AF Dam — irks Jerome irrigators

By KEN HODGE

JEROME — Northside Canal Company stockholders Saturday voted by voice to oppose the present contract for replacement of the American Falls Dam, but then agreed to hold a special election before Feb. 15 to decide the issue by secret ballot.
In a second voice vote members narrowly retained the legal services of Parry, Robertson, Daly and Larson, the company's law firm for more than 40 years, but then decided to also put that question on the ballot for secret vote along with the first question.
Several speakers supporting dismissal of the Twin Falls law firm alleged a conflict of interest in the company's simultaneous legal representation of Idaho Power Company, the Northside Canal Company and the American Falls Reservoir District.
John Rosholt, the firm's representative for the various clients, said it is possible to represent several interests which may conflict if they are aware of the situation and give their permission.
"We're not opposed to the dam; it would be folly to try to stop it," Jerome farmer John Darrington told more than 200 Northside waterusers during the heated discussion in the Jerome Junior High School.
"We're opposed to the way it's going to be paid for and the rules that are going to run it," Darrington continued.
A large group of Northside water users' initiators resolution to oppose the contract in its present form charging it violates the rights of the water districts involved and was "altered and amended" after approval.
Darrington and Fred Stewart, a Hunt area farmer, representing those opposed to the contract, also claimed no copy of the contract had been made available to Northside farmers for examination prior to a vote of approval.
Stewart proposed a change in the minutes of last year's annual meeting which stated the contract had been read to the general membership.
John Rosholt's attorney for the Northside Canal Company, agreed the 40-page contract had not actually been read at the meeting.
The minutes were changed by a voice vote.
Stewart, taking the floor for about 30 minutes, sharply criticized the contract for its "lack of omission" on the part of the authors.

Disney eyes possible Sun Valley purchase

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN
Times-News writer
SUN VALLEY — Walt Disney officials, with an eye to buying a ski resort, are in Sun Valley making extensive inspections of Sun Valley Co. properties.
Sun Valley Co. issued a letter to its employees Friday which acknowledged Walt Disney Productions' interest in a "year-around mountain resort area." But the letter also said "no decision has been made by either party to enter into any negotiations."
Ron Cayo, vice-president of business affairs for Walt Disney Productions, was in Sun Valley Friday, staying at the Sun Valley Lodge.
"Disney has personnel up here now," Cayo said, "and we're looking at the situation with a view to — if all the facts and figures indicate it — we may all down with Sun Valley and discuss a possible investment with Sun Valley. But we're still looking at all the facts and figures and circumstances," he told the Times-News.
Throughout Thursday and Friday rumors circulated that Bill Janss, president of Sun Valley Co., was negotiating the sale of the famed resort to a major corporation.
Late Friday afternoon, however, Janss issued a memo to the entire Sun Valley staff, saying that no negotiations had been authorized, but saying that Disney personnel would be in Sun Valley to make a "detailed on-site examination" of the resort's operations.

Later Janss added that "there have been no negotiations with anyone."
Disney Cayo said that his firm would be looking at the conditions of the eoulnain ski lifts, the Sun Valley Lodge and Challenger Inn, and the Sun Valley Mall throughout January.
Cayo said that Disney Productions has been interested in purchasing a ski resort for many years, and with this purpose in mind has looked at hundreds of ski areas throughout the country.
"I don't think it's any secret that most of them are available if one would want to acquire one," he said, apparently "in reference to the shortage of snow which has hurt many Western resorts financially."
Cayo also said Disney has had a long association and friendship with Sun Valley.
"We spent some time here with some of Sun Valley marketing people to kick around ideas on how Sun Valley could manage its resort, based on how we handle Walt Disney World and Disneyland," Cayo said.
"But then he added, again, 'It's important to emphasize the latter part of Sun Valley's statement. We are not in negotiations with Sun Valley. We're not discussing how our interests would materialize."

Janss' letter to Sun Valley employees said: "Walt Disney Productions has been interested in a year-around mountain resort area since the first days of Mineral King in California valley development that didn't get off the ground, some 11 years ago. During this time, Disney's staff and planners visited and examined virtually every mountain resort in America and Europe."
"Sun Valley Co. has for many years had a mutual exchange of ideas with Disney. It has been arranged for a number of the Disney staff to make a detailed on-site examination of Sun Valley's operations during January."
"It is possible that Disney may consider Sun Valley for a future investment. At this time, no decision has been made by either party to enter into any negotiations."
"Should there be further developments, I will keep you appropriately informed."
"This is not going to be a Disney World or Disneyland. If we do a ski area it will be a ski area. It will be on a par with some of the finer areas as in Europe," he said.

Lawyer killed, TF man dies

BURLEY — A prominent Burley attorney and a young Twin Falls man died in separate traffic accidents in the Mini-Cassia area Friday and Saturday.
Dean Kloefer, 63, Burley, died Friday afternoon of injuries sustained when his car crashed into a 13-foot truck parked on West 16th St. just west of Burley.
Gary Coy Silvers, 27, Twin Falls, was killed early Saturday when his pickup truck was hit broadside by a train at the Klamama Road crossing northwest of Rupert.
Cassia County officers said Kloefer, a long-time Burley attorney, died about 5 p.m. Friday at Cassia Memorial Hospital. He was hit about 1 p.m. Friday when the convertible he was driving collided head-on with the parked truck owned by Gordon Paving Co. The truck was parked on the south side of the road, facing west. The impact forced the convertible into the truck bed.
Deputy Sheriff Don Green said Kloefer was wearing a seat belt but the entire dash board and steering column were broken loose by the impact. Kloefer's head struck the windshield.

Gilmore's death near

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Chief Judge David T. Lewis of the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals Saturday night turned down another effort almost at stopping Monday's scheduled execution of Lewis' man with Attorney General Robert Hansen and D. Gilbert Athay, attorney for two other state prison inmates appealing their death sentences. Following 45 minutes of arguments, Lewis denied the motion for a stay — just 38 hours before Gilmore is to be executed.
Lewis told Athay, "You have to have some standing before you go riding off on your white horse." He then ruled there was no compelling reason that the other death row inmates would be endangered by Gilmore's execution.
Athay was one of three attorneys who lost similar appeals Friday before a federal judge in Utah. They claimed Gilmore's execution would affect their client's cases.
Athay said after the denial, "The court has ruled, it was fair and I don't disagree with the ruling. The only avenue we have left is an attempt at the U.S. Supreme Court and Justice (Byron) White is the justice in charge of this district."
"We had several hours of a grilling session," Rhoden said.
"He finally admitted he wrote the envelope, the note inside the envelope saying it (the will) was found by Joseph Smith's house, and he admitted he delivered the will."
"But we still don't know who wrote the will."
Dummar still insists he picked up an old man in the desert who identified himself as Howard Hughes and subsequently included Dummar in his will for 1-16th of the billionaire's $2.5 billion fortune.

Moscow embassy water tainted

MOSCOW (UPI) — Cyanide up to 250 per cent higher than safe amounts and large doses of mercury have been discovered in the water supply of buildings housing American diplomats in Moscow.
A U.S. embassy spokesman said Saturday the embassy doctor had found no evidence of illnesses related to the chemicals, but sent a memorandum about the hazard to residents of the buildings.
Only two weeks ago the embassy reported that one third of its staff had been found to have abnormal blood counts due to an unknown "factor in the Moscow environment."

Valley cold snap ends

MAGIE VALLEY — Temperatures have climbed in the past two days in Magie Valley to normal and above normal, ending a week long cold snap.
Temperatures reported by the U.S. Weather Bureau in Boise today show low readings in many Magie Valley communities higher than the highs reported last week. Rupert, for example had a low reading of 27 degrees Friday night.
Weather officials say it is not unusually warm although slightly above normal and again unusually dry. October, November and December set new records in low amounts of precipitation but January thus far has had a slightly better record. Snow depths in mountain watered areas, however, are running about one fourth normal.

Dummar must 'explain' will

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Utah service station attendant Melvin Dummar has 10 days to sort through the facts before taking the stand to tell what he knows about Howard Hughes' so-called "Mormon Will."
District Court Judge Keith Hayes Friday set Jan. 25 as the date Dummar must appear in his courtroom and explain where he got the three-page handwritten document purportedly written by the late billionaire.
Dummar said this week that he lied previously and admitted he was the person who delivered the document to the Salt Lake City headquarters of the Mormon church three weeks after Hughes died.

Harold Rhoden, special executor of the Hughes estate, said Friday that Dummar agreed to testify Jan. 25 "because he wanted to be believed."
"If he tells the truth," Rhoden said, "he will be in a far better position than if he lies. My plan will be to tell him the consequences of his lies."
Dummar, named as an heir in the "will" delivered to the Mormon Church last April 27, finally "cracked," Rhoden asserted Thursday in Los Angeles.

"We had several hours of a grilling session," Rhoden said.
"He finally admitted he wrote the envelope, the note inside the envelope saying it (the will) was found by Joseph Smith's house, and he admitted he delivered the will."
"But we still don't know who wrote the will."
Dummar still insists he picked up an old man in the desert who identified himself as Howard Hughes and subsequently included Dummar in his will for 1-16th of the billionaire's $2.5 billion fortune.

'Sleeper' finds warm cell

By BOB ZUCKERMAN
Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — Richard A. Floyd, 29, doesn't care where he lays his head, even if it's a Twin Falls jail cell.
A Myrtle Point, Ore., man who says he's spent the last seven years traveling in the Pacific Northwest, Floyd is one of the last persons to sleep in the old Twin Falls city jail before city police moved into the new station.
The man with one change of clothes, a down jacket, two pairs of shoes, sleeping bag and pack, says he's camped in nine states. Sometimes, "when the weather gets bad," he looks for a small garage or shed to sleep in.
"It's the only place I can find another place to stay in a cell for a night," says Floyd, estimating he's slept in 10 jails since he began his life as a wayfarer.
He's just one of 87 persons, almost all males, who last year spent the night in the city jail before city police moved to another place to sleep — not because they committed a crime.
The average age of a "sleeper," as they are appropriately called by Twin Falls police, is 37, according to police records.
Police Chief Frank Barnett says sleepers come from "all walks of life."
"Some of them is just down on their luck," he says. "Others just make a business of living that way."

The police chief says entire families have used a jail cell for their home on occasion. Once a couple and three children slept in the jail.
"Lots of times, it's people traveling, who started out with enough money to get 'em where they were going, but because of car trouble or something else, run out of money," Barnett says.
Providing travelers, including bums, a place to sleep doesn't encourage degenerates to come to the city, the police chief says.
"We don't provide a steady place," he says. "Ordinarily no more than two nights."
Barnett says providing travelers a place to stay doesn't cost anything, since the jail cells are there anyway. Police don't feed sleepers and usually make them leave the cell early in the morning, he says.
Floyd says the old Twin Falls jail is probably the oldest one he's ever slept in. He said officers didn't give him a blanket because they've already moved blankets to the new jail.
"I didn't mind," he said, "and I'm really quite thankful. I've done time in jail where jailers have jumped up and down on the floor to keep you awake."
"It's just part of the road," he says. "You get used to it after a while."

Traffic mishaps kill two persons

OFFICERS said the attorney was driving a car owned by Harold Middleton, Burley. The twin had traveled to Jackpot, Nev., earlier in the day and Middleton remained there while Kloefer was returning in the other man's automobile.

County Coroner Bruce Young said an autopsy will be performed Monday at the request of Kloefer's family. Investigation is continuing.

Silvers, 34, was killed about 8:35 a.m. Saturday when his pickup truck slid on the icy Kimama Road and into the path of an oncoming train.

Parts of the truck and camper were strung over about a 240-yard area by the train. Idaho State Police officers said the train was traveling east at about 65 miles per hour.

State Highway Patrolman Les Stimpson said Silvers' body was thrown about 100 feet. The officer said all that was left of the pickup was the frame.

Stimpson said Silvers was traveling north on Kimama Road and evidently slid on the ice as he saw the train.

Grani Jensen, Pocatello, said he saw the accident. The train, which consisted of two engines and 65 cars, "jerked" as he saw the pickup and blew the whistle again. Stimpson theorized Silvers may have found the road too icy to stop and attempted to beat the train to the crossing.

Minico school board, teachers vie in fact-finding

By SHANE O'NEILL
Times-News writer

RUBERT — Efforts by teachers to stage or expand upon a 1974 procedural agreement and a school board stance holding the line on past agreements led to the current impasse in 1976-77 Minidoka County teacher negotiations.

The procedural agreement was adopted two and one-half years ago after long negotiations between the district and the Minidoka County Education (then Teachers) Association.

It established salary schedules, economic benefits and grievances as negotiable items and set out a procedural process for developing policies, according to Virginia Ross, Idaho Education Association staff member and spokesman for the MCEA.

"It was not the teachers' intent to negate the procedural processes by the procedural agreement," she told two state-appointed fact-finders called in to probe the 12-month dispute between the district and teachers.

The MCEA offered 28 items over a year ago for negotiations. Roger Ling, legal counsel and chairman of the school district's negotiators, said tentative agreement was reached on 22 of those items, although the school board will take no action until the items are ratified by the MCEA.

Focal point of the conflict, is the master contract. Teachers want it to include the procedural agreement, pacts made in 1972 and any amendments so that, as Ross said Tuesday, they will all be in one place.

Ling claimed teachers want to negotiate every policy and added, "The board cannot accept a master plan that has both negotiable and non-negotiable items in it."

He said the board can and has put some requested policies in its handbook, but not as negotiated items, and will not give color to teacher negotiations.

Ross contended the MCEA "did not intend to include negotiable items in that document."

"The rub lies in what is negotiable."

The second teacher proposal stems directly from the master plan idea and calls for board agreement not to issue individual contracts until the master contract is adopted by both sides or, if they are issued, for the individual teacher contracts to be amended by the subsequent adoption of the master contract.

Ross claimed, "Negotiations can be hampered by issuance of individual contracts."

Ling countered that a contract will agree to amend through subsequent negotiations is not a legal contract. He backed that with rulings by two Fifth District Court judges, one involving the current dispute.

Ling also argued that negotiations should be settled before the public hearing on the annual budget or they might never be completed. He added that teachers do not have a legal right to "collective bargaining," since they have no right to strike.

Appearing before fact-finders chosen under the 1974 procedural agreement, the MCEA called for changing the selection process and for the district to share the fact-finding cost, since the two parties "are mutually responsible" for the additional step.

Ling responded that the board did not call for fact-finding and should not have to pay any part of the cost. He also said that the current

EPA cites pollution control in Idaho

TWIN FALLS — Idaho, Alaska, Oregon and Washington collectively lead the country in controlling air pollution from major sources, according to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

In Idaho, the major source compliance rate is slightly better than in the rest of the Northwest with only Bunker Hill Company's lead smelter in Kellogg and FMC's phosphate plant in Pocatello not meeting standards, according to Mark Hooper, EPA chief of air technical compliance in the Northwest.

EPA cites pollution control in Idaho

Hooper said the Bunker Hill lead smelter is not meeting federal standards on sulfur dioxide emissions. He said the company has applied for a permit to install the sulphur standards to the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals and that the EPA is waiting for a court decision before taking further action.

The FMC phosphate fertilizer plant in Pocatello is not complying with regulations in emissions of "particulate matter which contains high concentrations of phosphorus and tenoxides, the oxide of phosphorus," Hooper said.

Hailey man arrested after dogs smell drugs

HAILEY — A Hailey man was arrested by police Thursday for possession of ounces of hashish and small quantities of cocaine and LSD.

David Helmback was arrested at the Valley View Apartments in Hailey after the Hailey police were informed by U.S. Postal Inspection agent that a package containing the hashish was being delivered to Helmback, according to Hailey Police Chief Dan Norton.

Small quantities of cocaine and LSD were also found in Helmback's residence, Norton said. He estimated the value of the hashish to be around $4,800.

Helmback was arraigned in Blaine County Fifth District Court Thursday and was being held Friday in lieu of $10,000 bail.

"and as the dog sniffs it out, and where it is sent parcel post, the customs have the right to open it."

The parcel post package was turned over by customs to U.S. Postal inspection agents, Patterson said, and an agent from Salt Lake City delivered the package to the Hailey Post Office while also informing the Hailey police. After Helmback picked up the package the arrest was made.

Ford did a service as President

Gerald Ford never was elected President of the United States.

His brief reign as the nation's chief executive following the resignation of Richard Nixon probably won't be remembered by historians as one of the nation's most important presidencies.

After all, Millard Fillmore assumed the Presidency for two years in the 1850s and who remembers what he did in office?

Before President Ford slips into political oblivion, however, Idahoans should reflect on what his presidency was and what the former Michigan congressman did for his nation.

Next week, when Jimmy Carter takes over the White House, he will assume a job which holds great power. The American Presidency commands respect from Congress, American voters, and from leaders around the world.

When Gerald Ford became President one black Friday in August, 1974, the fate of the American presidency was unknown.

President Nixon had resigned and faced possible criminal charges for obstructing justice. The vice president had resigned months before and, the nation's top political advisors were in jail or heading there.

Jerry Ford was handed the keys to the White House and was told, you are on your own.

Under these less than perfect circumstances, he performed admirably as President.

Idahoans and other westerners voted to give Ford another term as President. It didn't work out that way, but the presidency probably will not again fall into disfavor under newly-elected President Carter.

Carter's victory underscores the confidence Americans have in the power of the Presidency to change things for the better in this nation. That confidence wasn't there when Jerry Ford took office.

Perhaps he wasn't a great President, but Ford was what the doctor ordered in 1974. He mended the wounds, he calmed a nation.

For that he has the thanks of Idaho.

Death penalty not academic

Americans apparently will be content tomorrow when Gary Gilmore walks in front of a five man firing squad in Utah and is executed for the murder of Benny Bushnell last year.

National polls show about 80 per cent of the nation feels Gary Gilmore should have the right to choose execution rather than appeal that his life be spared.

Two out of three Americans also agree with the concept of capital punishment.

Subtracting Gary Gilmore's name from the list of prisoners on death row in the United States still leaves about 350 people waiting to be executed. Gilmore's execution, the first in 10 years in this country, will certainly lead to more use of capital punishment.

Once the oddities of the Gilmore case wear off, Americans will be forced to examine exactly what capital punishment is. The events in Gary Gilmore's case aren't just an episode of Kojack. They are authentic events which led to some complex legal and moral problems.

Perhaps Gilmore is right when he says he has the right to die. But prisoners don't have many other rights so why this one? They have to ask when to use a toilet, must ask permission to talk to family, but Gary Gilmore has shown that he finally has one right which cannot be taken away, the right to die.

In the process, he has attracted more attention to his pathetic life than should ever be given.

But the price of this attention will be his death tomorrow. Following his death will be the executions of at least two other prisoners in the coming month, barring last minute legal shuffling.

Gary Gilmore opens the door to capital punishment in the United States. Proponents of the death penalty will now begin looking for proof Gilmore's death will deter crimes in others.

Opponents of the death penalty will again point out the barbaric nature of a society who executes its own.

In Idaho, a newly drafted capital punishment law will be passed this legislative session so that this state can join with rest of the nation in exercising the rights of capital punishment.

Beginning tomorrow the debate over the death penalty takes on a new, completely serious tone. A man will die in the United States for his crimes.

We must all begin thinking more seriously about the death penalty Monday because it is no longer an academic debate.

New weapons may alter warfare

Flying aircraft carriers, capable of launching and recovering fighter planes in flight.

Laser superguns, guaranteed to hit targets miles away almost instantaneously.

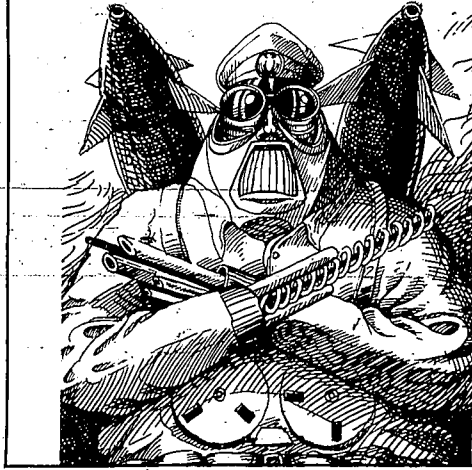

Tank armor impervious to present anti-tank weapons.

Mini-submarines for surprise strikes.

Remote-controlled planes that can do everything manned aircraft can, but better.

These are the new weapons that will alter the face of war in the 1980s.

A special LENS report.

