Sign of inspiration

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — A judge has awarded Celestine Tate, born without the use of her arms and legs, "full and free" custody of her one-year-old baby and called Miss Tate "a symbol of faith" to the handicapped. "There are some people who say that if you will it, it will be yours," said Family Court Judge Edward Rosenberg in issuing his decision. "And you have willed it."

Handicapped plan trip

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) — Teacher Essie Sutton used her life savings, a personal loan and all kinds of small fund drives, but she finally made it — her 16 handicapped students will get a bus tour of the United States. "Nothing can stop us now," the teacher said in an interview before her bus left McClymonds High School today for the 18-day, cross-country trip and a week's stay in the nation's capital. Mrs. Sutton and her educationally handicapped "kids" have worked for two years to raise $3,000 through cake sales, paper drives, car washes and aluminum-can salvage.

Brooke keeps diaries

BOSTON (UPI) — Sen. Edward Brooke, R-Mass., doesn't have to turn over his private diaries to his estranged wife, Renilda, who is suing him for divorce, a state Supreme Court judge has ruled. Justice Benjamin Kaplan gave no reason for his decision which upheld a lower court ruling that Brooke's diaries are covered by his immunity as a senator unless his wife's attorneys can prove otherwise.

Boy, 3, beaten to death

YAKIMA, Wash. (UPI) — Two physicians testified Saturday they believed a 3-year-old boy died as a result of daily beatings received from members of a Christian religious cult which believed he was possessed by the devil. The state rested its case following the testimony of Oregon State Medical Examiner William Brady and Yakima County Coroner Richard Muzzall. The defense will begin its presentation Monday. Dr. Brady conducted the autopsy on the body of David Weibach, whose decaying remains were found in a sealed bedroom in a Yakima home Sept. 19. The autopsy was performed four days later. Brady said it was impossible to determine from the autopsy what caused the child's death because the body was in such an advanced stage of decomposition. The boy had been dead for about two months before the body was found.

Prince speaks out

LONDON (UPI) — Prince Philip, who is supposed to stay out of political controversy because he is married to Queen Elizabeth II, found himself in the middle of one Saturday. Philip infuriated leftwing parliamentarians for implying that Britain's economic and industrial decline is directly linked to spending on the welfare state. Philip's solution, in a foreword writ in for the professional magazine, Engineer, was "innovation, risk and enterprise" and "rewards for success" — all of which he said were discouraged by too much welfare. He said the welfare system that Britain has run since World War II on taxes and foreign borrowing is "a protection against failure and exploitation." "Innovation, risk and enterprise are incompatible with complete stability and security," he said. "The successful technological innovators must become heroes again." "They must be allowed to gain and keep their rewards for success. The people who work for them must be allowed to share in their success."

Free, on honeymoon

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls man who has pleaded guilty to robbery was released from the county jail and married Friday night. David Harry Griljalva, 27, Twin Falls, married Denise Miller, 21, Twin Falls, in a ceremony performed by Magistrate Judge Daniel Mechi at 7 p.m. Friday at Griljalva's parents' home, 418 Park Drive. Fifth District Judge James Cunningham earlier Friday reduced Griljalva's bond from $15,000 to $1,000. It was posted shortly afterwards by Griljalva's father. Griljalva spent more than 40 days in the county jail after being arrested on a charge of robbery in connection with the armed theft of slightly more than $60 from the Maverik Country Store Oct. 2. Ernest Folsom, 23, Twin Falls, was also arrested shortly after the theft and charged with robbery. He was later released on a $2,000 property bond. Cunningham said Saturday he reduced Griljalva's bond to $1,000 because of several factors, but admitted the wedding had something to do with it. "That he was getting married shows that this guy is inclining to settle down and not planning to skip out," the judge said. Cunningham also said the fact that Griljalva's family and wife work in Twin Falls influenced his decision to reduce the bond to $1,000. Cunningham said, "The purpose of a bond is to insure that the man who is bonded doesn't leave." He said Griljalva's being a "long-time" resident of Twin Falls also played a part in the bond reduction.

MAGIC VALLEY — Sagging farm commodity prices promise slim profits and, in some cases, losses to Magic Valley farmers this year. "The current situation is one which could have developed any time in the past two or three years," according to Dr. Robert Sargent, Extension economist at the University of Idaho. "It has come home to roost" rather than on local producers. "First of a series No farm commodities, at current prices, promise to return profits to growers who find themselves in a cost-price squeeze between rock bottom prices and inflating costs of land, farm machinery, fertilizer and other production necessities. "I think they're dead," Bill Harris, Shoshone sale yard operator, said of producers in Magic Valley. "Farmers are having a real tough time, especially in the livestock business." Harris contrasted the rising costs of feeding and keeping cattle with the depressed sale yard prices being paid for calves, feeder cattle and fat cattle. "It costs $125 to $150 per year to keep a calf," Harris explained. "And if a cattleman gets $150 out of one, there's no profit there." The situation in the cattle market is typical of the kind of squeeze producers are experiencing, according to Dr. Sargent, but the causes of sinking prices are complicated and relate to cattle market conditions throughout the world. "If we could look at the cattle market in isolation, we have been moving toward correcting an oversupply," Sargent said. "Cow numbers have been reduced somewhat, but it is not down enough. It could take quite a while." The cattle market situation is further complicated by expansion in the hog and poultry industries which compete with the beef industry for the retail shopper's dollar, according to Sargent. Feed prices, too, affect the cattleman's price, he added. Hay prices are currently good for the grower but they place a burden on cattlemen. "Only seven out of the last 37 months have been profitable for cattle feeders," said Tom Hovenden, of the Idaho Cattle Feeders Association. Hovenden, too, attributed low prices to an oversupply of cattle. "When you got too many cattle per hundred people, you are going to be in trouble," explained Hovenden, who has studied cattle numbers in his country. "For the best 15 to 16 months we have been slaughtering more female cattle than male. This means there is a movement toward herd reduction," he said. Hovenden said he expects prices to move upward if 48 million cattle go to slaughter this year, especially since world drought is sure to reduce imports of beef. "But low prices are not restricted to the livestock industry alone. "There is really nothing in the area of farm produce or livestock that is enjoying any amount of strength," according to Robert Stuart, general manager of the Twin Falls Production Credit Association. "It is rather a bleak outlook right now." Beans, one of Magic Valley's major crops, seem to have done a little better crop throughout the world. Surplus beans fill warehouses, and grocery shelves are heavily stocked with last year's beans. "One of our problems this year has been a lack of export market," said Harold West, executive director of the Idaho Bean Commission. West said prices two years ago encouraged farmers all over the world to grow beans and the result has been a glutted market with prices hovering now at only $11 per hundredweight. According to studies made by University of Idaho researchers, the costs to Idaho farmers of producing beans can range from $14 to $25 per hundredweight. One Jerome bean grower, Bill Priest, estimated average costs of producing beans. "Depending upon how you are set up, it can be as low as $10 to $12 cents a pound to produce and the market hasn't been above 13 cents," Priest said.

Execution was quick in '38

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — It was easy for John W. Deering to have his wishes for a quick execution fulfilled — but that was in 1938. Deering's background was quite similar to that of Gary Gilmore who is fighting for the right to die before a firing squad. Deering, like Gilmore, couldn't seem to stay out of trouble or out of jail. When, on Oct. 31, 1938, at the age of 40, Deering sat strapped to a chair in the old Sugar House Utah Prison and shouted from under his black hood, "Good luck and goodbye," he became the first person in the state's history to be executed without appealing his district court conviction. He did not protest his sentence and nobody asked the governor for a reprieve. He was shot 37 days after being sentenced for the killing of Salt Lake City businessman. Deering got into trouble when he was 14, the same age Gilmore went to reform school. Most of his adult life was spent behind bars. Gilmore has spent 18 of his last 21 years in jail. After Deering killed the businessman, he was on the run for two months. The gun was pawned in Reno, Nev. His mother died later that May and Deering tried to claim his share of the insurance by writing from Detroit to his sister in Chicago. The letter was intercepted. (See Gilmore story, p. 6) Detroit police arrested a friend of Deering's in July and Deering was picked up as a suspected accomplice. When he got to the Detroit police station, he said, "I want to talk with you folks tonight. I'm wanted in Salt Lake for murder. I want to go back there and die." "If I have to go back to prison, I'll go stir crazy," he told Detroit police. Deering signed a confession, was extradited to Utah and convicted after a three-day trial. Deering was the only defense witness and on the stand, admitted his crime and pleaded to be allowed to die for it. "He's the happiest man around here," said a prison guard on the day of the execution.

Accidents claim 2

MAGIC VALLEY — A 17-year-old Burley girl and a Reno, Nev., trucker were killed in separate accidents in the Magic Valley Friday night and early Saturday. Peggy Roberts, 17, Burley, was killed in a one-car accident on Interstate 80, about five miles west of Burley, about 3:25 a.m. Saturday. Richard Green, 40, Reno, Nev., was struck and killed on Kimberly Road in Twin Falls about 8:45 p.m. Friday as he walked from behind a parked truck into the lane of traffic, city police reported. Miss Roberts died when the car in which she was riding rolled twice, throwing her 30 feet from the vehicle. Mindok County Coroner Kim Christensen said death came from massive head injuries. Susan Ann Waller, 18, Declo, was the driver of the car. She suffered lacerations and fractured ribs. Cassia Memorial Hospital officials listed her in good condition Saturday afternoon. Mindok County Sheriff-elect Ray Jarvis said Miss Waller was driving east on I-80 when the car veered off the pavement onto the median strip and then back onto the highway. He said the car rolled at least twice. Both the driver and passenger were thrown out of the car. Jarvis said the top of the vehicle was completely torn off and thrown 40 feet from the car. "The deputy said the car was equipped with a roll bar and possibly if they had had their seat belts on, they would have come through, but you just can't tell." Jarvis said the accident is still under investigation. Christensen said he would not know whether or not an inquest would be called until he received the results of some tests that were taken. Twin Falls police said Green was walking north across Kimberly Road from a motel where he was staying to George K's Restaurant for dinner when the accident occurred.

Sierra sales blocked in N. Dakota decision

By BILL LAZARUS
Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — Sierra Life Insurance Co.'s license to sell insurance in North Dakota was suspended on Oct. 21 after certain Sierra assets were found to be unacceptable under that state's insurance laws. However, an agreement has been reached to lift the suspension order until an appeal by Sierra to the district court is resolved, according to Thomas Smith, special assistant attorney general assigned to the North Dakota Department of Insurance. Sierra also agreed not to sell any new policies in the state and agreed to legal publication of the state's suspension order, Smith said. Under the agreement, Sierra would be allowed to contact existing policyholders in order to conserve its existing business in the state, Smith said.

In ordering the suspension, Smith said, North Dakota Insurance Commissioner J.O. Wigen added findings from a hearing held in late June before an independent hearing officer. Wigen, he said, found "quite a bit" of the company's assets to be "not well invested under our law." "A great deal of the real estate we found to be unimproved real estate. We found those assets to be non-admitted" or not acceptable as assets under North Dakota law, Smith said. "We suspended their certificate of authority (to write business) until they divest themselves of those assets," he said. Once the assets which were not accepted as a replacement, he said the department will "take another look" at Sierra's license to do business. Smith said Sierra also was found to be in violation of two provisions of state law. (Continued on p. 17)

Airwest may be idled by strike

PHOENIX, Ariz. — Unless some agreement is reached in a negotiations meeting this morning in Washington, D.C., between Hughes Aircraft and Aircraft Mechanics Fraternal Association (AMFA) negotiators, mechanics will strike the airline beginning at midnight tonight. Union officials in Phoenix said Saturday the strike call was postponed one day to allow for the negotiation session this morning. Although airline officials have declined to say when and to what extent the strike would affect airline flights to and out of Twin Falls, union officials say the airlines cannot operate without mechanics. Gary Michael, vice-president of the AMFA Local 32 in Phoenix, said a meeting scheduled for Saturday morning for a vote by the union on an offer from the airline was not held. "Our mediation board told us the offer was not worth voting on," Michael said. It was decided instead, he said, to meet with officials of the company in Washington, D.C., for one more attempt at reaching an agreement. Michael said he could not make any predictions about a strike, but said there would have to be a lot accomplished in the meeting today if it is to be forestalled. Airfrat mechanics for Hughes Aircraft are asking pay they say would bring their salaries in line with those of mechanics working for other airlines. The present pay is $7.50 per hour compared to $7.84 other airline mechanics are paid. Union mechanics have asked $8.72 per hour for the period from July 1, 1976 to July 1, 1978 and $9.86 per hour as of July 1, 1978.

More jobs for Jerome

JEROME — A Utah cheese-making firm is negotiating for control of Ida Gem Dairymen, Inc.'s Jerome plant in order to resume production here. Cache Valley of Utah, Stuffed, Utah, has been attempting to iron out details of the take-over the past several weeks and, if successful, would resume cheddar cheese production and employ about 100 persons. One of the problems has been the $1,000 per month sewer charge from the City of Jerome for handling plant wastewater. If the Utah firm takes over, it would continue production to cheddar cheese because it would not require the amount of water used for past production, a spokesman said.

Actress Ellen Corby removed from 'list'

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Actress Ellen Corby, 63, who plays grandma on the television series "The Waltons," was reported in improved condition Saturday at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center where she is recovering from a stroke.

Miss Corby was removed from the critical list and the intensive care ward and her condition was upgraded to fair, a spokesman for the actress said.

"She has movement and is alert. She has been conscious throughout," he said.

The spokesman complained that, although doctors have ordered she receive no phone calls or visitors, fans and friends have sent so many flowers to her room that "there's no room left for Ellen."

Miss Corby was discovered on a stairway in her West Hollywood home Wednesday by the producer and coworkers from "The Waltons," who went looking for her when she failed to appear on the set on time.

Suspect arrested

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — The FBI said Saturday it had arrested Robert Berchold, charged with the kidnaping of a 14-year-old Pocatello, Idaho, girl.

Agents said the girl, who is still missing, had been in contact with her parents and there was no indication she had been harmed. The FBI identified her as Jan Brobert.

Berchold, 40, Salt Lake City, was arrested Friday night at a trailer park where he was living, according to agent Clark Brown. He was held in the Salt Lake County Jail on an unlawful flight to avoid prosecution warrant pending extradition to Idaho, Brown said.

Miss Brobert has been missing since August, and was first listed as a runaway. But authorities in Pocatello this month filed first-degree kidnaping charges against Berchold, who has denied any knowledge of the girl's whereabouts.

Teeth ruled good as prints

ELGIN, Ill. (UPI) — Can teethmarks, like fingerprints, be used as primary evidence against a defendant charged with murder?

An Illinois appeals court has ruled, in effect, that they can. But the case involved has taken a complex twist which might lead to other lengthy court action.

The Illinois Court of Appeals affirmed Friday the 1973 murder conviction of Richard Milone, 24, without reference to new information on tooth marks which may link the case to another man, Richard Macek, now in a Wisconsin prison and charged with murder in a different case in the same area.

It ruled lower court evidence before it was enough to convict Milone.

Milone was sentenced to 99 to 125 years for the bludgeon murder of Sally Randel, 14, of nearby Carol Stream. Two teams of expert dental witnesses disagreed on whether Milone was the source of a bitemark on the girl's thigh.

Although other circumstantial evidence was offered against him, the question of the bitemark dominated Milone's trial and formed the central basis of his appeal.

But the court did not have before it possible new evidence that developed when three dental experts tied Miss Randel's murder to that of Nancy Lossman, 26, slain at Crystal Lake, Ill., more than a year after Milone was imprisoned.

Testifying at Milone's trial for the prosecution, Dr. Harold Perry of Northwestern University said, "I compared the casts (of Milone's teeth) and the transparency and found they mat-

Another state witness, Dr. Irvin M. Sopher, then of the Armed Forces Institute in Baltimore, said the similarities were "obvious." Dr. Lester Luntz, a forensic dentist from Hartford, Conn., concurred.

