Carter accepts rebate cuts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter indicated today that a scaling down of his proposed $50 income tax rebate was "workable," according to the chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee.

Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., said after a White House meeting between Carter and committee Democrats that the President did not object to panel changes in his plan to give a $50 tax rebate to almost all Americans.

The committee, which is working on Carter's $31-billion economic stimulus plan, voted Wednesday to provide a full rebate to Americans making more than $25,000 — and none at all to those making more than $30,000.

"The President was extremely understanding of whatever changes we made," Ullman said.

"What we had was an understanding that it was workable and that it was a procedure that made some sense."

Ullman said there was "no conclusion as to what we agreed to or what we didn't agree to. That was not the purpose of the meeting."

"We brought all of these ideas, put them on the table, and the President and his people were able to participate with us in the exchange of ideas."

During Carter's first weeks in office, congressional leaders complained they were not being consulted on important issues as Carter had promised. He promptly apologized and stepped up his schedule of meetings with them.

The economic stimulus plan, which the Ways and Means Committee began rewriting Wednesday, calls for changes in the standard income tax deduction and Carter said his first version was off-base on that subject.

He outlined the problem during a question and answer session with federal workers at the Agriculture Department Wednesday, noting with a grin that "people who do live together and are not married have a benefit in income tax."

He said the original economic package would have provided a $2,400 standard deduction for single people and $2,800 for married couples.

"We have changed that proposal and we have given a $2,300 standard deduction to single people, $3,000 to married people," he said.

During the meeting with HEW workers, Carter said he intends to move toward national health care in phases. He said he plans by the end of 1977 to have a schedule in mind for "a year by year" progression toward a complete comprehensive health care system."

On other issues Wednesday:

— White House Press Secretary Jody Powell said Carter "fully supports the 16-month test period for the Concorde in the terms originally proposed," and will not interfere with it. Powell said Carter relayed that message to the French and British governments.

— Carter told Cabinet members he will hold them "personally responsible" for carrying out his orders to cut down the number of unnecessary government forms. Business and individuals must fill out.

Testing may save Gem lives

By GEORGE WILEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A cancer expert says a statewide program of testing human excrement could save many lives lost each year in Idaho to cancer of the large bowel.

The stool-testing proposal was to be presented to a symposium for Magic Valley doctors today.

About 100 Idahoans died each year of cancer of the large bowel during the 1950s and 1960s, according to federal cancer statistics.

Dr. E. George Elias, chief of the Oncology section at the University of Maryland, said prior to the symposium that the stool-testing program is about to be launched in his home state. He said mobile test units will visit communities there to collect stool samples. An advertising campaign will urge "inform the public on how they can return the samples by mail."

He said the test is simple and inexpensive and only involves mailing an individual's stool sample to the laboratory.

Elias said early detection of large bowel cancer, next to skin cancer the most common form of the disease, could result in an 88 per cent cure rate for victims. He said about 50,000 persons die each year in the United States of large bowel cancer. He said the testing program expects to discover about 50,000 new cases.

"The stool test costs less than a nickel," Elias said, and would be used to screen the population at all age levels in both sexes. Participants showing reaction to the initial test would be recalled for further testing, he said. He advocated such a program for Idaho.

Elias said surgery remains the primary treatment for bowel cancer. Chemotherapy, he added, has been disappointing.

He said doctors now hope a new vaccine will help in controlling spread of the tumors.

The vaccine is made of cancer cells from the patient's own tumor, which are radiated and then mixed with a medium for injection under the patient's skin.

While the vaccine is too new to have given survival results, Elias said, reactions do indicate that "the patient becomes very sensitized against his tumor and therefore he will reject his own tumor."

Elias said research is proceeding on vaccines for other forms of cancer, including skin and lung cancer.

Patients are warned before the injection that the skin at the injection site will be red and tender and possibly ulcerate, Elias said. While such reactions are painful, he added, doctors feel a more severe skin reaction is a good sign fight off cancer cells.

Reason to smile

But, as usual, Hong Kong is in a festive mood to welcome in the new year and celebrations will last 15 days.

The front door of many Chinese homes is usually adorned with pictures of door gods, considered fierce spirits keeping out evil. Other Chinese sayings written in gold characters on red strips of paper are inside, and special delicacies are served: lotus seeds, sugared coconut and dates, and deep-fried pastries.

The government has sold out of its special 22-carat gold coin that has a portrait of Queen Elizabeth on one side and a picture of the snake on the other.

Department stores are packed and most shoppers are optimistic the boom will continue into the new year.

Despite higher prices due to a cold snap, shoppers have snatched up the flowers and fruit trees whose rich colors are symbolic of an auspicious year.

Thousands also will visit relatives in China or make the short boat trip to Portuguese Macao, where fireworks to drive away evil spirits are legal. They were banned in Hong Kong years ago.

Override effort fails

HOUSE — Because Republicans in the Idaho Senate failed to override Gov. John V. Evans' veto Wednesday, school taxes will rise four mills.

Evans vetoed a bill continuing the current four mills of property tax relief.

The House overrode Evans' veto on a 47-22 party-line vote. But the Senate sustained it on a near party-line vote that failed to produce the necessary two-thirds majority.

Sen. Vernon K. Brassey, R-Boise, voted with the Democrats to sustain the veto and Sen. Richard Egbert, D-Tetonan, voted with the GOP to override.

After the Senate acted on the veto, Republican leaders in both houses met to consider alternatives to the $7.8 million in ongoing tax relief and decided to take to caucus today two proposals — each temporary.

One would increase the grocery credit on income taxes to $25 from $20 for each dependent. The other would eliminate the $10 head tax for one year. The grocery credit increase would cost $3.75 million and the head tax about $3 million and each would be financed with general fund money.

Senate Republicans have endorsed the head tax idea in principle but have not discussed the grocery credit. House Republicans have discussed the head tax but taken no position.

Assistant House Majority Leader Jack Kennevick, R-Boise, said he felt the grocery credit might find more favor in his caucus because the amount of tax relief would be greater than the head tax.

He said that still would leave $3.75 million in projected revenue which the Legislature "if it desired," could use to fund additional appropriations asked by Evans.

Caucus Chairman B. E. Lewis, R-St. Maries, said the House Republicans are adamant in their desire to grant some kind of tax relief, saying "they campaigned for tax relief and against tax increases." Veto of the four-mill bill, he said, means a tax increase on property at the local level.

President Pro Tem Phil Batt, R-Idaho, said he did not think the Senate Republicans had the "extreme" fecklessness of their House counterparts concerning tax relief but indicated they would like to see some bill passed.

Serpent rule begins Friday

HONG KONG (UPI) — The Chinese Year of the Snake begins Friday.

That's not all bad, despite Chinese lore equating the snake with deceit and evil practices. A snake year is considered good for lovers.

The Year of the Dragon, which just ended, was the time for marriages.

For people born between Feb. 18 this year and Feb. 8, 1978, the snake is their birthday animal and they tend to become charming adults, according to Chinese tales.

Elderly Chinese still tend to cling to the predictions of the fluctuating Lunar calendar, but for most a new year is a happy time regardless of the animal.

The horse is up next year followed by the goat, monkey, cockerel, dog, pig, rat, ox, tiger and rabbit.

Still, some were a little wary of the snake, which has not popped up as often in advertisements as the dragon did last year.

"It's true there hasn't been much publicity about the omens of the Year of the Snake, because it's not regarded as auspicious," a government spokesman said. "And people don't really like snakes."

US shivers prevailing; coast damp

By United Press International
 "Light rains" dampened the Pacific Northwest early today, but it appeared as though the precipitation would cancel the Yakima Indians' plans to hire a rainmaker for their parched valley.

The national shiver continued through most of the nation with morning temperatures of 27 at Cross City, Fla., and 10 below at Houghton Lake, Mich. Temperatures around zero stretched from Michigan, and Ohio east through New York and Pennsylvania and into New England.

Mild temperatures continued to inch eastward on a warm mass of air that invaded the middle Mississippi Valley today. Precipitation was sparse with scattered snow flurries in New York, Ohio, West Virginia and Maine. Light snowfall also was reported in Missouri and rain drenched parts of Washington and Oregon.

About one inch of rain was reported in Astoria, Ore., not enough to relieve the drought that has precipitation running less than 20 percent of normal.

Gov. BOB STRAIN said he would ask the legislature for $175,000 to seed clouds near the Pacific Coast. The Washington legislature also is considering a $25,000 appropriation to buy rain for the parched state.

"And if rain doesn't come quickly enough, the Yakima

Indian tribe plans to hire a rainmaker from the University of Washington to provide rain for the Yakima River Basin.

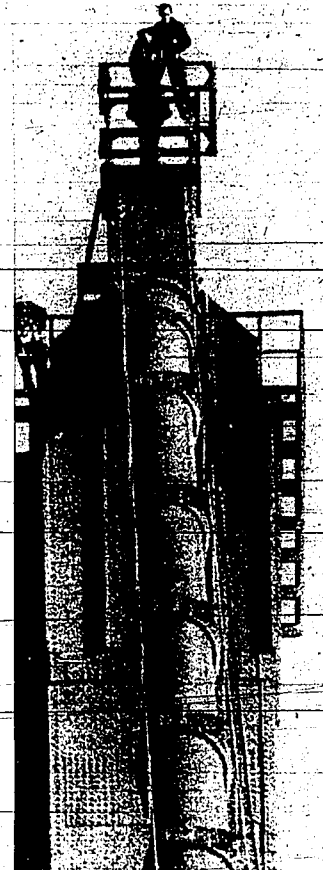

A legal storm appears to be brewing over the seedling plans. Officials in Idaho, east of Washington and Oregon, have threatened a lawsuit if the clouds are unnaturally drained of moisture before they pass over clapped Idaho soil.

Alabama's soil remains scorched after widely scattered forest fires claimed one life Wednesday, W.D. Morris, 72, an Odessa, Ala., farmer, suffered a heart attack while watching a fire sweep toward his barn. Ironically, the fire never reached the structure.

The fires, which began Feb. 4, already have burned 43,989 acres and officials say rain is the only thing that can stop the flames. But no rain was expected until Saturday at the earliest.

A rare snowfall struck Kitty, Ark., N.C., Wednesday, and children took advantage of the unusual opportunity to play with the fluffy flakes.

"Everything's a snowman," said David Hopper, a Kitty Hawk service station operator. Up to an inch of snow fell in Tallahassee, Fla., and two inches slicked highways in southeastern Virginia and on the North-Carolina coastal plain.

Senator dubs study fund waste

WASHINGTON (UPI) — This month's "Golden Fleece Award" recipient is the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration for its study to determine why prison inmates want to escape, Sen. William Proxmire announced today.

The Wisconsin Democrat called the $7,000 study a "crime," and said "it was responsible for it was being in jail. I'd bet they wouldn't need a time of taxpayers' money to decide why they wanted to get out."

Proxmire's monthly "Fleece" award is given to what he considers the biggest or most ironic waste of tax dollars.

But an LEAA spokesman said the project was commissioned by North Carolina using LEAA funds. About 85 percent of LEAA's budget goes to state and local governments for use in law enforcement, he said.

Tax refunds larger

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The nation's taxpayers are moving toward a pair of historical firsts this year. One is good, the other is not.

The Internal Revenue Service said Wednesday the average refund sent to taxpayers who already have filed 1976 returns was $46.34, the highest ever and probably will climb even more before all returns are processed, it said.

The tax collection agency, however, is alarmed about another of its findings. After processing 1.8 million returns at the 10 regional service centers, IRS found one in every 10 early filers made mistakes.

The general tax credit is causing the most problems, officials said.

"This year it can be computed in either of two ways: as $35 for each person in the family or as 2 percent of the first $9,000 of taxable income. The IRS said some taxpayers have taken less of a deduction than allowed.

"Our best advice," an IRS spokesman said, "is to read the instructions carefully on the standard deduction and follow the form to the letter on the general tax credit and you won't go wrong."

According to IRS Commissioner Daniel Alexander, changes in the tax laws are the major cause of the problems.

"Our best efforts toward form simplification were dwarfed by the new tax laws that made our major forms, the 1040 and 1040A, even more complicated," he said. "Obviously, the key to a simpler tax form is a simpler tax law."

The IRS said the average refund as of Feb. 16 was $46.34, compared to $41.67 at the same time last year.

After all returns were processed last year, the average refund came to $42.41 — an indication this year's final average can be expected to rise. By comparison, the average refund in 1970 was $29.31.

Carter said Wednesday the National Security Council said at the time after Carter met with representatives of the National League of Families — that the President wants to send a delegation to Hanoi to discuss the MIA situation and a "wide range" of issues.

An aide to the U.S. Montgomery, D-Miss., who chaired the House Select Committee on Missing in Action, said he expects Montgomery will be considered for the delegation should Hanoi agree to receive it.

The United States and North Vietnam exchanged sixth messages last year and held an inconclusive meeting in Paris Nov. 12, 1976.

