Winter or spring? Drought, fires could shut forests

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN Times-News Writer TWIN FALLS — The driest winter on record could mean the closure of the Sawtooth National Forest if moisture doesn't arrive before late spring. One small blate has already been spotted south of Galena Summit, an almost unheard of occurrence this time of year. If this winter's drought, which has hurt resort industries throughout the west, should continue into the spring and summer, Forest Service officials say there would probably be restrictions placed on the uses of the forests. At worst, the most severe restriction could be imposed — the temporary closure of the forests. "We've been kind of reserving judgment until we see what happens through the spring in terms of the severity and the number of fires," Bill Williams, fire management officer for the Sawtooth Forest, told the Times-News Friday. "It's too early to say that we're going to have a bad fire season, but if we don't get some appreciable moisture between now and late spring, we are in for a heavy fire season." Williams said one small fire in the Sawtooth had already occurred in January just south of Galena Summit. "Normally that country has got six feet of snow there," he said. "But this year the snow is low enough for a fire to creep around on the ground. It's the first fire I'm aware of that's ever occurred in January. We've had them in March, but never in January."

'Shacking' doesn't cut divorce GAINESVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — Unmarried couples living together are following a popular lifestyle these days, but a University of Florida sociologist says the arrangement provides neither a guarantee of continuing love nor insurance against the divorce court later on. Felix Berardo, editor of "The Journal of Marriage and Family," said researchers found no difference in the divorce rate between those who had cohabitated and those who hadn't. The study, scheduled for publication in the journal's May issue, deals with a sample of young men born between 194 and 1954 — 18 per cent of whom lived with a woman six months or more without being legally married. Based on this study and the LGA professional papers a year that he reads, Berardo said he doesn't believe living together prepares couples for the stresses of society that accompany the formal bonds of matrimony. "Bills and pieces" from the manuscripts I've seen, small samples measuring marital satisfaction, plus talking to young people who have lived together indicate that living together doesn't make for better marriages," he said. Research has exploded other misconceptions about marriage and the family, said Berardo, who also teaches graduate and undergraduate sociology courses at the university. "The idea that family size has anything to do with child intelligence, that mothers are better parents and that old-fashioned lines claiming that kids raised in single-parent homes are handicapped in some way or another have all fizzled in the face of research." Berardo blames post-World War II propaganda for some of these fallacies. "For example, the man in the street might blame the increasing number of working mothers for the rise in juvenile crime, but research shows no convincing relationship between the two. Neighborhoods are what make the difference," he said. "And the idea that the larger the family, the more loving and tolerant and warm the upbringing was part of the propaganda that brought us our post-war baby boom." Berardo said small families actually are more gallant and children from them are better achievers than children from large families, which are usually more authoritarian.

Eastern thaw brings bustle

By United Press International Buoyed by the sudden February thaw, towboats hacked a path through the ice-glutted Mississippi River while officials in western New York made disaster plans to combat the floods which could result from too much warmth too soon. The mild weather, following one of the most brutal winter freezes in memory, continued to soothe the souls of Midwesterners and Easterners. Early afternoon readings Saturday in the 50s and 60s stretched from the southern two thirds of the Atlantic Coast states along the lower Mississippi Valley, the southern and central Plains and the Southwest and Pacific states. Most rainfall has been light, easing — for the time being — the threat of flooding as the thaws bled into the heavy snows.

The National Weather Service placed western New York state under a flash-flood watch through Sunday. However, the Corps of Engineers told a group of Erie County officials Saturday the threat of flooding this weekend was not as great as first feared. Officials discussed the threat of flash flooding and considered disaster plans in the event that some western New York rivers and streams begin to swell over their banks. "I think there's always the potential for flash flooding," said Mayor Stanley Makowski of snow-billized Buffalo. "There has been exploration to get a boat which can break up heavy ice formations, and the possibility of evacuation of some of our citizens." Rivermen have worked to open up a 160-mile stretch of the Mississippi River has been closed to traffic from just south of St. Louis to Cairo, Ill., since Jan. 19.

BPA power studied for all Northwest

By BILL LAZARUS Times-News writer TWIN FALLS — The Federally owned Bonneville Power Administration would pool power and sell it at wholesale prices to private and public utilities throughout the Northwest under a plan being studied by a regional association of more than 130 utilities. The plan, which is being developed by the Pacific Northwest Utilities Conference, calls for enabling BPA to buy power from coal-fired and nuclear power plants built by private utilities and public bodies, according to Hector Durocher, power manager at BPA. The BPA, he said, then would sell a unit of this thermal power and hydropower in its system to utilities on a wholesale basis. Pooling the power generated in the region would help coordinate planning new power plants, would make it easier to raise funding for these plants and would make the wholesale cost of power more than throughout the region. Durocher said.

He said the plan is still in the "concept stage" and "nothing is finally agreed on." He said the BPA itself has "not yet come out in agreement" with the plan. Before the plan could be implemented, he said, Congress would have to pass a law authorizing BPA to purchase power from coal-fired and nuclear plants. Durocher said that utilities would have the option of building plants to serve their own needs or building plants and selling power to the BPA pool under the plan. He said several committees of the Pacific Northwest Utilities Conference are considering the details of the energy pooling plan. Spokesmen for the conference could not be reached for comment. Robert Brown, newly director for Idaho Power, said Friday that Idaho Power would "have to weigh the benefits" before deciding to join a regional power pool. "We wouldn't go into it if it were not beneficial to us and to our customers," he said.

Man shot for steel hand

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Vance Carroll was shot because a deputy sheriff mistook his steel artificial hand for a gun. Deputy Ronald Couch said he was questioning a witness in an assault case on a street corner when he sighted Carroll behind a nearby fence. When Carroll realized he had been seen, the deputy said, he began running toward the officer, who ordered him to halt. Carroll stopped, but his arm was pointed at the deputy, who mistook the glint of the steel hook for a gun and opened fire, shooting Carroll in the hip, the sheriff's office said. Only after Carroll was taken to a hospital, where he was reported in good condition, was it discovered he was wanted by police on suspicion of kidnapping and rape.

New energy costs soar

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The nation may have to spend up to $66 billion developing new energy sources over the next decade, and it will suffer hardships under any conceivable energy policy, the Congressional Budget Office said Saturday.

A second report, covering broad policy choices, said "there are inherent conflicts among desirable energy policy goals and among the various policies designed to support them."

The energy packages "the nation may choose from lie said, range from keeping the present trends, to protecting the environment to holding prices down, to freeing the market from price controls. Each has drawbacks.

"Both the highest level of energy demand and the highest level of imports to meet would result from the energy policy package emphasizing low costs to consumers," it said.

Welcome home, Bill Sunderland

Southern Idaho welcomes back a well-traveled native son named William Sunderland. Sunderland has purchased the newspaper Ketchum Tomorrow and returned to Idaho to run the weekly.

More than two decades ago the 42-year-old Sunderland began his newspaper career in Boise. He ranged far and wide before he returned to Idaho.

Sunderland traveled with Pope Paul, covered Jackie Onassis and worked major stories on the Vietnam peace negotiations while serving as a foreign correspondent with United Press International.

Most recently, the Montpelier native worked as an editor of the New York Daily News.

Bill Sunderland has seen it all, yet chose to come back to Idaho.

Running a weekly newspaper in Ketchum, finally sounded better than serving as an editor of the largest circulation newspaper in America.

That speaks well of Idaho.

If he does his job well, Bill Sunderland can help one of Idaho's fast-growing and fastest changing communities cope with the problems of urbanization, economic fluctuation and a transient population.

His job isn't an easy one. Community leadership is difficult in the Wood River Valley.

Newspapering isn't easy, either. Three weeklies and two daily papers serve the less than 10,000 full-time residents of Blaine County.

But with luck and by using what pastures he has built up over the years in other, wider places, Sunderland may be able to stamp a positive, personal mark on Ketchum.

Welcome home, Bill Sunderland.

Unproductive exercise in a free society

One of the most irritating, unproductive yet necessary exercises in our democratic society is tolerating the gloomy paranoids who see a communist in every governmental office.

Periodically, this small minority jumps the tracks of rational thought and begins bounding off across the prairie of irrationality in search of a new communistic dragon to slay.

Sometimes it's UNICEF Christmas cards, other times it's sex education in the schools, on earlier occasions the dragon has been fluoridation of water.

Twin Falls County apparently is about to be taken for another of those bumpy rides off into never-never land by a small group which wants to recall the three county commissioners.

To this disheveled bunch, communism and land use planning are synonymous.

So, the three county commissioners who are by law required to implement a local land use plan, are subject to the wrath of these self-styled patriots.

At a meeting a few days ago to inform the public about the county land use plan this vocal minority virtually took over the proceedings.

Giving long dissertations about the U.S. Constitution and the courts, the spokesmen for this band all but destroyed any chance the public had to learn something about the mechanics of the proposed county land plan.

Calling for the resignations of Ann Cover, William Chancey and Merl Leonard, the leaders of the anti-land use clan tried to explain why land use planning was anti-constitutional.

No wonder the group felt agitated. The United States Supreme Court, legislatures in two dozen states and county commissioners all of Idaho have endorsed the concept of land use planning.

That's quite a conspiracy to combat. The right to recall elected officials provides a built-in safety valve in a democracy. Certainly the highly active imaginations of the anti-land use group deserve access to this safety valve in their personal crusade to slay all that is pink.

But the Twin Falls County Commissioners needn't lose too much sleep over this frivolous effort to recall them.

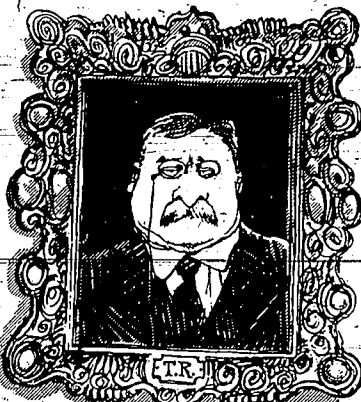

In the coming weeks, as the recall petitions begin to circulate, the commissioners and the citizens should remain completely calm, completely rational.

These people have every right to circulate the petitions and explain their views.

The more reasonable, thinking men and women of Twin Falls County have every right not to sign them.

Thought for today

"Great men speak to us only so far as we have ears and souls to hear them; only so far as we have in us the roots, at least, of that which flowers out in them." - Will Durant, American historian.

Keep thinking those warm thoughts

By ART BUCHWALD

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON - It isn't easy to keep warm when the President asks everybody to keep the thermostat down to 65 in the daytime and 55 at night. A psychiatrist friend of mine insists, though, that a lot of it is in the mind, and if you can think "warm" thoughts it will help you keep warm.

I'm not certain if he's correct or not, but I'm willing to make my small contribution to the energy crisis by giving you some examples of warm thoughts to think about. Zelda walked along the beach. It wasn't easy because the hot sand almost burned the soles of her feet. She found a spot around the cove out of sight of the other sunbathers. After spreading out her beach blanket she started to put suntan oil on her brown skin. Then she took off the top of her bikini and lay down on the red towel on her stomach. The rays of the sun gently engulfed her body as she started to doze off. Suddenly, a tall, bronzed man appeared and cast a shadow over her.

"Is this spot taken?" he asked with a mischievous grin.

Zelda pretended she was annoyed, but in fact she was happy to have company. The man spread out his towel next to her.

"Would you like some suntan lotion?" she asked him. "The sun is awfully hot."

"No," he said. "I'm used to the sun. And if I get too hot I can always go into the clear blue water."

Zelda thought to herself, "I hope we don't get into a heated discussion over where we can go for dinner."

The Johnsons sat down to dinner. Mr. Johnson was at the head of the table. His wife brought in a steaming bowl of oyster stew and placed it in front of him. He helped himself to some in his plate and then passed the bowl around the table.

"Well," said Mr. Johnson, "what have you children been up to today?"

"I got three A's on my report card," Gerald, his older son, said. "and I made the honor list." A warm feeling of pride went through Mr. Johnson, as well as his wife.

"Father," said William, his second son. "I have decided to become a doctor. But have no fear. I intend to work my way through college."

Mr. Johnson gazed at him.

Melissa, his daughter, chimed in. "I was going out tonight with George, but I decided to stay in instead and read the National Geographic. It has a very interesting article on Tahiti, where the temperature rarely drops below 70 and never goes over 85."

"That's nice," said Mr. Johnson as he served himself a slice of sizzling corn bread with melted butter.

"Don't eat too much," Mrs. Johnson warned. "because for dessert Little Ann has a surprise for us."

"And what is the surprise?" Mr. Johnson asked as his face flushed in contentment.

Little Ann said, "I'm going to make everyone flaming Cherries Jubilee."

"Hot dog," said Gerald. When Little Ann served her dessert everyone applauded her efforts warmly.

Renata knew she shouldn't be there. She sat next to the fireplace as Paul threw another log on the fire. The flames shot up, lighting her beautiful face. Paul handed her a glass of brandy which she took nervously. His eyes burned into hers as he said, "Why don't you take off your coat?"

"I should be going home," Renata said. "It's awfully late."

Paul sat down next to her on the cushion and gazed into the red-hot embers. "You know you don't want to go."

Renata blushed, and a strange heat overwhirled her.

"I guess I don't," she said, looking Paul slowly on the cheek. He looked at her and then stony, gently but forcefully, took her into his arms. The crackling of the logs in the room was the only sound that could be heard except for an occasional sigh.

Well, that should get you through the day or my psychiatrist friend is all wet.

How Carter plans to limit weapons

By HENRY S. BRADSHER

© 1977 Washington Star

WASHINGTON - By offering the Soviet Union possibilities of strategic arms limitations that it had previously rejected, President Carter has, nevertheless, his dedication to arms control without clarifying prospects for a new agreement.

One suggestion made at his first news conference would leave the Defense Department free to develop the cruise missile by dropping it and the Soviet Backfire bomber from the pending arms control treaty.

This satisfies a major Pentagon condition for continuing with cruise missiles under any new treaty. But it violates a basic Soviet condition of restricting cruise missiles.

Carter also raised the possibility of halting development of a big new intercontinental missile that the Pentagon considers important for continued nuclear deterrence, but the halt would depend on Moscow's stopping the deployment of its new mobile missile.

The President said he did not think efforts to achieve a new strategic arms limitation treaty - Salt II - would be hurt by voicing criticism of human rights violations in the Soviet Union. And he disagreed with former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger that arms control and human rights criticism had some linkage.

Much of the President's news conference was devoted to American-Soviet relations. He showed that he had been working on the subject, although aides said that detailed studies on arms control possibilities have not yet been completed.

"At the present time, my judgment is that we have superior nuclear capability," Carter said, but each superpower "could destroy a major part of the other nation if a major attack was made," killing 50 million to 100 million persons. "In this sense 'we are roughly equivalent.'"

Carter disclosed several proposals he has made to the Soviet Union, including one that each country would advise the other when a missile test launch is made.

This country's intercontinental missiles are removed from their operational silos and taken to Vandenberg Air Force Base in California for testing. But the Soviet missiles are test-fired directly from their silos after the warheads are removed. This makes it difficult for the United States to be sure whether a missile emerging from a Soviet silo is being fired with peaceful intent.

Another suggestion is "for a comprehensive ban on all nuclear testing" for at least an extended period of time - two years, three years, four years. An exception might be made for Soviet nuclear explosions to change a river course, Carter said.

The big issue in arms control has been turning the Vladivostok agreement, signed in 1974 by President Ford and the Soviet Communist party leader, Leonid I. Brezhnev, into a treaty that would replace the Salt I treaty which expires in October.

