Hagerman 'Einsteins' conscientious, counselor says

By GEORGE WILEY and LARRY SWISHER Times-News writers HAGERMAN — A class of apparent 'Einsteins' constitutes the eleventh grade at Hagerman High School.

Mikesell said the importance of the test was emphasized to the 28 juniors before it was given. If the school, he said, could have picked any of its classes to take the test, it would have picked the eleventh graders.

Sewage facility discussed
By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — Hospital and state officials met in Twin Falls last week with city representatives to formulate final agreements and proposals for putting the city's $7 million secondary sewage treatment facility into full operation.
The meeting was held at the request of Joan Milar, city manager, who said he wanted all of the responsible agencies agreed on closing out of the project.
Converting the city's system from a primary to secondary plant to meet state and federal regulations began several years ago and several stages of the system have already gone into operation.
Milar said by installing the new higher grade system the city is able to meet all requirements of the discharge permit. The new system handles all major industries in the city with the exception of the Amalgamated Sugar Co. factory are now served by the treatment facility as is the city of Kimberly.
Milar said the treatment plant upgrading represents a cost of about $6 million and the interceptor sewer system, also part of the overall project, represents about another $1 million.
Financing of the project was from three sources: 75 per cent federal, 15 per cent state and the remaining 10 per cent provided by the city through the accumulation of a continued monthly sewer fee.
In the day-long meeting Wednesday, the various officials discussed operation of the plant, grant payments, grant eligibility, discharge permit compliance and the interceptor sewers.
Milar said there are three main criteria under the discharge permit including control of total quantity of discharge, bacterial limitations and the amount of biochemical oxygen demand (BOD) imposed on the stream.
The total quantity for the system is an average of six million gallons per day with the full operation now running about four million. The BOD or solids limitation is set at about 3000 pounds per day, which Milar said the city will have no difficulty in meeting.
The full operations of the plant will be in effect in the very near future, Milar said, and will require increasing sewer department staff to about 18 or 19 persons compared to the 7 who operated the primary plant.
Under the new operation some of the equipment requires 24-hour-a-day supervision, Milar said, and workers will be on duty in teams at all hours.
In the Wednesday meeting, Milar said, the city officials discussed a number of questions with Department of Health and Welfare officials to make certain all agencies involved are following a unified program.
"We are all working toward the same goal," Milar said. "We want to meet the needs of the local citizens and eliminate pollution of the Idaho streams."
Those attending the meeting included Brent Gillouisen, Environmental Protection Agency, Seattle; Harold Cohen, EPA Idaho operations director, Boise; Al Murray, water quality bureau chief for Idaho's Department of Health and Welfare, Boise; Charles Fawcett, assistant attorney general, Boise, and Mayor Paul Ostyn, Councilman Henry Woodall, Milar and several city employees in the sewer and other departments.

Tax relief move strikes snag

BOISE (UPI) — House taxwriters discovered Friday they cannot provide permanent property tax relief with a simple repeal and appropriation from the state level.

They met to consider floor recommendations for a bill to eliminate four mills of the eight-mill county school levy only to learn that its relationship to other tax laws may require amendment or additional legislation. Accordingly, they held the bill in committee for three working days for further study by a subcommittee.

Dr. Reid Bishop of the State Department of Education sounded the first alarm by pointing out the schools will lose not just $8 million but $8,888,000 if the four mills are repealed.

He said the additional $888,000 represents money the schools would lose from distribution of sales tax funds funneled to the local level in place of the inventory tax. Since these replacement monies are apportioned to local taxing units according to what they levied on personal property a drop of four mills would mean a loss of that share of the replacement funds.

Bishop also expressed concern about the plan to include the state public school appropriation in the $84 million lost at the local level by elimination of the four mills. He said it does not take into consideration future growth as the property tax assessments are phased together at 20 percent of market values.

"I think we need to be sensitive to the economy of the state and nation as it affects the school districts," he said. "The bill is totally silent as to replacement except in the fiscal note (which mentions proposed inclusion in the school appropriation.)"

Evans off boards

BOISE (UPI) — Acting Gov. John V. Evans said Friday he will resign as the director of four corporations and transfer all his stocks to a blind trust before he is sworn in as the next governor of Idaho.

Panel keeps study bill

BOISE (UPI) — The House Education Committee held for further study Friday a bill to appropriate $10,000 for a study of possible course duplication at Lewis-Clark State College.

Weather hampers hunt for Eberle

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — Snow, rain and heavy fog hampered search efforts Friday in the search for a plane flown by T.H. Eberle, a prominent Boise attorney.

Only five planes were able to get into the lowest spots and none got into the higher elevations, said Lt. Michael Lorenz of the Civil Air Patrol. "We do, however, have ground crews in the area."

The search was launched after the single engine Beech Bonanza disappeared from a Federal Aviation Administration radar screen in Los Angeles. The plane was last east of Kingman when it disappeared.

Eberle left Boise about 12:40 p.m. Friday en route to Prescott, Ariz. At 4:30 p.m. Eberle landed the FAA that he was over Boulder, Nev., and was experiencing bad

Smashing time

MALAD (UPI) — Between $5,000 and $6,000 worth of windows were broken in the Malad business district Friday night, Sheriff Kenneth Wharton said.

Wharton said apparently a pellet-gun or b-b gun was used to shoot out windows in at least six businesses.

Kidwell pressing fisheries action

BOISE (UPI) — Attorney General Wayne Kidwell said a suggested tri-state legislative fisheries council would not induce him to back off the lawsuit Idaho has brought before the U.S. Supreme Court.

He said the incident is the second within the last two or three weeks, Wharton said.

Girl, 16, charged

PAYETTE, Idaho (UPI) — Payette Police have arrested a 16-year-old girl and charged her with first-degree murder in the strangulation death of a 2-month-old Payette boy.

William Gregory Moss, son of Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Kautz, died after being found dead Saturday when his parents returned home from a late night job. Kautz is a musician.

Police said the boy died of strangulation, although complete pathology reports have not been received.

The girl was arrested Thursday and was arraigned on the first-degree murder charge Friday before Magistrate Frank Joseph.

Bear River accord near

LOGAN, Utah (UPI) — A Bear River Compact Commission study committee says it is "very close" to a final agreement setting a minimum level for Bear Lake and protecting Utah Power & Light Co.'s water rights.

Two delegates each from Utah, Idaho and Wyoming, and an official from UP&L, met in the commission offices here to discuss two revisions in proposed amendments to the 19-year-old compact.

The study committee Jan. 10 agreed on the concept of establishing a protective level on the Bear Lake, but couldn't decide on a set elevation.

Poaching crackdown proposed

BOISE (UPI) — At the request of the Fish and Game Department, the House Judiciary Committee called for introduction Friday of bills to make big game poaching a felony and to assess civil damages for poaching.

One measure makes it a felony to deliberately and intentionally kill all big game except bear or mountain lion during a closed season or to take more than game than entitled during an open season.

A companion measure sets civil penalties of $1,000 per animal for unlawful killing of elk, caribou, pronghorn antelope, mountain goat, grizzly bear or moose.

It sets penalties of $100 each for other game animals, upland game birds, waterfowl, hawks, owls and song and insectivorous birds.

Shot fatal

BOISE (UPI) — A 4-year-old Boise woman died Saturday morning at a Boise hospital after she was accidentally shot at her home.

Police said Mrs. Virginia Ray Long was fatally injured when a gun being cleaned by her husband, W. K. Long, accidentally discharged.

Police said Long was cleaning several guns and apparently one of them started to slip out of a scabbard and accidentally discharged.

What's ahead for Jimmy Carter?

Devoted to the citizens of Magic Valley... William E. Howard, Publisher... Richard G. High, Managing Editor... Sunday, January 23, 1977

Mormons unfairly singled out

A not too subtle kind of religious discrimination spilled onto the Idaho legislature a few days ago when a paid lobbyist... Idaho's Mormon legislators.

Louise Jones, a lobbyist for the ERA task force and the Women's Caucus charged LDS legislators with a conflict of interest if they voted to rescind Idaho's ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment.

The lobbyist directed membership in the LDS Church while being against the ERA and therefore said legislators who were Mormons couldn't fairly vote on the question of whether to turn out Idaho's ratification of the amendment.

This tortured line of thinking seriously damages the credibility of the ERA Task Force and is bad example of what happens when a political cause turns into a vendetta against a religious group.

Attacking the 32 LDS members in the 195 seats of the Idaho legislature also may seriously damage the chances that the ERA will escape intact from this session of the legislature.

Many-state representatives and senators view the challenge to their LDS colleagues as unwarranted and in bad taste. As a result, there is the distinct possibility some of these legislators who are wavering on the question of whether to repeal Idaho's support of the amendment will swing to the other side simply to show support for their LDS colleagues and constituents back home.

In Magic Valley for example, only one of the legislators in the seven county area is Mormon. But all 12 members of the Magic Valley delegation need the support of LDS voters to be elected. Some of these politicians could well swing their vote against the ERA this time around.

In any event, the blundering attack on the LDS Church won't do any good for the ERA.

Why would a lobbyist take such a cheap shot at the LDS Church, anyway?

The anti-ERA views held by the church are no secret. Why attack them now?

All the LDS state senators voted against the ERA last time a recession move started but it didn't matter. The move died.

Charging LDS legislators with a conflict of interest over their opposition to the ERA denies the realities of the Idaho's legislative districts. A great majority of the voters who sent the Mormon legislators to Boise believe the ERA is a bad idea. The voters would scream if their legislators ever did support the amendment.

The pro-ERA lobbyist should have stopped and examined the absurdity of charging a conflict of interest existed among the Mormon legislators. Aren't the non-Mormon, pro-ERA legislators also guilty of a conflict of interest because they also are subject to external stimuli, which has led them to support the Equal Rights Amendment?

Using Louise Jones' line of thinking, perhaps all the women in the legislature should be excepted from voting on the ERA because they would stand to benefit by it.

Simply because a legislator has a strong religious faith doesn't mean he should be excluded from the Democratic process. LDS Church members sitting in the statehouse certainly are voting their consciences and are voting the way their constituents would want them to vote the ERA.

If anything, their commitment against the ERA is a clear example of how the legislative process works. The legislators honestly believe the ERA is bad and the constituents have given them a clear message how to vote.

In the past the Times-News consistently has supported ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment and opposed efforts to rescind Idaho's ratification. We continue to hold these positions.

But we cannot condone or accept the lobbying efforts being used on behalf of the ERA in Boise.

To suggest discrimination against LDS legislators by asking them not to vote on the ERA question seems as unfair as discriminating against women because of their sex.

WASHINGTON — Jimmy Carter moved into the White House Thursday with one overriding problem: How to reconcile his campaign commitments of innovation in almost every area of government policy with an equally strong promise to bring the federal budget into balance by the end of his four-year term.

The administration will move at a moderate pace in the first 100 days, Carter's aides say, with an emphasis on stimulating the economy, laying the groundwork for reorganization of the executive branch and setting the rest of the rest of his presidency.

Expensive campaign promises — such as national health insurance, welfare reform and doubled expenditures for education — will not begin to be fulfilled for 20 months or more, according to the Carter staff, and, even then, the speed with which they can be implemented will depend largely on the state of the national economy.

Hundreds of major domestic programs, ranging from food-stamp authorizations to water pollution control to farm subsidies, expire this year. Carter plans, for the most part, to ask Congress to continue funding them for another year while the new administration finds its overall policies. Nonetheless, the Carter staff has developed a tentative timetable for action this year. If the deadlines are met, the months ahead will be filled with change and controversy.

Carter promised during his campaign that, in his first week in office, he would pardon all Vietnam draft evaders, and there seems to be no doubt that he will keep that promise. The news will be that the new President says about other war resisters — military deserters, people convicted of crimes while protesting the war and men who received less than honorable discharges from the armed forces.

Within two weeks of taking office, Feb. 3, Carter hopes to send to Congress two legislative enterprises of government reorganization. One bill would give the President authority for four years to reorganize the executive branch, with each specific change subject to veto within 60 days by either house of Congress. The second bill would establish a new Department of Energy and would take a variety of existing energy agencies from around the government and place them in the new department.

Later next month, the administration plans to submit to Congress its legislative package for stimulating the economy. The package will include bills that would expand government job-creating programs and others that would reduce taxes. Additional measures to be introduced in the spring include longer-range economic stimuli.

Bert Lance, the new head of the Office of Management and Budget, has said that he would have the Carter administration's amendments to the Ford administration's budget before Congress by the first of March. That deadline is necessary if Congress is to follow its own schedule for preparing the budget for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1.

Within three weeks of the inauguration, Carter is expected to send Congress messages outlining his recommendations in the areas of energy and the environment. The fuel shortage caused by the extraordinarily cold winter in the East and Middle West may lead to some presidential action much sooner, possibly this month.

Joseph A. Califano Jr., the new secretary of health, education and welfare, has told Congress that draft legislation for restructuring the welfare system would be prepared by the first of May. The proposal will then be circulated throughout the government and around the country and, based on suggestions from experts, revisions will surely be made. It is entirely possible that no welfare legislation will be submitted to Congress this year, and, in any event, it is unlikely that changes will go into effect before October, 1978.

Government tax experts plan to concentrate this year on developing the more equitable tax system that Carter promised during the campaign. The legislation will go to Congress by the end of this year, but no congressional action is likely until next year.

Carter's planners say that other legislation contemplated this year would involve means of holding down health-care costs, ways to make housing programs more attractive to people in the cities, and a new program to target government financial aid where it is most needed. In the last category, the new administration would like to spend more law enforcement assistance money in improving the court system and less on police equipment.

The administration is also likely to press for new regulations on lobbying, conflicts of interest among government officials and campaign finance.

In a 29-page agenda for presidential action in the first six months of the administration, the Carter staff proposed that the President take a two-week tour of the country in March to mobilize support for his domestic program.

The staff recommended that Carter announce during the trip a modest increase in farm price supports, support for strict regulation of strip-mining of coal and legislation that would protect additional wild and scenic rivers.

He promised to reduce the size of the White House staff and increase the influence of the Cabinet, and he said that Vice President Mondale would be given far more authority than any of his predecessors.

He promised that blacks and women would be appointed to high positions throughout his administration.

He said that he would always tell the truth to the public and that he would discharge at once any government official who lied to or misled the public.

He promised a "minimum of secrecy in government and a maximum of privacy in our personal lives," and he pledged to eliminate much of the pomp that has surrounded other Presidents.

The extent to which Carter keeps those commitments will be clear in a few months, and it will be the first test of his administration.

Scranton departs from UN satisfied with performance

UNITED NATIONS — William W. Scranton left the United Nations Tuesday, apparently confident that his 10 months as the United States representative coincided with a reversal of fortunes for American diplomacy in the international arena.

It was hard to find anyone among his diplomatic colleagues, from friendly nations or adversaries, who disagreed very strenuously with that assessment.

"Instinctive anti-Americanism is not fashionable around here any more," one third-world delegate said. "Against the past years of tirades against the United States, for its policies toward the Korean issue, or Israel, or Panama, or even Puerto Rico, that mood represents a clear change."

As he left the United States Mission on First Avenue for his hilltop home in Dalton, Pa., Scranton seemed convinced that the new mood was more than superficial, that it reflected a real evolution in views of the United States and of the function of the United Nations.

"Significant changes in the world situation combined with a more mature tone here to alter the atmosphere for the better," he told the General Assembly in his parting speech. "The United Nations' cup, last year half empty, this year became half full."

Longtime United Nations delegates were ready to give no small credit for the change, at least in the cosmetic aspects most evident in everyday contacts here, to the personal style of the patriotic politician from Pennsylvania.

He made few memorable speeches; he never displayed any striking intellectual grasp of the issues. The administration he won for his political instinct, and his willingness to listen.

Governor Scranton — he was always called by that decade-old title — arrived last March 15 at a time when personal relations were at a low ebb between the United States Mission and the United Nations diplomatic corps.

The former delegate, Daniel P. Moynihan, had adopted a deliberately caustic stance, to stress his point that the United States did not intend to take all the mounting political abuse lightly.

On his arrival, Scranton indicated that, while accepting the premises of the Moynihan policies, his would be an entirely different manner. "Whether it was planned that way or not, it was a real one-two punch," said one American diplomat. "Pat socked them hard and made them all mad, then the Governor came in to pour on the charm."

Scranton eagerly embraced a new diplomatic strategy adopted in the last Moynihan months. Instead of building up public confrontations in the large United Nations forums, American diplomats started working months in advance to win the support of other governments.

through quiet meetings here and in their capitals, on the specific issues that the United States considered most important.

Then, in the heat of debate, Scranton would weigh in with some sharply, almost folksy, remarks that contrasted starkly with the pompousness that abounded from the United Nations restrooms.

"He almost made us feel that we were slighting him personally by voting against the United States," one neutral delegate said. "I don't know how many votes it changed, but it made us uncomfortable."

Working inside his own government, Scranton is widely credited here with playing a major positive role in guiding the evolution of southern Africa toward majority rule. This substantive change, as opposed to the personal style, has probably been the most important contributing factor to the new third-world attitudes toward the United States.

Scranton believes that this is the basis that his successor, Andrew Young, will be able to build upon. "There is now a tremendous opportunity at the United Nations," he says.

Moving back into private life — Scranton declined to discuss his personal plans before his departure — the Governor summed up his brief tenure as a diplomat. "I think we have begun to break the habit of confrontation, and have begun to create the habit of getting together on matters and trying to resolve them."

It was the chief delegate of the Soviet Union, the newly arrived Oleg A. Troyanovsky, who summed up the tributes at Scranton's last Security Council meeting last week. Speaking in English, a rare gesture from a Soviet diplomat, Troyanovsky said of Scranton: "The members of the Security Council, in spite of the comparatively short period of time during which they have had an opportunity to work with him, have come to value highly his personal qualities and diplomatic abilities."

Scranton's departure from the United Nations was a significant event, marking the end of a period of diplomatic tension and the beginning of a new era of more constructive relations.

Radicals split over 'coming out'

BOSTON — The radical Weather Underground movement, struggling to maintain momentum in the post-Vietnam era, has split apart over a plan to come into the open.

The schism appears to reflect heightened and sometimes bitter feminist perception among female radicals, along with the groping of the revolutionary movement for support at a time when mass-seething campuses are quiet and even much of the militance of the black movement seems to have died down.

In a series of documents circulating in radical circles, one faction of the underground organization attacks the group's leaders over and over again as "white male supremacists."

The schism appears to have crystallized over the plan to come into the open, but it involves long-festering differences over tactics and politics, according to the documents, which are being published Tuesday in Take Over, a Madison, Wis., underground newspaper, and other sources.

Bernardine Doherty, one of the most well-known — and accredited — of the radicals, has split with the other four members of the group's Central Committee over the plan, according to the documents.

Miss Doherty had at first supported the plan, but in a tape-recorded message played at a radical conference on the West Coast in December, she recalled her position and attacked her former colleagues as "white, male supremacists."

