YOUNG HOSTAGE is carried to safety by a police officer following her release by a former militant patient in Haysville, Kan., Wednesday. The child was one of five held along with a woman for several hours before they were exchanged for three officers, the girl friend of the suspect and two other persons. A police spokesman shot through window and killed Larry Lear when a go-between reported it appeared Lear might kill the hostages. The incident in the Wichita suburb lasted for over eight hours. China squelches 'rebel rule'

HONG KONG (UPI) — The Chinese leadership, with the aid of military units, has put down serious disturbances in the industrial city of Paoting, a former provincial capital about 100 miles south of Peking, dispatches from the Chinese capital reported today. A Peking dispatch of the West German news agency DPA said organized bands raided ammunition depots and established a 'rebel rule' in Paoting. The report said they looted, raped and blew up factories in that industrial city.

Court vetoes postage formulas

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Appeals Court has raised the possibility of lower first class mail rates and higher levies for other types of mail. In a 69-page unsigned opinion, the court vetoed the method used by the U.S. Postal Rate Commission for setting the 1977 rate for first class mail that was in effect from March, 1974, through December, 1975. A footnote mentioned that the method used to calculate the current 13 cent rate was "significantly similar."

US medics shelve swine flu program

ATLANTA (UPI) — Federal health officials said Wednesday the massive $135 million national swine flu immunization program will not be resumed because "significant evidence" links it with a rare form of paralysis. While officials would not flatly say the program was dead, it appeared lifeless. Begun in October, the vaccination program reached only about 41 million persons before it was suspended two weeks ago. Wednesday, Dr. David Sencer, director of the Center for Disease Control, announced the 13-member Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices agreed there was "significant evidence of association between influenza vaccinations and the Guillain-Barre syndrome."

Smoking foes losing battle

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Despite doctor's warnings and "I Quit" campaigns, Americans today smoke more cigarettes than ever before. The Agriculture department, in its latest report on the tobacco industry, said higher consumer incomes and gains in adult population account for the fact that Americans smoked 629 billion cigarettes in 1976 — almost 13 billion more than 1975 and 84 billion more than 1970. The trend shows no sign of slowing. "With further gains expected next year in population and consumer spending, cigarette consumption and output may rise further," the department said. But it said the trend "toward low-tar, low-nicotine cigarettes is expected to continue." The increase in cigarette consumption is not limited to the United States — it's worldwide. — The report estimated that over 3.5 trillion cigarettes were smoked world-wide in 1975 — a slight increase over the previous year and a gain of almost one trillion over the 1969-1964 yearly average.

came to light. Sencer said "There would have to be a substantial amount of influenza causing the country to justify resumption of the immunization program." One consultant to the committee, Dr. John Fox, an epidemiologist at the University of Washington, told the group "It's quite conceivable that we are looking at an effect of all immunological procedures." CDC officials were preparing a newly much more detailed questionnaire to circulate to physicians and health departments around the country, seeking all possible information on cases of Guillain-Barre syndrome. One of the questions to be asked is whether the victim received any other inoculations and if so when. The committee did agree to let private physicians continue to vaccinate their patients against various forms of flu, providing the patient signed an informed consent paper. "We do not think that very many physicians will want to do this," Sencer said. Virtually no influenza of any type has been reported thus far in the winter. Sencer said, which is very unusual. "We hope it will stay that way," he added. CDC figures announced at the meeting showed that of the more than 41 million vaccinated in the program, 109 died — some of heart attacks within moments of getting the shot. There were also 1,600 cases of non-fatal reactions to the vaccination. At least 196 cases of Guillain-Barre syndrome — a condition which has heretofore not been statistically recorded — have been reported since the Oct. 1 start of the vaccination program. There was a "significantly higher" rate of the paralysis among those vaccinated against flu compared to those not vaccinated.

Idaho water board approves new plan

By BILL LAZARUS

TWIN FALLS — A minimum of 850,000 acres of new farmland would be developed in the Snake River Basin by the year 2020 under the State Water Plan adopted by the Idaho Water Resources Board Wednesday. Unlike a draft plan proposed by the board last spring, the final plan does not call for a maximum number of acres to be developed in the Snake River Basin over the next 43 years. But, according to Keith Higginson, director of the Idaho Department of Water Resources, the new plan has set lower goals of the amount of farmland which can be developed in the basin. Under the draft proposal last spring, a maximum of 1.2 million acres of farmland was to be developed by 2020 in the Snake River Basin. Higginson said this maximum would have been the goal. This development would have allowed an average low flow of 3,200 cubic feet per second at the Murphy check station on the Snake southwest of Boise. Under the final plan, the Murphy average flow again would average at least 3,300 cubic feet per second and another low flow would be set for the Water check station. Higginson said the average low standard was set to insure that there will be enough water for major power plants in Hells Canyon during the late summer, when water is most short and when Idaho's energy needs are the greatest due to irrigation demands. But setting these minimum flows will limit agricultural development. Higginson said the board first thought 1.2 million acres of new land could be developed with the 3,300 average cfs low flow standard at Murphy. But this draft plan proposed for development would have required substantial groundwater pumping in eastern Idaho. The board, he said, had encountered much opposition in eastern Idaho to extensive groundwater pumping and so lowered its sights as to the total number of acres to be developed.

Nature, Higginson maintained, has already limited the farmland that can be developed. He said the Water Resources Department now has on hand applications which would require 13,000 cubic second feet of Snake River water for development of "more than double what the river flows in the summer months." The 146-page water plan will serve as a guide for irrigation and other water developments in Idaho. 19 of its 35 proposals will require legislative approval. According to Warren Reynolds, chief planner for the Department of Water Resources, some major legislative proposals would: — Authorize the establishment of "instream" or minimum stream flows for fish, wildlife and recreation purposes. He said currently there is "no basis" for setting aside water for these purposes. — Require recording of water rights by June 30, 1982. Reynolds said it is estimated as many as 200,000 such rights are unrecorded. — Establish a State Natural and Recreational River System. The plan suggests that the Brunson and Owyhee Rivers among others be considered for inclusion in this system. — Establish a protection program for reservoir sites. — Call for preparation of a state energy plan. (Continued on p. 13)

Job funds eyed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House Democratic leaders today proposed giving state and local governments throughout the country at least $2 billion more for public works projects to create jobs. Rep. Jim Wright of Texas, the new House Democratic leader, said legislation for this purpose will be introduced when the new Congress convenes Tuesday and he hopes it will pass within a few months.

Earth's trend to warmer climate, scientist says

By BILL LAZARUS

TWIN FALLS — The earth's climate should become warmer, not cooler, over the next few decades, according to Dr. William W. Kellogg, senior scientist at the National Center for Atmospheric Research in Boulder, Colo. He termed a Central Intelligence Agency commissioned study that predicted the earth is moving towards another ice age "very premature." The CIA study, Kellogg said, based its conclusions on the assumption that a sharp cooling trend between 1945 and 1955 would continue. This assumption, Kellogg maintained, is "ridiculous." In fact, he said, the trend over the past decade has been towards warmer climate, although global temperatures still have not reached the high of 1945 which was "the warmest period for several centuries."

Spin slows

BOULDER, Colo. (UPI) — The earth is spinning one second slower this year, and the National Bureau of Standards said it will have to make a correction on its atomic clocks on New Year's Eve. To compensate for the slowdown, the bureau will insert an extra second Friday to keep its atomic clocks up to date. "The earth is slowing down enough that the extra second is needed to keep the atomic clocks synchronized to the spin of the earth within one second," a bureau spokesman said.

Kellogg predicts a warming trend because man's increased burning of fossil fuels releases carbon dioxide into the atmosphere, he said in an interview Tuesday. Unless unexpected major "natural changes" in the climate occur over the next few decades, Kellogg said, the weather should warm due to increased carbon dioxide in the atmosphere. Carbon dioxide, he said, absorbs infrared radiation emitted from the earth. This absorption of the radiation, which otherwise would have escaped the atmosphere, should result in warmer temperatures, he maintained. If man continues to burn fossil fuels, such as oil and coal, at increasing rates, global temperatures are likely to be one degree centigrade warmer (about two degrees Fahrenheit) by the year 2000. By 2050, Kellogg said, the temperatures should stand at two to three degrees centigrade warmer. (Continued on p. 2)

Ban extended; Gem wool growers frown

By KEN HODGE
Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — A recent ruling by President Ford to continue a ban on the use of chemicals to control coyotes will have an adverse effect on Idaho's already dwindling sheep industry, according to Idaho wool growers. "It is going to continue to go downhill," John Faulkner, president of the Idaho Wool Growers Association, said about the sheep industry. "We lost our best tool for coyote control when we lost 1000 (a chemical effective in coyote control)." "It is a bad thing for the industry," Twin Falls sheepman Laird Noh said about Ford's ruling which will keep in effect a 1972 executive order by Richard Nixon banning the use of nearly all chemicals to control coyotes. Noh said, "I think it is safe to say if the predator control program in question is not strengthened out in the next six to eight months the entire professional coyote management program will collapse." He added the collapse of the program, now administered by the Idaho Fish and Wildlife Service, would probably cause more harm to the environment and to the coyote population than the simple use of chemicals for coyote control. "It'll just be every rancher out to protect his livestock in whatever way he can," Noh said. "It would be a mess." The present program, "professionally managed and operated by trained and qualified personnel" is the best way to control the use of toxic poisons, Noh said. Noh blamed the current assistant secretary of the Interior, Nathaniel Reed, for "trying very hard before he leaves office to demolish the entire federal livestock protection program." Warren Ahlstrom, of the Fish and Wildlife Service, said the 18 men in his program respond to calls from ranchers who are losing sheep to coyotes. Their main tools for coyote control since the ban on chemicals came into effect has been trapping and aerial hunting. Ahlstrom said, "Wherever the sheep are is the primary trouble spot." Ahlstrom explained, "Aerial hunting is most effective when you can use it." Ahlstrom said there is definitely a large loss every year due to coyotes. Idaho sheepmen agree coyotes are the biggest contributing factor to a continued decline in the state's sheep industry. "It has been a gradual downtrend since about 1951," Noh said about the sheep industry. "It accelerated down sharply in the last four years." "That is due to our problems in controlling coyotes," Noh continued. "Coyotes are that big a menace." And, according to Faulkner, the chemical 1080 was the most effective weapon sheepmen had for protecting their herds. "It (1080) was the best," Faulkner said about the chemical. "We haven't used strychnine for years. 1080 was the easiest and safest to use." "We don't want to kill coyotes all over," Faulkner said. "We just want to control them where there is livestock." According to Faulkner over 50,000 sheep are lost each year to coyotes in Idaho. (Continued on p. 2)

Nuke lab fire injures worker

RICHLAND, Wash. (UPI) — A Battelle-Northwest laboratory technician was injured by a small flash fire Wednesday.

