By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN
Times News Writer

CAREY — A Cherokee single-engine propeller plane crashed here Thursday, killing three Carey men and hospitalizing a fourth.

The pilot of the small plane, Gail Hansen, 43, and two passengers, Carl Peterson, 24, and Dick Funke, 33, were killed instantly, according to Halley Sheriff Deputy Donald "Duke" Green.

A fourth passenger in the plane, Richard Peterson, 21, was taken to Blaine County Community hospital Tuesday and was reported in stable condition today.

The crash occurred about 2:30 p.m. Thursday, according to Green.

The plane's destination was Boise, Green said. Apparently a wing hit the ground while the plane was still making the eastward turn from the runway, according to Green. This drove the plane nose down into the earth of a snow-covered plowed grain field, he said.

This impact then apparently threw the body of the plane up into the air, turning it and twisting it, so that it finally landed on its side about 80 feet from where the wing initially hit the ground.

Two bare spots in the snow showed where the plane wing had touched the ground.

The plane lay Wednesday in the field, facing the air strip about 356 feet away.

One wing was completely severed from the body of the plane and the nose had collapsed from the impact of the crash.

Glass and debris were scattered around the wreck. A gold watchband was found embedded in the soil about 10 feet from the plane.

The plane was owned by Hansen, who received his pilot's license last December, according to a pilot's license found at the wreck by investigating officers.

People arrived at the crash site within five minutes of the incident Thursday, according to Green. But only Richard Peterson, who was seated in the back, was alive.

Almost miraculously, the plane did not catch fire after the crash.

"There was just no spark at all," Green said.

He said, however, you could smell fuel on the ground on the spot where the plane's wing first hit, some 80 feet from where the plane wreckage lay.

Federal Aviation Administration officials from Boise were expected to arrive at the crash site, Green said. They will investigate the incident for probable causes.

Green and two local Carey residents were remaining at the site this morning to watch the plane until the FAA officials arrived.

An unnamed woman apparently witnessed the crash, Green said.

Mr. Funke, a prominent rancher had owned and operated the D-Bar-N ranch here since 1971. He was a former resident of Burley and moved to Carey in 1959 from that area. He is survived by his wife, Juanita and two young children. Funke was active in Farm Bureau and other Blaine County organizations.

Hansen, also a rancher in the Carey area, leaves his widow and a young family. He had resided in the Carey area for many years.

Peterson, a long-time resident of Carey, was engaged in a sheep ranching business with his father, James Peterson and other members of the family. He was unmarried.

Wood River Chapel in Halley is in charge of funeral arrangements for both Funke and Hansen and Marvel Chapel Area is in charge of the Peterson services.

Tense moment

Hostage safe after three day ordeal

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Anthony Kirilits, who held a real estate executive hostage for three days with a shotgun wired to his neck, let the man go Thursday night in return for promises of $5 million ransom and immunity from prosecution — which were immediately withdrawn.

As Kirilits stood on a balcony and fired the shotgun in the air in apparent celebration of a victory over the real estate company he claimed cheated him and the police who surrounded him, officers sprang and subdued him.

He was held today at the Marion County Jail in lieu of $250,000 bail on state kidnapping charges.

The "dynamite" which Kirilits, 44, claimed he had boobytrapped his apartment with keeping police at bay — turned out to be two one-gallon cans of gasoline.

The hostage, Richard Hall, 42, was taken to Wishard Hospital but he was released quickly. His only injuries had been a bad cut from the strap which had been wrapped around his neck and bruises to his wrists.

A doctor there said Hall was in "excellent spirits" and hungry. He asked for some soup, which he ate while laughing and talking with Mayor Richard Hudnut, the doctor and his wife.

Less than an hour earlier, Kirilits was still holding a shotgun to Hall's head as he faced television cameras in a live news conference punctuated with obscenities. He kept Hall on the deadly leash minutes later while he reviewed a list granting all his demands, including immunity and a $5 million ransom from Hall's firm.

"Looks fine, looks fine," Kirilits said. Then he released Hall to a balcony and fired the shotgun. Police rushed him and subdued him.

A few minutes later, officials withdrew all the promises that had been made to Kirilits.

It was unknown whether federal charges would be filed against Kirilits. U.S. Attorney James Young had refused to bargain with Kirilits while Hall was a captive.

Kirilits abducted Hall at 8:30 a.m. Tuesday from Hall's office in Indianapolis and took him to Kirilits's apartment. Kirilits had two one-gallon cans of gasoline and some wiring in the residence, but he told police the apartment was wired with 100 pounds of dynamite.

Kirilits claimed Hall had cheated him by trying to force him to default on a mortgage issued on land Kirilits wanted for a shopping center.

The break in the apartment house siege came Thursday evening when Kirilits, screaming, dragged Hall out of his own building on a forced march through a phalanx of newsmen to the recreation room of another building nearby.

Facing the cameras, 150 reporters and family members, Kirilits let loose with a ranting diatribe.

"Stand back or I'll kill this son of a bitch. I'll blow his goddammed head off," Kirilits warned.

TF recall launched

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times News Writer

TWIN FALLS — A recall movement for the three Twin Falls County commissioners was launched in a special citizens meeting here Thursday night.

John Durham, Twin Falls, said about 25 persons, who oppose the Twin Falls County Comprehensive Plan, met at his home to discuss circulating recall petitions.

Durham said today the grounds for recall will be that county officials are violating the oath they took when they entered office, saying they would uphold the constitutions of the United States and Idaho.

He said the committee has found some 27 points on which the proposed county plan violates the constitutional rights of residents of the county.

Durham said his group plans to meet with the county commissioners and give them an opportunity to abandon the plan and to assure the people they intend to uphold the constitution.

"We would like to give the commissioners our list of points the plan violates the constitution and ask they take it to the county attorney for a review and verification of the constitutional violations," Durham said.

He said he has not checked to see how many signatures the petitions will require but plans to do so and to obtain the necessary percentage of registered voters for a recall election.

"It isn't hard to recall someone if you are willing to work hard and we know we will have to work at it," Durham said.

He said the group also plans to attend a prior public information meeting on the county plan next Wednesday and one in Bulli the following week to gather opposing residents to its cause.

County Commissioner William L. Chaney said this morning he and other commissioners have taken no action as yet on the county plan, but in calling for its development the county officials are carrying out the Idaho law as set by the state legislature.

"Perhaps these people are going after the wrong public officials. Maybe they should start with the state legislators who passed the law requiring counties to prepare such plans," Chaney said.

Durham said petitions will be in circulation as soon as they are prepared and it is hoped there will be sufficient signatures for a recall vote by the time the public hearing on the comprehensive plan is held in the spring.

Price hike continues

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Wholesale prices rose 0.5 per cent in January to continue the recent trend of moderating inflation, the Labor Department reported today. But the figure does not reflect the full impact of the frigid winter.

The 6 per cent annual rate of increase is in the lowest range of what we'll be seeing for several more months," said Dr. John Kendrick, one of the government's leading economists.

Kendrick said only food prices, which will reflect the January freeze, and building materials prices are expected to increase at a faster rate.

Kendrick noted fuel prices actually fell in January, despite increases imposed by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

The fuels and power group of the Wholesale Price Index declined 0.4 per cent from December.

The index stood at 188.0 compared to a 100 base in 1976. That means goods which cost $100 in 1976 cost $188 in January.

The January increase was the lowest in five months, matching the 0.5 per cent gain in October. Prices were only 4.9 per cent higher than a year ago, which is moderate compared to the rampant inflation of 1974 and 1975.

Construction materials such as concrete and wood products, steel, aluminum and other metals were the primary upward forces in January, the department said.

Prices for processed foods, cereals, cheeses and baked goods actually increased at a more moderate rate than December despite predictions that the severe cold weather over much of the country would lead to increases.

"The January WPI does not reflect the full price impact of the severe winter weather that has affected much of the nation over the past several weeks," the department said. "Prices for most commodities were those in effect as of Jan. 11."

Roseworth cattleman named to hall of fame

By KEN HODGE, Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS—Well-known Roseworth area cattleman Rolland Patrick has been named to the Idaho Livestock Hall of Fame for outstanding achievement in the cattle industry.

He will be honored at a banquet Feb. 22 in the Twin Falls Holiday Inn.

Patrick has been a lifetime resident and cattleman in the Roseworth and Castleford areas where he operates a year-around cattle operation.

Rolly Patrick was born April 19, 1916 on the twin falls ranch, less than 20 miles from the ranch he now calls home. His parents were pioneers of the Three Creek area where Rolly learned about ranching at an early age. Rolly's father, Earl, won the same Hall of Fame award in 1972.

Rolly recalls his first experience with a weak cattle market. In 1934 when he was trying to earn enough money to attend college at Pocatello. He drove 15 head of cattle to market at Independent Meat Co. in Twin Falls that year where they brought two cents a pound. The largest steer he had weighed 1,640 pounds and brought whopping $2.20. His college career was a short one.

Meanwhile, on a ranch about 30 miles from Rolly's lived a little redhead who was to play a very important part in his life. On May 7, 1929, Rolly was married. Beth Brackett and, after a year and two of trucking they moved to the Brown's Bench Ranch where Beth had grown up. While living on this ranch, the Patricks became the parents of three daughters.

In 1945 they purchased the Devil Creek Ranch from president of the Idaho Cattleman's Association. He served 14 years of the Boise District Advisory Board for the Bureau of Land Management and served on the State and National Advisory Board and is still a member of those boards.

He was chairman of the District and State BLM Advisory Boards and has served as chairman for public funds, for bull sales and for the Industry Information Council. He also served on the nominating committee for the Idaho Cattleman's Association. He is a member of the Masonic Lodge and the Castleford Men's Club.

Beth and Rolly's daughters have nine children. In 1972 they formed a family corporation, including their daughters' families, the Randall-Brewers who live on the Devil Creek Ranch. The Mike Macaws and the Joe Conrads, both of Boise.

Hard work has been a way of life for Rolly but nothing can change his inherently good disposition, generosity and kindness to all. He believes all people are as good as their word. To Rolly, the rewards of ranching outweigh the drudgery. He hopes there is enough interest in ranching for a new generation to continue a way of life that produces the kind of people that have made America great.

TF planners turn down subdivision

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES, Times-News Writer
TWIN FALLS—A proposal for a 20-acre subdivision just south of Twin Falls was turned down by the Twin Falls County Planning and Zoning Board Thursday night.

John Anderson, Twin Falls, applied for a zone change on the 20-acre site in order to develop the area into one-acre housing lots. The property is located about two and one-half miles south of East Five Points on South Blue Lakes Boulevard.

The area is presently zoned agriculture and is surrounded by farm lands. Zoning board members had taken the application under advisement following a public hearing in last month's board meeting.

At that time a large number of residents of the area appeared to protest the request on grounds the increased housing would not fit in with the agricultural zoning in the area and the additional homes would create pollution and a threat to water in the area.

About 50 persons living north of the county fair grounds at Filer, attended the public hearing Thursday night on a proposed zone change on a half-mile area just north of the fairgrounds. The hearing covered a request from Beans, Inc. to have zone change from commercial to industrial to permit them to expand their bean warehouse business.

Zoning board members scheduled the entire half-mile area for industrial to eliminate spot zoning. Home owners in the area objected to so large an industrial zone adjacent to residential areas, saying it would devalue their property.

The zoning board instructed Zoning Administrator Ed Woods to check with the county attorney to determine if a zone change can be granted on the property owned by Beans, Inc. only. Residents in the area stated in the public hearing they would have no objection to an industrial zone on the property in question but did not favor opening up a half-mile area to industrial development.

The zoning board approved a variance for Jim Hopkins, Buhl, to allow him to expand his funeral chapel on U.S. 30 at the edge of Buhl by about 800 square feet.

Hopkins withdrew an earlier request for a conditional use following a hearing last month when it was explained the conditional use would be in effect only during his ownership of the property and if sold the next owner would not be able to expand the business.

Approval was also given Wayne Hash to allow him to expand an automobile repair shop he owns and operates just north of the Filer city limits.

Actions taken Thursday night by the zoning board will be presented to the Twin Falls County commissioners for their final approval or disapproval.

State employes plan hits snag in Idaho legislature

BOISE (UPI) — A new pay plan for state employes hit a snag in the Idaho Legislature Thursday while Republicans looked at alternatives to provide tax relief to the state's citizens in the face of a gubernatorial veto of a $7.8 million property tax relief bill.

It was revealed during debate in the Senate on a Democratic version to implement the Hay administrative salary plan that both the GOP proposal and the minority resolution were defective.

Sen. Richard High, R-Twin Falls, co-chairman of the Joint Finance Appropriations Committee, said both the Republican and the Democratic versions should be withdrawn.

He explained the intent in implementing the Hay Plan was to freeze some 110 employes who were already 15 percent or more above the prevailing pay schedule.

Both resolutions contained the same wording with that regard, High said.

Sen. Minority Leader Cy Chase, D-SL, Maries, sponsor of the minority pay proposal, asked that his resolution be held on the calendar until two new resolutions are drafted and there can be hearings on the new proposals.

The Republican version already has passed the Senate and is up for second reading in the House on Friday.

The Democratic proposal calls for $9.8 million in general fund monies to implement the Hay Plan, while the GOP measure only provides a $7.8 million from the general fund.

House Majority Leader Walter Liffie, R-New Plymouth, said the Republican pay proposal would be up for final reading in the House on Monday. He said it was at the bottom of the calendar and if there were still problems it would be held there.

Meantime, GOP caucus in both houses took a look at a one-year elimination of the $10 filing fee charged income taxpayers to provide tax relief and replacing the estimated $2.8 million it would take out of the building fund with general fund money.

