SNRA office costs soaring

By BARR QUINN
Times-News writer

KETCHUM — The mountain shaped new headquarters building for the Sawtooth National Recreation Area is budgeted to cost nearly $600,000 more than originally estimated and it's expected that it will take an extra year to complete.

Total cost for the 15,000 square foot building may rise to $1.38 million — or a cost of $115 per square foot, according to Forest Service estimates.

The building will house about 50 headquarters workers for the SNRA and serve as a visitors' center.

SNRA Superintendent Gray Reynolds had said in 1974 that completion of all facilities at the headquarters site would cost about $400,000. Now it appears the structure will cost $380,000 more than that.

Jim Simpson, Sawtooth National Forest engineer, said Monday that $481,000 has been turned from US 93 and the access road.

Another $199,000 has been spent to complete the sewer and water facilities, he said.

But the major expense apparently lies ahead. The SNRA has asked Congress for an extra $700,000 to complete the interior of the building and do more landscaping.

Invitations have been sent out to over 50 contractors, according to Cal Dennison, a contracting specialist in the Twin Falls office. Those bids will be opened Oct. 18.

The move into the headquarters has been delayed at least a year already. An expected appropriation to complete the interior was not forthcoming in 1976.

Don Dragger, contracting specialist with the regional Forest Service office in Ogden said the SNRA has a preliminary budget notification that $700,000 will be available this fiscal year to finish the interior of the building, landscape and set up—the visitor information center with exhibits and other items.

The complete package specifies the contractor will have 255 days to complete the contract after the bid opening.

A Forest Service official with the SNRA said the staff would like to be in the structure by the spring of 1977. Currently, Forest Service staff are in two different buildings, one south of Ketchum, the other in the Devil's Bedstead building.

Dennison said there is practically no interior work completed yet.

Warning by Henry succeeds

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry Kissinger apparently succeeded today in blocking a congressional move to deny the sale of 650 Maverick air-to-ground missiles to Saudi Arabia.

Kissinger appealed to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to reconsider its 4-6 vote Friday to kill the projected $30 million sale on the grounds it would prejudice relations with the Saudis and could result in retaliation by that moderate Arab country.

Following Kissinger's warning, the committee declined to take any formal action, but Sen. Gale W. McGee, D-Wyo., let it be known he would change his vote. That would result in a 7-7 tie, which would kill denial of the sale.

Congressional sources in both the Senate and House said there now is only an "outside chance" the two chambers could approve a concurrent resolution to deny the sale by scheduled adjournment on Saturday.

Sen. Clifford P. Case, R-N.J., told reporters he reserved the right to bring the issue before the full Senate.

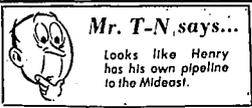

Rep. Thomas Morgan, chairman of the House International Relations Committee, said his panel would do nothing with the resolution to deny the sale until the Senate had acted.

Kissinger told reporters on leaving the hearing room he doubted that denial of the $30 million missile deal would lead to a retaliatory all embargo by Saudi Arabia. "There is a big gamut of decisions" the Saudis could make, he added.

"To reject the sale of Maverick missiles to Saudi Arabia would have foreign policy consequences out of proportion to the technical and military issues involved," Kissinger said.

He said Saudi Arabia has been a "good friend of the United States," played a stabilizing role in the Middle East, and been helpful in the search for peace in that region.

And Kissinger said in a 20-page study released today, by Senate Armed Services Committee Member John C. Culver that it is "politically infeasible" to get the world's nations to agree to universal restrictions on arms exports.

Dike ruptures

REXBURG, Idaho (UPI) — The Madison County Sheriff's office Monday night warned persons living near the Teton River here and in the Sugar City area to be alert for minor flooding through Tuesday.

A diversion dike at the base of the ruptured Teton Dam gave way Monday, sending a one-foot high wall of water down the Teton River. But officials said the flooding will be no worse than the annual spring runoff, and only property along the river may be in the way of the rising water.

No problems were expected, according to a sheriff's spokesman.

Last June the Teton Dam broke, flooding both cities as well as Idaho Falls and other communities along the Teton and upper Snake rivers.

Measure passes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate today approved an $85.3 million supplemental appropriations bill including a $50 million subsidy for the Postal Service.

The measure was passed by voice vote after the postal money was added to the bill by a vote of 63 to 14.

It also contains $20 million for payment of claims arising from the Teton Dam disaster in Idaho and $16.6 million for repair and restoration of facilities destroyed on Guam by Typhoon Pamela.

Added to the bill was the first $500 million of a total $1 billion in authorized subsidies for the postal service for the remainder of this fiscal year and fiscal 1977.

Damages awarded in CSI stable fire

By BOB ZUCKERMAN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A jury ruled against the College of Southern Idaho early this morning, awarding more than $22,000 to nine persons who lost horses in an arson fire two years ago.

College president James L. Taylor said today the college would not appeal the decision. "The jury made a decision, and I'm ready to accept that decision," he said. "I don't think an apology is in order."

Meanwhile, at least two horse owners expressed disappointment with the court's decision and would not rule out the possibility of an appeal.

"I'm not happy with my prices," said George Juker, Bull, who originally asked for $24,500 in damages caused by the fire. He was awarded $10,000 for three horses he lost.

Asked if he thought the decision was fair, Kenneth Kimball, another plaintiff, said, "To some extent, but I'm not happy with the prices either. Who could be?"

Though he originally asked for $26,534, Kimball was awarded $27,570.

The case was a result of an April, 1974, fire in which 14 horses perished and a Frontier Field stable was destroyed.

Later, William Roger Carlock, a CSI security guard, pleaded guilty to arson in connection with the fire.

Taylor said the court's decision would not affect the college's work-study program under which Carlock was hired. Taylor said students would not have a "harder" time being accepted into the program though he admitted the college is "more sensitive to the problems" in hiring because of this case.

Taylor added he did not think the decision would "change the attitude of people towards the college."

The 12-person jury announced its verdict about 1 a.m. this morning after more than six hours of deliberation and after hearing five days of trial testimony.

During the trial, the plaintiffs' attorneys called 30 witnesses, including Police Detective Capt. Tim Qualls and a host of experts and horse owners to testify on the merits of the horses lost in the fire.

The defense called two witnesses, Taylor and horse expert Thayne E. Lancaster, Piler.

Lancaster testified the lost horses were worth roughly $25,500 while plaintiffs' witnesses said the horses were worth roughly $87,200. In complaints filed in Fifth District Court, plaintiffs had asked for more than $100,000 in damages.

In his closing argument, Lloyd Webb, plaintiffs' attorney, said the college was responsible for the fire because it had negligently hired Carlock.

He argued the college should have seen several "warning flags" when Carlock was hired. The two law enforcement officers, who helped the college pick Carlock for the security position, knew that Carlock was sent to reform school as a youth. Carlock had a "deplorable family life," Webb said.

Webb argued that if the officers had investigated thoroughly they could have found other relevant parts of Carlock's past, including a history of violence, theft and poor employment record.

"We're not here to punish anyone, to punish the college," Webb said. "We're here for compensation, nothing more and nothing less."

Webb said the plaintiffs were not saying the college should not admit persons like Carlock to special programs.

But, he said, "For God's sake don't make them security guards."

In his closing argument, college attorney John Magel argued the college had used the required "ordinary care" in hiring Carlock.

Pound at nadir, draws support

LONDON (UPI) — Britain's crumbling pound plunged to another all-time low today and dealers said the Bank of England intervened for the first time in three weeks in a desperate bid to halt the slide.

The pound sank by more than three cents to $1.6305, ending a brief rally that followed a tough speech by Prime Minister James Callaghan to the Labor party's annual conference.

US economic index shows dip

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government said today its index that is supposed to forecast the direction of future economic activity fell 1.5 per cent in August, the largest decline in 19 months.

The drop in the index of leading economic indicators suggested that production and employment will weaken in the winter months. In the past, the index has risen before each economic expansion and dropped before each downturn.

Schorr quits CBS network job

NEW YORK (UPI) — Reporter Daniel Schorr, suspended from CBS News for leaking a secret Congressional report on the CIA to the Village Voice, resigned from the network today.

In a letter to CBS News President Richard Salant, Schorr said he was leaving with "great regret but convinced that no other alternative remains for me under the circumstances."

Schorr said he would work outside the daily broadcasting industry.

British envoy in South Africa

By United Press International

Britain's top official for African affairs arrived in South Africa today en route to Botswana to try to break a stalemate between black leaders and Rhodesia over the U.S. British plan for black majority rule in Rhodesia within two years.

Ted Howlands, Minister of State in the Foreign Office, made a transit stop at Johannesburg on his way to Gaborone, Botswana, where he will meet African leaders for discussions on the Rhodesian crisis.

Kissinger 'cautiously optimistic'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford and congressional leaders today got a "cautiously optimistic" report on the troubled Rhodesian agreement from Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

Assistant-Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd told reporters after the White House meeting that Kissinger "is of the opinion that the stories that have been surfacing that the thing is falling apart are not true."

Ford strike breakthrough hinted

DETROIT (UPI) — The strike by 170,000 members of the United Auto Workers union against the Ford Motor Co. is two weeks old today, but there are hints from both sides a breakthrough may be near.

Publicly, both union and company negotiators were silent. But spokesmen offered broad hints that progress was being made, and sources said several key items seemed nearer to resolution.

MAGIC VALLEY — Valley potato harvesters have begun digging good yields of high quality potatoes in spite of spring frosts and aphid-borne leaf roll virus, but growers do not expect profits at current low prices.

"It looks like all growers will be filled throughout the area," Bill Harding of J.R. Simplot said. "Potatoes are yielding better than they were last year and quality is good."

(Harvest pictures, p. 7)

Simplot's operation, near Four Corners on Highway 93, is transshipping some 10,000 sacks of spuds a day and shipping them to Heyburn for processing, while it stores some 25,000 100-pound sacks a day.

Simplot has storage for 600,000 sacks at its Jerome facility.

James Keegan, Twin Falls potato packer, said the Twin Falls area is in full swing harvesting spuds.

"The big operations are all going," Keegan said. "They have to go pretty heavy in September to get them out."

Keegan said the current crop is a good one.

"Yields are as good as last year or better from what I hear," he said. "Quality is better than it has been in a number of years, generally. There are a lot of excellent potatoes."

Jerome potato grower Raleigh Curtis, a farmer who had to spray against attacking hordes of the green peach aphids which the potato leaf roll virus, was not quite so optimistic.

"Mediocre," Curtis said about his harvest bounty so far this year. "Yield is what we anticipated, a little bit down from last year. Everybody's just a 'skosh' disappointed."

Curtis said his quality is excellent, nevertheless. He was fortunate enough to spend a lot of money spraying against aphids so that his crop did not suffer from much leaf roll virus, a disease which causes necrosis in potato tubers and usually forces farmers to sell immediately instead of storing spuds because the dead tissue in the spuds worsens in storage.

"Good crop or not, though prospects for selling potatoes are low this year."

"Nobody is happy about the price," Curtis said. "We will have about $1,000 an acre in our spuds. In order to come out, you have to have a three dollar bill at minimum."

But prices are running below $3 per hundredweight on spuds this year, just as they seem to be low on many crops including sugar beets, wheat, beans and cattle.

Curtis said he knew of some lots of potatoes which went for as low as 90 cents a sack because farmers did not have storage and had to move their crop.

"It's going to be tough for potato farmers to keep in business," Dick Snyder of Anderson-Nafziger said. "We have to have so much per sack because we have so much per acre into the crop."

Simplot's Harding said potatoes are plentiful but demand is low. And low prices are the result.

"Demand is very poor so far this year," Harding said. "There are lots of potatoes for sale but not many people buying them. If they were buying, the price would be about $1.75 to $2."

Harding, too, said farmers may not profit from their crops this year due to the low prices.

"It is going to be a break-even point if they get a good yield," Harding added. "Just like everything else, prospects don't look very good."

Spanish unrest continues

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — A Spanish youth shot during clashes between riot police and protestors demanding a total amnesty for political prisoners died today, hospital authorities said.

Carlos Gonzalez Martinez, a student, was found shot in the stomach in a doorway off Gran Via, the capital's main shopping street, following the clashes Monday night.

Police said they did not use their firearms in the skirmishing. Gonzalez Martinez was the 2nd person killed in political violence in Spain since the death of Generalissimo Francisco Franco 10 months ago. He was the first fatality in Madrid.

In the Basque region Monday, newspapers estimated that 600,000 workers went out on strike in a "day of struggle" in support of a total amnesty that would free Spain's remaining 350 political prisoners. Government officials put the number of strikers at 430,000.

The strikes and demonstrations came on the first anniversary of the Franco regime's execution of five urban guerrillas.

Although King Juan Carlos granted amnesty to hundreds of political prisoners in August, he did not pardon imprisoned Basque guerrillas and other inmates of violence.

National Security Director Emilio Rodriguez Roman said 90 per cent of the more than 300,000 workers in the northern Basque provinces — Vizcaya and Guipuzcoa — joined the strike. Steel mills, shipyards, docks, mines, appliance factories, paper mills and other plants fell silent. There were clashes in dozens of Basque towns where police attempted to break up demonstrations.