The Vladivostok agreement limited each side to 2,400 strategic weapons delivery systems - missiles in land silos and on submarines, and heavy bombers - with no more than 1,320 missiles to have multiple warheads. But the agreement omitted "gray area" systems such as the cruise missiles and the new Backfire bomber.

Disagreement over these weapons has forestalled a Salt II treaty, although Kissinger said the other 90 per cent of the text had been negotiated in detail.

The Soviet Union, estimated by American experts to be up to 10 years behind this country in developing technology for cruise missiles, has insisted on severely limiting them. The small, pilotless projectiles can be built to fly about 375 miles an hour for 2,000 miles, hitting within 30 feet of a target.

The Pentagon says the Backfire bomber "has an intercontinental capability." If it flies high and slow, it insists that Backfire is a strategic weapon and must be so counted; the Kremlin disagrees.

Congressional conservatives quiet presidential nomination.

There are numerous others making subtle overtures in the hope that the mantle of leadership will pass to them. Sen. Jesse A. Helms, R-N.C., is among the best known. But campaigning conservatives are uneasy about what they perceive to be a lack of political stability on his part.

There also is an entire generation of men and women in their 30s and early 40s, many of them charter members of Young Americans for Freedom, who are positioning themselves to some day fill the shoes of Goldwater and Reagan. But their time has not yet come.

When ideologies of either side of the political spectrum gather there are always issues. But the conservative platform these days is filled with such leftovers as gun control, abortion, the equal rights amendment, the Occupational Safety and Health Administration and the death penalty. None has proven appealing enough to lure an electoral majority to the banquet table.

The most obvious symptom of the conservatives' plight is their inability to agree upon a political home. For many, including Reagan, the preferred course is to work within the Republican party.

But other notables, including William A. Rusher, publisher of the National Review, firmly believe the GOP is on its way to extinction and argue vigorously for establishment of a new third party.

And Richard A. Viguere, the right wing's malling list impresario who cut his ties with the Republicans when he agreed to run the direct mail fund-raising campaign for Alabama's Democratic governor, George C. Wallace, in the 1976 presidential campaign, is promoting the notion of backing conservatives in Democratic primaries.

The lack of direction was vividly reflected in a questionnaire distributed to participants at the conference. The first question asked whether conservatives should turn their energies toward the Democratic party, "revive the Republican party" or form a new party.

For those who chose the GOP, there was a choice of no fewer than 11 possible new names, including Conservative Republicans, Conservative, Conservative Independent, Independent, Independent Republican, Independence, Liberty, Freedom and Democratic Freedom.

But only last month, conservatives who chose to remain within the GOP floundered badly when they tried to capture the chairmanship of the Republican National Committee with an obscure candidate, Richard Richards, the Utah state Republican chairman.

"His name" was hardly a household word, admitted one rueful supporter. For him and other conservatives, a political comeback may indeed be in the offing but this is truly the winter of their discontent.

118 weddings?

TOKYO (UPI) — Almost every day was Valentine's Day for Yokokura Kubo.

Kubo's usual way of approaching a girl was to walk up to her and say, "I've fallen in love with you at first sight."

Now in jail facing theft and fraud charges, Kubo, 29, says the gambit worked so well that he became engaged to 118 different women in 19 months.

Police in Nagano City, 100 miles northwest of Tokyo, say Kubo also has confessed to bilking the women out of $26,500 in cash and property.

Despite the 118 engagements, he is still single.

Kubo was arrested Dec. 21

following an accusation by a 29-year-old Nagano woman that he stole her wrist watch.

Details of his 10-month spree of marriage proposals were not made public until Friday, following a nationwide investigation of the victims by police.

He had gentle, high class manners, and he certainly knew how to win a girl's confidence," one of the officers who interrogated Kubo commented.

Officers said Kubo worked mountain resorts in the central part of Japan's main island of Honshu, favored as vacation spots as single office girls from big cities.

Nevada rejects ERA

CARSON CITY, Nev. (UPI) — A move to make Nevada the 36th state to ratify the Equal Rights Amendment has been defeated in the state legislature.

But the bitterness resulting from the 23-15 vote in the assembly Friday may result in a court suit about parliamentary tactics used to pass it in the Senate earlier, as well as a legislative investigation of lobbying pressures.

The amendment needs approval from 38 states to become part of the constitution.

The Assembly controlled 35.5 by Democrats, had supported ERA the past two sessions only to see it die in the Senate.

This time, the Assembly turned against Democratic Gov. Mike O'Callaghan, who urged approval of the proposed 27th amendment in his "State of the State" message to lawmakers early in the session. The dissenters included the speaker, majority leader and speaker pro tem.

"Understandably, I'm disappointed," said O'Callaghan, a lame duck governor who has enjoyed near total success in getting his legislation approved since he was first elected in 1969.

"I am particularly disappointed the resolution did not have the support of the Assembly Democratic leadership," he said. "However, I believe ERA took another step forward, as everybody is now on record and our constituents can evaluate us. I firmly believe those who oppose the amendment are swimming against the tide of progress in our social order."

Thirty-five states have ratified the proposed amendment. The deadline for ratification by 38 states is March 1979. Legislatures in three of the 35 states have voted to rescind their support, a move which authorities say may not be legal.

Gunshot kills Heyburn man

HEYBURN — A 25-year-old Heyburn man, James Lee Johnson Sinclair, was found dead at his home early Saturday morning.

Cassia County Coroner Ken Christensen said the man died of an apparently self-inflicted gunshot wound. A .38 calibre revolver was found in his hand.

The body was discovered about 7:30 a.m. by the victim's mother. She told police her son had been despondent the past several days.

Kidnap ends with surrender to 'son'

CINCINNATI (UPI) — A marijuana-smoking gunman, searching for a son he abandoned 20 years ago, surrendered Saturday to a policeman impersonating his son after holding eight persons hostage in a home for unwed mothers.

The gunman was identified as Jessie L. Coulter, 39, Detroit, who had served time in a Michigan prison on charges stemming from a 1958 gun battle with police.

Coulter was accompanied by his former wife, Rita Gibson of Detroit, 37-year-old mother of his lost son. Police did not know whether she came voluntarily or was forced to accompany Coulter to the Catherine Booth Salvation Army home Friday night.

Coulter was talked into surrendering shortly after six of his hostages escaped by jumping him and taking away his sawed-off shotgun while he was rolling a marijuana cigarette. He was still armed with a knife and held a man and a woman.

"Believe me it could have been a real tragedy," said Police Lt. H.W. Mills. "We tricked him into giving up by having a police officer imitate his son," said Police Capt. Robert Morgan, shortly after the 15-hour ordeal ended.

"He stood outside the locked door and pretended to be his son and talked to him for about 20 minutes."

"When the gunman and his ex-wife came out, one of them, I don't know which one, said, 'Is that really my son?'" said

Morgan.

Friday night, Coulter forced the hostages—four employees and four patients, including a pregnant 15-year-old girl—into a windowless former X-ray room.

Salvation Army Maj. David Baxendale, who was at the home all night, described how the six hostages took away Coulter's, sawed-off, single-barreled, 12-gauge shotgun.

Life support withdrawal OK'd for mother in coma

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (UPI) — Attorneys return to court next week to seek clarification of a judge's ruling permitting the removal of life support systems from Della Dockery, a 41-year-old mother of six who has been in a comatose state for three months.

Chancery Court Judge Herschell Franks issued a memorandum Friday saying the respirator that has kept Mrs. Dockery breathing could be legally removed, but he left to Mrs. Dockery's physician, Dr. Yukata Kato, the ultimate decision of whether to cut off the device.

Noting Mrs. Dockery "may be in a state worse than death," Franks took 15 pages to spell out the conditions under which the life support systems could be removed. He said Dr. Kato must determine that the patient never will regain consciousness, and establish that there is no reasonable possibility of a cure.

Franks' ruling was the result of a suit filed by Mrs. Dockery's family, asking for legal permission to terminate the "extraordinary and heroic" efforts which have kept her alive these past three months.

J. Tucker Montgomery, an emergency room physician and also an attorney representing Dr. Kato, said

Saturday that he will ask for clarification of several points made by Franks.

"Judge Franks' decision was just a declaration of what the rights of the parties are," Montgomery said.

"We will ask for clarifications on the ruling early next week—Monday or Tuesday. The judge has told us we can do that. We need to study the opinion on the broad aspects to medicine," Mon-gomery said.

He said attorneys for Mrs. Dockery, the family and Kato "will all have input in the final decree."

Floyd Morgan, attorney for Mrs. Dockery's husband, Guinn, said he would present Franks with a final decree on Monday. He said he also would ask for some clarification but would in general seek to have the chancellor's guidelines made applicable specifically to Mrs. Dockery's case.

Gem drought tactics mapped

By KEN HODGE
Times-News writer

BOISE — A committee formed by Gov. John Evans Friday to map out a program to alleviate possible drought conditions in Idaho sponsored seven task forces which will investigate the state's drought situations and recommend action.

"We anticipate they will come back with recommendations," said R. Keith Higginson, State Water Resources Director, who heads the committee. "There is a possibility they may suggest mandatory rationing or curtailment of water and power use in the state."

Higginson said the task forces would most certainly make recommendations about "voluntary things we can do to save power and water."

He said there is a strong probability Idaho will face a power shortage due to the decreased stream flow which will result from dry conditions on most Idaho water sheds.

Higginson said the task forces would assess drought-related problems in seven major areas:

- Water supply for public health, safety and welfare.
- Electrical energy conservation.
- Water supply for Idaho industry for a stable economy.
- Water supply for Idaho agriculture.

- Water supply for navigable reservoirs in the state where navigation is necessary.
- Modification of land management practices to minimize the impact of dry conditions on wildlife, forests and recreation areas.
- Water supply for each Idaho community's minimal needs.

The task forces formed Friday were data: public information, municipal and industrial energy; fish, wildlife and recreation; agriculture, and economy and employment.

They must report their findings by March 3. Higginson said the task forces would form the main thrust of Idaho's fight against the possible drought.

Homosexuals, adulterers said unfit for priesthood

AUGUSTA, Ga. (UPI) — A resolution declaring homosexuals and adulterers unfit to be ordained as priests was approved Saturday by delegates to the 155th annual convention of the Episcopal Diocese of Georgia.

After an hour-long debate, 138 delegates voted to approve the resolution and 30 voted against the measure.

"...along with the compassion and love which should inspire a Christian attitude toward the homosexual as a child of God...we shall continue to regard homosexual actions themselves as objectively offensive to God..." the resolution said.

The document also declared that anyone who commits heterosexual activity outside of marriage was unfit to be a priest.

"I completely supported the resolution. I'm glad we passed it. There was confusion as to whether it was aimed at a person's nature or action. The resolution is aimed purely at homosexual action, which the Bible says is immoral," said The Right Rev. Paul Reeves, bishop of Georgia.

Opponents of the resolution, who tried to delay the vote, said the resolution meant homosexuals could not be Christians.

Father J. Powell Gahagan of Valdosta said he knew homosexual priests "whom I find to be very good priests" and he urged delegates to "quit casting stones at other people."

Bills diverge on school arbitration

By GEORGE WILEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A pair of contrasting bills now in the Senate Health, Education and Welfare Committee could decide if Idaho teachers and school boards will have to follow binding arbitration next year.

One bill, which was drafted through and is supported by the Idaho School Boards Association (ISBA), would impose binding arbitration in a negotiations dispute only if both sides voluntarily agreed to arbitration beforehand.

The second bill, drafted by the Idaho Education Association (IEA), the state's largest teachers' union, would require binding arbitration at the request of either party and would establish a labor relations board appointed by the governor to oversee fact-finding and arbitration procedures.

Neither bill presently contains an anti-strike clause, although IEA officials argue no strike clause would be necessary "if binding arbitration were required."

The ISBA-backed bill, Senate Bill 1057, was introduced into the HEW committee by that committee's chairman, Sen. John Barker. R-Butte. It also has support of Rep. Lawrence Knigge, R-Elmer, who in addition to serving in the House is president of the ISBA.

Bill 1057 would strengthen the present negotiation law by setting time limits for negotiations between school districts and teachers' representatives. Negotiations would have to begin no earlier than Feb. 1 and no later than March 1 and would have to be completed by May 15.

If items in negotiations remained unsettled after May 15 those items would have to be submitted to mediation, either by a mediator agreeable to both parties, or through the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Services.

If mediation still failed to bring agreement, the disputed items would be submitted to fact-finding. After the fact-finding report, however, the two sides would simply continue to negotiate. If an impasse continued, both sides could, but would not have to, agree to binding arbitration. If both sides agreed to arbitration then an arbitrator appointed by the Idaho Board of Education would choose between either the last offer made by the school board or the last request of the teachers' union.

Once arbitration has been agreed upon, both sides would have to accept the decision of the arbitrator. The arbitrator would have to choose between the final proposals of one side or the other.

Knigge, who served as chairman of the Filer School Board prior to his election to the House, believes negotiations would be aided by the imposition of the time limits.

"The thing I like about Senate Bill 1057 is that it establishes time lines when negotiations will end," he said.

"The two parties may agree to the remaining items in dispute being settled by a neutral person, but it is not binding arbitration."

Knigge says he would oppose binding arbitration. "I don't want any side to be forced into that position," he said. "If the other party would, it is their choice."

He would also favor the addition of an anti-strike clause to the bill, but will support it without one.

"I think the present negotiation law is workable in most cases, and if this Senate Bill 1057 doesn't go anywhere, I'd like to see it remain just as it is," he said.

While 1057 has the support of the ISBA, the IEA is opposing it largely because the bill contains no provision for binding arbitration.

"We approve of the concept of final offer arbitration," said IEA executive secretary Don Reilly, "but in order for that to be meaningful that has to be at the request of either party."

The ISBA bill's provision for arbitration only by mutual agreement of both parties, he said, "gives one side or the other the level of refusing to go to arbitration, and if you refuse to go to arbitration, there's no end to the process. You drift off into never-never land, which is what we have now. It has to provide some finality to the process, that's what everybody is seeking. We agree that the finality should be final offer arbitration, but it has to be at the request of either party. Neither party should have the opportunity to block that."

Senate Bill 1127, the bill drafted and backed by the IEA, is much broader in scope than Bill 1057 and details procedures for binding arbitration to be followed at the request of either party.

The IEA bill would not only revamp the current law, it would add a whole chapter to the Idaho Code calling for a Professional Employe Relations Board. The three-member board, appointed by the governor with Senate consent, would be charged with appointing mediators, fact-finders and arbitrators to settle disputed items declared at impasse by either side.

The IEA bill would allow school board negotiators and teachers' union representatives to choose their own arbitrators by elimination from a list of names provided by the employee relations board.

The arbitrators could be called for by either side independently of the other if items could not be agreed upon.

The arbitrators could choose from either the final offer of either side or the recommendations of fact-finders, who would have been called in prior to arbitration.

The decision of the arbitrators would be "the final agreement between the parties" under the IEA's bill.

The IEA bill would set no time limits for the negotiations process.

Nor does it contain an anti-strike clause.

"If you're asking, would we favor an anti-strike clause being put into that," Reilly said, "I'd have to say not at this point. We're offering last-

Valentine balloons?

MANHATTAN, Kan. (UPI) — Four university art instructors figure the country could use a lift from the winter doldrums by "popping" balloons that would be more appropriate than a big valentine in the sky over the central Kansas prairie.

On Sunday afternoon, the day before Valentine's Day, students planned to send up helium-filled red weather balloons anchored by ropes and forming a giant heart. They describe the project—entitled "The Big Heart in the Sky"—as the largest valentine.

The Kansas State University artists invited volunteers to help create the sculpture by holding the 100 ropes which will keep the balloons in place.