The chief defense witness, forensic dentist Lowell Levine of New York, said it was "anatomically impossible" for Milone to have inflicted the bitemark. Three other dental experts agreed.

It was Levine who was responsible for the new development in Milone's case when he told authorities whoever bit Miss Randel also was the source of a bitemark on Mrs. Lossman.

Macek, an ex-convict who has confessed to at least two sex-related crimes and been charged with others, was indicted in Miss Lossman's murder after his teeth were matched to Miss Lossman's bitemark.

Interviewed Friday at Waupun prison in Wisconsin, where he is imprisoned and awaiting trial on still another slaying, Macek denied complicity in the Randel slaying to two DuPage County, Ill., investigators. He said he was far from the scene when the Randel girl was slain.

Levine's finding has been supported by two other dentists. Despite this, Luntz said last week he still stands by his original identification of Milone.

In an interview, Luntz acknowledged bitemarks are not always sufficient evidence of guilt by themselves, although when certain conditions are met, it is possible for a bitemark to serve as primary evidence.

Italy frees SS colonel

ROME (UPI) — A military court granted conditional freedom Saturday to critically ill war criminal Herbert Kappler, the Nazi SS colonel who ordered and personally directed the reprisal execution of 335 Italians at the Ardeatine Caves in World War II.

The 69-year-old Kappler, suffering from terminal stomach cancer, remained in bed in Rome's Cello Military Hospital but the police guard outside his room was removed as a token gesture.

Italian resistance veterans, Jewish organizations and virtually all Italian newspapers attacked the decision as an insult to the memory of Kappler's victims. Several newspapers said Italy had yielded to West German pressure of a time when this country needs financial help from Bonn.

"Three of my uncles died at the Ardeatine Caves and I cannot forget," Settimo Liventini said in the Rome Ghetto. "The freeing of Kappler is an unprecedented injustice. He should have stayed in jail to the end of his days. He is sick? So what? It means God has punished him, for what he did."

Italy's Defense Ministry said a Rome military tribunal granted Kappler's request for conditional freedom because of his "grave and incurable

Spain approves Franco rally

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — The government Saturday authorized right-wingers to hold a rally Nov. 20 to commemorate the first anniversary of the death of Francisco Franco by singing the Falange anthem and reading Franco's political testament.

Approval of the 20-minute ceremony came one day after several hundred thousand Spanish workers walked off their jobs in a one-day leftist-led nationwide strike—the first in Spain in 40 years.

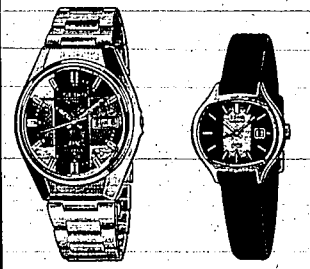

The strike, the first event in a critical political week, failed to produce any major disturbances or clashes.

On Tuesday the Cortes (parliament) takes up the government's liberal reform bill. Officials and politicians fear that extremists of the left or right may try to jeopardize the bill which would give Spain a Western-type two-chamber parliament.

Only 57 whooping cranes exist today, one less than the total of a few days ago. A juvenile whooping crane, hatched by foster sand hill crane parents in Idaho, was found injured in barbed wire fence in Colorado in October.

WHEN WILL THE SPENDING END?

It took 173 years, until 1962, for federal spending to hit $100 billion a year. But by 1971, only nine years later, government spending had jumped to $200 billion a year.

NOW STAR LOOK AND THINK!

Such huge spending has resulted in a bigger and bigger government debt. The interest alone on the national debt has more than doubled in ten years and is now over $40 billion a year. In fact, the interest burden on the debt constitutes ten per cent of the federal budget.

The big one that got away

He took out his knife, opened it and stuck it in the log. Then he pulled up the rock, reached into it and brought out one of the trout. Holding him near the tail, hard to hold, alive, in his hand, he watched him against the log. The trout quivered, rigid. Nick laid him on the log in the shade and broke the neck of the other fish the same way. He laid them side by side on the log. They were fine trout.

Nick cleaned them, splitting them from the vent to the tip of the jaw. All the insides and the gills and tongue came out in one piece. . . .

He washed the trout in the stream. When he held them back up in the water they looked like live fish. Their color was not gone yet.

from Ernest Hemingway's "Big Two-Hearted River: Part II"

HAGERMAN — Newcomers to trout fishing find the hardest part of an afternoon on the stream comes when it's time to whack the squirming fish back on the head, slit open his belly and tip out his innards.

For the neophyte angler, the resonance of a trout thrunking against a rock doesn't fit the vision of the trout fisherman as the man who saw God in his waders just the other evening. . . .

Repulsion over a battered trout brain and a wad of guts soon fades into the total experience of walking in the thistles, slipping into ice cold water over the tops of your waders, and catching your flannel shirt on a barbed wire fence. . . .

Learn to slit a fish with the best of them because most of your fishing cronies won't consider a trip to the creek successful unless your creel overflows with a limit of sleek, but dead, trophies.

An empty creel means skinny rations, a high voice, and probably an allergic reaction to mosquito bites.

Real men catch real trout and carry a Buck knife on their belts to clean them.

Did Ernest Hemingway ever throw back a trout, especially a big one?

Fish can't feel pain anyway. Instead of worrying about where to start the incision on a trout's undersides fill your mind with the fisherman's dream of an 18 inch rainbow too big to fit in a creel.

Anglers live for the long walk back to the car, whistling from the weight of a bulging trout hung on a jointed stick.

A big fish is the gold medal for those hours of standing on a bank trying to outwit one of nature's deceptive doinals.

The catch makes the day. The bigger the catch, the bigger the day.

Until one day. The day which changes your fishing habits forever.

A day so perfect you are overcome by the glistening light on the rippling stream.

A dozen geese pant overhead, churning through the air with a graceful power more awesome than a 747.

Following the tip of your pole through the grasslands you tiptoe to a hole, deep and wide, knowing a tremendous trout rests somewhere in the mossy bottom.

You cast.

From the blackened water your wildest fantasy comes true.

Your line pulls taut. An inanimate piece of fiberglass jumps to life, twitching and bending like never before.

A trout so strong and graceful he takes your breath away appears from the placid waters. He spins and twists, shattering the moody stream with his acrobatics.

He's big, too big for the creel.

To grow 18 inches long he's outwitted fishermen for three seasons, maybe more. Snagging mayflies, midges, devouring snails, for dessert, this rainbow is the king of the creeks.

Now, you've got him.

The thrashing water disturbs a duck who gruffly quacks off in the distance.

Other fish scurry from the pool. A frog jumps in behind them.

Slowly, inexorably you reel in this magnificent monster. He's at your feet, tired, exposing a flash of silver in the twilight.

Reaching into the water the coolness of his body blends into the chill of the black water.

With two hands you pull the fish from his habitat and look into his always opened eye.

With all his fitness and wildness he looks back, gills gasping for air.

A fisherman's dream comes true. A perfect afternoon, cool water, a slight breeze, an unforgettable trout wriggling in your hands.

Somewhere in the pit of your stomach creeps that feeling you get only when something you've always wanted to happen finally does.

At your feet you step on a rock of sufficient mass to obliterate life from the trout. A few stern taps and you can open his still quivering body with the sharp blade at your side.

You've done it a hundred times.

Back in town you think of your friends who will stay your back and joke about you buying the big fish at Safeway on the way home.

They ask how you caught this beauty. You fill back in a chair and describe his arching back, the power of his struggle.

Later, when the friends go home, you stuff the trophy in the freezer — with three dozen smaller fish from past excursions to the creek.

Back at the creek, a few seconds pass.

The trout has grown quiet in your hands.

Suddenly, you reach into the fish's mouth and tug on the hook.

Trying to avoid the tiny sharp teeth in his all white mouth, you free the barb and bend toward the water.

Still grasping the trout you submerge his shiny green back in the stream. You tug at his tail a few seconds.

With a flash of color and a wiggle, he's gone. He darts under the bank and disappears. Back from where he came.

Later, with a creel full of small ones you return home, take off your wet socks and tell your friends about throwing the big one back.

Why? They shout, why let a beauty like that get away?

The greatest trophy of fishing skill could be in the kitchen sink right now instead of swimming around in some old creek with a hole in his jaw.

Why did you let him go?

Sitting by the fire and listening to the ribbing, you can't quite explain why the big one got away.

But finally your friends quiet. You clear your throat and say you returned the trophy to the stream because he belongs in the stream. He was a wild creature, that smart old trout, like a wolf or fox.

He wasn't a hatchery production with his dorsal fin rubbed off.

He wasn't meant for the frying pan.

That rainbow was a creation so perfect he shouldn't have to give up his life in the wilds for a cold, permanent vacation in the freezer with lesser fish.

He was a part of a perfect day. Part of the spectacular sunset, part of the totally serene beauty of the creek.

He's still part of a perfect day.

The sport of fishing for that trout was an unmatched experience. The tug of the line, the fight for survival and the triumph of landing the trout of your dreams. It was all there.

He was in your hand, conquered in the best tradition of Hemingway and all the rest. So why still his belly to an final act of victory?

He's free to swim again, that fish, to give another man the thrill of a summer.

He was a fish too big to keep.

On another perfect day along the banks of Billingsley Creek north of Hagerman he waits, to meet you again.

Local birds colorful, interesting to watch

Editor, Times-News:

I read the story in Sunday's Times News about the little lady who fed birds in Chicago. I feel very sorry for people who only see Pigeons, English sparrows, and Starlings. Wherever you see these birds you can also see the Maker's most beautiful birds.

In our backyard we have seed out for birds and also a bird bath, with fresh water dripping into it. The water is much more attractive to birds than food. I have several English sparrows and a few Starlings, but oh! how fascinating to watch the ever changing action.

Each morning to see a great Red Shinned Flicker come for a fresh drink, sometimes we are lucky enough to see three at a time. We have many White Crowned Sparrows, and a few Fox Sparrows. These are beautiful song birds.

We also have Oregon Junco, beautiful Goldfinch and Warblers. What a thrill to see these little ones dart in among the larger birds, and take a good splashing bath. We have seen seven Robins drinking together. This fall we have identified fourteen different varieties of beautiful birds, and have had several varieties that we cannot identify.

Our most thrilling experience, so far, is watching a flock of Cedar Waxwings. Sometimes fifteen or twenty drinking at one time! We have watched as many as five bathing together! We know this flock will soon move on, but they have been entertaining us for over a week.

We also have a beautiful Red Squirrel come each day for his treat of sunflower seed. He finds this on the top step, just outside the glass door. When he finishes eating, he never fails to stand with his front feet and nose against the door and flick his beautiful red tail. We think he is saying "Thank You."

Those who only see the English Sparrows and Starlings miss so much.

Double standard seen in animal treatment

Editor, Times-News:

There seems to be a double standard in the animal world just as there is in the human world.

Two years ago when we watched ranchers shooting baby calves and burying them in ditches to protest market prices on beef, I can't recall anyone protesting about the "humane interest" in those little animals that were bred entirely for profit.

They gasped for their lost breath too. It was on television and in the newspapers. Children watched. I saw them.

Now your concern is so humane. Why do you think that puppies and kittens have to be gassed?

Not because of profit, surely, but because the adults who are really responsible do not care enough about their pets to have them sprayed (and neutered). It's time your children see what happens to those baby animals after you neglect your duty as a "pet lover."

Instead of speaking or being shocked, why don't you tell your children that because you love your pet, you must prevent it from having babies?

Spaying is not so expensive. If you can't afford to spay, you can't afford to feed a pet.

Prayer for today

We're only human, God.
How we love to use our very humanity as a cloak to cover every falling and every mistake!

"We just can't do everything," we say, to excuse ourselves for not backing a church program or giving attention to people who may need help and encouragement.

When we have trouble controlling our emotions or forgiving someone who has wronged us, we feel much better when we remind ourselves of how human we are.

Maybe we satisfy ourselves this way, but are you convinced that, because we're so human, we can't do any better?

'Lawbreaker' still represents Idaho

Editor, Times-News:

Your editorial of Sunday, Nov. 7 about Democrats "badmouthing" is a point worth checking into, but . . .

But, perhaps State Senator Stan Kress, who ran an honest and forthright campaign, is justified considering . . .

Considering that . . .

Idahoans in the second congressional district are still represented by a convicted lawbreaker. That really depresses and frustrates me. I can imagine how Mr. Kress, his wife and children feel after going through the rigors of the election and primary campaign.

2 — America has shaken off Nixonism: Ohio, Utah and some other states have gotten rid of immoral and undesirable congressmen while

In Idaho the state and Twin Falls county Republican organizations successfully endorsed, encouraged and persuaded their members to reelect a convicted lawbreaker.

3 — The opponent of Stan Kress also received help from some apathetic Democrat party members who decided when their primary candidate lost that they wouldn't do anything except vote for Kress, Twin Falls county, for example, could have gone for Kress, I believe. If more Democrats living here had really gotten serious about voting out the convicted lawbreaker who was and now still is representing them.

In your Nov. 7 editorial, I detect a quiet message that says we must continue to work for an honest and effective representative in the house of representatives. I certainly want to say that is my feeling and thinking.

May I also express my appreciation for your editorial in support of Mr. Kress. You thoughts were well put. Unfortunately the problem you pointed out is still in power, sitting as a reminder for my and your children to ask, "Why obey the laws?"

It is my hope that Mr. Kress and his family will begin now to prepare for two years hence. I believe Mr. Kress is well on his way to becoming the next 2nd congressional representative from Idaho. He and his family are experienced campaigners now; and I saw Mr. Kress grow and mature politically in a very statesman-like manner.

Car production questionable in '78?

Editor, Times-News:

This letter is meant for the benefit of those readers who are not aware of all of the ramifications of the Clean Air Act of 1970.

The Clean Air Act of 1970 mandates clean air standards for all segments of our country. In the case of automobiles, the law requires a certain level of improvement in automobile exhaust emissions each year. Millions of dollars are spent by the car manufacturers in order to meet the clean air requirements. However, those requirements have finally become so stringent that it is now impossible for the car makers to comply with the law for the 1978 models.

In response to this fact, the House of Representatives, in September finally moved on an amendment that would have frozen the clean air standards at the 1977 level for a period of several years. This moratorium would have given the manufacturer a period of time for further experimentation in order to meet the increasingly stricter emission levels.

Unfortunately, the amendment was held in the Joint Senate-House Committee until Congress adjourned and was therefore not voted on by the Senate.

Now, new legislation will have to be introduced when Congress reconvenes.

The following article appeared in the National Automobile Dealers Association Newsletter:

Will there be any 1978 models? In the wake of Congress' failure to pass Clean Air Act legislation before adjournment, a General Motors Corp. executive says there is a possibility the auto industry will be forced to cancel 1978 model production.

"This will occur if the new Congress doesn't revise vehicle exhaust emission standards next year," states GM Vice President Richard L. Terrell. He says requirements still in effect for the '78 models are "so close to zero emissions that our present catalytic converter system can't meet them."

As a practical matter, GM has only one possible course of action, Terrell points out, now that Congress has adjourned without enacting feasible auto emission standards for new cars scheduled to go into production next summer.

"We are continuing the testing and procedures to certify our 1978 models at the same emission standards — the same tough standards — that apply to 1977 models hoping the new Congress will be more responsive to the problem."

To meet the standards now in the law for '78 models will require new technology, particularly for reducing oxides of nitrogen, he says. "In spite of our best efforts, and the expenditure of hundreds of millions of dollars, we have not yet developed this technology to the extent that it could be applied to the variety of production cars the American public desires."

"We will keep trying, but time has run out for 1978 models; for those models, 1978 is today, and even if we perfected the technology right now, it would be too late for the 1978s."

This particular matter is just one example of how government moves to create more inflation, more unemployment, and less efficiency. What this country needs is less idealists and more realists as representatives of government.