They looked at the $10 head tax as a means of tax relief after Democratic Gov. John V. Evans indicated he would veto a bill to give $7.8 million in property tax relief by permanently reducing the eight-mill school levy to four mills.

House caucus chairman B.E. Lewis, R-St. Maries, indicated Republicans fell it will be futile to pursue the property tax relief proposal if Evans votes the four-mill reduction.

"We recognize we can override it (a veto) here but can't in the Senate," he said. "So we've got to be realistic."

After the Senate caucus, Sen. Walter Yarbrough, R-Grand View, said eliminating the head tax for one year was "a fair way to give relief to the people with what we believe will be surplus."

"It's better to give tax relief on a temporary basis than not give at all and spend more money than absolutely necessary," Yarbrough said.

House Republicans in their caucus also discussed reestablishment of a temporary $1 million emergency fund created in 1974 to help combat this year's anticipated drought.

Elsewhere on the legislative scene:

— Rep. Dorothy Reynolds, D-Caldwell, led a move that buried in committee a bill to impose stringent penalties on teachers who strike, calling the measure "anti-people" and an "insult" to the educational profession.

— Legislation rendering null and void a regulation the bans fishing from a raft or boat on part of the Snake River was introduced by the House Resources and Conservation Committee.

— The House State Affairs Committee put off until Monday consideration of a revised bill to strengthen the state's open meeting law after concern was expressed by Port of Lewiston authorities about proposed deletion from the law of a provision for executive sessions to discuss "trade and commerce."

— House taxwriters voted 10-7 to hold for further study the governor's proposed circuit breaker property tax relief to elderly renters. The action, that committee generally means the bill is dead.

Confirmation of Gem aides hinges on senate action

BOISE (UPI) — Whether Mathew Mullaney of Boise serves as a member of the Idaho Public Utilities Commission and William Kosterman of Nampa is appointed to the State Racing Commission hinges on the votes of 35 state senators.

Confirmation of the two has typically moved to the Senate floor with a recommendation that he not be confirmed and Kosterman with the endorsement of the State Affairs Committee.

The State Affairs Committee voted earlier this week 22-22 against Mullaney's appointment to the PUC. He was appointed by former Gov. Cecil D. Andrus prior to his resignation as Idaho's chief executive to become Secretary of State.

Andrus also reappointed Kosterman to the racing commission and the committee voted 7-3 for his confirmation, although two committee members who voted to send his name to the floor for approval said they may vote against him.

Sen. Minority Leader Cy Chase, D-SL, Maries, sponsor of the minority pay proposal, asked that his resolution be held on the calendar until two new resolutions are drafted and there can be hearings on the new proposals.

The Republican version already has passed the Senate and is up for second reading in the House on Friday.

The Democratic proposal calls for $9.8 million in general fund monies to implement the Hay Plan while the GOP measure only provides $7.8 million from the general fund.

House Majority Leader Walter Liffie, R-New Plymouth, said the Republican pay proposal would be up for final reading in the House on Monday. He said it was at the bottom of the calendar and if there were still problems it would be held there.

Meantime, GOP caucus in both houses took a look at a one-year elimination of the $10 filing fee charged income taxpayers to provide tax relief and replacing the estimated $2.8 million it would take out of the building fund with general fund money.

They looked at the $10 head tax as a means of tax relief after Democratic Gov. John V. Evans indicated he would veto a bill to give $7.8 million in property tax relief by permanently reducing the eight-mill school levy to four mills.

Taxpayers 'doomed'?

BOISE (UPI) — The state chairman of the Republican Party said Gov. John V. Evans' decision to veto the permanent reduction of the four mill county school levy has "doomed" every Idaho taxpayer.

Vernon Ravenscroft, Tuttle, said Thursday. "This action is in direct contradiction of the governor's state-of-the-state message in which he promised no new taxes."

"The county school levy is an established tax but four mills of that levy have been excused by legislative action each of the last three years. To re-impose the levy now will add nearly $8 million dollars to the tax burden at a time when many of our people will also be struggling to cope with emergency expenses brought about by the drought, energy scarcity and inflation."

Evans told a meeting of Ada County Democrats Wednesday he would veto a bill calling for a permanent four mill reduction of the eight mill school levy.

Medicare coverage asked

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Legislature is providing for Medicare coverage of services rendered by paramedics and nurse practitioners in rural areas was introduced Thursday in Congress.

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, joined 25 senators in cosponsoring the bill.

Under the changes it is suggesting payment would be made for care provided by certified paramedic in a rural clinic setting with periodic review by a licensed physician, Church said.

Presently Medicare does not cover medical services of nonphysicians or nurse practitioners unless these services are rendered in the presence of a physician, Church said.

The legislation "meets head on the problem of rural communities which can support a clinic but cannot afford a full time physician," Church said.

Church also joined in sponsoring legislation to change federal mine safety laws.

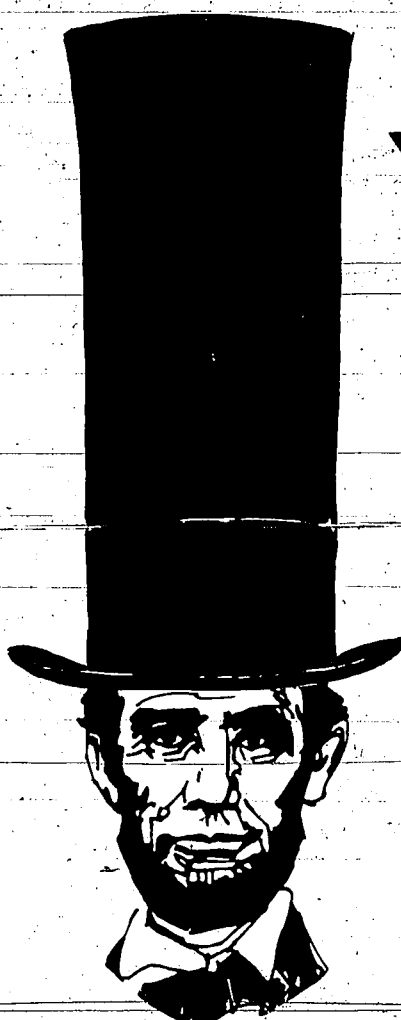

The legislation calls for transferring responsibility for mine safety to the Department of Labor from the Department of the Interior.

Charging that "there are no teeth" in existing laws, Church said, "miners still go into the mines without basic safety training, minimal civil penalties for safety violations discourage the capital investment necessary to improve dangerous working conditions and the government is without the power to bring continuing violations to a halt."

Transferring the safety jurisdiction would end a "basic conflict of interest," he said.

On one hand the Interior Department "is expected to work in close cooperation with the mining industry to maximize production while on the other it is called upon to interrupt production when necessary for mine safety reasons," Church said.

Agribusiness interests still dominate

"I owe the special interests nothing."

—President Carter

By MARTHA ANGLE & ROBERT WALTERS
Perhaps the most frequently used line in the 1976 presidential campaign was the proclamation used by then-Democratic candidate Jimmy Carter at the close of virtually every stump speech:

"My relationship with the people is where I get my counsel, my advice, my support. I owe the special interests nothing. I owe the people everything."

Carter has sought to perpetuate that image of the "people's president" through the use of a handful of carefully selected, highly publicized gestures—sending his daughters, Amy to a Washington public school, walking the entire route of the inaugural parade and stripping his White House staff of limousines for travel to and from work.

But with far less hoopla and fanfare, Carter has acquiesced to the wishes of the "special interests" of agribusiness in a matter of considerably more substance and import to the American people—selection of an Assistant Secretary of Agriculture for Marketing and Consumer Services, the federal official perhaps most important to the country's consumers of food.

The holder of that title has direct responsibility for all meat, poultry and egg inspection programs; establishment of standards, grades and classifications for a host of food products; implementation of marketing orders which affect the price of many foods; and administration of the food stamp, child nutrition and other supplemental food programs for the poor.

The Assistant Secretary's decisions affect every consumer's pocketbook as he or she goes into a supermarket. The amount of non-meat "filler" in a package of bologna, the level of chemicals allowed in a dressed chicken and the criteria for grading a slice of beef "choice" rather than "good" all are decisions in which that official is intimately involved.

Selection to fill the latter position was Robert H. Meyer, of Brawley, Calif., whose credentials were impressive to both the food industry and Carter, a fellow farmer-businessman. He is the proprietor of a large cotton farm in California's Central Valley and served as that state's chairman of the Food and Agriculture Committee for Carter during last year's campaign.

"The Carter people told the California growers months ago that they were looking for someone who was a producer or producer-oriented," said one Capitol Hill source who suggested that the "people's president's" never was serious about placing a consumer advocate in charge of federal food programs.

election to advise the president-elect on the thousand of appointments he is required to make throughout the federal bureaucracy.

But two weeks before Carter was inaugurated, what one insider described as "the old boy network of growers and marketing people" began an unpublicized but intensive lobbying campaign to either deny Foreman the nomination or to strip from her position most of the functions which could directly affect their operations.

In one case, the Missouri Meat Packers Association wrote Sen. Herman E. Talmeridge, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, to say that "we urge you to join Sen. Richard B. Stone, D-Fla., in opposing" the Foreman nomination. But Stone, although also the object of industry pressure, had not even taken a position on the issue.

Some groups are too embarrassed to discuss their behind-the-scenes lobbying. "You'll just have to go with a 'no comment,'" said a spokesman for the National Broiler Council, a major poultrymen's trade association, when asked to discuss his organization's opposition to Foreman.

Other groups whose members were involved in the stop-Foreman campaign included the California and Florida citrus growers, National Cattlemen's Assn. and American Meat Institute. One of the people willing to candidly discuss the matter was AMI President Richard Lyng.

"Everybody in the food business was nervous because they've never had somebody like her appointed to this job," said Lyng. "I think it's kind of a knee-jerk reaction, but Carol Foreman has been very outspoken on consumer issues."

As a result of that pressure, Foreman was offered a fancy new title, Assistant Secretary for Nutrition and Consumer Services, but precious little authority over federal food programs. That power will go to a newly designated Assistant Secretary for Marketing Services.

Selected to fill the latter position was Robert H. Meyer, of Brawley, Calif., whose credentials were impressive to both the food industry and Carter, a fellow farmer-businessman. He is the proprietor of a large cotton farm in California's Central Valley and served as that state's chairman of the Food and Agriculture Committee for Carter during last year's campaign.

"The Carter people told the California growers months ago that they were looking for someone who was a producer or producer-oriented," said one Capitol Hill source who suggested that the "people's president's" never was serious about placing a consumer advocate in charge of federal food programs.

Carter's stand on human rights

President Carter clearly wants the impression left that he is not backing off the issue of human rights in the wake of the confusion now surrounding it. After a meeting with Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin the White House issued a statement quoting Mr. Carter as saying, "We are not attacking the Soviet Union, but we are expressing our commitment on human rights."

There would seem to be an inconsistency here since it is hard to see how the United States can comment publicly on human-rights violations in the Soviet Union, as the State Department did the other day, without chiding the Soviet Union. But insofar as the President is indicating that he will not let the human-rights problem become an obstacle to diplomatic progress on crucial bilateral issues, his position is a welcome one.

Secretary of State Vance put the matter in good perspective when he said that human rights must be nourished everywhere but that the United States would speak out openly on the subject only "from time to time" and without being strident or polemical. He is too experienced a diplomat not to know that America must deal realistically with nations whose governments are repugnant to it and that more can usually be accomplished through behind-the-scenes diplomacy to relieve injustice than by shaming authoritarian countries in public.

Americans do not want the United States to conduct a self-righteous moral crusade. At the same time they do not want their government to feel constrained from speaking out openly about oppression when occasion warrants or, as happened in the Ford-Kissinger era, to refrain from inviting such an eminent writer as Solzhenitsyn to the White House. It should be perceived in the world that the United States acts according to its principles.

Nor should it be ruled out that public statements can have a positive impact. The reported easing of conditions for dissidents in Czechoslovakia could well be a response to the attention given by the U.S. and other governments to Prague's recent repressions.

In the end, however, America's concern for human values will most fully be embodied in what it does rather than what it says. It will be mirrored in its goals—in its efforts to relieve the world of threatening arms and inhuman poverty—and in the zest and purposefulness with which it pursues them. The Carter administration is still feeling its way in the sensitive realm of international morality. But it appears to be finding a sensible balance.

Debate goes on over man's origins

By CRISTINE RUSSELL
Washington Star

WASHINGTON—It's an old argument with a new twist.

The issues dramatically raised in the Scopes "monkey trial" more than 50 years ago—evolution versus creationism—continue to be debated today, with creationists battling scientists for equal time in the schools.

This time, members of the scientific and academic community—100 of them, including prominent paleontologist George Gaylord Simpson, author Isaac Asimov, Nobel Prize winners Linus Pauling and James Watson, and psychologists Carl Rogers and B. F. Skinner—are fighting back, taking the offensive with a strong statement affirming "evolution as a principle of science" and decrying creationism as "a purely religious issue."

The statement, sent to major school boards across the country, argues that "for many years it has been well established scientifically that all known forms of life, including human beings, have developed by a lengthy process of evolution."

The signers of the statement say that "there are no alternative theories to the principle of evolution, with its 'tree of life' pattern, that any competent biologist of today takes seriously."

and that the principle "is firmly established in the view of the modern scientific community."

It's always difficult to get a group of scientists to agree on a simplified definition of anything, but the statement attempts to boil down the complex scientific view of evolution this way:

"Very primitive forms of life, ancestral to all living forms, came into being thousands of millions of years ago. They constituted the trunk of a 'tree of life' that in growing branched more and more. That is, some of the later descendants of these earliest living things, in growing more complex, became ever more diverse and increasingly different from one another. Humans and the other 'higher' organized types of today constitute the present twig-end of that tree. The human twig and that of the apes sprang from the same apelike progenitor branch."

