MICHAEL PAPAPOPOULOS, 11 is hugged by his aunt, Kathy Papadopoulos, after she and her husband were awarded custody of the young millionaire. Michael was orphaned in 1972 when his parents, two brothers and grandmother were killed in an auto crash. Insurance worth more than $50,000 was awarded him then, and in testament will push the amount to more than $1 million.

Smokey dies at age 26

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Old Smokey, bear, a 26-year-old black bear who became one of the nation's most famous animals as the symbol of fire prevention campaigns, died Monday night in his sleep at the National Zoo.

"It was just old age," said a spokeswoman for the Agriculture Department's Forest Service after the bear was found dead in his cage early today.

Old Smokey, who was officially retired as the symbol of the service's forest fire prevention campaign in April, 1975, and replaced by a younger Smokey, hadn't come out of his cage for several days and was being watched daily, the spokeswoman said.

"When they went in to check him this morning, they found he had died," she said.

Kidwell seeks 'fair share'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Idaho's attorney general, Wayne Kidwell, Monday asked the U. S. Supreme Court to guarantee his state a "fair share" of Columbia River salmon and steelhead.

Attorneys general of Oregon and Washington asked the high court not to become involved in the interstate fishing dispute. Slade Gorton, Washington attorney general, said: "If you do, let me assure you that you will be involved in it forever."

Idaho is suing Oregon and Washington seeking membership in the Oregon-Washington-Columbia River Fish Compact which regulates commercial fishing in the river. It is asking the Supreme Court to determine what share of the fish belong to Idaho, where about half the fish are spawned.

Orphan wins day in court

CHICAGO (UPI) — Chicago's millionaire orphan, Michael Papadopoulos, now has a mom and dad.

"I'm not gonna celebrate, I'm gonna say a prayer of thanks," the 11-year-old boy said after a judge approved his adoption.

Michael had to go through a series of court battles to stay with, and become the legal son of, his aunt and uncle, Katsina and Dimitrios Papadopoulos.

He was orphaned four years ago when his parents, two brothers and a grandmother were killed in an auto crash. Michael was in the car, but escaped with only scratches.

He is due to become a millionaire on his 18th birthday because by that time, the $750,000 in insurance money he received is expected to have grown to $1.4 million. It is his when he reaches adulthood.

His day in court Monday was without incident.

"I want to be adopted," he told Circuit Court Judge Helen F. McGillicuddy. Said she, "I think you are going to be a happy little boy."

St. SIMONS ISLAND, Ga. (UPI) — President-elect Jimmy Carter, vacationing on the Georgia coast and studying planning papers for the White House transition, is staying so secluded not even some of his top aides can reach him.

Carter and his family intend to leave the white, sandy beaches Thursday morning to fly back to Plains aboard an Air Force executive jet. President Ford put at his Democratic successor's disposal.

Among the hundreds of personnel considerations Carter is weighing before taking office next January 20 is a purely political decision — picking a new National Democratic Party chairman to succeed Robert S. Strauss of Texas, who announced his resignation Monday.

Strauss, who is helping plan the inauguration which will formally return the Democrats to the White House after eight years of GOP rule, said he will leave Jan. 21, the day after the ceremonies.

Carter plans to meet with Ford to personally discuss the transfer of power, but both men are vacationing and no meeting time has been set. Their go-betweens — transition director Jack Watson for Carter and White House chief of staff Richard Cheney for Ford — are in frequent contact to smooth the change.

Carter ends vacation Thursday

Carter's press secretary, Jody Powell, has conducted daily briefings during the brief vacation, but he called off the Monday session and was out of contact in the evening.

"When we came down here, we said it would be an opportunity for him to study and rest," Powell said. "We said we don't intend to make major announcements down here."

Powell, a Carter intimate since the 1970 campaign for governor of Georgia, said even he had not been in touch with the president-elect.

When Carter returns to Plains Thursday, continuing to confer with aides and political advisers about appointments and executive organization in Washington, he faces a personal problem closer to home.

Powell said Carter will attend a congregational meeting of the Plains Baptist Church next Sunday, when members vote on a proposal to oust the Rev. Bruce Edwards as pastor. The congregation is also expected to deal with repeal — or reinstatement — of a 1965 rule forbidding blacks to become members.

Carter has said repeatedly he backs Edwards and opposes the all-white rule. Black reporters have accompanied him to the church, but no blacks are members of the congregation.

HAGERMAN — Four determined citizens criticized Hagerman City Council members and Mayor Ben Holl Monday night for their generosity in approving city water hookups to persons outside the city limits.

Clyde Clifford presented a petition signed, he said, by 76 other city taxpayers who resented the open-handed policy of allowing out-of-town residents to receive city water.

Hagerman Council draws ire

"You people think you're in your own little world. You're supposed to represent the taxpayers." Dave Howell told the council.

Both Clifford and Beutler said they felt there "has got to be a limit" somewhere on this policy, even though Mayor Holl assured them Hagerman's water supply which comes from the Thousand Springs aquifer, is unlimited.

Magic of Hemingway doesn't work in Twin Falls

Lipstick isn't that bad a movie. It's an interesting flick, one which vividly portrays the horror of a woman who gets raped and then has to prove in court she really didn't enjoy being battered and abused by some sleazy weirdo.

Still, "Lipstick" isn't the kind of movie which is going to bring out the crowds.

During its one week stand at the Twin Cinema, Margaux's lips have attracted less than 650 viewers, according to Wayne Kullander, manager of the Twin Cinema.

"It's not exactly what I'd call even a moderate grosser," Kullander said Monday.

Twice as many people have seen the mediocre John Wayne movie "The Shootist" which is showing next door to "Lipstick."

As a trickle of people filtered into the theatre Monday most said they came to the show to get a look at Idaho's girl in the movies.

"Local girl makes good, right?" said Larry Larson, when asked why he came to see "Lipstick."

Shell Nelson, a childhood friend of Margaux in Ketchum was one of 30 people to pay $2.50 for "Lipstick."

"I heard it was a bad movie," Shell said between munches of popcorn, "but I wanted to see what she looks like now. I was her friend in Ketchum."

Once the lights dimmed and the Los Angeles skyline flashed on the screen, Margaux Hemingway seemed a far cry from some country girl gone to Hollywood.

A credit viewer noticed pictures of Margaux in Sun Valley sitting on the dresser as the camera panned Chris McCormack's Los Angeles apartment.

And, in the end, Margaux does display some Idaho marksmanship to even the score against the man who raped her and her sister in the movie.

Boiler bill at $8 million

By BOB ZUCKERMAN
Times News writer

BOISE — Idaho Power Co. faces a nearly $10 million charge because it cancelled work on boilers and generators being built for its proposed Pioneer power plant.

The company which began work on a boiler for the proposed coal-fired plant near Boise is now asking for $8.5 million as a cancellation charge, an Idaho Power Co. official said today.

Another $1.1 million is being asked to cover the costs of cancelling a contract for a turbine generator no longer needed.

It has not yet been decided whether Idaho Power customers or the utility's stockholders will pay the cancellation charges.

Idaho Power signed two Pioneer boiler contracts with the New Jersey company, Foster Wheeler Corp., long before the Idaho Public Utilities Commission (PUC) in September denied the utility's request to build a coal-fired plant at Orchard.

Since then, Idaho Power has traded away one boiler contract to Portland General Electric Co. The Oregon utility will use the boiler in a coal-fired plant under construction in Boardman, Ore.

Foster Wheeler is apparently asking for the $8.5 million to cover cost of preliminary work on the second boiler, according to Robert Brown, Idaho Power's public relations director.

The $8.5 million is part of $16.5 million Idaho

Power estimates will be the actual expenditures so far on the Pioneer Plant proposal. Utility officials made the estimate at a hearing on accounting procedures before the PUC Monday.

The $16.5 million includes about $9.8 million in cancellation charges. Besides a boiler cancellation charge, Brown says other estimated cancellation charges include $1.1 million to General Electric Co. for preliminary work on one turbine generator, $50,000 to Westinghouse Corp. for feed water heaters, $40,000 to Ingersoll-Rand, Inc. for condensers and auxiliary equipment for condensers, and $13,000 to Tubeco, a company, for pipes and pipe fitting work.

Brown said all cancellation charge estimates are "subject to negotiation and subject to the possibility that the equipment cancelled might be used in another plant at a later date."

Actual expenditures also include about $6.7 million for design, engineering and environmental studies already conducted, Brown said.

At the PUC hearing, Idaho Power adjusted its estimate of actual expenditures from $16,541,035 to $16,534,553, an increase of $153,918.

At the hearing, Idaho Power requested it be allowed to amortize the actual expenditures over a 10-year period beginning in 1977. Earlier Idaho Power requested the money be amortized over a 10-year period beginning in 1976. The PUC has not made a decision on the request.

Mini firm

RUPERT — The Minidoka County Planning Commission will stand behind its recommendation for rezoning of land in the Burley-Heyburn area despite legal doubts expressed by the county zoning administrator as to its legality.

The commission decided Wednesday that Chairman George Falkner would write a letter to the Minidoka County Zoning Commission clarifying reasons for the planners' recommendation that the land be rezoned as commercial (C-1).

The land in question lies immediately west of 650 West Road in the area North of Burley. One of the affected parcels had been sought for a drymix concrete plant, but the Utah firm last week withdrew its request on the parcel.

The planning commission had recommended the change from residential-agricultural to C-1 zoning.

McCall calls for Andrus

PORTLAND (UPI) — Gov. Cecil Andrus of Idaho is sure to be secretary of the Interior in the Carter administration, according to former Oregon Governor Tom McCall.

"I'm sure," McCall said Monday he had been contacted and asked if Andrus' name could be put on lists for possible appointment to several posts in the Carter administration, including secretary of the Interior.

McCall, now a television news man in Portland, commented that "I have already endorsed Cecil Andrus for that post, (secretary of Interior)." He added that he considers Andrus sure to be appointed to that job.

25 hostages released from vault

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Twenty-five hostages, seized by gunmen who bungled a robbery at a home appliance store, were rescued, unharmed Monday night by the store owner who returned to the building to free them from a vault that only he could open.

Two suspects were captured, but two others were believed to have escaped. Police finally called off a search of the building just before midnight after determining no more suspects were inside. No one was hurt and no shots were fired during the five-hour incident.

Police said the ordeal began when three men with rifles entered the Columbia Merchandise Co. in suburban Tarzana, some 25 miles northwest of Los Angeles, and announced a holdup. Store owner Sy Gardner, in another part of the store, pressed a button to alert police and fled out the back door of the two-story building.

Police saw a man speeding off in a car. Gardner found a nearby police car, which gave chase, but the man escaped. An estimated 50 police officers, including two units of the SWAT Team quickly surrounded the building, and two of the gunmen inside immediately surrendered.

Police said a fourth gunman remained inside the building and hoisted 25 employees and customers into a walk-in vault at the apartment, then fled to an upstairs storage area.

Police officers afraid the gunman might be inside the vault, but only Gardner could reopen. Gardner reentered the building, aided by a phalanx of heavily-armed police, and unlocked the door. He was taken outside to safety before officers opened the door, guns at the ready, to release the hostages, including an elderly woman and several teenagers, were taken outside the building with their hands over their heads because police still feared that one of the gunmen might be among them.

They were taken in several squad cars to a police station for questioning.

Police kept the building surrounded for two more hours, searching it again with a dog for the fourth gunman, but he had apparently fled during the turmoil.

Ousted China aide still party member

TOKYO (UPI) — A high Chinese official says ousted Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-peng made mistakes that played into the hands of radicals but still is a member of the Communist party, a Japanese newspaper reported from Peking today.

The Tokyo Shinbun said Vice Premier Ku Mu gave that evaluation of Teng during a one-hour meeting with Kabeita Okakaki, retired chairman of All Nippon Airways.

"We criticize Teng's errors, but he retains his status as a party member," Ku was quoted as saying.

Teng, 73, was acting premier of China during the terminal illness of the late Premier Chou En-Lai. He was ousted after Chou's death last January in a bitter power struggle between socialist moderates and radicals within the Communist party.

He said Teng made mistakes that played into the hands of Vice Premier Chang Chun-chiao and other members of the "group of four" now accused to trying to stage a coup to take over the government.

They made use of Teng's errors and plotted to disrupt trade and production," Ku was reported to have said.

Plant grows 18" a night

NORFOLK, Va. (UPI) — A plant at the Lafayette College Park has shot up several feet in the past few days and threatens to grow through the roof.

Sue Morgan, the park's horticulturist, said the "century plant" has not stopped growing since it leaped 18 inches one night last month.

"It looks somewhat like an asparagus stalk," she said. "It's about four inches in diameter; so it's pretty impressive."

Ms. Morgan said she walked into the conservatory Oct. 28 and found the plant had grown a foot and a half since she left the previous day. It has grown another two to four inches a day since.

"I was amazed because it had just sprouted overnight," she said.

MEMBERS of the Los Angeles Police Dept. "Swat" team crawl around counter of a Tarzana, Calif., store in which two suspects were arrested after holding an estimated 25 persons at gunpoint for 90 minutes. The hostages were released unharmed. (UPI)

Indian fighter for Custer to receive military burial

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI) — Arizona Bill was a courier for Gen. Ulysses S. Grant and fought Indians with Gen. George S. Custer. But he was buried in an unmarked grave because the Army could not find his records.

Arizona Bill Thursday will receive the military burial he always wanted because of 39 years of work by an old friend.

"It's about time somebody gave him some honors," said George W. Miller, 69, a retired master sergeant.

Raymond Hatfield Gardner, dubbed Arizona Bill by Gen. George Crook and Nelson A. Miles while acting as a translator when they captured Geronimo, was removed from Brooke Army Hospital and died at age 85 in a county hospital on Jan. 28, 1930, because the Army could not locate his papers, Miller said.

Miller has been trying since the end of World War II to get Gardner a military funeral.

"I presented the fact they killed him out of the hospital over at Ft. Sam after they'd been treating him for years to die in an archaic ward, so I got busy and hunted around," Miller said. "I finally wrote a letter to the Veterans Ad-

Medicaid income list published

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In a move that organized medicine said makes doctors a "whipping boy," the government has published the names of some 2,500 doctors, dentists, labs and druggists who last year received more than $100,000 each for Medicaid services to needy patients.

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare released for the first time the names of those who make the biggest income from Medicaid.

The list showed they are located in areas ranging from New York City's Harlem to Watauga, Hawaii, central Indiana, New Orleans and Detroit.

HEW said it issued the names under requirements of the Freedom of Information Act. But the American Medical Association called public identification of Medicaid's big income doctors "nothing less than an attempt at guilt by innuendo."

"We are tired of doctors being made a whipping boy by publicity seeking bureaucrats and politicians," said James H. Sammons, AMA executive vice president.

"If they want to clean up Medicare and Medicaid, let them go after the Medicaid mills and nursing home operators who prosper in every major city with political protection," he said. "That's the root of the corruption and the fraud and abuse."

Sammons said public identification of big-income Medicaid doctors would only make it tougher for honest ghetto doctors to continue already difficult medical practices.

"If HEW wants to drive medical care out of the ghetto completely, it has certainly hit upon a highly effective method," he said.

The 2,533 doctors, dentists, laboratories and pharmacies listed received a total $445.3 million for their services — or 16.3 per cent of the $2.7 billion paid to Medicaid providers in those categories, HEW said.

The total Medicaid bill to federal and state governments is expected to rise from $15.2 billion in fiscal 1976 to $18.4 billion in 1977.

Lack of pregnancy ends in jail

GENOA, Italy (UPI) — A prostitute who managed to stay out of jail by bearing four children in four years has finally been hauled off by police — for failing to be pregnant.

Rita Luciani Gemignani, the constantly concealing call girl, was arrested and taken to a Genoa jail Monday when her pregnancy test proved negative.

Italian Law No. 146 says no woman sentenced to jail can begin serving her term if she is pregnant or has given birth within the previous six months.

Miss Gemignani, sentenced to 14 months imprisonment for failing to leave various Italian cities where she pled her trade, had obviously read the law — and everytime police called she waved a doctor's certificate proving her unjailable condition.

The result was four children in four years.

Detectives who called on her Monday heard the familiar "I'm pregnant" from Miss Gemignani — but this time she had no certificate.

Not letting her out of sight for a second — in case her condition changed — police drove her straight to a clinic. And when the pregnancy test proved negative, they transported her to Genoa's Marassi jail.

Many female felons in Italy have used the "expectant" law to postpone doing time. But most eventually get caught, or just decide it's all too exhausting.

Britain survives voting

LONDON (UPI) — Britain's Labor government has survived — by a one-vote margin — a crucial vote in Parliament that could have forced Prime Minister James Callaghan to resign and call a general election.

But the party had to summon sick and "walking wounded" members — and even a mother nursing her two-week-old baby — to turn out the vote needed to ensure the government's survival.

The vote, one of three major ones Monday, was on a motion to cut short debate on a controversial government bill to nationalize the aircraft and shipbuilding industries.

The government won by a 311-310 margin, with Frank Maguire, a Republican Independent member of Parliament from Northern Ireland providing the extra vote for Labor.

Mao turned wife in

HONG KONG (UPI) — Before he died, Mao Tse-tung warned his successor of his wife's ambitions to seize power, the Chinese Army newspaper Liberation Army Daily said Monday.