Own family slain

SAN JOSE, Calif. (UPI) — Police Saturday sought a man who said he was "going completely crazy" for Jack of medication in the bloody knife slaying of his wife and three children in their home.

The victims, whose bodies were scattered in two bedrooms, were Susan Hill, 33, Fay Hill, 12, Robert Hill, 8, and Deborah Gilbert, 14, a daughter by a previous marriage. Another son, Hahh Hill, 14, was not blood at the time.

"There was blood all over the house," said Sgt. Larry Dembovski.

The victims were found Friday evening a few hours after Mrs. Hill's estranged husband, Robert, 35, vanished from a county honor farm 30 miles away. The facility allows inmates to leave on work furloughs and has no locks.

Tea Co. Warren E. McCain, chairman of the board and chief executive officer, will take over Morrow's duties.

McCain was company president until Morrow was named to the position.

He has been with the company for 26 years.

No sign of moisture to break drought

Twin Falls, Burley-Rupert and Northdale areas:
Partly cloudy with mild days and cool night through Monday. Overnight lows 15 to 25 and highs in the mid 40's to low 50's both days.

Camas Prairie, Halley and lower Wood River Valley:
Partly cloudy with mild days and cool nights today and Monday. Lows in the teens and highs in the upper 20s to mid 40s both days.

High pressure over the area shows no signs of changing and the drought is likely to continue for a while. Snow showers Saturday afternoon were well into the 50s in the Magic Valley. A weak Pacific front moved across North Idaho last night and this will lower temperatures slightly today. Highs are still expected near 50 degrees today.

The dry weather is persisting in most of Idaho. A few light showers fell in South Idaho Saturday night.

The extended outlook calls for mostly dry weather through the period with highs near 50 and overnight lows in the 20s.

Bread grain prices rise 8 cents on March futures contracts

NEW YORK Times Service
NEW YORK — Despite some of the most bearish wheat market news in years, prices of the bread grain rose 8 cents, to $2.80, a bushel for the nearest delivery, March. This represents a gain of $400 on one futures contract.

"It's the weather," a broker tried to explain. "The farmers can't move their grain." His view matched those of others in the industry.

But the first quarter of every year is a weather market. Last year, for example, market letters gave the same catalogue of weather woes. There were reports of drought. The lack of snow cover meant winds would blow away seeded topsoil. And, of course, subsoil moisture was critically below minimum requirements for spring growth.

Still, the nation's grain producers harvested record winter and spring crops last year, unhindered by dust storms and other disasters promised earlier in 1976.

Today, the situation is far worse than one year ago. Whatever harm the record cold wave over the Great Plains causes farmers, they are already facing grave problems of marketing.

For one, thousands of floor millers and bakers concerned have been forced to shut down or curtail operations because of the gas shortage gripping the nation. And bakers who have to forego baked goods will not increase consumption after their fuel shortage abates.

Equally disturbing to farmers is the fact that the only other competitors for grain export business — Canada, Australia and Argentina — have been supplying China and a host of smaller countries with cut-rate wheat this winter. Their too, had record crops.

In Canada and Australia, where the state does the exporting, grain export prices are part of overall commercial trading policies of the governments. And Argentina, desperate for foreign exchange, has a new policy of selling at sharp discounts from world prices because it can easily print the money with which to pay producers at home.

Why, then, the recent rise in U.S. wheat prices for future delivery? According to grain specialists interviewed last week, the answer lies chiefly in who owns the wheat produced in this nation.

They pointed out that on Jan. 1, the latest reporting date, American farmers still owned 86 per cent of the almost 1.8 billion bushels of wheat on hand. Exports, millers and other commercially interested parties presumably owned the rest.

Farmer holdings include some 92 million bushels they have put into pawn under federal price support programs.

By comparison, farmers still controlled 69 per cent of the corn they produced last year; 62 per cent of sorghum; 32 per cent of oats; and 52 per cent of soybean stocks on hand Jan. 1, to mention only the major crops.

But the critical crop is wheat, because stocks of the bread grain stand at a nine-year high. The feedgrains and soybeans are not considered surpluses; much of the corn on farms today will be consumed by livestock on or near producing areas.

In any case, the grain specialists believe that as long as farmers hold their crops on the farm, at their elevator co-ops, or other storage facilities, supply-demand factors will be distorted.

Many farmers are holding, they concede, because today's prices are below production costs. Most hope that the new administration will raise crop loan support rates at which they may pawn their crops for a year so they can get cheap "pocket money."

The wheat loan rate was raised by 75 cents, to $2.75 a bushel, and those for other crops by lesser amounts last October as an election-year olive branch to farmers.

Ironically, the floor, thus drove under wheat prices raised many foreign buyers to the three other suppliers at a time when the nation can at best consume only 700-million of the 2.4 billion bushels of wheat produced last year.

Should the loan rate be lifted, the grain specialists noted, only a major crop disaster overseas would prevent stocks from rising even further.

As it is, United States wheat exports since that crop year began last June 1 total 627 million bushels — on Jan. 28, compared with 841 million in the five-year average period.

Partners buy 2 TF Dairy Queens

TWIN FALLS — The two Dairy Queen/Brazier stores in Twin Falls are now under new ownership.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Murphy, who have been in the business for 15 years, sold the stores to their partners, Mr. and Mrs. Keith Parry. The ownership transfer became effective Jan. 1.

During their 15 years of service to the Dairy Queen system, the Murphys have earned a number of honors from the company. The awards based on volume increases include the Golden Brazier, Golden Cone, Silver Cone and Top of the System.

The Twin Falls stores are also the only Dairy Queen stores in Idaho to carry the Quakly-Purilly Award, an honor received for the highest standards of quality, service and cleanliness.

Mrs. Murphy expressed her appreciation to the Twin Falls area. "We'd like to thank our customers for all the years of business. We couldn't have done it without them."

Mrs. Murphy also assured customers the same quality and service under the present owners.

The Murphys built their first Dairy Queen store in Twin Falls at 378 West Addison in 1961. The store at 803-B Blue Lakes Blvd. N. was added in 1971.

The Murphys formed a partnership with Mr. and Mrs. Parry in 1974. Prior to their move to Twin Falls, the Parrys were in the business in Richmond, Utah.

The Parry children, David, Melanie and Michael, will be working in both stores, said Mrs. Parry.

Farmers honored by firm

TWIN FALLS — The United States Steel Farm Service centers of Hansen and Twin Falls entertained about 450 customers at the annual dinner.

Farmers and their wives viewed several films on new farming methods and fertilizer application in the banquet room of the Holiday Inn, and heard U.S. Steel personnel explain why their continuing motto is "Service is Always in Season."

Jerry Dickard, manager of the Hansen plant, and Bill Lewis, manager of the Filer facility, introduced participants from both plants and special guest Jon Oberst, retail manager from Idaho and Oregon.

Royce Smith of ILLANCO said this year should be a challenging one for farmers and noted that energy is a big thing these days as all fertilizers are based on energy.

The speaker spoke on the handling of cold-flow ammonia and methods of putting it into the ground in "plow down" operations.

Kevan named to Hall of Fame

JAMES KEVAN

TWIN FALLS — James Kevan, Glens Ferry, life-long Idaho cattleman and businessman, has been named to the Idaho Livestock Hall of Fame.

He will be honored Feb. 22 at a banquet at the Holiday Inn.

Since 1949, Kevan has built a large cattle ranch east of Fairfield and has expanded his operations to the Glens Ferry area.

Born Oct. 11, 1921, he graduated from Twin Falls High School. His college career at the University of Idaho was interrupted by service in the Marine Corps during World War II, and he returned to school after the war where he majored in animal husbandry.

Jim married Beverly Simon of Fairfield in 1947, after they met in Moscow and he left the university to farm on the Salmon Tract. She graduated from the university four months later and in 1948 they farmed south of Twin Falls. The year after that, they farmed the Deer Creek Ranch north of Halley near Clarendon Hot Springs.

They moved to Spring Creek Ranch east of Fairfield in 1949 and have, through hard work and ingenuity, acquired 6,000 acres. They have put thousands of acres under sprinklers, built reservoirs and most recently acquired immigrant Pass Ranch, Glens Ferry, which they have developed in three years from 90 acres of cultivated land sagebrush and a garbage dump to 350 acres of productive ground in sprinklers.

Jim pastures and feeds about 1,000 head of cattle.

He owned and operated the Gooding Commission Co. for about five years and in 1970 became executive vice president and agricultural consultant for the Idaho State Bank in Glens Ferry.

The Kevan children include James L., U of I graduate and Mountain Home attorney; Marjanne Kramer, U of I graduate, school teacher and writer; Charles W., "Ollie," Fairfield farmer; Beyle Shewmaker, U of I graduate and wife, and Connie, who will graduate in 1977 from the College of Southern Idaho as a registered nurse. Jim has six grandchildren.

Jim has served two terms as Caimin Cotby commissioner and 12 years on the board of the Livestock Hall of Fame.

He is a member of the Lions, the Moose, Beta Theta Pi and the American Bankers Association.

He is a member of the executive council of the American Institute of Banking and the Idaho Cattleman's Association.

He is also a member of the Elmore County Cattleman's Association, the American Legion, Elks, Gooding Country Club and has served on numerous boards.

He has assisted with both 4-H and Future Farmers of America.

He has been a faithful supporter for stock sales in Carnas, Gooding, Twin Falls, Elmore, Owyhee, Ada, Adams and Washington counties.

Gorringer remains Oakley mayor

OAKLEY — Jay Gorringer will remain as mayor of Oakley at least for the present.

Gorringer had been faced with the possibility he would have to resign the position. He has been named watermaster for the Oakley Canal Co. and is required to live at the reservoir site outside the city.

"If I completely move out of town, then I'll have to resign," Gorringer said Thursday night.

"According to our attorney, as long as part of us live there in the town residence, I'm all right."

Alfred Barrus, Oakley city attorney as well as Cassia County prosecutor, said Thursday that he advised Gorringer that the only requirement is that he be an elector of the city when elected and throughout the time he is mayor.

He said actual residence and elector status are factual determinations not clarified by his legal opinion.

Gorringer said some of the Gorringer offspring stay in the town house parttime, and there are no plans to move them to the reservoir residence "right away, anyway."

He added, "I eat lunch down there (in Oakley) and a few things now."

A check showed that the telephone has been disconnected at the Oakley home. Gorringer said it was to be connected again today.

Gorringer was elected in the fall of 1975 to a four-year term as mayor, succeeding Tom Miller.

Presented By: The Idaho Army National Guard

Come, let "Old Bill" take you through the origin of Idaho's Volunteer Militia up to the modern Idaho National Guard of today. Idaho Militia Volunteers have served since the time of Chief Joseph and the Nez Perce Indian War in 1877. Since that time, Idaho's men have fought in conflicts including the Spanish American War, the Mexican Border War, both World Wars, the Korea and Viet Nam involvements. We invite you to experience the role played by Idaho's Militia and National Guard over the past 100 years by attending this historical program.

Homeowners first to face power cutoffs

By BILL LAZARUS
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — Homeowners and small businesses would be the first to suffer temporary power blackouts under an energy curtailment plan devised by Idaho Power Co. Most industrial users would get some continuous power even homes periodically cut off, according to the Idaho Power plan. Long before the blackouts became necessary, however, industries would have to adhere to electricity consumption cutbacks.

The blackouts to homeowners are unlikely even if dry weather and the resulting lower hydroelectric capacity continue. Idaho Power has said it expects to meet the needs of most of its steady customers this year even with the anticipated drop-off in stream flows.

Electricity rationing, however, is anticipated in Oregon this fall, according to an assistant to Gov. Robert Straub, and the state has supported development of a regional curtailment plan.

Spokane early this week to discuss the power outlook and development of a regional electricity curtailment plan.

No such plan exists in the region now. However, several utilities, including Idaho Power, have developed curtailment plans. Idaho Power's plan, which has been on file with the Idaho Public Utilities Commission for three years, may be modified soon, according to Robert Brown, news director for the utility.

Also, according to Garth Andrews, public information officer at the IPUC, the commission is now reviewing the curtailment plans and could call for changes.

But, Andrews said, Idaho Power's present curtailment plan is the one that would be implemented if electricity cutbacks had to be imposed now. The commission would have to order the plan to be implemented before cutbacks would be made.

There are eight steps in the utility's "Load Curtailment and Interruption Procedure."

Only the last step calls for "interruption of all service" to customers. Under this eighth step, a period of interruption will be followed by a period of restoration for each customer by sequential rotation of the available electric power supply.

Not everyone would be subject to the periodic cutoffs of electricity by rotation. The plan proposes the cutoffs be applied by steps to different classes of users with varying priorities. If the rotation cutoffs in one class did not save enough electricity to meet the need, the next lowest priority class would be cut off.

The first class subject to the rotational interruption of power would be those served by "non-critical feeder" lines which serve "no critical, sensitive or large industrial load."

According to Brown at Idaho Power, homeowners and small businesses are considered to be in this class. Under the plan, irrigation pumps would also be in this class, but only in the winter.

The next power consumers subject to the cutoffs are large industries and major commercial customers, "with over 750 kilowatt demand," according to the plan.

After industry comes electricity users "which might be required in an emergency such as city water pumps or emergency service radios."

Finally, the group with the highest priority are those users "considered necessary for the public health, safety or welfare," including hospitals, police departments, fire departments, critical water pumps, traffic control, lighted airports and sewage plants.

Before power interruptions would be made for any of these classes of users, however, several steps in the plan would have been taken to save electricity.

First, Idaho Power would start to curtail "all non-essential company uses." After that the power company would curtail service to "interruptible customers in accordance with contractual provisions." Interruptible customers buy electricity at a cheaper rate but agree by contract that they may be cut off.

Next, Idaho Power would request voluntary cutbacks by both government and the public.

Then, the utility would contact large industries and "obtain their pledge of voluntary curtailment by a specified per cent of their respective base use" of electricity.

If this were not enough the company would implement the interruption of standby and supplemental service to customers having alternate energy sources.

As the final step to take before imposing rotational interruption of service to homeowners, the power company would "implement interruption of all major use industrial and commercial customers" who do not comply with the specified voluntary curtailment per cent "to which they agreed."

Pheasant habitat enlarged

By SHANE O'NEILL
Times-News writer

BURLEY — A new public lands usage plan will crack down on farmer trespass and other unauthorized activities on isolated Bureau of Land Management tracts in Twin Falls and Cassia counties.

Working with farmers, the BLM will attempt to establish habitats for pheasant on the isolated parcels. Farmers will be allowed to plant some areas in return for providing water to the unfarmed habitat portions.

The plan will affect 57 tracts in the two counties. It was unveiled Friday by Burley district BLM manager Nick Cozakos.

The pact calls for cooperative farming agreements in the Twin Falls-Burley area on all those tracts surrounded by highly developed private agricultural lands, as well as land having potential for future development.

Cozakos said nearly all the tracts fall into one of the two categories.

The tracts range in size from 20 acres to 360 acres and total 5,638 acres.

The agreement, made under the Sikes Act, was finalized by William Mathews, state director for the Bureau of Land Management, and Joseph Greener, State Department of Fish and Game director.

Cozakos called the pact "one of the most significant actions" by the agricultural community, sportsmen and land managing agencies.

He said it will permit farming public land tracts suitable for agriculture. The rental to the agencies will be in the form of furnishing water for an unfarmed part of the tract as natural upland game bird habitat.

Cozakos said 10 or 20 of the isolated tracts have legal problems as far as access easements from adjacent property owners. He said access could be obtained in the cooperative farming agreements.

Dale Turpin, state fish and game official at Shoshone, said the agreement, under his department's jurisdiction, may be able to open some private land to hunting, too.