That's a roundabout way of saying that we're relatives of the apes but not direct descendants.

The statement acknowledges that the principle is not an "absolute certainty" but contends that it is "based on rigorous evidence" that has "continued to withstand searching criticism."

It is published in the current issue of The Humanist, the journal of the American Humanist Association and was issued out of concern, according to Humanist Editor Dr. Paul Kurtz, "about attacks on evolution throughout the country" and demands by creationist groups that their views be included in school classes.

Bills have appeared in recent years in several state legislatures to assure that the teaching of creationism appears side by side with evolution in science texts, but most recently the thrust of such groups as the Creation Research Group has been convincing local school boards and administrations to adopt their views.

A victory was scored in Dallas last month when a biology book containing the theory of the creation of man, as written in the Book of Genesis as well as the process of evolution was approved by the school district for use by high school students.

School board president Bill Hunter was quoted as saying, the book "recognizes that both evolution and creation are philosophical concepts or theories and that science needs to present the facts and let the people make their own conclusions."

Some supporters of the fundamentalist or creationist view even suggest that evolution is itself a religious concept, part of a modern "secular" outlook.

The signers of the Humanist statement strongly disagree. They argue that the creationist approach, which is based upon a literal interpretation of the Bible, "is a purely religious view held by some religious sects and persons and strongly opposed by other religious sects and persons. Evolution is the only presently known scientific and not religious explanation for the existence and diversity of living organisms. It is therefore the only view which should be expounded in public school courses on science."

While many of the signers are scientists, they are joined by several religious leaders who take the view that evolution may be a "manifestation of divine intervention in natural processes."

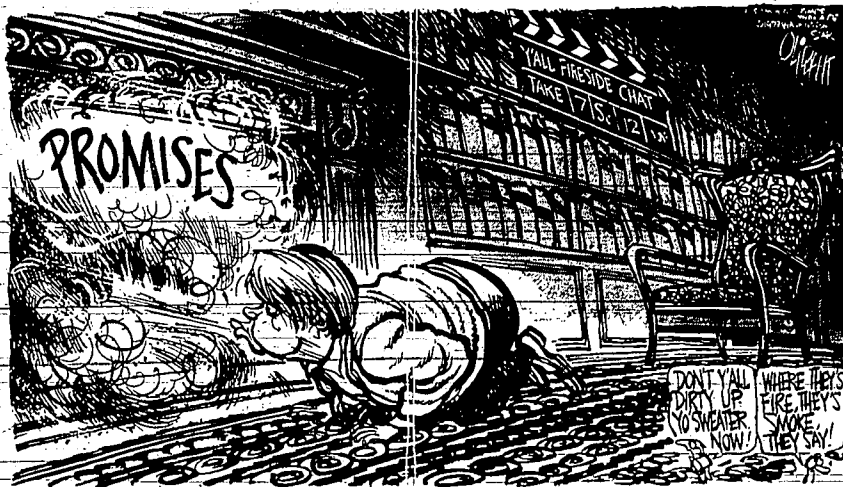

While President Carter didn't sign—"I didn't ask him. I figured he was too busy," says Kurtz—he did respond during the campaign with a carefully-composed letter. Carter said he had never opposed the teaching of evolution in public schools. "An important tenet of the Baptist faith is complete separation of church and state. I hold this view."

What effect is the declaration likely to have?

Kurtz, a philosophy professor at the State University of New York in Buffalo, said during a recent telephone interview that he didn't expect the statement to convert any creationists but he hoped that it might influence some school board members to "stand against them."

In 1975 the same approach was used to attack astrology, and, emphasizes that, unlike that statement, elicited widespread publicity, but it didn't seem to have any effect.

"Since we issued that statement astrology has been growing," admitted Kurtz.

It does pay to read

At a time when we hear so much about the decline in reading ability among the nation's youth, it is good to learn that one organization is successfully motivating children to read books in school systems across the country.

The organization is the National Multiple Sclerosis Society, which for the past two years has been conducting a program called the "MS Read-a-thon."

It works this way—Schoolchildren between the first and eighth grades volunteer to seek sponsors, who pledge 10 cents and up for each book the children read during a four-to-six-week period. The number of books read is verified by teachers and parents and funds collected are used for multiple sclerosis patient services and to support research into the cause and cure of MS, known as the "mysterious crippler of young adults."

Since it began locally in Cleveland in 1974, some $5 million has been raised nationwide through the program.

That's a lot of kids, and a lot of books. In fact, the society says that the hundreds-of-thousands-of youngsters who have participated in the MS Read-a-thon have read more than 10 million books so far.

Few women favor ERA

Editor, Times-News:
To Gov. Evans and members of Idaho Legislature:
Ever since the Equal Rights Amendment was passed by the Idaho State Legislature in the last hours of the last day of a legislative session, the great preponderance of Idaho women have been in my opinion against the amendment itself, but against the tactics used by its proponents - instigated and led by the League of Women Voters.

You have spent a great deal of time on this subject, time which should have been devoted to many matters of state and national import. As a one-time member (quite some years ago) of the League of Women Voters, and fully aware as to tactics of local chapters, detailed at the national level, I would urge the present legislature to rescind the amendment. Then, if after the pros and cons have been allowed equal time for presentation of their views, if you still believe the ERA represents the voice of Idaho women and is worthy of your support, pass the bill, after due deliberation.

any similar organization which engages in lobbying activities, I believe I represent the thinking of most American women; that is, that I strongly oppose any type of funding at state and national levels, of such groups.

devoting their time and energies to this subject - whereas many issues of great import to us all, go unchallenged. Rescind the ERA and give Idaho women a hearing - thus giving "equal rights" to those opposing the amendment - for few women, outside of the organized bloc of proponents, favor the ERA! (MRS.) TERESSA, DE. HENDRY Jerome

Facts about ERA remain hidden

Editor, Times-News:
As much as has been said about the Equal Rights Amendment, it's amazing that most of the comments and letters to the editors indicate that very few people are yet aware of the facts concerning this piece of legislation.

Her argument that families that have respect for each other wouldn't be changed by ERA is probably true, but what of the poor women who need current laws giving them certain rights and privileges that a man doesn't (and probably shouldn't) have? ERA would destroy this umbrella.

In-board's defense

Editor, Times-News:
In answer to Rex Vaghan's letter of Feb. 4, we lived and farmed on the Hunt Project under American Falls Reservoir District No. 2 for 25 years. We found the integrity of the manager and the board to be without question. They were always willing to listen to any problems that might arise, and would investigate things thoroughly and promptly to be sure it didn't create a hardship on other people.

The remark has been made, "The manager and board have been bought off." They are not that kind of people. Their haste was for the benefit of the water users and nothing else. Construction costs are soaring and so are government regulations.

Kissinger's memoirs

NEW YORK (UPI) — Lillian Brown and Co. will publish former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's memoirs for a reported price of $2 million.

Arthur H. Thornhill Jr., chairman and president of the publishing firm, announcing the signing of the contract Thursday, said it was for publication in the United States and Canada. Terms of the contract were not announced, but The New York Times reported today other book publishers "placed the figure at $2 million."

Law do change

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ten years ago, cellist Charlotte Moorman wound up in the pokey for playing the cello in the nude before 200 invited guests at New York's Cinematheque.

She "commemorated" the 10-year anniversary of her arrest, and a change in the city's public nudity laws, by taking up her cello Thursday night and taking off her clothes again — this time before a half-full house at Carnegie Hall.

This time the cops stayed away.

Florida man hits computer jackpot

WINTER PARK, Fla. (UPI) — Christopher Cossette's problem with computers began in 1976 when he received a check for $4,025.

Two weeks later, he got a check at his Winter Park home for $23,322.

Since then he has encountered several other computers that, for some reason, send him money.

The checks he began receiving in 1974 were from Enron's, a Canadian department-store chain with which he had done business.

"He said he wrote the firm, explaining he was now living in Florida, no longer doing business with the company and wanted to know to whom to return the money."

But the checks kept coming and he put the money in a bank while awaiting a reply from the store.

By October, 1974, he had received checks totaling $110,881.90. He earned enough interest while the money was in the bank to buy a sports car and add a swimming pool to his Winter Park home.

"That wasn't his last unusual encounter with computers. He bought two tickets to Europe from a Canadian airline but only used one of them. When he returned the other one, he sent the unused ticket to the airline. They credited him for the ticket and then returned the $739 for his own fare.

Letters asking the company to correct its mistake got no results.

A credit card firm mailed him three cards, he said. Everytime he used one to pay for a dinner, something seemed to happen — records for the three cards seemed to cancel each other out. He was never billed for the meals.

"I'm not a con artist," Cossette says. "I just stumbled into this, and I'm fascinated."

He said he once ordered a desk from a Canadian firm that sent him three desks, look back two and credited him for all three.

Balloonist resumes quest

JORDAN, Mont. (UPI) — Karl Thomas floated through the air with the greatest ease in his 92-foot-high balloon Thursday, — 250 miles altogether.

But when he landed, it was in rough, remote ranch country, and he had to call it a day in his attempt to set a transcontinental hot air balloon record.

He planned to resume his quest today to break the 33-day mark set by magazine publisher Malcolm Forbes Thomas, 28, was airborne more than 6 1/2 hours — sometimes as high as 15,000 feet — before landing for refueling in the rough Missouri River brakes south of the Fort Peck Reservoir.

It was not able to refuel the balloon, but the crew accompanied the Troy, Mich., adventurer was expected to have the craft ready for liftoff from the ranchland en route to North Dakota in his west-coast journey.

A spokesman for Thomas, a German-born psychologist and airport owner, said the balloonist was "very, very happy" with his progress from Helena, Mont., eastward Thursday.

Winds up to 45 miles an hour carried him from the edge of western Montana's mountains into the plains.

Ford signs contract

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Like his father, Steve Ford, 20, is going to be a television star.

'Oral contract' eyed

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Mel Thorne asked a Superior Court Thursday to uphold an "oral contract" with his estranged wife, British actress, Janette Scott, that she would not claim his money if their marriage broke up.

Miss Scott's divorce suit asks for half of Thorne's property, including their expensive home and an interest in a Hawaiian hotel.

Woman sentenced

LSWES, England (UPI) — Virginia McShane, a 60-year-old grandmother, has been given two years in jail for trying to talk her 85-year-old mother into committing suicide.

She was convicted of attempting to persuade her mother to swallow a fatal dose of sleeping pills on Mother's Day last year.

The prosecution said the motive was the mother's fortune of $51,000 that Mrs. McShane needed to pay her debts and maintain her country club lifestyle.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Attorney General Griffin Bell's announcement that he is thinking of placing narcotics control in the FBI triggered a barrage of calls with forceful later "clarification" to assure drug employees their jobs are not in jeopardy.

Drug Enforcement Administrator Peter Bensinger said Bell's words to a news conference Thursday were widely misunderstood as a firm decision to dismantle the DEA instead of a preliminary idea. The result was a "strong reaction from the field."

Bensinger told UPI that he understood headquarters and regional offices "were inundated with numerous questions in numerous calls" because DEA people "apparently heard it as a statement of fact rather than a proposal."

By mid-afternoon Bell, at Bensinger's request, drafted a clarifying statement which the DEA transmitted by teletype to 4,500 agents and employees in the United States and 42 other countries.

"I would like you to know that a conclusion to reorganize narcotics enforcement has not been made," Bell's message said. "Also, I would like you to know that your career jobs will not be put in jeopardy."

Narcotics enforcement has been reorganized several times in the past decade. The DEA itself represents 1973 merger of the defunct Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs and the Customs Bureau's drug enforcement.

"Maybe the reaction — it was certainly a strong reaction from the field in some degree reflects past reorganizations and mergers and consolidations which have been characteristic in this field since 1966," Bensinger said.

Bell told DEA employees his idea was in line with President Carter's request that the Cabinet reorganize government departments in some means of streamlining the government and making it more responsive to the public need.

"I would like to commend you for your recent accomplishments. I have just been shown your year-end statistics which reflect... for the first time, a substantial reduction in heroin-related injuries and deaths."

"Finally," Bell added, "I would like to commend you for your recent accomplishments. I have just been shown your year-end statistics which reflect... for the first time, a substantial reduction in heroin-related injuries and deaths."

Senate seeks preview of Mid-east quest for peace

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Foreign Relations Committee summoned Secretary of State Cyrus Vance today for a preview of the Carter administration's forthcoming quest for permanent peace in the Middle East.

Vance leaves Monday on a week-long trip to six countries in his first effort as secretary of state to bring hostilities to the negotiating table.

"It is critically important to make progress this year on Middle East negotiations," Vance said in a recent interview with the committee members who were eager to question him on his plans.

In his first overseas trip since assuming office, the former New York attorney goes first to Israel, Egypt, Lebanon, Jordan, Saudi Arabia and Syria, returning to Washington Feb. 21.

Vance appeared Thursday before the Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee to put the full weight of the administration behind repeal of the so-called Byrd amendment which permits the United States to import Rhodesian chrome in violation of a U.N. boycott of Rhodesian products.

Chrome, used in stainless steel, defense construction and auto bumpers, is not necessary for American industry, Vance said. As a test of American sincerity in black Africa, the existence of the amendment is a grave strategic handicap for the United States, he told the committee.

With continued imports of Rhodesian chrome, he told the subcommittee, "we have acted in violation of our own often proclaimed devotion to international law."

