ELEVEN YEAR-OLD Michelle Barris, Harrison Elementary School judge, seated, instructs young voters on how to vote in the school's straw election Monday. The students supported President Ford and Democratic Congressional challenger Stan Kress. See story on this and other student polls on p. 13.

No galas in Rhodesian talks

GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI) — Rival black and white Rhodesian delegations met for one hour and 40 minutes today but made no obvious progress in setting any firm date for black majority rule in Rhodesia.

(Earlier story, p. 7)

Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith left the meeting saying he still firmly intended to leave Geneva Wednesday because of the impasse at the talks.

Madrid transit strike worsens

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — Traffic slowed down today on some lines of Madrid's mass transit system in an apparent act of solidarity by subway workers with striking employees of the municipal bus company.

The walkout by 7,000 bus drivers, conductors and mechanics entered its sixth day, with no solution in sight. The subway slowdown added to the traffic problems of Madrid, a city of nearly 4 million.

City authorities have chartered 300 private buses and manned another 500 with army and police drivers to maintain a skeleton service. But many bus drivers are now driving their cars to get to work, creating huge traffic jams in the city.

McCarthy concedes little result

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Independent presidential candidate Eugene McCarthy ended his campaign Monday by conceding that he is unlikely to win any electoral votes.

McCarthy is on the ballot in 29 states and is a write-in candidate in California.

He told approximately 1,000 students at UCLA that if he gets 5 per cent of the vote he would interpret that as a sign of voter dissatisfaction with the major parties.

Aegean air space talks start

PARIS (UPI) — Greek and Turkish diplomats opened negotiations today on their nations' drawn-out dispute over the use of air space over the Aegean sea.

The talks coincided with the start of parallel negotiations in Bern, Switzerland, over the shipping and exploration rights in Aegean sea areas close to Turkey's coast.

Greek diplomats said "guarded optimism" prevailed at the talks at the Greek embassy.

US law on church, work upheld

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court today upheld by a 5-4 vote the federal law requiring employers to accommodate the religious needs of workers.

A 14-vote dissent failed to establish a precedent. It came about because Justice John Paul Stevens did not participate in the case, brought to the court by the Parker Seal Co.

Federal civil rights law since 1972 has required that firings or refusals to hire for religious reasons be justified by a company on the basis of undue hardship to the business. Numerous lawsuits have sprung up as a result, mostly by persons whose religion forbids Saturday work.

First town for Ford

DIVULGE NORTH, N.H. (UPI) — The first community to count its presidential ballots in the 1976 presidential election gave President Ford a two-to-one lead today over Democrat Jimmy Carter.

The 25 voters of this northern New Hampshire vacation resort cast 13 votes for Ford, 11 for Carter and one for independent Eugene McCarthy. One ballot was voted because the voter selected three candidates.

The returns came in just after midnight EST. Voters braved icy roads and a blustery snowstorm to cast their ballots.

GOP candidates favored in TF legislative races

TWIN FALLS — Republican candidates for the state legislature are considered favorites in Twin Falls County today as voters choose between candidates in three contested races.

Residents of western Twin Falls County including more than half the precincts in the city of Twin Falls have two contested races in legislative district 24.

Lawrence Knigge, a Republican, and Rex Reed, a Democrat, are seeking a legislative seat which opened up in the retirement of Rep. Bill Roberts.

Holdup foiled

WORLDAM, Wyo. (UPI) — A bank president foiled an attempted robbery by locking himself and 19 would-be hostages inside the bank's vault. The frustrated gunman surrendered to police.

"He used his head, he really did," Washakie County Sheriff J.B. Warila said of bank president Don Bobbitt. All the people in the vault "did what I did," the sheriff said.

The man entered the bank Monday armed with a .30-caliber rifle, forced 20 persons, including Bobbitt, into the bank vault and closed the heavy steel door from the outside.

Republican incumbent sheriff Paul Corder also thwarted the robbery for Twin Falls County sheriff although he faces two opponents today.

Matt Vice of Twin Falls and Bob Vawser, Kimberly, also are seeking the sheriff's office. Both are running as independents.

Hollister shuts hookup tap

HOLLISTER — City council members in Hollister have been forced to limit new hookups to the community water system because of what might be considered a "population explosion."

Mayor Charles Shepherd said the community, with a population of 57 in the 1970 census, has had seven to eight new families move into the area this year.

The city operates with a water system from two wells. One of the pumps went out of service a few weeks ago, leaving the city with a limited capacity for delivery of water.

Mayor Shepherd said because of this the council has decided to limit hookups to three in the next six months. This will give the city time to seek a solution.

"We hope to drill another well and add another pump in the future, but it costs money and takes time," the mayor said.

He said people are looking at land every day in the Hollister area and many of the new residents are mobile home owners.

"I don't know why they are moving here, unless it's just an inexpensive place to live and

Voters have 'say' today

By CHRIS PECK
Times News writer

MAGIC VALLEY — The pollsters had their say, the candidates had their say, now the voters get the final say in Idaho and across the nation. It's election day — 1976.

A majority of Idahoans able to vote are expected to exercise their ballot rights today and choose two U. S. Congressmen, 105 state legislators and cast their preference for the Presidency.

Almost without question Idaho will be chalked up in President Ford's column — not Jimmy Carter's; but the congressional races and the state legislative races are far from decided.

For many southern Idaho voters the most interesting race in 1976 is the Stan Kress-George Hansen contest.

Hansen, seeking his fourth term in the U. S. House of Representatives ran into difficulty in 1976 over apparently not filing his income tax returns on time while a member of Congress.

In addition, many voters questioned Hansen's effectiveness in Congress, noting that he was generally found on the far right fringe of the Washington political spectrum.

Still, Hansen's supporters rallied behind him, especially in the closing days of the 1976 campaign.

With endorsements from Ronald Reagan and a telegram from President Ford, Hansen confidently talked of victory today.

The second Kress-Hansen race may well be the eight Equities of Magic Valley.

In 1974 Hansen won Blaine, Camas, Lincoln, Gooding, Jerome, Minidoka, Cassia and Twin Falls counties by a total of 7,000 votes.

To unseat Hansen, Kress believes he must cut into Hansen's support in Magic Valley.

If Kress can slay within 3,000 votes of Hansen in the eight county area, he believes he will win a narrow statewide victory.

Twin Falls Republican county chairman Laird Noh conceded today a telephone canvass of Twin Falls voters found the Kress-Hansen race extremely close.

Both the Republicans and Democrats in Twin Falls County were trying to mobilize support today and were actively calling Twin Falls voters urging them to vote.

Residents who need a ride to the polls may contact the Republican headquarters at 734-3673 or the Democratic headquarters at 734-6014.

Undecided voters probably hold the key to the Kress-Hansen race in Magic Valley and Twin Falls County, but remain open until 8 p.m.

An estimated 18,000 voters still had not made up their minds who to support late last week, according to a Times-News poll and a private Republican poll.

The Idaho state senate may swing into Democratic control tonight for the first time in more than a decade.

Idaho Democrats are hoping to reverse seven seats in the state Senate and thereby take control of the body which last session was dominated 21-14 by the Republicans.

One Magic Valley senate seat the Democrats hope to win is in district 21 where Republican Barbara Fagg faces Democrat Jack Bell.

Registration in Twin Falls this morning was heavy with voters standing in line at many polling places at 10:30 a.m.

An estimated 140,000 voters are expected to cast in the second district, a total of 325,000 in Idaho.

Voting lines form for Election '76

By United Press International

Gerald Ford and Jimmy Carter showed up early to cast their ballots today and millions of other Americans turned out in heavy volume to decide one of the closest presidential elections in history.

Election officials in dozens of eastern, mid-western and southern states reported that voters were forming long lines to select between Ford and Carter. Governors were also being selected in 14 states, senators in 23 and House members and other state and local officials in all 50.

The weather was good in most sections of the country—Democrats have contended all along that decent weather would help Carter because it would encourage a heavier turnout. There are more registered Democrats than Republicans in the country.

The election officials were almost unanimous in describing the turnout so far as "heavy." There had been pre-election predictions that the number of voters participating would be the lowest because of widespread apathy among the electorate.

Port and his wife, Betty, cast their ballots at an elementary school in Grand Rapids, Mich., the President's hometown. "I feel very good," Ford told reporters. "Nov. 2 is going to be a good day."

Carter cast his ballot in Plains, Ga., and expressed confidence that he would win.

Both candidates were among the first to vote when their local precincts opened this morning.

Election officials in the Midwest, which encompasses several key states, said voters arrived at the polls early and in heavy numbers.

"I have worked a lot of elections and I have never seen so many voters come out so early," said one precinct worker in Columbus, Ohio.

"If the weather stays as it is, voting should be heavy much of the day," said a spokesman for the Wayne County, Mich., clerk's office in Detroit.

Michigan officials predicted a record turnout of 3.7 million voters, 72 per cent of those registered.

In Muncie, Ind., a precinct judge said the turnout was the heaviest he had seen in 10 years.

Ohio Secretary of State Ted Brown, who estimated a record 4.2 million voters would cast ballots, said the early voting throughout the state was "very heavy."

In New Jersey, another key state to both Carter and Ford, an election official in Hudson County said, "If we keep going at the rate we had at 9 o'clock, we'll have 80 to 85 per cent of total registered voters before the polls close."

New York City officials said 75 per cent of the three million registered voters there will cast ballots. "The voter turnout is very heavy," one official said. "This is the first time in five years that I've had complaints about long lines at polling places."

Injuries fatal to Filer man

BOISE — A 49-year-old Filer man died Monday in the Veterans Administration Hospital following a Buick auto accident.

James Alvarado Hadley, 48, Filer, suffered severe head cuts in a two-car collision at the intersection of Sawtooth Boulevard and Clear Lakes Road in Buhl about 9:20 p.m., Oct. 23, according to Twin Falls County Sheriff Paul Corder.

Hadley was taken to Magic Valley Memorial Hospital and transferred by ambulance to the Boise Hospital shortly afterward.

Sheriff Corder said Hadley was traveling west on Sawtooth when he apparently ran a stop sign at Clear-Lakes, hitting a car driven by Kathryn M. Mackay, 18, Idaho Falls.

A passenger in the Mackay car, Mrs. Ambrose Mendlin, 75, Buhl, suffered a broken femur, a laceration in the upper part of the leg, and was taken to the Twin Falls hospital. She was listed in good condition today.

Damage to the Hadley car was estimated at $5,000 and to the Mackay car, $3,500. No citations were issued.

3 persons shot in two incidents

TWIN FALLS — Three persons were shot in two separate incidents here during the weekend.

William Richard Winterholler, 29, and Marshall Edward Law, 28, both Twin Falls, were arrested Sunday night on charges of assault with a deadly weapon.

Police said Winterholler and Law were arrested in connection with two separate arguments the two allegedly had with a group of persons Saturday night.

In the second argument outside the Alley Lounge, 121 Fourth Ave. S., a shotgun was fired at another man and women from a vehicle the two men were in, police said.

The man and women, who were not identified, were taken to Magie Valley Memorial Hospital, where they were treated and released for gunshot wounds above the waist, police said.

Law was released on his own recognizance. Winterholler was being held Monday morning by police for questioning.

In another incident, Art Wiggins, age and address not given, was shot in the neck in the South Park area Saturday night, police said.

Police Detective Capt. Tim Qualls said he could release no other information on the case, and that it was still under investigation.

Wiggins was listed in good condition at Magie Valley Memorial Hospital today.

No arrests have been made in connection with the incident, Qualls said.

Four other persons were arrested during the weekend, one on an assault and battery warrant, one on an assault and battery charge, one on a charge of disorderly conduct and one on two counts of forgery.

Bill Stewart, 32, address unknown, was arrested Saturday night on a charge of assault and battery in connection with an alleged fight he had with his wife at the Military Inn, 162 Washington St., police said.

He was released on $300 bond.

Andrew Hamilton Trusty was arrested on a charge of disorderly conduct in connection with an alleged Sunday night fight he had with his wife at their residence on Larkspur Drive, police said.

When police arrived, they found Mrs. Marilena Trusty lying on the driveway with head cuts. She was taken to the Twin Falls Clinic, where she was treated and released. She has not signed a complaint against her husband.

Dora R. Stradley, 51, was arrested Friday night on two counts of forgery in connection with the alleged passing of two bad checks earlier this month. She was released on her own recognizance.

Optimistic Ford votes

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (UPI) — An optimistic and nostalgic President Ford voted at Wealthy Elementary School in his hometown today before heading back to Washington to await the outcome of his White House battle with Jimmy Carter.

"I feel very good. Nov. 2 is going to be a good day," said Ford after he and his wife Betty motored to the school and cast their ballots for the President.

The President arranged to return to Washington before noon, where he and his family will watch the returns on television tonight.

"Are you feeling lucky?" Ford was asked by reporters as he signed autographs for children in Grand Rapids and jubilantly hoisted aloft one youngster wearing a "Ford" cap and waving an American flag.

"Sure do. I'm feeling optimistic," he said. Obviously referring to nationwide polls which showed him forging into a virtual tie with Democrat Carter in the late going, he added: "Don't you think we have good reason?"

Mrs. Ford said she voted for "my favorite candidate, President Ford."

The President and his wife traveled in a motorcade from the Hotel Panlilio to the Wealthy Elementary School in Grand Rapids, where they arrived at 7:30 a.m. EST. Along the way, Ford stopped the motorcade in front of a service station where he spotted an elderly couple who were "friends of my parents."

from the home where Mrs. Ford was raised. Each signed the registration book and took their paper ballots. The President signed "in" the polling booth and Mrs. Ford in another. Each took a few minutes to check off their choices.

Ford seemed not to want to leave the school. While he was marking his ballot, several hundred children outside chanted "We want Ford."

When he emerged to resume his motorcade, Ford paused to shake hands with the children, many of whom wanted his autograph. He hoisted 7-year-old Chris Waring, who was wearing a red, white, and blue baseball cap with Ford's name on it and carrying an American flag, high into the air.

Ford was wearing a gray suit with a thin white stripe, pale blue shirt, and maroon tie. Mrs. Ford wore a gray worsted princess-style coat with a black velvet collar.

Ford, who broke down emotionally at the overwhelming greeting on his arrival in Grand Rapids Monday night, appeared still in a nostalgic mood. He spoke sentimentally of some of the old familiar places he saw en route to the polling place.

Today, he autographed a 1948 campaign photograph of himself, held by John Ritzmaster, who told reporters that Ford used to have his hair cut in Ritzmaster's grandfather's barber shop.

"In appreciation and best wishes, Jerry Ford," wrote the President.

London bookies like Ford

LONDON (UPI) — President Ford edged out Democratic challenger Jimmy Carter today to become British bookmakers' favored candidate in the U.S. election.

"In 12 years of political betting I have never known anything like this. It can only be described as Ford mania," said Ron Pollard, director of Ladbrooke bookmakers.

Both Ladbrooke bookmakers and bookmaker William Hill pegged Ford as the 5-4 favorite.

A spokesman for Hill said odds for Carter were 25-1 and Ladbrooke was quoting him at even money.

Carter had been the favorite through Monday.

Long night of returns in prospect

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A word of advice to television election watchers: make sure the tapper is full. It could be a long night.

With the public opinion polls agreeing the popular vote is going to be close, attention focuses on electoral votes, particularly "The Big Five" and "The Decisive Dozen."

The Big Five states are California, 45; New York, 41; Pennsylvania, 27; Illinois and Texas, 26 each, for a total of 165. Just 165 short of the 270 electoral votes needed.

The Decisive Dozen includes those five, plus Ohio, 25; Michigan, 21; Florida, 20; New Jersey, 17; each; Massachusetts, 14; Indiana and North Carolina, 13 each, for 265 electoral votes.

That means the first 10 states in the electoral ranking, plus either Indiana or North Carolina, can decide a presidential election. A candidate could carry 39 other states and lose.

"I'm not sure about the best bet either. It was wrong in 1916, but voted right in every other presidential election this century."

Carter confident

PLAINS, Ga. (UPI) — Jimmy Carter voted early today for Walter Mondale and his running mate and said he was confident of ousting President Ford from the White House.

"I'm glad the campaign is over. It's been a good one," the Democratic nominee told reporters after casting his ballot at 7:30 a.m., a half hour after the polls opened in a small, white concrete block house.

"I voted for Walter Mondale and his running mate," Carter said, flashing his famous grin. "I feel confident ... I think we have adequately presented myself and Senator Mondale to the American people and I am presently willing to abide by their judgment today."

Carter, accompanied by his wife Rosalynn, son Chip and his wife, Caron, was the 11th voter in Plains — arriving at the polling site at the crack of dawn and wearing only a beige cardigan sweater and slacks despite temperatures near the freezing mark.

curtains of a voting machine. Asked before he entered if he expected to win today, he replied very softly: "yes."

When he stepped back into view, he was smiling broadly and said "Thank you all ... let's get our crowd out now."

Carter then walked a block and a half to the family warehouse office where he went inside and sipped coffee with his brother Billy. Two longtime friends, John and Betty Pope, joined them. Ten minutes later, Carter left for home.