By NEA/London Economist News Service

The state of military technology is approaching a threshold beyond which almost every weapon in the collective arsenal of science fiction may become possible.

In addition to high-energy lasers, "seeing in the dark" devices, and ultrasophisticated artillery "locators," military research and development teams have come up with other technologies that are likely to change the nature of warfare as we have known it.

1. Tank armor: New technology in tank armor, particularly the Chobham kind recently developed by Britain, could once again make the tank the master of the battlefield. Today's small missiles — weapons that weigh only a few pounds — can destroy any tank now in service by virtue of the shaped-charge warhead they carry; this focuses the energy of its explosion into a fireball which burns through ordinary armor. Since the shaped-charge warhead does not need to be traveling fast when it hits, it can be mounted on a low-powered rocket small enough to be carried by a single infantryman.

The new armor is relatively impervious to this kind of explosive, and thus threatens to put most of the world's present anti-tank weapons out of business within the next few years. This will not mean that tanks are invulnerable, but it will mean that heavy weapons will once again be required to deal with them — not something foot soldiers can carry.

The Russians are in a bad fix here. All of their tanks are vulnerable to NATO's modern anti-tank weapons. But, because they have so many (40,000 of them), they cannot replace their tank fleet rapidly even when Russia eventually develops the ingenious new armor the West has invented.

NATO's biggest armies, the German and the American ones, will put tanks into service in a few years (time which will brush aside even the best shaped-charge anti-tank warheads now entering service. Unless the Russians perform a technological and manufacturing miracle, they will, therefore, be way behind in the tank competition — in quality, if not in quantity — for a long time to come.

2. Remotely piloted vehicles: Small remotely controlled planes can already do most things that manned aircraft can do, but better. They are cheaper, can fly higher and longer, and maneuver more lightly because they do not have to worry about the physiology of a human being inside them. And they can do all this in a smaller package, which makes them much harder to detect and shoot down. They can navigate on their own, fire the weapons they carry, send back reports — and even make kamikaze attacks.

The next steps are sensors and data links that will permit them to see better than man, transmit what they see to their controller, and receive commands at long range. They have already proved themselves as reconnaissance vehicles. They could do many of the ground attack jobs ordinary aircraft do now. But fighting other aircraft will take a bit longer; there is still too much resistance from pilots clutched on to their cockpits.

Robot airplanes will not replace all manned aircraft by the end of the century, but they could replace most of them.

3. Small submarines: Most of the money spent recently on research into underwater warfare has gone into more efficient and quieter nuclear submarines. But at the other end of the scale from the underwater Leviathans are tiny submersible vehicles — carrying two to five men apiece — which, almost unnoticed, have been proliferating like spawning fish.

Most of these mini-submarines are for research, or commercial work, or are expensive toys for rich men. But they will soon be given advanced for small countries to be able to make or buy submarines which will be hard to detect because of their size but could carry one or two weapons — such as cruise missiles — that could strike at targets with remarkable accuracy. These small subs will not have great range and speed, but they could travel a fair distance if they go slowly, and could be carried, secretly, on board many of the merchant ships of the world.

Because things are changing so rapidly, it is risky to predict precisely what effect this science-fiction-become-reality will have on war in the 1980s. One or two guesses are possible.

These weapons, like the original Colt revolver, are great equalizers. No many of them are needed to achieve a considerable effect; some of them are not all that expensive; and some, though immensely complex to manufacture can be operated by men with much less training than the old weapons required.

Letter to Betty

By JUDY CLABES

Dear Betty: You didn't ask to be First Lady. You didn't actively seek the job, and most of us got the impression you would be just as happy without it. But when it was thrust on you, you were there, doing it up right when we needed you most.

You were frank, honest, open, natural — all the things we had begun to think First Ladies couldn't be. But most of all, you were human. You made us more comfortable with ourselves.

Oh, we didn't always agree with you, of course. But we couldn't help but love you for the way you were making us feel again.

While we were being bombarded with reports of the inevitable demise of the American family, there you were with a doting husband and four handsome, well-adjusted, devoted, normal children.

You were a steady influence, you will your boys who'd rather ride bucking broncos, plant trees, or go skiing than bask in the limelight of First Family fame; you with a string-haired, often barefoot and bluejean-clad daughter who'd rather have an apartment of her own than the glamorous perquisites of White House living. No fancy finishing schools, no snobbishness, no impudence, no phoniness — just a regular American family doing things regular American families do.

You were ever the mother. Your boys admitted they had smoked marijuana. You weren't shattered. You may not have approved, but they were no less your sons. You admitted — theoretically, of course — that you would try to understand if your daughter confessed to having an affair. Mothers everywhere knew what you meant. We all know we may not always like everything our children will do, but they are our children and we'll love them nonetheless. That's what families are all about. You were a welcome reminder.

And you were ever the wife. You often kissed and hugged your husband for all the world to see. It seemed always spontaneous, genuine — as if you really liked him. Yet, you were your own person, often in disagreement with him on weighty issues, always expressing your own mind.

You made us feel less like freaks, those of us who also have minds of our own, but who love our men, too.

Best of all, your husband seemed to like you that way. We got the impression he really meant it when he said he was proud you spoke your mind.

So here you were, reminding us that marriages can work in wonderful ways.

You made us proud, Betty Ford. Our hearts were with you, as you — at your husband's request — read his concession statement to the world. You were gracious and dignified. "Most women couldn't have done that," a male viewer remarked. But deep down he must have been impressed by the fact that women are not necessarily reduced to blubbering incoherence in a clinch.

We remembered that it was Betty Ford who stepped forward and took charge when a man lay dying on the speaker's platform. It was Betty Ford, in a spontaneous act of genuine faith, who prayed. The nation watched in awe: you touched us all.

It was who prayed for you when we learned of your pending mastectomy. But it was you who gave us strength. You were open, forthright, unflinching, courageous — giving hope to thousands of women who had been through that hell, saving countless others from a similar fate.

How can we repay you for the service you've done us and your country?

We'll miss you, Betty Ford. We'll miss seeing you dance the bump with Tony Orlando or the lustle with Fred Astaire. We'll miss the "Betty Ford for President" buttons, we'll miss your uncharacteristic laugh, your warmth, your steely influence. We'll miss seeing you, First Lady, just be yourself.

At the time when we needed you most, you were almost too good to be true.

But that's the best part of all. We did believe again, and you didn't let us down.

WE'LL MISS YOU, BETTY FORD

Some post-election thoughts on a real winner.

International problems need Carter's attention

By THOMAS E. MULLANEY

NEW YORK — With his economic-stimulus package now opened and on the table to await congressional action, President-elect Jimmy Carter has promptly and correctly turned a good bit of his attention to international problems. There are plenty of them in that area — many with economic overtones and linked closely to policies to be adopted by the United States — and they are perhaps more compelling than foster growth of the American economy in the drive for greater global stability.

The decision to send his vice president, Walter F. Mondale, on a quick swing through Western Europe and Japan almost immediately after the inauguration next week to outline the new administration's foreign-policy intentions and to help pave the way for Economic Summit III, was an astute move by Carter.

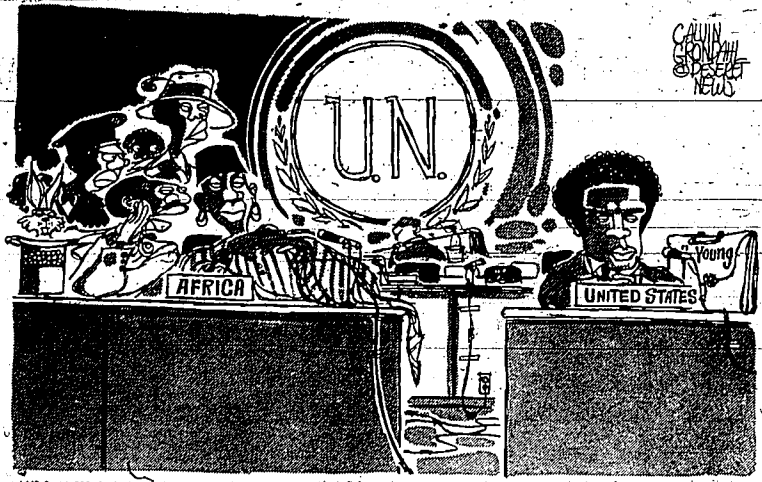

While the United States may no longer be the dominant force it once was in the international field, it still is fully expected by its Western partners to exercise strong leadership for the mutual benefit of all.

To this country still falls the chief responsibility for guarding against the adoption of fiscal, monetary and trade policies here and elsewhere that could create inflationary and other problems leading to increased distortions in world markets and fresh turmoil in the international financial system.

Now that the oil-producing countries have taken a fairly moderate stance on their prices for the first half of 1977, and Britain has obtained her big credit from the International Monetary Fund, two of the major international uncertainties of recent months have been clarified. Nevertheless, other big difficulties remain in the slowness of economic growth abroad, in the rise of protectionist trade trends, in the payments problems of so many industrialized and developing countries, in the huge growth of world debt, in the impact of high energy prices, in the need for alternative energy sources, in the constant danger of new political upheavals in many parts of the world.

One of the first issues to be determined by the new administration in Washington is whether the economic-stimulus program it proposed last week fulfills the expectations of Europe and Japan for spurring their own growth and lifting the economic potentiality of other countries.

"You'll have to think of something else to call a U.S. ambassador besides 'White Honky.'"

Some noses out of joint over Carter inaugural

WASHINGTON — Although threatened financial disaster for the Carter inaugural was prevented by an SOS to an Atlanta banker, no such preventive medicine has been applied to the political side of Mr. Carter's first great bureaucratic challenge since his November election.

"It is so bad," one influential Democratic state chairman told us, "that only a lizzard can save Carter's inauguration from hitting him politically during the first few months and maybe longer."

That seems exaggerated, considering the nature of the inauguration as a one-shot, one-day event that will pass into history Jan. 21. Yet, it is by no means a unique view among the scores of top Democratic party operatives who swarmed to elect Jimmy Carter and now find their requests for VIP tickets turned down and their calls to Washington unanswered.

EVANS & NOVAK

Only a 20-cent phone call separates neighboring Maryland from inaugural headquarters. Nevertheless, state Sen. James Clark, who ran Carter's primary and general election campaigns in Maryland, has been unable to get tickets for key figures such as state controller Louis Goldstein and James Ralph, a major campaign contributor. Clark tries to be philosophic. "It seems to be getting a lot harder to get Carter inaugurated than elected," he told us.

The threatened financial problem in 1976 ink spending by the inaugural committee, co-chaired by Buddy Tiraona and Vicki Rogers, was solved when Bert Lance, Mr. Carter's budget director-designate, started working early last month. Not known for procrastination, Lance quickly imported A.D. Fraser, vice president of Atlanta's Citizens and Southern Bank, to impose strict accounting and spending procedures.

stayed quietly in Atlanta headquarters but re-emerged as inaugural co-chairman working with many of the same politicians who had feuded with her last fall.

"This mix" has proved explosive. When Democratic state chairman met in San Francisco last month, no representative of the inaugural committee was there to hold hands or calm the angry. Instead, Carter was represented by Joel McCleary, a low-level aide of Philip Wise (Carter's selection as executive director of the Democratic National Committee). When one state chairman complained about lack of cooperation from the inaugural committee, McCleary replied: "If you had done better by us in the campaign you would find us more friendly to you today."

Following that December meeting, one important state chairman complained directly to Kurt Moffat, the inaugural committee's chief ticket man, about not sending invitations to Carter national convention delegates. Moffat's answer was demanding: some Carter delegates weren't really for Carter and, anyway, there weren't that many tickets.

Forgiving Steve tough in Idaho

MACKAY — In this tiny, isolated town on the plains of Custer County Steve Stanley has a bunch of friends. In the next few weeks he will need all of them to save his job. Not quite two years ago Stanley moved his young family to Mackay where he assumed the duties of high school principal and superintendent of schools. From the beginning he was a success. Mackay had suffered through four or five superintendents in the last decade but parents, teachers and students alike came to believe Steve was going to stay awhile. They may be wrong. Last Wednesday during an executive session of the Idaho Board of Education, Steve Stanley's teaching certificate almost was revoked. Minutes later he would be out of his job in Mackay and unable to get a teaching job anywhere in Idaho.

After a stormy session behind closed doors the state board of education postponed revocation of Stanley's meal ticket pending a public hearing on the matter. Back in Mackay the teachers and students of Steve Stanley rallied behind their leader. Petitions circulated in the school asking for support of the superintendent. Teachers voted unanimously to call off school the day of Stanley's hearing so the entire faculty could appear in his support when the hour of judgment came.

The teachers' support for Stanley is extraordinary not because teachers generally hate principals but because the Mackay faculty knows full well why the state board almost yanked Stanley's teaching rights. By no stretch of the imagination is this case something which is likely to be aired on Welcome Back, Kottler. Mackay's teachers now know their superintendent pled guilty on Oct. 23, 1976 to three counts of engaging in lewd and lascivious conduct with a minor child. The Mackay school board also knows their top administrator became sexually involved with two 16-year-old girls while he was principal in the Avery School District in Shoshone County.

But the board also supports Stanley today. "Erna Rukavina, the only woman on the Mackay school board spoke her opinion of the embattled district 302 superintendent on a crackling long distance phone call a few days ago. "We're not in a position to pass judgment on him in another time and another place," she said. "I think he's a great superintendent. I would come to his defense based on what I know of his record in Mackay. I think the rest of the board would, too."

Still another of Steve Stanley's allies is the pastor of the Mackay Community Church, Rev. Harold McGuinnis. Rev. McGuinnis was one of the first in Mackay to learn the past history of the superintendent. The reverend helped Stanley build a new life in Mackay based on intensely devoted religious beliefs. On a stack of Bibles or in a legal deposition Rev. McGuinnis swears Steve Stanley is a reformed man, one of God's children whose life has been changed past, present and future.

Against the Board of Education and the Idaho Code Steve Stanley will need even more than the help of Jesus Christ to save his teaching credentials. In the Boise office of Superintendent of Public Instruction Roy Truby, the entire Steve Stanley affair routinely generates waves of nervousness. The office didn't learn of Stanley's past until a parent from northern Idaho called to complain about the state's continued employment of a convicted child molester in a job where he comes into contact with young people. Now that the story is known, the state Board of Education and the superintendent of public instruction are trying to iron out a quick solution to the case knowing full well the incident could blow up like a time bomb. The iron, which the board plans to use to flatten out the Steve Stanley trouble spot is a 1963 law now in the Idaho Code which explicitly details four unforgivable sins which cannot be committed by holders of a state teaching certificate. Idaho law 33-1210 says any educator who is convicted of committing adultery, incest, crimes against nature or engages in lewd and lascivious conduct with minor children gets his certificate shredded with no ifs, ands, or buts.

Only on the advice of the Attorney General did the state board hold off on the revocation of Stanley's certificate so he could have a hearing. Superintendent Truby pledges to make the hearing as fair as he can and will allow Stanley to bring in his personal records from the past year and a half which show him purified from his sordid past. Rev. McGuinnis will be at the hearing, along with the Mackay teachers and letters of recommendation from the school board.

Best of these testimonies are likely to save Stanley from the unemployment lines. Idaho law just doesn't give second chances in cases like this. The crimes are judged too serious, the public reaction too negative, the vision of a second offense too horrendous. Not one parent in 1000 outside of Mackay is likely to stand up and defend the right of this superintendent to remain in education. The state Board of Education knows this and so does Roy Truby.

But not one parent in 1000 has a child in Mackay schools. In this town, with everyone knowing the past history of the superintendent, most teachers, kids, and school board members are willing to take the unpopular position of supporting Steve Stanley. Just maybe, this man is too good an educator to lose. In a subdued and quavering voice, Superintendent Stanley talked Friday about his future. He talked like a man who already lived through one nightmare and isn't relishing the idea of living it again.

His newly found religious belief are being put to the test, and he knows it. "I've done my job effectively because I have faith," he said. "I'm praying the whole thing doesn't come out again. I feel everyone of us has made a mistake. I feel I paid for mine in numerous ways. I have a black mark on me for the rest of my life. Now, I want to be left alone to do my job."

Not likely Steve. The Lord may forgive your past, the state of Idaho cannot.

Property tax draws protest from farmer

Editor, Times-News: We have paid the property tax again this year, and I wish to register a strong protest about this tax on behalf of all the farming people of our area... to call upon these farming people to examine the tax structure under which we operate and to get together and make a loud protest to the legislators who have continued to fail to face the problem and do something. Farming people and all those who own property from which they make a living pay income tax, sales tax and all the other taxes everyone else pays, but pay the property tax in addition. The property tax we pay each year is used to pay for county government, schools, school buildings, part of the hospital costs, hospital buildings, the airport, county welfare and many other things. Everyone benefits from the services this tax pays for, but businessmen who own property and farmers and ranchers who own land pay a much greater amount for these things than salaried people, wage-earners, or those who own securities. Why should one household pay so much more than another for these services and benefits? In the Times-News a few days ago we saw an article about a proposed recreation district in Cassia County. As I understand it this recreation district was to be funded by a tax levy against the property in the area, and consequently anyone who owns property more than a lot and dwelling, property they have bought and use to make a living, will have to pay a much larger amount toward this district than a family will only a house and a lot. The same goes for all these "improvements" in each county. Anytime a new public building to be funded by the county or school district is approved, the farm and business people must pay a much larger share of the cost than wage or salary earners. A few months ago we attended a meeting called to discuss a countywide fire district. The promoters wanted this fire protection to be funded by a four to eight mill levy on all county real estate, which would mean that a person who owned a farm on which he makes his living would pay the four to eight mills on the valuation of his whole farm as well as home. The wage-earner would pay the same levy on his dwelling. The house-owner would receive as much benefit as the farm family but would pay much less for it than the farm-owner. Since all of us benefit from these aforementioned things, why must the real property owner pay so much more for them than the person who works for wages or a salary? The non-farm, wage and salary earning population of our area, our state, and the whole nation is growing. More money is being paid by the counties, the school districts. The only way they so far have raised this needed revenue is by increasing the property tax and the valuation of property. This puts a heavier and heavier burden on the farm population and no burden on the lawyer, the doctor, or the other salaried people, or on the truck-driver, the school teacher, or the wage-earner who may be receiving 100 or more times what the farmer does for a net income. The truth is the property tax is antiquated, arbitrary and confiscatory. It is levied with no regard for the benefit received or the income of the owner. It has become a grossly unfair tax. Property owners pay the property tax in addition to income tax on their net incomes, and sales tax on what they buy. Legislators write the tax laws, and the legislators should change them from time to time to make taxes fall fairly on all citizens. As the farm population continues to shrink, the non-farm population continues to grow, bringing with the growth more and more need for funds for county services, hospitals, schools, and many other things. It is only common sense to require everyone to pay these costs. The property tax should be placed out and placed out quickly. Every family should shoulder its share of county and statewide benefits and services. It is time the legislators addressed themselves to this problem. It is time the farm-and-ranch-people-made-themselves heard. So far businessmen seem to have taken care of themselves with their cost-plus prices but as far as property tax goes, they, too, pay more than their share. The farming people are in a far different position in regard to prices. Farming people need to meet and present. We are told that they are now only four per cent of the population of our country. It is time they made a "96 per cent noise" about this totally unfair tax. JOY E. RIEDEMANN Twin Falls.

Editorial view applauded

Editor, Times-News: As an attorney who was directly involved in the Don Green matter, and as a member of Common Cause, I support your position and that of Mr. Talkington with regard to public grievance hearings for city employees. Common Cause is a non-profit organization dedicated to allowing the public access to government decision-making processes. The decision of the Twin Falls City Council to let the public access to grievance hearings violates the right of the taxpayers to see how their government works. Grievance hearings violate the right of the taxpayers to see how their government works. Grievance hearings pinpoint problems in the operations of city departments. This was especially true in the case of Don Green. Most of the publicity in this case was adverse to Don Green and Frank Barnett, and not to Don Green. The hearings demonstrated that certain procedures then in effect with regard to grievance operations to filter out information favorable to employees, and prevented the hearing committee from considering all available information. I refer anyone interested in this meeting to the report of the hearing committee. While upholding the decision to relieve Don Green, it severely chastised the city manager and the police chief for their incompetent handling of the discharge. It also recommended that Don Green be hired in another city department position. Mr. Miller refused to do this. I suspect that was the reason Don Green left town, rather than "adverse publicity." This decision by the City Council is a step backward. When the city conducts the grievance hearings behind closed doors, the employee has little chance of winning. When the employee is offered a chance to voluntarily resign with a good employment recommendation rather than to proceed with the grievance procedure, the employee will probably resign. Don Green believed he was right and decided to fight his discharge. How many others will make that decision now that the hearings are conducted behind closed doors? The city should take a long look at its grievance procedures. If it continues to treat its employees unfairly, I predict that the various departments will be forced to unionize in order to protect their members. LOUIS GARBRECHT Twin Falls.