Sen. Dick Clark, D-Iowa, said he hoped to win Senate approval of repeal by March 1.

Vance ruled out any possibility of U.S. intervention in southern Africa, even if negotiations were to break down completely.

Communists ask status

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — The Spanish Communist party today formally applied for legal status that would end a 36-year ban on their existence and allow them to participate in the first free elections in 41 years.

Five members of the party's executive committee and a lawyer presented the interior ministry with documents required by a new royal decree liberalizing the Franco-era political association law.

"We hope legalization will be granted... because we have a democratic party," party spokesman Armando Sallan Lopez told reporters.

Egypt approves tough new law

CAIRO (UPI) — Egyptians have overwhelmingly approved a tough new anti-subversion law aimed at cracking down on Communists and other subversive organizations.

Government officials hailed the result as vote of confidence for President Anwar Sadat.

"It will be like a sword hanging over our heads," said one Communist, who asked not to be identified.

Officials said more than 90 percent of the estimated 8 million voters in Thursday's referendum endorsed the bill, which bans demonstrations or any gatherings likely to threaten public order, strikes and subversive clandestine or paramilitary organizations.

It raised the penalty for such activity from 10 years to life imprisonment at hard labor.

Sadat announced the law a week ago and said it was aimed at preventing a recurrence of the January riots that killed 79 persons. He blamed the Communists for instigating the disturbances and said Egypt would "finish them off."

The new measure, Sadat said, would "give democracy teeth" which are more ferocious than dictatorial rule.

Deputy Interior Minister Mohammed Ismail said Egyptians have shown determination to stand like one man behind President Sadat and confront this minority of saboteurs.

Police went on the alert to guard against possible provocations by leftists who openly registered opposition to the law.

The newspaper Al-Ahram said 46 persons, including two female students, were arrested for distributing leaflets urging citizens to boycott the referendum. The newspaper Al-Gomhouria put the number of arrests for the same offense at 46. No official figure was available.

Al-Ahram said the leaflets were signed by the underground Egyptian Communist Workers party — one of four "subversive" groups

Churches

Church observes 56th anniversary
TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Second Ward LDS Church will commemorate its 56th anniversary this Sunday with a special sacrament meeting.
 Bishop Lewis Arrington has invited past bishops to speak. The second ward was organized Feb. 2, 1921, and continued until Aug. 1, 1922. It was then consolidated with other wards while the first ward building was being built.
 On April 15, 1922, it was divided into wards. The members met in the former Baptist Church building located at Fifth Avenue East and Third Street East. This building is still being used by the First Pentecostal Church.
 The building now housing second, fourth and tenth wards was started in 1938 and finished in September 1939. In 1954 Bishop Ross Ward started raising money to build the additions. In 1960 ground was broken and the additions were added.
 The second ward was divided in June 1953 to make the fourth ward and again in August 1972 to make the tenth ward.
 The public is invited to this special meeting at 5:30 p.m. Sunday at 348 Fourth Ave. N.

A jury, comprised of other congregation members, will hear the evidence and determine if the claims are fraudulent or have a basis of truth.
 Evidence will be presented under two major areas, violations of natural law, or miracles, and the business of the resurrection. Rev. Kirk said the special program is open to all interested persons and will be featured during the regular 11 a.m. Sunday service.

Priest states 'gay' stand
ATLANTA (UPI) — A Jesuit priest who ministers to the gay community says he believes the Bible does not condemn overt homosexual activity, as long as it is done in the spirit of love.

Scouts stress youth programs

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Boy Scouts in the Snake River Area Council are joining others around the nation observing Boy Scout month with the emphasis on youth programs this week. Scouts will highlight the week's observance with special church services on Sunday in nearly all churches of the area.

Del Hanks, Twin Falls-area scout executive, said other events include special displays of scout arts and projects in downtown stores in the area and the annual blue and gold banquets which will be held in most communities sometime this month.

Hanks said the scouting program in Magic Valley has an unusually high membership per capita. About half of the eligible boys now are members of some phase of the scouting organization. Unlike many large metropolitan areas where membership has been decreasing in recent years, Magic Valley areas continue to show a slight increase.

Hanks said there are 3,111 cub scouts and explorers active in the program in the Snake River Council and the council was one of only two in the mountain west to finish the year with a plus 19 membership. The year saw 468 scout advancements and 649 Cub Scout advancements. There were 2,471 merit badges and 1,346 Webelos activity badges awarded. A total of 61 boys attained the Eagle Scout progress award, about three times the national average.

One of the major activities for scouts in the Snake River Council is the outstanding camping program. Hanks said. This summer the use of Camp Bradley in the Sawtooths is expected to exceed 1,000 boys and leaders. Already, the sign-up indicates an increase in use by about 100 boys.

Gordon Beckstead will serve as council president this year with Sid Tomlinson as camping chairman. Hanks said the basic purpose for which, the Boy Scout organization was chartered in February, 1910 was education. "We are an educational organization primarily, although many think of Boy Scouts in terms of recreation. Our programs train the young men to appreciate and conserve our national resources by teaching them enjoyment of these elements. They also learn basic skills for good citizenship and the development of mental and physical fitness," Hanks said.

Not only are scout leaders in the council planning for the anniversary observance, but they are also looking ahead to the coming summer programs. "We are greatly concerned about the pending threat of drought," Hanks said. "A special meeting of camping committees was held recently to outline changes in our programs because of what appears to be a severe water shortage for next summer," he said.

This year many programs, involving camp fires, such as outdoor cooking and evening programs, will be revised to reduce fire exposure. Each campsite will also be equipped at all times with water buckets, shovels and other fire control equipment in addition to the regular water supplies.

As of this time, we still plan to conduct our full schedule of summer camp sessions, but to take a look at our programs in conjunction with the water shortage," Hanks said.

He said the aquale programs may have to be converted to the use of swimming pools if the lakes do not provide the anticipated water supply.

He said it is now possible to drive regular highway vehicles to Camp Bradley when usually the area has from 5 to 10 feet of snow.

This indicates we will be critically short of water in the Stanley Basin area and some needed conservation on our part," he said.

Plans this year to make the camp available to other organizations, including girls camping groups have not been changed, and the facility will also be used in the High Adventure Program for explorers and older scouts.

DEAR ABBY: I am 23, and five months ago I got married for the fifth time. All my previous marriages ended in divorce.

My husband is 29, divorced and has four children. He had a nervous breakdown and didn't talk to me until after I married him. This was a dirty trick because I've never had children and have always wanted some.

My biggest problem is the way he treats me. I've gone to the hospital for emergency first aid four times after he's beaten me up. He uses the excuse that he's drunk when he beats me so he's not responsible for what he does. He's locked me out of our trailer overnight and refused to give me any of my personal belongings. (I'm a trail rider.)

Should I try to make this marriage work? I really love him because he's so sweet when he's sober and he's awfully good to my dog.

G. IN GAINESVILLE, FLA.

CHICAGO — A good mother nurses and nurtures, kisses and caresses, and teaches her children to cross the street alone. Then, if she's feeling good about herself, she eventually cuts them loose and lets them out into the world without her. But many mothers can't do that because they never felt secure, nurtured and loved themselves. They cling to their children long after the children are grown, hoping to glean from them the love and security their own parents didn't give. That's the contention of Howard M. Halpern, a psychologist who has just written "Cutting Loose" (Simon and Schuster, $8.25). Halpern calls his book "an adult guide to coming to terms with your parents." In it, he explains that all parents have conflicting desires. "On the one hand, they really want their children to grow up, and be strong, independent and effective people. But, most parents also have a childishly dependent 'don't grow up' wish that makes them want their children to remain weak, dependent and ineffectual forever," Halpern said. "When grown people have trouble with their parents, Halpern said, it is usually because that inner child in the parent gets caught up in a 'song and dance' with the inner child in the offspring that has always obeyed the parent in an effort to gain approval. "A parent isn't 'bad' for having an inner child that wants to keep his or her offspring very close," Halpern stressed. "I want to hold on is deeply human. But we have to hope that parents can, more often than not, make the hard adult choice of supporting their offspring's growth." When they don't do that, they usually fall into very recognizable patterns. And the most guilty of those is the martyred mother and her guilt-ridden offspring, Halpern added. This mother usually tells the kids, how she suffered in childbirth and how she had to stay in and take care of them when they got sick, Halpern said. She always does favors for her children, regardless of how tired she is.

And whenever she gets an invitation, she says, "I don't know if I can make it, I'm so tired." Whenever her children call her, she checks, "So why didn't you call me all week?" Halpern said this parent is like a child, and is really saying, "Nobody loves me or cares about me and I feel so alone. If you stay with me I feel much better, so please don't go away." Don't get too interested in other people and other things, because I become afraid you'll forget all about me. Take care of me; pay attention to me." He said that such a parent learned those tricks from his or her parent, who also felt inadequately loved as a child. "It is an intricate art, passed down from one generation to another like an heirloom with a curse." He also said that possessive parents usually undermine their children's sense of adequacy. "They are always 'helping' and offering opinions when their offspring do or buy something. They always make it clear, in a loving way, that their offering couldn't possibly make decisions or manage far away from them without their advice and assistance," he said.

"I once treated a politician with a mother like that. His mother waited up with him the night he won his first big election. Then she whispered, 'Do you think you'll know what to do?'" Halpern said fathers can be dangerously possessive, too. Some are too weak willed to do their essential job, which is to help the mother and child separate from each other. Others are tyrants, who believe that they own their children. They say such things as, "I pay for the food that you eat and as long as I do, you'll do as I say." This kind of parent doesn't trust anyone, and tries to keep his or her children dependent by frightening them about the world outside. Once again, the offspring must recognize the fears of the inner child in this parent. "The first step toward ending a 'song and dance' with your parent's inner child is to recognize that you are participating in it," Halpern stressed. He said that often, as a parent grows older, faces a bereavement. It is necessary for the child to learn love and support.

5-time loser

DEAR G: I think you both need help. Having picked five losers at age 23 should tell you something. And to stick around for the physical abuse he hands out (drunk or sober) is literally asking for it.

Please go to your nearest mental clinic for counseling, unless you don't mind having your bridgework rearranged. (P.S. Take the dog with you. That bully you're living with might get drunk and take it out on the dog.)

DEAR ABBY: One day my husband came home from work like an enraged bull because the lunch meat in the sandwich I had packed was spoiled. (He accused me of trying to poison him!)

Abby, it must have spoiled between 7 and noon while his lunch bucket was sitting in a warm locker. I told my friend how mad my husband got because of this. She said she always makes her husband's sandwiches the night before and puts them in the freezer overnight. By lunch time they're all thawed out and fresh.

Well, I did this for a while and everything was fine—no complaints. Then one night, my husband saw me putting his lunch in the freezer, and he blew his top. He said I was feeding him like a dog because I was too lazy to make fresh sandwiches in the morning.

This isn't true: I told him that I'd go back to making them fresh every morning, but if he ever came home complaining that his lunch meat went bad, he could just buy his lunch, which I think is what he wants. Any suggestions?

CAN'T GET THROUGH

DEAR CAN'T: If you think that's what he wants, let him buy his lunches from now on, and you'll both be happier.

DEAR ABBY: I am an 88-year-old man with a pet peeve of long standing. Some suits for men come with two pairs of trousers, but pajamas come with only one pair of pants. Costs outfit pants, so I have accumulated many pajamas tops that lack bottoms.

If my complaint appears in your column, maybe it could start the manufacture of pajamas with two pairs of pants. J.B.S. STATEN ISLAND, N.Y.

DEAR J: Some men wear only pajama tops, and some wear only bottoms. A new kind of "pajama game" could be the exchange of tops and bottoms—unless some courageous pajama manufacturer starts selling tops and bottoms separately.

MV farmers worry about cost of labor

By KEN HODGE
Times-News writer

MAGIC VALLEY — Caught in a bind this year because of depressed farm commodity prices and a possible shortage of irrigation water, southern Idaho farmers appear to need extra irrigation workers, but many can't afford to hire them.

Government officials and irrigation experts say extra hired hands could be necessary to manage shallow irrigation waters.

Problems with financing next year's crops and finding the cash to pay hired men, however, may prompt many Magic Valley farmers to cut back on labor and, in some cases, on acreage planted.

Some say they must cut back on acreage planted because they will not have enough water to cover land they usually plant. "You can substitute water for labor when you've got the water," explains Borrell Larsen, University of Idaho extension irrigator, about the need for economy in water use this summer.

"Farmers may have to employ more help or work harder themselves to make the water go farther and manage it better," Idaho Department of Water Resources (IDWR) official Kenneth Dunn said about the impending short-water year in 1977.

Dunn said the IDWR will hold a series of meetings around the state beginning next week to inform farmers about the water supply they can expect and give them ideas about measures they can take to conserve water.

"We will simply tell them about some things we see they may have to do for better management of their short supply of water," Dunn said.

And farmers in the Oakley area, which could be hard hit by drought conditions brought on by a near-zero snow pack in the surrounding hills, plan to hold a school for local irrigators to instruct them in water management techniques.

"Irrigation water management is going to be one of the most important things to do this year," Robert Walker, soil conservation technician for the Soil Conservation Service in Burley, said.

"We will talk about nothing but how to take care of your water and use it properly," he said about the school to be held in Burley.

Walker said the Feb. 28 course will cover such basic knowledge as how to determine when irrigation water needs to be applied based on crop water use, rates and stages of plant growth.

"The topics covered by the school will include other knowledge included in the SCS handbook," Walker said.

Although more efficient management of irrigation water will require added labor, many valley farmers are attempting to cut back on labor expenses because they can't afford them.

Mike Cranney, chairman of the West Cassia County Soil and Water Conservation District, who will attend the school to be held in Burley, said the situation is a tough one.