"I am making this tape to acknowledge, repudiate and denounce the counterrevolutionary politics of the Weather Underground Organization," she said, adding. "The split in the W.U.O. is real."

The underground organization traces its roots to the 1969 breakup of Students for a Democratic Society, the leading white radical group in the turbulent protest days of the 1960s.

White and overwhelmingly upper-middle-class, the group battled police and broke windows in Chicago that fall and went underground the following year. Three of its members were killed in a Greenwich Village townhouse they had turned into a bomb factory in March, 1970, and the group has since claimed responsibility for some 25 bombings.

As has often been the case in white radical circles, the group's current political differences have been argued out in lengthy, academically reasoned position papers that might appear obscure to outsiders.

In these papers, the word "crime," rather than "error," is frequently used to describe the politics of the leadership group, indicating the bitterness of the division.

Ayers and two other members by pseudonyms. Joe Reed and Celia Sojourn.

"These are very serious riots," said Emille de Antonio, who recently made a movie "Underground" showing five of the fugitive radicals.

The film, which Miss Doherty and a group called the "Revolutionary Committee" criticized in such terms as "reeks of white male supremacy," was a part of the plan to surface, according to the documents.

The dissident group charged in its nine-page position paper that the film was intended to "sanitize the image of the organization" and raise money for lawyers.

The plan for surfacing, called "inversion," was formulated by Jones and others beginning in the spring of 1975, the critique said. It included "overtures" to the Democratic party for possible deals in exchange for information about Justice Department "break-ins" under the Republicans, according to the critique.

The criticisms continued, over and over, that the leaders had "abandoned armed struggle," turned away from blacks and watered down their ideology, hoping to attract support from the white working class.

In Boston, for instance, the documents charged, the radicals, who had succeeded in infiltrating anti-busing meetings, vacillated between supporting the black students and charging that busing represented "a major attack against the working class."

In renouncing the politics she helped formulate and lead for the past seven years, Miss Doherty said: "Why did we do this? I don't really know. We followed the classic path of so-called white revolutionaries who sell out the revolution."

Who won with Gilmore's execution?

EXECUTION NOTES — Gary Gilmore's execution remains flattered over the southern Utah desert a few days ago but the questions raised by his execution are far from settled.

Much as we would like to forget his name and his grim fate, we cannot, he deserves a brief eulogy and then, as a nation, we must reflect on why it was necessary to re-institute capital punishment at the expense of this two-bit loser.

A couple of lines in the final stanza of Kris Kristofferson's song "Me and Bobby McGee" could well be the simple, elegiac-for-Gary Gilmore. I'm thinking of the lines:

Nothing ain't worth nothing but it's free;

Gilmore surely was freed from his dead-end life by the Utah firing squad.

He often repeated with a grin he could "die with dignity," somehow concluding that absorbing four bullets in the heart would raise the value of his life a notch or two in the final standings.

Because Gilmore never asked to be spared the oblivion of his death chamber, he was spared the horror hangs in the air after his life has been obliterated.

If he didn't mind dying, and in fact saw his execution as a decree more acceptable than life in prison, why should any of us fret over his demise?

The problem with Gilmore's death was that it raised nasty questions about whether a society should deputize the firing squad, the gallows and the electric chair as friends of the courts.

In his final days Gilmore became a metaphor of a centuries-old debate over capital punishment. He was needed in the lead role of one of civilized society's oldest scripts.

Gilmore cannot be said to have played his part well. He never asked for mercy, and therefore didn't generate much identification with either of the opposing forces which play tug-of-war over the issue of capital punishment.

The two and a half months before his execution became a dreadful series of courtroom dramas as lawyers looted and howled over Gilmore's right to be sent irrevocably to the showers.

Gilmore's admittedly low-budget life lost almost all its worth in the early hours of January 17 as judges and lawyers flicked his life on and off, live-die, live-die right up until eight minutes before he was shot.

The five-man firing squad abruptly edited Gilmore out of the script with four shots to the heart.

If only the suddenly-executed man had smoked a cigarette or asked for restroom privileges there might have been a Judge in some other state who would have nudged the convicted man into the next frame of this melodrama, a frame which would not die.

The legal gyrations in the Utah and federal courts which alternately turned on and cut off Gilmore's life juices clearly suggested nobody has resolved the legal and moral questions raised by the prospective institutionalized killing of this criminal.

Idaho's state legislators and Attorney General epitomized the general confusion over capital punishment when the legislators uniformly cheered the death of Gilmore the same day the Attorney General admitted he wished there was a more humane way to execute people!

What exactly is a humane way to execute people?

Human beings like Gary Gilmore mock both the proponents of capital punishment and the challengers to the state's right to kill.

How satisfying is it to kill a man who views death as a way out? While supporters of the death penalty are quick to argue capital punishment deters crime, Gilmore's preedy rush to the firing line shoots a big hole in that old cliché.

If anything, Gilmore's case suggests some tortured warden may seek the lion's tooth either to gain attention or to end a life which hasn't been a picnic, anyway.

Obviously Gilmore's long record of crime and violence didn't elicit even a glimmer of understanding about how the judicial process works.

There is no evidence whatsoever he worried about getting caught, or that he ever tried to be anything but a criminal, or that he spent a single night perspiring about the thought of the death penalty.

This type of character doesn't fit into the mold of martyr and, therefore, the so-called bleeding hearts who tried to save his life because they opposed capital punishment didn't have much to rave about.

Gilmore's advice to the American Civil Liberties Union who tried to intervene on his behalf was a very succinct "butt out."

The civil libertarians were hard pressed to show any reason why Utah taxpayers should continue to pay $2300 a day to feed, clothe and house Gilmore in the state penitentiary. They knew he wasn't going anywhere and that he was a weight to society.

The only meaningful conclusion to be drawn from Gilmore's execution is that the man sincerely wanted to die and a slow death, as a kind of ultimate "Ritoids" to soothe a troubled soul.

Back among the living, his death doesn't solve much of anything. His execution only bloodies the debate over capital punishment.

More than $100,000 were spent defending Gilmore and hundreds of hours of courtroom time were logged in his case. All he wanted to do was be shot.

The most expedient way to have dealt with Gary Gilmore, and now to deal with the other incorrigibles among the 350 convicts on death row, would be to very quietly and with as little delay as possible, shoot them all.

This would save courtroom time, clear the prisons, permanently eliminate the rift-riff from the streets.

But the expedient course of action was denied Gilmore and it isn't likely to be administered to the other death row inmates in similar predicaments.

Even after Gary Gilmore has been eliminated there remains a lingering fear his death accomplished nothing.

Realistically, no fewer crimes will be committed because he is dead, nor will the lives he took miraculously condense here on Earth.

Instead, the legal and moral debates over a society's right to kill will continue.

As the lawyers talk, the other Gary Gilmore on the loose will continue to live their sordid, violent lives.

Certainly Gilmore probably is better off as ash on the Utah desert, but are we as a society better off for killing him?

Nature Conservancy discourages fishing

Editor, Times-News:

Since I know that your paper contributed greatly to the efforts of the Nature Conservancy in their fund raising drive for Silver Creek, I thought you might be interested in the attached.

Many of my friends in the Twin Falls area share my opinion: therefore if you feel it appropriate, I would appreciate having the enclosed letter published.

Gentlemen:

When your efforts to purchase the Sun Valley Ranch for the preservation of Silver Creek began, my only concern about the project was that your management practices might restrict the enjoyment of this magnificent fishery to the elite. Therefore, before making a contribution, I specifically asked the members of the Idaho Fish and Game Department and Jack Hemingway about their intentions regarding the future of the fishery.

In each instance I was assured that it was the intention to continue the present management practices, which at that time provided a limit of five fish and one in possession of over 14" in length. Given these assurances, I made by contribution and pledge for the future.

Imagine my disappointment over what has actually occurred. Last year the regulations were changed to provide that no fish over 14" could be kept. This year regulations provide that no fish may be kept at all and fishermen must fish with barbless hooks!

I have been fishing this section of Silver Creek for thirty years and have observed that during the past years the trout have steadily diminished in size, despite the restriction of the water to fly fishing only. Privately, employees of the Fish and Game Department tell me that the reason for the lack of trophy trout can be laid squarely at the feet of "catch and release" policies. The stream is simply over-populated. I suspect that all of this fishing snobbery is a reflection of Jack Hemingway's attitude. If he had his way, I am sure that trout would be eliminated from American diet. His influence as a fish and game commissioner for the State of Idaho will be over in April, much to the relief of many.

Well, the Conservancy has now effectively and through the influence of Mr. Hemingway encouraged 99 per cent of the fishermen who loved this area but would like to eat an occasional trout. You have discouraged the hundreds of out-of-state fishermen who visit this area every year — imagine a fly fisherman from California traveling 1,200 miles and being told he can't even keep one fish. Imagine the tie-year-old boy who has caught his first fish on a fly and is told that he has to let it go. My worst suspicions are confirmed, and I confidently predict that within the next few years the Conservancy will find some method to restrict access to the area.

Please cancel my pledge.

'Not again!' writer asks

Editor, Times-News:

Not again! That "right to work for less" committee has again collected a fortune and now wishes to promote its hate for the third time in Idaho.

The "right to work for less" committee with crass aggressiveness, constantly casts about for new victims and new means for disseminating its message of hate.

Its recent attempt to sway the Sigma Delta Chi Society of Professional Journalists was met with the statement that the right to work for less concept was "highly divisive" for our country and for the states that have the law.

If those who head up this work for less committee wish to crush unions, why not the American medical union, or the American dental union, the chamber of commerce, or the national manufacturers union, or even, as a last resort, their own union.

Please, the workers of Idaho are in enough agony now.

Many of us are part-time farmers trying to compete in the market place and only a decent job off the farm keeps us going. So, please send your messages of hate back to Utah and Sen. Jake Garn, who lends his name to such hate.

As far as forcing anyone to join the union, no force is used. If anyone doesn't wish to join a union, let him work for a non-union employer, there are many more of them in Idaho. The main reasons people want to work on union jobs are better wages, good working conditions, great health insurance and pension plans. And how many union members do you know who are on welfare?

As for the full-page advertisement in last Sunday's paper, these people were hand-picked and do not necessarily represent the opinions of the majority of Idaho's working people. If the unions could afford the same type of advertisement, we could conduct our own poll and come up a lot closer to the truth of how the public really feels about the right to work for less.

1080 ban cheered

Editor, Times-News:

The presidential ban on the use of poisons is the greatest thing that ever happened to us to protect our wildlife.

The cry for the use of 1080 made by the sheepman will benefit only a few, 1080 will kill coyotes. It also kills all other flesh eating creatures: eagles, hawks, the family pet.

What is to prevent 1080 from contaminating our streams, lakes and drinking water supply as it is carried into them by the snow runoff or rains. How much 1080 does it take to kill a human?

The U.S. sheep experiment station at Dubois is presently working on some chemicals which cause sterilization of coyotes, referred to as "Reproductive Inhibitors." This mass sterilization can and will be just as deadly to all our wildlife as 1080. If it can be done to one animal, it can be done to another. Rabbits here in our own area in 1963 through 1969.

If this type of mass extermination is not stopped now, there will soon be no wildlife left on the public range. The wildlife on public ground belongs to the public, not to the sheepman or any government agency.

In the past 40 years, I have seen the balance of nature's plenty reduced to a few dwindling specimens. This upset in nature's balance benefited only a few individuals.

It is time that we as concerned citizens band together and stop the destruction of our wildlife. If this means suspension of all grazing permits on public ground, So Be It.

Idahoans dependent on foreign oil

By EARL ADAMS
Idaho State Energy Office

BOISE — Idahoans who value the rugged individualism and hardy independence that characterizes our state might be surprised to learn that without a strong dose of frugal Yankee ingenuity, the future of Idaho's heritage may well lie with foreign lands.

Roughly 97% of the primary energy on which the daily lives and livelihoods of the world's population directly depends comes from fossil fuels which do not exist in Idaho and which occur mostly outside the continental United States.

Moreover, the cost of drilling new oil wells in the fragile Arctic and outer continental shelf, stripping Western surface coal reserves and trying to substitute electricity for petroleum and natural gas may well approach $1 trillion by 1985, an amount equal to 2% of America's net private domestic investment between now and then.

Since energy saved is cheaper and more accessible than energy generated, Idaho's heritage likely depends on our ability to curb energy waste and improve the efficiency of energy use, while developing the unique renewable energy resources that abound within this state.

In 100 years or less, America's hinges changed from a country that depends on sustainable sources for 84% of its energy to one that depends on non-renewable fossil fuels for 97% of its energy. Simultaneously, we've changed from the world's largest oil exporter to the world's largest oil importer.

But oil is not the only finite fossil fuel which we must import. America possesses only 1/5 of the world's coal reserves, and the entire North American Continent contains only 20% of the world's ultimately recoverable natural gas reserves.

Fully 2/3 of the world's coal and lignite reserves occur in Asia, 54% of them in Eastern Europe and the USSR, which also holds 1/3 of the world's recoverable natural gas reserves; and like it or not, 2/3 of the world's ultimately recoverable oil reserves exist in the Persian Gulf.

Such is the reality of world energy sources and supplies, and despite perennial hope to the contrary, new discoveries will not alter significantly this geological fix. In fact, if oil consumption continues to double every 10 years, then a doubling of oil reserves will delay depletion by only one decade.

American production of oil has already peaked, and ultimately recoverable oil reserves are expected to peak by the end of this decade. For American reserves, physical depletion may come by the turn of the century; world reserves probably will last no more than another 15-30 years beyond that.

Energy is the prime mover behind every thought and action. Without it, nothing is possible, and yet geochemists estimate that man is using up fossil fuels at a rate 200 times greater than the Earth can form them.

On this planet, as on all planets—the solar system, all energy (and matter, since E equals MC<sup>2</sup>) comes initially from the sun, a 400 x 10 (11) MW thermonuclear reactor.

About two-billionths of the sun's energy 1800 trillion MW) reaches our biosphere. Part is reflected by the atmosphere, part powers the Earth's myriad ecological systems and part is captured through plant photosynthesis and stored.

What is stored might be called energy capital. What we receive daily from renewable or sustainable sources is energy income. Whereas 100 years ago we relied mostly on energy income, today we rely almost exclusively on energy capital, half of which in America is wasted outright.

Petroleum (40%), coal (38%) and natural gas (19%) provide 97% of the world's primary energy. The remaining 3% comes from hydroelectricity (2%) and nuclear fission, wood, etc. (1%). Man's annual energy conversion rate is 20 times the energy recovered from all agriculture and hunting, three times the world population growth rate, 1/3 of net photosynthesis and roughly equal to the natural outward flux of geothermal heat radiating from the Earth's core.

Whereas under tremendous pressure and heat, nature produces oil in hundreds of millions of years, an average automobile, operating at 10-20% efficiency, consumes one gallon of capture through plant photosynthesis and double by 1985, consumes 1/3 of the world's annual oil production, 2/3 of it in the U.S. where the automobile accounts for 1/3 of America's oil consumption.

In Idaho, the number of registered vehicles comes within 100,000 or less of the state's entire population. Two-thirds of the world's ultimately recoverable oil and 1/2 of its present oil reserves occur in the Persian Gulf; and the World Bank has calculated that if oil costs $8 per barrel and world oil demand increases modestly, then by 1980 five Arab nations (Saudi Arabia, Abu Dhabi, Qatar, Kuwait and Libya) will have accumulated 2/3 of world liquidity.

At the current rate of consumption, neither all U.S. overseas assets nor the annual world oil markets budget could pay for a year's oil in the early 1980's. Yet planners estimate that America will import 10 million barrels of oil per day in 1980 and twice that amount in the mid 1980's. Proven reserves exist in the North Sea and in Alaska's North Slope, and exploration equivalent to one barrel of oil (67 KW) per day costs $100-200. Transport, refining, marketing and distribution cost thousands more. But add to this the cost of exploration and recovery from a smaller resource, and the cost begins to soar.

For example, from the North Sea, expected to produce at the rate of 6-8 million barrels per day, the estimated cost of providing to the consumer the equivalent of an additional barrel of oil per day is $10,000. From the Arctic and the outer continental shelf, the projected cost for each additional barrel of oil in the 1980's is $10,000-25,000.

Whereas it recovers 80% of current gas and surface coal resources, current technology recovers only 30-35% of the oil from a well. To recover a greater percentage of the oil in place, say 55-60%, requires putting more energy down the borehole in the form of steam and the like than the energy that can be recovered as oil.

To take oil's place, the industrial world has turned to new technologies, involving two other fossil fuels — coal and uranium. But in each case, a major part of potential energy is lost in the form of waste heat, making these technologies tremendously capital intensive.

In the production of synthetic gasses and liquids from coal, the cost of delivering to the consumer the energy equivalent of an additional barrel of oil per day is $20,000-50,000. To deliver an equivalent amount of electricity from nuclear combustion costs $150,000, and from nuclear fission — $200,000-300,000.

The lianpung is that electrical generation from coal releases two parts of waste heat for each part electricity. For fission this ratio is approximately three parts waste heat for each part electricity.

The Bechtel Corp. estimates that by 1985 America's current energy program will cost us $1 trillion in 1976 dollars, a figure equal to 2/3 of the country's net private domestic investment during the period between now and then.

In return for this $1 trillion investment, we are expected to get 900 new offshore oil wells, 170 new coal mines, 182 new 900MW coal-fired stations, 140 1,000MW nuclear reactors, 160 hydroelectric plants and 350 gas turbines.

America's current energy costs absorb 1/3 of net private domestic investment. Of the two-fold investment increase expected over the next eight years, 7/10 would be for electrification, a trend of the current energy program which forces 450-800 nuclear reactors, 500-800 huge coal-fired stations and 1,000-1,600 new coal mines by the year 2,000.

Because the majority of energy released by splitting atoms of U-235 or burning coal escapes, a major part of the country's fresh water runoff by 31-49 degrees Fahrenheit in the year 2000.

Moreover, commitment to a long-term coal economy many times the scale of today's makes the doubling of atmospheric carbon dioxide concentration in the next century virtually inevitable. Since atmospheric carbon dioxide acts much like the skin of a greenhouse, confining infra-red rays of sunshine, which the Earth would otherwise radiate back into space, the resulting effect will be higher temperatures across the Earth's surface.

The ultimate standard by which we can measure these plans is whether or not such massive electrification successfully can meet America's projected energy demands. If our energy program cannot satisfy this requirement, then perhaps the returns do not merit the investment.

According to physicist Amory Lovins, if the world's current energy conversion rate persists until the year 2000, we could build one 1,000MW nuclear power plant per day for the rest of this century, and more than 2/3 of our primary energy would still come from fossil fuels.

It is doubtful whether our economy can finance such energy growth and questionable whether massive electrification can meet future energy demands.

Even if we allow that the current energy program is sufficient to solve the problem posed by oil and natural gas shortages, we might still ask how the investment drain of such a capital intensive solution will affect the rest of the economy.

Money, after all, is not an independent entity, but must be referred to real physical resources. The increasing capital intensity of energy technologies means that the energy cost of obtaining useful energy is increasing — and hence, that net energy yields from gross energy resources are declining.