The 1:30 p.m. fire occurred in the Battelle Northwest Laboratories machine shop.

The cause was listed as a spark from a nearby grinder which ignited the highly volatile uranium residue around the grinder of the machinist.

The residue ignited in a flash of flames and radioactive matter from the blast struck the machinist in the forehead and head. Officials described the man's injuries as "superficial wounds to the forehead and scalp."

Two men were in the room at the time of the accident.

The flash explosion and fire was the second involving radioactive materials on the giant 100 square mile nuclear reservation near this central Washington city in the past four months. The one in August was much more serious.

Battelle officials emphasized the fire Wednesday involved depleted uranium which is "extremely low level" in radiation. "Much lower, for example than uranium found in its natural state," according to Battelle spokesman Larry Rader.

The fire was confined to the immediate area of the flash. Rader said the man's name was being withheld.

The second man changed clothes as a precautionary move and a fireman who touched the grinder area and got some radioactive matter on his clothes also underwent a change. Both were then sent home after being scanned and showing no further contamination, according to Rader.

The building, known as the materials development section of Battelle Northwest, houses the technicians who bend metal and build things for other divisions of the giant research complex. Forty workers are employed there.

Technicians in the machine shop also investigate physical properties of various metals for research with the use of such advanced equipment as electron beam welders, vacuum chambers and draw presses.

Evans advisers meet on Jan. 9

BOISE (UPI) — Lt. Gov. John Evans' advisory panel named to help him select his successor when he becomes governor next month will meet Jan. 9 to recommend three or four candidates after an "in-depth investigation" of the 13 persons they narrowed the field to Wednesday.

Committee chairman John S. Chapman, Boise, said Wednesday the committee spent most of the day developing criteria for the appointment including knowledge of the total state with an understanding of regional interests, an ability to communicate and work in harmony with the governor, good physical and mental health that would enable the person to conduct a campaign.

"The committee considered every area of the state and all walks of life of people who would be qualified then we limited these people to approximately 13 names," Chapman said.

"We felt very strongly that no region of the state should be excluded from consideration," he said.

Chapman said the committee considered some 30 or 40 names before narrowing the field to thirteen.

He would not name the candidates chosen but said, "after an in-depth investigation of these individuals the committee will come up with approximately four or five names to submit to the governor."

The investigation will involve talking to each person personally and individuals who know them to find out in more depth their qualifications," he said.

Chapman described the nine-member committee as "friends of the governor — a private group of people which is merely an advisory committee."

He said there are four women on the committee and the members "represent all regions of the state."

He was elected Wednesday to replace M. Karl Shurloff, who is resigning Friday. Matthew Mulaney, a special assistant to Gov. Cecil D. Andrus, will replace Shurloff, who is reported may be appointed U.S. Attorney for Idaho.

Recall move opposed

CALDWELL, Idaho (UPI) —

A total of 127 Canyon County employees have signed a petition opposing a drive to employes said their signatures on the petition was their way of saying "we do not wish to see tax money wasted for a recall election."

"We do not feel you, the taxpayer, should spend the enormous amount of $12,000 to $15,000 having an unnecessary election," the petition said. "We feel Mr. Earl Giles is doing his duty," and "we also feel he is acting in a proper manner, and has a perfect right to have an opinion."

A recall petition was filed against Giles after he dismissed

Charles L. Gray, the county road and bridge and solid waste supervisor.

The petition against Giles charged him with using his office to satisfy a personal vendetta. The document was signed by Caldwell Mayor Robert E. Pasley, Caldwell City Councilman Pete Olesen, Caldwell City Engineer Melk Lewis, Caldwell School District Supt. Darrell Deide and Assistant Supt. Robert Reynoldson.

Sunshine charges filed

BOISE (UPI) — Ten Idaho candidates, including Speaker of the House Allan Larsen, have been charged with violations of the Sunshine campaign reporting law.

Asst. Atty. Gen. David High said civil charges against a total of 17 people, including seven political treasurers, were filed Tuesday in Ada County Magistrate's Court.

The candidates were: Warren Leigh, Coeur d'Alene, Dist. 2; John Walker, Idaho City, Dist. 9; Sen. Larry Craig, Midvale, Dist. 10; Rep. George Danielson, Cambridge, Dist. 10; George Gillis, Boise, Dist. 14; Bill Orweiler, Boise, Dist. 16; Marden Wells, Idaho Falls, Dist. 20; Allan Larsen, Blackfoot, Dist. 17; Kent Remington, St. Anthony, Dist. 28; and Evron Staker, Idaho Falls, Dist. 29.

High said the action was "essentially a civil suit for collection of a penalty." He said the charges stem from financial reports due Dec. 2 and filed late by the 10 candidates.

High said the attorney general's office is asking for $250 fines from each of the defendants.

Strike restraint ordered

POCATELLO (UPI) — Attorneys representing both parties in the J.R. Simplot strike have agreed to a restraining order stipulating that members of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union refrain from using violence or intimidation while participating in picket lines at the entrance to the Pocatello plant.

Sixth District Judge Arthur Oliver was expected to sign the temporary restraining order Wednesday afternoon.

The order stipulated the workers be restrained from violent behavior for six months or until the end of the strike.

Simplot management has accused workers of being unruly during "shows of force" while on the picket line during shift changes.

The court order said the workers can post no more than five pickets at the Simplot entrance, replacing picketers within an hour of the regular shift changes.

The workers were ordered not to obstruct traffic to and from the plant and to refrain from violence or intimidation against Simplot property and employees.

Strikers may not trespass on plant property or possess or consume any intoxicating beverage or drug while on picket duty, the order said.

Attorneys on both sides agreed to the restraining order. Simplot management had no comment but a union spokesman said he doubted the striking workers would object.

Something still wrong with stamps

Idahoans can't complain about abuse of the federal food stamp program. Statistics released this week show 95 out of every 100 recipients of food stamps in Idaho legitimately qualify for the aid. Still, food stamps aren't likely to become any more popular with the general public. Taxpayers don't like the food stamp program. Many see it as a government excess, a bad example of tax money being spent where it shouldn't be spent. Partly as a result of this public animosity toward food stamps, Idaho's Department of Health and Welfare (HAW) religiously keeps tabs on offenders. Besides requiring proof of income and expenses, HAW officials usually check with an employer when a food stamp applicant claims he has been fired from a job. As a result of the state's diligence, Idaho has the lowest percentage of food stamp fraud in the nation. The food stamp program clearly is being administered well in Idaho. But a well-run food stamp program doesn't diminish the glaring faults in the program which will continue to irritate the public. Initially, the Agriculture Department began the food commodities and food stamp programs to supplement the diets of low income families. The program wasn't a welfare scheme but rather intended to give good food to needy families. Originally the Agriculture Department actually gave fruits, meat, vegetables and dairy products to the needy. This commodities program accomplished its goal — getting good food on the table of needy families. But today's food stamp program, an outgrowth of the commodities program, doesn't always satisfy the intent established by the Agriculture Department's food distribution program. Under the current food stamp regulations, users of the stamps may buy candy, gum, popcorn, soft drinks, TV dinners, potato chips and a hundred other junk food items. Critics of the food stamp program legitimately ask how such a program significantly improves the diet of needy individuals. Many users of the stamps probably buy a balanced variety of foods. But the potential abuse of the food stamp program remains. Administering food stamps is a headache which also detracts from the effectiveness of the nationwide program. Over $400 million were spent this year alone to administer stamps. Hundreds of grocers were contacted, dozens of forms were required to check on the program and additional federal and state employees are added each year to keep the food stamp machinery operating. Idahoans certainly can't criticize HAW officials for not keeping a tight rein on the food stamp program. Few people chisel money out of this state's food stamp program. But the larger question which plagues the entire food stamp program remains unanswered in Idaho and around the nation. Does this $5.3 billion food program accomplish what it was originally intended to do, namely get good food on the tables of needy families? Congress perhaps should modify the food stamp regulations to require stores to sell only nutritional food to stamp users. The stamps could be issued with the restriction that certain ones be used only for vegetables, meats or dairy products. Or, Congress should consider returning to a commodity-based food distribution system which was much more popular with taxpayers. Care of the needy is a legitimate concern of state and federal government. But a poorly conceived program such as the current food stamp mess may only assure another bag of potato chips goes home with a low income family and not significantly improve the diets of those with little money for food.

Carter's choice for AG not unique

David E. Rosenbaum, who joined The New York Times in 1968, is congressional correspondent for The Times in Washington. BY DAVID E. ROSENBAUM

WASHINGTON — By selecting a personal friend and confidant to be attorney general, President-elect Jimmy Carter followed the practice of almost all recent Presidents. President John F. Kennedy chose John W. Mitchell, his law partner and campaign director, to be his first attorney general. President Kennedy picked his brother, Robert. President Eisenhower chose his top political strategist, Herbert Brownell. Thus, to those who have served in the job themselves and to scholars who have studied the role of the attorney general, Carter's selection of a person like Griffin B. Bell, whom he has known since boyhood, came as little surprise. An attorney general, they say, has no more discretionary authority — to prosecute or not to prosecute, to file antitrust suits or to avoid litigation, to press enforcement of civil rights laws or to try for voluntary conciliations — than a President must have someone in the position whose judgment he trusts completely. A member of the Carter transition team who spent some time last fall interviewing experts about the ideal characteristics of an attorney general found that they were unanimous in their view that the primary qualification was the total confidence of the President. In the election campaign, Carter made two promises about his choice of attorney general. He promised to pick the best qualified person and to choose someone "without regard to political considerations." If what the experts say about the primary qualification is correct, then he could hardly have chosen anyone but Bell. He is the one lawyer whom Carter knows well enough to trust implicitly and who, at the same time, has had no role in his political career.