Prayer for today

We like new things, God. Whether it's a new book, a new project or a new suit of clothes, there's something intriguing about newness. The New Year is no different. Here's a new beginning for us, and we like it. Just lately there's been a lot of talk about another new beginning. They call it "born again" spiritually. There's something intriguing about that, too — turning away from the old life and mistakes and starting a new life through faith in Christ. Help us to see the possibilities of such a new life lived for you. — Uelita Martin

Pope warns of violence

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope Paul VI said Saturday that violence is smoldering throughout the world "like a partly extinguished fire ready to flare up again" at the first gust of wind.

The pope said the world will never be at peace until men overcome "the often greedy instincts of possessiveness, power, narrow nationalism, race and sex" and the notion that "evil always means other people."

Shots misfire, 6th glances

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (UPI) — A two-duty police officer escaped death from a gun that misfired five times while pointed at his face, authorities said. A sixth bullet hit him in a back brace he was wearing.

After visiting the police station Friday night, the officer looked out to his car, which was parked near a clump of bushes. As he entered the vehicle, police said, two men emerged from the bushes, opened the passenger door, pointed a gun at his face and pulled the trigger five times.

Kidnap victim found in coma

MARSEILLE, France (UPI) — A wealthy Marseille jeweler kidnaped last Tuesday and held for $600,000 ransom was found in a coma on a country road Saturday, police said.

Police said there was no indication why the kidnapers abandoned Richard Fournier, 32, before the ransom was paid. They said he was in serious condition at a nearby hospital in Aix-en-Provence.

Soviet dissident appeals

PARIS (UPI) — Exiled Soviet dissident Vladimir Bukovsky appealed Saturday for more help for Soviet civil rights workers and said "each single letter" sent in protest "helps improve the situation of people held in detention."

Opening a public debate on political prisoners in the Soviet Union, the 34-year-old biologist also said a bomb that exploded in the Moscow subway last weekend could not have been the work of Soviet dissident groups.

Bukovsky, who spent three years in and out of Soviet labor camps, denounced Soviet authorities for allegedly internment dissidents in psychiatric clinics after their imprisonment.

Peepers can be exposed

SEATTLE (UPI) — Peep show watchers are not entitled to complete privacy, federal District Court Judge Donald Voorhees ruled Friday, denying a preliminary injunction to three men.

The men had asked the federal court stop the enforcement of a City of Seattle ordinance.

The ordinance requires the interior of a peepshow establishments be arranged so that the viewing area of each booth — as well as each viewer from the waist down — is visible from the entrance to the premises.

Embassy water tainted

MOSCOW (UPI) — Cyanide up to 250 per cent higher than safe amounts and large doses of mercury have been found in the water supply at buildings housing American diplomats in Moscow, a U.S. embassy spokesman said Saturday.

The spokesman said the U.S. embassy physician had found no evidence of illness related to the chemicals, but sent a memorandum about the hazard to residents of the buildings.

Only two weeks ago, the embassy reported that one-third of its staff had been found to have abnormal blood counts due to unknown "factor in the Moscow environment."

There was no suggestion in the embassy memorandum that there was a link between the chemicals and the blood abnormalities, which involved a higher than usual count of white cells known as lymphocytes.

The embassy official said seven American families out of 130 lived in the two buildings where the chemicals were found.

The official said water samples were taken during August, 1976, from 12 buildings where U.S. diplomats and other foreigners are kept in isolation by Soviet authorities from the Moscow population.

At one building, the cyanide level in the water was 250 per cent higher than allowable under recommendations of the World Health Organization.

At another building, the level of mercury in the drinking water was found to be 35 per cent higher than recommended by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

Denies guilt

SINGER-ACTRESS Claudine Longet tells reporters she is not guilty after a jury found her guilty of criminally negligent homicide — a misdemeanor — in the shooting death of peepster Spider Sabich. (UPI)

Singer Longet convicted

ASPEN, Colo. (UPI) — Singer Claudine Longet was convicted Friday by a jury of neighbors of criminally negligent homicide — a misdemeanor — in the shooting death of her lover, peepster Vladimir "Spider" Sabich.

The former Las Vegas showgirl, originally charged with felony manslaughter, showed little emotion when the verdict was announced before a packed Pitkin County courtroom.

Later, holding hands with her ex-husband, singer Andy Williams, Miss Longet repeatedly blamed the residents of this onetime silver boomtown — he said they were against Miss Longet — for the verdict.

"The evil in this town was 'I am not guilty.'"

Williams, present for the entire week of testimony, cried as District Judge George Lohr polled the jurors to guarantee the finding was unanimous.

"I'm very disappointed," Williams said. "I expected her to be acquitted."

Deputy District Attorney Ashley Anderson said he did not expect Lohr to impose the maximum penalty of two years in jail and a $5,000 fine. He said that in similar cases, Lohr, who set a Jan. 31 date for sentencing, usually imposes "30 to 60 day sentences to be served in the jail at Aspen."

"I would have been disappointed if she hadn't been convicted of something," Anderson said. "I'm very pleased."

"Other people have had to serve a jail term and I would assume he (Lohr) would do the same in her case. I would assume she would not be treated any differently."

Defense attorney Charles Weedman slumped in his chair, and pulled at his necktie in apparent dismay when the verdict was announced. He partially blamed the residents of this onetime silver boomtown — he said they were against Miss Longet — for the verdict.

"The evil in this town was 'I am not guilty.'" the gossip about Spider and Claudine," he said. "For all of this there should be some shame in this community."

He accompanied Miss Longet and Williams from the courthouse, saying he was disappointed "but glad it wasn't felony manslaughter."

The seven-man, five-woman jury deliberated about 5 1/2 hours before reaching its verdict, which was read in court at 7:40 p.m. EST.

During the two-week trial, defense attorneys presented evidence in support of Miss Longet's claim that a .22-caliber pistol discharged accidentally March 21 and killed Sabich, 32, a two-time world professional ski champion, in their resort chalet.

Bolles case broken open

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) — Judge Bruce Birdsell allowed Tucson attorney John Adams to file a motion for summary judgment in the Bolles case.

Adams argued Dunlap asked him to kill Bolles and that Robison constructed the bomb which exploded under the reporter's car in a Phoenix hotel parking lot June 2.

Adams, 33, changed his innocent plea after spending two hours in Birdsell's chambers before a special Saturday court session scheduled to expedite jury selection.

Adams' story was told in affidavits filed in Phoenix to support the arrest of Max Dunlap, a contractor, and James Robison, a plumber.

The affidavits said State Attorney General Bruce Bablitt was among those marked for murder in the conspiracy.

Adams alleged Dunlap asked him to kill Bolles and that Robison constructed the bomb which exploded under the reporter's car in a Phoenix hotel parking lot June 2.

Detective John Sellers said in an affidavit, based on "voluntary statements" by Adams, that Dunlap asked Adams to kill three persons, including Bolles and Bablitt.

The affidavit said that during a conversation in March, 1976, "Dunlap said Kemper Marley wanted Donald Bolles killed as a result of Donald Bolles having given Kemper Marley a bad time over the Arizona Racing Commission."

Spree ends $500,000 gone and 'no regrets'

SANTA FE, N.M. (UPI) — Richard Rees had $500,000 in cash from a Brit's money bag, and quickly figured out how to spend it. "I bought a bar and had a party," Rees said. The tab at the Lookout nightclub at Fort Worth, Tex., was $250,000. Rees enjoyed horse racing, buying and junking cars and pickups, gambling in Las Vegas and giving lavish gifts to women. But the money ran out, and so did his freedom. Rees was arraigned on $250,000 bond Friday on charges he slipped away from Brink's delivery truck in San Mateo, Calif., last February with $500,000. The FBI tracked the fugitive Brink's guard across the southwest and captured him Thursday night in a cabin near where he camped in the snow-covered mountains of north-central New Mexico. "I have no regrets except that I am here," Rees said. "I knew I was going to get caught. I was glad to get caught by these guys (FBI). I wanted them to get me before someone else did."

Spree ends with grin

SUSPECT Richard Rees, accused of taking a half million dollars from a San Mateo, Calif., armored car, is led to his arraignment before a U.S. magistrate in Santa Fe, N.M., by an FBI agent. It is believed he spent the bulk of the money on a gigantic spending spree (UPI)

Rees, lanky and with a short dark beard, had $393 in his left pockets, money the FBI said was not part of the missing Brink's loot. This month, in a letter to a San Francisco newspaper columnist, Rees said he had spent most of the money on a horse, a car, a dog and women. He said women were his downfall. "I bought so many cars I really don't remember any more," he said Friday. "Sure I gambled, but I won. It was the first time I ever won on anything."

Disney eyes SV purchase

(Continued from p. 1) Cayo said he is considering either buying an existing resort or build one from scratch. "But if Disney buys an existing one you are pretty much set with what is there and certainly you don't go in and just rip it down and start over," he said. "We have no plans to come in with any mass development," he said. He said Disney experts have been gathering information on the existing Sun Valley operation including studying the company's financial records. "We're not getting that's all," he said. "Once the bulk of the information is gathered it will be a matter of assimilating it. A matter of dissecting this in our own company, which will take a period of time," Cayo said.

Sorensen's in trouble over try for CIA post

By United Press International The nomination of Theodore Sorensen to head the Central Intelligence Agency appeared to be running into serious — possibly fatal — trouble Saturday. Senate majority leader Robert Byrd said, without elaborating, that he believes Sorensen's chances of confirmation are "questionable." A newspaper reported the Kennedy administration aide had admitted in a 1972 affidavit to taking classified government documents, using them to write a book and donating them to the National Archives in return for a tax break. And a conservative political group, expected to lead the opposition to Sorensen's confirmation hearings, said the Carter nominee would be a "disaster" as CIA director. President-elect Jimmy Carter, attending a barbecue in Plains, Ga., Saturday, refused to answer reporter's questions about Byrd's assessment. Sorensen could not be reached for comment. His confirmation hearings begin Monday before the Senate Intelligence Committee headed by Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii. Byrd, who last week said he thought all of Carter's nominees would win Senate confirmation, retreated Saturday. In an interview, Byrd said he would "reserve final judgment" on the chances of Sorensen's confirmation as attorney general. Some civil rights groups and black leaders have accused Bell of helping Southern states resist desegregation orders in the 1950s and 1960s, and have challenged his record on other civil rights issues. "As of now," Byrd said, "I think he will be confirmed. But as for Sorensen, he said, 'I wouldn't be willing to say that.' "I consider his nomination to be in considerable difficulty. His chances are, at this point, questionable." Byrd refused to comment on possible reasons for opposition to the 48-year-old lawyer, who served as Kennedy's chief speechwriter; idea man and confidant. But many senators of both parties last week expressed concern about his registering for the draft in 1916 as a conscientious objector, his lack of experience in intelligence and his relationship with the Kennedys — especially his role in advising Sen. Edward Kennedy after the ear wreck at Chappaquiddick in 1969. The Long Island, N.Y., newspaper Newsday reported Saturday that Inouye has given members of his intelligence committee copies of an affidavit Sorensen filed in the 1972 Pentagon Papers case on behalf of defendant Daniel Ellsberg. According to Newsday, the affidavit confirmed Sorensen "took seven cartons of classified material from White House files, and later, without permission, used the information to write a book for President Kennedy. "He received a tax break for donating the classified material to his own property to the National Archives," the paper said. "He repeatedly leaked classified information to the news media and used secret information to write speeches when he served at the White House," it said.

A high school graduate, Floyd says he's been bouncing around since then. "I go home (to Myrtle Point) for about three months out of the year," Floyd says, falling up again, he says. He says he had his worst experience when he was 18 hitchhiking near Lewiston. "This guy in a pickup, drew a pistol on me and took my stuff through me out," he said. "All people are crazy, it just takes certain things to bring it out in 'em." He said he enjoys traveling to Yellowstone Park every year for a couple of weeks and "just bumming around." Just before graduating from high school, Floyd says he hitchhiked to San Jose, Calif., to visit his brother. He called it so much, he decided to keep doing it. On college, Floyd says, "You live in a small town, go to the community college. You usually get a job in the area and see all these people you know, the clique you grew up with, I'd rather meet the other

Jerome irrigators irked

(Continued from p. 1) He said the contract failed to provide protection for waterusers in a year like 1976 when they may not make enough money from the sale of their crops to meet production costs and pay for their water assessments by the deadline the next spring. "I was in the trouble I'm in this year," Stewart exclaimed about the unusually low prices he received for his crops, "and I can't make the water payment on time, I wouldn't get my water that year." And I'd like to know who could farm all summer without water and then go in and pay for his water for the next year," Stewart insisted. He cited a passage in the contract which reads: "Failure by the spacheholder to make all or any part of payment required for a period of 12 days shall constitute default and the contracting officer shall withhold the delivery of the water to the spacheholder . . . for the year in which such default occurs." Stewart recalled his early days as a homesteader when water was short in 1931, 1932 and 1933, saying if waterusers had been denied their water because of default — on payment — they would have had to give up their farms. Stewart also said, "We claim this contract is null and void because it was amended after we voted to approve it."

Stewart said the dam were saying." Stewart said. After Stewart's speech, Darrington proposed the company oppose the present contract and diamas the firm of Parry Robertson, Daly and Larson. "They represent Idaho Power and they represent us," Darrington said about the Twin Falls law firm. "I'd like to have another attorney's view of this contract," Rosholt, a member of Parry, Robertson, Daly and Larson, represents several canal companies and his firm also represented Idaho Power during the contract negotiations, he said. "It's been known for some 20 or 25 years that although our firm has been retained for the Twin Falls Canal Company and the American Falls Reservoir District, we have done things for the Idaho Power Company," he said. "You can represent contracting interests if they both give their permission," Rosholt explained. "We expressed the position from the outset that we would represent them both with their knowledge and consent."

Stewart insisted the original cost to irrigators placed at $1 million. Now, he claimed, the cost to irrigators will greatly exceed that amount. Rosholt said, however, the costs of the dam were never considered to be less than about $25 million and the delays and red tape involved in getting the project created added expense and inflated costs. "The project will probably cost one and three-quarters times the original cost," Rosholt said. "We had troubles, you add them up, plus record inflation on bricks and mortar and it's going to be more costly." "We still have the cheapest water in the world," Rosholt added. "It is on by going to cost about 85 cents or a dollar per acre-foot." Stewart also said the United States Government should be responsible for rehabilitating the dam and should assume such costs. He said the decision to replace the dam was made for other reasons than because of the deterioration of the old dam. "That dam wasn't near in the jeopardy that the papers

Winter grips East

By United Press International
The bitter cold gripping most of the northern half of the nation added another river passage to the hazardous travel list, and a Saturday snowfall gave the Buffalo area a new record for any winter.

The National Weather Service ended heavy snow and winter storm warnings issued Friday for the northeast, and said a storm that plastered eastern Pennsylvania and parts of New Jersey and eastern New York with up to 6 inches of snow had blown out to sea.

But a light snowfall around

Buffalo pushed the area's total for the winter to date to 126.6 inches, breaking a record set in the 1909-1910 season. There's a chance of another 42 inches before the winter ends, weather forecasters said.

A 30-mile stretch of the Allegheny River, a main commercial waterway, was closed near Pittsburgh by the U.S. Coast Guard to barges carrying oil or chemicals as a precaution against spills, because ice in midriver was up to 15 inches thick. Barge travel was nearly halted on the Monongahela and Ohio rivers because of ice, but the Coast Guard has not yet posted them.

Authorities ordered a 20-mile section of the ice-clogged Mississippi, mid-America's main north-south waterway, closed to traffic. A towboat broke up Thursday in a stretch of the River about 20 miles north of Cape Girardeau, Mo., apparently because of ice does and lack of proper channel buoy markers, displaced or sunk by ice.

Two grain-laden barges were sunk, and an "urgent advisory" Friday urged all boats remain off the river between St. Louis.

HS inflation?

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Freshmen are entering college with higher grades than ever before, indicating declining grading standards, according to the 11th annual survey of entering freshmen conducted by UCLA and the American Council on Education.

The University of California, Los Angeles, report on the survey said the survey indicated that "grade inflation" was continuing in secondary schools.

Among the 1976 college freshmen, nearly one in five or 19.7 per cent, earned an A average in high school. That was an increase of 1.4 per cent over 1975 and 6.2 per cent over 1969, the survey said.

The number of freshmen with C averages declined from 22.5 per cent to only 19.8 per cent during the same period, the survey said.

"When you consider these grade increases in the light of declining college admissions test scores, it is hard to escape the conclusion that grading standards in the secondary schools have been declining since the 1960s," UCLA Professor Alexander W. Astin, director of the survey, said.

Bogus check ring smashed

NORFOLK, Va. (UPI) — A white collar ring set up to sell bogus cashier's checks on the East Coast was smashed by a fake police fencing operation that netted $16.4 million in counterfeit checks and stolen merchandise, officials said Saturday.

Federal and state grand juries in Norfolk issued indictments with 248 charges against 60 persons involved in the organization that operated from Florida to upstate New York. Police had arrested 35 of those charged by mid-day Saturday.

The FBI and Norfolk police said "Operation Scowall" — the code name for the federally-financed police fence — was "the most successful operation of its kind in the country."

Investigators said the fake police fence started out buying stolen goods, amassing $1.4 million in merchandise, and ended up penetrating a nearly fool-proof counterfeit system.

FBI spokesman Herbert Clough said that the undercover police got $15 million in cashier's checks, either buying straight from the organization or by recovering them from other sources.

The investigation was started by four FBI agents and two Norfolk police officers who set up shop in a downtown Norfolk storefront in March, 1976. Agents passed the word they would buy stolen goods.

"It's not the Mafia," Clough said. "It was definitely organized... (but) was it the 'Cosa Nostra' or that type of thing? No."

New aide will propose grain reserve program

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Agriculture Secretary-designate Rep. Bob Bergland-D-Minn. says he plans to propose to Congress by March 31 a farmer-controlled grain reserve program which could operate at a "very modest" cost.

The reserve program, he said, is a policy to "accommodate the inevitable" fact that grain supplies can vary sharply from season to season, and that nobody yet can predict in advance whether the following year's crop will be big or small.

Bergland emphasized at a news conference Thursday that his plan is still in the drafting stage, and many details are not yet set. But in general, he said, it would operate by allowing farmers who put surplus grain under price support loans to hold it off the market for long periods — up to 3, 5 or even perhaps 10 years — for release when supplies decline and prices improve.

Conventional price support loans expire at the end of each crop season. When the loan expires, the farmer must repay the loan with interest or — if market prices are still below the support loan he got from the government — he can forfeit the crop into government ownership.

The system Bergland described would be a variation of an old practice, which has been used by farmers to "re-seed" their crop loans for additional seasons after the initial loan expiration date.

One way in which the program might operate, Bergland says, is for the government to pay storage costs on grain while farmers are holding it under extended loans. The program could include a feature under which the storage payments or other inducements, such as reduced loan interest rates, would cease if grain prices went above supports by specified amounts.

Ending the storage payments would encourage farmers to repay their loans and sell the grain. But Bergland emphasized his plan would not compel any producer to release his stored grain.

The only cost to taxpayers in the plan, Bergland said, "would be the very modest cost of storage." He said such costs would be "nothing" in comparison with alternatives such as forcing farmers to sell grain at disaster prices during surplus periods, government ownership of grain, or the costs to consumers if there are few reserves during short crop years.

Other highlights of Bergland's plans announced in a far-ranging meeting with reporters Thursday included:

- He intends to do everything possible to make better use of weather information in Agriculture Department policymaking and forecasts. Instead of making forecasts on the assumption that next year's weather will be average, he wants to see weather expertise used to help policymakers plan for possible surpluses or shortages.
- An Agriculture Department deputy secretary and assistant secretaries will be named by late next week, and other ranking aides will be selected later. Some top department agency administrators, including "those with a proven track record" will be retained if they want to stay.
- The Agriculture Department will be a "co-equal partner" with other federal agencies like the State and Treasury Departments in developing international trade policy, Bergland said.
- The secretary-designate plans to press for consideration of American participation in international commodity trade agreements.