The army newspaper disclosed Mao's warning in an article prepared by the paper's editorial department reaffirming support for Hua Kuo-feng as new chairman of the Communist party. The article was transmitted by the New China News Agency and Peking Radio today.

Mao "personally selected" Hua as his successor because he was tough and trustworthy and had administrative and leadership experience on every level, the article indicated.

"Chairman Mao, before he passed away, told Comrade Hua Kuo-feng the story of Liu Pang (the founding Emperor of the Han Dynasty), who, just before his death, perceived that Empress Lu and others of her clan were conspiring to betray the nation and usurp power," the article said.

This obviously referred to Mao's widow, Chiang Ching, and three of her radical associates who were purged last month.

The newspaper said when Premier Chou En-lai died last January, the "gang of four" pushed their own candidate for the post of premier but Mao blocked their move.

"Chairman Mao absolutely refused to give the power to them and he personally proposed Comrade Hua Kuo-feng for acting premier. The 'gang of four' felt bitter hatred and opposed this with might and main.

"To block their intrigues, Chairman Mao himself further proposed that Comrade Hua Kuo-feng be first vice chairman of the party central committee and premier of the state council," the newspaper said.

Then, "not long after this, Chairman Mao wrote to Comrade Hua Kuo-feng in his own handwriting, 'With you in charge, I'm at ease.' Thus, Comrade Hua Kuo-feng's position as successor to Chairman Mao was established."

Mao, the paper said, always "spoke highly of Comrade Hua Kuo-feng as being experienced in giving overall leadership to the work of a county, a prefecture and a province and in working at the central level."

Israel halts visit to site

TEL AVIV (UPI) — Israel has barred a high-ranking delegation of U.S. senators from visiting its top-secret atomic plant in the Negev Desert, but the Americans will apparently try again.

Sources in Jerusalem said they expected the senators to raise the question in meetings today with Commerce and Industry Minister Chaim Bar-Lev, nuclear scientists and other officials.

The delegation is on a tour of the region to check safeguards for American nuclear reactors promised to Israel, Egypt and Iran.

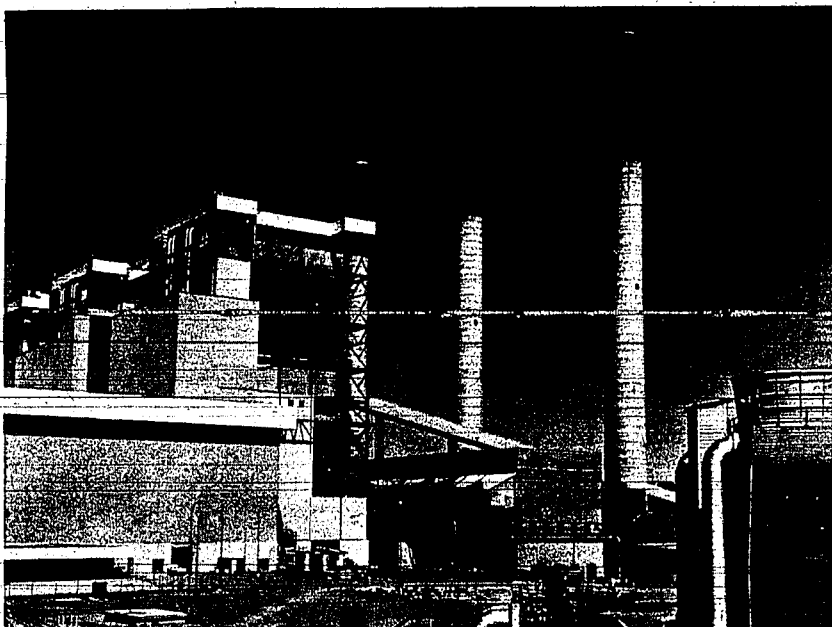

The sources said the request to visit the plant was first turned down when the delegation planned in Washington last month and then again when the senators arrived Sunday.

"The decision stands," they quoted Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin as saying after he met the delegation, headed by Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn. and Howard Baker, R-Tenn.

Jim Bridger's Third Unit

— greater protection for your electric supply

Coal power from Jim Bridger. You may rely on it more than ever before for electricity.

In recent weeks the third generator at the coal-fired Jim Bridger power plant began commercial operation. While it doesn't add to Idaho Power's total energy entitlement from the plant, it does provide back-up protection should generating problems affect either of the first two units.

STOPGAP POWER SUPPLIES: With other planned generating additions — a fourth Bridger unit, a fifth generator at Brownlee Dam, increased capacity at American Falls and part ownership of Oregon's coal-fired Boardman plant — our growing service area should be assured of enough electricity until the early 1980's.

Coal power from Jim Bridger. You can depend on it. Chances are the next time you switch on a light you'll be using it.

High priced butter not helping farmers

Each morning in this country millions of kids pour milk over their cereal for breakfast. Thousands of working people find midday satisfaction in grilled cheese sandwiches. At night, families in every section of the country sit down for a bowl of ice cream.

In total, about 13 per cent of the average American's food budget goes to milk and dairy products each year.

From the average man's perspective, the dairy business probably would seem to be a booming concern.

Oddly, even though most consumers pay more for a glass of milk than they do for a glass of beer, the dairy business isn't a very good bet for most small farmers.

In Idaho since 1973, more than 20 per cent of the small dairymen have abandoned dairy farming.

Between 1969 and 1974, national dairy farmers dropped from 600,000 to 300,000.

All the while, the price of dairy products from butter to ice cream to milk continues to go up.

Idaho still is one of the most profitable states to try dairy farming. Idaho farmers get more money for their milk than other farmers in the Midwest.

But even here, the dairy farmer isn't getting rich, at least the small farmer.

Idaho is far from any major markets. Transportation costs are high here and the price of machinery, including freight, from eastern and midwestern manufacturing points, adds to the cost of Idaho dairy operations.

To add an even more troublesome twist, the national price paid for raw dairy products went down six per cent at the end of October, while consumer prices went up.

Something is wrong. Unless the small farmers can get a fair price for their product, dairy industry will face even worse problems in the future.

The dairy business is rapidly becoming the domain of big national co-ops. These groups can manipulate the prices of dairy products on the national level, leaving the consumer with little choice but to pay the prices demanded by the big co-ops.

If regulations are needed in the dairy industry, their focus should be on controlling the dairy co-ops.

In addition, the government perhaps should investigate the percentage of markup retail sellers of dairy products take on their products. Too much of the middlemen are eating up too much of the dairy profits.

Back on the farm, the dairyman shares a similar plight with the consumer. Neither group has much control over the price of milk.

A good place to start a re-visit of the nation's dairy policy would be to make sure smaller farmers get a fair share of the profit from milk products.

Consumers, please note. America's farmers aren't the ones getting rich off high-priced butter, milk and ice cream.

North five points greatly improved

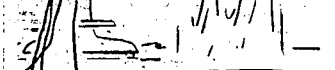

Twin Falls drivers who use the north five points intersection welcome the improvements made at the intersection by the Idaho highway department.

The traffic snarls which made the intersection a nightmare only six months ago are gone.

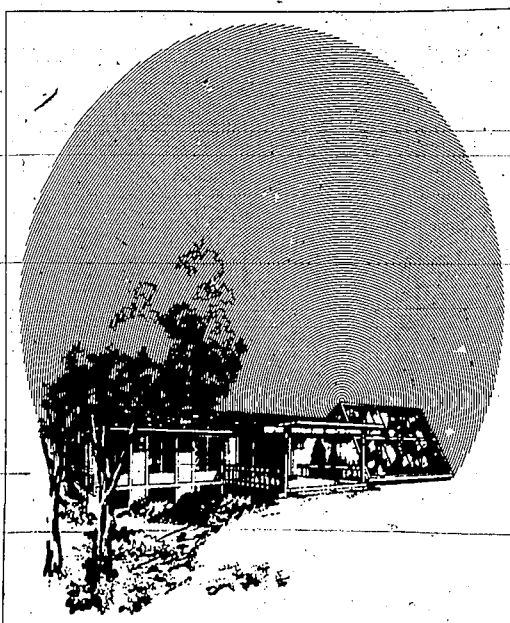

Even at 5 p.m. when the peak number of cars funnel into the intersection of Shoshone, Blue Lakes and Addison, the wait-between-lights is much less and the ease of making turns is noticeable.

Nice going, highway department.

Idaho's future tied to water supply

Several years ago our thoughts and our emotions were electrified by the announcement that pumps would be installed below Hagerman, that the Snake River would be pumped and repumped in a 3,000-foot lift, then dumped into the Colorado River, then pumped over several California mountain ranges to the coast.

What has been done to meet and beat this eminent aggressor? Have we formulated enough safeguards to protect our water for the future development of Idaho? Millions of acres feet of water are still wasting over the Milner Dam.

The few states we are throwing are not likely to stampede the California engineers into hiding. They are going full steam ahead in order to satisfy their ever increasing need for water. They are big and they are bold. They have 43 representatives in Congress, we have two. Can our small representation stem the onrushing upheaval that will erupt in the halls of Congress when the 40-year, moratorium expires? Can we?

The California advance guard has made its plan known (1963). It is a sinister forerunner of trouble, for Idaho industry, Idaho agriculture, the man who wants recreation, the sportsman, the fisherman, the economy of the state, and the individual.

Can we take a close look at several angles they are pursuing? They are past masters at water grabs — it is a frightening pattern — they are not making their plans, their blueprints, their expensive surveys as idle brainstormers, they are sincere dedicated planners. If they can get their foot in the door (get even a portion of our wasting water), their vote in congress will control, or at least limit our future. Our economic expansion will be lost along with our lost water, loss of tax income for the state, loss of individual income, loss of even the fish and wildlife. The Owens River water grab, even the minimal flow is in the pipeline, as well as the minimal flow of the Snake River, just remember they have a rather impressive vote in Congress.

If Los Angeles takes our water south, we will be the palebearers (our electricity) to transport the water over the 3,000-foot lift.

Snake River water surely is our inherited estate. Senator Jordan has warned us many times of the danger of losing our water. He is the authentic water expert of our time. As well as being an authority on Idaho's water problems, he has had experience with the problems of national and international waters.

It's much later than we think. We must wake up and take heed of the words of wisdom as Senator Jordan, Vernon Riffe, and others who have a concern for the land, water and the future of our State of Idaho.

The Oakley reservoir (in Cassia County) is about 400 feet above the Snake River. Surely enough spring and winter waste water from the Snake could be pumped into the reservoir to fill it to capacity each year, at a profit, if California can pump the same water seven times that high, suffer a sizeable evaporation loss in the 1,000-mile trip and then they can still sell it at a profit.

Some of the canals and laterals are already in and in use below the Oakley Dam. The same theory could possibly be used to fill the Salmon Falls Dam, although the river bottom is somewhat lower. It's still 7 times less lift than the southland plan. The canals and laterals are already built for the entire Salmon tract—the Roseworth Reservoir is close at hand, too.

It's quite possible the California interests will demand a right-of-way across the Salmon tract for their pipeline. Too expensive you say? It might be a favorable figure to compare with bringing the water from the river to the Oakley Dam and the Salmon tract which would irrigate only a portion of each tract.

The Oakley Dam, the Salmon Dam and the Roseworth Dam — here is storage that is already built and waiting for the water that is running to waste. Too expensive — the Snake-river route, into Canada, Montana, Texas, and even into Mexico. The Bruneau Plateau "perhaps the most potentially productive land in our state" could and should be irrigated with the water which is flowing through this area into Oregon and down the Columbia. We also mention the Mountain Home desert and other feasible areas.

We cannot longer debate the wisdom of putting water on new land. The Suburban is not debating the advisability of fulfilling their ambitious plans. They have our water on their projection boards, and it is certain they are ready and waiting to spring the trap as soon as the moratorium expires. In fact the attempt has been made to cancel the moratorium.

Water is the most precious natural commodity in the world. It's especially true in southern Idaho.

New land must be developed to offset the loss of 2,000 acres that were taken out of production for the building of the freeway system across America. The way the indicator is pointing at the present time we cannot maintain our food producing ability.

In the last six years 40,000 acres of agricultural land have been lost to urban sprawl in Idaho. The population increased 120,000 in the same period in this state. These figures were taken from the state water plan Part II Snake River Basin, Idaho Department of Water Resources. Multiply these figures by 10 years, or 25 years or 50 years, the amounts are staggering. It is not difficult to see the speed of our rapidly depleting food production.

First and foremost is the protection of the established water rights up and down the Snake River basin. These prior rights also need protection from the renewed efforts that will be exerted when the moratorium expires.

Idaho has many favorable sites for the building of multipurpose dams. Up river dams are the only answer to the damaging annual flooding that takes its toll each year. It's possibly the only way to control the minimal flow of the river.

Two more dams in Hells Canyon would produce 6 billion kilowatts annually. It has been stated that this would only be a drop in a bucket, however, Idaho Power along with the other power companies have brought Idaho a long way and up to the present time have supplied most of our needs.

Now! — Do the environmental groups have a stunted perception of the needs of the present and future needs of the majority? The free-flowing rivers are a perfect target for the out-of-staters. Are the Idaho environmentalists playing our water into the hands of the thirsty southland? It has been stated that most all of the muscle for these groups comes from California. Perhaps the environmental groups fall to provide the magnitude of our responsibility to feed and vision for the future generations. From all outward appearances the drum-beating environmentalists have as their slogan, "anti" — anti new dams, anti new agriculture, anti coyote control, anti well control, anti wild horse and burro control, anti timber and mineral removal on millions of acres of forest land — anti Idaho Power — anti Pioneer plant — anti nuclear power, and if they follow their anti policy, they will oppose thermal and solar power.

The same groups want to preserve square miles of the Bruneau desert for the birds of prey. All there is to preserve is sagebrush, the preserved coyote have eaten the last jack rabbit, the last ground squirrel and the last mouse. It's rather needless to say that the birds are not able to survive on sagebrush. They will have to fly to agricultural districts for their food. It's quite evident that the ecology groups have defeated their own purpose. How many pheasant eggs will the coyote need to satisfy his appetite day after day after day, how many young age grouse, how many partridge. How long will a young fawn last in a den of coyotes?

The day is coming when the environmental groups will have to recast their thinking and come forth with beneficial programs and meet the rest of the citizenry on common ground. The delaying action has been in progress too long. The shortness of time is very critical. It will take years to get dam construction under way again, — if the water is still in Idaho. Can any normal thinking man blame the thirsting water short basins for wanting water that is going to waste?

However, we do need clean air, the rivers and lakes need cleaning, the environs both far and near are cluttered with bird-cast refuse. No man with upright thoughts wants to see the birds off or see the last drop of water taken from the river. Nevertheless, my own thoughts are that a very very minimal amount of water should go down the river. No water should be wasted, furthermore, if very much goes down the river, someone will make a grab for it.

US trying to tap solar energy from outer space

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government is spending almost a million dollars to look for the best way of building solar power stations in orbit and beaming vast amounts of electricity back to Earth.

The multi-agency contract awarded to Boeing Aerospace Co. launches the most serious study yet of how to tap the sun's energy 23,000 miles out in space, beam it earthward by microwave and use it to power the fuel-hungry.

If the dream turns to reality, bright new constellations of power satellites may sparkle in the night sky sometime near the end of this century.

Boeing experts say space power stations would be immensely expensive — so much so, in fact, they hesitate to predict the multi-billion dollar cost.

A single orbiting station might be up to nine miles across, generating as much electricity as several nuclear power plants, and ultimately there might be up to 20 such stations in space, they say.

But the experts also believe power satellites could pay for themselves if, as Boeing predicts, conventional fuel costs increase more than 20 per cent in the next decade and more slowly after that.

"I am not going to tell you that power satellites are feasible," Boeing vice president Richard Taylor said earlier this year. "We think they may be, but this must be proved and it is no easy job."

The $970,000 study is financed jointly by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, which awarded the contract, and the Energy Research and Development Administration. Boeing won over two other firms — Rockwell and Grumman — to get the award. The contract is split into two phases.

During the first five months Boeing will examine the selection of solar energy conversion techniques and the location of their construction in space.

In the final seven months the company will try to compute as precisely as possible the costs of space power programs and seek ways to reduce the size of the equipment that would be put in orbit.

Beaming and other aerospace firms have developed several concepts in the past several years for gathering the sun's boundless energy in space and beaming it to Earth by use as electricity. Two of them:

— Orbiting a series of huge reflectors, covering perhaps 25 square miles, which would focus sunlight into a central furnace, heating gas to drive a turbine generator and produce electricity.

— Orbiting a huge field of solar cells that could transform sunlight directly into electricity.

Both concepts call for putting the satellites in orbit about 23,000 miles in space, where each would hover over a single spot on Earth. Satellites would appear motionless when viewed from the ground and would be in sunlight 99 per cent of the time.

Electricity generated by the satellite would be turned into microwaves, beamed to antennas some five miles in diameter on Earth, turned back into electricity and fed into the normal power grid.

Carter, Ford both viewed as safe men

Chicago Daily News

WASHINGTON — Jimmy Carter's election as President of the United States last Tuesday may not prove to be the most stirring event in recent American history. But it was reassuring in one major respect. The process turned up two safe men, and the voters chose one of them.

