BOISE — The Idaho Army National Guard, now 800 men under strength, is reorganizing to reduce its authorized manpower by 800.

Most Magic Valley units will be affected by the change.

The reorganization will remove one of two armored cavalry squadrons and involve a number of unit switches.

According to Idaho Adjutant Gen. James S. Brooks, none of the state's 23 armories will be closed, but many will operate at reduced strength.

Specific changes planned for the Magic Valley area include combining Jerome, Buhl and Gooding guardsmen into a single troop. Previously Buhl and Gooding formed one unit. Halley and Jerome formed another. Halley will now join the Headquarters Unit of the 116th Armored Cavalry in Twin Falls.

Burley and Rupert, formerly separate units, will also combine into one.

Major Gen. Brooks said today that although the number of full-time military advisors will be reduced, the impact will be "minimal" because "most of the full-time positions that will be lost are vacant at this time and therefore few technicians would actually be displaced."

Brooks said the decision to reorganize was made "after assessing the strength situation and coming to the conclusion that a state with the geographic problems of Idaho, combined with a small population, simply could not support the number of Guardsmen authorized under the present manning plan."

Brooks said the reorganization had been approved by Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus.

Lt. Jerry Benton, recruiting officer in Twin Falls, said the body count in Magic Valley and the remainder of Idaho will be the same, but there will be fewer units.

Idaho, in the past, has had a high number of guardsmen with an authorization of 3,500 people from a population of 700,000. Lt. Benton said. Most other states have smaller authorizations and larger populations.

He said all military recruiting is down over several years ago.

"We were recruited under a draft motivation program. With air force's blanket force, much of the demand has decreased," he said.

General Brooks said the impact of (full-time personnel) positions in Idaho will be minimal. Most of the full time positions that will be lost are vacant at this time.

General Brooks said the new plan hopefully will be implemented sometime in January or early February. He said Gov. Cecil Andrus of Idaho has approved the realignment proposal and the plan will now go to the Pentagon for final approval before becoming effective.

Both the adjutant general and local guard officials said no armories in the state will be closed. Each community that now has a National Guard armory will continue to function with guard operations.

Quake rocks Peking region

ROME (UPI)—A heavy earthquake rocked Peking today, the Italian news agency Ansa reported from the Chinese capital.

It said the 10 p.m. (7 a.m. MST) shock was the heaviest since a series of earthquakes in late July devastated the Tangshan area, 93 miles southeast of Peking.

The people of Peking, in line with standing instructions, waited for the quake to end before leaving their homes. Ansa said.

Blacks split in Rhodesia talks

GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI) — Black nationalist leaders split at the Rhodesia peace talks today on a British compromise timetable for setting up black majority rule in that African country now governed by the white minority.

The militant "Patriotic Front" of Robert Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo said Britain refuses to commit itself to a binding date, which they demand before the conference can continue. They forced a conference adjournment to permit them to study ten compromises.

Oil cartel ministers confer

VIENNA, Austria (UPI) — The oil cartel's economic experts opened met today to decide on recommendations for the Organization of Oil Exporting Countries, who may raise oil prices next month.

The Economic Commission of the 13-member OPEC met privately at OPEC's Vienna headquarters for a session expected to last several days.

The members of the Economic Commission can only make recommendations," a spokesman said. "Their findings will not be published before the ministerial meeting next month."

The ministerial meeting will open in the Persian Gulf state of Qatar Dec. 15.

OPEC ministers did not increase prices at their last two meetings, with Saudi Arabia largely responsible for the price freeze.

Union, GM aides keep talking

DETROIT (UPI) — The United Auto Workers and General Motors Corp. have less than four days to resolve several key contract issues and avoid a second auto industry strike.

Both sides have indicated several times since a strike deadline was set last Monday they could avoid a walkout by 300,000 workers that would be unprecedented following the 23-day shutdown at the Ford Motor Co. But labor observers indicated several tough issues remained to be settled by the 12:01 a.m. Friday deadline.

TF County aide resigns

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls County Clerk and Auditor Harold Lancaster this morning announced he will resign at the end of the year.

Lancaster, a Democrat, has two years to run on his term. Most likely, he will be replaced by a Republican appointee, since the Republican County Commissioners get to name his replacement.

Lancaster said he decided to resign because the dual jobs of Clerk and Auditor had become "more than one man can take care of and do it properly."

He said numerous changes in laws by the legislature each session make the jobs extremely complicated.

"I just simply got tired of trying to keep up with all the new laws and the extra work they're putting on the Clerk," he said.

He cited a change to an October to October fiscal year and the creation of a separate fund for the District Court as two examples of changes that have made the job more difficult.

"Maybe a younger man would do better," he said, noting that at 67 he is "already past retirement age."

Lancaster said he had no recommendations for a successor other than a person with "at least a working knowledge of accounting because there's a tremendous amount of money to handle."

"I really think this is a time for some new blood," he said. "They won't have any changes to make. It'll be all new anyhow."

Lancaster said he didn't know yet how he will spend his retirement, although he said he will work to augment social security and retirement income.

"Maybe it's age," he said, "but I just don't feel I can continue to carry the load."

Lancaster will have held the posts for 13 years and seven months at the end of the year.

Kimberly man shot to death

JEROME — A 32-year-old Kimberly man was shot to death and a 37-year-old Wendell woman shot in the leg in a tavern here Saturday night.

Gilbert Flores, 30, Jerome, was arrested about 3 a.m. Sunday in Hazelton after allegedly shooting to death Manuel C. Sola, 32, Kimberly, and shooting Arlen Ray, 37, Wendell, in the leg at the Northern Tavern, County Prosecutor Gene Frederickson said.

Flores was to be arraigned today on a charge of second degree murder in connection with the shooting death and on a charge of assault with intent to commit murder in connection with the shooting of the Wendell woman, the prosecutor said.

The tavern owner, who asked not to be identified, said he was at the tavern when the shooting took place but hadn't noticed any altercation until the shooting.

The Wendell woman was taken to St. Benedict's Hospital where she was listed today in good condition.

Truck hits Filer pupil

FILER — A 6-year-old Filer boy suffered head cuts and possibly a back injury when he was hit by a truck near the Filer Elementary School this morning.

Tim Miltrecker was walking to school on Stevenson Street, with "a large group of kids," stepped into the street about 8:15 a.m. today and was hit by the right rearview mirror on a truck driven by Voyve Reinke, 20, Buhl, Police Chief Randy Lammers said.

Miltrecker was taken to Magic Valley Memorial Hospital. His condition was not yet known.

The truck suffered no damage, police said. No citations have been issued.

ISU coach out

POCATELLO, Idaho (UPI) — Joe Pascales, head football coach at Idaho State University, was fired today.

Athletic Director Dobby Holt said the contracts of Pascales and assistants Larry Pasquales, Walt Posadowski and Mike Murphy would not be renewed when they expire next Jan. 31.

Holt made the announcement at a Pocatello news conference.

Pascales appeared at the conference with Holt and attacked the administration for non-support and criticized the university for sticking with the program for only nine months.

Not enough vaccine for most children?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Public Health Service today announced that healthy children aged 3 to 18 will be left out of the nationwide swine flu immunization program because of a vaccine shortage.

The health service said, however, that sufficient supplies still exist to immunize chronically ill children.

The announcement was the latest setback to President Ford's plan to immunize all Americans against swine flu.

With the available supply of the split-virus vaccine intended for children, only four million of the more than 40 million children aged 3-18 could be immunized, said Dr. Theodore Cooper, assistant secretary for health in the Department of Health Education and Welfare.

"While it is clear that we have the formula to provide a safe and effective vaccine for children, it is also clear that not nearly enough will be available before the influenza season, near its end, despite production efforts by the manufacturers of the split-virus vaccine," Cooper said.

Cooper has nursed the President's swine flu campaign through malpractice insurance problems, scattered scientific opposition, and more recently, public apathy in some areas toward getting the recommended shots.

His announcement today said only eight million doses of the split-virus vaccine suitable for children would be available before February.

Because two inoculations would be necessary, only four million children could be immunized.

The limited supplies will prevent a large scale immunization for children, he said.

"We would have preferred to have had sufficient vaccine to offer it to all children who are as susceptible to influenza as adults," Cooper said. "Fortunately, healthy children do not have the same risk of serious complications as older individuals."

The limited supplies that are available will be sent to states primarily for distribution through neighborhood health centers and other big city sites for children with crowded living conditions that make them more susceptible to infection. Vaccine will be sent to the states on the basis of state population. Some supplies will be available for private physicians.

Cooper also announced that a second swine flu shot is recommended for young adults aged 18-24.

Gilmore now eyes marriage

POINT OF THE MOUNTAIN, Utah (UPI) — If Gary Gilmore had his way he would have died today before a firing squad.

Instead Gilmore, 35, who was sentenced to death for murdering a Provo, Utah, motel clerk last July, will try to persuade a girl with whom he lived briefly during the summer to marry him.

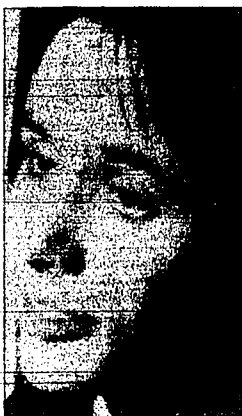

Last week the Utah Supreme Court agreed by a 4-to-1 vote to grant Gilmore's request that he be allowed to die "like a man" without further delay. But Gov. Calvin Rampton stayed the execution until the state Board of Pardons reviews the case Wednesday.

Gilmore will be visited today by Nicole Barrett, 23, a divorcee and mother of two.

Dennis Boaz, Gilmore's attorney, said his client told him, "I'm considering marrying Nicole. They have married other convicts in prison before. So I don't think they'll stand in my way."

The warden of the Utah State Prison said Gilmore has not filed a formal marriage request.