"We're going to have to cut all these costs back to stay in business," he said. "But we can't cut them back so much that we'll hurt ourselves. We have to find a happy medium."

Cranney said his farms are almost all converted to sprinkler irrigation which will help with more efficient water management.

"But we'll watch our water closer," he said about the coming year.

And Joe Klimes, Wendell area farmer, said he will probably cut his work force by 50 per cent in the coming year.

He said he would still hire enough men to move his hand lines and also said he would be moving them on 12-hour rotations instead of 24-hour schedules to keep his crops going and not worry about reserve moisture in the ground.

"Last year we ran the sprinkler 24 hours just because we had the water," Klimes said.

Suit names TF firm

JEROME — A Jerome couple is asking for more than $352,000 from a Twin Falls construction company for installing flammable insulation in a potato cellar destroyed by fire last September.

The couple, Donald and Phyllis Thibault, have filed complaint against Parc Peterson Construction, Twin Falls, The Upljohn Co. and Ed Bailey, Inc.

The couple charges the construction company and other firms with negligence in distributing, selling and installing the insulation, polyurethane foam.

In September, a man employed by Thibault was using an acetylene torch in the cellar owned by the Jerome couple. A spark ignited the foam and the building was engulfed by flames in a few minutes, according to the complaint filed in Fifth District Court here.

The couple is asking for $175,000 for the destroyed potato cellar, $11,500 for equipment destroyed, $80,000 for loss of potato storage space, $2,000 for clean up of the area where the cellar was destroyed and $84,000 in attorney fees.

The couple is also asking for $100,000 in punitive damages from the Upljohn Co.

Decision delayed on Rufener trial

By SHANE O'NEILL
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Prosecution and defense attorneys alike castigated Ernest and Griselda Rufener in summations at a preliminary hearing here Thursday.

Both contended the couple should be bound over to district court for trial on criminal charges in the chain strangulation death of Rufener's mother, Anna Marie Rufener.

"My arguments go to reduction rather than complete dismissal," defense attorney James J. May had told Magistrate Judge Russell Shaud. Shaud took the case under advisement, delaying his decision.

Minidoka County Prosecutor H. Bill Manning urged that the Rufeners be bound over on the most serious charges of first degree murder and second degree kidnapping.

May recalled the previous action of Cassia County Magistrate Judge George Granata in reducing those charges to involuntary manslaughter and false imprisonment, he asked that the reduction be repeated.

Manning offered varied possible ways in which the 77-year-old Anna Marie ufener might have met her death in an unheated bedroom here while chained to her bed on Easter Sunday, 1975.

He suggested it could be "more than coincidence she died on the night he (Ernest) returned — more than coincidence she died an hour before the coroner got there."

He said Rufener could have "waxed up and actually throttled her." He argued it was unlikely the woman's thyroid cartilage would be fractured accidentally by her own efforts against the twisted six-foot-long chain that fastened her to a bedpost.

He said the death could have been accidental, as Rufener contends, the woman strangling as she attempted to use a pot left in a 13-inch space beside the bed for toilet purposes. But he said the Rufeners placed the deceased in that situation and she "was being kept there until she died."

Manning said, "All of those possibilities point to one thing — first degree murder."

May ridiculed the suicide and strangling theories and admitting "the chain has a chilling effect," contended the murder charges and high public interest in the case were because "these people are different."

May had called Manning himself and Minidoka County Deputy Sheriff Clavis Schell as the only defense witnesses. Manning had testified he was most impressed on the death night that there was "no expression of remorse."

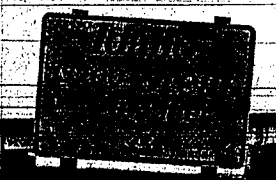

"They're here because they didn't show remorse," May claimed.

Manning reviewed the testimony, recalling statements about mental and physical torture, bruises, ridicule, "vulgar and obscene" verbal abuse. He spoke of testimony that the Rufeners would come into the house, empty-handed and send the elderly woman to the rear to carry "the groceries, would stand in the yard while the victim 'did all the work.'"

He emphasized that "although Griselda Rufener said her mother-in-law was on medication, none was purchased for her in the Mini-Cassia area and that a physician said the woman's extreme weight loss was due to "nutritional deprivation."

Manning said no medicine was bought because "they were too cheap to do so, and they were living off her money in a $53,000 estate from her husband) the whole time."

Evans' signature to replace Andrus'

Change planned for Gem signs

By CHRIS PECK
Times-News writer

BOISE — The first sign motorists see when entering Idaho is the admonition "Idaho is too great to litter," signed "Cecil D. Andrus, Governor of Idaho."

Idaho remains too great to litter but Cecil D. Andrus isn't governor anymore which means the signs, which are to be changed, according to the Idaho Division of Highways.

New Gov. John V. Evans apparently likes the idea of drivers seeing his name at the border just as governor Andrus did, according to Gordon Prouty, an engineering technician for the Division of Highways.

Prouty said highway crews will begin soon to paste Gov. Evans' signature on the anti-littering signs.

The four foot by six foot signs appear on all major border highways of Idaho, Prouty said.

A total of 40 signs bearing the signature of Cecil Andrus will be changed to show the John Hancock of Gov. Evans.

The Department of Transportation currently is reproducing Evans' signature on 10 inch by 40 inch strips of pressure-sensitive tape which will be pasted over the Andrus signatures.

"They will put these sticky decals right over the old name," engineer Prouty said.

"By the middle of March we'll start changing the signs," he added, "right now it's too cold and they probably wouldn't stick too good."

In 1971 Andrus asked that the anti-litter signs be put up with his name on them, Prouty said.

"Gov. Evans thought it was a pretty good idea to retain the signs with his signature," Prouty explained, adding that the new signature labels "will be fairly permanent."

If Evans isn't elected governor in 1978, Prouty said his office will probably make up another batch of sticky signatures to cover up the Evans trademark.

Total cost of the changing of the signatures will run between $10 and $15 a sign, or somewhere between $500 and $700, Prouty said.

"That includes labor and everything," he said.

Mary Brooks to resign US post

By BOB ZUCKERMAN
Times-News writer

WASHINGTON — Malvaan Mary Brooks, the third woman director of the U.S. Mint, said she will resign today.

After serving for seven years and two months as mint director, Brooks says she plans to return to Boise to live.

The 28th mint director said she was "saddened" to be leaving her job, but said she was very proud to be the first woman ever to receive the U.S. Treasury's highest honor — the Alexander Hamilton Award, presented to her Jan. 11 by Treasury Secretary William Simon.

Simon said Brooks, appointed by President Richard Nixon, provided "imaginative and innovative leadership" during her two terms in office.

"During her two terms as director, production of United States coinage virtually doubled, rising from 7 billion coins in 1967 to over 12 billion coins in 1975," Simon said.

While presenting a gold medal to Brooks, Simon said "When the public began withdrawing pennies from circulation in 1974, thus overburdening our overburdened mint production facilities, she [Brooks] established the first progressive system of audits for the nation's gold stocks in her charge at Fort Knox, Ky.," Simon noted.

Brooks was the first to hold a public opening of Fort Knox.

On speculation about who would succeed her, Brooks said, "I don't know. I don't believe the powers that be have decided yet. I imagine it will be a woman, though. A woman to follow a woman. I think they might think that makes sense."

On other topics, Brooks said: "She was 'very proud about what I've been able to accomplish,' including coinage changes like the Eisenhower dollar and Bicentennial coins."

"Was very much saddened" by the Watergate story and the subsequent resignation of Nixon.

Others arrested include Ralph Fugitt, Amos David Pompeper, Brad Mullison, Kim Thompson, Gary DeWalt and Jack Clough, all Twin Falls.

Markets

Stocks at midday

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices opened mixed Friday in a moderate trading of New York Stock Exchange issues.

The Dow Jones industrial average was off 0.67 to 937.25 shortly after the opening.

Advances led declines, with 114 up, 110 down, among the 309 issues crossing the Dow Jones.

Turnover amounted to about 370 million shares. The market's recent sharp decline has left blue chips and glamors attractively priced, analysts said. The smaller investor appears to be doing some buying. Institutions have cleared out of many of the higher-priced stocks.

As the market opened, the Labor Department reported wholesale prices climbed 0.5 percent in January, continuing the inflationary pace of recent months. But figures do not reflect the full impact of the three-point decline in energy prices.

The market was helped by optimism brought on by a warming trend in the weather in the East. James Schlesinger, President Carter's energy chief, said Thursday the immediate crisis was over in the Midwest and East. The Labor Department reported unemployment related to the weather declined sharply in the last week.

Prices closed near the day's highs, up 30 to 105 points, on trading range. The close was provided to 1 cent higher. Oil included strength in the soybean complex, sustaining beans in the face of an attack of late profit taking, buying in nearby and selling deferred.

Beans ended with gains of 1 to 5 cents after advances of 4-14 to 7 1/2 cents. Oil wound up 30 to 43 points higher with meal.

Who's best ever? Southern Idaho, 1976-77

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News Writer

ONTARIO — It appears official. The 1976-77 basketball team of College of Southern Idaho is the winningest team — at least tied — in the history of junior college basketball. The Golden Eagles nailed down that boast Thursday night when they beat the awesome inside work of Antonia Martin and Art Williams. They pushed past the Treasure Valley Chukars 65-49.

for three years of coaching College of Southern Idaho. It took just under 11 minutes for CSI to prove to TVCC that it couldn't beat the No. 1 nationally ranked team even with the home court advantage and backed with perhaps TVCC's all-time record crowd. More importantly — from the standpoint of immediacy — the victory lifted CSI to a 3-0 regional record. It eliminated TVCC mathematically from the post-season regional playoffs. A win on the homecourt Wednesday night should assure CSI of a spot in the regional tournament. It would also mean that only North Idaho could finish ahead of the Eagles who would have road games at Ricks and North Idaho left on the regional court schedule. Treasure Valley gave it a strong early bid. But CSI's defense kept tightening the noose and the semblance of a contest evaporated when the Golden Eagles, down by four, reeled off 14 straight points. Martin and Williams were anonymous with intimidation during that stretch. The Chukars were pumped up emotionally a factor Coach Grant correctly predicted. They pounded the ball inside and Wendell Tally picked up eight points as TVCC crased an 8-1 deficit to manage a 14-10 lead. But over the next couple of minutes, Williams and Martin started rejecting a few shots, dominated the boards and the Eagle defense became smothering. The teams traded two field goals each. Albert Dietrich giving Larry Bryson hit an outside shot and Oscar Spar still scored off a steal. Art Williams' two free throws sent the Eagles ahead to stay and his inside shot made it 22-10. Martin finished a rebound with 5:15 left, came back with a short jumper and Kim Goetz would tap with a bucket. That exploded things to 25-10 and suffice it to say in the next few minutes — moving into the second half — CSI moved ahead 40-20. That meant the Eagles outscored TVCC 35-6 in a 10-minute period. But the Eagles also broke off the engagement at 1 1/2 point. On two occasions they moved up by 23 points but very obviously had lost interest in the whole thing. Still, 46 points was as close as TVCC came thereafter. "We played defense and Martin and Williams were awesome on the boards," Coach Grant said in an understatement. Twice during the contest Williams followed his own misses three times for buckets. CSI did not shoot particularly well on the first one but Martin and Williams crammed a large number of the misses back through. The two freshmen, now reaching the point that Coach Grant predicted five months ago, combined for 41 points and must have had 12 blocked shots.

Scoreboard table for CSI vs TVCC. CSI: 65, TVCC: 49. Stats include points, rebounds, assists, and steals.

Senior guard James Smith was the entire Idaho offense, scoring 24 points for the Vandals. Weber completely dominated the boards, pulling down 45 rebounds to 21 for Idaho. The Wildcats also outshot the Vandals from the field, hitting 55 per cent compared to Idaho's 40 per cent.

Cal nips Oregon in five overtimes

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI) — Mike Miller sank three free throws late in the fifth overtime Thursday night to lift California to a 107-102 Pac-8 Conference upset victory over Oregon. Miller made one free throw with 59 seconds left that gave Cal a 104-99 advantage. After Oregon's Mike Greig made a three-point play, the Bears stalled until 19 seconds remained, when Miller was fouled. He hit two free throws and another by John Cassell with eight seconds left to close the scoring. Gene Ransom, a sophomore, rebounded with a career-high 30 points and had 11 fouls for California. Oregon forward Greg Ballard led all scorers with 41. He also grabbed 19 rebounds.

