By BILL LAZARUS, Times-News writer. TWIN FALLS — The Idaho Department of Water Resources since fall has stopped issuing permits for pumping from the Snake River below Milner Dam for new farmland projects, according to a department official. "We did not officially make a paratorium which says you cannot file. We did not deny applications; We're just not taking any final actions," Bob Fleenor, chief of the department's water rights bureau, said Friday. "The problem is not drought, but pending applications for farm development under the Carey Act. According to Fleenor, there is not nearly enough water in the Snake River to allow for development of all the Carey Act proposals...

much less projects with later, priority dates. Because of this, he said, in recent months the department has only granted permits for Carey Act projects which were approved by the federal government and which had early priority dates. Priority dates are set by when an application for water is made, not when a permit is issued. The person who first files an application has the first right. Since 1974 applications to develop farmland under the Carey Act have been building up due to slow federal action on proposed projects under the act. Now, Fleenor said, it would take about 15,000 cubic feet per second to develop all the Carey Act proposals for pumping out of the Snake River. But, he said, the average low flow on the Snake is only 7,000 cfs, at the Murphy gauge...

south of Boise. Also, he said, 3,300 cfs of this flow is not available for farmland development since the State Water Plan sets this flow aside to preserve what remains of Idaho Power's water right for hydroelectric generation at Swan Falls. That means, Fleenor said, only about 4,000 cfs of Snake River water downstream from Milner is available for farmland development. "That's why we stopped issuing the permits. It's not wise to issue a permit knowing that if Carey Act projects are developed there would be no water" for the water user with a later priority date, he said. Fleenor said the department stopped issuing new permits around September. The department now has on hand four applications for...

private farmland development which have been put into a "held" status, he said. All the applications are for relatively small projects, with the largest by Dell Ray Winegar of Fruitland for two cfs to put in 100 acres of farmland. The earliest private application to be held by the department was made in April. Fleenor said the application was processed and sent to Water Resources Department Director Keith Higginson for final approval in the fall. "The application came back. Fleenor said, with the following note from Higginson: 'Held. We should not approve any more 0-2 permits until a policy is established on the water plan and minimum flows at Murphy and the Carey Act desert land applications.' (Continued on p. 10)

AF Dam breach may cost water

By KEN HODGE, Times-News writer. MAGIC VALLEY — If next year is water-short, plans to demolish part of the old American Falls Dam may make the situation worse. If a normal amount of water is available, completion of the dam should make little immediate difference to irrigators. If dam and irrigation district officials approve the plan, water will not be stored in the dam for a period of about six weeks while contractors breach the old structure. The six-week demolition period means some water normally stored in the dam...

would be allowed to run down the river. And, on a dry year, filling the dam could be a little more difficult. "It's going to be very difficult having a dry watershed like we're looking at right now," Leo Busch, Bureau of Reclamation, said about the prospects for refilling the dam in 1978. But, according to Busch, this year is ideal for the completion of the new dam which includes a breaching or knocking a hole in the old dam to allow water to pass through and be stored and regulated by the new structure. "There won't be much water at all that...

goes to waste," Busch said. "We could have an empty reservoir by fall." He said drought conditions this year would probably result in complete emptying of the dam for irrigation purposes. Once the dam is empty, plans for breaching the old dam require keeping the reservoir empty by allowing full flow of the river until contractors can, using controlled blasting, knock a hole in the old dam big enough to allow proper functioning of the new dam, according to Thomas Schaefer, engineer. Breaching operations are expected to begin on or about Sept. 15, according to...

Schaefer and must be completed by Nov. 1 so storage can commence in the reservoir. "The problem you confront is that you have flowing water through your area of demolition and you run the risk of putting concrete from the old dam into the outlets of the new dam," Schaefer said. "So you've got to get the water out of there," he added. Refilling the reservoir in time for the next irrigation season will be the only catch: If there is a normal snowpack with a normal runoff for the 1978 season, the dam should fill without any trouble, Busch said. Idahoans worry over newcomers, growth

By BOB ZUCKERMAN, Times-News writer. TWIN FALLS — Idahoans are facing a great personality conflict these days, a conflict tinged with worry that their beautiful state may change. On the one hand, Idahoans are worried tremendously about the rapid population growth of the Gem State — Idaho grew more rapidly than all but three states last year — and the problems it causes. On the other hand, Idahoans admit Californians and other out-of-staters who come here have a right to visit and a right to stay if they want to. Elwood R. Werry, Shoshone mayor, says he's heard a lot of persons express their dislike for out-of-staters, particularly Californians, and he says he can understand the dislike. "I'm afraid that if Californians do the same... thing to Idaho that's been done to California, Idaho won't be the place it's always been," Werry says. He blames Californians for rapid, unplanned development in the Wood River Valley and decries the "commercializing" of certain beautiful parts of the state by out-of-state developers. "I believe, in certain sections of Idaho, Wood River Valley for instance, we've ruined that country," he says. "As far as I'm concerned, it's just ruined as far as our way-of-life is concerned." Werry and others like acting Kimberly Mayer of Ledbetter also blame out-of-staters for bringing a new sort of isolationism to Idaho. "My main objection about anybody coming from out of state is they don't dare get acquainted with their neighbors, because they have this feeling they get from the city that they... can't trust em," says Ledbetter. "They tend to buy a little acreage and then shut everyone off... sort of changes the friendly attitude of the state." "First thing one does when he buys a small farm here is put up a no trespassing sign," according to Werry. "I think that's bad. We're used to hunting on private property. Used to be you could hunt everywhere in Lincoln County without worrying about upsetting anyone, but that's changed." But Ledbetter, Werry and others recognize Californians and other out-of-staters have "a right to live where they want to." "People have a right to live where they want to," says Wendell Mayor Otto Lemke, who seems to encapsulate the conflict in the minds of some Idahoans. "On the one hand, he's worried that Wendell is growing and we don't have anything for all the...

new people," he says. However, even though "there's a lot of Californians coming," he says they're "all right. After all, they're human beings too." Twin Falls Mayor Paul Ostyn says he, too, looks at "out-of-staters in two lights, but only because two types of out-of-staters — those who come and these who don't — come here. He doesn't blame those from out of state from being a little standoffish in the beginning because "you've got to understand they've just moved from an area where you not only lock your doors at night, you bar them." Ostyn and others say not much can be done to stop growth. "I suppose you could discourage 'em from coming in some way, but I don't think you should do that," Ledbetter says. "Realistically, I think we're gonna have to live with them." (Continued on p. 10)

Declaring war on the aphids

A tiny life form smaller than a piece of buckshot may disrupt the biggest industry in southern Idaho. The green peach aphid, a simple insect which enjoys life on peach and apricot trees, threatens to move en masse to a new home in the country...

Homeowners can help stem the tide of this potentially disastrous spread of leaf roll virus. Idaho potato growers have raised $30,000 to fund an emergency spraying program of peach and apricot trees this winter and spring to short circuit the spread of the aphid.

Spreading insecticides in your own back yard isn't the most pleasant thought. But this year, with the spread of the green peach aphid threatening a primary industry of Idaho, homeowners should agree to help.

Thoughts for today.

League of Women Voters going strong

WASHINGTON - The League of Women Voters - which brought the presidential debates to the bicentennial - quietly marks its 57th anniversary this month. The temptation on such an occasion is to say something along the lines of: 'You've come a long way, baby.' Certainly the league's sponsorship of the nationally broadcast debates between Jimmy Carter and Jerry Ford was a far cry from its first efforts at voter education back in 1920 when their goal was to help newly enfranchised women find their way around the all-male preserve of the polling place.

Televized debates are a means of voter education perhaps undreamed of a half a century ago, but the league still stands as a model durable, useful, tenacious voluntary organization. Indeed, the most characteristic aspect of the league's programs over its long lifetime has been its willingness to persevere, to stick by issues and causes during the bleak times when other like-minded reformers have lost hope. League President Ruth Clusen says. The debates are a good example. They actually began in the spring of 1976 when after lengthy negotiations, the league got the vast array of Democratic presidential hopefuls - except George Wallace - to agree to meet in forums to answer questions from league-selected "specialists" and "the audience." Mrs. Clusen recalled in an interview. Carried only on public television, the forums gave a relative handful of viewers a sneak preview of Jimmy Carter's debating style (which wasn't anywhere near as engaging as former Oklahoma Sen. Fred Harris' or Pennsylvania Gov. Milton Shapp's). More than that, the forums showed the Republicans, who slumped the spring try-outs, that the league could organize half a dozen debating politicians in a smoothly run - if somewhat tedious - show. The smart money said a sitting President would never agree to debates, but the league refused to give up, petitioning Ford until he gave in on the eve of his nomination - to the surprise of a good many seasoned political observers.

But the league paid a price - in hard cash, thank you - for their good citizens role, and Mrs. Clusen said the accumulated debt her organization ran up makes her leery of jumping into the fray again. However, she believes that the league's persistence will have lasting dividends. "The debates made the question of 'will they debate?' something that won't go away," she said. "Candidates won't be able to escape the question. It's not something that should be legislated and certainly the question of how the debates are financed, and the format, need to be discussed."

Speaking as a true believer in the ideals of the league, Mrs. Clusen said she would like to see the concept of the great debates extended to those undomorous areas that get lost in the horse race atmosphere of elections - the issues. "We do not generally get a chance to see two people with diverse points of view debate an issue in a format where they can explore the matter in depth," she said. "Take energy conservation - suddenly that became a partisan issue because of the energy crisis and a bad winter. Before now, you were sort of patting on the head for talking about what could be done on a voluntary basis to conserve energy resources. "Now you have the President of the United States urging voluntary measures. I'm afraid we're a crisis-oriented country. It would be nice if we could find a way - through televised debates or whatever - to reach a consensus on how to handle something before it became a crisis."

Mexico's black secret: 60 billion barrels of oil

By ALAN RIDING N.Y. Times Service MEXICO CITY - Despite conservative official estimates, Mexico's oil and natural-gas reserves are now privately believed to exceed 60 billion barrels, roughly six times greater than Alaska's North Slope deposits and much larger than previously estimated. The new estimate, which contrasts sharply with the official reserve figure of 11 billion barrels announced just two months ago, has been accepted by American government and oil industry experts and more significantly, has been privately confirmed by Mexican officials who in the past were reticent to admit the enormity of the country's oil wealth. Last week, for the first time since oil was struck here in 1901, daily output exceeded 1 million barrels, of which 140,000 barrels today are being exported, mainly to the United States. The state oil monopoly, Pemex, has a 1982 production target of 22 million barrels, an amount which would be available for export. Most of Mexico's new proven reserves form part of a huge hydrocarbon basin in the southeastern states of Chiapas and Tabasco and offshore from the State of Campeche in the Gulf of Mexico. These deposits, discovered less than five years ago, already account for 60 percent of total output, although fewer than a dozen of an estimated 180 oil-bearing structures have so far been tapped. Private forecasts of even larger probable reserves are based on encouraging hydrocarbon discoveries in other regions, notably oil at Colixah in the Gulf coast state of Vera Cruz and natural gas near Nuevo Laredo on the Texas border around Sebastiano Vizcaino on the Baja California peninsula. During the administration of President Luis Echeverria Alvarez, who left office 10 weeks ago, officials both purposefully underestimated and were highly secretive about the country's oil reserves, apparently for fear of conflicting pressures from the United States and the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, which Mexico has so far refused to join. A fierce controversy also raged among senior officials over whether this oil should be exploited rapidly for short-term economic advantage or should be kept in the ground "for future generations."

But Mexico's new president, Jose Lopez Portillo, has now given the green light for accelerated exploitation and exports of crude oil, not only because of the country's current economic crisis and its desperate need for foreign exchange, but also, according to officials, because of his confidence in the size of the reserves. Other evidence of the new government's more open oil policy is that Pemex has contracted an American company, Degolyer and Macdonald Inc., to prepare an independent report on the size of Mexico's reserves for the benefit of the company's numerous foreign creditors. The report is expected to be completed within one month. But the problems of extracting this oil and natural gas are enormous, with Pemex particularly hampered by the enormous cost involved, the delays in obtaining necessary equipment from abroad and the shortage of skilled Mexican engineers and technicians. As a result, even though Mexico nationalized its oil industry in 1938, the government is now considering contracting foreign drilling companies to develop the off-shore deposits on the Continental Shelf near Campeche. Several independent companies, from Texas and California, are currently holding preliminary talks with Pemex on the subject. Significantly, the United States Trade Center here is also organizing a Marine Technology Seminar and Exhibition next month.

The league, Mrs. Clusen pointed out, has been probing the whole spectrum of environmental, energy, and conservation of natural resources issues since 1956 - those halcyon days of "I like Ike" when concern over diminishing resources in the greatest country on earth was liable to get you branded a dingbat. The league paid a price for such far-sightedness, and for its tenacity and durability as well. It has suffered from what is known in these Melancholic times as an image problem. The organization's name summons up images of nicely dressed suburban matrons - with a 20-year-old B.A.S. in the liberal arts, fretting about good government. "In addition, the league is one of the few groups willing to address themselves to, and lobby for, a wide range of causes in an age of special interest groups - raising the suspicion that it has spread itself too thinly to be effective. "Some of the things said about our image was justified, some of it was not," Mrs. Clusen, who looks for all the world like a nice, suburban matron but who has the energy of a dervish, said. "The middle-class, middle-aged woman was the one who traditionally had the time for political activism," she said. "They were the ones who were free to volunteer. But I've been urging our members to take some new approaches, to allow for some shortcuts, to broaden our membership."

The efforts are paying for the first time in two years they believe they can win. As for the league? Well, its members will stick by the ERA while recruiting more women to run for elected office at the state, local and national level. Mrs. Clusen has had her eye on a congressional seat in the Green Bay district of Wisconsin for some time now. Welfare reform - a top priority of the Carter administration - is a major league concern, as is a new approach to environmental issues that will stress that it's the poor in urban areas that live in the most blighted environments of all. "We're not a single-issue organization," Mrs. Clusen said in classic understatement. "But that's an advantage to us. When we decide to support legislation, we look at its effects on jobs, racial and sex discrimination, a wider range of concerns. "The Clean Air Coalition, which we're working with - well, that's all they do. We bring a much-needed perspective to such causes bringing a weight to bear in backing an issue: a kind of respectability."