In their narrow choice of Carter, they tapped an achiever. Carter wanted the job worse than the other fellows in his own Democratic Party, and on the other side as well. It was perhaps Gerald Ford's misfortune to discover too late that, in spite of the side judgments about his mental agility and executive competence, the job of being President was not all that forbidding or awesome. He came to like the job, feel comfortable in it, treat it with dignity, and reverence, and restore it to a Trumanesque proportion — which was right for Ford, as it had been for Truman, because both men came to it by accident and neither considered himself preordained to be President. They were modest men, indeed.

The wish for something more heroic in Carter and Ford was wishful. If the tumultuous '60s did not cure Americans of their romantic notions about the American Presidency, Richard Nixon did. It was a curse Ford could not exercise, and in this reporter's opinion, he could not separate his Republican allegiance from his loyalty to President Nixon and it was too much of a handicap against Carter. One of the most common comments heard hereabouts, and in many curious spots across the country, was that "at least, that Nixon crowd will be out!" The Nixon scandals ran deep and bitter, and were seen in a clear light as a betrayal of the public trust.

And yet, despite the albatross he bore, Ford almost won. The closeness of it had to be put down as a mild critique of the former Georgia Governor who lost his link with "the pee-pul" somewhere along the way. A sho-in in September, he barely edged out his victory in November. It was not a decisively affirmative vote, but the tentativeness of it should induce a healthy humility in an operation that showed disturbing signs of arrogance and aloofness during the campaign.

As the election fades, some lingering thoughts may be in order. One wonders how often Ford and his managers second-guessed Ford's surprising choice of Kansas Sen. Robert Dole as his running mate. Dole's impact, from most accounts, was amazingly adverse.

If Ford had been bold enough to resist, the yahoos of his own party and kept Nelson A. Rockefeller as his vice president, would the result in New York State have been different?

The nightmarish notion must hang there like a childing specter in the long night. — It would have been a crowning irony and a mockery of the Republican's right wing if Rockefeller had been the instrument for returning a conservative Republican to the White House for a full four-year term in his own right.

Former California Gov. Ronald Reagan — could he have made the difference if he had extended himself as the White House desired? Rushing to Mississippi, for example, to embrace Ford in the campaign's last days? Will Texas' John Connally, on a losing streak, manage to reverse his form and galvanize GOP moderates against a possible Reaganite grab to control the Republican Party?

And what happened to the pecksniffs of the land? Apparently, they couldn't mount a revolt against those congressmen accused or convicted of illicit sexual engagements. With one or two conspicuous exceptions, the voters returned the so-called offenders to their House seats. They were tougher on those-suspected of shady money deals. It might be noted finally that the election ended without re-accriminations, with a remarkable reservoir of goodwill toward the candidates and the process after what amounted to a pedestrian, uninspiring, low-level campaign.

Students adrift in job market

HOUSTON (UPI) — A national survey indicates high-school students have almost no concept of actual work or how to qualify for jobs they think they'd be good at.

The survey, released Monday by the National Assessment of Education Progress, said most students were overly optimistic about getting the jobs they wanted, but many could hardly fill out job applications.

"Everyone wants to be a winner," said Dr. Roy H. Forbes, director of the group. "Everyone wants to be successful."

"It appears that most students know primarily about occupations they have observed or that are talked about in the media," Forbes said. "Neither the students' studies in school nor their experiences in chores and part-time jobs have given them a realistic and comprehensive understanding of the world of work."

Forbes said the survey, given in 1973-74 to 100,000 persons, showed 44 per cent of the 17-year-olds polled desired a professional career. He said, however, census figures indicated only 20 to 25 per cent of currently existing jobs were in the professional category.

In analyzing the results, he said the group found half the youths had difficulty writing a job application and figuring a finance charge. He said about 54 per cent correctly answered five questions about the amount of training needed for a specific commonplace job.

Forbes said those teen-agers aware of their skills and abilities did not appear to pick jobs that corresponded to those skills or abilities. He said they needed more facts in career orientation.

"For too long society has focused on a college education as the key to success in the working world," Forbes said.

Catholics debate issues

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The nation's Roman Catholic bishops are considering what they hope will be a major statement of principles on moral issues from birth control and divorce to racism and the nuclear arms race.

The proposed pastoral letter on moral values, "To Live in Christ Jesus," sets forth the context for dealing with issues facing the family, nation and international community.

The proposed statement, presented to the National Conference of Bishops Monday and debated in small groups, will not be voted on until Thursday.

Today, after hearing from Apostolic Delegate Archbishop Jean Jadot and receiving a series of reports from various committees, the bishops — in executive session — will begin a discussion of the touchy issue of divorced and remarried Catholics.

Jadot, in his speech to the 250 bishops attending the four-day conference, singled out the shortage of priests as "one problem that we will have to face very soon — at most within 10 years..."

He said he was concerned that "so many of us... do not seem to be concerned that, if not today, then in a very few years, we will not be able to staff our parishes and institutions with priests as we did in the past."

"In some regions," Jadot said, "priests are dying in their 50s from overwork," and he called for giving "greater responsibilities to the laity, both men and women."

Jadot said a second problem was with the size of Christian communities, noting the increased interest in smaller communities.

He wants to end it

GARY MARK Gilmore, 35, has asked the state to execute him in connection with the shooting death last July of The Utah Supreme Court. However, he has stayed the Nov. 15 execution date to permit an appeal of Gilmore's conviction and the sentence. His left hand is bandaged from a self-inflicted gunshot wound.

Killer fights against life

POINT OF THE MOUNTAIN, Utah (UPI) — Condemned killer Gary Gilmore asked the Utah Supreme Court Monday to let him die before a firing-squad next week with grace and dignity.

"Let's do it," Gilmore said in a handwritten letter sent from his cell at Utah State Prison. He also asked that an attorney be appointed to help him fight for his right to die.

The court considered the admitted slayer's first letter Friday before opening the way for a stay of execution with a 3-2 decision. The stay had not been granted Monday because a request had not been filed by Gilmore's former lawyer, whom he had dismissed, nor by attorneys for other inmates on Utah's Death Row.

Warden Sam Smith said he was in the process of selecting a five-man firing squad for the execution next Monday, which would be the first execution in the nation since 1967.

"I have been sentenced to die Nov. 15 at 8 a.m.," wrote Gilmore, who has admitted killing a Provo, Utah, motel clerk during a robbery last summer. "This thing involves nobody but the sentencing court, myself and the firing squad."

"Don't the people of Utah have the courage of their convictions. You sentence a man to die — ME — and when I accept this most extreme punishment with grace and dignity, you, the people of Utah, want to back down and argue with me about it."

"We're silly. Look, I am sane, rational and more intelligent than the average person. I have been sentenced to die. I accept that."

He told the justices that any efforts by his former attorneys, by the lawyers representing two other Death Row inmates or by the American Civil Liberties Union "to stall or delay or appeal" his execution "are to be considered null and void."

"These people do not represent me," Gilmore wrote. "It is my opinion they seek nothing but personal publicity."

He asked for appointment of counsel to represent him in fighting for the Nov. 15 execution, noted appeal is not mandatory on death sentences in Utah, and he wanted to see Dennis Boaz, "a freelance writer and former attorney," and refused to talk to other members of the news media.

Public defender Mike Espin, one of Gilmore's two fired attorneys, said Monday he planned to file for a stay of execution, but he did not set a time.

Warden Smith said he does not if the execution will take place as scheduled, "but I have to assume it will as far as preparations are concerned."

Smith said he was in the process of selecting the five volunteers who will man the high-powered rifles. He said the squad would not include prison personnel. In the past, the warden has said he has a long list of law enforcement officers and other volunteers.

As in past executions in Utah, Smith said, he expected one of the rifles would contain a blank shell.

The convicted slayer, who first got into trouble with the law as a 14-year-old runaway and has spent half of his life in jail, was paroled to Utah in April by Oregon authorities. He was arrested in July on charges of killing a gas station attendant and a motel clerk on successive nights in the neighboring towns of Orem and Provo, located about 40 miles south of Salt Lake City.

He was convicted of slaying Bernie Bushnell, 25, a Provo motel clerk, and sentenced to die by the same jury after taking the stand and admitting he fired a shot into the back of Bushnell's head. Given the choice of hanging or being shot, Gilmore chose the firing squad. His first degree murder trial for the Orem killing has been indefinitely postponed.

Second debate did Ford in WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford was in the midst of the greatest comeback of all time until his second debate with Jimmy Carter, when it "fatally stalled," says pollster George W. Gallup Jr.

"That debate, in which Ford said Eastern Europe is not under Soviet domination, was the 'most decisive moment' of the campaign," Gallup said Monday in a speech to an electrical industry convention and at a news conference afterwards.

The second debate was on foreign policy, and Gallup said, "It fatally stalled President Ford's comeback, which, until that time, was the greatest in polling history."

Carter led by as much as 23 points — 18 when the campaign began in September, and Gallup said his poll showed the two candidates in a "virtual tie" just before the Oct. 6 debate.

"President Ford in effect was beaten on his own turf," Gallup said. "The most decisive moment was the second debate in this campaign."

In addition, "Strong efforts by local Democrats to get out the vote, concern over the economy and the decline in the vote for independent Eugene McCarthy all contributed to Mr. Carter's victory."

Carter had his huge lead because he was increasingly perceived as "out of where the voters see themselves," Gallup said.

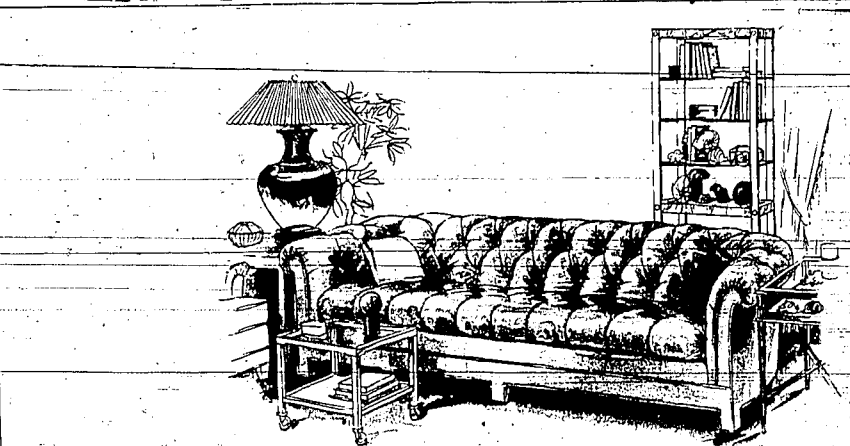

The Nixon pardon, amnesty and women's rights were the lowest of among 20 issues of voter concern, according to Gallup.

"The high cost of living was No. 1, No. 2 was unemployment, No. 3 was the between-federal spending and crime," he went on. Carter's interview with Playboy and former Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz' comment about blacks had little effect, he said.

Gallup said it was the closest election in history in terms of the number of states — 28 — in which a shift of three percentage points would have changed the outcome.

Despite voters' rejection of Ford, he said, the President contributed to optimism about the country. He said 65 per cent of the people in a recent poll were "highly favorable" about the United States compared to 72 per cent in 1973.

"The mood of the nation improved rather dramatically over three years ago," Gallup said. "When the history of the Ford administration is written it will be remembered as an administration that did a great deal in restoring the confidence of the nation."

Lottery winner

JOHN Sartoretti of College Point, Queens, New York, jumps for joy Monday after winning $1,000-a-week for life in the second grand tier drawing of New York State's "Empire Stakes" Lottery.

Newest millionaire plans to fulfill his classic dream

NEW YORK (UPI) — America's newest millionaire plans to fulfill the classic American dream of owning a Cadillac, vacationing in the sun and not working for the rest of his life.

John Sartoretti, 26, Monday won $1,000 a week for life — a guaranteed minimum of $1 million — in the second of four scheduled grand drawings in New York State's "Empire Stakes" Lottery.

The bearded winner used to install specialized equipment for the New York Telephone Co. in the Wall Street area. Now he plans to go to church a little more often and hopes his one chance in 25 million payoff won't make him "a showoff or a snob."

"All right! All right!" Sartoretti screamed when his name was called out by emcee/entertainer Jerry Lewis.

"You're a large kind of person," he said to Lewis, who raises funds for Muscular Dystrophy. The winner immediately pledged an amount in the "high four figures" to the fund.

Dora McIntosh, 23, Louis Castro, 32, and Lols Bagel, 42, each won $25,000. Five others each won $10,000 and 74 persons shared in $370,000 with $5,000 apiece.

"The first thing I'm going to do tomorrow is go out and buy a Cadillac — maybe a red one — and give my '73 Pontiac to my sister," Sartoretti said. "I'm not going to work. I might stop by Friday though, and pick up my paycheck for petty cash."

He'll take a month off to "get used to doing nothing for the rest of my life" and take his blonde 26-year-old wife Pat, his 3-year-old daughter Cathy, and his mother and father to Bermuda for a vacation.

Mrs. Sartoretti said, "I don't know what we're going to do now. I know that we can now buy the kind of things we never thought we could have."

The winning ticket was one of five Sartoretti bought. Another earned him $5.

"There must be something shining down on me," he said. "I'm Catholic and I haven't been going to church lately, but I'm going to start going now."

Family survivors get big surprise

PIERRE, S.D. (UPI) — South Dakota Economic Development Director Bob "Big Boy" Martin's 16 friends as a quiet, dedicated family man.

How much of a family man wasn't known until the 52-year-old official died three weeks ago of a massive coronary.

Attorney General William Janklow said it was learned after Martin's death that Martin had a wife and four children, ranging in age from seven to 25 years, in Pierre and another wife and five children, ranging in age from one to 27 years, in Sioux Falls.

Both families are filing claims on his estate.

Martin was married to his Pierre wife, Mary Lou, 47, for more than 25 years. He married his second wife, Pat, 23, of Sioux Falls, shortly after his move to South Dakota in February of 1964.

Pat Martin said she had no idea he had a family in Pierre.

"Martin's last salary checks and his personnel file have been impounded by the state until a court determines who will administer the estate."

Martin, who earned between $16,000 and $22,000 a year since 1967 in state posts in Kansas and South Dakota, was instrumental in the state's current industrial boom, especially in the eastern portion of the state.

He was known to friends as a quiet, dedicated man. He traveled frequently between the Pierre and Sioux Falls, where the main office of the State Economic Development Division is located, often spending several days in each city.

Martin's boss, Jack Allmon, South Dakota secretary of tourism and economic development, described Martin as a reserved, quiet man who didn't socialize much and said Martin's Pierre family was "very close."

Authorities said a Minnehaha County grand jury in Sioux Falls would determine "whether any laws have been violated and that includes, specifically, the use of state funds in an improper manner."

Officials also said Martin's travel and motel vouchers in both cities would be checked for irregularities.

Professor studies cancer treatment

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — A University of New Mexico Medical School professor says he's discovered a method of growing human cancer cells outside the body that could lead to more effective cancer treatment techniques.

Dr. John M. Yuhas, also associate director of the UNM Cancer Research and Treatment Center, said the laboratory-grown cells show the same tissue organization as tumors inside a body and, therefore, should show similar responses to drug or radiation treatment.

"It's a means of having the tumor grow just as it would in the body," Yuhas said at a news conference Monday.

"The goal of the project is to develop a means of predicting the best treatment for an individual cancer patient."

Yuhas, who said he discovered the new technique accidentally, said a small portion of cancerous tissue is removed from a patient during a normal biopsy. The few cells in the tissue are placed in a specially prepared dish, and within a few days, they grow into cell clusters, or spheroids, similar to cell growth within a body.

Previous cell-growing techniques took months and produced disorganized single cells rather than the spheroids. The method developed by Yuhas and other researchers at UNM can produce cell clusters in as little as two days and the technology is simple.

Yuhas said he discovered the process last summer while trying to isolate cancer cells. He said he ran out of the medium in which the cells were usually placed and put them in a dish coated with a substance called agar. He found the spheroids a week later.

"We have proven that this technique works with human biopsy material, but its use in treatment planning is several years down the road," he said.

"We are now testing experimental tumors from animals to determine whether the responses of the derived spheroids are able to predict the responses of the tumor."

John Dean sees 'end'

DENVER (UPI) — John W. Dean III, the former presidential counsel, says he believes the repercussions of Watergate ended with Jimmy Carter's election.

"The tentacles will wither and die," Dean said while visiting Denver Monday on a promotion tour for his book. "But the nation can't guarantee that it won't happen again. You can't legislate morality."

Dean warned that President-elect Carter and his aides must avoid losing touch with the real world now that their greeting campaign is over and they are preparing to move into the White House.

"It happens to anybody," Dean said. "It's a very, awesome place, the White House. The prerequisites are unreal."

Luciana introduces new exercise book

CHICAGO Sun-Times — Luciana Avedon leads the kind of life fairy tales are made of.

She lives in Rome, New York and Switzerland, where she skis cross-country. She is married and has two college-age children and a high-paying job — doing television commercials for Camay Soap — that requires only a month of work a year. She's about to go on a vacation to Switzerland and the Far East.

In between, she visited Chicago to talk about her new book, "Luciana Avedon's Body-Book," (M. Evans and Co., $10.95), which she co-authored with Jeanne Moll.