Carter returned to Plains late Monday night after closing his campaign by seeking a last minute surge in Ford's home state of Michigan. He was clearly relaxed and optimistic that he would win his 22-month-long, 500,000-mile battle for the presidency, despite a string of recent setbacks, including the current racial crisis in his home church.

"I'm glad it's over," he said Monday night when he ended his campaign.

Dental, poll visits for Mondale

AFTON, Minn. (UPI) — At the end of nearly three months and some 54,000 miles of campaigning, Sen. Walter Mondale came home early today to a small frame house overlooking his beloved St. Croix River to await an election that could change his life.

Mondale was to vote shortly after 7 a.m. MST in this small town about 35 miles west of Minneapolis. Then the Democratic vice presidential candidate goes to the dentist, his cousin, Dr. Roger Mondale, attends a private staff luncheon, and cloisters himself at home to rest and enjoy his family.

Mondale's wife, Joan, joined her husband late Monday night for his final campaign appearance in Flint, Mich., with Jimmy Carter. His son, Teddy, 18, has been traveling with his father throughout the campaign, helping with the television lights.

The two other Mondale children, Eleanor Jane, 16, and William, 14, were to join their parents this afternoon for a private dinner and an evening watching and waiting to find out whether Mondale will become vice president or remain a U.S. senator.

Mondale's campaign wound up much as it began — at the side of Jimmy Carter, waging an attack on the record-high unemployment and raging inflation he blames on President Ford's economic policies.

He joined Carter in Flint for a wild Democratic rally in a labor auditorium.

Mondale, clearly thrilled by the response of his supporters in Ford's home state, said he was confident Carter can win Michigan and the election and told the crowd the GOP is "praying for apathy" but will be surprised by a large vote turnout.

Earlier in Detroit, Mondale denounced the "human damage" and suffering Ford's insensitivity to unemployment has caused. The two Michigan stops were hurriedly added to Mondale's schedule when polls showed Ford's lead diminishing and Carter with a chance of an upset victory in the state.

Dole ponders active future as VP

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Sen. Robert Dole said early today "if we win the election" it's going to be remarkable.

But the Republican candidate said if he does become vice president, "I'll probably be very active" in trying to broaden the base of the party to include more minorities.

Dole, 53, was going home to Russell, Kan., where it was "Bob Dole Day," to vote at Simpson Elementary School and then fly back to Washington after a 44-state, 62,000-mile campaign.

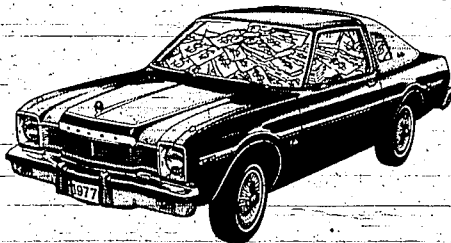

celebration" at Washington's Sheraton-Park Hotel.

In a low key chat before he retired early this morning, Dole assessed his role in the campaign:

"In a positive way I've taken a lot of heat and left the President to be free to be President, to stay in the White House. I've been out on the firing line. I haven't retreated from that."

"The race," he said, "is close enough, and it seems to me if we win it's going to be remarkable. If we lose there'll be a lot of Monday morning quarterbacking. Over all, I'd say it's been a good campaign."

Energy Adviser Mick SoRelle displays a typical insulation batt.

You can save energy AND save on your tax bill by insulating your home.

Idaho law now enables taxpaying homeowners to deduct from taxable income the costs of installing insulation in their residences. The deduction extends to installation of weatherstripping, double pane windows and storm doors.

The law also includes deductions for installation of alternative energy devices — solar, geothermal, wind, etc. — in your own residence.

Check with your accountant or attorney for details on eligibility and potential tax savings.

If you need information on how to go about insulating your home, call your local Idaho Power office and talk to an Energy Adviser. He or she will be glad to help you at no charge.

Win or lose, Ford strategy a 'success'

Inflation remains national problem

Whether President Ford or former Governor Jimmy Carter is elected to the presidency today, the winner of this year's election will realize after the first flush of victory, that he will have to cope for his four years in office with our principal economic problem—inflation.

For while unemployment is a serious national problem, inflation is not discriminate in those who bear its burden. It is felt by everyone, employed or unemployed. It is not only a threat to the retired, or fixed-income person, it also is a burden to the family where the husband works but sees his pay wither under inflationary trends.

We are indebted to John O'Riley, writing in the Wall Street Journal a tabulation of the rise in inflation in the country as reflected in the Consumer Price Index (CPI) since the year 1948; and for his comments on what is an acceptable degree of inflation.

The high point of our somewhat abated inflation acceleration came in December 1974 when the CPI registered an inflation rate of 12.2 per cent against the same month in the previous year.

In August of this year the CPI showed an inflation rate of 5.6 per cent which is gratifying since it indicates that the rate has decelerated by a little more than half.

However, while this is encouraging it does not mean that an inflationary rate of 5.6 per cent is an acceptable one when viewed in the light of the rates which were shown in the years before 1966.

As Mr. Riley points out in the eighteen years from 1948 through 1965 the rate was less than 2 per cent. Hence a 6 per cent is three times as much as the nation has had in the past, if we do not include the Korean War years when the rate rose to 5.8 per cent in 1950 and 5.9 per cent in 1951. In 1952 it dropped back to 0.9 per cent.

In the years 1949 and 1954 the rate showed a decline of 1.8 per cent and 0.5 per cent.

With the exception of those two years the nation has had a small rate of inflation with which it was able to cope fairly well. Our recent inflationary troubles were brought about by the rate of acceleration. We have always had some inflation.

Inflation hits hardest at the ranks of the retired or fixed-income person since he or she has no hopes of getting a pension increase, although cost of living increases have been granted to Social Security recipients.

A pensioner getting $500 per month would find under a 6 per cent of inflation that in five years of increase of the CPI that he would need $656 per month to buy the same things.

The $650 would be needed if we compute the increase simply as 6 per cent x $500 = $30 x 5 years or $150. Actually since CPI figures are computed against previous years, not against a base year, the rate of inflation is compounded. Hence the man starting out with a $500 pension would find that he needed $669 per month to just hold where he was financially.

And, of course the example above applies equally to the earnings of a man still employed. Many have seen wage and salary increase disappear in the inflationary spiral.

Mr. Ford deserves credit for prudent policies which have reduced it to its present level. But the job is not over by any means.

Berry's World

Since you are going to not vote for either candidate, which one will you not vote for more apathetically?

Washington Star - AKRON, Ohio - There can be only one strategy for President Ford's campaign strategy. Whether he wins or loses Tuesday, the strategy was a roaring success.

Trailing Jimmy Carter by a seemingly insurmountable 30-odd percentage points three months ago, Ford approaches election day no more than a few points behind, and should be able to defeat Carter. It would rank as one of the most dramatic comebacks in American political history.

Whatever the outcome, the President deserves little personal credit for the success of the campaign plan. For it was one that relied more on what he didn't do than on what he did.

It was a strategy based on the notion that Ford was an electable candidate in spite of himself, and on the possibility that Carter would make some egregious errors during the campaign.

Ford, of course, has to be given credit for agreeing to a campaign blueprint — and then sticking to it — that was hardly flattering to his view of himself as an able stump performer. But perhaps he, like his chief political advisers, learned a lesson from the nomination fight with Ronald Reagan.

By barnstorming feverishly while Reagan was his opponent, Ford came off "like the wild man from Borneo," said a White House official. "This time," against Carter, it had to be different.

That Ford adhered to the campaign plan almost without exception surprised some of his aides. "I was amazed that the result was the same as the plan," one said. "You don't always see that around here."

The President's strategy against Carter consisted of five elements:

— Keep the candidate tethered to the White House until the final days of the campaign. This was the Rose Garden phase of the plan. By staging controlled — and often contrived — "presidential" events.

— Attempt to make Carter the issue in the campaign and hope that the former Georgia governor will make some boo-boos. And if Carter did flub, the plan was to jump on it.

— Husband your campaign funds for a media blitz in the closing days. Should the President have done so by then, a strong advertising effort would be crucial to the chances of victory.

— Send the President on the road for a few brief trips from mid-August to mid-October but save the heavy personal campaigning for the last two weeks for a final push.

Washington Star - WASHINGTON — If Jimmy Carter wins the election Tuesday, Washington may see many women in the top positions of government next year.

At least, that's what the Democratic presidential candidate has promised Democratic women, and, as of now, many of them say they believe him.

Not everybody does, of course. Women in both parties have heard these glowing campaign promises all too often in the past — only to have them vanish, never to be remembered and honored once the election is over.

Despite the claims and counter claims of both parties, the number of women appointed to top-level jobs has remained remarkably constant, at 2 to 3 per cent, no matter which man or which party controlled the White House.

Only three women have ever headed a cabinet department. Only 18 have ever been ambassadors — and nine of those rose through the career foreign service. No woman has ever served on the U.S. Supreme Court.

Women have fared no better when they face the electorate. Harriet Crippin, the Democratic National Committee's Director of Women's Activities, cites a Library of Congress finding last year that of the 10,651 persons who have served in Congress since it began in 1789, only 94 have been women — 84 in the House and 10 in the Senate. And the great majority of those succeeded a husband who had died. There currently are 19 women in the House and none in the Senate, and the political community does not expect those figures to improve next year.

But the statistics may be different this time.

"I think there's a new day dawning if we win in November, the times are right for it, and Gov. Carter has the commitment," says Joan Tobin, director of the Democratic National Committee's Talent Bank '77, a sophisticated program for seeking out and identifying women with top qualifications, so that their names will be on the list of appointments in the event of a Carter victory.

Tobin and her staff have spent the summer and fall collecting recommendations from many sources, and then inviting the women thus named to fill out resumes if they wish to be considered for an appointment. The names will be fed into a computer which, hopefully, will cough out the right person for the right job.

Tobin expects to have 4,000 to 5,000 women's names ready if and when a victorious President-elect Carter sits down with his aides to pick a cabinet and other top officials. The names also will be available at the national committee for governors, mayors and others. Donoratic offers of looking for qualified women to appoint.

No President has ever before had such a pool of female talent readily available right after an election.

Sargent Shriver, who headed his brother-in-law John F. Kennedy's team that filled cabinet and other top posts, recalls that "we didn't even begin to compile any names until after the election."

When Kennedy and his inner circle began thinking about finding some women, a few weeks after the election, a phone call went from the Kennedy compound in Hyannis, Mass., to the late Margaret Price, then vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee's charge of women's activities, asking her to draw up a list of women she thought should get appointments.

"I remember we stayed up all night putting that list together," recalls Washington writer Natalie Springarn, who then worked with the vice chairman.

Remarkably, a copy of the memorandum

Challenge Carter to a series of nationally televised debates. This was the boldest part of the strategy, but gives Carter's monstrous task it would have been perilous for Ford to avoid a face-to-face confrontation.

The stay-at-home decision was probably the toughest for Ford to make. Though he is a man with fewer ego hang-ups than virtually any other major politician, it is the consensus of his aides that his stump style is less than effective.

In fact, the President's campaign planners had to unanimously flunk in putting this point across to him. When they told him he was breathtakingly "had-on" — the "hustings," he demurred but finally agreed to curb his travel drastically.

What made the Rose Garden phase so effective was the response of the television networks, at whose evening news shows it was filmed.

Because of the networks' concern for providing equal time for each presidential candidate, the Ford strategists figured that even phony events at the White House would be given the same play as Carter's campaign forays.

And they were. In fact, some Ford stories on the evening shows were treated as if the President were carrying out serious business while Carter was devoting himself entirely to tacky campaigning. So mark-up Part 1 of the strategy as a distinct success.

The bid to make Carter the chief issue in the campaign was a carryover from the Carter loss. In those races, the Georgian's opponents focused on the idea that he was fuzzy on the issues, a flip-flopper about whom little was known.

As soon as Ford won the nomination, he and his supporters began zeroing in on this. While vacationing in Vail, Colo., after the Republican convention, the President assembled a group of GOP luminaries who appeared at a press conference to say that Carter's fuzziness was stirring "fear and apprehension" among the voters.

There was another side to the anti-Carter argument: the allegation that Carter was really a big-spending liberal. In Southern conservative's clothing.

Ford, even in the soft-hitting language used in his White House appearances, tried to drive this point home, as did the numerous cabinet and GOP officials who stamped for him.

Finally, the Ford campaign focused on Carter's inexperience in handling foreign affairs and his stand that the defense budget could be cut. Public opinion surveys conducted by Ford pollsters indicated that these were vulnerable areas for the Democrat.

But more important than what the Ford campaign did was the fact that Carter made the blunders eagerly awaited by the President's camp, and they came on top of each other.

First, there was an interview in which Carter indicated he favored raising the taxes of any citizen earning the median income or more. Then, there was the Playboy interview in which he discussed sin and lust in a fashion not normally associated with presidents or presidential candidates.

Since both the stay-at-home and Carter-is-the-issue elements of the strategy worked adequately, the Ford campaign was primed for a closing advertising effort. While Carter spent a good deal on early TV plugs, the Ford campaign saved its money for a final blitz.

As part of the strategy's focus on the eight states with the largest number of electoral votes, a special series of 30-minute commercials was tailored for them.

In these spots, Sen. Joe Garagiola acted the role of confused taxpayer and questioned Ford on the issues. Naturally, Garagiola wound up utterly convinced by the President's responses, and the half-hour spots amounted to the high point of the advertising drive.

In his fondest dreams, Ford's political advisers might have envisioned a campaign in which the President never made a stump speech. Obviously they couldn't have that.

At the very least the President had to show the flag and put down Carter's charge that he was "hiding" in the White House. He made a few trips, including a steamboat swing down the Mississippi River, and his criticism of Carter was usually tame, just as his advisers had ordered.

It was only on a whistle-stop train tour across Illinois three weeks ago that Ford got strident. He did so then against the advice of his aides and in response to equally tough allegations by Carter.

For the final 30 days of the campaign the President devoted himself to full-blown campaigning, notably in the more populous states. Significantly, he utilized a set speech which he delivered far better than his cherished off-the-cuff remarks.

Allowing Ford to speak spontaneously represents a serious risk. But he can ordinarily get through a talk focusing on several precise points without too much damage.

It takes a great amount of work for the President to be able to give a rousing speech. He came up with one in his acceptance of the GOP nomination at Kansas City, and that gave his campaign a boost.

White House speechwriters, not the best group of writers ever assembled, labored for weeks on that one, and Ford spent hours practicing it in front of a camera. But there isn't time for that often during the heat of a campaign.

As a result, Ford stuck to a few "talking points" during his barnstorming trip. His attacks on Carter were muted, he made no fatal mistakes and thus he has been reasonably "presidential."

If there was a surprise in the campaign for Ford's strategists, it was that the debates turned out as poorly for the President as they did.

Ford, they expected, would be forced and certainly quicker on his feet than he was. The debates could not be duced, but ultimately they may be what kept the Ford comeback from succeeding.

The second debate, the key one, came at a bad time for Ford, and he made matters worse by his disastrous performance, particularly with the faux pas on Eastern Europe.

He was almost unsettled by the Earl Butz affair, the Watergate prosecutor's investigation of his campaign finances in congressional races, and John Dean's charge that he acted under Richard Nixon's orders in seeking to quash an early House probe of the Watergate break-in.

All this created about 10 days of what some Ford aides refer to as "down times." Seeking to come from so far behind, Ford may not have been able to sustain such a hiatus in his campaign drive and still win.

In the end, it was Carter's campaign to win or lose. The beauty of the Ford strategy, devised mostly by deputy campaign manager Stuart Spencer, was that it recognized this and was adjusted to it.

Except for the debates, the risks were kept to a minimum, and Carter was given plenty of room to stumble on his own.

Now you know

By United Press International - The hat of a newly deceased cardinal is hung on a high-up peg in his cathedral and stays there until it falls down.

Women may join Carter administration taken to Kennedy's plane in early December, 1960, still is on file at Democratic headquarters. It contains the names of 29 women.

Things definitely improved for women under Lyndon Johnson. Very early in his presidency he pledged to name 50 women to top jobs within a month.

He told his cabinet officers and agency heads it had to be done. The bureaucracy moved. Johnson got 50 top women, and hundreds of other women were promoted.

But at that point, the Vietnam War heated up, and increasingly pre-empted Johnson's attention.

That was the end of advancement for women until the third year of the Nixon administration, when private soundings by the White House revealed that Nixon had a very bad image with women.

Barbara Franklin was promptly hired to search out women for top jobs. She found a good many women for Nixon to name.

But then along came Watergate. Nixon, like Johnson, became preoccupied with his problems, and the program ground to a halt.

When Nixon resigned, the computerized talent bank of women was removed from the White House with Nixon's other papers — where they still sit enmeshed in legal red tape.

The Ford administration had to start over from scratch, and the subject has never seemed to be one of Ford's priorities.

Why do the Carter women think it could be different this time, if their man wins? And what does "different" mean? How many women would be named to the cabinet, and to ambassadorships, for instance?

