

Patty offers to testify in SLA trial

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The trial of William and Emily Harris raced toward a conclusion in a burst of courtroom surprises Tuesday with Patricia Hearst volunteering to testify against her former comrades and the Harrises resting their case without presenting a defense.

The Harrises maintained the prosecution's case was so flimsy and marred by reversible legal errors they don't need one. The turnaround announcement that Miss Hearst had offered, on her own and without promise of immunity, to testify against the Harrises brought angry shouts of "deal" from the defense.

Because the defense rested, however, there will be no chance for her to appear. The trial appeared ready for closing arguments and submission to the jury next week.

In another key development, Superior Court Judge Mark Brandler declared lie detector tests had cleared 14 sheriff's deputies and court employees of suspicion of planting an old newspaper, headlining the Hearst kidnaping, in the jurors' bathroom.

The defense asked for a declaration of mistrial, arguing that if deputies and court-workers were not involved the newspaper must have been smuggled in by one of the jurors in an attempt to sabotage the trial, since no one else could reach the bathroom.

The motion was to be argued today with the jury out of court. Tuesday's session opened with prosecutor Samuel Mayerson's announcement that Miss Hearst had offered through her lawyer to appear for the prosecution.

Defense attorney Leonard Weinglass angrily charged that Miss Hearst — who was charged with the Harrises and faces trial in January on the same 11 counts of assault, robbery and kidnaping — had made "an 11th hour deal."

The defense was planned on the repeated assurances that Miss Hearst would not be a prosecution witness, he said, and he would demand a mistrial if she appeared.

CB radio channels nearly doubled

WASHINGTON — The Federal Communications Commission

Twin Falls City Band will present concert

TWIN FALLS — The George Washington Bicentennial March by John Philip Sousa will be one of the pieces presented by the Twin Falls City Band in the city park band shell Thursday at 8:15 p.m.

Director Del Slaughter will be assisted by Larry Curtis. The first half of the program includes the "March, Grandioso," Roland F. Seltz; the coronation scene from "Horis Godunov," Modest Mussorgsky; "Plymouth Town" (Sea Chanty Rhapsody), Gerald Hartley; two French songs, "L'oeuz overt" and "Se je vous estonne," arranged by Peter Phillips, and the Sousa march.

After the intermission, the band will perform the "Sharpshooters March," G. Medallo; "Deep River Suite," including "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot," "Deep River" and "Joshua Fit De Battle"; "Frank Erickson," Macago; "Dick and Paul-Frietas" highlights from "Kiss Me Kate," Cole Porter; sounds of the Carpenters, arranged by John Cavacas and "the new Colonial March," R.B. Hall.

has decided to nearly double the number of channels available to Citizens Band radio users — a move that also is likely to stimulate the already-burgeoning $2.1 billion-a-year CB radio business.

At the same time, the FCC took steps to limit the increasingly severe interference being caused by CB radio users to television channels 2, 5 and 6. It ordered installation of filtering equipment on new CB radios — but considerably less filtering than broadcasters said was necessary.

The unanimous ruling, handed down Tuesday, increases the number of channels from 23 to 40.

However, the FCC forbade modification of existing CB transmitters to include the new channels. So those whose sets do not have all the available frequencies will have to buy new sets, although 23-channel sets will still be usable on the old channels.

The new channels will become available for use Jan. 1. The FCC has forbidden the sale of 40-channel CB sets, until then.

A spokesman for the Electronic Industries Association said the CB radio business, which has been enjoying a boom the last two years, is worth about $2.1 billion a year. About 70 per cent of CB equipment is made overseas.

The spokesman said 23-channel transmitters, on which prices average $120 to $150, are being offered at deep discounts in anticipation of the FCC ruling. He speculated that 40-channel sets might sell for 10 to 15 per cent more than the normal price for a 23-channel rig.

Flood victims must pay property taxes

BOISE (UPI) — There is nothing in Idaho law permitting an abatement of ad valorem taxes on real or personal property lost or damaged by the Teton Dam disaster, Attorney General Wayne L. Kildwell said today.

In an opinion prepared for Rep. Melvin Hammond, D-Rexburg, Assistant Attorney General J. Michael Kinsela said there is nothing to permit abatement or cancellation of such taxes by reason of a decrease in value after the assessment date has passed.

"Your question is directed toward finding a solution to one of the myriad problems created by the Teton Dam disaster, problems which are complicated by a lack of precedent in Idaho history and law," Kinsela said.

"This deficiency in resources may necessitate action by the forthcoming legislature but present opinion must be dictated by the law in force at this time."

"Under Idaho law," he said, property is assessed annually on Jan. 1 of the year in which the taxes are levied.

"The status and value of property on that date controls for purposes of assessment and nothing that happens thereafter can alter the assessment, assuming it was correct as of Jan. 1, 1976," he said.

"Since Idaho law does not provide for the abatement of the taxes which were correct as of the assessment date, the only source of tax relief upon flood damaged property is by means of a claim for exemption."

"Many persons affected by the flood may have been unable to appear before the board before the second Monday of July (as required by law), to make a proper claim for the hardship exemption," he said.

Connally shakes GOP afresh

By United Press International

John Connally's endorsement of President Ford is only one indication that Ronald Reagan's choice of Sen. Richard Schweiker of Pennsylvania to be his potential running mate may turn out to be the bombshell that backfired.

In the 24 hours following Reagan's surprise announcement, two delegates formally switched allegiance away from the Californian, others stated strong opposition to Schweiker, Connally endorsed Ford and Gov. Meldrim Thomson of New Hampshire withdrew his backing of Reagan.

The biggest test comes today when the 103 member Pennsylvania delegation meets first on Capitol Hill with Schweiker and then goes to the White House for a reception with the President.

The delegation was elected uncommitted, but the latest UPI count shows 79 supporting Ford, nine for Reagan and 15 uncommitted. UPI has been unable to detect any change in the delegation since Reagan picked Schweiker on Monday.

In Plains, Ga., if Democratic candidates Jimmy Carter and Walter Mondale were entertained by the GOP warfare they didn't let on. They spent most of Tuesday cloistered with economic experts being briefed on various issues related to the economy.

Carter's only comment of Connally was that he expected it would help Ford.

On the GOP side, in a rash of events there were these developments that did not bode well for the Reagan camp:

— Connally, the big fence sitter often mentioned as Ford's running mate, endorsed the President saying the Schweiker announcement convinced him Ford "clearly" was the better choice.

— Thomson, one of Reagan's earliest and strongest supporters said he could no longer support the Californian because of his liberal running mate. He suggested a third presidential candidate might be proposed at Kansas City.

— Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-Ill., chairman of Illinois delegates for Reagan, said he will work for the defeat of Schweiker as vice president at the GOP convention in Kansas City.

— Jack Wilson, a Reagan delegate in Colorado, switched to an uncommitted status because he found Schweiker "wildly liberal." In Columbus, S.C., Inez Faldings, an uncommitted delegate, said she is now for Ford because of Schweiker.

— Ford announced he would fly to Jackson, Miss., Friday to woo a 30 member uncommitted delegation that once had been considered strongly pro Reagan. There were reports of heavy dissatisfaction with Schweiker there, and several delegates said they would like to see a Ford-Reagan ticket.

— Michael T. Halbouty of Houston, chairman of "Oilmen for Reagan" and a Reagan delegate, said he had been up all night with telephone calls from Reagan delegates from oil states who were unhappy and disenchanted.

GOV. MELDRIM THOMSON

...quits Reagan camp

All 100 Texas delegates are bound to Reagan for three ballots as the result of the primary.

By late Tuesday Ford's total, according to UPI's count, stood at 1,121, or nine short of the number needed to win the nomination.

Ford had picked up one delegate each in South Carolina, Louisiana and Minnesota. The latter two delegates said they made up their minds before the Schweiker announcement.

Reagan had 1,055, a net loss of two; and there were 83 uncommitted.

Coalition opens battle against gas rate boost

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A coalition of consumer, labor and local government groups marshaled strength today to oppose the proposed new higher ceiling for natural gas that will cost the average household an extra $15.60 a year.

In an effort to spur new production, the Federal Power Commission announced Tuesday it will allow producers to charge nearly triple the previous national ceiling for gas committed to interstate sales.

The commission estimated the average home's natural gas bill will increase $15.60 a year.

A group of organizations headed by Energy Action asked the FPC to delay the decision, and also drew up court papers for a suit challenging the new rates. A spokesman for Energy Action said it is joined by more than a dozen other groups, including the State of Minnesota, the United Auto Workers, the U.S. Conference of Mayors, the National Farmers Union, and others.

The previous national ceiling for gas destined for interstate sales was 22 cents per thousand cubic feet.

The FPC ruled Tuesday a producer can charge $1.01 per thousand cubic feet for gas dedicated to interstate sales between Jan. 1, 1975, and Jan. 1, 1976, and $1.42 per thousand cubic feet for gas committed to interstate sales after that time.

Only where existing contracts signed during those periods have reopening clauses for reconsideration of rates, could those contracts come to the new high price. All new contracts from now on can be at the new rates.

A spokesman for Energy Action called the increase "the largest in history...an astronomical increase."

Broader support sought

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ronald Reagan's national campaign chairman said today the GOP challenger hopes that by choosing a running mate from the party's liberal, northeast wing he can unify the party for November and avoid a "replay of 1964."

Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., said in an interview he and campaign manager John Sears "recognized there were assumed risks" in selecting Sen. Richard Schweiker of Pennsylvania to be Reagan's running mate. He decided "the risks were worth taking."

"This shows that Reagan is no longer a regional, narrow-based candidate," Laxalt said.

He said Reagan, by choosing Schweiker, hoped "to demonstrate to Republicans a good faith willingness to unify the party."

"We had reached the conclusion that unless we had greater strength in the northeast, our chances of winning (in November) were not quite realistic, but close to it," he said.

"We needed to do this in order to conduct a meaningful general election campaign...if Reagan wins the nomination, he said, "The concern here is not the convention but after the convention—the fear that we would end up with an empty nomination."

Judge acquits Gulf lobbyist

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former Gulf Oil lobbyist Claude C. Wild Jr., acquitted of making an illegal $5,000 campaign contribution to Sen. Daniel K. Inouye, D-Hawaii, says he plans now to see what he can do with the money.

U.S. District Judge Joseph C. Waddy found Wild not guilty Tuesday because it had not been proven that he was indicted before a three-year statute of limitations ran out.

Wild had admitted making the illegal corporate contribution but claimed it was made in January, 1973. The indictment came on March 12, 1976.

Henry Glugni, Inouye's administrative assistant, testified as a government witness that Wild handed him the money—$50 and $100 bills, in a plain white envelope—after March 15, 1973.

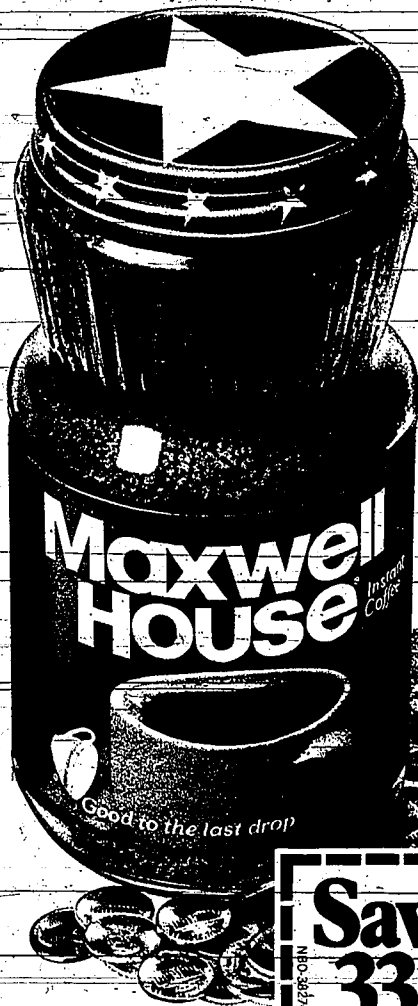

Inouye testified on Monday that he had not known the money was an illegal contribution.

"The court finds the evidence of the defendant is worthy of greater credence than that of Glugni," the judge said. He said the government "has failed to establish beyond a reasonable doubt that the contribution was made within three years of the indictment date."

"The court finds the defendant not guilty," Waddy said.