'Sneaky' maneuvers in Idaho legislature

BOISE (UPI) - Sneaky. That's about the only word to describe the way House Majority Leader Walter Little, R-New Plymouth, yanked the right-to-work bill out of the House State Affairs Committee Wednesday. Little, of course, doesn't see it that way. He feels he merely was exercising his prerogative of putting the bill on top of the committee's agenda and acting on it before some of its opponents showed up for the meeting. When questioned about it he said the committee members all knew what time the meeting was scheduled to start and if they were interested, they should have been there. On punctuality, he may have a point. Some of the members of that particular committee are notoriously late to its meetings - especially House Minority Leader Patricia L. McDermott, D-Pocatello. Miss McDermott just doesn't seem to function early (before 11) in the morning. Certainly, those who are diligent about showing up for so-called meetings to cool their heels until the slugabeds arrive to join them. But there is another principle involved. It's called "fair play." And that's what upset a lot of folks when Little hustled the right-to-work bill out of committee. In one case, that of Melvin Hammond, D-Boise, voting against sending out the bill - even though Hammond embraces the right-to-work concept. He said he played the "Devil's advocate" in urging the committee to wait for

Miss McDermott and others who, for varying reasons, could not be on hand for the start of the meeting. "Everybody knows I favor the concept," Hammond said. "But there were three tactical reasons for it. And it's common courtesy to wait until every one of them gets there on an issue that hot." One of the curious facts about the whole thing is that a poll of committee members indicates the result may have been the same if all the members had been present. As it was, the bill went to the floor without becoming law on an 8-7 voice vote. Wish everyone present had Hammond voting yes. It probably would have Echoes from the Statehouse: Every evening the Boise public television reporters videotape their legislative show on the fourth floor rotunda of the Capitol for playback later on the air. Their format includes interviewing a guest. While waiting for Gov. John V. Evans to show up Wednesday for an interview they whiffed away the time by asking each other the planned questions and giving stock, gag answers. Then Evans showed up for the real thing. And you guessed it, his first answer was the virtually word-for-word answer of the newsmen answered the same question earlier. The reporters nearly cracked up.

Bella rejects Carter bid

NEW YORK (UPI) — Former Rep. Bella Abzug said Saturday she has turned down an offer to join the Carter administration.

"Although I deeply appreciate President Carter's invitation to become part of his administration, I have decided not to accept," Mrs. Abzug said in a statement.

She said, "I feel I can be more effective at this time on a broad variety of issues by working through independent organizations or by seeking elective office."

Soviet dissident released

MOSCOW (UPI) — Authorities have released Vyacheslav Ivanov from a psychiatric hospital where he was held for two years following his arrest on a charge of distributing "anti-Soviet literature," dissident sources said Saturday.

The sources said Ivanov, 22, was discharged at the end of January with instructions to remain under "medical observation."

Ivanov was arrested in March, 1975 and examined by doctors who reported they found symptoms of "schizophrenia and feelings of intellectual superiority over the doctors."

He was in a psychiatric hospital rather than a psychiatric prison.

DETROIT (UPI) — Mark L. Monterosso may never again wear his orange jacket and a police bullet in the shoulder.

Suburban police admitted Saturday that Monterosso, 22, of Grosse Pointe Woods was the victim of mistaken identity by everyone involved.

Pointe Woods was robbed Friday by a middle-aged man wearing an orange parka. Moments later two Grosse Pointe Farms detectives, with a description that mentioned the parka, approached Monterosso wearing an orange jacket at another nearby bank.

"They identified themselves as police officers," Monterosso said later. "But they were in plain clothes, and I didn't believe them. I thought they were holding me up."

"I panicked and ran. I just wanted to get out of there because I had just made a large withdrawal."

Monterosso's quick departure understandably heightened the suspicions of the detectives, who started firing at his truck as they jumped into their unmarked police car.

The next few minutes were right out of the time television with Monterosso wildly driving through a suburban thoroughfare with police chasing and occasionally sneezing off a few shots. One hit Monterosso in the shoulder, and another grazed his head. At least 10 motorists hit the brakes.

Monterosso finally was stopped by Detroit police at a roadblock where he told officers that "robbers were chasing him. He was arrested and taken to St. John's Hospital for treatment of his

Contractor says he delivered will

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — LeVare Forsythe, an Alaska contractor who says he was a courier for the late Howard Hughes, has claimed he delivered the "Sealed Mormon will" to Melvin Dummar, a Utah service station, attorney Harold Rhoden told the court Friday.

Rhoden is acting executor of the late Howard Dummar said he left on a desk at the Mormon Church headquarters last April, Dummar, who tells about picking up an old man in the Nevada desert in 1968 who identified himself as Hughes, is named as a beneficiary in the Mormon Will.

Rhoden said that, if Forsythe's story could be proved, then it would in turn prove Hughes wrote the will which Forsythe said he delivered to the church headquarters in Salt Lake City last April.

Rhoden said he recently was in Anchorage to interview Forsythe and told District Judge Keith Hynes the contractor was willing to appear in Las Vegas to give a deposition.

Hynes granted Rhoden's motion for the taking of a deposition and set March 9 as the date. The deposition will be taken in private but the judge will be available to make rulings if questions arise during the proceeding.

Rhoden told the court Forsythe said he received a large manila envelope from Hughes. He said he opened it when the billionaire died April 5, 1976. It contained three smaller envelopes — one addressed to "Hughes' New York lawyer Chester Davis and another delivered to Dummar in late April. Rhoden did not disclose the contents of the third envelope but presumably it was Forsythe's payment for acting as a courier.

Wonder wins 4 Grammy awards

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Blind composer-singer Stevie Wonder captured four awards Saturday night to lead all recording stars in the 19th annual Grammy Awards telecast.

After performing live by satellite from Nigeria, the young black recording artist was announced winner of the best album of the year for his "Songs in the Key of Life."

Best record of the year, however, went to "This Masquerade" by George Benson. The coveted best-song of the year award went to Bruce Johnson for his composition, "I Write the Songs."

Earlier, Wonder captured Grammys for best rhythm and blues performance, "I Wish," and best-producer and best popular male vocalist for "Songs in the Key of Life."

Saturday night's triumph brought to 14 the total number of Grammys won by the young performer.

The two-hour televised Grammy Awards (CBS) were hosted by Andy Williams from the Hollywood Palladium with scores of recording stars, composers and musicians attending.

Natalie Cole and Linda Ronstadt ran away with the best female awards of the year. Miss Cole, daughter of the late Nat King Cole, won for best rhythm and blues performance with their "Chester & Lester."

Natalie Cole said, "I am more excited about winning this year than I was last year because the competition was a lot tougher. Diana Ross and Aretha Franklin.

"I didn't even think I would be nominated. It's been a great year and this award really builds my confidence. I'm going to work harder."

The Scotland Yard spokesman declined to identify the men or confirm there was any connection with Agee and Hosenball but the "Agee-Hosenball Defense Committee" identified them as Captain Aubrey, Duncan Campbell and John Berry.

Agee, a former CIA agent and Hosenball, 25, a reporter for the London Evening Standard, were served with deportation notices last November, for allegedly threatening "national security."

SPOKANE (UPI) — The city attorney says he may try to salvage Spokane's case against six adult bookstore owners.

A superior court judge dismissed the law suit on the grounds that the city's anti-pornography ordinance is unconstitutional, Judge Pro Tem Marcus Kelly said the ordinance violated first amendment rights to freedom of speech.

"We didn't expect to lose the case," said Richard Wrenn, city corporation counsel.

The city was suing six adult book store owners for selling hardcore pornographic material.

'Mexican standoff'

WRECKERS on either side of the border — one Mexican, one American — play tug of war with a vehicle load set with 550 pounds of marijuana which stalled in the mud of the Rio Grande River near El Paso, Tex., Thursday. After two hours, the Mexicans' cable snapped and the American wrecker towed the vehicle out. One suspect fled into Mexico but wasn't caught.

Bombings claimed

NEW YORK (UPI) — A Puerto Rican terrorist group which has claimed responsibility for numerous New York bombings in the past, said Saturday it set off blasts in two Manhattan office buildings during the night to push demands for Puerto Rican independence. The explosions, which blew out many windows and slightly injured two persons, came only hours after two Chicago Loop buildings were bombed. No one has claimed responsibility for the action in that city. New York police chemically tested blast debris and a one-page typewritten commu-

Sad tidings on weather

By United Press International
In a nation where millions would welcome the sound of thunder and the beat of a downpour, the National Weather Service tidings were anything but cheerful. "Weather," said the NWS, "continues to be quiet across most of the country."
Parts of the Midwest and of the northeast got light snow or rain. But most of the early Saturday falling moisture totaled less than a tenth of an inch.
Temperatures were hardly a problem, except for below zero readings in northern Minnesota and Maine, but there was no rain or snow of the soaking amounts needed in the drought belts of California and the Pacific Coast running north to Oregon, nor in the dry and dusty fields of the Dakotas, Minnesota and central Illinois.
Unseasonably warm temperatures were forecast for the West, where Stockton, Calif., and Las Vegas, Nev., have broken record highs for the date for four days in a row. Seattle had a record high for the date of 62 Friday.
With the drought and lack of snow keeping visitors away from the mountain regions, motel operators were doing a flourishing business along the Oregon coast as they have been most of the winter. Motels were booked almost solid for the three-day holiday weekend, and temperatures were in the low 70s.
In western Oregon and Washington, rainfall since last September, usual start of the wet season, has been only 25 per cent of normal. Washington cities worried about their water supplies, and areas which would have had up to 33 inches to this time have received 8. The Mt. Rainier snowpack, usually 12 1/2 feet deep at this time, measured 23 inches.

Governors of the two states considered cloud seeding programs. Idaho, to the east, said it would go to court to stop them, because they would dry out the clouds before they got to Idaho skies.
Gov. Dixy Lee Ray of Washington said water diversion from existing supplies might cost $50 million, "but the economic impact is not near as much as the potential economic loss."
Ken Woodward, chief of the California drought information center, dismissed proposals to bring snow from the overburdened "back east" to the drying reservoirs of California. "It costs too much," he said.
Woodward said it would cost about 20 cents to slip enough snow from Springfield, Ill., to California to create a gallon of water, or $62,400 an acre foot. He said nothing about the effect on Illinois farmers who are already hauling water for miles because their supplies are running short in central Illinois.
Monterey County in California imposed mandatory water rationing Friday, limiting residents to 50 gallons daily per person and making corresponding reductions to business and commercial enterprises.
On the opposite coast, in Rhode Island, the National Guard was trucking water from Providence to communities in Bristol County, but it was a matter of taste, not shortage.
A law raised the organic content of water in the reservoir used by the county water company, so that it tastes and smells "terrible," when mixed with chlorine.

Monterey limiting water use

MONTEREY, Calif. (UPI) — Mandatory water rationing in homes because of the California drought spread Saturday from the San Francisco Bay Area south to the Monterey Peninsula, where 50-gallon-a-day limits were imposed for individuals.
One cycle of an automatic washing machine is estimated to take about 30 to 40 gallons.
Besides drastically cutting back on home use, rationing edict, worked out by state and county officials, affects schools, businesses, golf courses, public agencies, hotels, motels and military facilities.
"The drought is far worse than any other in recorded history," Gov. Edmund G. Brown said in Los Angeles, where he disclosed a statewide 25 per cent cutback of water for personal use was being considered.
"The Monterey rationing, ordered late Friday, followed rationing steps in suburban communities north and east of San Francisco, and cutbacks of up to 60 per cent for California farmhands which produce 25 per cent of the nation's food and 40 per cent of its fresh fruit and vegetables.

Dixie burns

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) — Forest fires, many of them set by arsonists, plagued Thursday Alabama and Mississippi Saturday. Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace placed the National Guard on notice it might be called out to help deal with the situation.

River polluted

SOUTH CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI) — A large chemical corporation is investigating reports that large concentrations of carbon tetrachloride are polluting a 75-mile stretch of the Ohio River, a spokesman said Saturday.
The Environmental Protection Agency warned riverfront cities Friday that the chemical, used extensively in cleaning fluids, had caused cancer in animals and could possibly contaminate drinking supplies.
FMC was not named in connection with the chemical spill. But the EPA has been involved in litigation with FMC, and last week sued the corporation for allegedly refusing to test its waste waters.

Brake eyed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government wants to put motorists on rising hospital charges and hopes that prospect will not start a stampede to hike prices while the getting is good. Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph Califano said Saturday.
"I hope hospital administrators will realize they should leave their charges where they are unless they have cost increases, and not rush to increase charges simply because we are coming forth with a proposal like this," Califano said.

Election challenged

CHICAGO (UPI) — Edward Sadlowski, the insurgent candidate for the United Steelworkers of America presidency, has challenged the outcome of the Feb. 8 election he lost to Lloyd McBride.

Old Faithful.

New Faithful.

Good Old Faithful! Always got you where you were going. Always did it economically. And now, after 27 years, and 33 million cars, it's still a symbol of dependability and economy.

Now there's a car that's just as reliable and economical as Old Faithful ever was. It's New Faithful, the 1977 VW Rabbit. With engineering so advanced that automotive experts have hailed it as the kind of car Detroit will be building in the 1980's.

The Rabbit has a new fuel injection system, so it starts up quick as a bunny. Springs like one, too. 0 to 50 in just 7.7 seconds. The Rabbit also has advanced engineering features like negative steering roll radius, rack-and-pinion steering, and an independent stabilizer rear axle.

New Faithful lives up to Old Faithful's reputation for economy, too. Because it has fuel injection, you can use the most economical grade of gas. But you won't have to use it very often. Rabbit gets 37 mpg on the highway, 24 in the city. (That's EPA's estimate for manual transmission. Actual mileage may vary, depending on driving habits, car's condition and optional equipment.)

Dependability and economy. That's what Old Faithful gave a whole generation of Americans. And that's what New Faithful is giving a whole new generation of Americans.

Haldeman denies seeking pardon

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Former White House chief of staff H.R. Haldeman says he never sought a presidential pardon during the closing days of the Ford Administration. In a copy of the interview appearing in the current Political Animal, a Los Angeles-based newsletter, Haldeman said he asked persons seeking a pardon for him to "discontinue their efforts."

"I did not believe lobbying was the way to handle the pardon issue," said the convicted Watergate conspirator. "The President had to make the decision himself."

Former President Gerald R. Ford let office Jan. 20 without pardoning Haldeman or any of the other convicted persons in the Watergate case. Haldeman is appealing his conviction.