Nicholas deB. Katzenbach, who was attorney general under President Johnson, said in an interview that a President needed a personal relationship with his attorney general more than he did with any other Cabinet officer. Katzenbach gave three reasons why he felt that was the case. First, he said, it was inappropriate ethically and politically for a President to become involved in individual lawsuits or prosecutions. The President must be confident about the decisions his attorney general makes on such matters. Second, Katzenbach said, there are legal disputes almost daily among various departments and agencies, and one person, the Attorney General, must be the arbiter. Finally, he said, the President must know that he is getting good legal advice, even if it is not the advice he desires. President Johnson inherited Robert F. Kennedy as his attorney general, and their relationship was never comfortable. When Kennedy resigned to run for the Senate, Johnson named Katzenbach as acting attorney general and left him in that limbo for five months before he decided to send his nomination to the Senate for confirmation. Those five months, Katzenbach said, were a probation period, designed to give the President time to learn whether he could trust him completely and to find out where his loyalties lay. The ability of the attorney general to create political problems for the President and alleviate others is probably greater than that of any other Cabinet officer. Katzenbach gave two examples from his years as attorney general in which his judgment was crucial to the President. The first was his decision to prosecute Robert G. Baker, Johnson's successor, who had become involved in a political scandal. The second was his determination, after passage of the Voting Rights Act of 1965, to reduce the number of voting examiners in the South and to try to persuade Southern communities to end discrimination voluntarily.

...AND FOR ATTORNEY GENERAL...!

In the end, both decisions appear to have worked in Johnson's favor politically, but at the time they were made, Katzenbach said, there was a good deal of political tension. Actions of President Nixon's attorneys general were important factors in discrediting the Nixon presidency. First, Mitchell was accused of taking part in the Watergate cover-up. Then, his successor, Richard G. Kleindienst, was accused of settling an antitrust suit against the International Telephone and Telegraph Corp. for partisan reasons. Finally, Elliot L. Richardson caused a storm of protest when he resigned rather than follow the President's order to dismiss Archibald Cox as special prosecutor. After the Nixon experience, President Ford felt compelled to name an attorney general with whom he had no prior connections. Edward H. Levi, by his actions, performed creditably in the job, and Ford is said to have grown to trust his judgment. The Levi appointment has been cited by a number of legal experts as the foremost example for the view that the attorney general, in fact, should not be a crony of the President but an independent person of established integrity. In an interview Sunday on the NBC television program "Meet the Press," Levi was asked whether he thought Carter risked "giving an appearance of cronyism" by naming Bell. He responded: "The fact that he knows the President well, it seems to me, would be a very strange disqualification. I want to say that if he didn't know the President well when he became attorney general, he would get to know him well."

Truby deplores kids' TV addiction

By ROY TRUBY
State Superintendent of Public Instruction
It's an alarming fact — studies show that the average graduating senior has had about 11,000 hours of instruction in the classroom compared to 15,000 hours in front of the TV. Children are watching reruns, stabbings, shootings and other horrors. Just think of the reaction of parents if their children came home from school and said, "Mom, we saw five murders, two rapes and three robberies in a film at school today!" Yet the same "shocked" parents may think little of this type of violence and sex coming into their living room, family room and bedrooms week after week via the sound and picture box.

The National P.T.A. is launching a nationwide campaign against violence on television, and will hold hearings in seven cities across the country. Our region will meet in Portland on Feb. 7, and I plan to be there, along with state P.T.A. leaders. A number of studies have made clear the effects of too much television for children. Urie Bronfenbrenner, "Two Worlds of Childhood," wrote, "Children look more today to television characters than to parents, relatives, teachers and neighbors for models of adult behavior. And what kind of activities generally emerge? Much of the time it is violence." The exclusive six-year Surgeon General's report on television and violence completed in 1972 concluded that "watching violence on television can cause young people to act more aggressively." The report found, after analyzing more than 50 studies of 10,000 children between the ages of three and 19, that "the more violence and aggression a youngster sees on television, regardless of his age, sex or social background, the more aggressive he is likely to be in his own attitudes and behavior." One study by Dr. Robert Liebert concluded that "it was not a boy's home life nor his family background, but the amount of TV violence he viewed at age nine which was the single most important determinant of how aggressive he was 10 years later, at age 19." We must face the fact that TV has taken over as entertainer, babysitter and pacifier. Some preschool youngsters spend 64% of their waking hours in front of a television set, according to one recent study. What they see and hear is full of adult language, from programs to commercials. They are becoming observers rather than doers, listeners rather than makers or movers. And we are making little progress in improving programming for youth. There is even what we might call a "theory of television" developing as a prevailing influence on American society. The ads constantly tell us to seek greater pleasure through more consumption. One beer ad, for example, says, "You only go around once in life, so you have to grab all the gusto you can get."

The new Big Byrd in Washington

London Economist News Service
WASHINGTON — (LENS) — If it were national recognition that counted, then Hubert Humphrey or Edmund Muskie would surely be elected majority leader by the Democrats in the Senate when they convene in caucus early in January. If personal charm and a winning personality were the keys, then the job would probably go to Ernest Hollings of South Carolina. But national elections are one thing, the contests that take place in the closed, clubby atmosphere of the United States Senate are another. Indeed, it even seems to matter little whether a senator aspiring to be majority leader has long been in the mainstream of the Democratic party. So it is that Muskie and Hollings, each disappointed by the soundings of support they made, have withdrawn from the competition in favor of Humphrey; and so it is that Humphrey, desperate though he may be for a last hurrah after three unsuccessful attempts at the presidency and a new battle with cancer, is expected to lose. The favorite is a man virtually unknown to the general public. His personality is, if anything, caustic and abrasive. He has few close friends and many enemies. He is not sociable and boasts eagerly that in 23 years in Washington he has been to only one football game, three baseball games and one movie. His favorite pastime is to play the fiddle. He is a snarler with his staff and not favorable with the press. During his early days in West Virginia politics he was briefly a member of the Ku Klux Klan, and it took him years to come around to the liberal Democratic positions on civil rights, open housing and abuses of the intelligence agencies. He was once considered for a Supreme Court nomination by President Nixon. Yet at the last private count Robert Byrd appeared to have a firm hold on 30 of the 62 votes in the Democratic caucus (counting his namesake Harry Byrd of Virginia, who is officially elected as an Independent). Byrd came to public notice in Jan., 1971, when he won a surprise victory over Sen. Edward Kennedy, replacing him as the Democratic whip. For four years before that, Byrd had served as secretary of the Senate Democratic Conference, a position without apparent significance but an excellent way to learn the ropes. After beating Kennedy, the West Virginian became an indispensable support to Mike Mansfield, the majority leader. While the professional Mansfield brooded over policy and philosophy, Byrd ran the show, learning the intricacies of the Senate. Most of all, he did favors for his colleagues — both legislative favors and personal favors. When approached properly, Byrd lent his considerable skills to any cause of a friend, whether it was to stop a filibuster, move a bill ahead of its place on the Senate calendar, or prevent a measure from coming to a vote during the absence of one of its sponsors. Whatever the motives of the methods (and sometimes they were clumsy) Byrd's tactics have been successful. His own Senate seat is perfectly safe — he was re-elected without opposition in November, despite the fact that he no longer even maintains a home in West Virginia and rarely spends a night in the state. Some people laughed at his favor-son candidacy for the Democratic presidential nomination in the West Virginia primary election, but that made it the only primary in which Jimmy Carter did not run. Byrd kept his state's convention delegates loyal and then delivered them to Carter. All of this meant that when Mansfield announced his retirement at the end of his year, Byrd was in a perfect position to cash in his chips. Although many liberals wanted somebody less conservative, they have failed to unite behind a single strong rival. Erosion set in, in the liberal camp: senators such as Claiborne Pell of Rhode Island, Adlai Stevenson of Illinois and Floyd Haskell of Colorado, such as his own reason, decided to support for Byrd. Humphrey, backed now by Kennedy, claimed an advantage from the defeat of Byrd's allies at the polls in Utah, Wyoming and New Mexico. But Byrd, claiming no interest in the figures produced by his opponents, quickly went to work on the newly elected Democratic senators from other states, offering them the favors and courtesies at his command.

Tanker skipper arrested

By United Press International
Thousands of gallons of oil sloshed about in the Delaware River today, mucking up ducks and geese, and the captain of the ship responsible for it was under arrest. Another skipper whose tanker polluted U.S. Atlantic coastal waters with a record oil spill was still trying to explain it.

Pollution crews tried to clean up a 100-gallon spill in Connecticut's Thames River. And the Coast Guard, battling to prevent an oil disaster off Puerto Rico, failed today in an attempt to refloat yet another tanker that had run aground.

And the outbreak of tanker accidents from California to Puerto Rico. Environmental Protection Agency chief Russell Train called on the government to toughen standards on foreign tankers entering American ports.

Train said Wednesday, "The United States has been reluctant to set standards, but with the vast amount of oil coming into the country, the time has come to set more stringent regulations."

Train was investigating the spill of 133,500 gallons of oil into the Delaware River south of Philadelphia Wednesday by the Liberian-registered tanker Olympic Games. Vassilios Vilasmas, the vessel's Greek national captain, was arrested

Wednesday and held under $50,000 bond.

U.S. Attorney David Marston said Vilasmas was arrested under the 1972 Water Pollution Control Act and the Refuse Act of 1988. The skipper faced criminal charges of causing the oil discharge from the tanker Monday and of failing to notify the U.S. Coast guard immediately of the spill.