The rapid deployment of energy technologies with long energy payoffs, and large initial investments can lead to an energy deficit on current account. In other words, a crash program to increase energy supply can create an acute energy shortage, simultaneously deferring capital that could finance other energy opportunities.

Prayer for today

Forgiveness is a wonderful thing, dear God. Just to think that, if we ask you, you will forgive everything we have and ever do. The Bible says, "As far as the east is from the west, so far hath he removed our transgressions from us."

It is so great to get rid of that guilty feeling.

Forgiveness is special on the human level, too. In fact, that seems to be a condition of receiving your forgiveness, because Jesus said, "If you forgive not men their trespasses, how can you expect God to forgive you?"

Help us to be able to both give and receive forgiveness.

Uleita Martin.

WELL, THAT TAKES CARE OF THAT ANIMAL GILMORE!

Hussein congratulates Carter

AMMAN, Jordan (UPI) — King Hussein Saturday congratulated President Carter on his inauguration and said "the whole world awaits a Carter peace initiative for the Middle East." The whole world awaits with full hope and confidence your noble initiative for the sake of peace and international justice," the King said in a congratulatory telegram.

Heath opens German boat show

DUESSELDORF, West Germany (UPI) — Former British Prime Minister Edward Heath, an impassioned yachting man himself, Saturday opened the "Boat 77" exhibit. The show features a wide array of water-craft, ranging from small rubber-boats to seagoing yachts. In an address, Heath described the show as "one of the most important boat exhibits in Europe."

More than 1,000 firms from 27 countries are represented in the exhibition which runs until Jan. 30.

Kennedy offers 'cool' comment

CHICAGO (UPI) — Sen. Edward Kennedy, on hand for the opening of the family-owned Apparel Center, said the late Mayor Richard J. Daley once told him, "The Irish will run this city until hell freezes over." Glancing at Acting Mayor Michael Bilandic, who is of Croatian descent and a current favorite to become Daley's permanent successor, Kennedy smiled and said, "But it's been awfully cold around here lately."

Volpe calls on Pope in farewell

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — The outgoing U.S. ambassador to Italy, John A. Volpe, called on Pope Paul VI in a farewell audience Saturday. The former transportation minister and governor of Massachusetts, a Roman Catholic, was accompanied by his wife. Volpe leaves for Washington Monday to brief his successor designated by President Carter, Richard Gardner.

Callaghan, Schmidt meet today

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — British Prime Minister James Callaghan will confer today with German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt on Callaghan's forthcoming meeting with President Carter. Government sources said the world economic situation and the prospects for a world economic conference to be held in the Spring will be the top item on the agenda.

Bolles cited with Zenger award

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) — Slatin newspaper reporter Don Bolles was honored Saturday for "distinguished service in behalf of freedom of the press and the people's right to know." His former boss, responding to presentation of the John Peter Zenger Award to Bolles, delivered a scathing indictment of politicians, businessmen and the general public for failing to react to Bolles' stories about crime and corruption.

Spokane puts Stutz on show

Spokane, Wash. (UPI) — Evel Knievel has two of them, Elvis Presley has four, and the Show of Iran has 12. Spokane only has one Stutz and not for very long. The $55,000 Stutz Blackhawk VI is on show at the 1977 Spokane Auto Show this weekend. The car is made out of 16-gauge steel and trimmed with solid brass. It has a New Zealand lamb carpet. The dashboard is cypress wood. All the handles, locks and switches are 24K gold plate. Even the oil dipstick is goldplated. The Stutz descended from the old Stutz-Bearcat which was discontinued in the 1930's. The new line resumed in 1970. The Torino, Italy factory turns out five Stutzes a month.

Drink ads bring suit

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — General Foods Corp. is being sued for $15 million for using alleged false advertising to promote the sale of its Orange Cappuccino, Cafe Vienna and other international coffees. The suit was filed Friday by San Francisco Consumer Action, Malvina's coffee house and Nora Lohmann. The plaintiffs charged that coffee actually comprised less than a third of the ingredients and, in some instances, less than a fourth. "The principal ingredient of these artificial beverage products is sugar," their action said. A General Foods official, asked to comment on the suit, said he could not tell what proportion of its international coffee line consisted of coffee and what part was sugar.

HOPE, Idaho (UPI) — The retirement community decided to replace part of a municipal water line, but it made the mistake of doing the job itself.

The Idaho Department of Health and Welfare said the 60- and 80-year-olds falling on Roundtop Mountain broke the law. They didn't hire a professional engineer to draft the plans for the project and they didn't get approval from the health agency before starting work. "We don't want to discourage these people from fixing their water system, but they didn't follow the letter of the law," said Gary Sturm, an environmental engineer with the agency. The 94 residents of Hope, in Idaho's panhandle, are repining about one-third of the cast iron pipeline that brings water to the town from a spring on the side of the 6,139-foot mountain. The existing pipeline — 70 years old and three-fourths of a mile long — is so leaky that the water fountain erected near City Hall in 1906 by the Women's Christian Temperance Union doesn't even give a good squirt. "By the time we found out the people of Hope were going to do the job themselves, they had already ordered the pipe," said Sturm. "It wouldn't have helped for us to make a fuss. The city had already put money into the project."

Residents say a contractor would charge $80,000 to do the job and that they can't afford a tax increase. They also object to the teams of government forms necessary to obtain a federal or state grant. "We've scraped together the $10,000 for the pipe," said City Councilman Kernal Clebert. "As it is, the project has exhausted the city's treasury."

Mayor Al Williams said he was a little irritated the officials didn't say the project was illegal until after the city decided to save money with its volunteer labor. "They knew all the time what we were doing," Williams said. "We can do just as well as their engineers can without spending all sorts of money and going through all that red tape."

Eventually the City of Hope may have to hire an engineer.

John Hill, 24, charges double cross

Attica 'brother' seethes

OSSINGING, N.Y. (UPI) — He paces behind prison bars from one day to the next, wearing his hair shoulder length, sporting the turquoise and silver ring that symbolizes his cherished American Indian heritage. John Hill, 24, is the only member of the "Attica Brothers" not fully pardoned for his role in the bloody 1971 uprising that claimed 43 lives in the worst prison riot in United States history. He tries to appear calm, but inside he is seething. "I was doublecrossed," Hill said softly in an interview that took place just three days after his request for parole on a life prison sentence was denied. It was Hill's first public interview since a three-member parole board remanded him to the State Correctional Facility at Ossining — it used to be known as "Sing Sing" and once housed New York's electric chair — for at least two more years, even though Gov. Hugh L. Carey commuted his sentence, making him eligible for immediate parole. Hill was convicted of murdering Attica prison guard John Quinn and sentenced to 20 years in life. He feels the sentence denial resulted from intense pressure by the union representing prison guards. "It was the guard's union who was so upset about letting me out," Hill says.

FBI solves stolen coffee bean case

NEW YORK (UPI) — FBI agents in Staten Island seized 270 bags of green coffee beans, valued at $60,000, that had allegedly been stolen earlier in the day in New Jersey. Anthony DiSimone, 64, was arrested at a garage where the coffee was being loaded onto a Brooklyn coffee company's truck, the FBI said. He was charged with possessing 132-pound coffee bean bags stolen in Bloomsbury, N.J. Last week, agents in Brooklyn seized 200 bags of coffee which had allegedly been stolen. With the cost of coffee rising, a number of such thefts have been reported in recent weeks. The coffee was allegedly taken from a truck of the Consolidated Truck Service while the driver made an overnight stopover in Bloomsbury on route to Chicago, and then transported to Staten Island. A truck belonging to the Midtown House Coffee Co. was loading the bags from a garage at 354 Front St., Staten Island, believed to be DiSimone's place of business, when the arrest was made, the FBI said. Last Jan. 12, FBI agents raided that coffee company, located at 615 Sackett St., Brooklyn, arrested seven persons and reported recovering 280 bags of stolen green coffee beans.

Spud shipment scheduled

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Loading of the first shipment of fresh potatoes to be sent directly from Portland to Europe began this week, business sources reported Saturday.

The Danish ship Doris Skou was scheduled to arrive Sunday will take aboard 7,500 tons of potatoes and 500 tons of onions.

Operations in Eastern Oregon. SimTag is the firm name for the partnership of Pete Taggares, Othello, Wash., and

J. H. Simplot of Idaho, who operates Oregon's largest irrigated farm near Boardman.

Williams-Diamond & Co., Portland, steamship agents, said the Doris Skou will leave Jan. 29 for Antwerp, Belgium. The shipment is valued at about $1.5 million.

Industry sources said the shipment probably is part of an effort to dispose of a major surplus which has been holding potatoes prices down.

Previous shipments of Northwest potatoes have gone through Seattle or Eastern ports. A shipment from the Klamath Basin last year went through a Texas port.

Europe's drought of the last two years has opened markets there to American potatoes but Northwest growers have shared little of the new market because of higher shipping costs than those of Atlantic growers.

Robert Mercer, Denver, Colo., executive vice president of the National Potato Board, said Washington growers had sold potatoes for as little as $1.20 a hundredweight, about half the price a year ago.

Mercer said the most efficient farmers need $2.50 per hundredweight to break even.

The price for Northwest fresh potatoes has been depressed by large supplies still in storage from last year. Oregon producers had nearly one-third more potatoes in storage Jan. 1 than they did a year ago.

Movement of the potatoes by truck from Boardman to Portland began a week ago.

Revamped USDA advised

WASHINGTON (UPI) — If the Agriculture Department wants to avoid the fate of dinosaurs and old extinct creatures, it should bring consumers into a policymaking partnership and maybe even change its name, a group of young executives says.

The blunt advice was contained in a report from the USDA's 1976 Young Executives Committee, 20 middle-level bureaucrats appointed annually to study department operations while continuing their regular jobs.

The USDA in the past regarded farmers and agribusiness firms as its "primary clients," the group said. But in recent years programs such as food stamps have come to dominate its budget, and its activities now directly affect the lives of millions of uniform Americans.

The department's recognized clientele should be broadened to include, in addition to the traditional groups, low-income consumers served through the food assistance programs and consumers in general," it said.

"Only token steps have thus far been made and a sincere effort is now warranted," the panel added.

Incoming Secretary Bob Bergland said last week he intends to bring "consumer voices into the highest policymaking circles" to help shape a joint food-farm policy. Informed sources also said he had proposed appointment of an assistant secretary to oversee consumer affairs, another step suggested by the panel.

The committee said serious consideration should be given to changing the department name to reflect its new scope and functions. Although no specific name was proposed, members discussed possibilities including "Department of Food and Agriculture" or "Department of Food, Agriculture and Resources."

Hagerman boasts 'Einstein' class

The lowest mark scored by the Hagerman Juniors, 12.0 on math concepts, still leaves them a year ahead of national norms. It is the only area where they fell below their counterparts who averaged 12.3.

In spelling, where Idaho students were close to the national norm at 11.4, Hagerman scored 12.2. The Hagerman students hit freshman college levels of 13.0 or more on 10 of the 15 categories of the exam.

"We're proud of them," Mitchell said, "but we don't put that much stock in it. Besides, they might get a big head."

Associate state school superintendent Helen Werner said she hasn't seen the Hagerman results, but she doesn't question the scores.

"Do the scores indicate the test was too easy?"

"I surely wouldn't think so,"

Mrs. Werner said, "because statewide I felt that our scores were very reasonable."

Jim Ross, teacher of U.S. history for the Hagerman eleventh grade, said, "They are a sharp bunch of kids, they really surprised me." But, he said, no special preparation was given to the students.

Ross thought that because the kids live in a rural area they could concentrate more on school work and that parents had more control over their children.

"They still take a little pride in school work," he said.

The English teacher, Larry Hobson, said that hard work has as much to do with the level of the students' achievement as natural talent.

"They're very good students in being quite well disciplined," he said.

"I'm very pleased of course. This class is an outstanding class," Hobson said.

More missiles

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Without a new missile program, the Soviet Union could have 7 to 10 new missile systems by 1983, according to a Washington think tank expert.

Lewis Allen Frank, in a weekend report for the American Enterprise Institute, projects the development of an imaginary Soviet military planner, working only from public knowledge of U.S. intentions and capabilities.

Frank says the Soviet planner would press for new weapons to outsize Soviet missile power.

Next in line?

RETIREE Army Lt. Gen. James M. Gavin, 69, is reportedly being seriously considered as a nominee for Central Intelligence Agency director, but President Carter said Saturday he hasn't made any decision.

Fritz starts trip

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Vice President Walter Mondale leaves today on a globe-circling visit to America's key allies, prepared to restate a commitment to freedom in West Berlin and to consult Japan about withdrawing U.S. troops from South Korea.

Administration sources cited these items Saturday as proof that Mondale's mission — as President Carter's emissary on a nine-day, six-nation trip — will be "more substantive than symbolic."

But they also said the Vice President will carry on "blueprint" for fresh foreign policy initiatives, because the administration is still too young for such bold strokes.

Presidential press secretary Jody Powell said Carter values Mondale "as a personal friend as well as a chief policy and political adviser," and he will speak for the "President" on this trip.

The two men conferred Saturday with National Security Council advisers.

They were also to meet briefly Sunday morning before the Vice President boards Air Force Two for the 22,170 mile trip.

First stop is Brussels, where Mondale will consult NATO and European community leaders. Then, in order of stops, he moves on for meetings with state and government chiefs in Bonn, Rome, Paris, London and Tokyo.

Between Bonn and Rome, he will also pay a brief visit to West Berlin, the divided city that symbolizes the East-West conflict.

A special audience with Pope Paul VI is included in the Rome stop, and Mondale returns to Washington Feb. 1.

But perhaps the most delicate diplomatic task of the entire trip awaits Mondale at his last stop, in Tokyo, where the sources said he will "certainly" sound out the Japanese on a prospective, gradual withdrawal of U.S. ground troops from South Korea.

NSC setup streamlined

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter personally has overhauled the organizational system of the National Security Council set up by former President Richard M. Nixon and former Secretary of State Henry M. Kissinger.

White House Press Secretary Jody Powell said Saturday instead of the seven committees, there will be only two — committees on policy review, chaired by department officials, and special coordination, chaired by National Security Adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski.

Drug users into dock

GLASGOW, Scotland (UPI) — Nine sailors aboard the U.S. nuclear submarine Casimir Pulaski have been charged with drug offenses by American military authorities.

Navy spokesman said Saturday.

The nine seamen appeared before their commanding officer at Submarine Squadron 1 at Holy Loch, the Polaris submarine base on Scotland's west coast, the spokesman said.

They admitted the offenses, the spokesman said, and were removed from submarine duty according to Navy rules.

Colombia strikes coffee smugglers

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — The Army has launched a surveillance campaign along coasts, highways and trade centers in an effort to halt illegal coffee exports which totaled an estimated one million bags last year.

The campaign will also be directed against falsified export documents which enable coffee smugglers to get large amounts of coffee out of the country.

Illegal exports accounted for 10 to 15 per cent of the nation's total exports of coffee last year. Colombia is the world's largest exporter of mild coffee. It exported some seven million sacks last year.

President Alfonso Lopez Michelsen said in a nationally televised speech last weekend that most of illegal coffee exports were accomplished through falsified export documents.

For example, Lopez said an export document allowing export of 200 sacks of coffee is easily altered to read 2,000 sacks.

The president announced a strict system to uncover falsified documents, and limited the transport of coffee to certain highway routes and main ports.

Soviet airliner falls

MOSCOW (UPI) — A Soviet TU104 airliner exploded in the sky and crashed last week as it tried to land at the central Asian city of Alma-Ata, killing at least 90 persons, unofficial sources said Saturday.

Reports of the crash reached Moscow through foreigners living in Alma-Ata.

They quoted witnesses and personnel of the Soviet Aerlot Airline as saying the crash occurred Jan. 13 and there were no survivors. The report variously said the plane carried 90, 92 or 96 crew and passengers.

The plane, exploded at an altitude of 3,200 feet and crashed into an open field, the reports said.

Futures markets focus on reports

(Courtesy Sinclair & Co.)
CHICAGO — Cattle on feed and planting intentions reports were the principal focus of the futures markets Friday, though neither appeared until after the day's trading ended.
The 23 state cattle on feed report — about in line with anticipated figures — showed 3 per cent fewer cattle on feed as of Jan. 1 than a year ago. The Jan. 1 total was 11.92 million head, down from 12.32 million. For the fourth quarter of 1976, 8.75 million head were placed on feed, with 5.59 million head marketed in that period.
Chicago Board of members reacted with surprise to the corn planting intention report, which showed — 84.5 million acres, well above the estimate in the trade and 2 million acres above the survey of floor traders. The consensus was bearish.
For soybeans, planting intentions were listed at 33.5 million acres, about in line with trade thinking. The report was considered neutral. Durum and other spring wheat plantings were down 40 and 10, per cent, respectively, with that ground apparently being switched to soybeans.

In the day's futures trading, Maine potatoes settled 6 to 11 cents lower in the active months, distant November the only gainer at 5.70 per hundredweight, up 5. Volume was light at 1,275 cars. Cash barely held steady.
Live cattle closed near the day's highs, gains ranging from 37 points in February to 7 in December. Volume was 8,735 contracts.
Feeder cuts gained 20 to 70 points, the front month leading. Volume was 369 contracts.
Live hogs were slightly higher, up 10 to 57 points in which held in a heavy trade narrow range.
Pork bellies closed 42 to 50 points down, at or near the day's lows on moderately heavy volume. Late liquidation and speculative selling applies pressure.

Wheat showed minor fluctuations, trading in a narrow range and closing mixed, mostly easier. March through September were 1/4 cent to 3/4 cent down with December and distant March half a cent higher and nominally a cent higher.

Corn closed mixed on light short covering which lifted nearby from unchanged to a half cent up.
Evening up marked a generally well rounded soybean trade, with beans 4 1/2 to 1 1/2 cents down in old crop contracts and unchanged to a half cent higher in the new. Meal was 200 to 50 cents lower and all 7 to 8 points higher.
New York Comex gold closed 50 points down after recovering from losses of over 200 on overruns buying in the afternoon. Volume was 3,263 lots.
New York Comex silver closed higher by 110 to 50 points on an estimated 7,300 lots, after late short covering carried it to the season's highs.

Idaho's building on rise

TWIN FALLS — The construction industry in Idaho experienced a highly successful year in 1976, according to the Idaho Construction Report, a publication of First Security Bank of Idaho, N.A., said Kenneth J. Neuman, vice president and manager.
The letter is edited by Dr. Kelly K. Matthews, vice president and economist of First Security Company, a company of First Security Corporation.
Building permit construction activity in December, while declining seasonally from the November pace, remained sharply above last year.
Total construction value for authorized building permit construction in 47 major Idaho locations during 1976 was $35.68 million or 19.2 per cent above the 1975 level.
Non-residential construction for 9,385 dwelling units totaled $24.28 million an increase of 19.3 per cent in number and an increase of 25.3 per cent in value compared with a year ago.
Non-residential construction valued at $85.88 million in 1976 was up 28.9 per cent after alterations and repairs totaling $53.31 million were 9.8 per cent below last year.
According to the report, the average value for each dwelling unit permit issued (including multiple-dwelling units and mobile homes) was $23,898 in 1976, compared with $22,714 in 1975. The outlook for residential and non-residential construction in Idaho during 1977 remains favorable.