Carter said Wednesday he would like to improve U.S. relations with all nations, and repeated a willingness to remove the barriers existing with Vietnam.

PANAMA CITY, Panama (UPI) — U.S. negotiators today briefed a visiting congressional delegation from the House Appropriations Committee on progress in talks on a new Panama Canal treaty.

A spokesman for the U.S. embassy said the delegation of nine congressmen was in Panama to gather background on the canal situation and to observe embassy operations.

Talks on a new treaty to determine future ownership of the waterway went into their third day today, on heavily guarded Contadora Island in the Pacific Ocean, a 30-minute flight from this capital.

Hanoi stays mum on US delegation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Carter administration has asked North Vietnam to receive a high-level U.S. delegation — possibly including several congressmen — but has received no response, informed sources said today.

The sources said the proposed mission would be to seek a full accounting of U.S. servicemen missing in action, and to open up discussion on mending relations between the nations.

A spokesman in the State Department's Bureau of East Asian Affairs declined comment, apparently because the request to Hanoi still is considered highly sensitive by the new administration.

The sources said the mission was consistent with President Carter's pledge Friday to send a delegation to North Vietnam.

Kidwell protests seeding

BOISE (UPI) — Attorney General Wayne Kidwell asked Oregon Gov. Robert Straub Wednesday to "refrain from altering the course of nature" by proceeding with a cloud seeding program to induce rain in the state.

Kidwell, who said he has been informed that Straub ordered cloud seeding, told the neighboring state's governor in a telegram. "In light of the recent developments in Washington, this decision on your part has serious ramifications for southern Idaho which depends heavily on irrigation for its agricultural production."

"That irrigation in turn, depends on the rain and snow pack in our mountains," he said.

Reminding Oregon that it is Idaho's "downstream neighbor in receiving stream waters and electrical generating capacity from Idaho water," Kidwell said, "I urge you to reconsider your position and refrain from altering the course of nature to the detriment of all of us in the Northwest."

Kidwell conferred with Washington Attorney General Slade Gorton earlier this week in reference to the legal ramifications of a bill under consideration in the Washington Legislature to fund a $125,000 cloud seeding program.

Washington Gov. Dixy Lee Ray said in an energy address Wednesday such a program is a "drastic long shot" fraught with many uncertainties and some potential to soil habitats.

In the Washington Legislature earlier Wednesday a House Appropriations Committee spokesman said the plan is not on the schedule of measures to receive immediate action.

Indictments coming soon

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Attorney General Griffin Bell has told President Carter that at least six present or former congressmen will be indicted on charges stemming from an alleged South Korean influence peddling scheme, it was reported today.

Quoting Justice Department sources, the Washington Post said that between four and six indictments are expected to be handed up within the next few months.

A grand jury is now looking into allegations that South Korea has paid off each and gift totaling up to $1 million a year to members of Congress since 1970 to win favorable action on legislation.

Earlier this month, Carter met with Bell and urged him to expedite the investigation, the Post said.

Judge rescinds oil lease sale

NEW YORK (UPI) — A federal judge today rescinded the sale of $1.1 billion in leases for offshore drilling rights off the New Jersey and Long Island coasts.

Judge Jack B. Weinstein in U.S. District Court rescinded the leases for 93 tracts on the grounds that former secretary of the Interior, Thomas Kleppe, had violated the National Environmental Policy Act.

In a 132-page decision, Weinstein said, "Judged against a rule of reason" the secretary of the Interior violated NEPA. The parties are enjoined from further proceeding with the exercise of any powers purportedly granted by Sale of Leases executed by the defendant.

"The leases are declared null and void. This order is stayed pending the completion of appeals, if any."

Weinstein also said in his decision that there is no showing of illegal acts by the oil companies. The fact that they must suffer because of the secretary's failures was considered by the court.

Right to work bill hustled out

BOISE (UPI) — House Majority Leader Walter Little, R-New Plymouth, hustled the right-to-work bill out of the State Affairs Committee Wednesday and then delayed action on a right-to-work referendum.

Speaker Allan F. Larsen, R-Blackfoot, said later that the leadership will attempt to hold the referendum until after the House acts on the main bill which would outlaw compulsory union membership as a condition of employment.

With four members absent, Little successfully put the right-to-work bill at the top of the State Affairs agenda at the start of its morning meeting and then sent it to the floor without recommendation.

Committee members simply shouted their ayes and nays on the motion although a poll afterward by UPI indicated the bill actually went out of the committee by an 8-7 vote. Had all members been present, the poll indicated, the bill would have come out 10-9 — that is, unless some members would have been intimidated by a roll call vote or by the presence of a number of observers.

Under normal procedures the right-to-work bill should be up for final floor consideration by Friday, Larsen indicated if right-to-work bill passes the referendum may be submitted to State Affairs for safekeeping until the Senate acts on the main bill.

Meanwhile, Gov. John V. Evans vetoed the bill to cut the eight-mill county school levy to four mills. The legislator refused to override the veto. The House, on a 41-22 party line vote, overrode the veto, but the Senate failed to muster the necessary two-thirds to override. The Senate veto was 49-14 against the veto and in favor of the bill.

Elsewhere on the legislative scene:

- The House approved and sent to the Senate 56-12 a bill to amend the landlord-tenant laws, providing among other things that a landlord must inform tenant of his reasons within 30 days if he keeps a security deposit.
- House members also approved and sent to the Senate 50-48 a bill providing for fixed-term criminal sentences despite contentions in debate that portions of the measure are unconstitutional.

— Taxpayers lashed in a House committee a constitutional proposal to allow regional airport authorities to issue revenue bonds but sent to the floor with approval a bill providing for property tax exemptions on portions of wildlife habitat.

— On a 4-3 party line vote the House Ways and Means Committee introduced a resolution freezing some 40 state employees' salaries which are more than 15 per cent above prevailing rates for similar work in private industry.

Magic Valley Memorial hospital re-states major protective policies

From time to time as the number of patients increase and medical treatment becomes more complex, safety policies have been adopted by Magic Valley Memorial Hospital to insure optimum care and safety levels in the hospital. Major policies that affect patient care are stated herein for general public knowledge. The hospital believes that a restrictive policy should be adopted only when necessary, but those policies should be enforced.

The general visiting hours of the hospital are 1:00 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. to 8:00 p.m. Obstetrics and intensive care have special visiting hours. Visiting hours will remain unchanged but will be more strictly enforced in the future. In order for each patient to receive the nursing care required, visiting hours must be closely observed. Only immediate family members should visit a patient on the day of surgery. Anyone with a respiratory infection should not visit a hospital patient. The hospital recognizes that a brief cheerful visit is a stimulus to recovery.

To avoid the loss of personal property, the hospital recommends patients scheduled to enter the hospital not bring money or personal items of value such as rings, watches, or other jewelry to the hospital. Patients admitted on an emergency basis may have valuables placed in the hospital's safe for security. Otherwise, the hospital is not responsible for loss by theft or misplacement. If the patient is not capable of checking his money and valuables, an immediate member or responsible person may do this for him. Patient valuables should be claimed and taken home as soon as possible. A minimum amount of money should be kept by the patient necessary only for the purchase of personal items such as newspapers or sundries.

Patients may not use personally owned line operated electrical appliances such as TV's, radios, razors, hair dryers, curling irons, and other appliances. Battery operated units are acceptable but may not be recharged in the patient care area. This restriction is necessary to prevent accidents to the patient or other persons. It is also necessary in order to prevent interference with hospital sensitive electrical equipment such as heart rate monitors, ultrasound equipment, etc. Hospital TV sets are available through the hospital auxiliary.

Smoking is allowed only in the lobby, snack bar, cafeteria, and lounges. Smoking has been proven to be one of the most prevalent causes of hospital fires. To many ill patients, tobacco smoke is especially irritating. A patient may smoke in his room under certain circumstances when no other patient will become ill or uncomfortable or where medical circumstances will permit. Otherwise, smoking is prohibited in the hospital. A long standing rule of the hospital does not allow the sale of tobacco products on the premises. Advertisement

States should unite over water problems

In a desperate attempt to undo the dryness God hath wrought, the Washington State Senate has approved $125,000 for a cloud seeding project to offset the worst drought in four decades.

As a response to the Washington cloud seeding bill, Atty. Gen. Wayne Kidwell has warned of a possible lawsuit against Washington because it is trying to get all the rain for itself.

Kidwell's intentions surely are good.

But the attorney general had better be careful in his haste to threaten lawsuits over rain water.

In a dry water year Idaho may well do a bit of hoarding of its own.

Upstream dams on the Snake River could be filled to capacity and then held at capacity all summer to protect Idaho's irrigators.

According to Gen. John Evans, Idaho is not compelled to release water from the upstream dams for use in Washington.

Remember, the Snake River in Idaho flows into the Columbia River just inside the Washington-Idaho border.

Trying to limit the boundaries of the Northwest drought to the boundaries of any state is ridiculous.

Washington's legislators are being as shortsighted as Kidwell if they think they can monopolize rainfall.

Efforts to monopolize rainfall or stream flow is dangerous to all the states gasping under the sunny skies.

The stakes are too high for particular states to act like tiny fiefdoms with couids hanging over them or with diggs built at their borders.

If there's legislation which should be enacted to minimize the effects of a dry water year is should be in the form of a multi-state resolution drawing states together to manage resources.

Idaho, Oregon, Washington and western Montana share the same drainages which cannot be subdivided along state boundaries.

Real oddity

There have been a lot of freaky things happening around the world this year such as it being warmer in Alaska some days than in Miami, Florida. And resorts have no snow, while you could ski on the roads of Cincinnati.

But perhaps the most unusual happening in recent months has been the announcement by the Postal Service that it showed a $36.2 million surplus for the period from Oct. 9 to Dec. 3, 1976.

In July-September the Postal service also had a surplus, for the first time, of $15 million.

News of the surplus may be good for postal users, which includes almost all of us. It means that there might not be an increase in the cost of mailing for the remainder of the year, because it takes ten months for an increase to go into effect and the next meeting of the board of governors is not until March of this year.

For many of us who can still remember when there was such a thing as a penny-postcard this is welcome news.

The service now expects to finish this fiscal year with a deficit of $500 million rather than one like last fiscal year of $1.1 billion. And while $500 million in deficit isn't peanuts — if you will pardon the expression — it does reflect a wholesome trend in postal management.

The postal department and the present Postal Service have had a long and rocky financial history with no solutions to its problems coming to hand.

Postmaster General Benjamin F. Bailar and the millions of workers in the system are to be congratulated on the surplus. Perhaps it can be maintained in the future.

Now, Otto Awards

N.Y. Times Service

The Otto Awards are given today for the first time since 1966. They are named in memory of Dr. Otto von Auserel, the Nazi absent-minded professor, who, after discovering in 1935 how to make the atomic bomb, forgot to mention it to Hitler. In his spirit, the Otto is awarded to persons who have served humanity by failing to do something that would have made the world a worse place. No awards have been made in the past 10 years because, during that period, nobody anywhere neglected the slightest opportunity to do his or her worst. This year's prize winners are:

Hugo Newfield, of South Mercer, N.D. Jaded by the normal sexual excesses which had become commonplace with the full flowering of the sexual revolution, Newfield labored two years in his remote prairie laboratory to invent a new sexual excess. His invention required parties indulging in the new excess to acquire special equipment which included 10 pounds of salt-water taffy and a large electrical generator. When Newfield proposed to test his invention on his lab assistant, Igor, the old gentleman fled in terror, exclaiming that Newfield had become insane. This so depressed Newfield that he planted dynamite in his laboratory and blew it up.

Omar Tweed, of Custor, Ford, Mo. For 45 years a neighborhood druggist, Tweed had become outraged at the rise of the giant big-city chains and the resulting decline in neighborhood drugstore sales. He decided that the consciousness of all Americans had to be raised if the neighborhood drugstore was to be treated again with dignity. Accordingly, he planned to lead a terrorist group: made up of desperate neighborhood druggists, who would commit hijackings, bombings and kidnappings to draw public attention to their plight. Tweed abandoned his scheme after Mrs. Tweed pointed out that he was too rheumatic to fire a machine gun from a squatting position.

Elsie Staines, of Bayonne, N.J. Miss Staines was being courted by Merle Crozer, a brilliant young computer designer, who told her that without her at his side for the rest of his life, he would never be able to create a computer that would enable mankind, at the touch of a button, to recover and look at every television show ever produced.

Argus Meljaden, of Washington, D.C. A notorious gigolo in Washington social circles, Meljaden was approached by a literary agent with a multimillion-dollar contract for a full-length account of his life. Congressmen's wives really did in the afternoon while Congressmen were at the office. Meljaden had almost completed the book when he realized that if it was published, he would have to appear on TV talk shows all over the country to promote its sale. Having suffered agonies of stage fright, since his third-grade class play, in which he had starred as Casanova and been ruthlessly panned by the critics, Meljaden burned the manuscript.