Marston said the maximum penalty is a $12,000 fine and 12 years in prison.

The tanker was carrying about 17 million gallons of light Arabian crude oil when it ran aground while attempting to dock. The result was a 22-mile slick that left some ruddy ducks and Canada geese covered in oil and threatened other wildlife, marshlands and the shorelines of three states.

The Olympic Games was one of five tankers of Liberian registry to run into trouble in or near U.S. waters the last two weeks. In the latest incident, the tanker Daphne — carrying a 14 million gallon cargo — ran aground Tuesday night on the south coast of Puerto Rico.

The Coast Guard said it failed in an effort today to refloat the 31,283-ton Daphne in Guayanilla Bay. However, officials added that none of the tanker's oil had spilled.

Coast Guard officers boarded the vessel to make sure the captain did not try to dump his cargo into the Caribbean Sea.

In New York, Capt. George Papadopolous was still trying to explain Wednesday how his Liberian-registry tanker, the Argo Merchant, went aground Dec. 15 on the shoals of Massachusetts' Nantucket Island and dumped 7.6 million gallons of heavy fuel oil — the worst spill in the history of the U.S. Atlantic coast.

Papadopolous had testified the ship's pilot had a short-range navigational aid, indicated the Mantucket light ship that marked the shallow waters of the shoals was dead ahead, he later learned the light ship was behind him.

Soviet missile equals US best

LONDON (UPI) — The Soviet Union may already have a weapon to match the U.S. Navy's highly sophisticated Tomahawk cruise missile, the authoritative Jane's Weapons Systems said today.

Three Soviet missiles, about which very little is known in the West, could be "the answer to Tomahawk" and could "threaten the delicate strategic balance," the reference book's editor said.

The Tomahawk missile, capable of being launched from a submarine torpedo tube, can cruise at low levels for 2,000 nautical miles and deliver a nuclear or conventional warhead with an accuracy of a few yards.

A nuclear submarine can carry up to 20 Tomahawks and the United States eventually expects to have 90 such attack submarines, the publication said.

"It could well be that the Russians are working on a similar weapon," editor Ron Pretty said in the 1977 edition of the Jane's publication, which goes on sale Friday.

"Russia and the U.S. have been jockeying for position for the past 18 months in preparation for the next round of (Strategic Arms Limitation Talks) negotiations," Pretty said.

The Tomahawk "was thought likely to be the major bone of contention" in the new SALT talks.

"However, it could well be that the Russians are working on a similar weapon," Pretty said.

Tiger line under fire

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Flying Tiger, the airline founded by World War II hero Claire Chennault and operated by his widow, Anna, has been charged with illegally recording as operating expenses its largesse to politicians and foreign dignitaries.

The Civil Aeronautics Board's Bureau of Enforcement Wednesday asked the full CAB to hold a public hearing and order Flying Tiger to halt the alleged practices and correct its books.

Beneficiaries of the gifts from 1959 through early 1976 include a senator, a congressman, one past and one current Los Angeles mayor, a district attorney, a former Cabinet officer and the wife of South Korean President Park Chunghee, the investigators said.

The Los Angeles-based cargo airline also illegally listed $16,500 in payments to employes as operating expenses and failed to file required federal reports on a total $48,992.72 during the seven year period, they said.

More hotels struck

MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — A strike of hotel workers spread to Miami's two largest hotels, the Sheraton Four Ambassadors and the Dupont Plaza, early today following a deadlock in negotiations with owners.

It brought to eight the number of hotels in which members of Local 355, Hotel and Restaurant Workers and Bartenders Union, are on strike.

A seventh Miami Beach hotel, the Kanover (formerly Playboy Plaza), came to terms with the union after an eight-hour strike on Christmas Day.

Sunday, the maids, bellmen, waiters and waitresses, elevator operators and bartenders have been on strike at Miami's Doral Country Club hotel, and at the Carlton, Eden Roc and Beauville hotels on Miami Beach.

The union began a strike on Monday at the 1,235-room Fontainebleau, largest of the Miami Beach resorts, but it was halted by court order Wednesday.

A seventh Miami Beach hotel, the Kanover (formerly Playboy Plaza), came to terms with the union after an eight-hour strike on Christmas Day.

Full disclosure due in January

PLAIN, GA. (UPI) — President-elect Jimmy Carter and each member of his Cabinet will disclose full details of their net worth and arrangements for divesting their financial holdings before inauguration Day, according to Carter aide.

Press Secretary Jody Powell said Wednesday the Code of Ethics, setting forth guidelines for financial disclosure, will be made public Friday.

Carter revealed that each member of his newly formed Cabinet agreed to the terms of the code and will disclose his financial status in advance of taking office.

The president-elect, meantime, was making final decisions on his White House staff and members of the subcommittee, including undersecretaries and assistant secretaries. Carter has impressed on Cabinet officials his desire to have more blacks and women in the subcommittee level.

But there was no indication that he would set that example. Transition aides said most of Carter's inner circle campaign staff — mostly white men — will be his key operatives in the White House.

Carter so far has designated only Powell as press secretary, but he also has described campaign treasurer Robert Lipschutz as his White House counsel.

Others expected to be part of the White House staff — with direct access to Carter — were Hamilton Jordan, his campaign manager who will have a position involving political contacts; Jack Watson as Cabinet secretary; Gregory Schneiders as appointments secretary; Stuart Eizenstat in the policy area; and Frank Moore as chief of congressional liaison.

Carter returned to Plains Wednesday afternoon after three days of meetings on St. Simons Island in what he called an "unprecedented" gathering of his official family.

The president-elect also was putting the finishing touches on his economic package which he said will include a "mix" of a tax cut and a program for creating jobs in both the private and public sectors.

He is summoning his economic advisers to Plains next week, and invited Congressional leaders to join him afterward for a preview of the economic program which he hopes will win popular support before it goes to Congress.

In other developments, Carter insisted that he will carry out his campaign commitments, saying "you can depend on that."

Demo rift develops

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In the first public, non-ratified rift since the Nov. 2 election, Sen. George McGovern says Jimmy Carter's new cabinet could have been put together, for the most part, by Richard Nixon.

He said the Cabinet represents no real break with the past and signals "business as usual."

McGovern, the 1972 Democratic presidential candidate and a leader of the party's liberal wing, was asked in a CBS radio interview whether that was good or bad.

"Well, maybe it's inevitable," McGovern said, "It's been going on for a long period of time. Members of the cabinet, whether in Democratic or Republican administrations, have been selected, pretty much, from the same group of individuals."

Guard set

NEW YORK — Early in 1977, Britain's Royal Navy will deploy five small warships as the first step toward military protection of the North Sea oil and gas fields.

By early in the 1980s these fields will include 80 to 100 platforms and 6,000 miles of pipeline and will be producing one-third of the oil requirements of the European members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Crutch used to foil holdup

NEW YORK (UPI) — A one-legged watchman used his crutch to foil a holdup and then shot the two would-be robbers with their own weapon.

Police said the watchman, 56-year-old Harold Peterson of New York, was confronted Wednesday night by two men at the Brooklyn used car lot where he works.

When the pair demanded money, Peterson, who has only one leg, swung his crutch at the startled gunman and knocked the weapon from his hand.

Redd Foxx to marry

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Canadian Redd Foxx, 54, founder of the "Sanford and Son" television series, took out a license Wednesday to marry Yun Chi Chung, 34, a native of Korea.

The marriage plans were not announced. It would be the third marriage for Foxx and the second for the bride, both residents of Las Angeles.

People encouraged to shiver

CHICAGO (UPI) — As if anyone could help it when the mercury dips below zero, the city's health commissioner is encouraging people to shiver.

As Arctic air settled over the city and turned people into walking ice cubes, City Health Commissioner Dr. Murray Brown explained Wednesday that "shivering is your body's way of releasing heat to your muscles."

Brown said feet are particularly vulnerable to the cold, so pacing, rocking back and forth on the heels and wiggling the toes are all good winter exercises.

Miss Lillian recuperating

AMERICUS, GA. (UPI) — "Miss Lillian" Carter remains in satisfactory condition at Americus-Sumner County Hospital, where she is recuperating from a leg ailment.

The president-elect's mother was admitted to the hospital a week ago when she suffered a muscular spasm in her left leg. She is undergoing physiotherapy and is not expected to go home until Monday.

Japanese to visit shrines

TOKYO (UPI) — More than half of the Japanese population will visit shrines or Buddhist temples during the three-day New Year's holidays, police said Thursday.

Police said 66 million persons will turn out to pray for a good new year, compared to 64.84 million this year. Kawasaki Telsih Shrine in nearby Kanagawa province tops the police's list of estimated visitors with 3.7 million persons.

Boyle 'not pampered'

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Ailing former United Mine Workers president W. A. "Tony" Boyle, convicted of ordering the 1969 Yablonski murders, said he is not pampered at Western Penitentiary nor is he addicted to any drug.

Boyle, 75, who receives about six daily injections of a synthetic morphine, said in an interview with the Pittsburgh Press, "I do here what the doctors tell me. I could stop it overnight, if they find something else for the pain."

Spokane suspended

SPOKANE, Wash. (UPI) — The former police chief of Deer Park in eastern Washington won't spend time in jail after all. William Hopper had been sentenced to 30 days in jail as a condition of one year's probation after he admitted stealing a chainsaw while on duty.

But in an appearance in Spokane County Superior Court, Hopper's request for a suspended sentence was granted after Judge Willard Roe was told Hopper had secured a job in the lumber industry and would lose it if forced to go to jail.

Hopper was to begin his sentence next week.

'77 party greetings 'in' thing

By United Press International
In Portland, Ore., Basil Maullis, general manager of the Benson Hotel, says "There's a good spirit in the air," and coast to coast, party greetings to the 1977 New Year seem the "in" thing this year.

At a price, naturally. Across a continent, Viki Sammers at the Miami Ambassador Hotel in Miami said she was expecting "a much larger crowd than last year. For some reason, it seems people really want to celebrate this year."