Status precedes money—but not by much

MILTON RICHMAN NEW YORK (UPI) — Status, that's the big thing now, not money, and if you can somehow wind up getting both, then you're King of the Hill. That's why so many people are beating their brains out today: They want to be King of the Hill. Top Man on the Mountain, Numero Uno... You find this situation especially prevalent in sports where the participants are awarded on competition almost from the time they can walk. The teenage girl-figure skater or gymnast grows up to be a champion, but also something of a mechanical robot, without any emotion or deep feeling. Her mother or her coach made her do it... Why? That's simple, status. The money comes later. It's not much different in professional sports. Every athlete wants to be the highest paid, mostly because that makes him the best in the eyes of all the others. You see that happening on so many clubs... When he was with the A's, Reggie Jackson always wanted to be the highest paid and eventually reached the point where he was. Now that Jackson is highest paid with the Yankees also, MVP Thurman Munson says what about me? With the Mets, Tom Seaver is the top earner, and the noise you hear in the back is Dave Kingman: Status, that's the big thing now. If you're not getting at least two million, then you're all by yourself down there, cold and lonely at the bottom of the hill. Joe Louis never turns down anybody for his autograph. He wasn't the least bit upset when a woman came rushing over to him not long ago, handed him a pen and piece of paper, and gushed, "My goodness, Don Newcombe! I saw you pitch and always wanted your autograph." The former heavyweight champion took the paper from the woman and quietly asked Madison Square Garden matchmaker Teddy Brenner, standing next to him, "How you spell Newcombe?" Brenner told him. Always the gentleman, Joe Louis made the lady happy by signing the ex-Dodger pitcher's name... Recent death of Jack (Automatic) Manders, who used to kick extra points for the Chicago Bears in the '30's, brings to mind how accurate pro football's place kickers used to be when all they got was a couple hundred dollars a game. They hardly ever missed a conversion and usually played a position as well. Manders was the best of the lot. Steady as a metronome, he once booted 76 straight extra points. That's how he got his nickname. Now the teams go all over the world for placekickers, pay them fancy salaries and some of these "specialists" miss more conversions in one season than a fellow like Jack Manders did in his entire career. Self-improvers interested in their life-line as well as in their wallet, line will find it well worth reading "Keep Your Heart Running" by Paul J. Kiehl, M.D., and Joseph S. Freilighyusen, Kiehl and Freilighyusen kept meeting at marathon races in which they were competing, began exchanging ideas on nutrition, exercise and the relationship between physical and mental health, and the book is the result. The material in it has appeal for all ages and is designed to make you live happier and longer. Look for some data next week when the inter-league trading period starts Feb. 15 and runs until March 15. It's the first one ever this time of the year and was written into the new agreement between the owners and player after the players originally had kicked about it. Texas Rangers deny the Yankees have renewed talks with them for Toby Harral, and the Rangers aren't going to give him up, anyway. Yankees haven't quit trying to get a shortstop. Their prime target is Bucky Dent. The White Sox could have Ken Holtzman, Oscar Gamble, Ron Blomberg and Fred Stanley in return...

'Mystery' negotiator draws cool million bucks for aid to NBC

© N.Y. Times Service
NEW YORK — The mystery figure of the Olympic television negotiations, Lothar P. Bock, a West German theatrical producer, was paid a fee of $1 million and guaranteed, undetermined additional income by the National Broadcasting Co. for assisting the network's acquisition of the television rights to the 1980 Summer Games in Moscow.

NBC's total payment to the Soviet Union was led from television sources, is $85 million — $35 million for the TV rights, $50 million for production and equipment costs.

Bock, a 38-year-old resident of Munich, had been an adviser since 1975 to the Columbia Broadcasting System in the Olympic negotiations. But when CBS withdrew from the bidding on Jan. 25, he was released from his CBS commitment. Two days later he offered his influence to NBC and he was hired.

That night Bock and Robert T. Howard, the NBC network president, and two other NBC executives departed for Moscow to resume negotiations. When the American Broadcasting Co. executives arrived in Moscow last weekend, NBC had closed the deal.

"The Soviets trusted Lothar," said a source close to the Olympic negotiations for two years. "They never really trusted any of the networks because of the networks' hostility toward the Soviet government through the years.

Bock had gained the Soviets' trust by producing worldwide telecasts of the Bolshoi Ballet and the Moscow Circus.

All news conference Monday at Gallagher's restaurant, NBC officials will announce that, in addition to his $1 million fee, Bock has been promised a purchase by the network of three entertainment and sports programs each year through 1981, a total of 15 shows. He also will receive a separate fee for his role as an Olympic adviser to NBC through the 1980 games.

According to NBC, Bock's $1 million fee was conditional on the Olympic rights to the network obtaining for two years. "They never really trusted any of the networks because of the networks' hostility toward the Soviet government through the years.

Bock had gained the Soviets' trust by producing worldwide telecasts of the Bolshoi Ballet in Moscow in early December following a breakdown in Olympic negotiations. Bock stayed there. He is credited by NBC with having "significantly improved the terms" under which the eventual agreement was developed. The Soviet's original asking price reportedly was $100 million. The TV rights for last summer's Olympics at Montreal were sold to ABC for $25 million.

Bock is reported to have told officials of that network that the Soviet's new price was $81 million.

At the time the three networks were considering pooling their resources if the Justice Department would grant them an antitrust exemption. While the exemption request was being considered by the Justice Department, CBS decided to withdraw from the negotiations because the bargaining was using up too much executive time.

With CBS out of the picture, Bock then said his influence to NBC. He never approached ABC.

"ABC did not think they needed him," one network executive said. "They thought they were wired in."

Bock operates L.B.A. Associates, in Munich, the initials of his firm stand for Lothar Bock Associates.

In the past Bock worked with CBS in producing "Mary Tyler Moore" with the Bolshoi Ballet, a TV show that appeared last year. He also worked on other TV programs for CBS and for the British Broadcasting Corp. network.

Ageless Lane opens 47th baseball year

NEW YORK (UPI) — Frank Lane had a birthday the other day. The book says he's 81. He says the book is wrong, he's only 77. Besides, he argues, his chronological age doesn't mean a thing if you're young at heart, and nobody, but nobody, is any more so than Frank Lane.

About to embark on his 47th season in baseball, Frank Lane brings to his job the same ageless enthusiasm, the same insouciance. Maurice Chevalier used to bring to his when he was still around. He works special assignments scouting for the California Angels, moving all over the hemisphere from Mexico to California to Chicago and loving every minute of it. To Frank Lane, what he's doing isn't really work. It's pleasure.

You name some rookie in the majors or some obscure kid in the minors with only a couple months' experience and Lane immediately will tell you everything you'd like to know about him, rattling off his virtues, his faults and the way he likes his eggs. Lane knows little things like that because things are he had breakfast with the boy and talked with him someplace along the line. Whatever the Angels are paying Lane, he's worth more. His boss, Harry Dalton, will tell you that himself. But Frank Lane isn't that concerned with money now. The big thing with him is keeping active every day, being in the mainstream. With his contacts, he more than earns his keep by scouting players, obtaining the kind of information few others could and then passing it along to the Angels. He does all this while simultaneously serving as a one-man clearing house for anything that's going on in baseball.

Little gets by him. He keeps up with everything, even with something like that delightful valentine Johnny Bench got the other day from his estranged wife. "I when a drawing was held to determine who would get the 350 reservations.

from Acapulco, proving once more how he always thinks young.

"Knowing Johnny as I do, I don't believe these things he said about him," Lane said, growing serious. "He's a tremendous ballplayer and a helluva fine guy. All those things his wife had to say about him reminded me of another ballplayer, who shall be nameless. He had just gotten married in Chicago and was going to Florida by train on his honeymoon. I went to the railroad station with both of them to see them off. While we're standing around waiting for the train to pull in, he says, 'wait a minute, I gotta get some magazines.' He went inside the terminal and got himself Playboy, Penthouse, Hustler and two or three other magazines like that. He damn near missed the train. When I saw the magazines he bought, I said to him, 'what are you planning to do, read all night? Boy, that's gonna be some lively honeymoon!'"

Frank Lane can't wait for spring training to start, especially now that the Angels have picked up Joe Rudi, Bobby Grieh and Don Baylor, and should make a run for it in the American League West.

"We'll be one-two," Lane said. "If not, we'd better hang up our cue. Gene Autry (the Angels' owner) was not in favor of going out and buying the team, but he had to do it in self-defense. For the last five years, we had the outstanding farm system in baseball. We spent $1.5 million a year on it, and what we've done now is bought time."

FAMILIAR SCENE for Sun Valley March 15-16 will be the pinpoint parachuting during the Cuervo national para-ski championships at Elkhorn. As parachutists, the competitors aim for a 3/4-inch target. Rest of their score comes from two slalom ski runs.

Skyfull of skiers?

SUN VALLEY, Idaho — U.S. men's and women's championships and a $5000 purse will be at stake March 15-16 during the third annual Cuervo National Para-Ski Championships at Elkhorn Village.

A total of 60 competitors is expected for the Cuervo meet which combines accuracy parachuting, ski racing. The men and women with highest combined scores for both events will be designated U.S. champions by the U.S. Parachute Association (USPA).

Contestants must make two accuracy parachute jumps from 3,000 feet altitude aiming for a target 3/4 inches in diameter. The next day, they make two ski runs down a giant slalom course.

PARASKIING began in America at Lake Placid, N.Y. in 1970. Since then about 20 major contests have been held, with interest growing each year. The USPA estimates there are 25,000 sport parachutists in this country and that many participate in para-skiing.

"Para-Skiing began in Europe during the early 1960's," according to Cuervo contest director Kim Sommer of Pope Valley, Calif. "Europe's small airport managers found it unprofitable to keep parachute landing zones open all year.

Frequent flyers in the 1970 competition sponsored by Jose Cuervo tequila are the current U.S. champs — Peter Levy, 23, of Salt Lake City, Utah, and Jessie Farrington, 27, of Payson, Washington.

Middle fork trips increased

SALMON — The Forest Service will permit 350 private parties to float the Middle Fork of the Salmon River from June 1 through Aug. 24.

The number was increased because of an anticipated low water year permitting start of the float season nearly a month earlier than usual.

Originally, 200 private parties were to be permitted during the control season from June 23 through Sept. 1.

Sam Warren, Middle Fork "wild river" range warden, said that 652 applications had been received prior to the deadline. Feb. 1 when a drawing was held to determine who would get the 350 reservations.

An additional 60 persons were placed on a waiting list.

"Because all the private spots are filled does not mean the commercial outfitters do not have openings," Warren noted. Some 22 commercial boaters operate on the river.

Warren also advised that fire pans will be required of all boating parties this coming season on the Middle Fork to eliminate the abundance of fire rings and ashes at the camping spots along the river. A fire pan or propane stove will be required. The fire pan can be anything that will contain the ashes.

Jim Wiley, North Fork Ranger District, advised that the private party quota for the main Salmon River is completely filled from June through Aug. 16.

Three private parties will be permitted to launch per day.

"The only other way to get on the river prior to Aug. 16 will be through cancellations which we sometimes have," he said.

Anthony shatters qualifying record

GRETNA, Ia. (UPI) — Earl Anthony shattered a Professional Bowlers Association record Thursday afternoon in the final round of qualifying of the $100,000 New Orleans Open.

Anthony's 18-game total pinfall of 4,615 was 60 pins more than Dan Johnson's record of 4,457 set in South Bend, Ind. Anthony, pro-bowling's all-time leader in career victories with 27, is averaging 250 a game.

Leading Mark Roth of Staten Island, N.Y., by 36 pins when third round play began. Anthony rolled games of 237, 269, 268, 217, 278 and 216 to increase his lead over Roth to 108 pins.

Roth, this year's leading money winner with $25,650 in four tournaments, had games of 247, 217, 218, 241, 232 and 256 for a 4,407 total pinfall.

Rounding out the top five were Marshall Holman of Medford, Ore., with 4,204; Mike Matsosch of San Bruno, Calif., with 4,194 and Dennis Swayda of Phoenix, Ariz., with 4,169.

Anthony is the defending champion.

Following Thursday afternoon's round, the 144-man field was cut to the top 24 scorers for eight games of head-to-head match play Thursday night and 16 more Friday. The top five then advance to Saturday's nationally televised finals.

"If a bowler rolls a 300 in Saturday's title game, he will receive a $250,000 bonus from the tournament sponsor.

Massengale fires 64 to increase Hope classic lead to four strokes

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (UPI) — Rik Massengale celebrated his 30th birthday last Sunday resting at home in Charlotte, Texas. Thursday, he celebrated his wife Cindy's 28th birthday with a six-under-par 66 for a slunder total of 130 and a four shot lead over two-time winner Bruce Lietzke after two rounds of the $200,000 Bob Hope

Desert Classic. Massengale, who skipped the tour last week while Lietzke was winning the Hawaiian Open, had seven birdies and one bogey at Tamarisk and said it was easier to play golf than to find a birthday gift for his wife. But the Texan, who leads the tour's Blue study group on the road, made several incredible birdie putts and even though Lietzke shot a 67 for his 18th consecutive round this year (23rd carrying bag to 17th at par or less Massengale gained a stroke advantage. Lietzke had opened with a 67 to trail after the first round by three shots and in the second he made the turn in 31 and seemed headed for a record score until a long wait on the 14th tee took away his momentum.

Massengale, considering the long wait on "It was an exhausting round," said Lietzke.

Montana forced to forfeit games

BOISE (UPI) — University of Montana basketball player Lee Johnson was declared ineligible for play Thursday in an unanimous decision that shuffled Big Sky Conference standings. Big Sky Commissioner John Roning said the decision of the conference faculty representatives which he described as "severe" held that the University of Montana will forfeit all games Johnson played in, both conference and non-conference.

Big Sky Conference basketball playoffs as a result of the vote and will lose any funds available from the National Collegiate Athletic Association playoffs this year. That could mean a $2,000-$7,000 loss to the school, Roning said.

Johnson, an Omaha, Neb., was declared ineligible for the 1976-77 and 1977-78 basketball seasons in keeping with NCAA and Big Sky Conference eligibility rules. The Big Sky Conference office will send a letter of censure to the University of Montana, Roning said.

Massengala won the satellite Hope of Tomorrow here two years ago and was second to Johnny Miller by three shots a year ago. He said he doesn't know why he plays so well in the California desert but he hopes he never loses his touch on the flat, sandy courses. Massengale had one birdie putt of 40 feet, another from 20, a third from 15 and a fourth from 15. In the opening round, when he had eight birdies at Indian Wells, Massengale made one putt of 45 feet, another from 30 and two from 20 feet.