At a late-night news conference, Rodriguez said clashes in towns like Legazpia, Elbar and Renteria were "terribly rough" but he praised the police for keeping calm. He said at least 40 persons were arrested and an undetermined number — including some police officers — hurt.

In downtown Madrid Monday night, riot police used rubber bullets, truncheons and smoke grenades to disperse youths who set off small explosive charges under parked cars and used the disabled vehicles to barricade streets.

Syrians assault central Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Syrian tanks and artillery today launched a major military thrust in the mountains northeast of Beirut, apparently opening the long-expected battle for central Lebanon.

Palestinian military spokesmen said Syrian forces, massed at Sofar and Dahr El Balder 15 miles southeast of Beirut, pushed northward toward the supply line to Palestinian forces at Aintoura and Meteln in the mountains east of the capital.

Christian forces pressing down on the Palestinian front from the northwest joined in the attack and both sides said "fierce battles" were underway.

"It's started," said a Christian source. "The battle for the mountains has begun."

A Palestinian military communique said Syrian and Christian forces opened a "fierce attack" on all the mountain fronts using heavy artillery and rockets.

The communique said the troops were advancing along the fronts at Falohia, Hammama and Kirayal — towns along the main highway from Sofar to the major Palestinian outposts at Aintoura and Meteln.

Reports from travelers in the region indicated the Syrians have been massing troops and armor in the Sofar area, bringing them up from the eastern Bekaa Valley over the past few weeks.

Syrian and Christian demands that the Palestinians withdraw from the central mountains have been one of the chief obstacles holding up the progress of peace talks.

DACCA, Bangladesh — The military ruler of the government here has charged that India was systematically training Bangladeshi dissidents as guerrillas and was helping them to infiltrate into the country from several dozen special camps it had set up along the border.

Maj. Gen. Ziaur Rahman said that the Indians were arming the guerrillas and training them to attack rural police stations and villages, to blow up bridges and highways and to spread urban terror.

Ontario shelves flu shots

© Chicago Sun-Times

WASHINGTON — Ontario, the most populous and richest of Canada's provinces, has at least temporarily shelved plans for a comprehensive swine-flu vaccination program and will concentrate on protecting "high-risk" citizens against a possible Victoria flu epidemic this winter.

The decision was made in Toronto last week after Canadian provincial health ministers jointly urged their provincial governments to reconsider their support of a national swine-flu vaccination campaign.

Canada is the only country in the world outside the United States to have adopted a mass-vaccination policy for influenza.

The defection of Ontario leaves the Canadian federal government of Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau with scant support for mass vaccination. As things stand now, 91 per cent of Canadians — including residents of the five largest provinces — will not be getting swine flu shots.

Earlier, the provinces of Quebec, British Columbia, Alberta, Manitoba and Prince Edward Island had opted out of the swine flu program under constitutional authority that gives provincial governments more autonomy in health matters than American states enjoy.

Houston picks 'twin'

MOSCOW (UPI) — Baku, the capital of Soviet Azerbaijan and an oil center, has accepted an invitation to become a "twin city" to Houston, Tex.

The Tass news agency said Monday city officials have invited a delegation from Houston to visit the Caspian Sea city to work out a program.

Baku traces its history to the 10th century. With a population of 1.4 million, it is the fifth largest city in the Soviet Union.

MIG check slated to require week

TOKYO (UPI) — American and Japanese intelligence teams will spend at least another week examining the MIG 25 fighter in which a Russian pilot defected before returning the dismantled plane to the Soviets, government sources said today.

The sources said Japanese Foreign Minister Zenzaro Kosaka planned to tell his Soviet counterpart, Andrei Gromyko, in New York late today that analysis of the plane will be completed by Oct. 5. The two ministers are attending opening rounds of the U.N. General Assembly.

Bombs jolt plant while Dole speaks

QUINCY, Ill. (UPI) — Four bombs shook an industrial plant, a fifth damaged a bridge Monday night while Republican Vice Presidential candidate Robert Dole made a campaign stop in the industrial Mississippi River town of Quincy.

Secret Service agents assigned to Dole monitored the investigation but local police said there was "no evidence at this time" the blasts were connected with Dole's campaign appearances.

Police said four apparent time bombs exploded during a 10-minute period outside the Quincy Compressor plant, shattering windows and ripping up walls in one section of the plant. Plant officials said no workers were in the area of the explosions.

Howe plans no appeal

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Congressman Allan Howe will not appeal the misdemeanor morals conviction which probably ended his political career.

Dean Mitchell, Howe's attorney and campaign manager, said Monday he did not file the notice of appeal required for a review of the conviction by the Utah Supreme Court.

"I have no plans to proceed further in the state courts," Mitchell said as Monday's deadline for filing the notice of appeal passed. "At this point, I have no plans to go further at all."

Howe still has another month to pay the $435.60 court costs assessed him by Third District Court Judge Bryant Croft.

Arab strike call out

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — Israeli security forces went on alert today against possible trouble during a strike by Arab public officials.

The strike was called to protest a controversial report by a ranking Israeli official calling for tough measures against the Arab minority in the Jewish state.

Sympathy walkouts were expected in the occupied West Bank of Jordan and the Gaza Strip.

Arab sources said the strike would affect all public services in the Arab towns and villages of the Galilee, where Arabes make up 48 per cent of the population.

Portugal returns farms

LISBON, Portugal (UPI) — Portugal's government is returning 101 farms illegally occupied by leftist rural workers to their original owners in the first major test of the government's authority over the powerful left.

The Socialist minority government began a step-by-step, five-week process of returning the farms Monday in hopes of avoiding possible violence between the leftist occupiers and original owners.

Moderate politicians regard the land reform issue as the first tough test for the minority government of Prime Minister Mario Soares. They say it will be a yardstick of the administration's ability to make and carry out its policies.

"Hatching of a Nation"

When America's war for independence had been fought and won, the question arose how best to symbolize this new nation of liberty. Ben Franklin thought the powerful wild turkey would amply portray the spirit of America. Others believed the bald eagle, free from earthly restraints, was more fitting. The eagle won out, and a new nation tried its wings.

The spirit represented by this child's-eye-view of the American Eagle is the same spirit we try to bring to banking. Start your nest egg with us. See what hatches. See how it takes to the air.

And listen for our Children of Independence radio programs for more refreshing views of our country's heritage.

Expensive illusion

Business Week

The United Auto Workers has revived an old, potentially costly demand of the labor unions in its strike against Ford Motor Co. It wants extra days off — not in the form of plant wide holidays but as staggered vacation days for each worker. Its object is not to relieve fatigue but "to require the private sector to fulfill social responsibilities in reducing the levels of mass unemployment."

If it wins its point, it will set a pattern that will give another inflationary push to the cost structure of U.S. industry.

Years were widespread in the Great Depression. They are based on an illusion: the idea that when more workers are involved in producing the same amount of product, everyone is somehow better off.

Or to put it another way, they assume that rising productivity causes unemployment and that productivity increases if individual workers must therefore be offset by shorter working time.

As the union says, productivity is rising strongly in autos. But the U.S. today desperately needs massive increases to counter the inflationary bias that the economy has developed.

With workers demanding cost-of-living raises to protect them against price rises and annual wage gains to raise their standards of living, there is only one way the U.S. can avoid a cumulative inflation. That is by continuing to increase the output of each worker.

Theoretically, the union's demand for 12 extra vacation days would increase Ford's manpower needs by 5 per cent. The company probably could reduce that figure somewhat, but any new workers it hired would represent a disproportionate increase in costs because of fringe benefits and payroll taxes.

It is the business of labor unions to look out for their members. The rank and file of the UAW unquestionably want their negotiators to increase their job security by creating a bigger demand for workers in the industry. But it is also the business of responsible bargainers both in labor and in management to take account of what their decisions will do to the economy. The UAW demand will feed inflation.

What's more, in a bellwether industry such as autos, it could set a truly expensive precedent.

Post-debate stump

By New York Times

As the near-fiasco of the first Ford-Carter "debate" rapidly recedes into oblivion, the two Presidential candidates are resuming their more normal campaign on the hustings.

In their Philadelphia appearance, both missed an extraordinary opportunity to take the largest political audience in television history some insight into their respective philosophies, some understanding of their inner sense of direction, some feeling of the kind of leadership each might be expected to exercise.

In actuality, only the barest glimmerings came through; and the aura of artificiality that had already deadened their ponderous monologues was only accentuated by their embarrassing rigidity during the unanticipated 28-minute hiatus of enforced silence.

To only President Ford or Gov. Carter had seized the moment to react naturally, perhaps by walking across stage to chat informally with the other, the stiffness and servility of the whole performance might have been alleviated with great result to the one who had taken that human initiative.

But it was not to be; and so one can only hope that the second installment of the "debate" series next week will provide more depth and less gloss than the initial effort.

Meanwhile, the contrast between what Ford and Carter have said in campaign appearances since the Philadelphia debacle reveals a good deal more of substance in evaluating their respective candidacies than did their performance at the Walnut Street Theater.

In San Diego, two days after the television debate, Carter devoted a major speech to one of the most fundamental issues facing the American people and the world: the question of nuclear proliferation and how to stop it.

He has addressed this subject before; but in San Diego last week — with the grim comment that "it is time to readdress the question of atomic war" — he again displayed not only his understanding of the awful problem of nuclear weapons control but also his willingness to exercise the kind of national leadership required to deal with this question effectively, going so far as to advocate an embargo on the export of nuclear technology by forestalling nuclear weapons development in other countries.

Ford chose a different topic for his week-end campaigning. While Carter on Saturday was gravely discussing the nuclear threat to the safety of mankind, Ford on Sunday was haranguing troops to the deep South with a demagogic battle-cry on another — if less momentous — threat to the safety of Americans.

"The law-abiding citizens of this country should not be deprived of the right to have firearms in their possession," he said to the cheers of Gulf Coast audiences. Which was another way of expressing opposition to any meaningful gun-control, including the registration of hand-guns.

At the end of a day in which he so heavily stressed his belief in "the right to bear arms," President Ford was warmly greeted in Mobile by Gov. Wallace, victim of a would-be assassin's bullet. It is reported that Ford refrained from mentioning his opposition to gun control at that meeting.

Soviets uneasy over Henry's effort

By DAVID K. SHIPER
© N.Y. Times Service

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union is showing considerable uneasiness over Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's shuttle diplomacy in southern Africa, evidently concerned that the American initiative may undermine Moscow's long investment in building influence with the black nationalist groups that are expected to come to power.

Foreign analysts here see the Soviet anxieties revealed in a series of unusually strident press commentaries, plus the private remarks of Soviet officials, in which uncomfortable parallels are being drawn between Kissinger's current African mission and his effort last year in the Middle East. There, an Arab-Israeli settlement was achieved without Soviet participation, leaving Moscow's role and stature in the Arab world sharply reduced.

The Kissinger mission confronts such large stakes. However, that some Western diplomats think the Russians are worrying unnecessarily, Kissinger, who has met with both black and white heads of state in the region, including the two leaders of white-minority governments, Prime Ministers Ian D. Smith of Rhodesia and John Vorster of South Africa, is trying to act as a catalyst for a peaceful transition to black majority rule.

Pravda, the Communist Party newspaper, characterized the Kissinger mission last week as part of "a dangerous plot between imperialists and racists." To preserve the white regime in South Africa, the paper said, The American State was designed to "persuade the South African Republic racists to go in for insignificant reforms; put the gloss of liberalism on the facade of apartheid, place puppets in ministerial seats in Rhodesia and Namibia and in so doing cool down the heat of the liberation struggle."

Such comments, published almost daily, provoked verbal complaints to Soviet officials by American diplomats, according to one high-ranking American here. He voiced concern that a Soviet diplomatic effort may be under way to upset the Kissinger mission.

Some of the specific fears are fairly visible. Pravda has worried about the installation of pre-Western governments in Rhodesia and Namibia, as the South African-administered territory of South-West Africa is sometimes called. In a column, the government paper, contended that the United States was really pursuing military objectives in wanting to maintain South Africa as "a strong point for NATO in the South Atlantic."

Furthermore, the foreign policy magazine Novoye Vremya last week raised the specter of divisive factionalism among black nationalist groups. After the Kissinger mission in the Middle East, the magazine noted, "in the Arab world itself disputes and conflicts were aggravated." Those conflicts eroded Soviet influence.

Moscow seemed to be sketching out a position that would enable it to denounce any peacefully installed black regime, leaving it the option of continued, perhaps accelerated, armed support to radical guerrillas.

Western diplomats doubt that Moscow will run a repeat of the Angola venture, in which thousands of Cuban troops were deployed with Soviet weapons last winter to score a victory for the Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola against its two Western-backed opponents. Soviet officials, stung by the sharp reaction in the United States, have said privately that Angola was a unique situation.

But such hesitation to use Cuban troops again does not rule out covert military aid to militant factions in Rhodesia and elsewhere, even if Kissinger succeeds. Last summer Sam Nujoma, president of the South-West African People's Organization, was in Moscow, probably to discuss arms. He said later that black nationalists intend to intensify their guerrilla war in Namibia and needed Soviet weapons.

The feeling here is that unlike the Middle East, where Moscow sat back, kept quiet, and let the Kissinger ploy take its course, the Russians are determined to keep their hand in this time. "They learned the lesson of the Middle East," said one Western expert, "and they're damned bitter about it."