Mitzi Beeswacks, of Wen, Del. Mrs. Beeswacks is a music teacher in the Wen elementary-school system. After her third year on the job, she went into a deep depression at the discovery that almost none of her pupils were able to appreciate Scarlatti, or even Beethoven. Her first impulse was to write an angry book that would arouse the nation to the deprivation of its children. She got only as far as the title — "Why Johnny Can't Hear Haydn" — when she concluded that writing a book would be useless, since Johnny couldn't read and she submitted instead to psychiatric therapy.

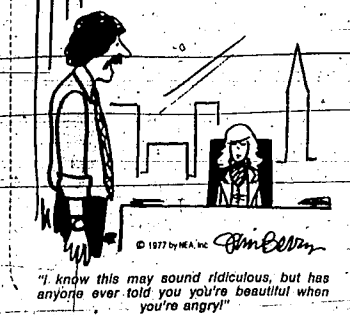

Hans Adams and Carl Jaggars, of the Bronx, N.Y. This joint award to two young street muggers stems from their response to an incident in midtown Manhattan last spring. After mugging a distinguished gentleman, they discovered in their loot a mystifying set of papers. After close study, they realized that these were the only blueprints in existence for a massive construction project that would make San Francisco look exactly like Third Avenue.

"We should give it back," said Adams. "I know," said Jaggars. Instead, without further hesitation they tossed it into the Harlem River.

Guntler Royalton, of Lapwing, Tenn. The janitor in a giant fake-food laboratory, Royalton watched for years while scientists toiled to develop the instant lamb chop. When they had perfected it — a secret formula of mixed styrene, elm ashes and finely ground garters — everyone went home and forgot to look it up. Spying it, Royalton started to put it in the safe, then changed his mind and tasted it. Immediately, he poured the powder down the sink and ate the secret formula.

Berry's World

The project has been controversial in the newspaper world. Some editors have criticized it as setting a bad precedent because a joint approach eliminates normal journalistic competition, and others have said they doubted

'Bolles report' due from journalists

© 1977 N.Y. Times News Service

PHOENIX — On an upper floor of the Adams Hotel in downtown Phoenix, an unusual group of journalists, after four months of research, have begun writing a series of articles that they say will expose a deep penetration by organized crime in Arizona.

Assembled as a team in response to the car-bombing murder last June of Don Bolles, an Arizona Republic reporter, more than 20 reporters from almost as many newspapers participated in the project. It was organized by a group called Investigative Reporters and Editors.

The journalists plan to publish a series of articles in their newspapers beginning March 15. Several participants have predicted that the articles will document widespread criminal activities by organized crime, sometimes in alliance with prominent Arizona figures and businessmen, in the Southwest.

"We are all very tired, but we feel we have accomplished what we set out to do," Robert Greene, Suffolk County editor of Long Island's Newsday, who headed the team, told a group of Arizona journalists recently.

The project has been controversial in the newspaper world. Some editors have criticized it as setting a bad precedent because a joint approach eliminates normal journalistic competition, and others have said they doubted such a group of normally competitive, often egotistical reporters could or should be made to work as a unit.

Greene asserted that the team's published results will be so newsworthy that the concept will be vindicated. And he maintains that despite others' expectations, the journalists had worked smoothly and cooperatively in a team.

"We have had discussions, occasional arguments, but nothing boyed what you would drop their competitive side, writing for the files."

Team members were required by Greene to sign an agreement promising not to discuss the project with other people — a rare kind of censorship for newsmen.

Nevertheless, some of the reporters have discussed their experience. They said that maintaining continuity as members of the team have come and gone since October had proved a problem. But, they said that with minor exceptions — one member is said to have left early over unhappiness about the team approach — the group has been compatible and worked well together.

They credited it largely to Greene's administrative and journalistic abilities in weaving the efforts together. Greene had used the team approach to reporting major news stories at Newsday, where he was instrumental in the papers winning two Pulitzer Prizes.

His method, places heavy emphasis on assembling large files of information from many sources, including interviews, public records and previously published material. Reporters are assigned to delve into specific aspects of the overall subject — in this case, organized crime in Arizona — and each bit of information they collect is reported on a memorandum.

The memorandums are cross-indexed and filed accordingly, and Greene routes copies to other reporters who may be working on related aspects of a topic. A microfilm system and several file clerks are used in the complex filing operation.

At Greene seized the thread of a major piece of new information emerging from the pattern of memorandums, he deploys reporters, like a battlefield commander, to increase emphasis on this topic. Each morning, the team assembles as a group to discuss the day's targets.

A general theory that members of organized crime from Chicago, Detroit, New York and other Eastern cities have moved into Arizona and in some cases formed alliances with local people and local financial institutions has been reported previously, in the New York Times and other publications.

It is common knowledge in Phoenix that the reporters have spent a considerable time investigating certain business activities of Robert Goldwater, the brother of Republican Senator Goldwater, the Senator himself, and the Senator's best friend, Harry Rosenzweig, a prominent businessman and Republican leader. But, the reporters declined to say how these men will figure in their articles, if they will at all.

The reporters say they are not attempting to investigate the murder of Bolles. But, in Greene's words, are attempting to "continue his work" and demonstrate that "when you try to kill a reporter, you'll have not only that paper to tangle with but also a geometrically increasing number of reporters."

Greene said that in addition to the reporters' salaries and expenses, contributed in most cases by their employers, financial aid for the project has been contributed by a number of individuals and groups and includes $20,000 from the Arizona Association of Industries, which is made up of many of this state's major manufacturers.

Although the reporters have begun to write their findings, they must now run a legal gauntlet — proving to legal advisers of their newspapers that the articles are accurate and not libelous.

Asked if he expected similar efforts in the future, Greene told the group of Arizona journalists: "It's successful, success has many imitators." He, the 47-year-old journalist added: "I know one thing — I will never do it again."

NEW YORK — Studies of oysters, clams and mussels that grow in scores of America's polluted coastal bays and rivers have disclosed cancer-like growths in a relatively large number of the shellfish, the National Marine Fisheries Service has reported.

The results of six independent studies of the bivalves are collected in the current issue of the Marine Fisheries Review, a journal of marine science published by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

The findings of the separate groups of marine biologists and pathologists determined that tumors that would be termed cancerous in man or warm-blooded animals were present in large numbers among the invertebrate mollusks studied.

The studies were made of bivalves collected from scores of bays, rivers, estuaries, and tributaries, most of them considered to be polluted in some degree, in the states of Washington, Oregon, Virginia, Delaware, Maryland, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Massachusetts and Maine.

The researchers found neoplasms, tumors with many of the characteristics of cancers such as the same cell structure, rapid cell division and other features, in numbers ranging from less than 1 per cent of the shellfish collected, in a few cases, to 15 per cent or higher in other samples. In some studies, it was found that the incidence was so high that they were epizootic — the equivalent of epidemics in human populations.

The findings are considered important by scientists because tumorous shellfish may be primary indicators or monitors of pollution that constitute the public to unsanitary, unhealthy or otherwise contaminated conditions in the nation's water areas.

The discovery of tumors in shellfish does not foreclose human consumption of these resources, according to the researchers. The danger in eating a tumorous clam or mussel depends on the amount of toxic substances it may contain, they point out.

In addition, most unhealthy shellfish show evidence of their condition, such as gaping shells, and are usually discarded. And cancer studies have shown that it is virtually impossible for humans to contract cancers from other species, especially involving such a wide species barrier as that separating man from clams.

The collective scientific studies of mollusks has disclosed that the relatively recent increase in the number of cancer-like growths may be an indicator of increased levels of toxic substances in the nation's waters in recent years.

According to Dr. Dante G. Scarpelli, professor of pathology at Northwestern University School of Medicine in Chicago, who helped to coordinate the collection and publication of the studies, a decade ago only a few cases of growths in shellfish were reported. But in the last few years they have been counted in large numbers.

In addition, Dr. Scarpelli said in a telephone interview, findings will help to determine how tumors grow in and affect the lower animals — invertebrates such as clams, mussels, oysters and scallops. Cancers in humans have been studied extensively but hardly any research has been done in the field of invertebrates, he added.

Time for involvement

Editor: Times-News:
Thank you for cutting down on the "those who rudely disrupted the public information meeting on the Twin Falls Comprehensive Plan." (Sunday Editorial, Feb. 13.)
For all their blabbing about protecting our constitutional rights, these self-appointed "saviors" of democracy made a mockery of the democratic process by usurping the public's right to learn about the comprehensive plan.
What is even more disturbing is that the public is not now any more enlightened about the plan than before the two informational meetings took place. It is questionable whether testimony presented at the forthcoming public hearing could be either constructive or accurate, reflect the informed views of the majority of citizens.

The planning council and planning staff should be commended for welcoming comments and criticism from interested groups and persons from the time of the plan's inception.

Now, however, public participation is more important than ever in this final phase of the planning process.

Perhaps more interest could be generated through increased publicity of public meetings or through contact with the social, civic and church groups in the county.

The more people become involved the better our comprehensive plan will be.

Heart Fund help thanked

Editor: Times-News:
This letter is written to express our appreciation to the people who have volunteered their time and efforts toward the Heart Fund Drive for 1977.

task, especially for the area chairmen who have found it so difficult to recruit people to do the door-to-door soliciting.

This requires on the average of one hour of one day out of 365. This hour is spent going door-to-door in their own neighborhoods for an organization that anyone regardless of age or race can benefit from.

The funds collected by these volunteers go toward developing new and more technical equipment that aids in initial diagnosis of heart disease, stroke, hypertension and blood vessel disease.

These funds also support the development of artificial heart valves and materials for synthetic artery grafts, creation of artificial pacemakers, introduction of coronary care units and education of doctors and nurses in acquiring new skills to work in and with each of the above.

Seventy-five per cent of the money contributed stays in Idaho to benefit the people here. The 25 per cent which goes to the national center is used for research awards and grants and for the development of professional and public health education and community service programs.

Unless you have had the experience of being an area chairman in soliciting the aid of their "reflective" neighbors, you have no idea of the frustration involved when you have called down a list of 42 people on a given street and 25 rudely turn you down and the other 7 weren't home.

Because the Idaho Heart Association is supported solely by contributions and receives no federal aid and is not a member of the United-Fund, the alternative to door-to-door solicitation to support the I D A H O — H E A R T ASSOCIATION.

The rewards and advantages far outweigh the inconvenience of a few hours of time well spent. There are very few families in Twin Falls who have not known someone who has been afflicted or been close to someone who died tragically of heart disease or stroke. These people will be the first to complain when there is no Heart Association to turn to.

Again our thanks go to the few people who graciously donated their time and energy this year and many times year after year.

If there should be any persons generous enough to be concerned about the existence of the Heart Association in the future, please contact us.

How to buy a wagon and drive home in a sportscar.

Simple. Just buy a Rabbit. For like a wagon, the Rabbit has a fold-down rear seat, giving you 19.4 cubic feet of cargo room. (Which, incidentally, is more room than you'll find in the trunk of a Cadillac Fleetwood.) And like a sports car, the Rabbit has incredible performance. With front-wheel drive, that literally pulls you around corners. And acceleration that takes you from 0 to 60 faster than a Jaguar XJ-6L or an Alfa Romeo GT.

Few cars in the world can give you all this room and performance.

And no other car — can give you all this room and performance plus 39 mpg on the highway and 25 in the city. (These are the impressive 1976 EPA estimates of what the Rabbit got with a standard transmission. Your mileage may vary, depending on how and where you drive, optional equipment and the condition of your car.) No matter which you're looking for — wagon or sportscar — you owe it to yourself to at least test drive the Rabbit before making up your mind. After all, how many other cars can you think of that give you the opportunity to drive home in both?

Teton suit ruled out

BOISE (UPI) — The State of Idaho cannot sue the federal government for damages as a result of the Teton Dam failure, Attorney General Wayne Kidwell said Wednesday.

Kidwell said the environmental and lands division of his office advised him that federal law prohibiting a lawsuit against the federal government without its permission "appears to block a civil lawsuit."

He added that criminal liability cannot be proved based on the "Independent Panel to Review the Cause of the Teton Dam Failure" report of Dec. 10.

"Unfortunately it does not appear a lawsuit against them directly would be successful, however, we will continue to monitor the activities of federal agencies in dealing with individuals and local units of government in Idaho," Kidwell said.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter said Wednesday Cuba may be ready to remove its troops from Angola, and a congressman said he was told in Havana the withdrawal is at least half-completed.

Carter said he would be willing to resume full diplomatic relations with Cuba once it withdraws its "mercenary" troops from southern Africa and fulfills a number of other conditions, including respect for human rights.

But Rep. John Bingham, D-N.Y., who talked with Premier Fidel Castro for seven hours last week, said

Castro expects the United States to meet some conditions, too. "The ball is in our court," Bingham said. The president made his comments during the question and answer period of a visit with Agriculture Department employees.

"I would very much like to see the Cubans remove their soldiers from Angola and let the Angolan natives make their own decisions about their government," he said.