Gilmore fatally shot a motel clerk after Miss Barrett fell him and at a time, his uncle Vern Danlous says, when he was trying to patch up the relationship.

World mart trend behind price slump

By KEN HODGE Times News writer

MAGIC VALLEY — A slump in farm commodity prices which promises slim profits for farmers and reduced business in agricultural support industries stems from world market trends which took root several years ago, experts say.

Dr. Robert Sargent, University of Idaho extension economist, blames the present situation on a cycle which began in 1972.

Second of a series

An increased demand for farm commodities caused prices to rise and encouraged farmers to boost their production, according to Sargent.

"The thing that brought on this takeoff (in farm commodity prices), Sargent said, "was major drought in various parts of the world."

The first of the major droughts occurred in 1973, according to Sargent.

"And farmers all over the world have responded to the need for increased production," he said. "We could see some rapid price changes."

The combination of increased demand and attractive prices for farm commodities enticed many farmers all over the world, especially in the U.S., to put as much land into production as possible.

The bean industry, typical of commodity markets during "this period," got worldwide responses to increased demand.

This country usually consumes about 16 to 19 million 100-pound sacks of beans per year, according to the Idaho Bean Commission.

In 1973, American farmers produced about 16.9 million bags, which would normally have met demand and provided a fairly stable market.

"On top of that, we had a strong export demand that year," said Harold West, executive director of the Idaho Bean Commission.

The increased demand for beans caused higher prices, which encouraged American farmers to grow beans for the high prices.

U.S. bean growers produced a staggering 21 million bags in 1974 and many made bounteous profits, according to West.

"We had some export demand that year, and that helped us fairly strong," West added.

But in 1975, while U.S. bean farmers were producing a large, 19 million-bag bean crop, demand fell off due to an increase in bean production throughout the world.

Both South Africa and Mexico exported large crops of beans and Ethiopia grew large amounts of the commodity.

Consequently, U.S. exports fell off, and Americans were faced with a considerable carryover for the 1976 season.

Demand dropped off completely, according to West, and prices fell to their present low level.

Death probe panel meets

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The newly formed House Select Committee on Intelligence met today for its first session, and conference with new evidence indicating that Cuban Premier Fidel Castro knew in advance that Lee Harvey Oswald intended to kill President John F. Kennedy.

The 11-member panel was formed by the House Sept. 17. Rep. Thomas N. Downing, D-Ia., is chairman. It is to start new investigations into the assassinations of Kennedy and the Rev. Martin Luther King.

Today's closed session was called primarily for the final selection of investigators and staff so that the panel can get down to work in earnest when the new Congress convenes in January.

Its main task is to try to find out if conspiracy were involved, contrary to the findings of previous investigating commissions and committees, that Lee Harvey Oswald and James Earl Ray acted solely on their own in the killing of Kennedy 13 years ago this month in Dallas and of King in 1968 at Memphis.

The executive meeting was preceded by a brief session which was open to reporters and attended by Downing and nine other members of the committee.

Downing told reporters the committee had asked for the FBI documents regarding Oswald's alleged Cuban connections before the Kennedy assassination.

A motion by Downing would have set up two subcommittees, one for the Kennedy slaying, to be headed by Richardson Preyer, D-N.C., and one for the King slaying, chaired by Rep. Walter Fauntroy, D-D.C.

CIA documents released last March under a Freedom of Information action revealed that a defector told the agency that Oswald may have been in contact with Cuban intelligence officers seven weeks before killing Kennedy.

The memo was said to have been forwarded to the Warren commission investigating the assassination in 1964, but it was not pursued. The commission, headed by the late Supreme Court Chief Justice Earl Warren, concluded that Oswald acted alone in carrying out the president's murder.

Further details of possible Cuban knowledge of Oswald's plot were reported by the New York Times Sunday on the basis of a memo which has now come to light and which is now in the hands of the assassination committee.

The CIA informer is said to have reported that he learned of Oswald's assassination plan from Castro himself. Oswald is known to have visited the Cuban Embassy in Mexico City shortly before the Dallas killing.

The assassination committee is also expected to pursue evidence that surfaced early this year that the CIA once considered using Oswald as an information source when he was living in the Soviet Union—where he married a Russian woman.

The CIA's consideration of using Oswald while he was in the Soviet Union conflicted with sworn testimony by former CIA director Richard Helms before the Warren Commission that "there's no material in the Central Intelligence Agency, either in the records or in the mind of any of the individuals that there was any contact had or even contemplated with Oswald."

Helms, who went to Tehran as U.S. ambassador after being relieved of his CIA post in 1963, tendered his foreign-service resignation as of the end of this year.

Police arrested Elton David Stone, 33, Oakland, Calif., at the scene and jailed him on an arson charge. Stone and a friend apparently were staying in a room of the condemned building when the fire broke out.

Damage to the hotel was estimated at $20,000.

The fire near St. Luke's Hospital began about 2 a.m. in the basement of an office-garage complex being built for physicians. It started building materials stored in the underground garage and spread to the basement before firefighters could control it.

Boros said the flames were fed by insulation and became so intense they actually pitched the cement.

The house fire occurred late Sunday evening at the Warm Springs Avenue home of Mr. and Mrs. Gail M. Ison.

Arson suspected in Boise fires

BOISE (UPI) — Four fires broke out in Boise Sunday and firemen said three of them appeared to be the work of arsonists.

They hit the old St. Alphonsus Hospital building, gutted the abandoned Oxford Hotel, erupted in the basement of an office and parking garage under construction near St. Luke's Hospital and burned the attic of a home.

Police arrested Elton David Stone, 33, Oakland, Calif., at the scene and jailed him on an arson charge. Stone and a friend apparently were staying in a room of the condemned building when the fire broke out.

Damage to the hotel was estimated at $20,000.

Boros said the flames were fed by insulation and became so intense they actually pitched the cement.

The house fire occurred late Sunday evening at the Warm Springs Avenue home of Mr. and Mrs. Gail M. Ison.

Fire Marshal John Boros said the St. Alphonsus fire started in the basement of the vacant three-story building and spread to the other floors.

It broke out about 10:45 p.m.

Boros said the hotel caught fire apparently when a lit cigarette was dropped on a mattress in a second floor room. Flames spread quickly to most parts of the five-story, steel-frame structure.

Police arrested Elton David Stone, 33, Oakland, Calif., at the scene and jailed him on an arson charge. Stone and a friend apparently were staying in a room of the condemned building when the fire broke out.

Damage to the hotel was estimated at $20,000.

Chirac pulls upset

PARIS (UPI) — Former French Premier Jacques Chirac scored what political leaders called a stunning comeback Sunday in the first round of seven-off-year legislative elections.

Chirac was one of the few members of the ruling Gaullist majority to successfully go against a voting trend to the left, in which the Socialist party led by Francois Mitterrand scored a victory over the Communists.

Chirac was elected on the first round with 53.6 per cent of the vote and will not have to take part in the final elections next Sunday.

Political leaders said Chirac's victory was "optimal" and called it a stunning comeback for the ex-premier, who resigned from the government of President Valery Giscard d'Estaing in August and was replaced by Raymond Barre.

Jean Lecanuet, centrist mayor of Rouen, said after Chirac's victory "the second result to strike me is the retreat of the Communist party to the benefit of Socialists, which could cause problems in the Socialist-Communist camp."

The newspaper Le Journal du Dimanche cautioned that the elections were not necessarily a preview of how voting will run in 1978 legislative elections, which the Socialists and Communists have predicted they will win.

They don't use bogeymen to scare kids any more — they tell 'em Ralph Nader will get them.

Ford returns to capital after golfing vacation

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (UPI) — President Ford, tanned after eight days of golf, ended a postelection vacation today and aides said he was returning to Washington relaxed and ready for a busy month of official and personal decision making.

Ford and his wife, Betty, arranged to board Air Force One at midmorning for the cross-country flight home.

The President got in a final round of golf Sunday to conclude his stay as he began it — in virtual seclusion and without giving any clues to his future plans as a lame duck chief executive or later as a private citizen.

But three White House sources said Ford soon will pick his base of operation as an ex-president and this exclusive desert resort appears to be the best bet.

Ford said nothing to squelch speculation that he would be settling in Palm Springs after Jimmy Carter's inauguration Jan. 20, and he had an opportunity to do so Saturday night when he fended off questions on the subject from party goers at a reception in a Palm Springs hotel.

His chief of staff, Richard

Cheney, said the vacation put Ford "in good shape" again after a rigorous campaign that left him tired and hoarse.

Now, Cheney said, Ford intends to pursue "a normal, busy routine for the next months" at the White House until he joins his family for a Christmas holiday at Vail, Colo.

Other White House aides said Ford would concentrate mainly on preparation of the fiscal 1978 federal budget and an annual report on the economy — both to be submitted to Congress shortly before Carter takes office.

Weigh benefits, FDA chief says

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The departing administrator of the Food and Drug Administration says society may have to weigh benefits against the risks from some food substances that might cause cancer.

"We build highways, we build bridges, we build buildings knowing full well what the statistical probability of people being killed is doing those things," Alexander Schmidt said in a farewell interview.

"So it is not reasonable to believe the use of chemicals in our society can be totally without risk."

Schmidt, who is returning to the University of Illinois Medical School Dec. 1 after more than three years at the FDA, noted that the National Cancer Institute now is testing 250 compounds found in the food and environment.

"As they and we begin testing the mutagenesis and carcinogenesis of everything around, we're going to be in for some rude shocks," he said.

"And the question that's posed ... is whether there can be an estimation of the risk of cancer accurate enough so that a decision could be made as to the level of risk or the level of no risk the public is willing to accept."

"Then I think the FDA will need and I hope will be able to get guidance as to whether for a certain benefit, a risk of say one in one or 10 million of one individual getting cancer in his lifetime is worth it."

"And if the answer to that question is no, then very clearly the FDA is going to start banning things right and left and will continue to do so."