"How do you do. May I speak to the head of the house?"

"It seems to me the chances of success are so slight that they needn't get so worked up," an American diplomat declared. Even with indications that Rhodesia will accept a timetable for black accession to power, the Russians may be able to nurture militant views among black leaders that would reject or subvert any accommodation, some analysts believe.

There is disagreement here on the extent to which the Kremlin's influence in southern Africa would permit the Soviet Union to play the role of spoiler, but there is little doubt about its desire to do so. To some extent, Moscow has competed against the United States for power in the third world simply by picking the winning sides in domestic struggles and riding the crest of the wave of anticommunism. The strategy's most vivid success was in Vietnam.

In Africa Moscow has long been ahead of Washington in actively supporting black rule. On the sudden reshaping of American policy and the application of Kissinger's personal diplomacy to southern Africa, Moscow found it easy to identify the United States with the maintenance of white supremacy. Now the shrillness with which the Soviet press continues to take this line, even while Kissinger is trying to get the whites to go down, suggests that Moscow sees a serious threat to the scenario of polarization in which the Russians back the winners and the Americans the losers.

Phony bombs next weapons?

© Newhouse News Service

WASHINGTON — The Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) is convinced the nation's passenger screening system is a success, but is worried that hijackers may still get away with using phony bombs to seize aircraft.

In a report to Congress, FAA said security measures at U.S. airports thwarted five possible hijackings or attacks against civil aviation in the first six months of this year. In other countries, three airliners were hijacked.

In addition, 2,200 firearms and seven explosive or incendiary devices were detected and 42 persons were arrested for attempting to board aircraft with them.

"These figures are convincing evidence that this country's anti-hijacking program has been and remains effective despite the hijacking of a U.S. airliner on Sept. 10," FAA head John L. McLucas said.

"In fact, it's interesting to note that the hijackers in this instance studied the screening system carefully and decided they could not smuggle actual weapons on board the aircraft. So they carried a number of ordinary objects through the system and used them to construct dummy bombs on board."

McLucas added that "baff" hijackers represent a new threat and may require additional security measures. He said tests are being run on electronic "sniffers" that can detect minute quantities of gases given off by explosives.

Bogan story brings kudo

Editor, Times-News:

Chris Bogan is a welcome addition to your staff. His instructive treatment on the subject of Marxism, Maoism and Communism might help many to realize what these terms really represent.

Definitions of this ideology are sorely needed, for to most persons, communism is just a word which seems to contain latent sinister meaning not fully understood, hence the dangers in its global encroachment might not be recognized by many.

I would like you to have Mr. Bogan further instruct us. Permit him to show us the difference between Maoism and the communist stance of the USSR. The ideologies are similar and dissimilar at the same time, which is confusing to the uninformed.

When World War 3 starts, it could very well be in that area and nuclear in nature, for both of these governments have little respect for the individual and would care little about losing millions of people in an atomic holocaust.

Keep up the good work, Chris!

Washington capital source for situation comedy

© Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Hollywood has suddenly discovered Washington, D.C., as a source for situation comedy.

Those of us who live here have known for years there was more situation comedy in the capital than in all the 50 states combined. But it was only after Washington's TV moguls realized how many laughs you could get out of this town.

A week doesn't go by that I don't receive a call from a television producer on the coast who is planning a situation comedy on Washington and asks for help in developing a series. I've been given a lot of thought and here are a few of the ideas that I think could work.

A CIA agent (hopefully we can get Dick Van Dyke) is having an affair with the wife of a congressman (Hope Lange?) who is afflicted because she knows her husband (Don Adams?) is having an affair with his secretary (Mary Tyler Moore?).

One afternoon the congressman comes home and finds Dick in the congressman's bathroom and Hope in her nightgown. He is immediately suspicious and demands to know what Dick is doing in his bathroom. Dick thinks fast and says, "I'm begging your phone on order of Henry Kissinger."

This infuriates the congressman who says he's going to call Dick before the House Ethics Committee. He hands Dick what he thinks is a subpoena, but it turns out to be a photograph of his secretary swimming nude in the Tidal Basin. The congressman says, "I'm not going to give the photo to the Washington Post."

ART BUCHWALD

Just then the nosy neighbor from next door (Nancy Walker?) comes in to borrow Hope's hair dryer. She reveals that the CIA agent has been at the house every afternoon for two months.

"Then you didn't come to hug my phone?" the congressman says. "No," replies Dick, "I've been having an affair with your wife."

relief I thought the bathrobe was just a cover." Everyone laughs at the congressman's stupid mistake. He drives off to vote on a tax bill, with Dick and Hope waving goodbye to him from the door.

Another situation comedy that could work because it has an adult theme that to do with a show about a presidential candidate's daughter. She's 8 years old and she's always getting in some kind of trouble. One day she's out selling Girl Scout cookies and happens to walk into an abortion clinic.

One of Jack Anderson's people spots her and leaks the story that the President's daughter is going to have an abortion. When the presidential candidate hears about this, he immediately goes on television and announces he's changed his mind on abortion from his previous position which, as everyone knows, was much clearer than that of his opponent.

Then he comes home and discovers that his daughter not only wasn't going to have an abortion, but sold all her Girl Scout cookies to women who were.

"Most of them were famished," his daughter tells him. The candidate then goes back on television and says he's reversing himself on the abortion issue and going back to his original position which was that, while he personally was against abortion, he didn't think people who wanted them should be deprived of Girl Scout cookies while they sat in the waiting room, unless Congress voted against it.

A widowed general (Tony Randall) stationed at the Pentagon accidentally stuffs his 12-year-old son's homework assignment into his briefcase and takes it to the office. The composition concerns a death ray the son has written about that can kill people from outer space.

The general's aide, a dumb colonel (Jack Klugman), submits the kid's homework assignment to the Joint Chiefs of Staff who vote to spend $100 million developing the new weapon.

When the general realizes his mistake he tries to get his kid's composition back, but it's been marked TOP SECRET.

In desperation the general gives his son a report written by the Rand Corporation on the cruise missile. The kid gets an F from his teacher because the assignment wasn't handed in on time.

To make it up the general takes the kid to the Super Bowl on a Lockheed private jet, provided by the company because it got the contract to build the death ray.

'Presidential' business for Ford

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford, calling his weekend Southern campaign swing "just terrific," arranged for briefings on Rhodesia today and launched a series of sessions with foreign ministers attending the U.N. General Assembly.

who has endorsed Carter, Nessen said "I don't think I would say Wallace is supporting the President. Obviously he is not."

Capital lobbies Carter's target

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Jimmy Carter, with President Ford obviously in mind, is criticizing Washington officials and lobbyists who "go to the same clubs, the same restaurants and play golf," on the same courses.

But he called it "significant" that Wallace "came out and stayed through the speech and appeared on the platform" with Ford in Mobile.

"This week he will have a whole series of meetings with foreign ministers," Nessen said. Among them, he added, would be the foreign ministers of France, West Germany and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko.

Defense Secretary Rumsfeld cites missile figures significant targets in the western United States if fired across the north polar region from Soviet territory.

The SS20, which is mounted on a mobile track launcher, has already completed tests as an intermediate range ballistic missile with a range in the 3,000-mile category.

No plan changes, Rumsfeld advises

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld says the Russians have an array of new missiles with deadly MIRV warheads and greater accuracy — but there is no urgent need to change U.S. plans to meet the threat.

Twice on Monday, before 8,000 persons at the Federal Plaza in Portland, Ore., and to 7,000 in the Roberts Stadium in Evansville, he poked at Ford.

Asked how the United States should respond, Rumsfeld said he had asked Congress to keep producing Minuteman III missiles with new, more powerful and more accurate warheads.

Better case seen

WASHINGTON — Lawyers challenging continuation of the debates between President Ford and Jimmy Carter believe that the first one strengthened their legal case.

Under the SALT I agreement that runs until October 1977, the Russians are allowed 1,320 intercontinental MIRVs, a figure they would not normally be expected to reach until 1980.

Patricia, ex-boyfriend testify

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) — Alameda County prosecutors used Patricia Hearst and her former boyfriend as opening witnesses Monday in an effort to obtain grand jury indictments against Symbionese Liberation Army members William and Emily Harris.

Miss Hearst spent 2 1/2 hours giving secret testimony to an Alameda County Grand Jury.

She described how she was spirited from her Berkeley, Calif., apartment in February 1974 by the SLA. Steven Weed testified for 30 minutes.

There was no word on what they told the panel, but Miss Hearst was presumed to have given the same testimony she delivered during her San Francisco bank robbery trial.

Dist. Attorney Lowell Jensen said he would call some 45 witnesses charging the Harrises with kidnap, false imprisonment and assault with a deadly weapon.

Family wants body exhumed for autopsy

ADAMSVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — The family of the late Buford Pusser will attempt Thursday to have the body of the "Walking Tall" sheriff exhumed for an autopsy in an attempt to prove he was murdered.

Larry Britt, a spokesman for the family, says Pusser was dragged before he lost control of his sports car in a fatal wreck Aug. 20, 1974 and wants the autopsy to back up his story.

"I can prove the man was murdered," Britt said. "And I want justice and the ones who did it."

The Tennessee Highway patrol ruled that Pusser's wreck was accidental, although there were seven unsuccessful attempts on his life while he fought a one-man battle against prostitutes, gamblers and racketeers as sheriff in McNairy County.

Britt contends unnamed conspirators slipped Pusser a drug before he left a Selmer, Tenn., fair and the drug, called catfegot, caused his early morning accident on Tennessee Route 64.

Britt said the autopsy is necessary to prove the presence of the drug.

But county officials said neither Britt nor Pusser's family have permission for the autopsy. The family was given a permit by the Health Department to move the body from the gravesite here, but any autopsy must be requested by the county coroner and approved by the county attorney general and county court.

McNairy County Coroner Harry L. Peeter said he did not think an autopsy was necessary at the time of Pusser's death and would not request it now.

Britt said Helen Pusser, mother of the sheriff, had given her permission for the autopsy and the family was prepared to go to court, if necessary, to sue Ralph Gordon, a Nashville attorney, who would represent the family in any court battles.

The day before his accident, Pusser had announced he would play himself in "Walking Tall, Part II," a sequel to the original film about his law enforcement career which reportedly grossed more than $50 million.

Indictment would automatically move the case into Superior Court for trial without a preliminary hearing.

The first witness to appear before the grand jury was Peter Beaumont, a mathematician at the Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory, who testified about how he was taken prisoner by the SLA kidnap team and how his car was stolen from him for use in the getaway.

Miss Hearst, 22, daughter of San Francisco Examiner President Randolph A. Hearst, presumably cooperated with prosecutors despite her sentencing last week to seven years in prison on bank robbery charges.

Her attorneys who said the sentence was too harsh and might convince their client to become a reluctant witness in any further criminal proceedings against SLA members or associates.

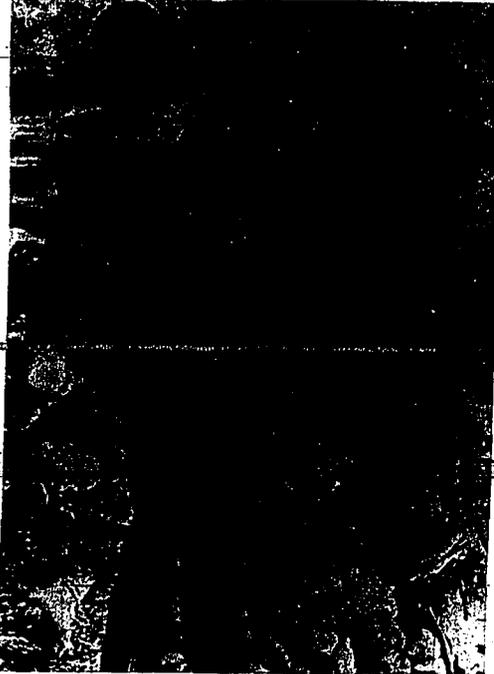

Miss Hearst, the Harrises and SLA associate Wendy Yoshimura were arrested in San Francisco in September 1975. The Harrises were convicted recently in Los Angeles on charges resulting from a shootout at an Angewald sporting goods store.

Miss Hearst told her bank robbery trial that two men and a woman burst into her apartment. She said she was knocked unconscious before being placed in the trunk of a getaway car.

She said Harris was one of the two men and his wife was the driver of one of two getaway cars.

Auction scheduled on movie rights

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Howard Hughes estate will auction off the rights to three of the late-billionaire's movies

The "Outlaw" for which Hughes designed a special brassiere for Jane Russell

Richard Gano, a Hughes cousin and temporary administrator of his California assets

Monday announced the estate will auction off rights to "The Outlaw," "The Conqueror" and "Jet Pilot."

"The Outlaw," which introduced and made a star of Miss Russell, was regarded as a racy film when it was released in 1943. Hughes was heavily involved in many details of the production

Including the design of the split bra worn by Miss Russell.

"The Conqueror" starred John Wayne and Susan Hayward and "Jet Pilot" featured Wayne and Janet Leigh.

The sale includes the films' exhibition, remake, sequel, television, stage, and publication rights, along with negatives, positive prints, scripts, and advertising material.