Those reading this letter may feel that I am concerned only because my personal income is derived from car sales. Those same people better take a good look. This involves everyone and it is time for everyone to get involved in their government. Contact those people who represent you in government. They will listen and get involved for the good of your children, if not for yourself.

Utah chairman of pardons indicates Gilmore to die

ONY Times News Service SALT LAKE CITY — George W. Lattimer, chairman of the State Board of Pardons, indicated Friday that there was a good chance that the board would uphold the death sentence of Gary Mark Gilmore, the murderer who has pleaded with the courts to be executed without further delay.

Gilmore had been scheduled to die before a firing squad tomorrow and the Utah Supreme Court refused on Wednesday to block the execution. But Thursday, Gov. Calvin L. Rampton stayed the execution until the pardons board could review the sentence, as required by law.

Through his lawyer, Gilmore said Friday that he was "disgusted" by the governor's action.

That even if the board allows Gilmore's death sentence to stand, it could take more than a month before it is carried out.

The law says that the trial judge must set a new date if the board upholds the penalty. The law also says the execution must take place at least 30 days after the "judgment" but within 60 days. A spokesman for the state attorney general said it is unclear whether "judgment" refers to the initial day of conviction, the day of the initial sentencing or the day of subsequent resentencing.

In any case, the meeting of the board of pardons next Wednesday at the state prison in Draper, south of Salt Lake City, promises to be quite a show.

Lattimer, who represented Army Lt. William Calley when he was accused of murder in connection with the My Lai massacre in Vietnam, said the meeting would be open to all and that Gilmore would be permitted to speak.

"I'll do everything except let them argue that capital punishment isn't appropriate. That's not our job," he said.

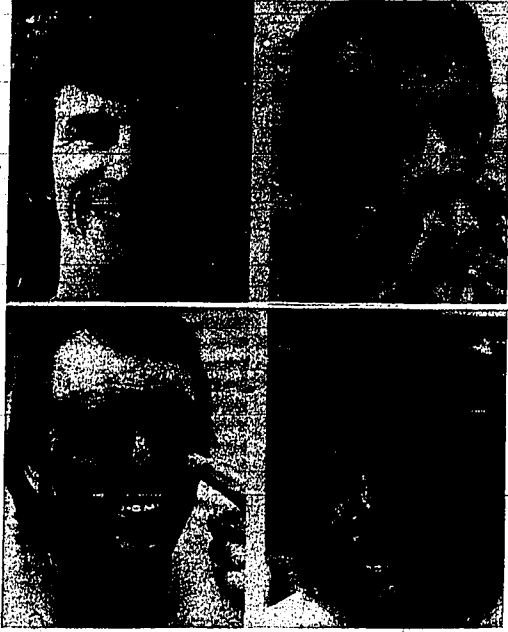

Lattimer, a former Utah Supreme Court justice, has served as chairman of the board for the past 10 years. Other members are Thomas R. Harrison, a businessman, and Harriet L. Marcus, a social worker. They are appointed by the board of corrections.

The board of pardons has the power to determine the lengths of a term sentence of a prisoner, to commute death sentences to life imprisonment, to parole prisoners and to pardon them.

In Gilmore's case, it has the power to do nothing, thus returning the case to the trial judge, who would set the new execution date. That judge, J. Robert Bullock of the Fourth Judicial District in Provo, where Gilmore was convicted of killing a local motel manager, could not be reached for comment on Friday.

Lattimer said he would permit lawyers to speak at the Wednesday hearing but only as interested parties, not as counsel. He also said he might permit briefs to be submitted.

In a telephone conversation, he told Gov. Rampton the order to review the sentence was "going to eliminate a lot of squawking, so I happily accept."

Other cons talk of death

ANGOLA, La. (UPI) — Some of the 30 men on death row at Louisiana State Penitentiary here think Utah convict Gary Gilmore, who wants to face a firing squad, is crazy — but they say they can understand how he feels.

Louisiana's prisoners, caged in a wing of Angola's maximum security reception center, are optimistic. The U.S. Supreme Court struck down the state's capital punishment law under which they were sentenced to die in the electric chair.

The court said all the men must be resentenced. Most think they eventually will be released. The 30 convicted murderers and rapists insist they are innocent and that their incarceration is a miscarriage of justice the high court soon will correct.

"I expect to be home in a year," said Eugene Stripling, 26. He was convicted of raping two women at gangland January 1975 in New Orleans. "Me and some other fellows, we looked in a law book. No doubt about it, they going to have to cut us loose."

Stripling, who has served five years of a 10-year sentence for the armed robbery of a New Orleans bus driver, said Gilmore is insane for wanting to die.

"I think he's crazy. No one in his right senses wants to die," Stripling said. "When he is freed, Stripling said, he wants to complete his eighth grade education and learn a trade.

"I've learned there's more to life than getting loaded and having a good time," he said.

But Joseph Gleason, 35 years old Monday, said he understands why a man would rather die than exist in prison.

"I can understand it," the convicted rapist said. "If I was guilty, I would feel the same way."

Xavier Miles, 23, believes his aggravated rape conviction will be overturned, but he said he can understand Gilmore's wanting to die.

"I know what he's thinking," Miles said. "I just don't let my mind stay on my being in here."

Stags land in jail for party

FORT WORTH, Tex. (UPI) — "There will be no party next year," said Gerry Goodman, secretary of the local branch of the prestigious national college fraternity.

A vice squad officer walked into the invitation-only stag party of SAE Alumni Association Friday night and found guests shooting dice and playing poker. Upstairs there were party girls.

While watching the gambling, which was held on the third floor of the Blackstone Hotel, one of the guests told vice squad officer L.E. Schilling: "You haven't seen nothing yet. Go up to the fourth floor."

On the fourth floor, Schilling said he and his partner found four prostitutes working in rooms that had lines of waiting customers outside. Schilling said there were 20-25 men waiting to pay $20 each. At one point, he said, a nude prostitute came into the hall warning everyone to be quiet and that "they would all get their turn."

Schilling and his partner revealed they were officers and wrote out 41 tickets for gambling and arrested three prostitutes.

More than 300 SAE alumni from several schools, along with Texas Christian University students and guests, attended the Friday fund-raising function, which was an alumni association event and not promoted by the SAE chapter at TCU.

Goodman said members are thinking seriously about never holding another stag party.

"Some of our people were at the police station until 4 a.m., and these guys are very much in favor of never holding another one."

TCU Chancellor Dr. J. M. Miquay said officials of the university were investigating to see what organizations, if any, on the campus were involved.

Addicts die from heroin overdoses

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Four drug addicts died and 24 became ill by early Saturday from a supply of unusually strong heroin containing an unknown impurity, police said. It was described as the worst epidemic of drug-related deaths in Washington history.

The heroin, believed to be a type commonly known as "Mexican mud," was cut to a strength of 12.4 parts heroin per part of dilutant, compared to the usual diluted strength of 2.5 parts of heroin, said Capt. Houston Bigelow, head of the Washington police department's drug enforcement division.

The heroin also contained numerous "black specks" of an unknown substance.

Although results of autopsies on three of the victims were "consistent with overdose cases," Bigelow said, drug officials were not ruling out a possibility the "black specks" also might have contributed to the deaths and illnesses.

"The strength of it... does not indicate that it would be the strength of the proportion that would cause this type of overdose in so many numbers," Bigelow said.

"I think there must be some impurities that go along with the strength."

"It could be a case that even the dealer did not know the strength of it," Bigelow said, "and apparently the user didn't know the strength of it and this sometimes happens."

He said the department was looking for at least two persons suspected of distributing the heroin Friday and that they hope to make arrests soon if they can get cooperation from the addicts affected by the drug.

Bigelow said a "substantial amount" of the heroin was distributed but not in "any proportion that would be alarming. I think we are at the end of the crisis right now."

There has been an increase in drug overdose deaths in the Washington area in recent months, including seven deaths in June, but "it's never reached an epidemic proportion as we have now," Bigelow said.

"We're not taking this as anything usual," he said.

Grizzly home due in Idaho

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government said Saturday it will hold hearings next month on plans to set aside 20,000 square miles of Idaho, Washington, Montana and Wyoming as the living area America's grizzly bears need to survive.

Grizzlies once ranged from Canada to Mexico and from the Great Plains to the Pacific, but the only significant grizzly populations remaining in the continental United States today live in the proposed refuge area, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service said.

"The agency wants to declare the 20,000 square miles a 'critical habitat' for the grizzly bear — the living space it needs to survive."

The proposed area — extreme northern Idaho and northeastern Washington, north western Montana, Yellowstone National Park, parts of several national forests and part of Grand Teton National Park — contain "the only significant grizzly populations south of Canada," said the Fish and Wildlife Service.

Under the nation's endangered species laws, federal agencies may not destroy or modify the "critical habitat" of threatened or endangered animals or do anything to jeopardize them. The designation does not necessarily close the area to other uses.

Rhodesians kill 19

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI) — Rhodesia said Saturday its troops had killed 19 nationalist guerrillas and exchanged fire with Mozambique regulars across the border in the past 24 hours.

A security forces commander said a Rhodesian army sergeant, Gregory John West, 30, was killed in the action, bringing the Rhodesian death toll this year to 99. The guerrillas have lost 1,293 men so far this year, the government said.

Security forces also said Mozambique's Frelimo forces had fired "without provocation" on Rhodesian troops and launched several mortar bombs on a border farm homestead. "Fire was returned. There were no casualties and no damage."

Solon reports Korean gift

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. John Brademas, D-Ind., said Saturday he had received a previously unreported $500 "campaign contribution" from South Korean businessman Tongsun Park, whose gifts to numerous congressmen are under investigation by the FBI.

Brademas, who earlier had told reporters he got legal contributions totaling $4,650 from Park in 1972 and 1974, reported the additional cash contribution in a written statement.

The congressman could not immediately be reached for additional comment. In the statement, Brademas said the $500 was received from Park in 1970 in response to "a general mail appeal." He said the contribution was not reported because it was made prior to passage of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971.

Brademas, first elected to Congress in 1958, retained his seat in the Nov. 2 elections. In the statement, Brademas said the $4,650 in contributions reported earlier represented the direct and related costs of two fund-raising receptions held at a Washington club owned by Park. These contributions were reported as required under the 1971 act, he said.

Brademas said he had received no other gifts, political or private, from Park and that he knew Park only socially, having first met him when they lived in the same apartment house in 1952. Brademas said he was "unaware of any ties Park might have with the South Korean government and has never discussed such matters with Park." The statement described Brademas as "a consistent critic" of the current South Korean regime and said he had voted for amendments to military and economic aid bills in an effort to halt violations of human rights in South Korea. Gifts by Park and other South Koreans to several members of Congress are under investigation as a possible attempt to influence U.S. policy in behalf of South Korean President Park Chung Hee's regime.

Sadat asks for U.S. arms

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — President Anwar Sadat called on the United States Saturday to supply Egypt with arms, saying he considered this "an obligation" and telling Americans, "I have proved myself to you."

Addressing a group of U.S. senators, Sadat also urged President-elect Jimmy Carter to help promote movement toward an overall Arab-Israeli peace settlement in 1977.

"Let Carter take his time, but not for long, because the problem of this area is so explosive," he said.

Sadat spoke to a 13-member delegation led by Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., and Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn. The group is on a Middle East tour in connection with setting up safeguards in the supply of U.S. nuclear reactors to Egypt, Israel and Iran. Sadat's pitch for American arms came in reply to a question by Sen. James B.

Pearson, R-Kan., about Egyptian-Soviet relations. Noting that Israel and Syria have received large quantities of arms from the United States and the Soviet Union respectively since the 1973.

Wife gone in Mexico

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Felipe Reyes Lopez thought he'd celebrated his 10th wedding anniversary in great style in the company of his spouse.

But all he has to show for it is a hangover and a missing wife.

Reyes Lopez told police investigators he and his wife, Teresa Chavez de Reyes, went out for a night on the town and ended up at Garibaldi Plaza, Mexico City's famous nightspot for mariachi serenades.

After a few songs and a few drinks, Reyes Lopez said, he tried to hail a taxicab without success.

So the couple started hitchhiking. Along came a blue car which stopped, and they hopped in.

The car's driver asked Reyes Lopez to check to see if a tire had gone low. He stepped outside and the car sped off.

Remains of last Aztec ruler believed discovered

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — A small glass case with a clutch of brittle bone fragments is revered by many Mexicans, including President Luis Echeverria, as probably the greatest single relic of the once mighty Aztec empire.

They believe the bones are those of Cuauhtemoc, last Aztec ruler and most venerated historical figure of Mexico's colorful pre-colonial past.

Many Mexican anthropologists, led by Professor Eulalia Guzman and other scientists who have examined, measured, x-rayed, photographed, chemically analyzed, photographed and otherwise intensely studied the bones, share that belief.

But despite 27 years of research, the opinions and conclusions of all experts have not been unanimous. A few have challenged or rejected the contention that the bones are Cuauhtemoc's.

The nation is now awaiting the conclusions of a new investigating commission assigned to probe the matter.

It was in 1949 that Professor Guzman, acting on information contained in ancient documents, directed excavations deep below the altar of a centuries-old Spanish colonial church in the isolated Indian village of Ixcateopan, in Guerrero State.

She found, in a tiny, carefully protected earthen crypt an assortment of bones, including part of a skull, beads of jade, amethyst, diamond-like crystal and metal, two metallic rings, and a copper lance-head, all resting on a small, flat piece of copper.

Most sensational of all, over the skull fragment was a copper plate crudely inscribed with a cross and bearing these crudely etched Spanish words: "Rey E. S. Coateemo" — King and Lord, Cuauhtemoc — and the dates "1525-1529."

Ixcateopan was Cuauhtemoc's birthplace, according to Mexican historians.

As the crow flies, Ixcateopan is about 100 miles southwest of Mexico City — seat of the Aztec Empire — but actually it is many miles father along the winding mountain roads. For centuries it was almost inaccessible.

Today Ixcateopan is fast becoming a national historical shrine, the supposed bones of Cuauhtemoc a magnet for Mexican tourists.

Last January, Echeverria — in a presidential decree — ordered a new commission of scientists set up to make a fresh study of the question.

But the president, apparently impatient over the lack of a speedy conclusion by the commission, journeyed himself to Ixcateopan last Sept. 26 — the 27th anniversary of Professor Guzman's excavation.

Without hesitation he declared the remains of Cuauhtemoc.

Whether Echeverria's pronouncement has complicated — from a political point of view — the new probe is unknown. There are no indications yet when the commission's conclusions may be ready.

Cuauhtemoc's stubborn resistance against Hernan Cortes, invading conquistador — and his stoicism as a tortured captive — and his role in the ruthless destruction of the Spaniards — makes him "an eternal hero" to every Mexican.

The Aztec Lord was hanged by Cortes in a territory which today corresponds to the Central American Republic of Honduras.

Grain drying systems may save fuel costs

WASHINGTON — During the fall corn harvest season, American farmers may be concerned with the cost and availability of the propane and natural gas they need to dry their harvest for storage and sale.

But in the near future, farmers may be using solar energy or a new microwave-vacuum system to dry corn and other grains. The Energy Research and Development Administration (ERDA) is working with the U.S. Department of Agriculture's (USDA) Agricultural Research Service (ARS) to develop both technologies.

Because the huge American corn crop is harvested in a short period in the fall with more excess moisture than almost any other grain, most of it is dried so that it can be stored without spoilage and used throughout the year. Dried corn is used as animal feed and in a variety of cereal products.

Farmers burn more than a billion gallons of liquid propane and natural gas to dry each annual harvest. These fossil fuels are, however, decreasing in supply and increasing in price. And, the more it costs farmers, the more consumers pay in grocery stores.

The microwave-vacuum drying system was originally developed by engineers at McDonnell-Douglas, Corporation to restore papers that had been water-soaked by fire hoses during a fire in a government research building. Ordinary hot-air drying would have damaged the papers.

So the engineers tried drying the papers with microwave energy inside a vacuum vessel. Because water vaporizes in a vacuum at a much lower temperature than at ordinary air pressure, the microwave energy evaporated the moisture in the wet papers without overheating or further damaging them. Restoration was successful.