"We've received information from indirect sources that Castro and Cuba have promised to remove those troops. And that would be a step toward full normalization of relationships with Angola."

The same things applies ultimately to the restoration of normal relationships with Cuba.

"If I can be convinced that Cuba wants to remove their aggravating influence from other countries in this hemisphere, we will participate in violence in nations across the oceans, will recommend the former relationship that existed in Cuba before human rights, then I would be willing to move toward normalizing relations with Cuba as well."

Shale oil 'feasible' now

DENVER (UPI) — Two energy specialists today announced production of crude oil from the rich oil shale deposits of Colorado, Utah and Wyoming was commercially feasible at current world oil prices.

The assessment was made by Harry Pforsheimer, director of the Paraho Development Corp. and John B. Jones Jr., president of Development Engineering Inc. The men said they tested an oil shale production process in the past three years under a privately funded $10 million program at the federally owned-Paolis oil shale facility near Rifle, Colo.

They presented a 1,500-page report on their findings to representatives of the Energy Research and Development Administration and the Office of Naval Petroleum and Oil Shale Reserves.

The men said the major obstacles to initiating an oil shale industry in the United States were domestic oil shale price controls and unrealistic environmental restrictions. Pforsheimer said there were 600 billion barrels of estimated recoverable oil shale reserves which is about equal to the declining world wide reserves of natural crude oil.

The program proved the Paraho process works successfully and appears to be a key to initiating the recovery of shale oil from the deposits in this tri-state area. Pforsheimer said.

Defies law

Father 'counts on the Lord'

MNNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Jacob Hatanpaa, 41, who served time for burglary and later found religion, says he'll "count on the Lord" to keep one of his six children out of a foster home in a fight over whether Hatanpaa has the right to tutor the child at home instead of sending him to school. "The Lord always works things out the right way," he said. Although Minnesota law says children must attend school from their 7th to 16th birthdays, Hatanpaa protested that public schools undermine the children's religious teaching and that some students use drugs. A sheriff and social worker went to Hatanpaa's house last week to take Eddie, 12, and Rick, just turned 16, for placement in a foster home. A judge had ordered that the children attend a school in Grand Marais, but the woodsman said no. "I talked it over with the Lord and the sheriff and social worker were coming to get the boys and He told be, 'Just tell them you haven't given them permission to do that.'"

"I did, and they went away," Hatanpaa said. "The stocky, blond northwoodsman talked about his situation Wednesday when he brought his wife, Barbara, and children to the Twin Cities on a monthly visit to pick up supplies for their big house in the woods near Schroeder, Minn. After the state charged the parents with neglect, Cook County Court Judge Walter Egeland ordered them to send the boys to school by Friday, although Rick's case is being dropped because he's now 16. "Neglect?" Hatanpaa said. "We're teaching the children at home and they're doing fine. If schools don't do the job you (have a constitutional right to do it) yourself, thank the Lord."

Jacob and Barbara tutor all their children. Besides Rick and Eddie, there are Sarah, 3;

SANTA FE, N.M. (UPI) — The energy boom town of Gallup, on the edge of the giant Navaho Indian reservation, is littered with drunks and the city blames the problem on the legislature. The district attorney, mayor, and a senator have appealed for authority to hold drunks up to 72 hours before releasing them to their families. Drunks from the reservation pour out of the jail in 12 hours, to return to the more than 40 bars and taverns in the sprawling boom city. "We could let the police tend to police work and ignore the people. We could let them lie on the sidewalks and streets. Let them freeze, be run over and die. We can't do that. They are our guests and need protection." The legislature made public intoxication a noncriminal offense in 1973 and set a 12-hour maximum to jail drunks. "The police spend 80 percent of their time with alcohol problems at a cost of $700,000," Junker said. "The legislature has the responsibility because it set this 12-hour limit. We need 48 or 72 hours so there can be some rehabilitation and the person taken to their families. They won't accept them if they are drunk." The committee held the bill to incorporate it will others setting an extended jail time limit, rehabilitation, and a $100,000 appropriation to return the sobered individuals to their homes within a 100-mile radius of Gallup.

House probe panel fuss boils

© Newhouse News Service
 WASHINGTON — Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., and other top House leaders are now being called into the boiling dispute over control of the House Select Committee on Assassinations. Rep. Richardson Preyer, D-N.C., ranking Democrat on the committee, said he will ask the House leadership to intervene to resolve the dispute between Chairman Henry B. Gonzalez, D-Tex., and other committee members over Gonzalez's insistence that Chief Counsel Richard A. Sprague be summarily discharged. O'Neill appointed Gonzalez chairman of the committee two weeks ago after the House voted to continue the committee's twin probes into the murders of President John F. Kennedy and the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., which Sprague has been directing since October. The dispute boiled over Wednesday at the first meeting of the committee since Gonzalez became chairman. Gonzalez repeatedly branded Sprague a "rat-lesnake" and accused Preyer of attempting to seize the chairmanship. Gonzalez made those charges after the committee voted down his effort to force a showdown on his week-old order that Sprague be ousted as counsel. At the Wednesday meeting, the committee also revoated a set of rules proposed by Gonzalez for the conduct of the committee's investigation, transferring much exclusive control over procedures and other elements of the probe from the chairman to a majority of the committee. Gonzalez has been claiming the support of House Majority Leader James Wright, D-Tex., in the dispute. But Wright said in an interview that he had not taken sides and was awaiting "a set of employment" that Sprague "facts" before doing so.

Pay hike foes plan protest

Opposition spreading

 FORMER CIA agent Phillip Agee has been ordered to leave Britain for allegedly violating national security. An American reporter, Mark Hosenball, was also tossed out for the same reason. (UPI)

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Thwarted in every effort to get a roll call vote on a proposed $13,000 annual raise for members of Congress, opponents of the salary hike planned at least a symbolic protest today before the House adjourned for the week. The raise will boost the pay for senators and congressmen from $41,600 to $57,500 and raise salaries for federal judges and top level government employees, including the vice president and Cabinet members, an average of 23 percent. It takes effect Sunday without a specific vote of disapproval. The Senate earlier tabled a disapproval resolution, thereby preventing a vote, so the House is the only hope of opponents who object to the large pay hike or believe the salary increase should take effect only if a public vote is held. The House was scheduled to adjourn for a three-day weekend today after hearing a speech from visiting Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo, and there was virtually no chance for a resolution disapproving the pay hike to reach the floor for a vote. So opponents decided to make a last-ditch protest by forcing a roll call vote on adjournment after making it clear they consider a vote for adjournment to be a vote in favor of the pay raise.

 BRITISH Secretary of State for Trade Edmund Dell said in London Wednesday Britain and France are considering suing the New York Port Authority to gain landing rights for the supersonic Concorde airliner in New York. (UPI)

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Carter Administration moved today to quell growing Senate opposition to Paul Warnke as U.S. strategic arms negotiator, denying a critic's suggestion the former Pentagon official will be a "disarmament czar." White House Press Secretary Jody Powell and a spokesman for the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency rejected allegations by Sen. Richard Schweiker, R-Pa., that President Carter promised Warnke the post of chairman of the National Security Council's arms control review committee. Carter's nomination of Warnke as U.S. strategic arms negotiator and director of the arms control agency has encountered conservative opposition in the Senate.

Getting out

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Watergate burglar E. Howard Hunt, 2-510,000 fine, paid, leaves prison next Wednesday. The U.S. Parole Commission made the announcement Wednesday of Hunt's pending departure — two days earlier than originally set so he can appear in court on a private case. Hunt was serving a 30-month-to-eight-years sentence for his role in the June, 1972, burglary of the Democratic National Committee headquarters in Washington's Watergate complex.

Vance, Egyptian minister confer

CAIRO Egypt (UPI) — Secretary of State Cyrus Vance opened talks today with Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy — who had just met with Palestinian guerrilla chief Yasser Arafat on current Middle East peace efforts.

Vance, calling Egyptian President Anwar Sadat a "man of vision," arrived in Cairo on the second leg of a six-day Middle East tour with an Israeli request to find out whether the Arab world might agree to limited peace negotiations.

Fahmy welcomed Vance at the airport and the two men began talks a short time later at Nile-side Foreign Ministry building in the heart of Cairo.

Fahmy had met earlier in the day with a Palestinian guerrilla delegation led by Arafat, chairman of the PLO's Liberation Organization, who arrived late Wednesday for his second visit to Egypt in three days.

PLO officials insisted the visit was not related to Vance's mission.

But the Middle East News Agency said Fahmy and Arafat "exchanged views on Middle East developments and the current contacts with the foreign ministers of the major powers and U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim, which are aimed at breaking the stalemate."

Crash kills Amin 'foes'

KAMPALA, Uganda (UPI) — Two government ministers and an Anglican archbishop, accused of plotting to overthrow President Idi Amin were killed in a traffic accident while trying to overpower an arresting officer, a government spokesman said today.

The victims were Janani Lumum, archbishop of Uganda, Burundi and Rwanda; Land and Water Resources Minister Lt. Col. Erivava Orvema and Internal Affairs Minister Obeth Oluubi.

The three, implicated by Amin in an abortive coup plot, were arrested late Wednesday but Radio Uganda announced at the time this was only provisional pending a full investigation.

Nuke test talks near

GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI) — A Swedish arms negotiator said today Sweden has received indications the United States and Soviet Union will be ready shortly for concrete negotiations on the banning of all nuclear tests.

Inga Thorsen, Swedish negotiator at the 30-nation Disarmament Conference, said bilateral contacts between the two nuclear superpowers must now be transformed into multilateral negotiations.

"Informal talks that we have had with several states indicate a readiness to begin such negotiations within the disarmament conference in the near future," she told the conference at its second meeting since opening its 1977 session Tuesday.

Dutch dock strike spreads

THE HAGUE, The Netherlands (UPI) — An estimated 2,000 more dock workers walked off their jobs today at Rotterdam, nearly doubling the world's largest port.

A management spokesman said Rotterdam was now 85 per cent incapacitated.

The action followed a stalemate in talks Wednesday to settle Holland's worst strike since World War II.

Jerome eyes drought aid

JEROME — Jerome City councilmen are doing their bit to help residents fight the drought.

The council agreed Tuesday night to advance to March 1 the rate on water metered sprinkling rates for lawns go into effect. Previously the rate did not begin until April 1.

The change was made in response to residents' who say their lawns and shrubs are dying for lack of moisture.

Councilmen rejected a claim for $20,000 from Mike Meyer, who wants the city to refund $50 for a bond he forfeited last summer when he was arrested by city police on check-bounce charges. He also seeks $25,000 in general damages because of the arrest.

City Atty. Bill Hart advised the council the malpractice claim, but noted "the city probably will be sued." The claim was sent to the city's insurance firm.

Meyer's embezzlement case was never brought to court because of insufficient evidence. He was arrested in connection with the loss of rent money from a local apartment complex where he was employed. He told police the bag containing money was stolen from his parked car while he was having a cup of coffee.

In other business, the council approved a request from Richard Critser, land surveyor, to submit the final plat for a new subdivision on North Fillmore, adjacent to Jefferson Grade School. Critser said he needed the letter to give to the Idaho Health Department in order to receive that agency's approval.

Sixteen single dwellings and two multi-family dwellings are planned in the subdivision by developer Lewis Rowland.

Verle Sullivan, Jerome, told the council the mail drop boxes the Jerome Post Office has moved to the city parking lot next to the post office should have been placed on the library property instead.

Auction date set for Ranch units

SUN VALLEY — The public auction of 93 condominiums at the Ranch at Sun Valley has been set for April 2 at 11 a.m., according to project officials.

A four-week-long open inspection of all condominium units will begin on March 3, according to Charles Biederman, project manager of the auction.

Also, on March 3 an intensive advertising campaign to publicly announce the auction will begin in Idaho newspapers. Biederman said.

Then, on March 18, the campaign will be expanded to include out-of-state newspapers. Advertisements will be placed in the Wall Street Journal and other papers circulating throughout California, Oregon and Washington, according to Biederman.

"We've had an amazing initial response," Biederman said about the planned auction of the $4.5 million condominium development. "People have been calling and asking for information and we think there should be some real bargains."

Biederman said 60 of the 93 units in the development will be sold with furnishings on an "as is and where is" basis.

Farm

Fund impact on farms under study

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland says he plans to ask the Internal Revenue Service probably later this week to delay approval of a controversial farmland mutual fund until his department can complete a study of the possible impact on family farmers.

Bergland said the proposed $50 million fund, sponsored by the Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust Co. of Chicago, "causes me great concern." He said he might ask President Carter to back changes in tax laws if studies due for completion in July show that such funds "threaten" the survival of family farming.

"It might be the forerunner of a much bigger investment industry which could attract billions of dollars into buying farmland," the agriculture secretary said.

Some critics of the plan had said widespread use of such funds could drive up land prices and threaten the survival of family farming.

Bergland, talking to reporters Tuesday, raised another possible concern.