Harvester and truck work together in dusty field

Potatoes drop from harvester into truck

Valley spud harvest begins

"Just 'like little kids," calls dust-covered Danny Thomason from under the potato reaper. "Gotta crawl around and play in the dirt."

In the midst of a huge field partially stripped of its potatoes sits the harvester, unable to continue digging potatoes because something is caught in one of its chains. Thomason, with the help of his fellow workers, has disassembled the chain to eliminate the snag.

Now he is under the machine, re-linking the chain piece by piece.

Soon the harvesters are back at work in the Jerome field. Danny Thomason mans the truck pulling the digging machine which, with the help of clod picker Guy Wilson, separates potatoes from rocks, weeds and other materials and drops the potatoes into a truck.

Story photos
By Nancy Kelleher

Mark Keith carefully guides the truck so it is always under the conveyor belt extended from the harvester.

Only once do Thomason and Keith miscalculate the synchronization of harvester and truck. During a turn the truck goes ahead of the harvester, and potatoes are spewed into mid-air.

Quickly the drivers jump from their vehicles, use the scattered spuds into the truck and together go on their way.

After the truck is full, Mark Keith drives to the potato cellar to store the load. There is a short wait as another truck unloads, then Keith backs the truck up to a conveyor belt.

The belt moves the potatoes, distributing them in a pile along the back wall of the cellar. As the potatoes roll from the truck onto the conveyor, excess dirt drops to the ground, and workers pick out rocks and weeds missed by the clod picker. Large pipes keep the piles of potatoes from rolling out flat on the cellar's floor.

While the potato mountains grow, the waiting truck drivers talk or play with the dogs that are sniffing about.

After his truck is emptied, Mark Keith returns to the field, and another vehicle moves to unload.

This time Mark works alongside the harvester driven by Tim Thomason, Danny's brother. Clod pickers for this rig are Beverly Bannister and Mrs. Meyers. Their hands fly as they remove rocks, weeds and other debris from among the potatoes whizzing by on a conveyor belt.

"I watch with some anxiety as one woman turns clods in my direction."

"Don't worry," shouts Mrs. Meyers above the roar of the machinery. "If I hit you with one, you'll know it."

The harvester jolts to a stop as it prepares to turn.

"I'll tell you one thing, they're smaller this year," says Mrs. Meyers, an eight year, veteran clod picker. "That July frost really hit hard. There are fewer per row, too."

As the machines start up again, Mrs. Meyers and Beverly remain quiet. Their concentration is centered on picking as many clods as possible from among the quickly moving potatoes. Their women are covered with dust.

Abruptly, everything stops.

"Twelve o'clock," shouts Tim Thomason from the cab. With that, everyone stops for a half-hour lunch, before going back to what could amount to twelve hours of work in a day.

TF extends landfill terms

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls County has renegotiated and extended for one more year the present Murlough East-End landfill contract. According to county Commissioner Merl Leonard, the county's contract with Art Bally "has been extended for one more year through 1977 at the same figure of $7,400 a year." Bally manages and runs the Murlough East End landfill site as well as the Filer dump ground.

The Murlough landfill is not as sophisticated as the Twin Falls and Buhl landfill sites, according to Leonard. But it is classified as a landfill because garbage dumped there is covered up. The Murlough Landfill is used for dumping any kind of household garbage, Leonard says. The only household waste prohibited in the landfill is concrete and deadly herbicide cans. The Murlough landfill, although not always attended

Burley man arrested

BURLEY — A Burley man was arrested following a two-car accident early Sunday morning on the Paul-Burley Bridge over the Snake River. Burley police charged Rene Perales, 20, with driving while intoxicated. He was released on $300 bond.

The accident occurred about 1:15 a.m. Sunday at the north end of the bridge. The Perales' car ran into the rear of a small station wagon driven by Fred John Judd, 26, Stanley.

Police said both cars were traveling north across the bridge. The Judd vehicle rolled several times when struck landing on the driver's side. Police said the Perales' car skidded about 30 feet after impact, spinning and stopping with its front end against the bridge railing.

Perales, Judd, and a passenger in the Judd vehicle — Joanne Judd, 24, Stanley — were all treated and released from Cassia Memorial Hospital.

Rufener arguments set

RUPERT — Arguments have been set for Nov. 8 at a preliminary hearing on murder charges in connection with the strangulation death of an elderly woman more than 48 months ago. Jerome County Magistrate Judge Russell Shaud has set 1:30 p.m. Nov. 8 for hearing here on a motion to begin a preliminary hearing against Ernest and Griselda Rufener and Jose and Minerva Monreal.

They are accused in the Easter Sunday, 1975, death of Anna Marie Rufener, mother of one of the defendants. The two Rufeners are charged with first degree murder and second degree kidnaping. The Monreals are charged as accessories before the fact on both counts.

Judge Shaud was appointed to hear the case after defense attorney James J. May, Twin Falls, moved to disqualify Blain County Magistrate Judge Jerry Wegman. Blain County Prosecutor H. Bill Manning had moved to disqualify Cassia County Magistrate Judge George Granata, after refiling the charges. Identical counts against the Rufeners had been rejected by Granata to involuntary manslaughter and misdemeanor false imprisonment at a preliminary hearing in May, 1975. Manning obtained dismissal of the reduced charges, then filed the original charges again, despite a challenge of legality from the defense. The case has been delayed by agreement because a similar case is before the Idaho Supreme Court, but Manning said the defense failed to attach the Rufener case to the one before the Supreme Court. Manning moved last month to have the preliminary hearing put on the calendar.

Frozen yogurt hot confection

By United Press International
To Europeans, who have been witting yogurt for 2,000 years, the thought of freezing it is revolting, but to more and more Americans, the new confection is the greatest innovation since the banana split.

Along the eastern seaboard, frozen yogurt stands are springing up like toadstools after a rainstorm, offering a new spur for the jaded palate and for weight-watchers, since yogurt contains about 57 per cent fewer calories than ice cream.

But frozen yogurt's success story is no instant epic. Actually, it might be called a tale of two yogurts—one that boomed and one that bombed.

The equipment was leaking or they were throwing it away by mistake or something," said Phillips. "They weren't. It was selling like crazy and it's been doing that ever since. The west coast variety — frozen solid and impaled on a stick within a paper cylinder like a popsicle — has enjoyed no such acclaim.

John Gosney, marketing vice president for Knudsen's, Southern California's largest yogurt producer, said a salesman came up with the idea in the hope of selling the cylinders.

"We started out using them to make slarbert push-ups," Gosney said. "They didn't sell very well, and the guy who made the tubes suggested we try yogurt."

Gosney said the variety that boomed in the east was a "steady but modest" increase in sales at supermarkets, but he admitted the record has been far from spectacular.

He said his company is watching the east coast phenomenon closely in "the hope that its burgeoning success will turn consumers back to the solid product."

Phillips, who sold out his east coast distributorship and headed west to spread the gospel of soft frozen yogurt, was openly disdainful of the popsicle.

"It's a bomb," he said. "It has no zing. You don't see it around much any more."

With an intimation of the ultimate in contempt, he added, "It isn't even competition for ice cream."

In Europe, consumers never heard of frozen yogurt. In fact, they don't even want to discuss it.

Europeans eat, drink and bake yogurt. They put it on rice, stir it into meat sauce, use it for salad dressing and prescribe it for stomach ailments and great longevity.

But freeze it?

"How revolting," said one Londoner when the issue was explained.

"Gelato (ice cream) is king of the cones," was the report from Rome.

And from Moscow, with a shudder: "Can you imagine frozen yogurt in a Russian winter?"

Harvard Square. The bomber came to light in the same year when a Los Angeles salesman needed something to fill the paper cylinders he was trying to market.

Alan J. Phillips, then of Boston, now of Los Angeles, was the man who bore the first standard for the new confection in the east.

"It was one uphill battle," he said. "We couldn't give the stuff away. In fact, we did give the machines away, so we could sell the mix."

Phillips' "mix" was the brainchild of Walter Simonson, of Boston. He was the first to come up with the idea of running yogurt through a soft ice cream machine for service in a cone. Harvard students loved it, but they were alone.

Phillips, who agreed to tackle the distribution problem for H.P. Hood Dairy Co. of which Simonson then was an employee, hit his first pay dirt in a host unlikely marketplace — New York City's fashionable Bloomingdale's department store.

Bloomingdale's was opening a new boutique and wanted a small health food bar "just for atmosphere," Phillips convinced them the new concoction was the promotion they needed.

Bloomingdale customers devoured the first 2,400 gallons of mix in two hours and the store called for more.

"They kept sending for so much more I sent a guy over to see what was going wrong because

Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Can animals count? I used to see horses in the circus obey their trainers by picking up their feet and putting them down according to the number the trainer called out. My father said there was some kind of trick to it.

But listen to this. We raised a female mink on our farm last year and she had a litter of five. Every day at feeding time this mother mink would make five little patties from her scoop of ground meat, then call her offspring to eat.

She never made six, and she never made four. Always five. So wouldn't you say she could count?

DEAR TERRI: I would say that your mother mink could indeed count. But not all animals are as smart as the mink. What other female owns a mink coat as long as she lives?

DEAR ABBY: My husband (I'll call him "Pat") is a musician, and he works evenings. We have a small child, but occasionally I like to see Pat work, so I get a sitter, and Pat's Uncle Joe and Aunt Mae take me. (They're about the age of my parents.)

One night Uncle Joe and his wife took me to hear Pat, and when they brought me home, Uncle Joe walked me to the door. It was quite dark, so he grabbed me and kissed me hard on the lips, and then he pinched my behind. I was so shocked I dropped my key!

The next day as soon as Pat left for work, Uncle Joe came over to see me. I didn't like the look in his eye, so I picked up the baby and went into the bathroom with her and locked the door behind me.

He kept calling to me to open the door, but I wouldn't do it. Finally he left.

Abby, I don't know whether to tell my husband or not. I don't want to put a strain on their relationship, but I really am afraid Uncle Joe will make a habit of coming over, and he frightens me.

DEAR ABBY: My husband is all the time bringing home nuts, candy and gooey pastry even though he knows how hard I'm trying to lose weight.

He's lucky. He can eat anything and not gain an ounce. If I just LOOK at a piece of candy, I gain a pound.

My husband has made dirty cracks about how fat I am, so why does he tempt me with all that fattening stuff? He knows I don't have any willpower.

DEAR NO HELP: He tempts you because: (1) Consciously or unconsciously he wants you to be fat. (2) He's unkind and inconsiderate. (3) He enjoys sweets and figures that your lack of willpower is your problem, not his.

Unified health care system stressed

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Imagine a society where every other building is a hotel or nursing home.

That's the direction in which the country is headed unless there is a radical rethinking and revamping of the country's long term health care system, according to T.H. Koff, assistant professor in public administration at the University of Arizona.

Koff, also director of the Retirement Housing Administration in Tucson, Ariz., and author of publications on long-term health care and gerontology, talked to nurses Thursday at the State Nursing Education Conference in Twin Falls.

In a seminar program entitled "Issues in Long Term Care," Koff discussed various aspects of the country's health care system including nurses and nursing homes.

Koff stated that the present health care system fosters a situation which alienates the elderly in the society.

"We must move beyond this in our planning for the future," Koff said. "The relatedness of nursing homes to the community needs to be established."

"Nursing homes will have to become an integrated part of the whole health system," Koff said.

"Poor treatment of the aged has caused much recent scandal."

"We must plan for the future by building community services of which nursing homes are a part — a unified part of a whole," Koff emphasized.

"Nursing homes in the future will have to be a significant part of a totality of health services," he continued. "Long term care has to be part of a continuum with a variety of roles."

The present role of nursing homes in our society is "ill-defined," Koff said. This effects the education and preparation of long-term care nurses and staffs, he said.

More and more elderly are living and dying in nursing homes, he said, adding, "It is too costly for them to dwell in hospitals. Families have no incentive to care for them at home, he added."

"Increasingly, the number of people dying in nursing homes is going up," Koff said, "and the number dying in hospitals is dropping."

Consequently, nursing homes will have to address themselves more and more to the issue of dying, Koff says.

"The reason for this situation, Koff claims, is because the present health system has helped divide the modern family, giving the family no reason to want to care for its elders."

"We have separated the family," Koff said.

"The health system doesn't pay to take care of elders. It rewards institutionalized elders."

Something must be done about this in the future, Koff said. He suggested an economic incentive plan to help families care for their elders.

"We have to think of a family incentive plan to enable families to care for elders... to urge them to want to take care of elders... to give them the economic incentive to do so," Koff said.

He said the goal should be to make the institution "an arm of the family."

The elderly are inadvertently mistreated and misunderstood, according to Koff. They are alienated from the rest of the society. For example, Koff said city planners and architects throughout the country think nursing homes are crucial and discriminatory. Therefore, they build houses for the aged scattered throughout their communities, according to Koff.

"But this reinforces the alienation of elders," he said. "All the research shows socialization of elders is faster among other elders."

In Koff's view, the solution is to plan for nursing homes that will be an integrated part of the health care system and which will, therefore, involve the family.

He is experimenting with the integrated health systems in Tucson County, Ariz. His theory is to make nursing homes the "hub of a health system."

FDA hits estrogen labels

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Estrogen drugs used by 5 million women going through menopause don't keep women feeling young or maintain their soft skin, the Food and Drug Administration said Monday.