Schmidt expressed hope the FDA can have a "workable scheme" in one or two years to determine risk levels.

NATO weakness tempting?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two senators who toured the NATO defense line said Sunday it contains weak spots that might tempt the Russians to launch a sudden ground attack.

Sens. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., and Dewey Bartlett, R-Okla., made the claim in a joint statement at the conclusion of their two-week visit to major North Atlantic Treaty Organization countries.

The two senators said the United States and the European members of NATO should invest more heavily in conventional defenses to correct the problems.

Within the past decade, they said, Communist conventional forces have been built up to the point where now they have "an ability to initiate a potentially devastating invasion of Europe with as little as a few days warning."

Present NATO defense plans assume there will be warning signals up to one month before an attack, followed by a war that would last between one and six months and allow time for reinforcements.

But in reality, Nunn and Bartlett said, attacking Communist troops could be on the Rhine River in West Germany within a matter of hours, "compelling the NATO allies to choose between using nuclear weapons on their own territory or accepting defeat at the hands of improved Soviet conventional forces."

They said the failure of NATO to keep pace with the Russians may tempt the Soviet Union to launch an invasion.

How regulations hurt business

By CORNELL C. MAIER
Is there too much government regulation of business?

Yes — or, at least, too much of the wrong kind. To the degree that governmental regulations protect and enhance the public interest — as the public defines its interest — that sort of regulation is good and proper. To the degree that regulation is unrealistic, unnecessarily restrictive, or to the degree that its primary thrust is to paralyze the workings of our economic system, frustrate initiative, or add senseless costs which ultimately must be paid for by the consumer — that kind of regulation is bad.

No one disagrees with the need for reasonable regulations, particularly in the areas of safety, health, the environment, and competition. What I disagree with is the constant escalation of regulatory agency activities into the efficient workings of industry to the extent that industry becomes literally paralyzed.

All too frequently regulatory agency rules have frustrated or thwarted what Congress originally had in mind. The Congress makes the laws, but the regulatory agencies make the rules, and the rules are what you have to deal with day-by-day.

Obviously reasonable government regulation of business and industry is right and proper, and good work has been done by many of the regulatory agencies and their staffs on highly complex problems.

But the question now is whether the increasing governmental intervention we are presently dealing with can be done wisely, without stifling productivity, innovation and investment. The question we have to settle is whether government can, or should, organize and direct our economic affairs. I think the answer to that is no.

Has government regulation kept U.S. business from growing?

Over the course of the past 10 years in this country, government regulations have impeded the growth and expansion of business — but not stopped it. Industrial growth and expansion, of course, means jobs, and payrolls, and additional taxes. "No growth" advocates notwithstanding, industrial growth seems a desirable national goal.

However, the proliferation of regulatory requirements in the environmental, energy, OSHA, industrial hygiene, safety, and other areas (coupled with the rapid inflationary rate in the U.S. which has pushed the capital costs of building new capacity to unthought-of levels) has made it virtually impossible for American business and industry to undertake the sort of growth and expansion needed for the health of our country and our economy.

Much of the legislation involving national issues like the environment, health and safety, etc., has been well intentioned, but the interpretation and application of those laws, as expressed in the rules and regulations of various agencies, has seriously penalized growth and development. The tremendous involvement of regulatory agencies in the operations of business, in many instances, is keeping business from doing its essential job, which is to provide the goods and services that people want and need.

Does the marketplace protect the public interest?

The marketplace is the most effective way of protecting the public interest. I have a high personal regard for the intelligence of the American people and a firm conviction that most Americans are fully capable of making the best judgment about what's best for him or her as an individual. The place that judgment really comes into play is in the marketplace. Interior or too costly products just don't survive. Their competitors wipe them out in the marketplace. The marketplace is the place where people cast their votes for or against products and companies.

Does business police itself adequately?

On balance, I think American business has done a good job of "policing" itself. Of course, there have been abuses. There have been totally reprehensible actions on the part of both individuals and corporations. But those are few. There is no doubt in my mind that the preponderance of American businesses and American businessmen have conducted themselves with integrity and responsibility.

Don't forget that we in business and industry — we're the people, too. We're as interested as anyone else in safety, and product reliability, and a clean environment. We're as interested as anyone else in all the national issues and problems that impact on individuals, because as individuals we're as much affected as anyone else.

The idea that business is somehow immoral, indifferent to the public interest, a dodger of law — that idea is a bum rap. I think you can count on the fact that most businessmen are smart enough to realize that their business exists solely at the pleasure of the society it serves.

(Cornell C. Maier, president and chief executive officer of Kaiser Aluminum and Chemical Corp., is addressing a forum of the American Management Associations in Washington early next month.)

Categorizing Carter

New York Times

The reason that Jimmy Carter has been such a puzzle "all year" — first among Democrats sorting out potential nominees in the primaries and then among the voters at large — is that he defies categorization in the terms that we have come to use as shorthand. He is a "liberal" on tax reform but a "conservative" on health insurance. He is suspicious of détente in the Middle East but some of our weapons systems the next. The pattern is a lack of pattern, at least of the kind we have come to expect. The politicians have been complaining for years that our shorthand is oversimplified and inaccurate; Carter is their ultimate proof.

One reason, of course, is that the President-elect comes to Washington without any history of involvement in the issues we have used to sort out the politicians. He did not have to vote on the civil rights bills of the 1950s or the Vietnam appropriations of the 1970s. He was not in the trenches against the Nixon administration.

This was a serious problem for Carter during the primaries. Democrats had no history of shared experiences with him, no benchmarks by which to categorize him. They were forced to try to do it with issues, such as abortion and amnesty, on which ideological lines are blurred.

As he becomes President, however, Carter arrives with far less baggage than most of his predecessors, a politically liberal man free to write new definitions for measuring national leaders. And the first hints of what those definitions will be will come from the appointments he makes over the next few weeks.

A Carter, Kennedy comparison

By DAVID E. ROSENBAUM

© N.Y. Times Service

WASHINGTON — Searching for clues about what is likely to happen in Jimmy Carter's administration, political analysts here are reviewing the relationship between President Kennedy and Congress in the early 1960s.

There are, to be sure, a number of striking parallels. But there have been significant changes in Congress in the last decade, and they appear in many instances to outweigh the similarities between the situation faced by Kennedy and that Carter will face when he takes office in January.

Carter will assume the presidency, as Kennedy did 16 years ago, after several years of a government divided between a Republican President and a Democratic Congress, a division that led to paralysis in many areas of governmental policy.

Like Carter, Kennedy was committed to a sweeping legislative program to institute fundamental changes in American society.

Although Kennedy had some successes, most notably in obtaining from Congress sharp increases in spending for defense and space exploration, his major proposals on social policy were stymied. Civil rights laws, health care for the elderly, a tax reduction and education aid, to name several important initiatives, were blocked by Congress and were not enacted until after Kennedy's death.

Carter will have to confront some of the same problems Kennedy had. He is part of a new generation of Democratic politicians and is viewed with some skepticism by the party's old guard in Congress. He was elected by an electoral college, and his presence at the head of the Democratic ticket seems to have been hardly a factor in the election of a heavily Democratic Congress, meaning that there are few in Congress who owe him a political debt.

However, there are vast differences between the Congress of 1961 and the Congress of today, and most of those differences appear likely to work in Carter's favor.

First and foremost, the prevailing ideology in Congress today is moderate-to-liberal, apparently in line with Carter's own views. When Kennedy took office, Congress was dominated by a conservative coalition of Republicans and Southern Democrats.

In part, the change came about because of the departure of most of the powerful Southern committee chairmen who held the reins of Congress in the early 1960s. Among them were Sens. Richard B. Russell of Georgia, Robert S. Kerr of Oklahoma and Harry F. Byrd Sr. of Virginia and Reps. Howard W. Smith of Virginia, Carl Vinson of Georgia and Wilbur D. Mills of Arkansas.

Even among back-benchers, the Dixiecrat element in Congress is rapidly becoming extinct. Race is no longer the overriding issue that it used to be. And, in every election in the last decade, more and more of the old-line Southerners have been replaced by moderates and even liberals.

In the few cases where there are still strongholds of Southern conservative influence — Sens. Russell B. Long of Louisiana and James O. Eastland of Mississippi and Reps. George Mahon of Texas and Jamie L. Whitten of Mississippi, for instance — Carter's own Southern background could reduce the hostility.

Moreover, there is a different breed of leadership on Capitol Hill today. No one wields the might of the late Sam Rayburn of Texas, the speaker of the House, who supported Kennedy on some matters but undermined him on others.

Rep. Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. of Massachusetts, who is virtually certain to become speaker next year, has neither the personal political strength of Rayburn nor the will to oppose Carter. O'Neill is primarily a party man — who has seldom strayed from the official Democratic line.

The probable Senate majority leader in the new Congress, Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia, has shed his conservatism of years past and has become in recent years an unabashedly partisan Democrat of no perceptible ideology.

Finally, there have been enormous changes in congressional procedures designed to make Congress less obstructive.

Kennedy's first battle in Congress was over control of the House Rules Committee, which in those days held sway over every piece of legislation in the House and which was dominated by men dead set against the Kennedy legislative program. The President eventually won the fight, but his struggle was so intense that it hardened the liberal-conservative lines and made accommodation difficult for the rest of the Kennedy presidency.

Today, the Rules Committee is an arm of the Democratic leadership in the House. It still must approve legislation for floor action, but it no longer holds independent power.

Another important change in procedures made all committee chairmen in the House subject at the start of every Congress to election by the caucus of all House Democrats. Nowadays, a chairman knows that his job is in jeopardy if he is not responsive to the will of the majority of Democrats. That knowledge alone should influence the actions of the like Mahon, chairman of the Appropriations Committee, who are more conservative than most of their Democratic colleagues.