Feds seek 85 top speedometer mark

©Newhouse News Service
WASHINGTON — Federal safety officials want to set 85 m.p.h. as the maximum speedometer reading on 1980 cars to reduce the temptation (NHTSA), which drew up the proposed regulation, also believes that setting 85 m.p.h. as the top number would allow speedometer dials to be more precisely calibrated and easier to read.

Two of Detroit's big four auto makers, Ford and General Motors, have voluntarily begun equipping some models with an upper reading of 85. Chrysler and American Motors have told the safety agency they plan reductions to 100 m.p.h.

Speedometers in the past have commonly registered 120 m.p.h. or higher.
NHTSA, which has been considering the proposal in various forms for nine years, expects several safety benefits to accrue if the regulation is adopted.
"First, whatever temptation present speedometers provide immature drivers to test the top speed of their vehicles will be diminished," the agency says.

"Second, shifting the indication for 50 or 60 m.p.h. from the center of the speedometer dial nearer to the right end should suggest to drivers that these speeds are near the legal limit."
Safety officials estimate fitting the speedometer limit would result in 125 fewer fatal accidents and 1,500 fewer injuries annually.
When Ford and General Motors told the agency last year that they would begin phasing in speedometers with 85 m.p.h. as the maximum reading, they said there was no hard evidence to prove the change would reduce speeding or accidents, but agreed there was nothing to lose.

The proposal would have no effect on the speed a vehicle is capable of attaining and would apply to both foreign and domestic models manufactured after Sept. 1, 1979 — the 1980 models.

Theisen firm tops in nation

TWIN FALLS — Theisen Motors, Inc., Twin Falls, has again earned the number one ranking Lincoln-Mercury dealers in the United States.
Emmett Harrison, president of the firm, has received a message from J.W. Smith, Denver district sales manager, informing him that the Twin Falls auto dealership attained its honor through the number of Lincoln and Mercury autos sold during 1976.
Registration figures for 1976 on new car sales compiled for the state of Idaho show that of 1,756 new autos of all makes registered in the Twin Falls County during 1976 there were 505 included Mercury and 99 Lincoln vehicles.
"Termining the share of the Twin Falls market achieved by Theisen "an unmatched performance." Smith commented the firm for its "outstanding representation" and expressed his personal appreciation.

Power line cost set at $34 million

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho Power Co. said today it expects to invest $312 million in new transmission distribution facilities this year to meet the requirements of an additional 53,000 customers in 1977.
Company president James Bruce said a single year customer growth record was set in 1976 and the anticipated outlay for lines and substations is the largest in the company's 60-year history.
Some $22 million of the outlay will be spent on transmission facilities and substations to distribute the power.
Bruce said last year the customer load increased by almost 10,000 new customers and the increase through the coming year necessitates an expansion of service and "rebuilding or strengthening of existing facilities."
The company's president noted improved conservation efforts by subscribers.

Kellwood pays again

ST. LOUIS — Kellwood Co. has declared a quarterly dividend of 20 cents per common share, payable March 1 to shareholders of record Feb. 10.
The dividend, the company's 61st consecutive payment, will be distributed to more than 5,000 shareholders nationwide.
Kellwood, a leading manufacturer of apparel, home fashions and recreation equipment, operates a laundry plant in Twin Falls.

Firm sold

SALT LAKE CITY — George J. Blizes Jr., president, American-Strevell, and Warren McCain, chairman and chief executive officer of Albertson's, said the sale of Albertson's Mountain States Wholesale Grocery Co. will be consummated Jan. 30.
The purchase includes all assets of Mountain States in Boise, the 150,000 square foot food distribution center, inventory and equipment; Boise Fruit Co., a distributor of fresh fruits and vegetables; Ontario Grocery Co., Ontario, Ore., a food distribution center, and Modern Foods, a food service and institutional supplier.
American-Strevell will continue to supply such retailers as Foodland/Clover Farm, Warehams, Mr. D's, and others in Western Idaho and Eastern Oregon.

Insurance man cited

TWIN FALLS — Raymond L. Mayo, Twin Falls, has qualified among Beneficial Life Insurance Company's top 20 agents for 1976, President Douglas H. Smith has announced.
In earning this distinction, Mayo placed in the upper 2 per cent of the company's agents as to his personal insurance production.
This past year, Mayo has numbered in Beneficial's exclusive Executive Club, and was a featured speaker at the annual convention. A popular lecturer, he taught adult education courses in finance and human relations aside from his occupation.
"Mayo, who holds a B.A. from BYU and an M.B.A. degree from Indiana University, moved to Twin Falls a year and a half ago with his wife Leanne and their six children. He is a member of the Ralph J. Hill Agency.

Sales chief designated

TWIN FALLS — Jens H. Noet will serve as Twin Falls sales manager for Chism Homes, Inc., an interstate real estate development and home building corporation.
Chism Homes are being built, presently in the new Sierra Estates subdivision in northwest Twin Falls.
Noet will coordinate the cooperative sales effort in the subdivision and will work with American Real Estate and Appraisal, Gen. State Realty, Globe Realty and Mike Gray. Noet is promoting sales of homes there.
"Noet recently retired from Household Finance Corp. after 25 years. He was a division Real Estate Manager and served the company in Milwaukee, Chicago and Los Angeles.

Ruling may end chemical use

By KEN HODGE
Times-News writer

MAGIC VALLEY — Southern Idaho irrigators say they don't know how much longer they will be able to use certain chemicals to keep moss out of their canal systems.

"We've got them for now," Clifford Montgomery, manager of the Twin Falls Canal Co., said about certain moss-inhibiting chemicals his company uses. "But we don't know for how long."

About 30 irrigator districts in Southern Idaho are watching with concern the registration procedures of the Environmental Protection Agency which may deny them the use of xylene and acrolein. The chemicals they say are essential to moss-free canals.

"I wouldn't live without it," Fred Diehl, manager of the Magic Canal Co., said. "Xylene." "We spend about $20,000 a year on it."

But, clean canals or not, the EPA has been ordered to clean up the books on which chemicals have been registered freely since 1956.

Bill Freutel, state pesticides coordinator for EPA in Idaho, said, "Congress has told us we will have to reregister and re-evaluate all 48,000 products on the market for pesticidal purposes. That includes herbicides, herbicides and fungicides."

He said any chemicals which came out on the market have been automatically registered ever since the practice of registration was initiated in 1956.

"In 1964 we got the authority to refuse to register chemicals," Freutel explained. "Then we started requiring evidence that they worked as indicated on the label."

And Freutel said in 1972 the Pesticide Control Act made EPA responsible for showing that products on the market "when used as directed would not be injurious to the user or the environment."

"This is what triggered the reregistration," Freutel explained. "We got to looking at the data we had and a lot of products did not have the right toxicity data."

Floyd Oliver, regional agronomist for the Bureau of Reclamation in Boise, said, "Each chemical will be called up in logical sequence for registration. At that time EPA will in effect advise the manufacturer of them what additional information is needed in the way of data in order to reregister the product."

"At present," Oliver said, "EPA is requiring issued reregistration requirements on xylene or acrolein."

"I can't give you a date on these pesticides or any others right now," George Laroche of the EPA in Washington, D.C., said. "The schedules previously announced are not to be relied upon."

One problem Diehl expects to occur is the unwillingness of the chemical manufacturers to make the three kinds of tests which may be required by the EPA in order to determine if the chemicals can be used safely.

"The use of xylene, (the chemical his company uses most) for mowing is a small use of it," Diehl said. "There are bigger markets for it elsewhere."

"When they have to lay out $2 million for these experiments for EPA, it becomes so expensive they can't do it," Diehl added.

"In the interim, the irrigators say they will continue to use the chemicals until EPA rules on them."

"We're really concerned with xylene," Freutel said. "We are requiring three types of additional testing on the part of the manufacturer."

But right now the products are legal, and Freutel said the data conflict over the effects of the chemical he said.

But the tests must be made to determine if the chemicals have no "unreasonable effects on the environment," Freutel said.

"It leaves Idaho out on a limb with nothing to take moss or weeds out of their canals."

Freutel said about the possible outlawing of xylene. "If they didn't have anything like those it would eventually be very dangerous in Idaho agriculture."

Diehl said his crews used to use chains pulled by tractors or horses to drag the moss from the canals before the advent of chemicals.

"You have to hire a crew to get the work done," Diehl said. "Or turn the canal dry for a week. It has to be the hot time of the year because that's when the algal dry it grows out."

He said crops would suffer if the canals were shut off during the hottest part of the summer.

"With chemicals, all the extra labor is unnecessary since the materials can be put in at the head of all the laterals."

"You have to make three or four treatments a year," Diehl said. "The chemicals suppress it (moss), but it'll come back."

"We're not trying to cut the product out of the environment," Freutel said. "EPA is concerned about the production of food, but we want to do it safely and efficiently."

Lambs gain, ewes steady on IF mari

IDAHO FALLS -- Lambs were 1.00 higher with ewes steady at the Idaho Livestock Auction this past week.

An estimated 492 sheep, 235 hogs and 2,000 head of cattle were sold.

Light fat lambs brought 48.00-49.00; heavy fat lambs 42.00-46.00; light feeder lambs 48.00-49.50; heavy feeder lambs 45.00-47.00; odd mutton feeder lambs 40.00 and down; light fat ewes 12.00-13.00; canner ewes and bucks 7.50-11.00; young ewes 30.00-50.00 per head.

BURLEY — The University of Idaho Cooperative Extension Service is putting on a sheep school for interested sheepmen.

The school will be held at the Ramada Inn in Burley on Feb. 1 at 10 a.m.

Two highly qualified sheep veterinarians, Dr. Richard Hall, the extension veterinarian in charge of the Caldwell Vet Research and Lab, and Dr. Robert Simons, the Idaho Sheep Commission veterinarian, will be speaking along with William F. Hazen, the Twin Falls extension agricultural agent. There will be various field demonstrations during the afternoon.

Prof defends farm chemical use

FOREST GROVE, Ore. — A California professor said at a seminar on pesticides Thursday that the nation's agricultural community can't afford to stop using the chemicals.

"We can't afford to fritter away our tools of production for emotional, vague and ungrounded reasons," said Dr. Boyale Day, professor of plant pathology at the University of California-Berkeley.

"The real hazards from these chemicals are not to people or to animals, he said, but to plants. "Whenever we do have a real hazard I'm the first one to say get rid of it. On the other hand, we need to carefully study these substances on a case by case basis."

Day referred to present day techniques as "the Stone Age of pesticides." He said the ongoing Revolution in agriculture is mechanization, as opposed to chemicalization.

Day said herbicide 2,4-D has the same level of toxicity as arsenic and paint. Referring to plans to certify those using certain herbicides, he remarked, "If we have government requirements that we certify those who use these pesticides then we should do the same thing to the jerk down at the gas station who fills your oil can."

The day-long seminar at Pacific University was sponsored by the Western Environmental Trade Association because the State Department of Agriculture is considering restricting the use of herbicides containing the chemical 2,4,5-T.

A spokesman for the state, Bill Kossman, told participants that the decision won't be made for at least 30 days.

Eric L. Drack, a U.S. Department of Agriculture spokesman from Washington, D.C., said the "proper use of pesticides is imperative in the future, and outlined new regulations requiring certification of those using certain pesticides.

"I think this is a major step in the right direction, and one the agricultural community supports," Drack said.

Newark, of Oregon Student Public Interest Research Group explained the results of a survey conducted last fall, which showed that 36 of 54 retail outlets in eight Oregon cities surveyed were recommending home use of herbicides containing 2,4,5-T, which was banned from home and recreational use six years ago.

Newark said OSPIRG notified the Environmental Protection Agency of the violations and the agency sent warning letters to many of the stores.

Lane County Commissioner

Robert Woods told of the county's decision to temporarily suspend use of 2,4,5-T in its road maintenance program. Much of the evidence presented at a commission hearing was in total conflict over the effects of the chemical, he said.

The county "did a very responsible thing" in banning use of the herbicide pending further data, Woods said.

Robert Buss, chief of the pesticides branch of the EPA office in Seattle, outlined problems federal officials have faced in deciding on future regulations for the use of 2,4,5-T and other herbicides.

Pass said a public hearing in Seattle on March 17 and 18 will discuss implementation of two new federal acts — the Toxic Substances Control Act and the Resources Conservation Recovery Act.

"The provisions for the disposal of hazardous materials will have far reaching impact, and we feel, sincerely, we've got to have public input before the regulations are put together," Pass said.

No women priests

By LARRY SWISHER
Times-News writer

BOISE — Idaho's Episcopal bishop, Hantford King, says he will not ordain women in the state despite recent national approval of women priests.

Several women were unofficially ordained in Episcopal churches in Philadelphia and Washington, D.C., in 1974 and 1975.

Fog, moisture may stick around

Twin Falls, Burley-Rupert and Northside areas: Continued areas of fog with a little snow or freezing drizzle through Monday. Overnight lows mid-tens to low 20's. Highs upper 20s to mid 30s both days.

Halley, Camas Prairie and Upper Wood River Valley: Patchy areas of night and morning fog, otherwise partial clearing with a few light flurries through Monday. Overnight lows 0 to 15 and highs both days in the 30's.

Synopsis: The persistent high pressure which has dominated the region for many weeks now is likely to continue. A weak storm which brushed past southern Idaho Saturday night causing a little light snow in the extreme southern portion, has moved southeast out of the area.

Not much change in temperatures is expected during the next several days. The high temperatures in the foggy lower valleys will remain in the 20's to low 30's, while the higher elevations will be warmer with a few readings reaching 40. Lows at night will continue about as they have been, ranging down to zero in the mountains and in the 20's in the valleys.

The extended outlook into mid-week calls for the dry weather and areas of fog continuing.

Cost nettles Burley man

BURLEY — A former Burley City Council candidate is "very grateful" for street improvements, but unhappy about the appointment of costs on a local improvement district.

David Peck, a candidate for council a year ago, complained to the City Council this week that he was overcharged for legal and engineering fees in connection with the LID project on southern Hilland Avenue.

Peck contended he was paying a second time for work already done in connection with his property.

"I'm very grateful to have the paved streets," he said, but objected to paying legal and engineering fees equally with owners of property 2 1/2 times his own improved frontage.

Because of earlier improvements on part of his property, Peck said, only 4,260 square feet of his property was part of the LID project and he was assessed on that basis for construction work.

Engineering and legal fees, however, were assessed equally among the 42 property owners.

City Attorney William Parsons said he could not render an opinion on the propriety of equal assessment without researching the subject. Mayor Chuck Shatt-

Expansion planned

RUPERT — Rupert is expanding its reserve police force.

Police Chief Ed Culver said the reserves board wants to increase the force to 15 men. He received authorization from the City Council this week.

The previous reserve total was 12.

Culver said about two reserves will be dropping and the board anticipates signing about 5 more men to make the 15.

The council this week accepted a bid of $9,901.22 for purchase of two police cars with trade-ins. The bid was by Warner Bros.

The council rejected the other bid, by Goode Motors for $6,500, because it failed to include a bid bond or check.

A thought for the day: American author James Fields said, "How sweet and plious, even in common speech, is that, fine sense, which men call courtesy."

Insult, injury also

TWIN FALLS — A 16-year-old Twin Falls boy suffered both insult and injury prior to the Burley and Twin Falls basketball game Tuesday night.

Police Chief Frank Barnett said Terry Butler, 16, and a friend, John Anderson, 19, were walking through the high school parking lot here when a Burley licensed vehicle backed into Butler, knocking him to the ground.

Witnesses told police the driver of the vehicle got out and hit Butler in the eye and then drove away. Driver of the vehicle has not been determined.

CYCLONE

Stirs up a storm with race-inspired styling

If you take the fun of trail riding seriously, take a serious look at Cyclone... the trail sled that looks and handles like a race sled.

Cyclone, a fan-cooled powerhouse, has many of the same features that led the Highpole for many a Liquinator to victory in five of eight cross-country races last season.

Road-worthy engine—340 or 440cc—placed low over the skis for superb handling on washboard trails. Wide 32-inch ski stance and 72-inch wheelbase provide stability on hills and switchbacks. Low-slung hood gives a clear view of the trail ahead... cuts wind resistance. Low, CD Ignition Disk, provides a firm, fast stop.

Reay sees school help handicapped

By LORAYNE Q. SMITH
Times-News writer

GOODYING — When Ed Reay became superintendent of the Idaho State School in 1952, there were 102 deaf and blind students on a campus with seven buildings.

When he retires Aug. 31 the school will be serving nearly 400 students through its combined residential, satellite and itinerant programs from a campus with double the number of buildings.

Reay estimates the replacement value of the seven new structures built during his administration at nearly $2 million. But probably more important, he feels, is the increase in the number of handicapped children and youths being led toward a more normal life.

While there were only 37 blind and 65 deaf children in the school in 1956, Reay says, "There were just as many (handicapped) children in Idaho, but they weren't in this school."

Today the state school has 134 resident students, of which 95 are deaf, 22 blind and 17 both deaf and blind. In addition, another 100 are helped through the school's itinerant program under which teachers work in the public schools and 49 more children are involved in the satellite program.

The satellite program began in Magie Valley in recent years and provides opportunity for state school personnel to work with parents to help them learn how to cope with their child's handicap. In cases of hearing problems this means having parents begin early with teaching communication — such as sign language.

"I used to be," Reay said, "parents would wait until a child got through a couple of grades and was way behind in his work before they'd realize he needed special help."

Asked how the state school has increased the number of students over the last 21 years, Reay said, "We did a lot of field work."

He said they used to have a deaf child come to the school at age 6 and "he didn't even know his name."

By contrast, a blind child at that age "could talk your arm off," Reay said.

Reay says he believes one major accomplishment of his years at the Gooding institution was a legislative change in 1961, allowing the state school to have children on campus under the age of 6.

"We started by saying if a 1-year-old was too babyish and didn't want to stay, we'd send him home," Reay said. But none of the pre-school children who have come since then have wanted to go back home.

The physical appearance of the south edge of Gooding has changed considerably during Reay's administration. In 1952 the superintendent's residence was built and a dining hall and infirmary in 1962. The building of a girls' dormitory followed in 1963 and a swimming pool was added in 1965.

A new structure to house the primary school for the deaf and administration offices was built in 1968 and the latest addition, a classroom building for the blind which also holds the superintendent's residence, was completed in 1975.

The latter building replaced the old administration building where Reay said his living quarters were "across the hall from the office, down the hall from classrooms with the kitchen downstairs."

Reay first became interested in teaching the deaf when he was an undergraduate at Illinois State College in Jacksonville. The campus was only a "half block" from the Illinois State School for the deaf and many of the state's friends worked on the state school campus.