Now ERDA has asked McDonnell-Douglas to design a microwave-vacuum dryer for grain and to study its economic potential. The dryer is expected to use much less energy than conventional drying units, and will run on electricity rather than direct burning of scarce natural gas. In 1977, the AeroGlide Corporation of Raleigh, North Carolina will build the dryer, and USDA's Agricultural Research Service will test it at its Tifton, Georgia experimental facility. ERDA hopes to see these units available commercially by 1979.

In addition to the microwave-vacuum technique, a more basic source of energy can be used to dry corn and other grains — the sun. Simple solar collectors can be built with materials and technology available now. Some farmers already have built their own solar dryers. But solar drying needs to be made more efficient, economical, and dependable before it can find widespread use.

ERDA is funding about 17 experiments to test solar drying of wheat, rice, forage peanuts, and other agricultural products as well as corn at universities and experimental farms in 14 states.

Solar grain drying simply replaces fossil fuel heat with heat captured from the sun. As in conventional drying, the wet grain to evaporate its moisture. At present, solar energy is best in which the drying air needs to be only five to 10 degrees warmer than the outdoor air.

Tests have shown that solar grain probably can be used in eight out of ten harvest seasons without the need for a backup heat source.

A continuing problem with solar grain drying is cost. A durable commercial system costs about $2000 and results in fuel savings of about $100 a year. A do-it-yourself plastic collector system can be built for a few hundred dollars, but is subject to damage by wind, ice, and snow as well as rodents, farm animals, domestic pets, and vandals.

Teton flood survey reveals low toxicity

BOISE — Flooding of the Teton Dam may not have caused as much contamination from pesticides and toxic materials as was originally feared. But state health officials are advising continued caution because large amounts of toxic materials are still missing.

Early results of a study conducted in the American Falls Reservoir area and upstream show levels of mercury, pesticides and PCB's (polychlorinated biphenyls) are within ranges measured before the flood.

"The results of our study show that fish caught in the forebay of American Falls Dam are safe for human consumption and there is no evidence of significant levels of toxic materials in duck or geese in the reservoir area," State Health Officer Dr. John Ashby stated.

Dr. Ashby said that at this time "there appears to be no serious public health hazard associated with normal activities in the Reservoir or Snake River area."

However, he cautioned that large quantities of toxic material were lost during the flood and that much of the material is not yet accounted for. A recent recovery effort conducted by the Department of Health and Welfare (H & W) yielded 657 barrels of various materials, with 186 of these labeled as containing pesticides.

According to Dr. Lee Stokes, administrator of the Environmental Division of H & W, indications are that many more containers of toxic materials are still in or near the river and these could cause a threat to humans, fish and wildlife.

At least 230 five-gallon containers of highly toxic pesticide Furadan were lost in the flood, he noted.

"The department intends to continue monitoring on a large range basis so that the public can be made aware of any change in the current status," Dr. Stokes said.

Details of the long term monitoring program will be announced following a review of all data gathered during the present study. Results announced are based on more than a thousand tests run so far on the 300 samples taken in the current study.

Assistance in recovering the white plastic Furadan containers is requested by H & W officials. Flood area residents should report the location of containers to the nearest H & W office immediately.

Fish feed at Leadore

BERT HARTMAN tosses feed to the fish and they scurry to the surface of the raceway. A nearby spring produces about 5,000 gallons of water a minute at an even 48-degree temperature.

Cattle slump forces rancher to raise fish

LEADORE — The cattle market is poor so a Leadore area rancher is turning to the commercial production of fish. Bert Hartman, who purchased the old Benson Ranch southeast of Leadore three years ago, is aiming at producing a million pounds of fish a year. Right now he has 18 raceways constructed, with 250,000 rainbow fingerlings in eight of them. He expects to have another 600,000 fish delivered shortly. Hartman says the cost of the project is in excess of $100,000. Next summer, plans call for installing another 15 raceways.

Mr. and Mrs. Hartman, who came here from Cutbank, Mont., have about 1,500 Black Angus, a white face and Simmental cattle on 3,000 acres of deeded land and 17,000 acres of federal land. Hartman said he decided to get into the fish production business because of "going broke in the cattle business." "I read an article that 1973 was a good year in the cow business but more money was made in the fish business that year," he said. "So I decided to give it a try." A heart attack, getting approval from the Idaho Department of Water Resources, the Environmental Protection Agency and the Idaho Department of Fish and Game delayed realization of the project until this fall. "The fish market still looked good so we started construction of the raceways in July," Hartman noted. The first fish will be ready for processing in January or February. The fingerlings came from Trout Farms Limited at Livingston and that firm will handle the mature 12-inch fish. The fish will be killed and cleaned at the Hartman ranch then shipped to Livingston for processing. Hartman said upwards of 35 persons probably will be employed at the ranch while preparing the fish for shipment. John Morrison, who worked for the Soil Conservation Service in Salmon as a technician, has been engaged as a biologist to handle the raising of the fish. A partner in the venture with Hartman is John Lewis, Cutbank. Purcell Spring, familiarly known as Big Springs, is the source of water for the fish raceways. It is located 10 miles southeast of Leadore. The water is 48 degrees at the spring and is 52-53 degrees in the first raceway below the spring. It doesn't freeze in the winter. The discharge rate is 5,000 gallons per minute. The young fish are being fed three times a day, consuming primarily a meal consisting of anchovies. The fish will be removed from the raceways when they reach the desired length. The ponds will be cleaned before new fish are released. There is a settling pond at each set of raceways to keep the water clean. There also are settling ponds before the water returns to the creek. The raceways are also screened to keep out any native fish. Helping the Hartmans is their son, Tim. Ben Hargis of Wilsal, Mont., constructed the raceways. Each raceway has some four feet of water.

Hartman looks on the fish venture as using a natural resource which doesn't take anything away from the ranch. "And I don't think it is a gamble, not in comparison to cows," he added. "I've never regretted coming to this country. I've never been sorry. We like the people, and we will make this work." Hartman will turn 60 next May.

Salmon may return to Idaho streams

BOISE (UPI) — Passage of the Lower Snake Compensation Plan and the offshore fishery management council concept are two major breakthroughs that will help bring back Idaho's salmon and steelhead populations, but the department of Fish and Game said more action is needed to save the sagging fish. Fish and Game director Joe ... expressed "great confidence" with the new measures. The department said implementation of steelhead and ... salmon test when ... Power Co. built three ... in Hells Canyon, and a ... membership in the Columbia River Compact are ... needed. U.S. Supreme Court will ... arguments today on ... attempts to obtain a ... membership in the compact, which sets commercial fishing regulations on the Lower Columbia River drainage. The department said Idaho Power Co. should "get off dead center on compensation for the Hells Canyon power dams so that this work can be dovetailed with the improved outlook of dams on the Lower Snake." The department is seeking two additional raceways at Rapid-River Hatchery near Riggins, a doubling of the size of Niagara Springs Hatchery and a new facility below Hells Canyon Dam to trap fish that can no longer pass that dam to traditional spawning grounds.

Try the Oswalt 3-Way Profit Package

Start with the Oswalt ENSILOADER... either tractor or truck mounted. Dig and load over a ton a minute from trench, bunker, or stack silos.

Patented reel and boom are hydraulically raised to clear the top of the ensilage (up to 21 feet high). Revolving rapidly as its own weight feeds it into the ensilage, the reel discharges smoothly and efficiently. A conveyor/loader carries away the ensilage as it falls.

Then mix the ration you want in the ENSILMIXER on your way to the feedlot. Weigh it in... mix it on the run... then weigh it off as you fill bunks uniformly—with a single pass.

Finally, dispose of feedlot wastes with an Oswalt Commercial Manure Spreader... the only spreader in America with the capacity, endurance, and performance to handle waste disposal from even the largest feedlots. Mounted on either a single axle or tandem axle truck, it handles loads up to 13 tons.

Britain's Richard confident

GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI)—The British chairman of the Rhodesia conference is confident he can produce a compromise "within the next day or so" acceptable to black and white Rhodesians on a target date for majority rule, officials said Friday.

"I hope we are in a position soon to call a plenary meeting and indeed I would hope it would be within the next day or so," chairman Ivor Richard told reporters after meeting with black nationalist leaders Robert Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo.

High conference officials said this meant Richard would call all delegations together to propose a compromise between their conflicting positions on the time required to make the transition.

Mugabe and Nkomo both said after their meeting with Richard that "no progress" was made. But the conference officials said the two "Patriotic Front" leaders may accept Richard's compromise while tabling their own reservations.

Rhodesian Foreign Minister Pieter van der Byl said Thursday that "Things are looking a bit better because the date issue has a chance of being achieved. When that's out of the way you can get down to discussing an interim government, which is what we're here for."

The nationalists insist on a 12-month limit for independence while Richard believes the period should be 15 months.

The white Rhodesian delegation argues that the independence process would take at least 23 months but it is not insisting on a target date as a condition for getting down to concrete issues.

Japan returns fighter

TOKYO (UPI)—Japan Friday handed over to a Soviet freighter 25 cartons containing the dismantled MIG-25 jet fighter—flown to Japan in September by a Soviet defector.

The transfer of the heavily guarded boxes to the 4,637-ton lumber carrier Talgo was made under the direction of the Japanese Air Self Defense Force.

The dismantled fighter, stripped of its military secrets by Japanese and American experts, arrived in the Pacific coast port 70 miles north of Tokyo aboard eight trailer trucks to await after a three hour trip from a Japanese air base near the nation's capital.

Japanese and Soviet officials briefly checked the shipment by peering through 31 inch windows on each box before loading them onto the Talgo.

On hand for the transfer were Victor Denisov, counselor at the Soviet Embassy, and Takehiro Togo, chief of the Foreign Ministry's first East European division.

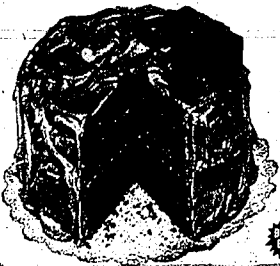

Soviet experts immediately began extensive examinations of the dismantled plane.

File reveals Oswald plan

© N.Y. Times News Service
WASHINGTON — Shortly before the assassination of President Kennedy, Lee Harvey Oswald reportedly told Cuban officials that he was going to kill the President, according to a recently discovered memorandum written by J. Edgar Hoover, the late director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, a high-level bureau source said.

According to the source, the Justice Department found the memorandum, which was dated 1964, after Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi received information of its existence from a source outside the Justice Department and ordered a search of bureau files.

According to the source, Hoover said in the memorandum that a highly reliable informant had told the bureau that Oswald had informed Cuban officials before the assassination on Nov. 22, 1963, that he intended to kill Kennedy.

The informant, the memorandum said, asserted that he had been told about Oswald's disclosure by Fidel Castro, Cuba's premier. It was not known when the informant received the information or when he told Hoover about it.

The informant said that the memorandum had been addressed to the Warren Commission, but that there was no record the commission had received it.

David W. Belin, who was a counsel for the Warren Commission and later a chief counsel for a commission that investigated the Central Intelligence Agency, said the Warren Commission had never received a document from the bureau with so explicit a piece of information attributed to a "reliable informant."

According to key sources, the Justice Department and the bureau have found no clear information as to the identity of the source of information mentioned in the purported Hoover memorandum.

In the last two years there has been growing evidence that the Warren Commission's finding that Oswald alone killed President Kennedy may have been based upon incomplete information.

The House of Representatives has appointed a special committee to reinvestigate the assassination and it is expected to review all FBI and Justice Department files.

Oswald was known to have visited the Cuban embassy in Mexico City about a month before the assassination. Press reports confirmed last year that the CIA had an electronic surveillance device in the Cuban embassy and had obtained a clear account of Oswald's visit.

Some of the agency's documents released recently under the Freedom of Information Act disclosed that Oswald had been in contact with three suspected Cuban intelligence agents during that trip.

Oswald's main purpose in visiting the Cuban embassy, Warren Commission documents indicate, was to get a transit visa through Cuba for a trip to the Soviet Union. No public documents have revealed what he told the three Cubans.

PVT. EDWARD D. SLOVİK was shot to death 31 years ago for deserting his unit in World War II, and now the Army Maj. for who defended him then is seeking a full pardon.

Pardon sought for man

MEDIA, Pa. (UPI) — The World War II Army defense counsel for Pvt. Edward D. Slovik, the only man executed for wartime desertion since the Civil War, is seeking a pardon for his former client.

Retired Army Maj. Edward Woods of Lansdale, Pa., and Robert DeFins, a colleague and neighbor, said Friday they will petition the Army Board for Correction of Military Records for a review and pardon to allow Slovik to receive the proceeds from Slovik's $10,000 military life insurance.

Mrs. Slovik, 63, lives in a nursing home under an assumed name in Detroit, where Slovik was born in 1920 and where they were married just one year before he went into the Army.

"She is a victim of 32 years of living in poverty and disgrace," said DeFins, who acts for Woods and Mrs. Slovik. Mrs. Slovik has granted the two men power of attorney.

Slovik was tried Nov. 11, 1944, and executed by a firing squad Jan. 31, 1945. He is buried in Cise Aisne Military Cemetery in Fere en Tardenois, France, 100 miles from the Swiss border.

"Our dispute is that he did not get the full due process of law," said DeFins, who said they are planning a book on the case.

Bernard Edelson, the Media, Pa., attorney hired to petition the Army, said Slovik "never hurt anyone."

"He just couldn't survive in a combat arena," Edelson said.

"The question is whether it was cruel and unusual punishment for his government to execute him under the circumstances."

Edelson said they will argue that Slovik was never represented by a lawyer and didn't know he was entitled to one. Woods was not an attorney.

Another ground will be that Slovik never received a trial transcript as required by military law. DeFins said records show the Army was still trying to deliver the transcript to him in 1946, a year after Slovik was shot.

Edelson said there was little precedent for changing the record. In 1967, the Army changed from dishonorable to honorable and 1980 discharge it gave Maj. Marcus Alfred Reno, who was once accused but acquitted of deserting Maj. Gen. George Custer at the Battle of Little Big Horn.

And Congress, he said, posthumously restored Confederate Gen. Robert E. Lee's citizenship.

Church backs CIA curbs

© Chicago Sun-Times
CHICAGO — Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, says that covert operations conducted by the Central Intelligence Agency should be stopped because they do the United States more harm than good.

Speaking to supporters of the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions in Chicago, Church said the CIA's extralegal activities into the affairs of foreign countries have sown widespread "suspicion and distrust" of the United States while forging alliances with foreign governments of dubious character.

"We haven't gained very much," Church said. "A friendly Iran and Indonesia, both members of the OPEC (Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries) cartel that's imposing inflationary oil prices on the Western economy. That's caused more damage than anything the Soviets have been able to do us."

Church said CIA operations overseas, including plans to poison African leaders, overturn the government of President Salvador Allende in Chile and put armed troops ashore in the Cuban Bay of Pigs, have drained away the moral authority with which the United States once led the free world.

"In the eyes of millions of people this kind of action has caused the United States to be regarded with vague suspicion and distrust," Church said.

"The distinction between the U.S. and the Soviet Union has been blurred."

Church, who served as chairman of the Senate's Select Committee to Study Governmental Operations with Respect to Intelligence Activities, said that despite the long list of abuses discovered by his committee and other researchers, he still felt the CIA's cover operations do not truly represent the intentions or feelings of most U.S. citizens.

"This is not the America I know," he said. "It is an aberration."

Church also said he did not ally himself with those who believe all covert operations should be forbidden regardless of circumstances. "I can foresee how a timely covert operation could stop a nuclear holocaust and save a civilization," he said. "What I'm against is this sort of self-generating series of covert operations. And I believe all covert operations should be severed from the CIA. Perhaps they can be placed under the direct control of the State Department."

Politics banned by PUC

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho's Public Utilities Commission ordered Washington Water Power Company Friday to refrain from including political advocacy with any bill for service or commodities furnished any of its Idaho customers.