According to Kurt Kotter, wildlife biologist for the BLM, about 1,000 acres can be farmed. Much of the land lies away from irrigation water and will be handled as dryland development with inter-seedings for bird cover.

The bulk of the isolated tracts lies in the area south of Milner, with a scattering around Oakley and to its northeast.

Others lie south of Twin Falls and east of that city along the Snake River.

Kotter said the areas furnish key habitat for pheasants and other upland species, but the tracts have been neglected. He added that disposal of public land has sharply decreased the amount of isolated land still in BLM hands.

The Organic Act of 1976, signed last October, embodies the new concept of retention of public ownership, rather than disposal to private individuals. He said BLM now is placing great emphasis on developing the isolated tracts as natural habitat.

Cozakos said, "The Snake River-Plain has historically had one of the highest pheasant populations in the state," but the populations have declined drastically in recent years with cleaner farming practices and the development of new agricultural lands. He said the cleaner farming practices force upland game to rely on marginal lands and isolated tracts for food and cover.

He admitted the BLM has "largely ignored" those tracts, but said the new program will be funded over a span of 5-10 years at a cost of about $400,000.

The proposed developments range from fencing the tracts to controlling unauthorized use. Cooperative farming agreements will allow portions of the tracts to provide nesting cover areas and suitable wintering areas, he said.

Various types of trespass, headed by farmer usurpation of the land, will be the first major problem facing the BLM-Kotter-said work will be necessary to determine correct estate boundaries and easements.

Kotter said there are no unauthorized grazings and the grazing has destroyed the natural cover on some tracts. Farmers also have reached beyond their boundaries to farm public land on 24 tracts, Kotter said.

He emphasized that a cooperative farming agreement will be signed with a farmer until the trespass issue has been settled and suitable payment for it made to BLM.

He said farmers also have found their own land "too valuable and used bound lands for equipment storage or for stacks of baled hay. He cited one instance where the farmer's house apparently is partially on public land.

Farmers also have hunted public land against trespass, making hunters think the land is privately owned and unavailable for hunting.

Federal rule called unfair

RUPERT — A federal "fairness doctrine" requiring free time to respond to paid radio and television advertisements on controversial matters of public importance doesn't seem fair to Marc Hayes, owner of KAYT Radio in Rupert.

The AFL-CIO has asked for free time to respond to paid radio and television advertisements promoting right-to-work legislation in Idaho. This legislation would prohibit "closed shops" or mandatory union membership in Idaho businesses.

According to Byron Johnson, Boise attorney for the union, the fairness doctrine requires "balanced reporting of any controversial issue" on radio and television. The Federal Communications Commission has ruled that even if a side of an issue is presented in a paid advertisement a station still has the duty to present an opposing point of view," he said.

Johnson says he has sent letters to radio and television in the Boise Valley and to KMYT, KBAR Radio, and KAYT Radio in the Magic Valley asking for response time to advertisements supporting right-to-work.

"It's really the station's obligation" to provide the free time for response, Johnson said.

At KAYT, Hayes said he would provide the free response time if required by the fairness doctrine. But he wondered about the fairness of the situation.

"I'm not questioning the legality, only the fairness of the so-called fairness doctrine that has one side pay for their spots and the other side get them free," Hayes said.

If the AFL-CIO prepared response spots have to be run for free "I think in all fairness to the other side, we would have to stop running the advertised pro right-to-work spots."

"I don't think we can charge one side and give the other side free time," Hayes said. He said the station takes no position on right to work.

He said he would be willing to run free programs presenting both sides, paid advertisement from both sides or not discuss the issue at all over the air. Whatever the case, he said, treatment of both sides should be equal.

KMYT Manager Harold Hirtz said his station would give the AFL-CIO spots to reply to the right-to-work ads because "the law's the law." He would not say what he thought of the law. He also would not say how many spots he would give to the AFL-CIO to respond to the right-to-work advertisements.

Bob Saxvik, manager of KBAR who now is serving as assistant to Gov. John Evans, said he has not yet seen any request for free response time from the AFL-CIO.

But, Saxvik already had a compromise worked out. He said he would give one radio spot to the union to every three spots paid for by the right-to-work.

TF County budget hearing set Monday

The session will continue until 3 p.m. in the district court room of the judicial building.

County commissioners will also keep the budget open for public comment through the week and expect to adopt the permanent budget at the end of the week.

The schedule includes: auditor's budget at 10 a.m.; the assessor, 10:30 a.m.; commissioners and prosecutors, 11 a.m.; sheriff, 11:30 a.m.; county treasurer; 1:30 p.m.; fair board; solid waste and county zoning at 2 p.m.; and parks and recreation at 2:30 p.m., with the Magic Valley Memorial Hospital at 3 p.m.

Narcotics, money stolen, recovered

SHOSHONE — An undisclosed amount of narcotics, including morphine, and more than $1,500 in cash, were stolen Thursday night from Gross Drug Store here, police said.

All the narcotics in stock at the store, plus from $1,500 to $2,000, were apparently taken by burglars who hid in the store basement until store owner Gilbert Pierson and his employees left about 6:45 p.m., according to Shoshone Police Chief John Shaffer. Then, the thieves came out to commit the burglary.

Drugs and money were recovered at 11 p.m. by police in an alley east of the store, Shaffer said.

Police received a call about 7 p.m. on the incident. "I think we were probably pretty close on 'em, so they probably decided to get rid of the stuff," Shaffer said.

Chleo and Speedy Gonzales Juan

Trained macaws delight Valley school children

By VALEZ BIRD
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A couple of vegetarian cut-ups, "Chleo" and "Speedy Gonzales Juan," have been walking on rolling balls and balling out of airplanes to the delight of Magic Valley school children.

If this sounds like a comedy team, it is — but an odd one. The "Robelle Birds," which have been performing these stunts, are a pair of trained macaws.

They eat nuts, fruit and seeds — and when they don't feel like working, they won't.

At a recent performance at Rupert Junior High School, "Chleo" and "Speedy" got a standing ovation after their act.

The next day trainer Gene Owens brought the birds to Twin Falls. When he went into The Leatherman shop, he discovered a pair of special parrot fags.

"I came in for a pair of shoes," Gene said, "and when they (Leatherman owners, Sonia and Mickey Jackson) heard I had two parrots, they lit up like I'd turned on a light switch, so I brought them in."

Gene's birds were bred in captivity. Chleo is a Catalina, a combination of scarlet and blue-gold macaws; and Speedy is a Milligold, a combination of military and blue-gold macaws.

The birds were trained by operant conditioning, a method which uses food reinforcement when an animal responds correctly.

During their 30-minute performance, Chleo and Speedy drive a Jeep, roller skate, ride a bicycle and scooter, walk on a ball, play basketball, roll over and put things on a post.

Chleo also plays poker, says hello when a telephone rings, rides bicycles on a high wire, paints with a brush in his beak and balls out of airplanes.

Speedy has done shows all over the United States and Puerto Rico. Chleo has played in the United States and in England, where he performed at Scarborough Fair and for the Sheriff of Nottingham. He has also been on several television shows, including The Johnny Carson Show.

Gene and the birds tour the country in a camper during three or four school shows a day, five days a week.

The macaws are about 32 inches long and live to be 60 to 80 years old. Their wings have to be clipped to keep them from flying away.

"Before I worked with these birds," Gene said, "I just thought birds were birds, but each one has a personality." The meeting another being. There's a communication, but it's a different form of communication.

"I feed and weigh them every day," Gene continued, "and if they don't want to work, they won't."

The Leatherman owners, Mickey and Sonia, had a special reason to "light up" when Gene mentioned his parrots. Last year, they bought an African gray parrot in Durban, South Africa, when they visited Sonia's parents.

Mickey said they have been interested in parrots for about 10 years and have just about all the literature on birds, especially parrots, that has been published in the United States, Canada and England. They plan to build a home with an aviary so they can keep three hens.

Being on the road has led to some interesting experiences for Gene, Chleo and Speedy. The Jacksons have invited the macaws to lunch so they can meet the African gray parrot.

When Gene's car broke down in Pennsylvania last fall, he went to a dealer and wanted to do a show for the mechanics and sales. They were so impressed they avoided the usual red tape to see that he got a new camper even though he had no credit. "I've never bought anything," Gene said.

People have opened their doors to him. A janitor in New Jersey who has toured the United States on a bicycle let Gene and the birds stay at his home for three weeks.

This is Gene's first time to act as master of ceremonies at the birds' show. "Since I started on the road," he said, "I only talk about birds." Before beginning the tour he was "an inverted artist" living on his sailboat in San Diego, Calif., doing oil painting, sculpture and wood carving.

"Breaking into working with the birds was easy," Gene said. "I knew about operant conditioning for training from college. Doing this is still kind of like being an artist because instead of expressing with paint, I express myself with my body."

When his current tour is over Gene said he will MC a show in a bird park which is being developed. "I'm saving for a bigger sailboat," he said.

"The Robelle Birds" are sponsored by Robelle Animal Production, Ltd., California.

Massengale ups Hope lead

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (UPI) — Rik Massengale, his confidence buoyed by an eagle on the fifth hole, recovered for a two-under-par 70 Saturday and a commanding six-shot lead over Bruce Lietzke and Bob Shearer with one round to go in the 90-hole, $200,000 Bob Hope Desert Classic.

Massengale, who hasn't won a tournament since last summer and took the previous week off, didn't play that well, until he ragged the fifth, which was his 14th hole. His second shot landed behind a tree and in coming out, he bent his club into a "V" but put the ball 18 feet from the pin and then ran it home.

"At about that time," said Massengale, "I heard Lietzke had shot a 72, so I felt pretty good."

"In fact, I felt so good, I was able to birdie the sixth hole as well and then I knew I was in pretty good shape."

As things turned out, he sure was. Lietzke went into a defensive shell and was lucky to shoot a 72 while Shearer, a 28-year-old Australian hoping to make his mark on the U.S. tour, charged to a 67 to tie for second at 112-under-par 276.

Massengale was at 18-under 270 and he admitted it would be pretty difficult not to win on Sunday.

"I don't know what to say about a six-shot lead," said Massengale, who led all the way in winning the 1975 Tallahassee Open and the 1976 Greater Hartford Open for his two victories. "I've never had such an advantage but I know I'll still have to shoot a decent round on Sunday."

Massengale played progressively worse in four starts this year and then decided to go home to Tewa last week while Lietzke was winning the Hawaiian Open for his second victory of the year and more $100,000.

"I simply had to get away," said Massengale. "The only place I can get my head together is at home, where it's quiet and peaceful. Previously, every time I took time off, I played well coming back and maybe I can do it again."

Veteran Gay Brewer, desperately needing to do well this year to save his exemption, shot a 72 and was all alone at 11-under 277, but that was seven shots behind Massengale. Charles Coody had a 67, and Hubert Green a 72 for 270 while Tom Trapic, Roger Maltbie and Gary Player, each shooting a 70 on a different course were at 279.

For the fourth day in a row, the tournament drew a record crowd, most of the fans coming out to see former President Gerald Ford. Saturday, Ford played in a foursome with pro

Billy Casper and amateurs Bob Hope and Jackie Gleason.

The gallery was estimated at more than 15,000 out of a total 26,000 who saw the competition over four courses.

Baylor and McGuire gain hall of fame

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (UPI) — Former National Basketball Association star forward Elgin Baylor, University of South Carolina coach Frank McGuire and three outstanding players from basketball's "early days" have been elected to the Basketball Hall of Fame.

The selections were announced Saturday by Lee Williams, executive director of the Hall of Fame, and Adolph Rupp, chairman of the Hall's honors committee.

Also chosen for membership in the Hall were Charles "Tarzan" Cooper, whose 1932-33 New York Renaissance team won 80 games in a row and is one of only four teams in the Hall; Laurin "Laddie" Gale, a forward on the University of Oregon's "Tall Fives" team that won the first NCAA basketball title in 1939; and William C. "Skinny" Johnson, an All-American in high school, college and AAU basketball teams.

Baylor was selected to the Hall in his first year of eligibility. The outstanding NBA forward was a high school All-American in Washington, D.C., and led his Seattle University team to the NCAA finals in 1958.

Drafted by the Minneapolis Lakers in 1958, Baylor was a co-winner of the NBA All-Star MVP Award and Rookie of the Year in 1959. He went on to captain the Lakers for 12 years and was selected to the first team All-Star squad for the next 10 seasons.

He ranks fifth on the all-time NBA regular season scoring list with 23,149 points and second on the all-time playoff scoring list, including a record one-game figure of 61 points.

Baylor is also the seventh leading all-time rebounder and the third leading rebounder in playoff history.

McGuire, now in his 27th year as a college coach, has guided teams to 500 wins, the rates second in total wins among active collegiate coaches and is 12th on the all-time list.

McGuire, the 23rd coach named to the Hall, has more than 600 total career wins counting victories as a high school and professional coach.

He began his coaching career at St. Xavier High in New York City and then went on to St. John's University, where he guided teams to five straight winning seasons. He left St. John's to take the head coaching job at the University of North Carolina and there his teams had eight winning seasons, including a perfect 22-0 season in winning the NCAA title in 1957.

He then moved on to coach the NBA Philadelphia Warriors before rejoining the college ranks at South Carolina in 1964. During his 13 years with the Gamecocks his teams have had 91 consecutive winning seasons and five 20-win seasons in a row.

After a couple of early tries, Shelley moved ahead 16-10 in the first quarter and pushed that to its biggest margin at 34-22 by intermission.

Buhl closed to within five in the third quarter. In the fourth Buhl turned to its press and behind the spark of Jeff Hepworth closed to within a point at 51-50. Hepworth hit six points in the comeback and moved to 51-50 on a pair of Jim Smutny free throws.

Castleford held small leads through the first half but moved off quickly in the third period. However, Tvedy picked up his fourth foul and had to retire to the bench.

The Wolves missed him sorely on the boards and Pirates Doug Bennett winding up with 17 rebounds, and Brad Gough, with 16, started bringing Hagerman back.

The Pirates tied it at 39 going into the final period and it was a two-point ball game for the next few minutes. With about three minutes left Hagerman moved up by four, went into a delay and Castleford had to start fouling. The Pirates hit their free throws to pad the

Irish whip S. Carolina

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (UPI) — Junior guard Don Williams led five other double-figure scorers with 19 points Saturday and paced Notre Dame to an 84-64 victory over South Carolina.

Williams scored eight points in the first 10 minutes of the second half when the Irish broke the game open, outscoring the Gamecocks 22-10.

South Carolina led 33-32 with 1:11 to go in the first half, but the Irish held a 36-33 halftime advantage and never again trailed.

Carolina was paced by Freshman center Jim Graziano and sophomore forward Karlton Hilton, each with 17 points.

Supporting Williams were Rich Branning and Dave Batton, who both scored 14 points.

REVERSE LAYUP is converted by Shoshone's Jason Webb on a baseline drive against Wendell Friday night. Webb hit 23 and Shoshone won 75-58.

Webb-led Shoshone rips Wendell 75-58

WENDELL — Junior Jason Webb turned on a sharp rebounding and scoring slow Friday night to point the Shoshone Indians past the Wendell Trojans 75-58.

Webb wound up with 23 points — all from the field — on an assortment of outside jumpers and rebound shots.

For the first quarter, it appeared the game would be a high-scoring barnburner. Both teams hit well. Wendell scoring effectively from the 15-18-foot range.

But the quarter rest knocked the edge off Wendell — but didn't faze Shoshone. Webb started the second period with six straight points. Toby Clayton hit two field goals and Giles added a free throw — all without a reply from Wendell.

That made it 31-19 and by halftime the Indians had pushed it to 32-25.