Many of the students trained in the field and went on to become superintendents of schools for the deaf throughout the U.S., Reay said.

He was taught in Iowa and Illinois and received his M.S. degree from University of Massachusetts at Amherst and a teaching certificate from Clark School for the Deaf at North Hampton, Mass.

After World War IV he received an M.A. in administration at Gallaudet College, Washington, D.C. the only college in the country solely for the deaf. He also has done graduate work at Portland State University, Oregon.

Reay served as principal of the schools for the deaf in Kansas and Washington and then went to Florida to hold a similar position. He had been in Florida only one year when the Idaho post became vacant. The (Idaho) said he had tried to "take the good things he'd seen" at the other institutions where he had served and apply them in Idaho.

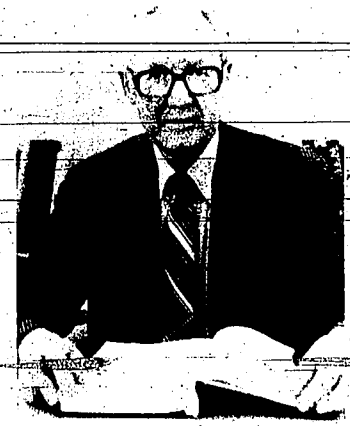

Reay feels that early acceptance and training of children with hearing or sight loss is the most vital factor in his work.

Reay claims the satellite and itinerant programs have increased awareness both in the public schools and among parents of the handicapped child.

There is more public acceptance of handicapped children, Reay believes, than there used to be. Now more parents accept the fact that if deaf children are going to be able to communicate they may have to learn sign language, he said.

During his years at the state school in Gooding, the staff has grown from 133 to 530. This includes employees in maintenance, food, and household service and dormitory care as well as 22 employees who are with the satellite and itinerant programs.

Twelve employees are involved in care for the 17 children both deaf and blind, who require extra care because they have additional health and physical disabilities. These children are the victims of the rubella epidemic about a decade ago, Reay said.

Chamber selects leader

KETCHUM — The Ketchum-Sun Valley Chamber of Commerce elected a woman president Monday for the third time in the chamber's history.

Sandy Koenig, former co-owner and current manager of the Tyrolean Lodge in Ketchum, was unanimously elected to the position Monday afternoon by the chamber board of directors.

The election was held because of the recent resignation of former Chamber President Alexander S. Henderson, whose business interests outside the area precluded his being here full-time.

Elected as chamber vice president was Terry Cole, head of recreation for Elkhorn at Sun Valley.

"I intend to continue the programs of the past president," Mrs. Koenig told the board of directors.

"Particularly important is the reorganization of the board to increase active participation of our general membership in chamber activities."

Mrs. Koenig was instrumental in starting the Ketchum area Motel Lodging Association.

Gooding sponsors breakfast

GOODING — The Gooding Chamber of Commerce will sponsor a series of legislative breakfasts, beginning Tuesday at 7 a.m. in the Lincoln Inn.

Jan Rock, publicity chairman, said chamber members and friends are invited as well as anyone interested in discussing issues before the current Idaho Legislature.

Chamber members will have direct telephone communication with Gooding County legislators during the breakfasts, which will be held every two weeks "as long as there is sufficient interest."

Mrs. Rock said: "By being able to question legislators directly about bills before they are passed, we will be able to get our information in time to take stands and be able to influence legislation more effectively," she said.

Jim Hines is the new chamber president, having succeeded Mrs. Rock. Walt Locke is first vice president and Rick Stevens is second vice president.

Valley comment

QUESTION:
What is your opinion of Pres. Carter's pardon of draft evaders?

Tom Edgell, Twin Falls:
I don't think very much of it, because I'm a vet. If the won't go in the Army, lock him up or send him away somewhere.

Thena Farmer, Twin Falls:
I don't believe in it, because I feel it's wrong. Just think, boys have fought and lost legs and arms and these boys (the draft evaders) should have fought, too.

Tip Rowe, Twin Falls:
I fought in World War II and I didn't desert or hang back. I feel if these boys were called on, they should have gotten in there and tried. I don't feel they should get off Scot free.

Doug Brown, Wendell:
I think it's a real drag. I went over myself and spent some time. They copped out and didn't pay the price and now they're getting a free ride. They made their choice and I don't think they should get a free ride now.

Patsy Morrow, Twin Falls:
I think it's real good he did that. It's about time. The war's been over a long time. And now they can come home and see their families. Really, they've paid their price. I don't blame them for dodging. I wouldn't have wanted to go.

Gloria McIntyre, Twin Falls:
I feel that they should have to do something to make up for it. It's not fair for them to come back. But they should have to do something or everybody would run away.

Mark Morrow, Twin Falls:
I think it's a pretty good deal myself. I think you should have the right to go to war or not. If you're in the fighting I don't think you should desert.

Bill Miller, Twin Falls:
I would hate to be in their situation. The country was built on the integrity of the people. I didn't want to go to Vietnam either, but if I did I think I would have stood it out. But I think he made a decision that the people would have given if there had been a vote on it.

Ruth Chaffee, Twin Falls:
I think that in some cases it was good but not all of them. I think some evaded the draft for other than anti-war reasons. But I'm not sure at this time that he didn't do the right thing. We all change our opinions over time and I think some of these boys have probably changed, too.

Suit may affect Gem power rates

By BILL LAZARUS
TWIN FALLS — The Portland City Council next week is scheduled to consider undertaking a lawsuit which could result, in sharply reduced electric rates in Idaho.

Portland City Commissioner Francis Ivanice is opposing that the city challenge the Bonneville Power Administration's marketing of electricity from federal hydroelectric dams.

"There's around 4,000 megawatts of low-cost hydropower in the BPA system. That should be supplied to all the homes and the farms of the region on an equal basis," Ivanice said in an interview.

Electric costs, he predicted, would drop by at least 25 per cent for homes and farms not now being served by BPA hydroelectric power.

If his plan is not adopted, he said, farmers and lumbermen can expect their electric bills to double in the next few years due to increased use of high-cost nuclear and coal-fired power plants.

He said the inexpensive BPA hydropower is plentiful enough to supply all homes and farms in Idaho, Oregon, Washington and western Montana.

Industries would buy the remaining hydropower and would purchase costly power generated from nuclear and coal-fired power plants to cover the rest of their power needs.

Ivanice, who is responsible for public utilities as city commissioner, cited the Bonneville Power Act of 1937 in support of his contention that the cheap hydroelectric power should go to homes and farms before industry.

The act, he said, states that existing hydroelectric dams should be operated for the benefit of the general public, particularly of the domestic and rural consumers.

"Industry was not mentioned in the act," Ivanice said.

Currently, he said, 42 per cent of the BPA hydroelectric power is being funneled directly to industry.

Some BPA power, going to public utility districts (PUD's) also is being fed to industry. One PUD in Washington State, he said, has only one customer — Mobil Oil Corp.

Under his plan, Ivanice said, private utilities would charge for wheeling the federal power to homes and residences, but would not make a profit on the electricity itself. He said the private utilities could arrange to sell the electricity they produced to industry.

Idaho Power News Director Robert Brown said the power company has no comment to make on Ivanice's plan.

Ivanice himself predicted little opposition from either BPA or industries.

Industry, he said, is more worried about a continuing power supply than costs.

He maintained that insuring the low-cost hydropower would go to farmers and homeowners would reduce the opposition to building new, costly nuclear and coal-fired power plants.

Officials at BPA also "know that something has to be done and it's a guess they don't mind being tested," he said.

Minico aides eye school facilities

By SHANE O'NEILL
TWIN FALLS — Minico County School District officials will meet with the county's fire marshal to devise a plan that will keep two Rupert schools open this fall.

Fire Marshal Odell McLane said Saturday that some measures will be necessary to comply with the state's life safety code if the schools are to remain open.

"If they don't come up with some plans to make some improvements, definitely they have a good possibility of being closed," McLane said of Washington and Lincoln elementary schools, the oldest in the district.

Supr. Darrell Hatfield and consulting engineer James Smallwood are to meet with McLane to develop a list of the minimum requirements for keeping the schools open.

Smallwood had recommended closure of these two schools and Pioneer Elementary School when he presented a facility needs engineering study last month. He proposed construction of a 22-classroom school to handle the displaced students and proposed moving the district's central offices and bus barns to the Pioneer location.

The proposals ran into strong opposition from members of the district's special committee on facilities needs.

McLane's warning, however, also stymied committee members' suggestions that newer schools be improved gradually and little or nothing be done at Washington and Lincoln, leaving these two facilities for possible replacement when the economy of the area improves.

"This has been going on for 3-4 years, and all I get are promises out of them," McLane said. "I told them, if they didn't make some plans or some hard-fast improvements on (Lincoln and Washington), we would be forced to close the schools."

McLane said he could not make a commitment on the time that would be allowed for improvements at the two schools until a solid proposal for improvements has been made.

He added that the safety of those using the facilities is uppermost in the minds of himself and state officials enforcing the life safety code.

The fire marshal cited improvements on the basement of Washington School as one major expense that would be required.

"If they utilize the gym area, the basement area, they'll have to go to a sprinkler system," he said.

"There are a lot of smaller items that have to be taken care of," he added, referring to Smallwood's list of life-safety projects. "Most of them are necessary improvements."

Smallwood's figures indicated that compliance with the life-safety code would cost $130,200 at Washington and $93,220 at Lincoln, with another $ 7,350 at Pioneer. Those figures include sprinkler systems and control measures against spreading flames, smoke and gas.

Smallwood's study also included general upgrading of the district's buildings to meet minimum standards and eliminate heavy heat losses in order to conserve on energy costs. The total cost for the three schools was listed at more than $1.5 million, while construction of a new school was estimated at slightly over $2 million.

Smallwood said the improvements would extend the lives of the three buildings only about 10 years.

Hatfield said response to Smallwood's proposals has shown little support for new bonding in the district, which has trimmed its bonded indebtedness in half in the six years Hatfield has been superintendent.

"He suggested the possibility of a plan facilities maintenance and operations override levy of 10 mills. He said the levy could raise $1 million in 10 years and if the district planned well, could provide funds for new construction, as well as renovation of existing buildings."

The override levy would require approval by two-thirds of the county's voters.

500 attend TF 'Stop ERA' rally

By BOB ZUCKERMAN
TWIN FALLS — More than 500 persons attended a "Stop ERA" rally in the College of Southern Idaho gym Saturday afternoon, many of them applauding and giving verbal support to speakers who voiced opposition to the proposed Equal Rights Amendment.

Calling the amendment "ambiguous" and a possible creator of "severe difficulties in families by upsetting role patterns of men, women and children," Janeth R. Cannon, first counselor to the relief society presidency of the LDS Church, Salt Lake City, asked Idahoans to tell their legislators to repeal Idaho's ratification of the amendment. The proposed amendment to the U.S. Constitution, which supporters say will protect the rights of women, has been ratified by 35 states, but must be ratified by 38 states to become law.

"One of the strongest arguments" for opposing the amendment, Cannon said, "is that we do not know how it will be applied or for what purpose it might be used as a weapon."

She said the amendment would "protect the right of homosexuals to marry and to adopt children."

"The amendment could 'cause women to lose previously hard-won rights, such as athletic opportunities of their own for girls in public schools and colleges, and preferential consideration child custody and alimony litigation," she added.

Sylvia McFestis, executive secretary of the Taxpayers' Advisory Board, agreed that Idahoans should call for the repeal of the state's ratification.

Idaho's ratified the amendment just 36 hours after it was proposed, she said. A certified copy of the amendment had not been received by the state legislature, she noted.

"To ratify such a thing, without a certified copy, is an irresponsible act in itself," she said. But it was even worse, she said, that Idaho legislators ratified the amendment without reading it and basing their support on the words of five or six legislators, she said.

Susan Hill, chairman of the Idaho Stop ERA board, Boise, talked about the "haphazard" ratification of the amendment would cause.

She said the amendment could "invalidate" protective labor laws and "privacy rights."

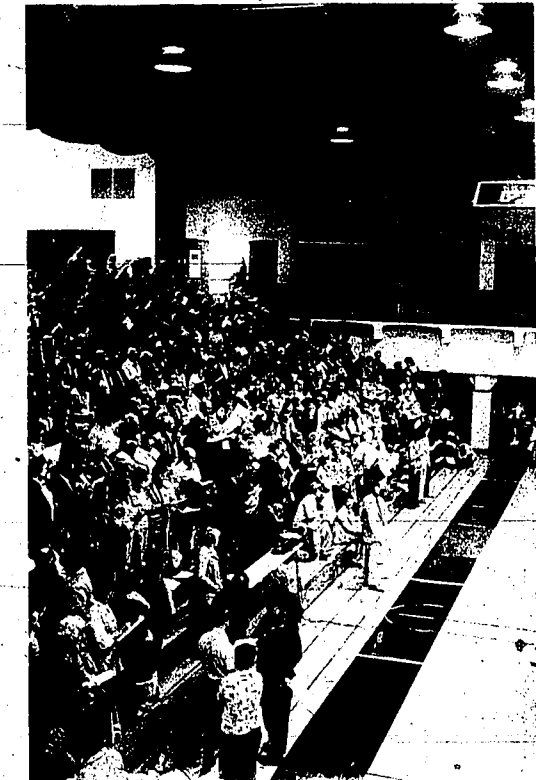

She called the National Organization for Woman (NOW), a woman's group that supports the amendment, "a radical organization, which in my opinion is opposed to the Christian religion."

"Speaking sarcastically, Hill said, "NOW says one of your basic problems — you didn't know you had a problem — is you're a sexist. You teach a boy to be a boy and a girl to be a girl, and that's bad."

The audience laughed and then applauded.

She said state forced rights amendments have forced police departments to lower their requirements for officers so women can be hired.

McKeeth said "ERA was sold to this country on the basis of a lie." Supporters of the amendment told the public the amendment would "somehow be synonymous with equal pay for equal work for women," she said. Now supporters of the amendment say the amendment would have nothing to do with "equal pay for equal work for women," she said.

Twin Falls 'Stop ERA' rally

Buhl blasts WR

BUHL — The Buhl Indians jumped out to a big first quarter lead and never looked back as they overpowered the Wood River Wolverines 56-36 Saturday night.

In the first quarter, Buhl repeatedly penetrated the Wolverine defense for inside shots and Carey Schmeckpeper and Kenny Hulse chipped in follow shots off the offensive boards to give Buhl a 20-8 lead.

Buhl continued to pull away throughout the next two quarters, and at the end of three quarters held a com-

Kimberly hits early

KIMBERLY — The Kimberly Bulldogs took advantage of the absence of the Declo Hornets' regular center to down the Hornets 71-39 Saturday night.

Playing without their regular starting center Malory, the Hornets were unable to go to the boards with the Bulldogs as Norm Bennett and Tracy Stanger pulled down bound after bound.

In addition, the Bulldog defense limited the Hornets' attack to five first-quarter points while Vern Exner and

Tigers upset Filer

FILER — The Jerome Tigers came from behind in the fourth quarter to upset the Filer Wildcats 57-56 Saturday night.

With two and a half minutes to go in the fourth quarter, Hillier hit a bucket to put the Tigers on top for the first time in the game, 53-52.

Then, with 40 seconds to go, Brad Carpenter cannot a two-pointer to up the Tiger margin to three, 55-52.

Arizona routs BYU

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) — Herman Harris scored 35 points Saturday night in leading 14th-ranked Arizona to a 115-45 Western Athletic Conference win over Brigham Young.

In picking up its 31st consecutive homecourt victory, the Wildcats outscored BYU 22-4 in a seven-minute stretch midway through the first half to gain command.

Arizona widened a 15-14 lead to a 37-18 advantage with 7:45 remaining in the first half. BYU trailed Arizona by 15, 56-41, at the half.

The rugged contest saw tempers flare on several occasions, erupting into a scarp between Arizona's Len Gardy and Verne Thompson of BYU eight minutes in the second half. Both players were ejected.

RR wins on line

MALTA — Raff River outscored Oakley 20-8 from the free throw line and held off two second-half Hornet rallies to score a 50-44 victory Saturday night.

Oakley tied the game 31-31 late in the third quarter, but Wilson hit four straight free throws to quell the Hornet rally.

In the fourth quarter, the Hornets again pulled within three, but the Trojans tightened up again to stall the

TF girls top Boise

BOISE — The Twin Falls girls put together a solid offensive and defensive effort to down Boise 39-34 Friday night.

The Bruins jumped out to an early lead behind the scoring of Brenda Palast, Marys Mumma and Muldoon as they passed crisply and moved well without the ball to work open for good shots.

The Bruins kept up the pressure and by the end of three quarters were up 35-24.

Boise managed to make the final score closer in the fourth quarter, but only after Twin went into a slow-down game to use up time.

Defensively, Palast and Salisbury held Boise's Brady to only six points in the second half.

In the preliminary, the Twin Falls JV's lost 21-8.

Twin Falls: Palast, 11; Mumma, 6; Salisbury, 4; Muldoon, 4; Ottersberg, 3; Bell, 2; Fuller, 2; Gibson, 4; Latham, 2.

Boise: Blivens, 2; Duhanty, 2; Brady, 16; Greer, 8; Koore, 2; Jackson, 2.

Declo downs Valley

EDEEN-HAZELTON — The Declo girls defeated Valley 30-14 Friday night in the season finale for both clubs.

Declo's way was made considerably easier when Valley made only one jump shot in the second quarter and failed to score in the fourth quarter.

The two advance to the district A-3 tournament in Shoshone Tuesday night. Valley meeting Clemons Ferry at 5:15 p.m. and Declo taking on Kimberly at 7 p.m.

Glenns Ferry nips

Solons in overtime

GOODING—Glenns Ferry's Bloom hit four points in overtime to "hit" the Glenns Ferry Pilots past the Gooding.

Senators 62-56 Saturday night. Bloom broke a tie at 58-56 with a field goal and then nailed down the decision with a pair of free throws after Gooding had missed a chance to tie it again.

The overtime ruined a good comeback by the Senators who fell behind 15-8 in the first quarter and trailed almost all the way. They were 10 down going into the last quarter but picked up some free-throw heroics from Jim Butler to get into the tie.

Butler tied it first with a pair of free throws at 54. Kevin King, who hit several jumpers, then drilled another bomb to send Glenns Ferry ahead but with 23 seconds remaining. Butler hit two more foul shots to tie it.

Gooding then picked-off-a-few jumpers and worked for the last shot, only to see it bounce away.

Wendell took the preliminary 51-51.

Lancaster, Wendell top Pirates 57-51

WENDELL—Kevin Lancaster won a 22-point scoring spree Saturday night to give the Wendell Trojans past Glenns Ferry 57-51.

Wolverines collect first win of year

HAILEY—An aggressive zone defense kept Wendell off balance all night and carried the Wood River Wolverines to their first win of the season 47-33 Friday night.

Wendell's Pete Dias hit a 15-foot shot at the buzzer of second overtime to win the preliminary 51-50.