Wait and see

BOISE (UPI) — The executive director of the Idaho Potato Commission said today if there are any adverse effects on the price of Idaho potatoes as a result of the adoption of the "Western Contract," the Commodity Futures Trading Commission will hear about it.

Gordon Randall said, "The Idaho Potato Commission is on record as not being very happy with lumping the Idaho potato with other potatoes."

"We'll wait and see if the net effect on the market is adverse then we will seek some redress," he said.

Randall said, "There are some discounts built into the new contract for other shipping points other than Idaho that represent the variance in prices that have been paid. If they tend to diminish the traditional price we get we will certainly talk to the commission about it."

He said the Idaho Potato Commission does not plan to bring a suit to protect the Idaho potato "at this time."

"But if we feel the contract in any way hurts our traditional marketing and pricing practices we will be less than forthcoming," he said.

The Commodity Futures Trading Commission adopted Thursday the "Western Contract," which recognizes Russet-Burbank crops from Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Colorado, North Dakota, Wisconsin, Michigan, Minnesota's Red River Valley and several California counties.

In the past only Idaho Russet-Burbank potatoes could be traded as such on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange and Idaho growers received premium prices for their crops, despite protests from other growers.

Study set

BOISE (UPI) — Water flow studies will be conducted below Anderson Dam next week, the Bureau of Reclamation said today.

Robert J. Brown, project superintendent, said the flows will fluctuate from 200 to 3,400 cubic feet per second at different intervals.

Brown said the study will determine the impact on the river environment of the installation of a third gate in the Anderson Ranch Dam. The addition would increase the present capacity of the installation to 40,500 kilowatts from 37,000 kilowatts.

"This study is being conducted by the University of Idaho and the Idaho Fish and Game Departments under a contract issued by the Bureau of Reclamation," Brown said.

Land bank meet set at Gooding Feb. 9

GOODING — The annual stockholders meeting of the Federal Land Bank Association of Gooding will be held on Feb. 9, according to Alan D. McCombs, manager of the association.

A highlight of the meeting this year will be a report on the program. And you may find the association during part of the year. The election of one director and dominating committee are also on the program.

Registration will begin at 11:30 a.m., with dinner to follow at the Lincoln Inn.

Directors of the Federal Land Bank Association of Gooding are Ray Sweat of Carey, president; Dwight Osborne of Fairfield, vice-president; Bill Barnes of Jerome; Joseph Pavkov of Pringle; and William Keene of Shoshone.

The association makes long-term loans to farmers and ranchers in Gooding, Lincoln, Jerome, Camas and Blaine counties.

Wrong identification

TWIN FALLS — A story carried in the Times-News on Thursday concerning the new American Falls Dam was accompanied by an erroneously identified picture.

Modest price increase forecast for retail beef

CHICAGO — Despite widespread concern about rising beef prices, signs point to only modest increases in retail beef prices during the first half of 1977, the Beef Industry Council said Friday.

The United States Department of Agriculture estimates total beef supplies for the year will be about 5 to 6 percent, resulting in a price increase in the number of cattle placed over 1976. This figure represents a 3-cent increase over 1975 average prices for beef, or an increase of about 2 percent over two years.

The short-term situation appears stable.

Reports of a record corn harvest, good availability of feeder cattle and optimism on the part of cattle feeders resulted in a 10 percent increase in the number of cattle placed over 1976, compared to the same month a year earlier.

As a result, the number of cattle in feedlots Dec. 1 was only slightly lower than on the same date in 1975. This indicates an adequate supply of fed cattle for marketing into the second quarter of 1977.

The long term trend, however, is toward higher prices.

Supplies of feeder cattle during 1976 were ample due to the record crop of 1973 and the large 1975 crop. However, sustained losses by producers have resulted in heavy liquidation of cow herds which, ordinarily would have been used to produce more calves. This is now being reflected in the outlook for feeder cattle supplies in 1977.

Current inventory shows ample numbers of cattle to be placed. In feedlots but, when these supplies are gone there will be a sharp reduction in feeder availability. Ground beef prices which have been kept low due to increased cow slaughter may increase as cow herd liquidation tapers off. Cows and other grass-fed animals contribute a major share of ground beef supplies. Other meat and poultry supplies will remain high.

Pressure will be placed on beef by competitive meats. Pork production during 1977 is expected to rise 1.3 billion pounds to about 13.7 billion pounds. As a result, pork production per capita should rise to about 63.5 pounds from the 1976 level of 57.8 pounds.

The USDA also estimates: broiler producers will continue to bring large supplies to market, with production expected to rise 5 to 8 percent during the first quarter. Record turkey supplies of 1976, up 11 percent from 1975, are expected to taper off during the year although first quarter output should match that of the same period a year ago.

Snow beginning to accumulate

IDAHO FALLS — Snow is beginning to accumulate on the Snake River watershed but depths are still far below those of a year ago.

Watermaster Arthur L. Larson said precipitation amounts during the first week of January included 37 inch at Moran for a total of 1.25 for the month; 96 inch at Island Park for 1.42; 19 at Pallasades for a total compared with 17 a year ago and 8 inches at Rifle Dam.

The water flow and storage report for the Snake River as of Jan. 10 includes:

- Jackson Lake, 580,800-acre feet compared with 625,000 a year ago; river at Moran, 269 cubic feet per second; Island Park Reservoir, 103,100 acre feet compared with 107,000 a year ago; Henry's Fork below Island Park, 433 second feet; Rifle Lake, less than 300 acre feet.
- Willow Creek, 30 cfs; Pallasades Reservoir, 1,052 million acre feet usable, compared with 1,009 million acre feet; river near Heise, 3,800 cfs; river near Shelley, 5,400 cfs; American Falls Reservoir, 842,000 acre feet compared with 877,000 a year ago; river at Neeley, 4020 cfs; Lake Walcott, 37,680 acre feet compared with 58,000 a year ago; river near Minidoka, 3,630 cfs; river at Milner, 4,240 cfs.

Washington, Gem 'war' continues

PASCO, Wash. (UPI) — The potato war between the states of Idaho and Washington will probably never end, but as far as the Chicago Mercantile Exchange is concerned a Russet Burbank potato is a Russet Burbank potato.

Idaho has understandably been very sensitive about its famous Idaho potato. The State is known as the "Gem State," not because of its precious stones, but because of the many-eyed vegetable.

Other states, meanwhile, have suffered interlary complexes from the status of the Idaho potato. The Russet Burbank, and in some cases have sought to increase sales by putting their spuds in Idaho potato sacks, or advertising by feeding it or comparing themselves favorably to the Idaho potato.

The Chicago Mercantile Exchange finally has recognized that a Russet is a Russet, for trading purposes anyway, and has given the Washington potato equality with the more famous Idaho spud.

"It helps all areas which grow Russet Burbank potatoes to be recognized," said Walter LePage, Pasco, Washington Potato Commission member.

In the past, only Idaho Russet Burbank could be traded on the Chicago futures market, and Idaho growers received premium prices for their crops, despite protests from Washington and Oregon growers.

The Chicago board now will recognize Russet Burbank crops from Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Colorado, North Dakota, Wisconsin, Michigan, Minnesota's Red River Valley and several California counties.

Aid sought for sugar growers

DENVER (UPI) — A Colorado legislator Wednesday introduced legislation urging Congress to help the sugar beet industry. Bill said he hoped federal officials would look at the plight of all farmers and ranchers.

"This is just one small part of the entire picture," said Sen. Timpan Bishop, R-Grand Junction. "We could have talked about a lot of other problems, but that was a shotgun approach I didn't want to take."

Bishop introduced a joint memorial which was approved on a voice vote, urging Congress and the President of the United States to take all appropriate steps to revitalize the economy of the state by proper legislative or administrative action.

Bishop, a college administrator, said the immediate cause of the memorial was the announced closing in recent weeks of four sugar beet plants in the state.

Temperatures do affect growth

By GEORGE ABRAHAM
WARM WATER FOR PLANTS
 Does the temperature of water used for house plants have any effect on growth?
 •Years ago, tests at one or two leading experiment stations tried to prove that temperature made no difference in growth and flowering of crops. We know better today.
 •Recent work, notably at Michigan State, indicates that warm water increases the number of blooms, the weight of the plants, and the length of stems of certain flowers such as snapdragons.
 •In winter (and even in summer) we advocate using water at or near the temperature of your greenhouse or house. Water temperature for seeds you're trying to sprout is very important.
 •Right now, tap water can run close to 42 degrees or even lower.
 •To get good germination of seed the medium or starter should be in 72 degrees or so. If you water the seeds with 42 degree tap water, it reduces the temperature to 45 degrees and it takes one day for the temperature to get back to 67 degrees.
 •Temperature of the water is different from the temperature of the air around your house plants. You get more mileage if you grow your house plants cooler at night. Certain foliage plants do not like to get below 65 or 60 degrees. African violets can take about 60 to 65 degrees, at night but not much lower.
 •The only effect cooler night temperatures have is a little delay in flowering. For example, greenhouse operators find that you get about one day delay in flowering for every one degree cooler temperature you run at night during the spring months.

green thumb

BEDDING BEGONIAS
 Last year many readers told us they had trouble raising recent petunias. This often happens if you grow them year after year in the same bed. Why not switch to an annual that threatens to dethrone the petunia — annual begonias?
 •They're great not only for bedding, but for spring pots, and porch boxes. They have an advantage over petunias — grow in full sun or semi-shade! And they provide a neat, bright display all summer, even during and after rains.
 •Petunias "mush" out after a rain and you have to wait a few days before the blooms appear again. Bedding begonias come in various colors which resist adverse weather — red, pink, pure white and shades in between. And they come in dwarf (6 to 8 inch), intermediate (10 inch) and tall (12 to 14 inch).
 •These annuals are easy to flower from seed you can start yourself. Use a light, well-drained seed starter (Jiffy Mix, Pro-Mix, Red-Earth, etc.). Do NOT cover seed. Just spread it light over the surface, water seed flat from below, place a plastic sheet over them and keep in a temperature of 72 degrees. Never let the seed dry out.

As soon as germination starts remove plastic sheet and move to the brightest window possible. When an inch tall, transplant into pots or "panty paks" and grow them on in a cooler window (about 65 degrees). If you start seed now, you'll have husky bedding plants by May.

POOR PLANT GROWTH
 If your house plants aren't making good growth, don't sock the fertilizer to them in hopes of beefing them up. After all, if you're under the weather how would you respond to a big meal shoved down your throat?
 •If you have a plant that's not faring too well, take a look at the roots. White roots mean good health. If roots are brownish, that means high soluble salts (excess "food") root rot, poorly drained soils or nematodes.

•Soluble salts come from fertilizers, manure and hard water, usually. Too much injures or cooks the roots, causing a slowdown of plant growth.
 •Many foliage plants shipped in are loaded with extra fertilizer to "carry them over" and when you feed such plants you really cook them further. Many state colleges (and florists) suggest washing the roots or soil ball with water to remove excess fertilizer.

•Many foliage plants are severely injured or killed because fertilizers are applied at the wrong time. After you flush the roots, allow the plant to grow a while, and if leaves are yellowish, you can apply a weak liquid plant food.
 •Root rots such as Phythium, Fusarium, Thielavopsis and Rhizoctonia often cause root or stem injury on many house plants. Symptoms are similar to cooked roots. Soils poorly drained can cause stunted growth, uneven growth and rotting.
 •Smell your soils and see if they have a musty odor, if so, repot, using a well-drained mixture such as one part each of sand, peat and loam. Plastic pots and glazed containers are apt to have musty soils because of poor drainage or overwatering.
 •Nematode injury is easier to detect. Plants are stunted and you'll notice tiny knots or balls on roots. Control: None. Discard entire plant and pot.

PLANT SHINES
 Foliage plants with shiny leaves look nice but don't overdo it with these commercial materials. Put on too much and too often can plug the pores (stomata) of the plants and impair growth.

QUESTION BOX

QUESTION OF THE WEEK: F. G. of Twin Falls:
 "I know you've answered this question before. Is it harmful to sleep in a room with plants? My daughter was told recently that plants reverse themselves and at night they are like people — give off carbon dioxide and taking in oxygen. Is that true?"
 "She is upset because her little 8-year-old has always slept in a room where her plants are kept. Could this be harmful to his health?"

This question comes up often and it scares a lot of people. It is true that during the day time, plants take in carbon dioxide (a waste product) and give off oxygen. At night the process is reversed: they take in oxygen and give off carbon dioxide. BUT, the amount of carbon dioxide the plants give off is so small it's nothing to worry about.

In fact, in a hospital the nurse who walks in to remove a plant from a patient's room gives off more carbon dioxide than the plant would in a week. Plants are healthy in a home not only by giving off oxygen but also moisture, to any nothing of the beauty they radiate.

Someone said: "Horticulture is, next to music, the most sensitive of the fine arts." Enjoy your plants — your selection today is the biggest and best it's ever been.

C.F. of Halley:
 "We canned a lot of tomatoes last year and they look good, but we get of hesitates to use them. One can had white mold on the tomatoes, but the rest seemed alright." We canned them the same way we've always done them. Do you think they are safe to eat?"

First, let's say this: watch out for any mold on the surface of canned tomatoes. Mold can deplete the acid in the vicinity of the mold and make a bad situation.

If you see mold on tomato for any other canned fruit don't simply skim it off the top of the jar. Discard the whole works and be safe. However, if you canned your tomatoes like you've always done, and did not take short cuts in the process, no reason why your tomatoes aren't safe to eat.

Don't believe this business about our modern varieties being less acid and therefore are a danger. The U.S.D.A. and many state colleges have run many tests to show our varieties are just as acid as ever, and just as safe.

Should a man or woman be forced to join a labor union to work in Idaho?

Many Idaho residents are now forced to pay dues and fees to labor unions in order to keep their jobs.

Compulsory unionism is opposed by 82% of the people in this state. We need a new law to prohibit it.

Here's a sampling of opinions from a statewide survey:

P. T. Rathbone, farmer: "I don't think a person should have to join any organization as a condition of employment. That's coercion. It's sort of a license to hold a job and I don't believe in that."

Elaine Carpenter, businesswoman: "I think it's a shame for a person to have to belong to a union to work. If he chooses to do so then that's great, but if he doesn't choose, to do so he shouldn't have to."

Stanley Robison, fruit rancher: "I think it's plum out of line to force a person to join a union to work. I feel like any man or woman has the born right to take any job he chooses."

Jim Marshall, Jr., college student: "We have freedom of speech, freedom of the press and freedom of religion . . . but we don't have freedom to work, and that's wrong."

Myron Stanley, lumberman: "A freedom of choice for a person is very important. Without that, you've taken away a lot of the natural incentive."

Rick Coffman, newspaper editor: "A person shouldn't be required to join a union just to get a job. That simply goes against the grain of everything this country stands for."

Bob Franklin, auto dealer: "I think that anybody ought to have his own complete freedom of choice as to whether he belongs to a union or whether he doesn't."

Tim Opp, construction worker: "I belong to a union, but I don't think a person should be forced to join to hold down a job."

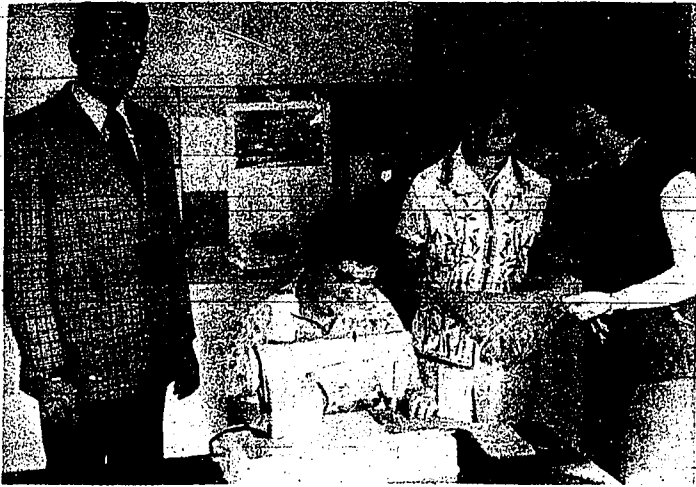

Paul McKague, service station manager: "A man's productiveness should determine what he gets paid, not whether he belongs to a union or he doesn't."

The Idaho Legislature will vote soon on a "right to work" bill guaranteeing every person's right to hold a job as a voluntary union member or as a non-union employee. Such laws are in effect in Wyoming, Utah and Nevada.

Encourage your state legislators to support the "right to work" bill.

Sewing machine donated to center

TWIN FALLS — A zig-zag sewing machine has been donated to the adult training unit of the Adult and Child Development Center of the Department of Health and Welfare.

The sewing machine will help develop leisure skills. The sewing machine is a gift from the Association for Retarded Citizens in Twin Falls.

Officials at the Adult Training Center in the Presbyterian Church classrooms, said most of the advanced individuals will have an opportunity to use the sewing machine and additional machines will be added if funds permit.

Search-and-rescue unit seeks funding

RUPERT — Members of the Minnie-Cassia Search and Rescue unit have asked Minidoka County for $2,500 toward the group's 1977 operations.

The 54 calls totaled 17,882 miles, involved 1,794 man hours and cost $5,948. The bulk of those miles were in four-wheel drive vehicles, which logged 11,821 miles and 772 man hours. The unit also spent 120 hours in first aid training.

They told Minidoka County commissioners they believe Cassia County will pay that much toward a rescue vehicle. Reviewing other counties, they said a similar unit in Jerome County receives $6,000 and in Lincoln $4,000. Commission Chairman Lyle Barton told the group that it served a beneficial purpose for the community and if there is in any way we can get the $2,500, we sure will.

Commissioners were working on the 1977 budget the first four days of this week. Search and rescue units previously have received money from the state snowmobile fund, but snowmobilers are seeking legislation that would limit use of the funds to searches using snowmobiles.

A spokesman for the rescue group told commissioners the fund, which turns 25 per cent into search and rescue from the $1 fee that goes to the state, once was over $40,000 but now has been reduced to $2,000.

Barton pointed out that the other $4 in the fee remains in the county. Snowmobilers have used it for development of a parking lot on Mt. Harrison and plan to construct a warming hut there with the help of other state funds.

Statistics for 1976 through Nov. 8 showed the search and rescue unit responded to 18 rescue calls using four-wheel drive vehicles, nine with two-wheel drive vehicles, three with snowmobiles, two involving motorcycles, two involving horses, three involving alpinists and one with a boat, as well as 16 extrication calls on vehicular accidents.

Whiter Wash There is a substantial difference between black and white ownership of washing machines and clothes dryers. Almost 75 per cent of white families have washers, against some 51 per cent for blacks. Dryers are owned by 57 per cent of white households and 18 per cent of black ones. Also, while nearly 51 per cent of white families own dishwashers, only 7 per cent of black households have them. The Conference Board reports.

Hollister woman to forego trip

HOLLISTER — Mrs. Audrey Carter, Hollister, has an invitation to the presidential inauguration Jan. 20, but she says she will have to forego the trip.

She received the invitation from President-elect Jimmy Carter (no relation) several weeks ago and said she plans to save it as a cherished keepsake. She said she has also sent — for some other inauguration souvenirs. "I would love to go," she says, "but I have a knee problem and am afraid I wouldn't be able to get around in the crowd."

Mrs. Carter, 70, says she was reared in the Hollister area. Her parents came here in 1905 as one of the earliest pioneer families. Other than 20 years spent in Boise, she has lived all of her life here.

Now a widow, she is also a life-long Democrat "and a good one," she says.

Although she isn't sure why she received the invitation, Mrs. Carter said she suspects the state or county chairman probably recommended her.

Mrs. Carter operates a small antique store in Hollister and lives alone. She is also a long-time friend of U.S. Sen. Frank Church.

"I helped Frank" when he first started, when he ran for the U.S. Senate the first time," she said, admitting he may have had something to do with the invitation.

At the time, the senator was entering his first campaign for that office; she was living in Boise and assisted as a member of the campaign committee.

Traffic safety urged in Rupert

By SHANE O'NEILL
Times-News writer

RUPERT — The city's traffic safety committee last week recommended Rupert get the jump on other Magic Valley communities toward federally funded traffic safety measures.

The committee responded favorably to Mayor Wendell Johnson's request that the committee study priorities for implementing traffic safety projects for seeking federal funding over the next four years.