Towne-led Dietrich tops Bliss

DIETRICH — Leland Towne pumped in 20 points to lead Dietrich to a 75-61 win over Bliss Friday night.

The Bears were cold early in the game, and, meanwhile, Larry Perron hit well from outside and effectively led the ball to Towne on the fastbreak.

Dietrich built a 32-20 halftime lead.

The Bears found the range more consistently in the second half, but couldn't close the gap on the Blue Devils.

Tech bows to Cincinnati

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Forward Brian Williams scored nine of his 17 points as 11th-ranked Cincinnati outscored Georgia Tech 18-6 early in the second half Saturday and coasted to an 84-73 triumph, for its sixth consecutive home court triumph.

Tico Brown led all scorers with 24 points, but Cincinnati's full-court press kept him from making any points while taking their lead.

Junior center Bob Miller led Cincinnati with 19 points and dominated the boards with 15 rebounds. Gary Voder and Steve Collier chipped in with 18 and 13 points respectively for the Bearcats.

Yellow jackets forward Randy Foster kept Tech alive in the second half with 16 points.

The victory enabled the Bearcats to take over second place in the Metro 7 Conference with a record of 4-2. Tech dropped to third place at 3-2.

Oakley keeps pace in MV race

OAKLEY — The Oakley Hornets held onto a sliver of the Magic Valley Conference lead by downing the Raft River Trojans 70-51 Friday night.

The Hornets win their sixth in a row. Left them in a tie with Murtaugh at the top of the conference and dropped the Trojans out of a tie for the lead. Oakley jumped out to a quick 9-0 lead, but the Trojans cut it to 23-20 in the second quarter. Then the Hornets rallied to go up by ten at the half 37-27. In "the third quarter," the Hornets outscored the Trojans 20-6 to put the game way out of reach at 57-33. Oakley will wind up its regular season this week with games against Declo at Declo on Tuesday and against Castleford on Friday.

Proposal may cut special education

TWIN FALLS — Proposed special education revisions which could cut back funding in some Idaho school districts apparently would not affect Twin Falls.

According to Idaho Director of Special Education John Schrag, the revisions which would impose maximums for enrollment in some special education categories, would have no effect in Twin Falls because enrollments there are already well below the proposed limits.

"The revisions would possibly affect about 15 small school districts which do have enrollments over the proposed maximums," Schrag said. "But the majority of the districts were in the Magic Valley."

The proposals now before the Idaho Board of Education, Schrag said, would set limits on the number of "learning disabled" or "exceptionally gifted" children a district could enroll for receipt of special education funds.

Those in the learning-disabled category would be limited to 1.5 per cent of the school-age population, Schrag said, while the number of gifted students would be limited to 2 per cent.

The percentage maximums would apply for the coming school year and would then be further decreased in steps to a maximum of 1.5 for learning disabled and 1.0 for gifted after 1980.

Schrag said some small school districts are now carrying 10 to 20 per cent of their student populations in the learning disabled category.

Since the districts received more than half again the state funding for special education students that they receive for normal students, the highly disabled in the learning disabled category is bringing more money to the small districts, Schrag said.

She said the cost of funds was threatening special education money for other categories of children, which must also be served.

She added, however, she didn't feel the districts were deliberately ballooning their special education allotments.

She said learning disabled — loose category — in which otherwise handicapped students might have been placed by mistake.

To qualify for learning disabled, she said, the student must have at least a normal IQ but must be unable to learn for some reason. She said the determination of what students are eligible will remain with the local school districts.

Getting a cat spayed

By LINDA MERRY DVM
Question: We recently acquired our first house cat. This cat is a lady and we'd like to have her altered. The problem is that we're completely uninformed about female cats. We understand they don't breed like dogs and aren't regular in their mating times, but how then can you tell when to keep them?

polyestrous" meaning the heat season is tied to the season of the year. If a cat is anywhere near puberty when the appropriate season arrives heat will be induced.

Each heat season lasts about four to six days if the cat is mated. If she's not mated, estrus (or heat) may last as long as ten days and begin again 15 to 21 days later.

The cat may come in heat every two or three weeks for three or four (or more) times in succession. Then peace prevails a couple months until the next appropriate season arrives and the whole process starts over.

Many cat owners would "give anything" to get the surgery done while heat is in progress but this is inadvisable. Increased blood supply to the uterus and decreased clotting power greatly increase surgical risk during estrus.

When should we start to worry about her getting ideas and how many times a year will she have seasons?

It's possible to misunderstand a cat in heat once but it won't happen a second time. The female cat in heat is not a lady. Her behavior can be "genitally described as 'obvious.'"

Heat is often preceded by a period when the cat is more active and nervous than usual. She begins "calling" in a loud, wailing cry that could only be described as "yowling."

In the presence of a male cat, or even if she can only hear, smell, or imagine him, the female is likely to assume the receptive posture consisting of crawling on the front legs, elevation of the pelvic region, deviation of the tail to one side and "treading" with the back legs.

Some females will interrupt this behavior long enough to roll, rub and purr before beginning the cat-eating behavior. The cat is "seasonally estrous."

Queen opens house for first time

LONDON (UPI) — Queen Elizabeth II, who is observing her 25th year on the throne, is opening her Norfolk home to the public for the first time this Easter. And so are Mr. and Mrs. Eric Walker. The queen's 274-room Sandringham House is well known but the Walkers' less imposing residence also has its place in British royal history.

They live in the former royal waiting rooms at Welferton Railway Station, built in 1888 for the Prince of Wales, later King Edward VII. The station is two miles from the Queen's privately owned mansion but still on the 20,000-acre royal estate, located 105 miles northeast of London. Edward VII bought Sandringham in 1861 as a country retreat. He used it mainly as a sporting estate. Queen Elizabeth, without sacrificing the first-rate hunting aspects, has made it a profitable commercial farming venture and keeps most of her racehorses there. Edward VII used to arrive from London on the royal train and rest in his waiting room—presently the Walkers' bedroom. His wife, Queen Alexandra, relaxed in what is now the Walkers' drawing room. The rooms are separated by a hallway leading from the platform to the former drive along which the well-remembered royals, were taken by carriage to Sandringham House. One of the highlights of the Walkers' tour will be their bathroom—the lavatory has the flags of the British Empire painted on it. The royal family stopped using Welferton station in 1965, because it was considered too expensive to maintain. The Queen and her family seldom visited Sandringham outside the Christmas and New Year holidays. British Rail put the station up for sale and Walker, now a retired

British rail official, bought it in 1967. "My wife and I have always been fascinated by converting historically interesting buildings," Walker said recently. "I was horrified to see such a marvelous one, which for me had the added attraction of being connected with the railway, in a very bad state of repair." The Walkers bought the "downside," or from London side of the station, which included the royal waiting rooms, for $135,000. The "upside" was sold separately and converted into two private homes. Come May, the public will be able to judge for itself.

Sweeping plan aids drought area farmers

By BERNARD BRENNER - UPI Farm Editor
WASHINGTON (UPI) — With parts of the Midwest gripped in a drought that has some farm experts predicting 1977 national grain production may drop from last year's record, Sen. James Abourezk, D-S.D., has produced a sweeping package of plans to step up aid to farmers and rural community governments in drought areas.

Farmers nationally managed to produce record corn and wheat crops in spite of drought troubles in some localized areas. But in South Dakota, which has been hit harder by the dry spell than most other areas, Abourezk said the drought cut 1976 crops by $600 million — two-thirds of the state's crop income under normal conditions.

Abourezk said federal aid has lagged behind the needs of farmers who lost crops and were forced to sell off livestock, and of communities which have seen their tax revenues dwindle as the farm earnings which support them fall.

The South Dakota Democrat and his aides said the problem was two-fold.

First, they said, federal officials operating existing relief programs have been reluctant to designate drought areas as "major disaster" regions, a step needed to unlock a maximum aid available under present law.

Instead, the "major disaster" designation has been reserved for sudden catastrophes like floods, and drought areas have been declared "emergency" areas which qualify for a smaller number of relief programs.

The new aid plan, existing laws should be liberalized to permit more help such as subsidies to assist farmers in rebuilding their livestock herds after droughts end.

For farmers, a package of four separate bills introduced this week by Abourezk would:

- Reduce interest rates on Agriculture Department farm disaster loans from the present 5 per cent to 1 per cent, and would allow farmers in some cases to delay repayment of the loans if droughts continue to hold down their income.
- Authorize drought-stricken landowners to get the cheap federal disaster loans, even if they have enough equity in their farms to get refinanced mortgage loans from normal commercial or co-op lenders.
- Revise a section of the price support program in order to give grain farmers whose yields are cut disaster payments based on 50 per cent of the support "target price" of the target price.

- Help farmers forced to sell off their livestock "foundation" livestock by aid when the producers purchase new cattle after the drought. If a farmer sold a breeding cow for $100, for instance, and later bought a post-drought replacement for $200, the government would pay him the $100 difference. This would be available only for replacing up to 100 head of the same kind and quality livestock.

- Authorize 20 weeks of government-subsidized education, with payments of up to $5,000 per person, for drought-area farmers who wanted training to improve their farm skills.

In addition, another Abourezk bill would amend existing laws to provide a mandate for using the high-priority "major disaster" designation in drought areas. Among other things, this would clear the way for granting Community Disaster Loans to rural governments which have temporarily lost the tax revenue.

Sheltered valley

NEW LAMBS in sheltered Hagerman Valley enjoy warm sunshine this week as they gambol on this rocky hillside pasture along Highway 90. Livestock winters in harvested fields and pastures in the protected valley, unaware of the severe winter weather in other parts of the country.

Forget sheep, raise coyotes

SANTA FE, N.M. (UPI) — New Mexico farmers and ranchers are encouraged to abandon the breeding and marketing of sheep and beef cattle in favor of the more profitable coyote and bobcat in a memorial passed Thursday in the House.

"This memorial was introduced to illustrate the ridiculousness of some of the Bureau of Land Management regulations," said its sponsor Rep. John Bigbee, R-Guatemala, Del Rio, Texas.

Lincoln. "This is about the most ridiculous piece of legislation I ever saw. But it's no more ridiculous than some of the BLM regulations that make it nearly impossible for a rancher to make a profit."

The memorial recognizes the need to change the habits of America.

It also calls for a study of the BLM regulations that make it nearly impossible for a rancher to make a profit. The memorial recognizes the need to change the habits of America.

Now, not just the pipe, but all structural components of the Circle-Master are epoxy coated to prevent corrosion.

No other coating resists corrosion like thermal set epoxy powder. Not paint. Not even zinc galvanizing. So to make our Circle-Master center pivot as corrosion resistant as possible, we've coated all structural components of the machine with a hard, shiny coating — thermal set epoxy powder.

Now, you'll have the same protection as well as the pipe shielded from farm chemicals, abrasion and weather.

If the water in your farm contains minerals, and the water on most farms does, or if you use herbicides and pesticides with the irrigation water, epoxy coating can mean a longer life for your center pivot system.

Until we introduced thermal set epoxy powder coating to center pivot irrigation in 1973, zinc galvanizing was the most successful method of combating corrosion. (We should know because we've been supplying galvanized fittings to the irrigation industry since 1932.)

But galvanizing wears away under the attack of minerals and acids, and thermal set epoxy powder doesn't. In a galvanized irrigation pipe, for example, repeated exposure to fertilizers, herbicides and pesticides can cause an inner rust core that only lasts longer. It saves you money in another way, too — the epoxy coating made the pipe offers less resistance to the flow of water than conventional pipe. You need less horsepower at the pump.

In time, thermal set epoxy powder coating may become standard with leading center pivot irrigation systems. But it's standard with us today.

Dairy farmers seek support price hike

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Government spending on milk price supports may rise substantially if Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland grants dairy farmers the support hike they're asking for April 1.

"But we're not aslamed at all of asking for it," Patrick B. Healy, secretary of the National Milk Producers Federation insisted in an interview.

"I think the taxpayer and the consumer will have to go along with this, so we can end the tremendous volatility we've had in milk prices since 1972," Healy said.

Both consumers and taxpayers would benefit if the support price were raised because a hike in support prices — even though it would produce a temporary boost in federal spending — would stabilize milk production and price levels.

Eventually, support costs would go down and consumers would be spared the sharp price peaks which have alternated with "valleys" of low farm prices in recent years, the dairy trader argued.

Administration officials formally opened the process of considering possible changes in milk supports this week with an announcement asking for low farm prices in recent years, the dairy trader argued.

Currently, supports are at $8.25 per hundred pounds for manufacturing grade milk. This price was equal to 80 per cent of the "fair" parity standard when it was set last fall, but it will equal only about 77 per cent of parity in April, officials estimate.

The milk producers federation is asking Bergland to continue using the 80 per cent of parity rate for the year beginning April 1, and to make automatic quarterly adjustments in the dollars-and-cents price tied to 80 per cent of parity thereafter.

Setting the support at 70 per cent of parity, government and industry experts agree, would mean a dollars-and-cents rate of about $9.61 a hundredweight as of April 1 — an increase of 35 cents per hundred pounds, or about 3 cents a gallon, above the current support.

Agriculture Department experts said that even if supports are not raised, federal costs of taking surplus dairy products off the commercial market in the year beginning April 1 would probably top the current year's estimated $317 million cost.

If support prices are raised to about $9.61, a further "substantial" cost hike would be likely, one specialist said.

The expert declined to speculate on potential costs, however, because he said much depends on future weather conditions. If droughts continue in the west, for example, milk production in that part of the country would fall below current forecasts. Midwestern milk products would then fill the gap on commercial markets, and potential government costs for buying up surpluses would be lower.

Healy said dairy industry leaders agree that if weather conditions are normal this summer, government purchases of surplus dairy products would rise in the year beginning April 1.

In the current year, the Agriculture Department is taking the equivalent of an estimated 2.1 billion pounds of milk off commercial markets under the support program.

Healy added, however, he found in talking to Bergland recently that in spite of the prospect of some "hike" in government support spending, the former Minnesota congressman was "very sympathetic" to farmer arguments that higher supports are needed to offset recent and coming increases in production costs.

Boise project

High success claimed for Boise reclamation project

MOSCOW — The federal reclamation project which helped establish irrigated agriculture in the Boise area has been highly successful from an economic standpoint, according to a study by the Idaho Water Resources Research Institute.

Farming increased the food processing industry has developed, and more high-valued crops have been produced.

"With the recent Tonolowich Dam incident, too many people have been seeing the Bureau of Reclamation as a negative influence," John Gladwell, institute director, said. "Our preliminary research shows that the Boise Project has been good for both the area and state as a whole."

As one of the bureau's first and largest developments, the Boise Project was selected in 1972 as the subject for a five-year study funded for $200,000 by the Office of Water Research and Technology. Now, not only are University of Idaho researchers coming up with the impacts of the project, but are also developing more accurate methodologies by which the impacts of future projects can be predetermined.

The research covers Ada and Canyon counties, roughly those areas lying within the watersheds of the Boise and Payette Rivers. There, as a result of the Reclamation Act of 1902, a series of dams, reservoirs and canals were built starting in 1908 which increased irrigation over the next 69 years.

Today, before any federal water project can be approved, planners must show the probable impacts that would occur both with and without the project. By applying these modern criteria to a past situation, the researchers are coming up with several interesting comparisons.

What would have occurred without the project had farmers used the old-style, line-irrigated flows of the Boise and Payette rivers?

Only 16 per cent of the project's net 1973 income from irrigation could have been generated in such a hypothetical situation. Even had the farmers had their own small reservoir, research shows that the resulting income would have been only 30 per cent of what is with the project.