"These are good driving courses here," said Massengale, "but you have to putt well to score. I've always putt well here." Lietzke had six birdies and a bogey for his 67 and said he was surprised he lost ground to

Ski race finale in Sun Valley

Mahre collects third straight win as Canada cops team title

SUN VALLEY, Idaho (UPI) — American World Cup competitor Phil Mahre won his third straight race Thursday in the Sun Valley finale of the Canadian-American ski series, but Canadian Raymond Pratte came in to win the men's series title.

Heidi-Preuss of the United States led during her second slalom run in the final women's race of the series, but she had clinched the Can-Am women's championship two weeks ago. The race was won by Canadian Jane Tisdall.

Mahre, who took advantage of a break in World Cup competition to race here, picked up 75 Can-Am points with his three straight victories on the manmade snow at Sun Valley and finished third in the series.

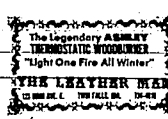

Mahre of White Pass, Wash., zipped through the 62-gate course which dropped 177 meters down Warm Springs run in a combined time of 1:03.86 seconds, easily defeating Cary Adgate of Boyne Mountain, Mich., at 1:05.80 seconds.

Pratte, of Rouyn-Noranda, Que., began the final race in second place in the Can-Am standings and needed to finish fourth or above to edge Mike Durtsch of Mazama, Wash., who had already won his maximum slalom points and couldn't add to them.

The Canadian finished third after Durtsch, who could have pushed Pratte down in the race standings by beating him, fell on the first run; Pratte tallied 85 Can-Am points to 81 for Durtsch. Pratte led after the first run down the 56-gate women's course, but fell on the second run. Tisdall, of Langley, B.C., won with a combined time of 2:08.89 seconds, edging Vanilla Haining of Calgary, Alta., at 2:10.17.

In the women's series standings, Preuss tallied 154 points for a huge margin over runnerup Leslie Leet Smith of Killington, Vt., who had 109 after a fifth place finish Thursday.

Do you want to make a fortune, young fellow? All right, go into the Hillside Underground Home Building Business. Rent a big digging machine like the swimming pool contractor's use to bit out huge chunks of earth. Make a deal with a carpenter, plumber, electrician, steel man and concrete pourer. No don't just gouge basements. Build little homes entirely underground with about four feet of earth on top of them. Make sure the entrance is dug first-down and then up the doorways, thus to employ the Eskimo igloo principle of warm-air capture. Windows? How about closed-circuit television cameras mounted overhead above ground level? In such homes, residents could insulate their possessions from crime, eliminate much of their insurance payments, and pare down to almost nothing their heating and air-conditioning bills. And the garden next to the garage above could be as big as the house, if not bigger. I'd go into this business myself if I weren't all tied up with investments in Hillside.

APPEALING

Q. "Can you confirm the claim that a painting by an ape once won first place in an art show intended for human painters?"

A. Can indeed. In Topeka, Kans., half a dozen years ago. An orangutan named Djakarta Jim in the zoo there was five years old then. One of his original water colors was entered in a regional art contest under a phony name and it got the top prize.

Q. "It's widely known through song and story that you can see England's white cliffs of Dover from the French coast. So what color are the French cliffs you see from the English coast?"

A. White, too. Same rock formation.

ADVERTISING

When citizens band radio operators see a police car with red lights flashing and sirens wailing, they say it's "advertising." What few may know, though, is that the original definition of advertising, in fact, was "to give a warning."

Most dreaded injury in football is the injury to the knee. Yet it's the head injury that's more likely to be fatal. Still, football players never worry about getting killed, am sure they don't. What scares them is the possibility that they might not be able to run again.

United Auto Workers, executives to commemorate 40th anniversary

DEARBORN (UPI) — It would have been unclear 40 years ago, members of the United Auto Workers sitting down to dinner with executives of General Motors Corp.

Back then they were battling each other, literally, as the UAW sought recognition as the bargaining agent for auto workers. The only sitting down then was the famous "sit-down" strike in Flint, Mich.

Tonight, top GM and UAW executives sit down at a dinner commemorating the signing of the UAW-GM "recognition" agreement of Feb. 11, 1937, on three typed pages that opened their bargaining relationship.

Many of the men who took part in the "sit-down" strike that began Dec. 20, 1936, in GM's Flint Fisher Body Plants No. 1 and 2 will be at the dinner.

The setzle did not end before strikers beat back Flint police in the "Battle of the Running Bulls," despite several battles between police and strikers and the arrival of National Guardsmen with fixed bayonets, there were no deaths.

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, finally arrived to help settle the dispute with the recognition pact.

"Not everyone believes in 'tuxedo unionism.' Some of the old timers will pass on the dinner and go instead to Flint, where local unionists will mark the occasion on Sunday.

"I cannot in good conscience take part in a celebration under the hegemony of the very corporation which has fought us every step down to the present day where new GM plants are opened in the South with non-union labor," says General Dillinger, a fiery veteran of the sit-down strike.

Now 64, Mrs. Dillinger said she was shocked when she received the invitation. She said it smacked of fraternization and collaboration with the auto company.

But another UAW aide said the adversary relationship is still intact.

"We work things out, we talk things out because we're more civilized now," the aide said. "But we don't take any crap."

Texas endures state's worst winter

DALLAS (UPI) — Firemen freed trucks frozen to a pond. The prostitutes turned out in a fog of white. And the "snowbirds" who flock to South Texas to avoid Northern winters were dismayed by the sight of the area's first snowflakes in more than 100 years.

From the Panhandle plains to the subtropical Rio Grande Valley, Texans have been shivering through the state's worst winter in a century.

Temperatures have consistently dipped below freezing in North Texas had 20 subfreezing days during a 23-day span.

Final records are not compiled, but National Weather Service officials said preliminary data shows the state enduring its worst winter in 100 years.

And while the rigors of a Texas winter may not impress a Minnesota lumberjack, the cold posed some real problems for man and beast in a state accustomed to sunshine.

At the same time, the occasional cold did what vice squad cops have been unable to accomplish — chase the prostitutes off the streets.

"There was definitely fewer hookers out during the cold spells, but the ones who were out were dressed for the occasion," said vice investigator Carroll Dickerson.

"They were wearing their woollies."

In Fort Worth a mid-afternoon wade through a pond turned out to be a chilling experience for some ducks — their feet froze halfway across.

A fire department spokesman said, "The very cold, heavy rain, severe ice-pleading that we help the ducks. The poor ducks' feet were really frozen."

Firemen broke the ice and freed the birds.

The icy road conditions proved the worst for Texans.

Floyd Cowart, a Dallas tow truck driver, said Texans could use a little more experience driving on ice.

"People in this part of the country aren't accustomed to ice and snow. Mostly, they just panic; slam on the brakes and skid off the road. And if they don't hurt themselves too badly, they call us," Cowart said.

The "snowbirds" (the retired folks who hark in the Lower Rio Grande Valley, were forced to endure something unfamiliar to the region — traces of snow.

But even so, "snowbird" Florence, a nurse of Rochester, Minn., could not muster much sympathy for complaining Texans.

"True, this has been the worst winter in my nine years here. I haven't gotten as much sunshine as I'd like. But I tell these people, 'this is still heaven. This is nothing like Minnesota.'"

Carter flies 'Doomsday'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter's first trip to Plains, Ga., as President was planned in a style which could serve as a reminder to the homelands of the awesome and onerous responsibilities now in his hands.

Carter was set to fly this afternoon on the "doomsday" 747 jumbo jet National Emergency Airborne Command Post, at the request of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. He was to get a full briefing en route by a battery of military officers on his top secret equipment and operations.

On the flight plane, one of the base at Andrews Air Force Base has never been flown by a President before.

The top secret communications gear can keep him in touch with the Pentagon, the underground bunker at Fort Ritchie, Md., and other outposts in a military crisis.

Before departing Carter was heavily preoccupied with a series of meetings, including a scheduled session with the League of Families to discuss further pursuit of information from Hanoi on Americans missing in action in Southeast Asia.

Carter was prepared for a long stay with his family in their rural Georgia setting, and his spokesman said he planned no announcements for the two-day retreat.

He was expected to be working mostly on possible cuts or additions he may want to make in the last federal budget which Gerald Ford submitted before leaving office.

Spreading love and goodwill with promises to federal workers that their jobs will become more "meaningful," Carter Thursday continued his drop-in visits to two more major Washington buildings — the Departments of Treasury and Housing and Urban Development.

He repeated some of the inspirational comments he made in visits to the Labor and Commerce Departments the previous day, and said there is an urgent need to convince the public the government is once again "competent" and "honest."

"We're not 'bosses' to anyone," he said. "We are servants to the American people."

He also tried to reassure the workers that he will not reorganize them out of jobs — reductions will be made through failure to fill vacancies which occur naturally.

On the folksy side, Carter preached a bit to startled HUD employees, saying "Those of you who are 'living in sin' I hope you'll get married."

"People in this part of the country aren't accustomed to ice and snow. Mostly, they just panic; slam on the brakes and skid off the road. And if they don't hurt themselves too badly, they call us," Cowart said.

Antiwar crowd different now

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The symbols are familiar — placards and peace doves, a circle of chanting demonstrators in front of the White House — and the issue, too: Vietnam.

But the mood in Washington has changed.

Thursday, President Carter faced his first antiwar demonstration in front of the White House as some 50 people gathered to call for "an end of the Vietnam War" by normalizing relations with Vietnam, and extending the presidential pardon to include military deserters and veterans with less than a honorable discharge.

The wintry weather gripping the East for several weeks broke in Washington this day, and demonstrators, marching in a small circle, waving placards and chanting "recognize Vietnam now," were cheerful, not angry.

Instead of lines of club-wielding policemen, there were only a dozen or so officers visible, and they joked with tourists more jovially dressed than the demonstrators.

More significant for the first time in 10 years, a delegation from the antiwar groups — the American Friends Service Committee, the National Council for Universal and Unconditional Amnesty, veterans self-help centers and others — were allowed inside the White House to talk with top aides.

"They told us the President knew the meeting was taking place," said Carol Weiss, a veteran of the peace movement and now national coordinator of Friendship, a private coalition of peace and religious groups seeking to aid the reconstruction of Vietnam.

"That's very important. He was not watching a football game."

During the Nixon years, White House spokesmen routinely announced the President was paying no attention to antiwar demonstrations, preferring instead to watch football games on television.

Hoax test for terror plan

LOS ANGELES (UPI) - Within the last 18 months, a terrorist group notified police that a nuclear device was in place at an industrial complex and would be detonated unless an undisclosed amount of money was paid.
Under Sheriff Sherman Block said Wednesday that the threat turned out to be a hoax, but it led to the creation of a nuclear blackmail task force. He disclosed the threat during a conference of the Emergency Preparedness Commission.
He declined to identify the intended victim of the hoax or to say when it occurred or who was behind it.
The FBI was brought in along with federal Energy Resources and Development Administration agents from a nuclear proving ground in New Mexico.
"Federal people with monitoring equipment finally determined that the threat was not real," Block said. "But the threat provided an opportunity for us to test our plans and procedures - during what appeared to be a real emergency."

"We are satisfied with the results."
Block said it would take only six to 12 well-organized terrorists to disrupt Los Angeles County.
Block said that over the last several years terrorists "generally composed of bright, young, educated ideologically committed people" have become very active.

Grange cited for service

TWIN FALLS - The Twin Falls Grange No. 210 recently won third place in national Grange competition for community services.

The plaque the Grange received represents the efforts of many local members who donated time and money to the many community service projects undertaken by the local chapter in 1976, according to Master Clark Kleinkopf.

The chapter first won top honors in the state of Idaho and received a check for $100 and later won third in the national meeting at Atlantic City, N.J., and received the plaque and a second check for $100 from State Grange Master Gordon Tate.

The community service projects completed by the local Grange which won them the award included donations of money and work to the Idaho Youth Ranch at Rupert.

Few advantages in open weather

BOISE (UPI) - The lack of snowfall in all areas of Idaho is likely to have an adverse effect on winter wheat and may mean below normal storage of irrigation water for next season, the Department of Employment said today.
But the agency said the open weather has some advantages.
The department said the weather has allowed ranchers to graze their livestock longer this winter and reduced the need for feed.
This reduced livestock feeding, however, has resulted in a decline in the number of agricultural workers, the department said. It said employment in agriculture during the Jan. 9-15 period was estimated at 30,020, which was down 2.6 per cent from the previous month and 4.5 per cent below the January 1976 level.

Employment of regular hired farm workers was 5.4 per cent below the December 1976 level and seasonal farm employment was down 18 per cent, the department said. When compared with last year's data, regular hired farm worker employment was down 17.8 per cent and seasonal farm employment was 6.2 per cent below the January 1976 level.
The agency said Idaho's average agricultural employment during 1976 was 38,600, down 1.8 per cent from the 1975 figure. It said most of the 1975 to 1976 decline was due to a five per cent decline in regular hired farm workers and a 2.8 per cent decline in local seasonal farm workers.

many hours gathering produce and creating a display for the Grange booth at the Twin Falls County Fair.
Kleinkopf has been community service chairman for the Grange during 1976 and will serve again in 1977. Total membership of the Twin Falls Grange No. 216 is 80.
The Grange works with many other organizations in its community service projects, according to Kleinkopf, a five-year veteran of the community services committee.

Crop irrigation info coming

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley farmers will have access to crop water use information this week which could help them schedule their irrigation more accurately and efficiently.

According to Dorrell Larsen, extension irrigator for the University of Idaho, the information on crop water use rates will be available twice weekly in the Times-News.

"This is another tool you can put in the arsenal for irrigation," Larsen told a group of farmers at the Snake River Conservation Research Center near Kimberly Wednesday.

"It could be valuable," he continued, "particularly in a year like this."

