

More Idahoans work in December

BOISE (UPI) — Warm, dry weather during the early part of December resulted in Idaho's unemployment declining for the third straight month, the Idaho Department of Employment reported today.

The agency said unemployment dipped to 6.4 per cent, seasonally adjusted, which compared with 6.7 per cent in November and 6.8 per cent a year earlier.

Unemployment was expected to climb again, this month, the department said.

In its monthly bulletin, the department said the weather in November and December, a time when a number of industries such as construction and lumbering slow down, allowed many people in outdoor jobs to work deeper into the winter than usual.

During the first 11 months of 1976, unemployment averaged 7.4 per cent, seasonally adjusted. In the same period in 1975 the rate averaged 6.9 per cent.

Consumer prices edge up again

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Consumer prices rose 0.4 per cent in December and 4.8 per cent throughout 1976, providing Americans with the lowest year-end inflation rate in four years, the Labor Department reported today.

The 1976 figures reflected a fulfillment of President Ford's promise to bring inflation below 5 per cent by the end of his tenure. But economists anticipate no further improvement during the next two years.

Inflation has cooled considerably from the 1974 peak, when prices rose at a 12.2 per cent rate. Last year produced the lowest inflation rate since it was 3.4 per cent in 1972.

The inflation rate last year also compared favorably with rates of 8.8 per cent at the end of 1973 and 7 per cent in 1975.

The December consumer price increase exceeded slightly the 0.3 per cent increase registered in November. But it was nonetheless smaller than the year's biggest one-month gain of 0.6 per cent last May.

The Consumer Price Index stood at 174.3 in December — near its peak at 174.3 in December at $100 a decade ago, now cost $174.30.

In a separate report, the Labor Department reported that American workers real spendable income rose a bare 0.1 per cent in 1976.

Food prices were responsible for most of the cooling trend in 1976. Smaller increases for gasoline, fuel oil, household appliances and new cars also contributed to the slowdown.

Increased costs for services — particularly medical care and transportation — accounted for most of the nation's inflation last year. Coffee prices rose 57.9 per cent during 1976.

The price of food purchased in groceries actually declined throughout 1976, the first such decline since 1961. A less dramatic slowdown occurred for other commodities and services.

Food prices rose 0.2 per cent in December. The increase was caused by higher prices for beef, eggs, coffee, poultry, fresh fruits and vegetables and restaurant meals. Coffee prices jumped 6.8 per cent in December.

Best prices were up 2.4 and poultry prices rose 2.7 per cent.

Price for other commodities increased 0.3 per cent last month, slightly more than in November. The biggest increases occurred for apparel, used and new cars, fuel oil and coal.

But gasoline and motor oil prices declined 0.1 per cent in December — the first decline since last April.

Most of the 0.4 per cent increase in service costs during December was caused by rising natural gas and electricity prices. Mortgage rates continued to decline, however, for the eighth consecutive month.

Filer 4th graders show well on test

FILER — Filer fourth graders scored nearly a half school year ahead of their national counterparts on an achievement test given last fall by the state.

The Filer youngsters also outranked their Idaho peers on the overall mark for the test.

Like fourth graders throughout the state, the Filer youngsters showed weaknesses in spelling, where they fell below the national average. In math computation they were slightly above the national average but below the level of most other Filer scores.

In math computation, the second weak area for state students, who averaged 3.7, Filer youngsters scored 4.1. In math concepts, Filer scored 4.6 to equal the state's similar score, and on math applications they scored 4.5 compared to the state's 4.3. Filer's total math score at 4.3 was three months ahead of the state's 4.0 average.

On the overall composite for the test, Filer fourth graders scored 4.4 compared to the state's 4.2. On reference skills they averaged 4.4 compared to the state's 4.3.

According to Filer elementary school counselor Dave Teater, the fourth grade results pleased administrators.

"We're really tickled with them, we're very pleased," Teater said. "This is one sample that we feel like we're doing real well."

Teater said the school had already identified spelling and math computation as weak areas to be worked on before the test results were released.

The test, which was administered last September in selected school districts throughout the state, was designed to give the Department of Education a base for establishing future statewide achievement norms.

The test was administered to students in the fourth, eighth and eleventh grades. Idaho students consistently ranked above national averages except for the spelling and math computation tests in the fourth grade.

Idaho's fourth graders averaged 3.8 (third grade, eighth month) on spelling, two months behind the national average. On math computation they averaged 3.7, to rank three months behind the national average.

On the overall composite score for the test, Idaho fourth graders ranked right at the national average with a score of 4.0.

Filer fourth graders in all but one category did better than the state average.

In the reading categories, the Filer youngsters matched their Idaho peers in vocabulary and comprehension with scores of 4.7. The Filer students ranked one month ahead in the total reading score with a 4.7 compared to the state's 4.6.

Filer students scored two months behind in language expression with a score of 4.6 compared to the state's 4.8. It was the only category in which Filer students failed to meet or better state marks.

Geothermal exports possible

TWIN FALLS — Geothermal energy development on the Snake River Plain has the potential of supplying all of the state's energy needs and leave a tremendous amount of energy for export, according to an Idaho Department of Water Resources study.

"Temperatures near 212 degrees Fahrenheit can be found in the Snake River Plain region, nearly 6,000 feet at reasonable drilling — 3,000 to 6,000 feet," department geologist John Mitchell, co-author of the study, said.

He said these temperatures are adequate for heating homes and for some industries. Temperatures hot enough to generate power, above 400 degrees, he said, can be found nearly everywhere on the plain at drilling depths of 6,000 to 10,000 feet.

In an interview, Mitchell said that rock under parts of the western Snake River Plain has the "base heat energy" potential of producing a total of 87 million megawatt hours of electricity per every square kilometer.

By contrast, Idaho Power Company's proposed huge 1,000 megawatt Pioneer power plant would have produced about six million megawatt hours of electricity a year operating at 70 per cent capacity.

Base heat energy, Mitchell said, represents all heat in excess of the heat necessary to keep rock temperature at 200 degrees Fahrenheit, down to a depth of 10,000 feet.

"One 'big unknown' in geothermal production, he said, is how much energy is available at great depths which could be pumped and used to produce energy.

Present technology, he said, could be used to extract heat in parts of the Snake River Plain where the hot water is known to exist.

However, in other parts, geothermal development may not be possible until the technology to extract energy from dry hot rock is developed.

BACTERIA which medical science knows little about may have caused the "Legionnaires' disease" which killed 29 persons exposed to it in Philadelphia last July. Dr. Charles C. Sencer, director, and Dr. David W. Fraser. (UPI)

Legionnaires' disease traced to new bacteria

Microbe hunters

WASHINGTON — Federal scientists believe they have discovered the cause of the mysterious Legionnaires' disease that killed 29 persons who were in Philadelphia during an American Legion convention there last July.

The apparent cause was a hitherto unknown bacterium discovered by scientists at the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta. The federal agency has been searching for the cause of the mysterious deaths since midsummer.

Announcing the discovery Tuesday, Dr. David Sencer, director of the center, said the bacteria have been "definitely associated with the disease." The newly discovered type of bacteria also appears to have been the cause of an earlier mysterious outbreak of fatal pneumonia that involved patients at St. Elizabeth's hospital here in 1965.

"The present findings provide very strong evidence that the two epidemics were caused by the bacterium," said a report on the discovery released Tuesday by the center. The report said there has not been time to identify the organism, thus leaving still open the question of whether it is something entirely new to medical science or some obscure germ that has previously been seen but not identified with pneumonia in humans.

The source of the bacteria and the manner in which they were transmitted to humans in Philadelphia and at St. Elizabeth's hospital are not known. The latest discovery should aid greatly in the search for answers to these key questions.

While the delay in finding the bacteria described Tuesday was caused by the fact that they are difficult to grow in the laboratory, Dr. Charles C. Shepard and Dr. Joseph E. McDade of the disease center were credited with growing research unit normally concerned with leprosy and rickettsial diseases. Dr. McDade is a research microbiologist in the same unit.

The organisms linked to Legionnaires' disease were first isolated from tissues taken from the lung of a person who died of the disease and from another person who died of pneumonia in Philadelphia.

Material from these specimens was injected in guinea pigs. After one or two days the animals became seriously ill. Material from the animals' spleens was then injected into fertilized hens' eggs. The embryos in the eggs died after about four to six days, according to the report. Examination under the microscope showed many unidentified bacteria-like organisms.

Although unidentified, the organisms are being called bacteria on the basis of their size and physical characteristics, the report said.

During the last several months all manner of possible explanations of legionnaires' disease have been suggested, including swine flu, traces of poisonous metals or other chemicals and infections of a kind known popularly as parrot fever, caused by organisms called rickettsia. All these hypothetical explanations have been abandoned after study.

The possibility of deliberate sabotage has also been considered and discarded.

Ford asks end to gasoline price lid

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Ford administration today asked Congress to remove federal gasoline price controls, a move some critics have said could drive up prices by 8 cents a gallon.

The Federal Energy Administration, in announcing the request, said the controls would be lifted March 1 if neither the House nor the Senate disapproves the move within 15 days.

President Ford should issue the proposal in his final days.

Egypt revokes food price hikes

CAIRO (UPI) — The Egyptian government, rocked by two days of riots over food price increases, revoked the hikes today, ordered police to kill rioters on sight and imposed a curfew on Cairo and Alexandria.

At least nine persons died in the riots, the worst since President Anwar Sadat came to power in 1970, and more than 200 were reported injured.

Sadat flew back to Cairo from his winter retreat in Aswan, 600 miles south of the capital, to take personal command of the situation.

Carter son booted for pot smoking

PLAINS, Ga. (UPI) — President-elect Jimmy Carter acknowledged Tuesday that his oldest son, Jack, was dismissed from the Navy in 1970 for smoking marijuana while stationed at the Navy's nuclear power school at Idaho Falls in 1970.

Press Secretary Jody Powell said report by columnist Jack Anderson "was consistent with the governor's recollection of the situation."

The columnist wrote that Carter's son, now 28, and 54 classmates were caught smoking marijuana and given general discharges. (Details, p. 5.)

Spanish freighter capsizes, sinks

MIAMI (UPI) — The 410-foot Spanish freighter Uloka capsized and sank today in stormy waters of the Gulf of Mexico, about 200 miles west northwest of Key West, Fla., the Coast Guard reported.

A Coast Guard plane and two tankers, the SS Arizona and SS Exxon, were on the scene searching for survivors. Seas were running 8 to 12 feet high, and winds of 30 to 35 knots, were hampering the search, a Coast Guard spokesman said.

FPC approves gas supply plan for East

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Power Commission has approved a complicated emergency deal to provide up to 250 million cubic feet of gas daily to seven Midwestern and Eastern states where supplies have been depleted by a record-breaking cold wave.

The order, announced Tuesday, involves a purchase from TransCanada Pipeline Ltd. at a price of $1.94 per thousand cubic feet.

Discipline bid traced at inquest

BURLEY — Opening testimony today at the inquest into the shooting death of 17-year-old James Leonard Tegan disclosed a picture of a father attempting to discipline his son.

Cassia County Deputy Sheriff Don Taylor told a coroner's jury that Paul Tegan, father of the dead boy, said he was "play-acting" when his thumb slipped off the hammer of a .357 caliber magnum revolver.

Taylor testified that the bullet from the gun struck the boy in the head between the bridge of the nose and the inner point of the left eyebrow at a slightly upward angle.

Taylor said that Tegan told him he had been worried about his son being late in returning from an LDS Mission. The older Tegan reportedly said that two youths had come to the house about 9:30 p.m. on Jan. 12, an hour before the shooting, looking for James. The father was quoted as saying that James had been in a fight with one of the youths earlier, and he feared they were looking for James in order to get even.

Deputy Taylor testified that Tegan told the father that the boy and his sister, Tjymara, was sent out to look for James, returned to the home about 10:30 p.m. Tegan allegedly said he fired a shot over James' and his sister's heads "to see how high they'd jump."

According to Taylor, the father told him that he began shoving the boy around in the house to impress on him how worried he had been.

"I guess I might have been trying to make an impression," Taylor quoted the father as explaining why he had the hammer pulled back on the revolver.

Taylor said the father was "very uncontrollable" during the interview.

"I killed my son, I killed my son; Oh, God I loved that boy," Taylor quoted the father as saying.

By GEORGE WILEY Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The statewide public school test administered last fall to Idaho students is designed as the first step in making school districts accountable for their teaching, according to state officials.

The test could also be the first step in the establishment of state high school competency testing.

Whether either of those proposed programs bear fruit will depend in part on the legislature, but the Idaho Department of Education (DPE) wants to implement them.

When the state test results were released last week, DPE officials were careful to say that they sought only "benchmark" norms for Idaho students against which future tests could be judged.

They also presented attempts to compare specific school areas against the statewide results.

Deputy DPE Supt. Jerry Evans said the state did not intend school by school or district by district comparisons with state results.

"What we wanted was an Idaho benchmark for student achievement in the basic skill areas," he said.

But while the DPE was resisting district comparisons in the initial test, Evans agreed that judging school district performance was the direction in which the DPE is heading.

"The whole thing here involves accountability and trying to make school districts more accountable for the mastery of basic skills," he said. "As we go into this thing, the districts will have their own testing programs. We're not sure yet where we're going, but we're moving in the direction of accountability and trying to put some credibility back in the high school diploma."

Gem tests called 'benchmark'

"The first thing that we felt we had to do was to determine what the achievement level in Idaho public schools was," Evans continued. "That's what we've attempted to do."

"I can assure you that it was a good faith attempt on the part of the state to establish a benchmark on achievement in the public school system," he added.

In its pursuit of accountability and high school competency testing, the DPE is being careful not to step on the toes of local school district administrators.

State Supt. Roy Truby has said several times that high school competency testing would be voluntary with the school district.

Addressing a recent principals' meeting, Truby suggested that the competency test could be administered first in the ninth grade. If students passed then, he said, they would not be subject to further testing. If they did not pass, school districts would be urged to correct deficiencies, and the students would be tested again in the tenth and eleventh grades to establish progress.

While the competency test would not be necessary for the district or mandatory for graduation, Truby suggested incentives might be given in the form of a state seal which would be attached to the high school diploma to show the test had been passed.

Employers might give more credence to a high school diploma if it had such a seal, he suggested.

"The state seal approach is being taken toward teaching accountability," he said.

Asked last week what sanctions the DPE might employ if a school district did not live up to a set standard for the state, Evans said:

"We still have a lot of faith in local control. . . . When local people really have an accurate picture of where they are, local people will come through. . . . Without some kind of state-regulated or state-mandated restriction."

If the state is going to use its authority to begin a norm for Idaho students for future accountability and competency testing, at least one administrator is concerned that the competency test may be too easy.

Deoyt Simcoe, special education director for the Twin Falls School District, where high school juniors scored well on the state test, said the best did not do much to show achievement differences between high level students.

Noting that 107 out of the 428 Twin Falls eleventh graders tested had scored at the upper limits of the state test, Simcoe said:

"I don't think the test was that challenging for the students in the upper limits. I don't think it really tested and differentiated those students."

Asked if he thought the test would be too easy, Evans responded:

"We examined as many tests as we could that we thought dealt with the basic skills in the public schools, and we concluded that this was the best that was available. . . . I could not say that it was perfect or that another test couldn't be designed that was better."

Evans emphasized that any future competency test would not be to the same test that was given.

"If we move into the competency testing program, the test will be designed by Idaho educators," Evans said. "It's too easy or if it's too hard it's because we made it that way."

Evans also noted that the DPE had exhausted its available federal funds on the initial test and that future testing, as well as accountability and competency follow-up, would have to come from the legislature.

"If the legislature decides not to provide the funds, there won't be any continued activity in this area," he said.

The real value of the initial test can only come in two or three years," he added, when follow-up tests are given.

"That's the significance of this state assessment plan that it gives us some benchmark so that in the future we will have some handle on whether student achievement is increasing or decreasing," Evans said, "and if it's decreasing we can change that trend."

Idaho students did well on the test, exceeding their national counterparts uniformly on the eighth- and eleventh-grade levels and falling below national marks for fourth graders, only in spelling and math competition.

The test was given only to fourth, eighth and eleventh graders in selected school districts throughout the state.

Chamber opposes Cassia-only tax

BURLEY - Members of the Burley Chamber of Commerce voiced their opinions Monday on various issues facing the community and state.

They said that they favor establishment of the Southern Idaho Regional Airport in Jerome County. But members were opposed to any new tax that would be imposed on only Burley or Cassia County.

Members at the Monday luncheon saw no need for eliminating the override levy requirement placed on school districts seeking extra money for maintenance and operations; had mixed feelings about the right of public employees to strike; and opposed a public vote on local government budgets.

"The idea of talking local budgets to the people drew considerable comment, primarily centered around election costs and falls in elected officials."

"If people have confidence in the people they elect, there's no need for it," Ed Elliott said, L.V. "Les" Morgan, former city councilman, added, "The solution is to elect people you can trust."

Morgan said Oregon has provision for the people to vote on budgets. He said several schools have had to close there because people refused to approve higher levies, or even the continuation of existing levies.

Morgan said in six of the eight years he was on the Burley council no one appeared at a budget hearing "and that's very bad." He added that three to four people showed up at the hearing one year.

Outgoing Chamber President Shirley Povlsen, who is also Cassia County treasurer, said the public needs to be educated to respond to budget proposals. He said, the county budget hearing also used to draw no attention, but interest now is growing.

About 40 people appeared last year to object to some items in the budget.

Asked if they favored public employees having the right to strike, many people flatly said, "No."

Vegwert said he believed they should have some type of representation and thought to collective bargaining. He said certain types of jobs involve public emergency services "and those employes know, when they go into them, they are going to have to work."

There was more difference of opinion on legislation designed to allow cities and counties to apply a piggy-back sales tax, a hotel-motel tax, household or income tax, liquor by the drink tax or increase the current levy maximum.

The major fear was that the additional tax would drive away business. Payette people dealing in Ontario, Ore., was one example raised.

Others included liquor sales now lost to Nevada because of the price in Idaho's state liquor dispensaries and the possibility that a Cassia County sales tax would drive customers to business on the north side of the Snake River.

Morgan said the local option taxing authority, with a local election required for approval, might benefit areas such as Ketchum and Sun Valley, where much of the trade is from outside the community.

Chamber members voiced doubts that the one-cent hike in gasoline taxes would be repealed.

Sandpiper dismissal pondered

TWIN FALLS - Retired District Judge Charles Scoggin, Fairfield, Tuesday took under advisement a request by James Koutnik that the suit filed against him on the Sandpiper liquor license be dismissed.

Local residents Eugene Kopp and Venita Beglan have filed a complaint in Fifth District Court here against Koutnik, claiming Koutnik's liquor license, leased to the recently opened Sandpiper Restaurant, should not have been issued because population requirements were not met.