The book is illustrated with Chicago high-fashion photographer Victor Skrebneski's pictures of Mrs. Avedon in a bikini. Mrs. Avedon, who says she is 41 and who looks fine in a bikini, believes leotards hide some of the facts.

She's been exercising for 16 years, ever since her Roman masseur told her, "You don't need massage. You need to build up your muscles."

She went to exercise class anticipating no results. Instead, she lost inches. "I became hooked," she said in her softly Italian-accented low voice.

Youths face taste test

TASTING dairy products could lead to a career for Future Farmers of America students Sam Wiseman, left, Andy Wiseman and Don Bennett, Twin Falls, shown with Karl Nelson, general manager of Young's Dairy, who has provided training and experience in tasting dairy products to help prepare the students for the National FFA Milk Quality and Dairy Foods Contest in Kansas City, Mo., Wednesday.

By KEN HODGE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Three Twin Falls vocational agriculture students may have a job future in the dairy industry if their taste buds are sharp enough.

Their tasters will be put to a test Wednesday in Kansas City, Mo., at the National FFA Milk Quality and Dairy Foods Contest at the 49th annual Future Farmers of America Convention.

Andy Wiseman, Sam Wiseman and Don Bennett, members of the Twin Falls FFA Chapter and students at Twin Falls High School, have successfully competed with other milk-tasting teams from around the state and are representing Idaho at the national competition.

"They say the experience gained in tasting dairy products like cottage cheese, milk and cheese could lead to gainful employment in the dairy industry."

And one man in Twin Falls, already employed by Young's Dairy in a capacity similar to that coveted by the boys, agrees with them.

"Experience is the name of the game," Mike Meyer, quality control man at

Young's says. "Many guys out of college will go into quality control and, if they want, they can try to get into production management from there."

Meyer says he has a degree in food science and actually does very little tasting of dairy products in his job since modern methods of analysis "make" more "scientific" tasting possible to control quality of products sent to market.

"Right now we have a lot of other ways to taste these products," Meyer explains. "I try to refrain from tasting the raw milk samples. I taste the finished products."

Meyer describes one method of testing raw milk received from a producer as smelling for a bad odor. He says he heats a sample of one producer's milk in a plastic container and opens it and "takes a whiff" of it to test for impurities.

"I am not on a par with a wine taster," Meyer says about his profession. "They are dealing with smaller differences than I am."

Meyer says Young's Dairy, however, does place a heavy emphasis upon sensory evaluation of milk products.

Meyer adds there are many opportunities opening up right now for new people in the quality control business.

"I think that trend is going to continue," he adds. "Dairies are mainly looking for people with experience."

And experience is just what the three young students from Twin Falls are getting by participating in FFA and the contests that are part of the programs offered by the organization.

The Wisemans and Bennett must complete tests on milk production and marketing. They will be expected to identify flavors and odors in milk and cottage cheese and to identify hard cheeses by taste.

The students must demonstrate their knowledge of milk quality by scoring sediment pads.

According to Meyer, sediment pads are filters through which raw milk is passed to collect any foreign matter which may be present.

"The pads are graded according to how much sediment is filtered out of the milk," Meyer explains. "Some milk may contain dirt, straw or other matter."

The students have been practicing their to-judge-and-tasting skills for about a month under the direction of Young's general manager Karl Nelson, who has provided samples and instruction in quality control.

Nelson, too, is an example for the students of what experience in dairy quality control can mean in terms of a career. He once held Meyer's job and is now in his present production position.

The students will travel to Kansas City with their adviser, John Gibson, and an alternate, Julie Carney.

New career?

New evidence given on famed duel

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A weapons expert says Alexander Hamilton booby-trapped with a hair trigger the pistol he used in his famous 1804 duel with Aaron Burr, but gripped the gun so tensely it accidentally "fired" ahead of time.

Merrill Lindsay, who helped examine and reproduce the pistols for the U.S. bicentennial Society of Richmond, Va., said the study of the weapons used in the early morning confrontation at Weehawken, N.J., more than 170 years ago suggests legendary accounts of the duel were wrong.

The bad guy, according to legend, was Burr — Thomas Jefferson's vice president who later was charged with treason for "planning" to set up a Mississippi Valley empire.

Burr demanded satisfaction after a letter in the Albany Register referred to Hamilton's "despicable opinion" of him.

When the two met July 11, 1804, Hamilton was mortally wounded but gasped before he died that he had not intended to fire.

His pistol actually went off and its ball struck a tree behind Burr, 12 feet up.

Lindsay said Hamilton chose to fight with a pair of pistols purchased by his brother-in-law, John B. Church, in London. The guns were said by Church's granddaughter in 1930 to the Chase Manhattan Bank, who allowed them to be examined by experts for the Richmond group.

"We had to take the original pistol completely apart to authenticate the reproduction," said Lindsay. "It was when we removed the lock from the stock that the long-kept secret of the concealed hair trigger came to light."

Both guns had concealed hair triggers — what a modern target shooter would call a single-set trigger, Lindsay said.

"By using them, Hamilton could surreptitiously set his hair trigger without anyone's noticing, he wrote. "This would give Hamilton a theoretical advantage by allowing him to shoot very quickly with a tiny, half-pound squeeze on the trigger."

"Burr's gun had the same 'tricky' trigger," but "Burr" probably didn't know it. He would fire with the ordinary 10- or 12-pound-pull. With his pistol, the hair trigger set, Hamilton ... boobytrapped himself that morning of July 11 in Weehawken," Lindsay contended.

Idaho gets grant

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. Cecil Andrus today announced receipt of a $53,000 federal grant for energy conservation planning and education he hopes will cut back consumption five per cent this winter.

Andrus said $20,000 of the money will go to the Idaho Conservation League for publication and statewide distribution of a brochure on conservation of energy. He said the rest will be used by the Idaho Office of Energy for preparation of a state energy conservation plan.

Education report says schools need changes in classroom

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A new report on education says American high schools need reforms so students will learn to cope with the world outside instead of being merely subjected to academic and social "aging vats."

It recommends gradual shifts to classroom days of only two to four hours, freeing students to spend more time at such practical pursuits as observing community government and helping to run their own schools.

"Both as an institution and as a social concept, the American high school will remain the keystone of this nation's educational system," says the 142-page report prepared for the U.S. Office of Education. "However, it requires orderly reform."

As it is now, the report said, high schools have become "aging vats" that have isolated "adolescents" and delayed their opportunity to learn adult roles, work habits and skills.

The report was prepared by a panel of academicians, researchers, school superintendents and students. It was described as the first comprehensive study of high school education in a decade.

It recommended reducing the length of the high school academic day, starting with seniors and working down to other grade levels as opportunities become available for outside study of the arts, media and other fields.

"A two-to-four-hour day is a necessary concentration of effort by the musician, football player, dancer, politician or scientist," the report said.

"The present all-day high school is a costly intruder on this need for both time and program variety."

The report also says the schools should give students the chance to try, and fail, in the art of self-government.

"The schools need to be laboratories for error in learning the roles of citizens," the report said. "This means realistic participation in the operation and management of the school."

"It is the only fail-safe institution available for learning the consequences of neglect, venality, and the appeals of power. Studied experiments in such consequences should be part of the schools' curriculum in citizenship," it said.

Oilman says Carter's cabinet 'vital'

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Jimmy Carter's selection of cabinet members and agency heads will be vital to the future of America's energy supplies and of big business in general, an oil industry executive said today.

Frank Ikard, president of the American Petroleum Institute, said Carter's plans to let federal agencies operate independently of day-to-day influence of the White House will represent a major change from the recent past.

He said he welcomed that change, but that it means the selection of individual agency heads will determine the outcome of declines between government and industry.

"Now we're accustomed to operating in a framework where what a White House staff member says about something is really more important than what a cabinet member says," Ikard said.

"I think this suggested change that Carter makes is great, because you will know who you are dealing with: From the early stages of the Kennedy administration, through Johnson to Ford, you never knew who really was making decisions."

The wondering about who will head federal agencies was just one of many questions in the air at the API annual meeting, the first major industry conference to be held since the election.

U.S. oil men said they were taking a wait-and-see attitude towards Carter, but they expressed concern about the future of their industry because Carter's energy plans remain largely a mystery.

TWIN FALLS — In September, County Prosecutor William Hollifield called in the state attorney general's office to investigate irregularities in the sheriff's office.

Sewage called worst polluter

MOSCOW, Idaho (UPI) — Industrial sewage was cited more than any other source as the culprit of water pollution in two southwestern Idaho counties in a recent survey conducted by Dr. John H. Hallaq, associate professor of business at the University of Idaho.

Hallaq said today his survey covered more than 1,000 households in Ada and Canyon counties in southwestern Idaho, site of Boise, Caldwell and Nampa and a substantial agricultural area.

"City people named industrial sewage as a major cause of water pollution less than expected," Hallaq said. "Those outside cities, some on farms and ranches, believed livestock grazing less responsible for water pollution than city dwellers."

He said city-dwellers underplayed other urban sources of pollution, while their rural counterparts were relatively more tolerant of agricultural pollution sources.

Overall, Hallaq said, the source of water-pollution cited most often was industrial sewage, aimed by about one-quarter of the respondents. He said almost 15 per cent named municipal sewage and approximately one in five blamed either septic tank systems or irrigation waste waters.

Water pollution was third out of eight items ranked as problems, at concern by respondents, with inflation first and property taxes second, Hallaq said. He admitted that because the questionnaire designed water quality assessment as its purpose, this may have caused some bias toward consideration of water pollution.

Nevertheless, he said he felt its rank indicated significant concern among the respondents. Water pollution outranked "traffic" pollution, growth, air pollution, school system financing, unemployment and noise pollution.

"Despite their concern with water pollution, Hallaq said, respondents were somewhat unsure about water quality in and the two cities."

Asked to rank nine statements by level of agreement, he said, the respondents agreed most often that the nation's waters should be protected for wildlife and recreational use whenever possible. They disagreed that present control of water pollution is adequate and were undecided about the acceptability of present water conditions in the area, he added.

Hallaq said a majority felt local government in some form should control water pollution with only 3.2 per cent wanting federal government control.

CB radio — an eye catcher

MERCER, Pa. (UPI) — Thanks to the citizen band radio craze and a Pennsylvania truck driver, a 12-year-old girl may be able to see out of her right eye again.

James Lewis of Sarber, Pa., known to his CB pals as "Sweet Pea," organized a coffee break donation stop at Howard Johnson's Motor Inn along Rt. 80 near Mercer, Pa. over the weekend, flagging truckers and other motorists over the air waves.

Tammy Siegrist, of Meadville, Pa., lost sight in her right eye at the age of five in a freak accident.

Several weeks ago Tammy and her family learned a Michigan hospital could restore her vision if the family could raise the $2,000 operation cost.

Lewis learned of the story while chatting with the girl's grandmother on a CB.

The donation program raised a total of $2,500 and another $300 was promised.

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — An executive of a tractor factory stepped out of his home in a suburb west of Buenos Aires today and was shot to death by a young man and woman believed to be leftist terrorists, security sources said.

The victim was identified as Adolfo Valli, a retired air force colonel working as personnel relations manager for the La Cantagracia tractor and truck factory.

Children's Book Week

Tale of homonyms

Rather than the simple summer tea party anticipated by the deer, at left, and several other animals when they boarded the boat, an incredible tale of homonyms and rhymes lead them into a conflict with the King of Rain.

Their experience is explained in "How a Horse Grew Hoarse on the Site Where He Sighted a Bare Bear," and is recommended for elementary school students.

"Book-Magic" is the theme for National Children's Book Week set Nov. 8 through 14.

During this week, families are encouraged to read together and to stop by the Twin Falls Public Library for reading material, storytelling and after-school films.

Films will be shown each day but Thursday at 4 p.m. in the Story Corner downstairs in the library.

At 11 a.m.- Saturday, youngsters 3 to 7 years old are invited to the library for storytelling and at 2 p.m. youngsters 8 to 13 years of age can enjoy the film, "Nanna Beh's Friend."

Books, stories and films

Holiday greetings

A mouse leads other animals, including this big bear, at left, through the proprieties of what to wear and what not to wear for the holiday.

In typical style for author, Ellen Raskin, "Twenty-two, Twenty-Three" culminates in an outlandish holiday greeting on the pages of this book recommended for pre-school and elementary school students.

Animal problem

What would you do? Just what would you do with a kangaroo, top, who jumps in your window and sits on your bed?

Or, a kangaroo, opossum or llama and others who keep popping up in your bathtub or your breakfast cereal?

Mercer Mayer's spunky heroine in "What Do You Do With a Kangaroo?" cleverly throws them out.

Bicycle magic

To challenge a dragon can be an experience by itself and Michael will take you through this experience as well as on a fantastic journey in "The Stolen Mirror," right.

Michael would much rather have a bicycle than the expected new baby and when a bicycle magically appears, he creates an adventure to unusual places with the elves.

Wizard's spell

A slightly inept wizard casts his spells which are demonstrated through the techniques of optical art at left.

The wizard explains in "The Wizard of Op" that the pages are printed with plain black ink on plain white pages and any shadows, flashes, color seen will be illusion in your own brain.

Abby

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1978 by Chicago Tribune, N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: You've printed several letters about incest, including one suggesting that it could be the fault of the girls for tempting men by wearing provocative clothing.

Well, when I was a skinny 12-year-old (with a 28 AAA bra) I suffered the torment of hell when my own father couldn't resist my "Twiggy" figure.

I married the first man who asked me just to get out of the house, but because of those nightmarish experiences I was frigid and my marriage failed. I was forced to move back with my parents, and my father started in on me again. That's when I moved out for good.

Since then, I have heard of many cases and I was glad to see it mentioned in your column. Men like my father don't deserve to be protected, Abby. I wish someone had let me know sooner that I should speak up instead of keeping quiet and feeling that I was in some way to blame.

Keep up the good work!

BORN TOO SOON

Kids should speak up

DEAR BORN: Incest frequently goes unpunished because the victims dread the humiliation of publicity and they fear reprisals. Children (both boys and girls) should be encouraged to speak up if anyone takes liberties with their bodies.

Adults who sexually use youngsters are sick, and their behavior is criminal. And the consequences of their crimes sometimes leave emotional scars that remain for a lifetime.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is beyond solving, but my loss might be someone else's gain if you print this.

My beloved father recently died after a mercifully brief illness. He will be remembered by his children and grandchildren with respect and admiration, but I regret deeply that I do not have one picture of this beautiful man that isn't over 20 years old. I am so sorry that I didn't insist that my father have a really fine portrait made showing his beautiful gray hair and the character lines that time etched on his lovely face.

All I have are a few very bad snapshots taken on a fishing trip six years ago.

TOO LATE FOR ME

DEAR TOO LATE: Thanks for an excellent idea. I'll pass it on.

DEAR ABBY: I'm glad you didn't tell NORMAL AND HEALTHY AT 17 it was all right to go all the way with her boyfriend just because she felt something "special" for him.

I had the same weakness for when I was 17. And the number of boys I "felt something special for" grew to nearly 50 guys by the time I was 20. I finally lost my mind. I'm sure you can understand how I felt. One of those guys I felt something special for ever asked me to marry him. After all, who needs a swinging wife with no self-control?

your health

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb, I need your advice concerning my varicose veins. I went to a surgeon this past week who specializes in varicose veins. I asked him for advice on a bump that I had on a vein in my leg. He told me I should be operated on for my veins.

I would like to get someone else's opinion before going ahead and getting the operation. I never had a vein in my leg until I had my first child — now 20 years old.

My doctor who delivered my children always told me not to worry about the varicose veins because they were from pregnancy. Now after the last child (9 years old) my veins are worse.

Dr. Lamb, my baby doctor was one of the best in the field. Now I realize that he should have told me to take better care of my varicose veins or he should have told me to see a specialist in that field. Now I can't seem to have faith in what the doctor says.

I am concerned that this new doctor is only interested in operating because he is a surgeon. Do you think I should get another doctor's opinion or should I go ahead and have my veins operated on? Is it a serious operation? I know my legs would probably look a lot better.

Dear Reader, There seems to be an inherited weakness to develop varicose veins. Commonly they first appear during pregnancy. The veins in the legs drain into larger veins in the abdomen. During pregnancy the baby presses against these large veins and prevents the normal flow of blood back to the heart.

The pressure builds up in the veins and causes them to become overdistended. The tiny valves in the leg veins cease to work and you have varicose veins. They usually get worse with each succeeding pregnancy.

The lump you mention is probably what we call a "blow-out." There are connecting veins between those you see on the outside of the leg and those veins deep inside your leg. When the valves in the connecting veins fail a spot sticks out which is an enlarged spot in the vein.

What could your baby doctor have done? Probably nothing would have helped much, short of not getting pregnant. You might have gotten some help from wearing support hose or elastic stockings that increase the pressure outside the leg by helping to prevent the over-distention of the veins.

Some years ago such preventive measures were not taken. They are still not used extensively. However, considering the basic nature of varicose veins — stretched veins — I think they are a good idea for anyone who has a family history of this problem. They may also be useful for any woman during pregnancy or those who must stand still for long periods of time.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 58, Varicose Veins, to give you a better understanding of your problem. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Just send your letter to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10101.