Senate Democrats have adopted similar procedures for electing chairmen. Perhaps even more significant, the Senate has relaxed its filibuster rule. Kennedy was repeatedly frustrated by the rule that required two-thirds of the senators voting to shut off a debate and bring controversial legislation to a vote. Now, it takes the votes of only 60 senators to invoke cloture.

All that having been said it is most unlikely that Congress will merely rubber-stamp the Carter legislative program.

Congress's self-image has gone full circle. When Kennedy took office, the prevailing view on Capitol Hill and elsewhere was that Congress was the primary branch of the government. Between 1964 and 1974, the role of the President ascended and that of the Congress declined to the point where nearly all policy was set in the White House. Gradually, in the last few years, Congress has begun to reassert itself and those now in Congress are determined to maintain their prerogatives.

New budget procedures allow Congress a measure of control over government spending and overall economic policy that never existed before. The Watergate inquiries and the investigations of the intelligence agencies gave Congress confidence that not all wisdom lay in the executive branch. The War Powers Act is a guarantee that no president can get the country into a long-term war without congressional sanction.

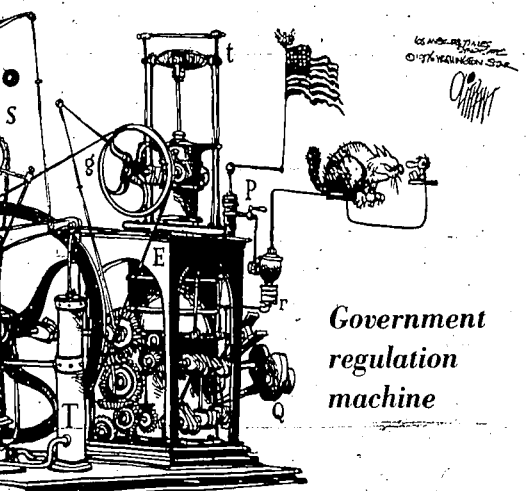

In addition, some of Carter's asserted intentions — government reorganization and tax reform, to name two — strike at the heart of the congressional establishment. It will require a good deal of negotiation and compromise before measures in those areas can be enacted.

One early battle Carter will almost certainly have to fight with Congress involves the so-called legislative veto. Increasingly in recent years, Congress has reserved for itself the right to curb specific actions by the president.

For example, under current law, the president has the ability to raise the price of crude oil and to approve the sale of military equipment abroad. If, in Congress disapproves of any step by the president in those matters, it can, by majority vote, block the action, and the president has no further recourse. Such restrictions cut so deeply into traditional executive authority that no president can allow them to stand without a fight.

The membership turnover in Congress cannot be exaggerated. Only 23 senators and about 75 representatives in the new Congress were in office when Kennedy was sworn in. Forty-two senators will be in their first terms, and about 150 House members will be their first or second terms.

Most of the members of the 95th Congress have never served under a Democratic President. For them and the country, it will be a

Government regulation machine

Shock treatment needed

Editor, Times News:
Were the pictures of these helpless dogs being put to sleep in such an inhuman way so shocking to the delicate eyes of some people it takes shock treatment to wake some people up.

We have no humane society here. I wonder if they would help by donating to it if we did? We had one once run by Bobbie Glasmann, she was a true humanitarian. She told me of such horror stories about the mistreatment of animals she investigated that I thought we must still be in the dark ages. She even had a horse, and some chickens left to starve, which she had at the shelter.

I shall never take my dear little Pekingese to any of the vets mentioned in the article as they approved of the smothering treatment. They forget that dogs lead the blind and are trained to smell out dope coming into our country, to say nothing of how many lives they have saved. I read where on the Eastern coast they are training them for lifeguards. Let us speak up and help protect them, and feed them.

'Main dragging' deplored

Editor, Times News:
Throughout the western part of the United States the people have been letting their children from age 15 and up participate in "Main dragging," a car game in which they drive up and down the streets for hours at a time, far into the night.

I asked a man in Burley why they did it, and his answer was "So the people will look at them." In many cases the adults, too, participate. This has been going on for years — on the East Coast, in Washington, D.C., and the surrounding area, high-ranking people ride buses and are in car pools. Why? To save gasoline, oil and lubricants.
If our enemies destroyed a U.S. fuel storage base overseas we would call it sabotage. Might not the people who partake in these car games also be practicing sabotage? I cannot help but wonder how many billions of gallons of fuel the citizens of the U.S. have wasted since they started "Main dragging."

Furthermore, it is my belief that when a parent allows a teenager to get behind the wheel of a powerful automobile in "Main dragging" he is teaching that child "Power" at an early age. Perhaps it is these children who, when young and when grown, make a game out of "pushing people around!"

Humane Society queried

Editor, Times News:
I'm back again to apologize to the Humane Society, for connecting their name to the letter I wrote about the animal torture that was in the Times News 2 weeks ago.

I have been in the Humane Shelter several times before they went out of Twin Falls, to see all the little pets or to find a home for some. The ones I saw looked healthy and well fed.

Again Humane Society — Sorry.
Now to Just Writing:
I would like to thank you for bringing this to my attention in a letter to me personally. Really I had never given this a thought. I got so busy when I seen these little dogs gasping for another breath.

Just wondering, if you had come to my face and talked about this, I would still of thanked you and appreciated it very much, for I'm not above making mistakes. Nor am I too proud to apologize when I do. But if you know me well enough to question what charity I do or do not donate to, you should know I am an average reader, and I can even write.

P.S. I really never fail to donate to any humane cause. I have even donated to the Humane Society.

Word for legislature

Editor, Times News:
It has recently come to my attention that all control and approval of construction plans for school buildings has been placed under the State Department of Labor. I believe this power would be more properly placed if it were returned to the State Department of Education. The State Department of Education has as its primary concern the education of present and future citizens of Idaho. This obviously cannot be the primary concern of the State Department of Labor so the needs of all the educational districts have to receive secondary consideration.

It is my contention that the State Department of Education is in a better position to know, recognize, and anticipate the needs of various districts and are, therefore, able to act more expeditiously and judiciously on decisions regarding construction plans and temporary building requirements.

I sincerely hope this is something that will be looked into and acted upon in the forthcoming legislative session.

Beirut now in control of Syrians

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Syrian peacekeeping troops seized control of Beirut today and halted Muslim-Christian battles that had raged almost nonstop through 19 months of civil war.

Two columns of Syrian tanks and armored cars rumbled into the gutted seaport and commercial center from the south and east. They were welcomed with hugs and kisses from jubilant leftist and rightist gunmen who fired wildly into the air to signal the apparent end of the war.

A third column of Syrians, Saudi Arabians and Sudanese moved up into Muslim west Beirut from the southwest after opening access roads to the city's airport.

In a lightning sweep that began before dawn, the Syrians took over all of the city's remaining battlefronts and seized commanding positions in all areas.

Red chiefs open meet

Tito, Brezhnev conferring

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (UPI) — Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev arrived today on his first visit in five years to Yugoslavia for talks with President Tito. The two leaders greeted each other with smiles, bear hugs and kisses.

Although relations between Moscow and Belgrade have improved over the past year, differences between the Communist systems of the Soviet Union and Yugoslavia were expected to be the key issue during the three days of talks.

Tito, 84, with a full head of dyed wavy red hair, appeared tanned and in good health following a two-month illness. Brezhnev, 69, looked pale and even older in comparison as he walked alongside Tito.

Brezhnev arrived aboard a special plane from Moscow and went immediately by motorcade to Tito's suburban White Palace residence to be welcomed by the aging marshal and top Yugoslav officials.

Hundreds of persons, including children let out of school for the occasion, lined the motorcade route. Security was tight, with uniformed and plainclothes police throughout the city.

The talks between Brezhnev and Tito will be their first meeting since the conference of European Communist parties in June. A document adopted at the conference stipulated that Communist parties be allowed to follow independent paths, a victory for Tito.

Brezhnev and Tito bear hugged and kissed three times, smiling and greeting each other with what appeared to be warmth. Guns boomed a 21-gun salute and a military band struck up the national anthems of both countries.

A small boy and girl from the Soviet embassy greeted Brezhnev with bouquets of roses. He smiled in acceptance and bent low to kiss them.

Relations between Belgrade and Moscow generally are good following a period of anti-Russian activity in Yugoslavia that forced Brezhnev to cancel a visit last spring.

The Yugoslavs clearly state that differences exist between Tito and Brezhnev but the final joint communique Wednesday is likely to note that the two men agreed to disagree.

Quebec voters irked

MONTREAL (UPI) — Quebec voters are angry with the Liberal government of Premier Robert Bourassa but maybe not enough to oust him in favor of the separatist policy of the Parti Quebecois in today's provincial elections.

Despite warnings from Bourassa that a victory for René Lévesque's Parti Quebecois will mean the separation of French-speaking Quebec from the rest of Canada, the electorate appears to want a change.

The latest poll gave 29.5 per cent of the vote to the Parti Quebecois, 15.9 to the Liberals and 55.4 to the Rodrigue Biron's Union Nationale party. There were 30 per cent undecided and 6 per cent made no response, with the remainder of the vote accorded to a number of smaller parties.

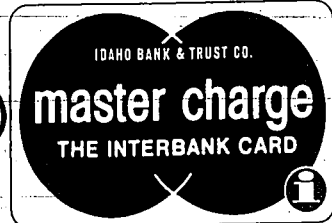

But the same poll showed that even among declared Parti Quebecois supporters, only 49 per cent supported independence for Quebec.

Honeymoon cut short

MUNCIE, Ind. (UPI) — It was only a two hour honeymoon and Michael Crisp, 29, and Kathy King, 26, had to spend it in front of a jail matron.

The couple was married Saturday in the city jail because the groom is a convicted murderer.

A jury found Crisp guilty last Tuesday of first degree murder in the April 11 shooting death of John Joalin.