In Idaho ethics, liquor licenses are issued as population increases. (For every 1,500 persons, one additional license can be granted.)

Koutnik said his attorney requested the dismissal on the grounds that the plaintiffs are "not an injured party and just meddling in someone else's business."

Fred Plankey, lawyer representing Kopp and Beglan, said the proper party would be a city, county or state representative. However, Plankey argued the city, county and state are defendants "so how can they also be plaintiffs?"

Judge Scoggin has set Feb. 28 for continuation of the hearing.

ERA clears 35th hurdle in Indiana

By United Press International
 Elated supporters of the Equal Rights Amendment hailed its approval by the Indiana legislature as a "major breakthrough" in their efforts to win ratification. Three more states now are needed.

A telephone call from Rosalynn Carter may have ensured passage of the amendment in Indianapolis Tuesday.

State Sen. Wayne Townsend said he returned a call Tuesday from the incoming first lady and she asked him to vote for the amendment if he found it in his conscience to do so.

Townsend, wavering on how to vote and besieged by conflicting mail and calls, told reporters, "There was no political pressure. I voted for it because I was trying to do what was right in my conscience."

The final Senate vote was 56 to 24. Loss of Townsend's vote could have blocked Indiana's becoming the 35th state to ratify ERA, since the motion would have failed of passage on a tie vote.

The League of Women

Voters described the Indiana vote as a "needed breakthrough" for (final ratification).

Women's rights groups generally have conceded that the amendment would be enacted unless they could obtain at least three more states this year. Before today, four were needed.

"Indiana's passage of ERA so early in the year is a clear indication that ratification is close at hand," said League President Ruth Clusen.

ERA proponents have singled out five states — North Carolina, Nevada, Missouri, Oklahoma and Florida — as the most likely to ratify the amendment in 1977. They believe Indiana gave them a much-desired momentum that could carry the amendment over the top soon.

Mary Brooks, the League's ERA expert, said if one target state acts favorably, "they can't stop us."

"They" she referred to were opponents who in Indiana and other states invoked reduced states' rights, homosexual marriages, unisex toilets and lost tax credits in debating the measure.

John Gardner, who founded and leads the citizens lobby Campaign Cause, said Indiana's General Assembly set an "important example" by ratifying the ERA.

"Indiana has become the 35th state to support a fundamental principle in our country — fair play and an equal chance, regardless of sex," he said. He called the vote a "major breakthrough" and said "approval by three more states will guarantee that the concept of legal equality is part of our constitution."

The National Commission on the Observance of International Women's Year applauded the passage and gave credit to the "positive efforts of ERA America" — a privately funded, independent organization which functions as a clearing house on issues related to the passage of the ERA.

Townsend, who reported Mrs. Carter's phone call, said he would call his district and would cost him votes if he runs for reelection and asked if she would come into his district to campaign for him.

Alaskan offers warmer setting

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A senator says there's a warmer setting for Thursday's Inauguration — the capital of Alaska.

As Washington shivered in 15-degree weather Tuesday, Sen. Ted Stevens, Alaska Republican, took the Senate floor to report that "the sun is not yet up in Anchorage but it is already 44 degrees."

Alaska has been having a relatively mild winter while much of the rest of the country experiences unusually harsh weather.

Stevens said Jimmy Carter could have a warmer inauguration by moving Thursday's events to Anchorage.

Fuel shortage relief actions set

© N.Y. Times Service
 WASHINGTON — The Carter administration was authoritatively reported Tuesday to be preparing a number of early actions to deal with the deep and worsening fuels shortage, particularly the shortage of natural gas.

In a related development, the Federal Power Commission voted Tuesday to send telegrams to pipelines saying that there could be interruptions to natural gas deliveries to houses, and reminding the pipelines that they could redirect supplies on their own initiative to protect life and property. The pipelines also were told that they should maintain deliveries to hospitals that lacked equipment to burn oil or other alternate fuel.

Officials said they did not anticipate any imminent interruption of residential natural gas. However, with the weather forecast calling for more temperatures far below normal, the officials said events later in the winter were hard to predict.

With natural gas supplies getting lighter from day to day, the new administration was expected to announce that it was asking Congress for emergency legislation to permit allocation of natural gas among pipelines and to broaden the legal authority for temporary purchases of natural gas at prices above federal ceilings.

The new administration also is expected to seek more comprehensive and timely information on fuels problems, perhaps by setting up a "hot-line" type of telephone circuit to the White House or Executive Office Building.

Announcement of these actions, plus a strong energy conservation statement by President-elect Carter or his energy co-ordinator, James R. Schlesinger, could come as early as Friday, according to sources in touch with the Carter transition team.

These sources also confirmed that Carter would nominate as Federal Energy Administration chief John F. O'Leary, 50, an economist who has worked on energy problems in three federal agencies. O'Leary is energy resources chief for New Mexico.

Schlesinger and his associates are understood to be advising Carter that the fuels situation could turn critical in many parts of the country by February if the weather remained abnormally cold. Therefore, the advice goes, as a new president, Carter must take charge of the problem quickly and effectively, lest he be blamed, within two weeks for failing to act swiftly and effectively.

Privately, analysts admit that it is problematical how much any president can do to ease a fuels shortage in the face of persistent and bitterly cold winter weather.

Bands, fireworks launch Carter inaugural activity

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Brass bands, jazz bands, symphony orchestras, folk dancing, hooting and hollering and four tons of fireworks are launching the inauguration of Jimmy Carter as the 39th President of the United States.

Bitter cold weather kept down the crowds at the opening events of the Carter inauguration Tuesday, but many of the indoor events — especially a free symphony concert at the Kennedy Center — drew packed houses.

Carter and dozens of his Georgia kinfolk join the celebration today and will attend the first of several exclusive events of the week — a gala tonight at the Kennedy Center, featuring Chevy Chase satirizing Carter to his face, and entertainers ranging from Beverly Sills to Johnny Cash.

The gala costs $25 a ticket for those invited, but will be broadcast to millions of Americans by CBS, which paid $1 million for TV rights.

Carter and members of his immediate family, including his wife Rosalynn, daughter Amy, three sons and mother "Miss Lillian" arrive late in the day. He will stay tonight at Blair House across the street from the White House.

Earlier in the day Carter's brother Billy was arriving with a plane load of 100 Plains, Ga. neighbors and kinfolk. Still earlier Atlanta society arrives in a chartered train. The Carter relations have taken over the top floor of a Washington hotel.

The big event comes Thursday when Carter walks across the street to the White House, jostled by a crowd of President Ford, rides with him to the Capitol and takes the constitutional oath of office.

Then comes a two-hour parade led by the new president, who has decided to walk the last leg of the journey to the White House. He campaigned two years for it, but abandoned his limousine for the last two blocks of the parade in a symbolic effort that will give the people a closer look at their new leader.

The weatherman says it will remain well below freezing throughout the rest of the week — but there will be no snow until at least after the parade.

Snow that night could cause havoc with the seven inaugural parties — which used to be called inaugural balls before Carter informally became the rule.

It was just 15 degrees above zero Tuesday night when the Carter inauguration was officially kicked off with a four-ton fireworks display on the Washington Monument grounds. In the same area where one million gathered last July 4 for the Bicentennial fireworks celebration, just 1,000 people braved the freezing winds.

Hundreds of automobiles jammed city streets seeking a warmer vantage point for the display, much of which was in the Carter-Mondale campaign colors of green and white.

While the fireworks were the official opener, free events had been staged throughout the day in museums and galleries throughout the city. At the Kennedy Center a full house saw a free concert given by the Atlanta and National Symphonies, featuring most American classical works and the "Ode to Joy" from Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Smaller groups of between 100 and 250 gathered in the seven museums of the Smithsonian for concerts by jazz combos, bluegrass bands and classical artists. A crowd of 4,800 hooted, hollered and danced until midnight at cavernous Union Station to wind up the first day. Tickets to the folk dance festival were free — and up to 8,000 could have been accommodated.

One of the first events of the inaugural — a fancy horse show — Tuesday afternoon featuring Lipizzan stallions — had to be canceled because of the cold.

Price of coffee now out of hand

WASHINGTON—The first linking that the price of coffee had gotten out of hand was in early 1977 when the IRS announced you could deduct the price of your first cup of coffee when discussing business, but you could not deduct the second cup. Also, you could no longer buy your wife a cup of coffee unless you could prove it was necessary for her to be there when the business conversation was held.

In a few months coffee had become a luxury item and was only served in the finest restaurants. At $20 a cup, some eating places offered to give you a free meal if you bought a cup of coffee to go with it (cream and sugar was extra).

But soon the idea of serving coffee after a meal was reserved for special occasions such as weddings, anniversaries, Bar Mitzvahs and New Year's Eve. It wasn't enough to just serve the coffee. People began to toast each other with their cups, and waiters showed the can the coffee came from, before they poured it from a pot wrapped in a white napkin.

The coffee makers started to put vintage years on the cans and connoisseurs emerged who could comment on the quality of each brand. They would say things such as "It's an unassuming little Maxwell House, but I think you'll be amused by its presumption" or "This Chuck Full o'Nuts has a nobility to it that you rarely find in any of the domestic brands. I would put it up against a 1976 Chase & Sanborn anytime."

The lusty grocer, best would say, rather grandly, "My grocer recommended this 'Instant Brand' over Nescafe. But it had to be drunk young when it's at its peak." People started keeping "Coffee Cellars" which they showed off to their friends. There, gathering dust, lying on their sides, could be found Medaglia 1974, Williams 1976, Salsway All-Purpose Grind 1970 and A&P Percolator Ground which came from beans picked from a special plantation outside of Rio de Janeiro.

It became such a luxury that voters accused their congressmen and senators of only being interested in "coffee, women and song."

Lockheed lobbyists gave away cases of coffee instead of money, and Arab intelligence men insisted on being paid off in Italian espresso instead of Swiss francs.

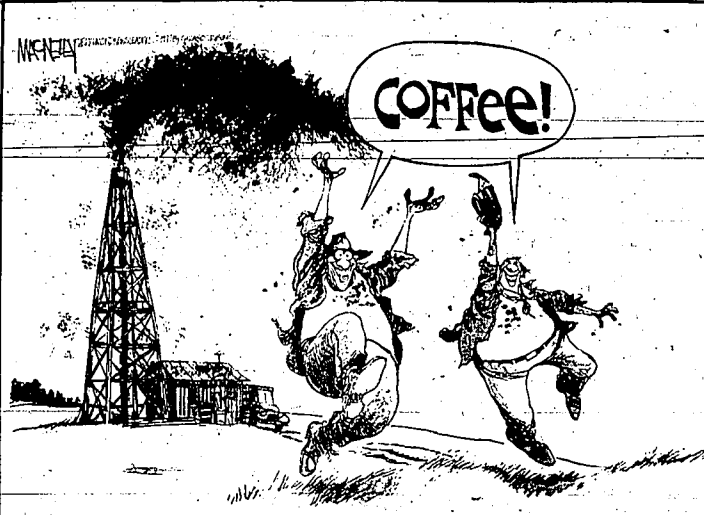

Detainers and generals opened secret numbered coffee accounts in Geneva and Zurich, while multinationalists deposited bags of coffee beans in vaults. The Soviet Union sold gold to buy coffee.

The Shah of Iran conferred his order for F-16 jets from the United States and ordered six shiploads of Yuban instead. Brazil took the F-16s to defend its coffee plantations from Ecuador.

But the worst thing that happened is that employees all over the country could no longer have a "coffee" break. Instead they were given "wine breaks," which were much cheaper but caused a tremendous amount of accidents and mistakes in productivity.

Things became so desperate that President Carter asked James Schlesinger to drop his energy projects, and find a way of "borrowing" time to put a question-mark over the lines outside the government party.

Just as World War III looked as if it would erupt over the coffee shortage, Brazil, Colombia, Kenya and Angola had bumper coffee crops, and the price dropped back to one dollar a pound.

Idaho potatoes only bruised

Idaho potatoes took a bit of a mashing a few days ago at the hands of the federal Commodity Futures Trading Commission.

For the first time in over 30 years the CFTC decided Idaho's potatoes could be mixed in with potatoes grown in Oregon, Washington and the Midwest and still be sold on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Immediately after the ruling came out the Potato Growers of Idaho and the Idaho Potato Commission cried out like bruised russets.

They said the mixing of out-of-state potato contracts with the famed Idaho bakers would damage the image of the Idaho tubers. They said, nobody but Idaho could claim the right to market what had been called the Idaho russet.

Certainly the loss of the Idaho russet name on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange is a setback for the state's potato growers. But the setback is more psychological than real at this point.

When the new potato contracts go on the market January 25 Idaho-grown potatoes still will carry a premium price. Idaho growers should watch closely to see if their potatoes can stay at a higher price. If the potatoes grown in Idaho cannot hold the higher price then the loss of the exclusive Idaho contracts will become tangible.

Unfortunately, the realities of the potato market today probably justify the end of the Idaho russet contracts. No longer are Idahoans the only growers of potatoes in the Northwest.

Oregon and Washington rapidly are expanding their potato acreage and the Commodity Futures Trading Commission is only reflecting the already established trend which Oregon and Washington potatoes pose to Idaho's product.

In the face of this setback, Idaho potato growers can't roll over like soggy hashbrowns in the face of the CFTC decision. Instead, growers must make sure the buying public remembers to shop for Idaho potatoes.

Growers must remember only a small percentage of the potatoes sold in the U.S. travel through the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. Furthermore, buyers of potatoes are still attuned to the selling power of an Idaho label on the package of spuds.

Even with the loss of the exclusive contracts on the Chicago exchange, Idaho still holds an advantage over potato farmers in other states because we out-produce all other states nearly two to one.

In the past, Idaho's growers have spent millions of dollars promoting the Idaho potato. Now is the time to push even harder to maintain the dominance of Idaho's name brand potatoes with consumers.

The loss of the Idaho russet contracts of the Chicago Mercantile Exchange realistically is an intangible setback.

With good promoting and smart farming Idahoans won't suffer much from this decision to allow other states to market their potatoes where only Idaho once did.

Film selection blasted

Editor, Times-News:
 I couldn't agree more with Jeff Van Nest's complaint about our sad movie selection here in Twin Falls.
 All we get are sappy "family shows" and the bloodiest violence films on the market.
 No doubt that is all that consistently sells tickets here in the gun-happy, Bible belt, but the problem is monopoly. Mr. Roper owns all our theaters.
 With money in mind, he can simply freeze out a whole segment of the population — those residents who enjoy the insights provided by a good film now and then — and play to the lowest common denominator.

 For just one example, Bergman's "Face to Face" was turned away from Twin Falls for fear it wouldn't bring a profit. I don't think movie theaters should always be run on a maximum profit basis.
 It would be nice to have my mind stimulated by a movie here. My glands have had enough for a while.

 Tell me why the powers that be negate Idaho. Watching the Rose Bowl parade we were told every state in the Union was represented. I think that was possibly true. The Carey High School Band did a splendid job, but who knows where Carey is? Illinois or Zimbabwe? Gov. Andrus is to be secretary of the Interior and he wants to legalize marijuana so the natural conclusion is there will be acres and acres of the grass.
 Medical authorities all say it is dangerous. It interferes with all bodily functions, causes hallucinations, blindness, destroys hearing, and interferes with heart action.

 Are we in Idaho to suffer the consequences of this dangerous drug, the first step to hard drugs, such as heroin and other harmful drugs? Is there anything that can be done to counteract this?
 Ask the people of Idaho if they want their children and grandchildren transmuted freaks? Let us pray God it can.

More government disturbing

Editor, Times-News:
 We are witnessing a public official taking another step in government. And so far we see presented only part of this man's philosophy and past stand taken in "governing."
 It's good that people point out the good things one has done, but it's also frightening and puzzling to have other facets being so suppressed. Especially when this same person seemed to have spent much time preparing hard work and promotion, even to the point of leaning hard on certain legislators in order to achieve his goals (this we witnessed), and that was attempting to pass his many, many land use bills sent to the legislature.
 No, Gov. Andrus was not the first to bring land use into Idaho as reported, since land use was on the books previously. But what he did attempt to do, was make land use a tool of the executive department and to be controlled by both state and federal executive officials. He was attempting to pass the bill which gave the Office of Budget untold powers; giving full executive controls by taking away from the legislative department (which represents the people). Thus, giving control of all programs and departments which govern the people, to a very few.

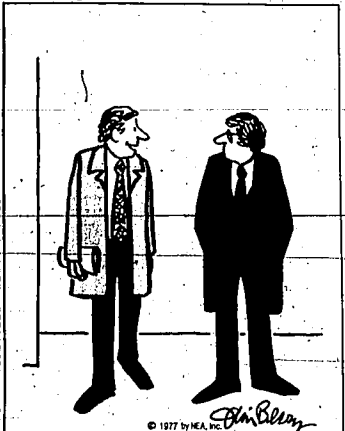

the Carter staff, suggesting that Gov. Andrus voice some proposals prior to him taking his oath of office. In order to circumvent being cleared by the OMB (ironically the same office the governor is pushing for more power here in Idaho).
 Why is it, many officials making laws for you and I to come under, trying to find a way to circumvent them themselves. We have declared that those promoting regionalism have political powers and financial positions to gain. This we feel, Gov. Andrus has somewhat accomplished.
 I'm sure Pres.-Elect Carter and Andrus will do their best to re-organize the federal government — into regional government.
 But we wonder if the type of government they are promoting, which takes away more freedom from the people, is really worth all they "think" they have obtained?
 Tell me, how can rational people on one hand condemn the Johnson and Nixon administration, and on the other hand try so desperately to implement the policies it handed down???

Poland may recognize rights of dissidents

London Economist News Service
 For the first time, a ruling Communist party may be about to have to come to terms with a coalition of disillusioned workers, middle-class critics and rebellious churchmen who between them amount to a center of power outside the government party. Tell that to Poland's fellow Communist parties in Eastern Europe and they will shudder.
 Some time during 1977 a decision will have to be made about how, and when, to cut the subsidies which are fed to Polish consumers like a diet of tranquilizers.
 These subsidies which keep prices down at a cost of something like an eighth of the national income in 1976, are as big an economic nonsense as Britain's present level of public spending.
 The loan Poland cajoled out of Russia in November, like Britain's new IMF money, is a borrowing of time to put the distortion right. But here the comparison with Britain ends.
 A one-party state for all its apparent strength, is short on political flexibility. When it runs into large-scale opposition the choices open to it are to crush the opposition, buy it out — or negotiate borrowing of time to put the distortion right over the whole one-party system.
 A policy of repression is far harder than it would seem to be. Polish workers who went on strike against the attempt last June to raise prices by cutting subsidies would, in the old days, have been sacked or jailed. The committee of middle-class intellectuals which is trying to help these workers who did get punished after June would have been quietly rounded up. The Roman Catholic church, which has put its weight behind this nascent opposition, would have been told it would lose some of its existing privileges if it did not shut up.
 But the government has hesitated to strike hard against any of these centers of dissidence. Some of the June rioters were imprisoned, but then released; their middle-class allies have been bullied by threatening telephone calls, but are still at liberty; the church has not been touched.
 The ease of modern communications is one important reason for this new moderation; it is much simpler now than it was in the 1950s and the "early 1960s" for "dissidents" in Communist countries to keep in touch with each other or to use the telephone and tell their troubles to their friends in the West.
 Another reason is Poland's growing economic dependence on the West; it already owes some $6 to $9 billion to Western countries, and wants to borrow more.
 Then there is the Polish government's knowledge that any deviation from its present relative self-restraint will be put under the spotlight at the conference which is due to start in Belgrade next summer to examine what has happened since the Helsinki declaration was signed in 1975.
 So, presumably, the Polish government's policy for 1977 is to buy off its opponents, not squash them. The industrial labor force may be offered a new wage increase to get it in the right mood for the big price rises that will have to come soon afterwards. To prevent this extra money simply lengthening the lines outside the shops, the loan from Russia will be used to put more consumer goods on the market and Poland's farmers may be given new incentives to grow more food.