A UPI survey Wednesday showed a broad range of prices for the celebrant away from home, aimed at any size pocketbook, including the empty.

New York City, broke, came up with enough scratch to set up a parade from the mall before the storied Plaza Hotel, across the road into Central Park for music, dance and mingling, all under the sponsorship of the Department of Cultural Affairs. The big bash gets a fireworks show at midnight.

Further south in Manhattan, a giant lighted ball spelling 1977 drops to the roof of Times Square at midnight; for decades, New Yorkers have watched in Times Square for the big ball to drop, free for the watching.

To the east of that, other traditions may pay up to $125 a seat to hear Guy Lombardo and the Royal Canadian All Stars in Waldorf Astoria; or they may drop in with the jet-setters at the silver-walled Regency, Park Avenue discotheque with its $150 per head minimum.

The Diplomat Hotel in Hollywood, Fla., features Sammy Davis Jr. and Liza Minelli in what is billed as "the most expensive nightclub show in history," and started proclaiming it at $250 a head. They weren't swapped, and prices later were advertised "from $100 per person," depending on the location.

On Lady Caller, told the story of a party of five was "two bottles" sent a check for $125. It was returned. The Fontainebleau in Miami Beach, where union service employees were on strike, advertised Sergio Mendez and Nell Sedaka in its grand ballroom from $75 to $125 per person.

Victor's, perched in the Hotel St. Francis tower in downtown San Francisco, offered a gourmet dinner for $140 per couple, with a 70-couple limit and the final course a chilled bottle of Dom Perignon, brut, 1969. Not far away, Earthquake McGoon's charges $15 to get into the club, run by veteran jazz trombonist Turk Murphy, and from then on you pay for what you eat or drink.

George Gilbert, food and beverage director at the Springfield, Mass., Holiday Inn said reservations Wednesday numbered more than twice those at this time last year for dinner, entertainment, champagne for $35.95 a couple plus $9 per guest for a room if they stay overnight.

The stay-in idea seems to have established itself, Gilbert said. "People feel they can really have a good time with their friends. They can imbibe a little more and not be concerned about getting in an accident on the way home."

Cheryl Chusson, of the Fairmont-Roosevelt Hotel in New Orleans said its package is $45 per person for a gourmet dinner, special performances by a music group, and "it's pretty close to a sell-out now."

New Orleans police were keeping their eye on preparations; they have been running television ads depicting officers handcuffing and jailing respectable looking men and women for drunken driving.

Maybe manager Margie Price at the St. Louis Playboy Club had the best idea for attracting a party, at least for the male chauvinist types. "We'll be sold out," she said. "We always have repeat business on New Year's Eve because the bunnies get very much involved...it's a fun time."

Inmates abandon hunger strike

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Most American, Latin and Canadian inmates of Mexican prisons tearfully abandoned their hunger strike Thursday, sought to force the government into passing a parole bill.

A spokeswoman for the prisoners said they started eating lightly Wednesday on hearing there was "no chance" the Mexican congress would enact parole legislation for drug offenders this session, which ends Friday.

"There were tears in the eyes of the fellows who were convinced the doors of freedom would open. Freedom suddenly seems very far away," said Mrs. Carolyn Johnson, of Alameda, Calif., a relative of one of the prisoners.

New York social worker Alice Levine said after visiting Santa Marta men's prison, "They realize parole is not going to be passed this year. They're bitterly disappointed."

Mrs. Johnson was one of a group of relatives of prisoners who were told Tuesday night by Augusto Gorinc Villanueva, president of the Chamber of Deputies, that there was "no chance" of the bill's passage this session.

"The bill is still in committee," she said. "They don't feel public opinion is such that they want a filibuster on it. There is concern because it involves narcotics, which is a problem among young people in this country."

Mrs. Johnson has been trying to secure the release of her brother, 42-year-old Philip Mallard, who is halfway

Riegler named
LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — Donald Riegler, an outspoken opponent of the congressional seniority system, has become Michigan's junior U.S. Senator, five days ahead of schedule, in a move calculated to give the freshman Democrat more clout on Capitol Hill.

Republican Gov. William G. Milliken on Wednesday appointed Riegler to the Senate vacancy created Sunday by the death of Philip A. Hart.

Illinois penal department sued for discrimination

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — A federal suit, authorized by Attorney General Edward Levi, today charged the Illinois Department of Corrections with discriminating against black inmates as well as permitting overcrowding and other abuses.

protection against infestation from disease carrying agents including mites, lice and rats."

The suit, filed in federal court, seeks an injunction which would force the department to remedy the alleged abuses under threat of contempt citations.

A separate suit, filed in Chicago, charged many of the same abuses prevail at the Cook County Jail. The Chicago suit omits racial discrimination as a charge.

U.S. Attorney Donald B. Mackay said the complaint charges the department with "denying black inmates the equal utilization of the facilities and programs of the Illinois corrections center system on the same basis as they are utilized by white inmates, including making housing assignments on the basis of race."

He said the federal government charges the state "maintains overcrowded living areas, fails to insure that toilets and sinks are adequate in number, operable and sanitary, fails to provide

Pacific storm system is moving southeastward along the California coast and will move into southern Nevada and Arizona over the weekend. This leaves southern Idaho with a continuation of variable high clouds and little chance of any important precipitation through the New Year's holiday weekend.

Holiday weekend travelers can expect generally good driving conditions in all directions out of Magic Valley.

From Boise westward into Oregon considerable fog is likely. Little or no precipitation should occur toward Moscow. Cold temperatures will prevail east of the Continental Divide. Travel conditions to Salt Lake will be good.

The five-day outlook is for little or no precipitation for southern Idaho. The 30-day outlook is for below normal precipitation and for near normal temperatures.

Smelly Wyoming water not bad

GILLETTE, Wyo. (UPI) — City officials say water that smells like rotten eggs because of hydrogen sulfide content is not harmful.

"Unfortunately, earlier in the year, the Department of Environmental Quality made a statement that water could be harmful to people and could kill them," Mayor Michael B. Enzi said.

"There's nothing harmful in our water and we want people to know it," he said. "The water is tested for harmful bacteria three times a week and none have shown yet."

Enzi said Tuesday engineers are working on ways to eliminate the problem. The odor problem arose because soft water wells — high in odor-causing hydrogen sulfide — were drilled after the city's water treatment plant was taken off line for upgrading, the mayor said.

The treatment plant has not been returned to use. Ac-ording to plans, the facility should have been ready for operation much sooner, Enzi said.

The plant was mainly used to treat hard water from city wells, he said. None of the original hard water wells are in use, Enzi said.

The water treatment plant will be back in service within 90 days, the mayor said, but engineers hope to have the problem controlled well before then. Chemicals can be used to alleviate the odor, Enzi said.

Water softeners generally cut the smell, Enzi said, but plastic water heater liners conduct more of the smell.

"This problem is very common with ground water supplies and some formations have more of it than others," Enzi said.

Kissinger retains agent

By HERBERT MITGANG ©1976 N.Y. Times Service
NEW YORK — To enhance the value of his memoirs in the American and international marketplace, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger has retained a powerful literary agent to represent him.

The agent is Marvin Josephson, president of International Creative Management, which has four offices in the United States and three in Europe. Josephson is chairman of the ICM parent company, Marvin Josephson Associates, Inc., stock in which is traded over the counter in New York.

ICM's clients include Barbara Streisand, Steve McQueen, Isaac Stern, Peter Benchley, Arthur Miller, Tennessee Williams, Harry Reasoner and Sir Laurence Olivier.

Kissinger, who is in Acapulco, Mexico, will not make any decisions until after he leaves office Jan. 20 on which American publisher will acquire his memoirs, according to Josephson and a State Department spokesman. At least a dozen American publishers have submitted offers.

In a departure from common procedure, Josephson is expected to negotiate all foreign publishing rights on behalf of Kissinger, country by country.

Figures mentioned in the American publishing marketplace range from $2 million to $3 million for the memoirs. Because of the great interest in Kissinger in Europe, book and magazine serial rights could add $2 million more. One foreign publisher's representative in New York said that $800,000 to $1 million would be sought in West Germany alone.

"We've all got some razzle-dazzle attached to our offers," said one major American publisher. "It isn't just the top figure that will take the prize, but the extras."

According to publishing informants, the "extras" being sought include a lifetime consultancy as an editor, magazine and newspaper columns, television advertisements or appearances, unlimited staff, chauffeured limousines and other things.

Two weeks ago some publishers were informed that the first book Kissinger wanted to write would be "Conversations With Mao." In the last few days other publishers were given to understand that the bidding would be for one big book.

Covering his tenure as White House security adviser and secretary of state.

This work would be 150,000 to 200,000 words, have a list price of around $15 and be completed in two years for publication in early 1979.

BICENTENNIAL FACTS

The Minutemen of Massachusetts were not a new idea. For more than a hundred years, the concept of having well-equipped, mobile forces ready for quick response had been a basic part of New England's military system. The term itself appeared in the 1750s, at the beginning of the French and Indian War. By the opening months of 1775, some 15,000 Minutemen obeyed the Provincial Congress's call to drill three times a week. The World Almanac reports.

Castle, grounds for sale

CATANIA, Sicily (UPI) — A ducal castle and 593 acres of grounds given to British Admiral Horatio Nelson in appreciation for his defeat of Napoleon's French fleet has been put up for sale by a Neapolitan.

Ferdinand, the Bourbon king of the Two Sicilies, gave Bronte Castle and its grounds to Nelson in 1799 after the British admiral's fleet defeated Napoleon's Mediterranean flotilla near Sicily.

The castle and grounds are now the property of Nelson's last heir, Alexander Nelson Hood, who carries the title of viscount and is an official of a Rome bank.

In putting the castle and grounds up for sale, an administrator for Hood said the price was negotiable.

"More than anything, it's a question of a test," said administrator Frank King. "The viscount wants to see if there are interested parties."

The castle, which has 25 rooms and a church dating from the 12th Century, adjoining it, sits on a 2,296 foot hill near the Mount Etna volcano about 31 miles from Catania. It commands a sweeping view of the volcano and the Mediterranean.