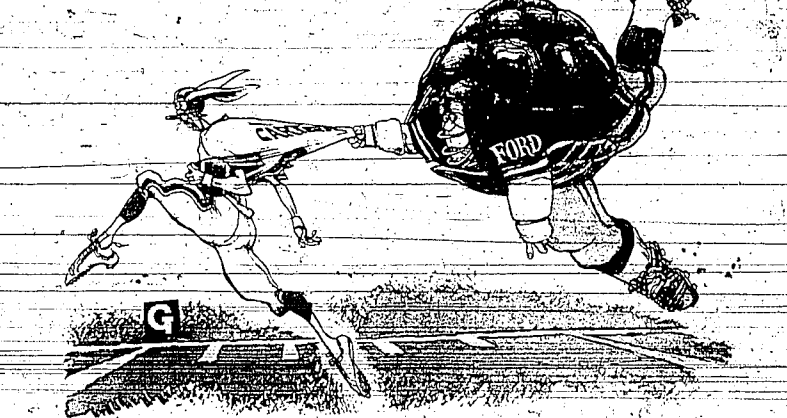

Joan Tobin says that is beyond her area of responsibility. She has only been asked to compile the lists, and she is concentrating first on the top 200 jobs.

Barbara Blum, who as deputy campaign director is the top woman in the Carter campaign, says there definitely will be women in the group that sits down with the president-elect to fill the top jobs. Carter won't promise any specific number of appointments, she says, because he believes that would amount to setting "quotas," of which he disapproves.

He wouldn't promise how many women he'd name to the top-level Democratic National Committee steering committee, for the same reason, Blum notes. "But now that it's named, you'll notice it has 25 men and 25 women!"

The very existence of Talent Bank '77 will serve as somewhat of a pro-40-to-the candidate to keep his promises to women, many believe.

Federal paperwork commission set up

NEW YORK — When the Commission on Federal Paperwork held hearings in here recently, one witness arrived trailing a 45-foot-long string of forms. These represented a year's paperwork on one child in the program for aid to dependent families.

In a year when Americans have been showing, with every ballot they cast, how fed up they are with red tape, the cost and the interfering ways of the federal bureaucracy, filling out government forms is probably the chore that brings all these irritations to a head.

Americans spend some 128 million hours a year filling in forms from the federal government alone — in addition to tax returns. This is only about an hour for each adult, but the misery is not shared out equally.

Many forms overlap. The Department of Health, Education and Welfare takes the prize with 818 different forms—the Department of Agriculture comes a close second with 639.

The chairman of Pili Lilly, a leading pharmaceutical firm, has told the commission that his company fills out 27,000 forms or reports every year at a cost of $5 million. The president of a drug firm says he spends $10 million a year. A single application for permission to sell a new drug for arthritis ran to 120,000 pages.

The Paperwork Commission was set up in 1974 by Congress and has President Ford's eager support. A year ago he ordered federal agencies to reduce by 10 per cent the number of standard forms in regular use. They managed to go one better and cut them by 12.5 per cent — to 4,500. The time spent by those who fill in forms went up, not down.

Now the President wants a 7 million hour reduction in the time Americans spend on form-filling and a further 20 million hour drop by the end of 1978.

In a President-Ford asked the 20 largest departments and agencies to take prompt steps to improve their ways of reaching decisions and carrying them out. Progress reports were required to show how much business. More paperwork?

Jimmy Carter promises. If he is elected, vast administrative reforms designed not so much to save money as to make the bureaucracy more effective. Good luck to him. He would not be the only president to have tried. President Nixon put this cause high on his list of goals.

And it is salutary to remember the work of the commission headed by former President Herbert Hoover that was set up by Congress in 1955 to cut big government down to size. Those were the days when federal spending had risen to a horrifying $75 billion a year. Today it is over $400 billion.

But there were nearly as many federal employees then as there are today — 2.3 million. In 1955, before the computer, paperwork costs touched $4 billion.

FTC probes test frauds

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Trade Commission today launched an investigation to find out if companies that offer millions of high school students crash courses for college entrance tests are defrauding the public.

The agency said it wants to know if such operations really can increase students' test scores, and if so whether the amount of increase is as great as advertised.

There are more than 2.5 million new admissions to colleges each year, and most schools require some kind of entrance test. The most common is the Standard Aptitude Test or "SAT," administered by the College Entrance Examination Board, usually during the student's junior or senior year in high school. A board spokesman said 1.4 million students take its test every year, but the organization opposes outside tutoring to help students face the exam.

"We do not recommend coaching schools because we feel that the SAT measures verbal and mathematical abilities — not achievements — that have been developed over a lifetime," the organization said. "Any two-week crash course is not the kind of thing that's going to affect the performance on the test."

In announcing the investigation the FTC said it was not prejudging the coaching industry, but making the probe public as part of its standard policy. The investigation is aimed, it said, at determining whether the operators of coaching services "are engaged in unfair or deceptive acts or practices."

The board said studies made in 1968 indicate coaching will yield only "insignificant increases in scores." It said one student in 15 will find that his score increases by 100 points or more between his junior and senior years, regardless of whether he is coached, and tutors sometimes "wrongly point to those particular students as proof that outside help was valuable."

"Among those from whom information may be sought in this investigation are operators of test preparation centers, review courses or tutoring centers, writers, educators, statisticians, psychologists and consumers," the FTC said.

Church incident fuss boiling on

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The President's Commission sent some 400 telegrams to black ministers, seeking to exploit politically Sunday's closure of Jimmy Carter's Baptist church in Plains, Ga., rather than admit a black as a member.

The telegram, signed by Ford Campaign Chairman James Baker, suggested that if Carter could not manage the affairs of his own church, he could not be expected to manage national issues and Congress.

Norman Dinkins, national director of the Ford Commission's "black desk," said the telegram was "sent in response to a number of calls we got about why the church was closed."

Dinkins said that although the Plains incident "is a racial attempt" to "obviously" "embarrass the man... the simple thing to do was to have the man come into church."

He said the telegram also was a "response to a number of ministers who were quite enraged and wanted to know if this is true," Dinkins said. In the incident, the church deacons cancelled services on learning that a black minister — a Republican who is not a Baptist and does not live in Plains — would seek church membership.

Carter said he did not participate in the deacons' decision and again pointed to his 1965 vote to integrate the church.

One black minister who received one of the telegrams, the Rev. Alfred M. Waller, pastor of Shiloh Baptist Church in Cleveland, Ohio, said sending the telegram to "so many black ministers in the Cleveland area to me seems to be a conclusive evidence that this whole episode is designed to embarrass Mr. Carter."

"I think it is obvious that they (those behind the church) are part of the conspiracy," he said. Waller said he teaches a class of 50 black ministers and most of them also received the telegram.

Carter headquarters in Atlanta said there was evidence the telegrams and the incident were coordinated since some of the telegrams appeared to be timed off prior to the appearance on news service wires of stories about the incident.

But Matt Patton, chairman of Carter's Georgia campaign, said it was "absolutely false" that the President Ford Committee sent the telegrams prior to the publication of the story. "He said there was 'no evidence' of the incident and the subsequent telegrams were coordinated."

Overseas vote rule relaxed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Americans living in foreign countries find it easier to vote this year than ever before because of absentee voting laws which became effective Jan. 2 this year.

But just how many will vote is unlikely to be known until next year.

The legislation, the Overseas Citizens Voting Rights Act of 1975, directed the 50 states to accept as eligible to vote former residents living abroad or those temporarily absent who meet certain limited qualifications of the states concerned.

The act obliges the states to provide voters with application forms for registration as well as instructions for mailing absentee votes to their county boards of elections. The Special Consular Services section of the State Department in January distributed instructions for registration and voting for citizens to embassies and consulates abroad.

"We will be conducting a survey to see how the act worked, but we do not expect to have the results before May," the spokesman said.

Site change on ballot

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (UPI) — Alaskans were asked to decide on a new site for their state capital today.

The voters were selecting from among three alternative sites. The present capital, Juneau, is so far removed from the state's core that it's in a different time zone and is accessible only by air and sea.

Opponents to the move said they did not want an instant city destroying Alaska's interior and question spending money to build an entire town. They suggested voting for inaccessible Mt. Yenlo, claiming they could tie up the choice in court and thus quash the move.

But most observers predict that Willow South, 70 miles from Anchorage, will get the nod.

No damage

RIALTO, Calif. (UPI) — A small earthquake shook this Southern California town Monday evening but did no apparent damage.

Residents described the tremor as "a very sharp jolt" lasting about two seconds.

Seismologists at Caltech in Pasadena, Calif., said the quake registered a mild 3.2 on the Richter scale at 6:46 p.m. local time with an epicenter midway between Rialto and San Bernardino, about 5 miles to the north.

Seniority rules before US court

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A stewardess fired under Air Lines' new "no marriage" rule is generating a Supreme Court contest over whether her previous service should be counted for seniority when she is rehired.

The Chicago case is one of many now in federal courts dealing with what kind of, if any, should be made in an employee seniority system because of race or sex discrimination forbidden by the 1964 Civil Rights Act.

In the case of the stewardess, Carolyn J. Evans, the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled that United repeated discrimination stemming from prior discrimination by counting her seniority from the date of rehiring. It ordered a trial of her complaint, which had earlier been thrown out.

The Supreme Court said Monday it will consider United's appeal.

The justices did not act on a New York case where seniority was ordered for minorities who never applied for work if they can show they were discouraged by discriminatory examinations for supervisory jobs in New York City's public school system.

In other actions the court: — Agreed in a New York case to decide whether a state may constitutionally deny scholarships or college loans to resident aliens who refuse to seek U.S. citizenship.

— Let stand the 1975 conspiracy-battery convictions of former Oklahoma Gov. David Hall and W. W. (Doc) Taylor, a Dallas financier.

Puerto Rico turnout 87%

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (UPI) — Election officials estimated about 1.5 million Puerto Ricans will cast ballots today — about 87 per cent of the registered electorate.

At stake in this year's elections are the island's governorship, a full legislature and municipal governments in 75 towns and cities.

Despite polls, which gave incumbent Popular Democratic party Gov. Rafael Hernandez Colon a comfortable four to seven percentage point edge as recently as three weeks ago, most experts predicted a dogfight between the incumbent and San Juan Mayor Carlos Romero Barcelo, a pro-statehood candidate of the New Progressive party.

Threat to water supply evaporates

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — An anonymous caller who threatened to dump 1,000 gallons of heating oil into the city's water supply unless he received $1 million in ransom money didn't carry out his threat, Water Department officials said today.

City officials and representatives of the Philadelphia Water Department reported no contamination of the water tested from fire hydrants early today.

"The threat is something you always worry about," said Water Commissioner Carmen Guarino. "But all it would do is dirty up the pipes. Health officials say that it would only cause nausea."

But the city's five reservoirs and 18 water treatment plants were under heavy security guard.

"It would be difficult to put anything into the system without us finding out about it," Guarino said Monday night. "It would be hard for anything of that magnitude to get away."

City Managing Director Hillel Levinson said the caller's instructions delivered on tape and discovered Monday morning by an employee in a City Hall record room, were followed.

MORE than 5,000 job seekers tried to jam their way into the personnel offices at the Cadillac auto plant Monday looking for jobs that were not advertised and are not even available. The out-of-work Detroiters began lining up before 4 a.m. at the plant on Detroit's southwest side whose unemployment rate, at nearly 10 per cent, is among the highest in the nation. (UPI)

Job seekers

Job seekers turned away

DETROIT (UPI) — They came by the thousands and waited in the pre-dawn darkness just on the word that there might be jobs. But there were no jobs — at least not now. All most of them got were applications. By mid-morning Monday, the crush of more than 5,000 job seekers brought police and closed the personnel office at the Cadillac auto assembly plant. There was some pushing and shoving, a few fights, but no serious injuries. "President Ford should be down here to look at this line," one young woman said. "He says unemployment is going down, but it sure doesn't look like it here." United Auto Workers Vice President Douglas A. Fraser said the incident at Cadillac was a good example of Ford administration policies not working. With the city's unemployment rate hovering near 10 per cent — among the highest in the nation — out-of-work Detroiters began lining up at the plant before 4 a.m. Monday after hearing from friends that Cadillac was hiring. All the automaker was doing was taking applications for its files because sporadic hiring since summer had used up all the job applicants. "I was here before 4 a.m. waiting in line," said Cecilia Thomas, 24, who has been out of work more than two years. "I got an application to fill out but there were so many people that I left." "I'll probably mail it in," she said. "But it really doesn't look that good for a job, does it?"

The crush of job seekers at Cadillac was a repeat of what occurred at a Pontiac Motor plant earlier this year and at a temporary office set up to hire employees for the new Detroit Plaza hotel, slated to open next spring in the huge riverfront Renaissance Center. Surprised Cadillac officials said the only word about the job applications was in notices posted on the bulletin boards in the plant. They said anyone interested in a job should apply by mail.

Markov presents recital

NEW YORK (UPI) — Albert Markov, a violin soloist with the Moscow State Orchestra who emigrated to the United States last year, made an auspicious American recital debut Monday night at Lincoln Center.

An enthusiastic audience at Alice Tully Hall gave Markov, 43, a standing ovation at the close of his scheduled program and was rewarded with numerous encores. He displayed virtuoso technique in Prokofiev, Schumann and Paganini showpieces together with considerable emotional intensity, crisp attack and a romantic approach to melody. Further appearances with symphony orchestras and on the concert circuit will determine whether he will take his place among the first rank of international violinists. He has excited curiosity and anticipation in musical circles since he won acclaim in an appearance with the Houston Symphony last May.

Bishop undecided

DETROIT (UPI) — Romanian Orthodox Archbishop Valerian Trifa, facing federal charges he participated in Nazi war crimes and the slayings of an estimated 10,000 persons, says he has not decided how to respond to a request in the resign from the National Council of Churches governing board. The council's executive committee, at a special meeting in Chicago Saturday, called on Trifa to step down after deciding it was "spiritually impossible" to suspend or remove him. Trifa, 72, of Grass Valley, Mich., is head of the Romanian Orthodox Episcopate of America and is one of the six Orthodox Church of America delegates to the governing board of the inter-faith group of churches.

not allow him to bring his violin with him and the 1794 Cremona instrument he used for his recital debut was the gift of an American admirer. The violinist decided to leave Russia because, as a Jew, he felt he had been prevented from playing outside Eastern Europe and performing the works of some 20th Century composers. As a gesture of gratitude to his adopted country, Markov performed Monday a fantasia he composed incorporating melodies from Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess." Markov, already making records on the Musical Heritage label to be released in 1977, will teach at the Mannes College of Music in New York and Yale University and will write a book for violin students.

Judge wants cocaine test

BOSTON (UPI) — A judge presiding over a cocaine possession trial says he wants to take the drug, under medical supervision, to determine if it is as harmful as Massachusetts laws say. Judge Elwood McKenney of Roxbury District Court said Monday he wants to try cocaine under controlled conditions because the prosecution had not presented evidence convincing him it's addictive. The defense in the case is challenging the constitutionality of the state's 65-year anticocaine law. "My wanting to do this is similar to a judge visiting the scene of a crime or viewing a movie to determine if it is nonaddictive and harmless." "I said that I would consent to being part of a controlled medical experiment — like at Harvard Medical School," McKenney said. "They (defense) are working out whatever details would be necessary for me to get through with it." Richard Miller, a 36-year-old father of two children who has no prior criminal record, was arrested last June 28 for possession of 520 worth of the drug. The two-week trial ended Monday with the defense resting and the prosecution presenting no evidence to

Ship in contact with adventurer

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (UPI) — A West German cargo ship made radio contact today with a 23-year-old American adventurer drifting alone for 19 days in the Atlantic aboard a damaged sailboat. A Coast Guard spokesman said the Hagen, a 340-foot West German freighter, established voice contact with Robert Galner at 12:21 a.m. (9:21 p.m. MST Monday). "For the next hour the two ships gave long counts, counting backwards from 100 in order to get a bearing on their radio signals," the spokesman said. Both craft fired several rockets, but the Hagen said it could not see the flares because it was caught in a tropical rain squall.

After the brief contact, the freighter, searching the Atlantic 600 miles east of Puerto Rico and to the southeast of the area known as the Bermuda Triangle, turned west trying to fix the position of the sloop, the Boodles Giny. "These things take time," the spokesman said. Galner, with 200 days' supply of food, 35 gallons of water and several back-up radios, was "in no immediate danger," the spokesman said. The Hillsdale, N.J.-resident left New York Oct. 2 in a bid to become the first American to circle the globe alone in a sloop.

On Oct. 13, Galner reported to his sponsors that he had engine and hull damage, then the sloop was believed to have vanished into the Bermuda Triangle, a section of the Atlantic where numerous ships and aircraft have disappeared.