Nor have the drugs been shown effective in treating simple nervousness during menopause, the agency added.

It ordered a crackdown on the way such drugs are labeled, citing scientific reports linking them to cancer of the uterus and birth defects.

The FDA:

Ordered estrogen manufacturers to print and distribute revised package labeling for physicians within 60 days.

Proposed a special brochure on the risks and benefits of estrogens for distribution to women when they have prescriptions filled.

Estrogens are valuable "drugs," said FDA Commissioner Alexander Schmidt, formally announcing labeling requirements he first disclosed at a Senate hearing last Thursday.

"They are needed when the symptoms of 'change of life' become severe. FDA's purpose is to keep these drugs on the market but to reduce overuse and misuse."

The labeling requirements would apply to all prescription drugs containing estrogen — except for "morning after" birth control pills which are already covered by a separate warning.

In addition to treatment of menopausal symptoms estrogens are prescribed for women seeking to maintain a "feminine" appearance; for women who have undergone surgical removal of female organs; to counteract breast engorgement in mothers who decide not to nurse; and for men suffering from prostate cancer.

If women take estrogens they should use them in the lowest possible doses that will control "change of life" symptoms and for only as long as the drug is needed, FDA said.

If estrogens are used for more than a year to treat the symptoms of menopause, FDA said, there is an increased risk of cancer of the uterus in the user.

The revised labeling says estrogens should not be used to treat simple nervousness because they have not been shown effective for either that purpose or for maintaining soft skin or youthfulness.

The new labeling also says physicians should re-evaluate estrogen treatment every six months; pregnant women should never be given estrogens because they may damage the offspring; and estrogens generally should not be taken by women with breast or uterine cancer, undiagnosed vaginal bleeding or clotting in the legs or lungs, or by women who have had heart disease, angina or stroke.

Survey pinpoints pint size burglars

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Pint-size burglars — children under 10 — carried out two-thirds as many burglaries in Minnesota in 1975 as perpetrated by those 20 and over, a survey showed today.

But Prof. David Ward, University of Minnesota professor in the department of sociology and head of the department of criminal justice studies, feels that the statistics might be misleading.

"The problem has been around for a long time," he said. "It just wasn't reported. Concerning those under 10 it might be that what used to be called 'pranks' is now called 'crime.'"

"I'd have to think," he said, "that many of these burglaries would involve resort dwellings in the northern part of the state." These houses and cabins are vacant for long periods during the year.

"It's sure hard to believe that these burglars do not have a different character than those carried out in the big cities. I doubt that they are real burglars like the teen agers," Ward said.

The survey was made by the Citizens League.

The project was under the direction of Calvin Clark, who said that the findings showed that two-thirds of the burglaries in the Twin Cities in 1975 were carried out by children 10 or under.

"We have reason to believe this would be a good average statewide."

The survey showed that of 6,000 burglars arrested in Minnesota in 1975 only 2,103 were by adults — roughly about one-third. The most prevalent age for burglars was 16, followed closely by those 17 and 15.

Paul Gilje of the Citizens League, a non-profit organization, believes that poverty is not the main or even major stimulus for the tender-aged burglars.

"Of course," he said, "there is some indication that robbery users up as the economy goes down. But most of these burglars are not down by poverty-stricken kids. There is some thrill aspect to it. Peer pressure and the like."

Clark said most of the thefts are of lawn mowers, bicycles and the like from a neighbor's

"They watch their neighbor go out, and chances are they leave the door unlocked and the kid goes in and gets his pants in the cookie jar."

The survey showed that enough merchandise was stolen in Minnesota last year to stock a large department store. There were 42,218 burglaries reported, and said the League, because many crimes are not reported the total probably was about 77,000.

"Burglary is not a very good business for adults," Clark said. "The fences those who broken stolen property pay very little for the goods they get. But for kids it's a pretty good piece of change."

Trend extension seen for fall

NEW YORK — To keep in step with fall fashion, it's not necessary to throw out last year's clothes and start from scratch. It would be foolhardy to suggest this and nobody has.

The new clothes are an extension of trends that have been simmering for the last few years.

Without resorting to such desperate measures as baring the navel or other parts of the anatomy, involving the aid of plastic or paper, or raising or lowering the hemline by a yard or two, designers have nevertheless, in a low-keyed way, turned out clothes that are fresh and inventive.

Anyone with a supply of blazers, pants, silk shirts and turtle-neck sweaters doesn't really have to worry — she's ready for the new season. Nevertheless, some trends have surfaced that emphasize fall, 1978. It isn't necessary to indulge in all of them, but any one will give a spirit of '78 to a woman's wardrobe.

your health

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb,
I am interested in body building so I have two questions. I have found that from the time you eat until the time food has passed through the small intestine, then into the bloodstream takes seven hours. Would that be a good time to work out to get better results when the food gets to the bloodstream?
I have calculated that to gain weight actually one pound of protein takes about seven gallons of milk. I've planned on doing this weekly, but I've heard the body would reject the milk in such great quantity. Is this so and would it be a good idea?

Bodybuilding data wrong

Dear Reader,
You might go to your nearest YMCA or if you are in school to your physical education teacher and ask about a good program for you. Your ideas are far from the facts of the situation.

"Food enters the bloodstream after it has been broken down by digestion. Most of the absorption takes place in the first part of the small intestine. Some foods are absorbed right away after leaving the stomach and entering the intestine, not seven hours later. For example, if a person drinks sugar water on an empty stomach the blood sugar (glucose) will rise usually within 20 minutes and continue to rise for an hour or so.

The importance of timing in relation to physical activity is the need for nourishment and it should be planned so that you are not stuffed with excessive bulk, otherwise it is not too important. The stores of carbohydrates already in the muscle fibers are what you need for much of your workout.

You certainly don't need seven gallons of milk for each pound of muscle. Perhaps you think you need a pound of protein for each pound of muscle. That is not the case. About 75 per cent of the lean muscle is water. Only 100 grams (3.5 ounces) of the pound of muscle is actually protein. A good diet with sufficient calories and 100 grams of good quality protein is usually adequate for muscle building.

Too much milk may affect a person with a limited ability to tolerate lactose, the double sugar in milk.

To give you a better background in weight training and principles involved, to try to keep you out of trouble, I am sending you The Health Letter, number 5-1. Weight Training for Energy and Weight Control. Others who want this information can send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with 50 cents for it. CowBelles hear plans for beef workshops

TWIN FALLS — Janet Guentz, Boise, home economist for the Idaho Beef Council, outlined beef education workshops she will hold throughout the state, when the executive committee of the Idaho CowBelles met here Friday.

Mrs. Clyde McAfee, Arco, president, conducted the day-long session at the Roseburg Motor Inn. She said the home economist will hold workshops used as polling places and the goal is to have everyone eligible to vote by informed, she said. All Idaho CowBelles are selling the "Keep Beef King" buttons sponsored by the National CowBelles in an effort to raise the $100,000 bond which must be passed with the Department of Agriculture preceding the referendum.

Plans for the annual convention of the Idaho CowBelles Nov. 18-20 at the Roadway Inn, Boise, were discussed. Officers will be elected at the annual business session Nov. 19.

Carol Seyburn, Caldwell, was announced as the winner of the $500 scholarship given to an outstanding student in animal husbandry at the University of Idaho. The official presentation will be made at a convocation later this fall at the University. Mrs. Phillip Gregg, Grangeville, second vice-president of the Idaho CowBelles, will represent the state group at the event.

Mrs. Thelma Daniels, Malad, first vice president, reported on a successful representation of the Idaho cattle industry through booths sponsored by the Idaho CowBelles at the Eastern Idaho State Fair, Blackfoot; Western Idaho State Fair, Boise, and the Twin Falls County Fair, Filer.

(See related picture page 12) Mrs. Walter Smith, Payette, reported on the statewide effort in conjunction with the Idaho Cattlemen's Association to inform the industry on all aspects of the proposed beef development Task Force, in anticipation of the referendum which will be held nationwide sometime next spring.

Gem allocation reduced

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho will not get as much water as some water users wanted in the revision of the Bear River compact agreed to by the governors of Idaho, Wyoming and Utah, Gov. Cecil D. Andrus said Monday.

"Idaho will not get as much water as some wanted but we will get more than some expected. All states had to give a little in their desires in order to reach agreement," Andrus said.

"The governor said, 'This agreement will resolve once and for all time the allocation of Bear River water.'"

"It is Idaho's advantage to get agreement now because each year without an agreement means unallocated water flowing from Idaho into Utah could be filled upon in that state. This will avoid a 'use it or lose it' race with Utah," he said.

"I am pleased that we have finally been able to come to agreement on a decision. Our agreement will protect our right to water from the Bear River," Andrus said.

Andrus said the agreement gives Idaho 200,000 acre feet of assured water below Bear

Lake plus some additional water in high flow years.

The agreement must be ratified by the three state legislatures and by Congress.

All water rights filed before Jan. 1, 1976 will be protected

Basin beet push begins

MOSES LAKE, Wash. (UPI) — The 1978 Columbia Basin sugar beet harvest is under way.

U and 1 district manager Marc Richardson said the acreage in the state is down from last year.

He said acreage dropped from 15,000 to 10,000 acres this year and he said producers expect a 10 per cent drop in production.

Richardson said it was too early to project yields per acre and filings made after that date must be filled from the allocation made in the agreement, Andrus said.

The agreement gives Idaho the right to develop an additional 6,000 acre feet of storage on the Bear River above Bear Lake and additional depletion on the river's Thomas Fork, he said.

Below Bear Lake, the agreement gives Idaho the first 125,000 acre feet of water per year. The next 400,000 acre feet goes to Utah, but from that they have to provide 120,000 acre feet for a bird refuge and the next 150,000 acre feet is split between the two states.

Shipments embargoed

POCATELLO (UPI) — Some 1,350 railroad cars of wheat are waiting to be unloaded at the Portland-Seattle port area and an embargo is in effect prohibiting shipments to a number of elevators. Union Pacific railroad reported today.

Some 12,400 covered hopper cars have been mobilized by Union Pacific to handle the demand for transportation services to move Idaho's near record wheat crop this year.

May said the backlog of unloaded cars "and the increasing number of cars moved to inspection points prior to determination of actual destination are forestalling maximum utilization of our covered hopper cars."

Valley heating costs on rise

By JEFF SCHER
Times-News writer

MAGIC VALLEY — Short of a pipeline break down or an Arab oil embargo, Magic Valley residents who heat their homes with natural gas or oil should be able to keep warm this winter, but it will cost them more than last year, according to an Intermountain Gas Co. representative.

Bill Chapman of Intermountain Gas says private homes should have all the gas they need this winter, barring some unforeseen catastrophe. Sixty per cent of the gas consumed in Idaho during the winter comes from Canada. The remaining gas comes from domestic sources, primarily the fields of Arizona, New Mexico, Utah and Colorado.

Chapman said residential heating is the biggest gas priority because of the increasing availability of gas resources, and residential consumers would be the last to have their supply restricted in the event of a shortage.

Intermountain Gas expects to have a sufficient supply of gas to keep high priority commercial users, such as food processors and fertilizer manufacturers completely supplied.

Chapman added that "interruptible customers," small commercial and seasonal operations whose supplies are routinely curtailed each winter, will probably have supplies curtailed.

Chapman said Intermountain has increased "peak-shaving" supplies for periods of increased demand. Intermountain has access to gas supplies stored at facilities in Nampa and Plymouth, Wash., which can be used when necessary to supplement normal gas flow. Both facilities are currently filled to their maximum holding capacity.

Although gas may be plentiful, it isn't going to be any cheaper, according to Chapman.

Intermountain currently has a price increase request pending before the Public Utilities Commission which, if approved, would result in a two per cent increase in the average customer's gas bill.

In addition, Intermountain's annual cost-of-gas rate adjustment will soon be effective, and this year's increase will probably be in the neighborhood of five per cent, Chapman said, because Canada has increased the cost of its gas from $1.60 to $1.80 per thousand cubic feet.

Chapman did have some good news for consumers. He said he expects a decrease in the cost to the consumer of natural gas will occur as a result of a Federal Power Commission (FPC) ruling that gas transmission companies cannot charge their customers in advance for anticipated costs of exploration for new gas fields. Exploration costs are currently included in the rates consumers pay. Chapman did not say how much gas rates would actually decrease as a result of the FPC ruling.

Chapman said the average customer in the Twin Falls area spent $27.34 for natural gas between May of 1975 and May of 1976. The average customer in the Idaho Falls area spent $34.46 for natural gas during the same period. The scene confronting those who heat their homes with oil is somewhat gloomier.

Local suppliers of oil say they cannot predict availability of oil supplies until their suppliers tell them what the availability will be. Local dealers say they currently have access to as much oil as they can use and do not anticipate any shortage in the months ahead.

A spokesman for Texaco's regional office in Los Angeles said it is not company policy to comment on availability or price increases because there are too many variables involved.

At the national level, experts expect supplies of heating oil to be adequate during the winter unless another oil embargo occurs.

Prices of heating oil are expected to increase this winter. Traditionally, prices increase as demand increases during the winter months.