After reading The Health Letter if you still wonder about having an operation get another doctor to examine you. If your legs are not bothering you I presume you can get along without it. But if you are concerned about the appearance or are having swelling or other problems surgery is a good approach. It is not a serious operation.

MRS. Mabel Barron, Filor, who has completed 4,000 hours of volunteer hospital service, was presented a special bar and a rose from Mrs. Doris Jensen, a-stalling officer, at the recent Magic Valley Memorial Hospital Auxiliary awards meeting.

FILED: What makes a person decide to volunteer 4,000 hours to help the person and patients in a hospital?

Mrs. Mabel Barron has been a member of the Magic Valley Memorial Hospital Auxiliary for the past 20 years. During that time, she donated 4,000 hours to the auxiliary. She is one of several hundred known as "Pink Ladies" because of the pink smocks they wear. They volunteer their time for a variety of jobs, furnish their own transportation to meetings and work, and even pay dues.

Mrs. Barron was awarded a 4,000-hour bar for her services at a recent auxiliary awards meeting — the first in the area to receive an award for that many hours. She likes the volunteer work, enjoys meeting and working with other volunteers, and through the years has said, "The auxiliary and its work have given me much more than I have given them."

She joined the group after the death of her husband, Late Barron. She became lonely, her life seemed empty, and she wanted to find a way of service to the community.

She spends four hours one week helping with surgical reception, and the next working five hours helping with sewing Pinky Dolls which the auxiliary presents to hospitalized children.

During her 20 years of service, she has mended sheets and done other hospital sewing, made the dolls, delivered magazines, candles and sundries to patients, and with the surgical-reception committee, which takes patients to their rooms. She also helps with admitting and dismissing patients.

People who have had her help them to their rooms before surgery, say it made their pre-operation time a little more cheerful to see a familiar face on their way to hospital rooms or X-ray and operating rooms. Mrs. Barron said she tries to be on hand for the service when she knows a friend or acquaintance is to be taken to a hospital room.

A special pin had to be made to hold the 4,000-hour bar. Mrs. Doris Jensen, who gave Mrs. Barron her bar, also presented her with a red rose, and said she considered it a great honor to be able to give the awards to such a dedicated worker.

South's one-spade overall was about as weak as you will ever see in good competition, but it almost got him a good result. North raised him to three spades and he would have made this contract if he hadn't run into brilliant defense.

West opened the deuce of hearts. East started the good defense by winning with the queen so that he could be sure when the king of hearts was. Then he led back his 10 of diamonds.

South covered with the jack and ducked in dummy after West played his queen. Note that if South took that trick, he would have to lose two hearts, two diamonds and a club.

Now came the crushing defense. West led back a low diamond. This gave South his choice of several ways to lose his contract. If he went up with dummy's ace of diamonds, he would run into those same five losers. So he let the diamond ride around to his nine spot.

Then if he tried to get to dummy with a diamond East would ruin it. If he played out his ace of spades, East would score his king so South led a club. East took his ace, put his partner in with the king of hearts and ruffed a diamond to set South that same one trick.

Little change expected in Gem spud replacement

MOSCOW, Idaho (UPI) — Consumers will not notice a big change when Idaho potato growers launch an expected major change in production replacing the familiar Russet Burbank with higher-yielding varieties. University of Idaho researchers said today.

Walter C. Sparks, a research professor stationed at the Aberdeen Research and Extension Center, told the University of Idaho College of Agriculture Consulting Council, "the size, shape and color of the Idaho potato are familiar to consumers everywhere — and we can't improve on these fine, eye-appealing qualities."

Genetic research aimed at improving the Idaho potato is in the hands of scientists who are being careful to avoid tampering with the appearance of the state's potato.

Experimental varieties, the results of continuing breeding programs of the university and the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Research Service, are undergoing extensive testing at Aberdeen and one new variety is expected to be released in 1977, Sparks said.

The University of Idaho professor said potato breeding research has emphasized increasing per-acre yields, developing plants that have built-in vigor and resistance to plant diseases and improving the potato characteristics which are important to processors and the fresh produce market.

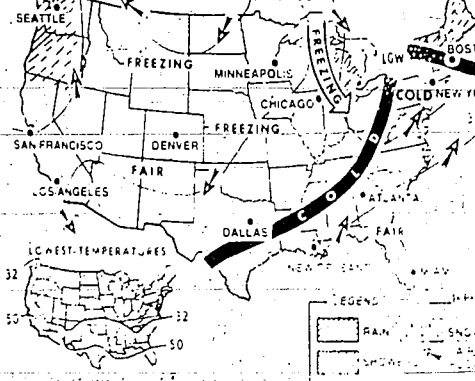

"People interested in potato research are visiting our Aberdeen facility in great numbers. This past summer, in addition to visitors from many sections of the U.S., we had more than 200 foreign visitors from 20 different countries," Sparks said.

Stiff competition

TF students to compete in national FFA contest

By KEN HODGE
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — Three Twin Falls vocational agriculture students will put their dairy cattle judging skills to a test Wednesday in the National FFA Dairy Cattle Contest in Kansas City, Mo.

Maurine Allen, John Holloway and Brent Lampe have trained intensively for two weeks previous to the competition. In addition to judging practice they received in state and local competition with other FFA chapters.

"We had them judge every work day for two weeks," Mike Quessnell, dairy farmer and one of the students' advisers, said. "We wanted to get them to judge consistently, every one alike so they would have a team effort and a good chance of winning."

The three team members, all Future Farmers of America at Twin Falls High School, will view with 43 other high school dairy teams from around the nation for the national title and may go on to other contests from the nationals.

"In the last two weeks the group has practiced judging about 30 different classes of dairy cattle at Harvey Quessnell Ranches and Bingham's Milky Way in Twin Falls and at West Point Dairy and Taylor Dairy in Wendell.

"Judging is like playing football," Quessnell, dairy manager at Harvey Quessnell Ranches, said. "You have to repeat it a lot and practice a lot."

In Kansas City the team will judge nine classes of dairy cattle and will have to give oral reasons for their judgments on two of the classes, according to John Gibson, the team's adviser.

They will be judged on their accuracy in judging and on their dairy knowledge and public speaking ability in giving reasons.

The team judging focuses on four general areas: according to Quessnell.

A good dairy cow is judged on general appearance, dairy character, quality of udder and quality of feet and legs.

"One of these cattle that ranks high in all four of those areas should produce more milk than a cow that does not rank high," Quessnell said.

Quessnell said skills in dairy cattle judging are useful to dairymen in picking good cattle and in keeping the quality of their herd high.

In judging, general appearance is about 20 to 35 percent; udder is about 20 to 25 percent and the other two are about 20 percent, Quessnell said.

"By visual appraisal, an individual can pick a cow that has the ability to produce milk not only in large quantities but also for a long time," he added.

According to Quessnell, visual appraisal is only one way of picking a quality animal. Genetic records are just as important.

"The contest in Kansas City is only for general appearance," Quessnell said.

November time to control weeds

WEEDS in first crop alfalfa may not have much bearing on quantity, he added, but it's in the quality where the producer can lose.

Dr. Cordis said that November is an ideal time to treat in that it allows for maximum winter precipitation to carry applied herbicides into the soils. Later on, treatment may not be as effective since there may not be enough precipitation. At about this time, also, the alfalfa generally ceases to grow and the ground is not yet frozen.

Certain winter weeds, too, may germinate at this time, and treatment can affect control while the plants are emerging. The herbicides remain in the soils long enough to be effective against early spring germination that periods in February or March.

Bond violations restraint ordered

GOODING - Gooding Livestock Commission Co. owners and operators W.D. and Melvin Wiseman have been ordered by the U.S. Department of Agriculture to refrain from violating the bonding requirements of the Packers and Stockyards (P. and S.) Act.

"Under the P. and S. Act, persons in the livestock marketing business are required to maintain a surety bond to protect people who are doing business with them," Al Sylvester, information specialist for the USDA said.

Recount sought on school bond

By GEORGE WILEY Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Petitioners for a recount in last month's school bond election would still like to see the ballots retailed, voluntarily.

The Twin Falls school district, however, maintains that a recount won't be done without a court order. That step does not appear to be forthcoming.

At last month's school board meeting, John and Dorothy Kolar, Twin Falls, presented the board with a petition containing 21 names asking the district for a voluntary recount of the ballots in the $4.9 million bond election for a new Junior high school.

Valers in that election passed the proposed bond issue by a razor thin margin of four votes out of more than 5,000.

Mrs. Kolar told the board last month, and still maintains, that the margin for error in such a close election of itself mandates a recount.

The school board, however, maintained and still maintains that it can't recount the ballots and will only do so with a court order citing alleged irregularities.

Mrs. Kolar said earlier this week that she had heard that at least one polling place was open late on the night of the election, but she added that the court fees for a recount will probably prevent her taking legal action. She said the board should make the recount without court action.

Mrs. Kolar said she has no special interest in a recount other than that the narrow margin leaves room for a "realistic error."

Mrs. James Keegan, who also signed the recount petition, thinks the recount should be done to lay to rest any possibility of error.

"It was so close," she said, "and I fell, just to keep everybody honest, there really should be one. And I don't mean that I suspect anything. It's just that there can be mistakes on that sort of thing."

John J. Schaefer, added, "Maybe they've done a thorough job, but the main thing we're questioning is in an election like close whether there was a chance of error."

Mrs. Kolar said she had heard that the high school, which tallied most of the favorable votes and carried the election over less favorable districts, was open after 8 p.m. on the night of the Oct. 12 election.

However, Assistant School Supt. Camden Meyer said he was at the high school to make sure the doors were closed at 8 p.m.

Meyer admits that several voters had lined up at the polls prior to 8 p.m., but hadn't made it to the booths until after the doors were closed. No new voters were allowed in after the deadline, he said.

Election judges at the high school agree that the doors were closed on time. They also maintain that their count of the results was scrupulous and accurate.

The ballots were counted at least once by each of the three judges, according to Judge Wilma Champin.

"I can't even understand how they could question it (the vote results)," she said. "If they want to go to the trouble of getting a recount, I have nothing to hide."

School Board Chairman Howard Ronk said a recount won't be done without a court order. Had the vote gone the other way, Ronk added, the school district couldn't get a recount without court action either.

Murtaugh approves custodians

MURTAUGH - School trustees in Murtaugh approved new building custodians and renewed insurance coverage on buildings during the regular November meeting Monday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Bud Bessire, Murtaugh, will handle cleaning and care of the school buildings. They took over the duties as of the first of the month.

Castleford audit presented

CASTLEFORD - Tom Candie, accountant for the Castleford School Board, met with the trustees Monday night to present the annual audit.

He told the board he can see no problems in their financial operation. Candie said the school is in good financial condition and operating well within anticipated expenditures.

School Superintendent Richard Peters said several other school matters were discussed, but no actions were taken.

Hansen council meets tonight

HANSEN - City Council members will meet tonight for their regular November council session.

Normally the council meets on the second Monday of each month, but council members attended an Association of Idaho Cities meeting in Twin Falls Monday night.

Complaint filed

TWIN FALLS - A Twin Falls County man has filed a complaint against the Singer Co., a New Jersey corporation, and The Marley Co., a Delaware corporation, asking for $100,000 in damages.

Edward V. Ginder claims the two companies, who each have owned Layne Pumps, Inc., Kimberly, agreed to keep Ginder on the job at Layne when they bought Layne.

Ginder's complaint filed in Fifth District Court there charges he was "wrongfully discharged" in March 1973. The complaint also requests the firms to pay his attorneys' fees.

Rufener hearing slated in January

By SHANE O'NEILL Times-News writer

RUPERT - The preliminary hearing on first degree murder charges stemming from the strangulation death of an elderly woman 20 months ago has been set for early January.

Jerome County Magistrate Judge Russell Shaud Monday granted a motion by Mindoka County Prosecutor H. Bill Manning to set a preliminary hearing on charges against Ernest and Griselda Rufener and Jose and Minoera Monreal.

The Rufeners face charges of first degree murder and second degree kidnapping in connection with the Easter 1975 death of Rufener's mother, Anna Marie Rufener.

The Monreals, brother-in-law and sister of Griselda Rufener, are charged as accessories before the fact to first degree murder and second degree kidnapping. The death occurred in their house, where the Rufeners also were living.

Judge Shaud set the preliminary hearing for all four defendants to begin at 1:30 p.m. Jan. 10.

His action came despite the fact that the defense has appealed the magistrate's earlier ruling that allowed Manning to refile the charges after he obtained dismissal of all charges last fall.

Manning obtained the dismissal of charges after they were reduced by Cassia County Magistrate Judge George Granata in a preliminary hearing for the Rufeners earlier last year. Granata reduced the charges to involuntary manslaughter and misdemeanor false imprisonment.

Defense attorney James J. May, Twin Falls, argued that the dismissal and re-filing, in light of the previous preliminary hearing, are illegal. Attorneys stipulated in March of this year to a court delay to allow the defense to appeal Shaud's ruling that the charges could be refiled.

Manning argued Monday that his August motion to set the case on calendar came after he learned that the defense had not filed its initial appellate brief and had already been granted a two-month delay.

He charged the defense with "a lack of showing good faith" in causing delays that could jeopardize the state's case.

He pointed out that he has at least one witness over 80 years old.

"People over 80 years old just don't live forever—and their memory sometimes goes," Manning said.

The prosecutor stated that the stipulation was that either side could push for trial if it decided it had waited long enough. He suggested the hearing be set for right after the first of the year.

"The state has an interest in seeing that serious crimes are prosecuted without undue delay," he said.

J. D. May argued that his firm had pressed its appeal without "unnecessary delay." He suggested a deposition be taken from elderly witnesses and contended that the hearing would be "an unnecessary expense of money and time" if the Supreme Court should subsequently hold the charges could not be refiled after dismissal.

"Crime costs millions," Judge Shaud commented. "Spending money is a necessary evil when it comes to prosecuting crime."

Shaud said the case "should be brought to court for further action now," adding that "sometimes we must close our eyes to expense."

Anna Marie Rufener was found dead on Easter Sunday in an unheated upstairs bedroom.

According to Rufener's own testimony, he had chained his mother to her bed for four months by bolting a six-foot low chain around her neck and a bedpost.

He said he found his mother sitting on a pot left for her toilet purposes. The body lay partially across the bed, held there by the twisted chain.

A Twin Falls pathologist concluded death was by strangulation. The victim's thyroid cartilage had been fractured.

Intersection changes studied

By BOB ZUCKERMAN Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - The Twin Falls City Council agreed Monday that before any decision to change the North Five Points Intersection is made, time should be spent evaluating recent changes there.

Speaking at a lunch meeting of councilmen and state transportation officials, Mayor Paul Ostyn said, "The general feeling of the council is we'd like to watch the current changes a while and see what happens, before we decide on further changes."

Late last month state and local officials completed a major reworking of the traffic-jam-prone intersection of Blue Lakes Boulevard, Addison Avenue and Shoshone Street. The reworking included road widening, addition of lanes and installation of new signal lights. The project did not include the controversial plan to close one intersection leg.

Transportation officials have maintained the current intersection will only relieve traffic problems until the early 1980s when the intersection will be just as bad as it was before recent changes.

Ostyn said councilmen disagree on how long recent changes can last. But they agree a public hearing should be held on future changes there, specifically, on the possibility of changing the five-legged intersection to a four-legged one by closing off Blue Lakes Boulevard south of the intersection.

Ostyn said such a hearing should come in late February or early March.

Howard Johnson, head of the Magic Valley district of the Idaho Department of Transportation, division of highways, said transportation officials "would like to see the intersection for a while too. But the 'a while' is the key."

It takes about five years to do a project," he said, "and if the other one is needed, we'd better get it in the mill."

Johnson said the public hearing would include discussion of possible improvements of Blue Lakes Boulevard North from Five Points to the Perrine Bridge.

AF Dam project back in court

TWIN FALLS - Testimony is continuing in Twin Falls today in the confirmation trial for reconstruction of the American Falls Dam.

Hearings began in October but recessed when Judge Theron W. Ward, Fifth Judicial District, disqualified himself.

Fourth District Judge Alfred C. Hagen, Boise, is in Twin Falls to complete the hearings. A group of irrigators and space-holding companies are seeking to stop reconstruction of the dam, contending the water users should not have to help pay the costs since the project is the responsibility of the U.S. Government.

James Ansett, Burley, represents the project opponents and is currently presenting testimony to show the Bureau of Reclamation could and would replace the deteriorating dam.

Tom Nelson and other members of the law firm of Parry, Robertson, Daly and Larsen, represent the American Falls Reservoir District. Testimony from the Reservoir District was presented during hearings before Judge Ward.

Judge Hagen will review transcripts of earlier portions of the hearings, along with testimony presented by the opponents, before making a decision as to continuation of the project.

The confirmation action is needed to allow permanent financing of the project through the sale of bonds. Interim financing for current work will be repaid when the bonds are sold.

Water users approved a $4 million bond issue for the project, but American Falls officials say only some of the bonds will have to be sold to finance the replacement structure.

High neck to neck for top senate post

MOSCOW - (UPI) - Sen. Richard S. High, R-Twin Falls, was in a tight race with Senate Majority Leader Phil Hart, R-Wilder, for the top Idaho Senate leadership post.