Mayor Johnson reviewed the funding plan, which is available to four counties and four major cities in the Magic Valley for engineering studies and traffic management projects.

Cassia, Minidoka, Twin Falls and Jerome counties are included, along with the cities of Burley, Rupert, Twin Falls and Jerome.

The four counties (and all but Rupert among the cities) have been designated "disproportionately involved" in traffic injuries and deaths. Ironically, although Rupert is not considered "a high traffic injury and fatality city," it is the only city with a complete detailed engineering study on traffic safety. The study was finished last year under a state grant.

Johnson said Rupert would not need additional engineering studies, but the community would have to determine which engineering recommendations it wanted to implement and then establish priorities on them.

Consulting work in conjunction with the studies would be 80 per cent funded by the federal government, he said, and so would all traffic safety projects in 1978.

The city would be obligated to continue with implementation for another two years, with the federal government funding 67 per cent in 1979 and 33 per cent in 1980.

Johnson said the pilot program, first in the nation, consists of engineering studies and traffic management projects not completed in that time, but the city would not be bound beyond that point.

The mayor and City Engineer Don Courtright both mentioned the possibility of clearing intersections of trees and other sight hindrances as a first-year project. Courtright said the city's three railroad crossings were another possibility, as well as improvement of sight distances along the Minidoka Irrigation District canal.

Mayor Johnson said he has urged Minidoka County commissioners to take an interest in the safety program, although "road" responsibility lies with the Minidoka County Highway District.

Committee members suggested the county might concern itself with improving the safety of the strip of Idaho 24 in front of the Wayside Inn north of the Heyburn interchange of Interstate 20.

That stretch of highway is the scene of numerous accidents and has had several fatalities. The committee and the city council have urged the state to take measures to improve safety there, but Courtright reported that highway division officials say they have no jurisdiction over it because of the commercial development there.

Committee members voiced the opinion that lighting of the business "site" presents a problem for motorists.

Dwaine H. Council, liaison to the traffic safety committee, said street lights in the median might improve vision for motorists, now coming from the lighted parking areas into the darkness of the median crossings.

Elks' winners

SIX TOP shooters in the Elks Club Hoop Shoot will go to Nampa to compete with other southern Idaho finalists. Above, left to right, are the winners in the girls' competition, Gayla (standing), Buhl, who made 18 of 25 baskets, Kandle Kugelge, Filer, who also hit 18 of 25, and Ashley Blasinghoff, Twin Falls who hit 13 of 25. In the boys' competition winners, left to right below, were Ronnie Hulse, Buhl, who hit 17 of his 25 shots, Matt Harr, Twin Falls, who also hit 17 of 25, and Steve Meyerhoffer, Twin Falls, who hit 20 of 25.

Solons demand say on new water plan

BOISE — Idaho's legislature seems determined to have the final say on the recently adopted state water plan.

Vard Chaburn, R-Albion, says a bill giving the legislature the authority to accept or reject the entire water plan will be introduced early in this legislative session, possibly next week.

"I think the bill will be very similar to the one introduced last session," Chaburn said, "that bill called for overall legislative approval for the state water plan."

The 1976 legislation passed the House and Senate but later was vetoed by Gov. Cecil Andrus.

But Andrus won't be in office this year to veto the legislative proposal because he is going to Washington as secretary of the interior.

Chaburn thinks soon-to-be governor John Evans might not veto the legislation.

"I think John will be more receptive," Chaburn said. "At least John's background gives him a better perspective."

Chaburn, chairman of the House Resource and Conservation Committee, says the state water plan probably is the "most important issue" to come before his committee this year.

"But we're also working very hard on energy," the Albion Republican said. "Our committee has an extremely wide difference of opinion on a kind of energy proposals should be adopted. We have opinions all the way from no conservation of energy at all to the other extreme where people would be bathing in cold water," he said.

Rupert eyes RR blockage ban

RUPERT — Rupert officials will make a new effort to end railroad crossing blockages during the heavy morning traffic to work and school.

City Engineer Don Courtright said he will approach Union Pacific Railroad (UP) about the possibility of changing its train make-up and dispatch time to avoid the traffic tie-ups that frequently occur shortly before 8 a.m. daily at the entrances to Rupert.

The city has three entrances off Idaho 24-25. All three cross the UP tracks; they are within a stretch of less than 3,000 feet.

Mayor Wendell Johnson told traffic safety committee members Wednesday night a single train blocked all three crossings for 20 minutes a few days ago. He emphasized the train was moving but had 100 cars.

The city has had numerous problems in past years with standing trains blocking entrances, particularly the main entrance at F Street. Union Pacific last spring renovated the F Street crossing.

The city has had numerous problems in past years with standing trains blocking entrances, particularly the main entrance at F Street. Union Pacific last spring renovated the F Street crossing.

City officials have said complaints of long blockages of the F Street crossing have been less numerous than in the past.

The traffic safety committee Wednesday recommended the city seek a state grant for renovating the Sixth Street crossing. Members also favored establishing a traffic light at that intersection with Idaho 24-25 to facilitate pedestrian crossings of the highway.

The two measures were proposed by Courtright. He said state officials told him federal funds might be available through the state for installing T-core plastic ties at the crossing. T-core ties were used in upgrading the F Street crossing.

Courtright said the state now has $300,000 available under the Federal Highway Safety Act of 1976 specifically for work at railroad crossings and will have another $15 million in April.

He said the project, if approved, would receive 50 per cent funding. Courtright suggested that Union Pacific might pick up another 5, even the remaining 45 per cent.

The engineering chief said the city might not be able to do the work this year, "but there is a good possibility" it could be done in 1978.

Courtright said the Sixth Street intersection with Idaho 24-25 receives a lot of pedestrian traffic, much of it youngsters going to and from school. He added that a push-button mechanism probably would be best for activating the red light for highway traffic, since the intersection is so close to the traffic signals at F Street.

Idaho farm series airs on national television

TWIN FALLS — The first in a three-part series involving Idaho agriculture was aired Saturday on television throughout the nation.

The three programs, put together by W.F. Buhl, Whitlom, are part of the U.S. Farm Report.

Saturday's segment covered the importance of trout farming in the Hagerman Valley. Whitlom said the trout operation is a multi-million-dollar business.

The other two television programs involving Idaho will be aired Jan. 22 and Jan. 29. The U.S. Farm Report is carried at noon each Saturday on KMYT in Twin Falls.

Next Saturday's program is an assessment of farmers' and ranchers' stands on the U.S. Government's settlement of claims arising out of the Teton Dam disaster.

The Jan. 29 program includes an interview with Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus, who has been nominated by President Jimmy Carter for the post of Secretary of Interior.

Whitlom said the interview covers Andrus' plans for changes within the department and his thoughts on lease grazing of public lands under the jurisdiction of the Department of Interior.

Whitlom is Western States correspondent for the U.S. Farm Report. His segments are produced in cooperation with the Idaho Farm Bureau of which he is public information director.

Other side given on case about lady who feeds birds doughnut 'crumbs'

By MIKE ROYKO
Chicago Daily News
CHICAGO — Barry Cohen, a machine precinct captain, protests that I have given him a bad rap.
 It was Cohen who got the goods on Ruth Humpley, the lady who feeds birds. Cohen had her hauled into court after he watched her scatter doughnut crumbs about his precinct.
 But Cohen is not writing about Miss Humpley and her legal problems. I did him an injustice.
 Even worse, he says, I maligned the good name of Jerome Huppert, boss of the 50th Ward, to whom Cohen owes his allegiance. And also his patronage job.
 Well, I want to be fair, to everyone, even ward bosses and precinct captains. Or at least no more unfair to them than I am to everyone else.

 So, a few days ago, Cohen sat down in a coffee shop near Traffic Court, where he works, to give this side of the bird-feeding dispute.
 "First of all, I want to say that Mr. Huppert loves birds," said Cohen, a squat, balding man who was nattily dressed in a pink shirt, red jacket and maroon trousers.
 "If you looked in Mrs. Huppert's back yard, you'd know what you would see?" he asked.
 "A statue of Mayor Richard J. Daley?"
 "No, you would see a 10-foot pole with a bird feeder on top of it. If you don't believe me, go and look. You can even take a picture of it."
 All right, I will concede that Huppert likes birds. But what about Miss Humpley? Why was she taken to court for tossing a few doughnut crumbs on the ground?

"Doughnut crumbs?" Cohen said, snorting. "They were not doughnut crumbs. They were whole doughnuts."
 "Whole doughnuts?"
 "That's right. With the sap oozing out! And they were still fresh. I felt them with my toe." What flavor?
 "I don't know, but they weren't just crumbs. You don't see sap oozing out of crumbs."
 (Miss Humpley denies that she tried to feed entire doughnuts to birds. She points out that she is a lady of limited means, and already spends most of her earnings on bird seed, which she scatters about the North Side. She says she would not be so financially reckless as to buy high-priced doughnuts instead.)
 Cohen went on:
 "That's not all she does. She throws out

"orange peels and banana peels."
 "And do you know what eats banana peels and orange peels and doughnuts?"
 "Monkeys?"
 "No, rats and mice eat them. That's the whole problem. I'm not against birds. It's rodents. It is rodents that are the issue here!"
 Cohen says that he was urged by 30 people in his precinct to do something about Miss Humpley.
 "So, I was out doing my precinct work when I saw her with the doughnuts."
 She claims you were lurking about in the dark, waiting for her.
 "Well, I was standing on the corner. I won't deny that. And as I watched, I saw her throw a doughnut on the ground."
 What did you do?

"I went up and like a gentleman, I asked her to cease and desist."
 Did she cease and desist? "No, she pointed blank refused. So I wrote down the exact date and time and place I saw her throw the doughnut on the ground. I would not sign a complaint unless I witness something myself. I have worked in the courtroom for 3½ years and I am not going to perjure myself."
 The question of doughnuts aside, why do you object to bird seed?
 "Birds aren't the only things that like bird seed. Rats like bird seed, too."
 But if somebody doesn't feed birds, then what?
 "It is not her place to take care of them." "Have you discussed this with Miss Humpley?"
 "Ha! That is an absolute impossibility. You cannot talk to her."

Use of O'Leary helping budget

TWIN FALLS — The reopening of O'Leary Junior High School has brought some relief to the overextended Twin Falls School District budget.
 At the regular school board meeting this week, board members applauded the transfer of about $17,000 from the plant and facilities fund to the district's depleted general fund.
 The transfer was made to meet costs and incurred in the purchase and upgrading of the old O'Leary School. By law the plant-and-facilities fund represented legitimate building expenses involving O'Leary which had already been paid from the general fund, administrators told the board.
 At its meeting last month, the board was told the general fund, which is used for daily expenses, had been overspent by about $92,000.
 The overspending was traced to the O'Leary closure and costs allegedly incurred in last fall's teachers' strike.
 School board chairman Howard Ronk said Tuesday the transfer of the $17,000 "will help some" to build up the general fund.
 Also due to help from O'Leary's reopening with its new fire sprinkling system was $2 savings of about $5,000, the annual insurance costs. The insurance was lowered after the installation of the fire safety devices.

 The school district will also save about $22,000 in costs incurred for busing during double shifting at the high school. The savings won't help the budget, however, since the extra costs were never budgeted.
 After the announcement of the overspending, the school district instituted a belt-tightening which stopped the purchase of textbooks and cut the use of paper-supplies in half.
 The district also cut teachers' extra pay from levels of last year in negotiating an extra-pay settlement.
 At its meeting Tuesday, the board authorized payment of about $34,000 from the plant and facilities fund to cover the balance of sprinkler system costs except for $10,000 held until all finishing work is completed.
 The board also approved the call for bids on the sale of about $4.9 million in bonds to build a new junior high.
 Final deadline on the bids will be 8 p.m. Feb. 8, at which time all bids received will be opened.
 The bonds to build the new school were approved by voters last fall. The last of the bonds will come due in 1997.

Society will take complaints

TWIN FALLS — The Idaho Hearing Aid Society has organized its own consumer-affairs program in Idaho to handle complaints and to assist with hearing and hearing aid problems.
 Jack Warberg, Twin Falls chairman of the society's consumer affairs committee, said the organization is asking support and cooperation in making the program a success. He said this is part of a nationwide program by the National Hearing Aid Society.
 "It has two major purposes, he said. One is to provide information and literature on hearing and loss of hearing to persons with problems. This information is available on request, and is supplied through the national office, National Hearing Aid Society, 20361 Middlebelt Road, Livonia, Mich. 48152. The second purpose is to receive and process complaints or differences that involve hearing aid specialists and hearing aid users."
 Warberg said unfortunately there are some unqualified persons who involve themselves from time to time with hearing aid sales. The committee will be working to investigate and eliminate such operations for the protection of the public.

 As part of the consumer affairs committee program the "hearing aid help line" has been established. Interested persons may call the help line in their community or nearest community. The number in Twin Falls is 733-1153 and collect calls will be accepted from persons in other parts of the state.
 The line is open to calls from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. Written material regarding the help line should be addressed to Idaho Hearing Aid Society, P.O. Box 1068, Twin Falls 83301.
 Warberg said cooperation is being asked from all medical care specialists, clinicians, audiologists, speech and hearing clinics, state agencies, the Idaho attorney general, consumer groups, Better Business Bureau and news media.

Minister files for $3 million

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls minister has filed a complaint in Fifth District Court here asking for more than $3 million in damages for the death of his wife in an auto accident two years ago.
 Rev. Carroll McGruder, Bethel Temple Church, is asking for $3 million in damages for the loss of his wife, Linda, in an auto accident in October, 1975, near Ft. Worth, Texas.
 McGruder also asks for $500,000 in general damages and $5,000,000 in damages for the complaint against General Motors Corp., Delaware; H.E. McGonigal, Inc., Indiana, and John Chris Motors, Inc., Twin Falls.

 The McGruders bought a car from McGonigal in April, 1974, the complaint says. In June, 1975, John Chris Motors repaired the car, the complaint says.
 In October, '75, while driving on a freeway near Ft. Worth, McGruder suddenly lost control of the vehicle and the car crashed, according to the complaint.
 The complaint says Mrs. McGruder died from injuries sustained in the accident.
 The complaint charges General Motors with negligence in manufacturing the car and McGonigal with negligence in selling the car.

Congress said arrogant over oil tanker control

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Transportation Secretary William Coleman said today Congress is being arrogant when it considers regulations that would increase U.S. restrictions on oil tankers operating 200 miles or more at sea.

“The fact is that the ocean is owned by all the people of the world,” Coleman said. “We went through that act (in Vietnam). That’s what led to other bad American policy.”

“And I just hope that Congress won’t be so arrogant that they will think that in this world today, even with our leadership, we can unilaterally impose these types of rules,” he said.

China predicts increase in export of oil, minerals

HONG KONG (UPI) — China predicted today that it will increase its export of oil and minerals to improve the country’s sluggish trade picture now that the “Gang of Four” has been purged.

“With the ‘Gang of Four’ being ‘ferreted out,’ the prospects for developing our foreign trade have become even more splendid and bright,” said Ching Ching, who is the widow of the late Chairman Mao, and the other three purged leaders — Wang Hungwen, Chang Chun-chiao, and Yao Wen-yuan were accused of increasing domestic consumption of petroleum to undermine export policy last year. This also caused a “momentary crisis in domestic oil supplies,” the article said.

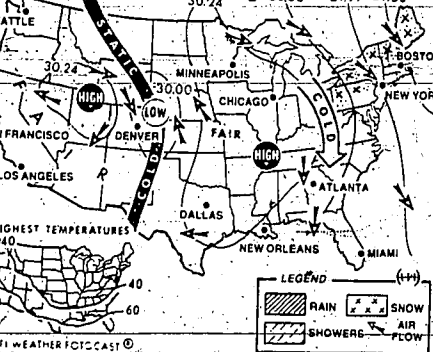

China’s oil exports last year were believed to have totaled about 10 million tons, down by about two million tons from the 1975 figure.

Blalock 71 wins Colgate

PALM SPRINGS—Calif. (UPI) — Jane Blalock shot a one-under par 71 Saturday and laid off late challenges by Donna Young and Jan Triplett to win the Colgate Triple Crown for the second straight year with a total of 143.

Young, who had a first-round 76, shot a four-under par 68 to finish in a second-place tie with Stephens at 144.

Blalock picked up $15,000 for the victory, plus a 1977 station wagon.

Young and Stephens, who shot a 70 Saturday, each collected $8,750.

Blalock, 31, led by two strokes when last-round action began and maintained that edge after 27 holes.

Young then birdied the 10th, 11th and 13th holes to tie Blalock's lead to one.

As Young completed her second hole in trouble on the 16th hole when her ball hit a sprinkler head. She was given a drop and got her par.

"I had missed that putt, which was only six feet. I might have been in trouble," Blalock said later. "Just before I teed off on the hole, I looked at a scoreboard and wondered about Donna and just my concentration. I was also playing with a super golfer, Jan Stephens, and at that point—made up my mind not to let anyone beat me."

Blalock parred the 17th, was on in three on No. 18 and two-putted for the par five that gave her the victory.

Stephens took her time on the 18th and stroked her second birdie putt in two days on that hole — a five-footer that tied her with Young.

Blalock had her family among the spectators — her father, mother and brother Jim; 22 from Highland Beach, Fla.

"It was a rewarding experience to win while playing for my family and my best friend (pro Jan Ferraris)," the champion said.

In a generous mood, Blalock gave the station wagon to a friend, John Salerno, general manager of the Connecticut Falcons softball team that she and tennis star Billy Jean King sponsored.

Duvillard wins again

WINTER PARK, Colo. (UPI) — Frenchman Henri Duvillard, the defending champion of the World Pro Skiing Tour, skied flawlessly and overcame stumbling Josef Odermatt of Switzerland to win the giant slalom Saturday.

Duvillard, who has won four of five events this season, beat Odermatt by a mere .022 of a second on the first of two dual races down the 28-gate course.

Odermatt held a half-gate lead at the midway mark on the second run, but lost control off the final of three bumps and allowed Duvillard to overtake him. Duvillard beat Odermatt by .022 of a second on the second run.

Duvillard pocketed $4,750 for the win and Odermatt, runner-up to Duvillard during the 1975-76 season, received $3,750.

Tyler Palmer of Kearsarge, N.H., was third and won $1,750, while Paul Carson of Don Mills, Ontario, won $1,750 for his fourth-place finish.

"I did not think I could win," said Duvillard after the final race. "Odermatt was too far in front, but he made the mistake."

The $25,000 slalom race was scheduled for Sunday.

Riddick wins dash

By JIM COUR
LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Steve Riddick, who didn't even make the finals in the 190-meter dash at the Montreal Olympics six months ago, scored an upset dunkie victory Saturday at the Sanjita Invitational track meet.

Competing before a crowd of 12,004 at the Sports Arena, Riddick first edged 19-year-old Houston McTeur in the 50-yard dash in 5.3. In the 60-yard dash 20 minutes later, Riddick was a 6.1 victor over Olympic gold medalist Don Quarrie of Jamaica and Ilseay Crawford of Trinidad.

Quarrie, who won the 200-meter dash at Montreal, was second in the 60, also in 6.1, while Crawford, the surprise 100 winner in Canada, was third in 6.2. Quarrie ran third in the 50 in 5.4.

McTeur, the former high school sensation from Baker, Fla., who now is enrolled at Santa Monica (Calif.) Community College, pulled up in the 60 after taking a stray elbow in the stomach at the start.

Riddick, who ran the anchor leg of the United States' winning 400-meter relay team at the 1976 Games, competed with only three hours' sleep.

He won the 50-yard dash at the National Invitational track meet at College Park, Md., Friday night and didn't arrive here until 10:30 a.m. MST Saturday.

Olympic discus champion Mac Wilkins led in one-two-three U.S. finish in the shot put at 670 over Russian Olympic medalists Yevgeniy Yermolov and Aleksandr Barshilnikov.

Al Feuerbach, who finished fourth at Montreal, was second at 66-21, while Terry Abritton of Stanford was third at 66-21.

Barishnikov, a bronze medalist at Montreal, was fourth at 63.5 while Miranov, runner-up to West Germany's Udo Beyer in the Olympics, was a disappointing fifth at 61-30.

NCAA champion Dedy Cooper of San Jose State upset

Olympic silver medalist Willie Davenport of Baton Rouge, La., in 7.2 in the 60-yard hurdles. Rory Kallmuck upset world record holder Dwight Stones in the high jump at 7.2 and Paul Cummings, a graduate student at Brigham Young University, set a meal record in winning the mile in 3:59.2.