Delaware Superior Court Judge Mario Piconi waived the usual three day waiting period for the Muncie couple, because they apparently wished to be wed before the groom was sentenced. His sentencing is due shortly.

The ceremony was performed in a hallway of the jail building. The couple was allowed their limited privacy in one of the building's rooms.

The slaying occurred in the house of one of Crisp's former girlfriends. She found her house had been broken into when she returned home, so she asked Joalin to help her see what was amiss. Joalin was armed, but Crisp was too, and shot him.

Dead pachyderm 'white' elephant

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — "Who'd want a dead elephant?" the curator of the San Diego Zoo asked. "It's like somebody delivering a dinosaur to your door."

Charles McLaughlin said dead zoo animals are more likely to wind up at the crematorium instead of stuffed and on display in a museum because there is less demand for the bodies of exotic birds, mammals and reptiles.

McLaughlin said paperwork for federal permits to transport endangered animals may take as long as six months and since zoo animals have a relatively short life span, the supply of bodies of such exotic beasts often exceeds the demand.

Many of the zoo's dead are stored on the top floor of the San Diego Natural History Museum, which will not accept anything weighing more than 100 pounds.

Lady Siberian tiger dies

ST. PAUL, Minn. (UPI) — Zuanne, a middle aged Siberian lady tiger, died Sunday at St. Paul's Como Park Zoo and the zoo's director, John Fletcher, says he thinks it may have been of a broken heart.

Zuanne arrived from the Prague Zoo in Czechoslovakia in December, 1964. Her mate came from the Moscow Zoo and they had 18 cubs. The mate died in 1972 and Zuanne was moved together with a young male and did fine.

However, about 18 months ago the young friend was moved out of Zuanne's cage and mated with a young tigress. That, Fletcher said, may have broken Zuanne's heart.

The actual physical cause of Zuanne's death was not immediately known and her body was to be sent to the University of Minnesota for a necropsy.

World Series 'pitcher' dies

BOSTON (UPI) — There won't be any more dreams for Joey Tramoto.

Joey, 11, died this weekend of leukemia at Children's Hospital in Boston.

Last year he achieved a life's ambition most other boys will only dream about — pitching the first ball in the seventh game of the 1977 World Series.

"Joey did a lot of things in his life that kids never will do," said his mother, Beverly Tramoto.

Mrs. Tramoto said Joseph wasn't the bragging type. If his friends didn't see him deliver that first pitch in the seventh game of the series between the Red Sox and the Cincinnati Reds, then Joey didn't tell them about it.

Although Joey played right field for the Hull Little League, his first love was hockey. He played defense on the Hull pee-wee team, starting out when he was six years old, and playing until three weeks before his death Saturday.

Watchdogs catch wrong man

ENUMCLAW, Wash. (UPI) — The Eugene Stevens' watchdogs caught the wrong man — an FBI agent.

Stevens said police advised him to buy watchdogs after his house had been hit by burglars. He bought two and posted a sign outside his house, warning: "Beware of Dog."

FBI Agent Thomas Olmstead went to the house to check out the last known address of a long-departed felon. He saw only a hapless puppy by the house but, when he opened the gate, two German shepherds pounced. One clamped its jaws on Olmstead's leg.

The agent pulled his pistol and shot the dog.

Ellen's progress pleases doctors

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Actress Ellen Corby, who plays Grandma on the popular television series "The Waltons," is showing steady progress in recovering from a stroke and is undergoing therapy at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center.

Miss Corby, 63, is off the critical list and has been moved out of the intensive care ward, a spokesman said Sunday, but doctors would not predict when the actress will go home.

"She's in fair condition and 'doctors are very pleased' with her progress, the spokesman said.

Hepburn breaks ankle

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (UPI) — A broken ankle has forced Katharine Hepburn to cancel "at least two" performances of a stage play — the first time she has missed a performance in an illustrious acting career.

"It was a damned fool thing to do," Miss Hepburn, 67, said, explaining she was running down a small incline at her Hollywood Hills home, hit a rock and twisted her ankle.

"For the first time I will have to cancel a performance and I don't like that at all."

Miss Hepburn is starring in "A Matter of Gravity" at the Ahmanson Theater in the Los Angeles Music Center.

Red tape delays dying mother's wish

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. is entangled in "red tape" in his attempt to gain the temporary release of truck driver Phillip Millard from a Mexican jail so he can see his dying mother in the United States.

"We're working on it but we have nothing concrete yet," a spokeswoman for Brown said Sunday. "We're just trying to cut through red tape."

Gray Davis, Brown's chief of staff, said "The hurdle at this point is the absence of an irrevocable (legal) guarantee" that Millard would be returned to Mexico.

Brown aides consulted with Mexican authorities and the State Department during the weekend trying to hammer out an acceptable agreement for the proposed 24-hour release of Millard.

Millard, 32, has served nearly half of a 6½-year sentence on charges of smuggling cocaine and wants to visit his mother, Isabel, 62, a retired Alameda, Calif., teacher who is dying of cancer.

Family members say Mrs. Millard is getting weaker and can barely recognize close friends.

Authorities said that since Millard had not committed a crime on American soil, Mexican officials were concerned that he could not be legally held once he is in this country.

Davis said the governor's staff had even drawn up an agreement that Millard would sign before leaving Mexico "which is relevant to his return to prison after he's visited his mother."

Brown earlier had been accused in Mexico City by Millard's sister, Carolyn Johnson, of letting the family down by failing to guarantee authorities there of the trucker's return. The governor said through an aide he would "do everything in his power to ensure Millard would return after the visit."

Bill Millard, Phillip's brother, said the family had received a letter from an assistant Lt. Gov. Mervyn Dymally advising "it is beyond the capability of this office to comply with your wishes and the requirements of the Mexican government."

But Davis said the letter did not represent Brown's views.

Leukemia victim, 5, aware death near

SHERMAN, Tex. (UPI) — Jamie Thomas had some heavy information for a 5-year-old child. He knew he was going to die.

"I think he knew before we even mentioned it," said Harold Karr, the boy's stepfather.

"About three months ago Jamie asked us, 'Am I going to die?' We told him the truth," Jamie had leukemia. Saturday he watched his family build a snowman from a rare autumn Texas snowstorm. That night he died.

The child had been in almost constant pain recently. Drugs helped, but they had to be administered every two hours.

"We told him that when he died there would be no pain, no harm, no hurt, and that he could play all the time," said his mother, Duana. Everyone knew Jamie would not live to see Christmas. There were plans made for weekend trying to hammer out an acceptable agreement for the proposed 24-hour release of Millard.

KK Klan members march

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — United States support of black majority rule in Rhodesia will lead to the deaths of thousands of white African residents, according to Ku Klux Klan leader David Duke.

Nine Klan members in hoods and white robes marched in front of the downtown Custom House Sunday in steady drizzle, urging the United States not to abandon Rhodesian Whites. Duke, self-proclaimed Grand Dragon of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, walked alone side in a leisure suit.

"If the blacks take over, ultimately the whites will be dispossessed of their property, their rights, their homes and ultimately their lives," said the 26-year-old Duke, of Baton Rouge.

"Every single black-run nation in Africa where they have taken over from the whites, there exists a dictatorship," he said.

The Dow Jones Industrial average, off nearly four points at the outset, was ahead 0.42 to 928.11 shortly before noon EST. A 2.34-point loss on Friday, the biggest drop since last 15.68 point last week.

Market breadth figures revealed considerable investor uncertainty. Of the 1,581 issues crossing the tape, 573 declined, 524 advanced and 488 remained unchanged.

Volume during the first two hours amounted to about 6,500,000 shares.

Growth of CB use bothers market

NEW YORK (UPI) - Shares of the E.F. Johnson Co., the biggest domestic manufacturer of citizens' band radio equipment, have fallen to 14 from a high of 34 last spring.

Wall Street analysts are wondering whether this solitary based Minnesota company will suffer further as it and 35 other members of the industry fight for profits in a chaotic market.

including the estimate of at least one analyst that the quarter will show a loss.

Johnston reported a third-quarter loss of about $250,000 after a tax credit. In a telephone interview, Richard E. Horner, Johnston's president, said this week, he "honestly didn't know" if the company would have inventory writeoffs in the fourth quarter, but he added that the cost of the inventory of 23-channel sets was below present selling value.

Since the 48-channel units cannot be sold until Jan. 1, the Christmas season is expected to be a difficult one. Meanwhile, discounting of basic 23-channel units recently dropped the retail price below $40, further disappointing quality producers such as Johnson, whose average set retailed at $160 last year.

Some persons believe that the future will be clouded by a flood of Japanese imports. In past such waves, sales of domestic black and white television sets, color sets, calculators and electronic watches have plummeted.

production. The high was set last March at 561,000 license applications.

Meanwhile, the Japanese produced 1.76 million sets in July, 1.39 million sets in August and 1.55 million sets in September, according to the Japanese Trade Ministry.

While it is clear that there are other markets for the equipment besides the United States, this country is by far the largest user. And, of course, there is production from Taiwan, Korea and the United States itself to figure into the equation.

In that supply-demand context, it is little wonder that leading companies, including Johnson, posted losses for the third quarter.

"Merit Delivers More Taste Than Higher Tar Cigarettes."

-American Institute of Consumer Opinion

Extensive taste testing shows Merit delivers flavor of cigarettes having 60% more tar.

The bottom line was conclusive: In a series of taste tests conducted for MERIT by the American Institute of Consumer Opinion,* smokers from across the country judged MERIT to have more flavor than five leading low tar cigarette brands.

What's really startling—and of major importance to all smokers—is that MERIT has less tar than these five brands.

History compiled

FLORENCE Fuller, secretary of the Wendell Grange No. 82, looks over the history which she compiled for the 65th anniversary observance of the organization.

Oldest master

KIRK Hayas, 83, is the oldest living past master of the Wendell Grange. He and his wife joined the organization March 6, 1934. They were honored during the 65th anniversary observance Thursday night.