By assuring a stable water supply over the whole crop year, the project allowed higher value crops to be raised, such as fruit, vegetables, hops and mint. Without the project, mostly low-value crops would have been produced since the lands would have received no late-season water supply.

These "with and without" project comparisons are now giving rise to the desired new methodologies which the researchers hope will aid future planners.

Seventy-three years ago when the Boise Project was being planned, few would have dreamed of such elaborate considerations. According to public hearing records, the people's only concern was the project irrigate more land and support family-sized farms.

But today, with the West developed and national priorities in flux, the reclamation issue has become more complex. Recently serious questions have been raised as to what extent the government should continue to invest in such projects.

One contribution of the Boise study then is a mathematical model which shows how money invested in a project also affects the local economy. For every dollar put into the Boise Project in 1973, the model shows $1.90 worth of income was generated; for example,

Using the model, such economic benefits have been traced into residual areas such as food processing and transportation. Power, recreation and flood control can also be assessed in dollar values and will be analyzed in the months to come.

"Of course, we are quite aware that the whole story isn't economic," said Gladwell. "Social and environmental impacts are also being analyzed, though they aren't fully assessed yet."

Preliminary research shows that with the project, population increased, more white-collar jobs were generated and the area has experienced an older age structure.

Hay prices at record levels

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Prices for winter-roughage are being driven to record levels this winter, the Agriculture Department says.

Department economists said in a recent situation summary that hay and forage supplies for the current season were reduced by a drought-shortened 1976 harvest.

The situation was worsened by farmers stepping up use of hay and forage because pastures were dry last fall and because cold weather increased the need for supplemental feeding.

The report said the resulting high price of hay, coupled with high prices for oilseed meal following a reduced 1976 soybean crop, is forcing farmers to use grain in place of meals and roughages.

The report added that corn, sorghum and barley prices currently are running slightly below year-ago levels in the wake of a record high price of livestock feed grains. But oats are in tight supply with prices over year-ago levels, officials noted.

For the next few months, the report said, feed markets should show a normal seasonal increase in prices, at least until prospects for 1977 production and demand begin to influence the market.

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem that is positively driving me up the wall. Our 7-year-old son still wets the bed—every night. I've tried everything, including taking him to several doctors. They all say there is nothing physically wrong with him. I'm smacked and tired of washing sheets and pajamas every day. Please tell me how to handle this.

READY TO GIVE UP

Don't bully bedwetter

DEAR READY: You say you've tried "everything." If you haven't tried the "Wee Alert-Buzzer" (Bears catalog), please do. If that doesn't work, continue to wash sheets and pajamas every day and say nothing. Now I'll tell you what NOT to do: DON'T tell your son that he could quit if he really wanted to—that he's just too lazy to get up and go to the bathroom; that he's a "baby"; that you're ashamed of him, and he is driving you up the wall. Realign yourself to the fact that you are only one of about 9 million American mothers with the same problem, and although it's not pleasant, there are worse fates. If there were no bedwetters in your family, there probably were on your husband's side because bedwetting is usually hereditary. And be sure to tell your son that, too. It will make him feel less guilty.

DEAR ABBY: I am engaged to a wonderful fellow. He is kind, considerate and polite. He is almost perfect. Ours is a long-distance romance, as he travels, but when we get together with other people, I find he has one fault that is very irritating.

He likes to do more than his share of the talking. With me alone, this is not true. I am a rather quiet person and seeing him dominate every conversation in public irritates me. Should I mention this to him, or tell him I am afraid that after we marry, this may be a sore spot with us?

IRRITATED

DEAR IRRITATED: Yes, tell him in as kind a way as you can. Not in criticism, but in "love." If you let it go, the irritation will grow, and the first time she leaves the cap off the toothpaste you're apt to clout him with a skillet.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I were both born in Germany. Our two children were born in the States. I think our children should be taught to speak the language of our native country, but my husband does not agree with me. Last summer I took the children to Hamburg to visit their grandparents, and they learned to speak a little in my native tongue. When we returned home my husband was furious. He refused to speak to the children in anything except English. He says, "We are Americans and should speak only the language of our country, and I don't want to hear any other language spoken in this house!" My husband's attitude puzzles me. Is he wrong, or am I?

MILWAUKEE MRS.

DEAR MRS.: I think your husband is wrong. The more languages a person knows, the better educated he is.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclosure stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

your health

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb,
Having read your articles daily to grab any information on gall bladder problems I could, I decided to write you myself.

I'm 118 pounds, female, and 37 years old, married with two children. Last January, eight months after having my last child, I had severe pain in the middle of my chest and through to my back. It lasted several hours. I was taken to the hospital by my husband and had extensive tests, including gall bladder studies. They were all normal.

In April another attack struck me. My doctor ran another test for gall bladder and found bile sand. He said to try a low fat diet, no alcohol, no egg yolks, no pastas. But when asked, he would not give me a written or typed thorough diet.

Is bile sand curable or serious? Could more larger stones have been missed even with the two tests. My grandfather died from having a stone removed 30 years ago after having gangrene set in. How much of a risk is this operation today? Is surgery inevitable in my case? Can this be dissolved or passed? I could surely appreciate an answer for I've been terrifiedly upset about this, not knowing if tomorrow I will be facing an operation and besides I've really been starving myself.

No real diet for gallstones

Dear Reader,
Your doctor was not more specific about a diet because there is a minimal benefit, if any, that you can get from a special diet for your type of problem. Avoiding fried foods, fatty or greasy foods or any foods that you know cause you trouble — if you had enough attacks — would be the general advice commonly given. That description of sand refers to the beginning development of gallstones. Diet does not cure or prevent stones. They are formed from an imbalance between bile salts produced by the liver, bile pigments and cholesterol. The bile salts help to keep the cholesterol and bile pigments in solution.

Defects in the intestine that affect reabsorption of bile salts so they can be used again, inflammation of the gall bladder and perhaps factors related to the liver metabolism itself may all be factors in stone formation. I am sending you The Health Letter number 24, Gallstones and Gall Bladder Disease, to give you a better understanding of gallstone formation and what can be done about it.

The severe pain you had, if it was associated with your gall bladder, may have been from the passage of a small stone through the bile duct. If you form more small stones, you run the risk of passing more stones and having more attacks.

If there are multiple stones, in a young woman like yourself in good health, surgery is an easy approach and will correct the problem. Things have changed a lot in 30 years and the risk of surgery in your age group is quite small. It can be much larger, however, in older people who develop gall bladder disease.

And, some gallstones can be dissolved now as you will see in The Health Letter I am sending you. Others who want this information can send 50 cents for it with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. There is a national study using chemicals to dissolve gallstones. I don't know whether they would take you, however, for "sand" unless you have definite stones that could be studied. You can read more about this in The Health Letter.

The devil made me do it...

Cupid's arrow?

Sweetheart

Sweet-tarts

It had seemed like a routine assignment. We had asked Times-News photographer Charles Lemmon to see what was available for Valentine's Day gift giving. When he first arrived back at the office with a pair of "cupid boxer shorts" we were skeptical. From then on, till the end of the week, it went downhill. A heart-shaped pizza, sports shirts with devils on them, chocolate cupid, edible Valentine cards; nothing seemed sacred to him.

The last we saw of Lemmon he was going to pick up an "eat your heart out" cake for his girlfriend. As for what Charlie expects to receive from her? "Indigestion," he replied.

Planning a wedding?

Your wedding may be the most important event in your life. We wish you every happiness. In order to obtain the best possible news and picture coverage of your engagement and marriage a few newspaper rules should be kept in mind. Time deadlines are important. Engagement stories and pictures must be run in the paper before the wedding. Space is short, and engagement stories take some time to process, so it helps to bring in or mail the information as early as possible. Pictures of the wedding must be received by the Times-News within two weeks after the event. Beyond two weeks, wedding pictures will not be printed. Remind your photographer of this. After the two-week deadline, wedding stories will be printed, but often in shortened form as space permits. After three months, wedding stories will no longer be printed. There is no charge for printing wedding and engagement pictures and stories.

Students granted 3 days of freedom

TWIN FALLS — School for kindergartners and first, second and third graders will not be held Wednesday through Friday, Feb. 23, 24, and 25, in Twin Falls.

Those grades will be dismissed for the three days — so that teachers may attend a special phonics training workshop in preparation for a new language arts program.

The school board approved the dismissal at its regular board meeting Tuesday night.

Special education director Doyt Simcoe told the board the training session was necessary no matter what kind of language program the district decides to use in the future.

Most incoming elementary teachers have received little training in phonics, Simcoe said. He said the workshop would teach them principles of phonics reading instruction.

The workshop will be required of all teachers in kindergarten through third grade and all special education teachers and elementary school principals.

The workshop will also run Feb. 26 and March 5, both Saturdays for which school closure is not necessary.

The fee is $30 plus a text deposit of $5. If the text is returned, $2.50 will be refunded.

How to Write Your Personal History
J. Malan Heslop and Doll Van Orden

Members of the Church have been admonished to keep journals. But nearly everyone has an excuse. "I'd keep a journal if I just had more time." "I would if I could only write." "My life's so dull. What would I say?" J. Malan Heslop and Doll Van Orden have written a book to motivate these "would-be's." "How to Write Your Personal History" is loaded with techniques and procedures on how to organize material, how to write imaginatively, how to enrich a personal history, and most importantly, how to get started. This informative book is filled with examples which, when applied, will make personal history writing readable, valuable, and fun.

Parents Without Partners plan TF open house Friday

TWIN FALLS — Can the one-parent family be organized and appreciated as the American dream of that loves, shares and lives happily ever after?

Parents Without Partners (PWP) is pressing for an affirmative answer, according to members of the Magic Valley Chapter.

To better acquaint the community with the PWP program, the group is sponsoring an open house Friday at 234 Second St. E. (Department of Health Building, across from Erickson's). The event is from 7 to 8 p.m.

The local chapter of PWP is for 20 years old. Members are single parents, either widowed, widowed, never married, or divorced, but all of at least one child. A child need not be in the custody of the parent. The chapter's membership has been steady, about 50 adults, and includes numerous guests, friends and visitors are constantly present at PWP meetings, and a drive to increase membership is in progress.

The International Parents Without Partners, Inc. was founded in 1957. It publishes a monthly magazine for its members and sets up many advisory guidelines for each chapter to follow in scheduling monthly calendars of activities. A PWP group must include educational, recreational community and family activities to meet certain standards set up in the International constitution and bylaws.

Monthly meetings here are numerous. There is the general meeting held at 234 Second St. E. on the first Thursday of each month.

Discussion and conversation groups cover pertinent subjects often suggested by the PWP monthly magazine, "The Single Parent."

There are book reviews, birthday parties, potluck dinners, dances, tours, sports and cards.

Then there are the get-togethers to produce the chapter newsletter every month. Every member and prospective member receives the newsletter containing a calendar so he won't miss any meetings of particular importance to him or her.

There is an orientator meeting on the first Monday of each month for new and prospective members. There are other imaginative activities, such as "fix-it and mend-it night" where members exchange skills to fix small appliances and gadgets, buttons sewn on, torn clothing mended, or even having spark plugs cleaned.

Surprisingly, in the Magic Valley Chapter of PWP there are often more men in attendance at meetings than women. There is an atmosphere of mutual support and loyalty among members.

Confidences are respected, though there are times when members "plot" how to help, cheer up or share better with another member.

Most PWP members maintain jobs or businesses as well as their homes and families. Still, they manage a lot of time for being good friends with one another.

International Youth Council (IYC) is the accomplishment. Magic Valley PWP is proud of establishing during the past year. The group is open to all youngsters, aged 12 through 17, who are part of a single parent family. The group has grown slowly but steadily and is now a strong part of the family goals of PWP. About 20 teens are actively involved in IYC in Magic Valley.

"The Single Parent" magazine has a generous space for features by correspondents each month. It's interesting and enlightening to hear the children's views on the single parent family as a way of life.

A series of classes on "Raising Adolescents in the Single Parent Family" will be sponsored by PWP, beginning Tuesday, Dr. Donald Keith, who teaches Adolescent Psychology at the College of Southern Idaho, will conduct the classes.

PWP members have access to community resources among professional members of the community. The PWP advisory board consists of a minister, a member of the College of Southern Idaho faculty, a professional counselor, a member of law enforcement, even a funeral director to help or counsel those who are widowed or have other experiences with death.

In the coming year, PWP members hope to improve access to community and national PWP organization resources and stronger communication among members of their own and other chapters.

A recent discussion covered the topic of "How to Recruit New Members." It was decided that the importance of quantity should not overshadow the quality of attention and support given to members. Those who plan meetings, it was decided, should strive for depth and individual satisfaction as well as advertising appeal to prospective members.

Response to regional and national meetings of PWP increases each year. Several Magic Valley members attended the Big Sky Winter Conference held at West Yellowstone the last week in January.

Members say they're still talking and laughing about all the fun and education they managed to combine. It was a family conference, featuring activities and meetings for PWP and IYC.

More information concerning the group and the open house can be obtained by calling 733-2939 or 733-7638.

Supplies lessen food cost

United Press International backpacks of canned and fresh fruits and vegetables increased imports from South America and Caribbean are taking some of the pressure off fresh produce prices resulting from damage by winter weather.

A CPI survey shows some markets even are offering deals on a few fresh fruits and vegetables.

In Washington, USDA food economist Larry V. Sommers says larger supplies of some and somewhat lower prices on meat could result this year when delivery and other products are not held by bad weather, he says.

In a midwestern supermarket chain reported sales of more than a dozen bottles of fruit and vegetables, but ran specials on flowers (39 cents a pound) and California navel oranges (49 cents a pound) in its divisions.

In Miami, the chain said members two for 49 cents, three for 49 cents at the same time last year. Fresh green beans were 79 cents, to 79 cents a pound, local tomatoes were only 39 cents a pound.

In Dallas, one market executive said unseasonably heavy weather in Mexico, heavy demand for Mexican produce and heavy rain in Texas' Rio Grande Valley were causing price problems.

Monogramming craze hits Tennessee casket industry

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI)—A manufacturing company has designed the perfect casket for those persons afflicted by the monogramming craze — a personalized casket.

The caskets, sold by Major Casket Co. of Memphis, come with eight-inch letters, available in sky blue, desert sand, harvest gold or sapphire, which are attached to the inside lid of the casket.

If the buyer chooses, the insignia of a favorite club or organization can be substituted for the middle initial.

George Thomas, president of the firm, said the new casket design was mandated by the ever-increasing use of monograms.

"There's something about the American people that makes them want to put their initials on everything — shirts, towels, sheets, cars — whatever," Thomas said. "So, Robert Shay, the man who heads up our parent company, Morlan International, Inc., in Philadelphia, Pa., said, 'Why not caskets?'"

The firm hired a team of industrial psychologists who, after a study of projected public response, endorsed the marketing potential of a line of personalized caskets.

"We unveiled the first personalized casket at the national convention of funeral directors in Houston in October," Thomas said. "Since then, we've had difficulty keeping up with the orders."

MELODY YOUTZ

Youth soloists featured

TWIN FALLS — For its second concert of the current season, the Magic Valley Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Lawrence Curtis, is featuring two youth soloists, pianists, Meg Rayborn and Melody Youtz, both Twin Falls.

Meg is the daughter of Mrs. D. F. McFarland and Robert Rayborn and Melody is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Youtz, all Twin Falls. Meg will play the first movement of "Piano Concerto No. 23 in A Major, K. 488" by Mozart. Melody will play the first movement of Piano Concerto No. 24 in F Minor, by Chopin. They will both be accompanied by the symphony.

Both of the soloists are graduates of Twin Falls High School. While in high school, Meg served as accompanist for both the Madrigals and the concert choir. She also played violin in the orchestra.