Finland's Antti Kalliomaki, a silver medalist at Montreal, captured the pole vault at 17-6 and James Butts won the triple jump at 54-9.

Viktor Saneyev of Russia, winner of the triple jump in the past three Olympics, was a disappointing sixth. Saneyev, who edged Butts in Montreal, went 50-7 on his first jump, but his other five efforts all were fouls.

Lietzke shoots 70 for third-round lead

By JOE SARGIS
UPI Sports
TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) — Tucson Bruce Lietzke, 23, who quit the game three years ago because he was tired of the grind, moved into position Saturday to win his first professional event when he shot a two-under-par 70 for a two-stroke lead after three rounds of the $200,000 Tucson Open.

Stadler, Larry Nelson, Danny Edwards and Andy North, Nelson had the day's best round, a six-under 66.

Lietzke's retirement from golf lasted only six months, and he went back to the game at the start of 1974 with the idea of turning professional. He needed two clinics to win his playing card, and he finally succeeded in 1975 when he won $30,780. Last year the University of Houston graduate placed 20th on the money list with $59,229 and earned "exempt" status for 1977.

Lietzke's birdies came on the par-five, 560-yard sixth and the par-four, 290-yard 13th at Tucson National. He parred all the other holes, and for the second straight day made it around the long, flat desert layout without a mistake.

Three-time defending champion Johnny Miller, starting the third round on the backside and eight shots off the lead, took a double-bogey six on the 10th and a double-bogey five on the 12th for a 39 but came home with a 32 that put him at 215, nine shots off the lead and out of the running.

U.S. Open champion Jerry Pate, who started the 1977 tour last week by winning the Phoenix Open, was two shots farther back at 217 while Ben Crenshaw, who won three events and more than $250,000 last year, was at 219.

PGA champion Dave Stockton, who lost to Pate at Phoenix on the first extra hole of sudden death, had a third-round 70 for a 212 total which left him six shots behind Lietzke.

Lietzke, who started the third round as the leader by a shot over Gil Morgan, had two birdies and no bogeys for 70 and this gave him a 54-hole total of 18-under-par 206. Closest to him, two shots back, were veterans Billy Casper and Gene Littler and Morgan. Morgan lost a shot when, for the second straight day, he bogeyed the final hole.

Casper, who has won only one title in the last three years, although he ranks third on the all-time money winning list, shot a 69 in the third round for his 206 while Littler had a 70 and Morgan a 71.

Charles Coody, Tommy Aaron and Rick Massengale were another shot back at seven-under 205. Aaron carding a 67, Massengale a 69 and Coody a 71. Sophomore Andy Bean had a chance to tie the threesome when he bogeyed the final hole and, instead, finished the day at 210 with Homero Blancas, Craig Norman, Okla. (UPI) — Forward John McCullough scored 15 points Saturday to lead Oklahoma to a 71-67 basketball upset over Big Eight leading Kansas.

The Sooners, playing at home for the first time in more than a month, took a 34-21 halftime lead as freshman Terry Slotts scored 11 points and center Al Beal added 10. Forward John Douglas paced the losers and took game scoring honors with 19 points.

The victory raised Oklahoma's season record to 9-6, 1-2 in the Big Eight.

EL PASO, Tex. (UPI) — Texas-El Paso, led by guard Jake Poole, hit 70 per cent of its second half shots Saturday to hand No. 10-ranked Arizona a 69-59 setback.

Arizona trailed the entire first half but kept within six points and the Wildcats when ahead, 49-48, with 7:10 left in the game on two quiet steals by guard Gary Harrison.

Poole's long range shots gave the Miners a 69-57 lead with seven seconds left. Poole hit seven of nine from the floor in the second half and was the Miners' leading scorer with 18 points.

Bob Elliott was the leading scorer for Arizona with 20 points and Harrison added 12.

Arizona now is 12-2 for the year and 1-1 in Western Athletic Conference play while UTEP advanced to 10-4 and 2-0.

Iowa edges Illinois

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (UPI) — Sparked by super shooting by Ron Lester, Iowa scored 12 of the final 14 points in regulation time and went on to defeat Illinois 81-81 in overtime Saturday in a Big Ten game.

It was Iowa's first Big Ten win and gave Illinois a 1-3 conference record.

Iowa never led in regulation time, trailing 47-33 at halftime, but took the lead for the first time with 2:40 remaining in the overtime on a free throw by Clay Hargrave for an 82-81 edge. Tom Norman and Lester each added a free throw for the final margin.

Lester finished with a gamehigh 21 points and Cal Wulsberg had 17 for Iowa. Levi Cobb had 18 and Rich Adams 13 for Illinois.

Washington wins

CORVALLIS, Ore. (UPI) — Washington, led by James Edwards and Stan Walker in a first-half surge, jumped out to a 21-3 lead and held on to defeat Oregon State, 90-76, Saturday in a Pacific 8 Conference game.

Edwards and Walker combined for 30 first-half points to pace the Huskies to a 47-33 halftime lead.

The loss dropped the Beavers to 2-2 in conference play, while Washington moved to 2-1.

Edwards led Washington scoring with 26 points, while Neill and Walker added 20 apiece. High scorer for the game was OSU's Rocky Smith with 23. Steve Smith and Don Smith chipped in 15 apiece for the Beavers.

Hayes-lead ISU thumps Boise State

POCATELLO, Idaho (UPI) — Steve Hayes got a game-high 20 points and 16 rebounds and Ed Thompson held Steve Connor to just 13 points in leading Idaho State to a 73-40 Big Sky Conference win over Boise State Saturday night.

The 7-foot Hayes dominated the game and often guarded two men in Idaho State's full-court press which forced 21 Boise State turnovers. The 13 points by Connor — the Big Sky's leading scorer — going into this week — was his lowest output of the year.

Thompson finished with 14 points, while Scott Gould and Jeff Cook both added 10 points for ISU. Steve Barrett came off the bench to follow Connor in scoring with 10 points for the Broncos.

N.C. increases league lead

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (UPI) — Center Tommy LaGarde scored 22 points and fifth-ranked North Carolina survived a late rally by Duke Saturday to post a 77-58 victory and strengthen its hold on first place in the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball race.

Duke controlled the opening tip-off, but could do little until late in the game when the Blue Devils cut a 20-point North Carolina lead to six points 72-45 with just over a minute remaining.

North Carolina went to its four-corner delay offense which 2-17 remaining in the game and simply outlasted Duke.

Following LaGarde in scoring were guard Phil Ford with 16 points and Walter Davis and Mike O'Koren with 12 each. Ford also played an excellent defensive game against Duke's Tate-Armstrong, holding Armstrong to 18 points, six below his average.

Jim Spanarkel led the Blue Devils with 19 points, followed by Armstrong, who was the only other Duke player in double figures.

Olympic organizers stay in word war

By United Press International
 Preparations for holding the 1980 Winter Olympics at Lake Placid, N.Y., were defended by local organizers Saturday and got some breathing room from environmentalists who are worried about construction needed for the project.

In a statement answering criticism that "damaging" the Kaspas, World Ski Federation secretary, leveled Friday about Lake Placid having done "practically zero" preparations, officials said the village had, in effect, been preparing for the Games since the ones last held there in 1932 and many facilities were still available.

Meanwhile, the Sierra Club said it would try to open negotiations with Olympic and Adirondack Park Agency officials to find an alternate site for a 90-meter ski jump needed for the Games and approved for Intervale, near the village.

Environmentalists have balked at having a tower needed for the jump built adjacent to a 70-meter tower already at Intervale. They say the jump, now sited for the edge of the Adirondack High Peaks region, should be moved.

The APA granted preliminary approval for the village Jan. 16.

Samuel Sage, Sierra Club's northeastern vice president, said a club committee voted Saturday to ask the APA to reconsider the approval.

He said other sites, including one at Bassett Mountain, about a dozen miles away, are "not only available but technologically superior to the planned site and can be built."

One of Kaspas's critics is Theodor Kaspas, a 90-meter site would be far away from the village where the rest of the events would be held. He cited the Sierra Club as a prime opponent to the Games' preparations.

Sage, in a telephone interview with UPI, said his group timed its Saturday vote to come after the APA had made its Intervale decision, not after Kaspas' comments.

Asked if the club would challenge the site in court, Sage said, "We will not take a position on that until we see what happens with negotiations."

He said the decision to ask for talks is "part of the Sierra Club's ongoing program to protect the environmental integrity of the Adirondacks."

The club also will write the International Olympic Committee saying it has no desire to undermine staging the Olympics at Lake Placid, Sage said.

"We are very much afraid that we're going to be blamed for whatever happens to the Olympics. We don't feel we're in a corner. There is negotiating room. If the Olympics is pulled out of Lake Placid, it will be for other reasons," Sage said.

The club wants to find an "immediate and reasonable negotiated solution to the controversy," Sage said.

Ronald MacKenzie, president of the Lake Placid Olympic Organizing Committee, said he's not and is looking areas very ready for the 1980 Games. He said ski preparations were detailed in a report sent Jan. 5 to national and international skiing officials. Kaspas had criticized alpine and cross country skiing preparations.

Buckeyes drop Wildcats

EVANSTON, Ill. (UPI) — Freshman guard Kelvin Ramsey hit 12 of his game-high 16 points in the first half to lead Ohio State to a 69-57 win over cold-shooting Northwestern Saturday.

The win evened the Buckeyes' Big Ten record at 2-2 while the Wildcats fell to 1-3. Northwestern had a 16-11 lead with 9:19 to go in the first half when Ohio State revealed off eight straight points and was never behind after that.

The Wildcats shot only 43 per cent in the first half and trailed 35-24 at the break. Billy McKinney managed only 11 points for the game, one behind teammate Bob Syvick, who was high for Northwestern. Bob Klbas had 11.

Besides Ramsey's 16 points, Tony Hall had 14 and Terry Burris 13 for the Buckeyes.

Alabama wins

STARBUCK, Miss. (UPI) — Fourth-ranked Alabama, hitting 58.3 per cent from the field in the second half, bounced back to defeat Mississippi State 65-63 Saturday in a Southeastern Conference game.

Alabama, now 14-0 on the season and 5-0 in SEC play, was paced by sophomore forward Reginald King with 21 points, T.R. Dunn with 18 and Ricky Brown with 14.

Mississippi State, which led by one point, 32-31, at halftime, got a 20-point performance from sophomore forward Gary Hooker, while Ricky Brown scored 15 and Ray White added 12.

Mississippi State's Ricky Brown missed a 15-foot jumper with five seconds left that would have tied the score and sent the game into overtime, but Brown's shot was off the rim and the Tide got the rebound.

Mississippi State is now 11-3 on the season and 3-2 in the SEC.

Purdue stuns Minnesota

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (UPI) — A pair of free throws by Wayne Walls and a basket by Walter Jordan insured Purdue's 66-64 overtime victory over Minnesota Saturday to give the Boilermakers a 4-0 Big Ten record and snap the Gophers' 11-game winning streak.

It was 131-ranked Purdue's third straight overtime win over 111-rated Minnesota, which dropped to 2-1 in league play.

Purdue, led by Eugene Parker's 17 points, was up by as much as 11 points in the first half and never trailed. However, Mike Thompson's basket tied the game at 55-55 with 4:15 left to play and that's the way it went into overtime as Purdue ran down the clock and failed to score.

Walls gave the Boilermakers their final lead at 61-59 and Purdue built the margin to six points at 65-59 before Minnesota closed again.

Kentucky downs Auburn

AUBURN, Ala. (UPI) — Junior forward Jack Givens scored 20 points, and collected 13 rebounds Saturday to lead third-ranked Kentucky to a 75-68 Southeastern Conference victory over Auburn.

The Wildcats, stung by a 71-67 overtime loss to Tennessee at home Wednesday night, ran their record to 10-2 on the season and 3-1 in the SEC. Auburn dropped to 7-5 and 1-3.

Givens, 6-4, hit 10 of 20 shots from the field and teamed with 6-10 Rick Robey to dominate the boards. Robey grabbed 10 rebounds as the Wildcats outboarded Auburn 46-33.

Forward Mike Phillips and guard Larry Johnson added 13 points each for Kentucky. Robey contributed 12 and reserve guard Truman Clark for Auburn.

Auburn was paced by guard Eddie Johnson's 18 points while Pepto Bolden had 15 and Stan Pietkiewicz 14.

Dolphins under probe

MIAMI (UPI) — The Miami Dolphins players and staff were investigated by the National Football League because of an alleged bookmaker had access to the team's locker room and practice field, it was disclosed Saturday.

An NFL executive said, however, that the Dolphins had been cleared of any wrongdoing.

The Miami News reported in a copyright dispatch that a Dolphins player and training camp employees might be fined for collaborating with J. Lance Cooper, a Miami real estate broker, who was arrested Nov. 8.

Cooper is scheduled to go on trial Monday before Dade County Circuit Court Judge Natalie Baskin on charges of bookmaking, keeping a gambling house and conspiracy.

However, Jim Kensil, executive director of the NFL, reached in Seattle, said no members of the Dolphins are suspected of illegal activities.

"We investigated the situation and found no evidence of wrongdoing on the part of the Dolphins," Kensil said. "There will be no fines of any kind."

"This individual did have access to the Dolphins, but they didn't know of his alleged bookmaking activities," he added.

Wicher rallies Glens Ferry past Kimberly

GLENS FERRY — Clutch fourth-quarter shooting by Tom Wicher rallied the Glens Ferry Pilots to a 63-53 victory over Kimberly Friday night.

Kimberly jumped out to an early 10-4 lead, but the Pilots rallied to catch the Bulldogs early in the second quarter.

The Pilots controlled the game for the next two quarters and led by 45-39 at the end of the third quarter.

In the fourth period, Kimberly staged a rally of their own. Kimberly cut the Pilots lead to one point, but then the Pilots' Wicher hit two straight baskets and Glens Ferry came to life and broke away to win by the final margin.

Wicher had 16 points and pulled down 16 rebounds for the Pilots. He shared game scoring honors with Dan Shiff, who also had 16.

Stanger led the Bulldogs with 13 points.

Technical helps Trojans tip Pirates

MALTA — Raft River capitalized on a technical foul capped against Hagerman coach Ron Knowles to score a 49-45 victory over the Pirates Friday night.

The game was close all the way, and Hagerman was clinging to a one-point advantage and had the ball when, with 4 minutes to play, Knowles was hit with the technical.

Not only did the Pirates lose the ball, but the Trojans' Wilson sank both the free throws awarded him for the technical and Lex Tracy put in a follow shot on the gilt possession to turn the one-point Trojan lead into a three-point Trojan lead.

After that, Hagerman could get no closer than three points for the rest of the game.

Briggs topped the Trojan scorers with 16 points, and Brown paced the Pirates with 12.

SMILING Jeff Thomsen enjoys a conversation with a fan while playing some pro golf. Thomsen, a Twin Falls high school grad playing out of Rupert, grabbed his first pro win in this country Friday, the San Marcos open — worth $5,000.

Thomsen buoyed by first victory on 'mini tour'

CHANDLER, Ariz. — "I finally got over the hill with a win. Maybe I'll go crazy."

So smiled Jeff Thomsen, Twin Falls golf professional, after taking the $5,000 first prize in the San Marcos open Friday night.

Thomsen claimed the title by four-strokes over Roger Calvin, Canyon Lake, Calif., Friday. It was the second in a series of four tournaments at the San Marcos golf course, the package offering $55,000 in prize money during its run.

Thomsen shot a closing four-under par 68 Friday to a four-day total of 11-under par 277.

In the first tournament, the Twin Falls grad tied for second place and picked up $3,250. Those two paydays along with the approximate $8,000 he took in a month's stay on the Australian tour last fall ran the youngster's total winnings to just under $15,000.

"I'm playing pretty good right now," Thomsen said. "I'll play in the next two tournaments here and I hope I can keep it going."

STANFORD, Calif. (UPI) — David Greenwood sparked a second-half rally to give UCLA a 100-86 victory over Stanford in a Pacific 8 basketball contest Saturday night.

Stanford hit 74 percent of its shots from the floor in the first half to lead 49-48. But the Bruins scored 10 straight points in the opening minutes of the second half to go ahead to stay.

Stanford pulled to within six points, 77-71, on a field goal by Wolfe Harry with 7:32 to go but Marques Johnson came back with a field goal for UCLA to make it 79-71. Johnson added a freethrow and the Bruins controlled the game the rest of the way.

Johnson was high scorer for UCLA with 27 points, while Roy Hamilton had 22 and Greenwood 20. Harry scored 21 for Stanford before fouling out with 2:09 to play.

Mackay downs Dietrich

DIETRICH — Mackay's superior accuracy from the free-throw line carried them to a 56-57 victory over Dietrich Saturday night.

Dietrich canned 26 field goals to 25 for Mackay, but Mackay converted 16 of 27 charity losses while Dietrich could make only 5 of 12 many of the misses coming in one-and-one situations.

Mackay led almost the entire game by about 2-6 points, but in the last two minutes Dietrich began pressing to get the ball, and Mackay broke the press for three easy buckets for their final margin of victory.

Jack McKelvey led Mackay with 16 points, and Jim McKelvey and Smith added 15 apiece for the Minors.

Larry Perron with 20 and Mark Perron with 16 paced Dietrich.

Pilots tip Vikings

EDEN — HAZELTON — Kevin King's early shooting sparked Glens Ferry into the lead and the Pilots went on to defeat Valley's Vikings 58-45 Saturday night.

King hit eight of his 23B points in the early going when the Pilots rushed into an 18-4 lead. That pretty much told the story the rest of the way in, although on a couple of occasions Glens Ferry moved up by as much as 15.

Burley wins twice, grabs EIC lead

BURLEY — The Burley Bobcats took over undisputed possession of first place in the Eastern Idaho Conference by edging Rigby 67-63 Saturday night and downing Blackfoot 64-57 Friday night.

In the Saturday tilt, Rigby had the Bobcats down 23-10 early in the second quarter before Farrell Williams, Jeff Kerbs and David Brown got the Bobcat fast break untracked.

The Bobcats caught Rigby early in the third quarter, and held the lead the rest of the game.

Rigby stayed in the game all the way, however, and it took two free-throws by Don Jones with seven seconds to go to tie the victory for the Bobcats.

On Friday, Burley also trailed in the first quarter, but

Indians nip Trojans

SHOSHONE — A late follow shot by Jason Webb nailed down a 75-71 decision for the Shoshone Indians against the scrappy Wendell Trojans Saturday night.

The winless Trojans weren't given much of a chance against the Indians but had their best shooting night and the game generally was closer than the final score.

Shoshone, trailing by one at halftime, outscored Wendell 24-21 in a torrid third quarter and appeared to have things in hand when a couple of fast break buckets midway through the final period opened up a nine-point advantage.

Shoshone went to its gun-carrier offense but couldn't keep the ball away from the Trojans. With 22 seconds left Wendell had pulled back to within one point and Shoshone had a free throw coming.

The shot missed but Webb took the rebound and scored.

Three great reasons why a Big John Snowmobile is your best winter weather buy

1. Proven features: The John Deere Liquidator™ and Cyclone™ are built with many of the same features that led our Liquidator race sled to win five of eight cross-country events in 1976-78. Liquidator, the closest thing to Liquidator yet, is liquid cooled to take the heat off high-performance snowmobiling. And Cyclone, a fan-cooled trail sled, airs up a storm of excitement wherever it goes. Both sleds feature a front-mounted 340 or 440cc red valve engine set low over the skis for superb handling. Wide 32-inch ski stance and 72-inch wheelbase for positive tracking on hills and switchbacks. CD ignition for sure-fire starts. And disc brakes for sure-footed stops.
2. Parts and Service: Computerized part location system backed by a crew of experienced mechanics. We service everything we sell.
3. Exclusive Trail Hazard Track Replacement Policy: When you buy a John Deere Snowmobile, the track is covered by a limited warranty and a policy that covers safety as the limited warranty doesn't. See us now for complete details.

Herrett's ideas fill farm needs

By KEN HODGE
Times-News writer

FILER—Ever since he was a young boy growing up on a sheep ranch in South Dakota, Bill Herrett's greatest desire was to build something someone could use.

Herrett came to Idaho in 1946 after serving as a diver in the Brooklyn Navy Yard and started a one-man blacksmith shop in Filer.

"I wanted to find the smallest town in Idaho to live," he recalls. "I found a way to make a living later."

He found a way for many others to make a living, too. The small shop he started six years ago has since mushroomed into a multi-million dollar manufacturing firm.