In addition, consumption of heating oil is expected to increase by approximately 10 per cent this winter. It is not known what effect this increase in demand will have on winter heating prices because, since July, the price of heating oil has been decontrolled.

Experts are divided in opinion as to whether prices will rise sharply or only slightly, but all agree there will be some increase.

Experts also expect the Organization of Oil Exporting Countries (OPEC) to raise the price of an crude oil from 10 per cent to 20 per cent in January.

Costs soar

THE long-controversial Sawtooth National Recreational Area headquarters building reportedly will cost well in excess of first projections and delays will continue before completion.

T-N columnist wins honor

BOISE (UPI) — A Times-News columnist, Dr. Linda Merry, Soda Springs, is Idaho's Outstanding Young Woman of the Year.

Owner of the Merryview Veterinary Clinic, Dr. Merry writes "The Merry Pet Column" which is self-syndicated to eight major newspapers. Along with the winner in each of the 48 other states and the District of Columbia she now is being considered for one of the 1976's Ten Outstanding Young Women of America awards.

SNRA headquarters price skyrockets

"All that is up is the shell," Denison said. Workers must sheetrock, carpet, install toilet facilities, erect cabinets, paint and install all electrical utilities, he said.

Denison said a forest service memo states the interior work could cost anywhere from $230,000 to $780,000. The actual cost of the completed headquarters will not be known until the jobs are open, but observers who have followed the controversial building say the cost will be over one million dollars.

Superintendent Reynolds was in California viewing another recreational area and was unavailable for comment.

Work on the site began in 1974 with the sewer and water facilities by A&J Construction, Hemetide. Last summer, Hunter Saucerman, Idaho Falls, completed the exterior on the headquarters.

The Forest Service has had its share of headaches trying to move into the building.

Ketchum residents became angered in 1974 after the Forest Service presented formal plans for the building in the Northfork Canyon, seven miles north of here.

Superintendent Reynolds said the Forest Service had supplied sufficient information prior to that time letting people know where the headquarters was to be built.

Idaho's U.S. Congressmen and Idaho politicians got involved in the controversy. The regional office sent a specialty team here to investigate.

Regional Forester, Vern Hamre decided to allow construction to continue after a long meeting in 1975 with local planning and zoning officials, who opposed construction at the Northfork site.

IP official says time loss costly

BUIH. — Electrical power customers will be the losers as a result of the Public Utility Commission's denial of the Pioneer Power Plant at the Orchard site, Lee Brandon, district manager for Idaho Power Co., said Monday.

Addressing the Buhl Chamber of Commerce luncheon, Brandon, newly named manager for the Buhl area, said the power company will be looking at all other alternatives including several other sites in Idaho for a coal fired plant. However, he said the time loss will be extremely costly.

With each delay, he said, building, labor and equipment costs increase greatly. He said Idaho Power Co. had hoped to have the Pioneer Plant under construction in the coming year. Now, he said, it appears any start in a new power generating facility is some 10 years down the road.

Brandon told Buhl businessmen and women the public utilities commission expects to demand to exceed supply by 1981 or 1982. Instead of 1981, as originally estimated.

He said there has been a 29 per cent increase in new homes served and an overall 35 per cent growth factor in the Idaho Power service area between 1970 and 1976.

Describing the Pioneer Power Plant as one of the most controversial issues ever to come before the PUC in Idaho, Brandon said any second choice site would probably meet with the same controversy, lengthy public hearings and possibly the same decision.

Brandon said in view of the need to meet growing power demands without a new major source of power close at hand, the power company will probably be asking for another rate hike before the first of the year.

He said the power company is considering all new sources such as solar and nuclear power, but either of these sources would be years away. He said Utah Power and Light Co., and Idaho Power Co. have discussed building a joint nuclear power plant to serve customers in the two state area.

Other sites considered for a coal fired plant, he said, include the Bliss area.

"The reason we didn't select Bliss over the Orchard site in the beginning was an estimated $33 million higher price tag if we were to build in Bliss."

"This is just one of the additional cost factors we are faced with," he said.

Warren C. Saunders, manager of the Mountain Bell Telephone office in Buhl, told the chamber members about a new "phone center" concept being offered in the Buhl area as of this week.

He said the system gives customer an opportunity to select the telephone he or she likes, take it home and plug it into a new jack system.

"Hopefully by the time the customer gets home with his plug-in telephone, we will have necessary conversions completed in the plant so calls can be made on the new telephone," he said.

Aviation clinic set

TWIN FALLS — A general aviation service clinic will be held in room 117 of the Shields Building on the campus of Southern Idaho campus at 7:30 p.m. Thursday.

The clinic is part of the Federal Aviation Administration accident prevention program.

Lloyd Graybill of the national weather service will cover the topic of aviation weather. The other two topics for the clinic will be FAA flight service facilities and winter operations of aircraft.

Tuition waiver granted by CSI board

TWIN FALLS — For the first time College of Southern Idaho full-time employees and their spouses will be able to attend the college tuition-free.

The CSI board granted the waiver at its regular monthly meeting last week.

According to CSI president James L. Taylor the tuition waiver will apply to about 240 full-time employees, and their husbands and wives. CSI presidential assistant Gerry Meyerhoeffer said the waiver will include dispensing of a $12 registration fee and pre-credit-hour fees of about $6.25, or $62.50 for a full-time student with three credit hours or more.

The board made the decision after it was approached by faculty representatives seeking the waiver.

In other action at the board meeting, the CSI trustees appointed Jack Simms director of admissions. Simms had formerly been director of student affairs. He was replaced in that role by Donna Ball.

Former admissions director Donald Keith resigned from the post to accept a position with the college as an education and psychology instructor.

Meyerhoeffer said Keith's switch from the administration to the faculty was voluntary. Keith had wanted to teach and had applied for the faculty post prior to his replacement. Meyerhoeffer added.

Enrollment figures from the college for this fall should be out next week, Meyerhoeffer said. The college makes the figures available to the Idaho Department of Higher Education before making them public, he said.

Buhl's new well water cold but extremely hard

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

BUIH. — Residents of Buhl are finding they can't have everything in the way of a water supply.

Two years ago the city drilled an additional well and the residents were delighted when they learned the water at about 800 feet was 50 degrees. Acustomed to 80 degree water from the city's other four wells, many looked forward to cold water right from the tap without having to wait for an hour or so of refrigeration.

There was a drawback, however. The new water was extremely hard. Engineers told the city they frequently hit a pocket of hard water and when it is pumped out the hardness would be corrected.

Now in its second year-of-serving, Buhl residents, the new well in the west part of the city is still pumping hard cold water.

Residents faced with eating from corroded glassware and dishes, and having to replace heating elements in hot water tanks all too frequently, are ready to forego the nice cold water.

Glassware in homes in the west part of the city where the well is located becomes coated with mineral deposits within a few short weeks.

City Clerk Peggy McArthur says numerous complaints are registered at City hall during peak water use months when the west well is in use.

This year it was turned on in July and because of the cooler than usual weather in late summer, was turned off early this month. It is used only when peak demands make it necessary, usually July through early October.

"We added the well because of complaints about pressure in that part of town. People found at certain times of the day during hot weather they couldn't get enough pressure to operate a washing machine or flush a toilet. We thought our problems were over when the new well came in with 80 gallons per minute and at 50 degrees," Mrs. McArthur said.

The city clerk said only very few people in the area have water softeners and those who do find they must be changed about every two weeks in summer months.

City officials say they could put a softener on the well itself, but the cost would be almost prohibitive.

The well could be drilled deeper and maybe find no water at all or hit hot water such as that produced by other city wells.

One advantage to the hot water is the low cost in heating water, but most residents have indicated they would rather have cold water because of the problems of cooling-water before it can be used for such things as watering lawns or drinking.

Mrs. McArthur said the city plans to continue efforts to find a solution to the problem. Engineer Wendell L. Smith, Preston, are attempting to help the city reach a solution.

Hard water results

CLOUDY glassware and brown stained china have resulted from extremely hard water in the west portion of Buhl as a result of a new well. The well was added to increase pressure but mineral content in the water is extremely high.

Gem air service menaced

By BOB ZUCKERMAN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Gem Airline Corp. degrades airline fares, three Idaho cities, Twin Falls, Lewiston and either Idaho Falls or Pocatello — could lose their air service, Idaho Transportation Director Darrell Manning warned Monday.

Speaking at an Idaho Transportation Board meeting with city and county officials here, Manning said major airlines officials were threatening to limit their service to 80 airports, thus eliminating service to Twin Falls and Lewiston.

"The decision to cut service to either Idaho Falls or Pocatello is a 'toss-up,'" because both airports do the same amount of business, Manning said.

Manning gave no other details but said concerned Idahoans should write to Washington, D.C., to make sure their views are heard.

Manning's comments came at the first stop of the Idaho Transportation Board's annual road inspection tour through Eastern Idaho.

During the roughly one hour meeting, board members discussed several topics, including bridge building, and the development of the North Five Points intersection.

Board chairman Carl Moore, Lewiston, said Idaho's major transportation problem is bridges.

"There are already 130 deficient bridges on state highway system that we know of, and there must be many more on county roads and streets," he said.

Moore's comments came in response to statements by Kenneth Poe, Twin Falls Highway District. Poe told the board a bridge is needed across Salmon Falls Creek Canyon near the Salmon Falls Dam on Salmon Falls Creek.

Traffic in that area uses a bridge on top of the dam, he said, adding this bridge was becoming inadequate with increased agricultural and recreational traffic.

Moore blamed the state of Idaho bridges on higher truck weights on bridges and late recognition that bridges were deteriorating.

Settlement near end

TWIN FALLS — Ratification of the negotiations settlement between the Twin Falls school board and the Twin Falls Education Association (TFEA) could be completed by Wednesday.

The settlement was agreed to after a four-hour negotiation session Friday evening.

The school board has called a meeting for 7 p.m. today to consider the ratification, and a vote in favor of the settlement is likely.

Asked this morning if the board would ratify the settlement tonight, school board chairman Howard Rank said, "I'm assuming so."

TFEA chief negotiator Bob Klus said this morning the TFEA membership's vote on the settlement will probably come Wednesday night.

Klus said copies of the final agreement will be going out to teachers this afternoon and a meeting for ratification has been tentatively scheduled for 7 p.m. Wednesday in the high school cafeteria.

Ratification by both parties will make the agreement legally binding.

Gonfab set at Elkhorn

SUN VALLEY — Communication and Motivation in Business Education is the theme of the fall conference for Idaho business educators to be held Sunday to Oct. 5 at Elkhorn in Sun Valley.

Joyce Wenman, president of the Idaho Business Education Association, has announced that registration will begin Sunday evening at 5 p.m. in the Elkhorn Office, with a reception following.

Guest lecturers featured on Monday and Tuesday will be Dr. Fred Winger, Eugene, Ore., speaking on typewriting; Mr. Jerry Jilek and Mrs. Dennis Griffin, Capital High School, Boise, presenting a session entitled "Interpersonal Communication and the Concept of Self"; Miss Barbara Ellsworth, of Mesa Community College in Chandler, Ariz., discussing individualized instruction on business machines; Mr. Ed Caldwell, editor, Southwest Publishing Company, Cincinnati, Ohio, talking about motivating business education students; and Dr. John W. Mitchell, associate professor of economics at Boise State University, lecturing on national economic policy.

Dr. Donn Miller, vice president and manager, Idaho First National Bank's trust department, Boise, is scheduled to speak at the Monday luncheon in the Lodge Dining Room. A banquet is planned at the Chert House Monday evening.

Exhibits of business machines and business education textbooks will be on display Monday and Tuesday in the Union Pacific Room.

Business teachers throughout the state of Idaho are invited and urged to attend. Registration forms and information are available from Natalie Shaffer, convention chairman, at Capital High School, Boise — phone: 375-4070, ext. 2021.

Student elections slated

TWIN FALLS — Activities for the week at the College of Southern Idaho will include the student elections Wednesday through Thursday.

Students will vote in the multi-use lobby from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. and in the vocational center lobby from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. both days.

Tuesday will include student senate candidate speeches at 10:30 a.m. in the mid-auditorium for vocational students; 11:30 a.m. in the Student's Nest for academic students; and at 12:30 p.m. in the vocational building on Kimberly Road for students there.

Other Tuesday events include a program board meeting at noon in the student conference room; student senate meeting at 3 p.m. in the student conference room; women's volleyball at 5 p.m. in the gym with CSI vs. BSU.

Wednesday includes an AARP defensive driving program at 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the student conference room; student personnel meeting at 3 p.m. in the student conference room; alcohol safety program 7:30 p.m. in the conference room; a coffee house program at 8 p.m. featuring "Chuck Brady and Stephen Kent, in the Eagle's Nest."