She entered numerous Junior music festivals, sponsored annually by the Twin Falls Music Club, received many superior ratings, and was awarded several gold cups. She attended several summer music camps on scholarships, among them the University of Idaho and Arizona State University.

She began her study of piano with Mrs. Youtz and later studied with Mrs. Ealer Bellini. In college she has a double major of piano performance and theory-composition. She is considering going into musical therapy.

She is currently a sophomore at Boise State University studying piano with Madeleine Hsu. She received the top sophomore award. She serves as accompanist for the Boise State University vocal ensemble and the opera theater group. She also does some composing — serious piano works, a collection of children's pieces, and has recently completed a selection for voice, piano and oboe.

Some of her compositions have been copyrighted: "Three Natural Stories — Spider in a Glass Jar," "Computer Romance" and "Stomach Dance" which represents indignation.

Melody has also entered many junior music festivals in piano, violin, and ballet, receiving numerous superior ratings, and has been awarded several gold cups. In addition to her study of piano with Mrs. Bellini, she has also studied violin with Mrs. James Danner and ballet with Beverly Hackney. She has attended a number of summer music camps, among them Sun Valley and Ricks College.

During high school she was active in the Pep Club and the Drill Team and attended a workshop for all northwest drill teams at Bozeman, Mont. She is currently a Junior at Boise State University majoring in piano. She is a student of Madeleine Hsu. She is the recipient of the Twin Falls First Federal Savings and Loan scholarship awarded to a college sophomore and the Boise State University class award.

Selections by the orchestra will include: "La Gazza Ladra Overture" by Rossini; "L. Kije Suite Symphonique Op. 66" by Prokofiev; "Carmen Suite No. 1" by Bizet, which includes Prelude, "Aragonaise," "Intermezzo," "Seguedille," "Les Dragons d'Alcala," and "Les Toreadors."

The concluding number will be "Sabre Dance" from "Gypsy Ballet" by Khachaturian.

Families will be admitted on patron tickets and general admission tickets will be available at the door.

'Between Acts' added at library

"Between Acts" by Robert Merritt, an intriguing, intimate, heavy — this is a wickedly witty look at the public and private personalities of opera and show business by the Metropolitan Opera's leading baritone, Robert Merritt. His stories bounce from the most sophisticated to the rowdiest.

Mini-Reviews

"A Civil Tongue" by Edwin Newman.

This is the author's understanding of what a civil tongue means. It is a language that is not bogged down in jargon, not studded with trick phrases, not weighted down with the gelatinous verbiage of Washington and the social sciences.

It is direct, specific, concrete, vigorous, colorful, subtle, and imaginative, and as lucid and eloquent as we are able to make it. A smog of jargon is settling on our land. Newman blows it away with sweet reason and sour comments.

A high comedy in a serious cause. "Homefront" by Winston M. Estes.

It is the story of how the war possessed people's thoughts and actions, drawing them together and permanently changing them.

good trump support and no first or second round controls and South goes to six.

South draws trumps with three leads and plays his ace of diamonds. West drops the jack and South stops to think. The result of the thought is that South plays out the high hearts, leads a diamond from dummy and ducks. West is in with the queen and forced to lead a club up the ace-queen.

Sort of an inspired play, but we made the East and West hands, we can be expected to find the winning play.

Ask the Jacobys

By Oswald & James Jacoby

Today's North-South cards were sent to us by a lady from Wisconsin who said she opened three notrump and played it there.

This is where she should play the hand after that opening bid. However, the hand is just the least bit strong for a three-notrump opening — and actually the North-South cards can produce six notrump with a 3-3 diamond break and a club lead or successful club finesse. But six spades is a fair one and we have made up a hand for that contract.

South opens two spades on his four-card suit. North jumps to four spades to show

Under the new rules about score corrections a score can be only half corrected. Thus, if you as East and West sign a slip showing North plus 450 and later on you find that North should only be plus 420, your score remains as minus 450; the North score is reduced to 420. There is a reason for this complication. Frankly, we don't like it, but it is now the law.

Of course, you can always ask what the final contract is when it is your turn to play.

Nurse granted stipend

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls nurse has been awarded a tuition scholarship to the University of Colorado Medical School to pursue a nurse practitioner's license.

Karen E. Booth, a former member of the in-service training staff at Magie Valley Memorial Hospital and more recently a nurse at Hazel Del Manor, was granted the tuition stipend in January. She will complete her coursework at the end of April and then return to Twin Falls for a six-month internship.

Upon completion of the internship, Mrs. Booth will be eligible for a license as a geriatric nurse practitioner. The nurse practitioner is allowed a broader range of freedom in treating and advising patients than a registered or licensed practical nurse. In many small communities nurse practitioners provide the only local medical service. They must work under the direction of a physician.

Mrs. Booth received her grant through the W.K. Kellogg Foundation.

Sorority aids handicapped

TWIN FALLS — Equipment which will help handicapped children learn to use their hands, leg muscles and maybe eventually to walk will be purchased for the Child Development Center here by the Sigma Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi.

Mrs. J. Gillespie, chapter president, and Carol Lookingbill, secretary and publicity director, presented a check for $200 to the center this week. The funds are part of the profit made from the group's annual flea market held in December. Members contribute hand-made articles for the special sale each year to raise money for community projects. They also provide a sale area for other community craftsmen with charges for the space going into the fund.

Mrs. J. Gillespie said the profit this year also allowed the club to donate $100 for clothing to the Larry Smith family of Bulli who lost their home in a fire.

He said half of the money will be used to buy a "sand and water" table for handicapped youngsters which is designed to teach them hand use through the sensation of feeling water and soil. Part of it will also purchase a set of "family" dolls with which children can relate to brothers, sisters, parents and grand parents.

Some straw-colored lawns dyed green

By GEORGE ABRAHAM
SPRAY YOUR GRASS?

One good thing about snow is that it makes everybody's lawn look the same. But as soon as the snow goes away, some lawns remain straw-colored.

A reader asks: If people can dye their hair, why can't we dye our lawn? You can. There are many lawn colorants on the market used to dye the grass green.

People who get desperate and blacktop their lawns would be smarter to spray them. If it's green they're after and can't get any more.

These lawn colorants are harmless to pets, birds, people and plants, in case you're wondering, they don't even stain children's clothes. If the color is allowed to dry thoroughly on the grass.

The colorant is applied with a fine spray uniformly, and to avoid streaks, make two light sprayings with the second at right angles to the first.

The cost to spray varies with how green you want your lawn. A light green coloring of dormant grass can be had for about $3 per 1,000 square foot whereas a deep green appearance in summer could run around $6 per 1,000 square feet.

Some people use these colorants to improve the brown spots in lawns caused by dogs, beetles, etc.

STORING CARROTS

If your carrots are stored in sand, better check to see if they have enough moisture. To us, sand dries out fast and carrots will shrivel. A plastic bag makes a fine place to store carrots. Wash them off and store them in the crisper. Or you can wash them, and store in plastic bags kept in a refrigerator. There's no point in bleaching them before storage.

DOCTOR YOUR PLANTS

Here's a guide to follow if your foliage plants aren't doing too well: (1) Weak growth or light green, or yellow foliage, due to

- Intense light, lack of fertilizer, root rot or poor root system.
- (2) Small leaves and long spaces between leaves: too little light.
- (3) Small leaves and short spaces between leaves: lack of fertilizer or grown too dry.
- (4) Plant's rot at or just above soil level: too much water, poor drainage or a root disease.
- (5) Brown spots on petals and leaves: due to light too bright, overwater, pesticide injury or disease.
- (6) Roots appear on soil surface: Soil may be waterlogged or plant may need repotting.
- (7) Plant wilts or leaf curls: due to lack of water, or overwatering; air too hot or cold.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

It was 200 years ago that Joseph Priestly discovered photosynthesis, the most important botanical process on earth. Photosynthesis is the process whereby plants, using sunlight as energy, take carbon dioxide and water to make oxygen. Priestly showed that a living mouse used up the air supply in the same way as a burning candle. The mouse got weaker, and weaker but when Priestly introduced a mint plant, the mouse gradually became stronger.

Why? Because the plant purified the air by taking on carbon dioxide (waste product) and releasing oxygen. Later, others showed that only green plants are effective in giving off oxygen and that light must also be available.

That's why we must up all we can to keep our planet green. All our food comes from plants. Plants are great "garbage collectors." Each year over 40 billion (repeat billion) tons of carbon dioxide are converted into plants-whose weight would exceed 100 billion tons.

Next time someone wants to chop down a tree because it's messy, kindly point out that it ~~is~~ necessary, but a great purifier. A tree near your home can produce a cooling effect equal to 10 room-size air conditioners running 20 hours a day.

An apple tree in your backyard not only produces all the apples you can eat (even when many are wormy), it produces enough oxygen to supply four people for a year.

Plants are not only nature's garbage collectors, but also noise stoppers and also make the best dust "mops" on earth, catching much of the falling particles found in 12 million tons of pollutants released into the atmosphere above the United States each year.

THE NO. 1 VEGETABLE

We all know that tomatoes are the No. 1 vegetable in the home garden, but did you know that snap beans rank No. 2?

Breeding the string out of string beans is one reason for such great popularity. Study your seed catalog for varieties that have a long picking season. Those described as "concentrated set" usually have only one or two pickings, the crop coming on all at once.

BRANDER and Spartan Arrow are two fine green beans that come on heavy for a main picking, but they do well under difficult conditions.

Bush Blue Lake, Tendercrop, Kentucky Wonder, Romano (Italian pole type) and Royalty are a few nice ones to try. While many beans have been bred for machine harvesting, the selection for the home gardener is better than ever.

QUESTION BOX

QUESTION OF THE WEEK: D. E. of Twin Falls: "I have some african violet plants which refuse to blossom. Is there anything we can do to make them bloom?"

Quite often a mature plant which hasn't blossomed for a long period can be forced into blooming by transplanting it into a fresh soil mixture.

Part of the old soil can be removed by gently working your fingers through the root mass and removing some of the root system. This root pruning is a stimulating process.

If you remove considerable roots, you may have to repot in a smaller pot than the original.

African violet fanciers feel that most mature african violets like to be somewhat rootbound for best growth and blossom formation. They have a general rule for pot size of a standard mature blooming plant: the diameter of the pot should be one-third the diameter of the plant.

A pot that is too large will contain so much extra soil that there is danger of root rot, or that the plant will make lots of leaf growth.

Some readers tell us that they can force stubborn violets into blooming by giving them the "hot foot" treatment. To do this they place the pot in a shallow pan of hot water. Some people even water their plants with water at 110 degrees to force them into blossom.

Does any violet fancier have other tricks for forcing stubborn violets into bloom? We might add that plants not getting sufficient light will fail to form flower buds. Often they will bloom if placed in a bright window.

E. D. of Hallett: "Please tell me why (all of a sudden) my young prayer plant folds its leaves at night, downward. At one time it folded its leaves upwards, the way it should. Can you explain this?"

The Maranta, or prayer plant, refers to the leaves' habit of folding together at night, like praying hands. Just why yours folds downward is a great mystery. Sometimes extreme dryness will curl the leaves downward, and will result in dead leaf tips, but this isn't your case.

Rabbit track is another name given to this plant because of the leaf markings. It's also called cathedral windows. Keep the Maranta or prayer plant evenly watered. Best temperature is around 72 degrees. Below 55 degrees will cause the plant to wither and drop. Meanwhile, if someone can explain why your plant rolls downward, instead of upward, we'd appreciate hearing from you.

Filer board sets review

FILER — A citizens advisory board to assess the needs for a new high school in Filer has been formed and will meet at 7:30 p.m., Feb. 28 to review findings.

Mrs. Margaret Vincent has been named chairman of the committee. Richard Schweitzer will serve as chairman of the need, site and site committee, assisted by Ewald Thacker, Dale Williams, Richard Allen, Grant Hgill, and Gerritt Peters representing the Hollister area.

Mrs. Carol Fort heads the public relations and funding committee, assisted by Mrs. Vincent, Lloyd Peterson, Ralph Smith and Arlene Lammers.

The cost, heating and architect committee will consist of Robert Hoke, chairman, Gwen Kropick, Ardean Lang, Jack Coffin, and Jim Lanting, Hollister.

The group will visit some of the neighboring schools for ideas. The present high school was erected in 1918 and needs extensive repairs. The junior high building was built in 1953.

The board will assess school needs as they stand today and the feasibility of planning for additions, new buildings and land purchase.

A steering committee of interested patrons from each school district had been appointed by the school board several months ago and a tour was made of the present buildings.

is occurring in parts of the building. The heating system, which was second-hand at the time of its placement in 1948, is deteriorating and needs annual repair.

School trustees feel the Filer schools will be growing each year. Bill Heaps, elementary school principal, said this year's kindergarten class consists of 72 children, compared to classes in the '30s and '50s of other years.

QUESTION: How did you feel about the repeal of the Equal Rights Amendment by the Idaho legislature?

Chiff Ghan, Twin Falls:
I don't really understand it. I haven't been following it.

Wally Schwab, Twin Falls:
I felt pretty good. I'm opposed to what they call "equal rights."

Ross Prather, Twin Falls:
I was opposed to it. I'm in favor of ERA. I think all this emotional opwash is unnecessary.

Zella Kidd, Bagerman:
I really think equal rights for women should be considered in things like pay. But as far as being equal in everything, I still like to be treated like a lady.

Jana Seale, Twin Falls:
I really don't read about it.

Mels Brumbach, Twin Falls:
I'm betwixt and between. It has some really good points but it goes overboard on some things.

John Krutson, Twin Falls:
I'm still thinking about it, and I'm not sure I understand it.

Jerri Fain, Buhl:
I don't go along with ERA.

Tiny group survives

HOLON, Israel (UPI) — The last remnants of the Biblical Samaritans are flourishing after centuries of decline, a leader of the group says.
"For centuries we were treated as a soon-to-be extinct species, but lamentation and eulogies were apparently premature," said Benjamin Tzedaka in an interview with the Jerusalem Post.
After increasing by only 90 in the years between 1948 and 1967, their numbers have jumped by 102 in the last 10 years, Tzedaka said.

TF woman teaches stained glass art

By VALEZ BIRD
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Cathedrals, Tiffany lamps and decoratively Victorian windows.

That's the general impression stained glass art leaves with most of us.

No one knows exactly where or when stained glass was first used, and until the late nineteenth century, it was found mainly in churches which were usually the only ones who could afford such extravagance.

Although the technique remains basically unchanged, there is a new expression of this old medium, and it's happening in Mrs. Jean Swarling's workshop, Twin Falls.

Jean became formally involved in glass art ten years ago through University of California at Berkeley extension art courses. She took classes on and off for four years before coming to Twin Falls.

"I thought I'd like to do commission work," Jean said, "but there wasn't a big enough market, and people were asking me to teach classes."

So four years ago she started teaching classes, and they are now so popular that she has full enrollment for 1977 except for a one-week summer workshop she teaches in the basement of Charles Stuhlborg, Inc., a Ketchum furniture store. She offers a beginning and an advanced class each fall, special projects each winter, and two beginning classes each spring. On Mondays she has studio sessions open to any student or "ex-student" which cost $3.00, and two sessions are included in the class fee.

Jean said there are six basic steps in making a leaded glass panel:

- 1) Working up a design (if needed there are many books with patterns for glass art);
- 2) Cutting the glass;
- 3) Leading up (putting lead around pieces of glass);
- 4) Soldering;
- 5) Water proofing with putty;
- 6) Cleaning and polishing.

An optional step is applying an antiquing solution over the soldering, which has a bright shiny surface, to give it a finished look.

