

Back in school

CLASSES resumed in Twin Falls today for an estimated 6,000 students who were out of school four days this week because of the Twin Falls teachers strike. Here, students at Twin Falls High School get back to the books.

today in brief

Assassination fails

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — Ethiopian leader Maj. Mengistu Haile Mariam escaped an assassination attempt in Addis Ababa Thursday night, the Ethiopian government radio reported today. The radio, monitored in Nairobi, said Mengistu's limousine was attacked about 8:30 p.m., as he was leaving his office in the grand palace in downtown Addis Ababa to return home.

Blacks arrested

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Police arrested scores of blacks today to prevent a recurrence of the rioting that hit the white downtown area of Johannesburg for the first time in 14 weeks of racial violence. An estimated 1,500 blacks surged through the city's main shopping street Thursday shouting black power slogans and smashing store windows.

Life question unanswered

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — The Viking 1 and 2 robot laboratories perched on Mars, after weeks of probing and poking, sifting and simmering, have given scientists data for an answer to the question: Is there life on the red planet? The answer: Who knows? The information relayed by the Vikings has not shown there is any life on Mars, scientists told a news conference Thursday. Then again, they noted, neither does it show there isn't any.

Flier-GF game tonight

A football game between Flier and Glenns Ferry High Schools will take place at 8 p.m. today at Flier High. An article on the Times-News sports page incorrectly stated the game would start at 1:30 p.m. The Times-News regrets the error.

TF classes resume after week-long teacher strike

By GEORGE WILEY, Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — Teachers in Twin Falls were back in the classroom today for the first time in nearly a week.

The six-day teachers strike officially ended last night as representatives for the teachers and school district negotiators sat down to begin bargaining again on teacher contracts.

However, neither side was particularly optimistic about the first negotiation session which ended last night. Still, teachers seemed glad to be back at work today.

"I'm glad to be back, everybody is," said high school librarian Shirley Thorpe as she returned to work this morning. "Picketing is no fun." "As far as gaining things, as time goes on we'll tell what we gained," Mrs. Thorpe added. "Hopefully, people are aware that there are needs that were unmet."

High school psychology teacher Jackie Reh-weder agreed that teachers were relieved the strike was over, but added, "I think it showed good faith on our part to do it (end the strike off)."

"If it (the strike) did anything," she added, "I hope it made people realize they must be aware of what is going on."

With the teachers back at work, however, there were indications both sides were near where they left off when the strike was called last Friday.

In a newsletter to teachers this morning, the Twin Falls Education Association (TFEA) said that during last night's sessions "the Twin Falls School Board reverted to their position of last week on nearly all of the unresolved items in negotiations."

"Negotiations did not go as smoothly as the Association had anticipated," Margie Valley Unit Serv. director Virginia Toss added this morning, "but we'll resume negotiations at 7 p.m.

tonight."

Ross said she didn't think the strike call-off had weakened the teachers' bargaining position, however.

"They (the board) realize (now) that the teachers of Twin Falls will strike," she said. A listing of bargaining positions on resolved issues, included in the TFEA newsletter, suggested the association had given ground on some proposals.

The TFEA's apparent concessions included an agreement to negotiate extra duty pay for teachers after job descriptions are finished by the school district Oct. 15.

The TFEA maintained its stance that the extra pay be geared to the district's salary schedule, but withdrew its previous objection to the job descriptions, which the board maintains are legally required.

According to the TFEA letter, however, the board refused to negotiate extra pay at all, a change in the board's previous stance. The board earlier said it would negotiate the issue following the job descriptions.

The TFEA's strongest stance on the issue of class size. Previously the TFEA had wanted additional pay for teachers with overloaded classes, but last night it proposed the hiring of teachers' aides to relieve overloading of classrooms.

TFEA negotiator Ben Kius said the teacher's aides proposal had been suggested in earlier meetings by acting school superintendent Carl Snow, "so we just picked up on it."

He admitted the aides proposal would be more costly.

School board negotiator Byron Snyder, who called last night's sessions "not too good" from the board's standpoint either, said the proposal would cost the district roughly $310,000.

"They're demanding things that cost money," Snyder said, "and we just don't have the money. They know this all the time, so I don't know why they keep harping on issues that cost money."

Debate breaks no new ground

By HELEN THOMAS, UPI White House Reporter

President Ford and Jimmy Carter traded charges of incompetence, swapped promises, swapped computers, and broke no new ground on major domestic issues in their first presidential debate.

In the first confrontation between presidential candidates since the Nixon-Kennedy clashes 16 years ago, the Democratic and Republican contenders Thursday used staid, measured tones.

Occasionally they spoke sharply and directly to each other on such issues as tax reform, unemployment and inflation, but for the most part they looked directly into the television cameras at an audience estimated at 100 million.

The 90 minute, prime time debate ran into a technical snafu. Nine minutes before it was over, an amplifier problem killed the audio portion for 28 minutes and left the candidates waiting nervously to give their summations.

The paper organization polled 600 persons across the nation and found 39 per cent thought Ford did better, 31 per cent thought Carter did, 30 per cent called it a draw.

"I think we both did adequately," Carter told reporters afterwards. His wife, Rosalyn, cut in and said, "You can't say it, but I think you won!"

Ford, grinning and waving to cheering supporters at a post-debate celebration, said: "From what I've heard, we did all right. And when we get to the next one and we talk about national defense and foreign policy, we'll do even better!"

"We're at a turning point in the history of our country," both candidates consider the debates critical. Historians generally credit the first debate in 1960 as John F. Kennedy's springboard to the presidency.

Both Ford and Carter used the Republican administration to make many of their points — Ford defending and Carter attacking. They stood in the old Walnut Street Theater at podiums seven feet apart for the first of three debates which may hold the key to the White House.

Ford said he has turned the economy around, moved toward a balanced budget, cut taxes and federal spending.

Responsible

NEW YORK (UPI) — A piece of machinery similar to a component in a car radio or home stereo set apparently was responsible for the 28 minute silence during the first presidential debate, an American Broadcasting System spokesman said today.

The spokesman for the network, which handled the pool transmission of the debate, answered a question of the cause of the failure by saying: "All we know at this point is that an audio amplifier seems to have blown. We are investigating further."

He said the amplifiers come in all sizes, and added: "It is not by nature a complicated piece of machinery. Everyone has one in his car radio or stereo set."

Sugar beets not so sweet this year, farmer says

By KEN HODGE, Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Sugar beets have been good to Flier farmer Howard Annis for 30 years, but this year prospects for him and other beet farmers don't look so sweet.

The entire domestic sugar industry is gravely threatened and may fold if sugar prices remain as low as they are now, according to Amalgamated Sugar Co. officials.

Depressed sugar prices could, in fact, result in closure of the Twin Falls Amalgamated Sugar Company plant and three other plants in Idaho and Oregon which are not predicted to operate at capacity next year if total beet acreage predictions for 1977 become a reality.

"I've seen the beet business grow from the time we used horses and short-handled hoes," Annis recalls about his early beginnings in the sugar industry. "In those days we could take about 50 tons a day out of the ground with an eight-man crew using hand tools (special knives with hooked ends)."

"Nowadays you can get 250 tons per day with a three-row digger," Annis explains. "Sitting in his dining-room overlooking his newly finished lawn, Annis is not optimistic about the beet market this year. Although no one knows what beets will actually bring on the market at harvest time, he says he has heard unfavorable rumors."

"I've heard everything from $15 (per ton) to $25," he recounts. "If we don't get $25 a ton on them, there won't be anything very attractive. As far as Annis can surmise from reports, prospects are right now that we won't."

Annis and most of the sugar industry blame the present situation on the repeal of the Sugar Act of 1949.

In 1978, Congress established the first tariff on imported sugar merely to raise revenue for the yearling government, but soon the tariffs became protection for the growing domestic beet and cane sugar industry sheltering it from the world market.

And now, instead of importing all of its sugar, the United States grows more than half of its total annual consumption of sugar in the form of cane and beets.

The reason the U.S. is able to produce so much of its sugar, according to sugar industry officials, is because growers and processors have been protected since 1934 by sugar legislation enacted when tariffs failed to provide the stable prices and dependable supply of sugar that Americans needed.

The legislation, which came to be called the Sugar Act, protected domestic sugar producers from the whims of the wildly fluctuating world sugar market.

This, farmers like Howard Annis were able to stay in the business for 40-year periods and "always get a good check" for their efforts.

Local verdict on candidate debate - it's a draw

ART IRELAND
... 'A draw'

JOHN W. JONES
... 'Ford won'

TOM PRAZAK
... 'not impressive'

TWIN FALLS — A quick poll today of local reaction here to the televised Ford-Carter debate last night shows most persons believe nobody won.

"I think it was a draw," Art Ireland, Twin Falls, said, adding the debates didn't change his mind. Former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter still is his man.

Tom Prazak, Twin Falls, also thought the debates were a draw. "I don't think either candidate is too impressive, and during the debates they were not too clear throughout in their views," he said.

Prazak said the debates hadn't changed his mind on who he was going to vote for and he seemed to be leaning towards President Gerald Ford.

John W. Jones and Harley Abshire, both Twin Falls, said they thought Ford won the debate.

"I think Ford did," Jones said. "Carter's plans and figures seemed vague."

Abshire said the debate was close, but "I'd probably have to go with Ford."

On the technical difficulty which caused the sound to go out during the last part of the debate, reaction was mixed.

"I think the technical difficulties did some unplanned good," Prazak said. He called the candidates' "spontaneous reaction" insightful.

Jerome woman injured at Paul

RUPERT — A Jerome woman suffered cuts when her car was sideswiped southeast of Paul Monday afternoon.
Marie Jenks, 56, Jerome, was treated at and released from Minidoka Memorial Hospital.
A Minidoka County deputy sheriff said she was injured as she tried to make a left turn into a driveway near the intersection of 500 West and 200 South roads about 1:50 p.m. Monday.
He said the woman had stopped at a stop sign, pulled out and began the turn. Paul Pugsley, 17, came over a hillcrest and his car sideswiped the Jenks car.
Three passengers in the Jenks car — Lillian King, 70, Elizabeth King, 20, and Jolanta King, 5 1/2 months — were shaken in the accident, but received no serious injuries.
Damages to the Jenks car were estimated at $1,100, with $800 damage to the Pugsley car.

Grizzly bear kills woman at Glacier

EAST GLACIER, Mont. (UPI) — A Highwood, Ill., woman was fatally mauled by a grizzly bear early Thursday while camping with four other young women in Glacier National Park.
The death of Mary Patricia Mahoney, 21, was the first caused by a grizzly in the park along the Montana-Canada border since two women were killed in the summer of 1967.
Ed Rothfuss, chief park naturalist, said park rangers shot and killed two grizzlies less than two hours after Miss Mahoney was attacked. He said one bear treed two vacationing California State Parks Department rangers who were guarding the body of the woman. District Ranger Robert Frauson shot that bear after hearing shouts that "the bear has returned."
Moments later, another grizzly appeared, and it was also destroyed.
Rothfuss said both bears were aggressive. He described them as weighing 250-300 pounds. They were probably three-year-olds, he said.
One of the animals had blood on it, although it wasn't determined if the blood was that of a human.
"We feel fairly confident we have the bear involved," Rothfuss said.
The four young women camping with Miss Mahoney were not identified. Rothfuss said.
"They were pretty badly shook up," he added.
Rothfuss said he had an unconfirmed report that Miss Mahoney was a student at the University of Montana in Missoula.
She was in a tent with two of the other women at the Swift Current campground in the northeastern part of the park when the bear ripped the side of the tent, Rothfuss said.
The animal leapt, Miss said, and again attacked Miss Mahoney before dragging the young woman's body about 300 yards from the tent site.
Two of her companions in a nearby tent ran to their automobile and began honking the vehicle's horn, attempting to scare off the grizzly.
The bear attacked only Miss Mahoney, said Rothfuss.

Heyburn man hit by steel

BURLEY — About 1,000 pounds of steel rod fell on a young Heyburn man Tuesday morning.
Richard Lee was treated at Cassia Memorial Hospital and held for about three hours observation before he was released.
Lee, working for Richardson Ornamental Iron, was on the back of a truck loaded with the steel, while Matt Hledeman, Heyburn, sat on the cab and helped hold the rods on the truckbed, a Cassia County deputy sheriff said.
The deputy said the load shifted when Terry Christ, driver of the truck, pulled the vehicle off the oil onto gravel on East 16th Street about 8:25 a.m.
He said Lee slid off the truck and the steel rod fell on his chest and head.
Lee was knocked out, but regained consciousness before he was taken to the hospital.

Festival at Minico

MINIDOKA — The Autumnal Equinox Star Festival, presented by the Southern Idaho Astronomical Association, will be held at 7 p.m. Saturday in the Minidoka High School auditorium.
The evening's program will include presentation of three NASA films, slides from the Viking and Mariner Projects, a collection of moon rocks and a special tour of the universe.
There will also be between 12 and 20 telescopes, including one 14-inch telescope, available for viewing the heavens.
Numerous astronomers from all over Idaho are expected to attend.
The festival is open to the public. Admission is free.

Another debate

The great Presidential debate in Philadelphia between President Ford and Jimmy Carter was not the only debate going on Thursday night. Bartender-owner Norman Simon carries on a running commentary with some of his regulars at a tavern in Richmond, Va. (UPI)

Patty will appear in court today

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Six months ago Patricia Hearst, convicted of participating in a $10,000 bank robbery with the Symbionese Liberation Army, was sentenced to a 25-year prison sentence and ordered to undergo psychiatric tests.