 The acquiescence of the Catholic hierarchy can be purchased, it is assumed, by financial concessions of some kind. Licenses to build new churches. The intellectuals can be offered a bit more freedom of expression. The disaffected estates of the Polish realm, the theory runs, can be bought off by one.
 But this policy may prove unworkable. For one thing, the cost of these concessions would eat up a large part of the savings from the subsidy cuts — the aim of the whole exercise. And people may no longer be willing to be bought.
 Poland, after all, has been this way before, not once, but twice. Wladyslaw Gomulka came to power after the 1956 upheavals, and Edward Gierek took over from Gomulka after the 1970 riots, on the promise that in future the Communist party would govern with the manifest consent of the governed.
 Both men failed to carry out their promise, although both started out with honest intentions. Because the one-party system closed in on them. That double failure has created a deep sense of disillusionment which has infected industrial workers as well as the more articulate middle class.
 So the government's choice will be between old-fashioned repression (using unpopular Russian troops?) or something new altogether...
 Something new means treating with an opposition which, in a one-party state, is supposed not to exist. Fortunately, the means of doing this do exist. The rudiments of a genuine labor movement, quite separate from the official trade unions which are mere appendages of the ruling party, came into being on the shop-floors of Poland's factories during the June riots.
 This movement has its links with middle-class critics of the regime and with the Catholic party of any Polish opposition, the Catholic church. The negotiations would not be formal or public; that would be too abrupt a challenge to the party's claim to sole authority and to Russian views. If the government wants to get the country's consent to the measures needed to put the economy right, it may have no alternative to the open discussion with the people who speak for Poland's opposition.
 But even this muffled sort of negotiation would mean that a Communist government would have stepped outside the fiction that it knows what its people want and entered the realm of bargaining for the content of the governed.

Carter son pot discharge admitted

PLAINS, Ga. (UPI) — President-elect Jimmy Carter acknowledges that his oldest son, Jack, was dismissed from the Navy for smoking marijuana.

Press Secretary Jody Powell said a report Tuesday by columnist Jack Anderson was "consistent with the governor's recollection of the situation regarding Jack's general discharge for smoking marijuana."

Anderson said Carter's son, now 23, and 54 classmates were caught smoking marijuana in 1970 while attending the Navy's nuclear power school at Idaho Falls, Idaho.

"The columnist said this was the reason for Jack's 'abrupt dismissal' from the Navy with a 'less than honorable discharge' the last week of that year."

"I'm not going to comment further," Powell said. "I've said as much as I know about the situation."

All three of Carter's sons have admitted smoking marijuana but they say they have stopped.

JACK CARTER ... given Navy boot

During the campaign, Carter acknowledged that his sons had smoked marijuana but he never said anything about Jack being dismissed from the Navy for doing so. He said he favored decriminalizing marijuana smoking but wouldn't favor legalizing it.

Rosalynn Carter, in the latest issue of Ladies' Home Journal, is quoted as saying she and her husband have had long arguments with their sons "about whether or not pot is good for you."

The sons insist marijuana "is no worse than alcohol," Mrs. Carter said.

Jack Carter later attended the University of Georgia and received a law degree. He now practices law in Calloway, Ga.

In a report on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America" program, Anderson quoted Jack Carter as saying the incident occurred just before his father was to be sworn in as governor of Georgia. His father earlier had been a submarine commander in the Navy's nuclear program.

"They treated me somewhat deferentially," Jack Carter is quoted by Anderson.

The columnist said Anderson said Anderson, head of the Navy's nuclear program, wanted to be sure the Navy had evidence that young Carter smoked marijuana before dismissing him with the general discharge.

Anderson said Jack Carter chuckled and said, "They did."

Blanket amnesty called unlikely

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford, in a final gesture of "compassion," may be prepared to grant relief to limited categories of Vietnam-era offenders but not blanket amnesty for all draft evaders and deserters, according to White House sources.

The sources gave no details and said Ford was expected to reveal his decision today — his last full day in office — after word was sent to Mrs. Jane Hart, widow of Sen. Phillip A. Hart, D-Mich.

Ford's schedule today was filled with private staff meetings, but he also was expected to ask Congress to lift federal controls from gasoline prices.

Mrs. Hart raised the amnesty issue anew Dec. 26, the day after her husband's death, by asking Ford to order across-the-board amnesty as memorial to the senator. Ford promised to reconsider it after opposing the dramatic move throughout his presidency.

The sources said Ford's response "will not be a flat 'no' or 'yes' of Mrs. Hart's request."

But they also said his action was likely to affect a relatively small number of the estimated 80,000 young men who illegally resisted the draft during the war and then chose not to take advantage of Ford's 1974-75 clemency program.

Ford ruled out a general amnesty early this month, the sources said, but then studied "many options" for lesser steps.

One possibility was said to be restoration of veterans' rights to ex-GIs who were wounded in the line of duty and later lost their rights after deserting or committing another offense.

President-elect Jimmy Carter has said one of his first official acts will be to grant a pardon to all Vietnam draft evaders, and was considering some action "to deal with deserters."

Ford told an interviewer last week that "there might be some further compassion shown," and some aides said he wanted to leave office with a last "gesture" of goodwill.

The President planned to fly to California immediately after Jimmy Carter's Inauguration Thursday to begin private life by attending a golf tournament at Pebble Beach.

His plans include renting a house near Palm Springs, Calif., lecturing three months a year on various college campuses, and making numerous public appearances.

WASHINGTON — President-elect Carter has decided to appoint Sol M. Linowitz, former ambassador to the Organization of American States, to the United States team that is negotiating a new canal treaty with Panama. Latin American diplomats reported Tuesday.

Linowitz, a 63-year-old attorney, will be named negotiator with Ellsworth Bunker and designated a special representative of the president with the rank of ambassador, "the diplomats said. He has long advocated a treaty that would set a date for ending U.S. control of the Panama Canal and Zone.

Several Latin American governments, meanwhile, launched a low-key effort to persuade the Carter administration to give high priority to its foreign policy to a new Panama treaty.

Complaints delivered by mayors

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The incoming Carter administration has assured angry mayors that "the next round of public works" job money will go in areas most in need.

About 125 mayors met Tuesday under sponsorship of the U.S. Conference of Mayors to give the new administration their complaints and requests. Eight members of the President-elect Jimmy Carter's Cabinet attended.

A frequent complaint was that some of the $2 billion the government recently handed out for public works projects to create jobs went to areas of relatively low unemployment and that many big cities with high jobless rates got nothing.

Birthday initiation for Evans

By CHRIS PECK
Times-News Writer

BOISE — The man who will soon be Idaho's 26th governor celebrated a birthday in the governor's office yesterday with a few staff members and the greetings of a dozen friends who sent cards.

For John Evans it was a kind of initiation ceremony into his new job as governor.

Five days from now Evans officially succeeds Cecil Andrus as Idaho's chief executive.

Although Idahoans elected John Evans lieutenant governor in 1974, only a small portion of the voters would recognize the soon-to-be governor on the street, according to a Times-News poll taken recently.

John Evans hopes that will change.

Entering his 52nd year Democrat Evans is about to emerge from the shadows of the lieutenant governor's office to assume the most public political position in Idaho.

Waiting for him to materialize as governor is a Republican-dominated state legislature that would like nothing more than to devour the new-born governor with the swiftness of hungry coyotes attacking a lamb.

"The legislature is under fire now," Evans said Tuesday between bites of a pink-frosted birthday cake.

Well aware of the Republican desire to snuff his governorship before it gets rolling, Evans nonetheless acknowledges he plans to run for governor in 1978.

To do that, he says he must forge his own image as a governor and shake the inevitable tag as the stepchild of Cecil Andrus.

The new governor believes the success or failure of his political future depends to some extent on how he performs in his first year as governor.

Evans calls these "the critical 30 days" when he must crack the shell of lieutenant governor and emerge as his own man.

"Developing an image is important," Evans said a few days ago as he leaned back in the more modest office he occupied as lieutenant governor.

"If I'm vulnerable the Republicans will be after me early," the Madras rancher and businessman said.

Democratic leaders in the legislature agree the Republicans will try to scuff-up the shiny new face in the governor's office as soon as Evans assumes office.

"They (the Republicans) won't allow him to look good if they can help it," Sen. Robert Kinghorn, assistant minority leader, explained from his desk in the Senate.

"Any proposals that he makes are going to be in for rough sledding," Kinghorn predicted, adding that "Evans has to come out and be his own man" if he hopes to win an elected term as governor.

Creating a solid image after holding the phantasmal office of lieutenant governor won't be easy for Evans.

While a very friendly man, he doesn't have extensive name identification with the Idaho populace.

And, while minority leader in the Senate, Evans got the reputation for being somewhat belligerent with his fellow Senators, especially the Republicans.

This won't help him as he tries to put on his best face during his first 30 days. To help his image after the legislature adjourns, Evans plans to do a considerable amount of traveling. "I've got to let the people of Idaho get to know John Evans," he explained last week.

In the meantime, Evans has tried to assemble a staff which can immediately begin shaping up his neophyte-like administration.

His choices for lieutenant governor and personal press secretary were made to a large degree on the basis of which candidates could step in and begin building Evans an image of his own.

By tapping longtime legislator Bill Murphy as lieutenant governor Evans denied the Republicans a chance to embarrass him by holding up the confirmation of his lieutenant governor pending a lawsuit on the legalities of the appointment.

The GOP leadership likes Murphy. Many current state senators worked with the northern Idaho democrat in the House when Murphy was Minority Leader.

The day Murphy's name was announced the Republicans announced they weren't going to press a lawsuit challenging the move after one round, Evans 1, Republicans, 0.

"We knew from his past credibility he (Murphy) would be acceptable," Evans said at his birthday party. "I needed a person who was on the scene and who had the expertise as a leader in the legislature."

Press Secretary Steve Leroy and another man who was "on the scene" and wouldn't require much break-in time.

Speaking of his new press secretary Evans said, "We didn't have two or three months to break people into our staff. We've got to have people who are here and ready to help us right away. That's the big reason we chose Steve."

Much as he wants to carve out his own profile as a governor, Evans is determined to protect his ties with Cecil Andrus.

"You will find my record is very similar to that of Cecil Andrus," he will say. "I've helped Cecil for a long time. I've known him for a long time and supported his programs."

Since first elected to the Senate in 1963 Evans consistently followed the Andrus example. Both men endorsed local land use planning laws, both fought against more dams on the Snake River in Hells Canyon, both opposed mining operations in the White Cloud Mountains.

John Evans is no newcomer to Idaho politics and this probably is his greatest asset as he becomes the 26th governor.

"He's been in the legislature long enough to be aware of the problems of this state," House Minority leader Patricia McDermott said. "He's very well qualified to be governor."

But will he survive his two years of gratis governorship well enough to be elected in 1978? Right now nobody knows.

On Monday Idahoans will begin getting to know their new governor.

Watch for him. He'll be wearing a new suit his wife Lola gave him yesterday on his birthday.

Liberty Poles

In the first years of American independence, July 4th was celebrated by erecting bunting-draped Liberty Poles and by holding a banquet to May Poles, they honored the Liberty Tree, a large elm in Boston's Hancock Square which the Sons of Liberty held meetings until British troops cut it down after the Boston Tea Party.

Deductions listed

BOISE (UPI) — A list of income tax deductions for older and younger taxpayers was released Tuesday by Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho.

The list is printed in a booklet issued by the senate committee on aging, which Church heads.

Hearings conducted by the committee "have made it clear that many individuals pay more income taxes than are legally due," Church said.

"Some are overwhelmed by the complexities in the tax law. Others are totally unaware of helpful deductions that can save them previous dollars," he added.

Several provisions in the 1976 Tax Reform Act, "such as credit tax exemption for child and dependent care expenses, the liberalization of the personal exemption credit and the new elderly credit — will ease the tax burden for many older Americans and other taxpayers," Church said.

The publication is available from Committee G-23, Dirksen Senate Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20510.

Inaugural medals will portray a grinless Carter for history

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The serious Carter face — without the famous, Carter teeth — will go down in history on the official inaugural souvenir medals bearing the President-elect's likeness. "I certainly didn't want Tim grinning," said Julian Harris,

Georgia-born artist who sculpted Carter's image for the medal. "I don't like to put a smile in sculpture because you get tired of it on anybody. But I did want it animated." So Harris combined a "serious brow" and a "pleasant" mouth in an expression that will become familiar to generations of Americans viewing the official commemorations of Jimmy Carter's inauguration. The medals, sold by the Franklin Mint in bronze, silver and gold at prices, ranging from $12 to $200, are among the hundreds of mementoes available to souvenir seekers. The 1977 Inaugural Committee hopes to pull in at least $1.7 million, from the sale of "official" souvenirs — those with the presidential seal. Some proceeds from the sale help pay for "inaugural expenses. Most expensive among the mementoes is a $2,500 boxed portfolio of prints signed by five artists who were commissioned to record their impressions of the inaugural. The prints, limited to an edition of 100, will include work by Andy Warhol, Jamie Wyeth, Jacob Lawrence, Roy Lichtenstein and Robert Rauschenberg. Medals can be the least expensive official memento if the buyer chooses a bronze edition for $12, but Carter's face is also offered for $200 in 24-karat gold proof — the first time in recent years gold has been offered due to a ban on private ownership lifted only in 1975. Franklin Mint sold 128,498 bronze and silver medals in 1973 commemorating the inauguration of Richard M. Nixon.

Also available this year from the Franklin Mint — which is handling all official inaugural mementoes — are a perfume, charms, a crystal paperweight and a library case. In addition, the Inaugural Committee is offering white and blue license plates

Abby

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1976 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Now that someone wrote in to complain about offensive TV commercials, I want to state my objections.

I really don't see anything so offensive about feminine hygiene products. But what spoils my appetite are commercials about acid indigestion, sinus trouble, hemorrhoids and diarrhea.

While having my dinner, I don't want to look into anybody's nose, down his throat or through his bowels. Thank you.

TURNED OFF IN TRENTON

DEAR TURNED OFF: Several thousand other readers write in. Read on for two vastly different views, and what to do about offensive advertising:

Views differ

DEAR ABBY: A lady wrote to say that douche, Kotex and tampon commercials on TV were offensive and should be banished. (She said her teenagers left the room in embarrassment when such ads came on.)

Children who are reared with these products in plain sight in the bathroom and who have their questions answered frankly would not be embarrassed by these ads. I think beer and cigarette commercials are far more harmful. (Fortunately, we have done away with the latter.)

If this lady wants to get uptight about something, she should forget the commercials and concentrate on the crime, violence and foul language we are getting in our TV "entertainment."

And while I'm sounding off, I would like to add that I think our movie code is all wet, too. Movies in which people maim and kill each other are okay for kids to see, but kissing and making love is for adults only.

Don't get me wrong, Abby: I'm not advocating pornography or heavy sex. But I'd rather have my kids see kissing than beer and cigars. After all, sex and menstruation are natural functions—violence, murder, alcoholism and nicotine addiction are not!

—ALABAMA BAPTIST

DEAR ABBY: I am in complete agreement with that person who wrote to complain about the feminine hygiene products that are now advertised on TV.

These commercials have been such a source of embarrassment to us that we no longer turn on our set when we have grandchildren and have noticed that when they watch TV here, they are frequently so embarrassed by some of the commercials that they leave the room.

Abby, I don't know why advertisements for such products cannot be confined to newspapers and magazines.

Where can I write to register my complaint? If enough people protest, maybe we can get some action.

DEAR READER: Send your complaints to:
EMILIE GRIFFIN
NATIONAL ADVERTISING COUNCIL OF BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU
845 THIRD AVENUE
NEW YORK, NEW YORK 10022

You can also refuse to buy the product whose TV commercials offend you, then write to the president of the company who manufactures it and tell him why you bought another brand.

If enough people protest in this manner, offensive commercials will be taken off the air. (P.S. If you lose the above address, write to me, and I'll forward your letter to the proper party.)

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

TF 'wizard' invents new foods

By HELEN LINK
(Special to the Times-News)

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls has its own food wizard.

Jim Liggett of Foundation Foods, Inc., fits the description perfectly. He really does invent new foods!

Foundation Foods is an Idaho corporation in Twin Falls in a recently remodeled grain warehouse at 409 Shoshone St. S.

The food firm operates under the premise that to be successful, new developments and processes in the food industry must be creative and original. This is Jim Liggett's entire concept of doing business. If someone has an idea about a new type of food product, he will work on a consulting basis. He says, "We create, 'not copy!'"

Liggett is vice president and Warren Shillington of Twin Falls is president of Foundation Foods. Shillington is aware of the need for economical, nutritionally sound and tasty food products with a long shelf life and has dedicated his resources to this endeavor.

Foundation Foods, Inc., is basically a company engaged in food technology with primary emphasis on high-protein foods made from soybeans and cereal grains. It holds or controls certain patented processes which are the "backbone" of the business. Other important areas include manufacture and sale of concentrated food and beverage flavorings and private consultation under contract.

The first question that comes to mind is what in the world is a food inventor doing in Twin Falls?

Liggett says, "I had been visiting my stepdaughter during vacations for the past ten years. I liked this area so much that I made arrangements with my clients that manufacture for me to operate in Twin Falls."

"Shillington, my partner in Foundation Foods, was interested in forming a company here in Twin Falls to develop a patented product called Mycelix. It is a cultured product made from sesame, soybeans and wheat."

"A cultured product, such as Mycelix, is developed by introducing a live organism (similar to a live yogurt culture) to be grown on selected cooked ingredients. This is done to develop a new flavor concept and at the same time reduce the carbohydrate content and increase the protein percentage. This creates a far more digestible product with much higher nutrition content."