Lead came, which is a strip of lead with a groove on each side, or copper foil with adhesive on one side is wrapped around each cut piece of glass, and then the pieces are soldered together. A board with nails is used for holding flatwork in place for assembling.

To solder a large lampshade, Jean rested it on top of a plastic garbage can.

"We do almost everything that can be done to a piece of glass, fusing, etching, painting," Jean said. Scraps of glass are melted in a kiln where they become a smooth drop-like shape and can be used again.

There are, essentially, two kinds of glass used; antique glass which is clear and opalescence which is opaque and was invented by Louis Tiffany because it diffused the glare from the light source. It is almost always a mixture of white and some other color.

Jean said supply is one of her biggest problems because living in Twin Falls, she is not close to suppliers. Most of her supplies are shipped from California.

"Everybody who takes my class goes out of here with a lot of respect and appreciation for glass and an artistic medium," Jean said. "I've taught people between the ages of 18 and 82, and I could teach junior high kids with no problem, but you're saving pay $40.00."

Jean seems to manage well being a housewife and mother along with her professional career. She says her husband, Rod, an orthopedic surgeon, "is very tolerant and patient."

Her daughter, Tricia, "if I learned how to do leaded glass in her mother's studio during the teacher's strike. Eric, her son, wants to do glass," Jean said. "But I think he's a little young."

Lynn Affleck solders seams in lampshade

Billie Edwards and Lynn focus on work

Two students in Jean's special projects class have taken beginning and advanced stained glass art.

One student, Lynn Affleck, Twin Falls, was an art major in college. She made two 7-foot windows to go by the door of her home. "I love it (glass art)," she said. "It's really a distinct art form that is becoming popular again."

Lucy Ramsey, Filer, is making eight panes for her kitchen cabinets. "It's a hobby; a pleasant way to create something that's your very own," she said.

An original lampshade by Louis Tiffany, an innovator in glass art, signed as authentic, sells for more than $10,000. A lampshade like the one Diane Nicholson, Twin Falls, is making would retail for about $100, but she thinks it will cost her $100 not counting labor.

"I like antiques, and I think that probably got me into this class," Diane remarked. This year she made Christmas presents out of stained glass, designing picture frames and tree ornaments.

Billie Edwards, Hagerman, who has taken the class for one year, said, "I do lots of art crafts, and I thought it would be fun. I love cutting the glass."

"I think this is the most challenging thing I've done," Colleen McClellan, Jerome, said. "The designs in Victorian glass are what really inspired me."

Jean's own tools, including a soldering iron, are available to her students. She estimated that, if one were to buy all the tools for stained glass work, it would be an additional $45.

Jean has done commission work from $1 to $1,000. She first works up several designs on paper and lets her customer make his choice.

"Most people get discouraged about the price when wanting commission work," she said. "But it's similar to commissioning an oil painting for which you wouldn't mind spending $200 or more. An original work in leaded glass is on a par with original work in any other medium."

The biggest job Jean has done was the rotunda over the dance floor at Blue Lakes Country Club. Her students helped assemble the pentagon which has a total of 15 panels, three on each side. The rotunda features a geometric pattern in blues and greens that matches the room's carpeting.

Jean is listed in the yellow pages and has received some calls with strange requests for repair work. One woman wanted her to fix a glass compote that her mother had given her.

Although Jean has done repairs on old stained glass windows, she prefers to work on original pieces.

Stained glass is the only art that relies entirely on a light source, either natural or artificial, for its effect.

"When you work with colored glass," Jean said, "you have to think about light source. It's a neat medium because it's not static."

LONDON (UPI) — DeBrett's, the genealogical company that has researched the ancestry of Britain's "blue-blooded" aristocracy for centuries, has extended its services to "red-blooded" commoners. "Since 1769 — we have concentrated on the British monarchy and aristocracy, but now we have decided to make the skills acquired through working on blue-blooded pedigrees for over 200 years available to everyone of pure English, Scots, Welsh or Irish origin, who have just as long and interesting pedigrees as dukes," DeBrett's said.

Managing director H.B. Brooks-Baker said the company now sees its policy of investigating only the pedigrees of blue-bloods as "a rather negative way of thinking. "We've had hundreds of inquiries like this (from commoners) for the past several years. And we can't continue saying 'no' without a good reason." DeBrett's own history extends back to 1675. It is best known for its publication, "DeBrett's Peerage" — sometimes called Britain's "Who's Who" of nobles. Its compilers keep up with the country's dukes and duchesses and lords and ladies, with the Royal Warrant holders (merchants who serve the royal household) and select clubs and restaurants. A new edition is published every two or three years.

Although the company's staff is small, Brooks-Baker said "it tends itself to expansion." If the demand for ancestry research from its new class of customers booms. The managing director said the new democratized services are limited for financial reasons, but added, "I think it's clear we'll have a rather good income from this that we'll be able to use on other historical research we're interested in."

DeBrett's pamphlet explains the techniques of genealogical research. Basically they involve scouring civil birth, marriage and death records, earlier parish records, and census returns. Other sources of information include wills, court records, government employee records, and immigration records.

The company's fees vary widely, because they are computed according to the time and expense involved in each research case.

GOING FOR BOLD
 By Colleen Touvin.

bold wallpaper are in style, and there is no question that one key to decorating impact today is having the courage to be bold and creative. Remember, however, that design must still suit the setting. Color wallpaper-patterns should be in scale and proportion with both your rooms and your furnishings.

A bold, splashy pattern will dominate a room and overpower a small room and cause small-scale antiques, for example, to be lost. Massive Mediterranean or large modern furniture pieces can hold their own.

This works the other way. A small wallpaper print design will look smaller in a large room, vanishing into the background. So be sure of the effect you want. If possible, take a sample of the paper you like home, and live with it a few days to be sure.

Bold or muted, elegant or modernistic, you need just the right wallpaper for your needs in our handsome selection. Come in—and browse through the best in wallcoverings at...

A: Probably the main reason was the pressure of stardom. The young actor felt he was being hounded. In the last few months before he killed himself he had taken to speeding along the freeways in his blue you'll be seeing him soon. Altherton is not one to fall under the spell of stardom. He's a dedicated actor whose primary interest is getting good parts on the screen or in the theater.

Q: Is any soap opera favorite, Paul Gleason, who plays Dr. David Thornton on "All My Children," married? He is my ideal. — O.T., Baltimore.

A: He's not married but your competition is keen. Gleason has ever so quietly become the new man in Candy Bergen's life.

Q: So now what's with All MacGraw and Steve McQueen — splitville or not? — A.P., Abilene, Tex.

A: That marriage looks better than ever. Closs, friends say they've never seemed happier. All and Steve decided to take a real commitment and buy the house they've been renting on the beach at Trancas just above Malibu.

Q: I've heard a lot of big talk out of Washington about President Carter's "modest way of running things." Has he done anything specific to cut down all the pompous and expensive spending, besides curtailing his staff's limo service? — A.M., New York

A: Without any public announcement Carter has closed the fancy executive dining rooms in the cabinet department. Now top brass eat with the secretaries of places like Agriculture, Commerce and State. The President has also quietly canceled the helicopter flights that used to ferry the joint chiefs of staff between their homes and the Pentagon.

Q: Are Artie Shaw and Evelyn Keyes still married? I never read about them anymore. — M.B., Golden, Colo.

A: The much-married former band leader is still hitched to the former blonde movie actress, although after 20 years they have a very relaxed arrangement.

Q: Evelyn has sold her Connecticut home and will soon move back to Hollywood, not to resume her acting career, but to finish up her autobiography called "Scarlett O'Hara's Younger Sister," which could be a sensation if she is candid about her marriages to Shaw and director John Huston.

Q: I know it took Alex Haley about 12 years to write "Roots." How did he support himself and what can you tell me about his own family? — R.J., Denver

A: He started off with a very small advance to write a rather modest book. This, plus a Coast Guard pension, kept him going in the early days of the project. As the scope increased he got more money from his publisher.

ALICE COOPER
... following the sun.

Corvette — the only place he could find some peace and solitude.

In one of the last interviews Prince told a writer that if his wife ever left him he would shoot himself. The day after this conversation she did leave and in less than two months he did shoot himself.

Q: Is the marriage of Mel Brooks and Anne Bancroft a happy one? — R.T., Rawlins, Wyo.

A: Their 12-year marriage has been fairly happy and quiet — until recently.

Mel has become more difficult since his success with movies like "Young Frankenstein," "Silent Movie" and "Blazing Saddles." Anne has complained to close friends lately that Mel's ego is also blazing as never before.

Q: I loved William Altherton in "Day of the Locust" and "The Hindenburg," but he seems to have disappeared from the screen after such a good start. What happened? — S.K., Joliet, Ill.

A: Altherton has just finished the film version of "Looking for Mr. Goodbar" — so

CLORIS LEACHMAN
... is the marriage in trouble?

PETER SELLERS
... an overblown reputation

About five years ago, Haley tried the highly lucrative lecture circuit and was a great success. Right now, he's more than well-fixed financially with a number of new, related projects in the works.

Haley, by the way, is not married and has no children. But he does have two brothers. So the extraordinary family line will continue but perhaps not with him — unless he marries and has children.

Q: How come we don't hear much about Alice Cooper these days? Is the rock star in hibernation? — A.M., Montgomery, Ala.

GINGER ROGERS
... still very busy

A: Well, you might call it that. Cooper and his wife, Cheryl, have been chancing the sun all winter. The Coopers and Alley's pal, Bernie Taupin, Elton John's lyricist, and Taupin's girl friend were in Acapulco for two months and then took off for Tahiti. Not a bad life.

Q: We think the Cloris Leachman-George Englund marriage — together but in separate domiciles — is a terrific idea. How long have they had this arrangement? — L.B., Pittsburgh

A: Cloris and George have been together but separated for some 25 years. How great an idea it is we wouldn't want to say. We hear the marriage is leading to rocky shoals.

Q: Since Peter Sellers is considered such a lady's man, who's his current girl? — R.L., Dallas

A: If you saw "Voyage of the Damned," then you caught Peter's latest, British ingenue, Lynne Frederick, who played Lee Grant's daughter in the film. But Peter's devil-may-care reputation is a bit overblown. He has to be very careful about just about everything since he's had several heart attacks.

Example: He's a vegetarian and a teetotaler. He just likes being in love and 22-year-old Lynne is very loveable, he says.

Q: We don't understand about that great star, Katharine Hepburn. Why don't we see her in more movies? And why doesn't she receive more honors like the other great actresses? A good example was when the American Film

Institute's first award went to Bette Davis. Why not Miss Hepburn? — Chicago

A: Kate is very careful about her film appearances. She won't consider a small supporting role, because the public considers her a major star. The AFI did want to honor Miss Hepburn and she was the first choice. Unfortunately, the feisty Kate turned it down saying she didn't want to give away that much TV exposure of herself for free.

Q: With all the "Star Is Born" publicity about Barbara Streisand and Jon Peters I got me wondering about Jon's ex, Leslie Warren. — G.F., Valley Stream, N.Y.

A: Leslie still carries the torch for Jon. They were married for eight years and have a son, Christopher. She's been having some rough times lately; the TV series she was supposed to star in got canceled and her recent nightclub act, which she tried out in Los Angeles, didn't go over very well.

Q: How is Hugh Hefner's daughter doing since she became a big editor at Playboy? — S.W., Des Moines, Iowa

A: Though the magazine has lost some of its advertising, its power and prestige, particularly in the wake of all its raunchier imitators, Playboy seems to have been bolstered up editorially by Christie Hefner. She neither thinks nor looks like a Playboy bunny and is very much in charge, from board meetings to minor personnel problems.

Also, since the famous Jimmy Carter interview, she's been seeing a lot of Pat Cashin — the President's official polisher. They were at the Inaugural Ball together.

JACQUELINE BISSET
... with Quinn as Jackie

Q: What about my old favorite Ginger Rogers? Has she retired? — N.T., Roswell, N.M.

A: No way. Ginger is still doing a nightclub act. The interesting thing about Ginger is that she has always been terrible about handling money. She recently stepped down as president of her own corporation. Her mother, who is 84, is still writing the checks and reading the contracts for her 66-year-old daughter.

Hot Lips marries but dumps Frank

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Hot Lips Houlihan, the naughty nurse in "M.A.S.H.," will be married on the series next month, ending a prime-time television longest "extramarital" affair.

Maj. Margaret Houlihan has been horsing around with Major Frank Burns for four years now. But this year they have gone increasingly to bed alone.

Hot Lips has found a lieutenant colonel in Tokyo and on March 15, the final show of the current season, the happy couple will exchange vows in one of the wackiest ceremonies in the annals of the tube.

The rites will be conducted by Father Mufely, the show's not-too-bright vicar. Major Burns' near hysteria at the loss of Hot Lips will act as best man. Col. Sherman Potter will give the bride away.

Corporal Klingler, the wacky transvestite of the field hospital group, will challenge nurse Houlihan for best dressed member of the wedding party. He will be the bridesmaid in a fluffy silk robin's egg blue empire gown and pearl necklace, carrying a nosegay of violets.

Leave it to Hot Lips to make a mockery of the solemn nuptial ceremony. The brazen lussy has the gall to wear white. She who has seduced, or tried to seduce, everyone above the rank of major who ever stumbled into the hospital. Once she becomes the bride of Lt. Col. Donald Penobscott, will Hot Lips remain faithful, or will she revert to her old alley cat proclivities.

"That's hard to say," said Loretta Swift, the lush blonde who plays Hot Lips to a tee. "It all depends on the writers." "I do know that if Margaret fools around she will be the first prime time married lady to cheat on her husband. But then she was the first prime time lady to carry on a hot and heavy affair and get away with it.

"She may even remain true to her husband. Margaret has mostly been of one-man woman, even if it was the wrong man."

Swift is a curious actress. She defends Hot Lips as if the nurse were her twin sister. Loretta, incidentally, refers to Houlihan only by her Christian name, Margaret. Never Hot Lips.

"The producers tell me that Margaret's bridegroom returns to Tokyo where he's stationed," Loretta said. "That means she will be separated from him for long periods and probably will take her sexual frustrations out on the poor guys in the M.A.S.H. hospital." "I'm not sure Margaret is capable of a really deep love. I think part of her interest in her husband is the fact that he's a lieutenant colonel. Margaret is impressed with rank.

"She'd probably like him a lot better if he were a general."

Off screen, Loretta has never been married. One assumes her love life is considerably more discreet than Houlihan's.

Certainly, she doesn't dig military brass. At least she hasn't been seen in public with anyone in uniform. But Loretta may beat Hot Lips to the altar. Loretta said she has fallen in love and will be married soon herself.

"The race is to the Swift," was the way she put it. The man in her life is a New York stock broker and they plan to be married in Rhode Island.

"The date hasn't been set yet. But I just may get married before Margaret does. We'll make our home here in Southern California."

Loretta said there are few parallels between herself and Houlihan.

"Margaret and I look a lot alike but we don't have much of anything else in common," she said, laughing.

"Margaret has no sense of humor. But she's a great nurse. It wouldn't be much of a nurse. She likes war games. And she's impressed with super-fidellities."

"But when push comes to shove, Margaret is a good girl. She loves children and so do I. She can never have a child on the show because they'd send her back to the States and that would be the end of Margaret on the series."

Loretta doesn't think Hot Lips' marriage will seriously alter the interlocking plots of the characters in "M.A.S.H." She believes Houlihan's marital status will open new avenues of comedy.

"The emphasis is distributed among so many characters on our show that Margaret's new status won't disturb the point of view that much," she said.

"I really don't know what the producers have in mind. But you can bet whatever happens to Margaret will be funny."