Miss Hearst appears in court today to hear from U.S. District Judge William H. Orrick Jr. whether, as a result of the tests, the sentence imposed on her after she was found guilty by a jury of seven women and five men last March will be reduced.

Since March she has been held in a federal jail in San Diego undergoing an extensive and detailed psychiatric examination ordered by her trial judge, the late Oliver J. Carter, to determine what a proper sentence would be. Under federal law, Carter had to sentence her initially to the maximum penalty in order to qualify her for psychiatric testing.

In her testimony at her sensational two-month trial, she admitted taking part in the holdup on April 15, 1974, along with four members of the SLA who had kidnapped her 10 weeks before, but said she was coerced. The other four were killed in a shootout with police in Los Angeles a month after the robbery.

However, the jury refused to believe her story that she was held blindfolded in a closet, brainwashed and raped by her captors until she submitted and went along.

Miss Hearst was transferred back to San Francisco Wednesday aboard a Coast Guard plane and was held at a federal jail for youthful offenders across the bay from San Francisco.

In pronouncing the original sentence, Carter, who died in June, said probation was not a proper sentence but that he would substantially reduce the sentence after the psychiatric report.

Orrick, a former assistant U.S. attorney general with just two years' experience on the bench, took over the case after Carter's death, and studied the psychiatric reports and the trial transcript to reach his decision.

Miss Hearst has cooperated with the government. During her trial, she named numerous persons, including one of her lovers, who she said harbored her as a fugitive.

Medic's refusal to treat, solon's daughter upheld

EL PASO, Tex. (UPI) — A medical association officer Thursday defended a doctor's refusal to treat the 6-year-old daughter of a state legislator who voted against a malpractice law.

Dr. William H. Wade, vice president of the El Paso County Medical Association, said the right to reject patients was important for physicians.

"That might sound offhand, as though it violates some medical ethics," Wade said.

"But...doctors are free to choose whom they will treat as patients. We feel that's an important right."

The specific case involved rep. Ron Coleman, the chairman of the Life and Health subcommittee that during the last session stalled the anti-malpractice bill. Doctors wanted the most. Coleman voted against the senate-approved bill.

Coleman said he received a certified letter from Dr. James E. Spier telling him that surgery for Coleman's daughter, Kimberly, had been canceled and would not be rescheduled.

"The reason he gave was that he could not acquire medical malpractice insurance," Coleman told UPI.

He said that he "had to believe" that Spier's refusal to operate on Kimberly was based on Coleman's opposition to the malpractice bill, and likely was a form of pressure on him to vote for the bill in the next session.

"That approach didn't impress me," Coleman said.

"Quite the opposite. When it happened, I didn't come back and take it to the press. That would make me as bad as Spier. I'm just sorry that the doctor felt that his withholding something of value would influence my vote."

The surgery was later performed by another doctor. Spier was not available for comment.

Wade said the refusal of Spier to treat Kimberly must be put in the context of the emotional legislative session, and the fact that Spier and two associates were currently fighting a malpractice suit — not connected with Coleman — and were paying $30,000 for malpractice insurance.

"They were real distressed about the whole situation and they refused to treat his daughter," Wade said. "That is their right. I don't know that I would have done so in that instance, but they chose to do so and they did it."

IPUC aides went 'fishing'

By RICHARD CHARNOCK
BOISE (UPI) — Two members of the Public Utilities Commission went deep sea fishing with executives of General Telephone Company of the Northwest, Inc. on a boat owned by a phone company official, UPI learned today.

Records in the office of Auditor Joe R. Williams disclosed that then PUC President Harry Nock, now deceased, and Commissioner Robert Leneghen stopped in Astoria, Ore., en route to a meeting in Seattle. They met with General Telephone officials and then went fishing with them.

Discovery of the trip came on the heels of earlier reports that General Telephone entertained three members of the State Tax Commission on a fishing trip at Westport, Wash., last spring.

The Westport trip brought immediate condemnation executive who works in the Portland area. Leneghen told UPI at least one other General Telephone official, vice president Monty Leavitt, was aboard.

"I was new on the commission at the time," he said. "I can't remember who all went fishing."

He said he drove to Astoria Sept. 14 in his own car with his wife, picked up Nock and that he and Nock met with the telephone company officials on state business. He said he cannot recall what was discussed at that time but that he believes it covered a wide range of subjects.

"I don't know what all we talked about," Leneghen said. "That was a long time ago."

After the meeting, he said, "I went fishing."

Records show that Leneghen left Boise on a Friday and met with the officials and went fishing on Saturday. He then drove to Seattle where he attended the 33rd annual meeting of the National Association of Regulatory Utility Commissioners. Travel vouchers show Leneghen paid for meals, lodging and transportation for the trip to the state. Nock traveled by commercial airliner to Portland and, after the meeting and fishing trip with the telephone company executives, flew on to Seattle, also at state expense. He suffered a heart attack at Seattle and was rushed to a hospital by a General Telephone official.

Leneghen said he cannot recall whether he or Nock set up the Astoria meeting with the officials of the Everett, Wash., based telephone company. He said Standridge was a former northern Idaho executive for the company and an old friend of Nock.

He said it is not unusual for PUC commissioners to go out of state to discuss business with foreign-based utilities who come under its jurisdiction because of outlets in Idaho.

"We meet all over," he said. "We're coming and going all the time."

Andrus apparently disagrees. "The governor called me about this and he was a little testy," Leneghen said.

called it a "stupid" thing for a public official to do — especially an official who has tax jurisdiction over the utilities. He said that, too, was "stupid."

The PUC has direct regulatory control over the telephone company and sets the rates it may charge.

Andrus said he plans to issue an executive order setting forth a code of ethics for state officials to follow. He brought the matter up at a Department head meeting this morning and told Attorney General Wayne Kidwell discuss applicable statutes with the agency officials.

Leneghen acknowledged that he and Nock went fishing Sept. 15, 1973 on a boat belonging to Clancy Standridge, a General Telephone executive who works in the Portland area. Leneghen told UPI at least one other General Telephone official, vice president Monty Leavitt, was aboard.

"I was new on the commission at the time," he said. "I can't remember who all went fishing."

Thanks to little Dana

Little Dana Knighton, who will be five years old on Sunday, asked the question which eventually broke the deadlock in the Twin Falls school strike.

Dana and her family were spending a quiet evening Monday as her father, Bob, gave a church lesson in the home. Dana, who had enthusiastically started kindergarten only a few weeks earlier at Sawtooth School, seemed preoccupied.

Finally she blurted out her question: "Why can't I go to school?"

That question started things happening. Bob Knighton, who says he "ordinarily wouldn't get involved in this kind of deal," soon found himself at the parent-teacher meeting called that night to let teachers and school trustees express their positions.

At the meeting, he says, "I got the impression they weren't that far apart."

So Knighton quickly organized a group of about 15 parents who wanted to get their kids back in school and bring the striking teachers and the school trustees back to the negotiations table.

The committee's success is now history. Through the next two days they prodded teachers and trustees toward a common ground, commonsense compromise which put the Twin Falls kids back in class.

And while the kids are working at their lessons, both sides agreed to continue negotiations every night until a settlement is reached.

But two of the three steps toward settlement are behind us: The strike is ended and both sides are talking steadily. Only final agreement remains.

We have no illusions that the teachers and trustees will be able to quickly settle the issues which still divide them. Friction and further hard feeling is inevitable.

Still, teachers and trustees have achieved an enormous accomplishment. They put the welfare of the schoolchildren first and accepted compromise which must have been distasteful. Both sides now can build on that accomplishment.

But what pleases us most is the role played by people outside the school system. Little Dana Knighton represents the real constituency of the school system. And Dana's father again shows what can happen when ordinary citizens become involved in trying to solve problems they encounter.

The real lesson of the strike is that the schools and the educational process are too important to be left to the educators alone.

The schools belong to the community for the benefit of its children.

Somewhat it is appropriate that it was a kindergarten child not yet five years old, her bright new life at school disrupted without explanation, who finally asked about the Emperor's clothes.

Thank you, Dana.

Thoughts for today

A thought for the day: American essayist, poet and philosopher Ralph Waldo Emerson offered this advice: "Make yourself necessary to somebody."

A thought for the day: President Eisenhower, who died in 1969, said, "In the final choice, a soldier's pack is not so heavy-a burden as a prisoner's chains."

Mao's revolution consumes its own

Political revolution is not something to be taken lightly, and Mao Tse-tung did not take it lightly. He focused his whole life and thought on it.

"Every Communist must grasp the truth," Mao declared, "Political power grows out of the barrel of a gun."

Mao was a revolutionary — one of history's most successful and dedicated revolutionaries.

"A revolution is not a dinner party, or writing an essay, or painting a picture or doing embroidery," Mao said. "It cannot be so refined, so leisurely and gentle, so temperate, kind courteous, restrained and magnanimous. A revolution is an insurrection, an act of violence by which one class overthrows another."

Revolution began at home for Mao, when he was still a boy. He was the son of a stern, flight-fisted man, and he and Mao clashed violently.

The first revolution came when the boy was 10 and he ran away because his teacher beat him. He wandered free for three days before his family found him.

The result of my act of protest impressed me very much," Mao later said. "It was a successful strike."

Political revolutions, however, cannot occur in isolation, abstracted from the world. As the root meaning of the word "revolution" suggests, it is reaction against something, resistance to it.

Mao sensed the power and energy in the revolutionary spirit. But that spirit cannot exist effectively while unbridled. He sought some way to contain it, and found a way in Marxist ideology.

Marxism is, in a sense, a political ideology created in revolt. It grows from a rejection of the ideas of Capitalism and sets itself firmly in opposition to those ideas. In one manner, Marxism is a disease of Capitalism.

Karl Marx, the 19th century political philosopher who formulated the essential ideas of the Marxist viewpoint, believed that political form as Communism, (which take the history of man was meaningfully interpreted in economic terms).

History had previously always been interpreted politically — as a series of struggles and wars to determine the possession of land and the succession of rule. Marx felt this was not the best perspective with which to understand a period and mode in man's history.

He believed, instead, that history was best understood in economic terms, which of course had political implications. For Marx history was — especially in modern Capitalist times — the story of man's alienation from himself and others.

In a capitalist society with private property, Marx believed there was a vicious division between those who produced and those who owned the objects of production. History was finally the story of class division and struggle, and these classes were defined ultimately in economic terms.

There is something vital about the energy of a man's work, Marx claimed. When someone expends energy to build a house or clear a field or make a tool, a portion of the worker is contained or embodied in the product.

But too often, Marx felt, the worker doesn't own the object he produces. It is owned by someone else — a wealthy lord or factory owner. The worker sees a part of himself go out into his product only to be possessed by someone else, and this depresses and alienates the worker from the world of material objects.

Marx claimed Capitalism, with its exaltation of private property, was dangerous and alienated the mass of men, because the material wealth of the world was possessed by a small body of people.

failures and destructiveness.

Mao sought ways to prolong the Chinese Revolution which began in the late 1920s. He provoked struggles and created oppositions. For instance, he rallied against the Capitalists.

"People of the world, unite and defeat the U.S. aggressors and all their running dogs!" he cried out. "People of the world, be courageous, dare to fight, defy the difficulties and advance wave upon wave. Then the whole world will belong to the people. Monsters of all kinds shall be destroyed."

But this was not enough. The revolutionary spirit was waning and Mao knew it. In 1966 he initiated the Great Proletarian Cultural Revolution. First writers and historians and intellectuals were purged in what Mao claimed a movement to cleanse "bourgeois" elements still in China and to drive out those who still followed the "Capitalist road."

Then, in a Peking speech, Mao urged China's youth to "learn revolution by making revolution." Millions of Red Guards poured from their classrooms and ravaged China.

There may have been doubts in Mao's own mind. In 1963, before the Great Cultural Revolution, he uncharacteristically commented, "Events do not always move in accordance with human will."

Above all else, Mao insisted the revolution continue. It became an end in itself. And it was at great cost to China.

His dream of a continuing revolution was ultimately self-destructive and an impossible goal. It was a revolution that consumed its own children.

CHRIS BOGAN

Marx's conclusion was to do away with private property. He urged the working class, the proletariat, to revolt and abolish private property by making everything public and common. This he called Communism.

Mao also claimed himself to be a Marxist. The "Quotations of Chairman Mao Tse-tung," better known as the little "Red Book," contain his explanation and interpretation of Marxism. The book was owned and carried by hundreds of millions of people in China.

Mao personalized and so adapted the Marxist viewpoint for China. There was no industrialized working class in China because it was an underdeveloped country. Mao therefore designated the role of the proletariat to the Chinese peasantry and then advocated a revolutionary struggle that drew its strength from them.

Mao's version of Marxism came to be known as Maoism. Its essential aspect was that of continuous revolution: Struggle, which is the primary force of revolution, was to be continual. It was to continue even within the Party leadership.

The idea was to institutionalize struggle and so maintain a revolutionary spirit in an established government. But this was a paradoxical dream and was doomed to certain

Jaworski's book brings back all Watergate pain

WASHINGTON — Reading Leon Jaworski's just-published book is like flicking an aching tooth.

It hurts, but you can't stop. In this lawyer's version of the Watergate year, it all comes painfully back.

Jaworski is the tough old Texas turkey who served as special counsel for the Watergate trials. He stepped into the office late in October, 1973, across the bloody floor of the Saturday Night Massacre; he served for 12 months in one of the most demanding and dramatic assignments ever given a lawyer. In "The Right and the Power," he tells his story.

Some jaded critics may be inclined to dismiss Jaworski's work as merely one more Watergate book. Of these, we have a groaning shelf full. I found his account rewarding partly because the law is my field, but also because Jaworski shared an agonizing experience that saddened many others. He came to Washington with an illusion of Richard Nixon's innocence; and he stayed to see that illusion cruelly shattered.