Iowa edges Northwestern

IOWA CITY, Iowa (UPI)—Iowa's Bruce "Sky" King pumped in 24 points to lead a second-half surge and reserve guard Tom Norman made both ends of a one-and-one free-throw with eight seconds left in the game to help the Hawkeyes past Northwestern, 76-74, in a televised Big Ten conference game Saturday.

King, who suffered an injury over a week ago, returned to the lineup Saturday to help the Hawkeyes improve their overall record to 10-4 and 2-3 in the Big Ten. Northwestern fell to 3-12 overall and 1-5 in the conference.

King led Iowa scorers and center Larry Olshtown and guard Cal Wullfberg each added 10 points for Iowa.

Weber St. drops NAU

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. (UPI)—Stan Mayhew poured in seven overtime points to lead Weber State to a 92-86 Big Sky Conference victory over Northern Arizona University Saturday night.

The Wildcats quickly established control of the overtime period, sprinting away to lead by as many as 10 points.

Northern Arizona had battled Backus with a four-point deficit in the final 42 seconds to gain a 77-71 tie and send the game into overtime.

The win gave Weber State an 11-4 overall record and a 4-0 mark in conference play. NAU now stands at 7-3 on the season and 1-3 in league play.

Mark Gossweiler led Northern Arizona with 22, followed by Willard Tsingine with 16.

Raymond Tsingine with 13 and Jeff Spencer with 12. Weber out-rebounded NAU 51-37 with Mayhew grabbing 16. Gossweiler paced NAU with 13.

Burley wins ninth

BURLEY—The Burley Bobcats racked up their ninth straight victory Friday night by downing the Madison Bobcats 79-63.

Burley had a 51 per cent shooting night in jumping off to a big early lead and holding sway the entire way.

Madison made one run midway through the second half when Coach Ron Gillet elected to give Farrell Williams a rest. Madison clipped 12 down to within six points but Kelly Davis and

Murtaugh drops Declo to stay atop standings

DECLO — Murtaugh took control almost from the opening tip Friday night and defeated Declo 65-43 to keep its share of the Magic Valley Conference lead.

The result knocked Declo out of the four-way tie for first and coupled with Raft River's victory over Oakley left Murtaugh and Raft River tied at the top.

Declo never did get untracked against the Red Devils who jumped into a 14-5 first-quarter lead and pushed out of reach at 58-19 at intermission.

Declo went without scoring leader Brent Malloy who is expected to miss a couple three more games due to an ankle injury.

Dietrich outlasted the four line in the closing minutes Friday night to outlast the rallying Camas County Mushers 65-61.

Dietrich couldn't count the victory in hand until Lar Perron drilled two free throws with two seconds left.

The teams played within a couple three points of each other throughout as Leland Towne's rebounding and 23 inside points made Dietrich consistent and Camas County collected fairly regularly off the break.

Dietrich took a five-point lead into the final period with the Mushers coming back to within one point with three minutes left. Perron opened it to two with a free throw and Mark and Lar Perron added points to keep Dietrich just ahead. Kevin Perron got the clinching points on a layup on the anti-press. Camas County again cut it to two but Perron then nailed it down.

Colts narrow choice for general manager

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Personnel Director Dick Szymanski appears to be the No. 1 choice to become the Baltimore Colts' new general manager, succeeding Joe Thomas who was fired last week by owner Robert Irsay.

Ernie Accorsi, former public relations director for the Colts, will probably become the assistant general manager, according to reports.

Accorsi is currently assistant to George Halas, president of the NFL.

By Wednesday the new general manager will replace Thomas, the engineer behind the Colts rebirth as champions but a man who received disfavor from players and fans.

Irsay said he already knows who that person will be. "I have already selected a new general manager," Irsay said Saturday. "I will make the announcement in Baltimore Tuesday, or maybe Wednesday. The man already has been picked by me, but I won't name him until Tuesday."

Szymanski, in his 22nd year with the Colts' organization, was a second round Baltimore draft choice out of Notre Dame in 1955. He played on three Colts championship teams as their starting center and was named to the Pro Bowl squad three times — including his rookie season — before retiring in 1968.

Thomas was offered the right to resign, said he wanted the players and fans to know that he had been fired. He planned to make a full disclosure Monday of what he alleges are falsehoods made by Irsay about recent negotiations.

Irsay will not say exactly why he fired Thomas, but reports indicate part of the blame goes to Thomas' salary demands.

Pairings finalized for three girls district cage tourneys

MAGIC VALLEY — Pairings for three of the five girls district basketball tournaments scheduled over the next two weeks have been finalized.

The A-3 tournament has the distinction of leading things off, the event being spread over two weeks at the Shoshone gymnasium.

It opens Tuesday night with Valley meeting Glenns Ferry at 5:45 p.m. Declo taking on Kimberville at 7 p.m. and Shoshone playing Kimberly in the nightcap. Filer, the regular season champion, has the first round bye and comes into action Wednesday night.

The tournament will continue Thursday, then take the weekend off and resume Tuesday through its conclusion.

The champion will advance to a regional playoff against the fifth district champion at a mutually agreed-upon site later in the week. It will be played somewhere in Magic Valley, but not on the district champion's home court. Only the regional champion will advance to the state finals in Boise.

The A-1 girls format will follow that of the boys. That means in another week Minico will be at Burley with the winner advancing against Twin Falls. First-round byes holder, the second night. The third night will be played between the two losers. Regardless of the second night's outcome, the third game will be played in the Mini-Castle arena.

Again only the champion advances to Boise.

Wood River will host the A-2 tournament Feb. 1 and 3. This will be a single elimination event and with only four teams entered, will wind up in two nights.

Undeclared Bull will meet Gooding at 6:30 p.m. Feb. 3 with the championship to be decided at 8 p.m. The champion will move on to the state finals in Twin Falls the following week.

The two A-4 tournaments still remain up in the air as those schools will have regular season games through next Thursday and the pairings will be based on the final standings. The A-4 state tournament also is scheduled for Twin Falls.

CSI girls whip Coyotes

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho girls basketball team routed College of Idaho 62-38 Friday night.

The tight CSI zone defense completely shut off the inside and forced College of Idaho to take low percentage perimeter shots throughout the game.

Mtn. Home rallies to beat Gooding

GOODING — Mountain Home came from behind in the fourth quarter to upend the Gooding Senators 64-50 Friday night.

Gooding led by three early in the fourth quarter, but then Englehart came off the bench to hit three straight outside jumpers to ignite Mountain Home. Masten also came off the bench to chip in eight fourth quarter points for the Tigers.

With two minutes to go,

Mountain Home had jumped out in front 50-45.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Attend services of your choice early in the day. Later join good friends in recreation you mutually enjoy.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Make plans to have greater abundance in the future. Take no chances with persons who are not your type.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... He or she will be able to team up nicely with others for putting through interesting projects. Direct education along lines of serving the public. Teach to finish whatever is started. Don't neglect ethical training early in life.

what's what

L.M. Boyd

It's known that most mares breed only during that time of year when the days are at their longest. At least, such is the case in the temperate climates. So some veterinary scientists conclude that light—more specifically daylight—is the key factor that regulates the breeding cycle in horses. You understand, don't you, that I've told you much more than I know about this matter?

It's a matter of record that Johnny Weismuller, the greatest "Tarzan" of them all, never liked elephants. Noted he: "Once I was following my elephant by vine when he stopped suddenly and I ran into his tail! and broke my nose."

Twice as many babies arrive later than earlier than when the doctors predict.

MOONEY

Q. "If I bank $10 a week at 5 per cent interest compounded daily, how much money will I have in the savings account after 20 years?"

A. $17,944.45. Might try that. Sounds pretty good.

It typical, your foot length is a little larger than your right shoe salesman of lengthy experience. That's why buyers err, he says, if they only try on one instead of both new shoes.

The fellow that runs the kitchen at Norm's Restaurant in West Los Angeles is Purr Cook, appropriately enough.

You know that pure saccharine is sweeter than sugar, but what you aware it's 550 times sweeter?

GREENLAND

Question arises as to why Greenland was so named. Credit Eric the Red for that inappropriate moniker. Wasn't that he thought there was much green about the place. But presumably, he believed the nifty 'table' would induce travelers to go there. Maybe he hoped to sell lots, who knows?

An American pharmaceutical house that puts out a green peppermint throat lozenge had to change the color to red and the flavor to cinnamon in order to sell it profitably in South America.

Eye doctors are quick to point out that most states force hunters to wear red clothing but no state requires hunters to take vision tests.

Do you buy the claim that snorers never wake themselves up by snoring. Neither do I. Can't contradict the contention, however, that snorers in general tend to be jovial folk who eat a lot and drink with gusto.

DOONESBURY

YOU KNOW A QUESTION I HEAR A LOT THESE DAYS IS, "LIZ, WILL GROSS EVER BECOME MEANINGFUL?" I'VE ALWAYS ANSWERED IT BY SAYING "IN THE AFFIRMATIVE!"

WE HAVE AS A PRECEDENT "WALTER SCOTT'S PERSONALITY PARADE," WHICH FREQUENTLY PROVIDES ANSWERS TO ISSUE-ORIENTED QUESTIONS SET FORTH BY READERS!

LET'S TAKE A LOOK AT SOME OF THESE QUESTIONS. I'D SAY WE CAN ALL LEARN A LOT FROM MR. SCOTT'S CHOICES!

WHATEVER HAPPENED TO THE VETERAN WAR? WOULD IT BE A VETERAN TRUMPET OR SOME-THING?

BORING! REALLY BORING!

Rehab center aide reports to board

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — About 35 per cent of the men completing treatment at the Magic Valley Alcoholism Rehabilitation Center have been recovered, Jim Taylor, center director, told the Region 5 Advisory Board for the Department of Health and Welfare here Wednesday.

Taylor, attended the January meeting of the board to report on the center's program in connection with a contract and Welfare clients.

He said there are 14 beds in the center, located in the old Catholic Church convent in Twin Falls. Of these four are detox units, he said. 30 per cent of the individuals from the program have returned to jobs and are remaining sober at the present time.

The center provides a home environment, offers responsibilities to the clients and provides counseling and assistance in obtaining jobs, Taylor told the group.

He cited examples of individuals who have been able to return to a normal life after treatment at the center. One man, he said, lost his job because of drinking and has now been sober for two and one half years. He returned to the same employer, starting-over at the bottom of the ladder with a night job and is now in line for promotion to a shift superintendent.

Taylor said the center has a large number of "out patients" attending therapy sessions. The program includes group therapy for the alcoholic and members of his family on Monday nights, alcohol and drug education on Wednesday nights, Alcoholics Anonymous on Thursday nights and Narcotics Anonymous on Friday nights.

These meetings are available to non-residents of the home and are required for all residents.

Taylor told the board the center is presently without a permanent doctor and is facing a move as the present building is being sold to the Twin Falls Clinic for additional parking area. He said the center has been offered the building as a gift if it can be moved.

John Van Orman, Jerome, chairman of the Idaho Board of Health, met with the regional advisory group.

Van Orman urged caution in drawing up contracts for Health and Welfare services, which are provided from other agencies.

Van Orman agreed with Rita Hogg, Halley, board chairman, that an effort should be made to ask newspapers in the state to find some other means of designating the Department of Health and Welfare as "HAW." Van Orman said it certainly does not lend dignity to the state agency.

McDermott reported on the media campaign, asking board members to contact the regional office to make appointments for cutting tapes to tell about the various phases of Health and Welfare services. All radio stations in Magic Valley are cooperating with public service announcements advising the public about available services, he said.

Members of the board toured Magic Valley Rehabilitation Services, Inc., in the former Gem Equipment building on Eastland Avenue South.

Jeff Crumrine, director, explained the training program and employment program for handicapped persons.

He said training at the center progresses the client to a point where he or she can do some types of work and then helps them find jobs.

Crumrine said the center maintains work contracts with such establishments as Sun Valley and the Holiday Inn for mail services, provides industrial jobs and is available to handle certain production at the center. The center also maintains janitorial services contracts.

Progress discussed

WORK records showing progress of clients at Magic Valley Rehabilitation Services Center are discussed by center director Jeff Crumrine, center, John Van Orman, chairman of the Idaho Board of Health, and Rita Hogg, chairman of the Region 5 Health and Welfare Advisory board. Board members toured the center during the regular Wednesday meeting.

State will relax pool regulations

TWIN FALLS — In a move that should please motel owners, the state plans to relax some depth regulations on public swimming pools.

Under changed regulations proposed by the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare "HAW," public pools will not have to have a maximum depth if there is no diving in the pool.

Previously, the state required an eight-foot minimum for a non-diving pool's deep end.

The South-Central Health District will hold public hearings on the proposed regulations in Boise in February.

According to SCHD environmentalist Gerald Hurst, the regulations will reduce the length required for hotel pools.

Hurst said the "whole ball of wax" on state regulations had been rewritten, but he said most of the changes have to be made in the old document.

more flexible. The regulations will apply to public admission pools only, not to private home pools. Once the local hearings are completed, the proposal will be submitted for formal hearing at Boise on Feb. 10.

DEAR ABBY: May I say something in behalf of hunting? I have been lied about, framed and given a bad name in recent years. I am an avid hunter, and I know that the legal hunters are doing our wildlife a great deal of good. I am not referring to poachers or "sport" hunters, but the animal painlessly, then leave it to die. Wildlife herds need to be thinned. Leave a deer herd alone, and it will multiply until there is not enough for all. Many deer will die slowly and horribly, rather than quickly from the clean shot of a skilled hunter. The same goes for animals that are not eaten. They need to be fed, too. And by the way, Abby, what are these signs there for in the first place?

MONTANA HUNTER

DEAR MONTANA: Considering the way people are treated—by wars, overpopulation and disease—might I ask what people are "there for in the first place?" Any?

Hunter gives views

Orchestra rehearses

IN preparation for the opera, "I Pagliacci," Lawrence Curtis directs a rehearsal of the orchestra in the music room at CSI. The Northwest Opera Association is producing the performance with support from the Idaho Commission on the Arts and Humanities and the National Endowment for the Arts.

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem that is worrying me terribly because I am a very sensitive person. My boyfriend whom I love very much has just told me why he has avoided kissing me lately. (I noticed that he had, but I didn't want to ask him why.) He said he hated to hurt my feelings, then he hurt me that he thinks my tongue is too big, and it feels "rough" to the touch. I was crushed, but didn't respond. I just held myself together, then I cried my heart out after he left. Abby, is there any way to reduce the size of my tongue and make it smooth?

I am 25 and am dieting strenuously, hoping I will lose weight in my tongue, too. But what about the roughness?

UNKISSED

DEAR UNKISSED: Your boyfriend's reason for avoiding your kisses sounds pretty weird to me. It would be easier by far to find another boyfriend than to alter the size and surface of your tongue. If I were you, I'd lose this book.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 68-year-old man who has been singing professionally since age 7. (My father was a famous singer.)

Over the years I have sung and lectured in just about every type of church you can name. This exposure has given me a fairly good education as to what kind of people attend church but why they attend still puzzles me.

During the '60s, I visited over 300 churches. On my own I conducted a survey containing one question that could be answered voluntarily (and would be kept confidential): "Why do you attend church?"

The response was both revealing and surprising. More than 50 per cent wrote: "Because it's the thing to do." Less than 1 per cent mentioned anything about worshipping.

I am presently completing the second year of a three-year survey on the hospitality (or the lack of it) in churches.

To date, of the 195 churches I have visited, I was spoken to only once by someone other than an official "greeter"—and that was to ask me to please move my feet.

Sincerely,

JOHN CHARLES THOMAS, JR., Ph.D.

DEAR DR. THOMAS: I find your survey discouraging, but fascinating.

When you complete your three-year survey on hospitality (or the lack of it) in churches, please send it to me, and I'll share it with my readers.

Opera lead

TENOR Jay Fowles, Jerome, rehearses his role as Canio in the tragic opera "I Pagliacci." Northwest Opera Association will sponsor the performance at CSI Jan. 26, 28, 29 and 30.

'I Pagliacci' to open in TF

By KEN HODGE

Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Northwest Opera Association's forthcoming presentation of the tragic opera "I Pagliacci" by Leoncavallo represents the combined efforts of many southern Idahoans.

The presentation, which will open with two special student matinees at the College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts Auditorium on Jan. 26 and 28, an evening performance at 8:15 Jan. 29 and a final matinee Jan. 30 at 2:15 p.m., is being directed by Boise dramatist John Eichmann.

A native Boisean, Eichmann graduated from Boise State University in theater arts where he was honored as best actor for outstanding contribution to theater and dedication to the performing arts.

In the past 13 years, Eichmann has appeared in over 30 plays and starred as Dr. Carrasco in "Man of La Mancha," Mendel in "Fiddler on the Roof," Richard Lionheart in the "Lion in Winter," Macduff in "Macbeth," and Chris Keller in "All My Sons."

He has directed such shows as "The Private Ear" and "The Public Eye," as well as the opera "Carmen" in Boise.

The music in the performance is directed by Lawrence Curtis, Twin Falls, head of the CSI Music Department. Curtis has conducted four operas in Twin Falls and has lived in Twin Falls since 1970.

Curtis, originally from California, received a bachelor's degree from San Diego State University and his master's from the University of Redlands.

He has conducted local performances of "Carmen," "Slow Dusk" and "Amahl and the Night Visitors."

He has also conducted musical performances by CSI and the Dilettantes which include "Oklahoma," "Bells Are Ringing," "The King and I," "Hello Dolly," "Guys and Dolls" and "Oliver."

Tenor Jay Fowles, Jerome, netted the lead role in the upcoming opera of Canio, the prince of clowns who discovers his wife's plot to run away with a villager after his group's evening performance.

Fowles, a charter member of Northwest Opera Association, attended Brigham Young University where he sang roles in "Pagliacci," "La Boheme" and "Bartered Bride."

While doing graduate work at Indiana University, he sang roles in "Adrienne auf Noxus" and other operas. He also sang roles in "La Boheme" and "La Traviata" in Boise.

Soprano Martha Mead, who plays Canio's unfaithful wife, Nedda, is well known to Idaho audiences and has lived in Twin Falls since 1957.

She studied voice at the American Conservatory and the Richard DeYoung Studio in Chicago. She majored in English and drama at Purdue University where she also produced a musical radio program each week. Traveled with several singing groups and sang leading roles in many musicals and oratorios.

In 1951 Mead was selected best singer of Gary, Ind., in connection with the Chicago Musicland Festival.

She has presented recitals in Twin Falls and Boise and has sung soprano oratorio roles: such as Handel's "Messiah," Mozart's "Requiem Mass," Haydn's "Imperial Mass," Schubert's "Mass in C Major," Bach's "Passion According to St. John," and others.

She has sung leading roles in the operas "Carmen" and "La Traviata" with the Boise Philharmonic Orchestra. In addition, she has performed musical roles for the Dilettante Group of Magic Valley and the Twin Falls Music Club.