Grange celebrates 65th anniversary

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

WENDELL—The Wendell Grange had a hard time keeping its chief officer when it started back on Nov. 11, 1911.

According to a history presented at the group's 65th anniversary program Thursday night, there were three masters before the year was out.

Andrew Smith, the first elected master, soon moved so W.J. Fitzsimmons was elected Nov. 25. But in December he resigned as he was offered a traveling position and would be unable to attend all the meetings. So J.F. McBurney became the duly elected master of the young Grange Dec. 23, 1911.

One of the first official acts of the Grange was to buy a carload of coal for its members, according to Florence Fuller, who compiled highlights from records of the past 65 years for presentation at the anniversary program.

Ira Kistler, Gooding, past state master, was the speaker, and special music was presented by the Buhl Chorales under the direction of Helen Dietz, and solos by Mrs. Blanche Smith and Elsie Childers.

Nearly 150 persons attended the anniversary event and there was "standing room only" in the hall, according to Martha Ruby, master. She is the third woman to serve as master.

The Grange had a woman master long before Women's Lib. The first woman to the top leadership post was in 1926 when Mrs. Robert Moore was honored. She was re-elected in 1927 and again 1930. Five years later Mrs. Frank Burke was elected, although she resigned after serving two months.

The new Grange did not hold any meetings for two months during the flu epidemic in 1918 and again in 1919 when a public ban was put on public meetings.

The history records the Wendell group had a difficult time the next few years holding together, but in July, 1920, the Grange was incorporated so bonds could be sold to members at $5 to raise money for a Grange building.

In October, 1920, the Grange was able to hold its first meeting in its own hall. The present building is in the same location, but was built adjacent to the first building. Records show lots on each side of the current building were purchased in 1937 for the unbelievable price of $6.50.

Among the historical mementos displayed at the hall Thursday night was a resolution adopted in 1923 urging Wendell boys to "refrain from smoking and drinking."

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas W. Hardy, San Jose, Calif. A reception was held the next evening in the LDS 10th ward building.

Jim: "I learned bridge while you were in Korea and I was at Notre Dame. When you got home and took off your uniform, I remember you taught me the importance of learning the single-suit plays."

Oswald: "These are the plays where declarer wants to do the best he can with a single suit. Maybe we should show some of them this week."

Jim: "Let's start with an easy one. South is in a normal three-notrump contract. The key suit is spades and South needs four spade tricks. At some stage of the play he goes to dummy with the ace of hearts to take the spade finesse."

Oswald: "If it loses to the king the contract is doomed to defeat, but there is his majesty perched in the East hand and the finesse will work."

Jim: "Nevertheless he must be careful to start the spade by leading the nine from dummy. If he makes a mistake and leads the jack East can beat him by refusing to cover. He must play the six spot from his hand. Then, when the time is led north East holds back again, South must win in his own hand and can't lead through the king for the third time."

MR. and MRS. DOUGLAS DENMARK

MV pair married in Colorado rites

TWIN FALLS — Douglas and Dec Denmark, Twin Falls, and Debbie Irene McDonell, Kimberly, were married in a double-ring ceremony Oct. 29 in Monte Vista, Colo.

The wedding ceremony was performed in the First Christian Church by Rev. Andrew Gudahl.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Willis Denmark, Twin Falls. The bride's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Gerald W. McDonell, Kimberly.

The bride designed and made her own floor-length wedding gown of white broadcloth enhanced with long lace sleeves, empire bodice and a lace inset front. A waist-length veil of bridal illusion was held in place by a beaded tiara.

She carried a bouquet of yellow roses and white daisies with long yellow streamers. She was given in marriage by her father.

Attending the couple were Marsha Templer, Denver,

Colo., matron of honor, and Jack Jordan, Monte Vista, as best man. Usher was Robert McDonell, Kimberly, brother of the bride.

A wedding reception was held at the home of Jack and Susan Jordan in Monte Vista. White and yellow flowers decorated the reception tables. A two-tiered cake, topped by silver bells and decorated in yellow roses and green leaves, centered the bride's table.

The bridegroom is a 1971 graduate of the Twin Falls High School and a graduate of the Denver Automotive and Diesel College in Colorado. He is employed in Monte Vista.

Debbie is a 1975 graduate of the Kimberly High School where she was valedictorian of her class. She has been attending Bakersfield College in California and working for the John Lawrence Insurance office there.

Following a brief wedding trip through Colorado, the couple will live in Monte Vista.

Meeting postponed

TWIN FALLS — The November meeting of the Magic Valley Radiological Technologists will be held Nov. 30 instead of Nov. 16 as originally planned. Tom Shriver, president of the group, said the meeting will be held in the Cassia Memorial Hospital, Burley, 8 p.m.

DEAR ABBY: For the woman who lost her husband to a younger woman, here's one man's story: I loved my wife dearly, but after six children and 35 years of marriage, our relationship became so platonic I felt sure I was losing my manhood. I blamed it on her devotion to our home and children rather than on my age.

Depressed, I left home under the pretense of seeking work in a distant state, but I had other things in mind. I found a willing young girl who looked up to me adoringly, lifted my spirits and restored my lagging sense of manhood. I felt as though I had found the fountain of youth, so I filed for a divorce solely on the grounds of sexual incompatibility.

As soon as my wife got word of this, she did what every woman who really loves her husband should do. She caught a bus and traveled 1,600 miles to win back her man. She didn't whine or hire any lawyers, or even send me for what I had done; she came courting me like a sweetheart, and she laid a loving on me like she hadn't done in years! Of course I knew that some of her passion was faked, but we men are gullible, and I loved her all the more for it.

You guessed it. She brought me back home, bound hand, foot and heart with nothing but chains of love.

HOME AGAIN

DEAR HOME: Another classic example of a woman casting herself in the role of a sex object to get what she wants. It may be fine for some women, but the Women's Libbers would have her scalp for such a degrading ploy.

DEAR ABBY: My husband sleeps in his underwear. All winter he wears the long woolen kind, and he sleeps in the same underwear he's worn all day. The problem is getting him to change it.

Abby, he has four suits of clean underwear in his drawer, but he refuses to put on a clean pair without a fight. I have a terrible time getting it away from him to put it in the wash. Don't tell me to grab it while he's in the bathtub. It's a battle to get him to take a bath. No. He thinks deodorants are for sissies, and the smell is awful. Please help me.

BERTHA IN BISMARCK

DEAR BERTHA: Nag him, threaten him, beg him and bribe him if necessary. If nothing works, look at it this way: You'll never have to worry about another woman stealing him. And he's easy to find in the dark.

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of a very nice, but shy 17-year-old son. He has never had a date in his life, and I'm sure it's because he's afraid he'll get turned down.

He is an honor student, but doesn't do very well in sports, which could be the reason he isn't very popular with the "in" crowd at school. He is slightly overweight, but there are fatter boys who date so that can't be the reason.

It breaks my heart to see him alone all the time. A girls' club is having a dance, and the girls ask the boys. One of my best friends has a daughter in this club. Should I put a bug in my friend's ear and ask her to ask her daughter to ask my son? He wouldn't have to know I arranged it.

MOM

DEAR MOM: Don't put any bugs in anybody's ear. Your son may be a late bloomer. And another one of his problems could be a well-meaning mother who's inclined to run interference for him. Let him develop socially at his own pace.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY, Box No. 6970, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

your health

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb—
I am concerned about the medicine that my husband has been taking for seven years for high blood pressure. His blood pressure is normal now, 140 over 80, but the doctor says he still should keep taking Enduron, one tablet each morning.

Dear Reader—
Enduron is another medicine to help people eliminate salt and water. It is used commonly to help control mild high blood pressure. It will not hurt your husband.
Many people who have high blood pressure and require treatment will have to take it the rest of their lives. The medicine keeps the blood pressure at normal levels. If your husband stops taking his medicine he may be right back where he started in a very short time.

Again, anyone who has high blood pressure should get rid of every excess pound of body fat. I am sending you the Health Letter number 1-8, Blood Pressure. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Just send your letter to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1531, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Pressure problems

Dear Dr. Lamb—
Recently I read that taking insulin could cause blindness. I am a diabetic and take insulin. Now I'm really scared that the insulin will cause me to go blind. Should I stop my insulin and follow some diet to control my diabetes? Would you send me a diet I could use instead of taking insulin?

Dear Reader—
No, I am not going to help you do something that would be harmful to you. These scare stories were about some really interesting research but research is all it is at the moment.

The story related to the idea that people become "allergic" to insulin and this causes the overgrowth of blood vessels in the back of the eye that can lead to blindness in diabetics.

There is not a single case on record of this occurring in humans. Dr. George Cahill, president of the American Diabetic Assn. and professor of medicine at Harvard has already pointed out that his eye problem also occurs in patients who do not take insulin.

Biological research is complicated. You can produce a fever by causing heat stroke but that does not mean all fevers are indicative of heat stroke. The old dictum in logic is that "the simultaneous occurrence of two events does not prove a cause and effect relationship." So it is with the animal research on insulin. The fact that we can produce vascular changes in animals does not prove that this is how they are caused in diabetics.

The best way we know at present to prevent these eye problems is to adequately control diabetes. That means following your doctor's instructions. While I am on the subject, let me say once again that to not should ever stop taking medicines of his own. This can be dangerous. Suddenly stopping your medicines may cause a reaction in some cases. The epileptic, for example, who takes Dilantin may be thrown into a severe convulsive attack if he suddenly stops Dilantin on his own.

On your case stopping insulin could allow your diabetes to get worse and could cause diabetic coma with really serious consequences. The way to get the most out of your doctor's instructions is to follow them.

Interstates nearly done

BOISE— The latest figures compiled by Idaho Transportation Department statisticians show that the 612.6-mile Interstate Highway System in Idaho is 94 per cent completed.