If Congress approves currently debated plans to base future farm price supports on farm production costs, "we could be guaranteeing (investors in farmland mutual funds) an 8 per cent return," Bergland said.

The Agriculture Secretary conceded the IRS might tell him it can't hold up its ruling on whether the proposed Ag-Land Trust — which sponsors plan to sell to pension funds — qualifies for tax-exempt investments.

And the Agriculture Department's study might show the fund and its possible successors pose no threat to family farming, he said.

But if officials conclude there is a threat, "we might recommend to the President that the government should support changes in tax policies," he said.

Under questioning, Bergland said the issues raised by the proposed Ag-Land Trust fund were complex.

Congress could change tax laws under which the fund is seeking tax-exempt status so it can be sold to pension funds, he noted. And states can adopt laws—banning corporate farming in an effort to prevent sales of land to such investment plans.

But could the federal government adopt a nationwide ban on purchases of land by investment groups?

Bergland said Agriculture lawyers are examining that question, but "I doubt we could do it on constitutional grounds. If we could do it on farmland, (a ban) could get into housing and other areas... it would be messy," he said.

The agriculture secretary defended his decision to ask the IRS to hold up approval of the Ag-Land Trust plan pending studies on "impact" issues not directly related to whether the trust meets current IRS requirements.

"I think it's perfectly proper" to request a delay until we've had a chance to look at the ultimate impact if this trend develops unchecked," he said.

Earlier, several members of Congress and a number of farm organization spokesmen had asked both Bergland and Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal to delay approval of the Ag-Land fund pending studies.

Hearings on the issue before a House Agriculture subcommittee headed by Rep. Howard Niles, D-Minn., were scheduled to open here Friday.

Sponsors of the plan have insisted that, far from hurting family farmers, it would help them by making farms available for rental. A Continental Illinois Trust spokesman was quoted recently as pledging that in buying farms, the fund would avoid getting into bidding wars which would drive up land prices.

The sponsor of the

Bear River plan OK'd

CHEYENNE (UPI) — The Wyoming Senate has passed legislation approving the compact allocating more water from the Bear River to the states of Utah, Idaho and Wyoming.

The proposal, similar to bills introduced in legislatures of the other two states involved in the compact, now goes to the House for debate.

The sponsor of the legislation, Sen. Hight Profile, D-South Lincoln, said the additional allocations would come from the upper watershed of the Bear River, located an area where three states join. The change would increase certain water entitlements for Wyoming and Utah by 7,000 acre feet annually and would grant Idaho storage rights to an additional 4,500 acre feet per year.

Nevadans set meet on drought

RENO — Recommendations aimed at coping with possible drought impact on Nevada agriculture are to be ready by the end of February.

The recommendations are being prepared by the Drought Crisis Committee, College of Agriculture, University of Nevada. The committee was formed on request of U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland. It is to be functional should the present promise of an upcoming drought year materialize.

The committee will next meet on Feb. 25, and hopes to have recommendations ready for review and discussion.

"We hope to have recommendations including alternative approaches and options available to Nevada growers and livestockmen that may help them get through a crisis year with as little pain as possible," said Dr. Dewayne Gilbert, state cooperative extension agronomist and chairman of the committee.

Syrup threatened

MONTEPELIER, Vt. (UPI) — Vermont's multimillion dollar maple sugar industry faces a triple threat this winter from weather, nature, and human error.

State officials say with sugaring time only a short time away, reports of damaged trees have been surfacing across Vermont. The cause of the damage is being investigated by a technical team.

Vermont supplies over one-third of the nation's maple syrup.

Brent Tullion of the Vermont Forests and Parks Department said drought, overgrazing, and cattle grazing around tree roots are among possibilities for the trees.

Idaho cows' milk yield sets record

BOISE (UPI) — The average output per milk cow in the state was at a record high for the month of January but was down by 20 pounds from the previous month, the Idaho Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said today.

Idaho milk production totaled 121 million pounds during January of this year which was a two per cent increase from the 1976 output.

The average output per cow was 895 and the number of milk cows decreased by 1,000 from December to January, the agency said.

The December butter production was down by some 300,000 pounds from a year ago but American cheese output increased 12 per cent.

Ice cream production during December showed a 3,000-gallon hike, the reporting service said.

Abby

By Abigail Van Buren
©1977 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I see so many letters in your column from women who are in love with married men and are waiting for them to get a divorce. Take it from a woman who was married nine years on a married man. No matter how much he loves you and how little feeling he has for his wife, one thing will always hold them together: money!

My married lover begged me to be patient until he could work it out so we could marry. Of course, he was never able to work it out.

Married men will stall because their children "need" them, or their wives are "emotionally unstable" or "physically ill." But if they told the truth, they would admit that they stay married because divorce is too expensive.

Abby, why do these men lie through their teeth?

NINE YEARS WASTED

Money speaks

DEAR WASTED: Not all men lie through their teeth. Many have paid through the nose.

DEAR ABBY: My grandmother died recently and left me her collection of antique clocks from all over the world. Most of them are in working order.

I hate to appear ungrateful, but I don't have any special interest in clocks, and I have had several good offers from clock collectors. Some members of my family have told others that we should keep the collection in the family, but no one in the family has offered to buy it from me.

Any suggestions?

TICK TOCK

DEAR TICK: Tell your family that the collection is for sale, and offer it to them first. If you get no takers, sell the clocks to a dealer and tell your family that it took too long to wind up the estate.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 22-year-old unmarried woman and I'm not bad-looking. A delivery man for my office, who comes about once a week, has shown an interest in me. About two weeks ago he brought me a box of candy. I accepted it, but in a nice way tried to get it across to him that I wasn't romantically interested in him. It didn't seem to put him off because the next week he brought me some flowers.

I really enjoyed getting these presents, Abby, but I feel guilty—like maybe I owe him something. Do I?

Maybe I shouldn't have accepted the gifts in the first place, but I didn't want to hurt his feelings. He is really nice, but he's not my type, and I have no intention of going out with him. So what should I do if he asks me?

STUMPED

DEAR STUMPED: Turn him down diplomatically and don't feel guilty. When he gets the message that you aren't interested in him (and he will), he'll quit bringing you presents.

Enjoy program

READING for enjoyment is part of the special Buhl school program to improve student skills and attitude. Janie Lunte and Deanne Stansell seem to be enjoying it.

Buhl students 'all booked up'

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

BUHL.—There's a lot more reading going on in the Buhl schools this year.

According to most reports it is being enjoyed more.

Now in its first full year, a special secondary reading program for seventh, eighth and ninth graders involves about 450 students—the total enrollment in these three grades. It is not reserved for those with reading problems but is designed to improve all reading skills and habits regardless of the student's present degree of ability.

Karen Fraley, curriculum director for the Buhl school district, said the plan is patterned after a reading program in Nampa, but it has been revised and tailored specifically to the needs of Buhl students.

Mrs. Fraley is most enthusiastic about the program as are the two teachers and two teachers aides who work with it.

"We expect to see some real results in a few years but it is too early yet to know what it will do for us except we do know most of the students enjoy it and appear to be showing reading improvements," Mrs. Fraley said.

Two years ago Mrs. Fraley and other school officials went to Nampa to review the program there. The Nampa plan was used as a basis with many revisions and changes she and teachers felt would better adapt the program to Buhl. A proposal was written up by Mrs. Fraley and submitted for federal funding under Title 3 of the Elementary Secondary Education Act (ESE). The plan was approved and the district received a federal grant of $15,000 to purchase material and equipment and launch the program.

It is designed, under Title 3 regulations, to have the school district continue such programs after the original grant. The Buhl district will be taking it over in the future.

There are two phases to the program. One is developing reading skills and the other is reading for enjoyment. All seventh and eighth graders participate in both portions of the program while ninth graders concentrate only on improving skills.

Before the program was instigated all students were tested to determine their level of reading skills and their attitudes toward books and reading.

"Attitude is an important part of this program and we have already seen some improvement in students attitudes toward reading classes," said Pauline Harper, teacher in charge of the reading skills center.

While some of the equipment used in the program is most sophisticated, some techniques simply encourage students to select books they enjoy and read them. Each student keeps his own records of books read. Teachers and the teacher aides check these records and the student's knowledge of the books to determine the reading has in fact been accomplished.

In the skills center the student utilizes audio and visual equipment purchased with the grant. Head phones, video screens and cassette can be used on an individual basis.

Students are given a great deal of freedom of choice and make many of their own decisions as to which of the facilities will assist them the most. Tests are frequently given to keep a record of the student's progress and developing needs.

A speed control reader is used to speed up reading pages, but not until the student attains 80 per cent retention of reading material at one speed is the speed increased. The student's listening ability is also tested in the program.

A perceptual accuracy test is given through a screen and projector which flashes a set of numbers or digits before the student for a fraction of a second. The student then recalls as many of the numbers or digits as possible and practices until his accuracy improves. This skill helps in reading traffic signs and similar quick notations.

In the reading for enjoyment, students play reading games and conduct contests, work with a television camera and television broadcast unit to illustrate what they have read. A skill will be enacted from given reading material and filmed. It can be shown at the same time it is filmed or can be played back later for all of the class. Including the actors, for review and criticism.

Paperback books are made available in the reading for enjoyment classes.

"We find students are much more eager to read the paperbacks than the hardback formal looking books," Mrs. Fraley said.

Annette Buckendorf conducts the reading for enjoyment classes and Pauline Harper the reading skills class. Lynn Martens and Chris Wehler are teachers aides.

your health

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb—

Does Aspirin (aspirin with Minox) have anything to do with minor strokes—speech mix-ups?

After my first such attack, the doctor told me I was too old for a neurologist to accept. Then he gave me Aspirin without changing the subject. After reading the Aspirin label I assume it is to replace Tylenol for my arthritis.

My father's family died of major strokes. My mother had minor strokes, the year she died at nearly a hundred. So I may have years to go yet and wish to avoid crippling strokes and senility.

Too many doctors are too busy to bother with older people. Could you take time to help me avoid a crippling stroke? I do not recall reading about strokes in your column and would greatly appreciate any help you can give me. I am totally alone.

Aspirin not cause

Dear Reader—
I suspect that your doctor gave you Aspirin because the aspirin in it helps prevent blood clotting. Some small strokes are caused by small parts of bloodclots breaking off of larger clots in arteries in the neck and seeding the brain.

The aspirin helps to prevent the clots and may prevent strokes. A national study is under way on the benefits and dangers of using aspirin for this purpose and to prevent heart attacks.

Tylenol does not have this effect and is not used for that purpose. So I suspect your doctor was doing more than just replacing Tylenol with Aspirin as a pain reliever.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 8-8, Aspirin and Related Medicines so you can learn more about the effects of these common medicines beyond simple pain relief. There is a limit to how many of these you or anyone should take. Women should avoid any of these medicines before childbirth. Others who want more information on these medicines can send 50 cents and a long-stamped, self-addressed envelope for the issue. Write to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 20020.

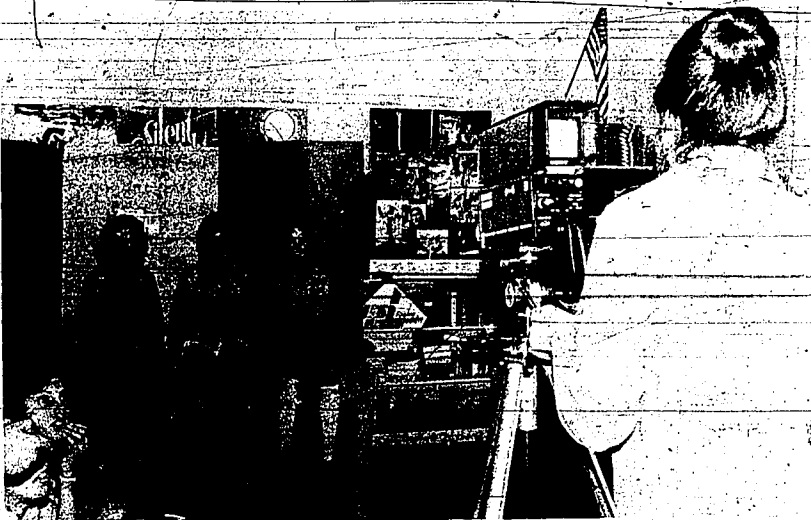

I hope that doctors are not taking the attitude that older people, like yourself don't need help. I know many good neurologists who do see patients in consultation, like yourself, to resolve what the basic problem is and usually send them back to the family doctor.

It is a mistake to assume a person will only live a few more years because of the life-expectancy tables. Some people live very productive lives for years, as in the case of your mother. Adolphus of Germany was still chancellor in his 90s and was vigorous until he died of pneumonia. In many other cultures people commonly live from 80 to 100 years of age. In fact, the average lifespan of the first seven presidents of the United States after George Washington was 81 years.