Liggett has a long history. In the food development business. His interest in science began with his navy training in the U.S. Medical Corps Training School while he was learning to be a lab and X-ray technician. After leaving the navy, he completed a degree in chemistry from the University of Chicago and then opened his own medical laboratory in Chicago which he operated for four years.

About that time, he was asked to do some lab work for several food companies on poisons and toxins that were suspect in cream pies. He says, "From then on I realized that working with the food industry would be much more interesting and offer more opportunity in the future."

Soon after that, he worked as consultant and director of New Product Development for John Kraft Sesame Co. Kraft was former chairman of the board of Kraft Foods.

Between 1956-1960, he was director of research in new products for Zion Industries, Bakery and Candy Plant, Zion, Ill.

Some of his most important work came between 1960-1968 when he was associated with Central Soya Co. in Chicago as senior technologist in new product development. During this period of time, he spearheaded the development of a machine which can separate the oil from the protein of the soybean.

He was a pioneer in soybean experimentation and isolation of soy concentrate which is 90 percent pure protein. He also developed an ice cream formula based on the soybean, without any milk, for a Japanese firm.

During the next three years, Liggett worked for Swift Chemical Co. Protein Division as new product technical adviser.

Prior to becoming associated with Foundation Foods in Twin Falls, Liggett operated as an independent consultant with no company affiliation. Some of his clients at this time included the Kellogg Co., Miles Laboratories and Keebler Biscuit Co.

In addition to this colorful work history, Liggett has served as consultant and director of new products for Flavor Tree Foods, Inc. Some of the many products he has developed for Flavor Tree include Periola breakfast cereal, condensed soy beans, ice cream powder instant mix, chocolate brownie mix, sesame sticks and chips, cheddar sticks and chips, onion sticks and chips, pizza sticks, apple sticks, rice chips, taco chips, bacon and cheese chips.

Liggett feels that there are few, if any, disadvantages in being located in Twin Falls. He keeps a supply of over 150 ingredients and 300 flavorings in his laboratory kitchen. Anything else he needs can usually be easily shipped within a few days.

He likes being established here in an agricultural community. He says, "We have agricultural products here that need to be utilized with the techniques that I have developed with snacks and specialty foods. I plan soon to begin work on local products — beans, potatoes, peas and fruit."

It is possible that some of the work Liggett is doing can help supply answers to the world's food problems. He says, "In order to help feed the hungry of the world with low-cost high-protein foods, such as those derived from the soybean, several factors have to be taken into consideration."

"For peoples of any culture to eat food that they are not accustomed to, the new food must resemble foods they are familiar with in texture, color, aroma and appearance. If we can accomplish this with foods made from soybeans, potatoes, beans and grains, then we will not only have a palatable product, but a market for many of our agricultural products."

"The answer to feeding the world is not just to ship excess agricultural products to other countries, but to develop food products from these items that will be acceptable culturally to foreign peoples."

Liggett comments on the American diet. "The typical American diet contains too many carbohydrates and too much fat. In my development of new foods, I reduce both carbohydrates and fat and increase protein. Some of these products can offer alternatives to people who cannot afford a lot of the traditional high-protein foods. The foods we develop will give people more protein for their food dollar."

Does he enrich his food products with vitamins and minerals? "No. That is an area for medical science. It would be impossible to reinforce foods with vitamins and minerals that would be correct for the general consuming public."

"Highly nutritious foods of the future," says Liggett, "will rely heavily upon soybean products, milk proteins, vegetable leaf products (such as alfalfa), algae, seaweed and higher protein grains. The sum and total of these can supply the world with the necessary nutrition that it needs."

The Foreign Agricultural Service forecasts that the worldwide soybean production will be about 41½ million tons of soybean meal. The meal is what is left after the oil has been removed.

Unfortunately, according to Liggett, most of that production will be used for animal feed instead of human consumption. It is obvious, then, that a lot of work needs to be done with the soybean to make it more palatable for humans. If it is going to aid in feeding the hungry of the world.

Does Jim Liggett eat his own inventions? "My personal favorites are the sesame sticks, brownie chips with sesame, the cheddar chips, and my new high-protein (60 percent) soup mix that I have just perfected for Foundation Foods, Inc."

And, yes. They are delicious!

Examines ingredients

WORKING — with his — microscope, — Jim Liggett can examine the ingredients used in his work. The food firm operates under the premise that to be successful, new developments and processes in the food industry must be creative and original.

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho Business Department will offer a new program for the spring semester.

Mrs. Sharon Almond is coordinating a program to train medical secretaries and receptionists. The principle course, medical office procedures, will provide the student with a knowledge of procedures in a medical office.

Another class being offered as a part of this program, medical terminology, will provide the student with a knowledge and better comprehension of the meaning of medical terms along with correct spelling and pronunciation of these terms.

Both courses will be offered during the day for full-time students as well as in evening extension courses.

Mrs. Penny Rowe, an experienced medical secretary, will teach the evening medical office procedures course, which will be offered in three sections: secretarial responsibilities, financial responsibilities and medical transcription practice.

Mrs. Janey Draney, R.N., will teach the evening medical terminology class. Please call Mrs. Almond at the College of Southern Idaho, 733-9554, ext. 271, for information.

Planning a wedding?

Your wedding may be the most important event in your life. We wish you every happiness.

In order to obtain the best possible news and picture coverage of your engagement and marriage a few newspaper rules should be kept in mind.

Time deadlines are important. Engagement stories and pictures must be run in the paper before the wedding. Space is short, and engagement stories take some time to process, so it helps to bring in or mail the information as early as possible.

Pictures of the wedding must be received by the Times-News within two weeks after the event. Beyond two weeks, wedding pictures will not be printed. Remind your photographer of the deadline.

After the two-week deadline, wedding stories will be printed, but often in shortened form as space permits. After three months, wedding stories will no longer be printed.

There is no charge for printing wedding and engagement pictures and stories.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Allen Funt looked back over 30 years of "Candid Camera" and its predecessor, "Candid Microphone," and wondered why he wasn't dissatisfied with not having gone on to greater things.

"I'm always embarrassed because I have stayed with this thing so long," Funt said in an interview. "What kind of guy is this? Actors give up parts after six years. 'Bonanza' breaks up and here I am doing the same thing. But every time I try to do something new — feature movies, books, records — it always turns out to be 'Candid Camera.'"

"I just can't be bored with the show, neither is the rest of the world." "Candid Camera" goes to approximately 120 stations in the United States, as well as achieving considerable popularity abroad.

"My last count, we're being shown in about 60 countries," Funt said. "Actually, that situation is getting better. Over the years we were being shown overseas. We were shown in Italy and Greece and you never collect.

"Now in country after country, after attempting to do 'Candid Camera' on their own, they're coming to us to bring our show there. The French stole our show for 19 years and now they've come to us to try to do our show."

The syndicated half-hour began in 1947, as radio's "Candid Microphone," then became television's "Candid Camera" in 1949. In all that time, you'd think something would have changed.

"It's a dilemma," Funt said. "Do you change what was successful or do you leave it alone? Either way you're in trouble."

"I think the basic difference between the show we started with and what we do now is the move away from cruelty. In the earlier shows we held individuals up to ridicule and I'm embarrassed by them."

"Now if we want to show people doing a dopey thing, we don't zero in on a single person, and we're very sensitive about using people who don't seem strong enough to take the joke."

Times have changed and Funt noted:

"Things have to be quicker and shorter now..."

He said the show now zips through six or seven episodes in the half-hour format that formerly housed only three or four.

BPW unit holds meet

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Business and Professional Women's Club held a regular business meeting Monday at Sunny View Courts.

The state mid-year board meeting will be held Feb. 19 in Boise. Marguerite Montgomery, Woman of Progress, was given special recognition.

A $50 scholarship was given to a College of Southern Idaho, nursing student.

Minerva Lorain gave an informative program on the BPW national foundation. Ada Powell conducted a quiz on the United States Presidents. Refreshments were served by Barbara Carlson, Gela Miller and Marie Post.

The next meeting will be held Feb. 7 in George K's restaurant.

Past.

The "big dish" antennas of NASA's Deep Space Network are so sensitive they can pick up a spacecraft's radio signal as weak as 1/100,000,000,000,000 watts of power. If this energy were collected for 18 million years, it would light a 7.5-watt Christmas tree bulb for only one-thousandth of a second.

 ♣ North-South vulnerable

West leads ♠ 10. East South Pass ♠. Pass ♠. Pass ♠. Pass ♠. Pass ♠. Pass ♠. Deuce ♣ opening lead — Deuce ♣.

By Howard & James Jacoby

North's two-club call was a decision underbid. His 19-point hand is really worth some sort of jump after his partner responds with one spade. On the other hand, North did not know what jump to make. He didn't like the idea of a jump raise with just three trumps or a jump in clubs or hearts with his actual holdings in those suits. So he bid two clubs and hoped his partner would bid pass.

South didn't pass. He raised clubs to three. North bid three spades. South went on to game and all of a sudden West doubled.

The double looks insane but there was a lot of method in West's madness. He was sure that his partner could ruff a club!

So West opened a club. East ruffed and returned a diamond to West's ace. A second club ruff was the third trick for the defense and then, as West explained later on, it was only reasonable to assume that East could produce a trick of his own.

East did. He held the ace of trumps and since the game was match points, West's double had given them a top score.

Ask the Jacobys

A British Columbia reader wants to know why a "finesse" is called by that name.

The answer is that the term goes way back when and was obviously coined by some unknown player of that game.

your health

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb:
I am 50 years old and seven years ago I had an operation for a duodenal ulcer.
The surgeon inserted a plastic tube to act as the stomach outlet and removed part of the intestine.
Since the operation, when I eat anything that has sugar in it an hour later I become very sleepy. My heart thumps like a bongo drum and I shake all over. My skin feels like it is on fire and I sweat terribly. I have to lie down and I go to sleep immediately. When I am out somewhere I don't eat because I never know when this will happen. I've had tests for diabetes and they don't show anything. Could you possibly give me any clue as to what this could be? Other than this I am in very good health.

Ulcer surgery

Dear Reader:
You have what doctors call the "dumping syndrome." It is a complication of your surgery. That does not mean the doctor did something wrong. About a third of people who have operations for ulcers have a dumping syndrome after surgery. Less than five per cent of patients operated upon continue to have difficulties such as you experience. The others recover within a few months after surgery.
Apparently the mechanism is to empty (dump) the contents of the stomach too rapidly into the small intestine, before there is time to dilute the food with the acid digestive juice of the stomach.
Concentrated sweets such as sugar are the worst. These draw fluid into the intestine from your bloodstream in an effort to dilute the solution. This decreases the amount of fluid in your blood and decreases the volume of blood available for circulation. This and other hormonal responses stimulates your sympathetic nervous system.
The sympathetic response causes an outpouring of adrenaline, the fight or flight hormone. The heart rate may speed up, you may feel shaky and you will sweat. This is the typical adrenaline response that is also triggered with an attack of low blood sugar and also with attacks of anxiety. In some patients with your problem low blood sugar is a major factor in causing the symptom complex.

You can help manage your problem by following the program for low blood sugar (hypoglycemia) and I am sending you The Health Letter number 39 to give you more information on this.
Others who want this information on hypoglycemia can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your letter to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019.
The drowsiness is part of the picture and people with this difficulty often need to lie down after eating. It is important for you to limit your concentrated carbohydrate intake by avoiding sweets, sugar and starches and foods that contain them. You can eat leafy vegetables and bulky foods. Salads will help here. They are emptied more slowly.
You will need to eat more protein foods because these will not trigger these reactions and can be used for energy. Although there are few conditions where I recommend increasing the fat in the diet this is one place where it is helpful. You will need to use more fat for calories since you won't be using as much carbohydrate. Small frequent meals rather than large ones, avoiding liquids for an hour before and an hour after the meal and lying down after eating all help prevent this reaction. Avoid tobacco, alcohol and coffee.

Miss Sargent, Huether wed

KIMBERLY — On Jan. 9, Carol Dianne Sargent and Randy Lewis Huether were united in marriage at the United Methodist Church, Kimberly.
Rev. Darwin Secord performed the double-ring ceremony at 2 in the afternoon. The altar area was decorated with baskets of yellow and white daisy pomps tied with blue ribbon and marked by matching confetti.
The bride was given in marriage by her father. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Sargent, Murtaugh. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Huether, Kimberly.
The bride's gown featured a bodice made in a pinafore effect with a wedding-band neckline, bishop sleeves and a floor-length A-line skirt, all of white sheerganza, trimmed with white chantilly lace. The chapel-length veil, also trimmed with chantilly lace, was held in place by a matching lace headband. She carried a white Bible with white baby rosebuds tied in the white lace streamers with a corsage of yellow and white daisy pomps on top.
Bridesmaids were Merrily Huether, Twin Falls, and Julie Conrad and Patrice Peterson, both Murtaugh. Carol Lattin of Kimberly was matron of honor. The flower girl was Debbie Patterson, cousin of the bride.
The candle lighters were Shiron Patterson, cousin of the bride, and Teri Rosa, cousin of the bridegroom.
Serving as best man was Raymond Sargent, brother of the bride. Groomsman were Brent Huether, Twin Falls; Kevin Huether, Kimberly; brothers of the bridegroom, and Vern Lattin of Kimberly; Rocky Wray, Kimberly, and Steven Sargent, brother of the bride, were the ushers.

Music was furnished by Beverly Cruthers, organist, and Sterling Cruthers and Brent Huether, soloists.
A reception was held in the church recreation hall following the ceremony. The guest book was attended by Kim Peterson of Murtaugh. Gifts were displayed by Joyce Conrad, aunt of the bridegroom, and Judy Patterson, aunt of the bride. Also helping with the gifts were Lori, Jana and Jana Rosa, cousins of the bridegroom, and Joyce Cluse and Cheryl George, both Murtaugh.
The bride's table featured a three-tiered wedding cake surrounded by five small heart-shaped cakes, all decorated in white with clusters of yellow flowers. The cake was served by Tami Breeding, Murtaugh. Coffee and punch were served by Betty and Rhonda Cluse, Murtaugh.
Bridal showers were held in Murtaugh by Sadie Breeding and Betty Kleinkopf, and in Kimberly by Merrily and Donna Huether. A rehearsal dinner was hosted by Mr. and Mrs. Huether, parents of the bridegroom.
Following a short honeymoon trip, the couple will be at home in Campbell, Calif., where the groom is associated with the air force ROTC program at San Jose State University.
Bird Sanctuary — The most important pelican nesting ground on the east coast of Florida is Pelican Island in the Indian River near Sebastian, used as a rookery at least since 1858. Early boat travelers along the river used to kill hundreds of pelicans as they cruised by this island. They used the birds for target practice until it was designated as the first federal wildlife refuge in the United States by executive order of President Theodore Roosevelt in 1903.

GET TO KNOW YOUR SMITH'S STORE MANAGER
This year, more than ever, I want you to feel at home in our store. You can count on our customer service, and all Smith's store managers help.

Before or during each shopping trip, visit my red and white customer center. It's located at the top of our aisle in the front of the store. Pick up a copy of my Dinner of the Week, check over the latest newspaper ad on display, exchange any coupons, and if you desire, fill out a suggestion blank. (They come directly to my office.)

Just above the suggestion blanks should be a picture and name of the current store manager. On the side of the center you'll find the pictures of the assistant managers and department heads. We think this will make you feel more at home to know the people in charge.

If you are dissatisfied or concerned about anything in our store, ask for the manager, and get to know him. He can tell you why certain products are on our shelves... he can special order others for you. He'll adjust the temperature if you are uncomfortable and he can arrange for other services. Just let him know.

I hope you will never feel rushed at Smith's. If you want to take time to compare, check your shopping list, read labels etc. On the other hand, if you are in a hurry we'll do all we can to get you out on time. (We appreciate your understanding.)

We're working hard to be your favorite store. Your praise may be the ones we need to help us solve some problems and improve our customer service. If you'd like, why not make an appointment with the manager and walk him through his store. Give him your ideas and send me a copy. Or call my office on the red phone. We want to be your favorite store.

Past inaugural celebrations had riots, humor, freezing cold

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In 1863, the sensation was a $1 dinner that included pickled oysters, chicken salad, roast beef, ham, ice cream, cake — and the electric lamp hanging over the main entrance to James Garfield's inaugural ball.

In 1937, inauguration day for the first time was Jan. 20, not March 4 — and Franklin Roosevelt and Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes had to ward off the cold with electric heating pads.

When William Henry Harrison insisted on walking to his inauguration in 1841, braving the rain with bare head, he literally caught his death of cold.

The inauguration of a president is one of America's most enduring traditions — and the attendant stories are funny and sad, happy and bitter-sweet.

For example: — Andy Jackson did not attend his inaugural ball. He was in mourning for his beloved wife Rachel, whom he had buried the previous Christmas day in her inaugural gown.

— Yet Jackson was involved in one of the wildest inaugural parties. He rode down Pennsylvania Avenue on horseback while his admirers waved hickory canes and brooms and shouted "huzzah" for Jackson.

— The throng raced into the White House, stood with muddy boots on the satin-covered furniture, broke crystal — and china — as they pressed toward the president. Jackson escaped out a window and servants took tubs of orange punch, which already had soaked the drapes and carpets in the mansion, outside so the 20,000 frenzied fans could picnic on the South Lawn.

— For Grant's first inaugural in 1869, the ball was held in the basement of the new Treasury Building, and the 6,000 guests were jammed like sardines in the stifling atmosphere. Horace Greeley left in a huff when he had to wait one hour for his topcoat; and the crowd grew so unruly that "at dawn several women were found cowering in dressingrooms."

— From the head of the first Grant inaugural to the bitter cold of his second, in 1873 a temporary pavilion was erected, not weatherproof; and the thermometer plummeted to zero. Valves on the musical instruments stuck, champagne froze in the punchbowl, turkeys had to be cut with hatchets. Overhead, the hundreds of canaries imported to lend sweet music to the proceedings sang nary a note.

They all had frozen stiff. — Jackson and Grant were not the only hosts for rowdy balls. Abraham Lincoln was forced to flee in 1865 from the ball at the Patent Office with 5,000 guests arrived by dining room that held but 300. And 8,000 guests stormed the Davis Hotel in 1813, making things so stifling that windows were smashed to let in cool air.

Gem water outlook for '77 'grim' now

TWIN FALLS — "The water supply outlook for the 1977 irrigation season is quite 'grim,'" according to the Jan. 1 report of the Soil Conservation Service.

A good water supply for next year depends to a great degree on snowfall and resulting runoff in the mountains of Idaho, according to the report.

Snow accumulation prior to Jan. 1 was "practically nonexistent," the report said. The fall season, according to the report, was one of the driest on record.

Even the general storm over the entire state during the first week of January which brought some relief to snowless mountains, laid a blanket of white powder with very low water content, according to the report.