High, the senior co-chairman of the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee, is completing his fifth term in the Senate, four as joint finance appropriations co-chairman.

The field in the race for Senate President Pro-Tem apparently was limited to High and Batt during caucus sessions at the North Idaho Chamber of Commerce sessions in Moscow.

But Sen. Reed Budge, R-Soda Springs, reportedly was standing on the sidelines in the event of a deadlock between High and Batt.

The top leadership position was opened when President Pro-Tem James Ellsworth of Lander did not seek re-election.

Among those after the majority leadership post were Sens. Dane Watkins, R-Idaho Falls; James Risch, R-Boise, and Larry Craig, R-Cambridge. Observers said the fight for that position was an "open horse race."

J. Wilson Steen, R-Glenns Ferry, was reported to be seeking the assistant majority post now held by Sen. Dick Smith, R-Treburg, who also sought another session in the position.

Sen. Walter Yarborough, R-Grand View, GOP Caucus chairman, reportedly was not interested in moving out of his present position.

Buhl HS interior design plans undergo refinement

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES Times-News writer

BUHL - Plans for the interior design of the new Buhl High School, authorized last month in a bond election, are undergoing refinement.

Buhl High School Principal Dale Thornsberry told Buhl School Board members Monday night efforts are being made by CTA Architects and Engineers, Billings, Mont., and by local high school officials to meet all of the educational needs of the school.

One of the decisions yet to be made, he said, is whether the vocational building should be made of masonry or metal.

Architects are now planning a metal building, the first they have designed for school use, and should have some cost estimates and comparisons by December, Thornsberry said.

After visiting with principals and teachers in new buildings, some while others may be as low as $35," he told the board. "I think it will be interesting to know what these different costs run."

Thornsberry said he would recommend board members visit as many other schools as possible before making final decisions on the Buhl plans. Generally they will follow the rough draft introduced prior to the school bond election, but he said there are many decisions yet to be made as to interior designs and finishing.

Thornsberry said teachers in the new Sawtooth Elementary School, Twin Falls, and Wood River High School, Halley, indicate they prefer square or rectangular classrooms to the triangular-shaped rooms originally proposed for the Buhl High School.

District voters approved a $2.5 million bond issue Oct. 12 for construction of the 11-classroom high school building.

School board members heard the annual audit report from Tom Schabot. The accountant said the district's financial condition is good and said that while there may be some carry-over funds in some areas of the budget which are larger than he would like to see, there is no other way to operate.

By the time the bulk of the year's income is received when tax payments are received in December, the carry-over funds will be needed to keep the district operating, Schabot said.

Schabot urged the district to avoid single signature checks in cases where an individual employee or administrator might be making out a check to himself or herself, signing it and cashing it. He told the board this has happened in rare instances.

Schabot also suggested several ways of handling student fees.

In other business, the board approved May 22 at 3 p.m. as the date and time for graduation. It also adopted a resolution establishing a bond building fund.

Board members approved a girls' junior varsity basketball coach. One of the special education teachers will take the additional assignment. The board suggested the girls' basketball teams have woman coaches whenever possible.

In Annapolis, Md., an 18-year-old girl originally identified as Toni Zimmerman has received court approval to change her name officially to Toni Zimmermanman, correspondents report. They say she had considered "Zimmerperson," but decided no.

That oceanic fish known as the marlin was named in honor of the rope-spinning sailor's marlinpike.

The man who runs the 100-yard dash in nine seconds is swifter than the man who runs the 100-meter dash in 10 seconds, bear in mind.

Client asks the difference between first, second and third degree burns of the skin: Swiftest definitions maybe: Red is first, blistered is second, and charred is third.

FISHING

Q. "As I recall, you used to go fishing a lot, Louis, but did you catch many fish?"

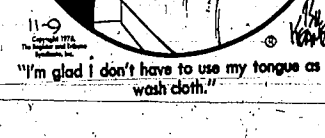

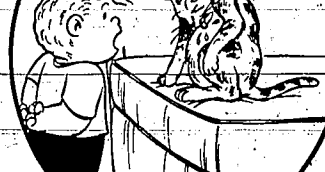

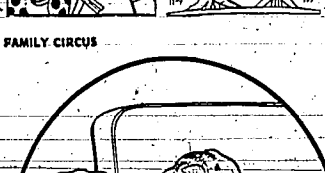

A. Yes, unfortunately. Because that seemed to be the point then, to catch fish, which is the wrong reason, isn't it? Next time, if ever, I'll know better. Fishermen who go fishing solely to catch fish, as it were, themselves wind up empty. They become tight lipped and squinty eyed and intensely deliberate of hand and foot. But the whole notion in going fishing is to get uncaught. Loose jotted, bland in thought, as casual as a cloud. Professionals accepted, sure enough. Next week expect an essay here on how the proper approach to muskrat trapping can set you free. Don't miss it!

ROCK FORMATIONS

If you've traveled through the western desert land, you've probably seen those peculiar rock formations wherein great flat boulders seem to be balanced precariously atop stone pillars. Client asks how they're formed. Most of the mysticians the geologists think erosion attacks those sides of the pillars where the least weight rests. As the stone surface is sloughed away, the boulder overhead shifts toward that wasting side, thus compressing the stone under it, and that compression makes that side more resistant to erosion, leaving the other side of the pillar loose to permit further sloughing away. The slow taster-totter effect is thought to stretch out over centuries.

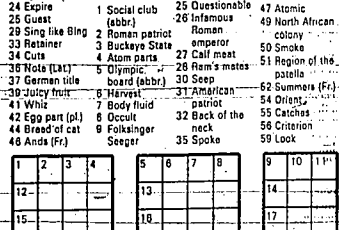

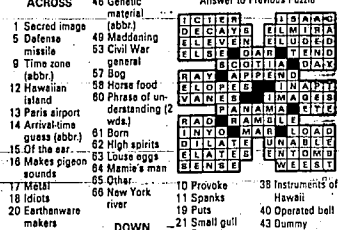

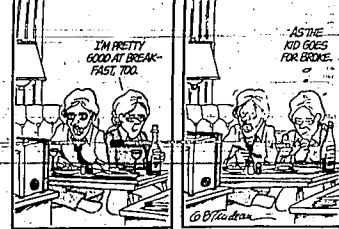

Numerous police detectives rely on the belief that no crime is original, that each has been committed before somewhere by someone, and that all belong to one or another recognizable "modus operandi." However, said detectives are having trouble categorizing a recent report filed with the lawmen of Mountain View, Calif., where a local fellow was accused of trying to drown his wife in a waterbed. Police record rooms are not bogged-down with case histories of waterbed murder attempts. On the contrary.

Eagle boosters set dinner-meeting

TWIN FALLS — A "get acquainted" dinner meeting will be held by CSI Eagle Boosters at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at the school cafeteria. Booster President Fred Wananman said Coach Boyd Grant will introduce all the players and the game film of last year's national tournament finals will be shown. He said he expected CSI to win this time, too.

Wananman said the no-host meal will cost $2.00 per plate and all interested persons are invited.

He added reports on progress of the current season ticket campaign will be made.

Namath questionable for Sunday's game

HEMPSTEAD, N. Y. (UPI) — New York Jets quarterback Joe Namath, who has missed the last two games with an inflamed right knee, was examined Monday and remains questionable for Sunday's home game against the winless Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

Namath was examined by Dr. James Nicholas and Dr. Robert Grossman at Lenox Hill Hospital in New York. They termed the injury an old irritation that has flared up and prescribed medication, heat and more rest.

Dr. Nicholas said he's seen Namath's knee in worse condition, but that this time it is healing more slowly. X-rays showed no further deterioration.

Jets coach Lou Holtz said rookie Richard Todd, Namath's replacement, showed improvement against Miami in setting up, throwing and picking out receivers. Holtz also said that linebacker Larry Keller had a "super" game, but suffered a bruised shoulder and may miss Sunday's game. If Keller is unable to play, he will be replaced by rookie Bob Martin, who is expected to be ready after missing the Miami game with a hip pointer injury.

The Jets also waived wide receiver Keith Denson, a first-year player from San Diego State. Denson, who played with the Southern California Sun in the world football league, fumbled two kickoffs which led to scores in the first two games. He was picked up by the Jets two weeks ago as a free agent.

City buys Hialeah, lets it to Brunetti

HIALEAH, Fla. (UPI) — The famous Hialeah Race Trac was sold for $13.3 million Monday to the city, which immediately said it will lease it to New Jersey construction magnate John Brunetti, who had been trying for two years to buy it.

The sale was announced by John W. Galbreath, board chairman of the financially troubled but prestigious horse track. Galbreath headed a syndicate which acquired Hialeah in 1972 for an estimated $21 million.

Hialeah has been losing money ever since the Galbreath syndicate bought it and the sale price is thought to barely cover the track's debts.

However, Galbreath has indicated throughout three years of negotiations for its sale that a major concern of his syndicate was its continued operation.

The city agreed to buy the land and buildings to prevent its closing. Among those who had sought to buy the track was James Dunn, owner of Gulfstream Park of Hialeah, who had proposed to shift Hialeah's racing dates to his Broward County track.

Mayor Dale D. Bennett of Hialeah, who spent months putting together the financial package to buy the track, said he had mortgage commitments which will be paid off from Brunetti's 30-year lease payments. Brunetti also said $4.3 million on the lease to assure the sale to the city.

"This is the most important development in the history of Hialeah and tourism in south Florida," said Bennett. "It means $37 million annually to the economy of Hialeah and $24 million annually to the economy of all of Dade County."

The present mortgage holders, Southeast First National Bank of Miami and Marine Midland Bank of New York, will remain the principal mortgage holders under the municipal ownership, but Bennett also obtained $1 million each from the National Bank of South Florida in Hialeah, the Hialeah-Miami Springs First State Bank, and the Flagship Bank of Westland.

Bengals rip Rams in last half 20-12

CINCINNATI (UPI) — "It was really embarrassing," said Ken Anderson, rolling his eyes and recalling a nightmare of a first half.

"There we were," continued Anderson, "on national television with all the other players in the league watching, and I lead an explosive passing attack that gets five yards."

Indeed, the usually-accurate passing Anderson hit only two of 12 aeriels for five yards in the first 30 minutes Monday night as his Cincinnati Bengals fell behind the Los Angeles Rams 6-0 at halftime.

"But," said a happy Anderson, recalling a dazzling third quarter, "we got the momentum going and turned things around."

Anderson directed the Bengals to three touchdowns in the third period to rally the Bengals to a hard-earned 20-12 victory.

"This is the first time we've played a good team and come from behind to win," added Anderson. "I think that's going to prove to be good experience for us."

Bengal defensive tackle For Carpenter, who helped hold the Rams' lead to just 6-0 until the Cincinnati offense got untracked, insisted there was no big worry in the Bengals' locker room at halftime.

"Nobody was down at the half because we were only behind 6-0," explained Carpenter. "We only needed one touchdown to go ahead and we went right out and got it."

Moaned Rams coach Chuck Knox. "You can't make mistakes against a good football team and win. We had momentum and lost it," continued Knox. "We should have put more points on the board. Had we moved the ball, it would have been a different game."

"But there are no excuses," he added. "We got beat."

Anderson connected on touchdown strikes of 30 yards to Bob Trumpy and 17 yards to Boobie Clark to ignite the Bengals' third-period fireworks. Clark ran nine yards for another touchdown.

The Rams had to settle for field goals of 19 and 23 yards from Tom Dempsey in the first half and a 17-yard pass from James Harris to Ron Jesse with just nine seconds left in the game as the Bengals' defense continued to be amazingly tough at home.

In five games at Riverfront Stadium this season, the Cincinnati defense has yielded a total of only three touchdowns and four field goals — an average of just over six points a game.

The victory boosted Cincinnati's record to 7-2 as the Bengals lightened their grip on first place in the American Conference Central Division.

Playing before a partisan Cincinnati crowd of 52,480 in freezing 27 degree weather, the Rams slipped to 6-2-1, but still continue to lead the National Conference's Western Division over the 6-3 San Francisco 49ers.

Anderson, who completed only two of 12 passes for five yards in the first half, led the third-quarter outburst by hitting six of 10 aeriels for 105 yards and two touchdowns.

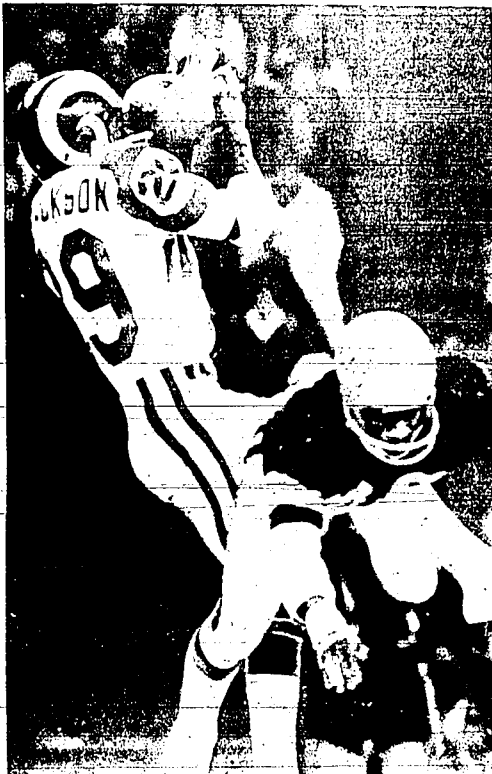

The Bengals' biggest third quarter and second half of the year began when Gary Durley sacked L. A. quarterback Harris on the Rams' 25' and shook the ball loose.

The ball squirted down to the nine-yard line, where Bengal cornerback Ken Rytel fell on it. On the next play, Clark zippered in for a nine-yard touchdown and a 7-6 Cincinnati lead with 12:21 left in the third quarter.

After the Rams punted, the upstart Bengals stormed to the attack again, marching 80 yards in six plays, Anderson hitting Trumpy on a 30-yard pass for the TD.

Chris Bahr, who had connected on 25 of 25 previous extra points, was wide on his conversion attempt to get the Bengals' lead at a precarious 13-6 with 6:34 left in the period.

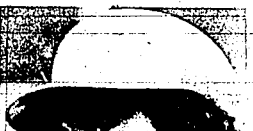

After Los Angeles couldn't get a first down, Cincinnati mounted a 53-yard drive in seven plays, Anderson teaming up with Clark on a 17-yard scoring pass.

Allen declares self 'free'

Dick Allen

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The Philadelphia Phillies announced they received official notification Monday that controversial first baseman Dick Allen has declared himself a free agent.

Allen will thus go through a special free agent draft which probably will be held the next three days during the annual general manager's meetings in Palm Springs, Calif.

Philadelphia general manager Paul Owens and manager Danny Ozark had said Allen, who reportedly left the team without permission on at least two occasions last season, would not be in a Phillies' uniform in 1977.

The 34-year-old Allen appeared in 85 games in 1975, hitting .288 with 15 homers and 49 runs batted in. He was placed on the disabled list twice with an ailing right shoulder. In his 13-year career, he has hit 346 homers.

Allen, who had signed a 1976 contract on Sept. 2, verbally notified the major league baseball players association office Friday that he would exercise his option to become a free agent under the new players' owners' agreement.

Under that agreement, a player with at least six years in the majors who did not sign a 1977 contract by last Aug. 31 can declare himself a free agent.

NCAA orders Beavers to forfeit 15 games

MISSION, Kan. (UPI) — The NCAA Monday ordered Oregon State University to forfeit 15 basketball games in which center Lonnie Shelton played during the 1975-76 season, leaving the Beavers with a 3-24 record.

Shelton was declared ineligible for the 1975-76 season after signing a professional contract with the American Basketball Association Spirts of St. Louis. He was permitted to participate on the University's basketball team by virtue of a federal district court order in Oregon.

The NCAA appealed the decision and the ninth circuit court of appeals overruled the District Court. After the appellate court's ruling the NCAA Council reviewed the case and voted to revoke several of the NCAA's restitution provisions.

As well as making Oregon State, which had finished the season with an 18-9 record, forfeit the 15 wins in which Shelton participated it also ordered Oregon State to vacate the records and performances achieved by Shelton, including his 17.8 scoring and 7.7 rebounding averages.

The three wins occurred in games played in February of last year, after the appeals court ruled against Shelton.

"It should be noted that the council's decision was not based on any determination that Oregon State University was involved in facilitating or supporting the court proceedings," said NCAA President John A. Funk.

"The University has cooperated fully in applying the restitution requirements imposed by the council."

"In arriving at its decision, the council concluded that the university's opponents were those whose interests were disadvantaged throughout the period of Shelton's ineligible participation, regardless of the university's involvement in the court proceedings."

Denver owner defends Ramsey

DENVER (UPI) — Denver Broncos owner Gerald Phipps said Monday he believes Steve Ramsey has been plagued all season by a breakdown of the offensive line and said fan criticism of the team's starting quarterback was "unaccurate."

"I think our biggest problem is we're playing with a lot of new people in the offensive line," said Phipps, chairman of the board of Empire Sports, Inc. "We haven't given Steve Ramsey the protection he should have. He needs to get his throws away."

Ramsey at one point during the Broncos game with Tampa Bay Sunday was booed by fans unhappy at two interceptions by the visitors. He wound up the game with 200 yards passing, including a 71-yard bomb to Haven Moses for a touchdown. Denver won the game, 48-13.