"There was no approach or effort on my part to seek a pardon from President Ford," Haldeman said, adding that he had become aware of informal efforts by a number of persons in Los Angeles and Washington to intercede with Ford on his behalf.

"I asked the persons involved to discontinue their efforts," he said.

Haldeman told the Los Angeles Times the quotes attributed to him in the Political Animal were accurate, but he would not expand upon them.

Court orders FDA to study laetrile

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Food and Drug Administration today announced a new investigation of the controversial "cancer drug" Laetrile, saying at the same time that it regards the medicine as worthless.

The agency said it would accept written testimony and conduct an oral hearing on the drug, because a federal court has directed it to do so as part of a suit against the government by backers of the drug, also called Vitamin B-17.

"This proceeding is being undertaken by FDA solely because the agency was directed to do so by the Court of Appeals," the FDA said. It added that it will continue in the meantime to crack down on commercial distribution of Laetrile wherever it is found.

There are several court cases pending on the subject and at least one instance where permission has been granted by the courts for persons seeking treatment to bring the drug into the country from Mexico. There have also been reports of widespread smuggling operations involving Laetrile.

In addition, the state of Alaska has recalled its use. Laetrile is found in the pits of apricots, peaches and bitter almonds. Promoters claim the cyanide involved seeks out cancerous cells and destroys them.

"Scientists have never found any evidence to support these theories," the FDA said. "No professional dietetic or nutrition group has ever recognized Laetrile as a vitamin."

Despite intensive efforts by many groups, the FDA said, "No professional dietetic or nutrition group has ever recognized Laetrile as a vitamin."

House committee blasts defense

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A House Armed Services Committee report today blistered the Pentagon for what it called inadequate and inefficient command and communications systems at home, abroad and in space.

"I expressed a concern that borders on dismay over the (Defense) Department's inability to deploy a satellite communications system after 16 years of effort," it said.

While located in the basement of the Pentagon, it said, "a realistic assessment must conclude that there is little possibility that the National Military Command Center would survive a nuclear attack directed against it."

The critical report on the Pentagon's global command, control and communications posture was compiled by the Investigations Subcommittee of the House Armed Services Committee.

Two of its three members and staff visited installations around the world, including the isolated British-owned island of Diego Garcia in the Indian Ocean, and had reported a number of findings and recommendations.

Among them:

— The Diego Garcia communications station "provides an essential link in worldwide command and control" and should be expanded to support naval and air units required to protect Indian Ocean shipping lanes in a wartime situation.

— "Most military command centers and their communications networks would not survive a nuclear attack directed against them."

— Soviet capability for communications jamming "presents a serious threat to command and control."

Nevada man found guilty of murder

ELKO, Nev. (UPI) — A district court jury Thursday found Donald L. MacMillan, 56, guilty of second degree murder and attempted murder in the fatal shooting of a man and MacMillan's ex-wife in a trailer court Sept. 26, 1976.

MacMillan was accused of breaking into the trailer of his ex-wife Lenora with a shotgun and wounding her. He then shot and killed Claude Munez Jr. with a .22-caliber pistol.

The district attorney's office had sought a first degree murder conviction.

New timber rules urged

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Forest Service Friday proposed new regulations which could ease some current restrictions on use of open-auction sales in selling timber from National Forests in Western states.

Under existing temporary rules, timber sales in communities classified as "dependent" because their industries rely heavily on lumber from adjacent National Forests, can be made on a half-and-half basis — half oral auctions, and half by sealed bids.

Officials said two significant changes would be made by the newly proposed rules.

First, the regulations would make it easier for communities to be classified as "dependent" by granting that status to towns where National Forest timber has accounted for 30 per cent or more of the local supply during the past two years.

Second, the proposed rules would allow the percentage of timber sold in dependent areas by oral auction to rise above the present half-and-half level "if there is an increase in the volume of timber purchased by firms outside the dependent communities."

Forest Service Chief John R. McGuffee said he hoped comments on the proposal, which will be used in preparing a final regulation, would offer suggestions on what level of sales to "outside" firms should be used as a trigger for stepping up oral auctions, and by what proportion the oral sales should be increased.

Officials noted that until passage of a new forestry law in 1976, most Western timber sales from National Forests were made by oral auctions while sealed bids were used in other areas.

Under the law, sealed bids are required unless special exceptions are granted to protect dependent communities.

Current temporary rules for granting the exception had stirred sharp controversy in some Western areas. Critics of the sealed bid system contended it allowed "outside" firms to drain off timber from local industries and threatened the economic stability of some communities.

The critics said firms in dependent communities could, under an oral auction system, outbid their "outside" competitors for timber needed to preserve local jobs. Defenders of the sealed bid system countered that oral auctions sometimes led to low bid prices in areas where competition was thin.

Report reveals lifestyle changes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The number of American couples living out of wedlock has more than doubled, since 1970 and now tops the 1 million mark, the Census Bureau reported Tuesday.

Its annual report on marriage and household lifestyles also said divorcees have increased dramatically over the past decades and young adults are "waiting longer to get married."

"Fundamental changes are occurring in marriage and family living," in the 1970s, the report said.

"Whether or not these changes represent only a temporary departure from past norms or the emergence of new and lasting lifestyles,"

Census said that in March, 1976, when the statistics were compiled, 1,329,000 unmarried Americans lived with a member of the opposite sex in a two-person household, compared with 654,000 in 1970.

Forty-eight per cent of the men and 43 per cent of the women reported had never been married.

The report also cited a "dramatic" increase in the number of divorcees as a "major development" of American lifestyle in recent years.

It said the divorce rate more than doubled between 1963 and 1975, from 2.3 per 1,000 population to 4.8 per 1,000.

In 1976, there were 2.8 million divorced men and 4.1 million divorced women who had not remarried.

Census said the average age at which men and women first marry increased by one year between 1960 and 1976.

For men, it said, the average first-marriage age increased sharply over the past two years after remaining stable from 1967 to 1975.

Cheat schemes eyed

CARSON CITY, Nev. (UPI) — Sophisticated cheating schemes have bilked Nevada casinos out of $25 million a year, gaming control officials told the Assembly Ways and Means Committee Friday.

Dennis Gomes, chief of the Gaming Control Board's audit division, said siphoning off such a large amount of revenue meant the state was losing a sizeable amount of taxes.

He told of one hotel-casino which recently went bankrupt after "organized crime" moved in and defrauded it of $100,000.

"A month later they came back to another casino, but we are able to stop it," Gomes said.

However, board chairman Philip Hanniffin said the casino had lost $80,000 before undercover agents were able to move in.

He said a typical method used to defraud casinos has been establishment of false identities and credit ratings. The cheaters then sign casino markers for chips. They will gamble a while then cash in the chips and disappear, leaving the casino unpaid.

Hanniffin has asked the legislature for 15 new audit investigators. Mike O'Callaghan has recommended it. Gomes said the needs at least 20 by 1978.

Idahoans worry about newcomers, change

If there's more of a tinge of dislike for Californians than other out-of-state groups that may be because most out-of-staters coming to Idaho are from California.
"The only reason I think we refer to Californians is because there are more of them coming," says Ostyn.
While no clear statistics are available, a recent survey done by the state division of tourism and industrial development showed that about 23 per cent of all inquiries about traveling in Idaho were Californians, the largest percentage of such inquiries.

Former Californians now living in Idaho say they've heard persons voice animosity toward Californians and other out-of-staters visiting or moving to Idaho.
However, most say they've never been slagged out for such animosity.
Diane Ronayne, Twin Falls, who moved from California 10 Idaho seven years ago, says no one's ever picked on her about being from California, "except in a joking sort of way."
Ronayne, a local magistrate court secretary, is just one of several former Californians who have ended up working in the county courthouse. When asked if animosity toward Californians in Idaho existed, Magistrate Judge Daniel B. Meehl, a native Californian who moved to Idaho almost 10 years ago, said, "Yes and no." Californians "is the essence of any dislike for out-of-staters here."

"I think there's a lot of it against Californians generally, but I feel that most of it isn't too serious," the judge says. "I would simply compare it to the attitude of Mexicans against Americans who visit their country."
While Mexicans voice a certain dislike for the American tourist in general, they treat individual Americans very well, Meehl says. "I have never suffered any personal animosity toward myself in Idaho because I was a Californian," the judge notes.

Another ex-Californian, Terry Castaneda, who moved to Twin Falls six years ago, says an animosity "against people who are the essence of Californians" shows views of any dislike for out-of-staters here.
Persons here have developed what she calls "the myth of the Californian."
Idahoans are afraid

Californians will bring with them the crime and urbanization which they know exist in California cities, Castaneda says.
Idahoans are "suspicious and fearful of the liberal attitudes, and big money that Californians bring with them," she says. Persons from Twin Falls are "very unorgiving of people who don't share the same views as they do."
Twin Falls is afraid of dissent, and debate as a public exercise is foreign to our town."
Mayor Ostyn suggests Californians and other persons from other states may be responsible for some of the animosity against them.

"People used to be big city life, may find rural Idaho a lot for them," he says, suggesting those persons should probably leave. "They call us back-woodsy and things like that, and we resent that."
However, Ostyn says, "I have no animosity toward other people from other states moving to Idaho, as long as they really want to contribute. I have no objection to my neighbors being Californians who want to make this a better place to live."

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI) — A strong earthquake rocked the Kamchatka Peninsula in eastern Russia and the Aleutian Islands of Alaska Saturday, seismographic stations reported.
There were no immediate reports of damages or injuries.
The epicenter was in the Bering Sea between Kamchatka and Attu Island.

Hostages freed

HARLINGEN, Tex. (UPI) — A doctor Saturday night injected a sleeping sedative into a man who had held two women hostages throughout the day, and the man released the hostages and surrendered.
The hostages were released unharmed about 6:30 p.m. after a daylong chase through far South Texas and a standoff at a Harlingen motel.
The man, identified as Roy Aguilar, 46, of Houston, was sent to the Valley Baptist Medical Center. He was semiconscious and under guard.

Demolition plan squeeze on water

Bureau of Reclamation records substantiate the fact that enough water runs down the Snake River and other tributaries, including large natural springs to fill the reservoir by spring.
"It is an easy reservoir to fill," Art Larson, Snake River watermaster, said. "If you want to search the outflow down to nothing, you can store quite a considerable amount."
Busch said the flow from the natural springs that empty into the reservoir contribute more than 800,000 acre feet of water during the summer months.
Add during the flood season, according to Busch, the total storage has been known to store as much as 400,000 acre feet, or nearly one-fourth of its total capacity, in 10 days.
Presently the reservoir is filling at a rate of 30,000 acre feet per week and should be full in a month's time, Larson said.
In the event of another dry year, however, the amount of water which is allowed to escape during the time the contractor is working to breach the old dam could be a significant figure.
A year average fill rate for the reservoir indicates about 150,000 acre feet of water are usually stored in the reservoir during the six-week period when the contractor will be making his breach.
And, according to disclosure

Snake pump papers 'held'

0-2 permits, Fleanor said, apply to the Snake River between Milner Dam and the Oregon border.
"This policy," he said, is still in effect. He said the department would not approve any water applications for major farmland development until it's determined what happens with the Carey Act applications.
Despite his statement, Higginson-Friday said there was no policy of not acting on applications for Snake River water for private farmland development. He said the department is considering the applications on a "case-by-case" basis.
He did say that a developer would be "eventually wiped out" if he were to put in a large farmland project, under a recent permit and the federal government later gave the go-ahead to the Carey Act projects, Higginson maintained, would leave the developer without water.
Both Fleanor and Higginson said the department has a policy of not issuing water permits for development of public lands under the Carey Act or desert entries until a project has gained approval from the federal government.

"The difficulty... is that a permit once issued becomes a property right which sometimes is used for speculative purposes," Higginson said. He maintained the department should issue permits for leaseable projects, not for use as a marketable commodity.
Higginson said the department is approving some permits to pump from the Snake River for projects on public land which are ready to go ahead and are up against federal guidelines for development.
But the Carey Act applications may be backlogged at the Department of Water Resources for some time.
Larry Woodard, associate state director for the Bureau of Land Management, said a few Carey Act applications have been approved in Idaho "on a very small basis."
Until new regulations are adopted governing disposal of public lands, Woodard said there would be "no more approvals of development projects."
"I wouldn't expect any major authorizations for at least a year," he said.
The new regulations are likely to permanently restrict farmland development on public desert lands. They will be written to mesh with the federal Organic Act passed by Congress this fall.
This act places emphasis on retention of public lands, in contrast to the past policy of favoring disposal of desert lands for farmland development.
However, the regulations adopted under the Organic Act may not affect Carey Act development, depending on the outcome of a suit brought by the State of Idaho against the federal government. The state is seeking to administer the Carey Act program.

Command menaced

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Pentagon's global communications systems are inadequate, inefficient and incapable of surviving nuclear attacks, a congressional report said Friday.
"Most military command centers and their communications networks would not survive a nuclear attack directed against them," reported the investigations

Gets eagle

BRUCE ARMGA, son of Mr. and Mrs. Larry H. Armga, Twin Falls, received his eagle award Feb. 13. Bruce, 15, a senior in high school, is a member of Explorer Post No. 700 and was sponsored by the LDS 3rd Ward.

Payola scandal revives

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Payola may be the ultimate rip-off for '50s and '60s nostalgia freaks.

The broadcast industry saw few tunes, plows them under, reaps golden oldies from barely dusty memory. The word "payola" is a spinoff from these activities.

Now the Federal Communications Commission — which regulates broadcasting — is holding hearings into whether payola has gotten sophisticated.

When the FCC first investigated in 1964, payola was simple: money for a "plug," a disc jockey would spin a record often to help make it a hit.

Since then, the music industry has grown so much that hit record is not the only way to make big money. Concert tours by name performers give local promoters a shot at a quick profit — and the risk of losing their shirts.

In two days of hearings, the FCC has been told disc jockeys are playing and replaying the records of musicians and singers appearing at concerts they are promoting, and threatening other concert promoters they will not play the records of other artists unless the disc jockeys are dealt in.

A Washington rock disc promoter testified that a group of disc jockeys at WOLM — a black-music station regarded as having the power to "make or break" a record or an entertainer — threatened not to play the records of musicians and singers coming to Washington for concerts he promoted.

William Washington, president of Dimensions Unlimited, Inc., finished his testimony Thursday, and the hearings were recessed until Tuesday. After another promoter, John Boyle, president of Cellar Door, Inc., testified, the disc jockeys will have their say.