"It is very doubtful if future storms will bring the watersheds to a normal condition this year," the report said. "The snowpack varies from a low of 66 per cent of normal to a high of 56 per cent of average on the Montpelier Creek drainage in southeastern Idaho."

"Approximately 40 per cent of the total winter snowpack is usually accumulated by Jan. 1," the report said. "Extremely heavy snowfall and rain will be needed during the rest of the winter season to bring conditions to even a reasonable level."

Basing his figures on the ten lowest years of snowpack on record, officials concluded the chances of further snowfall occurring to bring the snowpack to normal are only one in eight.

"It is quite apparent at this early date that water supplies for hydroelectric power generation will be critical and supplies for irrigation seriously deficient except where adequate carryover storage is available," the report said.

According to report figures, Salmon Falls Dam is 24 per cent full, Oakley Reservoir is 56 per cent full, Magic Reservoir is 31 per cent full, Little Wood Reservoir is 22 per cent full, American Falls Reservoir is 68 per cent full, Palisades Reservoir is 89 per cent full, Jackson Lake is 68 per cent full and Island Park Reservoir is 79 per cent full.

The report urges water users and managers to plan now for the most efficient use of water during the coming season.

Wild oat control meetings planned

MAGIC VALLEY — The University of Idaho Cooperative Extension Service will hold two wild oat symposiums in the Magic Valley this week.

The first will be held Thursday at the Ponderosa Inn in Burley and the second will be held Friday in the National Guard Armory in Gooding.

The symposiums will cover the scope of the problem of wild oats locally and possible solutions to the control of wild oats.

Robert Higgins, extension weed specialist, will discuss the problem and methods of control. Dr. Gary A. Lee, professor of agronomy and weed science at the University of Idaho, will lecture on the biology of the wild oat and its cultural control.

Other lecturers will discuss various herbicides useful in controlling the noxious weed. The major emphasis in the symposiums will be on wheat and barley, but other crops will be considered.

Money back

MOSCOW, Idaho (UPI) — The Latah County Grain Growers, in order to dramatize how much the cost of bread is affected by the cost of wheat, offered area residents a full refund for the cost of the wheat in each loaf purchased.

Those who took the growers organization up received a three cent rebate per 45 cent loaf of bread.

take advantage of provisions for depreciation and investment credit, according to two economists of the University of Idaho College of Agriculture.

"When you are computing your income tax, you should make every effort to limit that liability," says Dr. Ray Prigge, extension farm management specialist, and Stan Falke, graduate research assistant.

Prigge and Falke are the authors of an information bulletin, "Don't Overpay the Bill," which is available at county offices of the UI Cooperative Extension Service.

Water shortage looming for many Western areas

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Much of the West is facing shortages of water for crop irrigation and community supply next summer because of this winter's record low snowfall, the Agriculture Department warned today.

The department's Soil Conservation Service said surveys on Jan. 1 found less snow in many parts of the West than at the beginning of any January in 40 years.

Normally, nearly half of the year's snowpack is on the ground by the start of the month. But officials said that "throughout the region, many snow survey sites were bare and most others had less than 30 per cent of their normal Jan.

1 snowpack."

That was bad news for ski enthusiasts and winter resort operators. But it was also potentially serious news for farmers, small communities and others who depend directly on rivers and streams for water supplies.

"Storms would have to yield nearly double their typical snowfall between January and May to prevent water shortages," the conservation service said, because snowpacks accumulated in winter and spring provide about 70 per cent of the western water supply.

Reservoirs in most western states are full. But officials said this meets less than half of the region's summer irrigation needs. Officials pointed out that in California, a record drought last year left reservoir supplies depleted.

The SCS survey found that Nevada had no snowpack at all on Jan. 1. New Mexico, Oregon, southern Washington and much of Idaho had 5 to 15 per cent of average snow. In other states, the survey found Utah had 5 to 25 per cent of normal snowpack, and Colorado, western Wyoming, western Montana and northern Washington and Idaho had 25 to 40 per cent of normal. No survey was made in Arizona.

Sugar help applauded by Church

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A pledge to help the U.S. sugar industry by Secretary of Agriculture-designate Bob Bergland was applauded Monday by Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho.

Church said, "Almost every other sugar producing country directly involved in support of their own sugar industries, leaving their excess to be dumped at bargain-basement prices below actual cost."

"And most of that excess sugar ends up in the United States to the detriment of our own domestic producers," Church said.

Testifying before the U.S. International Trade Commission in November, Church called for increased tariffs, lowered quotas and new sugar legislation to aid the nation's ailing sugar industry.

"I'm therefore pleased that the new secretary of agriculture has pledged his support for aid for the domestic industry," Church said.

Butz sets visit

NAMPA (UPI) — Former Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz will make two appearances in Canyon County early next month.

Butz will address the annual dinner meeting Feb. 3 of the Nampa Chamber of Commerce and address a public hearing before the Canyon County Republican Central Committee in Caldwell the next morning.

He is scheduled to arrive at the Boise airport on the afternoon of Feb. 3.

Seed yields show drop

BOISE (UPI) — The 1976 alfalfa seed production was down 40 per cent and the red clover seed crop showed a 17 per cent decline from the previous year, the Idaho Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said Tuesday.

The service reported alfalfa acreage and yield are both lower than the previous year. Harvested acres were 16 per cent below the 1975 total and yield was 19 per cent lower than the previous mark.

Red clover seed production hit a new low replacing the 1975 low. Yield was 24 per cent under 1975's figure and the lowest since 1968 even though acreage harvested was 10 per cent above 1975.

Merion Kentucky Bluegrass seed was 58 per cent below the 1975 production and But Kentucky Bluegrass seed was up by 48 per cent.

Sign law irks TF merchants

By BOB ZUCKERMAN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A local pharmacist said Tuesday he and several other downtown merchants will not take down signs in front of their stores, even though they may violate a city ordinance beginning March 20.

Robert Crowley, Crowley Drugs owner, said officials from Young Electric Sign Co., Twin Falls, have told him they will defend him and several other undisclosed merchants who lease signs from the sign company.

"When you get laws that want to take away your individual freedom, I feel like it's not constitutional," Crowley said.

"Tex" Goodson, retired manager at the sign company, said he could not comment on the sign ordinance and what his company might do when city officials begin enforcing it in a few months.

He would only say "leaseses" four signs have no authority for issuance of any statements on our signs."

Early in 1972, city officials adopted new sign regulations.

"In order to minimize the inconvenience of conforming, the regulations allowed a five-year transition period for compliance," City Manager Jean Milar explained in a letter to merchants who may be violating the ordinance. "Please consider this advance notification so that your sign conforms to the city ordinance."

Darrell Howard, city building inspector and zoning officer, said the letter was mailed to roughly 50 merchants who could be violating the ordinance.

He estimated 25 of those merchants have already complied with the ordinance, and several others have expressed an interest in getting an extension of the arch 20 time limit.

At a City Council lunch Monday, councilmen agreed they would consider requests for time extension on a "case by case basis" at council meetings.

Most signs which may violate the ordinance are those which are perpendicular to the side of a building and extend out from the building more than 18 inches, the building inspector said. "This will no longer be allowed when the new ordinance takes effect, he said.

Persons who violate the ordinance would be subject to one of two consequences, according to City Atty. Charles Brumbach.

The first, "more likely," possibility is the city would file for an injunction in district court, seeking a court order to force sign leaseses to comply with the ordinance, Brumbach said.

Another alternative would be to consider violations as a criminal matter and proceed in district court, he said. Convicted persons could face a $300 fine and 30 days in jail for each day they violate the ordinance.

Still no place for Mrs. Moon

TWIN FALLS — Mrs. B.J. Moon, who along with her husband has filed a suit against the state health and welfare department charging a department regulation discriminates against the couple because they are married, still has not found a nursing home facility that can take care of her.

Mr. Moon said today his wife was not admitted to a Kimberly nursing home Monday as expected because the facility does not provide "skilled" care as defined under welfare regulations.

Officials at the Cassia Memorial Hospital, which provides the necessary care, said today they have an open bed and that if Mrs. Moon came in to talk with them, arrangements "probably" could be worked out.

Sign must go?

SIGN ordinance will force removal of non-conforming signs such as this one on the Twin Falls Mall. Here, Robert Crowley, who leases the sign, says he and others expect to contest the sign crackdown.

Rupert vows solution to area fire problems

By SHANE O'NEILL
Times-News writer

RUPERT — A perplexed Rupert City Council promised Tuesday night to take steps to eliminate confusion that blocked response to a December fire in the Jackson area east of Rupert.

Al and Dana Shultz complained that neither Burley nor Rupert would send fire-fighting units to their home to battle a fire early one morning a week before Christmas. They said a building and its contents were destroyed.

The Shultzes live in the Jackson township in Cassia County, but the area is near Rupert. Dana said there apparently is a cooperative protection agreement between the North Cassia Fire District and the Mindoka Rural Fire District that places responsibility on the Mindoka unit for the Jackson area.

Dana said he was the only one home when the fire broke out. He said he called Burley and was referred to RUPERT, but the man that responded on the Rupert switchboard said it was "not our fire" and advised calling Declo.

Dana said the Declo department responded, although it was not their fire and was the first one on the scene although its alarm would not sound and firemen had to be called individually.

"We lost the entire building and all its contents," Dana said. "With any wind, we could have lost everything on the entire place."

He added, "When people are in trouble, I think it's kind of poor judgment not to answer a fire call. If there was a house fire out there, people would burn to death."

The Shultzes had appeared under the impression that the city had responsibility under the cooperative agreement. Mayor Wendell Johnson said he was puzzled, but maybe the Mindoka County Rural Fire Department had that responsibility.

Dana pointed out that there is a single telephone number for fires in the county and added that the dispatcher should know which fire-fighting unit to send.

"We just lost some property," Shultz said. "But the next time we might lose some lives."

He added that the Shultzes of his had the same problem obtaining fire-fighting response on three fires last summer.

Mayor Johnson said the problem apparently was a breakdown at the communications center, which handles police and fire calls for both cities and the county.

He assured that the city would attempt to solve any problem at the communications center.

Carey children go home

TWIN FALLS — Two Carey children who apparently suffered carbon monoxide poisoning in the back of a stationwagon Monday were held overnight in the Twin Falls Clinic for observation and then released to their mother.

The two, Travis Bowman, 7, and sister Heidi, 5, were sitting Monday in their mother's stationwagon with the engine running, police said. The incident took place at the Lynwood Shopping Center parking lot.

Suddenly, the two children began complaining of stomach pains, the mother, Mrs. Mary Bowman, said later. Both kids fainted.

"It's amazing how quick the carbon monoxide will hit you," Mrs. Bowman said. "I was in the store no more than five minutes, picking up a prescription."

The children's grandmother, Mrs. Dixie Cowgill, Carey, also in the car, rushed into Pennywise Drug to tell the mother what had happened, Mrs. Bowman said.

Ted Manker Jr., Pennywise Drug assistant manager, who ran to the scene when he heard about the incident from a fellow employee, said he provided artificial respiration for one of the children before police and the ambulance arrived.

Mrs. Bowman said she had "no idea" her stationwagon's exhaust system was apparently leaking. "You couldn't smell anything," she said.

She said she planned to have the system checked before she starts using her car again.

"I hope my story will prevent the same thing from happening to someone else," she said.

Heather Bowman, 6, Carey, another of Mrs. Bowman's children who was in the car during the incident, was not injured.

Robert Willis, service manager at Bill Workman Ford Inc., said carbon monoxide leakage can be prevented by having an exhaust system checked when taking a car in for service at any station or repair shop.

He said car owners can also check under their cars for holes in the muffler or exhaust pipe forward of the rear axle.

Butz scheduled to speak at TF Republican banquet

TWIN FALLS — Former Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz will address the annual Republican Lincoln Day Banquet in Twin Falls, Feb. 5.

David Mead, member of the banquet committee, said the former secretary, who is a colorful speaker and drawing card, will be on a Lincoln Day speaking tour in Idaho during February.

The banquet will be held in the Blue Lakes Inn with William Laning, former speaker of the house in the Idaho Legislature, as master of ceremonies. Mead said Butz expected to attract a capacity crowd with the event open to the public.

Tickets will be available from members of the Twin Falls County Republican Central Committee and at locations in various communities to be announced later.

Mead said members of the committee have donated beef, lamb, potatoes, beans and other food products for the banquet.

He said Butz, a resident of Indiana, will be visiting his aunt, Lillian Butz, Twin Falls, while here. He also has a cousin who farms in the Burley area.

Butz, who is known for his frankness, is expected to discuss agricultural programs and the economic outlook in agriculture, although he has not yet listed his specific topics.

Dale Peterson, Murthaugh, is chairman of the annual banquet and ticket chairman are Jack Claiborn Jr. and William L. Chaney.

135 MV students attend district meet

TWIN FALLS — Students from four Magic Valley high schools held a special study in state government here Tuesday in the annual district Youth Government program.

About 135 students from Twin Falls, Filer, Oakley and Glens Ferry attended the day-long program at the College of Southern Idaho, under the direction of Steve Carter, CSI, regional director.

This is one of six district sessions held in Idaho prior to the annual Youth Legislature which will be conducted in Boise in April.

The students met during the morning in small groups with various speakers to discuss aspects of state lawmaking. Paul Smith, magistrate judge, Twin Falls, discussed judicial matters and William Lazarus, Times-News, met with the press group to discuss coverage of legislative sessions.

In the afternoon delegates voted for the election of a group of state and legislative officials who will serve during the mock legislative sessions in Boise in April.

Delegations from Jerome and Burley failed to attend, making it difficult for the small schools to muster enough votes to defeat Twin Falls candidates. However, Carter said, some of the Twin Falls delegates cast ballots for candidates from other schools to give Filer and Glens Ferry some of the positions.

Those elected included Dave Morris, speaker of the House; Rick Bevan, associate justice; Pat Donnelley, assistant attorney general; Tammy Walker, secretary of the Senate; Les Hall and John Forbes, appellant co-councils, all from Twin Falls.

Deanna Durham, Filer, editorial staff, and Gary Wertz and Lucille Finlayson, both Glens Ferry, respondents co-council.

Rupert backs energy proposal

RUPERT A proposal for legislation authorizing energy districts received endorsement Tuesday night from the Rupert City Council.

The council voted to inform the Association of Idaho Cities (AIC) that it favors the proposal of Gov. Cecil Andrus' energy commission for allowing local areas to form energy districts.

At the same time, Mayor Wendell Johnson said he has talked to various officials in the Mini-Cassia area about setting up an energy meeting to provide "some input into the state energy plan."

He said Hoyburn Mayor Harold Hurst, president of AIC, will ask the state to send representatives of the energy commission to the meeting.

Mayor Johnson told the city council that an energy conservation meeting last week in Burley received poor attendance and he felt it provided no input into the state energy plan.

"There ought to be more people," Johnson said.

Elmer Schenk, Rupert superintendent of public works, told the council that the energy commission's proposal would allow establishment of districts which could float bonds and develop energy sources to serve the people of that district.

He said the proposal is designed particularly for places like the Boise area, which has an underground hot water supply.

But he added, "It might enable a district to build a dam and generate its own power."

Mayor Johnson explained that the proposal envisions simpler forms of energy development, such as burning garbage for power. He said the AIC was only asking for council comments.

Councilman Clark Cameron felt more time was needed to study the proposal, but admitted, "We're going to have to conserve energy and develop new energy sources wherever possible."

Youth leaders

DISTRICT representatives to the Idaho Youth Legislature who were named during youth government day activities in Twin Falls Tuesday include Dave Morris who will be speaker of the House; Pat Donnelley, assistant attorney general; Tammy Walker, secretary of the Senate and Rick Bevan, associate justice, all from left.

Governor eyes water clash

By CHRIS PECK
Times-News writer

BOISE — John Evans and the Republican-dominated Idaho Legislature may be on a collision course over the question of who shall have final control over the state water plan.

Monday the House Resources and Conservation Committee approved introduction of a bill which requires periodic legislative review of the state water plan.

Rep. Vard Chaburn, R-Albon, said the bill giving the legislature power of periodic review over the state water plan was approved easily by the Resources and Conservation Committee, which he chairs.

"We have in the past had problems with state agencies not interpreting bills the way we intended," Chaburn said.

"There are some times they administered them," he said.

In an interview Tuesday, however, soon-to-be Governor John Evans said he didn't think the legislature should demand final control over the water plan.

Evans said the Department of Water Resources should retain control of the water plan.

While not saying he would veto a measure which would give the legislature control of the plan, Evans said he was "in agreement with Gov. Andrus' veto last session."

In 1976, Andrus vetoed a bill nearly identical to the one introduced in committee Monday.

Evans argued that the legislature already has control of the water plan because the legislature can change the wording of most parts of the plan and the Department of Water Resources will abide by the changes.

"To insist on overall approval doesn't seem important to me," Evans said.

Texas con's case remains in court

HUNTSVILLE, Tex. (UPI) — Unlike Gary Gilmore, Jerry Lane Jurek has never asked that his execution be carried out, and the Supreme Court has given him at least a few more weeks of life.

Jurek, a 25-year-old loner with an IQ of about 70, had been sentenced to die in the electric chair early Wednesday for the murder of a 10-year-old girl.

But the Supreme Court Monday blocked the execution to allow Jurek's attorneys time to file a complete petition for formal review of his case.

The court's brief order said Jurek's attorneys must file a complete petition for a Supreme Court hearing by Feb. 16 for the stay of execution to remain in effect. Texas must file its formal response by March 1.

If the petition for formal review is denied, the stay of execution is automatically lifted under the court's order.

Jurek, who spent 11 years in the state penitentiary and has trouble making change for a dollar because of his mental limitations, has shown little interest in his case, according to his attorneys.

But he did recently tell reporters he did not expect to be executed.

Cuero, Texas attorney Tuby Summers said he receives a letter from his client about four times a year, written in a semiliterate, phonetic style.

He said Jurek never discusses his feelings or hopes.

"I think he is aware of his situation," Summers said. "But like most people on death row, he lives from day to day."

In the latest appeal, Jurek's attorneys argued his constitutional rights would be violated under a state district court decision permitting his execution to be televised.

The attorneys also said that some potential jurors were improperly excluded from Jurek's trial after expressing reservations about capital punishment.

Before the stay was granted, Jurek was in danger of becoming the second person executed in the United States within three days. Gilmore's execution in Utah Monday ended an unofficial 10-year moratorium on capital punishment in the U.S.

Texas Attorney John Hill, in a written brief filed by assistant attorney general Walter Prentice, had asked the court not to delay the execution of Jurek, convicted of strangling Wendy Adams in August 1973.

JERRY LANE JUREK ... little interest

Only 'Wow!'

BOISE (UPI) — Condemned killer Thomas Eugene Creech said only "Wow, this could really start something" when he watched television news reports of the execution of Gary Gilmore by a Utah firing squad Monday.