The best thing that you can do to avoid strokes are to same things we do to avoid heart attacks: Controlling blood pressure seems to be of great importance. You can do this by keeping your weight down. Stay on a diet moderately low in fat and cholesterol, don't smoke and get some regular exercise, such as walking each day. This may stretch your years of enjoyment and help you prevent that crippling stroke for many years. I am also sending you The Health Letter number 2-5, on strokes to give you more information. And may you live to be a hundred and enjoy each day. (Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

Skit televised

TEACHER aide Chris Welch televises a skit in the "Reading for Enjoyment" classes at the Buhl Junior High School. The equipment is used in testing understanding, retention and thoroughness of the students reading ability. A television set is used to show the performance, immediately or later for class review.

Ability builder

Works at own speed

SPEED control is developed by a Buhl student. The projector at left flashes a line on the small screen, upper left, and moves at a given speed, increasing as student retention and reading ability increase.

FDA orders pretzel recall

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Consumers were cautioned Wednesday that 19,000 cases of pretzels, some distributed nationwide, are sprinkled with lye crystals that can burn the tongue, mouth and throat.

The Food and Drug Administration announced recall of the pretzels made by Pepperidge Farm Inc. and distributed under six brand names, along with 37,000 cases still in the company's stock.

The lye crystals look like the salt crystals used on pretzels, the agency said in issuing a list of the contaminated brands which consumers should return to the place of purchase.

Pretzels with the lye crystal were made at the Pepperidge Farm plant in New Holland, Pa., which now is shut down, the FDA said.

It said that earlier this month, two consumers in Detroit "received chemical burns to the mouth and tongue from eating lye crystals that were in the pretzel bags. Neither consumer was hospitalized and both have recovered."

"Subsequent FDA examination of unopened pretzel packages has revealed the presence of sodium hydroxide lye crystals."

The announcement explained that lye and water are used to "give pretzels their glazed look. This process, properly carried out, is safe because pretzels absorb sodium hydroxide and the chemical is converted to sodium carbonate, a harmless substance, when the pretzels are baked."

"In this case the sodium hydroxide apparently was not mixed properly. As a result some of the chemical did not dissolve completely in the solution and subsequently got into the packages along with the pretzels."

The agency listed these brands and distribution areas:

- Pepperidge Farm brand (nationwide), Thin Slices in 1 1/2 oz. bag and 1 1/2 oz. boxes; Nugget, 1 1/2 oz. bag, 1 1/2 oz. box; Tiny Twist, 1 oz. bag; Dutch style, 7 1/2 oz. bag; Cheese Twigs, 11 oz. box; Plain Gems, sold institutionally in 1 1/2 lb. bags; Cheese Gems, sold institutionally in 1 1/2 lb. bags; and Tiny Twist, sold institutionally in 1 1/2 lb. bags.
- The Pepperidge Farm products Goldfish Pretzels and Frozen soft pretzels are not involved.
- Billy's Pretzels (nationwide), Thin, Pretzel, 1 1/2, 8 and 14 oz. size; Tiny Thin Pretzels, 9 oz. size; Special Pretzels, 8 and 14 oz. sizes;

Dutch Pretzels, 10 oz. size; Ball-of Pretzels, 8 oz. size; Thin Pretzel Slix, 9 oz.; Cheese Flavor Gems in 2, 15 and 20 oz. sizes.

Snyder's of Hanover Guest Quality brand, (Pennsylvania only) Pretzel Nibblers, 14 oz.; Special Pretzel 8 oz.; and Pretzel Logs, 9 oz.

- Cain's brand (Ohio and Michigan only), Tiny Twist Pretzels, 9 oz.; Pretzel Slix, 10 oz.; Pretzel Twists, 1 1/2, 9 and 13 oz.; and Dutch Pretzels, 10 oz.
- Crouthamel's Prize brand (Maryland, District of Columbia, Pennsylvania, Delaware, New Jersey, New York, Connecticut, and Massachusetts) Thin Pretzels, 1 1/2 oz.; Tiny Thin Pretzels, 9 oz.; Slick Pretzels, 9 oz.; and Dutch Slix, 10 oz.
- Dutch Valley brand (Pennsylvania and Maryland), Pretzel Gems, 15 oz.

Ask the Jacobys

A Florida reader asks who wins the rubber. The side with the greater number of points or the side that has won two games.

The answer to this question is that the side that wins two games is given the rubber bonus but if it leaves their score below that of the other side, then the other side wins the rubber.

(For a copy of JACOBY MODERN, send $1 to: Win a Bridge C/O This newspaper, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019)

By Oswald & James Jacoby

The Unlucky Expert had cornered us again. He showed us the West hand and asked if we would open one heart if we weren't vulnerable and our opponents were.

Our answer was that we would open his hand as would anyone who played any normal bidding system. The hand counts 12 points in high cards plus two more for the doubletons. In addition it includes three quick tricks and the hand should be opened irrespective of vulnerability.

Then we asked what calamity befell him as a result of opening the hand. We flattered him by remarking that he was far too good a player to pass with that nice aggregation of cards.

If you readers take a look at all the cards you will see what did happen. He bid a heart. Not doubting, East passed.

It was a horror and South grimaced at four spades with no trouble at all.

Our hero cashed the ace and king of hearts and shifted to a club.

South drew trumps and eventually led a diamond toward dummy. Our friend ducked, but South went right by with dummy's king and wrapped up game and rubber while if West had not opened the bidding there is a near certainty that South would have gone wrong in diamonds and lost his contract.

Club honors Buhl insurance agent

BUHL. — Vivian Daiss, Buhl businesswoman and active community leader, has been named "Woman of Progress" in Buhl by the Business and Professional Woman's Club.

She is a member of the BPW Club and is not only manager of the insurance agency she and her husband own, but is especially active in youth programs in Buhl.

Both she and her husband, who was disabled shortly after they opened their business, are licensed insurance agents. In addition they operate an 80-acre farm near Castleford and find time for youth programs involving their high school age daughter, Debbie.

"I can operate a tractor as easily as a typewriter or calculator," she says of her farm and business activities. "And I have enjoyed being a lot of places in the world."

"We are an active family and enjoy camping, water skiing and all sorts of things a family can do together," she said.

Mrs. Daiss joined the BPW club in 1943 when she completed school. She has served as president at least three times and has held other local and district offices. She has also been active in Women of the Moose, holding the top ranking state office of Deputy Grand Regent.

A member of the Buhl Chapter of Commerce, she is also active in the Independent Insurance Agents Association, served as a Future Homemakers of America chapter mother, member of the Girls' Advisory Council for Castleford, Girl Scout leader and many other youth and adult programs. She was a host mother for an exchange student from Greece three years ago.

"Our home is always open to young people and sometimes it is nearly filled with high school students," she said.

Hagerman prepares for accreditation

HAGERMAN. — The Hagerman school district is preparing for the biennial visit by an evaluation team as part of the accreditation process.

Trustees spent most of Monday night board meeting discussing the upcoming evaluation.

On another matter, the board renegotiated a bus contract with Dick Wain, Hagerman, who owns and operates four buses for the Hagerman district.

Ken Black said that each school must fill out forms yearly but a site evaluation is held every 10 years on each school as part of the Northwest Accreditation requirements.

The visiting team will be in Hagerman April 13-14.

Team members will include the persons from the State Department of Education and 10 from among teachers and administrators of other Magic Valley schools.

Prior to the site visit teachers must fill out self-evaluation forms on every aspect of school operation, Black said.

He said different schools are visited each year and that he understood Gooding and Glenns Ferry are also scheduled for site visits this year.

Elementary School gets basketball

SHOSHONE. — Shoshone school trustees have approved a request for fifth and sixth graders next year.

Larry Meszek, high school basketball coach, asked the Board Monday night to budget for such an afterschool program to teach basketball fundamentals to both girls and boys in these two grades.

Supt. Ken Crothers was instructed to try to find someone qualified to coach the course.

Alice Haught was hired to complete the year as a reading teacher for Mrs. Pamela Phillips who is moving with her husband to Reno, Nev.

Mrs. Haught is a new local resident, Crothers said. Her husband, Ken Haught, farms in the Shoshone area.

The trustees approved a request of Ed Anderson to take his office occupation students to Idaho State University, Pocatello, to visit the computer center and vocational business facilities.

Crothers reviewed legislative topics which will affect school districts.

Valley renews principal contracts

VALLEY SCHOOLS — Principals Craig Hall and Bruce Sorensen have been given renewed contracts for another year in the Valley School District No. 202.

The action was taken during a regular school trustees meeting Monday night at the Valley High School. High School Principal Hall will return for his third year at Valley. Sorensen will continue his duties as principal of the Eden and Hazelton elementary schools.

Athletic Director Monte Andrus presented a proposal to the board for construction of a regulation track to be located around the existing practice athletic field just south of the high school. Valley does not have a regulation track at the present time and is unable to hold any of the track meets at home.

The project would be financed by the student council and the student body. The board approved the proposal, providing that gravel and construction costs comply with the funds that are available.

The Valley Teachers Association presented a motion at the meeting held lengthy discussion with the board about negotiations and procedures for the coming year. A definite settlement was not reached and another special meeting was called to continue negotiations. This meeting has been set for 7:30 p.m. March 7 at the superintendent's office and will be open to the public.

The board has been investigating the needed replacement of the furnaces in both the Eden and Hazelton elementary school buildings. An estimate of $78,000 was given as the cost of replacing the heating facilities with electric furnaces. Johnson Electric of Hazelton, working with Idaho Power Co., had made this estimate. It was decided that further fact-finding investigations would continue before any action could be taken.

In other action the board announced that bids would be opened during the March 14 board meeting for the Valley district school insurance. Supplied by Arlyn Bodily reports that all copies of the insurance evaluation, and materials needed for the bids may be picked up at his office.

The board gave approval to Kermit Douglas, school bus contractor, to attend a bus safety and transportation workshop in Boise. They also approved sending the debate team to tournaments in both Idaho Falls and Boise.

Approval was given for DeLo to join the Big Six Athletic Conference. With DeLo joining the conference the number of teams will rise to seven. This will facilitate renaming the conference.

Swensens have made your search for roots easy by prominently displaying them on the produce rack, and while a long search for roots in old archives and genealogical libraries always entails the possible risk of finding something "rotten" back, there somewhere, you can be assured you'll never find any rotten roots on Swenson rack!

Protective oil reserve considered

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Federal Energy Administrator Joseph L. Leahy today told Congress it will cost up to $3 billion for the country to buy enough oil reserves so that America's would be protected against another Arab oil embargo.

During the strategic oil reserve program "an embargo in insurance policy for America," Leahy said he was convinced that we as a nation will find the premiums on the policy well worth the protection it offers.

Enacted by Congress in 1975 in the wake of the oil embargo crisis, the program's goal is eventually to put up to one billion barrels of oil in reserve in case of future interruptions of imports.

O'Leary told the House energy and power subcommittee that the reserve program is on schedule. About 150 million barrels will be stored by the end of next year, with an eventual storage system of at least 500 million barrel reserve by 1982.

"It is estimated that a 500 million barrel reserve, combined with conservation measures, can essentially replace lost imports for a period of six months for the most likely interruptions," O'Leary said.

In addition, the mere existence of the oil reserve may serve as a deterrent against future oil import interruptions.

O'Leary said the FEA has identified "risk areas of the country most dependent on imported oil" to determine where the reserve supplies of crude oil should be located.

UL student tours Libya

LIBERTY — Lyn Tominaga, a graduate of Minico High School and now student body president at the University of Idaho, traveled to Libya this week as part of a delegation headed by Congressman Steve Symms of Idaho.

Tominaga, 23, a scholar in cultural anthropology, said he hoped to continue a good-will tour with a view of the drip irrigation techniques now in use by the Libyans in their desert nation. "In the future, we might be looking to their type of irrigation for our own use," he said.

Chase ends in arrests

TWO MEN, handcuffed and leaning against the hood of a car they allegedly stole from Stockton, Calif., were arrested Wednesday afternoon after trying to escape Border Patrol and county sheriff's officers in a high speed chase west of Twin Falls.

The two, Raymond Hahl, 21, and Clifford Wilson, 23, both Stockton, were traveling north on U.S. 93, when two Border Patrol officers in a car headed south spotted them.

"We thought we'd stop 'em, because they had a Mexican appearance," said one of the officers, Robert Wylie. When officers had turned around and closed to within half a mile, the men driving the allegedly stolen car "sped off," Wylie said. "We were doing 105 and they were still pulling away," he said.

County sheriff's deputies set up a one-car roadblock about four miles from Twin Falls. When the chased car reached the roadblock, it turned off the road into a subdivision, where it became stuck in a field.

Hahl and Wilson were being held in the Twin Falls County jail. Arraignment was set for later today.

'Nickel per hour' sparks wage hassle

By BILL LAZARUS
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Idaho Department of Labor has taken a Filer employer to magistrate court over a nickel-an-hour wage dispute.

Beyond the hourly five cents, the issue is equal pay for women doing equal work.

In its suit on behalf of Bettye Coats, Filer, and her daughter, Diervo Burgess, the Department of Employment charges that Jerry Montgomery of Red's Beverage and Sporting Goods did not pay the women equally to two men working in the store.