The 2-1 commission order was handed down in connection with a formal complaint filed against the utility by Kootenai Environmental Alliance, a civic organization, in May of 1975. Washington Water Power serves portions of northern Idaho.

Commissioner Ralph Wickberg dissented in the order and filed a dissenting opinion.

In its complaint, the civic group alleged that in March of 1975 WWP printed a statement urging construction of hydro-electric dams on the Middle Snake River in Hells Canyon in a monthly publication, "Gazette," which is placed in customer billing envelopes.

Canning Kitchen goes $900 in debt

By NANCY KELLEHER
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — "Trying to give people a good price on the finished product has been our downfall," according to Oren Hutton, board chairman of the Canning Kitchen, south of Twin Falls. "We didn't keep up with rising costs."

As a result of its attempt to keep prices low for customers, the 27-year-old cooperative canning organization is $900 in debt, Hutton said.

Yearly $2 membership fees and profits from can sales have been sufficient in the past to repay a bank loan borrowed prior to the July-October 1976 season, according to Hutton. The income is used to pay five salaried employees, pay utility bills, buy materials and keep the building in good repair, he said.

This year, however, the income did not match the kitchen's costs. Hutton said registration fees will probably be raised next year and the members probably will be charged more for cans. The board of directors which makes financial decisions will determine in the spring whether prices and fees will be raised.

"At a recent meeting of the board of directors and 85 of some 500 to 600 members discussed means of repaying the debt."

"Members were enthusiastic about getting the debt behind us," said Hutton. "By a unanimous vote, they decided they don't want to borrow from next year's fees." A calling committee will telephone users of the kitchen to request donations. A share sale will be held to raise funds Nov. 19 and 20, from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., at the Elks Lodge. Donations for the sale will be accepted from Monday to Thursday.

In its 27 years of operation, the Canning Kitchen has provided a quick means for persons to preserve the produce of their farms and gardens without making a mess in their homes. Members use the facility to can everything from vegetables to fish.

The kitchen, owned by its users, was originally funded by the sale of 52 interest-bearing shares and $5 donations. All of the shares have been paid off with interest, according to Hutton. Land was originally donated by I.T. Creed, a longtime member of the kitchen. Creed has been repaid for the donated land. The land, building and machinery belong to the Canning Kitchen.

The Canning Kitchen is open to everyone, not just Twin Falls residents. Beginning canners are also welcome, according to one member.

"People shouldn't be hesitant about coming here," said Mary Goldsma, who, along with other workers, is willing to help inexperienced canners. "There has never been anyone turned away because they didn't know how."

Kitchen hurting

THE CANNING KITCHEN in Twin Falls has been operating for 27 years, providing a quick, easy way for farmers to preserve everything from vegetables to fish. By keeping prices to customers low, the kitchen has run into financial difficulties and is currently $900 in debt.

Monster surf floods north shore of Oahu

HONOLULU (UPI) — The first "monster surf" in two and a half years battered the north shore of the island of Oahu Friday, flooding homes and closing roads and beaches.

Three emergency Civil Defense shelters were opened before dawn as residents were roused from their sleep by mobile loudspeaker-units and told to evacuate the area.

Fred Pugarelli of the state Civil Defense office, said 25 to 30 feet-high waves had been expected as the result of a Pacific storm but that they had not been predicted to hit the beach until after dawn.

The heavy seas were caused by an intense storm 1,700 miles north of Honolulu in which a long freighter sank.

In 1969, high surf caused more than $3 million in property damage in the same area of Oahu island. In March, 1974, five persons lost their lives during a weekend of high surf. Four of them had gone to the beach to watch the huge waves roll in.

Radio says Mao's widow attempted to frame Chou

HONG KONG (UPI) — Mao Tse-tung's widow and her three radical colleagues purged last month by China's new leadership tried to "frame" the late Premier Chou En-lai, according to a provincial radio broadcast.

Chiang Ching also led the group in "persecuting" Mao and tried to take control of the army, Chekiang Radio said in a report Thursday on a rally held in the provincial capital of Hangchow by 100,000 people.

The broadcast gave no details of the attempt to "frame" Chou but said the activities of the four had "gravely" disturbed and undermined the party's central leadership. It called them "blatant conspirators."

The report was part of a campaign by China's official media to depict Chiang Ching as rude, selfish, overbearing and lavish.

Other allegations were that: — While visiting an army unit on Hainan Island in the South China Sea, she ordered an artillery firing practice halted so she could collect sea shells on the beach.

— Aboard a Chinese Navy destroyer, she "sprayed poison" while taking about some military leaders, trying to create a split between the military and the Communist party.

— Inside Peking's Forbidden City area, Chiang Ching and her three associates gathered frequently in her "great mansion" to watch forbidden foreign movies and gorge themselves with food and drink.

School administrator 'overstepped bounds'

MOUNT CLEMENS, Mich. (UPI) — A school administrator acknowledged Friday that he ordered 22 eighth grade students to disrobe in gymnasium locker rooms between classes in a search for a missing master key to student desks.

"I overstepped my bounds. In retrospect, I shouldn't have done it," Steven McDermott, assistant principal at Clintondale Intermediate School, told the school's parent-teacher organization.

The boys took their clothes off in one locker room in the presence of McDermott and several teachers. The two girls in the class used another locker room and were accompanied by a woman gym teacher.

The key to the desks was reported missing Thursday by an industrial arts teacher. Before ordering the students to strip, McDermott said he conducted two searches of the classroom, instructing students the second time empty their pockets and remove their shoes and socks.

When that failed to turn up the key, the administrator said, he told the students to go to the gymnasium "and strip between the lockers between classes."

"I told the girls I was sorry, but it was only fair they did it too," McDermott said.

One 13-year old student, who asked not to be identified, said: "They went through the clothes and everything. I was mad, too. It was awful embarrassing. It wasn't like we were undressing for gym class or anything like that."

The key never was found.

Saxbe may resign as India diplomat

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — Former U.S. Attorney General William B. Saxbe plans to resign as ambassador to India and leave his post here later this month, embassy officials said Friday.

Saxbe will host a party Sunday "to say goodbye," according to invitations, and the official announcement of his departure is likely to be made Monday, the officials said.

Blunt and outspoken as a U.S. senator and later as the U.S. attorney general, Saxbe has generally maintained a low profile as ambassador.

There has been no great warmth in relations between India and Washington since Saxbe's arrival in New Delhi in March, 1975 but the ambassador is known to feel that the relations have improved some what during his tenure.

Earlier this year Saxbe told friends he was considering resigning because of what he considered unfair criticism of the United States by Indian officials. He changed his mind when the criticism stopped.

The ambassador, a Republican, told friends before the U.S. presidential election he planned to resign by the end of the year and return to Ohio no matter who won at the polls.

New presidents traditionally accept the resignations of non career diplomats who are the "political" appointees of their predecessors and nominate their own men for the jobs.

Driver ticketed daily

CHICAGO HEIGHTS, Ill. (UPI) — When you drive a Rolls Royce you don't park in the rear, even if it means a daily traffic ticket.

A Chicago pediatrician has been receiving daily $3 tickets for leaving his Rolls in a no parking zone in front of his office building.

"He gets a parking ticket every day," says Nancy Guzzino of the Chicago Heights traffic records department.

"The people complain," she said. "But there's nothing we can do except to keep ticketing him. And that's what we do. So every month he pays the tickets — at $3 each."

"This has been going on for months," she said. "I guess he figures it's worth the $3 a day to park his Rolls Royce where he wants to."

Skeletons identified

MAUNA LOA, Hawaii (UPI) — Two skeletons found near the summit of Mauna Loa have been identified as those of two Polynesians who died in a snowstorm in the 1800s.

Hawaii Volcanoes National Park Superintendent Robert Barbee said Thursday that the two men apparently were "Hawaiian mountaineers." He said they were the first two known to have died on the mountain.

The bleached skeletons were found in August by Dr. Jack Lockwood of the Hawaiian Volcano Observatory beneath a lip of lava near the edge of a crater at the top of the 13,680 foot mountain.

"From the position of the bones it appeared they had been huddled together when they died, with the older one trying to protect the younger," Barbee said.

He said a metal knife blade, a metal adz and what looked like a walking stick were found near the bones.

what's what

L.M. Boyd

Again am asked how long is a deceased person referred to as "the late." A kindly client recently explained that "the late" is properly used as a courtesy just as long as most of the deceased's contemporaries remain alive, thus to avoid any subtle implication by mention of the departed that those contemporaries themselves might have outlived their appropriate allotment of time. "The late" suggests that the dead is only relatively recently dead and that the living need not expect to be immediately likewise.

Was reported that a typical pair of Las Vegas dice only lasts ten days on these tables. Question arises as to how long it takes to manufacture such dice. About 11 months. Besides 13 machinings, they're cured.

Those spears carried by the biblical Goliath weighed almost 22 pounds each.

WOMEN'S JOBS

What types of salaried jobs aren't undertaken routinely by women? When researchers checked out 451 career classifications, they found only nine in which women weren't active. Regrettably, though, they failed to identify those nine. Submarine commander might be one. And what are the others?

"What's the costliest mispelt ever by a publishing firm?" inquires a customer. Possibly, it was the instance years ago when The Edition House in New York discovered after its release of the Bible of the Holy Writ that a phrase which was supposed to explain how to gain "immortality" of the soul inadvertently printed instead the word "immorality."

A WOMAN'S HOUSE

That the furnishings in a woman's house invariably reflect her own personality, has long been known. But that scholar Theodore Reik goes into an explanation of the matter a little more deeply: "Her home, the room within which she lives, is for a woman a continuation of her body. It is her true self, that which she is, physically extended. Women have, therefore, great interest that their homes should not only be comfortable but also look beautiful. The four walls represent herself in projection. The person who enters her room is in her presence whether she is physically there or not."

Our Language man says there's no literal translation in any other tongue of the English idioms "hit it off," "put up with him" and "through and through."

Note it claimed in print that no dog ever wins a fight with a grown swan. Can this be true?

Q: "What's the motto of that organization called the Cryonics whose members will let their bodies after death be stored in deep-freezers to await future medical discoveries they hope will bring them back to life?"

A: "Never say die." At least, that catchphrase has been attributed to them.

Council action delayed

HEYBURN — Paul and Heyburn city councilmen have held off action on the proposed Minidoka City-County Comprehensive Plan.

County Planning Coordinator David Abo told each council it could now adopt the plan without awaiting final action by the county.

Both city councils decided Wednesday night to await adoption by county commissioners.

Heyburn City Councilman Wilford Wilcox urged the delay at the Heyburn meeting.

He told councilmen he was in no hurry for the city to adopt the plan because of a mutual agreement with Cassia County for a 1979 extension to May 1, 1979, on adoption of mutual areas of urban impact.

The councilmen also argued that the county adoption would come before, or at least at the same time as, city adoption and that he wants to see what the 1977 state legislature will do with land use planning.

"I see no particular advantage to adopt this plan now that we don't particularly benefit from," Wilcox said.

Abo reminded Wilcox that counties and cities are mandated to have zoning and subdivision ordinances by Jan. 1, 1978, and said early adoption of the plan would allow Heyburn to start updating its zoning ordinance and start developing a subdivision ordinance.

Abo replied that the 1977 legislature might eliminate that mandate by March 1 when the legislative session ends.

Heyburn Mayor Harold Hurst added, "I think a lot to want to wait for the same reason."

Abo told the council that the last required public hearing by the county was held in August and no further hearings will be needed unless county commissioners make changes in the plan.

Commissioners are awaiting word on the plan by their legal counsel, Robert Nielsen, with reference to revision of the zoning ordinance.

Abo said the cities in the county now can adopt the plan if they feel it is satisfactory.

"Once the plan is adopted, he said, each city could make changes to fit its own concepts." "As I see it, the idea was to adopt plans as closely uniform," Abo said. "Once the plan is adopted, I think the plans will then begin to become individualized."

Abo assured the Heyburn councilmen it would have the power to make changes in the plan without going through any of the county regulatory bodies.

The planning coordinator told the council state mandate requires Heyburn to have a planning and zoning committee.

Hurst replied the city has appointed a committee three times but the council has had to act as a zoning commission.

Abo said state law provides for three to 12 members, all of whom have resided within the county for at least five years.

The Association of Idaho Cities, of which Hurst is president, is proposing legislation to drop the five-year requirement.

Hurst said he would like to

Stuart seeks PTA members

ROBERT Stuart Junior High School teachers are now sending PTA membership cards home with students. Here, Jeff Custer is given a card by his teacher, Gary Barker. Memberships will also be sold at an open house for parents and teachers set for 7:30 p.m. Monday at the school cafeteria. A brief business meeting will be held after which the parents will visit the classrooms.

Livestockmen hold 1st sale

BURLEY — Two Minidoka area livestockmen held their first sale as owners of the Burley Livestock Commission yards Thursday.

Gaylord Phillips, Heyburn, and Jay Whittle, Burley, purchased the business from Jim Palen.

Livestock sales will be held every Thursday, starting at 11 a.m. The sale yards are at 100 Occidental St., Burley.

Phillips said he and his partner plan immediate construction of a new sale barn, which they expect to be ready by Jan. 1.

He said they will install a new sale ring, barn, offices and lunch counter, and will improve corrals.

The pair plans to do commission sales. Phillips and Whittle are bonded and chartered. They also plan to hold special sales when needed.

Both men have spent most of their lives in the livestock business.

Whittle worked with his father, part-owner of the Burley sale ring, as a youth.

Phillips worked for Frank Coffey, local auctioneer, livestock man and one-time owner of Burley Livestock.

Phillips bought a quarter-interest in the business, but sold it after 1 1/2 years.

Phillips has operated Phillips Auction Service for about 30 years, and will continue handling farm, real estate and farm cattle sales.

Flashing traffic lights approved

HEYBURN — Flashing light traffic signals were approved Wednesday night for three intersections in Heyburn.

The Heyburn City Council approved the signals for 18th and 17th streets at their O Street intersections after hearing a plea from representatives of local groups.

The organizations represented at the council meeting included a sorority, the PTA and the Lions Club. The groups offered to collect money for purchasing the lights, which will cost about $365 apiece.

The council also authorized a four-way flashing warning light for the intersection of 21st and L streets.

Councilman Bud Scoville

proposed the signal there. He pointed out that the intersection gets a lot of traffic from workers at Simplot and other nearby industry.

Councilman Wilford Wilcox spoke in favor of the 21st Street signal and the project requested by the local organizations.

Heyburn council fails to buy lots

HEYBURN — Two lots for sale near the Heyburn sewer treatment plant have failed to arouse sufficient interest for the City Council to purchase them.

Councilmen agreed the two lots are attractive for future city use, but said they felt the price was too high.

The lots are 50 by 140 feet each and adjacent to city property already acquired alongside the sewer plant.

The city plans to construct a secondary treatment facility at the existing plant site with the aid of federal financing. Effluent from the plant will continue to flow into the Snake River, but will meet the standards laid out by the Environmental Protection Agency.

Mayor Harold Hurst informed the council Wednesday that the lots, as well as others not adjacent to city property, are available. But he added that the $1,500 price on each of the adjacent lots appears "way too much."

Councilman J. R. Brown agreed. But he asked, "When are you ever going to get a chance to get those lots again... at any price?"

Councilmen agreed that the lots might be useful, but they are not necessary to city planning now. Hurst said the city will keep an eye on the property in case the price should be lowered.

Even Elliott, building inspector for the city, reported that four of 18 houses now under construction in Heyburn are close to being "finalized out" with his office. He said final inspections on four more houses can be expected within two weeks.

UCLA rips Beavers

CORVALLIS, Ore. (UPI) — Olympic hurdler James Owens romped for touchdowns of 35 and 16 yards in a 21-point, second-period UCLA explosion and the second-ranked Bruins went on to defeat Oregon State 45-14 in a Pacific-8 Conference game Saturday.