Larsen said local farmers could use the information and couple it with information they can determine about their own fields in order to predict when to irrigate.

Larsen said the computer will provide data about evapotranspiration or crop water use for alfalfa, the thirstiest plant grown in Idaho, to within a six per cent accuracy.

"If we can call a plant within six per cent, we can call it more accurately than we have the efficiency to irrigate,"

Larsen said present irrigation methods provide between 50 to 75 per cent efficiency in water use and predicted more efficient scheduling could help farmers use their water to better advantage.

Reviewing general irrigation needs of different crops, Larsen told the audience sugar beets need at least 30 per cent moisture for proper germination and beet seedlings need a steady supply of water to get them off to a good start in the spring. He cautioned loss of yield could occur in bean crops if they are allowed to get dry before the first irrigation and told listeners the bean plant has high requirement for water during mid-July, especially during the bloom stage.

He said moisture in bean crops should be kept at 60 per cent or above for best yields.

Gas lack curtails output of nitrogen fertilizers

WASHINGTON — Natural gas shortages have curtailed production of nitrogen fertilizers needed for spring planting in some of the country's principal growing areas, according to industry officials.

Ohio, said by telephone from his Cleveland headquarters: "I don't think we are in a position to start talking about a fertilizer shortage. Supply and demand are about in balance, but continued curtailment would start cutting into that."

"We're going to feel this worst in the South," said Donald Borst, executive vice president of C.F. Industries Inc., of Long Grove, Ill., which also operates plants in the Middle West.

"While some plants can substitute oil for fuel, experts say, they have no substitute for the gas as a raw material."

Wheeler believes that the total loss of production would reach about 750,000 tons of anhydrous ammonia, or a little less than 5 per cent of normal production. Other estimates ranged 600,000 to a million tons.

Recycling center has record year

TWIN FALLS — Reynolds Aluminum Recycling Co., which maintains a permanent center here, set a new record in 1976 for the amount of aluminum collected in Idaho, Utah and Washington. Reynolds' Twin Falls center recycled 416,700 pounds of aluminum last year, which figures out to 18 pounds for every person living inside the city limits. The firm recycled 10.6 million pounds of aluminum in the year, over 3 million pounds more than in 1975. Paying at the rate of 15 cents a

The company pays 17 cents a pound for aluminum beverage cans and other clean household aluminum items such as pie pans, foil, frozen food and dinner trays, and dip, pudding and meat containers. Certain other types of clean all-aluminum items can be redeemed at a slightly lower rate. The recycling center is located at 349 Maxwell Ave. It is open from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday. For more information, collectors can call Twin Falls phone number 731-6220.

Fair time cut for pupils

TWIN FALLS — A decision by the Twin Falls School Board to keep school in session a half day on Feb. Day has drawn support from the chairman of the fair board. "It's not going to be a problem," said fair board chairman Mike Gray. "The students involved heavily get off."

The school board made its decision in order to meet the 180-day 90% attendance required by the state. The board also dropped a half-day off the beginning of next year's Christmas vacation to meet the state requirement. School administrators had been set to start classes next year on Aug. 25 and let out a full day for the fair and the Friday prior to the Christmas weekend.

Their schedule ran around when the board objected to starting school late in mid-week. "Care, though," board member Richard Ryall asked superintendent Camden Meyer, "don't you think it's a little odd to have school start on a Thursday?" The board then readjusted the schedule. School is now scheduled to start next year on Aug. 29, a Monday, and run through Friday, May 26. Students will be let out 1:15 p.m. on Sept. 8, Twin Falls' fair day, and again on Friday, Dec. 23, to start Christmas vacation. Under state law, four hours of attendance qualifies as a full school day.

In making the decision on fair day, board members argued students rarely get out to the fair in the morning even when school is let out. Gray agreed with the school board decision.

"If they get out there at noon and in the afternoon, and perhaps for the rodeo, that's pretty good," he said. "I do feel the educational benefits of the fair are tremendous."

Gray acknowledged that the school district had a scheduling problem. "Anything they can do to improve that situation, I think we ought to support," he said. The high schools will also let out a half day for the fair, a policy that district has followed for several years.

The Filer school district lets its students out for the entire week of the fair, but this is because the fair is in Filer, according to superintendent Ray Baker. "We've done this now for three years, and it's worked out so good that we just automatically don't have school for that week," Baker said. He said most Filer students work at the fair and had been out of school anyway. "The board just declined no school for that week."

He said Filer schools start a week earlier to make up for the time out during the fair.

South might well follow up by merely bidding six hearts, but there is some chance for North to hold the ace of diamonds. In any event, assuming North is a good player, South can afford to bid five clubs.

Ask the Jacobys

One of the more complicated and controversial new duplicate rules concerns the correction of scores. Under the old rules, if a score was entered as four spades-making-five-and-both-sides-agreed-later-on that was four spades making-jump-four, the score could be corrected. The new rule will be explained tomorrow. Do you have a question for the experts? Write "Ask the Jacobys" care of this newspaper. The Jacobys will answer individual questions if stamped, self-addressed envelopes are enclosed. The most interesting questions will be used in this column and will receive copies of JACOBY MODERN.

When you play this convention you respond two notrump to deny holding an ace; with one ace you bid that suit; with two aces you jump to three notrump, and so on. The convention would work beautifully with today's hand where South could bid two spades and jump to seven hearts after partner responded with three diamonds to show that ace. However, with most hands the normal responding system works out much better. But even with this hand the grand slam can

Blaine studies justice

HAILEY — The first comprehensive statistical evaluation of an Idaho county's criminal justice system will be made in Blaine County by the state Law Enforcement Planning Commission (LEPC).

Fred Grant, the state compliance officer at LEPC and the governor's aide on criminal justice, announced Wednesday that LEPC will make a comprehensive "system rate study" of the Blaine County adult and juvenile criminal justice system.

Grant stressed the study was being conducted because LEPC felt Blaine County had established several innovative and progressive programs in its justice system, especially in its juvenile division. LEPC wants to determine if these programs are successful and effective, he said.

"Believe me," Grant stated Wednesday to a group of county law-enforcement officials and others involved in the county justice system, "we're not coming in here because of the problems Blaine County's got, but because we think you offer guidance to those problems."

The system rate study, which will begin in two or three weeks and will probably take three or four months to complete, will choose a given year, probably 1974-1975, and will study every case in the adult and juvenile criminal justice system in the county, according to Grant.

LEPC researchers and statisticians will study and follow the case progress of subjects to determine what happens under the Blaine County justice system, Grant said.

For instance, LEPC will examine a case from the first encounter or arrest by police, to bail, to release, to prosecution, to conviction or dismissal, to sentencing, to jail or probation, to parole, to a determination of success or failure after going through the justice system.

The years 1974 or 1975 would be good ones to study, Grant said, because they allow a chance to follow the subject after contact with the county's criminal justice system and to see whether or not re-arrests and second incidents occur. It allows LEPC to "get some feel as to recidivism," Grant said.

"At least then," Grant stated about the purpose of the study, "you'll have some concrete (statistical) evidence to know whether what you're doing really works."

The names of case subjects examined in the study will remain private, Grant said.

Judge gives life terms to accused IRA killers

LONDON (UPI) — An Old Bailey judge Thursday sentenced four IRA killers to a total of 47 life sentences and 616 years in prison on six counts of murder. Police ordered armed reinforcements to London in case of a reprisal of the killings.

One of the condemned men, Martin J. O'Connell, 25, turned his back on Judge Joseph Cantley during his sentencing to 12 concurrent life terms and shouted "Up the Provo!" As he was taken from the dock.

Judge Cantley recommended the four serve at least 30 years before any possible parole — the heaviest possible sentence in Britain, which has no parole-time death penalty.

Fearing an IRA reprisal to the sentences, police brought extra-units into London and intensified already heavy security measures at public buildings and main railroad and subway stations. Many police were armed.

Between them the four men, who confessed to being members of the Provisional IRA "active service unit," received 47 life sentences and individual concurrent terms of imprisonment — totalling 616 years.

O'Connell, Edward Butler, 28, and Harry Duggan, 24, all of the Irish Republic, were convicted of 21 of the 23 charges against them which included 7 of murder and 14 involving bomb explosions. Like O'Connell, the other two received 12 concurrent life sentences.

Hugh Doherty, 26, Irish-born but a resident of Glasgow, Scotland, was convicted on 18 counts and received 11 concurrent life sentences.

The four were captured in December 1974 after holding a man and wife hostage at gunpoint in the couple's apartment for six days.

A jury of six men and five women deliberated for nine hours Wednesday before convicting them of the murders of writer Ross McWhirter, internationally known cancer expert Prof. Gordon Hamilton-Fairley, police bomb-disposal expert Capt. Roger Goad and three other persons.

The four defendants refused to plead during the 13-day trial. None of the four were present — for Wednesday's verdicts but all four stood in court Thursday for the sentencing.

Jury finds teen guilty

RUPERT — A Heyburn teen-ager was found guilty here Wednesday of a reduced charge of assault with a deadly weapon.

Paul Pugsley, 17, had been charged with assault with a deadly weapon with intent to commit murder. A jury Wednesday found him guilty on the lesser charge.

Sentencing has been set for Feb. 28 in Fifth District Court. Juvenile jurisdiction was waived on Pugsley to allow his trial as an adult. A 16-year-old boy with him at the time of the incident underwent juvenile proceedings.

Pugsley and the other juvenile went to a housing unit in the Paul Labor Camp in the early hours of Nov. 20, knocked on a door, and when it opened, they began firing with .22 caliber pistols.

One of the shots hit Adam Hernandez, 21, who was renting the unit.

According to testimony, the shooting stemmed from an argument at a party earlier the same night.

Ketchum budgets higher

KETCHUM — Ketchum's proposed budget for the first nine months of 1977 is 19 per cent above 1976's spending rate.

The projected nine-month budget is $862,743, or an increase of $131,400 over three-fourths of last year's 12-month expenditures of $895,125. Three-fourths of the 1976 yearly expenditure was $671,343.

The increases reflect an 8 per cent salary increase which will account for about $19,200, according to Ketchum City Administrator Jim Jaquet.

Other improvements will include $50,000 for modifications to the sewage treatment plant as required by the state; $12,000 for a bikepath to Warm Springs and a pedestrian walkway near Hemingway School, and $15,000 for land acquisition for an ore wagon museum.

Hearing on the proposed budget is scheduled for Feb. 21.

Jaquet also has prepared the 1977 budget for the entire 12 months to make a better comparison with last year's expenditures. Under this method, the 12-month budget for 1977 is $982,250 or 9.7 per cent increase over the $895,125 1976 total.

Because the fiscal year for Idaho cities and counties has been changed from Jan. 1 to Oct. 1, all governmental units now must compile nine-month budgets to legalize spending until September, when a new 12-month budget will be approved.

The proposed nine-month expenditures include $81,802 for general government, which includes administration, compared to $101,750 for law enforcement, compared to $93,351; $9,846 for animal control compared to $12,844; $59,394 for fire control, compared to $72,441.

Other major items include $4,933 for ambulance service, compared to $7,160 last year; $11,157 for building department — compared to $18,437; $133,580 roads and streets, compared to $127,000; $257,501 miscellaneous, compared to $266,637; $33,266, park, compared to $32,965 and $124,091, sewer, compared to $153,421.

A major item under the miscellaneous heading is $24,894 for debt service. Jaquet said this item is high because Ketchum finances its budget largely through tax anticipation notes.

A large portion of the revenue for the new budget will come from property taxes. Jaquet said that the city will not receive 1977 tax revenue from the county until January, 1978. So to finance the budget the city borrows money from banks in the form of tax anticipation notes.

Jaquet said the tax anticipation notes for 1977 will be $182,210-00 which the city will have to pay interest.

Former TF man receives Meritorious Service medal

TWIN FALLS — Army Maj. Vaughn D. Brauer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin W. Brauer, Twin Falls, recently was presented his second award of the Meritorious Service Medal in Heidelberg, Germany.

The medal provides recognition for degree of achievement falling between the standards of the Legion of Merit and the Army Commendation Medal.

Maj. Brauer earned the award during his last assignment with the Helena, Mont., district recruiting command.

The major, assigned with the U.S. Military Community Activity, Heidelberg, entered the Army in September 1961 and holds the Silver Star, two awards of the Bronze Star Medal and the Army Commendation Medal.

Carter schedules talk show

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter will hold his first two-hour "talk show" on Saturday, March 5, talking from his Oval Office with telephone callers from across the country, the White House announced today.

Press Secretary Jody Powell said the program, to be billed "Ask President Carter," will be broadcast live by the CBS radio network with Walter Cronkite as moderator.

Powell told reporters the question with Carter is "part of the President's continuing effort to make himself available to the people."

Details of the telephone talk show will be announced later, said Powell, but callers will be able to reach the White House toll free. The calls apparently will not be screened ahead of time.

The presidential spokesman also announced that Carter will fly to Plains, Ga., Friday on the F-14 National Emergency Airborne Command Post jumbo jet, which is equipped with a world-wide communications apparatus.

Powell explained Carter is flying on the top-secret military aircraft in order to have "a briefing on the plane that it is conceivable in a national emergency would be in the position of mobile commander-in-chief."

Carter will be the first President to fly aboard the plane and he would be able "to save time and fuel" by having the briefing while flying home for the weekend.

Powell said a pool of reporters would be permitted to accompany Carter but would not have access to parts of the mammoth 747 jet which is equipped with the "secret" electronics gear.

In other developments, Powell said Carter has been concerned about the "impact of high heating bills on Americans" but has not taken a position on any approach for reimbursing those hard hit by the high cost of fuel.