Jaworski's deflowering came on a morning in December, 1973, when he listened for the first time to the famous tape of Nixon's conversation with John Dean and Robert Haldeman the preceding March 21. The experience left him tually shaken. In the privacy of his office, he could not escape a stunning conclusion: "The President of the United States had, without doubt engaged in highly improper practices, in what appeared to be criminal practices."

"I had not come to Washington expecting this. I had expected to find all sorts of wrongdoing by his aides, conduct unbecoming and even criminal, but it had never occurred to me that the President was in the driver's seat...listening to him scheme. KNOWING he was the President of the United States, I felt as if my heart was shriveling inside of me."

Jaworski was compelled by the nature of his job to sit on this damning evidence. Seven months would elapse before he would be able to access, not to the tapes themselves, but to reasonably accurate transcripts of the tapes. Even the most accurate transcript, he suggests, cannot adequately convey the shocking contrast between the public Nixon, projecting a polished image, and the private Nixon, profanely plotting with his aides.

"Listening and rereading to the tapes, I was amazed at the inordinate amount of time they consumed. I often wondered how Nixon was able to concentrate even briefly on the matters of state that begged for his attention. There he was in the Oval Office, day after day, night after night, scheming, plotting, and finally sacrificing his staff and others — one by one, so as to save himself. It was a sordid, frightening drama."

Jaworski's task was to coordinate the prosecution of the Watergate defendants collectively. Some of them, notably the remorseful Edg Krogh, won his sympathy; most of the others earned only his disdain. Jaworski is the American Bar. What hurt especially was that so many of the defendants also were lawyers, officers of the courts, sworn to uphold the law. He had small pity for them.

Toward the end of his stay, Jaworski ran into harsh criticism on two counts — that he had not moved swiftly, after Nixon's August resignation, to obtain an indictment against the former president; and that he had not challenged Gerald Ford's September pardon. His lawyer's explanation makes sense. He was convinced that Nixon could not possibly have obtained a fair trial until months or years had elapsed; and he was satisfied, after examining the precedents, that Ford's pardon was fully within the presidential power.

Of the writing of Watergate books, we probably will have no end. At least 20 volumes have appeared already, and memoirs are yet to come from Gen. Al Haig and of course from Nixon himself. Jaworski's book makes a significant contribution to this historian's collection. As special prosecutor, he was chiefly responsible for the criminal side of the story. He alone had "the right and the power" to put the defendants in the dock.

Jaworski is fully entitled, as a prosecutor, to be proud of his work; but in the disgraceful events he disclosed, there can be no pride at all.

Citizens offered support

Editor, Times-News: As a fellow "non-conformist," I wish to offer my support and assistance to Mr. Lampe and Mr. Poindexter in opposing the absurd abuse of office and power displayed by Jean Millar and his syndicate.

Although I do not believe that city planning is a necessary evil I do not doubt its malevolence, only its necessity, and that recent examples have proven its inefficiency, the fact remains that the majority consider it essential. It appears, therefore, that the only immediate recourse an individual has is the voicing of his disapproval at the more scatterbrained schemes of the planners.

One of the claimed chief purposes of city planning is the protection of an individual's property values; however, Mr. Millar apparently failed to consider the effect his actions will have and have had on the value of Mr. Poindexter's and Mr. Lampe's property. I have not yet begun, moreover, to speak of the contemptuous reaction received by these gentlemen from the man whose paycheck they help in providing.

I realize that it is difficult to "please everyone." Nevertheless, I do think that some chest-deflating and a lot more common sense in these instances could have provided if not a better solution then a better understanding between those involved. We are all human; let's start acting and treating each other as such.

Lebanon chief faces big task

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — President Elias Sarkis began his first full day as Lebanon's sixth president today facing the almost impossible task of halting a war that still raged across Beirut and the mountains.

Sarkis, a 51 year old Christian moderate who took over as president Thursday from rightist Suleiman Franjeh, scheduled talks with Christian leaders after Palestinian guerrilla chief Yasser Arafat offered him a unilateral cease fire.

Sources in Christian-held east Beirut said Sarkis had little chance of winning support for a cease fire.

Sarkis was also expected to receive the resignation of Moslem Premier Rashid Kara today and began the difficult task of assembling a cabinet — both neutral and Christian — from Lebanon's long-fought Christian and Moslem factions.

Despite Arafat's sudden offer of a truce Thursday, fresh fighting was reported in Beirut's downtown and suburban battle zones and in the central mountains northeast of the capital after a short lull late Tuesday.

Heavy mortar shells slammed without warning into residential streets in Moslem held west Beirut — already deserted as leftist gunmen celebrated the Moslem feast of Ramadan by firing deafening bursts of machinegun fire in every direction.

In a congratulatory message to the new president, Arafat pledged support for Sarkis' peace efforts and announced a unilateral cease fire.

"We declare on our own part, a cease fire in all the positions of our armed forces which are not directly facing the Zionist enemy Israel," he said. "We will avoid any provocations and attacks anywhere in Lebanon."

Leftist sources said the cease fire has not been agreed to in advance by Syria, the Christian rightists or Arafat's leftist allies. It took some high Palestinian officials by surprise and one privately called it "a public relations gesture."

A Palestinian spokesman said Arafat hoped the Christians would accept the truce offer, but if they did not, "we will cross that bridge when we come to it."

Rhodesian acceptance of black rule expected

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI) — Prime Minister Ian Smith will announce Rhodesian acceptance of black majority rule in a nationwide broadcast tonight, parliamentary sources said today.

The sources said a 50-man parliamentary caucus of Smith's ruling Rhodesia Front party agreed Thursday on the basis of a cabinet recommendation to a U.S.-British plan for a constitutional settlement.

If the reports are correct, the decision will mark a historic turning point in a regime that has insisted on white rule ever since breaking away from Britain 11 years ago.

The sources said pressure from South Africa, which provides landlocked Rhodesia with its only economic lifeline to the outside world, was instrumental in pushing the Rhodesian leadership toward acceptance of a transfer of power.

The specifics of the South African role were not spelled out, but one political source said, "There are all sorts of ways to exert pressure without formally applying sanctions."

The proposals for majority rule, which have the approval of black African governments, were put forth by Secretary of State Henry Kissinger during talks with Smith last weekend in Pretoria, South Africa.

They are believed to call for majority rule within two years, with a multiracial government running the country in the interim.

The parliamentary sources said one of the provisions of the plan was a halt in the war being waged on the country's borders between Rhodesian troops and black guerrillas.

The sources said no vote was taken at the caucus because it was clear Rhodesia had no choice but to accept the principle of majority rule.

Electric car developed

TOKYO. (UPI) — The Japanese government today announced the development of an electric car that can go 50 miles—twice as far as previous models—is cheap to operate and might eventually help make Tokyo's exhaust-polluted air clean again.

The Ministry of International Trade and Industry said four of the new cars and three light trucks had been built and would begin undergoing extensive road tests in the suburb of Higashi-Murayama next month.

MITI officials said initial tests showed the vehicles can travel 250 miles on a single battery charge — twice the distance of other models developed in Japan and elsewhere.

MITI spokesmen attributed the improved performance to a new, light-weight "hybrid" battery that combines the principles of the iron-air and lead-acid batteries.

The car can travel at 50 mph, the officials said, and a loaded truck can go at about 43 mph.

However, these maximum speeds can be kept up only for short distances. Developers said the vehicles probably would be most widely used as delivery vehicles, postal vans and service cars in low-speed traffic.

Production cost would be about three times that of a gasoline-powered vehicle of comparable size but could be operated at one half the cost, the officials said.

"We have the technology. It's a question of whether it can be put into general use," said one engineer associated with the project.

The Japanese government has shown a keen interest in electric cars, which generate no exhaust fumes, because of the severe smog problem created by the growing number of gasoline-powered cars in large cities.

Kissinger hopes for black rule

LONDON (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and British Foreign Secretary Anthony Crosland said today they had no doubts that Rhodesia would unequivocally accept the Anglo-American plan for black majority rule.

The two men were speaking at a news conference at the U.S. Embassy, concluding Kissinger's African shuttle that produced the breakthrough in the Rhodesian conflict.

Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith will give his government's decision on the Anglo-American peace proposals for Rhodesia in an address to the nation tonight.

Kissinger said, "I am hopeful that we will get an unequivocal answer. At the moment, I have no doubts that we will."

Japan to move Russ fighter

TOKYO (UPI) — Despite Soviet warnings, Japan today prepared to move a MIG25 fighter, one of the richest intelligence windfalls of the decade, to a Japanese airbase where it can be inspected in secret.

A U.S. Air Force C-5 Galaxy transport plane was being used to transport the fuselage of the dismantled MIG from the civil airport at Hakodate City, 500 miles north of Tokyo, to the Japan Air Self-Defense Force's Hyakuri base, 30 miles south.

The plane's other components will be flown to Hyakuri aboard a Japanese military transport.

The fighter has been at Hakodate since Sept. 6 when a defecting Soviet air force lieutenant, Viktor I. Belenko, landed and asked for asylum. Belenko is now in the United States.

The plane had been kept out of public view until today by a temporary shed. As the shed was dismantled, reporters saw that the plane's wings, rudders, stabilizers and rockets had been stripped away.

Elizabeth Drew steals show

NEW YORK (UPI) — While Gerald Ford and Jimmy Carter squared off at each other like a pair of impassioned CJs, a pretty woman named Elizabeth Drew stole the show at the first 1976 presidential debate.

The best drama of the evening came when the candidates weren't talking — a technical failure silenced Carter's rebuttal some eight minutes before the debate was scheduled to end.

South resumed 28 minutes later, and for the record ABC returned to the podium first, followed by NBC, with CBS last to realize the main event was back on the air.

Even when the candidates weren't losing millions and millions — like McGovern's money, Carter was serious and rarely smiled; Ford was absolutely funereal.

The closest the President came to cracking a smile — you could see his lips twitch — was when answering a question put by Mrs. Drew, of The New Yorker magazine, the only woman on the panel of reporters that also included Frank Reynolds of ABC and James Gannon of The Wall Street Journal.

With all the beforehand talk about whether the debates would deal with shadow or substance, image or issues, Howard K. Smith of ABC noted with surprise that the candidates indeed stuck to the issues. He suggested that perhaps images would have been better.

The post-comerouter talk make a dull drama — any liveller. For much of the time the two men looked like before and after in an anti-drug commercial, talking on the screen as plucked heads, visible only to the shoulder. There were restrictions against the camera zooming in on the audience, but not against showing the candidates in their entirety.

In any event neither man looked like he'd been sent by Central Casting, although Carter wears a suit with elegance unmatched since John F. Kennedy. Ford was well-tailored, but he has a tendency to wrinkle after a while.

Carter's performance seemed marred by initial stage fright, although he loosened up about half way through, when the subject of nuclear reactors put him on familiar ground. His Southern drawl posed no language barrier, not even when he pronounced "oil" as "awl."

Sinatra needs license

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Singer Frank Sinatra has enough in a casino owning corporation to ensure that he get a state gambling license, says the Nevada Gaming Commission, which decided Thursday, although the singer's previous license was revoked for associating with a gangster.

The commission ruled that Sinatra and his attorney, Mickey Rudden, must be licensed because they own 533,000 shares, or 6.6 percent of the stock of the Del Webb Corp., owner of the Sahara and Mint Hotel casinos in Las Vegas and the Sahara Tahoe at Lake Tahoe.

Sinatra owned the Cal Neva Club at Lake Tahoe and the Sands Hotel in Las Vegas until his license was revoked in 1963 on the grounds he played host to Sam "Momo" Giancana, a Mafia chieftain who was shot to death in his home in a Chicago suburb last year.

Riley predicts

AKRON, Ohio (UPI) — Chairman elect Richard A. Riley of Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. predicted Thursday the domestic tire industry will put out 220 million tires in 1980, 50 million more than last year, with all of the growth coming in radial tires.

"Radials, which accounted for 64.9 million tires in 1975, are projected to jump to 116.4 million tires in 1980," Riley said.

King comments

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — The Rev. Martin Luther King Sr. said Thursday American blacks would still have problems, even if his son had not been assassinated.

"If he were here it would be moving faster," the father of the slain civil rights leader told a news conference. "But nothing is going to move that quick. If he had been living, it wouldn't have been completed."

King said he is on a nationwide tour to encourage blacks to register to vote.

"Anybody not registered to vote is not a citizen, he's just blocking traffic," he said.

Prince discloses plans

LONDON (UPI) — Prince Vittorio Massimo, head of one of Rome's leading Catholic families, has disclosed plans to become a Moslem and marry a Brazilian fashion model, according to the London Evening News.

The newspaper said Thursday the 61-year-old millionaire prince made the announcement on his arrival in London to complete formalities for his marriage to model Josepha Soares, 29.

"We will marry at Håstad, Morocco, probably in October, at a mosque," the newspaper quoted Massimo as saying. "I am changing my religion and although I am head of the oldest family in Italy, I intend to become a Moslem."

The Massimo family claims to descend from the Roman Consul Fabius Maximus who fought against Hannibal.

Lawsuit settled with hamburgers

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Wimpy, the hamburger freak of the old Popeye comic strip, would love it.

The Wimpy hamburger Hamlet restaurant group has settled a lawsuit by agreeing to pay off in hamburgers — $10,000 worth.

"Sometimes you settle a lawsuit any way you can," commented attorney George DeWitt, whose firm brought a class action suit against the restaurant chain over stock transactions.