Since the beginning of the Interstate era in 1956, $372,520,000 has been spent on Idaho's Interstate System. Current estimates indicate that an additional $151,650,000 will be needed to bring the system up to full Interstate standards.

The federal government provides 92 per cent of the funds.

Value of homes increases quickly

WASHINGTON, D.C.— Between 1970 and 1974, the median value of owner-occupied, single-family homes increased faster than the income of owners. Likewise, the median gross rent of renter-occupied units increased faster than the income of renters, according to a report released recently reflecting the results of the 1974 annual housing survey conducted by the Bureau of the Census, U.S. Department of Commerce, for the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

In continuing the upward economic spiral of previous years, the median value of owner-occupied, single-family homes rose 59 per cent, from $17,100 to $27,200 between 1970 and October, 1974; the report says. Median income for homeowners during this period rose 22 per cent, from $9,700 to $12,800.

Median monthly gross rent (including utilities) increased from $108 to $143 (32 per cent) from 1970 to 1974, while the median income of renters went up from $6,300 to $7,700 annually (22 per cent).

The report also showed that the value of owner-occupied homes in 1974 was about twice the income of their owners. This ratio varied considerably, however, according to income level.

For example, the value of homes in the low-income group (owners with incomes of less than $4,000) was four times or more than their annual income; many of these owners were elderly. In the high income group (owners with annual income of $25,000 or more), however, the value of homes was less than 1.5 times median income.

Renters generally paid about 22 per cent of their annual income for gross rent. Households with incomes under $5,000 spent 35 per cent or more of their incomes on rent in 1974. Households with incomes of more than $25,000 spent less than 10 per cent of their incomes on rent.

Low-cost housing, both for homeowners and renters, tended to be older and to lack more of the amenities such as air conditioning and complete plumbing than did high-cost housing. For owner-occupied homes valued at less than $10,000 (about 8 per cent of the total owner units), the report shows that about 73 per cent were built prior to 1950.

One-third of these homes have air conditioning, while 13 per cent lacked complete plumbing facilities. For units valued at $35,000 or more (about 31 per cent of the total owner units), 23 per cent were built before 1950.

Navy commissions nuclear submarine

NEWPORT NEWS, Va. (UPI)— The Navy commissioned the USS Los Angeles Saturday, putting into service the first of a line of high speed nuclear submarines intended to outclass Soviet sea power quantity with U.S. quality.

The Navy said the ship commissioned at the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Co. is the first of 23 high speed nuclear powered attack submarines.

But the exact speed of the vessel was withheld other than a statement that it is faster than 20 knots under water. The 300-foot sub, whose 12 officers and 115 enlisted men will be skippered by Cmdr. John F. Christensen, carries an armament of four 21-inch torpedo tubes and is billed as having the most advanced antisubmarine warfare capabilities.

The sub, fourth Navy vessel to bear the name Los Angeles, was completed at the Newport News company and launched in April 1974. Since then, the sub has been engaged in sea trials.

Jackie Cooper, a Naval Reserve Captain as well as a Hollywood entertainment figure, cited statistics in a speech at the ceremonies. He said, "Soviets now have a fleet of about 325 submarines, of which about 140 are nuclear powered."

Kepone storage at missile site?

By GEORGE WILEY
Times-News writer

Passengers continue to embark on Airwest planes at Joslin Field in Twin Falls

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls firm may take charge of the disposal near Grand View of more than 60 tons of Kepone contaminants from dismantled plants of the insecticide's Virginia manufacturer.

The storage of the contaminants, some tainted with arsenic, would be made in abandoned Titan missile silos near Grand View now owned by Wes-Con, Inc., a Twin Falls disposal firm. The silos are in the desert about 30 miles south of Mountain Home.

Whether the toxic materials will be disposed of in Idaho is now being considered by the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare and the Department of Water Resources. Those agencies are expected to act in 30 days on whether the Kepone materials from Allied Chemical Co., Baltimore, Md., will find a permanent concrete-enclosed home in Idaho.

Allied and Life Sciences Products—Hopewell—Va., were fined about $16.9 million in October for polluting Virginia's James River with Kepone and other toxic chemicals.

The bulk of Allied and Life Science's Kepone will probably be disposed of through high-temperature incineration, but about 130,000 pounds of contaminated refuse from dismantled manufacturing plants can't be burned. This is the material being considered for Idaho storage.

The material includes 5,000 pounds of Kepone mixed with arsenic which can't be burned without releasing arsenic into the air. It also includes about 60 tons of Kepone sludge in barrels accumulated from the plant dismantling clean-up. Contaminated steel and equipment from the plant about five tons to the potential Idaho shipment.

HAW and Water Resources representatives met in Boise Friday with representatives from Allied and the federal Environmental Protection Agency to discuss disposal of the materials in Idaho. A decision on the storage is expected within a month.

If the state rules favorably on the storage, the contaminants would be placed in the abandoned missile sites now owned by Wes-Con.

According to Wes-Con owner, Gene Rinebold, the Kepone contaminants would "absolutely not" present a health hazard to Idaho residents.

"The hazardous aspect of this material is finite extreme low range of toxicity," Rinebold said today. "Less hazardous than common DDT."

Rinebold said Kepone had been voluntarily taken off the market by Allied after the publicity surrounding the James River pollution. He said the chemical is still listed as a saleable insecticide.

The Titan missile sites which Wes-Con uses for disposal of toxic chemicals are rated as the safest disposal site in the U.S., Rinebold added. "We've got that on record," he said.

He said no financial arrangement had been reached with Allied, adding that Wes-Con's maximum charge for disposal has been 3.5 cents per pound—plus shipment, preparation and cleaning costs.

Rinebold said the missile sites, which have 13 feet of concrete on the bottom and six-foot, steel-reinforced concrete walls, would prevent the Kepone being a groundwater hazard even if the site weren't more than a half-mile from groundwater.

today in brief

Vandals damage Rupert churches
RUPERT — Two churches suffered minor damage from vandalism in Rupert over the weekend.

Rupert police received a report Saturday that someone had entered the Methodist Church through a broken window.

The pastor's office and study doors were jimmied open, but nothing appeared to have been taken, police said.

Damage was estimated at $30.

The caretaker at the Church of Christ-Central reported that two lights in front of the church were broken Saturday evening.

He said he heard a door slam and glass break, but saw no one. Damage was listed at $20.

Police made no connection between the two incidents.

Man guilty of weapon display
HAILEY (UPI) — George Fritz, Bellevue, former editor of the Wood River Journal, pleaded guilty to a charge of displaying a deadly weapon and received a $300 fine and a six-months suspended jail sentence Friday.

Fifth District Judge Douglas Kramer ordered Fritz to surrender all of his firearms to the Blaine County Sheriff for one year.

Fritz was originally charged with assault with a deadly weapon, stemming from an August incident involving a property boundary dispute.

Bar fight brings arrest
BURLEY — An early morning fight in a downtown bar brought about the arrest of a Heyburn man Saturday.

Burley police arrested Juan Salinas Chavez, 30, about 12:25 a.m. Saturday on charges of disturbing the peace and resisting arrest.

Police said Chavez was involved in a fight in a Main Street bar. He was released on $250 bond.

Station wagon looted at Rupert
RUPERT — Merchandise valued at about $170 was stolen from an unlocked station wagon parked along a Rupert street.

Ron Busabe told police a tape deck and two speakers, a camp stove and lantern, three gallons of gas and a cooler were taken from his vehicle Saturday.

Oakley irrigators set meeting tonight

BURLEY — A meeting on possible irrigation of the Oakley Fan will be held here today.

The meeting is scheduled for 8 p.m. in the Ponderosa Inn in north Burley.

John Mangano, planning officer for the Bureau of Reclamation, will head a contingent from the bureau's regional office.

Crossroad signs warn motorists

BURLEY — Crossroad signs will warn north-south motorists of the intersection of 100 South and 150 East roads near here.

The Burley Highway District compromised his week on the conflicting views of two groups of area residents.

The district agreed to erect the warning signs at 150 East Road. Stop signs already halt traffic on 100 South Road at that intersection.

One of the groups called for a four-way stop to provide additional traffic safety. The other presented a petition with 24 signatures objecting to the proposed four-way stop.

Airwest continues to fly one more day

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Hughes Airwest passengers were traveling on schedule today with a threatened strike by aircraft mechanics delayed for another 24 hours.

Union officials in Phoenix, Ariz., said the mediation board proposed holding up strike measures until midnight Monday instead of Sunday to allow for continued negotiations. Both sides agreed and aircraft mechanics who went on strike at midnight Sunday went back to work within 30 minutes. They returned with no loss in pay, officials of the Aircraft Mechanics Fraternal Association said.

Paul Shoaff, manager of Airwest operations in Twin Falls, said the airline could probably continue flights for some time even though the strike should materialize tonight. Supervisory personnel would be able to handle mechanical services at least temporarily.

Shoaff said the airline maintains a number of alternate plans in the event of strikes and would be able to determine a course of action if the strike is called.

World's market trends caused farm price slump

Sargent says he is not optimistic about an improvement in the bean market this year.

If Europe continues to sell cattle at the present rate, however, he says demand for beans may increase since beans have a high protein content and could serve as a meat replacement.

A Boise-State-University (BSU) economist agrees the present farm price situation came about because of overproduction in this country and in Idaho.

"The fundamental problem in Idaho's economy is that too many resources are devoted to the agricultural sector of the economy," said Dr. Donald Billings, BSU economist.

"Saying that in Idaho is a big risk," he added. "Because of increased productivity, this country requires fewer and fewer farmers," Billings said.

He said slumping farm prices will clearly have an adverse effect on Idaho's economy.

"Idaho was among the top two or three in agricultural income last year in the nation," Billings said. "And Idaho's per capita income actually grew less than the national average."

Billings urged diversification in Idaho's economy.

But Sargent disagreed about the steps Idaho should take to bring itself out of the current slump.