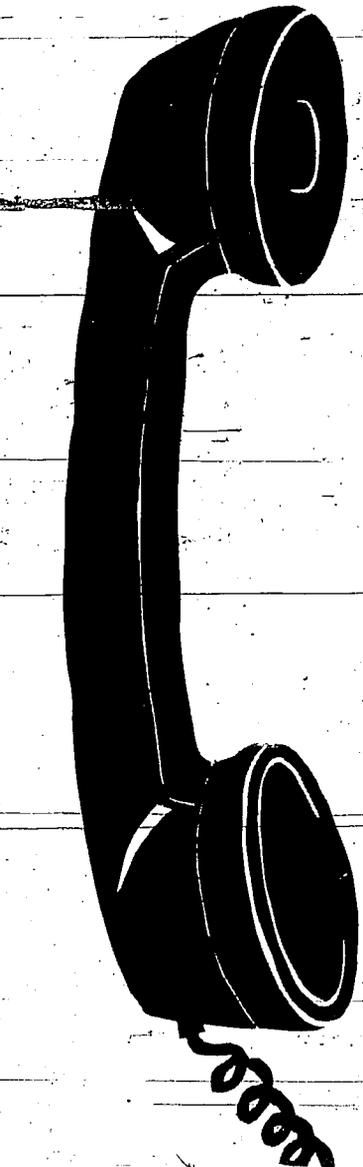

Thursday will be devoted to a higher education counselor day program from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the Fine Arts Auditorium with a defensive driving program from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the conference room.

On Friday Tommy Overstreet and the Nashville Express Concert program will be offered at 8 p.m. in the gym. The concert is open to the public with tickets available at the door.

Women's volleyball will be held Friday and Saturday for CSI team members and the Ricks College invitation track meet will be held Saturday.

Air show tragedy

ACROBATIC pilot Jerry Presson, 38, Miami Lakes, Fla., goes into an inverted flat spin, top left, begins to pull out, top right, and nearly had his experimental aircraft righted, center, when it crashed during an air show at Weyers Cave, Va., Sunday. Fire and rescue personnel work to free Presson, bottom. He was pronounced dead at the scene. (UPI)

Agency says Mrs. Dole 'legal'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Library of Congress study concludes that Mrs. Elizabeth Dole is not violating any federal laws in campaigning with her husband, Sen. Robert Dole, but Rep. John Moss, D-Calif., said Monday she should resign as a member of the Federal Trade Commission.

"The partisan political activities of Mrs. Dole are absolutely inconsistent with the quasi-judicial nature of her responsibilities as a commissioner," Moss wrote to FTC Chairman Calvin J. Collier.

Mrs. Dole took a leave of absence from the FTC and said her salary in that period would be turned over to the federal treasury until after the Nov. 2 election and her husband's fate as President Ford's running mate is decided.

Moss asked the Library of Congress to research the question of whether a leave of absence was sufficient to comply with federal laws and rules affecting ethics and conflict of interest of federal officials.

"It does not appear that Mrs. Dole's campaign activities are in violation of federal statutory provisions," the study concluded. But, said the study, "arguments may arise that such an involvement in and identification with a partisan political campaign by a commissioner may compromise the necessary non-partisan and impartial character of the office and of the commission upon the return of the commissioner to active duty."

"It will be utterly impossible for the business and industries subject to the jurisdiction of the FTC, for the Congress, or for the public generally to accept as independent and nonpartisan Commissioner Dole's opinions upon her return as a sitting commissioner," said Moss.

"Your approval of Mrs. Dole's injudicious leave of absence shows disappointingly poor judgment," Moss told Collier. "I request that you promptly advise Mrs. Dole that she must either immediately remove herself completely from all partisan political activity or tender her resignation."

'77 fish regs

BOISE (UPI) — Next year's fishing seasons and regulations will be discussed at the Fish and Game Commission's October meeting in Boise. The meeting will be held Oct. 21 at 9 a.m. at the department headquarters. A public hearing on fishing seasons and regulations will be held between 1:30 and 5 p.m.

PGA leaders

WASHINGTON (UPI) — J.C. Snead's victory in last week's Kaiser International Open lifted him from eighth to fifth place on the Professional Golfers Association's money-winning list for the year. Snead's victory increased his 1976 tournament earnings to $191,807. Jack Nicklaus continues to lead with a total of $265,438. Ben Crenshaw held second with $256,321 and Hale Irwin boosted his third-place total to $232,718. Hubert Green was fourth at $211,406.

Steelhead regulations

BOISE (UPI) — Steelhead fishing regulations will vary in Idaho when the season opens Oct. 1 because of differences between runs of the ocean trout. The Idaho Fish and Game Department said the Clearwater River will have a catch and release season but regulations allow a catch and keep season on the main Salmon River and part of the Snake River. Counts of steelheads coming into the Salmon and Snake Rivers show increases over last year. Regulations allow a one steelhead bag limit, with three steelhead allowed per season. The regulations apply in the Snake River from an area 400 feet below Hellis Canyon Dam downstream to the Oregon-Washington border. The catch and release season on the Clearwater River reflects a lower run size for the steelheads there. Officials said a catch and keep season might not allow enough of the steelhead to spawn.

Raiders end arrested

HOUSTON (UPI) — The Harris County sheriff's department contained Oakland Raiders' standout defensive end Charles Philby better than the Houston Oilers did last weekend. Philby, a rookie who played his college ball at Houston's Texas Southern University, flew to Houston Saturday with the five Raiders and was served three warrants charging him with passing bad checks worth about $150. Philby told Harris County constable Walter F. Rankin that his checkbook had been stolen while he was attending college and that he had not written any of the checks, but Raiders' business manager Jim Oito paid off the amounts of the checks, plus legal fees, and thus cleared the way for Philby to play. In Sunday's game, the 6-foot-9 Philby sacked Oilers quarterback Dan Pastorini twice, deflected three passes, dug in on two crucial goal-line stands and played the finest game of his career in a 14-13 Oakland victory.

Elk, deer tag sales

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Department of Fish and Game will be working overtime to assist hunters who literally wait until the last minute to purchase deer and elk tags. The Boise headquarters and six regional offices will remain open until midnight Tuesday, Sept. 28, for final deer and elk tag sales. Elk tag sales end throughout the state at that time, along with deer tag sales in northern Idaho. Deer tags will be on sale through Oct. 12 in counties south of Idaho County.

Gottfried rips Asie

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Brian Gottfried put on an amazing exhibition Monday night to annihilate defending champion Arthur Ashe; 6-2, 6-2, and capture the singles championship of the $125,000 Pacific Southwest Open Tennis Championships at UCLA's Pauley Pavilion. Gottfried, who has been the glint of the tournament, outplayed Asie in every department of the game. He won first prize money of $20,000 and Asie collected $10,000 for finishing in the runner-up position. Gottfried took total charge of the match with sensational passing shots and continuously caught Asie off balance. Ashe lacked his usual quickness and was a split second late in starting moves which gave Gottfried the opportunity to score on brilliantly placed cross-court shots time after time.

Rangers manager suspended

ARLINGTON, Tex. (UPI) — The Texas Rangers announced Monday American League president Lee MacPhail had suspended manager Frank Lucchesi for three days for his part in a heated argument earlier this month with umpire Rich Garcia. Lucchesi will miss the Rangers' final road series of the year with Minnesota this week and will resume managing the Rangers Friday night when they open a final home stand against Chicago. Garcia ejected Lucchesi from a game Sept. 14 in Arlington after the Rangers manager had argued loudly from the dugout over a pitch he thought should have been called a strike. After the game Lucchesi said he wanted to meet with MacPhail to discuss Garcia because he thought Garcia was prejudiced toward him. "I don't know why he is prejudiced, but he is," said Lucchesi. Since then, however, Lucchesi has conducted his meeting with MacPhail. Texas third base coach Jackie Moore will manage the club during Lucchesi's absence.

Warriors Ray unsigned

SAN JOSE, Calif. (UPI) — The Golden State Warriors' first NBA exhibition game is only four days away and they're still missing center Cliff Ray. "He hasn't shown up yet and I haven't talked to him," coach Al Attles said Monday. "I'm leery with my players and want to devote my attention to getting them ready." Ray's contract expired last year and he became a holdout when he failed to show for Friday's opening practice at San Jose City College. It was reported that Ray's agent, Regale Phillips, of Philadelphia, has filed an appeal for free agent status. "It's his decision," said Attles. "But the only thing I can do about it, Cliff is obviously an important part of the team. As far as me calling him, it wouldn't do any good. I don't even know if he's in the area. It could be considered tampering since Bentley Stirling is handling things with his agent." Ray's absence still leaves Golden State with two centers, veteran George Johnson and 7-1 rookie Robert Parish. The Warriors, who compiled the NBA's best win-loss record last season, open their tune-ups Friday night in Portland, Ore.

Ali predicts knockout by fifth round

NEW YORK (UPI) — Heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali ran around Central Park at four in the morning without getting mugged, then whipped his tongue into final fighting trim Monday with one more exhortation on how he will "destroy Ken Norton." Three years and a million or so words after their last encounter, Ali and Norton face each other in the chilly night air Tuesday for the world heavyweight championship. More than 250 million people around the globe are expected to watch the fight "live" via closed circuit or satellite-relayed television, according to promoters. At Yankee Stadium, where the bout begins at about 10:30 p.m. EDT, promoters are hoping for a paid attendance of at least 40,000. That would leave almost 20,000 empty seats, but with tickets scaled from $20 down to $25 would assure a five-gate record of about $3.5 million, almost one million dollars more than the second Jack Dempsey-Gene Tunney fight at Soldier Field in Chicago 49 years ago. "All is expected to weigh in Tuesday morning at about 220 pounds, five or six more than Norton. Both fighters are in perfect physical condition after weeks of intense training. Norton sparred 225 rounds, while Ali boxed less than 100 rounds, but in their respective positions—Norton, 31 years old and still refining his boxing skills, Ali, 34 and fighting frequently—each may have chosen the best means of preparation. All, a 2-1 betting favorite, said he would go for the psychological edge right from the start by making Norton wait five minutes in the ring in the expected 5 degree weather before making his entrance. From there, Ali said he will press the fight all the way. "I'm predicting a knockout over Ken Norton this time," said Ali, who divided two split decisions with Norton three years ago. "I'm ready now. The first I was out of shape, had my jaw broken and still almost won. The second fight, my hands were hurtin', couldn't hit without pain and pulled out the decision. But now my hands are well and I'm in shape. The first five rounds he should be gone." Norton, who has become a commercially successful actor since he became famous by breaking Ali's jaw, sees the fight taking a different course, naturally. "It's gonna be a hectic fight," Norton said. "He's gonna come out punching early. He feels he's gained a bit of punching power, but he doesn't move around as much. His foot agility isn't as good. His hand speed is very good and he does punch a little better. "So he's gonna set up more, use his hand speed and his added weight for extra punching power to try to take me out early. If that doesn't work, he's gonna bounce around a little bit but he can't box like he used to for more than five or six rounds. And eventually, he has to come back down and go to the tie. This was moving around a lot in his last fight with me and I had to go seek him out. If he's gonna be a Stationary target now, I can hit him twice as much and twice as hard and I plan to punish him quite a bit." Norton relaxed with just a few friends Monday but Ali, the irrepressible self-publicist, ran four miles in the rain in Central Park and then held a news conference later in the day to promote his new autobiographical movie, based on his book "The Greatest." Acting ability and morality have developed into an issue between Ali and Norton for this fight, and what may have started off as kidding, has often taken on sharper tones. "I'm not a sex symbol. I'm a religious man," said Ali, who stars as himself in his own movie.

Firebird Raceway features 'Battle of the sexes' race

BOISE — In a battle of the sexes Jerry the "king" Ruth took on Shirley "cha cha" Muldowney in a two out of three match race at Firebird Raceway Sunday afternoon. Ruth not only won the affair but set an all-time Idaho elapsed time record in the process. In the first round Ruth covered the quarter mile in 5.97 sec at over 230 m.p.h. Ruth broke the record set by Gary Beck of Edmonton, Canada, 1974. In the second round Muldowney gained a measure of revenge by getting off the line first and leading all the way for the win in 6.53 sec over Ruth's trailing 6.65 run. The finale had Ruth unleashing another tremendous time record in a 227.76 m.p.h. Muldowney registered a 6.831 at 203 m.p.h.

Padres plan rejected

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — A city council committee rejected Monday a proposal by the San Diego Padres to delay repayment of a debt the National League baseball club owes. An attorney for Padres owner Ray Kroc said the committee action could result in 50-cent like in all ticket prices next season. The Padres wanted to repay the $2.1 million loan, given to the team by the city in 1969, over a 13-year period from concession revenues. The current agreement bases repayment on the club's attendance.

Scott May signs Bulls pact

CHICAGO (UPI) — Scott May, college basketball player-of-the-year for Indiana's NCAA championship team, and star of the winning U.S. Olympic team, signed a multi-year contract with the Chicago Bulls Monday and said he wants "to be known as a complete player." "I want to play," he said. "I don't care if I start. I want to contribute, and I'll do the best I can to help. "I try to play defense the best I can. I try to do everything the best I can, rebounding, defend-ive, offensive. I don't know how I'll have to change my game in the NBA, but I'll do the best I can on every part of it." May believed that his experience in the Big Ten, which plays a "muscular game," would help him adjust to the NBA and added he expected no trouble playing a fast break offense. "Basketball is a motion game, and we did kind of the same thing at Indiana." He refused to discuss details of his contract, although it was believed to be for more than five years and for around $1 million.