One of two men on death row in Idaho, Creech watched the television news from his isolated cell in the maximum-security unit of the prison, guards said. The other condemned killer, Philip Lindquist, "really had no reaction whatsoever," a guard said.

Wiretap limits set out

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court ruled Tuesday that federal agents must specifically identify individuals when seeking court permission to wiretap, but inadvertent failure to do so will not bar use of wiretap evidence.

The decision by Justice Lewis F. Powell was criticized by three dissenters on grounds it requires the government to strictly comply with sections of the 1968 Omnibus Crime Control Act but then allows the evidence to be used despite failure to comply.

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger dissented from another part of Powell's ruling on grounds it went too far by requiring agents to identify all persons they might overhear in criminal conversation when seeking a federal court wiretap warrant.

The decision arose after two lawyer federal agents overheard suppression of tapped conversations involving five Cleveland, Ohio, area men charged with violating federal gambling laws.

Federal investigators failed to name three of the defendants as targets when seeking wiretap authorization, although they had been heard in allegedly criminal conversation as the result of an earlier tap.

The other two men were not named in an inventory presented by agents to a judge for notification that they were overheard in tapped conversations.

Powell said the 1968 act requires both that targets of taps be named in warrants and that names of those overheard and likely to be charged be presented to a federal judge for possible notification.

But he overruled the lower courts, holding the tap evidence could be used against all five defendants. He said the inadvertent violations did not involve provisions which were central concerns of Congress in passing the act.

Absent evidence that the agents intentionally violated the law or that a warrant would not have issued had three defendants been named, Powell said, failure to name the defendants was not sufficient error to bar the evidence.

Using similar logic, he said failure to notify two defendants after the tap was ended, while notifying 39 other subjects, would not make the tap itself inadmissible.

Justices Thurgood Marshall, William J. Brennan Jr. and John Paul Stevens dissented. Marshall said the naming and notice provisions were important parts of the 1968 law and violations call for suppression of resulting evidence.

In another case, Marshall alone rejected a plea by the sons of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg asking that judges Appeals be disqualified from their lawsuit against attorney Luther King.

The brothers, Michael and Robert Meeropol, accused Nizer of invasion of privacy and misuse in his book, "The Implosion Conspiracy," of copyrighted letters the Rosenbergs wrote before being electrocuted for espionage in 1953.

The Meeropols contend all the judges are compromised by their association with Judge Irving R. Kaufman, who sentenced the Rosenbergs.

Rocky describes freedom threats

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Vice President Nelson Rockefeller warned in a farewell address Tuesday that old repressions and new tyrannies threaten the future of free people.

Rockefeller, addressing the Senate where he has presided for two years, said "the winds of change are sweeping our world" and added "clearly, tomorrow belongs to no one."

"Free peoples can claim no prior lien," Rockefeller said, "only through strength and resolution, only through wisdom and courage, will free people gain the future."

The vice president, who serves as the president of the Senate, spoke only two days before leaving office. The Senate set aside most of the afternoon for his final speech and tributes to him and President Ford.

Only about a third of the senators, most of them Republicans, were in the chamber when Rockefeller spoke, seated behind the presiding officer's desk.

But Rockefeller, who once had to formally apologize for his handling of a delicate procedural issue, was given a standing ovation when he finished.

Rockefeller told the Senate: "Traditional milestones are being overturned; venerated signposts obliterated. Historic bastions of power are yielding to new and untried forces.

"And in too much of the world, the light of liberty has been snuffed out and economic freedom erased."

"Our expectation of man's inevitable forward march to universal recognition of the dignity of every human being is being denied, not only by the continuing repressions of the past, but also the emergent tyrannies of today."

To assure that free people gain the future, Rockefeller said "they must convince the world, not alone of the moral rightness of their cause, but equally of the universal and practical benefit from pursuing it."

Rockefeller, who was named by Ford and confirmed by Congress, said his two years as Vice President "in all candor, cannot be said to have surely tried either my talents or my stamina."

But he added "in all fairness, these two years of service have afforded me the rarest opportunity to gain new insights into the working of this great democracy; its trials, its triumphs, its challenges, its promises for the future."

Trials to Rockefeller came from Democrats and Republicans and were led off by Senate Democratic Leader Robert Byrd.

Death probe panel seeks to continue

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The head of the House assassinations committee asked that his panel be allowed to keep up its investigation or the United States will become "the laughing stock of the world," according to remarks published Tuesday.

The 11-man committee, established in the final days of the last Congress to investigate the assassinations of John F. Kennedy, Martin Luther King Jr. and any others, went out of business Jan. 3. It failed to win unanimous approval for its reconstitution the next day, when the new session began.

"We are now without any legal authority and in law do not exist," said Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-Tex. "Permit us to finish the job otherwise it will make us the laughing stock of the world."

His speech, prepared for delivery Monday, was not actually delivered but printed in the Congressional Record.

Gonzalez, designated chairman of the House Assassination Committee last year, withdrew a resolution to re-establish the panel Jan. 11 when opposition surfaced to the committee's proposed $6.5 million budget for this year. Its proposed methods of operation and the staff director, former prosecutor Richard A. Sprague, and 72 other members of a proposed staff of 170 have gone without pay since Jan. 3 but agreed to carry on until the committee's status is resolved.

They were notified that salaries would have to be cut under a complicated formula based on December earnings even before a new budget is approved. The staff, according to a spokesman, agreed to a 25 per cent cut for those making $16,000 a year or more and a lesser cut for those earning between $10,000 and $16,000.

Gonzalez said the committee had 13 subpoenas for witnesses and evidence outstanding in Tennessee — King was killed in Memphis — and Texas which have to be reissued when the panel is reconstituted.

Time was of the essence, he said, since many witnesses to the Kennedy killing and surrounding circumstances more than 13 years ago had died and their deaths had to be investigated as well. The same held for the fatal shooting of King almost nine years ago.

Action by the board was completed — just three hours before the 4:30 p.m. deadline set by Byrd.

Most of the board's deliberations took place in private during the last three days. A 35-minute public meeting capped the discussions. Some members complained they did not know what they were voting on.

Busing plan drawn

COLUMBUS (UPI) — The state Board of Education Tuesday transmitted to federal court a proposal for desegregating the schools of Cleveland, the nation's eighth largest city, by busing. The board said it neither embraced nor opposed the plan.

The 20-page plan, which proposed busing 52,112 of Cleveland's 122,727 elementary and secondary school pupils within the city by 1979-80, was sent to Judge Frank J. Battisti of U.S. District Court in Cleveland.

The board voted 18 to 1 to send the plan, which does not include busing to suburban districts, to Battisti to meet a court deadline despite the fact there was no consensus among board members about details of an integration plan for Cleveland schools.

Action by the board was completed — just three hours before the 4:30 p.m. deadline set by Byrd.

Most of the board's deliberations took place in private during the last three days. A 35-minute public meeting capped the discussions. Some members complained they did not know what they were voting on.

IN 1953 Monte Montana, a California rodeo rider, asked for — and received — permission to lasso President Dwight D. Eisenhower who was on the reviewing stand in front of the White House. He snarled, but secret service agents were horrified. Security forces are ready for almost anything at Carter's Inauguration.

Rope trick

Agent recalls rope 'threat'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Among the things that make Secret Service agents nervous at inaugural ceremonies are friendly cowboys who unexpectedly lasso the president.

It happened once, in 1953, while Dwight D. Eisenhower was on the reviewing stand in front of the White House. Monte Montana, a California rodeo rider, asked for — and received — permission from Ike to throw a rope around his shoulders.

The incident made the president smile, but it horrified the Secret Service. "If the horse was startled, it could have yanked the president right off the reviewing stand," said one agent who still remembered Monte's surprise 24 years later. "While there isn't likely to be a repeat of the lassoing trick at Jimmy Carter's inauguration, security forces are ready for almost anything else, friendly and unfriendly."

The Secret Service, along with other federal and local police agencies, has spent months on security preparations for the inaugural festivities. And although the tensions of the Vietnam War and Watergate are over, a Secret Service spokesman said the calmer atmosphere makes no difference to the agency.

"Secret Service personnel are of the same mind set whenever they perform a function, whatever the national mood," he said.

But other police agencies are encouraged by the prospect of an inaugural unmarred by the type of violent dissent which marked Richard Nixon's parade in 1968, when rocks and beer cans were thrown in the direction of the presidential limousine.

"We're hoping everybody will still be as nice as they were in the Bicentennial," said Robert Rabe, commander of the Washington, D.C. police special operations department, which is handling inaugural security preparations.

So far, Rabe said, "it appears to be a very relaxed feeling. We don't have any information of any problems at this time at all."

Art Lamb, special events director for the National Capitol Parks, said there have been an unusually low number of applications for demonstration permits.

"It's an unusually low number because of the fact that in the past, we had the Vietnam War, the Nixon thing, we had angry people in the streets. This year we don't have it," he said. "It's going to be a great thing down here."

Lamb and others said they don't foresee any special problems due to the fact that Carter has invited "All America" to the parade.

"Everybody comes and everybody has a good time," Lamb said.

That doesn't mean, however, that the Secret Service is not going through with its usual elaborate precautions to protect the President. As in past years, there will be bullet proof glass both at the Capitol, where Carter will be sworn in, and at the reviewing stand in front of the White House.

Carter will ride from the Capitol to the White House along Pennsylvania Avenue in a limousine with a protective cover, but he will be fully visible to the crowds lining the street, hoping for a glimpse of him.

As in past years, the Secret Service will have "a system of identification" for persons going in and out of buildings on Pennsylvania Avenue Jan. 20, and anyone who unexpectedly opens a window along the parade route can expect to be quickly surrounded by police.

There will be helicopters flying above the parade, and thousands of police and other security forces mingling with the crowds.

The D.C. police force's Rabe said most of the city's 4,400 police "will be on duty one way or another" on Jan. 20. Though pickpockets have not traditionally been much of a problem at inaugurations, he said, "there's going to be a policeman close enough if any assistance is needed. There will be enough to protect against the opportunist."

Rabe said every security officer on duty Jan. 20 will be alert for the unusual — "It's that sudden instance that occurs, that unexpected thing that occurs," he said. "You've got to be very security minded."

Richfield budget rises slightly

RICHFIELD — Richfield's 1977 city budget has been set at only three per cent above last year's spending rate. The new $73,500 budget was approved at a hearing Monday night attended by one interested person. The new budget is for nine months, until the new fiscal year begins Oct. 1. Last year's budget for the entire year was $65,000. Three-fourths of that amount is $71,250, or an increase of $2,250 for the comparable nine-month period.

The general fund in the new budget totals $17,250, compared to $20,000 for the full 1976 year. Irrigation fund is $1,125, compared to $1,500; street and alley, $7,500 and $10,000; airport, $375 and $500.

Ruth Swainston, city clerk, said $22,500 is budgeted for sewer fund, compared to $30,000 last year. Part of this money is to pay indebtedness remaining on the town's sewage system built about three years ago.

Other items include $750 for recreation, compared to $1,000 for the last 12 months; $3,000 for street lights, compared to $4,000; $6,000 for revenue sharing, compared to $8,000; and $15,000 earmarked for the water system, compared to $20,000.

Driver admits guilt

TWIN FALLS — A 21-year-old Jerome man has pleaded guilty to involuntary manslaughter in connection with the traffic death of an 18-year-old Jerome woman.

The man, Salvador Chavola, was arrested and charged with involuntary manslaughter in November after the car he was driving crashed into a parked pickup truck. The woman, Larkia M. Jenks, a passenger in Chavola's car, was killed. Police said the Chavola vehicle was traveling north on Locust Street about 11 p.m. Nov. 18 at what witnesses estimated to be 90 to 100 miles per hour. The car veered across the center line of the street's 800 block and crashed into the pickup front. The impact forced the pickup and a smaller vehicle behind it backwards about 50 feet.

Both Chavola and Jenks were pinned under the dashboard of the car they were riding in. Police reports indicated Chavola, who suffered serious injuries, stopped breathing on the way to the hospital but was later revived. Chavola faces up to a five-year prison sentence.

Citizen group forms in Jerome

JEROME — The new Jerome Recreation District Commission has formed a citizens advisory committee to inventory community programs and needs in recreation.

This group will meet Monday night at 8 p.m. at the courthouse to begin an inventory of present recreational activities in the Jerome community and listing their needs.

"We need a citizens advisory group to do this," DeWitt Moss, commission member, said Tuesday. He said anyone willing to work on the project is invited to attend next Monday night's meeting.

Between 8 and 12 people are needed who will contact the "long laundry list," Moss said, of all different types of recreational groups in the area.

At a previous meeting the members went over facilities and current programs conducted by school and city but now the commission needs to inventory all the non-public kinds of recreational activities, Moss said. The three directors officially hired the accounting firm of Kays and Correll with Charles Correll as representative.

The group also approved a job description for the candidate for recreation supervisor. Moss said the job description was necessary so they could apply for someone qualified under CETA, a federally sponsored program where the government pays 100 per cent of the salary and 20 per cent of fringe benefits.

There are many other requirements and the recreation district may not be able to find a qualified supervisor under this program, Moss said, "but we felt obligated to try."

The three directors also will advertise for a supervisor to start and implement a district wide recreation program.

Members will meet Jan. 31 with members of the Idaho Parks and Recreation Department to get guidance on starting and implementing a district wide recreation program.

Kidwell eyes 'debt'

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Department of Administration and the State Permanent Building Fund Council are involved in an "illegal marriage" that could subject the state to "millions of dollars in long-term debt," Attorney General Wayne Kidwell told the Board of Examiners Tuesday.

Kidwell made the statement after George Neumayer, acting director of the Department of Administration, asked the board for authorization to spend some $80,000 that he said had already been committed in "programming contracts" for state office buildings in Idaho Falls, Lewiston and Boise.

The attorney general said the department and the building council "are acting virtually as one agency," which he said is "extremely dangerous" because it exposed the state to "tremendous liability." Kidwell advised Neumayer to "limit his ability to running the the Department of Administration" — not to — administering the building authority because of a "worst result" in "a tremendous conflict of the statute" which gives the power to authorize expenditures from the permanent building fund to the board of examiners.

Neumayer said he intends to ask the legislature to appropriate the committed money which he said is available in contingency funds.

Kidwell said he would not vote to authorize the expenditure of the already committed money "until the Idaho State Building Authority and the Department of Administration are two separate entities."

Neumayer said he had not transferred money to the department of administration from the permanent building fund, although he said, "I've entered into contracts that have not spent those funds."

Williams' shooting sparks Burley to 70-58 victory over Twin Falls

TWIN FALLS — Burley turned loose its offensive machine Tuesday night, jumping ahead with an early fast break and rolling over the Twin Falls Bruins 70-58.

Bobcats, avenging an early-season loss, never trailed in the contest and, with senior Farrell Williams going on an outside shooting jolt in the second quarter, controlled the scoreboard throughout.

It was guard line defense that established the lead for the Bobcats in the early going as they hustled into an 18-8 lead in the first six minutes and that pretty much told the story.

The rest of the tale came when Twin Falls' leading scorer Dave Welter picked up four fouls in the first 5:28 and although he scored 10 points and played the entire second half, the inhibitions were there.

"I'd be lying if I said we deserved to win this one," Coach Ron Watson said afterward. "They have that speed and to stop them we have to do specific things. We didn't do them tonight."

Williams, one of the state's leading scorers, hit 12 of his 20 points in the first half and then two quick ones midway through the fourth quarter that put Twin Falls away for good.

Throughout the night it was a matter of Burley getting that emotional scoring game going for quick four to eight-point blitzes and then dying off again for a while — at least long enough for Twin Falls to whittle back into contention.

The first break came after Lawrence Pfeiffer and pulled Twin Falls to within one at 7-6. Williams hit three buckets — with Kerbs sandwiching another between Nos. 2 and 3. After Mike Ridgeway hit for Twin Falls, Davey Brown got loose on two fast breaks worth two cripplers and a free throw.

That made it 18-8.

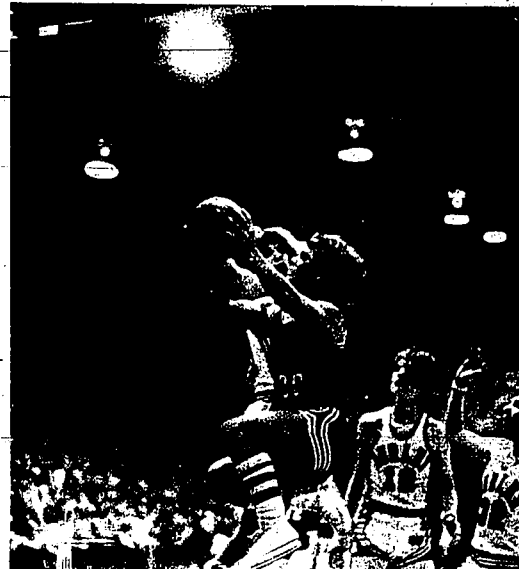

Twin Falls cut back to 22-16 in the second quarter and tried a zone to contain the Bobcats. Williams hit three straight out of side court and finally missed one — which was promptly shoved back up by Davis.

Twin Falls stayed within eight at intermission but Burley picked up eight of the second half's first 20 points to push ahead 47-32.

Randy Kolar rebounding and couple-three follow shots got Twin Falls rolling. Twice in the fourth period the Bruins pulled to within seven — and missed free throws both times that could have made it closer.

With 4:47 left, Gordy Kerbs started the final Burley onslaught with a pair of free throws and Williams then rang in with his final four points on nifty feeds from Brown and Davis on close-in shots. That made it 64-51 and Burley was home free.

Williams' 24 points, 11 rebounds, 10 assists and 10 fouls were the high marks for the Bobcats. Burley's 70 points were the highest in the conference since last season.

Chandler lifts Filer by Shoshone 68-65

FILER — Dennis Chandler scored two field goals and assisted on a third Tuesday night when the Filer Wildcats swooped from behind in the final minute to edge Shoshone's Indians 68-65.

The victory was the seventh straight in the Big Six Conference for Coach Ron Maxwell's Wildcats who maintain at least a one-game lead on everyone going into the final three games.

Tuesday night's victory came the hardest. After a close first quarter, Shoshone bounced into a 10-point lead in the second period and still had eight left at intermission.

Filer outscored the Indians 14-2 as the second half began and the Wildcats then maintained meager margins until the closing minutes.

Shoshone rallied back into a tie with about two minutes left and then took the lead and got the ball back. But Chandler stymied a delay attempt by stealing the ball and driving for a crippler.

Seconds later Joe Hepas stole a Shoshone pass and forwarded the ball to Chandler for the go-ahead points. Chandler then assisted Jerry Shaffer on a fast break bucket and Elliot nailed things down with a free throw about 10 seconds from the end.

Shoshone cut it to 68-65 at the buzzer. Filer won the preliminary.