Sheriff's race and late charges

The relationship between news and politics is particularly difficult immediately before an election. Occasionally in a particularly heated election campaign, candidates or their most ardent supporters are tempted to raise last-minute charges. Often those charges are without merit. Sometimes they prove to be serious. But almost never can last-minute charges be proven or disproven before election day. So the voting public is left with charge and countercharge but little substance. The role of the press is especially ticklish as election day draws nearer. At some point, most newspapers simply refuse to print new charges raised at the last minute. The Times-News, for example, refuses to raise new charges on the day before or the day of an election. However, the paper will permit a candidate to reply to an earlier charge so long as no new charges are raised. But what about a serious charge raised the week before the election? Obviously there is time for a candidate to reply. Still there is something unsavory about the arrival of a last minute accusation. Such a problem arises today with the information that the Twin Falls County Prosecutor is investigating the County Sheriff's office. The Times-News has learned that the prosecutor has asked for and received the office's books and has requested outside auditors to assist in the investigation. There is no reason to blame the prosecutor for his last minute investigation. He was reportedly acting on the basis of information brought to him at the last minute by supporters of sheriff candidate Ivan Kijster. He had little choice but to check into the complaints. At the same time, acting on tips by opponents of incumbent Sheriff Paul Corder, the Times-News was able to confirm the unusual circumstances surrounding a recent cross-country trip by a sheriff's deputy. The official trip was made to pick up a prisoner in West Virginia to be returned to Twin Falls to face charges here. Instead of taking the direct route, however, the deputy went from 400 to 600 miles out of his way to visit his mother in Texas. Gas and depreciation for the extra miles were paid by the county, along with meals and lodging for the deputy and a companion. Sheriff Corder told the Times-News he had authorized the trip and was aware of the southerly route to be taken by the deputy. The circuitous trip is difficult to put in perspective less than a week before the primary election. At the very best, it shows a cavalier attitude toward taxpayers' pocketbooks on this one trip. What is unknown is whether it is part of a larger pattern of poor management in the Sheriff's office as charged by Kijster, or if it is only an isolated incident. And that is the trouble with last-minute election charges. The real importance of the deputy's trip won't be known until well after the election. But meanwhile, Sheriff Corder will be defeated or returned to office partially on the basis of the prosecutor's investigation and the deputy's trip. We certainly believe there is no place in Twin Falls County for sloppy administration. But we do not believe any reasonable voter knows enough at this late date to place it in proper context. We think voters would be well advised to take last minute charges with a grain of salt. At the same time, voters must realize that some things could be improved in the Sheriff's office.

Notes from CHRYSE PLANITIA - The scientist couldn't believe their eyes. Line by line, Viking II learned the picture of the century back to the Jet Propulsion Laboratory. As each line made the image clearer, the astronomer's jaws dropped another inch. Finally, there it was. A small, greenish humanoid in a fur parka was staring into Viking's mechanical eye. Nibbling a piece of Mars bar, and holding what had to be a laser gun, the aggregate of man's ancient image of life on Mars was standing there, eyeing a mammalian robot. Now that the picture Newsweek wished it had for the cover this week. And if the truth were known, most of us probably wish the same thing. Scientists already are crowing and clucking about the wealth of new facts learned from Viking's soft landing on Mars. They shout about Argon gas, the lack of cloudiness in the atmosphere. All that is fine. But we hopeless dreamers ache for something more from Viking's historic mission. Something along the line of Martians rowing strange canoes down intricate canals.

WASHINGTON - The Supreme Court, finding increasing harmony within its ranks of natural resource issues, is becoming deeply involved in determining environmental policy. In its nine-month term which ended two weeks ago, the court announced a score of decisions involving the government's right to regulate the cleanliness of the country's air and water. The most important was its ruling upholding the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) plan to phase out lead in gasoline as a potential health hazard. The term began with the retirement of Justice William O. Douglas, an outdoorsman and environmental advocate, and the appointment of Justice John Paul Stevens to replace him. But the court handed down its major environmental decisions with little divisiveness. Three key rulings were issued without dissent. In a unanimous decision involving the Clean Air Act, the court held that EPA could approve state air pollution control plans without having to consider whether the plans are economically feasible. The court said that while technology and economics are legitimate issues, they should be considered by EPA only when it initially reviews a state's overall plan to implement the Clean Air Act. The court rejected the case brought by Union Electric Co. in St. Louis. The utility had challenged Missouri's air pollution control standards on grounds that there were no feasible means to comply with them for three St. Louis area power plants. Writing the opinion, Justice Thurgood Marshall said Congress realized the technology might not be immediately available to meet all the state air standards but that the pressure of the law could "force" development of the technology. Confronted with the theory issue of air pollution enforcement, the court let stand lower court rulings which upheld EPA's authority to insist that electric utilities and factories adopt continuous emission controls like flue-gas scrubbers to reduce sulphur dioxide pollution. In so doing, the court is allowing EPA to prohibit the use of so-called "intermittent" controls such as temporarily shutting down plants as a substitute for installing air pollution control equipment. The court rejected arguments of conservationists in a number of related cases in which it placed limits on the obligation of federal agencies to comply with the landmark National Environmental Policy Act. In one key case, the court ruled that the Department of Housing and Urban Development does not have to prepare an environmental impact statement when it reviews reports filed by private developers under statutes governing interstate land sales. In another, it ruled that the Interior Department could go ahead with plans to lease public lands in the West for coal strip mining without first preparing an impact statement on the "regional" effects of such coal development. The court handed down several related decisions which held that federal facilities such as power plants run by the Tennessee Valley Authority and military installations are not subject to state and local permits for air and water pollution discharges. The court also curbed EPA's authority to regulate water pollution from industrial power plants. It held that the discharge of radioactive materials is already regulated under the Atomic Energy Act and subject to standards set by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission. The only environmental issue on which the court appears deeply divided is the matter of federal control over commerce. This question is likely to affect the courts' consideration in its next term of transportation controls under the Clean Air Act. The question arose in a 5-4 decision last month, in which the court struck down new power plant amendments to the Fair Labor Standards Act, holding that the amendments did not fall within the ambit of the Commerce Clause of the U.S. Constitution. The decision sharply limits federal authority over states in matters involving commerce. Until now, EPA has used this authority under the Commerce Clause to require states to adopt transportation controls like parking bans and bridge tolls as part of their air pollution control strategy. The court has agreed during its 1976-1977 term starting Oct. 14 to review lower court rulings on transportation controls in California, Virginia, Maryland and the District of Columbia. Whatever stance the court takes is certain to affect transportation controls in other states where they are planned or already implemented. Two recent Supreme Court decisions have broad implications for land development. In one, the court ruled that a city charter provision requiring proposed land use changes to be approved by 55 per cent of the voters does not violate the due process rights of a landowner seeking a zoning change. In the other, the justices let stand a lower court ruling allowing the town of Petaluma, Calif., to limit its growth by restricting the number of building permits issued each year.

Next term the court is scheduled to consider a land use issue regarded as critical by many states, especially in the Northeast. It concerns garbage disposal and centers on a New Jersey statute barring disposal within New Jersey of refuse originating or collected outside the state. For years, Philadelphia has been trying unsuccessfully to locate nearby land in New Jersey as a dump site. The court agreed to review a New Jersey Supreme Court decision holding that the statute is a reasonable method for New Jersey to preserve its land.

Editor, Times-News: Who is out to get Sheriff Corder? And why? Sheriff Corder is a life-long Republican, a trusted law enforcement officer, and a man of complete integrity. He has served Twin Falls County well. Just what is really behind the present campaign of accusation and innuendo? And why? I am a Republican precinct committee man and know the 25th Precinct well. The sheriff's opponent lives in my precinct. I think each candidate should run on his own party's ticket. My many friends in the other party agree with me that this is always the right thing to do. Are double standards emerging in this campaign? Aid is the sheriff to be their victim? Paul Corder has done an outstanding job and we will have no regrets and no unexpected upsets in our county if we keep what we now have. My vote will go to the sheriff. His record through many years speaks for itself. ELSA ULLMAN Twin Falls

Mars is close, but no cigar

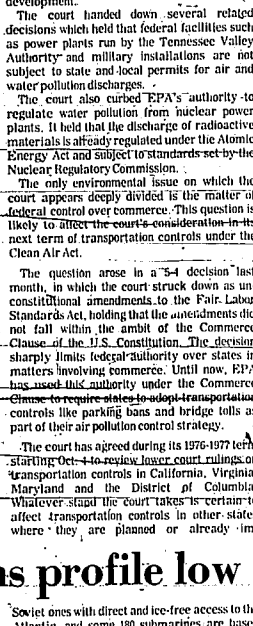

Only 99 years ago Italian astronomer Giovanni Virginio Schiaparelli gazed in wonder at what he called the "canals of Mars." He fanned the imaginations of millions with his theories of life on Mars. As late as 1906 America's famed stargazer Percival Lowell staked his professional reputation on a book outlining the life on Mars. So much for professional reputations. Percival. Even though the eyes of a robot, Mars comes off as the place you would want to visit only after spending a few winters in southern Wyoming. Instead of a planet-men with antennae and shiny green heads can call home. Mars comes off as nothing more than the first wash in a watercolor. Like a picture slightly out-of-focus, or an embryo stopped short of maturation, Mars falls short of the dreamy image as a place where a super race once lived. On paper she looked good. The scouting report suggested the planet might be just the corner of the solar system where another kind of life springs eternal. The atmosphere is oxygen, nitrogen, and carbon dioxide, just like Mother Earth. Sunsets are a spectacular red, like Buffalo.

Soviet ones with direct and ice-free access to the Atlantic, and some 180 submarines are based there. There are also, in round figures, 110,000 military and civilian personnel stationed there (including two army divisions and a national patrol aircraft and 200 fighter-bombers. The naval and military build-up in the Kola peninsula is still going on, and the defense ministers of Scandinavian countries have been voicing understandable anxiety about it. The three Norwegian ministers who were recently allowed to attend a Soviet exercise north of Leningrad under the terms of the Helsinki agreement did not see much, and NATO experts do not expect the agreement to make any practical difference. Indeed, General Sir John Sharp, the British commander-in-chief of NATO's northern forces, recently claimed that the buildup in the Kola peninsula represented "the most important strategic threat to the Western alliance at present." This is one reason why NATO chiefs have been pressing Norway and Denmark to increase their defense budgets. NATO has asked the Norwegians for a 4.5 per cent annual growth in real defense spending. Norway is unlikely to agree to such a big rise, mission set up by the government is likely to recommend some rise when it reports later this year. NATO is also trying to improve its ability to resist a Soviet invasion of Norway. It is thinking about preparing a stockpile of equipment, including tanks and trucks, for use by other NATO troops, like the British and Canadians, if troops had to be called into Norway. At present, however, the Norwegians will not allow any foreign troops of nuclear weapons to be based in Norway. They fear that the Russians would see this as a Cuba-like threat. This is the dilemma for Norway. It wants to improve its defense, but also to avoid doing anything which the Russians could interpret as a provocation. That is why a yellow sunburst on the border will shortly be only a pile of firewood. The Economist of London

Corder backer gives opinion

Editor, Times-News: Who is out to get Sheriff Corder? And why? Sheriff Corder is a life-long Republican, a trusted law enforcement officer, and a man of complete integrity. He has served Twin Falls County well. Just what is really behind the present campaign of accusation and innuendo? And why? I am a Republican precinct committee man and know the 25th Precinct well. The sheriff's opponent lives in my precinct. I think each candidate should run on his own party's ticket. My many friends in the other party agree with me that this is always the right thing to do. Are double standards emerging in this campaign? Aid is the sheriff to be their victim? Paul Corder has done an outstanding job and we will have no regrets and no unexpected upsets in our county if we keep what we now have. My vote will go to the sheriff. His record through many years speaks for itself. ELSA ULLMAN Twin Falls

Tentative terms reached in costly cannery strike

By United Press International
A tentative settlement was reached today that 55,000 California cannery workers will be back at work by the end of the week, ending the most costly strike in the history of the state's food industry.

The head of the United Mine Workers ordered 60,000 wildcat strikers to end their walkout.

The twin developments Tuesday led other possible breakthroughs in national labor disputes.

Labor Secretary W. J. Usery Jr., shutting in Washington from the cannery negotiations, joined in bargaining sessions in the 98-day strike of United Rubber Workers against four tire-making companies.

UMW President Arnold Miller told wildcat strikers to go back to the pits in West Virginia, Ohio and Virginia. There was no immediate indication whether the miners would obey. They were striking in protest of a federal court's back-to-work order against strikers at one coal mine in West Virginia.

In Oregon, a federal judge ordered striking state grain inspectors to stop a walkout which growers and shippers said could endanger a 60-million bushel wheat crop at harvest time.

Port officials in Oregon said longshoremen will begin loading grain bound for the Far East Thursday or early Friday as a result of the order.

Fresh labor troubles sprouted in Detroit: General Motors Corp. and Ford

Motol Co. presented their outlines of bargaining issues to the United Auto Workers and were greeted with scorn.

The proposals had no specifics on wages and fringe benefits. UAW Vice President Irving Bluestone said he had never seen "a set of demands as far reaching and turn-the-clock-back as these are."

Negotiations were afoot in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., to settle on a new contract between Western Union and 8,000 members of the United Telegraph Workers. The old contract ran out at midnight, but no strike deadline had been set.

A threatened strike by the Transport Workers Union against Trans World Airlines could disrupt travel into Kansas, Mo., for the Republican National Convention. The union told the National Mediation Board flight attendants were ready to go out at 4 p.m. Friday.