Baritone Richard Humphries, Twin Falls, plays Tonio. A resident of Twin Falls since 1974, Humphries has performed in musical performances of "Most Happy Fella," "The Marriage of Figaro," "La Boheme," "Three Penny Opera" and "Carousel."

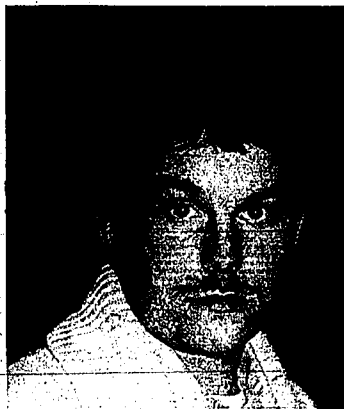

Jerry Kidd, a Boise baritone, netted the role of Silvio. He is a member of Boise Master Chorale and received his bachelor's degree in communications from Brigham Young University in 1966. The performance will be Kidd's opera debut.

Tenor Patrick Woliver, chairman of vocal activities at CSI, plays the role of Beppe in the January production. He has a master's degree from the University of Tennessee in his home state.

Woliver, who also serves as vocal coach and chorus director, has sung major tenor roles in "Gianni Schicchi" by Puccini, "The Bartered Bride" by Smetana, "Luca di Lammermoor" and "Rita" by Danizetti, "Il Barbiere di Siviglia" by Rossini, "Die Fledermans" by Strauss and the "Mikado" by Gilbert and Sullivan.

The production is supported by the National Endowment for the Arts, Washington, D.C., and the Idaho Commission on the Arts and Humanities.

Tickets are available from Twin Falls music stores, from Magic Valley schools and at the door.

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb:
My husband who is 32 found out about eight months ago that he has rheumatoid arthritis of the spine.

An arthritis specialist taught him exercises to do twice daily and started him on a medication, Tandearil. He seemed to be doing just fine.

After six months he had to go to his doctor for a blood count, which he did. He told him the blood count was normal but the doctor was uneasy about the Tandearil. He said it affected the blood count.

Another friend told him it affected the bone marrow. She said her mother took it for arthritis and you can touch her arm and blood rises to the surface. All this is unsettling. So my husband discontinued the medication for a while. During this time he was in quite a bit of pain and could hardly bend and get around so, yesterday he started back on the medication.

Could you please shed some light on the side effects of this medication and any alternatives?

Arthritis of spine

Dear Reader,
I'll have to say again that patients should never stop their medicines without asking their doctor about it. The doctor may want to change the medicine rather than just stop it. When a patient does otherwise he sometimes runs the risk of seriously endangering himself.

Rheumatoid arthritis of the spine, also called rheumatoid spondylitis, is particularly prone to affect young men, many younger than your husband. The disease is similar to ordinary rheumatoid arthritis but it differs in some important aspects. It usually progresses to cause fusion of the vertebrae, causing a "poker spine."

The main goal in treatment is to minimize the deformity of the spine and exercises are very helpful in this regard. Your husband should continue to follow the exercise routine designed for him.

The Tandearil (oxyphenbutazone) is to relieve pain and to decrease the inflammation involving the spine. It is not a real safe medicine and anyone taking it does not have to have regular evaluations of the blood-forming process. A tendency to bleeding has occurred in some patients taking the medicine. It is very effective medicine if it doesn't cause any new problems. The situation here is an old one in medicine, the treatment is good for the disease but the medicine may not be good for the body.

For this reason most doctors prefer to try a patient such as your husband on aspirin first. If the pain can be controlled by aspirin, or by Motrin or other similar medicines it may not be necessary to use such a powerful medicine as Tandearil.

Another pain relieving medicine that also has some side effects, but perhaps not so many is Indocin (indomethacin).

Why don't you suggest that your husband talk it over with his doctor and if he has no objection try to control his pain with a different medicine since he is concerned about Tandearil. One of the nice things about aspirin, which is one reason I often recommend it, is that despite the fact that it sometimes causes problems, too, like other medicines, it is still one of the safest most effective pain relievers we have ever had.

And I am sending you The Health Letter number 4-11, Rheumatoid Arthritis to give you more information on the rheumatoid diseases. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Write to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. Tell your husband to keep up his exercises and good luck on the outcome.

By Oswald & James Jacoby
We believe that it was the great poet Culbertson who wrote: "A little false card now and then is relished by the best of men."

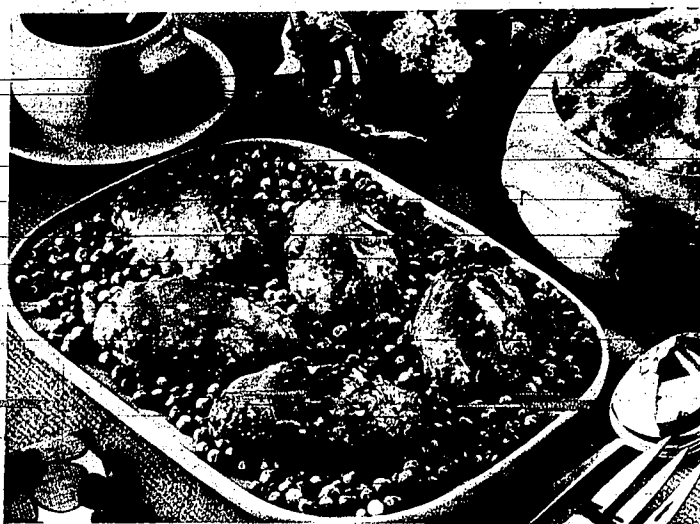

In that case we must assume that today's North and South don't belong in that best of men category because when the smoke of battle had cleared away they weren't at all happy.

On the other hand good-old West was certain.

West didn't think much of his hand or his chance of doing any good with a heart or diamond lead so he put his jack of clubs on the table. Instead of playing quickly from the table, South thought a while before playing the king from dummy. This gave East time to see that the only possible tricks for the defense would be in trumps and that some desperate measures were necessary to keep South from taking the double trump finesse. The double finesse is the best percentage play when you hold nine trumps; it becomes a perfect safety play when you hold 10.

So East dropped the queen of clubs under dummy's king. South won, led the jack of spades, watched East produce the deuce, thought a while, rose with his ace to guard against a possible club ruff and was one down when West showed out.

Individual Meat Loaves are ready to serve in 30 minutes

Inexpensive main dish takes minutes to prepare

Pressed for time tonight? Here's an idea for an inexpensive but noteworthy main dish you can put on the table in 30 minutes. Individual Meatloaves, created in the Test Kitchens of The R.T. French Co. in Rochester, N.Y., gives a fresh look to an old favorite and has a sprightly orange sauce that makes it really different. Don't worry about the sauce... it's easily put together with orange marmalade and an envelope of onion gravy mix.

Golden Topped Potato Casserole makes an interesting side dish, yet requires only packaged instant potato granules, cream cheese, and bread crumbs. You'll like its crisp, brown topping.

Complete your quick, easy, and low cost dinner with green peas, chocolate pudding, and milk or coffee!

INDIVIDUAL MEATLOAVES

1 envelope (3-oz.) French's Onion Gravy Mix
1 1/2 cups water
2 tablespoons orange marmalade
1 egg
1 teaspoon salt

1/2 cup fine dry bread crumbs
1 pound ground beef
Stir together contents of gravy mix, envelope, water, and marmalade. Measure 1 cup gravy mixture and combine with egg, salt, bread crumbs, and ground beef; mix lightly. Shape five oval loaves on shallow baking pan.

Bake at 400 degrees for 20 to 25 minutes. Heat remaining gravy mixture to boiling, stirring frequently. Serve gravy over meatloaves. Five servings.

GOLDEN TOPPED POTATO CASSEROLE

1 envelope (5 servings) French's Idaho Mashed Potato granules
1 package (3-oz.) cream cheese, softened at room temperature
1 tablespoon butter, softened at room temperature
2 tablespoons fine dry bread crumbs
1 teaspoon French's Paprika

Prepare potatoes following directions on package, except reduce milk to 1 cup. Add cream cheese, stirring briskly until cheese melts and blends in with potatoes.

Spoon into buttered small casserole. Combine butter, crumbs, and paprika; sprinkle over potatoes. Bake at 400 degrees for 5 to 10 minutes, until crumb topping is golden brown. Five servings.

TF club holds meet

TWIN FALLS — The MS and S Club met at the home of Sherry McAllister.

The annual husbands' dinner was set for Jan. 29 at 7 p.m. at Smitty's.

Those attending should tell Sherry McAllister by Saturday. President Grace Leibl conducted the business meeting. Gladys Davis reported some facts about Idaho history and Sherry McAllister described the history of some of her family heirlooms, which she displayed.

Sorority holds meet Wednesday

TWIN FALLS — Sigma Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi met Wednesday at Dorily Boguslawski's home. The members decided to donate $200 to the Child Development Center from money the chapter earned from a flea market. Also the chapter will purchase new clothes for two children in a needy family and $100 was previously given to the Smith family of Buhl, who lost their home in a fire. Luella Champin attended the meeting and will be transferring to the chapter. Members should bring others wishing to join to the next meeting in preparation for a spring rush. The next meeting will be at Bonnie Gillespie's home. Kenneth Himple of Western Nursery spoke on caring for indoor plants and answered questions.

CONNIE RANDELL ... names date

March 10 date set

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Tibor of American Falls. The doubling ceremony was performed by Father Bill Taylor at the Catholic Newman Center on the Idaho State University Campus, Pocatello. The bride, given by her parents, chose a white brocade, floor-length dress with a trailing veil of snowflake design. Her corsage was of blue and gold roses with white carnations and long ribbon streamers. Mrs. Steven Sulfridge, Pocatello, was the matron of honor; Mrs. Dennis Berni Smith, Anclorage, Alaska, and Joan Berni, Glennis Ferry, were bridesmaids. All are sisters of the bride. Greg Ashbauer, Pocatello, was best man; Jerolaine Sulfridge, niece of the bride, was flower girl, and Don Striclin was ring bearer. Ashbauer Sulfridge sang. A reception was held in Newman Hall. The three-tiered wedding cake centering the bride's table was decorated with blue and gold bells, roses, white columns, cherubs and gold leaves. It was made by Ethel Berni, Glennis Ferry, and Mrs. Jan Berni, aunts of the bride. The young couple honeymooned at Salt Lake City.

Yost, Williams exchange vows

TWIN FALLS — Terrell Yost and Greg Williams were married in the fireside room of the Methodist Church Dec. 23, with Ray Thompson, minister, officiating. The bride is the daughter of Mary Yost and the late Paul Yost, Twin Falls. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Murrell Williams, Wellington, Nev. Lani-Fix, Twin Falls, was the maid of honor and Bob Hanson, Seattle, Wash., was best man. Julia Yost, sister of the bride, served as bridesmaid, and Garin Yost, brother, gave the bride away. Jeff Hardin was pianist. Athena Evans took care of the guest book and Lori Egan was in charge of the rice tray. Honored guest was Mrs. Mary-Warey, Twin Falls, grandmother of the bridegroom. A reception after the ceremony was held at the Yost residence.

Tacoma rites planned

TWIN FALLS — A March wedding is planned by Rachelle Louise Martin, Tacoma, Wash., and former Twin Falls resident Richard Alan Hughes, McMinnville, Ore.

JULIE STASTNY
... plans rites

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Melvin L. Martin, Tacoma, and the Rev. and Mrs. James B. Hughes, Anchorage, Alaska. Rev. Hughes was pastor of Twin Falls Baptist Church from 1967 to 1975.

Rachelle is a December 1976 graduate of Lemhi College, McMinnville, with a degree in home economics and biology. She graduated from Lakes High School, Tacoma, in 1973.

March date set

FILER — Mrs. Dick Morris, Twin Falls, and Mike Stastny, Hansen, announce the engagement of their daughter, Julie Stastny, to Brent Lierman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Lierman, Filer.

Miss Stastny is a 1976 graduate of Boise State University with an associate degree in marketing. Lierman was graduated from BSU in 1975 with a degree in business administration. He is employed with the Department of Agriculture in Jerome. The couple plans a March wedding at Peace Lutheran Church in Filer.

Hot line explained

RUPERT — Hotline director Treva Winks spoke to a Parents Without Partners meeting here. She described the history, purpose and services of Hot Line.

Hot Line began in Idaho in 1970 to help young people with drug problems, and the Burley and Rupert office has operated for seven years, Winks said.

Volunteers answer about 95 calls a month, she reported. The calls deal with problems of child abuse, rape, suicide, venereal disease, abortions, birth control, alcoholism, drugs and requests for information. Elderly people make-up the bulk of callers, Winks said.

Winks said the volunteers hope to provide emotional support and to help people to develop confidence in making decisions. They in no way tell a person what to do or give legal or medical advice, she said.

Utah Symphony sets 2 concerts

TWIN FALLS — The Utah Symphony Orchestra will give two performances at the College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts Auditorium Feb. 7 at 2 and 8 p.m.

The concerts are being sponsored by Twin Falls Music Club and First Security Bank of Idaho. Each year the 88-member-symphony-orchestra tours the intermountain west performing about 125 concerts. They have played in the Kennedy Center, Carnegie Hall and London's Royal Festival Hall.

Tickets, for the afternoon, student performance are $1.50 and for the evening performance $2.00.

QES leader sets visit

TWIN FALLS — Mrs. Virginia Peters, worthy grand matron of Idaho, Order of Eastern Star, will visit Twin Falls Chapter No. 29 Tuesday. A no-host luncheon will be held at noon at the Holiday Inn. School of instruction will be held after the luncheon. A no-host banquet at 5:30 p.m. at the Holiday Inn will be followed at 8 p.m. by a regular meeting at the Masonic Temple.

performance. $5. They can be purchased at First Security Bank Offices, Jerome, Gooding—Shoshone—Burley, Rupert and Twin Falls; music stores—and Magle—Carpel—Travels, Twin Falls; Welch Music Store, Burley and drug stores.

A group of photographs entitled "The Abrahams Years," which the University of Utah has exhibited, will be displayed in the foyer before and during the performance at CSI.

This is the first time the Utah Museum of fine arts, University of Utah, in conjunction with the Utah Symphony tour concert, have sponsored an opportunity to make the concert a multi-media event with the photo exhibition. These are casual shots of members of the symphony and soloist in act and have been selected from the many photos taken by Martin Zuick, first clarinetist with the symphony.

Country shows move to Filer

TWIN FALLS — It's that time of year again, and members of the Magic Valley Country Music Association are planning their annual February show.

Due to a mix-up in date scheduling with the College of Southern Idaho, however, instead of presenting the shows at the CSI Arts Auditorium, the shows are planned at the Filer High School Auditorium.

According to Bill Taylor, president, show time is set at 8 p.m. Feb. 21, 22 and 23, with proceeds to be divided between the Easter Seal Center and the Buhl Radio Association. Proceeds from the October show, $1,000, which was presented in observance of Country Music Month, was presented to the Adult-Child Development Center.

A benefit dance is planned by the group for the Smith Family whose home was destroyed by fire during the holidays. The event will be held from 8 p.m. to midnight Tuesday at the Buhl Masonic Hall.

Officers will be elected during the February meeting.

Valley comment

QUESTION: Should people boycott coffee because of high prices?

Doris Pearson, Fairfield:

Yes. I think they're making too much money and I don't think the growers are really making a profit. . . . The coffee brokers are making the profit. I've been boycotting coffee about one month.

Mike Ellis, Twin Falls:

I'm not a coffee drinker myself. But, with just what it's gone up recently, I would think that something should be done.

Billie Rogers, Twin Falls:

I think it's a good idea. But I doubt if it will do any good. I don't think the consumer can affect the price that much, unless it's a total boycott. I haven't stopped buying coffee, although my budget might force me to do so.

Joe Powlus, Twin Falls:

I'd say no. Well, it's just like everything else — I think there's got to be a reason for it to go up. . . . It's got just as much right to go up as everything else.

Freda Schuler, Twin Falls:

It probably would be a good idea. It's really uncalled for, I think, that price. A boycott would help. We've all got to start doing something, I suppose. Giving up wouldn't bother me a bit. I only drink about one cup a day.

Gwen Sahiberg, Twin Falls:

I sure do. It might help. I love coffee. I had a pretty good supply but I don't know what I'm going to do now. It's just ridiculous the price, these major brands have on coffee. I guess I'll have to switch to tea.

Paul McFarland, Twin Falls:

I sure as hell do. I think they ought to boycott gasoline too. In my opinion, if people . . . would just say, 'no, we are not going to buy it,' then watch the price come down.

Walt Williams, Anchorage, Alaska:

I would say it's a matter of opinion for the individual. If he wants to pay a high price and drink coffee, that's fine. If he doesn't want to pay that price, he should boycott it. Surely if everybody boycotts it, it will bring the price down.

G-rated film opens in TF Thursday

The theme song of the motion picture, "Joe Panther," produced by a Utah-based movie company, has been selected as one of the top ten for consideration for an Academy Award for 1976.

Members of the music branch of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences selected the song, "The Time Has Come," as one of the 10 best original songs composed for motion pictures in 1976. Fifty-six songs from movies were in competition in the preliminary selection.

"Joe Panther," produced by Artists Creation & Associates of Salt Lake City, will open at the Cinema Theater in Twin Falls on Thursday.

The G-rated $1.5 million movie stars Brian Keith, Ricardo Montalban and Ray Tracey, a screen newcomer who plays the lead role. It is the story of a Seminole Indian youth who is determined to make a place for himself in the "modern white man's world."

The theme song of the movie, composed by Academy Award Winner Fred Karlin with lyrics by Norman Gimbel and sung by England Dan and John Ford Coley, has a universal application, which characterizes all youth everywhere.

The song illustrates youth's striving to reach out and satisfy the restlessness of trying to achieve on one's own in today's world.

"I am all that you say," the song agrees, "Restless and young and feeling freedom — But there's more. I know what I have here, safety and love and friends forever. I need what I have — here. But there's more. Got this dream inside me. And it knows no boundary."

Kimberly man hunts for wild pig in Arizona

By GARY STONE
Special to the Times-News

It was 11:45 a.m. Jan. 4, and the pressure was on me!

Everyone else in my hunting party had their pigs, and it was the last day of our Arizona Javalina archery adventure. We were to break camp at noon to return home.

I had taken the high ridge hoping for a shot, when around the corner of a huge boulder stood a spiny-haired creature that stared defiantly at me.

I eased the arrow into place and drew back, carefully picking a spot for the razor head. It had to find its mark. I knew the second the arrow left my bow that the wild pig would bolt my way (its only escape route) so when I released, I had to jump out of the way or be run over.

My arrow was right on the mark, hitting the pig high in the shoulder. It was not an immediate kill shot and sure enough the pig ran right up my left leg before I could move.

As it darted past, Mert, one of my partners, also let fly with an arrow, hitting the pig in the mid-section. I was trying to regain my footing when two smaller pigs charged right at me.

The dense brush slowed down one pig as I pinned it to the ground with my right foot. I finally let it go, as I knew that my previous shot was true. We then waited about one-half hour, then began the tedious task of tracking the thin trail of blood that the pig had left.