"There are probably a half dozen or eight quarterbacks in the National Football League that we would love to have," said Phipps. "For that matter, any of the other 20 teams that don't have them would love us."

Phipps said Ramsey was "unlucky." Broncos directors believed "We're a lot better at quarterback than a lot of people seem to believe. We have just got to give the people back there (in the backfield) a chance to work."

Phipps said he and coach John Ralston believe the Broncos, now 5-4 and after a wild card berth into playoffs, "could easily have won a couple of the games we dropped but that's water over the dam."

"All we can do now is try to put it together and get it going for the rest of the season."

Pitt's first eastern team to be ranked No. 1 since 1959

NEW YORK (UPI) — Tony Dorsett's ferocious desire to capture the Heisman Trophy propelled the University of Pittsburgh to the No. 1 ranking today and marked the first time an eastern team has been top-rated since Syracuse won the national championship in 1959.

Never mind that Pittsburgh became top rated by the UPI board of coaches by virtue of Michigan's surprise loss to Purdue last Saturday. Pitt Coach Johnny Majors knew he needed an assist from somebody to reach the top and he got that help when Michigan was bombed after encountering too many Bollermakers.

Dorsett had his own shot at the top as he set NCAA records. The Pitt star rushed for 212 yards and three touchdowns in a 37-7 rout of Army that gave him a career total of 6,192 yards in all-purpose running and enabled him to become the first college football player to have three seasons of 1,500 yards rushing.

Pittsburgh, second in the ratings last week, drew 36 first place votes from the 42 coaches and a 404-point total as it finally emerged No. 1.

UCLA and Southern California, each on two first-place ballots also moved up a notch as Michigan dropped from No. 1 to fourth place. UCLA was awarded 373 points and Southern Cal 286. Michigan received die-hard 1972 playoff support from two coaches, but it wasn't enough as the Wolverines skidded 71 points to 247.

Texas Tech remained fifth in the ratings with 224 points. Georgia moved up two places to sixth with 196 points. Maryland slipped a notch to seventh on 162 points. Ohio State dropped one rung to No. 8 with 151 points. Nebraska remained ninth with 142 and Missouri climbed into the top 10 with a distant 25 points.

Houston made big strides with a vault from 17th to 11th place, Alabama was three notches better in 12th. Tulsa climbed three rungs to 13th, Oklahoma entered the top 20 in 14th place and Florida plunged from 10th to 15th place. Iowa State and Arkansas were in a tie for 16th place, Baylor in 18th and a three-way tie existed for the No. 19 position among Notre Dame, Brigham Young and Wyoming.

When Syracuse won the national title in 1959, the Orangeburg had a runner comparable to Dorsett — the late Ernie Davis. The title year occurred in the middle of the decade when Syracuse featured such powerful runners as Jim Brown, Floyd Little and Larry Coakley.

NEW YORK (UPI) — The United Press International board of coaches has ranked 42 college football teams with 1st place votes in the poll.

Those teams on probation for NCAA violations are Michigan State, North Carolina and Southern California. Note: Southern California's victory over Colorado was ordered by the NCAA Southern Conference, but the NCAA continues to carry the loss on the record books.

Michigan coach calls off all interviews in wake of upset

ANN ARBOR (UPI) — Subdued Bob Schembacher, smarting from "as big a disappointment as I've had," Monday barred writers from interviews with his University of Michigan football players a week earlier than usual.

Schembacher and his former mentor Woody Hayes, whom the coach of the Wolverines intensely dislikes being compared to, traditionally emulate one another on the eve of the Ohio State-Michigan season-ending struggle by closing practices and shutting off the normal flows of information.

Michigan was blindsided from the list of unbeatens by Purdue's Saturday 16-14, and Schembacher has reacted by closing a curtain of secrecy around his players. "I don't want to talk to anybody," he said. "I don't care what you write this week. I'd prefer if you didn't write anything at all."

"We've gotten more attention by losing one than we've gotten by winning all season," the coach said, noting the higher than usual attendance at his weekly news luncheon. "I haven't seen most of the TV and radio guys for at least a year."

"You've got to understand," Schembacher said as he explained the ban, "these guys are really way down. The players and coaches... it's a matter of placing the emphasis on their coming back."

The Intense Michigan coach blamed his offense for flittering away opportunities to get more than 14 points and was harsh on his defense for failing to stop Purdue when it counted.

"That is as big a disappointment as I've ever had," he said. "I really feel it and I'm not taking anything away from Purdue, their effort was super — but this is the first time since 1959 we have lost to a team — I feel we should have beaten it."

In 1959, Schembacher's first year, Michigan State inflated him into the ways of the Big Ten with an upset of the Wolverines. Since then, no other Big Ten team except Ohio State had beaten a Schembacher-coached Michigan team.

"Alex (Agase, the Bollermakers' coach) was so happy as I looked at him on the field after the game," Schembacher said. "We have beaten him every way imaginable in the past."

"I hope his job wasn't on the line. He is a great coach, a great man and a great friend of mine. There is probably no coach who needed that more than he did."

Schembacher wondered if perhaps success hadn't spoiled both him and his team.

"When you win a lot," he said, "sometimes you forget how you got there. You forget the price you paid to get there. It happens to the players and it happens to the coaches."

Yanks' Paul named executive of year

NEW YORK (UPI) — Gabe Paul, the ambulance-chaser who traded the New York Yankees to win their first American League pennant since 1964, was named the major leagues' executive of the year today by United Press International.

The 65-year-old Paul, who served as general manager of the Cincinnati Reds, Houston Astros and Cleveland Indians before joining the Yankees in 1973, was chosen for the honor by 19 of the 25 UPI baseball correspondents who participated in the annual postseason survey.

George Steinbrenner, chief owner of the Yankees, and Bill Veckel, president of the Chicago White Sox, received two votes each while Joe Burke, general manager of the Kansas City Royals, and Bob Carpenter, III, president of the Philadelphia Phillies, got one vote each.

Paul, who started his career in baseball as a batboy with his hometown Rochester Red Wings of the International League when he was 11 years old, swung the key deals which lifted the Yankees to their 29th pennant.

Included among them were deals for shortstop Jim Mason, outfielder Elliott Maddox, Chris Chambliss, Dick Tidrow, Mickey Rivers, Ed Figueroa, Willie Randolph, Dick Ellis, Ken Holtzman and Oscar Gribble plus the signing of Jim Hunter to his record contract after the former Oakland A's star was declared a free agent.

"Obviously, I am honored," said Paul when informed of the award. "And I want to thank those who voted for me."

"This is all part of a continuing effort to keep the Yankees strong," Paul added. "I won't hesitate to make more deals. You can be afraid to make mistakes. You have to make deals on the basis of what you think in the present. If you're wrong, the only thing you can do is go out and try again."

White wasn't sure about going back to bench after boo-boo

UPI Executive sports Editor
(NEW YORK UPI) — Pro football weekend delvers:

Bud Grant doesn't like his Minnesota Viking players to be flamboyant. He goes so far as forbidding them from wearing shoes. So Sammie White, a rookie from Grambling who has been one of the club's surprise stars this season, knew he was in trouble.

With the Vikings leading 24-23 midway through the final quarter, Fran Tarkenton hit White with a long pass. White held the ball overhead in one hand and was about to spike it to the ground when he was hit by Lem Barney at the three. The ball spiraled into the end zone, where Lions' cornerback Levi Johnson recovered for a touchback.

"Man, I felt bad about that one," said White. "I just wanted to crawl into a hole. I wasn't even sure if I should go back to the sideline. I was so sure I had a touchdown that I just showed too much enthusiasm. Once is enough. It won't happen again."

Sammie fell, pretty bad, obviously, about what looked like a sure touchdown," said Grant. "But he came back and made up for it right away with another touchdown. Sammie is a rookie and a damned good one. He's learning. He learned today that he won't do that again."

Tampa Bay's John McKay and Denver's John Ralston are old college rivals and maybe some of the bitterness still remains. McKay, who coached at Southern California until this season, returned to shake Ralston's hand Sunday after the Broncos crushed the expansion Bucs 48-13. McKay also lost with a few choice words at the former Stanford coach, feeling he ran up the score.

The witless New York Giants came within four yards of upsetting Dallas Sunday and Cowboys came away with their heads bowed despite winning 9-3.

"I think we are back down to earth now," said defensive end Harvey Martin. "Everybody was sky high after we beat Washington. But something like this brings you back."

"I think it is just up as bad as anybody," said defensive back Chuck Waters. "In the interception in the last quarter, set up Dallas' final field goal. It's a shame to have a game like that. I've been here seven years and some of the other players have been here 10. But we all fell it, from the coaches on down. There wasn't anything we could do about it."

Chicago Coach Jack Pardee isn't getting himself worked up over an admitted error by an official that cost his team a victory over Oakland. The call came when Wally Chambers sacked Raider quarterback Ken Stabler and he fumbled on the Oakland 29. Roger Stillwell recovered and ran for an apparent score but referee Chuck Heberling nullified it because he had inadvertently blown his whistle at the point of recovery. The Bears lost 28-27.

"I don't know why he blew it," Pardee said. "He shouldn't have. An official can set a flag but he can't set a whistle. Most violations can be eaten. On a flag you can have a conference of officials but a whistle stops play and you can't overrule a whistle."

"It's in the record book now and it hurt. We had a touchdown taken away. Usually an official won't blow a call like that, but he blew the play and he blew it. It's not of our fault so in this part to admit it, but it's not going to change the outcome."

"This was a game we've easily could have won. We had many opportunities to win. If we'd taken advantage of our chances, the game would not have been close. We should have won by three or four touchdowns. But now we've got the whole season ahead of us. We're not ready to write the season off, because we can make the playoffs."

Bum Phillips denies any dissension on his Houston Oilers despite the fact the club has lost four straight games.

"There is not any dissension," he said. "There is not any animosity toward each other. There is not any dissension. There is not any animosity toward each other. There is not any more than when we were winning."

"It's just a different thing each week. Just like it's a different guy making the mistake each week. If I knew how to correct all those things, I'd correct them three weeks ago. It's kind of like a cancer. It breaks out in a different spot each week and it turns out that that's the difference in the ballgame."

Dorsett heads U.S. backfield

NEW YORK (UPI) — Tony Dorsett does not hide his ambition to win the Heisman Trophy. He was denied the award last year, but said he thought he deserved it. The Pittsburgh running back thinks he should win it this year, too, and there seems to be no way to keep the trophy out of his hands now.

Dorsett rushed for 212 yards on 33 carries, scored three touchdowns and set another NCAA record Saturday to head the United Press International Backfield of the Week. Dorsett scored on runs of 27, 39 and 5 yards in second-ranked Pittsburgh's 37-7 victory over Army before leaving early in the fourth quarter of the game with a head injury and a concussion.

It was Dorsett's eighth 100-yard game, the 31st of his career and his eighth plus-200-yard game, pushing his career rushing total to 5,659 yards. Dorsett also claimed his ninth NCAA record, becoming the all-time, all-purpose runner with 6,192 yards, 189 better than the mark set by Archie Griffin.

Meanwhile, Dorsett's chief competition for the Heisman, Southern Cal's Ricky Bell, is hobbled by injuries and watched his team's victory over Stanford from the sidelines in street clothes. In his two previous games, Bell was held under 100 yards rushing.

Also selected to UPI's Backfield of the Week were Georgia quarterback Troy Goff, North Carolina fullback Mike Voight and Ohio State fullback Pete Johnson.

Goff scored three touchdowns and passed for two others to rally No. 8 Georgia to a 41-27 victory over No. 10 Florida and a probable Sugar Bowl berth.

Goff cut Florida's 27-13 halftime lead to seven points early in the third period with a six-yard pass to Bysses Norris, his second TD pass to Norris in the game. After Georgia tied the game, Goff, who rushed for 133 yards, put his team ahead with 12:42 remaining on a five-yard run and added a one-yard TD run with 5:04 left.

Voight rushed for 161 yards on 19 carries and scored on touchdown runs of one, 18 and 84 yards to lead North Carolina to a 27-21 triumph over Clemson. The senior running back picked up 135 yards in the first half, including his 85-yard TD gallop, the longest run of Voight's career.

Johnson scored four touchdowns in Ohio State's 42-10 rout over Illinois to become only the fifth player in NCAA history to surpass 50 career TDs. Johnson scored on runs of one, two, four and one yards to bring his four-year total to 53.

Receiving-honorable mention went Vince Evans, who threw four touchdowns passes in Southern Cal's 42-21 victory over Stanford. Andre Herrera, who rushed for 184 yards including a 78-yard TD run as Southern Illinois beat Illinois State 17-3, and Rod Backwood, who passed for 248 yards and three touchdowns in Weber State's 52-19 romp over South Dakota State; John Pappalardo, who ran for 95 yards and three touchdowns as Yale beat Princeton 39-7.

Noll reviews Steelers' start

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — If the Pittsburgh Steelers reach their third straight Super Bowl this season, Coach Chuck Noll believes they not only will have overcome a horrendous start but also some "taxing" circumstances.

"One thing people don't realize is that a professional football season is very taxing physically and especially taxing emotionally," Noll said Monday, foreshadowing the rest of the season after the Steelers' fourth straight win and third straight shutout on Sunday.

"There is the players' physical punishment and Noll said, "there is the pressure they face when they take the field every week and that's something they have to bear up under. This is the point of this whole thing. That's one of the measures of a champion, to be able to do it."

The Steelers lost four of their first five games but have since beaten the pressure. Their overall statistics shine in the wake of Sunday's 45-0 massacre of the Kansas City Chiefs, in which they tied a modern-day NFL record of three straight shutouts.

The all-time record, incidentally, is held by Detroit (seven in 1931).

The last three victims—New York, San Diego and the Chiefs—have all been blanketed by the revitalized Pittsburgh defense. The last team to score against the Steelers was Cincinnati, a third-quarter field goal, in a 236 Pittsburgh triumph Oct. 17. The Steelers haven't allowed a touchdown in 17 consecutive quarters.

Noll knows this is no time to let up.

"We have to be able to concentrate and not lose the concentration in what we are doing," he said. "As long as we keep that concentration, we won't be distracted by being a fan, a coach, a player and so on. That's when you fail."

"People of narrow vision and concentration are called 'bullheaded,'" Noll explained. "They don't want to get involved in all the garbage and with what everyone else is doing. Usually, those kind accomplish more that way. What you really have to do is mind your own business and worry about doing your own job."

FLYING Kim Goetz of CSI bounced his head and arms off the backboard after slamming the ball through in Monday's exhibition game against Mountain Home Air base. The return of the dunk rule opened auspiciously with Goetz breaking the rim on his first slammer and causing a 20-minute delay in action.

CSI meets AAU team in Rupert tonight

TWIN FALLS — Kim Goetz broke a rim on a dunk shot to highlight College of Southern Idaho's 1976-77 basketball opener.

The broken rim caused a 20-minute delay for changing but in the interim action was just as exciting as after play resumed but in the Golden Eagles won 124-60 against the smaller and considerably older Plainsmen of Mountain Home Air base.

The Eagles now travel to the Minic gymnasium Tuesday night to meet a crew of former Minic-Cassia players under the guidance of Jay Hatt. It previously was incorrectly reported the game was scheduled for the Burley gymnasium.

festivities there will begin at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday with all proceeds from both games going to the Shriners' Cripple Children's fund.

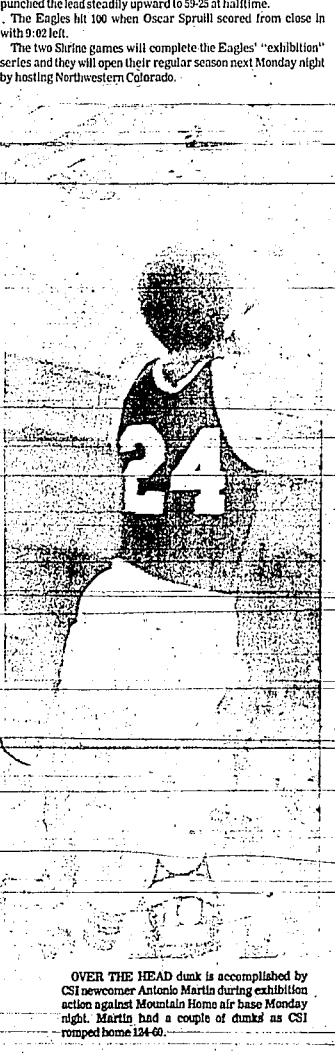

"I really don't know how to assess a game like that," Coach Boyd Grant said immediately afterward. "I guess just to say that we had better talent tonight."

Goetz made his big break with just over 90 seconds gone and following the delay — the teams were tied once at 66. Then Antonio Martin and Goetz hit field goals and within seven more playing minutes the Eagles bounced into a 33-11 lead.

The second plateau showed the best outside shooting as it punched the lead steadily upward to 59-25 at halftime.

The Eagles hit 100 when Oscar Spruill scored from close in 9:02 left.

The two Shrine games will complete the Eagles' "exhibition" series and they will open their regular season next Monday night by hosting Northwestern Colorado.