As payment of its legal fees, the law firm will receive coupons good for $9,970 worth of hamburgers or other food at the group's six restaurants.

Flaming dessert leads to lawsuit

OXNARD, Calif. (UPI) — Elsa Paquette, in a $5,000 suit against the Hilton Inn, complained that the baked Alaska dessert served at a formal dinner ended the meal all too abruptly — by exploding in her face.

A waiter poured more brandy onto the flaming dessert as the fire began to flicker out — despite warnings on the bottle not to do so — causing an eruption of flames, the suit charged.

She said she saw her "life flash before her eyes," lost a $600 designer gown ruined by gobs of flaming brandy, and suffered shock and fright that she would be trampled to death by other diners fleeing the table in panic.

Hansen residents will vote Oct. 12

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES, Times-News writer
HANSEN — Residents of the Hansen School District will vote Oct. 12 on expansion of the new elementary school.

A proposed $350,000 bond would provide a four-classroom addition to the elementary school, plus an all-purpose room which could be used for physical education, music, basketball and other school and community activities.

Garth Miller, school superintendent, said the town of Hansen has grown so much in the past year the new elementary building is already overcrowded.

"Last year was the first full school year the new building was in use. Already we have had to move the eighth grade to the high school and divide the first grade into two classes," Miller said.

He said it appears the majority of families who moved to Hansen to occupy the new housing developments and those in the new mobile home court are young families with small children. High school facilities have not become overcrowded, Miller said.

When weather is bad, he said, there is no place for grade school youngsters to go during recess or lunch hours.

Although the children now go to the high school for lunch and will continue to do so, there is no play area where they can spend free time after lunch.

In the new round grade school building, sound carries throughout the structure making it difficult to show movies or hold a program for part of the students at one time, Miller said.

Miller said the classrooms would be added on the south of the building. The architecture will blend, although the addition will not be round as is the existing grade school building, he said.

Voting will be from noon to 8 p.m. Oct. 12 at the Hansen High School. The general obligation bond will require a two-thirds majority to pass and, if approved, will be repaid over an 18-year period.

Miller said this will retire the bonds at the same time as the $380,000 bond voted to build the original grade school.

Miller said two meetings have been called to inform the public of the proposed bond issue election.

The first will be at 7:30 a.m. Tuesday in the high school cafeteria. The breakfast meeting will be attended by the district fiscal agent, who will be able to answer questions on costs to the taxpayer. Miller said he feels a 10-mill levy will cover the initial costs and said it would be reduced as the bond is repaid.

A second meeting will be held Oct. 4 at 8 p.m. in the small gymnasium of the high school. Both meetings are open to the public. Property owners and school district patrons are urged to attend.

Leforgee to head division

TWIN FALLS — Rex Leforgee, accountant for Chalk & Lawley, 864 Filer Ave., has been selected to serve as chairman of the professional division for the 1977 United Way fund raising campaign.

Assisting Leforgee will be Tom Condie, accountants; Paul Beeks, lawyers; Hob Bowen, architects & engineers; Tom Young, clergy; Ross Prather, insurance; Lytle Frazier, contractors, and Pete Blumenthal, United Way Agencies. This United Way Professional Team has a challenging goal of $5,000, which will be their share of the United Way $115,000 objective.

Complaint dismissed

TWIN FALLS — A complaint filed in Magistrate Court against James Cobb, Twin Falls, for failure to stop after being involved in an auto accident, has been dismissed. According to the complaint, Cobb was involved in an accident on U.S. 93 about 12 miles north of Rogerson. William Kimball and Shelley Cudgill were injured in the accident.

Lennie Malone

Publicity chairman selected

TWIN FALLS — Lennie Malone, information & referral director for the Senior Program at College of Southern Idaho, has been selected to serve as publicity chairman for the 1977 United Way fund raising campaign.

As chairman, Malone will coordinate publicity programs with the campaign chairman, Tom Young, United Way Agencies. He will also implement a publicity campaign leading up to, and during, the campaign.

Burley council okays three grant requests

BURLEY — Applications for three grants to aid the police department were authorized Monday night by the Burley City Council.

The city applied for grants from the Law Enforcement Planning Commission. The requests total more than $65,000.

The largest grant sought is for city-county two-way radio apparatus costing $37,950. The city's share on a 75% matching basis would be $9,487.

The council also authorized applying for a grant toward a $25,870 burglary-robery prevention project. The city would have to pay 10 percent of $2,587 of the cost.

The city also seeks a 90-10 matching grant outlay of $2,595 for copymaking equipment.

All grant applications are for 1977.

CEEB announces SAT exam dates

NEW YORK — The College Entrance Examination Board has announced that the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) will be offered six times this school year.

The test dates are Nov. 6, Dec. 4, Jan. 22, March 26, May 7 and June 4.

The SAT, which is required for admission to many colleges, measures verbal and mathematical skills.

The SAT is available to high school juniors and seniors and takes two and one-half hours, with an additional 30 minutes for an additional 30 minutes for questions on costs to the taxpayer. Miller said he feels a 10-mill levy will cover the initial costs and said it would be reduced as the bond is repaid.

Students must register for the tests at least five weeks in advance. The deadline for registration for the Nov. 6 test is Oct. 1.

Registration forms and information may be obtained from high school guidance counselors.

Test fees are $7.25 for the SAT and $11.00 for one, two or three Achievement Tests. Students unable to pay test fees may be eligible for fee waivers.

All participants but one agree to drain project

By SHANE O'NEILL, Times-News writer

RUPERT — Agreements have been signed by all but one participant in a storm drain improvement project along Idaho 24-25 in Rupert.

City Attorney William Goodman told the Rupert City Council Tuesday night that only Richard Bohle has not signed his agreement, and that signature only awaits an addendum to it regarding three additional lots Bohle wants to prepay for later improvement.

Bohle already has agreed to pay for curbing on the present storm drain project, since his business stands to benefit most from the new drains. He received council approval for him to prepay his share of any future local improvement district for three lots he owns besides the Idaho Industrial property included in the present storm drain project.

The project originally encompassed 32 blocks, but property owners rejected a proposal for a local improvement district.

The city and immediate property owners put together the project, under which property owners will pay 17 cents per square foot. The city will contribute $7,227 for work in the intersection and for adding nine feet to B Street to make it 58 feet wide.

The council rejected responsibility in another drainage problem suffered by David Hansen on 18th Street.

Councilman Clark Cameron raised the issue, saying Hansen claims his property is flooded by waters coming off the Big Valley Park and 18th Street.

He said the water comes to within 1-1 1/2 inches of the basement window and Hansen believes the city is responsible for solving the problem. He said the only relief would be to install a drain, but approval of one there would probably bring several other requests.

Councilman W.F. "Bill" Whitton remarked that the council had just solved a similar problem on the Bohle property, with property owners paying the cost of the drain.

Heifer project explained

KING HILL — The heifer project was explained at the September meeting of the United Presbyterian Women at the home of Mrs. Frank Jones.

Helpers are donated in under-developed countries. A family who receives a heifer, must, after the first heifer calf is born, donate it to a family without a cow.

Mrs. Mildred Caranahan read a review of the Purdue convention, with over 5,000 in attendance, including several hundred men. Only in recent years have men attended.

A letter was read, asking for nominations for Presbyterial officers. It was announced that beginning the first of the year, the Concern Magazine will be a quarterly publication instead of monthly, but a newsletter will be sent out each month that the magazine is not published.

Sermon topic announced

TWIN FALLS — The Sunday lesson sermon at the Christian Science Church this week will be "Reality."

Services will be held at 11 a.m. Sunday and at 8 p.m. Wednesday at 160 Ninth Ave. E. and Sunday School will begin at 9:45 a.m.

The Christian Science reading room is located at 115 Second St. W., and is open to the public from 1 to 4 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

LDS members hold social in Almo

ALMO — The Aaronic Priesthood and Young Women's organizations held an opening social at the Almo Ward 7-78 Church.

All families of the ward were invited to the activity night which featured a potluck supper, a talent show, a quiz contest and outdoor games.

A religious film on home teaching was shown. In charge of arrangements were Bishop David Boden and other officers of the organization.

Building dedication set Sunday

TWIN FALLS — The Community Christian Church will dedicate its new building at 3 p.m. Sunday with an open house to follow.

Ted Hadley and the "New Sounds" will present the special music and Richard Ewing will offer the dedication address.

Sunday evening at 7:30 the high school youths will be joined by the Kimberly group for a special movie, "He Restored My Soul."

Church officials invite the public to join them in their new house.

Tickets for the "New Sounds" concert at the church Sept. 30 are available. Proceeds from the concert will go to purchase a new piano for the church.

Wendell church sets 'Round-Up' campaign

WENDELL — "Round-Up Days" are here for the Wendell Community Free Methodist Church.

A special nine-week campaign to enlist new Sunday school scholars and church visitors is being held at the church located in the Legion Hall on Idaho Street. The dates are Sunday through Nov. 21.

The time each Sunday is 9:30 to noon.

Two "ranch foremen," Roy Race and Deweyne Cushman, have been chosen to direct the campaign. They are the "boss" men of the teams (ranches), "The One-Way Bar" and the "Three-in-One" Ranch. Each ranch will be working to see who can "round-up" the most new ones (doggies) during the campaign.

Every Sunday will feature special activities such as a poster contest, theme song contest, dress-up western day, puppet show, a real horse buster will speak, special music by the youth of the church will sing, the young people from the Caldwell Free Methodist Church will have charge of one service. There will be awards for the winners of each contest.

Rev. Ted Lux is the pastor of the church; The public is invited and urged to attend, says Pat Lux, Sunday school superintendent.

Boise Catholic aides, laymen meet in Jerome

JEROME — Three representatives of the Boise Catholic Diocese were at the Catholic Parish Hall in Jerome recently.

Lay people, priests and sisters from throughout Magle Valley met with these representatives to ask questions, make suggestions and become informed on the function of the various offices.

The Catholic Education Office was represented by Rev. William Wissnuth, director and Sister Beth Mulvaney and Michael Relief, all Boise. Teachers were presented with information on new texts and materials available as well as for future workshops to be held in the area.

Frederic Lilly, news editor of the "Idaho Register," the weekly diocesan newspaper, listened to suggestions from parish correspondents, and led a discussion of the role of the paper and services it should provide to readers.

The diocesan Liturgical Commission was represented by Rev. William Crowley, and music, training for lectors, updating of parish churches to conform to new liturgical needs, and preparation for the reception of the various sacraments were among topics discussed.

The Jerome meeting was one of six held in various parts of the state. Local arrangements were made by Mrs. Donald Nutsch, Jerome, religious education coordinator.

Baptists, monks erase past

C.N.Y. Times Service
Every third Thursday, Rev. C. Brownlow Hastings and six other Southern Baptist ministers' drove a few miles from downtown Atlanta to a secluded Trappist monastery. There, with three Roman Catholic monks, they spend the day reading the new Testament in Greek.

For three years, since the first such session, the monthly routine has been that Dr. Hastings, a church official, calls "one of my most satisfying experiences."

It also represents the kind of easy communications between members of the two powerful religious groups that was virtually unknown a decade ago.

A heavy overlay of distrust and antipathy has, in fact, darkened relations between them for most of the nation's history. Significantly, the legacy of this feud has been injected into the current presidential campaign, particularly in terms of the impact of Jimmy Carter's Southern Baptist identity among Roman Catholics. Recent polls have found concern by Catholic voters about Democratic candidate Carter's religion.

Much of the consequent discussion has centered on the images each religious group has held of the other. Despite efforts to erase the past, the negative notions die hard. Baptists and Catholics, usually isolated from one another, have viewed each other across a solid barrier of disagreement, confusion and animosity.

To a Catholic, the Baptist was often portrayed as a fanatical follower of a superficial, revivalist faith who has strayed from the historic church. Moreover, the stereotype was of a strait-laced moralizer for whom the Bible was almost an object of worship.

Many Baptists, on the other hand, were reared to regard Catholics as puppets of the pope for whom personal faith in Jesus Christ counted less than reliance on church formulas for salvation. Furthermore, Catholic belief in the intercessory role of the Virgin Mary and the saints often looked like idolatry to Baptists.

Meanwhile, each church proudly held itself up as the true way. Generally neither Baptist nor Catholic could imagine being the other.

Though these impressions remain, especially in Baptist rural areas and Catholic urban areas, the ecumenical age, among other things, is bringing about a transformation of attitudes.

Seminar scheduled at Hagerman

HAGERMAN — Dr. Henry Brandt, psychologist, will speak at an all-day seminar in Hagerman High School Gym on Oct. 9 at 9 a.m.

Dr. Brandt mixes humor with a biblical perspective on marriage, family living, maturity, counseling and management. He travels worldwide speaking on these subjects.

Sen. and Mrs. James McClure are to be the honorary chairmen of the seminar. Dr. Brandt will be conducting.

The seminar will consist of two lectures in the morning, beginning at 9 a.m., a luncheon, then two lectures in the afternoon.

The topics of Dr. Brandt's lectures are, "Building a Wholesome Person," "Foundation for a Happy Marriage," "Parents Worthy of Honor," and "Dealing with Resistance."

Tickets are available at the Christian book stores in the area.

Places where tickets are available are: Hagerman, The Methodist Church of Wendell or Gooding; Hamilton Drug and McCleery Drug, Jerome; The Parties-Sow and Save, and Swain's, Set in Twin Falls, and Saw-Mor drug in Bull.

The registration fee of $7.50 per person includes lunch and full participation in the family emphasis seminar. Advance registration is urged as tickets are limited.