Three to face kidnap charge

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Two men and a woman were ordered Monday to appear for arraignment Nov. 15 on charges of kidnaping influential pop music figure Lou Adler, president of Ode Records. Adler, who discovered "The Mamas and the Papas" and other popular rock groups, and an aide, Neil Silver, were kidnaped from Adler's Malibu home Sept. 1 and released the next day after payment of a $25,000 ransom. Charged with kidnaping, robbery and conspiracy were Zoltan Kakash, 38; Sandra Nagay, 38; and Veronica Franovich, 26.

Lebanon peace key goal

BEIRUT (UPI) — United States today began contacts with rival factions in an effort to help end Lebanon's 1 1/2-year war. President Elias Aoun readied a timetable for the employment of an Arab peacekeeping force.

Quiet returned to the battlefronts after an outbreak of fighting Monday that had further strained the 13-year-old cease-fire.

U.S. Charge of Affairs Robert Lane met with leftist leader Kamal Jumblatt in an effort to help the drive to end a year-and-a-half old war that has torn the country apart and killed at least 50,000 persons.

American diplomatic efforts have been limited by security precautions since the murder of U.S. Ambassador Francis E. Meloy in July.

Arab League special envoy Hassan Sabry El Kholy met with rightist leaders in east Beirut to discuss implementation of the peace plan.

On Monday, former Jordanian Prime Minister Zaid Rifai met rightist chiefs in what Beirut newspapers characterized as an attempt to reassure the rightists about the stationing of troops from the proposed 30,000-man Arab peace-keeping force in areas they control.

Fresh contingents for the force were expected before Thursday after which Sarkis planned to begin implementing the Arab peace plan.

Sarkis' objective was withdrawal of all factions from confrontation lines, followed by reopening of highways and positioning of the Arab force between the rival groups.

An important obstacle to the plan has been rightist reservations about letting the Arab forces into areas they control.

Phalangist leader Pierre Gemayel said after a meeting of right-wing leaders Monday night. "We did not look into this subject, but we are keeping it in mind."

The rightists have declared they intend to maintain security with local police in sectors they control and see the role of the Arab force as essentially a buffer to be stationed at key points between the rival sides rather than inside their territory.

But Kholy said the force has "the right to go anywhere."

In turn Jumblatt said Monday. "The Arab peace troops must be allowed to enter the isolationist-held (rightist) areas before President Sarkis even thinks of sending them to nationalist (leftist) areas. This is because the Syrian army has occupied large areas of our nationalist territories and now it is the turn of the isolationists."

On Monday, fighting with rockets, mortars and machine guns sent civilians scurrying from the streets in both east and west Beirut.

Beirut Radio reported at least 12 dead and 27 wounded.

Leftists engaged in sniping and artillery duels with rightists along the "green line" that divides Beirut, sending civilians running from the streets of the capital. The line has been impassable for two days.

IVOR RICHARD... talks going well

Date for independence of Rhodesia first goal

GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI) — Rhodesia conference chairman Ivor Richard says he will call together a delegation heads for informal talks as a first step in fixing a firm date for black majority rule.

After a weekend of separate discussions with delegates, Richard said Monday he was convinced it would be worthwhile to try setting a date for independence before trying to solve the other problems such as the nature of an interim government.

Richard, Britain's ambassador to the United Nations, announced he was calling the heads of delegations together for "informal, restricted" talks.

The time of the meeting was not immediately disclosed.

But Prime Minister Ian Smith, complaining he had "nothing to do here," said he will return to Rhodesia this week, probably Wednesday, "because I've got more problems at home than I do here."

He would not say if these problems included a recent flareup of fighting along the Rhodesian-Mozambique frontier.

Smith told reporters he was not surprised about the fighting because black leaders already had announced they will step up the guerrilla war to support the aims they seek at the conference table. Smith said he hoped Rhodesian security forces will "mete-out just retribution."

Asked whether he thought the Rhodesia conference would succeed — Smith was leaving two ministers and a full delegation in his absence — the premier said, "It is a high-guess at the moment."

The establishment of a date for independence was one of the few areas on which all the sides just might be able to agree. All four black delegations say they want majority rule within a year.

A "patriotic front" of relative moderates and hardliners proposed Sept. 1, 1977. Smith said earlier he was prepared to reduce the period of interim government from the two years envisaged in the peace package put forward by Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

But Smith insisted he will not budge from other basic points of the package, which the blacks unanimously reject. These included a two-year interim government in which the white minority would retain control of the police and army.

Kissinger's deputy, Assistant Secretary of State for African Affairs William Schaefele, met with Smith Monday but refused all comment on the encounter.

Military rules Burundi

KINSHASA, Zaire (UPI) — bloodless military coup has thrown the 10-year regime of President Michel Micombero in the tiny, landlocked African nation of Burundi, radio broadcasts said today.

The Burundi broadcasts, onitored in neighboring Zaire, said the coup was fired off Monday by a group of army officers led by Lt. Col. of Bagaza, who took over as chief of state.

Bagaza was known outside Burundi as one of the top leaders of the Burundi army.

Reports reaching Kinshasa from the Burundi capital of Bujumbura said all the ministers in Micombero's cabinet, all the members of the executive council of Burundi's sole-political party, and the armed forces chief of staff had been ousted from their posts.

There were no immediate reports on the fate of Micombero or his ministers.

but the reports said the coup was bloodless.

All telephone and cable communications between Burundi and the outside world were cut. The new regime imposed a curfew.

The communiqué accused the ousted Micombero — 36 of taking too much personal power, and said Burundi's economic and political situation had been permitted "to go adrift, pulled in all directions by multiple elites and selfish politicians, greedy for personal power and material goods."

It placed administration of the nation in the hands of the "directors-general of the various ministries."

Micombero, a former police officer who held the military rank of general, had ruled Burundi through his National Council of the Revolution since Nov. 28, 1966, when he overthrew 19-year-old King Mwami Ntare V.

Burundi, situated between Rwanda, Tanzania and Zaire, is one of Africa's most populous nations with a population of about 3.5 million people packed into less than 11,000 square miles.

Salisbury, Rhodesia (UPI) — Rhodesian commando forces supported by warplanes and helicopter gunships have destroyed several guerrilla training bases and killed several hundred guerrillas in Mozambique, the Rhodesian news agency IANA said today.

The agency, quoting security sources, said the troops — both black and white — returned to their bases in Rhodesia today after their two-day "hot pursuit" raid into Mozambique.

They launched their attacks on the Mozambique bases, within about 50 miles of the Rhodesian frontier, using armored cars, cavalry, helicopter gunships and jet strike aircraft the sources said.

On Sunday a government spokesman said security forces had crossed into Mozambique in a "hot pursuit" operation "in the interests of the country... in accordance with accepted international practice" — following a buildup of guerrilla forces in the border area.

The Mozambique government has called the raid an "invasion" and said "heavy fighting" took place Monday in the Northwestern province of Tete and the Gaza province in Southern Mozambique.

In London, the Foreign Office said today Britain does not recognize the right of "hot pursuit" by armed forces across international frontiers.

"Our position is that there should be no hot pursuit. We do not recognize the right of hot pursuit across international frontiers, nor is it recognized in international law," a Foreign Office spokesman said.

Plane falls

TOKYO (UPI) — A U.S. C-1 transport plane crashed on landing at the American Air Support Naval Base on the western outskirts of Tokyo today, killing six servicemen aboard, naval authorities reported.

The plane was making an approach for landing when it veered out of control at 1:30 p.m. (9:30 p.m. MST Monday).

The names of the victims were not announced pending notification of their families.

Carter 'abhors' church's ruling

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — Jimmy Carter, trailing for the first time in a national poll, said Monday he abhors his church's decision to bar blacks and will keep trying to remove "that last vestige of racial discrimination."

Predicting victory on Tuesday, Carter campaigned in Sacramento, Calif., where he began his quest for the presidency 23 months ago, before flying to Michigan for an election eve rally in President Ford's home state.

Carter called a morning news conference to discuss the decision by deacons at the Plains, Ga., Baptist Church to cancel services Sunday rather than allow a black minister who had applied for membership to attend.

"I can't resign from the human race because of discrimination. I can't resign as an American citizen," Carter said. "I don't intend to resign from my own church because of discrimination."

"I think my best approach is to stay within the church and try to change an attitude which I abhor ... (and) eliminate that last vestige of racial discrimination."

Hitler scores

MUNICH, West Germany (UPI) — A watercolor painted by Nazi Fuehrer Adolf Hitler in 1916 was sold for $3,330 Saturday at an auction. A silverware set formerly owned by Hermann Goerring, head of Hitler's Luftwaffe, brought $2,340.

The Hitler painting "Stadt an einem Fluss (City at a River)" was bought by a German art collector.

A spokesman for the Count Klenau auction house described demand for relics from Germany's Nazi past as "very good."

Idaho case slated

BOISE (UPI) — The United States Supreme Court is expected to hear arguments Nov. 8 concerning Idaho's right to a vote in setting fishing regulations for fish produced in Idaho waters.

The Department of Fish and Game said the court will decide if Idaho has the right to sue for a voting membership in the Columbia River Compact, the regulatory body that sets both sport and commercial fishing regulations on fish in the Columbia River. Part of the fish are produced in Idaho waters.

The compact was formed nearly 20 years ago and Idaho has had only an advisory role in setting downriver regulations, the department said.

Idaho Atty. Gen. Wayne Kidwell will present the state's case.

Helsinki monitors hit blockade

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Soviet Union and the State Department have joined in throwing up roadblocks to a congressionally mandated commission for monitoring compliance with the East-West-Helsinki Accord, a commission member said Monday.

The source said the 15-member commission, now preparing for its first fact-finding trip, has received "strong indications" the governments of Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union will not allow the panel to enter.

The commission official, who asked not to be identified, said the three members of the executive branch who serve as commissioners on the panel also have been instructed by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger to journey only to Brussels and not to attempt to enter the communist countries.

Rep. Dante Fascell, D-Fla., chairman of the commission, in a statement in Miami called Kissinger's decision "a deeply regrettable last-minute policy reversal."

The panel was created to monitor Soviet and East European compliance with the agreements of the 1975 Helsinki summit meeting which call for such Western goals as increased emigration from the U.S.S.R. and Eastern Europe and better East-West communication and exchange of information.

The Helsinki conference also achieved a primary aim of European communist governments by giving Western recognition to existing European boundaries and asserting they must not be changed by force.

Ring cracked

ROME (UPI) — Police said Saturday they have cracked a ring which counterfeited hundreds of paintings by contemporary Italian artists.

They said a raid on a Florence home netted 225 paintings falsely attributed to artists Giorgio De Chirico, Renato Guttuso and others, with forged notarized identification attached.

Police arrested the apartment's owner, Umberto Lombardi, 51, and said they were looking for other members of the ring.

Mailing discarded

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Undelivered campaign mail has been found in discarded bins at the main post office in Portland, a newspaper reported today. The Oregonian, "D-Ore," said he is asking for a full scale investigation.

The newspaper, the Oregonian, quoted Rod Adams, a janitor at the central post office, as saying he had seen large quantities of campaign literature destroyed.

Portland Postmaster Benjamin Luscher went to the post office Sunday night but said he did not know whether deliverable mail had been destroyed. He said some campaign material was found with discarded mail and was to be returned to postal stations for delivery Monday.

Christian Arabs volunteer

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — Dozens of Christian Arabs living in Israel have volunteered to join the Jewish state's army in gratitude for Israeli military aid to Lebanese Christians, a senior government official said Monday.

The Israeli armed forces drafts Jewish men and women, and Arab men of the non-Muslim Druze religious sect. The armed forces also accept volunteers from the nomadic Arab Bedouins.

Shimon Tolson, the prime minister's minority affairs adviser, said the Arabs have made their requests informally to members of parliament, the cabinet and the army.

The decision whether to accept the Arab requests will be made by the Defense Ministry, Tolson said. "But we welcome their interest and readiness to join the army."

On Thursday, November 4, 1976, the United States Information Agency will offer the public a free copy of the book "The Arab World: A Guide to the Middle East" by the late Dr. Yehuda D. Ben-Zur. The book is available in paperback and hardcover. It is a comprehensive guide to the Arab world, covering its history, culture, and politics. ## Workshop scheduled

WALLA WALLA, Wash. (UPI) — The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers announced today a workshop in Boise Nov. 18 for public review and comment on findings of flood damage reduction aspects of the Boise Regional Water Management Study.

Engineers said the main focus will be on flood damage reduction on the Boise River, although flood damage reduction possibilities in the Boise foothills and at Caldwell also would be considered.

Sponsors of the workshop — Ada Council of Governments, Canyon Development Council and the Army Engineers — hope to obtain public input to the study to allow for submission of a final report in early 1977.

Wreck found

ST. GEORGE, Utah (UPI) — Deer hunters stumbled on the wreckage of a light plane and the skeletal remains of two men believed missing for six to 18 years, Washington County Sheriff Evan Whitehead, said hunters found the plane Sunday in Grass Valley about 25 miles north of here in the Dixie National Forest.

Whitehead and two deputies were bringing out the remains of the two men and searching records to determine when the plane crashed and who it was carrying.

Flu serum key missing

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The swine flu vaccine may be ineffective because the serum is missing an important ingredient, says a former government microbiologist who claims he was fired for opposing the inoculation drive.

Dr. J. Anthony Morris, 57, who was fired last July from his job with the Food and Drug Administration, said a protein called neuraminidase is lacking in the millions of doses now being distributed nationwide.

FDA Commissioner Alexander M. Schmidt said he based Morris' firing on grounds of "insubordination" and "inefficiency." But Morris said it was his opposition to the swine flu program that got him in trouble. He is suing to regain his job.

"The vaccine isn't going to protect people," Morris said. "It elicits the wrong kind of antibody."

But, Morris added, "I don't expect a swine flu epidemic in the first place."

He based his prediction on the fact that the virus has not been detected since it was isolated last winter from several Army recruits at Ft.

Dix, N.J.

Morris explained that flu vaccines should contain two important proteins, both of which occur on the outer coat of influenza viruses. He said neuraminidase protein is the most important of the two because it blocks the virus' spread to the respiratory tract.

Morris said the missing ingredient "was found last July only after millions of doses already had been manufactured" and after the federal government was committed to a mass inoculation program.

Idaho bridge damage rising

LEWISTON, Idaho (UPI) — A marked increase in bridge damage this year resulting from river height loads was reported today by the Idaho Division of Highways.

District Engineer Marvin Lotspech, Lewiston, reported the Koskia bridge, with a clearance of 14-feet-3 inches, has been "six times since" secondary and the Mount Idaho bridge on State Highway 14 has been damaged twice in the same period.

Lotspech said the department has leveled a damage bill amounting to more than $3,000 on the bridges as a result of those collisions.

Although the frequency and cost figures are higher than normal, Lotspech said, the real danger is if a serious enough collision occurred it may be necessary to close or restrict traffic on these structures.

He said anyone hauling over height or overweight loads which result in damage is liable for the repairs.

Lotspech also reported construction activities were beginning on U.S. 12 in the vicinity of Lowell. He said large-pipe and culvert installations were being made this fall to improve highway drainage to facilitate the 26.3 mile "asphalt" overlay scheduled early next year.

Poe Asphalt of Lewiston is the prime contractor on the $1,156,199 project.

Appearance called off by singer

HENO, Nev. (UPI) — A report that country singer Merle Haggard was dead touched off a 12-hour search in Northern Nevada Sunday, but he telephoned a local hotel later to report he was cancelling a scheduled appearance.

Haggard missed appearances in Denver and Salt Lake City Friday and Saturday. Sunday authorities in Winnemucca and Battle Mountain received a message that the Utah Highway Patrol received an anonymous report Haggard was dead.

"Merle Haggard's body is in a gully eight miles west of Battle Mountain," a woman telephoned the Salt Palace concert center where he was to appear Saturday night.

About a dozen sheriff's officers, two highway troopers and an aircraft combed the Battle Mountain area until Lander Sheriff George Scwhinn suspended the search to await further information. He said it was possible the report originated from "a crank who missed the show."

Late Sunday, a spokesman for Haggard's reported Haggard had contacted hotel officials. He said Haggard cancelled his local appearance "for personal reasons."

Hearing called on VFW land

RUPERT — A public hearing has been called for Thursday on a swap of city land with the Veterans of Foreign Wars (VFW). The land in question lies along the Minidoka Irrigation District canal in North Rupert. It is just south of the old National Guard Armory.

The public hearing is set for 7 p.m. Thursday at the city hall.

Rupert earlier had given the State of Idaho a deed to a 40- by 85-foot parcel for VFW use. A sewer line runs through the property and makes its use unfeasible. City Engineer Don Courtright has proposed that the city shift the VFW land rights 66 feet westward.

That would allow the VFW to use a parcel 85 feet long and with a width varying from 35- to about 25 feet.

The VFW plans to construct a 28- by 32-foot building on the property and to join it to the existing facility by means of a canopy. Courtright said the canopy would be high enough to allow boom trucks access to the sewer line.

The council is considering issuing a quit-claim deed to the state for VFW use of the western parcel in exchange for return of the land with the sewer line in it.