Successful fishing depends on coordination in hook setting

By JEFF SHER
Times-News writer

Anywhere fish can be found — the finest gear, the most perfect casts, the most natural looking bait and the best Intendents might impress your fellow fisherman, but they won't fill your creel if you haven't mastered the technique of setting the hook.

No aspect of fishing is more critical than how you react when a fish first takes your bait.

Striking too soon can pull your bait right out of the fish's mouth or impart unnatural movement to the bait which can scare off the hungriest predator.

Striking too late brings up nothing but an empty hook.

There is no way to give foolproof, step-by-step instructions on how and when to set the hook. Experience is the only effective teacher, and unfortunately, we only seem to learn from our mistakes.

Any successful angler will tell you that he suffered through countless missed fish before attaining a high ratio of hooked fish to strikes.

To catch fish, you have to learn what's happening on the other end of your line when you feel those little nibbles or violent strikes.

Ruel Stayner, owner of Ruel Stayner Sporting Goods, says the most common mistake bait fishermen make is to strike too soon when they feel some life on the other end of the line.

Sven says this is especially true when fishing with cut bait. Cut bait is used to represent a minnow, and predatory fish will strike a minnow, often repeatedly, to kill it before actually swallowing their meal. According to Sven, fishermen will often react to that first attack and lose any chance of hooking the fish.

In dry fly fishing, a fisherman can often see his bait. This can be a handicap for an inexperienced fisherman.

Stayner says novice fishermen will make the mistake of striking as soon as they see some motion on the surface, and they will often jerk the fly away before the fish has had a chance to swallow it. Then they think they had a strike and missed it. Stayner says, when in reality the fish probably approached the fly and then slied away because of some drag on the fly invisible to the fisherman or because of the presence of the leader.

Stayner says if a fish goes for your fly, he's going to get it, and there is no need to strike until you actually see the fish suck in your fly or feel the pull on your line.

In fishing downstream with wet fly or nymph, the fly floats just below the surface of the water, and you must watch your line for movement not caused by the current or you must wait until you feel the strike. In fishing downstream, fish will generally hit your fly at or near the point where it has completed its arc across the current and is directly downstream from your rod tip.

In this type of fishing, a fish will often hook itself by its own downstream drift against the relatively stationary hook, so a light pull on your rod is all that is necessary to set the hook.

Sven says to set a hook all you have to do is just "poke a cloud."

Jerking your pole violently, especially when a good sized fish is on the other end of the line, can easily snap a light leader.

The angle of your rod to the water also makes a difference in the amount of motion required to set the hook. If your rod is at a 45 degree or greater angle to the water, all that is required is a slight reaction, but at 45 degrees or better, it is impossible to avoid having some slack in the line.

This can be compensated for by lowering the rod tip until your line is almost straight from your reel to your fly, but with your rod in this position, a more radical motion of the rod is required to set the hook.

Knowing when and how to set the hook is important, but your timing is equally crucial in hooking the fish. Quick reactions are required, as fish react quickly to the taste of cold steel. Concentration is the only way you'll be consistently able to react quickly enough. You may miss a lot of good scenery and a lot of pleasant daydreams, but you'll catch more fish if you concentrate the motion and feel of your line.

When you are out on the water, the moment of truth happens so quickly you're not going to have time to think about what to do. You won't have time to recall what it said on page 217 of your fishing manual.

F & G department pressing for anadromous fish rebuilding

BOISE (UPI) — Passage of the Snake Compensation Plan and the offshore fishery management council concept are two major breakthroughs that will help bring back Idaho's salmon and steelhead populations, but the Department of Fish and Game said more action is needed to save the anadromous fish.

Fish and Game director Joe Greenley expressed "great satisfaction" with the two measures.

But, the department said replacement of steelhead and chinook salmon lost when Idaho Power Co. built three dams in Hells Canyon and a voting membership in the Columbia River Compact are still needed.

The U. S. Supreme Court will hear arguments today on Idaho's attempts to obtain a voting membership in the compact, which sets commercial fishing regulations on the "Lower Columbia" River drainage.

The department said Idaho Power Co. should "get off dead center on compensation for the Hells Canyon power dams so that this work can be dovetailed with the improved outlook at dams on the Lower Snake."

The department is seeking two additional raceways at Rapid River Hatchery, near Riggins, a doubling of the size of Niagara Springs Hatchery and a new facility below Hells Canyon Dam to trap fish that can no longer pass that dam to traditional spawning grounds.

Officials said the Lower Snake River Plan mitigates for unavoidable losses in the Salmon and Clearwater rivers but "it is necessary for those profiting from development in Hells Canyon to provide compensation for the Snake."

The department said the state wouldn't have experienced the declines in salmon and steelhead runs that stopped fishing if Idaho Power Co. and the U. S. Army Corps of Engineers had compensated for the losses at the time of dam construction.

Theisman moves to starting unit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Joe Theisman, who led the Washington Redskins to a "born again" victory over the San Francisco 49ers, was confirmed Monday by Coach George Allen as the starting quarterback against the New York Giants this Sunday.

"We have to give the nod to Joe this week," an elated Allen told newsmen following the team's return from its 21-21 West Coast win that kept alive its Super Bowl playoff prospects.

In recent weeks, Allen had confined himself to saying he was "leaning" towards either Theisman or veteran Bill Kilmer but he clearly signaled that the younger quarterback would be his choice against the wireless Giants.

The San Francisco victory came on three touchdown passes from Theisman to Jean Fugelt and an eight-yard run of a fake field goal in the fourth quarter which set up a subsequent winning three-pointer by Mark Moseley.

Theisman, rolling out of the pocket and releasing quickly to frustrate the 49er pass rush, completed 20 of 32 passes for 308 yards to solidify his claim to a starting role against the Giants.

Allen cautioned, however, that the 6-3 Redskins can't take victory at New York for granted, recalling the narrow Washington victory against the 0-9 Giants in the season opener and their tough 23-loss to the Dallas Cowboys Sunday.

"The Giants are much better than anybody realizes," he commented. "They're going to beat somebody. I just hope it isn't us."

The Skins trail Dallas by two games in the division and are one game behind the St. Louis Cardinals with matchups with both teams yet to come.

A loss at San Francisco would have all but knocked them out of a chance for even a wild card playoff berth.

"We beat a good football team," he said. "It was our best game of the year. Our offensive line was outstanding. Our two receivers, Frank Grant (with 11 catches) and Fugelt were exceptional. Definitely, we played well except for two big plays against us."

"It was a joyous plane ride back."

Ali proves acting ability

HOUSTON (UPI) — Heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali, who is in town to make a movie about his favorite subject, Monday illustrated his acting talent for the local police.

Ali didn't start out to prove anything. He was jogging in sweat clothes near downtown at 6:30 a.m. when officers W. T. Calloway and S. Orlando stopped him in the routine investigation of a shooting in the area.

Discovering who Ali was, the two thought they would give the boys back at the station a thrill. So with Ali's permission, they halted a staggering, yelling, apparently drunk Ali in.

The officer in charge ordered Ali jailed, and then the fighter quit the jail.

"Aren't I a good actor?" he hollered.

Finally, the star of the inprocess movie "The Greatest," shook hands, signed autographs and went back to jogging.

BYU quarterback shoots for plateau

PROVO, Utah (UPI) — Brigham Young quarterback Gifford Nielsen has a hot hand. And if the junior can keep his streak going for two more games, he'll finish the year with more than 3,200 yards passing to join an elite handful of collegiate quarterbacks.

Nielsen and Rice's Tommy Kramer are locked in a battle for the top major college quarterback of 1976. And both have a solid chance of topping the 3,000-yard passing plateau this fall—a mark reached by less than a half dozen signal callers.

Kramer leads the NCAA passing statistics, averaging 25 completions through eight games, while Nielsen has passed for the most touchdowns and yardage—23 TDs and 2,489 yards—and he is tied in completions per game with an 18.4 average.

"I'm not worried about how I'll match up against anyone," says Nielsen, "as long as we're winning as a team. In one of my best games this year I passed for 32 yards and three touchdowns, and we lost to Wyoming. But against San Diego State, I only completed 10 passes for 89 yards and we won 8-0."

That five-point loss to Wyoming may cost BYU the host spot in the Christmas Day Fiesta Bowl as the Western Athletic Conference champion. Both the Cougars and Cowboys have one WAC loss. But if both finish 6-1 in league play, Wyoming will go to the Fiesta Bowl as the winner of the Cowboy-Cougar game.

Nielsen's main job now is making sure Brigham Young wins its final two games to give the Cougars a share of the WAC title and a possible berth in another bowl game.

"The two major reasons for our success are the play of our offensive line and the number of good receivers we have," Nielsen said.

"The line has been giving me the time to find an open man. And the receivers just keep running their patterns, waiting for me to spot them."

Nielsen must have more receivers than any other collegiate quarterback in the nation—he's thrown to 12 this year. But fullback Todd C. Christensen is his favorite.

Christensen has caught 41 passes thus far as Nielsen's safety-valve receiver. But the quarterback's home run receiver is John VanDerWouden, catching seven of Nielsen's touchdown aerials.

Since that Wyoming game, Nielsen's arm has passed BYU to four straight wins and a 7-2 overall record. And, if he can match his 300-yard passing average from the Cowboy game, he'll finish the year with 3,250 yards passing, a mark surpassed only by Tulsa's Bill Anderson with 3,464 yards in 1965, and by Greg Cook of Cincinnati with 3,273 yards in 1968.

Neumann suspended

BUFFALO, N. Y. (UPI) — Buffalo Braves guard Johnny Neumann remained on indefinite suspension today, for repeated misconduct detrimental to the team.

Buffalo general manager Bob Mackinnon suspended Neumann from the National Basketball Association team Monday night. A team spokesman would not comment on the reasons for the suspension of the veteran guard.

Neumann, a five-year American Basketball Association veteran, was signed by the Braves as a free agent last August.

Cards, Expos trade

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — St. Louis and Montreal completed a six-player trade Monday which sent Bill Gref, Angel Torres and Sam Mejias to the Expos in return for Steve Dunnet, Tony Scott and Pat Scanlon.

Gref, a righthanded relief pitcher, was 1-5 in 47 games for the Cardinals with a 4.09 ERA and six saves. Torres, a left-handed reliever, was 2-5 in 48 games with the club's Arkansas farm team.

Mejias is an outfielder who batted .323 at the Cardinals' Tulsa farm club. He saw a brief stint in St. Louis at the end of the season.

NBA starting to take Blazers seriously

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Somebody asked the other day when the Portland Trail Blazers bubble would burst.

Portland, if you haven't noticed, is one of the hottest teams in the new National Basketball Association season. The Blazers, who go against Kansas City Tuesday night, are 6-1 and lead the Pacific Division, where in five of their first six years they finished last.

Denver, still with a perfect record, and Cleveland, which came into the NBA the same year Portland did, are the only teams with better records. Cleveland has lost once in nine tries.

The answer to the original question—when does the Portland bubble burst—comes three ways. On the road, the second time around, maybe never.

Portland has been a notoriously poor road team in its previous six seasons. The best road record the Blazers ever compiled was last year when they won 11 of 41 games in arenas of the opponents. The second time around answer is for those coaches who got caught by surprise when they came to Portland and the Blazers fast broke and pressure on the ball through ballhawking tactics and traps left opponents gasping. Next time they'll know what to expect.

However, Gene Shue, coach of Philadelphia, said he wasn't surprised when his tiers fell to the Blazers blitz. "I'd been warned what to expect. But the Blazers did it anyway. The night they beat us they played one of the best games played by any basketball team anywhere. Bill Walton was incredible. They have a great team."

Bill Walton and the Blazers know what they have going. And so does new coach Jack Ramsay, a 19-year-veteran of the coaching wars who said at the outset of the season, "Our future is now." He got rid of individual stars, such as Sidney Wicks and Geoff Petrie, whose statistical credentials were great but who apparently weren't fitting into the team concept.

Ramsay, who holds a doctorate in education, opted quickly on what he could read on the Blazers schedule—an early home schedule advantage. He didn't monkey around with a lot of rookies and tryouts in the fall camp. He pared the roster down to the 12-player limit almost immediately. His philosophy was that since Portland had a schedule advantage in the beginning, he should capitalize on it quickly by getting the team organized in a hurry and make a run right off the bat with the home court advantage. It's paid off. Portland's only loss is its one road game at Golden State, a team they intimidated two nights earlier at home. They also have 12 straight home court victories stretching back to last season. Ramsay was the last visiting coach to beat them.

The Blazers have been devastating, averaging just over 120 points a game and yielding an average of 103.

"We are fortunate in having some extremely intelligent basketball players," said Ramsay of his Blazers. He talks of his "nobodies" with great reverence. He said of the win over talent-rich Philadelphia, a 146-104 walloping and worst defeat handed any team in the NBA this year, as "the best basketball game performance of any team I've ever coached at any level."

Shue agreed, saying, "They killed us immediately, in the first three or four minutes. Walton is so versatile, such a complete player. He makes everything go." Ramsay agrees that Walton, now team captain with Wicks gone to Boston, is "the most coachable player I've ever coached. He has to be considered, the way he's going, as perhaps the most valuable team player in the NBA."

Of course Ramsay has his fingers crossed that Walton stays healthy. He's playing the healthiest he's ever played in this, his third season in the NBA.

Walton himself, in a postgame interview following the win over Philadelphia, said, "People keep asking how we prepare for this powerful team or that one. Well, I think it is about time people start asking how do those teams prepare for us. We have a good basketball team."

Ramsay says if he can get 60 games out of Walton this season Portland will be in the playoffs, and he already has predicted the club would win at least 45 games.

A secret ingredient about the Blazers has been the play of the guards—all a bunch of little guys—Lionel Hollins in his second year out of Arizona State, veteran Herm Gilliam, purchased from Seattle; Dave Twardzik from the ABA and rookie Johnny Davis, out of Dayton University. Together they are averaging better than 50 points a game, something that Petrie, one of the best pure shooters in the NBA didn't do. And more important, they are driving opponents crazy with their fast hands and ball hawking and traps.

The New York Knicks, one of the most experienced teams in the NBA, lost the ball on 23 steals, a Portland club record, and 23 turnovers, in their shellacking by the Blazers Sunday night.

The first road trip starts Thursday in Atlanta, then goes to San Antonio and New Orleans, before the return home. The road is the next obstacle for Portland, and if the Blazers can manage to win out there at all, they're in the race with Walton healthy to the NBA championship.

Just ask any coach who has felt their sting.

Shofner leaves TCU coaching position

FORT WORTH, Tex. (UPI) — Texas Christian Head Football Coach Jim Shofner, whose teams won only two games in his three years at the school, resigned Monday effective at the end of the current season.

"It all boils down to the fact that we haven't won enough games over a three-year period and I feel we should have won more by now," Shofner said. "I don't think we could have expected a championship team by now, but we could have expected a few more wins. I know I certainly anticipated a better season this year."

The Horned Frogs, 0-8 and in the cellar in the Southwest Conference, lost 14-10 last Saturday to unbeaten Texas Tech. Resignation rumors were widespread following the loss.

"All of the talk and rumors naturally had some influence on my decision," Shofner said.

Shofner said he met with TCU Chancellor James M. Moudy Monday morning and "we came to this conclusion."

"My main concern at present is finishing this season on a good note. My only immediate plans are to try to beat Texas this weekend."

Shofner said TCU was the only place he wanted to coach on a college level. A former assistant coach for the San Francisco 49ers, Shofner said he may try to resume coaching in the NFL.

Moudy issued a statement saying Shofner helped restore "character to Horned Frog football."

Moudy said Shofner "has pledged his help in every way to our search for his successor and for the transition."

Athletic Director Frank Windaggar said Shofner "has bridged a lot of gaps with the alumni and media. It is sad that the only thing he couldn't bridge was the won-lost column."

"I think our program is so much better off than three years before because of Jim Shofner," Windaggar said.

Since Shofner took over as head coach at TCU in 1974, the Horned Frogs have won only two games.

UCLA worries about looking toward USC

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — UCLA's unbeaten Bruins are at Oregon State, which has won only one game this season, next Saturday but Bruins' head coach Terry Donahue is worried.

"The problem this week," he told his weekly breakfast meeting with reporters Monday, "is going to be similar to what it was last week. It's going to be hard to keep the players and the coaches and everyone else from thinking ahead to the USC game."

"You never know what the weather is going to be like in Corvallis. Oregon State beat California in Corvallis when California was healthy. They beat them before Joe Roth got hurt."

The Bruins are coming off a 46-0 Pacific-8 victory over Oregon — their first shutout of the season — in a game in which Donahue used all 54 of the players he suited up.

"The shutout was a goal our defense has had all year," the UCLA coach noted. "I was happy to see them get it."

In running their PAC-8 record to 5-0 and season mark to 8-0, the Bruins limited the Webfoots' offensive woes and rushing to become No. 10 in the nation in rushing defense. That was UCLA's best defensive performance against the run since 1947 when the Bruins held Washington to a minus three yards in a 34-7 win.

The Bruins came out of the Oregon game with just one injury. Tight end Don Pederson suffered a hip pointer but Donahue said he did not know how serious the injury was.

UCLA athletic director J. D. Morgan announced that the UCLA-University of Southern California PAC-8 Rose Bowl decision at the coliseum Nov. 20 was a sellout — 92,604. It is the Bruins' home game.