Ultimately at stake is the license of WOL, whose owner, Edmont Sonderling, also will testify.

Sonderling and his disc jockeys spoke with reporters Thursday, denying anything illegal was going on. Sonderling said he has ordered the disc jockeys to curtail their activities, but only because it was "interfering with our work ... causing a problem ... with advertisers."

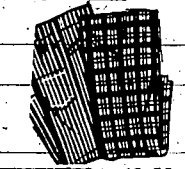

McI Edwards, the station's music director, and the president of D.J. Productions, Inc. — made up of disc jockeys at the station — said Washington misrepresented a $4,000 payment made to D.J. on April 18-19, 1975, concert by the black group Earth, Wind and Fire.

Edwards charged Washington and Boyle had a near-monopoly of dates at the Capital Center, but the bad date tied up the $4,000 was for the rights to the date.

Right to work bill passes Gem House

BOISE (UPI) — The House passed the controversial right-to-work bill 41-29 Friday after a 14-hour session in which sometimes continued debate.

After the measure passed, the House sent back to committee a referendum on the issue — heading back an effort to dispose of the bill on the floor.

Opponents contended the right-to-work bill would guarantee "freedom" to working people to choose whether to join a union or be represented by a union in negotiations.

Proponents said the bill was a union-buster. It would force unions to base their dues on the number of workers in the house, rather than on the number of workers who actually work for the employer.

The debate even when Rep. Melvin Hammond, D-Restburg, in the chair, speaking on the floor, put the bill on the floor. Hammond, an employer, said the bill would prohibit a union membership as a condition of employment.

"Good unions don't need compulsion and bad unions don't deserve them," Floor Sponsor John Brooks, R-Gooding, said. "Workers should be free to decide whether to join a union or not."

Rep. John Rendon, R-Boise, chairman of the State Affairs committee that sent the bill to the floor for consideration, gave a major address against it — saying as he did so he might be committing political suicide.

He said the issue had been mounted in Idaho by out-of-state interests and the money they brought in, he said, "has created discord in this state — pitted father against son, friend against friend, people against other people, labor against industry — and for what cause?"

Idahoans, he said, have lived in peace for 30 years.

Elsewhere on the legislative scene: The House completed legislative action 66-3 on a Senate bill to increase penalties for using a firearm during the commission of a crime.

The Senate adopted a resolution calling on the governor to utilize all measures to alleviate the consequences of a severe winter storage this year. It also approved a resolution for Idaho to join Washington and Oregon in forming a tri-state legislative fisheries committee.

Residency question aired

GOODING — Gooding County officials were in session today with assistants from the Idaho attorney general's office over legal questions on the residency of County Commissioner Jim Wilkins.

Gooding Pres. Atty. Phil Becker said he has given the three county commissioners the report received earlier this week from Ursula Kettler, assistant attorney general, regarding the county's investigation of charges Wilkins does not reside in the commissioner district in which he was elected last November.

Becker said the report "basically reviews the facts" and includes copies of newspaper accounts of the situation and Wilkins' voter registration card.

The state officials are saying "Here are all the facts — make up your mind," according to Becker. But he said "We have some additional information they don't have."

He said this material, which he declined to describe, would be presented during this morning's conference with the state's attorneys.

According to law, Becker said the state attorney general's office can not make a legal ruling.

"They can give opinions on the law but their interpretations are not the law," Becker said. By conferring with the state attorneys, Becker said, "We're trying to take it out of the commissioners' hands." He indicated final decision on Wilkins' eligibility to serve probably will be decided in district court. The attorney general's office may file the court action, he said.

Wilkins' home is situated about 250 feet inside the boundary between commissioner districts 1 and 2, putting his residence in district 2. He was elected from district 1 and owns property in that district.

Prior to the November election, Wilkins stayed in the former theater building for a week, claiming that his "camping out" there constituted residency within the district.

Richfield gains deputy

RICHFIELD — Richfield will have a resident deputy sheriff soon.

Jack Olson was sworn into office Monday by Lincoln County officials and will move to Richfield as soon as housing is available.

According to Ruth Swainston, Richfield city clerk, the community has not had a resident deputy since the death of Martin Whitesell about two years ago.

Mayor Ward, county commission chairman, attended the Richfield City Council meeting Monday night to sign a lease for county use of the town's sanitary landfill.

Mrs. Swainston said the county is taking over operation of the landfill in the county but until a central site is selected the county will assume operation of the present Richfield city dump east of the city limits.

Council members discussed the uniform building code with Edwin Johnson, county building inspector. The city's new building code was being second reviewed.

Dog licenses are now due and should be paid at the city office which is located in the Richfield Highway district office.

Helmet law repeal gains Senate nod

BOISE (UPI) — Repeal of a law requiring motorcycle riders to wear helmets was endorsed by the Idaho Senate today.

The repeal was passed by the Senate 21-12 and now goes to the House for consideration.

The measure sparked the only major debate in a busy morning in the Senate.

Senators approved 15 other bills before adjourning 11:45 Monday morning. The House did not meet.

Sen. Kenneth Bradshaw, R-Wendell, floor sponsor of the helmet repealer, said the law was not helping to the extent that it was intended.

"Arguing that it provided a 'false sense of security,'" Bradshaw explained that in California, which does not have the helmet law, motorcycle fatalities were no greater, than in states which have the statute.

Gem bean use pushed

POCAHELLO, Idaho (UPI) — Sen. James McClure says he will include dry beans on a list of products eligible for sale through the "Food for Peace" program.

McClure Saturday asked U.S. Budget and Management Director Bert Lance to include dry beans in the program because they are not a "USDA price-supported commodity."

McClure said dry bean producers face an oversupply situation and the fact they are off the USDA price support list "has nothing to do with the supply and demand factors."

"Dry beans are an excellent food item and easily shipped and stored. They are one of the best food items to be used in the Food for Peace program."

"This, coupled with the fact that they are in surplus nationwide makes it apparent that immediate action must be taken to secure markets for these dry beans wherever possible," McClure said.

65-plus readings OK

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. John Evans told state institutions that take care of persons with health problems to "waive when necessary" his directive to "keep state buildings at 66 degrees in temperature."

"Those of us who are healthy and working can do plenty to conserve energy without making it more difficult for people who already have more than their share of problems," Evans said.

State health officials advised Evans that most elderly persons and those with chronic health conditions will be able to make the adjustment to lower temperatures satisfactorily.

More CIA payoffs charged

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Newspapers named nearly a score more foreign dignitaries — from the Dalai Lama to a Thai police chief — as alleged recipients of secret CIA payoffs Saturday. The White House stuck to its "no comment" policy.

Archbishop Makarios, the president of Cyprus, called a Washington Post report that he got $1 million a year from the CIA in the late 1960s "unworthy of denial." But he denied it anyway.

In Bonn, a spokesman for Willy Brandt denounced a similar report about the former Social Democratic chancellor of West Germany as "a slanderous imputation." At the White House, a spokesman referred reporters to the "no comment" policy announced Friday in response to the Post story that Jordan's King Hussein got millions of dollars in CIA money from 1957 until President Carter stopped payment this week.

It is the administration's policy not to comment on either to confirm or deny any stories concerning alleged covert activities," it said.

In Amman, a spokesman for the pro-Western Arab monarch called the newspaper story about Hussein "a combination of fabrication and distortion."

The Post said Saturday the CIA also paid money to Mikarios and put the Dalai Lama, the exiled Tibetan leader, on its payroll in 1953.

But Makarios replied in Nicosia, "I did not have, nor was it possible for me to condescend to have, any relation with the CIA or other services of this kind."

The New York Times, meantime, quoted intelligence officials as saying many other foreign leaders got CIA payments over the years.

Foreign presidents it named in that category were Chiang Kai-shek of Taiwan, Ramon Magsaysay of the Philippines, Syngman Rhee of South Korea and Ngo Dinh Diem of South Vietnam — all deceased — and Mobutu Sese Seko of Zaire and Eduardo Frei of Chile. Mobutu is still in power.

The Times quoted intelligence officials as saying cash payments also went to former Mexican President Luis Echeverria when he was interior minister, Carlos Andres Perez when he was interior minister of Venezuela, Gen. Phao Sriyanond when he was police chief of Thailand, and Holden Roberto, leader of the National Front Angolan guerrillas that lost the civil war to Marxist forces last year.

It quoted sources as saying these men were paid for supplying intelligence information helpful to the U.S. government.

The Post said the court-enscumbered manuscript of a book by two former U.S. intelligence officers, named six foreign leaders as having secret financial relationships with the CIA.

Carter seeks aid

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter asked college and university leaders Saturday to "help me with the problems that afflict our students" and said he in turn would ease the paperwork burden imposed on them by government.

"I want foremost a relationship with you that is continuing so that you might help me with the problems that afflict our nation from an academic and also a practical standpoint, and I might help you as President through the government structure," he told them.

Carter was dressed casually in brown slacks and a suede sweater for the Cabinet Room meeting, although the other men wore suits. Reporters attended for the first two or three minutes of the meeting.

The President's official schedule was light for the weekend. It listed additionally only Sunday School and morning worship at the First Baptist Church here.

Election '76 cost tallied

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government spent more than $72 million in taxpayer dollars to finance last year's presidential election, still has almost $24 million left over, the Federal Election Commission said Saturday.

A nearly complete accounting of America's first publicly financed presidential election was released Saturday by the FEC. It revealed about one quarter of the available money was not spent and may be used in 1980 instead.

The taxpayer money comes from the $1 individual checkoff on income tax returns.

The FEC is still considering requests for almost $1 million more in matching money from eight Democratic primary contenders trying to pay off their debts. Jimmy Carter asked for almost $60,000 of that amount.

Both Carter and former President Ford spent the $21.8 million federal limit allowed them in the general election.

Other Democrats receiving matching funds were former Sen. Fred Harris of Oklahoma $463,099; Sen. Frank Church of Idaho $622,747; California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. $459,089; Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas $511,199; Sen. Birch Bayh of Indiana $469,189; Pennsylvania Gov. Milton Shapp $299,066; former Peace Corps director Sargent Shriver $205,069; former North Carolina Gov. Terry Sanford, $348,588 and antiabortion candidate Ellen McCormack $244,125.

Plans OK'd

BOISE (UPI) — Final plans for an $800,000 remodeling project at State Hospital South and an estimated $500,000 nursing addition at the Idaho State School and Hospital were approved Saturday by the Permanent Building Fund Advisory Council.

The project at State Hospital South includes interior remodeling and replacement of iron bar windows to meet building code standards, Rep. Boney Hedlund, council chairman, said.

Plans for the skilled nursing care addition at the Idaho State School and Hospital were approved and will now be forwarded to the federal government for approval.

Loans out?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter intends to ask Congress to abolish the $32 million loan program for college students, according to the chairman of the House Education and Labor Committee.

Rep. Carl D. Perkins, D-Ky., said Saturday that he has "strongly protested" the cut, which Carter plans to seek under the budget revisions being submitted Tuesday.

Some day, it'll be in orbit

SPACE shuttle orbiter "Enterprise," riding atop its mother ship, a modified Boeing 747, comes in for a landing after completing its first two-hour flight at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., on Friday. A chase plane lands close behind, at right. A longer, higher test flight is planned Tuesday. (UPI)

'Higher, faster' test set

EDWARDS AFB, Calif. (UPI) — The next goal for the world's biggest "biplane" is higher, faster.

The "Enterprise," first of the space shuttles intended to usher in a new era of workday practically to space flights, left the ground for the first time Friday, riding piggyback atop a Boeing 747.

The specially braced Jumbo jet carried the spacecraft on maneuvers over the Southern California desert for two hours, kicking off a year-long series of tests.

The strange-looking four-winged combination of the airliner-size shuttle atop the massive 747, was dubbed "the largest biplane in the world, now flying" by NASA pilot Thomas McMurtry.

Pilot Fitzhugh Fulton said the "flight went exactly as he planned." A NASA spokesman said the next test will be conducted Tuesday, as scheduled, with a goal of flying "higher and faster."

"Most of the time, we couldn't even tell the shuttle was there," said McMurtry, who piloted the combination to 16,000 feet at speeds up to 227 miles an hour. There was no problem, even in 30 degree turns or flying with one engine failed, he said.

It was a mild debut for a craft scheduled to thunder into space at 17,000 m.p.h., streaking to altitudes up to 690 miles in the 1980s.

The orbiter cockpit was unmaneuvered and its controls were inoperative. In later tests, two pilots will take their places in the cockpit of the Enterprise before it is finally launched by explosive bolts to glide to a landing in a test scheduled for July.

Although the shuttle weighs 75 tons, bringing the combined weight of the two craft to more than a half-million pounds, that is "less than a fully loaded 747 weighs taking off from Los Angeles for London," he said.

Fulton reported early in the flight some "very slight buffeting in the rear" of the plane, but discovered the 747's engines were out of balance and corrected the problem.

The shuttle, named the "Enterprise" after the space ship in the "Star Trek" television series, is the first of a series of shuttles intended to make orbital journeys, more like airplane flights and less like the pioneering space shots of the 1960s.

The first orbital launch is scheduled for 1979.

Archbishop buried

© N.Y. Times Service
 NAIROBI, Kenya — The body of the Anglican archbishop of Uganda was secretly buried by Ugandan authorities Friday, foresting the cancellation of funeral services that had been scheduled for today.

Wednesday within hours of their arrest on charges of involvement in an alleged coup against the rule of President Idi Amin.

The official explanation of the deaths has drawn widespread and vociferous expressions of disbelief.

The news was announced here Saturday by Canon Burgess Carr, the director of the All African Conference of Churches, who said he had been told by the widow of Archbishop Janani Lumumina in a telephone conversation that the body of her husband had been "disposed of" by government officials. The information was further confirmed in a phone call to an Anglican churchman in Kampala, the Ugandan capital, who said that a memorial service would be held Sunday without a funeral since Lumumina's body had not been released to his family.

According to Ugandan officials, Lumumina and two government officials died in an automobile accident on Water projects face funding ax

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter will ask Congress to delete funds in the next fiscal year for 18 water projects, including mammoth irrigation and power projects in Arizona, North Dakota and California, it was learned Saturday.

The cuts, designed to stop construction on "unnecessary and environmentally unsound" dams and water projects, will be included in proposed budget revisions the White House sends to Congress Tuesday, sources said.