Welfare mothers question rule

By NANCY KELLEHER Times-News writer TWIN FALLS — "We think the welfare system is against the family," Ben McKelway of Idaho Legal Aid Services said Tuesday. A hearing will be held Wednesday from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. to allow testimony by local welfare recipients and spokesmen from Idaho Legal Aid who will testify on welfare regulations known as "continued absence rules."

assistance from the Department of Health and Welfare, a child must be deprived of parental support for some reason such as continued absence. Desertion, divorce and separation constitute continued absence in the eyes of Health and Welfare. When the absent parent is often present in his spouse's home, the department checks to determine whether he is supporting the children, Naomi Brown of the Department of Health and Welfare said. These checks are completed to by the applicant for aid when or she signs the eligibility contract. Idaho Legal Aid spokesman Ben McKelway claims the Welfare Department uses this "continually absent" clause to cut off eligibility to families in which the parents are separated, but the father returns to visit his children. He claims the department assumes a person is guilty before proven innocent. The overall philosophy, he feels, is people will try to cheat the system; that husband will be sneaking back to the home while his wife collects welfare monies. McKelway has dealt with many complaints against the department through his work with Legal Aid. He said he cited one case that may be reviewed at Wednesday's hearing where a woman was told a divorce had to be finalized before she could receive help. The divorce had already been filed, but the woman was seeking a reconciliation. She was forced, according to McKelway, to choose between receiving money to feed her children, or letting the divorce go through. She didn't want the divorce, he said, but had to let it go through so she could feed her children. Naomi Brown denied case workers encourage divorce so people will be eligible for support. She said divorce has no bearing on whether or not a person is eligible. The aim of the program, she said, is to help the child who is deprived — maintenance, physical care and guidance of a parent. Only when there is a question of deprivation, is an investigation conducted. She claims separated persons are only investigated when reports are received that the absent spouse is in the children's home more often than his own. Otherwise, she says, VISIS is not discouraged. Legal Aid claims in some cases, the mother and children have had their assistance cut off after a short visit from a separated father.

FBI probes equipment loss

TWIN FALLS — Surveying equipment valued at close to $18,000 was taken from vehicles parked at the U.S. Forest Service office, 1625 Addison Ave. E., Saturday night, police reported. James Simpson, forest service civil engineer, said a distance measuring meter valued at $5,600, and two theodolites, another type of surveying equipment valued at $3,000, were taken. He said the FBI was investigating. Police Detective Capt. Tim Qualls said police had no suspects. "Cars was signposted from about seven trucks at the forest service office, and mirrors on one truck were removed the same night, police said."

Buildings identified

TWIN FALLS — Sunday's edition of Idaho, The Times-News Sunday Magazine, featured pictures of portions of buildings in Twin Falls. Tower raised at new bridge

TWIN FALLS — The new Perrine Bridge was expected to be closed from 2 a.m. to about 3:30 p.m. today so officials can raise a 215-foot tower. Officials were to use cables running across the roadway south of the bridge to raise the tower. Everett Kieber, highway department official, said Monday all traffic would be rerouted to the Hansen Bridge or persons would have to wait until the tower is raised. Kieber said the tower will be used in the tearing down of the old bridge. The process should take two to three months.

Proposal studied

KETCHUM — The Ketchum City Council voted Monday night to take into advisement a proposed itinerant merchant's ordinance submitted by the Chamber of Commerce. The ordinance, presented to the council by Steve Berry, manager of Sturtevant's of Sun Valley, proposed certain restrictions and controls to help deal with the heavy inflow of "itinerant" merchants into Ketchum. The council decided to present the chamber's ordinance to the city prosecutor to prepare a working ordinance. A proposal to restrict traffic and create a mall area with park benches and other facilities for pedestrians at the base of Warm Springs Cliff resulted in considerable debate. The council finally voted to make the Lloyd Drive area in front of the ski lift a one-way street and declare the Accident reported

OAKLEY — An Oakley woman was involved in a collision with a cow Monday night. Mae Louise Schummer, 25, told a Cassia County deputy sheriff she was driving her pickup truck about "one and one-half miles south of Oakley's main street about 7:30 p.m. Monday. She said she did not see the cow until too late. "The cow was owned by D. Critchfield. The truck has an estimated $600 damage."

Burley council pushes park funding

By SHANE O'NEILL Times-News writer BURLEY — Burley wants to begin development of its proposed Freedom Park soon, but the City Council doesn't want to give up chances of federal funding. "It's foolish to overlook funding of this kind," said councilman Garth Payne. Payne's parties came after Mayor Chuck Shaddock and Parks and Recreation Director Jack Keen proposed the city develop the park without federal funding. They suggested various civic groups in the city be given the chance to develop parks in the area with a single city plan. The freedom-parks plan was approved by the council three to four years ago and the city has sought funding since that time. Keen said outdoor-recreation funds are now available if the project receives approval from federal authorities, but the officials want the city to get a separate use agreement for each facility now existing in the freedom park area. Some of the facilities included involve a rifle range, pistol range, skeet range, Idaho National Guard and a new building for the Mini-Cassia search and rescue unit near the Burley airport. Keen said the city could remove its name from the bureau's list and "forgo the piece-meal outdoor recreation money." "Shall we play games with them and try to define these oddball areas?" Keen asked. Mayor Shaddock told the National Guard and the Boy Scouts have already offered help in developing portions of the area. "He said the city could contact various groups that use the area, as well as other civic groups, and have the park developed faster than seeking federal funds. Keen outlined a plan that would provide a floral garden near the Snake River, and a 300 by 400 foot outdoor camp area, and a shelter and park section. He said the area already has such

TF eyes large apartment unit

By BOB ZUCKERMAN Times-News writer TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls City Council all but approved Monday a 106-unit motel and apartment complex to be built at 689 Blue Lakes Blvd.-N.

After a public hearing on an application for conditional use and construction and operation of a 50-unit motel and 50-unit apartment complex on the 2.8-acre property, councilmen agreed not to take any official action until the developer presented plans satisfying some conditions area residents bring up at the meeting.

However, Councilman Steve Lincoln told the developer, Gary Willey, the council could not deny the conditional use requested, only place on it restrictions. Conditions the council supported at the meeting were:

- The building be set back at least a 50-foot from the property line on the south, north and east sides.
- The parking lots on the outside of the building be buffered from the property line by a 15-foot wide grass area with a four-foot high mound and at least six-foot high trees on top of the mound to block view of parking stalls from surrounding residents.
- A decorative fence be built inside the tree line. And a possible access to Alder Drive from the property be closed to vehicular traffic. Earlier, Ann Cover—a resident of Alder Drive, presented the council with a petition signed by nearly 40 persons opposing the conditional use of the property now primarily a horse pasture.

The petition asked the council to deny the request. The petition asked four conditions be placed on any conditional use of the property:

- A 50-foot landscape buffer zone be placed on all residential sides of the building.
- The buffer zone include 12-foot high trees and a seven-foot high fence inside the tree line.
- No pedestrian or vehicular access be allowed to Alder Drive.
- And all applicable city ordinances be complied with.

During the public hearing, Willey told area residents, "We'll do whatever we have to do to landscape and fence the building to make sure it satisfies our neighbors." "We don't want to do something which will be a detriment to neighbors." He said a motel-apartment complex was probably the most acceptable type of use for area residents.

GOP strength seen in MV student polls

MAGIC VALLEY — If Magic Valley students reverse the voting patterns of their parents at the polls today then President Ford will carry the region by an overwhelming margin, and incumbent Republican Congressman George Hansen will trounce Democrat Stan Kress.

No straw votes were taken in Twin Falls secondary schools, but several votes were taken elsewhere in the Valley.

The results of those polls show Gerald Ford leading by about 75.8 per cent, with his rival Jimmy Carter garnering only a meager 24.2 per cent of the student vote.

In the Second District Congressional race, Democratic challenger Stan Kress fared better than his party's standard bearer, but still came in second to incumbent Congressman George Hansen.

With about 470 votes cast Valleywide in that election, Hansen gathered about 59 per cent of the student vote, while Kress won the selection of about 41 per cent of the students.

The school polls throughout the Valley were conducted under widely varying conditions, with some held as early as last week and some only completed this morning. Sample ballots were to be passed out in still more schools this afternoon.

Ford and Hansen scored decisive victories in polls at Gooding and Wendell high schools. At Wendell Ford defeated Carter 29 to 12, with one write-in vote going to Ronald Reagan. Ford did even better at Gooding, squashing the Georgia-peanut farmer 48 to 12.

In those same ballots, Congressman Hansen trounced Kress 27 to 17 at Wendell and 46 to 15 at Gooding. At Kimberly High School Ford beat Carter 40 to 10, and Kress lost to Hansen 20 to 35.

Burley okays 'warnings'

BURLEY — A split Burley City Council Monday night approved installation of road warnings at railroad crossings in the city. The plastic lettering would be placed on the pavement surface by the state Department of Transportation under a federal grant. It is available at every railroad crossing that has traffic of at least 100 cars a day.

City Clerk E.E. "Bud" Brinegar had instructed all the council's last meeting to obtain more information on the state's proposal. He said the lettering is supposed to last about five years and there would be no cost to the city, nor any obligation to renew the letters if they become worn.

City Attorney William Parsons, however, warned that, if the letters become worn and faded, and "someone does not see them, we're in trouble." Parsons said such signing tends to be neglected and recommended that the city maintain them "in top flight condition or not at all."

Councilman Leonard King remarked that the flat signs would only be visible in the summer, and might not be seen at all in the winter.

"If there's a possibility of any obligation," councilman Garth Payne said, "I think we ought to leave it alone."

Councilman James Roper took the opposite view, commenting that if the city rejected the signs "somebody could say we were negligent."

King then suggested that the city accept the signs for the first four to five years and paint black over them if they become worn.

Roper, King and James Henderson voted in favor of the installations. Councilman Ray Barlow opposed the motion and Payne passed.

suggestion and drop the effort for federal funding, but city attorney William Parsons suggested the city pursue the grant.

He said there would be a thaw in the situation, and "we may get the peace and do what we want."

Councilman Roper said the city should point out to Shaddock officials that plans would have to be altered because of two facilities in the area. He also mentioned the bridge to be built over the Snake River between Burley and Heyburn in a joint project with the state.

The council then voted to follow through on the federal funding application, while making approaches to local groups for their development.

Fabric softener wins agency nod

By MICHAEL J. CONLON
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government has ruled that Bounce fabric softener is safe and may remain on the market, although an investigation is continuing into two other aspects of it and similar products.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission said extensive human testing information submitted by the manufacturer, Procter and Gamble, convinced it that the product is not likely to cause substantial personal injury or illness.

The commission said it is still considering whether Bounce and similar products should be labeled to tell consumers to stop using them if a skin rash develops.

P and G said more than two billion sheets of it had been used safely in the past four years in over 40 million households, and "we hope the news of the CPSC decision will reassure any consumers who were unnecessarily alarmed by reports of the investigation."

Bounce consists of nonwoven rayon sheets treated with a chemical. The sheets are put in dryers with damp clothes and washable home furnishings to reduce static and make the fabrics softer.

The commission said it is still considering whether Bounce and similar products should be labeled to tell consumers to stop using them if a skin rash develops.

Procter and Gamble has said there is no evidence that Bounce contributes to fires. In addition, the CPSC staff investigation into the skin irritation question concluded that the danger of fires appears "remote" and "virtually all cases have involved lint buildup, which itself may have caused the fire."

Two important consumer protection laws have been on the books now for a year, but many persons are unaware of exactly how they work. The laws are the Fair Credit Billing Act that gives charge customers new rights to challenge billing mistakes and the Equal Credit Opportunity Act that prohibits discrimination on the basis of sex or marital status in credit transactions.

"The sheets are put in washable home furnishings to reduce static and make fabrics softer."

The Federal Trade Commission offers free pamphlets explaining both laws. Did you know, for instance, that if you are stuck with faulty merchandise that you bought with a credit card other than the one issued by the store you can refuse to pay the credit card issuer until the dispute is settled?

That and other rights and protections are detailed in the pamphlets. They can be obtained by writing to the Public Reference Branch, Federal Trade Commission, Washington, D.C. 20540 or in person at the FTC's regional offices in Atlanta, Boston, Los Angeles, New York City, Chicago, Cleveland, Dallas, Denver, San Francisco, Honolulu and Seattle.

Magic makes comeback

By DAVID L. LANGFORD
NEW YORK (UPI) — It was lunchtime at a midtown men's club built of "fantasies of another sort," but The Bunny couldn't wait to show her new trick to The Magician, the black-bearded man holding court in the corner booth.

"Watch," said bunny-costumed Merrie Terrell, balancing a tray of martinis on her left shoulder while she fingered matches in her right hand. The matches appeared to switch from white to black in color. "I stayed up most of the night practicing."

The magician was pleased. He showed her a way to improve the illusion.

"You see?" said Harry Blackstone Jr., a second-generation wizard, turning to his table companions. "Magic is coming back."

"They say that magic is the second oldest profession," added Blackstone, who got his start in the profession cleaning rabbit cages for his famous father. "But for so long we were in a period in which surrealism had no place, with the coming of television—the Vietnam war, the space program, etc."

"From the days of the pagan priests, the illusionist had relied on the audience's willingness to believe."

Perhaps it's part of the trend toward nostalgia, but magic is indeed enjoying a renaissance today. And television, which may have contributed to its earlier decline, is a factor in its revival.

Even though Bill Bixby's popular series, "The Magician," is now in reruns, two major networks scheduled magic specials this fall. Hundreds of magic specialty stores are springing up all over the country and toy manufacturers have found a new Christmas craze in magic sets. Amateur magicians are turning out for conventions in 10 times their former numbers and the once-humble pros are now finding ample bookers.

And on a recent night, a truck driver walked up to the ticket window at New York's Cort Theatre and shellied out $72 to take his kids to see "The Magic Show," the Broadway hit now in its 17th year, starring the young Canadian magician, Doug Henning.

"I wish I knew the exact reason," said TV veteran Mark Wilson, who dabbles in magic in a big, corporate way. "There's a big interest in terms now, isn't there?"

Wilson was the pioneer of network television magic in the Sixties with his show, "The Magic Land of Allakazam," which ran two years on CBS and five on ABC, and he was the sole creative consultant for the hit Broadway show. He likes to think those shows helped ignite the renaissance.

"After the end of vaudeville, the only place the magician was working was in nightclubs and fairs," he said. "Now, through television, the public is being exposed to really good magic."

A record 1,700 amateurs and professionals registered for a recent convention of the Society of American Magicians in Philadelphia. (The magicians checked out of the Bellview Stratford Hotel just before—the ill-fated Legionnaires checked in.)

"We use to have only 200 to 300 at those meetings," said Wilson, whose son, Greg, is already a pro at age 21. "Wilson said a few years ago there were only 20 to 30 magic specialty stores in all of the United States. Now there are 250 to 300."

Ted Erickson, a spokesman for the Toy Manufacturers of America, said his industry first started noticing the trend about two years ago and it's still building.

"Magic sets have been a staple part of the toy industry for 100 years, but a couple of years ago we noticed a greater number of sets coming onto the market," Erickson said. "The impetus seemed to come from the Bixby television show and there was some ruffin' among the adults from the Magic Show on Broadway."

Wilson, Henning, Blackstone and 200 to 300 other pros are befuddling their audiences with the traditional tricks of the masters of theatre's oldest art, which had its origins 3,500 years ago in Shamanism and the priesthood. Most times it is only new packaging for illusions created by such men as Harry Kellar, Howard Thurston, Charles Joseph Carter and, of course, the tortured Harry Houdini during the golden age of magic from 1875 to 1925.

Much of that tradition is preserved in The Magic Castle, a private club in California—for some 4,000 members of the Academy of Magical Arts, whose board of directors includes Wilson and actor Cary Grant.

But the magician is adapting to the contemporary world. As Wilson insists, "new tricks are being invented all the time." And with the Bixby series, the magician shed the cloak of the villain and became the hero.

"Fantasy is what this place is all about," he said. "But like many other pros, Blackstone spends at least half his time performing at trade shows and making promotional appearances for such enterprises as ham, burger chains. In between club dates and television shows, he also did 19 commercials last year, including one for Butterfinger candy bars."

"That's not so unusual when you think about it," said the tall and handsome performer whose hair and beard has the color and sheen of wet seal.

"But like many other pros, Blackstone spends at least half his time performing at trade shows and making promotional appearances for such enterprises as ham, burger chains. In between club dates and television shows, he also did 19 commercials last year, including one for Butterfinger candy bars."

"Butterfingers?" he laughed. "That's a great sponsor for a magician."

Blackstone, born 41 years ago in Michigan, didn't intend to follow in the footsteps of his father and his uncle, Pete, who started out as the Bouton Brothers featuring "straight and crooked magic." Harry Bouton, who started as a magician at age 14 in 1899, later took the stage name "Frederick the Great," which he changed it to Blackstone in 1914 and made the latter legal in 1927.

But after graduation from high school the younger Blackstone joined his father's show. "I was mostly interested in the technical side of theatre," in the process he became skilled at performing tricks.