Jenner, Morgan win 1976 awards

BUFFALO, N.Y. (UPI) — Bruce Jenner, the 1976 Olympic decathlon champion, and Joe Morgan, the Cincinnati Reds' second baseman who was picked as the National League's most valuable player last year, were named Tuesday as winners of the Dunlop trophies for the best amateur and professional athletes of the year.

They will receive their trophies at a pro-am awards dinner here Jan. 31.

Jenner, 37, won the gold medal with a record total of 8,418 points in the 10-event competition at the Montreal Olympic last year.

Morgan batted .333 for the Reds and helped lead them to the World Series and a national championship.

In previous years, the awards were not announced until the dinner itself, but a spokesman said there was a better chance the winners, would appear if they were known ahead of time.

Both Jenner and Morgan have accepted invitations to attend the dinner.

The winners were selected from a vote of sportswriters and sports broadcasters around the country.

Gough's late points carry Hagerman past Declo 35-28

HAGERMAN — Gough's six fourth-quarter points opened up a little breathing room and carried the Hagerman Pirates to a 35-28 decision over Declo's Hornets Tuesday night.

It was the first loss in the Magic Valley Conference for Declo and coupled with Raft River's Tuesday night defeat of Murtaugh threw the league into a four-way tie. Hagerman picked up its first win after three narrow losses to co-leading teams.

Tuesday night's contest was marked with poor foul and field goal shooting by both sides.

Hagerman led only 13-9 at intermission and in the third period the Pirates just stayed ahead of Declo's Mallory. He hit 12 of Declo's 14 points in the period as Hagerman stayed up by one.

But Declo's production fell to five points in the final period when Gough and Hagerman managed 11 and that was enough. Hagerman's free throw shooting eye returned somewhat in the closing minutes as Declo had to foul in an effort to get the ball.

Hagerman won the preliminary 37-35.

Weber drops Utags

OGDEN, Utah (UPI) — Junior Stan Mayhew set a single-game scoring record with 45 points, pouring in more than half of Weber State's total output in the Wildcats' 89-76 win over Utah State Tuesday night.

Mayhew, a junior college transfer from Trinidad State in Colorado, easily shattered the one-game record of 40 points by Jerry Trice against Northern Arizona in 1966. It was also the second highest individual scoring effort by a single player against USU.

The 6'7 forward also set a school record with his 18 field goals, and grabbed 20 rebounds for the Wildcats. The win gave Weber State the state trophy for best record against in-state schools with a 4-1 record.

Weber State broke away from a 34-34 halftime tie when Mayhew scored 13 straight points for the Wildcats to put them in front 63-52 with 9:50 left. Mayhew hit 18 of 26 field goals and nine of 15 from the foul line.

Weber Center Jim Erickson had 14 points, and Bruce Collins and Bob Holgate 12 each. Collins also had 14 rebounds as the Wildcats outboarded USU 52-22.

Jeff Meyer had 22 points to lead Utah State. Deon Hanger scored a career-high 17 and Blair Martineau added 12 before fouling out. Aggie starters Martineau, Mike Santes and Rawlee Perkins all fouled out in the game.

Weber State is now 10-4 on the season, winning its fifth straight game. USU's record drops to 8-8. The Aggies have now lost their last three games.

Thomsen trails by 4

CHANDLER, Ariz. — Jeff Thomsen, Twin Falls, winner of last week's event, shut a 7-11 in the third of four $35,000 San Marcos open golf tournaments.

Thomsen, who tied for second in the first competition sponsored by the National Golfers of America, was four shots off the lead.

Irish end loss skell

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (UPI) — Toby Knight scored 18 points, grabbed 16 rebounds and blocked six shots in 33 minutes to help Notre Dame snap a four-game losing streak Tuesday night with a 89-70 victory over Stonhill College.

Knight's play lifted the Irish from a 22-21 lead with 11 minutes to go in the half into a commanding 51-36 lead at the intermission.

Junior center Dave Batton came off the Notre Dame bench to lead all scorers with a career-high 22 points in 21 minutes as Notre Dame improved its record to 6-4. Stonhill, which fell to 5-7, was led by forward Tom Lavan's 17 points.

Creighton wins sixth

OMAHA, Neb. (UPI) — Rick Apke scored a game-high 19 points Tuesday night to help Creighton win its sixth game in a row and boost its record to 12-2, with an 84-62 triumph over Centenary.

The Blue Jays led throughout the game and used substitutes throughout the second half. Cornell Smith added 18 points for Creighton while Bobby White led Centenary, which fell to 6-9, with 14 points.

Kansas tames Cyclones

LAWRENCE, Kan. (UPI) — Kansas, sparked by the second half play of freshman, Jaian Houston, fought off an Iowa State charge Tuesday night to post a 79-62 Big Eight victory over the Cyclones.

Houston, in his only second start of the season, contributed 11 of his 13 points to help the Jayhawks pull away in the second half. Herb Nobles, who scored 11 of his 15 points in the first half, led Kansas. He also grabbed 13 rebounds.

The win assured the Jayhawks of a share of the conference lead with a 3-1 record and a 12-3 overall mark. Iowa State, which was led by Leonard Allen's 22 points, dropped to 1-3 and 4-17.

Raft River drops Murtaugh to gain share of conference lead

MURTAUGH — Raft River scored three points off a technical foul to break a tie in the fourth quarter and defeated Murtaugh's Red Devils 50-48 Tuesday night.

The victory threw the Magic Valley Conference lead into a four-way tie among Oakley, Declo, Murtaugh and Raft River.

The game was tight through. Raft River holding narrow margins through most of the middle quarters. About midway through the fourth period Murtaugh pulled into a 42-42 tie but a Red Devil picked up a technical and a Trojan converted by hitting the foul shot and a field goal after the in-bounds pass.

Murtaugh never caught up again.

Raft River handily won the preliminary.

Buhl overpowers Jerome 64-33

BUHL — The Buhl Indians stymied Jerome with an early full court press and collected a 64-33 South Central Idaho Conference victory Tuesday night.

It was the third straight top win for the Indians who trailed only once — at 2-0.

The Indians managed only a 10-5 first-quarter lead but started moving away in the second. They pushed a 25-11 halftime advantage to 17 in the third period and coasted home.

Helping Buhl's effort was 71 per cent foul shooting 12 of 17, while Jerome hit only five of 11.

Mtn. Home drops Glens Ferry

GLENS FERRY — Mountain Home's Masten, hitting from all parts of the floor for 25 points, sparked a sharpshooters Tigers offense past the Glens Ferry Pilots 57-41 Tuesday night.

Mountain Home hit on a couple of fast break midway through the fourth quarter to set up a finish that belted the first three periods.

Glens Ferry jumped into an 8-2 lead early but in the second period, hitting eight of 14 field goal attempts, Mountain Home inched into a 22-21 halftime lead. Glens Ferry managed just eight points in the third period to fall behind by six.

Early in the fourth quarter the Pilots pulled to within six and tied the ball. An offensive foul killed that chance and Mountain Home immediately started pulling away.

Banks, Matthews leading hall of fame candidates

NEW YORK (UPI) — Two of baseball's most feared pitchers in 1955 and 1959, Ernie Banks and Eddie Matthews, are the leading candidates today for election into the Hall of Fame by the Baseball Writers' Association of America.

The two power-hitters, who are tied for ninth place on the all-time home run list with 512, need to be named on 75 per cent of the ballots cast by the BBWAA to gain election. Banks makes it, it would make him only the eighth player to be elected to the Cooperstown, N.Y., shrine — the first — since the first year of inductions. Jackie Robinson, Bob Feller, Ted Williams, Stan Musial, Sandy Koufax, Warren Spahn, and Mickey Mantle were the only other players to make it on the first try.

Banks, who spent his entire 19-year career (1953-71) as a shortstop-first baseman with the Chicago Cubs, had a lifetime batting average of .274 and hit more homers (293) than any other shortstop in baseball history. Slender and graceful athlete who derived his power from strong wrists and forearms, Banks also drove in 1,636 runs and twice won the National League's Most Valuable Player Award (1958-59). Five times he hit more than 40 homers in a season and he was named to the NL All-Star team 10 times.

Matthews, who played 15 seasons with the Boston, Milwaukee and Atlanta Braves before closing out his career with Houston and Detroit, teamed with all-time home run king Hank Aaron for 11 seasons to give the Braves the most potent one-two punch in the NL. Matthews, who played r-second baseman with the Chicago White Sox in the 1950s and '60s.

Hodges, a lifetime .273 hitter with 370 home runs and 1,274 runs-batted-in, finished third in the balloting "last year behind pitchers Robin Roberts and Bob Lemon—both of whom were elected. Hodges' 233 votes were 58 shy of the 75 per cent needed for election. Hodges died in 1972, three years after managing the New York Mets to their only world championship.

Snider batted .295 in 18 seasons, mostly with the Dodgers, and also belted 407 home runs while driving in 1,333.

Slaughter, who hit an even .300 for 20 big league seasons, was fourth in the 1976 balloting, falling 94 votes shy. Known for his eye-glazing style of play, Slaughter spent the first 13 years of his career with the Cardinals before moving over to the American League where he helped the New York Yankees to pennants in 1956-57. Fox, who died in Dec. of 1975, was the outstanding second baseman in the American League from 1951 through 1962. He compiled a lifetime .288 batting average and in 1959 was named the AL's Most Valuable Player after leading the White Sox to their first pennant in 40 years.

Duke loses top gun

DURHAM, N.C. (UPI) — Duke senior guard Tate Armstrong, the leading scorer in the Atlantic Coast Conference, suffered a broken wrist in the team's victory over Virginia Monday night and will be out of the lineup for most of the season.

Duke athletic officials announced that x-rays taken

Tuesday at Duke Medical Center showed Armstrong fractured a bone in his right wrist when he hit the floor after a collision five minutes into the game.

The 6-foot-3, Houston, Tex., native went on to score 31 more points, however, and ended up with a total of 31 for the night. Armstrong, a member of the gold medal-winning U.S. Olympic basketball team, was averaging 22.9 points per game in leading the Blue Devils to an 11-3 record.

"What can I say, I'm extremely disappointed for Armstrong and for the team," said Foster. "It just seems that when things were turning around something like this hits you."

Armstrong's wrist was put in a cast and he will likely miss four to six weeks of playing time. School officials said they hoped Armstrong would be back in action for the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament which begins March 5.

Hockey team ready to fold

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — The Minnesota Fighting Saints, on the brink of folding for the second time in a year, Tuesday announced that they will "voluntarily terminate" the World Hockey Association franchise unless a bona fide buyer completes a purchase of the team by 11 p.m. EST Thursday.

The announcement was made by WHA chairman Ben Hatskin after days-long negotiations here prior to Tuesday night's WHA All-Star game.

Hatskin said the sale would be without conditions, meaning the seven players the Saints sold to the Edmonton Oilers last week in a controversial move has been completed and approved. All other Minnesota players will become free agents within the WHA if the franchise does terminate, Hatskin said, and their playing rights will be subject to WHA operating regulations.

Maryland has to leave home

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (UPI) — Coach Lefty Driesell's 18th-ranked Maryland Terps go on the road tonight for the first time this season and their top priority will be to neutralize Driesell's "Hoat-Wayne" "Tree" Rollins.

"Rollins is a fine player, probably the best slot blocker (that) has played in this league since I've been here," Maryland Coach Lefty Driesell told his weekly media luncheon Tuesday. "He's the kind of guy that if he's playing well can dominate a game."

Maryland's three big men—Terry Gibson, Mike Davis and Lawrence Boston—all give three or four inches away to Rollins, who is averaging 16.1 points, 14.6 rebounds and 4.1 blocked shots a game.

Guard Stan Rome leads the Tigers, 1-2 in the Atlantic Coast Conference and 11-3 overall, with a 17.6 average.

Clemson has got the kind of figure that can beat anybody in the country if they play well," said Driesell. "They've beaten some teams by 50 or 60 points."

The Tigers are also 7-1 in the Ivy League, and Driesell is wondering how his young team—Steve Sheppard is the only senior—will react in its first road appearance.

"It's always interesting to see how some of your young players react," he said. "They have a veteran team and we have a young team."

Nicklaus, Ford, Palmer debut in Crosby meet

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — Jack Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer, the two best known professional golfers, and an amateur by the name of Gerald Ford, make their 1977 debuts this week in the $200,000 Bing Crosby National Pro-Am, the tournament that is as much a social event as a sports spectacular.

The long range weather forecast, at least as of Tuesday, calls for dry, unseasonably warm temperatures of around 60 degrees and only light wind. That is guaranteed to bring out record crowds to the Monterey Peninsula for a tournament that draws around 80,000 fans anyway, even in inclement weather.

"Having Mr. Ford, Jack and Arnie here all at the same time, isn't going to hurt," said a happy Crosby official. "If the weather turns out as good as they are forecasting now, it's going to be the greatest tournament we've ever put on here. We could threaten a lot of records, too."

Ford steps down as President, officially, around noon—EST Thursday, then makes the trip here to play as Palmer's amateur partner in the second round on Friday. Jack McCormack, Palmer's agent, will stand in for Ford on Thursday, but the team score in the first round will be sufficient, Arnie thinks. That way Ford can be eligible to play the next two rounds, and if he and Palmer have one of the 25 low team scores, they will advance to the final round on Sunday.

The format here, both for the pro and team play, is one round over each of three tough seaside courses. Spyglass Hill, a Crosby course the last half dozen years, will not be used this year. Lack of rain over the last two winters nearly ruined Spyglass. Pebble Beach, the only true links in America, is rated among the world's top 10 courses in the first 50. No one ever has played the Shore Course at Monterey Peninsula often enough to rank it (the club has fewer than 100 members). But most observers, limited as their view may be, say it is a tough course on which to score. That's understandable since many of its holes flank Carmel Bay and can prove bothersome if the wind blows.

Nicklaus held to his schedule of 15 tournaments last year, which was not a typical one for Jack. He won only twice but his victories were important ones.

Area judo team places second in Boise State tournament

TWIN FALLS — Members of the College of Southern Idaho and the Twin Falls judo teams took second place in the tournament last weekend at Boise State University.

The local judoists scored a total of eight points in their competition, behind first place Capital team with 11 points. Ore-ida club of Ontario, Ore., was third with six points.

Competitors from Twin Falls who placed in the top four positions included Tim Voyles, first in the 8 y ears old and under division, Clint Treadwell placed third in the 11 and 12-year-old middleweight division, and Steve Benkula was fourth in the same group. Greg Dobbs was first in the lightweight brown belt; Wiley Dobbs, first in lightweight brown-black belt.

Tim Voyles surprised his opponent with his stand-up judo throws and his expertise with the mat techniques.

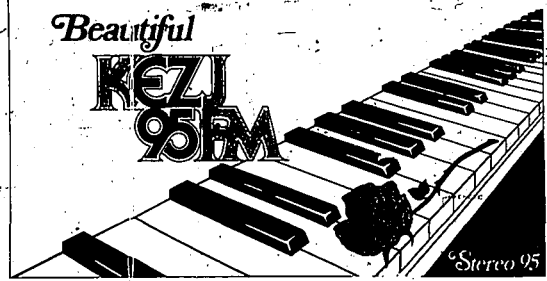

Wiley Dobbs displayed outstanding technique in dispatching his opponent with a throw wins in all except the championship match in which he met John Gregory, Boise State graduate with a long list of experience in collegiate and national events. During that match Wiley won a hard-fought decision.

Gregory was awarded his second degree black belt for his all-around judo prowess.

Verl Breshers, in his first trophy win, displayed technique worthy of a brown belt although this was only his second tournament. All white belts were put into one class and Breshers was giving away 10-20 rounds in most cases.

The next tournament for Twin Falls and CSI teams will be Jan. 29 in Ontario, An Intermountain Judo Association meeting was held following the Boise tournament.

Wesley L. Dobbs, Twin Falls, CSI Judo instructor and president of the association, conducted the meeting. Judo promotions for those in the association were conducted. Wiley Dobbs served as secretary.

Atlanta owner ready to start sentence

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Atlanta Braves Owner Ted Turner has all but resigned himself today to a one-year suspension for tampering with former San Francisco Giants outfielder Gary Matthews despite an appeal for clemency to Commissioner Bowie Kuhn by a peace delegation of influential Georgians.

Abraham Lincoln, Jesus Christ, John F. Kennedy—if the world can get along without them, the Braves can do without me for a year," the 38-year-old Turner said after a one-hour meeting with Kuhn Tuesday.

"I have no reason to believe there has been any change in the commissioner's decision," he told newsmen after his meeting with Kuhn, a sequel to the commissioner's conference with Atlanta Mayor Maynard Jackson, Fulton County Chairman Charlie Brown, Chamber of Commerce spokesman Jesse Hill, and others who urged that the one-year penalty be either revoked or reduced.

the player became available in baseball's free agent bidding war last year. According to the commissioner's office, Turner told San Francisco owner Bob Lurie at a cocktail party he would do whatever necessary to sign Matthews.

An Atlanta assistant, subsequently dismissed, arranged a public party for Matthews—seven prior to his becoming a free agent. Kuhn declared on Dec. 30 that his suspension of Turner for a year was "a regrettable and painful necessity."

"Jesus and an array of other Georgia officials told Kuhn the action would be "detrimental to baseball, to Atlanta, to the Southeast."

Cal signs Cuellar

ANAHEIM (UPI) — Mike Cuellar, 30, co-winner of the 1969 American League Cy Young Award and a four-time 20-game winner, Tuesday signed a contract with the California Angels.

"One of the areas we wanted to strengthen was our left-handed pitching," said Angels' General Manager Harry Dalton. "Mike has been one of the most outstanding pitchers in the American League since 1969."

"Even though he had an off year in 1976, his experience and ability should give him a good chance to help our club," Cuellar, who is pitching for Caguas in the Puerto Rican League this winter, compiled a 4-13 record and a 4.96 ERA for Baltimore last season.

It was the second time Dalton had acquired Cuellar.

Airport plan talks okayed

By BOB ZUCKERMAN Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls City Council Monday agreed that negotiations begin between the city and a local engineering firm on master plan development for the Twin Falls City-Country Airport.
The approval came a week after the airport commission recommended J-U-B Engineers, Inc., Twin Falls, develop the plan.
The firm will now meet with the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) in Seattle to determine what studies of airport traffic patterns must be made, according to Dale Riedesel, J-U-B vice-president and manager of the Twin Falls office.
Based on these determinations, the firm will apply for a grant from the FAA of from $50,000 to $80,000 for planning, Riedesel estimated. The city of Twin Falls would be expected to pay an estimated $5,000 to $8,000, he said.
Only Councilman Chris Ostyn voted no, saying they could not support preliminary negotiations before the council had approved budget funds for the master plan.
"By approving negotiations, you're indirectly approving spending money on the master plan, something this council, I don't think, has decided," Ostyn said.
Councilman Leon Smith disagreed and said the council could always later vote against an amount finally negotiated.
Ostyn also questioned whether it was fair to limit the negotiations to one firm.
Councilman H. E. Cheney said, "You have a commission for those decisions. They're open applicants. What's the point of having a commission if they have no power?"
During the two-hour meeting, the council also held a public hearing to discuss how to spend roughly $270,000 available this year under the Federal Revenue Sharing Program.
City Manager Jean Millar presented statistics showing the city still has roughly $225,000 in federal funds left over from last year.