The nation's chief federal mediator, James F. Secore, announced the breakthrough in the eight-day California strike. He called it "a rather unusual settlement," since negotiators between the canners and the California Council of Cannery Workers agreed on the overall cost of a three-year contract without working out the specifics.

President Ford issued a statement of hope the workers would ratify the agreement and "return to their jobs as soon as possible." This dispute has been the most costly, in terms of crops lost, in the history of the California food processing industry.

Postal controls proposed

Chicago Daily News
WASHINGTON — The Postal Service, Congress' tar baby, gets stickier by the day.

Four Democratic senators will ask Congress this week to approve legislation that would restore some of the legislative body's controls over the mailing system.

Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., chairman of the Postal Operations subcommittee, disclosed details of a substitute to the postal reorganization amendments reported out of the Senate Post Office Committee several weeks ago. The substitute would give Congress continuing authority over annual budget appropriations for the Postal Service.

As outlined the amendment would:

- Require the Postal Service to go to Congress each year for authorization and appropriation approval on its fiscal budget. This would begin in fiscal year 1978.
- Authorize a $4-billion transitional subsidy for fiscal 1977, beginning next Oct. 1, to keep the Postal Service going.
- Impose a moratorium on increasing postage rates and on the closing of post offices that serve 35 or more families. The moratorium would be in effect through Sept. 30, 1977.
- Require the postmaster general to be appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate. Under the reorganization act, the postmaster general is elected by nine members of the board of governors and no congressional approval is required. This was a step to remove the post office from the political arena.

Spokane gun sale new kidnap clue?

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Authorities hunting two fugitive suspects in the Chowchilla bus kidnap case are investigating a report that a man who identified himself as James Schoenfeld sold five guns and 3,000 rounds of ammunition to a Spokane, Wash., sporting goods store.

Police said the incident occurred July 19, the same day that Schoenfeld, one of the suspects, was denied entry into Canada because he carried weapons. He was released by authorities who did not know he was being sought by police. Spokane is about 100 miles from the border.

An employee at the sporting goods store, which he visited, said the young man sold a .30-30 rifle, a .20-gauge shotgun, a .22-caliber rifle, a .22-caliber pistol and a .38-caliber pistol in addition to the ammunition for $180.

Miotke said the young man was "hippie looking" with a heavy beard and dirty clothing. He drove an old model car crammed with food and camping equipment, which bore a California license plate.

Stamp reform vote set

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Agriculture Committee, after months of wrangling over proposals to reform the government's food stamp program, agreed unanimously Tuesday to take a final vote on the issue Aug. 5.

A committee aide said the decision indicated the bill will not be sent to the House floor until late August at the earliest, after Congress returns from the recess for the Republican National Convention.

The panel began hearings last January on conflicting plans for overhauling the $5.8 billion stamp program, which currently serves about 18 million Americans.

Tax return uses limited

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate has voted new limits on who can see and use a taxpayer's confidential information.

The action buttresses "the right of all Americans to be secure from government snooping into their private tax information," said Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., after the Senate Tuesday approved a major section of the tax revision bill.

The approval is tentative because it is subject to later reconsideration as the Senate completes the lengthy bill and the House adjusts differences.

"One of the main crimes to come out of Watergate was the use of tax returns for political purposes," Weicker said.

The bill would make certain unauthorized disclosures felonies rather than misdemeanors, with a prison penalty of up to five years and fine up to $5,000.

It also would set standards for those who prepare tax returns as a business. It would exempt winnings from state lotteries, keno, games, bingo and slot machines from withholding requirements.

While the Senate debated the major tax bill, the House Ways and Means Committee approved a bill Tuesday that would ease in some ways and tighten in others the current taxes on estates and gifts.

The bill includes:

- A combined credit for estate and gift taxes, to replace the current separate exemptions of $20,000 and $30,000, respectively. The effect would be to exempt from taxation the first $120,000 of the combined value of the estate and lifetime gifts.
- An exemption for the first $250,000 of the value of property left to a spouse.

Missile program guard headed off

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Working through a young aide to Sen. Daniel K. Rostenkowski, internationalist, nearly succeeded recently in writing language into a Senate committee report protecting its controversial Condor missile program.

Rockwell, the 10th largest defense contractor, is one of the more active lobbyists on Capitol Hill and is known in Congressional circles for the way it entertains members of Congress and military officers at its hunting and fishing lodges.

Unwittingly, Shannon Cockett, a 22-year-old aide to Inouye, D-Hawaii, got caught up in the lobbying operation when Rockwell set out to block a move in the Senate Appropriations Committee to kill the Condor missile it has been developing for the Navy.

A Rockwell representative convinced Miss Cockett that the Condor program should be continued and provided her with supporting language to be incorporated in the Senate committee's report on the defense appropriations bill.

Inouye, who acknowledged in an interview that he did not know much about the Condor program, accepted the language submitted by his aide and presented it to the committee for its adoption.

But in a lunchtime recess, aides to Senators Thomas F. Eagleton, D-Mo., and William Proxmire, D-Wis., who were critical of the Condor missile, upset Rockwell's lobbying efforts by prevailing upon Miss Cockett to accept some changes in the language that tightened congressional control over the program.

Rockwell and Navy representatives protested to Miss Cockett that the modified language was unacceptable. But by then it was too late to change the committee report.

'Viva Knievel' brings dancer Kelly back to screen

By VERNON SCOTT
HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—The world has rediscovered Gene Kelly thanks to a pair of movies consisting of clips from ancient film musicals.

The older generation had forgotten how good he was. Youngsters had never seen him do his stuff on the big screen before.

But, "That's Entertainment" and "That's Entertainment...Part 2" have revived the dancing man's career, bringing him legions of new fans.

Kelly's brand Irish grin reflects his feelings about his new-found popularity. He poured himself an evening cocktail behind the bar of his

Beverly Hills home, one of the oldest in that silk-lined-pocket of the rich. "A thousand letters a week have been coming in," he said.

"A lot of the mail is from kids who seem to think we made those musicals only a couple of years ago. And I'm surprised at the romantic notes I'm getting from girls who weren't even born when I made those pictures."

"The interesting thing about 'Entertainment 2' is that Fred Astaire and I did some new things as hosts of the picture. Audiences can see us then and now."

"I directed those sequences. Fred was wary about dancing again. I told him we wouldn't compete with ourselves of 20 years ago. We'd just make a few moves.

"I restricted our routines to simple steps and Fred trusted my judgment."

"The acceptance of the picture has convinced me that Fred and I are a fraternity of two. We keep in close touch with one another."

"But dancing is a young man's game. You have to be an athlete and train as hard as a boxer. So I've tried to do less and less work."

Kelly's inactivity over the past four years has been voluntary.

"His wife, Jeanne, died of leukemia four years ago. The tragedy overwhelmed the star who devoted himself to providing all the love and security possible for their two children, Bridget, now 12, and Tim, now 14.

He chose to sacrifice his career rather than leave his children to make movies away from home."

Kelly even refused the lead role opposite Liza Minnelli in "Cabaret." He couldn't bring himself to wrench Bridget and Tim from their surroundings and pack them off to Europe with him.

"It's easier to work now because the kids are recovering from their mother's death," he said. "I went to Europe for 10 days earlier this year to promote 'Entertainment 2.' They were secure enough for me to leave them."

The youngsters, in fact, are responsible for Kelly's return to movies with a costarring role with Evel Knievel in "Viva Knievel."

"I turned the part down when my agent called and asked if I was interested," Kelly said. "I'd planned to go to Europe to do another movie."

"I told him to ask for a Steve McQueen-type salary to discourage any further offer. Then the kids heard about it.

"Tim has his own trail bike. He pleaded with me to take the picture. He said Knievel is a folk hero. Babe Ruth and Lindbergh were my heroes but I learned Knievel is the man of the hour these days."

"Bridget gasped when I told her I'd refused the part. So I changed my attitude. I sent for the script and liked it."

"I play a grease monkey pal of Knievel. Until now I've never played a real character role. I'm like the child star with a pop in his career. I don't have enough age in my face to play characters my own age. At the same time I'm too old to get the young girl in a movie."

"This picture is a lark. I don't dance. I don't shave. I don't wear makeup. And I don't get the girl. I'm having so much fun I can hardly wait to go to work in the morning."

There is a chance Kelly will star in a musical television special this year.

It will give him the opportunity to don his famed dancing clothes once again—the gray flannels, moccasins, white socks and sweater.

"That outfit was my trademark," he said grinning. "And for a very good reason. Astaire was always elegant. He danced as a rich man, faultlessly attire."

"I played poor guys, working stiff and sailors. Even in 'An American in Paris' I was a guy getting along on the GI bill."

"The television show will give me an opportunity to bring joy to people. That's all I really want to do."

"Come to think of it, that's what I've been working at in movies since I made 'For Me And My Gal' back in 1942. And when I see the reaction to 'Entertainment 2' it helps me believe I've succeeded in some small way."

Hughes judge ill
LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI)—The probate court judge charged with straightening out the many "wills" of Howard Hughes was hospitalized Tuesday for a kidney ailment, postponing a hearing on the "Mormon will."

The hearing was postponed from Tuesday to Aug. 27 because of the illness of District Court Judge Keith Hayes. The "Mormon will," so called because it turned up mysteriously in Mormon church headquarters, was the first of some 32 documents purporting to be the last will and testament of the late billionaire.

NY budget eyed
WASHINGTON (UPI)—Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., thinks New York's austere financial plan might work—but the city will never be the same if it does.

He told a news conference Tuesday New York City can live up to its reduced budget, but he said: "I am not as confident it can do so without severely impairing further and perhaps divisively, its economic and social fabric as the nation's—indeed, the world's—principal city."

Cleaver may be freed
OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI)—A Superior Court Judge has ordered state parole officials to decide within the next month what former Black Panther Party Leader Eldridge Cleaver's term in San Quentin should have been.

Cleaver, held for violating parole and then fleeing the country, has sought his release on grounds he was not a parole violator at the time in 1968 when he was ordered back to prison after involvement in a gun battle between members of the Black Panther Party and Oakland police.

Judge Spurgeon Avakian indicated Tuesday that he would order Cleaver's release unless the Adult Authority holds a hearing promptly to decide the length of Cleaver's term on his 1958 conviction for assault and intent to murder.

Fritz Elaw free
OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI)—Draft evader Fritz Elaw, who returned to this country after six years in London to participate in the Democratic National Convention, was released from jail Tuesday on $5,000 bond.

His trial was set for Aug. 12.

Elaw, 29, had been in the county jail since Monday. He was an alternate delegate to the Democratic National Convention in New York.

Dallas vice unit 'busy'

DALLAS (UPI)—Louise Jagger told the city council that her friends were now calling her "madam" because hundreds of prostitutes congregate in front of her rooming house every night.

"The newspapers report there are 2,000 prostitutes in Dallas," she said. "Well—I believe they all gather in Cedar Springs every night of the week."

The city council responded Monday to this gripe and others like it with a pledge to provide vice officers with new laws frankly aimed at "harassing" the ladies of the evening out of town.

And a police spokesman said Tuesday the officers were gungho for a new crackdown on the burgeoning profession.

"These guys are doing the absolute best they can and there's no way—right now—of stemming the overt prostitution going on in Dallas right now," information officer Bob Shaw said.

"An officer will go out, bust a prostitute and she's back out on the street the next week and the effectiveness of the officer is destroyed because she knows who he is. And he'll never be able to arrest her again because first she would have to suggest a price to him—and nobody is that dumb."

"But if the city council gives them a legal way to harass them, get them off the street—well, the officers believe they can get the job done and done well."

He chose to sacrifice his career rather than leave his children to make movies away from home.

Kelly even refused the lead role opposite Liza Minnelli in "Cabaret." He couldn't bring himself to wrench Bridget and Tim from their surroundings and pack them off to Europe with him.

"It's easier to work now because the kids are recovering from their mother's death," he said. "I went to Europe for 10 days earlier this year to promote 'Entertainment 2.' They were secure enough for me to leave them."

The youngsters, in fact, are responsible for Kelly's return to movies with a costarring role with Evel Knievel in "Viva Knievel."

Cadet won't face charges

KINGS POINT, N.Y. (UPI) — Cadet Nancy Donnelly will not face sexual harassment charges at the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy, which forced her to resign two months ago but reinstated her last week.

Rear Adm. Arthur E. Engel, the superintendent of the academy, said Monday the 20-year-old cadet would face only probation, but gave no reason for the school's decision.

Miss Donnelly's sponsor to the academy, Sen. Glenn Beall, R-Md., and the American Civil Liberties Union have charged the school with sex discrimination because her alleged sex partner was allowed to graduate while she was forced to resign.

Miss Donnelly and her ACLU lawyer, Kathleen Peratis of Washington, met for more than an hour with Capt. Edward Knutson, the school's commandant of midshipmen. The school then released the following statement:

"Miss Donnelly will join her class and proceed to sea as scheduled. She will be on academic probation and make up the academics missed due to her resignation on May 17, upon her return to the academy in January.

"There will be no further disciplinary action."