"My dad used to say there is nothing he does that could not be done by a 10-year-old child said, "When I come back I'm going to be a winner."

Two years later he found a sponsor and got a 26-week contract for the "Magic Land of Allakazam."

With his pretty blonde wife and assistant, Nani Darnell, Wilson probably has been seen by more people than any other magician in the history of conjuring thanks to his television exposure. While his older son Mike, 22, is studying industrial psychology at Berkeley, Greg, who started doing tricks at age 4, is a frequent TV guest.

Comeback seen

MAGIC, the art of illusion, is making a comeback, though we probably will never see the rabbit pulling the magician from his top hat. with 15 years of practice," said Blackstone, who was named "America's Bicentennial Magician" by the Bicentennial Commission.

James Mark Wilson, 46, on the other hand, decided he wanted to be a magician at age 8 when his father, a traveling salesman, took him to a fair in Minneapolis. He wound up majoring in advertising at Southern Methodist University.

While working at a magic shop in Dallas he performed at Rotary Club meetings and put on local shows. Finally he put together an act appearing locally on several Texas television stations. In 1958 he decided it was time to try the networks and left for Los Angeles.

"I couldn't even get in to see a program director at the local stations," Wilson recalls. "I went back to my hotel room and looked out the window and

At the peak of the season, Wilson has a staff of 80 persons packaging magic acts for state fairs, trade shows, conventions and amusement parks.

"I've named the Magician of the Year by the Academy of Magical Arts. Wilson also was recognized by the Society of American Magicians as the "Superstar of Magic."

Constantly in demand as a guest on TV variety and talk shows, Wilson will appear on a Peggy Fleming CBS special Nov. 16.

"Five or six years ago no magician would get billing along with an Andy Williams or a Peggy Fleming," he said. Wilson said he made magic work on television by always performing before a live audience and by announcing that a trick photograph was used.

He thinks the time is ripe for a magic variety series on TV. "I just hope it's done right."

Face being '40' with big smile

By United Press International
Ever since Judith Viorst left home, "a nice middle-class girl from New Jersey planning to live a life of wild abandon in Greenwich Village, with roachies and multicolor prints and my mother calling every day to tell me 'whatever you're doing, don't do it,'" she has been chronicling her life and "the lives of an awful lot of women like me" in books of light-hearted poetry.

Her latest book, "How Did I Get to Be 40 and Other Attractions," (Simon and Schuster) takes a look at the decade of "the sagging kneecap and upper eyelid droop."

The earlier books are "The Village Square," "It's Not to Be an Interviewer," "You-Don't-Just-Sort-of-Slide Into Them," "You Live up Certain Things, you Come into your own in certain ways."

forever. Really put away forever. Even when you're 30 you can probably go to medical school if you really decided that you wanted to be a brain surgeon. At 40, that whole kind of open-ended flexibility of life is simply not there any more.

"You will never read all the books, go to all the places, become the president of the United States or a love goddess or a tennis star because those things are over."

Today the wife of political writer, Milton Viorst, her mother's fears that she would marry "somebody of a different race, color or creed that would give her at least a heart attack," were unfounded. The couple live in Washington, D.C., with their three sons, Anthony, 15; Nicholas, 12; and Alexander, 9 — "all jocks" — interested only in sports.

specific person — less narcissistic and more generous than she was earlier in life. "There is a mid-life crisis, not only for men but for men, Mrs. Viorst said, "a time of self-confrontation, reassessment — some kind of genuine knowledge that you're not immortal."

The women's movement has helped American women to better define themselves outside of men-women relationships, she said, but she thinks that aging is still more of a problem for women and that it really becomes an issue when they get into their 40s.

One reason for this is that sexuality is probably tied more to youth here than in other countries, Mrs. Viorst said. Men, she feels, "can more easily parlay power, charm, intelligence and money into sexuality than women can, so that if they're not attractive and if they're aging, they can seduce — with these other qualities."

smart, charming but it is hard to translate that into sexual terms," she said. "Somebody said a woman who looked like Henry Kissinger would not make out as well as Henry Kissinger. They meant sexually — and I think that's correct."

Mrs. Viorst, who has been married for 16 years and readily admits that her own "conspiratorial powers are very poor," doesn't think having an affair bolsters a marriage.

"What I really think people ought to do is not get married until they are 30 — that they ought to have interesting, varied, good relationships with other people. Then they ought to settle down and stay faithful."

almost sexual rage and disappointment that they've missed something.

"I think some women can come to terms with that, but for some women it is really a sense of loss, particularly since the period of the 60s. They watch their young daughters doing things that their mother would have killed them if they did."

Mrs. Viorst, who does a monthly column for Redbook magazine, 666-N, "Feel marriage is outdated. "Marriage is something that can hold you together during periods of unlove while you work it out."

your health

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb:
I am 63 years old. At night I have leg cramps. I was wondering what might cause this and if I can do anything to help. Sometimes I have to get up five to six times a night and walk. I am overweight and have your weight losing diet. I have lost 14 pounds but need to lose 20 more pounds.

Dear Reader:
Leg cramps at night can often be helped by making extra efforts to keep the feet and legs warm. You can wear some warm heavy long socks to bed at night. The legs cool off faster than any other part of the body because they are farthest from the heart.

You should have an examination of your legs to see if you have a circulation problem. When the arteries to the leg become obstructed with fatty-cholesterol deposits the circulation can be seriously compromised. If that is the case and the condition is causing severe problems many people can get relief from surgery. A graft is put in to detour the blood around the local obstruction.

Try heat for cramps

The claim is that the obstruction must be localized so it can actually be detoured. If the entire length of the artery is blocked like a dead end street, there are no normal open arteries to detour to.

Losing weight will help in most circulation problems if a person is overweight. Weight loss helps clean out obstructed arteries, lowers blood pressure and decreases the work the body must do with normal physical activity. Others who wear the same diet you have lost weight with can send 50 cents for The Health Letter, number 47, Weight Losing Diet. Send a long stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to me in care of this newspaper, P. O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Dear Dr. Lamb:
I am presently confined in a penitentiary. My problem is that for the past three months I have had a very high pulse rate (100) and after heart tests and X rays the doctors say that my heart is not bad and to stop worrying about it. What I would like to know is why the sudden change after having a pulse rate of 72 for the past 30 years?

I have been wondering if it could be because of how extremely nervous and uptight I have been for the past three months. Please, I'm begging you to give me any information pertinent to this problem.

Dear Reader:
I am glad you have had a good examination. That helps to rule out many problems that could cause an increase in heart rate. Yes, real anxiety which your letter suggests you have, can really cause the heart rate to increase suddenly. Many people with anxiety have fast heart rates when there is absolutely nothing wrong with the heart. Of course, the anxiety needs to be dealt with. Just knowing that and being reassured that your hearts O.K. may help some.

There are some other causes for fast heart rates that could apply to your condition. Smoking a lot of cigarettes will often increase the heart rate around 10 beats per minute. If you drink coffee or smoke I suggest you quit.

Also, lack of physical activity can lead to a progressively higher resting heart rate. Eliminating coffee and cigarettes as well as getting started on a good physical fitness program may help you a great deal.

Deadline set for stipends

BOISE — Idaho high school graduating seniors interested in applying for the 1977 State of Idaho Scholarship Program must submit materials to the Office of the State Board of Education by Dec. 31, according to the Board president.

Edward L. Benoit, Twin Falls, said scholarships of $1,500 each, funded by an appropriation of the Idaho Legislature, are available to outstanding high school graduates for academic achievement during high school and on national tests.

Applications and letters of recommendation from two high school officials or teachers must be mailed on or before Dec. 15, 1976, to the Office of the State Board of Education in Room 307, Len B. Jordan Building, 650 W. State St., Boise, 83720. But Della M. McManus, OSBE scholarship officer, urged students to submit materials by Dec. 15 to allow sufficient time in case further information is required before the final deadline.

Students interested in academic scholarships must take the American College Testing (ACT) assessment battery. The last test date in 1976 is Nov. 20, but the Board extended the test date to Feb. 5, 1977, to give all students time to take the test. However, Mrs. Manus emphasized, applications still are due in December, even if students postpone testing until February.

DESIGNER REVEALS SEWING SHORTCUTS USED IN GARMENT INDUSTRY

Roger W. Burke, a veteran of the garment industry since 1954, is head designer for the Sunburst Pattern Systems. He is bringing his vast background of practical experience to the consumer in a book found in any bookstore to thousands who sew.

A native of Southern Pines, N.C., Burke attended Middle Tennessee University and received his degree in the University of Geneva in Switzerland. Burke worked in industrial design in offices, but soon found out while attending the Fashion Institute of Technology in New York City and the Trade Technic College in Los Angeles that it is just one short step over to clothing pattern design.

Burke has headed up the production divisions of such companies as Bolony Designs in N.Y.; Karon of California; Brooks-Brothers, one of the jobber's biggest divisions; and created his own line called "Man Trap" for Hollywood models in Los Angeles.

Burke has been lecturing internationally for the past six years on sewing shortcuts, design, pattern drafting and fitting. "I will be in the area local before my professional secrets in sewing techniques and shortcuts, and the alteration of commercial patterns. I will also show how anyone can make a pattern simply and make that pattern fit." He will be introducing a new pattern making method and will be giving many tips on design.

Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I don't think loving the Lord is anything to joke about, so when I saw this bumper sticker on the car ahead of me that said, "THANK IF YOU LOVE JESUS," I honked my horn. I guess maybe I overdid it because the next thing I knew I had a motorcycle cop alongside me, asking to see my driver's license. I showed him it fast and asked him what I did wrong, and he asked me why I was honking my horn.

When I said, "Because I love Jesus," he asked me why I had been drinking his beer.

Well, Abby, he didn't give me a ticket; he just chewed me out for disturbing the peace, and told me not to do it again.

My question: Was I wrong to honk?

LOVES JESUS

DEAR LOVES: Maybe a short tool would have been enough to let Jesus know you love him, but in the future you'd better do your heavy praying to church.

Short tool sufficient

DEAR ABBY: I'm a girl, nearly 20, and a sophomore in college. Last summer I met a kid at the beach. (I'll call him Brian.) We dug each other right away and have been going together ever since. (We're really in love.)

Brian said he was 18, and I told him I was also 18. He's 6 feet tall, weighs 175, is very well built and LOOKS 18. I'm small and have always looked younger than my age.

Brian dropped out of high school to take a construction job until the Navy calls him for training for some special kind of job.

Abby, I accidentally saw his driver's license and learned that Brian is only 16 years old! When I told him I knew, he said he hated lying to me, but was afraid I wouldn't date him if I knew his right age.

Then I told him my right age and he said it didn't matter. Do you think he's too young for me? Now that I know he's only 16, I feel that he is, but before then, I didn't. We've even talked about marriage.

AGE DIFFERENCE

DEAR DIFFERENCE: If you didn't feel that Brian was too young for you until you accidentally found out, you're probably well-matched, regardless of your ages. But for your sake as well as his, defer marriage until his future is more clearly defined.

DEAR ABBY: My son is married to a girl who doesn't like to cook. They brag that in the two years they've been married they haven't eaten anything but breakfast at home—and on Sundays they usually go out for Sunday brunch.

They both work and don't have any kids (thank the good Lord, or they'd be dragging the kids out to eat every night), but I think it's a disgrace the way they live in restaurants and drive-ins.

I once expressed my opinion on that subject, and they both gave me an argument about how much money they saved by eating out because groceries were so expensive.

I'll leave it to you, Abby. Are they right or are they wrong?

HIS MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: As long as they aren't asking me (or you) to pick up the tab, it's none of my (or your) business.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Miss Eastman, Dennis Lampe exchange nuptial promises

TWIN FALLS — Debra Eastman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Eastman, Twin Falls, and Dennis Lampe, Twin Falls, were married at the Eastman home Oct. 18.

Lampe is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Lampe, Twin Falls.

The Rev. Brian Munson performed the nuptials. The bridal couple stood between beauty baskets of pink pom-poms and green chrysanthemums.

Escorted by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of white satin, empire style with rose-lace on bodice and overlay. The gown was made and designed by the bride's grandmother, Mrs. George Mitchell, Twin Falls.

In her hair, the bride wore a wreath of miniature green carnations and baby's breath. She carried a colonial bouquet of pink and green miniature carnations with pink satin streamers.

Sandra Eastman, sister of the bride, was maid-of-honor. John Holtzway, Washington, was best man.

A reception followed the wedding, with Shirlene Eastman, sister of the bride, registering the guests, and Mr. and Mrs. Larry Eastman and Jana Lampe in charge of gifts.

Centering the bride's table was a four-tiered wedding cake, decorated in pink and greens, with bells and doves topping the arrangement. Mae Chattercut and served the cake with the assistance of Vickie Taylor and Mary Mitchell served the punch.

Guests were seated at quartet tables covered with white lace over pink and centered with floral arrangements around pink and green candles. Pink bows accented the serving table, which was covered to match the guest tables.

After a wedding trip to Nevada, the couple plans to reside in Twin Falls. The bride is employed at the Twin Falls Clinic Hospital—and the bridegroom at Keystone Seed Co.

Freedom train hit by vandals

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — The Bicentennial American Freedom Train made it through 124 cities without any major vandalism — until it reached Raleigh.

Authorities Sunday reported someone stole a brass gate from the rear car early Saturday while the train was parked at the state fair grounds.

"We've gone through some really bad areas," said John Manning, who handles security for the train, "and we've never suffered any vandalism. A lot of people respect the train, you know."

The train arrived in Raleigh Thursday evening and authorities speculated—the gate, on which a Bicentennial plaque was mounted, was taken sometime early Saturday.

Manning estimated the gate actually cost about $1,000, but was irreplaceable. He said President Ford is shown standing behind the gate in a film made when the train was dedicated Dec. 19, 1977.

Maybe West should have put up that king of diamonds at his first opportunity. He probably would have done just that if South had stripped the hand before leading the suit, but South made his play early and it worked.

Baltimore Colts pound Houston Oilers

BALTIMORE (UPI) — The Baltimore Colts, led by Bert Jones, Lydell Mitchell and their ferocious "sack pack" defensive line, pounded the lackluster Houston Oilers 33-14 Monday night in the National Football League's nationally-televised game.

Running backs Roosevelt Leaks and Don McCauley scored two touchdowns each on short yardage plays and reserve Ron Lee ran 69 yards for the final TD as the Colts, 7-1, took a two-game lead in the AFC Eastern Division. The loss left the Oilers two games behind Cincinnati in the Central Division, tied with Pittsburgh and Cleveland at 4-4.

The 25-year-old Jones, the AFC's leading passer, completed 10 of 23 passes for 197 yards before he was relieved by Bill Troup. Mitchell, the leading runner in the conference, pounded out 136 yards in 22 carries and caught seven Jones passes for 46 yards.

The Colts' defense, led by linemen Fred Cook, Mike Barnes, Joe Ehrman and John Dutton, sacked Oilers' quarterbacks Dan Pastorini and John Hadl six times for losses totaling 63 yards.

Pastorini, who directed his club to minus seven yards passing offense in the first half, was benched in favor of Hadl, a 15-year veteran. But Pastorini returned in the fourth quarter and directed the Oilers to their only two scores of the night after Baltimore had piled up a 31-0 lead.

He hit Ken Burrough with a 53-yard touchdown pass and running back Joe Dawkins scored on a two-yard run.

The first two Colts' touchdowns, which broke open the game, were gifts from the Oilers, running back Ronnie Coleman in particular. Midway through the first period, Coleman fumbled when hit by Colts' linebacker Stan White. Jim Cheynski recovering at the Houston 13. Two plays later, Leaks scored on a four-yard sweep.

Early in the second period, Coleman tried an option pass and Fred Cook of the "sack pack" deflected it to Derrell Luce who intercepted at the Houston 22. After three running plays by Mitchell and a Jones to Mitchell pass, McCauley plunged over from the one.

On Baltimore's next possession, Jones drove the club 53 yards in five plays for a touchdown. The key was a 23-yard dash by Mitchell and Leaks got the score on a one-yard plunge.

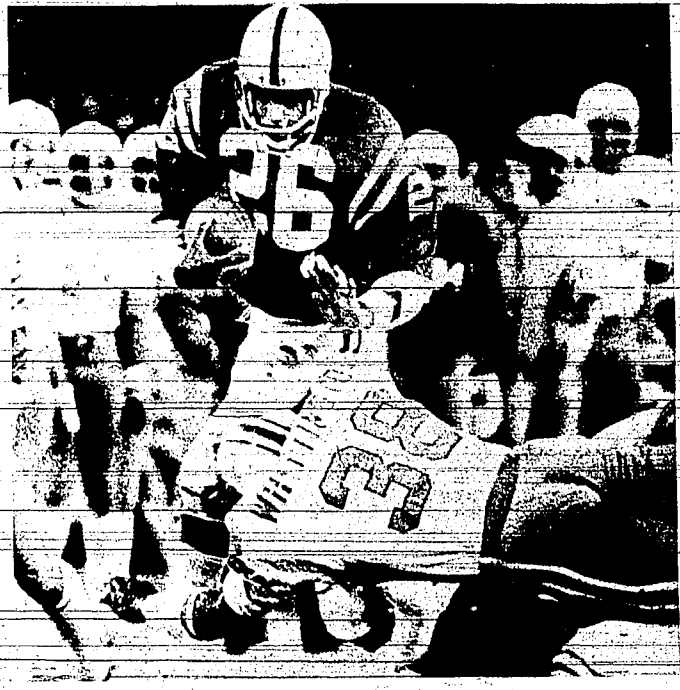

Leading 21-0, the Colts called the game away early in the second half on a 25-yard field goal by Tom Linhart and McCauley's second one-yard scoring plunge, which capped a 57-yard drive.