BSU vs MSU crucial test

BOISE (UPI) — This weekend's game between Boise State University and Montana State in Bozeman will be a crucial test for Coach Jim Criner's defending champions, John Rensing, Big Sky Commissioner, said Monday. Rensing said a loss to the Bobcats would, for the moment, drop the Broncos from the title chase. Boise State lost its opener to the University of Idaho and would be 0-2 with a loss to Montana

State. Both teams will enter the contest with 2-1 season records. Saturday's contest will be MSU's first conference game. Idaho State University with a 1-2 record so far travels to Las Vegas to play Nevada with a 3-0 season history this weekend as the University of Idaho with two wins and one loss faces its traditional rival Washington State, 0-3 in Pullman for a non-conference game.

Championships end drag slate

POCATELLO — Entries from four states as well as the largest turnout of racers for the entire year highlighted the Idaho State Drag Racing Championships at Intermountain Raceway over the weekend. Harry Dubach, Kaysville, Utah, captured the competitive dragster bracket with several solid runs of 8.80 sec at over 150 m.p.h. Dubach final round victim was Alan Bloom, Idaho Falls. Both drivers were running Chevy-powered fuel-injected rails. In the modified bracket Dave Austin of Twin Falls, made it all the way to the semi's in his modified Chevy before being defeated by eventual winner Gene Ney, Salt Lake. The super stock bracket was also dominated by out-of-state cars and found Keith Lynch, Grange, Utah, take the win. Al Steinmetz, Pocatello, won the stock bracket in a 1970 Olds 442. A winning time of 12.35 sec defeated Larry Davis from Twin Falls. After losing the consolation race, drag racing season at Intermountain Raceway until early May of next year.

Dodger manager retires after 23 years

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Aging Walter Alton decided to step down Monday after 23 seasons as manager of the Dodgers — in Brooklyn and in Los Angeles — but he will stay with the club in another executive capacity. The 64-year-old Alton, his eyes glistening with emotion, told a news conference in the Dodger clubhouse the time had come for him to give up the reins to a younger man and he will retire at the end of the 1976 season. Alton, winner of seven pennants and four World Series titles, has served longer as manager with one team than any other big league manager except John McGraw of the New York Giants (33 years) and Connie Mack of the old Philadelphia Athletics (33 years). He ranks fifth on the all-time list of pennant winning managers behind McGraw (11), Casey Stengel (10), Mack (9) and Joe McCarthy (8). Dodger President Peter O'Malley said he tried to persuade Alton to stay as manager but could not stake his decision. Peter's father, Walter O'Malley, the man who brought Alton up from what was then a Dodger farm club at Montreal 23 years ago to manage in the big leagues, said, "This is a sad day."

The elder O'Malley, who became board chairman when he made his son president a few years ago, recalled that when Alton's name was first mentioned to him, he said, "Who's he?" Alton was hired as manager of the Dodgers in Brooklyn in 1953 as a second choice to Charley Dressen who was fired when he insisted he should have a contract of more than one year. Alton signed one year contracts uncomplainingly every year after that. His salary rose over the years ago, a reported $100,000. Peter O'Malley said no decision has been made on a successor to Alton.

The big hit has been his concern for his men. When I got hurt, he called me from time to time. I don't think there are many like him." A few of the players crowded in a doorway when Alton addressed a crowded news conference. He said he decided to retire when he came to the realization that this Dodger team would not overtake Cincinnati this year in the National League West. The Dodgers are in second place with an 89-67 record 10 games back of the Reds. Alton, a quiet man who controls his emotions well, sounded a bit shaky when he said: "I've been in baseball for 41 years and it's been awful. I would like to say something like, 'You can't win if you don't score and you can't score if you don't get on base.' " He was always a gracious winner and gave full credit to his players and respect to his opponents. A few times he lost his temper and on one occasion challenged players to a fist fight because they seemed happy after losing a crucial game. But for the most part Alton has been frank and honest and unemotional.

GLISTENING eyes tell the story as Walter Alton, the manager of the Dodgers for 23 years, announced his retirement at the end of the season. Dodger officials say he will remain with the Dodger organization in an executive capacity. (UPI tele)

Tom Lasorda, Dodger third base coach who once said he "bleeds Dodger blue," has been waiting in the wings to succeed Alton. Lasorda, 49, a high spirited guy who is liked and trusted by the Dodger players, helped develop many of the current stars while he was a manager in the minors. The O'Malleys perhaps did not want to announce a successor immediately because that would detract from Alton's retirement as the big story. Some of the players are known to believe that Alton is a fuddy-duddy in his baseball thinking and should have retired some time ago. But no harsh words were heard for the moment in the clubhouse. Said shortstop Bill Russell, "I didn't especially want him to go. If it wasn't for him, I wouldn't be playing in the majors." Dave Lopes, the second baseman, said, "All good things must come to an end. I wish the best for the man. I wouldn't want to be following in his footsteps. In my opinion, Tom Lasorda is the most qualified to manage. If somebody else gets the job, it would be an injustice to Tommy." Catcher Steve Yeager commented, "I think he is a super human being, a leader in his own right, not only on the field but off the field. The big hit has been his concern for his men. When I got hurt, he called me from time to time. I don't think there are many like him." A few of the players crowded in a doorway when Alton addressed a crowded news conference. NASCAR drivers gain dollar

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — NASCAR Grand National point leader Cale Yarborough became the second driver to top the $250,000 mark in winnings with his victory Sunday in the Old Dominion 500 at the Martinsville (Va.) Speedway. Richard Petty, the defending Winston Cup champion and nearest challenger to Yarborough, still leads in money won for the season, however, with $264,500. Yarborough has won $254,315 so far this year. Six other drivers have won more than $100,000 in Winston Cup competition this year but he has David Pearson with $223,300. The others are Benny Parsons, $172,655; Burt D. Baker, $164,655; Bobby Allison, $161,885; Dave Marcis, $153,565; and Darrell Waltrip, $151,305. Lennie Proulx with $91,705 and Richard Brooks with $73,385 round out the top 10 money winners for 1976.

Redskins nip Eagles in overtime

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Mark Moseley kicked a 20-yard field goal 12:49 into a sudden death overtime to give the Washington Redskins an exciting 20-17 victory over the upset-minded Philadelphia Eagles in a nationally televised Monday night game.

The overtime was forced by a 41-yard scoring pass from Eagles' quarterback Mike Boryla to wide receiver Charlie Smith with 1:07 remaining in regulation time and the unbeaten Redskins leading 17-10.

The field goal by Moseley, a former Eagle, came after Eddie Brown picked off an overthrown pass from Boryla who had five passes intercepted in the game, giving Washington the ball on the Philadelphia 22-yard line. A series of running plays carried the ball down to the 12 and Moseley booted it through.

Joe Lavender, another former Eagle coach led the Redskins by forcing Dick Vermell after each play to report to training camp, also figured prominently in the victory by picking off two of Boryla's passes in the end zone.

Before Boryla's game-tying touchdown near the end of regulation play, Mike Thomas' 27-yard touchdown run in the third quarter staked the Redskins to a 17-10 lead. Washington had overcome a 10-0 deficit with a TD and a field goal 62 seconds apart late in the second quarter.

The upset-minded Eagles, now 1-2, had taken the lead on a 16-yard scoring burst up the middle by fullback Art Malone with 3:17 left in the first half. But Brown ran the ensuing

STOPPED after a short gain is Eagles' running back Mike Hogan (55). Redskins Jake Scott (13) puts on the initial hit, and Chris Hanburger (55) and Harold McLinton (53) close in for the finish. The Redskins went on to win the contest in overtime. (UPI/Tele)

Pistons rookie hurt

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — Rookie Phil Sellers, the Detroit Pistons' No. 3 selection in this year's NBA draft, injured his left Achilles tendon Monday during a workout and will miss at least several days of practice.

Team officials said Sellers, from Rutgers, was trying out at the guard position during a team practice when he developed severe inflammation in the tendon.

Short gain

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Jim Kaat broke a personal six-game losing streak and Greg Luzinski singled home Bosetti to make it 4-0 in the fifth. Bowa highlighted a three-run Philadelphia rally in the seventh with a two-run double off reliever Eddie Sotoman.

Kaat, whose last win was Aug. 21, led St. Louis to five hits before leaving for a pinch-hitter in the seventh. Kaat struck out two and walked none in raising his record to 12-14.

Philadelphia took a 2-0 lead in the first inning off loser Pete Falcone. 12:45, on a single by Dave Cash, a wild pitch, a walk to Rick Bosetti, a double by Luzinski and a sacrifice fly by Brown.

Jerry Martin made it 3-0

Phillies keep winning ways

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The Phillies kept their winning ways going Monday night with a 4-0 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

Tom Griffin, now 7-7, went all the way for the winners.

He drove in two runs for the Phillies, including the tying run in the eighth with a single.

Padres top Reds

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Doug Rader's two-out pop fly that fell just behind first base drove in Mike Champion and Mike Irie with a pair of runs in the bottom of the eighth Monday night to break a 3-3 tie and give the San Diego Padres a 5-3 win over the Cincinnati Reds.

Rader's hit came off right-hander Santo Alcala, who came in at the start of the inning to relieve starter Don Gullett and dropped to 11-4.

Tom Griffin, now 7-7, went all the way for the winners.

He drove in two runs for the Padres, including the tying run in the eighth with a single.

Dodgers blank Astros

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Bill Russell broke up a scoreless pitching duel in the seventh inning Monday night when he singled home Steve Garvey to lead the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 2-0 victory over the Houston Astros, while Don Sutton hurled his 21st victory.

Russell Dan Larson held the Dodgers scoreless on two hits through six innings but Garvey led off the seventh with a single, his 197th hit of the season, advanced to second base on a groundout and scored on Russell's single. Los Angeles tied it in the eighth when Davey Lopes walked, stole second and talked on Bill Buckner's single.

Sutton, 21-9, hurled a fourthatter for his fourth shutout and 14th complete game.

Mets clip Expos

NEW YORK (UPI) — John Miler hit two homers, including a grand slam, and pitcher Jon Matlack went 3-for-4 with two RBIs Monday night as the New York Mets routed the Montreal Expos 10-3 in a rain-delayed first game of a doubleheader.

Miler's club-record third grand slam this season was the big blow in a five-run sixth inning. Miler's 14th homer, a two-run shot, came in the second after a sacrifice fly by Felix Millan.

Matlack, now 12-9, scattered seven hits to set a personal season-high for victories. He had two singles, one good for two RBIs, and a double.

The game was called with none out in the top of the eighth inning after a one hour and 10-minute rain delay and the second game was postponed.

Elliott sets office race

BURLEY — Burley businessman Edward G. Forschler has filed a petition for a four-year term on the Southern Idaho Regional Airport Authority board of directors.

Elliott is the first candidate to take out a petition for the seat to succeed George Forschler, as representative from Legislative District 26. The district includes Cassia County and two precincts in Minidoka County.

Forschler, chairman of the Authority, announced earlier this month he would not seek reelection. His term expires Dec. 1.

The election will be held in connection with the Nov. 2 general election. Deadline for filing for trustee is Oct. 15, just 18 days before the election.

Forschler is the only seat up for election this year. Others on the board include Dr. L.V. Ruebel of Jerome, Dale Garner of Rupert, and Robert S. Meyer of Gooding.

Elliott is president of Elliott's, Inc., an implement dealership in Burley. He is a long-time supporter of the regional airport concept and was president of the Southern Idaho Chamber of Commerce when the authority was launched 10 years ago.

Forschler appointed Elliott organizational director over the past four years.

BOISE (UPI)—The Idaho Supreme Court upheld today the constitutionality of the Idaho Dredge and Placer-Mining Act.

The unanimous opinion written by Justice Charles R. Donaldson, the high court reversed a ruling by District Judge James G. Towles that had declared the act unconstitutional.

The high court found that the State of Idaho properly could regulate mining activities on federal public domain property as long as the state regulations did not conflict with any applicable federal legislation.

It found the dredge mining act is in harmony with existing federal legislation and that it did not deny either due process or equal protection of the law to a mining partnership which challenged the law.

Under the act dredge and placer miners must obtain a permit from the state before they may conduct dredge mining operations. To obtain the permit an applicant must comply with certain requirements — including the posting of a performance bond to reclaim and restore lands disturbed by the mining.

James C. St. Eugene Weiss and Oral Lake, Montana residents conducting business in Idaho as a mining partnership, conducted a dredge mining operation along Sherlock Creek, a tributary of the St. Joe River. Their unpermitted mining claims are located within the St. Joe National Forest on property owned by the federal government.

Which they did not apply for a permit under the dredge mining act the State Board of Land Commissioners brought an action to enjoin their operation. The lower court refused to permanently enjoin the operation.

ENERGY FACTS IN A NUTSHELL

- Three quarters of all energy currently used in the United States is derived from two of our scarcest fuels — oil and natural gas.
- The inevitable result has been increasing importation of these fuels from abroad. This makes it most difficult to meet our national goal of decreasing fuel imports and moving toward energy independence.
- Our most abundant domestic energy resources available in the near-term are coal and uranium.
- By 1985, we will have to nearly DOUBLE our coal production and transportation capacity to keep pace with reasonable energy growth and demand projections.

— Excerpt from a study by George Weisman, Director, Office of Waste Management, ERDC Idaho Operations Office — April 27, 1978.

ENERGY TIP: The greatest heat loss for a concrete slab floor occurs at the edges. Rigid insulation with resistance of R-5 (at least 2 inches) should be placed around the entire perimeter of the slab.