The projects include the $1.4 billion Central Arizona Project, the controversial $562 million Garrison Diversion Irrigation and power generation project in North Dakota, which Canada had objected to for environmental reasons, and the $74 million Auburn concrete arch dam in California which has been under review for fear it might not be able to withstand earthquakes.

The Army Corps of Engineers projects for which funding was proposed halted include: each in Basin, Arkansas; Freeport, Illinois; Grove Lake, Kansas; Dayton, Pointsville and Yatesville Lake, Kentucky; Atchafalaya River, Bayous, Chene, Bœuf and Black channel and harbor project, Louisiana; Dickey-Lincoln School Lakes, Maine; Nevada, Park Lake, Missouri; and Lukfata Lake, Oklahoma.

Bureau of Reclamation projects include: the Central Arizona Project; Auburn Dam, California; Delores and Fruitland Mesa, Colorado; Savery-Pot, Hook, Colorado; Wyoming; Garrison Irrigation Project; Ona, Irrigation Project in South Dakota; and Central Utah, Bonneville, Utah.

Defense savings planned

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The administration will propose a $2.7 billion reduction in next year's defense budget and consider "substantial" cuts involving personnel in the future, a senior defense official said Saturday.

The official said the administration will draft in the coming year a "comprehensive" package of defense savings that would cover such items as military retirement, bases, transfers, post-exchanges and schools.

"In the long term the savings will have to come from personnel," he said, discussing general terms of the budget changes President Carter will send Congress on Tuesday.

"The sweeping statements are true," the official said, "but working them out is more complicated. You can't do something in four weeks, maybe not even a year, but you can make a start. That's where the substantial savings are."

Rupert first Valley town to fight drought

By SHANE O'NEILL
Times-News writer

RUPERT—Rupert is the first town in the Magic Valley to go on emergency energy conservation measures to combat the current drought.

Mayor Wendell Johnson called a special meeting of the council Saturday morning. The council voted to cut its street lighting by one-third, as the city did during the 1973 oil crisis.

Councilman Clark Cameron's motion also included preparations for conserving electricity on the lighting of baseball fields and tennis courts when the summer season arrives.

The council also called on individuals and businesses to follow the city's lead and save at least 10 per cent on their energy consumption, "so that we might not be required to spill out of the existing (water-storage) inventory for energy production."

Cameron emphasized that the city was not trying to convince people there is a current electricity shortage. He said the major concern is saving the water now stored in dams on the Snake River, rather than having it dissipated for energy production.

"In other words," Cameron said, "we're conserving water."

Water conservation was the other point made by Mayor Johnson in opening the meeting.

He said Northwest Public Power Supply officials reported this week that only 59 million acre feet of water currently is stored in northwest reservoirs.

That equals the amount that was stored in reservoirs in August of 1973, a bad drought year. It is 11 million acre feet short of the Feb. 7 storage of 70 million that year.

The major called for voluntary cuts in energy consumption. Whether 5 per cent or 25 per cent, he said, "everybody should make some effort to save energy."

Mayor Johnson cited the Idaho Power Co. decision—to accept no more applications for farm electrical connections. He pointed out that all electrical users are on the same grid of power lines and a shortage for one will affect everyone.

Cameron added, "Everybody's going to have to suffer if and when we have to cut back."

Commenting that the shortage that triggered the Idaho Power curtailment is "detrimental to our agricultural economy," Councilman W. F. "Bill" Whitton proposed support for Sen. James McClure in his effort to bring large diesel generation plants into the area to supplement hydroelectric power.

He said, without enough electricity to lift water for well irrigation systems, "crops will become a total disaster."

"We could return back to a desert state here in a hurry," he warned.

Councilman Dwinnelle Allred, manager of First Security Bank, said crop failure from lack of water "would bankrupt our economy."

The council discussed other measures that probably will be taken at a later meeting.

Cameron suggested changing the city's present five-day rotation basis on flood irrigation of lawns to a seven-day rotation. He added that the council should "put some teeth in the ordinance so that we can control, with penalties, the amount of water used from the city's low pressure system."

Whitton suggested the city put its lower rates into effect for sprinkler irrigation beginning March 1, but the council delayed action after Cameron and Allred voiced fears it might induce people to use more water than necessary.

The city will maintain a record on electrical use to make public reports on the consumption cuts. Whitton also proposed that a log be kept of effluent going through the city's sewer treatment plant, with reports made on water conservation.

TF tax exemption deadline March 15

TWIN FALLS—All widows and disabled persons or others eligible for property tax exemption must reapply for the exemption for 1977 by March 15.

County Assessor G. W. "Bill" Clark said persons must apply in person at his office on the third floor of the county courthouse by the deadline of March 15 if they are to continue exemption for the coming year or if they are newly qualified and wish to apply for exemptions for the first time.

It is necessary to apply each year for exemptions, Clark said. Those qualified include widows whose husbands have died, not because of divorce; service-connected disabled, partially or totally and non-service-connected permanent disability; blind persons or any person known to have been taken by a hostile force as prisoner, hostage or otherwise; fatherless children under the age of 13, or persons 65 years of age or older as of Jan. 1, 1977, with a total household income not to exceed $5,500 during the calendar year.

Clark said this amount may be increased to $6,000 by the legislature this session in which case the assessor will approve applicants coming within that income range. He said such persons should make an application prior to the deadline and their claims will be approved, depending on legislative action.

New applicants or persons who are exempt for the first time this year must bring proof of income and their Social Security numbers. Exemption amounts are based on income totals.

Twin Falls city panel weighs center plan

TWIN FALLS—The Twin Falls City Council will reconsider plans to purchase the Chateau Bar and convert it into a senior citizens center at its regular meeting Monday night.

Two weeks ago the council voted against such a move, for the first time refusing to acquire property under the Community Development program. The city has already spent close to $90,000 under the program to purchase land in and around Rock Creek to be used as a park. The purpose of the program has been to clean up blighted areas of the city and construct a park in the canyon.

Boy Scout 'drive' already launched

TWIN FALLS—Boy Scout officials and volunteers will be "driving" toward a $59,000 goal in the annual Snake River Council fund campaign for 1977.

Already launched, the drive covers the eight-county area but because of the United Way allocation to Boy Scouts from Twin Falls there will be no solicitation in the city of Twin Falls.

Funds will be used to maintain the scouting services on a council-wide basis. Perc Peterson, council chairman, said it takes $24 a year to keep one boy in scouting. This covers the professional staff and administrative expenses, properties, camps, insurance, telephone, paper and mailing expenses.

The theme of this year's drive will be playing around a 10-hole golf course. When the 10 holes have been played the drive will have reached the 100 per cent mark.

Many scout families are currently holding annual dinners to kick off the campaign in communities around Magic Valley, Peterson said.

He said chairmen have been named for each county with Bert Armstrong as Twin Falls County chairman; Dale Smith, Cassia County; Ron Tanner, Minidoka County; Jack Basolo, Blaine and Lincoln counties, and Mike Pacer, Northside areas.

Chess players compete in TF

LARRY Parsons, Boise, studies the board before making a play while Phil Leavitt, Pocatello, enters his play on the tally sheet during the first day of the Idaho Chess Championship Tournament this weekend at the Twin Falls YMCA. Twenty-seven Idaho chess players are competing for money awards and trophies at the two-day meet. The players will face each other through five rounds of play in three sections. First place winners in each of the three sections will pocket $50 and carry home a trophy. Second and third place winners will receive $25 and $10 respectively. An extra $50 and a trophy will be awarded to the new state champion.

TF County adopts $9.63 million budget

BY BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—The tentative Twin Falls County budget of $9.63 million for the first nine months of 1977 was adopted late Friday afternoon by county commissioners without change.

The action followed a full week's period allowed for public hearings on the tentative budget which by law can be reduced but not increased before final adoption.

Merl E. Leonard, commission chairman, said there were a number of questions about the budget but no protests.

"Once we explained the various expenditures to those attending our hearing they offered no objections," Leonard said.

Leonard said the budget, including the separate $6.5 million Magic Valley Memorial Hospital budget, revenue sharing and the $400,000 anti-inflation federal money, reflects a 24 per cent increase over the spending rate of 1976 for a nine-month period.

Without the hospital budget which is nearly all from hospital fees and room charges, and without revenue sharing, there is about 11.79 per cent increase over 1976.

Leonard said, the $10,000 in federal anti-inflation money is shown in the budget general fund as it is being used for salary increases for the county.

Revenue sharing of $1.02 million compared to $1.05 million for all of 1976, is budgeted separately and will be used for capital improvements, social services, transportation and so on. The entire county airport construction fund will come from revenue sharing this year and amount to $200,000.

Commissioner Leonard said the only budgets which were questioned by taxpayers attending a full day's hearing session Monday were law enforcement and county fair.

He said Sheriff Paul Corder will add another vehicle in 1977 and will hire an additional deputy to provide full-time jailer duty on the fourth floor area of the courthouse. Leonard said a sizable amount has been budgeted for travel costs in the sheriff's office because of the many trips it is now necessary for officers to make to return prisoners and persons scheduled for court appearances.

In all department budgets, he said, some space has to be made for emergencies, and especially in the sheriff's case where a large event extending over several days could require special services from the county officers and wipe out a large amount of the salary budget.

Leonard said each department has left some such flexibility in the budget, and if the funds are not needed they are not spent but are rebudgeted for following year.

The Twin Falls County Fair budget is actually down about $25,000 over the 12-month budget for last year and down about $25,000 on a 12-month basis for 1977 compared to the expenditures of 1976.

This year the county fair board has asked for $194,102, most of which comes from the gate receipts from the four-day county fair and rodeo. This compares to $219,800 budgeted for 1976, but covering 12 months.

For capital outlay this year, the fair board has asked for $11,000 compared to $18,500 last year, but this does not include the revenue sharing money which is earmarked for a new swine barn and judging ring similar to the sheep building which was erected last year.

Museum officials eye solar heating

RUPERT—The Minidoka County Historical Society's new bi-centennial museum may use solar heating.

Directors have been probing the possibilities of heating the 76 by 46-foot building with solar energy.

The society Thursday night authorized board member W. F. "Bill" Whitton to apply to the Energy Resource Development Administration (ERDA) for a federal grant to install a solar heating system.

Whitton also received the group's approval to search for a designer to plan the solar unit.

Whitton unveiled plans Thursday night for using solar energy to heat the structure.

He also enlisted federal handling of its top priority programs to develop new sources of energy. He said he has been able to get no help from the federal government on ways to design a solar heating system.

Whitton said Sens. Frank Church and James McClure and Rep. George Hansen have obtained manuals at his request, but the manuals are outdated.

He said he has presented the society's plans to both senators, but they have been unable to come up with no response other than that the society must furnish plans for a solar device.

Whitton told the society members that he has been unable to get any assurances that federal funding will be available. The best indication is that some federal funds might be available in 1978.

Despite the problems he listed, Whitton said he thinks the museum will be completed late this year and will be operational in early 1978.

The museum is a joint project of the society and the Minidoka County Bicentennial Committee, which chose it as the group's permanent bi-centennial year project.

McClure to visit Rupert

RUPERT—Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, has scheduled two speaking engagements this week in the Mini-Cassia area.

The state's junior senator will be the main speaker for a Lincoln Day fund-raising reception and banquet Friday at the Rupert Elks Club.

A cocktail hour is scheduled at 6:30 p.m., according to Minidoka County Republican Chairman Bus Howard. The dinner will be at 7:30 p.m.

McClure is scheduled as guest speaker again the following day for the 39th annual meeting of the Raft River Rural Electric Cooperative, Inc.

The meeting will be at 1 p.m. in the Raft River High School auditorium in Malila.

The meeting itself is expected to include an update on the geothermal project the REA co-op has jointly with the Energy Resource Development Administration on land south of Malila.

Mississippi quake prone

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — California may be the center of U.S. earthquake activity but there is the possibility of a great quake in the Mississippi Valley where buildings are not as quake-resistant as a federal expert says.

Major quakes have shaken the American Midwest in the past, a panel discussion ending a two-day conference at Caltech on major earthquakes was told Tuesday.

"But it isn't known how often they may occur," said R.B. Matheson of the United States Geological Survey noted an engineer responsible for instrumentation to record tremors.

While there has been a great deal of concern that old structures in California — built before earthquake codes were tightened — may collapse, there are also many such buildings in the Midwest, he said.

"An area from Memphis, Tenn. to St. Louis is rich in old structures — I can place instruments there and know I'll get readings," he told the conference at the university.

Don Anderson, head of the Caltech Seismology Laboratory, said a great earthquake struck the Midwestern area about 1811. It is not known when another may occur, he said, since there are no records to indicate their frequency.

Dr. Charles Richter, who in 1935 established the commonly used scale measuring the magnitude of earthquakes, said 90 per cent of losses in lives and property in earthquakes are due to unqualified structure and could be prevented. An estimated 14,000 unsafe buildings still stand in Los Angeles, he said, but there are even more in other areas of the state.

The greatest likelihood of a great quake, near 8.0 on the Richter scale, would be in Southern California, he said, because there has not been such a quake in the area since 1857.

San Francisco, however, suffered a great quake in 1906 which involved the northern part of the San Andreas Fault.

Richter said he had a tendency to play down earthquake predictions — by administrators go after predictions like hogs after a full trough.

"It's like thinking there's life on Mars. It's an obsession with them."

Anderson, who spoke on the major quakes, said the motion of tectonic plates — the sections of the Earth's crust — causes earthquakes, and one large quake may trigger another somewhere else.

It has been proposed that there is a migration pattern, he said, "which draws a line around the Pacific Basin." He said quakes were known to have triggered other similar disturbances along the Aleutian Arc.

Stivers grumbles over bills

By CHRIS PECK
Times-News writer

BOISE — Grumbling over the death of his bill designed to discourage strikes by public employees, Rep. Tom Stivers said today, Idaho public employees and teachers "obviously want the right to strike."

And Stivers charged his bill died partially as the result of the AFL-CIO Committee on Politician Education (COPE).

Stivers said all four Democrats in the House Local Government Committee who voted against his anti-strike bill Wednesday have received contributions from COPE.

"It's kind of sick trying to get something out of committee under these circumstances," Stivers said.

On a 6-5 vote the local government committee opted to hold indefinitely the Stivers bill.

"I think this pretty well finishes this bill," Stivers said.