The win set up a conference title showdown battle between the Bruins and USC which tipped back Washington 20-3.

Owens came on in relief of Wendell Tyler, who raced 68 yards for a first-period touchdown but went out with an injured left shoulder on a fumble early in the second quarter.

Owens' run for the first-quarter score made him the sixth player in Pac-8 history to go over 3,000 yards in career rushing.

The Bruins' upset pass interception by Frank Stephens at the Oregon State 26 and a fumble recovery by Jerry Robinson set up Owens' touchdown runs. An interception by Tom Murphy set up the third Bruin score of the second period which came on a 26-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Jeff Dankworth to flanker Wally Hank.

The Beavers' fifth-string quarterback, Dave White, threw a 10-yard touchdown pass to Lee Overtun in the first period and a seven-yard toss to tight end Tom Chamberlain late in the second quarter to trail 14-28 at the half.

Nine turnovers were costly for Oregon State and UCLA converted five of them into scores.

Robinson got his second fumble recovery on an errant Beaver pihthead at the OSU 12 and four plays later Frank Corral kicked a 23-yard field goal which held up through the third period despite two scoring threats by Oregon State which were killed by interceptions by Michael Molina and Levi Armstrong.

UCLA wound up its scoring with Dankworth scoring from the six after hitting Henry on a 46-yard pass. Steve Bukich, backup quarterback, scored the final Bruin touchdown from the one after a Beaver fumble set up the scoring opportunity.

In all, UCLA had five pass interceptions and four fumble recoveries. The victory was UCLA's 14th straight, a school record.

Irish passing beats Alabama

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (UPI) — Rick Stager completed 15 of 23 passes for 235 yards, including a 56-yard touchdown bomb to Dan Kelleher Saturday to lead Notre Dame to a squeaky 21-18 victory over Alabama in a regionally televised football game. The triumph was the seventh against two losses this season for the Irish and broke a five-game winning streak for the Crimson Tide with their third loss in 10 games.

Davis cup team beats Venezuela

CARACAS, Venezuela (UPI) — Fred McNair and Sherwood Stewart, the world's second-ranked doubles team, defeated Humphrey Hose and Jorge Andrew of Venezuela Saturday to complete a three-match blitz which catapulted the United States into the second round of the Davis Cup zone competition for the first time in three years.

Last year, the United States was eliminated by Mexico in the first round and in 1974 it was upset by Colombia.

After being tested fully in the first set, McNair and Sherwood breezed to an easy 8-6, 6-3, 6-4 triumph.

On Friday, Dick Stockton and Vitas Gerulaitis swept the first two singles matches to give the U.S. a 2-0 lead in the best-of-five series and set the stage for McNair and Stewart.

A-M stuns Arkansas

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (UPI) — Quarterback David Walker directed a near flawless Texas A&M attack Saturday and halfback Curtis Dickey scored one touchdown and passed for another in leading the Aggies to a 31-10 victory over 10th-ranked Arkansas.

The loss dropped the defending Cotton Bowl champion Razorbacks to 3-1-1 in Southwest Conference play and may have ruled their chance for a return visit.

A&M is now 4-2 in the SWC and 7-2 overall. Arkansas' season record fell to 5-2-1.

In winning the Aggies avenged their loss to Arkansas' last year that knocked them out of the Cotton Bowl and a possible national title.

Walker, a left-handed red-shirt junior, guided the Aggies to 24 points in the second quarter and the A&M defense, ranked second nationally in rushing defense, took care of the rest.

Terps still unbeaten

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (UPI) — Mark Mangas and Vince Kinney produced a 33-yard touchdown pass off a fake field goal Saturday and the seventh-ranked Maryland Terps maintained their perfect record with a 20-0 victory over surprisingly tough Clemson.

The Terps (10-0) were nursing only a seven-point lead early in the third period when Ed Loncer set up for a 51-yard field goal attempt. But Mangas, the holder and Maryland's regular quarterback, straightened up and threw to Kinney, who rambled down the right sideline for the score.

Maryland needing only a triumph over lightly regarded Virginia next Saturday to complete a perfect season and win a third straight Atlantic Coast Conference championship.

The victory over Clemson stretched the Terps' two-season winning streak to 14 games and extended their record-setting ACC streak to 19 straight games.

Maryland's defense again played a stout game in registering its second shutout in two weeks.

Top-rated Pitt tops West Va.

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Irrepressible Tony Dorsett, playing in his final home game, rushed for 193 yards and three touchdowns Saturday to lead top-ranked Pittsburgh to its 10th straight victory, 24-16, over upset-minded rival West Virginia in a regionally televised game.

Dorsett, whose number 33 jersey was retired during an emotional halftime ceremony, scored on runs of 17, 2 and 30 yards, but was thrown out of the game with 29 seconds left after getting into a fight that cleared both benches. Carson Long added a 27-yard field goal.

By being tossed out of the game Dorsett missed a chance to tie an NCAA record of three consecutive plus-200 yard games.

Quarterback Matt Cavanaugh recorded his best rushing day ever, running for 124 yards in 19 carries, although he missed a substantial portion of the second half with shoulder and elbow injuries.

Dorsett's yardage, gained in 38 carries, was his 32nd career plus-100 yard game. It pushed his career yardage total to 5,838.

Sloppy play by Pittsburgh kept the game close. All three of West Virginia's scores followed Pitt fumbles.

The Mountaineers scored on a 22-yard field goal by Bill McKenzie and on touchdowns passes of 14 and 9 yards from Dan Kendra to Steve Lewis.

Patner fumbles turned the ball over twice more and they were penalized four times for 50 yards.

The Panther defense, however, preserved the victory. The defenders were particularly hard on Kendra, sackng him six times for 52 yards.

Iowa State surprises Nebraska 37-28

AMES, Iowa (UPI) — twice on short runs and Luther Talback Dexter Green scored Blue had a 95-yard scoring kickoff return to lift No. 16 Iowa State to a 37-28 upset of ninth-rated Nebraska Saturday, boosting the Cyclones into a first-place tie in the Big Eight conference. Nebraska recovered from a 17-7 first quarter deficit to forge a 20-20 tie early in the final period, but Iowa State put it away with a touchdown after a long scoring drive and a field goal that followed a Cornhusker fumble. Iowa State, which has never-won the Big Eight title and was picked to finish seventh in most preseason polls, climbed to 4-2 in the conference and 6-2 overall. Nebraska, which lost six fumbles, fell to 4-2 in the league and 7-9 overall. Iowa State, beating Nebraska for the first time since 1950, built its early lead before a record crowd of 51,500 on a 21-yard field goal by Scott Kollman, a one-yard run by Green and Blue's kickoff return. The speedy split end-caught the ball on the five-yard line, appeared trapped at the 30, then stumbled forward and broke into the open. Nebraska, however, rallied behind the passing of quarterback Vince Ferragamo, who passed 43 yards to Bobby Thomas for Nebraska's first touchdown, directed a 68-yard scoring drive culminated by Monte Anthony's 14-yard run, then hit Thomas again on a 30-yard scoring play with 14:33 left in the game.

Ferragamo's second pass to Thomas tied David Humm's school record of 18 touchdowns passes in one season. Iowa State came back with an 80-yard scoring drive that used up more than six minutes. The Cyclones ran 15 plays and Green punched in from the 3. Iowa State's Maynard Stensrud recovered a fumble on Nebraska's first play after the kickoff and Kollman kicked a 21-yard field goal six plays later to boost the Cyclones' margin to 30-20 with 5:46 left. Kollman had booted a 31-yarder to give the Cyclones a 20-13 lead at halftime.

Iowa State scored its final touchdown late in the game on a 16-yard run by Buddy Hardeman, who took over at quarterback after starter Wayne Stanley was sidelined by a knee injury in the closing seconds of the first half. Nebraska's last score came on a two-yard run by Richard Berns.

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Vince Evans passed 24 yards to Shelton Diggs for a touchdown and completed a 40-yarder to Randy Simmin to set up a second score and spark thirddranked Southern California to a 20-3 triumph over Washington. USC went into the game as the nation's No. 1 offensive team with an average of 473.4 yards a game. Steve Robbins kicked a 41-yard field goal for the Huskies after Washington got the ball on the USC 27 when freshman Charles White fumbled the opening kickoff. Robbins missed a 35-yard field goal attempt at 6:19 of the second period after the Huskies, now 0-3, got to the USC 3.

On a crucial third goal situation at the three Washington quarterback Warren Moon was caught by linebacker David Lewis while attempting to pass for a 16 yard loss. Washington got to the USC 11 late in the game but had to turn the ball over on downs. White started a tailback and carried the ball 16 times for 65 yards while Bell, coming off an ankle sprain, was held to 21 yards in 12 carries. Washington 230-pound fullback Robin Earl gained 107 yards on 23 rushes.

Barbershop harmony . . .

Magichords schedule 'Mr. Music' Friday and Saturday

TWIN FALLS — Unique shows of barbershop harmony await Magic Valley residents when the Magichords presents "Mr. Music."

The shows, which will explore the moods and melodies that reflect the heartbeat of the nation featuring the works of Mr. Music himself, Irving Berlin.

To feature the Berlin music is a feather in the cap of the local group, according to Magichords officials. Seems Berlin's works could never be obtained for barbershop shows.

Then, last year, officials from the Society for the Preservation of and Encouragement of Barbershop Quartet Singing in America Inc. went to Berlin's agents to seek permission to use the tunes.

After hearing their version of one of his songs, they were told if all the songs could be done that well they could have a free reign on the music.

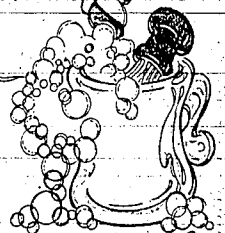

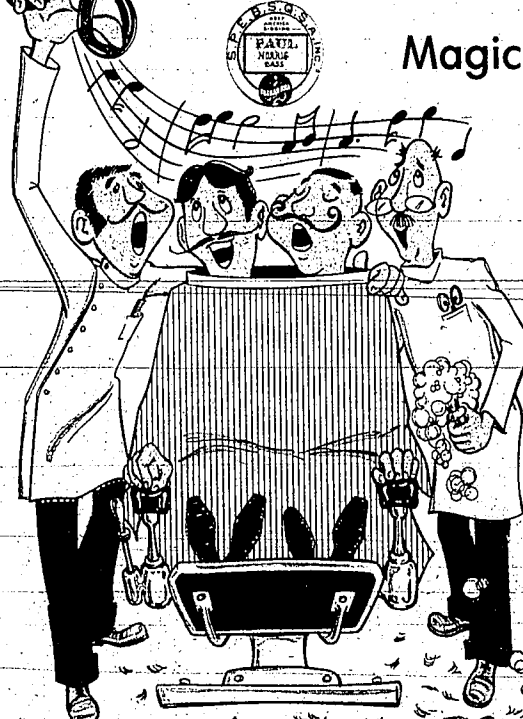

With this thought in mind, a program of such well-known tunes as "Mandy," "A Pretty Girl Is Like a Melody," "All Alone," "The Girl That I Marry," "Easter Parade," "White Christmas" and "Alexander's Ragtime Band," was in the making.

Burt Hulsh will serve as master of ceremonies for the second half of the show, with Dr. Chuck Lierman doing the honors for the opening. Show time is 8 p.m. each night at the College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts Center.

The San Francisco Storm Door and Whale Oil Co. are headliners for the programs along with local quartets, including the Common-Taters.

8 p.m. at CSI

By GEORGE ABRAHAM
SOWING GRASS NOW

Can you sow grass seed this late and have a good lawn by spring?

Indeed you can. Even if you have some bald spots in the lawn, by all means get the grass seed on, even if it doesn't grow. This is called "dormant seeding," a common practice on athletic fields where constant tall activities damage the turf and prevent in-season repair.

Dormant seeding or "overseeding" allows the seed to lie dormant in place, ready to shoot up on the first warm days of spring. You don't have to worry about getting on the lawn in spring when the wet weather can be a problem.

How about the birds — won't they eat the grass seed? Yes, they'll eat some, but if you put it on at the rate of three pounds per 1,000 square feet, there'll be around 14 seeds per square inch. (Bluegrass has about two million seeds per pound) to around four seeds per square inch for ryegrass (has about 250,000 per pound). This means there'll be enough for your lawn and birds, which don't eat as much seed as you think.

Tests show that four pounds of seed scattered evenly over 1,000 square feet of soil in the fall will produce grass of equal or better quality than an abnormally high seeding rate of six to eight pounds of the same seed mixture sown in the spring.

A seeding as late as December will have more months of good growing weather before summer than spring seeding. Whatever you do, don't make the mistake of sowing a "temporary" grass now, in hopes of plowing it up in spring and putting in a permanent grass. That's expensive and extra work. Make one seeding, using a permanent grass. It'll save you money.

DANCING HOBBY BALLS AGAIN?

A reader writes: I believe your problem with dancing moth balls is not enough baking soda is used. You must add one teaspoon of soda, for each glass of water used. I use one-fourth cup of white vinegar, plus one teaspoon of soda for each glass of water.

A nice idea for Christmas and fun for the kids is to anchor a china or Christmas tree candle with florist's clay in a large apothecary jar or brandy snifter. Omit the food coloring and color the moth balls with crayons to resemble Christmas balls. This makes a very attractive centerpiece.

P.S. After an hour or so, add another dash of soda and vinegar to rejuvenate the above mixture and jostle the moth balls back into action.

HOME-GROWN BANANAS

Hobby greenhouse owners like to test their skills at growing exotic items. We suggest you use your greenhouse to grow the dwarf banana for fruit and beauty.

The easiest to grow is the Cavendish banana, also called canary banana, dwarf Chinese banana, etc. It's real name is Musa cavendishii, a dwarf type that takes little care.

You can buy started banana plants from mail order houses and certain nurseries. Grow the plant in a tub, using a soil mixture of one part each of sand, peat and loam, with perlite added.

It likes a sunny window and a warm temperature (80 degrees in day, not less than 65 degrees at night). The warm temperature might create a surplus-of-sucker growth, making it necessary to prune out some to prevent crowding.

Starting bananas from seed (those black specks you see in a banana are either seeds or unfertilized ovals). Most seeds are sterile; getting the seed to germinate is a difficult thing. It must be taken from fruit that is mature, but not over-ripe or rotten.

If you happen to run out of shoe polish, you can shine your shoes with the insides of a banana peel. Unless you live in Council Bluffs, Iowa, you may find it difficult to find a legal banana. It's illegal to toss away the skin. Not a bad law.

Banana skins belong on the compost pile. If any reader has had experience growing bananas, will you please write and tell us?

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1974 by Chicago Tribune. N. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Seymour and I have been married for six years and have no children to tie us down. He has just informed me that he was going to Aspen for a four-day skiing trip with "the boys." Then he laid down the law as to what I may and may not do while he is gone.

1. I may NOT get on a plane and go anywhere.
2. I must be home every evening to receive his phone calls otherwise he'll "worry" about me. (He says I can't call him because he's not sure where the lodge is, and it's difficult to get incoming calls there.)

Abby, why should I sit home every night for four days while he's off skiing somewhere with "the boys"? This has got to end in a showdown because I refuse to hold still for that kind of treatment. How should I handle it? SEYMOUR'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Tell Seymour you won't make any promises, but if you should decide to go somewhere, you'll be happy to call him if he lets you know where he can be reached. And if he calls and you aren't home, he shouldn't think you dropped dead because there is still plenty of life in you!

MADELEINE HSU
French pianist

Pianist, symphony schedule concert

TWIN FALLS — A French-born pianist who has concentrated widely in Europe will be soloist with the Magie Valley Symphony Orchestra concert at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the Fine Arts Auditorium at the College of Southern Idaho.

The symphony will give an identical program Monday at 8:15 p.m. at the new Wood River High School Auditorium in Halley. Larry Curtis, head of the CSI Music Department, is the conductor.