The firm, Acme Manufacturing, Inc., employs 125 workers during peak seasons and manufactures more than 60 products, including farm equipment and parts for other types of farm machinery.

Herrett, who started it all, claims the ideas he got for inventing the forerunners to the products Acme now makes simply originated from his desire to fill the needs of his customers.

"It's not something you can educate for," he explains about his talent for making things which will do certain jobs. "Everything I've done, I've done for the fun of it."

The first thing he ever invented was a sled-type corrugator which his company still sells nearly 30 years later.

"I'm not an engineer," Herrett insists, asserting he has very little formal education. "You might say I've invented my way into engineering."

But in 1966, he was named Idaho Businessman of the Year and in 1974 he received the Industrial Achievement Award for the Pacific Northwest Region from the American Society of Agricultural Engineers.

"Enthusiasm is what has made it all go," Herrett says about his growing firm. "I'm a tinkerer at heart. That is what it has developed from."

Herrett originated an idea some years ago which has made Acme one of the world's largest manufacturers of major equipment, a bell-made metal links which is used in harvesting equipment to convey produce such as potatoes and beets.

He originally got the idea from other chain belt manufacturers by major equipment and began working to perfect a manufacturing process using hydraulics to mass produce the chain for use on farm equipment.

"The chain was perhaps the hardest thing I ever did," Herrett recalls. "Sud" bled over it but never quit. It was a big job. It took years to get something that was perfect."

Last year Acme made more than three million links which, when assembled, totaled about 1,000 miles of draper chain.

They used about 4,000 tons of steel rod which they now purchase in one lot each, making their operation one of the most efficient and productive in the world.

Draper chain is familiar to farmers and farm equipment manufacturers throughout the world since it is used on potato and beet digging machines, flower bulb diggers, tomato pickers, rock picking machines, sweet potato diggers and beach cleaning machines.

"We have the best in the nation," Herrett says about the chain which his company ships all over the nation and to several foreign countries. "We've got the jump on the competitors. It took years. And we're still developing it."

About 17 years ago, when his business was growing rapidly, Herrett hired men he considers to be keys to the success of the expanding firm.

"I have a personal ability to hire good men," Herrett says about his employees. "I have a lot of good people around me. It's a credit to me and a credit to them."

The men he has hired have helped the company to grow into what it is now.

One, Hugh Farmer, sales manager, says the company is at least as big as any other company which manufactures draper chain.

"We just about set the standards for the industry," Farmer says about Acme's approach to the making of draper chain. "There are some manufacturers that are better now because of it."

Farmer explains Acme takes a strict engineering approach to the making of the chain.

"We decide what is the best link from an engineering standpoint. Then we establish specifications for that best link," Farmer says. "And then we manufacture it so we can inspect for those specifications."

Engineer, Dick Uppiano, oversees the manufacturing process and inspections, always striving to improve the process.

Since the company changed over to forging the metal links instead of merely bending them into shape, the tempering, or reheating, process has become an important focal point, according to Uppiano.

After the metal rod has been cut from the coil to the proper length, heated red hot, bent by machine and cooled in an oil bath, it is as brittle as glass and must be reheated or tempered just right. Uppiano says the tempering gives the chain the properties best suited to making a satisfactory draper chain, according to Uppiano.

Uppiano says the tempering process rearranges the molecules in the metal of the link and must be done precisely in order to create the best link for each particular job.

"Heat treatment is the key," Farmer agrees. "All the items we manufacture require heat treating to some degree."

Farmer says Acme has become very sophisticated in the treatment process and in selecting proper materials suited to its work. And the management and treatment of high carbon steel used in the draper chain is a very technical process.

DEAR ABBY: In 1973 I wrote to you and you printed my letter together with your answer, which changed my life. I would like to share with you what has happened to me since:

1. I have sustained my 100-pound weight loss for five years.
 2. I went into therapy.
 3. I received a Master's degree in psychology, and am now a practicing and teaching therapist.
- I owe an eternal debt of gratitude to Overeaters Anonymous and you.

ALBERT IN LOS ANGELES

DEAR ALBERT: Don't sell yourself short. Without your determination, you never could have accomplished your goal. I shall reprint your letter as an inspiration to others who need it now.

Satisfied reader

DEAR ABBY: My name is Albert, and I am a compulsive overeater. Three years ago I weighed 305 pounds. I was in debt to the tune of $5,000, my marriage was on the rocks, and I was about to lose my job. Overeating was the cause of all my problems, but I didn't know it then.

I had tried reducing clubs three times, diet doctors, quack doctors, shots, pills, and even hypnosis. One diet doctor put me on pills and shots and I lost 100 pounds in seven months. In less than six months I had put it all back on again. (It cost me $1,500.)

Then someone told me about Overeaters Anonymous, and I went to a meeting. There were signs all over the place saying, "WE CARE."

Abby, I have never met a more loving, caring bunch of people in my life. I couldn't believe it. The only requirement to join "O.A." is a desire to stop eating compulsively. There are no dues, and nobody is weighed in, humiliated. You don't even have to attend meetings if you don't want to. I can only tell you that after that first meeting I felt that God had sent me there.

Today, I weigh 150 pounds, am debt free, have money in the bank and my marriage is more secure than ever. I've returned to my church, where I was ashamed to go for years because I felt so unworthy.

Overeaters Anonymous is strictly that. No last names are used, but I will sign mine, and you may check me out. That organization has done so much for me I want to let others know about it so they can be born again. Because that's what happened to me.

ALBERT IN LOS ANGELES

DEAR ALBERT: Not only did I check you out, but I personally spoke with several members of "O.A.," and every word you wrote is true. Anyone interested in learning more about this wonderful organization there are chapters all over the U.S. may write to Overeaters Anonymous, P.O. Box 34854, Los Angeles, Calif. 90034.

DEAR ABBY: The other day a friend of mine (I will call her Josephine) told me how cool she thought my brother was and that would give anything to go out with him.

Well, I told my brother about Josephine and what she said, and he didn't think the same about her. In fact he thought she was a creep. I even offered him money to take her out just once, but he wouldn't do it. I know Josephine is going to ask me about my brother again. What shall I tell her?

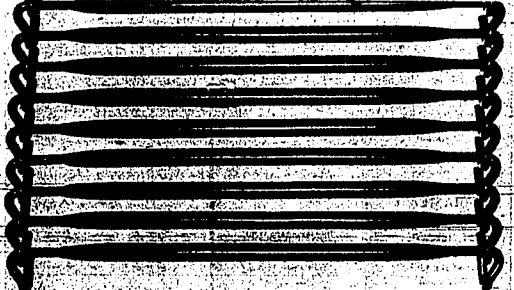

ON THE SPOT

DEAR ON: If Josephine inquires about you, "cool" brother again, tell her that he freezes at the suggestion of taking a friend of yours, and unless she can attract him on her own, it's not tonight Josephine—or any other night.

Pagliacci opera set soon

Opera planned

ARMS flying, Patrick Woliver directs the chorus rehearsal for Northwest Opera Association's production of Leoncavallo's tragic opera "Pagliacci."

TWIN FALLS — As the production date for Northwest Opera Association's presentation of the tragic opera "Pagliacci" approaches, rehearsal pace is picking up.

The production, to be presented Jan. 26 and 28 at 1:30 p.m., Jan. 29 at 8:15 p.m. and Jan. 30 at 2:15 p.m. at the College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts auditorium, requires many rehearsals of the cast of more than 25 adults and some ten children.

The directing efforts of Boise dramatist John Elchmann, CSI vocal chairman Patrick Woliver, and CSI music department head, Larry Curtis are being turned toward reading the singers and the musicians for their performance.

Woliver, playing a triple role as one of the performers, a tenor who plays the part of Beppe, the chorus director and the vocal coach for the other performers and members of the chorus, has been rehearsing with every spare moment, according to publicity director Jigly Driscoll.

New to the Twin Falls area, Woliver came from his native state of Tennessee to become chairman of vocal activities at the College of Southern Idaho. He holds from Knoxville and holds bachelor's and master's degrees from the University of Tennessee.

Woliver has performed extensively in opera and brings a wide background of operatic experience to the January performance of Pagliacci.

He sang major tenor roles in Puccini's "Gianni Schicchi," Stravinsky's "The Bartered Bride," Donizetti's "Lucia di Lammermoor" and "Rita," Rossini's "Il Barbiere di Siviglia," Strauss's "Die Fledermas" and Gilbert and Sullivan's "Mikado."

Equally suited for oratoria and musical comedy, Woliver is a member of Actor's Equity Association.

Tickets are available now from all Twin Falls music stores or by calling Denis Youtz at 733-7905. Students can purchase tickets at all Magic Valley schools.

your health

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb —

About six months ago I began having bright red blood with my bowel movements. There was no pain of any kind. This went on for about a month. Then as suddenly as it started it stopped.

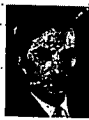

I never thought it could be serious because there was no pain. My wife tells me it could be cancer. Is this true? What should I do? There never was any pain and there has been no bleeding for five months or more. I am 38 years old and have three children.

Dear Reader —

Don't take a chance. Have a medical examination as soon as possible. Anyone who has bleeding from the rectum for no readily apparent cause should get medical attention as soon as possible. Your friend is right, it is one of the signs of cancer of the rectum.

Probably you have hemorrhoids. Childhood is apt to cause them but even hemorrhoids can be brought out because of a mass in the rectum and the mass may be cancer.

Don't take a chance

I'd like to take this opportunity to remind everyone that the second most common cause of cancer deaths in both men and women is cancer of the colon and rectum. It is exceeded only by cancer of the lung in men and cancer of the breast in women.

The early signs of cancer of the rectum and colon are not associated with pain. Bleeding is one sign. Any unexplained change in bowel habit is another. If a person starts having more frequent stools, smaller ones or diarrhea, or constipation and has not had these findings before, run to the nearest doctor — don't just assume you have common irregularity. Let the doctor find out for sure. He may save your life.

The person who is a real challenge even to a physician is the one who has had bowel problems for life. Intermittent attacks of constipation, diarrhea and symptoms that are similar to spastic colon may make it difficult or impossible to tell if a change in bowel habit has occurred.

There is some indication that a normally functioning colon may prevent cancer of the colon. Why? The theory is that chemicals that may irritate the lining of the colon and start a cancer are in contact with the colon wall longer if you have constipation or sluggish movement of food residue through the colon. This is one reason advanced for including bran and other sources of cereal fiber in your diet. For whatever reason, cancer of the colon is far less common in populations where constipation and sluggish bowels or spastic colon are uncommon.

Hemorrhoids can be aggravated by a spastic colon. Straining increases the pressure and may precipitate the bleeding. For both reasons it is important to try to develop normal bowel habits. To give you more information on this I am sending you The Health Letter number J-2, Spastic or Irritable Colon and Constipation. Others who need this information can send 50 cents for it with a long stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Send your letter to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Incidentally the high rate of rectal cancer is another reason why adults should have a rectal examination at the time of their periodic checkup. This applies to both men and women. If your doctor is not doing one ask him why not.

60 Pounds Lost On High Fiber Diet!

BEFORE

AFTER

I lost 300 pounds 10 or 15 pounds at a time, only to gain it back again plus five more pounds each time.

One year ago I topped the scales at 206 pounds, only to find myself obese, unhealthy, and very unhappy with life and myself.

In the midst of total depression I decided to stop trying fad diets and lose weight by utilizing food from the basic four food groups.

I had joined diet clubs only to find that by faithfully following the program, the loss was so minimal I would go on a binge and gain more weight.

The day came when I weighed over 300 pounds, wore size 20 clothes, and had slowed down my metabolism to the point that I could eat no more than 1,200 calories each day or gain weight.

The more depressed I got, the more I ate, and the less I believed I could do anything. I was disgusted, disappointed and humiliated in myself.

I came to the conclusion that I was a sugarholic because whenever I would eat foods containing sugar I would go on a binge and gain back any weight I had lost.

I began reading more than 60 nutrition books and government reports on health, some of which I read twice or three times. After studying these books I found the key which eventually led to my loss of 60 pounds.

The articles and books convinced me that by changing my diet to high fiber it would help digestion and allow me to lose weight faster than other ways of dieting. It also became convinced that by staying away from white refined sugar it would help me from going on eating binges.

On Oct. 1, 1975, I weighed 206 pounds and within one month of utilizing my new eating habits, I lost 15 pounds.

The weight kept dropping off and within five months, I lost 52 pounds changing my dress size from 20 to 14. I have since lost another 8 pounds and wear a size 12.

To my discovery, a high fiber diet is more filling, less expensive and more appetizing. The diet is more filling because fiber absorbs water and can swell to eight times its size. It also takes longer to digest high fiber foods which helps appease hunger.

After discovering the benefits of bran, I researched further and found that whey is an excellent food which has value in intestinal hygiene for proper digestion. Whey also acts as a mild temporary diuretic which helps reduce water retention.

After taking whey and bran daily, I came up with the idea of transforming whey, bran, and herbs into tablets. Chickweed helps dissolve fat when combined with a low calorie diet and Fenel seed is a natural appetite depressant.

I call this new weight reduction program Anna Louise's 2+2 Bran Whey Herb tablets. These tablets are being sold nationally at health food stores and health spas. Each bottle contains 160 tablets which is a 30 day supply.

I am very satisfied with my new weight/loss and most important I am able to keep it off by continuing eating high fiber foods and using the Bran Whey Herb tablets for maintenance.

The best part about this new program is that you do not have to count calories nor weigh foods. Just eat the foods listed in the booklet that explains the complete program and you too can say "POUNDS A WHOLEY."

Start now on the highway to lose unwanted pounds by getting the tablets and booklet at your local health food store or spa.

6 small slices Swiss cheese
1/4 cup flour
1/4 cup grated parmesan cheese
1 tsp. salt
1/2 tsp. sage
1/2 tsp. pepper
1/2 cup salad oil
1 1/2-oz. can cream of celery soup

Low temps 'aren't all bad'

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — It may not seem like it when your feet and hands and your ears and nose are falling off, but a psychologist believes prolonged temperatures of 30 to 40 below aren't all bad.

"Crime and disturbed psychiatric behavior go down, and morale goes up in cold weather," said Dr. John Brantner, professor of health care psychology at the University of Minnesota.

"It can be looked at not so much as extreme cold," he said in an interview Wednesday during a record-breaking cold wave, "but as a shared hardship phenomenon, a universally imposed hardship for which resentment is inappropriate."

"There's no use shaking your fist or getting mad at an arctic cold front. It falls equally on the rich and the poor, the high and the low. We're all in together."

"If anything, morale goes up," he said.

"Although it has its own tragedies within it — fires, deaths from exposure and the like — the tragedy rates are much lower than other hardships such as tornadoes and floods."

"The study of the shared hardship phenomenon is very interesting," Brantner said.

"I don't know if there have been studies made, but I would be surprised if mental depression increased during seasons of cold. Frustration, yes, irritability, yes, but most people see irritability as useless."

"The weather is so bloody impersonal. It's not directed at me. No agency is directing the cold only at me. Of course you can be mad at people living in a nice climate. It would be interesting to talk to people who have moved to 'nice climates' and then returned to Minnesota," he said.

So far as sexual habits go, he said, aside from earlier maturity, there is not much difference in cold and tropical weather. State and city vital statistics bureaus have no records on birth rates as a result of prolonged cold.

South won; played ace and queen of hearts to throw West in with the king. West led a club, but it was all over. South ruffed the club, ruffed a heart in dummy, ruffed another club, and another heart, got back to his hand with a third club ruff, pulled East's last trump, scored his contract trick with his last heart and conceded the last two tricks.

East could have seen all this coming and could have played a low trump. South would get to ruff one heart with the ace of trumps, but East's jack would overtake the trick one to hold South to nine tricks.

By Oswald & James Jacoby

East started out his career of crime when he failed to bid three clubs over North's two spade call. Not that this failure was a serious crime, just that it proved to be very expensive.

Had East bid three clubs West would surely have taken him to game which makes East's South would probably have saved at five spades and been doubled and set.

In any event East did not bid South and West elected to open his singleton trump.

The nine was played from dummy and here is where East really violated the laws of good bridge. He covered with his jack.

A Florida reader asks a very interesting question that we can't answer definitely.

After an opening bid of one notrump all four suits are bid. Finally the opener bids four notrump. Our reader wants to know if that four notrump is Blackwood.

The answer is that it depends on partnership understanding. Most experts would play it as showing a desire to play at four notrump, but some partnerships just play all four notrump calls as Blackwood.

I kind of like it as it is. I think it's a good town. We do need a little more traffic control than we now have. But outside of that I think it's a good place to live.

Harald Gerber, Twin Falls:

Concerned citizens. I think too many people complain about things, whether it's the parking situation or whatever, without taking part. That's on the local level. The same is true on the national level ... They just sit and complain and think someone else ought to do something.

Joe Gorman, Twin Falls:

What's wrong with it now? I'm satisfied with it. The (traffic) lights-needed fixing. They've got them working now and they're a great improvement.

ION: What does Twin Falls need most?

Eberly Parkwood, Twin Falls:
Snow; I ski.

Kathy Speirs, Twin Falls:
Maybe an indoor tennis court. I miss playing tennis in the winter and sometimes in the summer the courts are wet.

Linda Esterbrook, Gooding:
They need to improve the traffic problem on Blue Lakes North. It's quite congested out there. You can't pull out of the Blue Lakes Shopping Center.

Virginia Turner, Kimberly:
I think Twin Falls needs a good radio station or a more diverse type of music ... Anything but top 40. That's all they've got here — country western or the top 40.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The inauguration of Jimmy Carter, centered around a brief, slow-moving ceremony at the Capitol, is now a weeklong television spectacular bringing the reception, pomp, and parade into millions of American homes. The three networks — NBC, CBS and ABC — plan extensive coverage of Inaugural Day activities Jan. 20, and will also originate nightly news and other programs from the nation's capital all that week. For those working during the day, public television is planning a special 90-minute replay of highlights at 1 p.m. More than 1,000 persons have applied for working press credentials with the Carter Inaugural Committee, several hundred from newspapers abroad. Most newspapers will get their coverage from the wire services. Nearly 100 reporters and editors from UPI's Washington news bureaus will participate in coverage of the week's events. But the emphasis is on television. A giant stand to hold TV cameras and commentators has been constructed at the Capitol to make coverage there of the swearing-in and inaugural speech comfortable and convenient. CBS and NBC plan to begin their special coverage at 10 a.m., with ABC due to go on the air a half hour later. All three plan to remain on until the parade concludes. Only ABC is planning live coverage of the inaugural balls from 11 p.m. to 1 a.m. Top names in television news will anchor the coverage — Walter Cronkite, Roger Mudd, John Chancellor, David Brinkley, Howard K. Stern, Barbara Walters, Harry Reasoner and Eric Severeid — joined by scores of reporters. They will be at events from the morning prayer service by Dr. Martin Luther King Sr., at the Lincoln Memorial to the departure of President Ford at Andrews Air Force Base. NBC has purchased exclusive live television rights for the inaugural eve at the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts. It will include coverage by Leonard Bernstein and the National Symphony Orchestra, Johnny Cash, Sunday, January 16, 1977.

Beverly Sills, Steve Wonder, Paul Simon and a poem, reading by James Dickson.

The three networks have joined in a "pool" arrangement for camera coverage of most events, with NBC covering the Capitol ceremony, the parade route, and ABC, the White House area.

Frank Jordan, executive producer of NBC's coverage, believes the use of portable mini-cameras this year will be the biggest change from prior inaugural coverage.

"The Inaugural day, especially the ceremony, is uniquely suited for live television," Jordan said. "It takes place under conditions ideal for live television. It is planned in advance with television in mind."

"There isn't much suspense," Jordan added. "You really know who is what, not like a convention or election."

NBC plans to originate its morning "Today" program from Washington all that week.

Elliot Bernstein, senior producer of ABC's coverage, said although it was a long time since their reporters will "wait a few days before we put any words on the man."

"Our coverage will take that approach," he said. "I don't think we will talk to them about whether we should have a tax cut or not have a tax cut."

"This is Jimmy Carter's day," Bernstein added. "We are covering one of the few rituals in the American system where we honor people in a regal way, in honoring the man and the office."

In addition to the 90-minute wrapup inaugural night, public broadcasting will have live coverage in New York and Washington, narrated by Paul Duke.