Catholic women to meet

JEROME — Women from Catholic parishes from throughout south-central and eastern Idaho will meet in Jerome on Sept. 30 for workshops sponsored by communion chairmen of the Idaho Council of Catholic Women.

Car excluded

If you want to buy this 1977 Dodge Monaco station wagon, you'll have to be below 4,000 feet altitude when you close the deal. Dealers in Burley, Halley or anyplace else over 4,000 feet can't get this car and many other models.

EPA rules hamper new car sales

By JEFF SHER
Times-News writer
MAGIC VALLEY — New car dealers in 20 Idaho counties may be unable to sell certain 1977 cars of light-duty pickup trucks until next year unless action is taken in Congress within the week.

Under new Environmental Protection Agency regulations, all 1977 model cars and pickup trucks under 6,000 pounds sold in high-altitude counties (those which lie entirely above 4,000 feet in elevation) must meet federal emission control levels before they can be certified for sale in those counties.

Counties with any portion of their area lying below 4,000 feet are not affected by the regulations, and dealers in those counties can sell any model that is available from the manufacturers.

Dealers in high altitude counties are unable to obtain certain models of cars because the manufacturers have not yet been able to adapt certain 1977 models to comply with the regulations. The required modification involves an adjustment in the carburetor.

Gary Asson of Bonanza Motors, Burley, said he 1977 Buick Electras or Rivieras have been shipped to high altitude areas because the necessary modifications have not been made.

He also said a 152-cubic-inch, four-cylinder, cast-iron engine developed this year by Pontiac is not available to high-altitude dealers.

Don Ramsey of Dawson-Ramsey Motors, Halley, said he can't get any cars with five-speed transmissions.

Ramsey added, "I already lost one sale to a foreign car dealer because he (the buyer) wanted a five-speed."

CSI arson fire trial in 4th day

By BOB ZUCKERMAN
Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — The fourth trial day of a more than $104,000 damage suit against the College of Southern Idaho opened today with more testimony on the value of horses lost in an arson fire two years ago.

The case is the result of a fire in a Frontier Felt stable where at least 16 horses reportedly perished.

After the fire, William Roger Carlock, a CSI security guard, pleaded guilty to second-degree arson in connection with the fire. He received a 10-year suspended sentence and was released on five-year probation in January, 1975.

According to complaints filed in Fifth District Court, the horse owners are trying to show that through the negligent hiring of Carlock, CSI has become responsible for damage caused by the fire.

U.S. District Judge Douglas Kramer, who is hearing the case, has said two key issues in the case are:

—Did CSI know of Carlock's previous violent actions before he was hired?

—And if those officials knew, or should have known, was that enough for them to be able to foresee any later violent actions?

Mrs. Mary Yost, mother of one of the nine plaintiffs, testified today the horse her daughter lost in the fire was worth $2,700.

Another plaintiff's wife, Kaye Schulz, testified a horse her husband lost in the fire was worth about $25,000.

Plaintiffs' attorneys, Monte Carlson and Lloyd Webb, have already called more than 15 persons to testify. Defense attorney John Magel will call his own witnesses after Webb and Carlson have completed their examinations.

During the trial yesterday, the horse owners' attorneys called Dr. Richard S. Wurst, a Twin Falls psychiatrist, to offer testimony on the predictability of Carlock's action.

As a juvenile, Carlock allegedly set phone wires on fire, fought with girls, stole money and shot up several windows with a BB gun, according to testimony from Police Detective Capt. Tim Qualls.

In other testimony yesterday, Del S. Morgan and George Juker, both plaintiffs, described the merits of horses they lost in the fire.

Juker, Buhl, valued three horses he lost at from $22,000 to $24,000.

Leroy E. Gibbs, Wendell, a rancher with experience in quarter horse sales, also testified that he wouldn't trade a horse like one lost by Morgan for $37,000.

The horse owners are asking for $104,285 in damages, according to the complaint. The plaintiffs and damages each is asking for are Kenneth Kimball, $25,584; Bill Schulz, $25,000; George Juker, $24,500; Del S. Morgan and Larene Morgan, $12,000; David L. Delett, $5,551; Lauren Lee Day, $4,000; Charles Woodland, $3,000; and John Alexander Elgert, $1,000.

Besides CSI, the complaint also lists as defendants Charles and Frances Bowlin, and The Frontier Riding Club, Inc. The Bowlins leased the stable from the college and operated the firm.

Depressed sugar prices face MV farmers

In fact, if prices of sugar are compared over the years from 1935 to 1973, with allowances for inflationary trends, sugar could be said to have remained at almost exactly the same price level over the years, fluctuating no more than about one cent per pound, according to a report of the Amalgamated Sugar Company.

But in 1974, according to the Amalgamated report, Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz, always in favor of free market systems, called for an end to sugar legislation.

Prices began to rise as early as January, 1974, in anticipation of the action, according to the report.

Immediately upon repeal of the Sugar Act, according to Amalgamated, the U.S. was subjected to the "roller coaster" price fluctuations of the world market.

Not only sugar producers and growers but also consumers recall skyrocketing prices of sugar in 1974 after the legislation went off the books, according to Robert Day, manager of Amalgamated.

"It came time to review the Sugar Act but Butz said we were better off without it," Day said. "He is free trade on everything."

In January, 1974, sugar prices had jumped to $12.63 per hundredweight (cwt) from a price of only $10.29 in 1973 and by November, 1974, the market had exploded to an unheard-of price of $57.30 per cwt.

"World consumption outstripped production four years straight," Day recalled.

Then, when prices were so high, everyone got into the sugar business to take advantage of high returns and in 1975, a sugar surplus resulted, according to Day.

By Sept. 1, 1976, prices of raw sugar had plummeted to their present low levels of $9.20 per cwt.

The low prices could force closure of all four Amalgamated Sugar's refining plants and could bring a halt to the domestic industry which cannot compete with foreign producers who are "dumping" their sugar on the U.S. market, according to Amalgamated officials.

Estimates of sugar beet acreage for next year fall in the 65,000 to 75,000 acre range, according to company officials — only 40 per cent of the capacity of the four plants.

Hospitals facing nurse shortage

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN
Times-News writer
MAGIC VALLEY — A serious nursing shortage faces hospitals throughout Magic Valley and Idaho, according to nurses attending a state conference in Twin Falls.

Nurses questioned Thursday at the Idaho Nursing Education Conference said they see a shortage of nurses in hospitals throughout Idaho.

Low pay and less than perfect working conditions were cited as the reasons for the shortage.

"The shortage of nurses is a major problem for the whole Valley," Lela Oraby, Chairperson for the conference said.

"In this area it is really hard to get nurses. It's almost to get people into the field," Oraby added.

Oraby said most young nurses prefer to work in metropolitan areas where pay is higher and generally higher and hospital facilities more complete.

Rosie Acton, the chairperson of the Idaho Nurses Association's Legislative Committee, said the shortage of nurses in Idaho was linked to both salary and working conditions.

"Health service is a 24 hour service," Acton said.

Consequently, someone has to have the undesirable hours. But in Idaho the salaries are low and the wage differential for different shifts is not very great, Acton says.

"The differential is not enticing enough to lure nurses to night shifts," she stated. And the shortage persists.

Action also expressed concern for the number of nurses who are trained in Idaho and then leave the area.

She said she'd been told roughly 80 per cent of the nursing graduates from Idaho schools leave the state.

Audrey Harper, a nurse at the Cassia County Memorial Hospital, also linked the nurse shortage problem to economics and said there are many nurses in the area who aren't working because of the low wages.

"There are about 100 nurses in our area," Harper said, "and of the two hospitals we employ maybe 60 nurses."

Action agreed it's a "very real problem that we have nurses in the area who don't work."

The shortage of nurses in hospitals only affects the quality of health care indirectly, the nurses say.

Patients always get the necessary health care, such as being bathed, receiving medication and other treatments, according to Oraby. But she says it is hard on the nurses and other things don't get done.

She said jobs like patient teaching, long-term planning and discharge plans (preparation for a person to go home) suffer because nurses are so busy.

"It's very difficult to get those things done when you are tearing your hair out to get regular duties done," Oraby commented.

Hospitals are aware of the problem, nurses say.

Schools' merger opposed at Bliss

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer
BLISS — Opponents of a consolidation of Bliss schools with Gooding schools say most townspeople and parents in Bliss don't want to merge the two school districts.

About 237 residents of the small Bliss district have signed a letter of affirmation opposing consolidation with Gooding.

Burton Lenker, superintendent at Bliss for the past five years, said feeling is running about 7.5 to 1 in support of retaining the Bliss school, according to information presented his office.

Mrs. Arla King, a Bliss resident helping conduct the survey, said everyone she has contacted has been in support of keeping the educational program in the local community.

"Mrs. King, who has four children in the school at Bliss, said her children have attended larger schools but she feels they do better in the small school."

Superintendent Lenker said the school has about 130 students from kindergarten to 12th grade. Bliss students employ 13 teachers.

Lenker said just this week the school added a band instructor and started a school band. The school participates in all sports, he said, and has applied for a northwest accreditation.

"It looks good for this," he said. "A lot of people feel it is important to have accreditation so students can be accepted by colleges outside of Idaho, and I think we will get the accreditation."

organizations and other programs to give every child an opportunity to be part of the important activities, he said.

"We think this builds character and helps develop the young people's personalities much greater than in the larger schools where many of them are only spectators," he said.

Lenker said the drop-out rate in the Bliss school is extremely low, which he also credits to the individual attention given each student.

Letters and petitions opposing consolidation signed by local residents are being mailed to the state, Superintendent of Schools, Idaho congressional delegates, Gov. Cecil Andrus and the state board of education.

Those in the Bliss district who seek consolidation say there are about 13 students being transported every day to Gooding from the Bliss district and about that many more who are attending schools in Hangerman, Buhl, Wendell and even one who goes to California for better educational opportunity.

The consolidation supporters say the school is inadequate and does not offer a suitable curriculum; they say "the school" is not accredited and graduates cannot enroll in colleges outside of Idaho.

The consolidation proponents say their own petitions are being circulated in the Bliss and Gooding school districts.

The district boards are expected to meet this fall to discuss consolidation.

Howard Annis, who with his son grows about 200 acres of sugar beets near Filer, holds up a nine-pound beet which may not be worth as much this year as it would have been in the past. Farmers may get as little as $15-per-ton for beets this year, a price which would, they say, not meet their production costs.

Open house set

GOODING — Open house will be held Saturday and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Idaho Regional Training and Training Center.

The public is invited to tour the facility which will open Oct. 1 in the former Idaho Tuberculosis Hospital at the south edge of Gooding and meet the center's staff.

State Sen. John M. Barker, R-Buhl, will speak at 2:30 p.m. Sunday in the dedication ceremony. Refreshments will be served.

The "niftiness" of football players on the field is referred to by medical experts as "inverter kill." And studies show that players with the highest degree of same tend to be the wide receiver. Then comes the tailback. After that the halfback. Rated in descending order thereafter are the quarterback, cornerback, linebacker, tight end, guard, defensive end, center, defensive tackle, interior lineman and offensive tackle.

Recent research indicates those cities wherein the houses are priced the lowest include Austin, Houston, Denver and Bakersfield. Those with the highest priced houses include Anchorage, Honolulu, New York City and Boston.

GENERATION

Q. "How many years is a generation?"
A. Figure 33.

It has long been claimed that youngsters in hot humid climates tend to mature earlier than children elsewhere. But latest studies show, on the contrary, that the warmer and wetter the weather year round, the later arrives the puberty amongst.

Consider yourself a Seasoned Citizen, too, if you recall when John Wayne preceded Gene Autry as Hollywood's first vocalizing cowboy. Name of the film character was "Singing Sam."

Do you realize more than 10,000 people worldwide have survived kidney transplant?

GREENWICH VILLAGE

Few records remain about how one young woman named Babs single-handedly almost wiped out prostitution in New York City's Greenwich Village in the 1920s. She vowed to drive the paid streetwalkers out of the area, by whatever means. The means were extreme. Photos show her to have been quite attractive. She offered herself free to any man who promised not to pay the working girls.

Contrary to widespread belief, a "lion's share" is not most of something, but almost all of it, reports our Language man. After a lion makes a kill, said beast does not abandon much of it, but between naps, eats the whole thing, except for bones and whatnot.

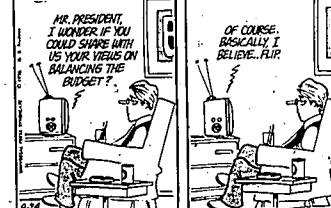

Those stargazers who the only distant galaxy you can see without some sort of scope is the galaxy of Andromeda.

In California, remember, it's against the law to pluck the feathers from a live goose.

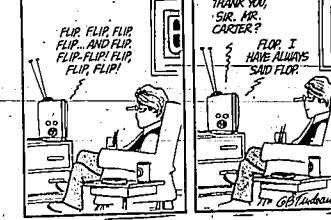

The word "slang" is slang itself, coming from a Norwegian phrase that translates "slang the jaw."

Stocks at midday

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices opened lower Friday in moderate trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones Industrial average was off 2.32 points to 1,008.48 shortly after the opening. Declines led advances, 211 to 87, among the 439 issues crossing the tape.

Analysts said investors were disturbed by the Federal Reserve Board's report of a record $4.5 billion increase in the nation's basic money supply. On a broader scale, it climbed $5.8 billion. Analysts said the report shattered speculation the Fed would ease credit. But, they said, the one-week fluctuation did not mean the board would tighten, either.

As the market opened, Citicorp of New York, as expected, announced it was lowering its prime lending rate at quarter point to 9 1/2 percent.