Madeleine Hsu is associate professor of piano at Boise State University and recently became an American citizen. She studied piano with Sonia Chalon, Alfred Cortot, Wilhelm Kempff and Rosina Lhevinne.

She has the bachelor and master of music degrees from Juillard School of Music, New York City, and is a doctoral candidate at New York University.

She has performed as soloist with many symphony orchestras worldwide, including the Warsaw Philharmonic-Lublyn, the Nice orchestra of France, the Philharmonie of Rio de Janeiro and the Boise Philharmonic.

She gives yearly summer recitals in either Paris or New York. The pianist will perform Beethoven's "Fifth" Piano Concerto, Opus 73, known as "The Emperor."

In addition to the concerto, the orchestra will perform Brahms' "Academic Festival Overture" and the Sibelius "Second Symphony."

General admission tickets will be available at the door and families will be admitted on patron tickets at both the Halley and Twin Falls concerts.

VFW Auxiliary sets membership drive

BUHL — A membership drive is on by the VFW Auxiliary and a special program is planned.

Jacques Paul, past state president, Kamlah, and Nancy Vederhoff, chief of staff, state of Idaho VFW, will be speakers for the evening program beginning at 8 p.m. Friday at the VFW Hall, Buhl.

They will explain the benefits that can be derived from the organization and explain basic coverages available.

To be eligible for membership you must be a wife, widow, mother, sister, daughter, 16 years of age or older, foster daughters, half sisters, grandmothers, granddaughters, foster mothers and foster daughters of a veteran, if they are so related to the veteran before overseas service.

Membership is also open to women veterans authorized to receive campaign medal or ribbon for overseas service.

DEAR ABBY: When you hear that someone you know has a terminal illness, how can you let them know you care? If you don't see him or speak to him regularly, it would seem ghouliah to call and talk about his health—or worse yet to call and avoid the subject.

Sympathy cards or flowers would be premature. It would be awkward to offer sympathy and insist to express false cheer, so I usually do nothing, hoping they will understand. Then I feel guilty and regret my silence when it's too late.

How would you handle this, Abby? AMATEUR SAMARITAN

DEAR SAMARITAN: I would maintain the same degree of closeness as before. (Suddenly becoming overly attentive would seem as inappropriate as suddenly avoiding all contact.) To let someone know you care, call or write a brief note simply saying, "I heard you were ill and want you to know that you are in my thoughts and in my prayers." Silence shows indifference.

DEAR ABBY: I finally accepted a blind date with a girl I'll call "Patty." (I say "finally" because a relative of hers who's a friend of mine had been trying to arrange a date between me and her for a year.)

Patty was okay, but nothing special. I wouldn't have asked her out again, but a week later she called and said she had two tickets to the theater and asked if I would escort her. I said I would because I like theater, but now I'm sorry because a few days after that Patty called and asked me to escort her to another party!

One week later Patty asked me to escort her to a benefit performance for which she had the tickets ($100 a couple), and I couldn't very well pass that up!

Then she asked me to please save New Year's Eve 'cause she and a friend are having a party.

How can I break this Patty pattern without hurting her feelings? I don't want to be known as a STUCK WITH PATTY

DEAR STUCK: You'll be stuck as long as you accept her invitations. Better learn to say NO before you wind up saying "I do."

DEAR ABBY: Is it possible for a teenager to love her parents and hate them at the same time? I think I do, and that is my problem. Please help me. SIXTEEN AND FEELING GUILTY

DEAR SIXTEEN: Yes. But get the magazine, Discover Yourself. It's on the newsstands now. In it you'll find an excellent article in which these two conflicting emotions are explained in language you will be able to understand. I recommend it highly to all teenagers.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Face it. Fashions for spring reflect more nostalgia than naughtiness when American, and even French designers, go to work.

Who would have thought there would be so much glancing back in the new season? For example, spring fashions include bermuda and shorter shorts, clam diggers (or pedal pushers, as they are also called), the bare-backed and usually, hare-topped sundress, camisole-tops for day and evening, wrapped, surplice tops, halter tops, dirndl skirts with fullness falling below waistlines nipped in with self-fabric sashes, and the wholesale return of natural fabrics — wool, plume, seersucker, and the pure lincos, silks and cottons.

This was the opening message-of-the-New York fashion industry as it began its semiannual "press weeks" which will conclude Nov. 19.

Opening day, Thursday, carried a French accent with several U.S.-women's wear designers represented in a combined show featuring French textiles, and a preview of Yves St. Laurent's menswear collection.

One of the stars of the textile show was French-born Pauline Trigere, a longtime success on New York's Seventh Avenue.

By Oswald & James Jacoby

Here is another hand from a World's championship match. It is a problem hand. Can you reader's make seven diamonds against a club lead with the shortage of seeing all the cards in front of you? The Italian dealer did not find the play at the table, but it was there.

All South has to do is to run off all his diamonds. After six diamonds have been played, dummy should be left holding four spades, the seven of clubs, a low heart after carefully jettisoning the Jack of that suit and a diamond.

West will be holding four spades, the king of hearts, and queen of clubs.

Now the last diamond is led. West must throw the queen of clubs. Dummy's little spade will have done its work and can be discarded.

Now South cashes dummy's ace king and queen of spades. On the last of those three leads East will be forced to throw his last club which will establish dummy's seven spot of unguard his queen of hearts to give declarer two heart tricks, since the ace will now drop both the queen and king.

A nice problem indeed and one can't really blame the man at the table for not working it out.

Ask the Jacobys

A New York reader wants to know how good a player the late Merwyn D. (Jimmy) Mator was.

We don't really know. He was only 33 in 1942 when he died and was already regarded as one of the five or six best in the world. If he had lived he might well have been the greatest of them all.

(Do you have a question for the experts? Write "Ask the Jacobys" care of this newspaper. The Jacobys will answer individual questions if stamped, self-addressed envelopes are enclosed. The most interesting questions will be used in this column and will receive copies of JACOBY MODERN.)

1st artificial kidney worn

© Chicago Daily News
CHICAGO — The first wearable artificial kidney is being used by one patient full-time, according to a report to the Kidney Foundation of Illinois.

The eight-pound "walk-around unit, which cleanses the blood of impurities produced in metabolism of food, just as does a normal kidney, has freed Levi Porter of Salt Lake City, an engineering student, from being tied to a conventional machine at home or at a dialysis center.

"It has made him mobile while dialyzing," says Dr. William J. Kolff, head of the division of artificial organs, University of Utah, where the WAK "wearable artificial kidney" was developed.

"The impact on kidney patients' sense of dependence will be enormous."

Kolff, builder of the world's first artificial kidney machine, a crude device, during World War II, said several other patients are trying the WAK part-time.

The WAK eliminates the 120-quart tank of dialyzing fluid used in the conventional machines and replaces it with a dialyzing regenerating system that requires only a 20-quart tank. This is small enough to put under the seat of an airplane.

Even while dialyzing, he can disconnect himself from the tank, go to the door, do an errand, Kolff pointed out.

The machine is worn in front of the body and held by two belts, one around the waist and the other over the shoulder.

The department also has implanted an artificial heart in a calf that lived 122 days after the natural heart was removed.

Remodeling your kitchen and other feats of daring

Most people we know approach the idea of remodeling their kitchen with a sense of dread and foreboding — invariably, these self-same people are the hapless complex we know after our craftsmen have completed their jobs and everything is back to normal.

Most people realize that remodeling by themselves can be a risky venture and sometimes costs more than had professionals been involved at the start. Most people need the help of professionals for a lot of good reasons. Maybe you should consider some of them.

How much do you want to spend? How much do you probably figure too little... or perhaps too much. Either way you lose. Remodeling, too, is an art. You may think you know your needs, but we've had experience. We know what you need... or at the very least, can suggest, so you know what's the latest and what's available. Making sure you get the kitchen you want is the name of the game. That's why it pays to choose the professionals at KEY BUILDING & LIGHTING CENTER. After being in the building business for over 25 years... we know all the answers to remodeling kitchens and bathrooms. If you're about ready to take the big step... QUESTION: Do you plan to get swine flu shots for yourself or your family?

Gladys Winks, Heyburn:
No. I just think I want one. I'm just a little spooked of them.

Gene Larsen, Twin Falls:
Yes, I'd rather take a chance on the shot than on all the misery and chance of death from the flu.

Mrs. John Bruce, Hazelton:
We haven't decided yet. I have mixed emotions.

Carole Wanman, Kimberly:
No. I just am not interested. I don't think the scare is that bad.

Wayne King, Twin Falls:
No... I take a lot of vitamins and I'm very seldom sick.

Rich Durrington, Twin Falls:
I've been thinking about it. But every week there's a new story about whether it's good. We will probably get them. I have one question, though. What is the swine flu?

Ken Arrington, Twin Falls:
I've got mixed feelings about that

Jim Peters, Twin Falls:
No. I don't understand mass inoculations. It is just personal preference.

TV star scene

Mac Davis has been given his second holiday special, "The Mac Davis Christmas Show," set for Dec. 15 on NBC. The theme of the show is to look at Christmas through the eyes of children. So, who do they get for guests? Some kids, right? Wrong. Try Richard Thomas and Raquel Welch.

John Davidson will also headline a paratelic special for NBC. "The John Davidson Christmas Show." Davidson's got some little people on his special anyway — his two kids, and the Lennon Sisters with their numerous offspring.

Speaking of children, in a rare television commitment, Ingrid Bergman will take viewers into the world of "Childhood," a series of five one-hour dramas to be seen on PBS, beginning, in January. Bergman will open each hour to provide a frame of reference for the plays, which were adapted from the work of five well-known writers: Rudyard Kipling, H.E. Bates, George Ewart Evans, Frank O'Connor and Barbara Warling. The series is intended primarily for adults, although each drama is told through the eyes of a child. So, don't dismiss it as merely a kid's show.

Michael Landon has named National Easter Seal Chairman and will be the host of that organization's 1977 television in March... Frank Clifford who does the play-by-play on ABC's "Monday Night Football" and was one of the all-time greats of the New York Giants, has been named the recipient of the 1976 Gil Hodges Memorial Sports Award.

The voices of Debbie Reynolds, Paul Lynde, Henry Gibson and the late James Moorehead will be heard when CBS airs "Charlotte's Web," E.B. White's timeless "story of miracles" will have its premiere run over two consecutive Fridays, bumping Spencer's Pilots, which has been shot down in flames, but is still waiting to hit the ground... Remember the Brady Bunch? Well you'll get to see the whole gang together again on Nov. 28 (6-6 p.m., MST) when ABC airs a special, "The Brady Bunch Variety Show." On subsequent Sundays in this time slot, formerly held by the now defunct Bill Cosby show COS, ABC will air "Journey Back to Oz," an animated show, and "The Young Pioneers Christmas," a sequel to last year's TV film starring Linda Purl and Roger Kern.

The old-line pros meet the newcomers, when Bob Hope and James Stewart join Henry Winkler and John Howard in "An All-Star Tribute to John Wayne" Nov. 26. One wonders what Howard and Winkler have to do with Wayne, other than the fact they're hot properties around ABC, which is airing this special. If Winkler doesn't watch it ABC is going to squeeze him dry. How much of a good thing can we, or he, stand.

Irwin (Sonny) Fox, a host and producer of high quality children's shows for over 20 years, has been named Vice President of Children's Programs at NBC. The recipient of numerous media and public affairs awards, Fox is currently host of CBS' Way Out Games, Chairman of the International Emmy Awards Committee, a member of the Board of Directors of the International Council of the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences and a member of the Advisory Council of the N.Y.U. School of the Arts.

Dial-ogue

TATE TALK — Is Nick Tate, who plays Alan Carter on Space 1999, married? Also, whose are he live and how old is he? Is he liked by the costars on the show? Terry Lester, New Iberia, La.

The affable Australian Nick Tate seems to be a favorite among fans of Space 1999. The show's producers say he gets 5,000 letters a week. For all of you, here's the dope: Tate is single and lives in London when the show is in production. He is 36. From what I've been told by people connected with the show the entire cast gets along wonderfully, including Tate.

TALK SHOW KING — Allen Griffin and Mike Douglas of the talk shows brothers? Barbara says no. Eleanor says yes. Eleanor Adams, Plano Beach, Calif.

Sorry, Eleanor, you lose. Griffin and Douglas are totally unrelated.

DAWN'S SONG — Recently I saw a movie called "Dawn: Portrait of a Teenage Runaway." On this film there was a song. It was a real rock & roll song and there were singers, too. I love this song and I hope you can tell me the name of it, where I can buy it and who sings it. Thanks a bunch! Barbara Cobble, Naugatuck Conn.

I was unable to get hold of anyone who knew the facts about this song, so your best bet is to write to the producers of the film directly. The address is Debra Cramer Productions, 20th Century-Fox, 10100 Pico Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif. 90023.

MAD FOR MCHATTIE — I thought Stephen McHattie was great in "Whatever Happened to Rosamery's Baby?" Was he also in that movie about James Dean? I seem to recall him playing Dean. Where can I write him? Joan Coppolano, Troy, N.Y.

McHattie did play Dean on TV last season. You can reach him through his agent's office: Smith-Stevens Representations, Ltd., 1650 Broadway, N.Y. N.Y. 10019.

Let the sun shine!

Tracy Hanson's house is designed from the ground up to be energy-efficient. Hanson, a residential designer, is installing a solar water heater in his home he is building for himself. Skylights abound in his house, and windows are placed to take best advantage of seasonal changes in the angle of the sun's penetrating rays. Hanson is one of many area residents exploring the possibilities of natural energy supplements to fuel power.

Stockard Channing

Movies bombed

Everyone said Stockard Channing was going to be a big star. Unfortunately, the three movies she made turned out to be bombs. "The Fortune" didn't make one. "The Big Bus" was a big bust at the box office and "Dandy, the All-American Girl" has been returned to Hollywood for reworking.

Enlightened energy projects

By HANCOY KELLEHER
Times-News Staff

TWIN FALLS One of the most inexhaustible sources of energy known to man is available in huge quantities in southern Idaho.

Although this energy source is free, few people have tapped it. Over 300 days a year are sunny in Twin Falls—and a small but increasing number of people are harnessing this solar energy in an effort to cut fuel costs.

The Community Action Agency (CAA) is sponsoring several solar projects in the Magic Valley. For two years CAA has been interested in energy problems of low-income people. This group is hardest hit by increases in fuel costs, according to Kay Viste, executive director of CAA.

In 1974, a city-wide insulation program was started by the CAA in houses owned by the elderly or handicapped. That same year CAA started looking at other means of fuel conservation, according to Ms. Viste, and began construction of solar greenhouses and solar furnaces.

Materials for the greenhouses and solar furnaces were paid for by an Alternative Energy grant from the State Economic Opportunity Office. Federally funded CETA (Comprehensive Employment and Training Act) workers constructed the energy-saving devices. People on whose houses the solar units were placed shared none of the costs, although one man helped with the labor.

Three solar greenhouses have been constructed by the CAA. "The solar greenhouses," says Ms. Viste, "supplement heat and food supplies of low-income families."

The local solar greenhouses are built on the south side of a home, so are most solar units, for maximum availability of sunlight. Two layers of greenhouse fiberglass are placed at an angle to the house, explains Tim Williams, foreman of the CETA workers.

The sunlight filtering through this double layer of fiberglass "will get anything on the floor or backwall of the greenhouse hot enough so it won't freeze on a cold night," says Tim.

As he opens a greenhouse door of the project on 299 Ramage St. in Twin Falls, a warm flow of air rushes out. When construction is finished, a stone floor will help retain heat as will barrels full of water along the greenhouse's back wall.

Since the exhaust for the family's clothes dryer runs through this moist air, too, will be utilized for heat. Hot mist air from the dryer exhaust will be run through large barrels so that the heat will stay in the greenhouse, while the moisture will be trapped in the barrel.

Though the greenhouse interior remains unfinished at this time, it is already housing geraniums in pots. Tomatoes that would otherwise have frozen in the cold, are ripening in its solar-warmed air.