The wild pigs had been feeding in the area that morning, leaving many fresh tracks, making it very difficult to track. We followed the trail for approximately 600 yards and sure enough, there lay my pig in its own tracks. What an end for a perfectly planned Javalina hunt!

I am a free-lance artist from Kimberly, and being an avid archer for many years, I had jumped at the chance to go to Arizona with the Wood River Archers Club.

My specialty is woodcut-painting that involves sandblasting into wood, then painting the detail with paint and brush. I like to paint historical subjects and this hunting trip would be a good time to make sketches, take photos and document in wood.

the aged Indian ruins and many other old buildings, etc., that dot the area.

My hunting partners were my best friends, Ken Ambrose, Mert Stapleman and Dan Watson, all of Bellevue. We met Ken's brother Jim from Boulder City, Nev., and Carl Butler from Las Vegas. Carl and Jim had both hunted the Javalina area for many years and would act as our guides.

The season started the first of January, so we left several days in advance to make it. It was a long, grueling drive. We arrived at Globe, Ariz., opening morning at daybreak and were at camp ready to hunt at 10 a.m. We hunted hard the first day, seeing nine deer, but no wild pigs.

The second day things really picked up. Carl got the first pig, and we agreed to use it for camp meat. We dug a deep pit, heated rocks and poured hot coals over the pig wrapped in foil. What a feast!

We planned an evening hunt in another area. Everyone circled a canyon and converged at the same time, trying to trap the pigs in the area. I was the first on the spot, and being on a high cliff, I could see up and down the canyon. I spotted six large pigs in the bottom of the ravine just as they spotted me.

They ran up the other side of the canyon and disappeared into thin air, except for one that ran over the ridge above. I then saw everyone in the hunting party approaching from different directions, but could not position anyone close enough to see the pigs. I knew there had to be a cave or hole in the rocks, so we all converged on the area.

Sure enough, the pigs had run into a cave barely big enough to squeeze into. It was getting dark, so we had to return to camp for the night. It started raining about 3 a.m., and kept going all morning.

We left camp about 8:30 a.m. and got to the pigs, hoping they still were in the cave. Again, I was there first, and as I approached the hole, I could hear oinking and I could see beady eyes peering out at me.

After everyone arrived, one of the pigs came to the entrance and Dan promptly dropped him in his tracks with a perfectly shot arrow between the eyes. The only trouble was that the pig was now dead about 30 feet in the cave with an unknown number of live pigs right behind him.

It was going to take all the courage one could put together to climb in the deep cave under these conditions.

Dan kept remarking that he had read somewhere "that you should be sure to leave an exit for a trapped pig." That was sound advice as we were to find out.

We finally made a torch out of Dan's tee shirt tied to the end of a 10-foot pole. Dan was first to try to squeeze into the cavern after his pig, but he weighs about 250 pounds, so could not get in far enough. I was then elected to try as I was the skinniest of the bunch.

As I squeezed into the hole, I held the torch out to see, and as I did, it ignited a packrat nest behind the dead pig. The fire blazed up immediately and I backed out, fearing the fire might spook the rest of the pigs. I was blocking their exit!

After a while, the pigs still had not moved so I got another long stick to try to hook the dead pig and drag him out. It just wouldn't work. Someone had to squeeze past the narrowest area and grab the pig.

By this time, it was getting very smoky in the cave, and with an extra push from me, Dan barely hooked the pig and pulled it free. Only a few seconds passed when another pig broke for the entrance, knocking Mert backward into me. We both tumbled backward, making it difficult for any of the others to shoot. Several finally got shots, but the pig was too fast and disappeared over the ridge above us.

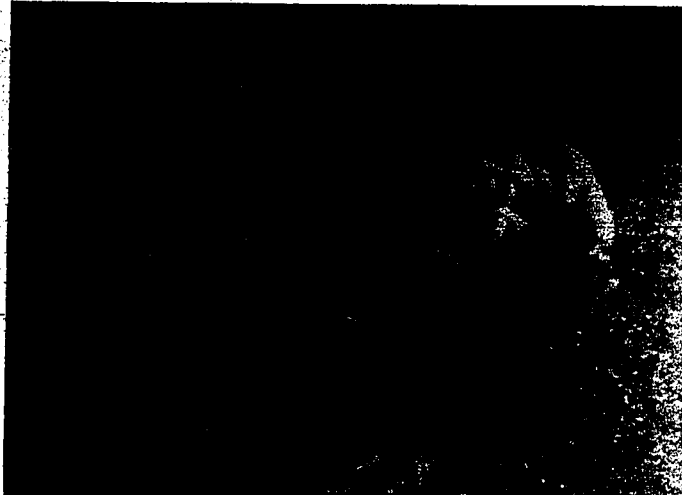

We had to wait only several minutes before another pig appeared. Ken shot it first, then I hit it, making a clean kill. Immediately another pig appeared. I shot first hitting it in the head, but the arrow was at such an angle it ricocheted upward. Jim was next to shoot, and he hit it in the upper shoulder. The pig broke and ran right through us; down the hill and up to another cave on the far side of the canyon.

Ken and Jim went after him, and Jim finally returned to camp to get a flashlight and something to hook the pig deep in the second cave. Ken stayed there and finally made another shot that killed the pig. He got it out just as Jim returned with the flashlight. Mert and I stayed at the first cave because we could hear another pig ready to come out.

After several hours the pig still would not come out, so Mert and I decided to try a long shot deep into the cave. Mert's shot finally hit the pig, and he charged just as everyone was arriving back at the first cave. A volley of arrows greeted him as he charged out.

With all the pigs now gone, I decided to climb as far in the first cave as possible to retrieve the arrows that we had been shooting all day.

I finally managed to squeeze past the narrowest point, and was deep inside when a scorpion scurried from under my shirt and I saw others climbing on the cave walls. The fire had disturbed all the insects and vermin in the cave. Boy, did I make back-up marks in the cave floor! I was terrified!

The hunting party (author far right) pose with their prizes

I did manage to get three of our arrows but left about 10 more to stay forever as far as I'm concerned. Earlier, we had found a set of rattlesnakes rattles at the cave entrance, so I was also very leary of snakes. This made five pigs so far; however, I could not claim any of them, since we had earlier agreed that the person who hits the pig first claims him.

We were up at 6:30 a.m. the next day for coffee and a light breakfast. This was to be the last day of the hunt. Everyone had their pig but me, and we had agreed to break camp about noon to return to Las Vegas.

I took the high ridge and everyone else was strung out down the mountain, I ran into Mert and Carl at the far point where we were to meet, when we jumped pigs. Pigs went everywhere! Mert and I saw some enter a rock pile and gave hot pursuit. Two pigs broke and got away, and our hurried shots missed.

It was then I spotted the pig I finally shot. I got her at the last possible minute, and we had all filled our tags. We broke camp and were on our way to Las Vegas where Jim promised to take me on a photo/sketch trip on Lake Mead.

Boy, did a hot shower and clean sheets feel good. Mert said, "I was so dirty I had to beg the water to come out of the shower."

Look, Ma, one hand

TUBE TALES: We hear that CBS' Bill Moyers has managed to book a lengthy personal interview with Cuba's Fidel Castro.

This would be the first in-depth interview since the U.S.-Cuba chill. It might be the opening spark in the warming up of American and Cuban relations.

Q: What's happened to Gale Gordon, who was so great with Lucille Ball on TV? — M.E., St. Louis.

A: Veteran Gordon, 71, is one of the hottest attractions in the country doing winter and summer stock, dinner theater bookings, etc., all thanks to his years of exposure with comedians like Lucy and Eve Arden.

He's played in "The Sunshine Boys," "Never Too Late" and "Norman Is That You?" He swears he's such a ham he'll never stop acting.

Q: I've read Dean Martin has decided not to make any more record albums. Can this be true? — J.K., Detroit.

A: Dean wants to keep recording and collecting those royalties from all his middle-aged fans but at the present has sued Warner Bros. Records for $1.5 million. He claims they have lost interest in his work and his audience and won't let him cut any new albums.

He says his WB deal still calls for five more albums at $150,000 per, plus a percentage. If Dean wins his case, you'll be able to buy his records again.

Q: Did Rosalind Russell finish the autobiography she was working on before her death? — O.E., Salt Lake City.

A: Working with writer Chris Chase, Roz fortunately completed her book several months before her death. From advance reports, her book is up-beat on life.

Ironically, it was done during some of her sickest and most painful ordeals with arthritis and cancer.

Q: We happen to know that Jackie Onassis is only a fair skier. How does she rate as a horseback rider? — E.L., Boulder, Colo.

A: No question about it — she's a better rider than she is a skier.

Jackie is an ardent and extremely able member of the tally-ho set in Bedminster, N.J. She's always spurring her mount to be up near the front of the hunt — not far behind the fox.

And that's a dangerous place to be because the rider up front hits all the obstacles first.

Q: What's the latest on medical science's efforts to help couples plan the sex of their children before conception? — M.T., Chicago.

A: Ten women in England are taking part in a test that may answer your question. Depending on what time of the month it's used, a new jelly-based compound is supposed to have an effect on the female egg and sperm.

Dr. John Pollard, who developed the jelly, says, if the stuff works, it should be as easy to buy as toothpaste.

WISH YOU'D ASKED THIS ONE: Will Joan Mondale give up her food cooperative now that her husband is the vice president?

No, the co-op that Joan started with 16 other families will continue to flourish. Each member, including Joan, will share the responsibility of buying fresh foods at wholesale prices at the market and divvying them up among the co-ops.

The only change will be that Joan will be sorting potatoes at the elegant vice presidential home that was redone by Nelson Rockefeller.

LYNN REDGRAVE

... annoyed at another actress

Q: Are we crazy or is it true that Mary Hartman's husband, Tom, on the TV show has gained an enormous amount of weight? — R.O., Brooklyn

A: No, Tom, played by Greg Mullavey, hasn't gained an ounce, but Louise Lasser, who plays Mary, seems to be melting away. She's down to 85 pounds, which is why her husband looks so plump.

Q: I think Jerry Lewis and Lynn Redgrave are an odd couple to be co-starring in "Hello, Poppin'." How do they get together? — P.Y., Torrington, Conn.

A: The show has gotten some rotten reviews on its pre-Broadway tour while doing a sell-out business.

But all is not well between the American comic and the British star.

Because of all the rewrites, Miss Redgrave thinks she has lost ground, and is particularly annoyed that some of the better, new material has been given to another actress in the cast, in whom Lewis has taken a very personal interest.

CHARLOTTE RAMPLING

... waiting for the baby

Q: It's fascinating how celebrities are "in" one year and "out" the next. For example, where's Charlotte Rampling this year after all the publicity two years ago? Has she disappeared from the "in" set? — H.S., Rochester, N.Y.

A: Charlotte is still very much in the swing of things. She completed a couple of European movies last year. Right now, however, she is taking life quietly. She is spending time in Paris with her lover, Jean-Michel Jarre, waiting for the birth of their child in late March.

Q: Any truth to the rumor John Wayne nearly died while making his best-ever film, "The Shootist"? — Q.M., Denver

A: It was a carefully kept secret but Big John collapsed on the set after a bout of flu. "And because he has only one lung, it could have been fatal," says producer Dino De Laurentiis. "It looked for a while like 'The Shootist' would be John's last as well as his best film."

Q: Why is it that you never read interviews with "Tonight" show host Johnny Carson? Doesn't he realize that the public is interested in reading about him? — W.P., Erie, Pa.

A: Carson realizes but doesn't care. He hates interviews and refuses to give them.

Q: We've read only good things about Liz Taylor's new husband, John Warner. What do you hear from his enemies? — R.L., Chevy Chase, Md.

A: Nobody really hates the man. The worst you hear is that he's very vain — a total peacock who has enough clothes to stock a goateed man's store.

The key to his marriage, his detractors say, is that Warner is bedazzled by celebrities and very star-happy. They're also betting the marriage won't last a year.

Q: I saw Jean Peters' comeback in "The Horsechangers" on TV and I'm wondering if she has made claims on the Howard Hughes estate. — W.A., Hays, Kansas.

A: When Jean was allowed to get her divorce from Hughes, a financial settlement was arranged. Like everything else connected with the mystery man, the financial details were never made public.

Speculation is that the divorce deal called for at least $50,000 per year for the rest of Jean's life.

BURT LANCASTER

... still hates publicity

Q: What's Burt Lancaster's private life like? This long-time fan never sees anything personal about Burt in print. — D.M., Boston

A: Burt's legendary hatred of personal publicity has gotten even worse since 1971, when he and his wife divorced after 30 years of marriage and five children. Currently, he shares a Los Angeles apartment with Jackie Bone, a 47-year-old hairdresser and spends as much time as possible with his children.

Q: I loved Lesley-Anne Down of "Staircase Downstairs" who is in the new Flink Farber comedy. Can you tell me something about her love life? — E.E., Atlanta.

A: Lovely Lesley spends most of her time in London with American actor Bruce Robinson. You might have seen him in the Truffaut film, "The Story of Adèle H." After a seven-year love affair, they're considering marriage.

BURT REYNOLDS

... beached at the hospital

INSIDE STORY OF THE WEEK: We hear that Burt Reynolds is in a Palm Beach hospital suffering from nervous exhaustion. Now what do you suppose got old Burt so worn out?

Q: Is it true that Dean Martin has dated skater Dorothy Hamill? — R.G., Butte, Mont.

A: It's not Dean but his 25-year-old son Dino, now separated from his British actress-wife Olivia Hussey, who is quite taken with the petite skating star. They were introduced last year by Dino's best friend, Desi Arnaz, Jr.

Q: I never see my old favorite Efrem Zimbalist Jr. in movies or TV anymore. What's the story there? — V.E., Alexandria, Va.

A: Zimbalist has dropped out of acting and is devoting most of his time to politics. He was a Republican delegate from California at the convention in Kansas City and now is being pressed to run against Governor Brown in the next gubernatorial race.

'Roots,' a dynamic family history, comes to TV

By JOHN HANAUER
UPI Television Writer
NEW YORK (UPI)
Alex Haley spent 12 years searching for an intangible that slavery stole from black Americans — his identity as part of an ethnic group with an identity and culture beyond the American experience.

Blacks in America traditionally have been identified by themselves and others, in terms of what was done to them. Their history, as far as they know it, began in slavery, and they can claim only vague roots somewhere in Africa.

Haley went back to find out who his ancestors were, where in Africa they came from, how they came to be sold into slavery, and what happened to them as slaves and freedmen. His story, told in the bestselling book "Roots," comes to television via ABC-TV's startling today at 7 p.m. Mountain time in a 12-hour presentation over eight consecutive nights, a method of putting a novel on the air that hasn't been tried before.

After two-hour episodes Jan. 23 and 24, "Roots" will be shown from 8-9 p.m., mountain time, Jan. 25-27, goes to two hours Jan. 28, back to one-hour Jan. 29, and winds up Jan. 30, 7-9 p.m., mountain time.

It makes for stunning television theater.

The first two segments of the program get "Roots" off to a rousing start, although they are very different.

"Roots" begins in The Gambia, West Africa, in 1750 with the birth of Kunta Kinte, who was "the African" about whom Haley's grandmother once told him stories.

Kunta Kinte is shown growing up in an idyllic pastoral setting, perhaps somewhat romanticized, but a far cry from the old-fashioned stereotype of primitive savagery.

The boy, only recently having completed his manhood rites, is captured by slavers. The scenes that follow, as the captives are caged on a beach—then stuffed into a slave ship like perishable but not very valuable goods — there are arguments for both "tight pack" and "loose pack" of human cargo — are horribly realistic.

LeVar Burton as the young Kunta Kinte, Cicely Tyson as his mother and Thelma Houston as his father bring to the screen a warm family picture before it is shattered by Ralph Waite as an evil white trader who'll do anything to get rich and Edward Asner as a moralistic ship's captain corrupted by slavery.

The slaves aboard ship, most of whom do not speak a common language and don't even understand what the ocean is, try to take over "the white man's canoe," but the rebellion fails and they are sold at Annapolis. Here Kunta Kinte is bought by Lorne Greene and finds both a friend in Louis Gossett Jr. and a cruel overseer in Vic Morrow.

The story continues through the week until Jan. 30 when the emancipated black family, harassed by nightriders and exploited by the greedy, moves to Hennings, Tenn. That's where Alex Haley first heard his grandmother speak of "the African."

Brandon Stoddard, ABC vice president who has seen the "Roots" project through from the beginning, speaks proudly of the show. Those who have read the book will find minor differences, and Stoddard explained in an interview:

"First of all, when we bought 'Roots' two years ago... it was only one-third finished. We worked off it; I don't know how many drafts of 'Roots.' At one point we were working with 2,800 pages and there were some things in the drafts that did not wind up in the Doubleday book.

"Then there were the dramatic changes — to have a slave talking inside his head for an hour is okay in a book but doesn't play too well on television. But there is nothing in 'Roots' that Alex didn't wholeheartedly approve."

Stoddard said the innovative scheduling was done for maximum impact.

"'Roots' is an event in itself," Stoddard said. "It's not like 'Rich Man, Poor Man,' which spanned 20 years in the amount of television time that 'Roots' covers 117 years.

"With 'Rich Man, Poor Man' each episode ended with a man on a cliff. But with 'Roots' the mood changes, the characters change and you can go into 'Roots' at any point, miss a night and go back to it, and not be confused.

"We don't expect 90 million Americans never to go out to dinner or visit Aunt Sally's from Jan. 23 through Jan. 30. I do think a lot of people will be watching at least three or four episodes."

In a way, "Roots," which cost ABC $5 million, is a gamble.

"Obviously there has never been a television drama which deals with blacks on a long term basis," Stoddard said. "But there are attitudes and emotions here that have nothing to do with black and white. I'm a New England WASP and I find myself responding to it enormously."

Open door policy works for solon

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Beginning his 12th term as Secretary of State of North Carolina at age 77, Thad Eure billed as "The Oldest Rat in the Democratic barn."

He figures he's still there because he never closes the door.

Eure came to office during Franklin D. Roosevelt's first term, wearing a jaunty bow tie — still his trademark — and signing his name with green ink.

Eure opened the door to his Capitol office and never let it close, a policy that he believes has kept him in office while other politicians have come and gone.

"It's wide open all the time, with the emphasis on all," Eure said Wednesday. "If there's anyone else in public office who can say that, I haven't heard about it."

Two decades ago Eure was nicknamed "The Oldest Rat in the Democratic Barn." by John Lanning, who was then the state Democratic chairman and is now a federal judge.

"He goes all over the state," says Ernest Messer, a member of the state legislature from Haywood County and a friend of many years. "He likes to meet people. He remembers them."

Eure said that when he took office in 1936, "I sat down in the same chair I'm sitting in right now. There isn't a piece of furniture in this office that wasn't here when I came here."

"His campaign technique hasn't changed much, either."

"There's never been a school group in this state, who wanted to visit this office or visit with me who didn't do so," he said.