"But we got some good exposure from this bill," Stivers added. "We got the Idaho Education Association (IEA) and the Idaho Public Employees Association (IPEA) to admit they want to strike."

"We got their color out now," the Twin Falls representative said.

Stivers singled out Rep. Jack Spurgeon, D-Coeur d'Alene, and Daryl Sallaz, D-Boise, as being responsible for killing his bill.

"Spurgeon is the past president of the IPEA and Sallaz is a teacher," Stivers said, "that kind of looks it in."

Stivers said the final, amended draft of his bill "was cut down to a wrist slapping" for striking public employees.

The "wrist slapping" imposed on striking public employees would have included a two-year freeze on salary.

Originally, the Stivers bill called for a three-year freeze on salary and a five-year probation without a chance for tenure.

"We did everything they (the IEA and the IPEA) wanted us to do," Stivers said, "and they still killed the bill. Obviously the teachers and public employees want the right to strike."

Stivers took a parting shot at Don Rollie, executive secretary of the IEA.

"Isn't that kind of strange Don Rollie arrived in Idaho less than 30 days before the Twin Falls teachers went on strike?" Stivers asked.

Stivers said the IEA through its Maple Valley Uniserve office played a significant role in organizing the teachers strike last fall. "That's no secret," Stivers said. "Indications were that Virginia Ross, head of the IEA, had a lot to do with the strike."

Ross is director of Maple Valley Uniserve, a regional office set up by the IEA to help teachers with contract negotiations.

$514 million lost in mail frauds

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Consumer losses due to mail frauds jumped by $110 million last year, thanks to sophisticated schemes and plain old gullibility, according to Postal Service officials.

"Victims range from persons looking for quick money investments in land or stock, to others shopping for a variety of 'vanity' items such as blemish removers, diet pills and breast or penis enlargers."

"There is always going to be an area where people for a moderate price are going to take a chance that a miracle will be visited upon them," said George Davis, assistant general counsel in the service's consumer protection office.

He said reprints of old mail order catalogs demonstrate that only the costumes and prices, not the schemes, have changed.

"I suggest that genetically it will take a long time to breed gullibility out of the human race," he added.

The Postal Service said losses in the past fiscal year rose to $514 million compared to $395 million the previous year. Investment schemes — with a public loss amounting to $59 million — ranked No. 1.

Charles Wilson, head of the Postal Inspection Service's Fraud branch, says investment schemes include such things as vacation or investment property in remote areas that have to be undeveloped and uninhabitable; phony securities or stocks; and selling fraudulent mortgages.

"The 'bait' here is 'sore truth,'" he said that schemes have become more sophisticated, but he also contends that prices are higher and people are paying more where they used to charge you $5 for a widget they now charge you $10."

At the same time Wilson believes "untold millions" of dollars are being saved because of continuing government enforcement.

The Postal Service also said its No. 1 complaint involves others shopping for a variety of merchandise. It received 19,000 such complaints with a value of $2.6 million during the past fiscal year.

Thomas Chadwick, the service's consumer advocate, told UPI that many of the complaints result from the new Federal Trade Commission rule which requires companies either to deliver merchandise within 30 days or state a time when it will arrive.

He also said that from 86 to 90 per cent of those problems involve only some "mixup or misunderstanding."

Chadwick said the service's complaint handling mechanism launched 18 months ago — involving post cards which can be sent to the service complaining about problems — is now operating smoothly and the public seems satisfied.

"We did a superb job at Christmas in moving the mail," he said. Since then, with the change in administrations, there has been a "distinct drop in editorial content and public expressions from officials" about performance which tend to raise consciousness and increase consumer complaints," he said.

The officials were interviewed in conjunction with the service's 2nd annual "Consumer Protection Week" Feb. 21-25.

Johannesburg finds gold in sewer digs

JOHANNESBURG (UPI) — Gold is found abundantly in South Africa, but this time it was discovered in an unlikely place: the sewers.

City engineers excavating a tunnel to carry sewage from Johannesburg to a treatment plant outside the city struck gold near the city center, the Daily Star reported Friday.

Johannesburg was a major gold mining center when it was founded 99 years ago. Today a maze of abandoned workings crisscross beneath its streets.

The find, a pillar of unmined ore left over from old mining activities, was claimed by Village Mining Co.

Tests on the ore have not conclusively shown the profitability of the strike, and more assays are planned. A spokesman for the company cautioned against hopes that a rich vein had been struck.

But the company's shares on the Johannesburg Stock Exchange jumped after the news.

TV hits English classes

DETROIT (UPI) — Television sitcom comedies like "All in the Family" will be taking the place of Shakespeare in the classroom of English Prof. Robert Strozier this spring.

If the pilot project is a success, Strozier says, he may even get into Saturday morning cartoons as a culture form.

"TV is something students can identify with," the Wayne State University instructor said. "They've grown up with it. Television is now the focus of our culture."

Classes in Strozier's course — "Popular Culture and Television Drama" — will get under way April 4 and a "whole bunch" of students already have signed up for it, perhaps viewing it as a rather painless way to earn four credit hours.

Enrollees will find that television no longer will provide a distraction from homework — it will be their homework. They will be assigned to watch — and study — shows like "All in the Family," "Sanford and Son" and "Laverne and Shirley" and turn in in-depth evaluations of the programs.

"I really want to examine television dramas generally," Strozier said. "I want to start with the comic form. All comedies are alike — whether it's Shakespearean, Moliere or 'All in the Family.'"

Strozier, a scholar in classical and Renaissance-era literature and theater, has no background in television production. But he has no time for those who bad-mouth the "boob-tube" rather than appreciate it for what it is. "You can't say this is good. This is bad. Television exists. We've got to deal with it," he said.

Fuel lack may bring hazards

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Savings aids and ads to conserve heating fuel are prompting the government to warn consumers about deadly carbon monoxide poisoning, fire and explosion hazards of devices designed to shut chimney flues when their furnaces off.

Such devices could cut oil and natural gas consumption by 10 percent — the equivalent of 400,000 barrels of oil per day — by preventing heat from escaping through the chimney when the furnace is not operating.

But the Federal Energy Administration and the Consumer Product Safety Commission said they view them as a danger from improper installation, particularly for do-it-yourselfers.

The warning was issued following a complaint from Richard Simpson, former chairman of the CPSC, who said a recent discussion about one such device on the CBS television show "60 Minutes" may have "needlessly played a key role in exposing hundreds of thousands of American families to the risk of death by asphyxiation."

Simpson wrote a letter to CBS news president Richard Salant saying the show made it sound like the government was holding the device off the market even though it was safe.

Plane crash starts suit

TWIN FALLS — A man has filed a complaint with District Court asking more than $150,000 for injuries sustained in an airplane crash two years ago.

Dean Levra is suing National Union Fire Insurance Co. of Pittsburgh, for $150,000. The complaint alleges the insurance company was providing liability coverage to the plane's pilot, Leroy B. Pope, at the time of the crash.

The complaint, as an alternative, asks for the money from Ronald J. Brown, owner of the plane.

Five district tournaments open this week

MAGIC VALLEY — The major business of basketball tournaments — gets underway on five fronts across Magic Valley this week.

In a change from previous years, the tournaments will be spread over the entire week and never will all five be in operation at the same time.

All the tournaments except the A-1 have built in favorites because the other four brackets and pairings are based on conference standings. And, in fact, the extra edge — if it's there — is directed to the conference championship team.

Another nice item is the fact that two A-1 teams will advance to the state playoffs in Pocatello. This being Twin Falls' year for the opening bid, the Bruins have in a position to earn a trip to state by winning one game — either the first one on the home court Saturday or the following week in the loser bracket semi-final.

The A-2 tournament is again scheduled at the College of Southern Idaho gymnasium and that should prove beneficial to the eventual champion since the state playoffs will be played on that floor March 10-12.

The A-2 and the fifth district A-4, will be "interrupted" in mid competition through conflicts of gymnastics. The A-4 meet will not play Friday because Burley's Bobcats will be hosting Minico on the tournament floor that night. The A-2 will skip Thursday and Saturday.

Pairings, for two of the meets haven't been completed pending coin flips. The A-3 will accomplish that in a special meeting Sunday at Wendell — site of the tournament — while the fifth district A-4 must flip to see whether Raft River or Mercur gets the No. 2 seed and first-round bye after trying for second in the Magic Valley Conference.

Buhl went through the A-2 South Central Idaho Conference in undefeated fashion to hold the favorite's role. However, the entire league seems to have finished on a "flat" note. None of the participating coaches saw anything the final weekend that indicated to them their teams were "peaking."

Filer is the Big Six champion and the A-3 favorite — but the Wildcats don't have to look far away to see the ominous Glenns Ferry Pilots right on their tail. Glenns Ferry lost a couple of pre-Christmas league games when 6-5 top Gun Dan Sims was out with an ankle injury. With Sims in the lineup, the Pilots avenged both defeats.

Glenns Ferry also is hoping to get a third-straight shot at 50-plus game winner Teton in the A-3 finals. Teton has defeated the Pilots by one point and in overtime the last two years for the state A-3 crown and, of course, maintaining that long winning streak.

Oakley is a tight choice in the fifth district A-4 with Murrough and Raft River rated as the most likely to succeed if the Hornets can't. Coach Neal Wyatt feels his charges have an excellent shot at winning "if we play smart. Lately we've been playing a little dumb...getting big leads and letting up."

Carey has won 16 straight to close its season and included in that streak are double wins over all its competitors in the A-4 meet at Gooding. Carey has the big height advantage in 6-4 Dave Ivie and 6-5 Ray Bame. The A-1 looks like Minico could be the winner, based on a consistency point of view. Burley, however, can line up tremendous offensive firepower and has scored in the 90s on a couple of occasions this year. However, the Bobcat defense has given up a lot of points. Too, on a good shooting night, however, Burley would be the pick over both Minico and Twin Falls. Question is, will that good shooting night occur in the tournament.

The surest thing about Twin Falls this year has been its inconsistency. The Bruins have had some good games and some real croppers. On a couple of occasions, they've shown the ability to play well. This has always been when they've shot well. It isn't a hot-shooting hot club, however.

Still the inconsistency could result in the one good night that will surprise Minico or Turley and thrust the Bruins into state. After all, they have two chances to win one — and one's all they need.

Allison wins in last half mile

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Donnie Allison, pole sitter for Sunday's $414,000 Daytona 500, overtook Darrell Waltrip with one-half mile to run Saturday, winning the Permatex 300 mile model sportsman race at Daytona International Speedway.

Allison and Waltrip, both driving Chevys, battled for the lead during the entire event with defending Permatex champion Joe Millikan, who finished fourth, and Sam Somers, runner-up.

"That's the hardest 300 miles I've ever run," Allison said. "But I've got a 300-mile jump on all those other guys running tomorrow and I hope I can make it two wins in two days."

Allison's winning margin was only eight feet as Waltrip made a last second bid to overtake him.

"My car was running a little better than Darrell's," said Allison. "I was behind him in a draft, but the engine got hot and I had to move in front."

Allison's winning average speed was 154.396 miles per hour, far ahead of the old mark of 147.16 m.p.h., set in 1967 by Jim Paschal in a Plymouth.

Roth loses 3-year battle with cancer

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI) — University of California quarterback Joe Roth, 21, died at his apartment Saturday after a three-year battle with cancer.

Roth, who competed just last month in the Hula Bowl at Longhull after a successful two-year career as the starting California quarterback, was released from the University of California Medical Center in San Francisco Thursday after a week-long stay.

His family, friends, California head coach Mike White, and some of his teammates were at his bedside when he died.

"His humility and quiet courage in triumph and now in tragedy showed him to be an extraordinary young man," school Chancellor Albert H. Bowker said in a statement.

Only last month Roth spoke hopefully of the future.

"I like the cliché about looking at the glass as either half full or half empty," he was quoted as saying. "I see it as half full. I figure I can walk across the street tomorrow and get run over by a car."

"At least I know what my problem is and how to cope with it. But if everyone starts coming up and telling me 'feel for me, I'm afraid it's not making me feel the same way. I mean, I fear I won't be the same Joe Roth anymore. Instead, I'll be Joe Roth, underdog. I don't want that!'"

In 1975 at Cal Santa, Roth threw 14 touchdown passes in 1975 to tie the Cal single season mark set by Craig Morton and led the NCAA in both best average gain per pass completion, with an 8.4 yard average, and fewest interceptions, with 22.

Prior to attending Grossmont, Roth was graduated from Granite Hills High School in San Diego.

Purtzer leads LA open by 3 strokes

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Unsung Tom Purtzer, looking for his first tournament victory on the PGA tour, blazed in with a five-under-par 66 Saturday to grab a three-shot lead over comebacking Lanny Wadkins after three rounds of the $200,000 Los Angeles Open.

Purtzer, 25, Phoenix, Ariz., made an eagle, six birdies and three bogeys in his 33-33 round over the 7,029-yard Riviera Country Club layout to pull out of a tie with Wadkins with a 59-hole total of 91, 12 under par. Purtzer and Wadkins began the day as co-leaders.

A former Arizona State golf team member, the 6-foot, 170-pound Purtzer had opening rounds of 68-67.

Purtzer's eagle came on the 11th hole, a par five, 559-yarder when he knocked in a 25-foot putt. He had two birdies and seven pars on the front side.

On the backside, he had four birds and took his three bogeys, three-putting the 554-yard closing hole for his second bogey on the 18th in two days.

"I'm looking forward to tomorrow," Purtzer said. "I hope I have enough gas to make it."

Boxing, brawling highlight Elks card

TWIN FALLS — Boxing fans were treated to some stylish boxing and some good old-fashioned brawling at the Elks Club Third Annual Olympic Style Boxing Program Friday night.

In the first fight on the card, Doug Capple, now of Boise but formerly of Twin Falls, fought a gully bout but was outboxed and outgassed by Jeff Schills of Blackfoot in an unanimous decision.

The second bout of the night, which featured two Golden Gloves champions, Dave Trimble, Boise, and Ernie Chavez, Blackfoot, was one of the best fights of the evening, both technically and competitively.

In the third bout, J. Chavez, Blackfoot, won an unanimous decision over Randy Hostler, Twin Falls. Then it was T. Johnson, C. over Larry Cossey, Twin Falls, in a split decision, and D. Dillingner, Blackfoot, followed with a split-decision win over J. Hebert, Emmett.