Late in the game, after Houston scored its two touchdowns, Lee shook loose on his 69-yard run.

Before the fourth quarter, Houston's deepest penetration was to the Colts' 25, from where Skip Butler missed a 43-yard field Goal. The Colts also missed 10 points worth of scoring opportunities in the first half. Mitchell fumbled at the Houston five and tackle

David Taylor knocked the ball out of the end zone for a touch-back. Later, a 22-yard Linhart field goal attempt failed when Troup dropped the snap.

First down

LYDELLE MITCHELL, (12), the leading rusher in the AFC, goes for a first down before being taken down by Houston safety, C. I. Whitington (38). Mitchell picked up 100 yards in the first half of the game and the Colts went on to whip the Oilers 33-14. (UPI tele.)

Pro football owners and players union leaders look for contract settlement

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Pro football owners and player union leaders have decided to make another stab at negotiating a labor contract which might end their long dispute, possibly before Super Bowl time.

Representatives of the two sides met for three hours Monday with NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle at headquarters of the NFL Players Association and announced new moves to solve the deadlock which brought on one preseason strike and a brief player protest walkout in the past three years.

Two recent court decisions prompted the meeting—an appeals ruling upholding a federal judge's decision against the so-called Rozelle rule requiring arbitrary compensation for a free agent player and another U.S. district court judgment declaring that pro football's college draft system is an antitrust violation.

"I thought the tone was hopeful," Rozelle told reporters after the closed meeting between representatives of the NFLPA and the owners' Management Council.

"We could get a decision hopefully before the end of the season, perhaps by mid-December," Karch said.

But Dick Anderson, president of the union, was less optimistic on any timetable, telling newsmen—"The hope now is that we're going to see where we stand since the court decision. We have to see what changes are forthcoming from their side. Because of the court decisions, the atmosphere looks a little better but we've got to see some changes."

The Miami Dolphin veteran and Dan Rooney, head of the Pittsburgh Steelers, worked out a tentative contract proposal earlier this year but it was turned down by a 21-3 vote of the union player representatives in August. There have been no further talks since then.

Both sides agreed to set up four taskforces which will try to come up with recommendations for the basis of a labor contract by Dec. 1.

NFLPA Executive Director Ed Garvey said "we'd like to get things moving again" but noted that the Karch and Rooney had flatly rejected a move to discuss reinstating a dues checkoff for player union members and adding the owners: "I don't think their mood is indicative of any change."

However, Garvey said that "It is now time to settle past difficulties and reach agreement... I think with 30 days of hard work we can settle these issues."

One of the task forces was designated to study a workable and legal draft and a modified reserve system. Garvey disagreed, however, that the union does not represent any draftees until they have made their squads and the right to negotiate a draft procedure affecting them might be legally questionable. He also noted that even as the two sides were meeting with Rozelle, the owners had filed for reconsideration of their unsuccessful appeal on the Rozelle rule.

Tommy John named NL comeback player

NEW YORK (UPI) — Former teammate Mike Marshall said last April 10 when Tommy John made his first start of the season for the Los Angeles Dodgers.

"At that moment," said Marshall, "Tommy John became the comeback player of the year."

Marshall's assessment was confirmed today when the 33-year-old John was voted the National League's comeback-player of the year by a panel of 400 baseball correspondents from around the country. John received 10 of the 26 votes cast and doubled the total of his closest competitor, Joe Torre of the New York Mets.

"Bill" Buckner of the Dodgers and Jerry

Koosman of the Mets received two votes each while Steve Carlton, Gary Maddox, Jim Lonborg, Dick Allen and Jay Johnstone of the Philadelphia Phillies, Bill Russell of the Dodgers and Dave Concepcion of the Cincinnati Reds got one each.

John's comeback was a study in perseverance and faith. In mid-July, 1974, John ruptured a ligament in his left elbow. Doctors had to transplant a tendon into the elbow and reproduce the original nerve which also had been damaged.

"They told me my pitching career probably was over," says John. "They said the chances that I would ever pitch again were very slim." John, returning after a season and a half on the disabled list, appeared in 31 games and compiled a 10-10 record with six complete games and a 3.09 earned run average. He pitched a total of 207 innings and had two shutouts.

John's comeback became especially important to the Dodgers when Andy Messersmith was declared a free agent and signed with the Atlanta Braves. The pitcher the doctors thought might never pitch again wound up as the No. 5 starter in the Dodgers' rotation.

"That was my goal in the spring," John recalls. "It seems like a modest enough goal now but back then I wasn't so sure it could be done."

John credits his wife, Sally, and Dodger director of scouting, Ben Wade, with helping to rebuild his confidence. At one point John had become reconciled to building a new career as a baseball instructor at the professional level.

John, who had a 13-3 record when he suffered the injury in 1974, started the 1976 season with a 123-106 lifetime record in the major leagues. He was a star for the Chicago White Sox before the Dodgers acquired him, Dec. 2, 1971, in exchange for Dick Allen.

Roth wins PBA event

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Mark Roth posted two key wins Monday night to successfully stave off Paul Colwell and win the $60,000 Northern Ohio Open bowling tournament.

The title was the fourth of the Staten Island, N.Y., bowler's Professional Bowlers Association career and his third this year. The $6,000 first place paycheck topped his earnings for 1978 to $69,800, second on the PBA money list.

Colwell, Tucson, Ariz., had peaked away at Roth's lead until he narrowed the margin to 80 pins with three games remaining. But Roth then came through with his two highest scores of the tournament, 283 and 285, to tie the title despite losing to Colwell in the final game 254-214.

Roth ended the 42 games with a total pinfall of 10,013, a 227 average, to 9,914 for Colwell.

Larry Laub, San Francisco, emerged from a tight battle with Barry Asher, Costa Mesa, Calif., and Cliff McNeely, San Lorenzo, Calif., to finish third. He beat Asher, 225-199, in the final game to sew it up. McNeely was fourth, nine pins ahead of Asher.

Namath gets nod

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (UPI) — Head Coach Lou Holtz of the New York Jets announced Monday that if Joe Namath is healthy he will start at quarterback this Sunday against the Miami Dolphins.

Namath sat out Sunday's game against Buffalo with a battered leg while his understudy, rookie Richard Todd, led the Jets to a 19-14 victory over the Bills. It was only the second win of the season for New York and both have come against Buffalo.

Holtz indicated he was satisfied with Todd's play, saying "He's made one NFL start and he's one-and-one. He performed under a lot of pressure and Buffalo threw a smorgasbord of defenses against him."

Todd completed 51 of 70 passes for 87 yards and one touchdown against the Bills. But Holtz was wary of giving him a second start in favor of a healthy Namath.

"Todd will be disappointed in the films when he sees himself," Holtz added. "There was a couple of things he didn't do right—he didn't set his feet properly and he didn't deliver the ball with confidence. I know he can play better."

UTEP coach resigns

EL PASO, Tex. (UPI) — University of Texas El Paso head football coach Gil Barshosh Monday announced his resignation effective Dec. 1.

"My resignation was my decision and under no pressure from the administration," Barshosh told a news conference. "I felt by resigning that this would focus on the main problems of rebuilding and maintaining a strong football program at UTEP."

Among reasons Barshosh cited as contributing to his resignation were a low recruiting budget and the lack of some facilities.

"I feel that with the fine group of football players and a new head coach the time is now for the right people in the community to get involved and back the program."

Saban named AD at Cincinnati

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Lou Saban, who resigned recently as head coach and vice president of the Buffalo Bills of the National Football League, Monday was named athletic director at the University of Cincinnati.

Saban, a native of Brookfield, Ill., coached the Bills, then of the American Football League, from 1962 through 1965. He returned to Buffalo in 1972 and remained until his resignation Oct. 26. A single wing quarterback at Indiana University, Saban played football professionally for Paul Brown's Cleveland Browns and his first coaching job was at Case Institute in Cleveland.

Since then, he also coached collegiately at Northwestern, Western Illinois and Maryland.

Saban also coached professionally with the old Boston Patriots of the AFL and with Denver in both the AFL and NFL.

UC had been without an athletic director since July when Hindman Wall resigned to accept a similar position at Tulane.

Redskins coach still looks for Super Bowl playoff spot

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Coach George Allen tried to pep-up his down-in-the-mouth Washington Redskins Monday by asserting that they can gain the Super Bowl playoffs by winning five of their next six games, beginning against the San Francisco 49ers this weekend.

"The 49ers game is the key," Allen said in the wake of the team's 20-7 loss to the Dallas Cowboys Sunday. "A 10-4 record would put us in the playoffs."

Allen acknowledged, however, that the Dallas setback, dropping the Redskins two games off the NFC East lead with a 5-3 record, was a serious setback.

"Our backs are against the wall," he said. "The next six weeks will test our character. We're not discouraged, but we have to play more consistently. We're playing in spurts so far this season."

Allen said that he would make a decision early this week on whether 37-year-old Bill Kilmer or 27-year-old Joe Theismann would be his starting quarterback against the 49ers in San Francisco.

He started Kilmer for the first time in three weeks against the Cowboys. He sent in Theismann for the fourth quarter but the former Notre Dame quarterback was unable to pull out a victory.

NY Giants add wide receiver

PLEASANTVILLE, N.Y. (UPI) — The New York Giants Monday signed free agent wide receiver Ed Marshall and made room for him on the roster by waiving rookie linebacker John Tate.

Marshall becomes the seventh former member of the Memphis Southern to join the Giants since the World Football League folded last October. The coach of that Memphis team, John McVay, also took over as head coach of the Giants last week when Bill Arnsparger was fired.

Marshall was considered the premier receiver in the WFL, leading the league with 19 touchdowns and 60 receptions in 1974 and adding nine TDs and 31 catches over 11 games in 1975.

Marshall, a 6-foot-4, 200-pounder out of Cameron State, was cut by Detroit late in the preseason and was picked up by the Jets. He was active in one game with the Jets but did not play and was cut a short time thereafter.

Tate was a sixth round choice of the Giants out of Jackson State in 1975 who sat out all last season with a knee injury.

Strong rebound

GUARD Dick Snyder (7) of the Cleveland Cavaliers grabs a rebound from Nets forward Jan Van Breda Kolff (20) during their game Monday night. Snyder connected on a three-point play later in the game to lift the unbeaten Cavs by the Nets 82-75. (UPI tele.)

KC Kings slip by Knicks

KANSAS CITY (UPI) — Guards Ron Boone and Bryan Taylor combined for 40 points and the Kansas City Kings overcame a lethargic fourth quarter Monday night for a 105-101 win over the New York Knicks.

Boone, who finished with 22 points, scored his only two points of the fourth quarter on a pair of free throws with 14 seconds to play for the winning margin. Taylor had 18 points and six steals, and forward Scott Wedman added 17 points and nine assists for the Kings.

The Knicks, who trailed by 12 points in the opening minutes of the second half, were led by guards Walt Frazier and Earl Monroe, with 22 points and four assists apiece. Spencer Haywood had 19 points and 12 rebounds for New York, which had closed to within two, 103-101, with 24 seconds to play.

The Kings managed only one field goal and three free throws in the final 5:50 of the game as they missed their final seven shots from the floor and committed six turnovers. But a strong defensive effort that allowed New York to get no more than one shot each time down the court except once in the fourth quarter preserved the victory.

Defense is key to Oklahoma football

KANSAS CITY (UPI) — Defense, says Oklahoma coach Barry Switzer, is what you rely upon to win football games.

"Through the course of the season defense is going to have to win seven or eight games for you," Switzer told the Big Eight media briefing several weeks ago. "Every now and then your offense will get fired up and blow someone out but in general defense is what you have to rely on."

That Oklahoma defense, which was giving up less than 10 points a game through the first six games this season, has been anything but reliable the past two weeks. Hit by injuries, it has fallen apart while Oklahoma has lost to Oklahoma State, 31-24, and Colorado, 42-31.

Missouri 19; Nebraska was beating Kansas 31-3 and Iowa State was blasting Kansas State 15-14. This week, Oklahoma State meets Nebraska with Colorado traveling to Missouri and Iowa State at Kansas.

OSU, Nebraska and Colorado are tied for the Big Eight lead with 21 records, making the Oklahoma State-Nebraska game this weekend a very important one. While Oklahoma State has played Nebraska well the last three years under coach Jim Stanley, it has not beaten the Cornhuskers since 1961 and the league coaches don't expect that to change this year.

because of its passing offense (directed by quarterback Vince Ferragamo) and because it has the type of defense that can be strong against the Veer offense," said Missouri coach Al Onofrio.

whose team upset Nebraska two weeks ago. Stanley is not undervaluing the game. "It is the most important game in the history of our school," said Stanley.

Cavs nip New York Nets

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (UPI) — A three-point play by Dick Snyder with 1:43 remaining lifted the unbeaten Cleveland Cavaliers to an 82-75 victory Monday night over the New York Nets.

The game was protested by Cleveland coach Bill Fitch after Cleveland was assessed its second technical foul of the game, but the protest became mute after the Cavaliers won.

Snyder's twisting layup and foul shot gave Cleveland a 77-75 lead. Jim Chones and Austin Carr combined for 24 second-half points to erase a nine-point third-quarter New York lead. The Nets led 38-32 at halftime by holding Cleveland to its lowest first-half total since the Cavs scored 23 against Milwaukee in a 1971 game.

It was Cleveland's sixth victory without a loss, the best start in the team's seven-year history. Nate Archibald scored 22 points to lead the faltering Nets, now 2-5. Snyder led the Cavs with 15 points.

"Several weeks ago I felt we had become a good defensive football team," Switzer told Monday's Big Eight briefing. "We expected our defense to be our salvation and then we lost so many people."

Oklahoma now has lost six starters off its defensive unit and has lost two games in a row for the first time since 1967. The Sooners will try to get back in the win column by hosting Kansas State, the only Big Eight team with a losing record, this week.

While Oklahoma was losing to Colorado last week, Oklahoma State was beating

Ohio State sophomore fills big shoes

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — Tom Cousineau, Ohio State's sophomore linebacker, is being compared with former-Buckeye star Andy Gradishar, now of the Denver Broncos.

Cousineau, a 6-foot-3, 225-pounder is similar to Gradishar, a two-line all-America for the Buckeyes, in both size and quickness.

But, says OSU defensive coordinator George Hill, who also had Gradishar as a sophomore, the likeness is more than physical.

"He has the mental attitude," said Hill. "Tom wants to be a great football player. Randy had that. They dedicate themselves."

"I never saw Gradishar play," said Cousineau. "but I looked at a lot of films of him. He was a great linebacker. To be compared with him is a heck of an honor."

Cousineau is the leading tackler on the Ohio State team, with 63 solos and 54 assists in eight games, an average of nearly 15 participations per game.

In the last three games, he has 19, 18 and 15 participations, with his performance in last Saturday's 47-7 victory over Indiana earning him the honor of United-Press International Midwest defensive player of the week.

Against Indiana, his father's alma mater, he recovered a fumble, broke up two passes and also forced a pair of bad passes by Hoosier quarterback Scott Arnett.

Although his father was a former Indiana football player, Cousineau never pressured young Tom to join the Hoosiers of Lee Corso.

"Maybe if they had been a winner," said Tom, "I might have considered Indiana. But, it wasn't what I was looking for."

When it came time to decide, Michigan from the other school in the picture.

"It wasn't an easy decision," said Cousineau, "but, I know I made the right one."

Long Day

NEW YORK (UPI) — During their exhibition swing through Japan and Hawaii, the NFL San Diego Chargers found a new way of scheduling: two-day workouts. They practiced during the morning in Japan, crossed the international date line and night in Hawaii and, after a few hours sleep, had an afternoon workout in Honolulu.

Lakers West likes defensive outlook

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI) — The key to good defense is the amount of pride the players take in playing it, says Los Angeles Lakers coach Jerry West.

The Lakers showed good defense Sunday in defeating the Detroit Pistons 121-101. They hope to keep it up when they host the New York Knicks Friday.

"I'm not surprised by the good defense," said the first-year coach. "There's a remendous amount of pride on this team and the players have made up their minds this is an area that is so important if we want to win games."

The Lakers, ranked 17th in the league in defense with a team yield of 107 points per game last year, have built an early-season 3-3 record based on a defense that is currently ranked third in the NBA, allowing 109.6 points per game.