Wendell will open shop bids

WENDELL — Bids on a new city shop will be opened at the Wendell City Council meeting Thursday. The shop will be built at the site of the old labor camp.

City Clerk June Holm said the City Council wants to have a 30 by 80-foot cinder block building constructed to house the city shop equipment.

Some months ago councilmen attempted to construct the new shop where the city water tower stands. Because that area is residential, neighbors protested and the plan was dropped.

The only remaining city property is the site of the former labor camp, Mrs. Holm said. A five-year lease the city had with the Farm Labor Sponsoring Association expired this July, and since the growers association had not kept the camp up, the city decided to let the lease expire, the clerk said.

The area, on West Avenue and Shoshone Street, is zoned for industry. It is located in the southwest part of town, next to the Wendell Highway District maintenance building.

Most of the former labor camp buildings have been removed. The two remaining structures will be incorporated into the city shop, the clerk said. In addition to the new structure for which bids are wanted.

Diogenes made happy

TWIN FALLS — Two honest Twin Falls boys, Donnie Parsons and Mike Jordan, both 12, turned in about $70 in cash and checks they found here Friday, and a sheriff's deputy has located the owner in Gladstone, Mo.

The boys found the money in a purse at the intersection of Eastland and Hillcrest drives Friday night. Through information on a check, sheriff's deputy Buddy DeWeese was able to find the owner.

Mrs. Paula Tarrant, 22, who left Twin Falls Friday for Gladstone, says she apparently lost the money when she laid her purse on top of her car at the Gasamot on Addison Avenue East. She drove away, forgetting the purse was on her car top.

TF County plan meeting Wednesday

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls County Commission designed largely to protect and preserve valuable agricultural land in the county, will be revealed during a meeting Wednesday night.

The meeting is open to the public and will begin at 8 p.m. in the Judicial Building. At that time, members of the commission will receive copies of the final draft of a countywide planning report, according to Ann Cover, chairman of the Twin Falls County Planning Commission.

Four years in the making, the plan deals with growth and development of the county and all of the cities and communities in the county.

Mrs. Cover said the plan is designed to protect farm lands, but said recommendations and major features will not be made public until the Wednesday night meeting to give members who have served on the commission an opportunity to receive the plan before details are announced publicly.

Mrs. Cover said the plan was prepared by Stevens, Thompson and Runyon, Portland, Ore., a consulting engineering firm, but utilizes suggestions of Twin Falls County residents through the 10 commission members. When commission members determined a course of action, the consultants would work out the details for the plan.

Following formal presentation of the plan Wednesday night, copies will be sent to each City Council in the county, and community leaders. Copies will be made available to the public at the county planning office on the third floor of the old hospital building. They will be available on a check-out basis, Mrs. Cover said.

Sierra sales blocked in N. Dakota decision

Editor's note: In Sunday's Twin Falls County edition of the Times-News the second half of this story was inadvertently omitted. The story is being rerun today in papers delivered only to Twin Falls County readers in order to provide them the complete news report.

By BILL LAZARUS
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Sierra Life Insurance Co.'s license to sell insurance in North Dakota was suspended on Oct. 21 after certain Sierra assets were found to be unacceptable under that state's insurance laws.

However, an agreement has been reached to lift the suspension order until an appeal by Sierra to the district court is resolved, according to Thomas Smith, special assistant attorney general assigned to the North Dakota Department of Insurance.

Sierra also agreed not to sell any new policies in the state and agreed to legal publication of the state's suspension order, Smith said.

Under the agreement, Sierra would be allowed to contact existing policyholders in order to conserve its existing business in the state, Smith said.

In ordering the suspension, Smith said, North Dakota Insurance Commissioner J.O. Wigen adopted findings from a hearing held in late June before an independent hearing officer.

Wigen, he said, found "quite a bit" of the company's assets to be "not well invested under our law."

"A great deal of the real estate we found to be unimproved real estate. We found those assets to be non-admitted" or not acceptable as assets under North Dakota law, Smith said.

"We suspended their certificate of authority (to write business) until they divest themselves of those assets," he said. Once the assets which were not accepted are replaced, he said the department will "take another look" at Sierra's license to do business.

Smith said Sierra also was found to be in violation of two provisions of state law.

One finding, he said, was that Sierra should have presented its "reinsurance agreement" with Sandia Life Insurance Co. to the insurance department for approval or disapproval.

In that agreement at the end of 1975, Sierra sold almost all of its non-Idaho insurance policies to Sandia, a wholly-owned subsidiary Sierra had recently formed in New Mexico.

Smith also said that Sierra's placement of some bonds and securities on its books at par value instead of market value also was found in violation of North Dakota law.

Par value of a bond is its value at maturity while market value is its current market worth. Refusing to accept the bonds and securities at their par value meant these assets were determined to be worth about $25,000 less than the company had listed them, Smith said.

He said the department made no determination as to Sierra's overall financial condition.

"We're not going to be concerned at this particular point with solvency or insolvency," he said, adding that the department is just saying that certain of the company's assets don't meet North Dakota standards. That doesn't mean, he said, that the unaccepted assets have no value.

"Obviously those assets have some value. But what value they have is hard to say," Smith said.

Fred Frazier, Sierra's president, would not comment to the Times-News Friday on the North Dakota decision.

Fiance kills himself

CHICAGO (UPI) — Rene Abrey, 29, shot and killed himself at his own bachelor's party early Saturday on what was to have been his wedding day.

Homicide Sgt. John Healy said a "brawl" at Abrey's at Chicago's Roberts Elementary High School, earlier fell out, cut his nose at the party, signaling the end to his bachelor days.

"He told everybody there he didn't want to go through with this," Healy said, "because he didn't want his wedding pictures to show him with a scratched nose."

Abrey's fiancée, Sarah Padilla, 19, attending a bridal party at the apartment downstairs, was told of Abrey's remarks and confronted him with them.

Drut banned from International track

AMSTERDAM (UPI) — The International Amateur Athletic Federation Sunday banned French Olympic gold medalist Guy Drut for life because he admitted accepting appearance money at track and field events, IAAF president Adrian Paulsen said.

But Paulsen said Drut will be allowed to keep his 110 meter hurdles gold medal, won at Montreal, because the offenses took place after the Olympics in July.

"The Drut case is very simple. The French champion indicated in an article, published in a French magazine that he received money for taking part in track and field meetings," Paulsen said.

"The IAAF asked the French Federation to investigate and as a result Drut was found to have broken the international Olympic Committee's Rule 26 on amateurism. "We had only one recourse—to ban Guy Drut from the International Amateur Athletic Federation," Paulsen said.

Drut, when informed of the IAAF's decision, said he hoped his exclusion from amateur sports will force an international reappraisal on the rules of "false" amateurism.

"That what I wish above all is that the measure taken regarding me could bring out the anachronism of the current rules regarding amateur sports," Drut said. "I dare to hope that that which happened today can serve as an example and that the international authorities will find new motives for an indispensable revision of the rules of amateurism."

not commit dishonest acts." "After my public declarations on false amateurism and after I renounced amateur competition, I took all responsibility," he said. "The International Amateur Athletics Federation in excluding me took a measure which I consider quite normal."

Michel Marmion, president of the French Federation of Athletics, said "this sanction against Guy conformed to what I expected."

"The important thing for me," added Drut, "was that I can keep my gold medal and Olympic title from Montreal and I find that a consolation."

Steelers defeat Dolphins

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Franco Harris rushed for 107 yards and a touchdown and reserve running back Reggie Harrison also scored a touchdown Sunday to lead the Pittsburgh Steelers to their first victory over the Miami Dolphins, 14-3, in a nationally televised game.

Harris scored the Steelers' first touchdown on a 21-yard run and Harrison scored the other on a one-yard plunge after rookie quarterback Mike Kruczek completed a 64-yard pass to Frank Lewis, the pass play by the Steelers this season.

Rocky Bleier rushed for 113 yards in 21 carries, making the Pittsburgh backfield only the fourth pair of running backs in NFL history to have back-to-back 100-yard games. Harris' yardage, gained in 22 carries, was his 24th 100-yard plus game, making him fifth in the NFL in 100-yard game performances.

Broncos blank Chargers

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Rick Upchurch caught a 59-yard pass from Steve Ramsey for a touchdown and set up a field goal with a 38-yard punt return to lead the Denver Broncos to a 17-0 victory over the San Diego

Chargers. Denver stayed in second place in the AFC's Western Division with a 6-4 record and the Chargers remained in 6th place, despite losing their fourth straight.

Denver scored its first touchdown after safety Steve Foley intercepted San Diego quarterback Dan Fouts' pass and returned it five yards to the Broncos' 22-yard line.

Grogan leads Pats by Colts

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Quarterback Steve Grogan ran for two touchdowns and cornerback Mike Haynes intercepted a pair of Bert Jones' passes Sunday to lead the New England Patriots to a 21-14 victory over the Baltimore Colts.

Patriots' third touchdown with a pass to Al Chandler. Haynes stopped two Colts' drives in the second half with interceptions of Jones, who had been intercepted only five times previously this season.

New England's win closed the gap in the AFC East to one game. The Patriots, who snapped a six-game winning streak by the Colts, now 8-2.

Grogan scored on a pair of short plunges and set up the Colts last a chance to score with 10 minutes left in the game when running back Lydell Mitchell on New England's 21 and the Patriots' Sam Hunt recovered.

Saints top Lions

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Quarterback Bobby Douglas passed 69 yards to wide receiver Larry Burton for a third-quarter touchdown and linebacker Warren Kapone scored after recovering a fumble Sunday to lead the New Orleans Saints to a 17-16 win over the Detroit Lions.

Detroit's Herman Weaver, trying to punt from his own end zone, had a bad snap and attempted to run the ball. He was hit and the ball popped loose. Kapone grabbed it at the two and ran in for the score.