At least eight other banks had taken the step in the past two weeks because commercial paper rates, on which Citicorp's formula is based, have declined.

Analysts were watching closely to see how and if the market reacted to the debate Thursday night between President Ford and Democratic challenger Jimmy Carter. Some traders sold last Thursday in advance of the debate.

Profit taking accelerated Thursday after the Commerce Department reported retail sales plunged 4.1 percent last week after rising 1.2 percent the week before. Many investors this week have been anticipating a pickup in the economy later this year and early next year.

But they continued to be disturbed by the government's report Wednesday that net defense capital spending plunged 11.7 percent and durable goods orders skidded 22 percent in August.

Time for hope again as TV season starts

Chicago Daily News

The beginning of a new television season, like the beginning of spring, is an occasion for hope. It is a time to look for encouraging signs; there will be plenty of time later for despair.

Never mind that most of the new shows will be canceled before the season is over. Never mind that some shows will deteriorate as producers, writers and actors lose interest. As we do when a new President is inaugurated, we must look for the good news now before the honeymoon ends.

And there is some good news. There will be a perceptible decrease this season in the amount of televised violence. There will be a potential violent cop show at the end of the first-run viewing season last April; this year there will be only 15 (four of them new), plus one new violent Western. Five hours' less violence may not be much, but it's a sign of hope.

Moreover, the networks appear to be making an effort to do something other than cops and doctors in the so-called "Adult viewing hours."

So much attention was devoted last season to the new "family hour" (the no-sex, no-violence period) that nobody really noticed what was happening after that. The fact is that on some evenings all three networks literally offered nothing but violence later in the evening. The few gaps were filled almost invariably with movies (often violent), doctor shows and adult situation comedies.

The number of cop shows is decreasing partly because the networks are genuinely concerned about the criticism they've been receiving for feeding us such a steady diet of mayhem. More important (to the networks), the ratings have shown the public is getting tired of cops.

The cop shows simply did not perform well in the ratings last season. Starksy and Hutch did the best, ranking 15th out of 97 shows, and Kojak came in 16th. But S.W.A.T., one of the most violent, came in 71st and was canceled, as were Jigsaw John (75th), Matt Helm (82d) and Bert D'Angelo-Superstar (91st).

And you can expect some returning police-detective shows to get the axe before long. Judging from their lack of popularity last season, they include Hawaii Five-O (39th), Switch (43d), Police Story (47th), Barnaby Jones (59th) and The Blue Knight (60th). "There's some feeling that the cop show may have about had it as a "dramatic form," said veteran cop-show actor Robert Stack, who nevertheless will try another one this season. "These things go in cycles, and cop shows may be heading toward the bottom of a cycle. Even Quinn Martin (the veteran co-show producer) seems to think so."

Doctor shows, the standard alternative to cops, will be missing from the tube for the first time in recent memory. (The closest approximation will be Emergency!, about an ambulance squad, and two situation comedies, Doc and The Practitioner. The shows were dropped because the realistic one, like Medical Story, were too frightening and the unrealistic ones, like Marcus Welby, were too saccharine for the audience.)

To replace cops and doctors, the networks are turning toward what has been called "human drama." "Family drama" or melodrama. "There was almost none of this at the beginning of the 1975-76 season, aside from 'family hour' staples such as The Waltons and Little House on the Prairie.

In February, ABC began a 12-hour novel-for-television called "Rich Man, Poor Man" that took television by storm. The show, which traced the lives of two brothers from the late 1940s to the early '60s, was well acted, excessively produced, undemanding of the viewer and full of action and dramatic clinches. It had some violence, but violence was not its raison d'etre. It finished the season in third place in the ratings, behind All in the Family and Laverne and Shirley.

Even though one of the brothers had been killed in the final episode, ABC decided to turn the show into a series, entitled Rich Man, Poor Man, Book II, that will center around the career of the surviving brother, played by Peter Strauss, 29. To make up for the lost interplay between the two brothers, the producers aged the two boys born on the original show into their late teens.

They're throwing stuff away. The possibilities are almost limitless. The original Rich Man, Poor Man opened up all sorts of new possibilities for television. The new show can do even more. Let's face it, the first show was basically pulp fiction. But it opened the door. This year we'd like to put it on a little higher level: ABC programming chief Fred Silverman says he's willing to take chances on this one. You can do that when you're successful."

ABC also was pleased with the success last spring of an excellent mini-series called Family, about an upper-middle-class family dealing nonviolently with contemporary problems. That show will return this fall with Meredith Baxter Binyon playing the role of the older daughter.

CBS' new melodrama is called Executive Suite and is based loosely on the Cameron Hawley novel, which was made into a 1954 movie of the same name. The show will star Mitchell Ryan, Sharon Acker and Stephen Elliott (most recent in Beacon Hill) in what is billed as an examination of conflicts within a large corporation but is expected to focus more on the characters' personal lives than on corporate stratagems.

Norman Felton, producer of Executive Suite, expects the show's characters to have more dimension than we're used to seeing. "We won't have the hero image that might have been popular years ago," he said. "Don Walling (the executive played by Best Seller Ryan) will be without faults. We want him to be realistic—without turning him into a Bob Haldeman."

But there is a danger that these shows, though freed of the co-show formulas and clichés, will develop their own set. Network pressures may make them as unrealistic as the shows they've replaced. "Sure there have been pressures from the network," said Felton.

"They told us not to make a big deal out of the fact that the corporation in the show makes a product that causes cancer. They said, 'We're not sure people like to have a series that talks a lot about cancer.' And the network people told us, 'How about getting a little old-fashioned romantic love into the show?'"

NBC took the success of Rich Man, Poor Man as an indication that 1) the novel-for-television was a salable commodity, and 2) a network could quickly grab big ratings with a limited series. So NBC is giving us Best Sellers, television adaptations of such potboilers as "The Rainey Exchange" by Robert Ludlum, "The Eighth Day" by Thornton Wilder, "Evening in Byzantium" by Irwin Shaw, "Once an Eagle" by Anton Myrer and "Galveston" by Suzanne Morris.

The first Best Seller will be a nine-hour, seven-part rendition of Taylor Caldwell's "Captains and the Kings," the story of an Irish immigrant who builds a business empire and longs to see his son elected the first Catholic President of the United States. (Sound like somebody you've heard of?)

Richard Jordan will play the lead and the network hopes to grab viewers with appearances by stars like Ray Bolger, Celeste Holm, Henry Fonda and Patty Duke Astin.

Randall Shown and Lear's Nancy Walker Show, which run back to back on ABC Thursday nights.

Randall plays a widowed Philadelphia judge with two children, a bossy housekeeper and a bossy secretary. Miss Walker plays a talent agent whose husband is returning home after spending most of their married life at sea. She has a gay live-in secretary (Ken Olson) and a sad, homely, constantly pregnant daughter, played by Beverly Archer, who steals the show in the premiere episode.

CBS executives are enthusiastic about All's Fair, another Lear product starring Richard Crenna as a conservative Washington columnist who falls in love with a liberal photographer played by Bernadette Peters. Like most of Lear's characters, they spend a lot of time slouting at each other. The show was given the honor of replacing All in the Family in the network's immensely popular Monday night comedy lineup.

All in the Family, the highest-rated television series of all time, has been moved to Wednesday night to help prep up the two rather weak new sitcoms that will flank it — Ball Four, named after Jim Bouton's icon-elastic book about baseball, and Alice, based loosely on the movie "Alice Doesn't Live Here Anymore." Bouton, who needs some more acting lessons, stars in Ball Four, which abounds with locker-room humor sanctified for "family hour." Alice stars Linda Lavin as a young widow who works as a waitress but aspires to a singing career.

Abby

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune Inc. All Rights Reserved

DEAR ABBY: I'm in the process of having some root canal work done, which is no picnic, but that's not my problem. It's my dentist. While he works, he whistles through his teeth. I wouldn't mind a little Herb Alpert or Burt Bacharach, but no, my dentist keeps whistling "Easter Parade" over and over again until I am ready to scratch my eyes out. Not only that, but he calls me "Mrs. Grassfield," and my name is Mrs. Greenfield. Should I deduct 20 per cent from my bill for aggravation?

MRS. GREENFIELD

DEAR MRS. GREENFIELD: You could try. Maybe he's already added 20 per cent for entertainment.

Patient aggravated

DEAR ABBY: I recently moved to this city to be near my married son and his family. Although my son and his wife have many fine traits, they use foul language that I find offensive.

I am being babysat with their children (ages 5 and 9), and I am horrified to hear these children use the same vulgar four-letter words their parents use. I have told my son and his wife it offends me, and I've asked them not to allow their children to talk that way, but they say I'm old-fashioned and prudish, and everybody talks that way today. (Do they?) I was also told I'm not to discipline their children because that's the parents' job. Have our values become so depraved that clean speech, modesty and respect for others no longer exist? What am I to do?

HEARTBROKEN IN HARTFORD

DEAR HEARTBROKEN: You can decline to babysit with your grandchildren. Clean speech, modesty and respect for others still exist in some homes, but unfortunately not in your son's.

DEAR ABBY: I've never seen a problem like mine in your column. I have two fathers who are equally dear to me. My "real" (biological) father and my adoptive father.

I was 14 when my parents were divorced, but my father always kept in close touch and let me know that he loved me all the years I was growing up. My mother remarried when I was six, and I can truthfully say that my adoptive father could and I have been more wonderful to me.

I was being married at a church wedding. My problem is which father I should choose to give me away. I don't want to hurt the feelings of either father by choosing the other. It was suggested that the ideal solution would be to have an uncle give me away. Please help me.

TORN

DEAR TORN: Why not ask both fathers to share the honor? And when the clergyman asks, "Who gives this bride away?" both fathers can respond in unison, "We do."

Check this out with your clergyman. You are twice blessed. Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

New TV melodrama

BRIAN Welling (Leigh McCloskey), the company president's son, and Summer Johnson (Brenda Sykes) are drawn deeper into company affairs and closer to each other in "Executive Suite," CBS' new melodrama for the fall season. "Executive Suite" is one of three serial-type programs offered by the three TV networks this fall.

Should pregnant women take flu shots?

WASHINGTON — Should pregnant women take the swine influenza vaccine? The federal government says "yes," but at the same time the Public Health Service wants to "study and evaluate" the effect of swine flu vaccine on pregnant women. According to some of its critics, the government has recommended the vaccine a bit too enthusiastically for pregnant women. The federal Center for Disease Control has invited researchers to submit bids on a contract to determine possible adverse effects of the vaccine on the outcome of pregnancy. The solicitation was made in Commerce Business Daily, the government's journal for announcing contract opportunities and further details are contained in the official "request for proposals."

Although the research will involve human subjects, it is not clear from the solicitation whether the normal rules for the protection of human subjects will apply. These rules require that a research project undergo institutional review, that the benefits outweigh the risks and that informed consent be obtained. Dr. Henry Retzlaff of the CDC said, "We have no evidence at all to suggest that there is any possibility of adverse effects" from the vaccine. "We believe there is no risk of any kind to mother or fetus." However, he acknowledged that "this particular vaccine has not been tested on pregnant women because of time constraints. You'd have to test a vaccine on pregnant women for nine months, and it hasn't been nine months since the program began."

The program to offer the vaccine to "every man, woman and child in the United States" was announced by President Ford on March 24. The government's top health officials have said they would advise pregnant women to take the vaccine. Their view is consistent with the recommendation of the Public Health Service's Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices, a group of outside experts. The government intends to seek written consent before giving anyone the vaccine, and the section of the consent forms pertaining to pregnant women has been criticized on several counts. Marcia Greenberg of the Center for Law and Social Policy, a "public interest" law firm, says the consent forms "not only fail to fully explain the risks and benefits of the vaccine...

but are actually affirmatively misleading." The forms are being revised, on the advice of a national commission concerned with protecting the rights of human subjects of medical research. Congress, in approving insurance for the swine flu program, directed the Public Health Service to consult with the commission about the consent forms. The commission called for a revision of the original form, dated July 15, which said that "flu vaccine can be taken safely during pregnancy." The same statement is made in a "consumer memo" circulated by the Food and Drug Administration. Commission members felt that while there was no evidence of potential harm from the vaccine, there was a lack of controlled studies demonstrating its safety.