Miss Donnelly, of Oxon Hill, Md., charged sexual discrimination because her fiancé, midshipman Mark Lewis of Lebanon, Ore., was allowed to graduate and she was forced to resign, although both had violated the same rule.

She also said the academy threatened to press charges against Lewis, stalling his graduation, if she did not resign.

Beall and the ACLU took up her cause and last week the Maritime Administration of the U.S. Commerce Department announced that she would be reinstated, but said she would face a disciplinary hearing on the sexual misconduct charges. Monday the academy announced that she would only face academic probation.

Americans and foreigners flee Lebanese civil war

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — It looked more like the sailing of a holiday cruise than a military evacuation from war.

The 300 passengers boarding the ship docked at the marina carried golf clubs and tennis rackets, pushed baby carriages and lugged at dogs and cats to the muzzles on the beachfront towers.

But the natives' flowers stemmed from the barrels of guns. And the whistling, scream of rockets and deadly thud of mortar in the distance betrayed the reality of the scene on the white sandy beach Tuesday morning.

The craft was a U.S. Navy landing-craft from the USS Coronado, an amphibious landing dock ship of the "Austin" class, which was anchored a mile offshore. The craft, flying a U.S. flag and manned by 20 unarmed 6th Fleet sailors, edged to the shore and lowered its gangway.

Assembled on the beach were 156 Americans and 153 other foreigners who were fleeing Lebanon's civil war on what U.S. officials said may be the last evacuation from the war zone. In 16 months more than 33,000 soldiers and civilians have been killed in Lebanon.

Watching them were scores of Palestinian guerrillas, checking passports and documents before allowing the evacuees board the craft.

Just as the first evacuee, a Lebanese-American businessman, was struggling up the slippery ramp with his two suitcases and a set of golf clubs, a Palestinian guard fired two warning shots in the air to keep photographers back. A few of the U.S. sailors helping the evacuees up the slippery ramp flinched.

The Palestinians also refused to allow a 22-year-old Palestinian woman, an Iraqi college student and an Egyptian from boarding the boat.

"You're not a foreigner. You are a Palestinian and you have Palestinians to take care of here. You have no right to leave," the guard told the pleading woman. All three were taken away.

But the remainder of the Palestinian guerrillas lounged about the beach; smiled and sported red and white flowers from the muzzles of their machine guns.

"We thought it would be a nice touch. We didn't want to scare anybody," the Americans are nice people," the PLA commander in charge of desk-side security explained.

Then, a parade of families pushing baby carriages and wrestling with bulging suitcases, tennis rackets, un-

Sale of armaments to Iran 'out of control,' committee says

WASHINGTON — Problems in sales of armaments to Iran have forced the U.S. government to conclude that it failed to exercise sufficient supervision in the past and to decide that it must be more careful in the future.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee has been briefed by its investigators that sales were "out of control" from 1972 until last year, with Pentagon officials and weapons manufacturers waffling for days in Iran without considering that country's ability to handle all the weaponry.

Under government auspices, U.S. weapons manufacturers and related companies have sold Iran $10 billion worth of military hardware and expertise in recent years. A $1.1 billion oil deal to raise money partly for military hardware is not being negotiated.

Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi has been fearful of Soviet pressure on his northern border and generally apprehensive about the turbulence of Iran's Middle Eastern fringe. This has made him eager to obtain the best American weapons that his oil riches can buy.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger is flying to Iran next week to discuss relations and general world problems as part of keeping close ties with the United States' best weapons customer and, it is hoped here, also a pillar of stability in that region.

The Senate investigators, whose report is scheduled to be made public soon, traced the origin of troubles over weapons sales to a May 1972 visit by Kissinger and then-President Richard M. Nixon to Iran. After the visit Nixon ordered that Iran be supplied with any conventional armaments it wanted, including the newest and best weapons in the U.S. arsenal — some not even yet deployed with U.S. forces.

This relationship has raised some problems, however. The Shah runs a tightly paternal government for his 33 million subjects, complete with secret police whose job is to destroy any challenge to his power.

The United States accepts the Iranian dictatorship as the only possible government in Tehran. It has ignored accusations by Iranian exiles of human rights violations because of what it regarded as overriding considerations of regional stability and of access to Iranian oil. Not only for the United States but also for Israel.

The U.S. commitment to stability under the Shah has enabled him to purchase and begin to deploy what is potentially the strongest and best-equipped armed force in his part of the world.

There are lurking fears in some U.S. minds, however, that stability might not last forever.

Lennon can stay

NEW YORK (UPI) — The population of the United States of America was increased by one 35-year-old former Beatle Tuesday as the government gave up trying to deport John Lennon and granted him permanent resident status.

Lennon was handed a green, laminated "permanent resident alien" card after a hearing before Immigration Judge Ira Fieldsteel which ended the singer's five-year struggle to avoid deportation since a 1968 hashish possession conviction in Great Britain.

"I have a love for this country," Lennon said, "If it had been 2,000 years ago, we all would've wanted to live in Rome. This is Rome and I don't want to live in the hills. This is where the action is."

Lennon must wait five years before becoming eligible to apply for U.S. citizenship.

"I'll have to think about that," he said, "I can't think of what I'll be doing in five years."

U.S. and Australian leaders meet in D.C.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Australian Prime Minister J. Malcolm Fraser, warmly welcomed Tuesday at the White House by President Ford, urged the United States to continue its leadership of the Western world.

Ford promised Fraser in a speech of greeting "The United States will remain a strong and faithful ally." He said Australia and America "are natural friends and allies in every sphere of the world."

Fraser arrived in Washington Sunday from the Olympic Games in Montreal for a Bicentennial visit which he will also use to urge the United States to match a Soviet naval buildup in the Indian Ocean, and to encourage U.S. businessmen to invest in Australian enterprises.

Fraser, on his first visit as prime minister, spent Monday in discussions with Australian diplomats in Washington, and his official stay began Tuesday with a colorful greeting on the South Lawn of the White House.

It included a 19-gun salute, an honor guard and color party from the four services, speeches by both leaders and a military band's rendition of "The Star Spangled Banner" and Australia's new national anthem, "Waltzing Matilda."

By flying to Ford, Fraser did not mention his hope the United States would counter growing Soviet strength in the Indian Ocean with an increase in its own naval forces.

He told Ford "we value our independence. We do not expect others to assume our responsibilities. Over time, however, our paths have come to run, to an increasing extent, in parallel."

"Comradeship in arms on a number of occasions has been the basis for a closeness, a sharing of purpose which has, I feel, been to the benefit and comfort to both of our countries."

Monetary policy slightly tighter

WASHINGTON Star
WASHINGTON — A slight tightening of monetary policy was announced Tuesday by Federal Reserve Chairman Arthur Burns.

There is no reason to expect that the latest moves will raise interest rates significantly, although rates may rise as the economic expansion increases demand for credit.

Burns presented a generally optimistic assessment of the economic outlook and financial conditions.

There has been a "substantial recovery" from the recession, he said, while observing that the pace of economic upturn usually slows after the first year. He implied that the recent slowdown from the extraordinarily fast pace earlier in the recovery has been normal and healthy.

"Activity in all major sectors of the private economy... seems poised for further advances," he said, adding that financial conditions are "favorable for continuation of economic expansion," with no sign of sharply rising interest rates.

But Burns was less optimistic than some economists about the inflation outlook. Although the inflation rate has dropped, he said, there has been little further progress since mid-1975.

Many economists warned a year ago that the Federal Reserve's target for growth of the money supply was too low to finance a strong recovery from the recession, Burns recalled.

"The strength of the recovery has demonstrated that 'the moderate rate of monetary expansion fostered by the Federal Reserve has been quite sufficient,'" he said.

Burns is required to report to Congress quarterly on the Federal Reserve's targets for growth of the money supply. The targets have been lowered gradually, and Burns Tuesday announced a further small reduction.

He said no new change has been made in the target for M-1, the narrowly defined money supply, consisting of currency in circulation plus demand deposits (checking accounts). Earn the second quarter of this year to the second quarter of next year, Burns said, the Federal Reserve is aiming for growth of M-1 in a range of 4.5 to 7 per cent.

Andrus applauds fiscal successes

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. Cecil D. Andrus expressed gratification today that during his administration the state has kept the general fund in balance while meeting Idaho's operating need without any general fund tax increases.

"The fact that actual general fund revenue is so nearly equal to advance projections is proof, too, that Idaho's economy continues strong," Andrus said.

He said employment increased during June, as compared with May, although many persons were out of work as a result of the collapse of the Teton Dam.

He said the dam's floodwaters damaged considerable eastern Idaho farmlands, resulting in a decline in agriculture employment.

Statewide, however, employment in other industries showed gains and the total number at work was well ahead of a month earlier, the governor said.

Andrus said July employment was expected to show continued gains.

The chief executive noted the preliminary financial report for the fiscal year ending June 30 showed total revenue according to the general fund at $230,000,000 while his advance projection of anticipated revenue was $220,000,000.

Farmers complain of cannery strike

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Angry California farmers hauled 13 tons of rotten tomatoes around Washington Tuesday and raised a stink about a cannery strike.

At an outdoor news conference near the Capitol, farmer Fred Starrh held up a handful of the Spauldy, rotting fruit and said his group is trying to stop a California cannery strike that has left produce spoiling in the fields.

"This is what we're looking at every day," said Starrh, a Shafter, Calif., grower who is president of California's Kern County Cannery Marketing Association.

The Agriculture Department escaped, Starrh said, because the growers feel Secretary Earl Butts has tried to stop the cannery strike.

"We feel Congress should enact legislation protecting agriculture from strikes at harvest time," he said. "This load of tomatoes demonstrates what we, as growers, face in our strike and harvest days are not to a strike."

As for the rotten tomatoes, Starrh said the farmers would try to find a legal dumping ground in the Washington area but, failing that, they might have to haul the fruit back to California.

Dolphins and whales commit mass suicide

LOGGERSHEAD KEY, Fla. (UPI) — "There's something definitely very wrong, we just don't know what it is," said marine biologist Gary Davis, surveying the 30 whales that stranded themselves on this remote island 65 miles from Key West.

It was the third mass suicide abduction the part of whale or dolphins in Florida waters in two weeks.

A fresh team of rescuers set out from Key West at dawn today in a bid to save as many of the whales as possible. Those that will be brought back to the mainland for autopsies.

"Some of the whales are drying out, fast," Davis said Monday evening. "and probably won't survive."

Sunburn and dehydration are the most dangerous to the whales.

The Coast Guard identified the 25 pilot whales as pilot whales, which resemble pilot whales. The animals ranged up to 15 feet in length and weighed 500 to 1,500 pounds.

O'Dell expressed little hope that many of the whales could be saved.

"It is virtually impossible because of the distance and remoteness to bring any of the animals to an aquarium for treatment," he said. "The only possibility for saving them is attempting to 'low' some of them out to sea."

Davis said two large whales beached themselves Sunday afternoon, but he and five Coast Guardsmen stationed at a lighthouse on the island pulled them back into the water.

"Then sometime Monday morning, the entire school of whales came ashore," said Davis, who has been conducting a summer biology experiment on the island. They used portable pumps to skin-and prevent dehydration and death.

Longerhead Key — a mile long, half-mile wide island about two miles from the Fort Jefferson National Monument and 65 miles west of Key West — is guarded by a shallow reef of staghorn coral. Davis said several whales cut themselves across the reef and one was seen bleeding and thrashing wildly after gashing its body.

Opening lead — 3♣

By Oswald & James Jacoby

West wasn't proud of his opening bid and saw little chance to beat South's three notrump contract. The only real hope would be to find his partner with the queen of clubs.

South ducked the first club, but had to win the second. Then he ran off dummy's five diamonds. West had to make four discards and they gave him no apparent problem. He ducked the eight and four of spades, then the deuce of hearts and finally the deuce of clubs.

The moment of truth had arrived for South. If West had opened a genuine fourth best he was holding one spade, two hearts and three clubs and a spade high would bring home three notrump.

If West had made the tricky lead of fifth-best club he was clearly holding the singleton king of hearts and the ace of hearts play would be the winner.

You can see all the cards.

Abby

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1972 by Chicago Tribune, N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of two very pretty and popular daughters. One is 16 and the other is 17. The older girl is stringing three boys along at once. She wears a friendship ring from one, an I.D. bracelet from another and an Indian necklace from a third. None of these boys knows about the others, and when one calls here and she is out with another, I have to lie to keep from hurting the caller's feelings.

The younger one is going with two boys. Each thinks he is the only one. One is so jealous he has threatened to do bodily harm to any other boy who comes near "his" girl. She is getting tired of them both, but doesn't want to hurt either one, so I have to lie to them when they call.

I have always taught the girls to be kind and avoid hurting feelings, so I suppose it's my fault that they're involved with so many boys.

How does a mother get uninvolved? If I were to tell these boys the truth, they'd be terribly hurt.