The grounds, which include several farm buildings, are planted with olive, nut and fruit trees. There also is a swimming pool and several tennis courts.

When Nelson died in 1805 at the battle of Trafalgar, the castle passed to his brother because the admiral left no legitimate heirs. The brother in turn willed it to his daughter Carlotta who married the viscount of Bridport from Dorset in England.

Hood, the present owner, is 28 and the only living descendant of the viscount and still carries the title.

In recent years, Hood has reportedly spent about half of his time attending to his banking job in Rome and about the other half at Bronte Castle, which has been equipped with modern plumbing and heating.

NEW president of the Twin Falls Rotary Club is Jack Smith. He will assume his duties in July. Newly elected first vice-president is Bob Seibel and Leon Smith is second vice president. New board members include Stan Rose, Tom Moore, Terry Smith and Ken Mann, outgoing president of the club.

Carter says women will receive chance

ST. SIMONS ISLAND, Ga. (UPI) — President-elect Jimmy Carter predicts that by the time his presidency is over, many women will have had "a chance to show their leadership ability."

As for his Cabinet, Carter says he had always encouraged people "to disagree with me strongly."

"I don't want a group of yes men or yes women in my Cabinet," he added. "I need to have strong advocates for their positions... and there will be times when they advocate something very strongly when I make a different decision."

He made the remarks on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America" program which was taped in advance for broadcast Wednesday.

By the time his administration ends, he said, "there'll be a large number of women who have been given a chance, not only in government but in private life to show their leadership ability."

He explained women would be coming into positions of assistant or undersecretary or deputy secretary which would be "a stepping stone" to higher posts in government.

Carter protested that Attorney General-designate Griffin Bell "has not been treated fairly so far" and believes the criticism comes primarily from people who had other candidates in mind for the job.

"The major criticism... is that he had a membership in a private club," Carter said.

"Until I started running for president, I also had no membership in a private club, and I would guess if you look at the present incumbent Cabinet and the ones preceding them, many of them had memberships in private clubs."

"This is not a legitimate criticism but it was raised because, you know, Griffin is from the South and because he is a friend of mine," Carter said. "But I think when people go to know Griffin Bell, they will agree with my assessment that he will be not just an adequate attorney general but a great attorney general."

but he wasn't in the mood for humor.

He continued: "I was afraid to try either major suit. Five cards might not be enough so I went to six diamonds. West opened the king of clubs. East signalled, indicating with the queen. A second club was led. South had to use one of my trumps to ruff and there was no way to keep East from making his trump king while the slam would have been wrapped up in either major suit.

Of course, our unfortunate friend was wrong. A diamond lead would beat the slam in either major suit.

Ask the Jacobys

By Orwald & James Jacoby

The unlucky expert had caught on for the last time in 1970. Maybe, we can get him to leave us alone in 1977, though we doubt it.

This time he held the very nice North hand with 150 honors in each of the major suits.

Here is his tale of woe.

"Normally, I would get a chance to bid both spades and hearts, but my partner started the ball rolling with a bid of four diamonds. I bid four notrump to see if he held an ace and he showed one. Now what was I going to do?"

We suggested the famous bid of six sparts to let partner choose which major suit for the slam to play in.

Keep 'em cool

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — Keep 'em cool if you want to keep your winter bulble plants for next year, says Don Steinegger, Extension horticulture specialist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Steinegger recommends a well-lit location, with night temperatures in the upper sixties and day temperatures no higher than 75 degrees Fahrenheit (25 Celsius) for poinsettias and an east or west window and similar day and night temperatures for Christmas cacti.

Both plants also need uniformly moist soil, poinsettias all year, and the cacti, for 10 months. Steinegger said the latter should rest during September and October, then be dosed with either soluble or slow-release fertilizer in November. He suggests the same types of fertilizer for poinsettias about two weeks after they are bought.

He said both plants bloom best when polibound.

Collection agency must alter method

WASHINGTON (UPI) — National Account Systems, one of the nation's largest debt collection agencies and a subsidiary of Diners Club Inc., has agreed not to obtain credit information under false pretenses, the Federal Trade Commission announced today.

The complaint includes a contract agreement, the FTC charged that the Chicago-based company:

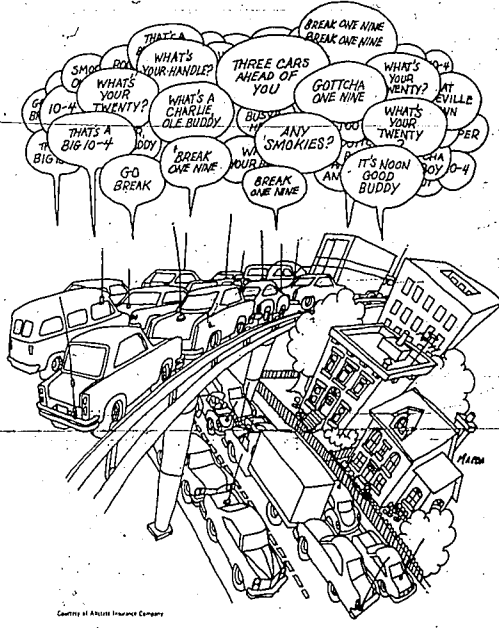

- threatened debtors that they will go to jail if they did not pay up.
- "unfairly used abusive and obscene language when contacting debtors."
- "urged employers to pressure debtors to pay."
- did not completely inform debtors of costs and obligations under the Truth in Lending Act.

The company offers dining and collection services in more than 50 cities across the nation.

The announcement was made after the FTC's Los Angeles office accepted the agreement from National Account Systems, a subsidiary of Diners Club Inc., and three NAS subsidiaries: NAS Creditors Services, Inc., National Account System of Milwaukee, Inc., and A.B. Hartman, Inc.

According to the FTC staff, "NAS and its three subsidiaries have telephoned a consumer reporting agency and deceived it into furnishing them information under false pretenses.

Under the consent order, the firms involved agreed to halt all the alleged practices under threat of fines of up to $10,000.

Special insurance required for CBs

BOISE — Many insurance companies in Idaho, and across the nation, no longer include citizen band (CB) radios and other sound equipment in general automobile insurance policies because too many CBs are being stolen.

While exact figures are not available, insurance company spokesmen put annual CB thefts in the millions of dollars.

Jerry Parsons, public relations director for State Farm Insurance Co., Bloomington, Ill., estimates State Farm handled nationally about $7.5 million worth of claims on CB thefts.

Thefts of parts and accessories from vehicles accounted for $17.6 million of State Farm's claims in 1974 and $30.4 million worth of claims in 1975, he said. While the insurance companies don't break down these figures by category, Parsons said it's "pretty clear" a large portion of increase in claims is caused by CB thefts.

Spokesmen for Allstate and Farmer's insurance agree, and, along with officials from several other companies, have changed their coverage policies. Generally, insurance companies now only cover the theft of CBs and other sound system equipment if the purchaser of car insurance pays a special premium.

Starting in March, State Farm, the second largest insurer of cars in Idaho, began charging from $4 to $10 annually for coverage of CBs and other sound equipment, according to Don Bollinger, district manager for State Farm, Boise.

Beginning last year, Farmer's insurance, the largest insurer of cars in the state, began charging from $3 to $100 annually for special sound system coverage.

Sigge May, Allstate Insurance charges $17 annually for a special policy that covers CB valued at $250 or less. Coverage is also subject to $50 deductible.

"It would be unfair to require that all policyholders who don't own such units to pay for these thefts," said James R. Hanks.

23,000 drug seizures

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Customs Service arrested nearly 21,000 persons and made 23,000 individual drug seizures — including 388 tons of marijuana — during 1976.

The drug seizures, which represented an increase of 10 per cent over last year, included the 271 pounds of heroin, 1,135 pounds of cocaine, 7,853 pounds of hashish and more than 20.7 million units of dangerous drugs such as amphetamines and barbiturates in addition to the marijuana.

At street prices, the products would cost $631 million, a 39 per cent increase over 1975, the service said.

National Guard changes postponed beyond Jan. 1

BOISE (UPI) — The reorganization of the Idaho Army National Guard announced earlier this year will be delayed, but when implemented should improve the caliber of Idaho's guard units, according to Brig. Gen. Gordon Shore.

Gordon Shore, assistant Idaho Adjutant General, said guard officials continue to appraise only positive results from the reorganization.

He said at the time the reorganization was announced it was stated the effective date would be Jan. 1, but "we doubted we would get it that quick."

Shore added, however, the posture of the guard will be improved because it will allow units various locations to have an attainable strength objective.

"The objectives that they have to maintain presently are out of reason," Shore said.

Shore said since the announcement that the guard would reorganize, recruiting has remained at about the same level it has been for the past several months.

"We have continued to recruit at all times and recruiting has been at the same level as it has been for the past several months," the general said.

Near-collision figure up

BOISE (UPI) — Near-miss accidents involving school buses at railroad crossings without warning lights have more than doubled in southern Idaho, reported Union Pacific engineers today.

Nine near collisions were reported this year as compared to four in the previous year.

None of the close calls occurred at crossings with train-activated devices. All had only crossbucks or stop signs.

C.B. "Rocky" Rockwell, Salt Lake City, a Union Pacific spokesman, said the exact locations were not immediately available. But he did know of two near accidents this year at Mindok and Soda Springs and one each at Caldwell, Nampa, Rupert, American Falls and Idaho Falls.

The bus driver was alone in some cases but in others buses were fully loaded with children, Rockwell said engineers report such incidents when they are concerned that a bus may not be able to cross the tracks in time of their train without getting hit.

US crop cost estimates vary

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate leaders planning legislation to raise future major crop support targets to cost-of-production levels are being confronted by widely varying estimates of what it will cost farmers to produce crops like corn, wheat and cotton next year.

Unpublished Agriculture Department estimates obtained by UPI indicate for example that — depending on what items are included in production cost tabulations — the national average cost of producing a bushel of corn in 1977 could be as low as $1.48 or as high as $2.02.