The sixth match-up was not a pretty fight, but it was a crowd pleaser. Wes Richards, Blackfoot, and Dwight Barker, Ca., came out punching and didn't let up until the end of the third round. Both took and absorbed a number of stiff shots and the emphatic crowd roared their approval.

The seventh bout was the only fight of the evening to be ended with a punch. Randy Forrest, Pocatello, scored a TKO over Gene Bogart, Twin Falls, when Bogart walked into a hard left uppercut in the third round. The blow sent Bogart back into the ropes, and had no referee Dale Trumbo caught him on the rebound, he would have crashed to the mat unconscious. Trumbo held Bogart until he could be revived about a minute later.

The eighth bout looked like it was going to be a bar brawler, as both fighters came out swinging for the one-punch knockout. Unfortunately, 30 seconds into the fight, Mike Knapp, Twin Falls, dislocated his shoulder and Lamont Williams, Ca., was awarded a TKO.

In the ninth fight, Spider Kat, Boise, dropped an unanimous decision to Pocatello's Steve Danrison, as the reluctant Kat never mounted much of an attack.

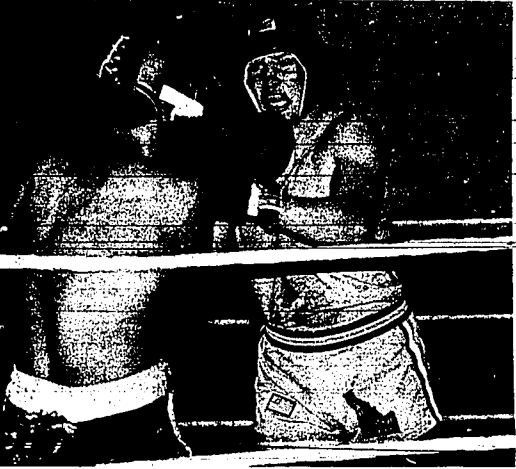

The judges for the evening were Wally Bernard, Ray Baker, Billy Trullillo, Kin Butler and Gene Goetts, three of whom scored each bout.

REFEREE Dale Trumbo supports Gene Bogart, Twin Falls, after Bogart took a left uppercut from Randy Forrest, Pocatello. Bogart fell into the ropes after being hit, and Trumbo alertly stepped in to keep him from falling to the mat.

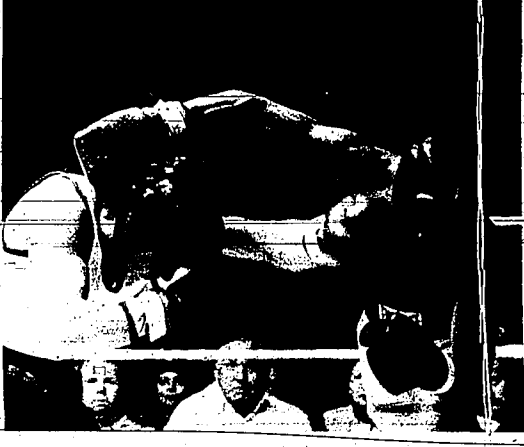

Effective counter

ANTHONY Ramos counters with a hard right to the head of Joey Keene, but Keene went on to win the bout anyway in boxing action at the Elks Club Friday night.

IDAHO'S Joey Keene takes a shot to the chin and throws one in return. Keene may look distressed, but he won an unanimous decision over Anthony Ramos, Ca., in action at the Elks Club Friday night.

SV World Cup races set

SUN VALLEY (UPI) — The only giant slalom and slalom world cup races in the country this year will be in Sun Valley March 5-7, a Sun Valley spokesman said Friday.

Nearly 200 alpine racers and coaches from 14 countries will arrive at the ski resort March 2 to begin training for the three-day Subaru World Cup Championships.

World Cup winner Anemarie Moser-Proell, Austria, and the U.S. ski team's Phil Mahre, White Pass, Wash., will enter the competition.

Defiant Finley sells Lindblad

CHICAGO (UPI) — Volatile Owner Charles O. Finley of the Oakland A's, defying Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn's direct order, sold left-handed relief pitcher Paul Lindblad to the Texas Rangers Saturday for $400,000.

Finley said Monday Foxes General Manager Charlie Fox "has made inquiries as to the possible purchase of Vida Blue. We've talked money and players."

The order was directed at him, this would appear to be obvious. Kuhn, in an unprecedented move last summer, denied the sale of Blue to the New York Yankees and of Joe Rudi and Rolfe Fingers to the Boston Red Sox.

Hard losers

GUATEMALA CITY, Guatemala (UPI) — Local soccer fans, angered after their hometown club lost to an army team, attacked the winning players with machetes Friday, the army said. Five persons were killed in the melee.

The slayings occurred as the army team was boarding a bus in Santa Barbara, 170 miles from the capital, after downing the local squad 6-3, a spokesman said.

About 30 men attacked the soldiers and tried to disarm Capt. Sebastian Espinosa, the army said.

Two hundred other villagers, armed with machetes, knives and clubs, waded into the attack as Espinosa fired his pistol into the air to try to force them away.

The army said Espinosa was hacked to death. Four villagers also were killed in the fighting.

Minico overpowers Twin Falls 75-39

RUPERT — The Minico Spartans established their superiority over Twin Falls in the first half and "blew" them away in the third quarter Friday night for a 75-39 victory.

The Spartans led throughout the game but it was the third period that turned it into a shambles. Minico outscored the Bruins 26-8 in that span.

Although Minico dominated everywhere it was most impressive on the backboards. The Spartan stats had Minico holding a 52-18 edge there with 6-5 Junior Quinn Hepworth leading the way with 16 takedowns.

Seal hit two Minico buckets midway through the first quarter to start the Spartans toward the big margin and then Cody Thurston took over for the rest of the half.

From an 11-6 lead, Minico went out 20-10 with Thurston hitting the final five points of the quarter. Mike Ridgeway and Dave Wetter reduced the lead to eight a couple minutes into the second period before Thurston took off again.

He hit six straight points and would up with 13 of his 19 by halftime. That was the difference to that point.

Trojans top Declo to tie for second

MALTA — The Raft River Trojans took the lead to stay midway through the second quarter and went on to defeat Declo 80-68 Friday night.

The victory left Raft River and Murlough tied for second place in the Magic Valley Conference, one game behind champion Oakley.

Declo took a narrow lead in the early going and stayed just ahead until the Trojans moved up 19-18. Raft River hit the final six points of the game and maintained a near-constant 10-

Late Devil blitz buries Hansen 80-58

HANSEN — The Murlough Red Devils exploded for 26 points in the last four and one half minutes of play to bury Hansen 80-58 Friday night.

Murlough got up 10-0 early, but the Huskies fought back to 15-20 at the end of the first quarter.

The Red Devils upped their lead to 14 at the half, but in the third and early fourth quarters the Huskies took control.

With four and a half minutes to go, the Huskies had pulled to within five at 54-49.

Then the roof caved in. The Red Devils put in shots from every possible angle and from the free throw line in the last few minutes and the stunned Huskies could do nothing to stem the scoring tide.

The Red Devils overcame a 20-point performance by the Huskies. Jerry Lockwood with 18 points from Bates and 22 from Buckley.

Camas County ties Devils for second

FAIRFIELD — The Camas County Musersh pushed to a 17-point lead in the first half to tie Dietrich 80-63 and tie the Blue Devils for second place in the Northside Conference final standings.

The Musersh led throughout, taking a 25-18 first-quarter lead and extending that to 44-27 at intermission.

Dietrich's six-man crew, however, was down to four at the end of the night due to injuries. With only six men on the team, Dietrich went into this one with just five men as Evans was lost for the tournament season to a broken wrist Wednesday night.

Oakley collects loop cage title

OAKLEY — Oakley's Hornets collected another Valley Conference basketball championship Friday night by defeating the Castelford Wolves 69-57.

The victory let Oakley finish one game ahead of Murthaugh and take the title into the fifth district A-4 tournament opening at Burley high school Tuesday night.

Oakley led almost through with Castelford making runs at the Hornets periodically. The Hornets bounced ahead 49-59 in the first eight minutes of the first period with Castelford scoring three times in the first minute to narrow the gap to five.

That's the way it went throughout the game with Oakley's biggest margin being about 20.

CSI's Bond runs national time

PROVO — Sophomore Leo Bond qualified for the national junior college track and field finals in an outdoor track meet Saturday at BYU.

The meet originally was scheduled for indoors but 70 degree weather made the switch to outdoors logical. And it left CSI coach Jim Blaisdell unhappy.

"We only brought eight men because there are only three indoor lanes and more than that would have made it a day-long thing," he said. "Now I wish I had brought them all."

Blaisdell was particularly pleased with the 47.2 quarter-mile clocking of Bond. He won the event against runners from BYU, Utah State, Utah, Idaho State, Weber, Wyoming, Ricks and Snow. It equals his best time and "it's still the middle of February," Blaisdell said.

Also showing well were Joe Williams, who was fifth in the high hurdles in 15.5 and turned a 57.1 in the intermediates. It was the first full flight of either event that Williams had run this year.

"We haven't even worked on the intermediates," the coach said.

Steve Kaufman turned in a 14:58 in placing fifth in the three mile and frosh Ed Coates of Kimberly brought more smiles from the coach with his first sub-20-second quarter.

Gooding tops Wendell in last 3 minutes

WENDELL — The Gooding points of the game Friday Senators rattled off the final 13 minutes to down the Wendell.

Trojans 65-51.

In a tightly fought contest, it appeared the decision would go to the final buzzer. With just over three minutes left, Wendell moved ahead 51-50 and then tied offensively.

Gooding then hit its best shooting stride of the night as Wagman, Kirk Hall and Traugher picked up most of the points to make it more impisided than it was. Gooding took the lead 59-50.

ISU slips past Montana 66-63

MISSOULA, Mont. (UPI) — Greg Griffin converted a three-point play with four seconds left to give the front-running Idaho State Bengals a 66-63 Big Sky Conference win over Montana Saturday night.

Griffin's winning points capped a second-half rally that brought the Bengals from a 12-point deficit with 16:30 remaining to a six-point lead with five minutes left.

With the game tied 63-63 Idaho State passed the ball for nearly 12 minutes before Griffin was fouled as he hit a four-footer on the base line.

Ed Thompson and Jeff Cook scored 18 points each, with 11 of Thompson's points coming in the second half. ISU's foot coach Steve Hayes was held to three points and two rebounds before fouling out late in the contest.

Michael J. Richardson had a career-high scoring total of 25 points and shot all 13 of Montana's free throws.

Idaho State is now 11-1 in league play and 19-3 overall. The loss dropped Montana's record to 4-8 in the conference and 5-19 overall.

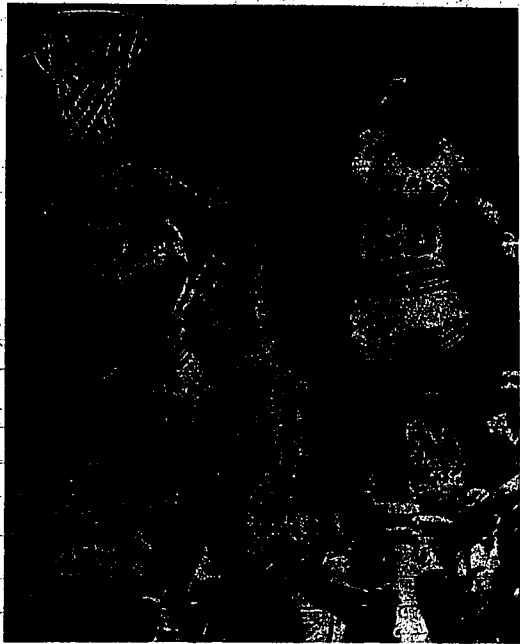

The Idaho State Bengals bolted to an early 24-4 lead and easily defeated the Montana State Bobcats 93-73 Friday.

Keyed by the outside shooting and ball handling of Ed Thompson and the inside work of forward Greg Griffin, the Bengals demoralized the Bobcats with a solid defensive effort and a blistering fast break.

Idaho State led by 22 points at the half and held that margin to the final buzzer.

Thompson had 22 points and directed the Bengal offense throughout. Griffin finished with 14 points, although he sat out much of the second half with four fouls.

MSU had four players in double figures, with reserve guard Mark Manuel leading the way with 17 points.

Idaho edges NAU at final gun

MOSCOW, Idaho (UPI) — James Smith hit a 20 foot jump shot with five seconds remaining to give the University of Idaho a 59-58 Big Sky Conference victory over Northern Arizona University Saturday night.

Smith, Idaho's lead scorer, finished with 18 points for the night, all in the second half. Dave Henson paced Northern Arizona with 15 points.

NAU maintained its lead until the very end of the game. The score was tied only once with about eight minutes to go.

Caldwell cops 54-42 win over Jerome

JEROME — The Caldwell Cougars outscored the Jerome Tigers 54-42 Saturday night.

The Cougar defense forced numerous Tiger turnovers in the first half and the Cougars put in six buckets off the offensive boards to take a 36-19 lead at the break.

The Tigers fought back in the second half and got within eight points with four to go in the game on the strength of their press, but the Cougars' defense held tight and was just too big to overcome.

Montana State ends BSU playoff hopes

BOZEMAN, MONT. (UPI) — Senior center Bruce Smith played in a career-high 30 minutes and grabbed 14 rebounds in leading the Montana State University Bobcats to an 87-73 Big-Sky Conference win over Boise State Saturday.

The Bobcats trailed by seven with 10:30 remaining but tied the game on a flurry led by Mike Stanny. Stanny had three key field goals and a steal as the Bobcats overcame the Bronco lead—and outscored their opponents 37-16 in the last fourth of the game.

The Bobcats, now 6-6 in league play, can clinch a spot in the Big Sky post-season tournament with a win over Northern Arizona next Friday.

The loss dropped Boise State to 3-9 in the league and 8-16 overall, and eliminated the Broncos from playoff contention.

Six straight points over a four-minute period in the second half gave the Montana Grizzlies a lead they never relinquished on the way to a 72-67 win over Boise State Friday.

Trailing 61-60, the Grizzlies got field goals from Ben DeMers, Michael John Richardson and Craig Henkel to take a 66-61 lead. After that, the Broncos could get no closer than three points.

Boise State led 39-33 at the half on the strength of 55 percent field goal shooting and 14 points from Steve Connor, who ended up with a game-high total of 24.

Montana countered with 22 points from Michael Ray Richardson and a 37-to-23 rebounding edge.