MOM IN THE MIDDLE

Honesty lacking

DEAR MOM: It's commendable to teach your daughters to be kind, but you should also teach them to be honest. Stringing boys along is dishonest. You're setting a bad example. Start being like it is, Mom, and encourage your daughters to do the same.

DEAR ABBY: WANTS EQUALITY maintains, "It's still a man's world," and she lists some reasons why, but she forgot to mention one.

If a man is outside on the sidewalk (just walking by) and he happens to see a woman undressing through a window, he's peeping Tom.

However, if a woman sees a man undressing through a window, HE'S an exhibitionist!

J.E.E.

DEAR J.E.E.: Not exactly. If a person happens to come upon a view of undressing, when or she hangs around to enjoy it, that person is a voyeur.

DEAR ABBY: With your wide audience, perhaps you can appeal to towns and cities to rechristen the names of some of their streets.

My cousin had a bad fire in his house, and the firemen went to three addresses before they got to his. In his town, which already had a Lake Street, Lake Court, Lake Avenue and Lake Terrace, they are building an old age complex to be called "Lake Side."

In another town near here, the Rescue Squad had a most difficult time finding the right place because there are four streets with similar names that are constantly mistaken for one another.

I hope you think this is worth printing.

DEAR MRS. C.: It is, and I did.

Buhl miss, Wetzstein say vows

TRILL — Melonie Graesch and Darrell Wetzstein were married July 11 at St. John's Lutheran Church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Orville Graesch and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Wetzstein, all Buhl.

Rev. R. J. Scholz officiated for the double ring ceremony which took place before a crowded congregation on the altar and bouquets of pink roses and white daisies arranged by Ann Pufahl.

The bride, escorted by her parents and given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of crepe satin with a floral lace bodice. The dress featured bell sleeves of floral lace and a chapel-length train.

Her elbow-length veil was held in place by a satin covered tiara with the Christian symbol of marriage embrodered on the front in gold lame.

The dress and veil were designed and made by Judy Fiedler, sister of the bride.

She wore a gold pin which belonged to her great-great-grandmother.

She carried a bouquet of yellow roses, white daisies and pink carnations.

Judy Fiedler, sister of the bride, was matron of honor, and Kathy Behm, was bridesmaid. Junior bridesmaid — was Jennifer Fiedler, niece of the bride.

Best man was Arnie Wetzstein, brother of the bridegroom; Groomsman were Alan Wetzstein, and Cecil Wetzstein, both brothers of the bridegroom.

Mrs. Maxine Schroeder was organist and Julie Brown and Marty Behm were soloists.

Karen Schultz, sister of the bridegroom, registered guests. Sue Williams received gifts and Bernice Wetzstein, sister of the bridegroom, and Melinda Thomas were gift bearers.

The couple was honored at a reception in the social hall of the church.

The bride's table was covered with a lace tablecloth and a pink underlay.

The four-tiered cake, baked by the bride's mother, was decorated with pink and yellow flowers, doves, bells and real flowers. The cake was topped with a cross and the Christian symbol, a heart with the names of the bride and bridegroom and the wedding date. The cake was baked by Regina Thiemann.

Mrs. Ann Pufahl and Mrs. Ruby Cramer cut and served the cake. Punch was served by Mrs. Patsy Foster, sister of the bridegroom. Renia Thiemann served coffee.

The bride was honored at a shower — given by Suranun Graesch, cousin of the bride, and Kathy Behm.

Special guests were Mr. and Mrs. E.H. Persigehl, Filer, great-uncle and great-aunt of the bride, and Mr. Wetzstein, grandfather of the bridegroom.

The couple plans a wedding trip in the fall. They are now residing on a farm south of Buhl.

Old-fashioned washability eyed

A few seasons ago, the T-shirt was used mostly for children's playclothes, men's underwear and simple sportswear.

Then, fashion designers added high styling, different treatments. Now, the shirts are a fashion basic — for every family member. The only "old-fashioned" feature is their washability, notes The Soap and Detergent Association.

As for styling — the round neckline is joined by square, boat, basket or jewel styles. Sleeves are short, cuffed, semi-cuffed or longer and loose. Stripes, embroidery, picture patterns, contrasting colors and designer and personal logos add to a "high-fashion" look.

Most T-shirts are made of cotton or cotton blends — comfortable, soft, absorbent. When shopping, examine the T-shirt for even, close knitting and reinforced back shoulder and neck seams. Be sure the neckline is firmly knit so it won't lose shape with wear.

your health

by LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb—

My friends and I have been wondering whether or not those bust developers that are advertised in magazines are medically safe. Do they actually work?

I have never read any articles on the good and bad effects of these gimmicks. We all read your column every day and would really follow your advice on this matter.

I along with the others, are desperate to have a fuller figure, but we are not so desperate to ruin ourselves for life. I'm sure there are many other women who read your column who have the same questions in mind. Also, are there any other ways such as exercises, that would help a woman to safely increase her bust?

'Developers' don't work

Dear Reader—

Thousands of mail asking about breast size. Some women are unhappy because they think they are too small, others think they are too large, and still others complain because they are unequal. I realize that a woman is sensitive about her figure but I think it is overdone.

Those devices you see advertised are mostly to get your money. Many of the advertisers have been up before the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) for their marketing practices. You cannot increase the size of the breast by rubbing on creams, or using a massage device or watercup.

All of those types of claims are without basis and the marketer is preying on women like you and your friends who have a natural desire to look your best.

You can increase the size of your bust by implants, but that is rarely indicated. Injections are dangerous and usually illegal. You can increase your breast size by gaining weight but the weight gain often detracts from the overall attractive figure that a woman wants.

You can improve your figure by improving your posture. That means standing up straight and keeping your shoulders back. A round-shoulder posture will minimize what you have. You can make the breasts appear more prominent by developing chest muscles. The breast sits on the pectoral muscles over the front of the chest.

That is why those exercises you see in women's magazines of pressing your hands together, or even lifting small weights that require your moving the arms forward toward the midline under stress help. To do these exercises you can lie on your back, hold a book or weight in the hand of your outstretched arm.

Now lift the weight up and toward the midline. Let your hand go back to the bed and lift again. Use different positions with the arm at the side, or over the head to work all the muscles over the front of the chest.

I think exercise and posture are the only sensible things to recommend. Occasionally a woman will have an endocrine imbalance and will benefit from proper hormone therapy but the truth is some women were born small. It is the personality and piggyback figure that counts.

Remember that many people still think that "small is beautiful". Despite all the humor and locker talk, and even girl watching, the truth is men don't fall in love with or marry a woman because of her breast size. It takes more than two mounds of fat to be attractive regardless of how they are shaped.

I'm sending you the Health Letter Number 1-10. Exercise, Posture, Strength. Others who want this information can send a 10¢ stamp, self-addressed envelope with 50 cents for it. Send your letter to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

'New weapon' explained

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — Life guards apply pressure to certain vulnerable points on the body to bring an unconscious, or terrified, potential drowning victim before they endanger their rescuer.

The victim, a 28-year-old mother of two, recalled the use of "pressure points" from her water instructor training to make her attacker pass out. Lt. J. A. Dungan of the sex crime squad said Monday.

Tax law revise pushed

ARCO — Idaho Second District Democratic congressional candidate Stan Kress Thursday told a noon luncheon at the Arco Senior Citizen Center that Congress must revise the inheritance tax laws and increase the small-estate exemption from $50,000 to $200,000.

"The present inheritance tax system is extremely unfair," Kress told the group. "It is leading to the destruction of the small family farm and business, while the extremely wealthy use loopholes in the law to go for generations without paying any inheritance tax."

Kress said he knew of instances where small farms and businesses had to be sold by heirs to pay the inheritance tax bill. He cited examples of estates being taxed twice in a relatively short period, once when passing to a surviving spouse and again when passing on to the couple's children. "We should increase the estate exemption to $200,000," Kress said, "to allow men and women who have worked all their lives to build a small farm or business to pass that investment on to their heirs. The family enterprise is a solid, economic institution that should not be forced out of existence."

Kress said he also favors revising the law that allows huge estates to be placed in trusts to avoid the payment of inheritance taxes.

Louvre Linage
The Louvre Museum in Paris was first opened to the public on Nov. 8, 1793. The construction of the Louvre, originally intended as a royal residence, was started in 1204 by King Philippe Auguste. Its fine-art collection was begun by Francis I in the 16th century.

Building continues

ADDITIONAL Twin Falls County office and court space will be available by next year. Idaho Construction Co workers are ready to begin construction of walls for the new judicial building addition. Above, concrete pouring has been completed and material moved to the site for wall structures. The addition will be directly west of the present judicial building.

Wegner supports measure

BOISE — Glen Wegner told members of the Ada County Republican-Central Committee Monday he would support passage of proposed federal "sunshine" legislation. The legislation, he said, is designed to make the deliberations of congressional committees and financial records more open to the public.

"The basic idea behind the Stone-Chiles bill is that congressional committees and the executive branch make their deliberations openly unless a compelling reason for making them secret can be demonstrated," the candidate for the Second District congressional seat said.

The bill would make public herebefore undisclosed congressional committee attendance and voting records. Wegner, a Republican, said, "and require congressmen and members of the executive branch to make more complete disclosures of outside income and personal expenditures of public funds."

Wegner noted he has made complete voluntary disclosure of his personal financial and tax records for the past ten years.

"Total openness of financial matters of elected officials is something people have a right to expect," he said.

Man sells lions

LEMING, Tex. (UPI) — Carl Skaggs loves cats — big ones: 600-pounders that can crush a man with a swipe of a massive paw — and he's got plenty of them.

And they're for sale for up to $1,500. The more domesticated they are, the more they cost.

Skaggs, 37, raises African lions, mountain lions and bobcats on his 24-acre "Safari Farm" 15 miles south of San Antonio. Currently, he has 15 lions ("three or four of them are bred-mommies-ready to drop them any minute"), 17 bobcats and 12 mountain lions.

"I'm trying to cut down the size of the African lion and domesticate them by breeding," he said. "I keep the most gentle and the smallest ones for breeding out of each litter."

Somehow, Skaggs hopes by breeding domesticated big cats he eventually will trim them down to about 100 pounds — from an average 600 pounds for males.

"All the zoo specialists and federal people say it can't be done, but it's working out for me," he said. "I've got some gentler stuff and some smaller stuff."

Skaggs says it's easy to domesticate a big cat — simply provide it with plenty of love.

"In my opinion, one way to save the animal is to domesticate it instead of taking it and sticking it in a hole somewhere," he said.

"It's one form of saving the animals, but generally the government and the veterinarians are against it."

Skaggs believes the way to prevent the big cats from reverting to wild characteristics — such as biting or mauling the owner — is to train the owner. Instead of the animal, so he teaches courses on handling wild animals.

He said almost any animal will remain gentle and domestic if it's treated like a pet.

"I've had people bring them back and say they're so wild and mean they can't handle them, but then I keep them for a week and they're where kids could handle them," he said.

Skaggs, who sells the animals to the general public, said a full-grown lion will eat from two to four pounds of fresh meat a day — mostly chicken and liver.

"The only problem he has had occurred recently when a lioness escaped from his compound and roamed the neighboring ranches, but he quickly recaptured it."

Death ends abduction attempt

TISHOMINGO, Okla. (UPI) — New Mexico rancher Steve Cain now custody of his young son in a divorce case, but his former wife fled the state with the boy. Cain and three of his friends drove to Oklahoma to get the boy back, authorities said.

The alleged attempt to abduct the boy ended in a high-speed chase and a crash which killed Cain and his 3-year-old son Cody.

The three New Mexico men who accompanied the Sierra County, N.M., rancher to Oklahoma were charged Monday with kidnapping. They previously had been charged with second-degree murder in the boy's death.

Authorities said Cain, accompanied by the three men who drove separate cars, took the boy from his former wife's house Friday night. They were pursued by his former wife Jean and her brother, Clay Martin, 16, also driving separate cars.

Highway patrol investigators said Cain swerved to the left to stop Martin from passing and his car hit the rear of Martin's car, struck an embankment, left the road and overturned three times.

Charged with kidnapping were John Lee Sanders, 25, of Winslow, N.M., who played high-school football with Cain; Phillip Wallin, 21, of San Jon, N.M., who is married to one of Cain's sisters; and Charles Goetz, 25, of Truth or Consequences, N.M., who is engaged to another sister of Cain.

Monster belief fulfills need to explain unknown

NEW YORK — The expedition that is searching the murky depths of Loch Ness may not find the long-necked monster that has been said to surface into the Scottish mist now and again.

But whether Nessie, as the monster is popularly called, is discovered or not, people will continue to believe in such creatures, as they have throughout recorded history.

A belief in monsters, psychologists say, seems to fulfill a universal human need to explain the unknown, to reach beyond the dullness of ordinary life, to give form to undefined fears and hopes for a brighter future.

Angus Hall, in the book "Monsters and Mythic Beasts," says, "We need creatures to inhabit that strange borderland between fact and fantasy and our interest lies not so much in whether they really exist, but in the possibility that they may exist."