The $1.48 figure does not include any land costs, and for that reason is unlikely to be used by lawmakers designing new support formulas. It also assumes comparatively good per-acre yields which tend to hold down per-bushel costs.

The $2.02, on the other hand, covers land expenses as well as other costs. It uses a low estimate of per-acre yields, which inflates per-bushel costs for items like fertilizer, fuel and machinery. It also uses the higher of two alternate department methods of calculating the cost of land.

Confronted by this wide range of estimates, Senate Agriculture Committee Chairman Herman E. Talmadge, D-Ga., is scheduled soon to decide on specific figures or cost formulas for inclusion in a bill to cover crop supports in 1978 and future years.

The legislation, which Talmadge plans to introduce early next year for consideration by his committee, would replace a law which expires at the end of the 1977 crop season.

Talmadge said recently he would like to see a support target level "that about equals the cost of production." He said this should be coupled with crop support formulas "about 80 per cent" of the new target levels.

Talmadge's options at this point can be highlighted by comparing scheduled 1977 supports with the "cost of production" supports which could go into his proposal.

Under existing law, the 1977 target price for corn is scheduled to be about $1.75 to $1.80 a bushel, and the crop support loan rate has already been set at $1.50 a bushel. Market prices for corn in mid-November averaged $2.02 a bushel.

(The law provides that if market prices sag below the target — which hasn't happened in recent years — the government would make up the difference with direct payments to growers. The crop support loan rate puts an effective floor under the market. If it drops below target levels.)

Using 1977 Agriculture Department cost estimates as a base, Talmadge and his colleagues could design a production cost formula including part or all of farmer's land costs. Conceivably, the result could be a 1978 corn target price ranging from about $2 a bushel to $2.00 or more.

Whatever figure Senate farm leaders propose may be above actual costs for some farmers and below costs for others.

In the case of corn, for example, the Agriculture national average cost estimates not including land expenses range for 1977 from $1.48 to $1.64 a bushel, depending on per-acre yields.

If the national average was $1.64, estimates indicated costs in the Great Lakes states and Corn Belt would be $1.51, or 10 cents below the average. But costs in other regions would be above the average — $2.44 a bushel in the southeast, $2.01 in the northeast, $1.72 in the northern Plains, and $2.02 in the southwest.

Agriculture Department 1977 production cost estimates for wheat ranged from $2.18 a bushel with high per-acre yields and no land costs to $3.29 a bushel with lower yields and a high land cost estimate.

One possible combination using low variable costs and a land figure based on average acquisition costs over the past 30 years would produce a total cost estimate of $2.99 a bushel.

For cotton, cost estimates range from 42.8 cents a pound using low variable costs and no land costs up to 61.3 cents a pound using high variable expenses and current land prices.

Burros threatening ruins

LOS ALAMOS, N.M. (UPI) — A head of wild burros that is damaging the environment and threatening historic Indian ruins at the Bandelier National Monument is increasing by nearly one-third each year because the animals have no natural enemies.

The herd, initially composed of domesticated animals that were turned loose or strayed from their owners, was first noted in the north central New Mexico region in the 1930s, said Bandelier Superintendent John Hunter.

"It has now grown to about 140 animals, and our research indicates it is increasing at 29 per cent annually," Hunter said. "These animals have no native enemies other than man; natural predation is very limited."

Hunter said the burros eat much of the grass in the area and the loss of vegetation also has become a major source of soil erosion. Additionally, he said, the animals' habit of "trailing" or walking in single file, creates hard paths that lead to water erosion.

Winter wheat needs moisture

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Agriculture Department says the nation's winter wheat crop remained in fair to good condition through the end of last week, but it still needs moisture and has lost most of the protective snow cover it had earlier.

The report indicated there had been no substantial change in the condition of the crop, which officials estimated last week may fall 8 per cent below last year's harvest.

The crop estimate last week said farmers had cut plantings by 3 per cent, but it added that poor moisture conditions in many areas may hold per-acre yields down and produce an 8 per cent cut in total output.

A weekly crop weather forecast, issued Tuesday, said the crop still needs more moisture in most major winter wheat states.

Because most of the protective snow cover has been "lost," officials added, there is now an added risk of losses from "blowing" or wind erosion. Later in the season unless additional moisture is received.

In Kansas, the nation's leading winter wheat state, officials said the crop showed "little change" last week and remained short of moisture. Kansas farmers were able to graze cattle on only 5 per cent of their winter wheat compared with 10 per cent a year earlier, the report added.

Potato imports hearing Tuesday

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A public hearing on a proposal to allow pearl onions and dehydrated potatoes from underdeveloped countries to enter the United States duty free will be held in Boise Tuesday.

Sen. James A. McClure said the hearing, conducted by the U. S. International Trade Commission, was originally scheduled to be held in Texas but was moved to Boise because of the adverse effect the proposal could have on Idaho agricultural products.

"It would not be in the best interest of the Idaho farmer in this time of over-production and depressed market prices to allow additional products to enter the markets of the United States duty free,"

McClure said. The hearing will be held at the Idaho Fish and Game building, 600 Walnut St., Boise, at 10 a.m.

McClure said persons wishing to present testimony should notify the United States International Trade Commission in Washington, D.C., by Dec. 30. Notification should include the person's name, address and his position regarding the proposal so the ITC can establish a schedule of speakers.

Due to the shortness of time, if advance notification is not made, the commission will allow individuals to speak at the hearing, McClure said. Written statements will also be accepted by the commission through Tuesday.

Sheep die in stampede

PAYETTE, Idaho (UPI) — Some 225 sheep were killed early Tuesday morning after they apparently stampeded and trampled each other.

Shepherd Bud Widner, 68, said he believed the sheep had been chased by dogs.

The sheep, owned by Phil

Soulen, Welsler, apparently ran from the dogs, stampeded through fences and jumped over an embankment. The dead sheep were apparently at the head of the herd and were trampled and smothered.

The sheep, all pregnant ewes due to lamb in February, were worth more than $15,000.

Dairy sales stronger

WASHINGTON — Due to increased cheese sales, dairy sales have been strong this year, according to the National Milk Producers Federation.

Commercial disappearance, according to the federation's December newsletter, will likely approach 116 billion pounds milk equivalent, up 2 billion pounds from 1975.

Butter sales were down in 1976 and could compare to sales experienced in the early 1970s.

Experts expect further growth in cheese sales and prospects for all dairy products sales in 1977 are expected to be good, according to the news letter.

Arrest decision delayed

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls County Prosecutor William Hoffield said Wednesday he will decide by early next week whether anyone will be arrested in connection with the Christmas Day shooting of a Hollister father and son.

The prosecutor said the delay was being caused by a need to compile "all the facts" in the case.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which fell 5.15 points Wednesday and failed for the 12th time this year to hold above 1,000, was off 0.75 to 994.18 shortly after the opening. Advances led declines 137 to 142, among the 44 issues crossing the tape in the early morning. Profit taking that stung bluechips Wednesday was expected to continue. Pitt kicker doesn't worry about foe

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — The man who kicked every extra point and field goal for the University of Pittsburgh the past four years said Wednesday he could care less who lines up against him in the Sugar Bowl New Year's Day.

"I don't know anything about Georgia, except that Atlanta's in Georgia," said Carson Long, who will be playing his last game against the fourth-ranked Georgia Bulldogs Saturday.

"I just kick and let the other guys do the physical stuff."

Kicking and joking was what

Long concentrated on Wednesday as he and his top-ranked teammates ran through a light workout in 70-degree weather at old Sugar Bowl Stadium. This year's Sugar Bowl will be the third held in the Louisiana Superdome.

Long was the nation's No. 1 scorer this year and is the No. 2 scorer in Pittsburgh history behind teammate Tony Dorsett. He and Dorsett and the Panther offensive line are three of the reasons coach Johnny Majors was able to build an unbeaten team.

"The offensive line really doesn't get enough press, but at the end of the season you'll notice a lot of the guys will go to the pros," said tight end Jim Corbell.

"This is the best offensive line I can remember in history, but the only thing they ever write about them is that they are big and they eat a lot."

The offensive linemen are big. From tackle to tackle they average 244 pounds. But they are good, 100 — good enough to enable Dorsett to become the most prolific runner in college football history with 6,082 yards.

"They deserve all the credit they get," Pitt defensive tackle Don Parrish said of the offense. "We're just glad to be in the Sugar Bowl. We've got the best in the South against the best in the East, and it's going to be the best in the nation."

Pittsburgh middle guard Al Romano agreed with Parrish about Georgia being the best in the South, but said there was no comparison between the lines of the two teams.

"The only thing I know about the (Georgia) offensive line is that they're all nuts," said Romano. "From the way they talk, if the can't beat us, they're going to shoot us all."

Maryland quarterback respects Houston's defensive secondary

DALLAS (UPI) — Mark Manges is the kind of person polisher George Gallup must have dreamed about.

Manges always has an opinion about the Maryland quarterback has a couple of pretty strong opinions this week.

One of them is that if somebody doesn't do something about Houston's defensive tackle Wilson Whitley New Year's Day, Manges' Maryland Terrapins might be in for a rough time in the Cotton Bowl.

"And the other is that Manges does not have much use for any poll that does not rate Maryland as high as he thinks the Terrapins deserve."

"I'm sure I'll see Wilson Whitley once or twice during the game," Manges said Wednesday. "He's just too good to keep out of there all the time. He is probably the best defensive lineman in the country."

Whitley, in fact, seems to be on Manges' mind a lot these days.

The ability of Maryland's offensive line to deal with the talented Houston tackle will be one of the keys in Saturday's Cotton Bowl struggle between the unbeaten Terrapins and the Southwest Conference co-champion Cougars.

"Houston's secondary is top rate," Manges said. "But, again, I think the key is Whitley. He will be our biggest job. If we have time to throw I think I can find the receivers no matter how their secondary ranks."

"I think their secondary got its reputation because they intercepted a lot of passes from guys in the Southwest Conference who are not that good at throwing the ball. The Southwest Conference is primarily a run-oriented conference."