Test shows 'index' baffles many teens

By United Press International
A nationwide test of reading skills shows a newspaper index baffles 60 per cent of the 13 year olds and 41 per cent of youths 17. The assessment of reading also included nine year-olds, not tested on the paper-index question. The nine year olds go to the head of the class. Their reading skills, compared to the little or no improvement among 13- and 17-year-olds, went up 12 percentage points—compared to scores by 13-year-olds four years ago. Sixties among black nine year olds went up the most, 4.8 percentage points. But the blacks still are 13 points below whites. At all ages tested girls continued to read better than boys. The report on reading skills was put out Tuesday by National Assessment of Educational Progress, a project of the Education Commission of the States in Denver, Colo. The newspaper index question was included in tests administered to 13 and 17 year olds. Four years ago, 42 per cent of the 13 year olds were successful in this category. Forty per cent were successful this time around. Among 17 year olds, 63 per cent succeeded in the newspaper index test-question in 1971. This last time, 59 per cent were successful. Subjects were asked which pages to check for television schedule, weather, stock averages, beauty hints. They also were asked if the paper carried a bridge column. The National Assessment surveys educational attainments in 10 learning areas. Different subjects are assessed every year and periodically re-assessed to mark change in achievement—up or down. The reading assessment was conducted by the Research Triangle Institute, Raleigh, N.C., and the Measurement Research Center in Iowa City. The new report does little to ease anxiety over declining reading skills. Dips in the Scholastic Aptitude Tests for college entrance also have caused much concern and currently are being probed by a blue ribbon panel headed by Willard Wirtz, head of the National Manpower Institute in Washington, D.C. Some authorities fear dropping scores on the college entrance tests may be related to falling reading skills. The hopeful side of the National Assessment report the improvement was among nine year olds was attributed to reading intervention—an attempt to improve skills in the earlier years of school. Roy H. Forbes, director of National Assessment, said the evidence shows special programs at the elementary level are paying off in reading. Earlier assessments showed that the intervention programs to bolster skills also were successful in science and writing. "With the taxpayers demanding education accountability and a return to the basics the National Assessment of Education Progress data indicates that while we should maintain such attention also should be aimed at the intermediate and secondary schools." Roger Farr, a reading authority from the University of Indiana, Bloomington, is quoted in the report. "I think all ages are going exceptionally well on the items that are straightforward, basic, literal," he said. "They are doing exceptionally well on very minimal kinds of literary tasks. But as soon as the tasks start to get harder the results seem to drop off rather quickly." By harder, Farr said he meant as soon as the passages become longer or the questions require more manipulation. Farr is associate dean for research and evaluation at Indiana's School of Education. He also is co-director of the Reading Research Quarterly and a member of the board of directors of the International Reading Association. Another reading authority, Prof. Wayne Otto, head of the University of Wisconsin's Curriculum and Instruction department, reports: "It's not that they can't read; it's that they are not willing to read. When the content is especially interesting, as in an item that included directions for performing a magic trick or when few mental manipulations are called for, 17-year-old seem to do very well. "But any time there seems to be any kind of challenge—personality descriptions radically. Testing is a very unpopular activity among 17 year olds today." National Assessment performs its measurement chores under contract with the National Center for Education Statistics.

'Success stories' start year for women's league

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls League of Women Voters began the new league year with a program entitled "Success Stories of Idaho Women in Public Life."

The program was highlighted by a panel discussion with five Idaho women who are active in public life throughout the state. These special guests of the league include Hope Kading, Boise; Betty Penson, Ward, Twin Falls; Janet Hay, Nampa; Marge Titus, Jerome; and Joy Buersmeyer, Boise.

Kading is president of the Idaho Park Foundation and was a recent candidate for Lieutenant Governor. Kading attributed her success and accomplishments in many different fields to her having "defied the odds" and "having realized all learned skills are transferable to other undertakings. She expressed her belief that each activity must be undertaken with a positive attitude and sense of humor."

Ward, an Idaho Journalist, was a former travel editor of the Idaho Statesman and is now on the Idaho Commission for Women Programs and a member of the National Defense Advisory Committee of Women in the Service.

Ward described her start in journalism, saying she felt she was successful because she worked harder than men to learn her trade and because she could point the table harder and yell louder. She described her generation of women as the survivors and the current generation of women as the "female achievers."

Hay, a former chairman of the Idaho Board of Education, urged the women in the audience not to neglect their speaking and writing skills, and not to be hesitant to speak out on issues once they had studied the facts. She cautioned them always to stick to the issues rather than personalities.

Buersmeyer, currently president of L'Harrison Enterprises, was recently appointed by Gov. Cecil Andrus to the Idaho Commission on Women's Programs. She is active in the Democratic Party and commented that voter apathy is one of the leading problems our nation has.

Buersmeyer, a member of the Boise City Council, the executive director of the Idaho Mental Health Association and a mother of five children, said she believes that women must accept responsibilities, but without trampling on the rights of men.

After the panel discussion which was moderated by Ella Nelson, there was an open discussion period with questions and comments from the audience of League members.

MAGIC VALLEY — An area resident has been named assistant director for two plays at the University of Idaho. Moseley and Gathers have been named cast members.

Gale Oakes, Twin Falls, will be the assistant director of "The Road" (Sept. 16-18), "a spoof on various Christian-type mysteries by Tom Stoppard," and "Box and Cox" billed as a "Victorian curtain-raiser."

Kurt Daw, Hansen is a member of the cast of "Hound," and Joan Vaw, also of Hansen, will perform in the comic afterpiece. The plays open Oct. 7, opening the University of Idaho theater season.

Edmund Chavez, theater arts head, directs both "Hound" and "Box and Cox."

The unlucky expert had caught us again. With no escape, we agreed to listen to the sad story of one hand.

Here is his tale of woe. This hand cost me top score last night. The field was in the same four-spade contract I was with one exception. Everyone else made it. I was down one.

"You didn't call for trump my king of diamonds at dummy's king of diamonds at trick one, did you?" we asked.

"No, I called for the deuce, but old honey, who sat East, envelopes are enclosed. The most interesting questions will be used in this column and will receive copies of JACOBY RECEIVE."

and suddenly asked what the king was still doing in dummy. Then he put that card back and placed the queen of hearts on the table. Three quick heart tricks cooked my goose.

The hand is rather interesting in that some good player in the East seat might deliberately play the ace of diamonds at trick one. The theory being that South would have played dummy's king. If he held two diamonds. A trifle far-fetched, but experts do all sorts of unusual things and sometimes they work.

Gem State basks in Indian Summer

Twist Area, Northside, Burley-Rupert area:
Clear and cool tonight. Sunny and continued mild Saturday. Saturday's highs in the mid-70s, overnight lows near 40.
Sunday's outlook: dry and mild. Haying and harvesting still on 'out' good, with no precipitation and light winds through the weekend.
Soil temperatures should drop from the upper 60s, dropping into the mid-50s during the night, and should average in the lower 60s.

Halley, Camas Prairie, lower Wood River Valley:
Clear and cool tonight. Sunny and mild Saturday. Highs Saturday in the lower 70s, overnight lows tonight near 30.
Sunday's outlook: dry and mild.
Synopsis:
Indian Summer weather is expected for the next several days as high pressure continues to build over the Pacific Northwest. A Pacific cold front now in the eastern Pacific will be blocked by this high pressure and be forced to move into Canada, leaving mostly clear, sunny skies in the Magic Valley over the weekend.
However, with light winds and clear skies, overnight temperatures will drop to near 40 in most areas and down into the 30s, with some areas of frost likely in the higher mountain areas through the weekend.
The haying and harvesting outlook for Sunday through Tuesday calls for sunny days and clear nights. No precipitation and light winds through Tuesday. Highs generally in the 70s, overnight lows in the 40s.

Harris plead innocent in kidnap case

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI) — Symbionse Liberation Army members William and Emily Harris pleaded innocent Thursday to the kidnaping of Patricia Hearst.
The judge set Oct. 7 for a preliminary hearing, ignoring pleas by defense counsel that it be set for next Monday in order to frustrate the district attorney's attempt to get an indictment from a grand jury.
The Harris, unshackled and in a laughing, jovial mood, the district attorney from holding what they called a "star chamber" proceeding before the grand jury.

Assistant District Attorney Alex Selvin conceded he planned to present the matter to a grand jury beginning Monday, a proceeding that would do away with the necessity of holding a preliminary hearing since the prosecutor would ask for dismissal after getting a grand jury indictment.
Selvin said that even though the crime took place more than 2 1/2 years ago, and the complaint was filed in April, he would be unable to prepare his case by Monday.
The defense attorneys concentrated on the testimony of Miss Hearst which would be given before a grand jury without the opportunity for cross examination.

Easy for bombers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two bomb experts said Thursday almost anybody can find the ingredients needed to blow up people and property because of "gaping loopholes" in federal and state law.
"Relatively new compounds that form powerful explosives are available at the corner drugstore," Arthur Gunn of the Nassau County (N.Y.) bomb squad said in testimony before the Senate Judiciary Committee on Internal Security.
Gunn and Lt. William Poe, supervisor of the Explosive Control and Firearms Unit of the Louisiana State Police, told the committee there was a "tremendous proliferation in the use of illegal explosives," and inadequate law is a problem.
"Our state laws must define exactly what comprises a bomb and what is an explosive. Present statutes should be constantly updated in keeping abreast of current technology," Gunn said.
Poe, 34, a 10-year veteran of the Louisiana State Police, said "gaping loopholes" exist in federal laws and "there are thousands of pounds of surplus military explosives sold throughout the United States ... in many cases in bulk form."

of Miss Hearst which would be given before a grand jury without the opportunity for cross examination.

SV books hospital meet

SUN VALLEY — The Idaho Hospital Association (IHA) will hold its 43rd annual convention Sept. 25-29 in Sun Valley.
IHA Executive Vice President John D. Hutchison says he expects more than 900 persons representing Idaho's health care community to attend the convention.
Dr. Duane Vandenhuech, a professor of history at Western State College, Gunnison, Colo., since 1962, will keynote the opening general session on Sunday. He will speak on "Americanism."

Other general session speakers and their topics will include American Hospital Association. Senior Vice President Leo J. Gehrig, M.D., Washington, D.C., "Politics, Election, and What Then?" Robert Crosby, a Hospital Corporation of America executive and past president of Charter Medical Corporation, Nashville, Tenn., "Today's Political Realities and Their Effects on Tomorrow's Hospitals," and William T.

Robinson, senior vice president, American Hospital Association, Chicago, Ill., "IHA — and State — Hospital Associations — As I See them."

Oil market guard asked

BOISE (UPI) — Sen. James McClure joined in cosponsoring legislation aimed at preventing major petroleum marketers from suddenly pulling out of an area and requiring them to give notice of withdrawal.
"The legislation which I have sponsored would require any major oil company which controls more than one-seventh of the gasoline sold in a state to notify the governor of that state and then close only 25 per cent of its operations in any six month period," McClure said.

Miller opens tourney with record nine-under par 63

NAPA, Calif. (UPI) — Johnny Miller says playing golf has to be fun or it isn't worth the effort.

Thursday, the 29-year-old blond Californian shot a course record nine under par 63 on Silverado's North course for a two-shot lead over veteran Don January in the opening round of the $175,000 Kaiser International Open.

"Playing golf has to be fun for me," said Miller, who won the Tucson Open, the Bob Hope Desert Classic and British Open this year but ranked only 15th on the money list.

"If I looked at the game as a profession, I would get bored," added Miller, who is shooting for his third straight Kaiser title.

Miller started on the back nine of the North course, which is considered a little tougher than Silverado's South course, and took a bogey five when he three-putted the 10th hole.

As things turned out, it was the only mistake Miller made for the day as heaced the 11th hole and added birdies at the 12th, the 14th, the 16th, the 18th, the first, the fifth, the seventh and the ninth on a 31-32.

That broke the course record of 64 held by Bobby Nichols, Bob Slesion and Rod Cuda and it enabled Miller to take the lead on a day when January was playing his best golf in his career. It also was the only time under coming to the final three holes on the South course. But he bogeyed two of them and had to settle for a 65, which left him a shot ahead of J.C. Snead, Gibby Gilbert and George Archer.

Dan Sikes, Jim Dent, Tom Watson and Forrest Fezler had 65 to play four shots off the lead.

January, who already has won the most money of his career this year with more than $146,000, played the back side first on the South course and made the turn in five under 32 with five birdies.

Then, coming back, he reeled off four more birdies through the sixth, including three in a row and was in excellent position to take the lead.

But he made a bad chip on the par three seventh for a bogey and he two-putted the par four eighth after driving the ball into the trees for another bogey and that spoiled an otherwise excellent round.

"I had to play well to shoot the score I did," said January. "I drove the ball well except at the last couple of holes and that made the difference."

Miller is coming back after a three-week rest and he usually plays his best when he has left the tour for a rest.

"The way I play, with my approach, I don't believe I will burn myself out," he said. "Usually, I win after taking a rest."

Another interesting thing about Miller's game success is that of his 17 tour victories 13 have come in western events. Half of those 13 were won on the West Coast but only two of them were won in the middle of the summer and enjoy the time off with his family.

Most of the tour's more glamorous players are passing the Kaiser but the tournament started with 13 of the top 20 money winners. U.S. Open champ Jerry Pate had entered but withdrew before teeing off because of illness.

Hofheinz transfers Astrodome control

HOUSTON (UPI) — Judge Roy Hofheinz Thursday sold his financially sagging Astrodome empire, including the Houston Astros baseball team, and relinquished control of his dream—the Astrodome—to two lending corporations.

The purchase price was not disclosed.

T.H. Neyland, board chairman for Houston Sports Association, Inc., announced the purchase by General Electric Credit Corp. and Ford Motor Credit Corp., two of the creditors with whom Hofheinz retained his falling sports domain.

"Judge Roy Hofheinz' imagination and drive created this complex for Houston, and without him it would never have happened," Neyland said.

Hofheinz has the option to buy it back within a year, Neyland said.

Sidney Shlenker, president of the Astros, resigned and will be replaced by Tat Smith, formerly corporate vice president. Smith remains as general manager of the baseball club.

Martin Kelly, formerly a financial executive with General Electric Credit Corp., was named executive vice-president of Astrodome Corp., the umbrella organization for the Hofheinz holdings.

The lending corporation assume control of AstroWorld Amusement Park, which is currently leased to Six Flags Inc., approximately 300 acres of undeveloped land adjoining it, the baseball team and the lease of the Astrodome.

The Astrodome, the first domed stadium, is owned by Harris County. Houston Sports Association Inc., which is owned by Astrodome Corp., is in the 12th year of a 40-year lease to operate it.

Marshall on verge of iron man mark

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — Defensive end Jim Marshall will set a record by playing in 225 consecutive games Sunday when he starts for the Minnesota Vikings in Detroit.

Marshall, who will be 39 on Dec. 30, played 12 games for Cleveland in his rookie season in 1960, before being acquired by Minnesota in its first National Football League season in 1961. He has started every regular season game the Vikings have played in the NFL, or 212 games.