Dr. Jane Singer, a Chicago psychotherapist, commenting that monster fantasies "fit us out of the known and give us the courage and imagination to create something new," said: "We need the Loch Ness monster the same way we need to make trips to the moon — to go beyond the known to what people have never before seen."

"It there actually is a Loch Ness Monster it doesn't mean our fantasies will be stifled," said Dr. Gertrude Williams, a St. Louis psychologist. "We will simply look for something else. There's a whole push now for extraterrestrial life, for example."

According to Dr. Williams, "a belief in monsters represents an existential desire to get beyond the real, drab, predictable, plastic world." She added: "Just as there may be a fear of the unknown, there is embedded in the human psyche a wish for the unknown, a desire to explore the unknown."

In history and literature monsters have played ambivalent roles — they both fascinate and repel, stimulate and shock, frighten and protect. They represent objects to worship and to fear. They provide symbolic scapegoats for the evil forces in man and nature and give people opportunities to overcome that evil through courage and wisdom.

Dr. Bruno Bettelheim, the child psychologist, whose recently published book "The Uses of Enchantment" describes the "psychosocial importance of fairy tales, said in an interview that man creates monsters to give form to his anxieties.

Hansen unhappy with rule writers' attitudes

WASHINGTON — Rep. George Hansen told Interior Secretary Tom Kleppe the Washington regulation writers stand to confuse more Teton Dam disaster victims than they can compensate.

"I am extremely dissatisfied with the attitudes of those writing the regulations for reimbursement," Hansen said. "They seem to be taking the adversary role based on a feeling that payment is some kind of welfare brought on by natural disaster rather than an obligation brought on by failure of a government project."

Hansen asked Kleppe to "review immediately several very objectionable provisions" in the regulations under which the $300 million and any additional funds are to be distributed to Teton Dam victims.

"Hansen said he was not satisfied with the Department's explanations that the objectionable parts of the regulations would be worked out following the statutory 30-day comment period.

"This raises the question of who should be served the regulations or the people the regulations cover," Hansen said. "As the regulations are now written, signing a check for settlement constitutes a release of the government from further responsibility even though full loss may not be known, and this just isn't right."

"Another objectionable section of the regulations," Hansen said, "is that the claimants lose control for further amendments to his claim after a determination has been made by one of the federal claims officers."

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, JULY 29, 1976

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day and evening when you are likely to feel tied down to conditions you would like to have changed. The best course of action is to do the work that has to be done and postpone making any changes.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Schedule your time and efforts intelligently and carry through with those policy decisions reached earlier in the day.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Plan recreations with family early so there is more harmony at home. Don't permit troublemakers to make things difficult for you.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Get the machinery working that will make your home more comfortable. Stay within your budget. Use extreme care in motion.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Take time to gain the aid of associates for those financial affairs you are working on. Don't neglect important communications.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Ask an expert for advice about something you have planned to do. Don't jump into it blindly. Make important monetary decisions tonight.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Keep that promise you have made to associates and get the right results with it. Don't fail to handle regular routines.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Come to a real understanding with a friend if you want to have a worthwhile relationship. Handle arrangements for a social event of importance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Some obligation of a business nature can be solved nicely with the aid of a good friend. Being more cheerful can help you in your career.

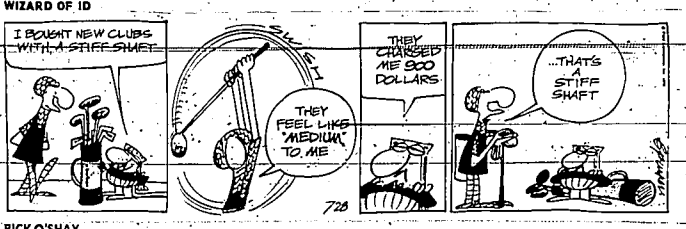

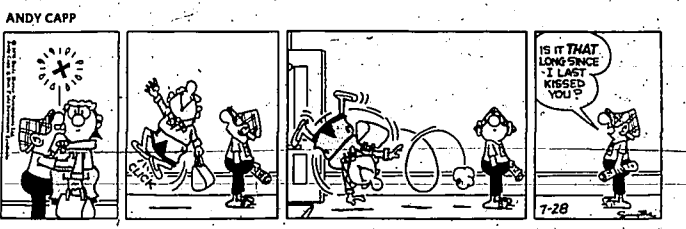

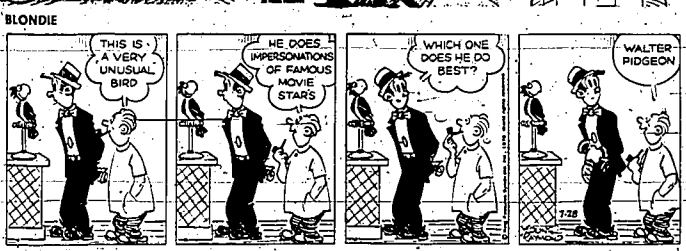

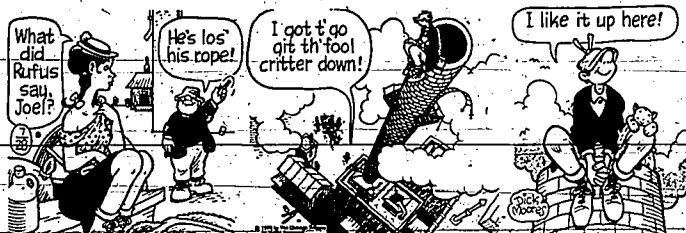

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) A new idea you have should be discussed with a higher-up for approval before you try to put it in operation.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Make certain your credit standing is in order so that you are more respected by others. Show increased devotion to mate.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Make sure you keep promises made to associates. A civic matter crops up that needs quick action, so be sure to give it.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) If properly astounded astrologically, you should be concerned with improving your environment. Take better care of your health.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be capable of handling almost any task but will need encouragement since the habit of procrastination is strong in this chart. The ability to solve difficult problems is excellent here. Give ethical training early in life.

what's what

L.M. Boyd

It was at the Culver House in Culver City, Calif. Fifty dergymen booked a banquet room. Fifty liquor dealers did likewise. Their get-togethers were side-by-side, and some casual in the catering department inadvertently served to the dergymen a dessert ordered by the liquor dealers. It was watermelon balls soaked in brandy and rum. Culver House owner Bill Lane found out too late. He asked the hostess what the dergymen said about it. "Nothing," she replied. "They were too busy putting the seeds in their pockets."

"Jugs" in Spanish means panel of judges or courtroom. But the early Mexican cowboy meant it synonymous with "jail." Our Language man says that's where we got the word "hoosegow."

QUERIES FROM CLIENTS

Q. "Do many women shave?"
A. Their faces, you mean? A lot do. Particularly in the Orient. And most particularly in the theater.

Q. "How many incumbent presidents have run for election or reelection? How many of these have lost?"
A. Just 13 have run; and only two have lost.

Add to the Bicentennial notes—the fact that British Gen. John Burgoyne during the Revolutionary War required 30 wagons in his entourage to carry along his fancy foods, champagne and numerous lady friends. His love of such lushness cost the British the war, some say.

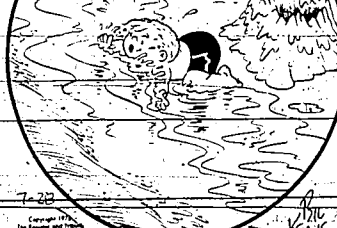

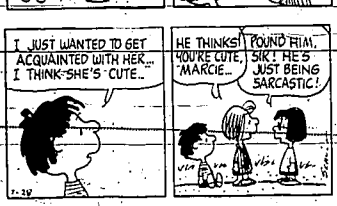

SHIP'S MASTER

There are only two occasions when a ship at sea is not under the complete command of said ship's master. Can you name them? Wait, don't say when the harbor pilot takes over. The harbor pilot is only an advisor, ordinarily. Not in the Panama Canal, however. Nor in the Suez Canal. There, the canal pilots take full command. And if a ship's master has a history as a troublemaker with canal pilots, he may even be removed from the vessel by subtle means. A higher authority may invite him ashore for a conference where he is dined in a dandy manner, then sent overland to meet his ship by fancy auto or railroad car.

There are only about 215 million people in this country. So how do you account for the fact that there'll be 250 million calendars printed here this year?

Postlers contend one bride in 10 was a pickup.

DOONESBURY

If I want to move furniture and appliances . . .
I use the Times-News because I can count on Instant Results . .

It's hard to believe the success we have enjoyed in the past year and a half since we purchased Dutch's as a Showkase Store. Now we have added a new facility, Dutch's Showkase Warehouse, just across the street from our present store to serve Magic Valley even better!

There are many reasons for this success. First, we believe in selling more merchandise for less. Second, we offer one day service on appliances and one day delivery. Third, we offer easy financing. Fourth, we offer only the finest in name-brand merchandise including Furniture, Appliances, Stereos, Televisions, Carpeting and many more. Fifth, we have trained professional sales and service departments dedicated to your satisfaction. And most important we use the bulk of our advertising budget with the Times-News. We find it is the best way we can reach you with the specials we offer each week. And, we have learned by experience that we can count on our ad to bring us "Instant Results" and after all, that's what it's all about.

NEW YORK (UPI)—Prices opened mixed Wednesday in moderate trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones Industrial average was ahead 0.42 point to 984.55 shortly after the opening. Declines led advances, 210 to 124, among the 540 issues crossing the tape.

Just as the market opened, the Commerce Department reported its index of leading indicators rose only 0.3 per cent in June, the slowest increase in seven months. It increased by a revised 0.7 per cent in May.

Earlier this month—the government reported the Gross National Product, stripped of inflation, rose 4.4 per cent in the second quarter, down from the 8.2 per cent rise in the first period.

On Tuesday, Arthur F. Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, predicted the GNP would rise 6.8 per cent this year, the same prediction given by White House economists.

Burns disturbed investors Tuesday when he testified before the House Banking Committee that the board had lowered target rates for the broader aspects of the nation's money supply, indicating the Fed had "tightened" credit slightly.

'Dear Critics: sit on it' — U.S. cage team

MONTREAL (UPI) — There were a lot of critics and they were all wrong.

Some people laughed and others just cried when the United States sent the youngest basketball team in Olympic history into the Games this year — especially considering history.

"Even a man with the experience and knowledge of Marquette University coach Al McGuire said these youngsters could not win in this competition against experienced, international players."

Sorry.

They not only could win, they did. The young Americans blew out Yugoslavia with their burning speed 95-74 Tuesday night to regain the gold medal.

Russia, the team they wanted to beat in the finals, didn't make it, so the U.S. could not have that satisfaction. But the players did get the pleasure of answering all their critics.

John Thompson, the coach at Georgetown University and assistant to Olympic coach Dean Smith, set the tone for them when he told a team meeting: "Wouldn't it be a wonderful thing to go back to all those people who said we weren't good enough and show them the gold medal?"

The U.S. was good enough largely because Adrian Dantley was so good.

He scored 12 points in the first six minutes, helped build a 20-8 lead, and the outclassed Yugoslavians never got within seven points the rest of the night. At the end, the Notre Dame All-American had 30 points even though he missed 3/2 minutes of the second half after a Yugoslavian's elbow opened a cut above his right eye.

"We played with poise and confidence and it was an effort that anyone associated with this team had to be proud of," said Smith, who also was criticized because seven of the dozen players came out of his own Atlantic Coast Conference.

There was no criticism Tuesday night, however. The U.S. team averaged 97 points a game on its drive to the gold medal, as opposed to the 73 it averaged during the ill-fated 1972 competition at Munich.

After what happened there, a crusade was the only word that would properly describe what the youngsters did this year.

"We sacrificed a lot this summer, trying out for the team, risking injuries, anything that might have happened," said Scott May, who led Indiana University to the NCAA championship and was the college player of the year in 1975-76.

"But believe me, when that final gun went off tonight, it was all worth it."

This year the officials were from Holland and Canada. Four years ago, the officials were from Brazil and Bulgaria and Russia, won the gold medal, handing the Americans a bitter and controversial 51-50 defeat — the only U.S. basketball loss in 70 Olympic games.

Tuesday night's victory gave the U.S. its eighth Olympic basketball gold medal, and each individual medal like the one Dantley got is worth about $66. They are, in fact, plated silver brads containing only six grams of gold.

But now that he has that one, Dantley will concentrate on sitting down to collect a lot more gold from the Buffalo Braves.

Despite the recent merger, he will collect a fat contract from Buffalo, which selected him in the first round of the NBA draft last spring. He was picked No. 6 overall, following his junior year at Notre Dame, where he averaged 23.6 points a game.

"I always play well in big games," said Dantley, who was the leading U.S. scorer throughout the Olympics with 116 points in six games, an average of 19.3.

Dantley's performance Tuesday night did nothing to diminish his bargaining power.

A 6-5 forward who was forced to play against much taller opposition, he finished the first half with 18 points as the U.S. built leads of as many as 22 points. When he went out in the second half, the lead was still a comfortable 18 but when he came back it was down to 10, 66-56.