Whitley would probably like to hear that Manges is worried about him, but to not that the Maryland Junior also is concerned about the Terrapins receiving the recognition he says they deserve.

"I think to determine a national champion you have got to have a playoff after the season," he said. "You can have the best people in the world making a decision about which team is No. 1 and it might not be right."

"There are certain cliques that vote in the polls and that's not right. I know if we go 12-0 and Georgia beats Pittsburgh and we don't get to be No. 1 then something is wrong."

Manges is also the guy who said during the season he wanted Maryland to be able to play a Big Eight Conference team in a bowl game so the Terrapins could prove they could play in that league.

"But now I'm glad we're here playing Houston," he said, "because I think Houston is better than any team in the Big Eight. They are ranked higher than any Big Eight team."

"Being in Dallas is better for us at this time than in Miami (for the Orange Bowl). I haven't heard anybody complaining about being here."

Brand Robinson scored 16 points and Greg Griffin hit 11 for the Bengals.

Eddie Adams tossed in 22 points for the loser.

Fresno State and Eastern Montana meet in Thursday's consolation game.

The Cowboys held the Yellowjackets to just 16 field goals in 76 attempts while hitting 36 of 75 in the runaway Wyoming led 45-22 at halftime.

Flanigan's points were supplemented by Tony Revak's 14 and Tony Barnett's 11 points.

Freshman guard Russell Steele led EMC with 11 points.

Weber downs St. Louis, gains finals of Far West Classic

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Weber State stormed back from an 11-point halftime deficit Wednesday night and beat St. Louis 64-57 to gain a berth in the finals of the Far West Basketball Classic.

The Wildcats, 5-3, will challenge sixth-ranked North Carolina, which defeated 20th-rated Oregon 86-60.

St. Louis, 1-9, will play the Ducks for third place Thursday.

Poor shooting by Weber State in the first half caused most of the Wildcats' problems as they hit only 25 per cent of their shots and trailed 19 at halftime.

The Wildcats came out fast in the second half, hitting 14 of 20 from the floor and getting eight straight points in the first three minutes of the half to regain their momentum. They took the lead for good with 10:33 remaining, 41-39.

Center Jim Erickson keyed the comeback, hitting five for six from the floor in the second half and finishing with 21 points. Forward Stan Mayhew added 12 points for Weber State.

Carl Johnson led St. Louis with 15 points and Howard Jackson added 12.

"It's the first game remarkable Anthony Roberts scored a tournament record 48 points as Oral Roberts held on to defeat Bowling Green.

Roberts' sensational shooting Wednesday included 20 of 29 from the floor.

Combined with his 46 point effort against North Carolina Monday night, Roberts' 94 tournament points was a record for a three game tournament, and he set it in only two games. The old record was 92 points.

For the tournament, Roberts is shooting nearly 64 per cent from the floor, 47.47.

The Titans moved away to a 41-26 halftime lead and increased the margin to 23, 49-26.

Stanford tops CSU

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (UPI) — Guard Mike Bratz hit for 28 points to pace Stanford University to an 87-66 victory over Colorado State Wednesday night.

The Rams rallied to close the Stanford lead to 73-70 with 4:23 left in the game, despite an 18-point first half performance by Bratz and Kim Baskis by Bratz and Kim Bolton, along with a free throw by Jay Carter, gave the Cardinals a 72-72 lead with 3:11 left in the game.

CSU took its only lead of the second half when guard Fred Anzures canned a 20-foot jump shot to put the Rams ahead, 54-33, but Stanford was never seriously challenged again during the contest.

Bratz shared high scoring honors with CSU forward Alan Cunningham, who scored 28 points and grabbed 20 rebounds during the game.

The victory gave Stanford a 7-3 season mark, while CSU dropped to 5-4 with the loss.

SIDE GLANCES

"Good heavens, Caroline! While I was waiting for you to shoot, I could have baked a cake!"

Both coaches claim teams prepared for Sun bowl

EL PASO, Tex. (UPI) — Texas A&M and Florida Wednesday went through their first workouts in the Sun Bowl and both coaches said their teams were ready for Sunday's clash.

Texas A&M, which arrived in the border city shortly after midnight, worked out Wednesday morning and Coach Emory Bellard said the squad would go through several light workouts prior to game time Sunday at 1 p.m. MST.

"We had a short but good workout," said Bellard. "Everyone was running well and we have no complaints."

Southeastern Conference in scoring and total offense, practiced later with team leader Jimmy Fisher working on the passing game, which both coaches feel will be a major factor in the game.

Although both clubs run out of the Wishbone, Florida puts the ball in the air more while Texas A&M relies on the running of sophomore fullback George Woodard and freshman speedster Curtis Dickey.

"We are really very similar offensively," said Bellard, who then proceeded to add, "It's just that they run outside and throw a little more and we like to keep it inside."

Woodard and Dickey combined for 1,879 yards this past season, setting a new A&M record. Woodard also led the Southwest Conference in scoring with 17 touchdowns, second best in the Aggies' history, while Dickey ran for eight scores and threw for two more off a halfback option plays.

Florida, like the Aggies, planned only light workouts the rest of the week.

Coach Doug Dickey, whose team is trying to break a fourgame losing streak in bowl appearances, said he's concerned about the Texas A&M defense which ranked fourth in the nation overall.

"Defensively, they are as good a football team as we've seen this year," said Dickey. "They are a lot like Georgia and we couldn't contain them."

Floridians decry expense of huge Sun bowl contingent

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — United Faculty of Florida (UFF) Wednesday took issue with the University of Florida Athletic Association for spending $140,000 on expenses related to the Sun Bowl game in El Paso, Tex.

In an executive council resolution, the UFF's University of Florida chapter attacked the association for sending an official party of more than 200 persons to El Paso for six days.

"Instead of a junket, the money could have been spent on the library," said chapter president Dr. Robert Blume.

"The library has been unable to purchase new books since September due to a lack of funds."

The resolution suggests: "Perhaps all the highly-paid freeloaders will reimburse the Athletic Association for the flight, drinks, dinner and accommodations."

The Florida football team, which meets Texas A&M Sunday night, and other members of the official party left Gainesville Wednesday morning on two chartered Southern Airways jets.

In addition, 23 children of university officials and their guests plan to fly to El Paso Thursday on the "Blue Goose," a university-owned DC-3.

University Athletic Director Roy Graves has told local reporters that the children's expenses will be paid by their parents and that the university will make $20,000 on the bowl game plus nationwide TV exposure.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, DECEMBER 31, 1976

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This is no day to take chances where your financial position is concerned. Make sure that you are economical during the daytime. Then you find that the evening improves and you will be able to celebrate bringing in the new year on a happy and pleasant note.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Try not to argue about finances during the day. Evening then becomes more charming. Get advice from an expert early, though, before you celebrate tonight. Dress beautifully.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 21) Do not fool sorry for yourself because another will not go along with some plan you have, since it is best in the long run. Show others you like them and make the evening a happy one.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Do not accept limitations where something you want to do is concerned and be successful. Relieve tensions during day so that you can see the new year in happily. Drive with care.

NEON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Help a friend who is having a difficult time at present and gain goodwill. Although your funds may be low, see the new year in hopefully and all will soon improve for you.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Not a good day to contact a bigwig, but fine for handling credit matters. You can see the new year in on an optimistic note after a rather difficult day. Avoid one who is jealous of you.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Looking into new projects that are appealing to you is wise in the morning, but don't take any risks that could prove costly. Be with cheerful persons this evening and lift your spirits.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Handle responsibilities early and free time for the evening's entertainment. Perk up the spirits of mates, friends. Don't overstep.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Not a good day to have a confrontation with associates who are unreasonable. Get caught up on your work early. Then see the new year in the right spirit and be happy.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Calm down early and get duties handled efficiently otherwise you could make costly errors. Be with good friends this festive evening. Forget anxieties.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You want to enjoy yourself during day, but it is best to get practical affairs taken care of. Then you can make the evening a happy one. Celebrate this evening, but do so sanely and safely.

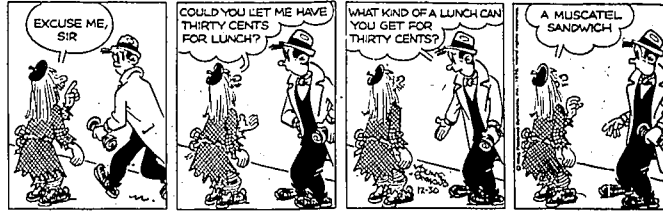

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Use last at home so that all is pleasant there. Invite friends for celebrations. Avoid troublemakers, though, and be on the safe side.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Take care in driving, walking, talking when others are in a rush and are irritable. Take care of affairs during day. Bring in the new year on a note of optimism and hope.

Ambitious brides can change their husbands' personalities only if those husbands are under 28 years of age. Or so says one matrimonial specialist. "Most men get set in their ways by 28," he avers. Our Love and War man does not concur. He says most bridegrooms change their ways to one degree or another as soon as they marry, no matter at what age. He cites the case of a widower who gave up cigars, hard liquor and Monday night football when he remarried at age 73. For the first time in his life, he did divided duty with his bride on the interior household chores, taking on the toast making, the dish washing and the floor sweeping. And instead of getting up every dawn at five o'clock as he'd done for years, he then-forward remained abed daily until almost noon, devoting the last several morning hours to coy dialogue. PET FOOD

Q. "What do the pet food people mean when they talk about the four D's?"
A. Refers to meat from animals that are dead, dying, diseased or disabled. Odd you'd hear any pet food people use the expression, though. It's a Department of Agriculture phrase. Please note, not all the meat and meat byproducts in pet food should be described. For instance, I understand Ken-L Ration, for one, relies rather on low-grade federally inspected meats. Also, it makes little difference to the pet whether the meat is Four-D or otherwise. It's processed at such high temperatures that there's no danger in it.

Matter of personal honor. Now, if such a fellow swears he's taken a bath, that's it, they believe him. No affidavits, witnesses or Polaroid pictures necessary.