The job duties between the two men and the two women were "nearly identical," the department contends. Montgomery maintains the men had taken more responsibility on the job.

Coats and Burgess, who were working at Red's in late 1975 and during most of the first half of 1976, were earning $2 an hour, except for a brief period when Coats earned $2.65 an hour.

During the same period, according to the department's suit, two men with "nearly identical duties and responsibilities" were earning more: Steve Hadley at $2.05 cents an hour and Gordon Larsen at $2.15 an hour.

The department asks for $59.40 in back wages due the women to make up for the five-cents-an-hour difference with the lowest paid male employee and an equal amount in other damages because of the employer's "willful failure" to pay equally.

In his response, Montgomery maintains the higher pay for the male employee is justified.

"Gordon Larsen had a great deal more skill and knowledge and ability to sell guns and other sporting goods than either Bettye Coats or Diervo Burgess," he states. He said Larsen also handled counting of money and managed the store at times, responsibilities which, Montgomery claims, no other employee had shared.

Montgomery says that Steve Hadley, though not having as many responsibilities as Larsen, "could take trades-in on guns" and "could reduce the price of guns on cash sale."

The case, now in magistrate court in Twin Falls, has not been set for hearing.

According to Thomas Swinehart, attorney for the Department of Labor, "if a person comes and makes an equal-pay complaint with the department" reconciliation is attempted.

If that doesn't work, Swinehart said, the department does not itself hold hearings, it takes the case to court. "If it looks there is possibility of merit to the charges."

Even for five-cents-an-hour the department should take a case, Swinehart maintained. "It's the department's obligation under statute to bring claims which the department feels do have merit, regardless of size," he said.

Coats already has won one other battle in her dispute with Red's. G.H. Orr, an appeals examiner for the Idaho Department of Employment, found last summer that she was eligible for unemployment compensation because she had been "discharged" from her job at Red's "but not for misconduct."

Coats, the examiner found, may have been "somewhat disenchanted when noting that a male counterpart received more pay for perhaps less work than she was performing." But, he found that she had not changed the "pattern" of her work and had received no complaints from her employer before she left her job.

Crash kills Utah man

GOODING — A Utah man was killed early today when his car overturned west of Bliss on Interstate 20.

Gooding sheriff's officers identified the victim as Calvin Eugene Gifford, 49, from the Salt Lake area.

Leonard Schroedter, 45, and Alfonso Valdezquez, 30, passengers in Gifford's late model car, were taken to Gooding Memorial Hospital where they were treated and released. Schroedter is from West Jordan, Utah, and Valdezquez is from Long Beach, Calif. Both are engineers with Westinghouse, according to hospital attendants, and were working at Richland, Wash.

Deputy Sheriff Bill Boyer investigated the one-car crash which was reported by port of entry officials at 1:27 a.m. today.

Rupert hearing set tonight

RUPERT — The fate of a proposed industrial park south of Paul could be determined in a public hearing here tonight.

The Mindoka County Zoning Commission will hold the hearing at 7 p.m. in the county courthouse in Rupert.

The industrial development, proposed along Idaho 27 just north of the interstate interchange. The front part, along the east side of Idaho 27, already is zoned commercial.

Durrell Moon, engineer on the proposed project, already has threatened the county with a lawsuit if a necessary zoning change is denied.

Tonight's hearing actually is on Moon's request to change agriculture-residential zoning on the back part of the property to commercial. The front part, along the east side of Idaho 27, already is zoned commercial.

The prospective developers are Robert Knudsen Sr. and Robert Knudsen Jr., Idaho Falls. They are proposing a walk-in retail trade and some light industry, such as assembly of irrigation equipment.

Moon had withdrawn his plan proposal and request for a zoning change after a stormy session before the zoning commission last month. The following day, he said he discussed the matter with his clients and they intended to go to court, if necessary, to gain approval of the development.

Among grounds Moon listed was an alleged conflict of interest on the part of one member of the planning commission. The plan had received planner approval at one point, but the commission then recanted on its recommendation for approval after objections were raised by residents north of the property.

The judge will consider two motions at the hearing, one to determine if the case should be dismissed and one to determine if a trial in the matter should be held in another county.

Corder hearing set March 10

TWIN FALLS — Sixth District Judge Arthur Oliver has set the arraignment of Twin Falls County Sheriff Paul Corder for 10 a.m. March 10 in Fifth District Court here.

Corder has been charged with mishandling public funds and five counts of perjury. The judge will consider two motions at the hearing, one to determine if the case should be dismissed and one to determine if a trial in the matter should be held in another county.

Minimum acreage produces comment

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES

FILER — Minimum acreages for the division of land in various agricultural zones continued to draw most of the comment here Wednesday night in a third public information on the proposed Twin Falls County Comprehensive Land Plan.

The largest and most orderly attendance for any of the three meetings to date gathered in the Filer High School Auditorium. Ann Coyer, county commissioner and chairman of the Joint County Planning Commission, opened the meeting with a slide presentation explaining provisions of the plan.

With the exception of persons who stated they prefer no regulations at all on their land and want neither land use planning nor zoning, most of the objections were on limitations of 5 to 80 acres for division of farm land in various agricultural zones.

Mrs. Coyer explained the areas immediately around communities, urban zones, would allow as little as one half acre of land to be sold from a farm for housing. As the zones progress further from centers of population the limitations increase.

In the zones listed as farm-residential, no less than 5 acres may be sold in a single parcel. In the agricultural zone, the minimum is 40 acres while the farm-ranch zone limits the size to no less than 20 acres. Beyond the ranch land zones are forest and range land, generally under federal control.

Several owners of land outside of urban areas said the 40-acre minimum is too large to allow them to realize full value of their land.

Others said they felt it should be at least 40 acres or perhaps more in some of the zones if the farm land is to be preserved.

Another proposal which drew criticism in the plan is one calling for a tax level on undeveloped land adjacent to cities which would encourage its development. Mrs. Coyer said this was added in the plan as a means of guiding development close to urban areas where sewer, water and other services are available before outlying areas are brought into development.

Several farmers endorsed the plan as a means of keeping subdivisions from developing in farming areas. Several said they have had experience farming adjacent to dense housing.

L.C. Abel, Filer, said a subdivision is being considered on land adjacent to his farm.

"If it is approved, you may as well plan on another of my 160 acres. I won't farm next to a subdivision. I'll sell out and move," he said.

Mrs. Coyer said the present county zoning ordinance limits land division to five acres in all agricultural zones, but she added the commission increased this to 40 and 80 acres in outlying areas to preserve prime agricultural land in farmable parcels.

She promised a close look at all public comments on these recommendations. She said any farmer may provide space on his farm for a home for a family member.

Abel said there is a loophole in the present law because each land owner may divide his property once. The five-acre parcel can be purchased and subsequent sales made to reduce it to a mere housing lot, he said.

Charles Harris, Farm Bureau member and early opponent of county zoning, said he has come to see the need for planning. He endorsed the plan and urged its adoption.

Howard Buhler, Filer realtor, recommended the county call for a referendum on the plan and adopt it only if the majority of county residents vote in favor of it. His son, Will Buhler, said, following the meeting, he plans to meet with the county commissioners to discuss a referendum or an amendment to the existing zoning ordinance and county plan.

He said he does not favor recalling county officials over the issue, but would like to see more freedom given the landowner in developing his individual plan.

Several persons, including Diane Ronayne, president of the Twin Falls League of Women Voters, endorsed the plan and complimented the commission members for their long and dedicated effort in preparing it.

Another resident suggested if the county is going to tell a landowner he must retain his land for agricultural purposes, the taxpayers who would benefit should pay him for withholding development.

John Durham, Twin Falls, who heads a county commissioner recall movement stemming from the proposed county plan, addressed the Filer meeting briefly. He contends the plan is unconstitutional and infringes on inalienable rights of property owners.

SV closes 2 more ski lifts

SUN VALLEY — The two operating ski lifts on Dollar Mountain, put into operation six weeks ago after this winter's only major snowfall, closed down today because of inadequate snow conditions on the mountain.

The warm weather here in the past weeks has melted the foot of snow that a January storm dumped on the mountain, according to Sun Valley publicity director, Shannon Besoyan.

"The lifts that were operating on Dollar Mountain — Half Dollar, and Quarter Dollar — will no longer operate," Besoyan announced today.

The final decision to close the lifts was made Wednesday morning, according to Sun Valley Vice President of Recreation and Mountain Operations Wally Huffman.

The beginners ski school will be moved to the base of Warm Springs Run on Baldy Mountain, Huffman said. A section there will be fenced off for these skiers.

Ski conditions on those slopes open on Baldy remain good on artificial snow, according to Huffman. He said snow is made on these slopes every night and he estimated there was about a 20-inch base.

The vertical on Dollar Mountain is only about 600 feet, and the mountains fully exposed to the sun all day, Besoyan observed. Baldy's runs, however, lie in a northern exposure and are protected by the shadow of the mountain most of the day.

For the past three weeks mountain crews have transported artificial snow in a dump truck from the base of River Run to Dollar Mountain and then have shoveled the snow out onto bare spots, Huffman said.

"But we were losing it faster than we could haul it over," he stated. "We just couldn't continue to do it."

The snow was getting dirty during transport which caused the sun to melt it even more quickly, Huffman noted.

Publisher, TF woman injured

TWIN FALLS — A prominent Ketchum newspaper publisher and a Twin Falls woman both suffered two broken legs in a car-pedestrian accident on Blue Lakes Boulevard Wednesday night.

Gordon Glasmann, 53, publisher of the Wood River Journal, Halley, and the North Side News, Jerome, was crossing from the west side of the 130 block of Blue Lakes with Joyce Turley, 41, about 10 p.m.

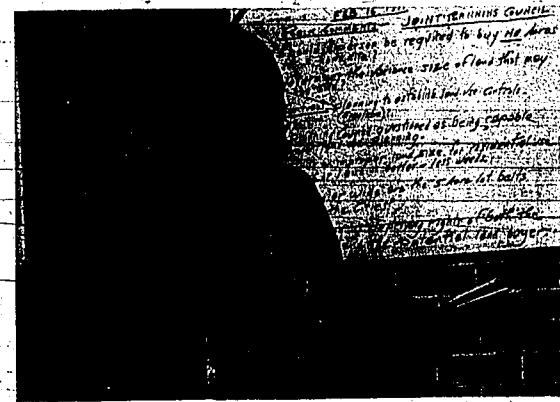

They were struck by a northbound car driven by Anthony Howard Jansson, 32, Jerome. Police said Jansson told them he had not seen the couple crossing.

Glasmann, who also suffered a broken pelvis, and Turley were listed in fair condition in Magic Valley Memorial Hospital this morning.

No citations have been issued. No other injuries were reported.

Glasmann is a member of a prominent family which owns extensive newspaper and television properties in Utah and Idaho.

He is the former owner of KMYT Television in Twin Falls and the Gooding Leader, Gooding.

Help sought on deer range rehabilitation

BOISE—Volunteers are urgently needed to assist in planting a variety of shrubs on 30 acres of big game winter range near Arrowrock Reservoir, according to Robert Carpenter, range conservationist on the Boise Ranger District of the Boise National Forest.

The project is an effort to improve forage conditions for deer on critical winter range in this area.

The project area has been identified as critical big game winter range by the U.S. Forest Service and the Department of Fish and Game and was first planted to browse species including bitterbrush. In 1968 following a major fire, in 1976 a major effort was made to plant 20,000 bitterbrush seedlings through use of volunteer labor.

More than 200 people participated, representing the Treasure Valley Bow Hunters Association; Capitol 4 by 4; Fort Boise Community Center; North American Versatile Hunting Dog Association; Idaho Outdoors Association; Boy Scout Troops 19, 39 and 129 and the Boise High School Ecology Club.

Last year's efforts were considered very successful with 90 per cent of those seedlings planted surviving. The Forest Service has, therefore, decided to continue with this range rehabilitation program, using volunteers.

This year's project will be an excellent opportunity for sportsmen's groups or other organizations to contribute their time to the improvement of critical wildlife habitat in this area of the state. This project will begin on March 1 and last through mid-April. Those organizations interested in this type of volunteer work and contributing to the improvement of wildlife habitat should contact Bob Carpenter on the Boise National Forest at 384-1572, or visit his office at 7803 Warm Spring Avenue, Boise, Idaho.

Those who participate in this program will definitely enjoy themselves and will benefit the big game population that depend on winter range near Arrowrock Reservoir.

The area being rehabilitated is significant to the State of Idaho and has been recognized as one of the more important winter ranges, especially for deer herds in State Herd Unit 39. Unit 39 is one of the most productive herd units in the state and probably the most hunted. This rehabilitation and improvement program has been recognized as a major area of emphasis by the State Department of Fish and Game, as well as the Forest Service. By providing shrub seedlings grown at the Lucky Peak Nursery and through the use of volunteer labor, the goal of improving big game winter range can be achieved.