Two other solar greenhouses have been constructed by the CAA in Burley and Buhl. The average cost of the greenhouses was $200 each. Funds were provided through an Alternative Energy grant from the State Economic Opportunity Office.

The greenhouses were relatively easy designs, but a solar furnace they added to John Hanchey's house, "looked like Mount Everest," according to Tim Williams.

Williams was handed a blueprint and told to build the solar furnace at 252 Ramage St. The project entailed reconstruction of the roof and attic, plumbing and electrical work; all areas in which the workers had little or no experience.

Several people applied to the Community Action Agency for installation of the solar furnace in their homes. The Hancheys' home was situated with the roof's slope facing south, which is necessary for correct exposure to the sun's rays. The Ramage Street house was chosen for the project because the condition of the house and the Hancheys' income-level met with CAA requirements. The only thing standing in the way of the work, said Tim Williams, was an old elm tree that blocked the sun's rays from the roof. We just cut that tree down, he said.

The solar construction on the Hanchey house utilizes a hot-air system. A rooftop solar collector heats air which is drawn into a basement storage area. From there it circulates throughout the house. A thermostat in the living room regulates the opening and closing of a main vent when heat is needed in the house. Individual rooms are controlled through the opening and closing of individual room vents when the hot air is circulating.

The solar furnace was designed by Delvin Butterfield, president of Butterfield Inventive Research, Inc. of Twin Falls.

The basement storage battery was designed by Robert Amende of Twin Falls. "This system is a Model T," says Butterfield of the experimental Solar Furnace project. "It was built simply so that people who don't know the ABCs of solar energy could understand it."

Butterfield is a solar heating consultant to CAA. His experimental design is strictly for the public. He will not patent it. He also tried to design it as cheaply as possible to make it more accessible to the public.

Materials for the solar furnace cost $2,500. Tim Williams, the CETA foreman, said, "I could install one on a new home for $4,000 and still make a profit."

According to Butterfield, the furnace will cost 8 to 14 cents to operate each day. It is expected to have a 50 to 70 per cent efficiency rate.

Williams said, "We hope to take a $70 monthly heating bill and knock it down to $20. The furnace will last at least ten years.

We hope for 20-year-life maintenance—but this is all experimental so we have no definite figures. I think it will pay for itself before it wears out. The major expense will be replacement of the Tedlar (a strong plastic covering) after 10 or 20 years for $500."

Delvin Butterfield sees the interest in the Hanchey project and other ongoing projects as an important indication of the advance of solar energy use.

"The ball is starting to roll," he said. "Solar energy is starting to snowball. I see this year as the beginning of a big solar energy avalanche."

It was not always like this, though. Butterfield first became interested in investigating means of utilizing the sun's power in 1944.

"I walked out of a door on the south of the Hanford Atomic Works in Washington," he says, "when I saw a thermometer registering 127 degrees. I said to myself, there must be something that can be done with this extreme heat."

Butterfield began to experiment with solar energy, first as a hobby. Now it's his profession.

The Hancheys' solar furnace collects heat on rooftop panels on the south side of the house. In order to place the panels at the correct angle to the sun, the angle of the roof's slope had to be corrected. Panelling in the second-story rooms was removed and sheet rock was installed for reroofing. Insulation was also added to the entire house to ensure that heat from the solar furnace got maximum utilization.

A rooftop thermostat turns the air circulation system on when the solar plate reaches a temperature of 220 degrees. As air is heated it is returned to the cellar where it runs into a small room containing three hot water tanks.

The tanks hold a total of 120 gallons of water which is heated by the hot air before being pumped into the regular gas water heater. Thus the gas water heater uses less energy because the cold water coming into the house is preheated before going into it.

This room is lined on the bottom with river rock to retain heat. Heated air passes through this room into a larger heat storage room.

An estimated 50,000 pounds of rock fill this room. River stone was used because it is heavy stone and retains more heat. Robert Amende designed this heat storage room so heated air is drawn under the rocks. As it rises through the layer of rock, heat is stored in the stones. It is hoped that the whole area will maintain a temperature of 160 degrees, said Tim Williams.

Amende's heat storage battery is designed to store heat for 3 1/2 to 6 days during the coldest part of the year, according to Butterfield.

The CETA employees have been working three months on Hanchey's house. Tim Williams feels that they have really accomplished quite a bit.

"There was so much to be gained by the people who worked and learned from this project," he said. "We worked out problems as they came up, so it was great training for us. After all, that's what CETA's all about."

John Hanchey arrived home from work and came over to talk with Tim about progress on the furnace.

"I'll be excited when it's done," he said. "It'll be just like having a new home."

After the solar furnace begins operating, CAA will make 200 follow-up reports. They will compare last year's heating bills with post-solar furnace bills. Efficiency and structural checks will also be made.

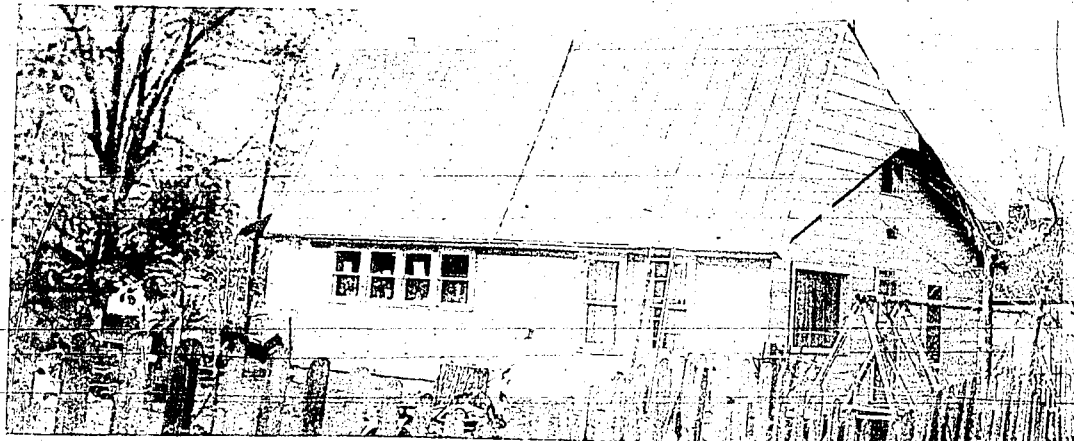

Other organizations and businesses besides CAA also are becoming interested in solar heat.

Intermountain Gas & Electric, currently distributing a proven solar-heating system manufactured by Piper Hydro, Inc., California. The system utilizes rooftop panels like the Hanchey furnace, but on a smaller scale. Water instead of air runs through these panels and is stored in a 50- to 60-gallon tank.

After the water is heated on the roof, it enters a pipeline running through the house. The pipes form a circulator loop which can be tapped at any point for a faucet. Heat exchangers are also built into the system. These convert the hot water into heated air which can be ducted throughout the house to provide warmth for rooms. A gas-powered boiler boosts the water temperature when the sun is not heating it sufficiently for home use. The set water temperature is usually 140 degrees.

This system has been installed in a new house recently completed by Design Builders in the College Meadow subdivision near the College of Southern Idaho. The installation cost was $4,684, but prices vary according to the complexity of the system installed. Installations in existing homes cost more.

According to Ward Pack of Intermountain Gas, a minimum of 30 per cent of the heating, bill can be saved with this system. If, however, one is conscientious about doing washing, bathing, etc. during strong sunshine hours, a savings of 35 to 40 per cent could be realized, he said.

Tracy Hansen, a home designer, has begun building his own house keeping solar principles in mind. He is installing the Piper Hydro Solar System distributed by In-Termountain Gas.

"The house is designed from the ground up to be energy efficient," says Hansen. "When you build a house from scratch, you should keep these things in mind."

Hansen is investigating the use of wood burning stoves and a windmill to supplement the natural energy he will harness with his solar water heater.

"Almost every time I design a house," he said, "people ask about solar energy. I've done a lot of research on it, so that I can answer questions intelligently. I am no expert in the field, however."

As a residential designer, Tracy Hansen sees the importance of utilizing resources in the exploration of solar energy in constructing homes.

"People should be encouraged to orient a house on a site so that it will naturally use the sun. Proper overhangs and fewer windows on the north and west would help save on fuel consumption. Up until this time houses have just been placed on the land rather than conscientiously situated with a regard for use of natural forces."

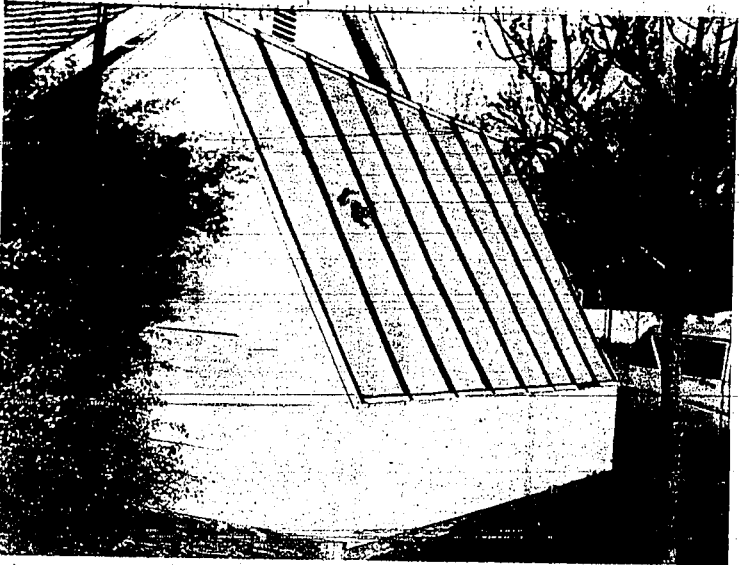

Other homeowners are making attempts to utilize the sun in their house designs.

These measures are being taken for one reason, according to Del Butterfield, "because everyone around the world has been ripped off through the oil cartel."

A tax break is available to homeowners who install an alternative energy device. According to a new Idaho law this year, individual taxpayers may adjust their income on their state tax returns for four years following installation. On state income tax filed the first year after installation, the taxpayer may subtract 40 per cent of the cost of the addition from his total income, according to Tom Larsen of the State Property Tax Division. This amount cannot exceed $5,000.

For the next three years, 20 per cent of the cost of the installation may be deducted from total income, again not to exceed $5,000, said Larsen.

As Ward Pack said, "We've got as much sunshine here as in Miami, Florida." Area residents are becoming more aware of the possibilities of using this sunshine, and taking advantage of it.

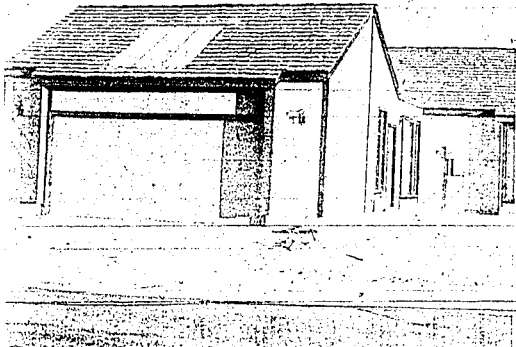

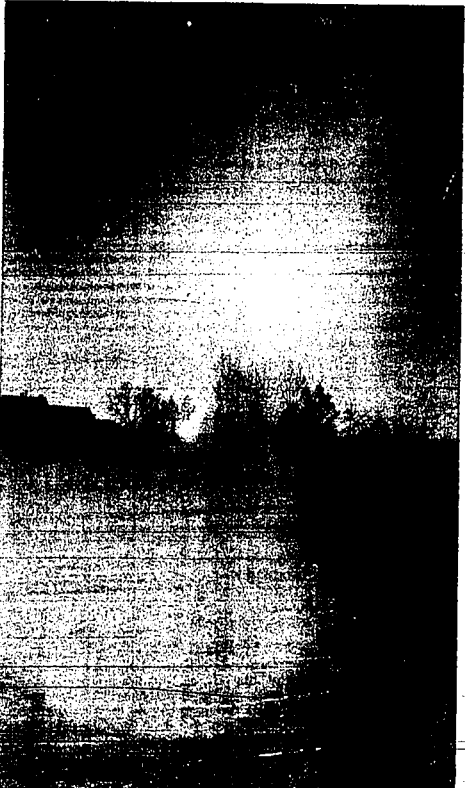

THE roofline of John Hanchev's house had to be corrected before construction of the solar furnace could begin. (facing page)

The Solar greenhouse pictured above was added to a Twin Falls home by CAA, enabling the homeowners to grow food during winter months. The greenhouse also aids in heating their home.

"OLD Sol" (right) consistently shines down upon the Magic Valley making solar energy a feasible alternatives in this area.

The rooftop solar collector pictured below saves energy by heating water for the house's hot water heating system.

Environmentalists decry proposal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Environmentalists charged Thursday that new government proposals to allow industrial development in already polluted areas are so full of loopholes that the air will get dirtier if they are allowed to take effect.

The allegation was made by a representative of the Clean Air Coalition following a meeting with Environmental Protection Agency officials to discuss proposals laid out Wednesday by Deputy EPA Administrator John R. Quarles Jr. in a speech at Anaheim, Calif.

Quarles said EPA had developed a "tradeoff policy" in which new industrial development would be allowed even in areas where the air has not yet been cleaned up to the level the law requires — provided there is an accompanying reduction of other pollution in the same area.

Such areas include most urban sections of the country.

Rafe Pomerance, a representative of Friends of the Earth who attended the meeting at EPA, said the regulations still in a draft form do not have adequate safeguards to make sure existing sources of pollution will be curtailed as new ones are allowed to begin operation.

"The regulations are full of loopholes," he said. "The way they've written them they won't work."

He said the agency went further than Congress did in its proposal to amend the Clean Air Act — a piece of legislation which died in the closing days of the last session. He said the congressional proposal was more narrowly defined.

He said the coalition, which also includes such groups as the Sierra Club and the American Lung Association, hoped the matter could be solved without taking EPA to court.

Quarles said the new approach splits the difference between dictates of the Clean Air Act, which prohibits introduction of new sources of pollution such as power plants in areas where air quality standards have not been met, and the demands for industrial development in some of those same areas.

Refreshed Carter starts preparation

PLAINS, Ga. (UPI) — President-elect Jimmy Carter, "tired of vacation and ready to go to work," ended a six-day stay on the Georgia coast Thursday and returned to Plains.

There appeared to be plenty for him to do in addition to the myriad chores involved in taking over the presidency. Carter also faces a racial integration showdown within his church.

The president-elect plans to attend a business meeting of the Plains Baptist Church Sunday at which the congregation will decide whether to fire its pastor, the Rev. Bruce Edwards, who wants to scrap an old church policy and open worship services to "blacks." Carter is expected to back Edwards.

Carter's aides had little to say Friday concerning a suggestion by fellow Democrat, Sen. Abraham Ribicoff of Connecticut, that Secretary of State Henry Kissinger be kept on in the Carter administration to work on Middle East problems.

"He (Carter) is not president. He has no authority to appoint any envoy anywhere," said press secretary Jody Powell.

On the final morning of his vacation at the 1,300-acre Musgrove plantation on St. Simon's Island, Carter, his son Chip, and two close friends, Gordon Hicks and Jim Bishop, went fishing at 6 a.m., catching 30 sea trout. "We were just dragging them in," said Carter, who said he caught "seven or eight" himself.

Afterward, Carter said: "I'm tired of vacationing and am ready to go to work. We've had a good week."

He flew from the Georgia coast to Albany and went by motorcade directly to his tree-shaded home. He unloaded his own bags.

Carter plans no further appearances or public appearances until he meets Friday afternoon with campaign manager Hamilton Jordan and transition director Jack Watson to discuss the staffing of the presidential transition.

Carter pollster Pat Caddell told reporters shortly after Carter's return that his analysis of the election showed he managed to put together a voting coalition — in the South envisioned by 19th Century populists — "blacks in very large numbers, blue collar-whites, low income whites and the middle class," while losing upper-income southern voters.