Dantley went back into the game, took over once more, and the Americans outscored Yugoslavia 21-12 over the next six minutes to make it 87-68.

Some of the lustre was taken off the title game because of Russia's surprising loss to Yugoslavia in the semi-finals. It was no secret the Americans wanted a chance to win their title back from the Soviets, but there was no loss of joy over the fact they beat somebody else instead.

Smith's young team — all but three players on the 12-man roster were college undergraduates and the other three were seniors last year — juggled each other, jumped for joy and generally whooped it up pretty good at the end of the game. Bill Russell, a member of the 1956 gold medal team who was here as a television commentator, perhaps best summed up their performance under such intense pressure when he said "they played a perfect game."

Dantley did have help, particularly from Phil Ford, who still has two years of eligibility left as a guard for Smith at the University of North Carolina.

Ford had six steals, including two that set up baskets by Dantley as the Americans jumped off to their quick, early lead. Ford also led the U.S. in assists during the tournament.

Scott May, the college player of the year for NCAA champion Indiana, and Mitch Kupchak of North Carolina scored 14 points each for the United States. Drazen Dalagic paced the Yugoslavians with 27, Kresimir Cosic, the Brigham Young University center who had 20 points in the 89-84 semi-final upset over the Soviets, had 15 Tuesday night.

The U.S. got its gold medals from Lari Killianin, president of the International Olympic Committee, and had the satisfaction of seeing him accompanied by William Jones, secretary-general of the International Amateur Basketball Association. Jones is the official who made the rulings that gave Russia six chances to play the final three seconds of the 1972 title game, until the Soviets finally scored and won.

Unfortunately, the millions of U.S. fans watching at home for this emotional highlight of the entire Olympics did not get to see that while it was happening. The American Broadcasting Company, which has the television rights in the U.S., chose to show tapes of boxing matches while the American flag was raised, the national anthem was played and the players marched around the court in victory. Later ABC showed a tape of part of the ceremony.

Nothing else that happened in the Olympics Tuesday really mattered to the majority of Americans, and it was, in reality, a quiet day anyway since there was no competition in track and field.

However, the U.S. did advance four of five boxers into the semi-finals of that competition — four others are in the quarter-finals and will fight Thursday night. The winners were flyweight Leo Randolph of Tacoma, Wash., bantamweight Charles Mooney, an Army sergeant from Ft. Bragg, N.C., lightweight Howard Davis of Glen Cove, N.Y., and light welterweight Ray Leonard of Palmer Park, Md. However, featherweight Davey Lee Armstrong of Puyallup, Wash., lost a close and controversial decision to a Cuban, Angel Herrera.

The 18-year-old Randolph, who made up a poster with his picture and a sign that says "1976 Olympic gold medal winner," and has it hanging in his room here, pounded out a decision over Ireland's David Larmour, a 27-year-old veteran of more than 400 amateur fights.

Mooney suffered a cut over his eye but still won a unanimous decision over Chivson Hwang of South Korea that was greeted with boos from the crowd. Davis, the 1974 world amateur featherweight champion, stopped Tzvetkov of Bulgaria at 1:48 of the third round after opening a cut over his left eye. And Leonard pounded out an easy decision over Ulrich Beyer of East Germany, a former European champion.

All four are assured of at least bronze medals, matching the total the Americans won at Munich in 1972.

Klaus Dibiasi, Italy's 28-year-old veteran, won his third straight Olympic gold medal in the 10-meter platform diving, the final swimming diving event of the Games. Greg Louganis, a 16-year-old from El Cajon, Calif., competing despite a severe toothache that caused pains every time he hit the water, was second.

Vassily Alexeev of the Soviet Union regained the title of "world's strongest man" when he won the superheavyweight weightlifting with a world record 968-pound total.

That was the 26th gold medal of the Games for the Soviets, who lead in that category and also in total medals with 80. East Germany is second in gold with 28 and the United States, which has 22 gold medals, 25 silver and 18 bronze, is second in total medals with 65.

Russia, however, had to accept boos when it got one of those medals.

That was the bronze medal the Soviets won by beating Canada 100-72 Tuesday as Alexandr Belov, who scored the final basket at Munich, scored 21 points, grabbed 12 rebounds and blocked five shots. The pro-U.S. and pro-Canadian fans at the sold-out Forum booed the Russian team lustily as the medals were presented.

Canyon Springs slates $4,400 Ida-Gem tourney

TWIN FALLS — The Ida-Gem amateur, which offers nearly as much in added money as the field will pay in entry fees, will be conducted at Canyon Springs golf course this weekend.

The event offers $2,000 in added money and due to the limitation of 120 players on the nine-hole layout, the field will kick in just $2,400. All of it will be returned to the field in the form of merchandise prizes.

Mike Sessions, host professional, said the field is filling quickly, particularly in the first through third flights. As usual the greatest vacancies in the championship flight.

The tournament is being underwritten by California Nick Demetrou, a former all-American football quarterback who now is big in Disney productions and owns a chain of fast-food restaurants in the east — his restaurant-business currently makes him the biggest single customer of Ida-Gem — hence the name.

In addition to the $2,000 added money, Demetrou and Ida-Gem are offering two courtesy carts with free beverage and Ida-Gem propped shops through both days.

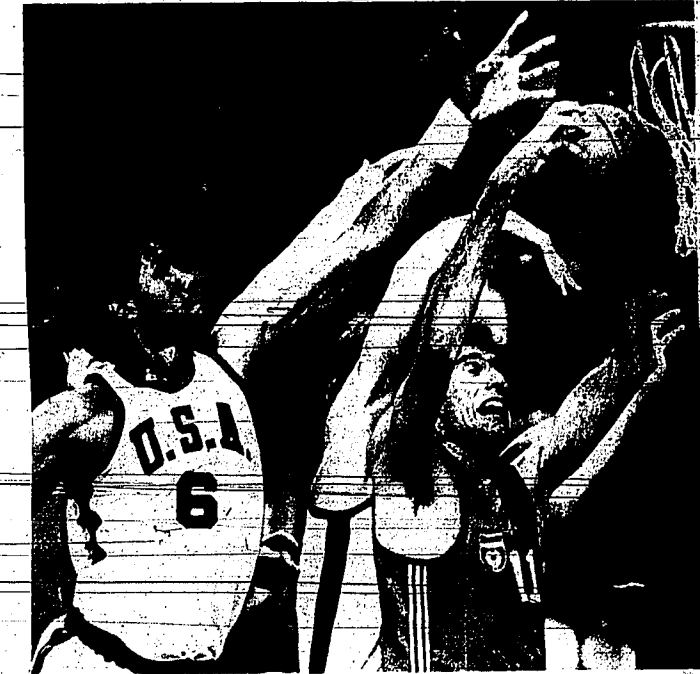

The problem, says Sessions, is figuring out a way to divide the money. He plans on paying the top eight spots in each of the four flights.

"Actually, there won't be any losers. They can eat and drink all day both days and get in two rounds of golf and a chance to win good money," Sessions said earlier.

The course is rated one of the most frustratingly tricky in the area. Canyon Springs golfers are expecting someone other than the usual few Magic Valley contenders to pick up the title.

A prime prospect is Jim Purves, Twin Falls, who plays the course well. He scored well at Burley last week. Burley amateur title Gary Duncan hopes to ride a hot streak through this one and a couple more before having to go back to college.

Kevin Packard also should show well.

Garvey says facts refute NFL owner 'horror tales'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ed Garvey, executive director of the pro football players' union, told a congressional hearing today that "horror stories" voiced by owners when the Rozelle compensation rule was abolished have been proved false.

In testimony prepared for delivery before the House Committee on Professional Sports, Garvey said the National Football League Players Association also favors a proposal that the top eight NFL Super Bowl playoff teams be prohibited from signing free agents to prevent richer teams from cornering the market on stars.

Garvey was the opening witness as the House group resumed hearings on a broad range of problems confronting professional sports. He was to be followed by baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn, who testified last week but was recalled for questioning about a major league franchise for Washington and proposed legislation affecting tax shelter treatment of team owners.

Garvey focused on a federal judge's decision earlier this year which virtually struck down NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle's unilateral authority to assess compensation for a star playing out his option and signing with another team.

He noted that Rozelle suspended the rule May 1 and "for the first time in history... 24 players were truly free agents. Now we could test the horror stories that were predicted by owner witnesses. We wanted to see if Lamar Hunt, Clint Murchison and Bud Adams, the wealthiest NFL owners, would purchase the top eight stars to Los Angeles... and we waited for the cold weather cities to fold their tents and give up."

Garvey said that neither Hunt's Kansas City Chiefs nor Adams' Houston Oilers landed a free agent and Murchison's Dallas Cowboys signed but only after losing two free agent stars to the rival Washington Redskins.

He added that former Miami star Paul Warfield, who had jumped to the now defunct World Football League, returned to the NFL with the Cleveland Browns and Willie Spencer, a top NFL running star, signed with the Minnesota Vikings.

Of the union's suggestion that the free-agent problem be dealt with by denying the eight playoff teams the right to sign them, Garvey commented: "There is no need for other restrictions on athletes as this would help the weaker teams improve. The weak teams could improve rapidly under such a system and the strong teams would be at a slight disadvantage. To date, the NFL has rejected this novel proposal."

"If one is simply looking at the question of balance within the league, to predictable improvement of losing teams, to a system that weakens the strong and helps the weak, there is not a good argument against it that we have heard," he said.

Jerome edges W.R. in Legion playoff

TWIN FALLS — Greg Thibault rifled a lonesome single to centerfield to lift Jerome Legion past Wood River 7-6 in an extra-inning playoff game Tuesday night.

Thibault's hit, accounting for his third RBI of the night, ended a tight duel in the best of three series that saw each team win at home and then get the two extra innings in the rubber match, played at Twin Falls' Jayvex field.

The victory sends Jerome against an undetermined Boise area team this weekend with that winner earning a berth in the state "B" tournament in Buhl early next month.

Jerome's Mark Kells seemed to have a 6-3 victory well in hand in the top of the seventh, inning when he retired the first two men. But two errors sandwiched around a walk loaded the bases and Pat Howe promptly tied the score when he belted a base-clearing double to the centerfield fence.

The game ended in the bottom of the ninth when Kells opened with a hit and moved to second when Bryan Farnham hit by a pitch. Thibault then singled off Ford's single plating Rick Hillier, who lived on an error, in the first inning. In the second, Bruce Thompson singled and Thibault walked with Marty Humphries and Rex Harding plating them with a sacrifice fly and a ground out.

Wood River sliced it to 3-2 in the third when Butterfield lived on an error, Young singled and John Shay chased both home with a triple.

But Jerome seemed to have moved out of teach in the third with a three-run outburst. Kells lived on a fielder's choice and Ford drew a walk. Thibault scored both with a long triple and he scored seconds later on a wild pitch.

Singles by Dupuis and Shay got one back for Wood River in the fifth and set the stage for Howe and Thibault to have their offensive moments.

Seahawks anticipate exhibition sellout

SEATTLE (UPI) — General Manager John Thompson of the Seattle Seahawks says the new NFL team's first preseason game Sunday against the San Francisco 49ers will be played before a sellout — "for now, sellout" — crowd in Seattle's Kingdome.

Thompson told the Puget Sound Sportswriters' and Sportscenter's Tuesday that only a few thousand tickets remained to be sold and they were going at a rapid rate.

"I'm sure we will have a sellout or near sellout," he said.

Thompson said about 2,000 season ticket buyers had returned their tickets because they were unhappy with seat locations, but he said that development was expected.

"We knew last year when we sold those 24,000 tickets the first day we had a problem. Everyone envisioned sitting on the 30-yard line."

Coech Jack Patera, continuing twice daily practice sessions at Century, has said he won't announce his starting lineups until Thursday.

Patera also has said he won't be playing all four quarter-backs in the game and intends to select two from among "Ben Grant, Gary Kettley, Steve Meece and Jim Zorn."

All four were given a turn in last Saturday's intra-squad scrimmage. Zorn threw for the most yardage, 135, completing

TWIN FALLS — Brenda Falash, the girl who probably never had a chance to be anything but an athlete, takes her show on the road this week.

And the junior-to-be at Twin Falls high school is looking forward to her first big test in regional competition.

Brenda, along with Clay Meyer and Debbie Brizee from Twin Falls and Billy Ransom of Piler and perhaps some other Magic Valley youngsters, will run Saturday and Sunday in the western regional AAU Junior track and field championships in Rosewell, N.M.

While all are good athletes, Brenda takes a wealth of athletic background into her competition. She qualified in three events — the quarter-mile, half-mile and 220-yard dash although she might forego one of the longer events once she sizes the field up.

Brenda is the daughter of Bob and Ellie Falash and there's a lot of athletic background right there. Bob was given his choice as a Twin Falls senior to play in either the basketball or football all-star games, in the days when Idaho had those early August "classes."

family, what do you say? It's just sports."

Her date this weekend with the best from Idaho, Utah, Arizona, New Mexico and part of Oregon is the highlight of her career thus far.