This year's project will again involve planting nearly 20,000 bitterbrush seedlings. Bitterbrush, commonly referred to as the ice cream plant for deer, is usually abundant, sometimes being the chief component of vegetation on important big game winter range. In many places in the western United States, it is regarded as the most important single browse species.

Bitterbrush is generally grazed by deer throughout the year, but its palatability ordinarily appears to be the greatest in spring, winter and late fall. It is almost the first plants to leaf out in the spring and holds its leaves until early winter and is very important on spring-fall and winter ranges for big game.

This forage is of high quality and is said to be a strong feed because it produces solid fats which are not readily lost during bad winter when feed is scarce. Consequently, bitterbrush and the other browse species to be planted in the project area, will be of significant benefit to deer herds that are dependent on this winter range. They will also aid other forms of wildlife and aid in erosion control.

14-year-old predicted to succeed Chris Evert

NEW YORK (UPI) — As a 14-year-old child prodigy, Tracy Austin enjoys playing tennis and seeing her picture on the cover of national magazines.

Her attitudes might alter dramatically a few years from now, however, when she'll be expected to dethrone Chris Evert as the queen of women's tennis much as Evert was expected to dethrone Billie Jean King. That's when the real pressure will surface.

The youngest of seven members of "The First Family of Tennis," Austin, by her own recollection, has not lost a match against someone her age since 1970. She has won indoors, outdoors, on clay and on hard surfaces. She won a 14- and under title when she was a 12-year-old. In mid-February, she'll try to win the U.S. Indoor 18-and-under title at Port Washington, N.Y.

Recently, the eighth-grader with blonde pigtails and teeth braces from Rolling Hills, Calif., competed in the Virginia-Slits-of-Seattle, where she defeated Greer Stevens, a former World Team Tennis rookie of the year, and extended Rosie Casals to three sets.

"It was really exciting," she said of her experience against the professionals. "I've won more than $6,000 so far, but I'm still an amateur. The money goes to the Women's Tennis Association. They give me enough money to pay for all my expenses."

Despite her modest success, Tracy will wait a few years before trying to tackle the Slits' tour on a regular basis. She insists her current 5-foot-11, 90-pound frame is a handicap off the court, but not on it.

"I don't think that physically

I could take all the traveling," says Tracy, who has grown three inches in the last year. "I play with my coach, Robert Landsdorp, all the time at the Jack Kramer Tennis Club and he hits me every kind of shot. The hardness of the shot doesn't bother me."

—Predictably, Austin would most like to emulate Evert's game, "because she's so steady in the backcourt."

Unlike Evert, Austin has no reservations about coming to the net for a volley. "It doesn't make much difference to me," she says. "It all depends on how the point is played."

Admittedly, Austin's serve is weak, even among girls her peers.

"It's not that powerful but I do place it well," she says. "I practice three hours a day during the school year and four hours a day in the summer. I practice a lot with my brother, Jeff. No, I can't beat him yet."

"It should come as no surprise that Tracy gravitated toward tennis while other young girls were playing with dolls. The Austin family—father George, mother Jeanne, brothers Jeff, Doug and John and sisters Pam and Tracy—have won some 400 tournaments, including nine national championships.

"They've encouraged me, helped me, things like that," says Tracy, who was pictured on the cover of World Tennis Magazine at age four and on Sports Illustrated this past summer. "I first picked up a racket when I was two, but I didn't really start playing until I was five. I don't feel much pressure, but everyone does expect me to win all the time."

Oakley and Burley seek titles on final weekend of regular season

MAGIC VALLEY — It's the last hurrah and the Magic Valley Conference has all of it locally.

That's how it shapes up this weekend when the regular season draws to an end for Magic Valley's high school teams.

Oakley will be hosting the Castelford-Wolves needing a victory to wrap up the Magic Valley title. Meanwhile, Burley takes its Cross State title hopes on the road where the Bobcats will play at Madison of Rexburg Friday and Rigby Saturday.

A pair of wins there would send Coach Ron Gillett's crew into the district tournament next Friday with one trophy already in the case.

Castelford provided Oakley with the chance to win the Magic Valley title outright when it knocked off Murtaugh Tuesday night. If the Wolves stay in a spoiler roll and beat the Hornets, the thing will again fall into a three-way tie, and coin-flipping for pairings in next week's district tournament will start.

That assumes, of course, that Murtaugh beats the Buckles at Haisan and that River View ungratefully loses to Delta. If either loses, the number in the tie drops commensurately.

For the rest of the folks it's merely playing but the string. Buhl takes its 79 South Central Idaho Conference title already is tied up to Wood River, while Filer crosses the river to play at Jerome on Thursday night due to a scheduling change.

Gooding and Wendell hook up in an intra-Gooding County battle at Wendell while Glenn Perry plays host to the Hugerman Pirates. In the Jung, Big Six game, Shoshone will be at Valley.

On the Northside, Dietrich climbs the hill to meet Camas County at Fairfield while Richfield is home to the Bliss Bears.

Saturday finds an interesting matchup at Jerome. The Tigers will host the Caldwell Cougars and the madir Tor Coach Al Thorn and Jerome must be the '96-18 lucing Caldwell hung on them at Christmas time.

The Big Six concludes with two games. Glenns Ferry traveling to Shoshone and Kimberly entertaining Wendell Valley is at Murtaugh and North Gem at Richfield in a pair of non-conference tilts.

Detroit nips Marquette 64-63

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Dennis Boyd's desperation jump shot with just one second remaining gave 19th-ranked Detroit its 21st straight win, 64-63, over the sixth-ranked Marquette Warriors Wednesday night.

Marquette led 63-58 with less than three minutes to play when Jeff Whitlow and Boyd hit jump shots to pull Detroit to within a point. With two minutes left, Marquette went into a delay offense but with 32 seconds left Terry Tyler stole the ball from Boy Ellis and Detroit went into its own delay. John Longled Detroit with 20 points while Terry Duero had 16 and Boyd 14.

Chicken night in Rupert

KGB CHICKEN will be the extra-curricular attraction Friday night when the Minico Spartans host the Twin Falls Bruins at Rupert.

KGB chicken spices cage game

RUPERT — "When I first heard about this, I thought what the heck is going on..."

That's the reaction of Twin Falls Coach Ron Watson and he'll doubtlessly be joined by hundreds of others Friday night when KGB chicken provides some merriment during the Twin Falls-Minico basketball game at Rupert.

The chicken is a "mystery" as to inner identity and probably usefulness. But it has popped in St. Louis, Las Vegas and Los Angeles with such people as Paul McCartney (in concert), the Doobie Brothers, St. Louis Cardinal baseball team and almost every sports team in San Diego. The Chicken calls itself San Diego's ambassador of comedy.

The promotion belongs to Minico athletic director Mike Erling who sees the thing as a special treat for the loyal Spartan fans.

To that end, T-shirts proclaiming "chicken night" are being worn by Spartan students and fans, and it was the message on the shirt that first caught the attention and consternation of Bruin Coach Watson.

Concerning the game, Minico won the first meeting at Twin Falls handily. Neither has any place to go in the SIC with a victory. It's strictly a prep for next week's district playoffs.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Quietly do what will change the attitude of friends so there is more harmony between you. Don't be forceful with anyone.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Handle routine duties tactfully and get excellent results. Not a good day to engage in civic affairs.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Don't give up on something you feel is important today because of delays, but hold firm. Think constructively.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Your intuition is not working accurately today, so don't follow it. Wait until evening before making any important decisions.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Don't get into any arguments with associates today or there could be unpleasant consequences. Relax at home tonight.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Make sure you complete your work today instead of putting it off for another day. The evening can be a happy one.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Keep calm if a troublesome situation flares up at home and it will soon blow over. Use care in motion today.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Know what your fundamental aims are and how to gain them speedily. A co-worker may be tried but don't become involved.

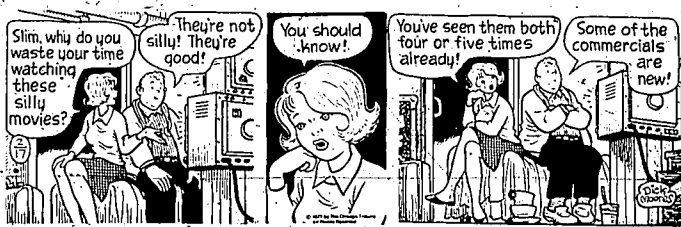

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Make sure you obey traffic regulations and avoid the possibility of accidents today. Make long-range plans for the future.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Study your finances well and know where to put in economy measure wisely. Follow the advice of a trusted adviser.

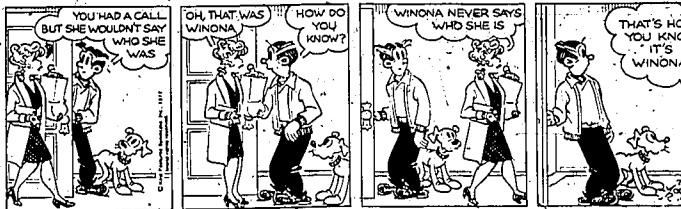

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Anything of a personal nature could have delays, so be patient and good results will follow. Strive for happiness.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will likely encounter more problems than most others during lifetime so teach to make right decisions. Direct the education along lines of troubleshooting and whatever requires being resourceful. Be sure to give ethical training early in life. Sports are a must-here.

No traditional French waiter wears a mustache. That fact is for the chef.

You'd have to be 108 years old to have been born before the first tennis shoes came out.

It has been proven repeatedly that loneliness can cause an isolated dog to become hysterically timid.

Experts at the Smithsonian Institution think they're able to figure out which museum pieces are the most interesting to the public by counting the fingerprints on the display cases. Historical surgical instruments rated exceedingly low, for instance. No prints. But the glassed-in shelves of old, high-ranked high. Smudges were everywhere.

COFFEE, TEA OR MILK?

Q. "Can you make tea in those newfangled automatic drip-coffee makers?"

A. Certainly can. Excellent tea. I had no intention of joining a coffee boycott when we first made tea in that brewing machine. But the tea tasted so good that the coffee canisters have been opened since. Odd thing. A man can drink coffee for 35 years or so, to realize eventually that the reason a bit of it always gets cold in the bottom of the cup is that he really doesn't like the taste of it all that much.

Q. "How many of the young people getting married do you figure lie about their ages to get their licenses?"

A. Almost but not quite one in 10 is a fair guess. Specifically, researchers in Ohio found 7.35 per cent of the brides lied, did 8.33 per cent of the grooms.

Q. "Doesn't the rate of sex crimes rise in a neighborhood after the houses of ill repute thereabouts are closed?"

A. On the contrary... The rate drops off. Studies repeatedly have shown that.

Q. "What was the national speed limit during World War II?"

A. 35 m.p.h.

SENILITY

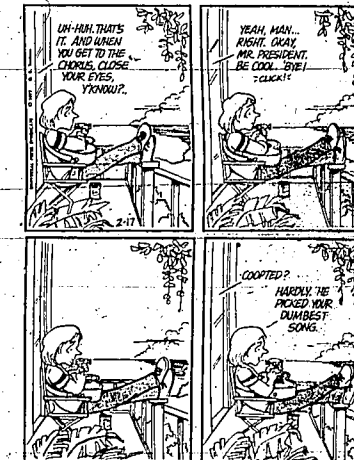

Among people over age 65, there are nowhere nearly as many who are senile as those who think they are. Anxiety more than anything else is what causes senility; it's said.

Contrary to widespread belief, swans aren't mute; but in fact, can make about eight different sounds. They bark. They bugle. They go, "Hoo-bit! Hoo-bit!"

Combined weight of the insects is three times greater than the weight of all the other animals put together.

Payment deferral proposed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, said Wednesday he will ask for a one-year deferral of water payments by farmers to minimize the effects of the drought in the Northwest.

McClure's latest bill asking Treasury Secretary Cecil D. Andrus about the matter, saying, "I am very concerned about the possible crop losses by farmers this season and I imagine many of them will not be in a position to make water payments. By deferring those payments for a year during this drought, we might be able to ease the burden," McClure said.

At a meeting with representatives of public and private utility companies and the Bonneville Power Administration in northern Idaho Tuesday, McClure said, "We should be moving on conservation programs right now. We should begin immediate conservation measures of both water and electricity. Second, we should begin moving alternative generating units into this area now so that we can conserve what water we have for needed power generation later this year."

Low bidder

BOISE — A Twin Falls firm is the apparent low of three bidders on a culvert extension project in Bannock County.

The Idaho Transportation Department said C.L. Heilman Co. bid $23,546 for extending a 12 foot culvert for the Pine Creek later on U.S. 91.

THIS WEEK'S TOP OF COMPARISON: PRICES!

We meet or beat all advertised prices on comparable merchandise. We try hard to be the leader by selecting quality merchandise that you want and advertising it at the lowest possible prices. Everyone has their specials, but we encourage you to look past them right at our uniformly low prices. Don't be fooled by the specials only!