He said $205,000 of these leftover funds were already committed to items from last year's budget, including $77,000 for final payment on the recently-opened police station and $88,000 for a new city golf course sprinkler system still being designed.
Highest priorities, set in previous years by the council, for revenue sharing funds included spending an additional $150,000 on the remainder of the gold course sprinkler system, $50,000 for a city vehicle storage building and $35,000 for a library fire sprinkler system, Millar said.

He recommended other high priorities for spending revenue sharing funds, including $17,000 for fire department vehicle replacement, $10,000 for parks department vehicle replacement and $4,000 for engineering department equipment.
Mr. and Mrs. Michael L. Talley, 1811 Seventh Ave. E., told the council some revenue sharing money might be better spent on sidewalks on Elizabeth Boulevard for children traveling to and from Morningside School.
Talley also asked that some funds be spent to cover the cost near the school to keep children out of it. "The safety of children should come before recreation," he said, noting the high amount to be spent on the city golf course.
A council committee will make a final recommendation to the full council on how those funds should be spent at the next meeting, Jan. 31.

In other action, the council:—Denied a request by William Perkins and Lewis Rowland for a zoning ordinance interpretation to allow indoor racquetball-handball facility to be constructed on Falls Avenue.
—Approved the sale of three lots in South Park under the Community Development program for $8,600.
—Approved preliminary plans for close to 50 acres of development, including three subdivisions near the College of Southern Idaho and a fourth subdivision near Sparks Street and Ridgeway Drive.

Demo urges action on election bill

BOISE (UPD) — Rep. Joe Wagner, D-Lewiston, urged the House State Affairs Committee Tuesday to give favorable consideration to his bill to combine the regular and presidential primary elections.
Wagner's bill, introduced last week, proposes holding the elections the first Tuesday after the first Monday in June. At present, the presidential primary is held the fourth Tuesday in May and the regular primary is held the first Tuesday after the first Monday in August.

"I realize the date I've chosen doesn't coincide with the Oregon presidential primary," Wagner told the committee, adding he hopes Oregon might change the date of its primary to conform with Idaho's if Idaho moves to June.

Rupert board turns down teacher plea

RUPERT — Teacher negotiating sessions apparently will be held in the evening in Minidoka County.

The school board Monday night rejected a teacher request for professional leave for teacher negotiators to meet in afternoon sessions from 5 to 5 p.m.

"I don't think we should approve the request," said board member Leonard Martin.

Larry Caldwell, president of the Minidoka County Education Association, contended afternoon sessions would benefit both the teachers and the district. He said afternoon scheduling would be more convenient to teachers who have duties at night and would avoid the district having to reimburse central office personnel for evening work hours.

Supl. Darrell Hatfield said, "I would have no objection justifying this on the basis of students and the education they are getting."

Although Caldwell proposed having fellow teachers cover the negotiators' classes, Hatfield said at least some of the negotiators have special skills required in their classes.

He cited former MCEA president Milton McDaniel, Minico High School shop teacher, and Rick Bollor, Minico debate instructor.

Asked about his own situation, board legal adviser Roger Ling said he would prefer negotiating after regular working hours, but would be available to negotiate whenever the board desired.

Ling is head of the school board's negotiating team.

Ling explained the teacher request means, if the board failed to grant professional leave, the MCEA does not want to negotiate during school hours. Caldwell indicated this is correct.

The board had told the MCEA it would be willing to negotiate during school hours or in the evening. However the board Monday night voted not to grant professional leave for teachers to negotiate during afternoon hours.

Burley seeks new traffic signs

BURLEY — The Burley City Council Monday night voted to seek federal grants for updating traffic signs in the city.

Leon Bedke, assistant city engineer, told the council the application would include some 285 to 300 signs, about 200 of them "stop" signs.

Bedke said the federal grant covers complete cost of the signing on all streets, not designated as Urban Districts.

He said Mel Latta, Idaho Division of Highway Safety, first contacted the city regarding grant funds three months ago and a preliminary application patterned after an application made by Twin Falls, was sent in November to the Idaho Traffic Safety Commission.

Bedke said he received word in the past week that money is available. He proposed city crews do the work of installing the signs and the larger posts many of them will require. He said the city could then present a lump sum total to the state Division of highways for payment.

Minidoka board delays decisions

RUPERT — The decision to rehire the Minidoka County School District superintendent and assistant superintendent awaits a special meeting next Monday.

Contracts for Superintendent Darrell Hatfield and Assistant Superintendent Doyle Lowder were scheduled for consideration in this week's regular meeting.

The school board postponed the decision for one week following a meeting Monday.

Hunter, chairman of the board, said the trustees will meet in executive session at 7 p.m., Jan. 21. She said the board will hold an open meeting at 8:30 p.m. to take action on the two contracts.

"The two contracts were to have been discussed during an executive session Monday, but other matters took nearly all of the time scheduled."

The board also postponed action on a petition regarding the granting of leave to employees for pregnancy. The policy is to be considered during an all-day work session on school board policies Jan. 22.

Mrs. Hunter said the meeting will begin at 9 a.m. at the migrant education resource center.

The board did re-employ Superintendent's legal counsel Monday and approved a contract for Helen Cannon, Twin Falls, as auditor for 1978-79.

The board approved Mrs. Cannon's 1978-79 audit. Mrs. Cannon said the district's books were "the cleanest set of books" she has audited in some time.

Fireman of the year announced in Filer

FILER — Ron Hytting was named "Fireman of the Year" of the Filer Volunteer Fire Department and received a plaque and a bonus from the department.

Hytting has been a volunteer fireman since September 1972 and has a total of 173 points and has attended 39 fires and 19 drills.

Ardean Lang was named fireman of the month for December.

Filer responded to five fires during the month of December, according to Gerald Mullen, fire chief.

Dec. 14 they were called to a house fire on 720 Adell, where a fire and ceiling area were on, well due to a faulty fireplace.

Owner of the house is Charles Gill.

Dec. 15 the firemen were called to 117 Ramsey St. on a medical call where a resuscitator was needed but upon arrival the person had already been taken to the hospital in a private car.

Dec. 22 firemen were called to the Robert Moody residence, west of Filer, to a chimney fire. Damage of $500 was estimated to the inside and outside of the house.

Dec. 26 a chimney fire at the Kelly Lookingbill residence north of Curry brought firemen to the scene. No estimated damage was reported.

Partly cloudy through Thursday and areas of morning fog. High temperatures Thursday near 40 and overnight lows 10 to 20. Friday's outlook little change. Synopsis:
Dry spring-like weather continues across the Magic Valley. This is being caused by a large high pressure area over the Pacific Northwest. Temperatures Tuesday climbed to near 50 degrees in the valley, and Hagerman reported the warmest with 53 degrees. However, this morning areas of dense fog covered the lower valley, and patchy fog elsewhere. In the Boise valley, persistent fog has plagued the area for the last two weeks. In fact, Boise air terminal was closed during the night and this morning because of fog. Meanwhile, no snow for the skiers. Mostly fair skies along with mild daytime temperatures will continue through the weekend. High temperatures will be mostly in the 40s and overnight lows near 20.

Solon wants explanation

BOISE (UPI) — Chairman John Reardon, R-Boise, told the House Tuesday he intends to invite the director of law enforcement to come before his State Affairs Committee and explain allegations of illegal activity by legislators. Director John Bender said last Friday he will welcome a grand jury investigation into allegations of a labor bootlegging conspiracy. He told the Lewiston Morning Tribune that at the same time he will ask an investigation into reports of illegal activity by certain members of the Idaho Legislature. Should the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee ask a grand jury investigation "triggered by inuendo and rumor," Bender said, he will appear before the jury with unsubstantiated information of his own. Among his allegations are the possibility that joint committee members in the past have fulfilled contracts for state agencies they are required to fund. "Reardon, rising on a point of personal privilege, told the House that Bender's remarks had cast a 'cloud' over the House and Senate. "Irrespective of party affiliation that cloud hangs over this body," Reardon said. "If, in the commissioner's considered opinion, there has been an illegal practice which has taken place in his knowledge in the past then it becomes his bounden duty to have reported that and recommended appropriate action. "He has made reference to his willingness to appear before a grand jury. And, as you know we have no enactment to afford this state the means and manner to approach this situation," Reardon said. "As long as that cloud hangs over these respective bodies public confidence will have suffered. You and I both know that by and large the public is tending to look askance, they are tending to lose their faith in government and nothing that is done either in our personal lives or our activities as members of this body representing these people should exaggerate or give impetus to that lack of confidence. "As chairman of the State Affairs Committee I will be inviting Mr. Bender to appear before that committee at a time certain to elucidate the remarks as appeared in the Lewiston Tribune," Reardon said.

Income tax updated

BOISE (UPI) — House taxwriters sent to the floor with their approval Tuesday a bill updating the Idaho income tax code to conform with changes in the federal Internal Revenue code. Retrospective to Jan. 1, 1977, the bill would cost the state an estimated $731,000 in general fund revenue if enacted because of changes in the federal code. Under normal rules of procedure the measure should come up for final consideration of the House in 48 hours.

Personnel chief back Hay Plan

BOISE (UPI) — Senators were told today implementation of the Hay Compensation Plan for Idaho public employees would end the yearly hassle in the legislature over salaries for state employees. Richard Barrett, Idaho Personnel Commission director, said the legislature already has adopted the plan and he could see no reason for delaying implementation for another year because it would only result in an additional startup cost. He said if delayed, the Hay Plan should be repealed by this session since it is scheduled to go into effect July 1. Barrett outlined several formulas for implementing the plan. Cost of the formula would range from $5.4 million to $2.9 million. Implementation of the Hay Plan is one of the major issues the legislature must resolve early. The Joint Finance Committee has completed its budget hearings but can't proceed with drafting agency budgets until it knows the wishes of the legislature concerning state employee pay. The joint committee finished its work Monday, well ahead of previous sessions. Also, the revenue projection committee of the legislature came up with its prediction on the revenue the state's general fund can expect during Fiscal Year 1978. The revenue group predicted general fund taxes will generate $281,907,000 in revenue next year — $5,734,000 more than estimated by Gov. Cecil D. Andrus. In discussing the Hay Plan for the Senate, Barrett said implementation of the plan would end one of the yearly problems of the legislature — the hassle over setting salaries. The system is "bizarre, inefficient and has been upheld by the courts," Barrett said, adding that 2,000 employers in the nation were using the system. He said also the classification provisions were "sound and far superior to what we have used in the past." "Once we master it, it becomes simple to use," Barrett said. "It is a tremendous improvement over any concepts we used before." He said one of the major objections to the plan was the costs the first year. But, he added, after the first year the costs would level off. In answer to questioning, Barrett said he figured it would take three years to work out all the problems with the new system. He said New Jersey was the first to adopt the Hay Plan and that state is perfectly happy about it although it took them three years to work out the bugs. "Once going it should simply outgrow and not complicate it," Barrett said when asked if implementation of the plan would result in additional staff.

Replying to Senate Minority Leader Cy Chase, D-St. Maries, Richard Hutchinson, deputy personnel director, said the largest increases will be in the clerical sector. Chase questioned the percentage of increases, but Hutchinson said it would be impossible to talk at all. The minority leader said he understood that some would receive 30-40 per cent increases. "That's absolutely correct," Hutchinson replied.

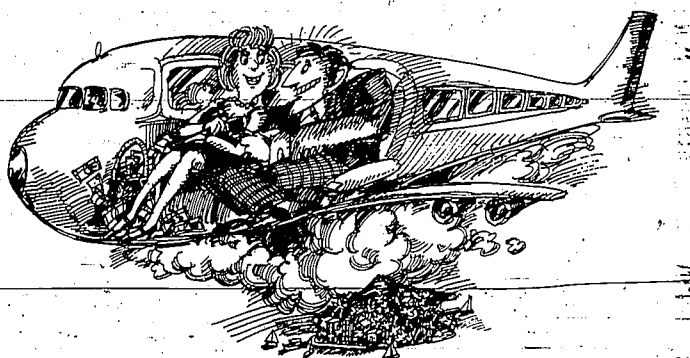

Steve Swatley of the Idaho State Public Employees Association said since the plan has been worked over this past summer it was receiving "positive" reaction from state employees. Swatley said his association would like to see their proposal which provides no less than a $50 per month increase through implementation. In the House, the State Affairs Committee held until it could hear from the Secretary of State's office a measure by Rep. Joe Wagner, D-Lewiston, to consolidate the Presidential and regular primaries in June.

Evans picks Leroy

BOISE (UPI) — Lt. Gov. John V. Evans today named Steve Leroy, information officer for the Department of Law Enforcement, to serve as press secretary when he succeeds Cecil D. Andrus as governor. Leroy already has begun his duties as Evans' press secretary. His brother, David H. Leroy, is Ada County prosecutor and headed up the President Ford campaign in Idaho last year.

SECOND-HAND CLOTHES

Q. "Don't people like Queen Elizabeth and Jackie Onassis get more money for their dresses when they sell them second-hand than they paid for them in the first place?"
A. Jackie Onassis gets sizable sums for her second-hand dresses, although probably not as much as the original costs. Queen Elizabeth, however, never resells a dress. Her cast-off clothing is either burned or flipped to pieces so the material can be donated to welfare institutions.

Q. "You said the shortest holo-alphabetic sentence is 'Pack my bag with five dozen liquor jugs.' But there's no X . . . ?"
A. Quite so. Should have said: "Pack my box . . ." etc.

NICKNAMES

Question arises as to whether the individuals in all societies have had nicknames. Don't know, don't know. Do know, though, that the nickname thing goes way back. Even to ancient Egypt. Scholars say their studies reveal that certain Egyptians in the days of the pharaohs were known to their intimates as Red, Baldy, Lazy, Ape, Frog, Donkey and Big Head. Those were commoners. One son of a king was called The Cat. And a particular king's daughter was referred to as Nopsy.

Was just 100 years ago, please note, that Mr. Charles Hires of Philadelphia became the first person in history to figure out how to mass produce root beer.

Did I tell you that the sun pouned for pound produces legs heat than the human body?

Although that celebration known as the Mardi Gras long has been identified with New Orleans, fact is it originated in Mobile.

Airbags due on '80 cars

WASHINGTON (UPI) — General Motors, Ford and Mercedes-Benz will begin offering American car buyers more than 340,000 cars equipped with air bags beginning three years from now, Transportation Secretary William Coleman said Tuesday.

Volkswagen has agreed to install its automatic lock seat belt in another 60,000 cars for sale during the same period, as part of a two-year experiment to determine effectiveness and consumer acceptance of devices designed to give drivers and passengers built-in protection during crashes.

The project, covering the 1980 and 1981 model years, will start one year later than Coleman originally announced last month. He said the automakers cited retooling and design changes in requesting more time.

Under contracts signed with the Department of Transportation, GM will develop capacity to sell 300,000 Chevrolet Chevelles, Pontiac Lemans, Buick Centuries and Oldsmobile Cutlasses equipped with air bags covering the full front seat. The devices inflate when the car hits something, providing a cushion for occupants.

Ford will develop production capacity to offer an air bag for the driver's side only on 140,000 cars of an as yet unidentified new line of compacts which will not be marketed until the 1980 model year.

The price will be $50 for the full one, unless an independent audit by the General Accounting Office shows it should be higher. GM agreed to spend between $5 million and $15 million advertising and promoting the cars, and Ford agreed to spend at least $2 million.

Critics of GM's earlier air bag experiment — which saw less than 10,000 sold — claimed the company charged too much and did little to promote the devices.

Mercedes-Benz will provide driver-side airbags for 2,250 sedans, at a cost of $425, Coleman said the company was granted the higher price because it made a final agreement to produce a certain number of cars. He also said the company claims its cars are so expensive anyway that a hubcap costs almost that much.

VW agreed to install its belt system, which straps the driver in place when the door is closed, on 60,000 cars.

Coleman said he hoped the experiment would convince the American people they work.

Three insurance companies — Allstate, Nationwide and VW Insurance — have agreed to offer premium reductions of up to 30 per cent for air bag-equipped cars.

Housing starts up 33% for '76

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Housing starts rose 33 per cent in 1976 for the first increase in four years and the largest in six, the Commerce Department said Tuesday.

Permits for future building issued in 1976 were 36 per cent higher than the previous year, despite a 5 per cent drop from November to December.

Commerce said the number of new homes, duplexes and apartments in which construction began in December jumped 13 per cent to end two months of declines.

The new data on construction activity was further evidence that the economy began to improve in December.

New homes, condominiums and apartments were being built at an annual rate of 1.9 million units in December.

Although that was 51 per cent higher than starts in December, 1975 it was well below the peak of 2.4 million units in January, 1971.

The 33 per cent rise for the year followed declines of 13 per cent in both 1973 and 1975 and 35 per cent in 1974 — the start of the worst recession since World War II.

Counter Soviets, Rumsfeld advises

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld said Tuesday military spending should increase over the next five years because Russia is moving toward "meaningful nuclear superiority" and can threaten vital U.S. interests.

"While the Soviets are not likely to succeed in the admittedly complex, costly, and difficult task of achieving meaningful nuclear superiority, it is clear that their capabilities are taking them in that direction."

The 32-page report detailed Soviet programs and proposals Rumsfeld said are needed to maintain the military balance between the two superpowers.

Among them are the B1 bomber, Trident submarines and a new nuclear missile, the MX, for which Ford has suggested $294.3 million in speeded up development funds in the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1. The MX would be more accurate than present Minuteman ICBMs and would be placed on underground tracks to elude Russian missiles.

New leads turn up in Cooper hijack

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Publicly over the fifth anniversary of the D. B. Cooper Portland hijacking during the Thanksgiving season last year has brought a number of new leads, an FBI spokesman said Monday.

Agent Ralph Himmlsbaach said, "We are still not sure of the specific value of some of these leads. Some interesting ones are still under investigation."

The hijacker boarded a Northwest Airlines flight in Portland, demanded and got $200,000 in $20 bills and then bailed out through the rear stair door of the Boeing 727. It is believed he bailed out from southwest Washington.

Himmlsbaach said, however, "Not one bit of hard evidence has been found so far to determine whether Cooper did or not reach the ground safely."

He added not one of the $20 bills paid to Cooper has been found.

Himmlsbaach said, "We got more calls than usual on the fifth anniversary because of reports that the statute of limitations on the crime had expired — which isn't."