Marshall now shares with George Blanda the NFL record of 224 consecutive games played.

Vikings center Mike Tinglehoff will play his 199th NFL game in a row and will become the fifth NFL player to achieve the 200 consecutive game mark against Pittsburgh on Monday, Oct. 4.

Two retired players, Oakland center Jim Otto at 210 and San Francisco tackle Len Riddle at 208, are the others.

Familiar pose

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — A visibly angered Pittsburgh Coach Chuck Noll refused to comment Thursday on fines against him, Steelers' defensive tackle Ernie Holmes and two Oakland defensive backs by NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle, but wide receiver Lynn Swann did plenty of talking for him.

Swann, the most visible casualty of the hard-fought season opener between the two teams that prompted the fines, called Rozelle's ruling against the Steelers "political" and against the Raiders inadequate.

Swann suffered a concussion in the Sept. 12 game when he was whacked on the head by George Atkinson, one of two Raiders' defensive backs Rozelle fined. Oakland's Jack Tatum drew a personal foul penalty during the game and was fined for unsportsmanlike conduct. Atkinson's fine reportedly was $1,500 and Tatum's $750.

Holmes said Thursday he had no idea what he had been fined for, but a league spokesman said he was fined along with Atkinson and Tatum "for actions on the field in the Sept. 12 Pittsburgh-Oakland game."

The day after the game, Noll lambasted the Raiders' defensive actions as "criminal," which is presumably why he was fined. The NFL spokesman said only that Noll has been fined for conduct detrimental to the game.

Noll and Holmes each said they did not know the amount of their fines.

Fines draw Steeler ire; casualty fingers Raiders

That was the limit to Noll's comment on the punishment, although the expression on his face spoke for him. When the topic was broached, he turned red and pressed his lips tightly together.

Swann was not so restrained.

"I'm not satisfied with Rozelle's decision," said Swann, who missed the Steelers' home opener with Cleveland last week because of the concussion, the second he has suffered in the Steelers' last two games against Oakland.

"I do not think it was a strong enough deterrent," Swann continued. "I think in situations of that nature, it should carry an automatic suspension of one to two weeks."

"I think he (Rozelle) was being political in a situation that should have not been political, but a decision made for the benefit of football. That decision was not beneficial to football."

Holmes said, "I don't know exactly what I was fined for... and whatever I did do, I don't think I deserved to be fined."

But he said, whatever it was he did do, "I'd do it again."

"I think there was some kind of misunderstanding as to what kind of foulplay I am, what my intentions are on the football field," Holmes said.

"But if Pete says I did something wrong, Pete must be right."

A team spokesman said the NFL normally does not issue statements regarding fines, but did so in this case because of the previous publicity generated by the game.

New tax aids illegal gaming, solons told

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The only American managing a British gambling casino predicted Thursday the new instant federal tax collection on race track winnings of over $1,000 will lead to widespread evasion, cheating and more customers for illegal bookmakers.

Victor Lowmes, managing director of the London Playday Club and three other English casinos, gave his views as part of a panel of British and Bahama authorities testifying before a special White House Commission on National Gambling Policy.

Lowmes told a subsequent news conference the new deduction on winnings in the recently tax reform bill awaiting President Ford's signature was "ridiculous."

If the President signs the bill, the Internal Revenue Service will be able to collect taxes, in advance, on racetrack winnings of more than $1,000. The procedure would be similar to withholding taxes on income.

He said that to avoid the Internal Revenue Service collectors, a winning bettor will cash a series of $5 tickets one at a time. He also forecast those subject to heavy accumulating-discarded losing tickets at the track so that he can show an overall loss at the end of the year.

"The average gambler isn't going to be a winner in the long run," he added "and the proposed collection seems to me to be ridiculous and merely creating expensive paper work for the government."

Lowmes and Sir Stanley Raymond, chairman of Britain's gaming board, both opposed any direct income taxes on gambling winnings as counterproductive. They noted the British government collects about $18 million a year by assessing a modest excise tax on casino operators and bookmakers instead.

Lowmes praised three provisions of British law—a 10-hour waiting period before a local club member can gamble at a casino, a ban on advertising and a rule against any live entertainment.

Gate goal near

NEW YORK (UPI) — Major league baseball's goal of a 31 million attendance for 1976 is within reach going into the final 11 days of the regular season.

An all-time season record was established Wednesday when 150,399 fans turned out for this major league play, increasing this year's total to 30,109,174. This brings the 31 million figure into realistic sight with 110 games remaining among the 24 big league teams.

Major league attendance has reached 30 million in three of the last four years. Poor September weather last year held the count down to 29,789,916.

'Skins show loss

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Washington Redskins grossed $8.9 million in 1975 but showed an operating loss of $30,463, the Washington Post reported Thursday.

The figures, the Post said, were obtained from a prospectus by sports entrepreneur Jack Kent Cooke, who has offered his 71 per cent stock holding in the team for $11.25 million.

Post sports writer Len Shapiro wrote that the club showed a profit of $82,544 in 1973 and $17,884 the following year. The player payroll, he said, rose from $2.6 million in 1973 to $3.2 million last season and now is estimated at $4 million, the highest in the National Football League.

Coach George Allen's salary was listed as $125,000 annually with bonuses of $5,000 for winning the division title, $10,000 for the conference championship and an additional $15,000 for a Super Bowl victory.

Kupchak decision near

LANDOVER, Md. (UPI) — Mitch Kupchak, the Washington Bullets' top draft choice, has met informally with club officials and will decide soon whether to play with the Bullets or in Italy, a spokesman said Thursday.

"There is really nothing new, except that Mitch will make a decision in the next couple of days," said Bullets' publicist Marc Splaver.

Napoles released

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Former world welterweight champion, Joe "Musta" Napoles was freed on $3,000 bail Thursday after being charged with assaulting a city policeman.

Napoles, who lost his World Boxing Council title in Britain's John Stracey here in December last year, was arrested Wednesday by one of the policemen he is accused of slugging two weeks ago.

Quarterbacking spices Cowboy-Colt duel

By CHRIS TURKEL
UPI Sports Writer

Two of the best quarterbacking in football will be spotlighted Sunday when they lead their undefeated teams against each other as the DALLAS COWBOYS TRAVEL TO TEXAS to play the DALLAS COWBOYS on national television.

Former Heisman Trophy winner Roger Staubach, currently rated the No. 1 QB in the NFC, directs the Cowboys, runnersup to Pittsburgh in the 1976 Super Bowl, while Bert Jones, ranked No. 2 in the AFC, leads the Colts.

Staubach has completed 60 per cent of his passes for two touchdowns and only one interception in spearheading the Cowboys' attack. Meanwhile, the stingy defense has yielded only 13 points in two games—second-best in the league.

The former Navy great is at his best in crucial third-down situations, converting a 58.6 per cent of most times strive for 40 per cent third-down efficiency.

About Staubach, Dallas Coach Tom Landry says: "I'd rate him as good as any quarterback in the league."

Asked if he would trade Staubach for Jones, Landry replied: "No. You could not suggest anyone I'd take over him."

Jones has tossed five TD passes, including three in last week's come-from-behind 28-27 victory over the Cincinnati Bengals. His 60-yard TD pass to Roger Carr against Cincinnati is the longest in the American Conference so far this year.

Baltimore is seeking a clubhouse 12th straight regular season victory. Last season, after losing their first four games, the Colts won 10 in a row to take the AFC Eastern Division title.

The Colts will be making their first appearance in Texas Stadium-Overall, Baltimore holds a 4-2 series lead over Dallas, including a 16-13 Super Bowl V triumph in 1971 on Jim O'Brien's 32-yard field goal with five seconds remaining.

Baltimore is expected to be at full strength, with only backup safety Randy Hall questionable. Dallas, though, will start running back Doug Dennison and guard Herbert Scott in place of the injured Charlie Young and Bart Lawless, while the other starting running back—Robert Newhouse—is listed as questionable.

Elsewhere in the NFL, there are two other games between undefeated teams—Oakland at Houston and St. Louis at San Diego.

The Raiders-Oilers clash before a sellout crowd in Houston pits the high-powered Oakland offense, with 886 yards and seven TDs in two games, against the league-leading Houston defense, which has surrendered only three points and 278 yards while scoring the opposing QB eight times. The Raiders have reported that (back) Clarence Davis and Carl Garrett (as doubtful).

Both the Cardinals and the Chargers are coming off shutout victories last week. St. Louis 29-0 over Green Bay and San Diego 23-0 over Tampa Bay. The Chargers' defense has not given up a TD in six quarters and San Diego QB Dan Fouts is ranked No. 4 but his favorite target—wide receiver Gary Garrison—is out for the year with a shoulder separation. St. Louis QB Jim Hart will miss All-Pro tight end Jackie Smith, but with an ailing foot, and fleet wide receiver Mel Gray is questionable.

In other games Sunday, Atlanta is at Chicago, Buffalo is at Tampa Bay, Cleveland at Denver, Green Bay at Cincinnati, Minnesota at Detroit, New England at Pittsburgh, New Orleans at Kansas City, New York Giants at Las Vegas, New York Jets at Miami and San Francisco at Seattle. Monday night, it's Washington at Philadelphia.

AL owners blast Cardinals for tampering

CHICAGO (UPI) — American League owners support unanimously a move to deny the St. Louis Cardinals the right to sign free agent ball players because they believe Cardinals' owner August Busch violated the major league tampering rule.

The AL unanimously endorsed a request from League President Lee MacPhail on Sept. 16 to Commissioner Bowie Kuhn asking for a hearing on whether Busch violated major league rule 3 (G) by publicly announcing he had requested $3 to $4 million from the board of directors to sign free agents.

Allegedly he mentioned he would attempt to sign pitcher Rolfe Fingers and outfielder Joe Rudi of the Oakland A's, and the initial protest which MacPhail relayed to Kuhn was by A's owner Charles O. Finley.

The AL owners acted at a discussion meeting Thursday at which Finley said he "raised all kinds of hell" because the owners were informed that teams could begin negotiating with free agents whose teams were not involved in the playoffs at the end of the regular season.

"This was something they sprung on us from out of nowhere," Finley said. "All the other owners felt the same way I did. We had all been led to believe that we had until Nov. 4 to negotiate with our unsigned players. Now we find anyone can come in and sign them the minute the season is over."

MacPhail said that the AL meeting was briefed on the ground rules covering free agents, and that they could talk to such players, but could not negotiate for money or sign any contracts.

"That's a break," Finley said. "Anybody going out to talk to a player has got to say we're not supposed to talk money but I'm going to talk money anyway."

"I have been under the impression no one could talk to my players until they have been drafted. You can see how this interferes with my negotiating a contract. All the other major league clubs will be coming in making their bids.

"It will make it almost impossible for me. The guy says other clubs offered me more money and back and forth, back and forth, by the time it gets back to me."

Finley alleged that the decision to permit talking to free agents between the end of the season and the draft was a "side agreement" in which both Kuhn and the director of the player's association, Marvin Miller, were involved.

Finley warned the AL meeting that he would take legal action against any team which tries to sign any of his six players who could become free agents.

"Nobody can come in and steal your assets like this. You can't come in and rape a club just like that. I'm fighting to survive, but what they're doing is turning all the hawks and buzzards loose on Charlie Finley. I'm bleeding like a stuck hog and they're waiting for the old ticker to stop. That's when they'll swoop in and pluck me dry."

Free agents could negotiate with as many as 12 teams plus the team for which he previously played, but there would be a restriction on how many free agents any team could sign.

MacPhail said it would depend on the number of free agents in the pool, and that "it looks at the present time as if each club will be limited to signing two players or as many as they last. If they lose more than two, they will be eligible to sign more than two."

The league meeting discussed many points, including both the free agent and expansion drafts to stock the new Seattle and Toronto teams, the umpire development program, the possibility of adopting three divisions, network television, and a format for selection of members of the board of directors.

Farm

Hog production recovers from low mark of year ago

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Hog production is continuing to recover from last year's depressed levels and supplies through at least the first nine months of 1977 will run substantially above year-ago rates, Agriculture Department experts said today.

The forecast of heavier production — which would keep farm prices below the comparatively low levels of early this year and would tend to lower retail pork prices for consumers — followed release Wednesday of a new department survey of hog production.

The survey, made in 14 major producing states, estimated production of baby pigs in the 14 states from June through August at 18.1 million head, up 21 per cent from a year ago. A previous survey in June had predicted an increase of only about 16 per cent.

The June-August pigs will go to market as pork around the end of 1976 and in early 1977.

For the months from September through next February, the survey found farmers planning to continue producing above year-ago levels, but at a diminishing rate.

For the September-February quarter, farmers reported plans to produce pigs from 2.4 million sows, up 16 per cent from a year earlier in contrast to the 19 per cent indicated in an earlier survey.

For December-February, plans call for an increase of 9 per cent above a year earlier compared to the 12 per cent shown in a previous survey.

A department analyst said the reduction from earlier plans shown in the two latter survey periods may be due to farmers' reaction to recent cuts in corn production prospects.

Experts had already noted that the reduction in corn prospects, which foreshadows higher livestock feed prices, could lead hog farmers to slow but not cancel their expansion plans.

First Idaho report set

BOISE (UPI) — The first potato production report for fall potatoes will be released Oct. 12, the Idaho Crop and Livestock Reporting Service announced today.

The information is available upon release to any grower, shipper or processor by calling the service in Boise at (208) 384-1567.

Idaho potato area extension specialists also have the information in Parma, Blackfoot and Idaho Falls after 1 p.m. on release days.

The time and dates will be announced, the service said.