"I don't know what to expect. It's exciting but scary," she smiles.

Her partner in all this running is Brizee, who won the state mile title last spring and is considered to be a bright prospect for distance.

"We run three days a week at the track and the rest of the days out on a road somewhere," Brenda says. "We've never been out of condition. We took two weeks off after track season had ended and then started running again. Right now I guess what we're doing is polishing ourselves for the regional. I don't think we are in as good condition as we were during the track season because our practices haven't been as hard. But we're in pretty good shape."

The one thing she is looking forward to is finding out just what she can do.

"I think I'm getting stronger all the time. I know I am. I can run farther, faster than ever before. I don't know if I'm getting faster because with the events I've been running I haven't had much sprint work, I haven't been timed. But I know I'm definitely getting stronger and I feel that I will continue to grow stronger."

Brizee and Brenda will start working out for cross country in another three or four weeks and will run through the winter. I think we'll be a lot stronger next spring and then we'll see, by the times in track."

"I should have broken 2:20 this year. I felt that I could. But there wasn't anyone really pushing me in any of my races. Debbie feels the same way. That's why we're looking forward to running into some strong competition in New Mexico. Even if we lose we'll have a better idea of what we can do."

Brenda busily discounts opinions held that for the large part women athletes perform better in their early teens than later when it would seem maturity takes away their sharpness and stamina.

"I think that happens because so many girls just lose interest. When you're a freshman or a sophomore everything is new and exciting and its fun to be part of it. But then some of the girls get tired of the work and just lose interest. Like there are so many girls that quit running when they graduate from high school. They don't even think about running in college."

The enthusiasm of the team and the turnout is one of the reasons she is now happy the family moved back to Twin Falls. "You get so many girls out for track here and there's more fun when there are more on the team. Everyone gets excited about track in Twin Falls while in some places like Pocatello it's not as big a deal."

The (the coaches) changed it around in the middle of last season so the girls were taking the same workouts as the boys and working out with the boys in distance training. That made a lot of difference. And the parents here are all really excited about their daughters running. They come to every track meet."

Riding on the outcome of the regional is a possible trip to nationals in Tennessee next month. Only the individual champion wins that prize, however.

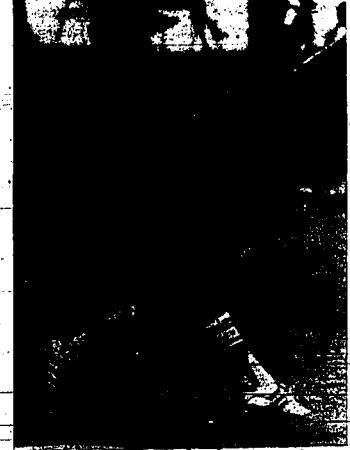

"After the preliminaries I think I'll be able to see how the quarter and half mile shape up. If I feel I can make a better showing by dropping out of one of them, I will. They come close together in order of events. In Boise I had only something like 30 minutes between them. But I'll run the 220 regardless because it's one of the last races of the day."

And if it comes to a choice, her druthers are already known.

"I run the half mile because Coach (Jerry) Kleinpeter thinks it is my best event. But if I have to drop one down there, I'll stay in the quarter because that's the one I like best."

She makes no prediction.

"I'll be down there just trying to do my best," she says. And knowing the psyche of the Falash family, the certainty is if that Brenda Falash is beaten, she will have run the best time of her life.

BASEBALL, basketball, Brenda Falash plays all the sports available to women in Twin Falls. But track is her first love.

He played four years varsity ball for the Bruins — the second to the last to accomplish that — and was the last four-year basketball letterman at University of Idaho until the NCAA rescinded the silly rule of not allowing freshmen to compete on the varsity level. Bob got his first letter due to a break in the rule during the Korean War when colleges were having trouble getting bodies out for sports because Uncle Sam had a lot of them in khaki uniforms.

He had a chance to sign a professional baseball contract and most of those watching him felt football was his best sport.

Mrs. Falash is a physical education teacher at O'Leary junior high and that indicates her dedication to sport.

Older brother Mike has been called the best quarterback Idaho ever produced in leading Highland to the mythical state championship and he was named MVP in the state basketball tournament his senior year although the Rams finished second to the Bruins. There's also a suspicion on Mike that baseball was his best sport.

A second older brother, Mark, was considered a top wrestling prospect at Highland, but he unfortunately was injured in a motorcycle accident and was unable to continue in sports. A younger sister, Susan, is thought by the family to be another Brenda-a-budding.

Because of those older brothers, Brenda's life has revolved around sports as she tagged along with mother to watch the boys play knothole baseball and basketball. The brothers also let her play with them in pickup games — like letting her snag in the outfield while they took hitting practice, etc.

She first turned to swimming and picked up a few dozen medals there. When the family moved to Pocatello she became associated with the ISU-associated women's track club called the Windblowers.

It was in the midnights that she discovered she liked running. As a 13-year-old she turned in "about a 59" second quarter. Others with better memories report it at 58.6.

The quarter-mile remains her first love although she has yet to run it in interscholastic competition. As a freshman and a sophomore, Brenda has been surrounded by good quartermilers — but no halfmilers. Hence, she has moved up the extra lap to the half to fill the team point void there.

She is not restricted to any distance. She is the defending state cross country individual champion and the state A-1 half mile titlist. She also ran on the winning 880 and mile relay teams.

Between times she was a sophomore starting guard on the Bruin basketball varsity and plays centerfield for Red's Trading Post-Snake River Tire, considered the best women's aggregation around town.

She spends her days roguing for a bean and pea warehouse and runs afterward. She anticipates she will be running for a long time — if not in races, just to run.

Why does she keep herself moving like that?

"I love it," she says of athletics. "With a family like our family, what do you say? It's just sports."

Her date this weekend with the best from Idaho, Utah, Arizona, New Mexico and part of Oregon is the highlight of her career thus far.

TWIN FALLS — Professional Jim Packard and amateur Carl Hoss combined for the pro-scratch championship of the Idaho PGA chapter Tuesday.

The twosome turned, the Blue Lakes Country Club course in six-under 63 to end the two-day event at 129 and a six-stroke advantage. But that margin wasn't there until the final few holes when several challengers ran into bogey trouble and fell back.

It was the first victory for either man in this event although they twice had combined for second: Packard

Yankees sign duo

NEW YORK (UPI) — Money may not be able to buy happiness but both Ken Holtzman and Graig Nettles believe that it is able to buy security.

The two linked long time contracts with the New York Yankees Sunday night, leaving only Sandy Alomar, Elliott Maddox and Doyle Alexander the only unsigned players on the roster of the American League East division leaders.

Holtzman came to New York as part of a 10-player trade with the Baltimore Orioles June 15. He was traded to Baltimore from the Oakland A's a few days prior to the start of the season after he failed to agree to new contract terms with A's owner Charles O. Finley. The Orioles also failed to meet Holtzman's contract demands and after a proposed deal with the Kansas City Royals failed to materialize, Holtzman came to the Yankees only hours before the trading deadline was set to expire.

Neither the Yankees or Holtzman would divulge terms of the contract but it was believed to be a five-year pact calling for an estimated $750,000. Nettles signed a three-year contract for an estimated $300,000.

Corn one of few gainers in futures mart Tuesday

Courtesy Sinclair and Co. CHICAGO — Corn provided about the only bright spot in the commodity futures market Tuesday.

It was one of the few segments of the market to close with gains as grain and meats wound up lower for the day.

Commodity News Service said Maine potatoes closed 6 to 30 cents down in all but May — which did not trade even for liquidation — which was unchanged. The 30 cent drop occurred in April. Volume totaled 258 trades.

In the Commodity Futures Trading Commission hearings on the new contract, diverse testimony called for an end to all potato futures trading and for dropping the May contract. The hearings are continuing in Presque Isle, Me.

Corn showed considerable balance and resisted pressure from soybeans' flirting with limit losses, with late speculative day trading

European harvests reduced

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rains have at least partially broken the worst drought in memory in Western Europe, but they came too late to prevent crop losses that will cut the region's grain harvest to an estimated 125 million metric tons, according to the Agriculture Department.

The estimate — 8 million tons below the department's June forecast and 45 million tons below an earlier prediction — was 7 million tons below last year's poor crop.

The new forecast Monday confirmed informal predictions made earlier by department policymakers. It was "issued after analysts' conferences with top executives who had just returned from a two-week field tour of European drought areas."

Because of the reduction in grain output, spokesmen added, Western Europe's net grain requirements for this year's winter season, which begins this fall, are now expected to rise to 32 million tons, up nearly 11 million tons from the current 1975-76 season.

Officials said actual imports in the new season would be up by only 1 million tons, but the net import total will be more than twice that amount because European grain exports are expected to fall off by about 6 million tons.

The import estimates, spokesmen said, included a projected 5-million-ton gain in European pig slates of grain for livestock feed. Most of that extra feed will be American corn, spokesmen said.

New production estimates showed European wheat prospects at 24.4 million tons, compared to 46.6 million tons last year, and feed grains at 74.1 million tons compared to 81.8 million tons last year.

UFW plans Florida bid for workers

MIAMI (UPI) — The United Farm Workers of America plans a statewide drive of consumer boycotts and work in the fields to organize 150,000 Florida farm workers.

The drive, patterned after a similar one in California, will begin with a push to have city consumers boycott farm products, said Ray Demers, head of the Miami UFW office.

"Once the city boycott starts are working and we get the housewives across the state, we can start organizing in the fields," he said.

The UFW signed its first contract in Florida last year with workers of Coea Co.'s Minute Maid frozen orange juice operation, which is located in central Florida.

Richard Cook, head of the Florida Farm Worker Ministry, said the union plans to end child labor and contract abuses and seek job security and protection from pesticides.

producing a close-a-cent higher to a cent lower. The highs were as much as 4 cents above the previous close. Export statistics showed 159 million bushels shipped during May and a cumulative total of 1.3 billion bushels through June.

Wheat finished with small gains after highs of 3 to 4 cents over the previous close, with technical resistance halting an advance on short covering and exporter buying. Some speculative buying interest appeared when prices were 3 1/2 to 5 cents above contract lows.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture has reported the winter wheat harvest is 90 percent complete, slightly above average of last year.

Soy beans vacillated rapidly over a 16- to 19-cent range before settling from 18 to 19 cents lower. The market sagged to limit down twice during the day, with a run of buying the market almost back to Monday's close in between. Exporter demand made meal the strongest member of the complex, which settled from 1.00 to 2.80 higher.

Corn bear spreading was a feature in oil, which saw gains but only a short time before closing 33 to 50 points lower.

Heavy wire house and local liquidation followed issuance of the semi-annual cattle inventory, with prices dropping 25 to 1.30 per hundredweight with all 1976 deliveries losing more than a dollar. Trade was placed at 13,221 contracts, eight tenths for net meats and a 50 cent lower price for 500 to 600 pound choice steer carcasses stimulated selling.

Most live hog trade lacked spark, with limit losses in pork bellies and heavy commission house selling exerting pressure. At the close, hogs were 52 to 130 lower with moderately heavy volume of 3,495 trades.

Pork bellies closed sharply lower with the back months down the limit. Bullish anticipation of a large movement strengthened August and February, but all contracts were under pressure from aggressive selling.

Despite firm cash markets, bellies ended 20 to 200 points down.

Chicago Board of Trade silver closed 5 to 10 cents higher, partly in sympathy with gold and copper prices.

Sugar II in New York ended from 22 to 42 points on a trade of 4,669 lots, with the world spot price at 12.5 cents a pound. Sugar 12 traded 210 contracts, closing 23 to 42 points down.

Improving outlook for beef forecast

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A report from the Agriculture Department Monday indicated currently-low cattle and beef prices are likely to move up later this year and in 1977.

The report from the department's Crop Reporting Board estimated the number of cattle and calves in the nation July 1 at 133.5 million head, down 5 percent from a year earlier.

Most of the decline came in beef animals, pointing to a decline in consumer supplies of beef in the future. Heavy beef supplies in recent months have held cattle prices below the break-even point for most farmers.

Officials estimated the number of beef cows on hand July 1 at 42.8 million. The stock of these cows, which will produce future calf crops, was down 9 percent from a year earlier.

Dairy cow numbers were estimated at 11.1 million, down 1 percent from last year.

The survey indicated that supplies of grain-fed beef probably will remain heavy for some months — it showed the number of steers weighing over 500 pounds at 18.9 million, up 8 percent from a year earlier, while the 18.7 million estimate of heifers over 500 pounds was unchanged from a year ago.

Officials also noted, however, that the stock of young heifers, steers and bulls weighing under 500 pounds totaled only 39.3 million head, down 14 percent from a year earlier.

Economists noted in another report that farmers facing red ink prices for live cattle have been slowing down the rate at which they are moving cattle into feedlots. This factor coupled with the decline in total cattle numbers "point to some easing in beef output and prospects for stronger beef cattle prices in the coming year," the economic report said.