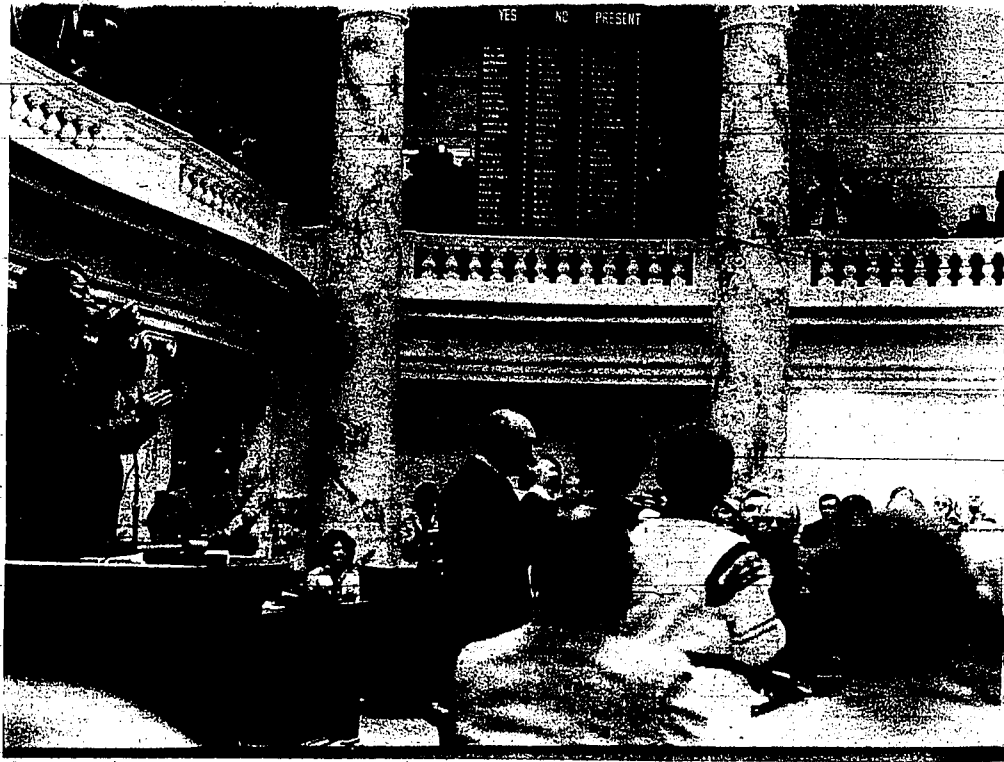

Political writers for papers throughout the nation will assemble also to cover the events, with an especially large delegation from Carter's home state of Georgia.

Debra Hersberg, head of media credentials for the Inaugural Committee, said applications from Georgia were "really heavy."

"A lot of them have been with Jimmy for a long time," she said, "and it's just as much their day as his."

She said the biggest problem was dealing with persons who were not working reporters, but who applied for credentials.

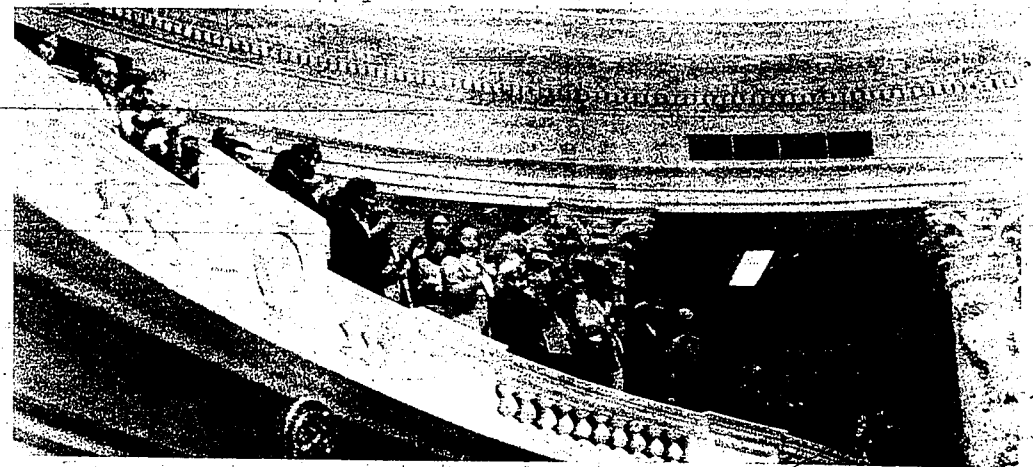

Farewell to Boise

A drink of water during a pause for applause

A pensive Gov. Cecil Andrus leaves rostrum following address

Standing ovation from gallery marks conclusion of remarks

Cecil Andrus speaks with tears . . . as he says goodbye to Idaho

By CHRIS PECK
Times-News writer
BOISE — Applause echoed off the domed ceiling of the House of Representatives Monday as Cecil Andrus stood with tears in his eyes before the 105 Idaho legislators. "I wish you well," the governor said, "I know with God's help all will continue to be well in Idaho. I will miss you." With that the legislature came to its feet, still clamping and gave the Democratic governor a final farewell. The Republican-controlled state legislature hasn't always applauded Cecil Andrus nor has the 45-year-old outgoing governor always evoked warm feelings from fellow Democrats. Still, Andrus' tearful departure as governor of Idaho to become Secretary of the Interior in Jimmy Carter's Administration marks the highpoint in the career of one of Idaho's finest politicians. He has managed to become a popular Democratic governor in a state dominated in recent years by Republicans. He's managed to build a strong following among environmentalists while still governing Idaho during a generally welcomed period of economic growth.

He's turned his modest political power base from rural Idaho into a springboard to national political prominence. These aren't the works of a second-rate politician. When Andrus is confirmed as Secretary of the Interior this week he will become the highest ranking Idahoan ever in a presidential cabinet. His position to a great extent is due to a chance friendship he and Jimmy Carter struck up in recent years. This friendship, based on what Carol Andrus calls "the same kind of vision" was perhaps the luckiest political alliance Andrus ever forged. To some extent Andrus has always been a lucky politician. When he ran against Don Samuelson for governor in 1970, for example, he was pitted against a man who at that time was considered a political lightweight.

Idahoans were and still are a conservative lot. But Andrus courageously read an unpopular current in the Idaho mainstream which said voters would support a man who wanted to protect the wilderness areas of their state. This ability to sense what people wanted in a governor and then make his political image accordingly gave Cecil Andrus an uncommon advantage over any opponent. In six years as governor Cecil Andrus didn't do much compromising. Instead, he managed to convince Idahoans that his vision was their vision.

For example, he pushed through land use planning laws after commissioning the Idaho Tomorrow study which concluded residents wanted to preserve their "quality of life." It was Andrus who asked for the Idaho Tomorrow survey and later it was Andrus who used the survey to promote his land-use planning bills. Kindergartens were begun in Idaho, over the protestations of many Republican and Democratic legislators, because Andrus wanted them. To a lesser extent, Idaho's Pioneer coal-fired generating plant was scuttled after Andrus opposed the project before the Public Utilities Commission. And, the Teton Dam went ahead partially because Cecil Andrus supported it. There were times as governor when Andrus wasn't Mr. Nice Guy. According to some legislators, Andrus occasionally would call in the Democratic leadership of the legislature and threaten them, saying he wanted support for his bills no matter what their personal preferences were. He could twist arms as governor but rarely was burned because of it. The Andrus effort to promote statewide kindergartens often is cited as an example of how the governor could control the Democratic vote when needed. Within the executive and administrative offices, Andrus also wielded considerable power. Almost always he got who he wanted appointed to public commissions. He also found money to buy an airplane for executive use after the legislature turned down the idea. Andrus rarely showed his tough side to the voters. Instead, he was an extremely accessible governor, careful to send best wishes to newly elected local officials and always careful to spend a few days each summer walking the streets of Idaho's small towns listening to voters. He was a personable governor with a good sense of humor and a great memory for names. Finally, his vision of Idaho was a good one. For this he will be missed when he goes to Washington as Secretary of the Interior.

By ROBIN ADAMS SLOAN

Q: What's happened with the David Frost TV interviews with Nixon and when will we ever see them again? — Chicago

A: Frost will begin taping the interviews in sessions next month for airing in May.

The British television personality and his business managers have been busy just selling the syndication rights world-wide and are looking for $50,000 to $30,000 per 30-second ad spots for the U.S. market. Frost has never confirmed that Nixon will get $1 million for this TV deal, but he does say that Nixon gave in to demands that "he (Frost) has final editorial control."

One of the main reasons for the slowness of the Frost-Nixon TV deal was that neither wanted to prejudice the appeals of Mitchell, Ehrlichman and Haldeman before the Supreme Court, which should be resolved by April at the latest.

Frost plans different types of programs for individual countries. The U.S. will see four 90-minute specials cut down from the original 2 1/2 hours of interviewing tape.

TOM JONES

... taxes and acting

Q: Where is Lee Harvey Oswald's widow today? — M.J., Houston

A: Marina Oswald Porter, now 35, lives in rural Rockwall, Tex., and works as a sales clerk in a nearby Dallas suburban department store. She has three children, two by Oswald, and a third by Kenneth Jess Porter, whom she married in 1965.

Q: Why didn't Ruth Gordon write about her old friend Katharine Hepburn in her new autobiography? — F.M., Trenton, N.J.

A: Ruth and her husband, Garson Kanin, were once very close friends with Hepburn, but Hepburn no longer speaks to Ruth and Garson — thanks to Kanin's best-selling book — a few years ago. "Tracy and Hepburn."

The very private Katie thinks Kanin betrayed their friendship by writing what most reviewers thought was an innocent, but money-grabbing project at best.

Now, while Ruth is promoting her new book, nothing makes her more angry than when TV interviewers bring up the subject of her former friend, Miss Hepburn.

Q: Are there any plans to make a film about Golda Meir? — C.S., Pasadena, Md.

A: Seems lots of actresses think they're right for Golda, including Shelley Winters, Jo Van Fleet, Joanne Woodward, and Anne Bancroft, who is believed to have bought the rights to the Meir autobiography with a little help from hubby's big Brokeback millions. SCANDAL TIME: The wife of an extremely high-political figure is hitting the bottle. In the presence of other people the other day, he said to her, "I didn't know you started drinking bourbon so early in the morning."

Q: I remember that John Tunney's wife, Mieke, said when they were divorced that there was no hope for reconciliation, as long as Tunney was in politics. What about it now that he's out? — R.T., Lancaster, Pa.

A: A friend asked the former Mrs. Tunney that question recently, and she said, "You'd have to ask John. I would never close the door."

Q: I've always read that Angelica Huston is a model but never see her picture except in the gossip column. Does she ever work or is she just a party girl? — K.T., Pompano Beach, Fla.

A: When your lover (Jack Nicholson) is worth $10 million (thanks to his percentage of "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest"), Angelica certainly doesn't have to spend any time working in front of hot lights for photographers in a modeling studio.

However, just for a little pin money, she does an occasional modeling assignment like a recent Bonwit Teller sales catalog. Most of all, she wants to act, and does have an effective bit in "The Last Tycoon."

Also, she photographs better as a fashion model than as a three-dimensional actress, weighing only 100 pounds for her 5-foot 9-inch frame.

Q: How much does Catherine Deneuve get from her new Mercury automobile TV commercials? — A.C., San Jose, Calif.

A: Catherine picked up a cool $100,000 from Ford for the Mercury pitches which took only a week to shoot last summer.

But at the same time, Catherine hurt her six-year association promoting Chanel No. 5. The Chanel people just didn't think Deneuve was quite classy enough for their image, and so they dropped Catherine from their future advertising plans.

Q: Now that Tyrone Power's daughter Taryn is starting to make an acting career for herself, I'm wondering what her mother is up to. Is Linda Christian still breaking hearts? — J.O., New Orleans.

A: Absolutely. As a 52-year-old playgirl, Linda is still in the swing of the social whirl, centering around the Riviera and Roma. Last report is she has a young beau, half her age, named Jan Pierre Arba, who wants to be an actor.

WALTER CRONKITE

Q: What's behind Tom Jones' decision to take on U.S. resident-alien status? — N.G., Philadelphia

A: First, the incredibly high British taxes; and second, Jones' desire to branch out and expand his career from singing sex symbol to serious, straight actor. In fact, Tom plays a hired assassin in a new movie called "Yockawald" coming out this spring.

GOLDA MEIR

... many want to play Golda

Q: How does Turman Capote go about annoying just about everybody? — F.L., Miami

A: We'll give you a couple of examples.

Recently, Truman discoursed on actors with an interviewer and said that an intelligent person "just couldn't be one." Then he added that "neither Laurence Olivier nor John Gielgud is particularly intelligent" and that "Merlon Brando is so dumb it makes your skin crawl."

Then he turned on Jackie Onassis' pet, he said, "is a freak, it totally created person who made herself from top to bottom." That answer your question?

Q: You mentioned that Marlene Dietrich is now 75 and living in Paris, working on her memoirs, but does this mean she's retired? — M.L., New Haven, Conn.

A: A lot of news reports at the time of Marlene's birthday said she was fast becoming a recluse and refusing to see even good friends. This isn't the case. She is still recovering from complications from her leg and hip injury of two years ago, but plans to continue to work.

And to prove it, she has signed with a special agent just for television commercials. Dietrich will probably never retire.

Q: What's my favorite James Cagney doing these days? — R.T., Corpus Christi, Tex.

A: He's working for director Claude Lelouch in Lelouch's sequel to his famous "A Man and a Woman." The problem is that co-star Genevieve Bujold is not the easiest actress in the world to work with, and worse, Lelouch is giving her the closeups.

Q: What about the wife who got dumped when Steve McQueen fell in love with a MacGraw? — T.P., Memphis, Tenn.

A: Nelle McQueen has had some interesting time in her life since her divorce. Her current suitor is Charles Revson Jr. He's a very rich man since he's an heir to the Revlon cosmetic fortune.

Q: I see the Smothers Brothers are splitting up again. Is this final? — B.M., Tucson, Ariz.

A: It looks that way. Dicke wants to enjoy his passion for car racing and tend to running his business empire, which includes a very healthy wine vineyard.

Tommy's going to try to go it alone as a single. Their last joint appearance as a team is on a pay-TV special.

Q: You had an item about Britt Ekland and her current swain Rod Stewart. What about Lou Adler? — H.H., Charleston, S.C.

A: That relationship was over years ago, and a lot of ladies have come and gone in the record producer's life. Latest to leave is Ingrid Bouling, the actress in "The Last Tycoon."

Lou likes a low profile, so no one knew that was a twosome.

Q: How does comedian Harvey Korman act as Carol Burnett show's guest? Has his own show like everybody else? — J.M., Syracuse, N.Y.

A: Over the years, Harvey's been offered a number of series but he's turned them all down. However, Harvey has just signed with ABC to do a comedy series. The show is currently in the development stages.

JACKIE KENNEDY

... Capote has an opinion

Q: How come Walter Cronkite never said anything about his belief in UFOs? I read about it in a weekly national tabloid, recently. — G.H., Brooklyn.

A: Because Cronkite doesn't believe in them. That story really angered him and he called the editor and complained bitterly. We hear top brass at the newspaper have ordered that reporters must have tapes and other proof to back up their stories.

gossip column

By ROBIN ADAMS SLOAN

Q: What's happened with the David Frost TV interviews with Nixon and Johnson, will we ever see them? — A.Z., Chicago

A: Frost will begin taping the 12 two-hour sessions next month for airing in May.

The British television personality and his business managers have been busy just selling the syndication rights world-wide and are looking for $50,000 to $80,000 per 30-second ad spots for the U.S. market. Frost has never confirmed that Nixon will get $1 million for this TV deal, but he does say that Nixon gave in to demands that Lee (Frost) has final editorial control.

One of the main reasons for the slowness of the Frost-Nixon TV deal was that neither wanted to prejudice the appeals of Mitchell, Ehrlichman and Haldeman before the Supreme Court, which should be resolved by April at the latest.

Frost plans different types of programs for individual countries. The U.S. will see four 90-minute specials cut down from the original 24 hours of interviewing tape.

TOM JONES

... taxes and acting

Q: Where is Lee Harvey Oswald's widow today? — M.J., Houston

A: Marina Oswald Porter, now 35, lives in rural Rockwall, Tex., and works as a sales clerk in a nearby Dallas suburban department store. She has three children, two by Oswald, and a third by Kenneth Jerser, Porty, whom she married in 1965.

Q: Why didn't Ruth Gordon write about her old friend Katharine Hepburn in her new autobiography? — E.M., Trenton, N.J.

A: Ruth and her husband, Garson Kanin, were once very close friends with Hepburn. But Hepburn no longer speaks to Ruth and Garson — thanks to Kanin's best-selling book of a few years ago, "Tracy and Hepburn."

The very private Kanin, thinks Kanin betrayed their friendship by writing what most reviewers thought was an innocent, but money-grabbing project at best.

Now, while Ruth is promoting her new book, nothing makes her more angry than when TV interviewers bring up the subject of her former friend, Miss Hepburn.

Q: Are there any plans to make a film about Golda Meir? — C.S., Bethesda, Md.

A: Seems lots of actresses think they are right for Golda including Shelley Winters, Jo Van Fleet, Joanne Woodward, and Anne Bancroft, who is believed to have bought the rights to the Meir autobiography with a little help from hubby Mel Brooks' millions.

SCANDAL TIME: The wife of an extremely high political figure is hitting the bottle. In the presence of other people, the other day, he said to her, "I didn't know you started drinking bourbon so early in the morning."

Q: I remember that John Tunney's wife, Mieke, said when they were divorced that there was no hope for reconciliation, as long as Tunney was in politics. What about it now that he's out? — R.T., Lancaster, Pa.

A: A friend asked the former Mrs. Tunney that question recently and she said, "You'd have to ask John. I would never close the door."

Q: I've always read that Anjelica Huston is a model but never see her pictures except in the gossip columns. Does she ever work or is she just a party girl? — K.T., Pompano Beach, Fla.

A: When your lover (Jack Nicholson) is worth $10 million (thanks to his percentage of "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest"), Anjelica certainly doesn't have to spend any time working in front of hot lights for photographers in a modeling studio.

However, just for a little pin money, she does an occasional modeling assignment like a recent Benoit Teller sales catalog. Most of all, she wants to act, and does have an effective bit in "The Last Tycoon."

Alas, she photographs better as a fashion model than as a three-dimensional actress, weighing only 100 pounds for her 5-foot 9-inch frame.

Q: How much does Catherine Deneuve get from her new Mercury automobile TV commercials? — A.C., San Jose, Calif.

A: Catherine picked up a cool $100,000 from Ford for the Mercury pitches which took only a week to shoot last summer.

But at the same time, Catherine hurt her six-year association promoting Chanel No. 5. The Chanel people just didn't think she was as chic as they wanted. Catherine from their future advertising plans.

Q: Now that Tyrone Power's daughter Taryn is starting to make an acting career for herself, I'm wondering what her mother is up to. Is Linda Christian still breaking hearts? — J.O., New Orleans.

A: Absently. As a 52-year-old playgirl, Linda is still in the swing of the social whirl.

A: First, the incredibly high British taxes, and second, Jones' desire to branch out and expand his career from aging, singing sex symbol to serious, straight actor. In fact, Tom plays a hired assassin in a new movie called "Vockwald" coming out this spring.

Q: You mentioned that Mariene Dietrich is now 75 and living in Paris, working on her memoirs, but does this mean she's retired? — M.K., New Haven, Conn.

A: A lot of news reports at the time of Mariene's birthday said she was fast becoming a recluse and refusing to see even good friends. This isn't the case. She is still recovering from complications from her leg and hip injury of two years ago, but plans to continue work.

Q: I see the Smothers Brothers are splitting up again. Is this final? — B.M., Tucson, Ariz.

A: It looks that way. Dickie wants to enjoy his passion for car racing and stop running his business empire, which includes a very healthy wine vineyard.

Tommy's going to try to go it alone as a single. Their last joint appearance as a team is on a pay-TV special.

Q: You had an item about Britt Ekland and her current swain Rod Stewart. What about Lou Adler? — H.H., Charleston, S.C.

A: That relationship was over years ago, and a lot of ladies have come and gone in the record producer's life. Latest to leave is Ingrid Bouling, the actress in "The Last Tycoon."

Lou likes a low profile, so no one knew that was a twosome.

Q: How come comedian Harvey Korman outshone Carol Burnett show doesn't get his own show like everybody else? — J.M., Syracuse, N.Y.