The players are starting to really understand and execute our defensive strategy," West said. "Our whole defensive concept is team-oriented and, as a team, they've shown improvement every game."

The Los Angeles offense has also improved, with five players scoring in double figures after the first six games.

Center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar leads all scorers with 27.7 points per game, followed by forward Cazzie Russell with 21 and guards Bo Lamar with 11.4, Lucius Allen with 10.8 and

Steelers return to Super Bowl form

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — They have won three games in a row after a horrendous start. Their defense has not allowed a touchdown in 13 straight quarters. Their offense is cashing in regularly on opponents' mistakes.

The Pittsburgh Steelers are looking like Super Bowl champions once again and their coach, Chuck Noll, is heaping praise on everyone, including the referees.

The Pittsburgh defense, which became famous for its "Steel Curtain" during the past few years, was the object of Noll's pleasantries Monday as he reflected on Sunday's 23-0 conquest of the San Diego Chargers.

"Our defense has played exceptionally well," said Noll. "They've been taking the ball away from some tough offenses and giving our offense plenty of opportunities. Our defensive coaches have done a great job."

Noll said he was apprehensive, "scared to death," before Sunday's game because of the injuries plaguing his Steelers.

"Whatever fears I had going in," he said, "they were set aside" by the extra personnel of "our people."

Originally, Noll singled out quarterback Terry Bradshaw, who returned to the lineup after missing two games with a neck injury. Reggie Harrison, who played the entire "second" half when a charity horse sustained a fracture, and the wheaky fourth-quarter Bradshaw to Frank Lewis to Bradshaw's Randy Gorman pass-play that brought the game to life.

Chargers coach Tommy Prothro called the broken maneuver a "High School Flurry" play and Noll was asked to respond. "I have no argument with Tommy Prothro," he said. "That was it. He was asked, a 'High School Flurry' play?"

"Whatever it takes," Noll replied, laughing. Then he turned to his men.

"We were very happy with the way Terry finished up, he looked very strong," he said. Bradshaw went in when rookie Mike Kruczek suffered a slight neck injury late in the first half.

"I wanted him in sometimes," Noll said. "It was in the back of my mind that it would be in the second half. But then we needed offense and he was most familiar with the two-minute stuff."

Harrison, who gained 108 yards in 13 carries, didn't surprise Noll.

"He's a different kind of runner," he said. "That's one of the reasons we kept him originally. We need him for that changeup. He doesn't mince footsteps. Just 'piffow' straight through."

Although the Steelers have been surrounded by controversy over officiating in recent weeks, Noll even complimented Sunday's men in stripes.

"I was very impressed with Tommy Bell and his crew yesterday," Noll said. He recalled John Banaszak's fumble-recovery touchdown that resulted when the Chargers muffed a lateral. Advancing a lateral is disallowed by the rules.

"The touchdown's on the scoreboard, the coach comes out and the flags are thrown. The officials were proven wrong. They picked their flags up and ate them. They took those points off the board. For them to do that, well, to me it looks something special."

New broadcast union proposed for sports

RADNOR, Pa. (UPI) — In an open letter to the three major U.S. television networks, the editors of TV Guide magazine Monday suggested the creation of an American Broadcasting Union to bid for and broadcast international events.

The proposal, outlined in the magazine's Nov. 6 issue, would enable ABC, CBS and NBC to secure U.S. broadcast rights for events such as the Olympic Games at a price comparable to what other government-operated networks pay.

The magazine said the proposal would require approval of the Department of Justice, should be implemented in time for the bidding for television rights for the 1980 Summer Olympics in Moscow.

"The Soviet Union reportedly is asking $100-million for the rights."

"I suggest the time has come for American networks not only to stop chasing the carrot being held out to them by the Soviets," the magazine said, "but to work together to establish a more equitable system of paying for televising the games around the world."

The magazine said the formation of an American Broadcasting Union would enable the ABC, CBS and NBC television networks to "share the expense of buying rights and would then be on an equal footing with broadcasters in other countries."

The magazine said the government-operated networks are "quite happy to have an American network pay the lion's share of televising the Olympics."

ABC paid $25 million for television rights to the recent Olympics in Montreal while the European Broadcasting Union, representing Western European broadcasters, paid $45 million. The group representing Eastern European broadcasters paid $2.5 million.

Ohio's 'seven year war' even up

CINCINNATI (UPI) — The Cincinnati Bengals have finally pulled even in Ohio football's "Seven Year War."

When the Bengals beat the Cleveland Browns 21-0 Sunday, it marked the sixth victory of the last seven meetings of the Ohio rivals for Cincinnati.

The series, which began in 1970 and has featured two games a season the past seven years, now stands even at 7-7.

Cleveland's early dominance over the expansion Bengals, taking six of the first seven confrontations, now seems like the distant past.

"Although the Bengals surrendered 319 yards to the Browns Sunday, most of the credit for the win still went to the Cincinnati defense because they tightened down when they had to."

Cleveland was thwarted on five good touchdown opportunities—first-and-goal at the four, five and nine-yard lines and first downs on two other possessions at the Cincinnati 12 and 20.

"They made a lot of yards on us all day, but we stopped them when we had to," said Bengals' linebacker Jim LeClair, who participated in nine tackles. "That usually makes the difference, and it did Sunday."

The victory pushed Cincinnati's record to 6-2 as the Bengals remained in first place in the AFC Central.

"It's good to be on top of the hill and let the rest of the teams come after us," said coach Ron Carpenter, recalling recent years when the Bengals have been struggling to catch the Pittsburgh Steelers in the division.

The Bengals, always tough at home, have been exceptionally stingy on defense at Riverfront Stadium so far this season, as Carpenter pointed out.

"Through four home games we've only given up a total of two touchdowns," said Carpenter, who helped out Sunday's cause with a sack and a fumble recovery. "That's really something to be proud of."

At home, Cincinnati has held Denver to just one touchdown in a 17-7 win, permitted Green Bay only one TD in a 28-7 romp, shut out Tampa Bay 21-0 and yielded only two field goals in the 21-0 triumph over the Browns Sunday.

Coach Bill Johnson also is bragging about his defense.

"Sometimes we do give up too much (yardage), but the intensity with which we play overcomes that," he said. "That was pretty much true of our goal line situations Sunday."

The Bengals, with playoffs obviously on their minds, entering the Los Angeles Rams in a nationally televised game next Monday night.

Hayes takes Pensacola final

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — President Gerald Ford turned to Ohio State Coach Woody Hayes for help Monday in his final push for votes in the Buckeye State.

The President in Columbus for a "non-invited" Hayes to be by his side.

Hayes, a strong supporter of Ford's candidacy, joined the former Michigan Wolverine captain, passing up his weekly meeting with the local media for the first time in his 26 years as Buckeye head coach.

"Coach Hayes was asked to participate by the Ford people," said Mike Homan, Ohio State sports information director. "He said he would try to make it back here in time, but I don't think he will."

Instead of Hayes, reporters heard, from assistants John Mumney and Alex Gibbs, both of whom talked about last weekend's 47-7 win over Indiana and the upcoming game against Illinois.

"We had a hook of a revenge motive against Indiana," said Gibbs. "Our whole objective was get after them. We made mistakes, but they were aggressive mistakes. We hit Pensacola, Fla. (UPI) — Mark Hayes, a 27-year-old pro from Stillwater, Okla., fired a five-under-par 66 Monday to come from two strokes behind and win the $125,000 Pensacola Open by two shots.

Hayes, who earlier this year won the Byron Nelson Classic, shot four birdies on the front nine and added two more on the back nine. His only bogey was on the par-four 15th but rebounded with a birdie on the 16th hole and pars on each of the final two holes.

The victory was worth $25,000 for Hayes, bringing his total winnings for the year to $151,699.

Lee Elder, the tournament winner in 1974, finished second at nine-under-par 75 for the 72 holes.

Frank Beard shot a 70 Monday and finished tied with Tom Purtzer for third at six-under-par 72. Purtzer shot a 60 tied for fourth were George Archer, Chi Chi Rodriguez, Jerry McGee and Phil Rogers, all with 79.

"It really feels great," Hayes said. "The last four or five weeks I've really been playing bad."

He said he missed the cut in three of the last four tournaments he played, but last week made some changes in his swing, and got a new set of clubs.

"I guess I've finally found a set of clubs that I can use. I also got a new utter that I started using this week," he said. "When I really felt like I was going to win, was on the practice tee this morning. I changed my setup. Before I had trouble hooking, but today I hit a lot of real strong drives. It was beginning to wonder what it was going to take—I didn't think my swing would hold up until this morning."

Hayes said it was useless "to go out and try to win a tournament. You just kind of got to let it happen. You can't try to win. You've got to let the birdies fall where they may and avoid the bogeys as much as possible."

Hayes' first birdie came on a 40-foot putt on the par three second hole. He sank a two-footer on the fifth hole for a birdie three, then dropped in a one and a half foot putt on the next hole, a par five. He finished the front nine by holing a six-footer on the par fourth hole.

After turning in 31, he sank a 15-foot putt for a birdie

New support bill drawn

By BERNARD BRENNER
UPI Farm Editor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Acting on orders from Chairman Herman E. Talmadge, D-Ga., of the Senate Agriculture Committee, Senate farm aides have begun drafting a proposed new farm bill which would base crop supports on farmers' production costs.

The draft, which presumably will be used as a framework for committee decisions on the actual shape of a new farm law next year, reportedly would set support "target prices" for grains and cotton at the full cost of production.

Crop loan rates, which are used in combination with the target price system, would be pegged at about 80 percent of production costs in the preliminary draft proposal, sources said.

Senate experts warned, however, that it was too early to indicate specifically what this plan would mean to farmers and consumers in terms of actual price floors. Calculating production costs on a nationwide basis for farm crops is a tricky exercise, with a great deal of room for disagreement on some major details, one specialist noted.

The twin target and loan support plan, which was written into farm law in 1973 and also, would be retained without change in Talmadge's draft bill.

Under this plan, the Agriculture Department announces a basic crop loan floor and a support target for wheat, corn and other major crops. The loan serves to set a basic floor under open markets because farmers, if they find the market weak, can hold their crops off the market by pledging them as collateral for support loans.

The target prices, in all cases, are set above the loan. If market prices at the end of a season average below the target, the government gives farmers a direct payment to cover the gap between market and target levels.

This year, for example, the wheat target price set under a rigid formula in the 1973 law is $2.30 a bushel. The wheat crop was initially set at $1.50 a bushel but recently was raised — under strong pressure from farmers — to $2.25 a bushel.

The 1973 law is effective through the 1977 crop season. The new law which Congress will try to pass early next year will apply to 1978 and later crops — and that's one of the problems facing Senate aides drafting a proposed new bill.

Actual government estimates on crop production costs are not only full of variables but are currently available only for 1974, although 1975 figures will soon be available. But the new law must deal with 1978, and even if actual figures for that year do not have to be administratively proclaimed until late 1977 or early in the following year, the hard estimates will be available and some way would have to be found to project probable costs.

If that problem is satisfactorily solved, Congress would still have to agree on just what the cost of production means.

A recent study by the Agriculture Department showed, for example, that 1974 national average costs-for-wheat included $2.04 a bushel for so-called "variable" out-of-pocket costs plus an allowance for overhead and a return for management.

If land costs are added in an attempt to cover total production costs, the situation really gets complicated.

For farmers who bought their land many years ago at comparatively low prices, for example, the report estimated land costs at 60 cents a bushel, bringing the total 1974 cost to $2.64 a bushel. But many farmers own land bought recently at higher costs, or are paying rents reflecting current conditions.

For them, the higher land expenses produced a wide range of total costs going up to $3.54 a bushel.

Support prices based on the costs of the high-cost producers, economists say, could mean a windfall for the lowest operators.

Jimmy Carter farm advisers, meanwhile, say Carter is "quite specific" about favoring a price support system that would peg supports "at or near the cost of production."

President Ford's farm advisers have resisted the idea of a rigid tie between support floors and specific estimates of total production costs because of fears that this could lead to a surplus buildup and a new round of problems for agriculture.

In the same volume, however, Ford farm spokesmen say he wants to approve some increases in supports to take account of the fact that production costs have risen. Ford himself has said he wants the 1973 farm law extended without major change except for some increases in support rates to reflect increasing costs.

New gas source?

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Pacific Gas and Electric, joined with Southern California Gas in hiring Hamilton Standard Co. to determine what facilities are necessary to convert cattle manure to methane — a gas similar to natural gas.

PG&E guesses that 30 million cubic feet of methane a day could be produced by feeding wastes in Imperial, Fresno and Kern counties alone.

The main method under study is anaerobic digestion, the conversion of solid waste by action of bacteria in the virtual absence of oxygen. The same process is used in sewage disposal plants.

An end product of anaerobic digestion is a sludge valuable as fertilizer.

Filer bull sale entries decline

By MARJORIE LIERMAN
Times-News writer

FILER — Uncertainty about beef prices and the increased cost of production brought a sharp decrease in the number of bulls sold at the 37th annual Fall Range Bull Sale.

Only 63 bulls went through the sale ring at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds which usually sees over a hundred bulls for sale at the annual event. They brought a total of $49,510 for consignors, or an average of $78.17 per bull.

Grand champion bull was consigned by Kenneth Naugle, Nampa, and brought $1,700 from the UX Ranch, Ruby Valley, Nev. Reserve champion, consigned by Ralstin Hereford Ranch, Craigmont, sold for $950 to Smiley Ranch, Deeth, Nev.

The 63 head of bulls were judged and sorted into three in class A; 18 in class A-minus; 28 in class B plus and 14 in class B.

Naugle said he was well satisfied with the price his grand champion brought, considering the way the cattle market is at the present time. He said he remains optimistic about the cattle business and market and believes it will improve.

"It will have to get better on a lot of cattlemen are going to be forced out of business," Naugle said. He is the son of Wayne Naugle, who was honored for many years of cattle raising at this fall's Twin Falls County Fair and Register of Merit Hereford Show.

Piero Pica, Challis, and Jack McCroskey, University of Idaho, were judges for the sale. Auctioneer was Ken Trout, Caldwell. Jim Faulkner, Bliss, was sale chairman.

Bread price, sale link said 'absurd'

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Wheat Growers Association said news stories linking wheat sales to Russia with higher bread prices are "grossly inaccurate" and "absurd."

Executive Secretary Harold West said the reports are "absurd" — particularly in view of the large amount of last year's wheat still on hand when this year's harvest began.

Bob Geddes, Banida, association vice president, said farmers are losing money on wheat and if anything they need to sell more wheat overseas.

He said the United States consumes only about one-third of its annual wheat production, leaving the remainder for export.

"The truth is, we didn't sell enough wheat overseas last year and the result is we have a wheat market that is 75 cents to 1¢ below the cost of production," Geddes said.

He said the farmer's share for the wheat in a one-pound loaf of bread has decreased from 25 percent to less than 13 percent.

Alfalfa wins nod over timothy hay

MOSCOW (UPI) — Idaho horsemen may be overlooking the nutritional advantages of alfalfa by exaggerating the value of timothy hay, a University of Idaho agronomist said today.

A scientific study in Pennsylvania has disproved the timothy-is-best theory of horse feeding, Dr. H.A. Guenther, extension agronomist, reported.

"Tests were made with 25 forage rations — and the best results came from feeding alfalfa hay together with smooth bromegrass or timothy hay," Guenther said.

He described as "completely wrong" the idea that digestive disorders are the price horses must pay for enjoying alfalfa hay.

Nutritional information about horses is important to every family that buys a horse for recreation, Guenther said.

Guenther gave horse owners the following tips:

— Facts about nutritional needs are available from county offices of the University of Idaho Extension Service.

— Forage should be analyzed in order to determine how much hay to feed and to make sure the ration is balanced.

Exports seen key to '77 spud crop

WASHINGTON (UPI) —

Consumers should be cheering a current effort to expand potato exports because it could help assure them ample supplies next year, an Agriculture Department report indicated today.

"Plantings in 1977 may well depend on export sales this winter," economist Erank E. Hokana warned in the report.

Hokana noted that potato exports already appear headed for high levels because drought-stricken European countries have been making large purchases in this country.

At the same time, however, he said American farmers have produced a record crop currently estimated at 16.9 million metric tons, and domestic potato prices are low.

"U.S. potato growers currently are facing prices about $1 per hundredweight below last year's low level, and in many instances still below break-even costs despite growth in export activity."

"To maintain production next year at its current level, prices may well require the stimulus of increased exports," the economist added.

Hokana noted that although potato crops in most European countries this year have been cut by the drought, Canadian production is currently estimated to be up 13 percent from a year ago and Canadian producers are also expected to make sales to Europe.

MOSCOW, Idaho (UPI) — The University of Idaho College of Agriculture Consulting Council will meet in Moscow Wednesday through Friday to review the college's potato program and selected graduate programs.

The council will tour research and academic programs of the college and review research and extension budgets, developments and requests.

Committee members from throughout the state are expected to meet for the three-day on-campus meeting.