Cincinnati signs three key players

CINCINNATI (UPI) — The Cincinnati Reds announced Saturday that National League most valuable player Joe Morgan, major league RBI leader George Foster and Ken Griffey, who finished second in the league batting race last year, have all agreed to contract teams for 1977.

A club spokesman said the three have not signed the contracts because they are not in Cincinnati, but said that was just a formality.

The three players, all represented by agent Tom Reich, have agreed to three-year contracts, the spokesman said. Reich had just finished two days of talks with Reds general manager Dick Wagner Friday.

Morgan, 33, was the National League MVP the last two years, only the second time in NL history a player has won back-to-back MVP titles.

He batted .320 last year and had 111 RBIs, becoming the first National League second baseman since Jackie Robinson to go over 100 RBIs.

"Bring me an estimate of repairs, and I'll meet it or beat it."

Sunshine Mining proxy fight boils

KELLOGG, Idaho (UPI) — Behind the scenes battle to unseat New York Attorney Irwin Underwieser as chairman of the board of the strikeplagued Sunshine Silver Mine is beginning to slowly surface as the date of the May 3-annual, meeting, show-down approaches.

Legal punches and counter punches are being thrown.

The latest was a counter proxy fight by Sunshine Inc. — in which they sought a court injunction prohibiting a Colorado company from participating in a stock proxy fight begun by the dissenting stockholders, forced recently and wrest control of the company from Underwieser.

The target of the suit is Charles Schwab, president of Golden Cyclic Gold Corp., who was hired by top Sunshine stockholders to lead the proxy fight several months ago.

Top officers of Hecla and Silver Dollar Mining Companies are trying to obtain enough stock proxies to get rid of Underwieser.

Both mining companies hold substantial blocks of Sunshine stock and have working agreements with Sunshine.

And their annual profit pictures have been hurt by the marathon strike at the Sunshine, which will be one year old March 10 with no settlement in the offing.

Underwieser, meanwhile, has been the target of an ouster before. And he's survived.

In 1973, a strike ended after 18 weeks and a proxy fight followed at the annual May meeting.

Among other things, it was alleged Underwieser is in a conflict of interest as both board chairman and legal counsel to the company, since he received $125,000 in legal fees during the proxy battle aimed at eliminating him.

Underwieser still wears both hats in the Sunshine company. As board chairman he earns $100,000 per year.

In preparation for the annual meeting, members of the dissenting stockholders group sent attorney Bob Magnuson to New York where he has been taking depositions from Underwieser for the past two days, according to sources.

The place for the Sunshine stockholder showdown has not been named.

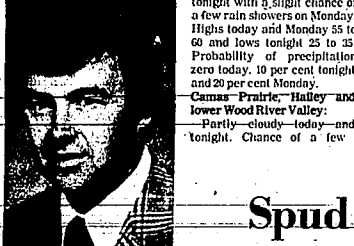

That is up to Underwieser. The stockholders meeting was held last year in Boise.

Spud futures inch higher; cattle weaker (CHICAGO — Potato futures inched higher Friday.

The May delivery of Western russets gained 9 cents, closing at 9.12 per hundredweight, cents off the day's high and a dime above last low. Volume was about 48 cars.

Commodity News Service said Maine spuds traded over a narrow range on volume of 1,622. New May peaked at 2.25, up 15 cents after a low of 9.08. The market ended mixed. March down a penny and April and New May 5 and 7 cents higher, respectively.

Speculative interest was discouraged by the long weekend and lack of fundamental impetus.

A softer tone in dressed beef markets weakened live cattle, which closed mixed but mostly lower. Only the two 1978 minimal. Volume was 7,319 contracts.

Live hogs rallied near the close, setting slightly higher, and at the day's highs in most contracts.

contracts ended on the upside, as the range was from down 55 cents per cwt. to 10 higher. February scored the biggest loss, for technical reasons associated with the end of trading. Other declines were minimal. February expired at 41.12, off 32 points. Other options were 5 to 25 higher and 10 lower in the back, picking up strength after February went off the board.

Pork bellies closed with small declines and near the day's lows in the back. Off 20 to 62 points. February expired at a large premium to cash, at $4.67.

A later weather rally brought wheat out of a negative stance to close 3/4 to 5 cents higher, with distant March on a contract higher. High winds over the northern and central plains were seen as a threat to unprotected wheat plants.

Spillover support from late wheat and bean rallies and a lack of pre-hedge selling helped corn post half a cent to 2 1/2 cent gains. New crop December and March inched to new contract highs for the third straight day.

Soybeans closed 3/4, cents higher to half a cent lower with last minute local support. Bidding nearby options above Thursday's close. Oil closed unchanged to 10 points higher on local short covering. Meal ended 50 cents to 1.00 higher on late local buying.

New York Sugar 11 closed mixed, off 1 point to up 5. In a virtually dead market and a turnover of 3,226 lots. Inaction was attributed to evening up ahead of the long holiday weekend. Prices on the No. 12 domestic contract were also mixed, from off 10 points to up 20.

Earnings of sugar firm dip

OGDEN, Utah — The Amalgamated Sugar Co. Monday reported net income for the 13-week abbreviated fiscal year ended Dec. 27, 1976 of $1.4 million, equal to 68 cents per common share.

This compares with earnings of $2.7 million, or $1.32 per common share of the comparable 13-week period of the preceding year.

The low earnings of the period under review are principally the result of abnormally low sugar prices during the period.

A. E. Benning, chairman of the board and president, said that this abbreviated fiscal year is the result of change in the company's fiscal year from the last Monday in September to the last Monday of December.

Ford Motor command change near DETROIT (UPI) — Ford Motor Co. Chairman Henry Ford II said today he will name a successor sometime this year, putting control of the No. 2 auto firm outside of his family for the first time in its 74-year history.

Ford, who will be 60 Sept. 4, has been chief executive of the firm for 32 years. At age 28, he took hold of the firm from his aging grandfather after World War II and engineered one of the most dramatic corporate comebacks in the history of American industry.

Ford was hospitalized for treatment of a heart ailment last year and been cutting back outside activities although he has told associates he feels fine. Company sources say he has been devoting more time lately to the matter of planning a change of command at the world's second largest auto company.

"I have talked [to other board members about it and will work out a plan," Ford said in a Detroit news interview. "It will be done in March, but it will be done and announced this year."

"I am trying to get the sense of the directors," the Ford executive said. "But I have not thought it through. There are a lot of different ways to go."

Ford would not speculate on who might succeed him or how it would be handled or even if he will step down before his mandatory retirement at 65.

He said he had some other prepare the number of possibilities and they came up with "1,500 options."

Ford's only son, Edsel, who is 29, is an assistant area manager for the Lincoln-Mercury Division in Boston. While Edsel is a year older than his father was when he took the reins, the older Ford says Edsel — named after the original Ford's only son — is not ready.

Another contender is Lee A. Iacocca, 52, the president of the Ford Motor Co.

While there is a chance that someone outside the family could become the chief executive, Ford says someone named Ford has to be near the top.

Idaho's energy may be coal-fired power plant

By CHRIS PECK
Times-News writer

BOISE — A nuclear or coal-fired power plant may be in Idaho's future, according to Gov. John Evans. He said that he hasn't yet decided which kind of additional energy source he prefers.

Speaking at a news conference where he outlined an energy conservation plan for state buildings, Evans said conservation would have to be the first way for Idaho to get more energy.

Behind conservation, Evans said, he was unsure what course Idaho should take to get more energy for the rest of this decade.

On related energy matters, Evans said he had for the designation of Earl Adams, director of the Idaho Office on Energy because Adams was "a liability to this administration."

The governor said Adams, a man who had opposed development of a nuclear power plant in Idaho and had been a leader in a conservation program for the state, would be replaced soon.

Adams doesn't resign until March 1.

Gov. Evans also called the appointment of a new commissioner to the Idaho Public Utilities Commission "the most important I have to make as governor."

Last week the Senate rejected the appointment of Matthew Mulaney Jr. to the IPUC. Mulaney, an Andrus appointee, was judged to be too environmentally-oriented.

Evans dodged a question of whether his appointee would be a staunch environmentalist. He also would not give the names of the "two or three" people he is considering for nomination to the IPUC.

Evans quotes an hassle over cloud seeding and Bureau of Rec. water distributing plan.

These comments came in a question and answer session following the governor's first formal news conference Tuesday.

He was asked to comment on Atty. General Wayne Kidwell's threat to sue the state of Washington if that state begins cloud seeding.

"Suing the state of Washington is the wrong way to approach it. It's the wrong attack."

"We've got to erase state lines during this drought year."

Evans added that he thought the Idaho constitution forbade the pooling of water rights.

Evans said he didn't know the specifics of the Bureau of Reclamation plan but said he doubted it would be necessary or legal.

Gila Forest allows Rainbow group despite pot, nudity

BEAVERHEAD, N.M. (UPI) — Gila National Forest officials are inclined to put up with the Rainbow Family's marijuana smoking and nudity in exchange for having the forest "fixed up."

The quasi-religious organization has applied for a special use permit for a campout convention of about 1,000 persons this July.

Although a decision will not be made until next week, authorities say the group has taken good care of its campsites in its past annual gatherings in the West, starting in 1972.

"I guess their beliefs hinge on complete trust in each other, and they do take their clothes off quite frequently," said Dick Spray of the agency's Southwest Regional office in Albuquerque. He said members of the group may smoke marijuana but "they very definitely frown on hard drugs and they're against alcohol."

Officials said the proposed convention site, along the east fork of the Gila River, is some 20 miles from the nearest settlement.

Ron Henderson of the Gila Forest headquarters in Silver City said officials and forest service officers from the Montana site of last year's gathering gave a "favorable report" on the Rainbow Family, saying the group left "a part of the Lewis and Clark National Forest looking better than before."

"According to the sheriff up here, he had an understanding with them and there were no arrests for drugs," Henderson said. "When he walked through the different camp areas, he saw no evidence of drug use."

Henderson said background checks on key "family" members showed them to be respected members of the rural communities where they are primarily vegetarian subsistence farmers.

Kimberly studies needs of schools

KIMBERLY — Needs for additional elementary school space called in heavy use of the gymnasium are under study by the Kimberly School Board and administrators.

Vernon Exner, school superintendent, said Thursday the population in Kimberly and surrounding area has shown a marked increase in the past year. He said the board is currently discussing the situation and determining how much money is available for possible expansion.

"We plan to talk to some architects to gather information on how we should proceed with expanding, and about what we can expect in the way of cost," Exner said.

He said figures show most of the increase in school population is in the lower grades. Growth in junior and senior high school areas is not exceptionally high at this time.

"Of course (on a long range basis) these larger classes will work their way into the junior and senior high school areas," he said.

Most of the new families moving into Kimberly and buying homes in new subdivisions in and around the area appear to be young families with small children. Many have pre-school-age children which indicates further demand for elementary class rooms, Exner said.

Exner said the school system has one gymnasium. With the increased emphasis on girls' athletic programs as well as boys' the facility is in use from 7 a.m. until after school hours. Elementary children have a chance to use the gymnasium during lunch time only, he said, and most of the demand is from 7th through 12th grade students.

School board members have set a special board meeting for Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. to meet with principals and teachers for recommendations on the 1977-78 school year. Board members expect to have information available for a revised policy manual by the regular March meeting.

J.S. Smith, trustee, said research for the manual is largely directed toward policies in five areas:

Blaine says budget okay

CHRISTOPHER BOGAN Times-News writer

HAILEY — Blaine County's budget approved this week for the first nine months of 1977 is 35 per cent above three-fourths of the 1976 budget and 31 per cent above last year's actual spending rate.

The nine-month budget is $139 million, or an increase of $6,035 over three-fourths of last year's 1976 budget appropriations of $132.9 million. Three-fourths of the 1976 budget was $128 million.

Another indication of the county's growth, evidenced through its spending, is seen in the comparison of the 1977 nine-month budget with 1976 expenditures.

Because less money was spent last year than budgeted, the 1977 budget is 51 per cent above the county's 1976 spending rate.

The nine-month budget is an increase of $472,318 over three-fourths of last year's 12-month expenditures of $132.9 million. Three-fourths of the 1976 yearly expenditure was $348,914.

Because the fiscal year for Idaho cities and counties has been changed from Jan. 1 to Oct. 1, all governmental units must compile nine-month budgets to legalize spending until September, when a new 12-month budget will be approved.

According to Blaine County Commissioner Dr. Ivan Gustafson, much of the increase reflected in the above figures is because the county must budget for everything it plans to spend, although, in many cases the county is reimbursed for expenditures through state and federal grants.

Major increases in the approved nine-month expenditures include $79,733 for the county hospital, compared with $56,328 for the entire 1976 expenditure; $368,045 for road and bridge, compared to $333,028; $23,500 for ambulance service, compared to $14,184; $162,925 for specials compared to $92,936.

Included in the road and bridge appropriation is funding for two new bridges over the Little Wood River in the Carey area, according to Gustafson.

And the large increase in specials reflects a $61,000 expenditure for the Brown and Cawley wastewater study, he said. The county will be reimbursed by the state for about $55,000 in this regard, he said.

Other major items include $59,700 for the departments of the clerk, district court, auditor and recorder, compared to total expenditures of $47,725; $146,760 for the sheriff's office, compared to $142,703; $61,805 for the prosecuting attorney's office, compared to $55,387; $74,000 for the district and magistrate court, compared to $68,651; and $60,000 for the county airport, compared to $52,000.

Shirt off his back in payment

MRS. Ethel Schroeder, administrator of the Allumee Department in Milwaukee, Wisconsin's courthouse and Francis McCormack, clerk of courts, displayed the $300 personal check written on the back of a shirt. Peter Driscoll had the check made to make a family support payment to his former wife. McCormack said he "attempted" to cash the shirt and if the bank accepts it, Mr. Driscoll will get his cancelled shirt back. (UPI)

'Pot' bill rapped

CONCORD, Calif. (UPI) — Los Angeles Police Chief Ed Davis says "victory gardens" grown by "potheads" would be a hazard to children.

Davis, speaking in opposition to a proposed bill to legalize the cultivation of small amounts of marijuana in California, told a Republican women's group Thursday young neighborhood children soon would find the flowering cannabis.

He said the probability was that children would discover the plants, realize that they were and they'd begin "ingesting marijuana" using it.

Bridge building goes on schedule

TWIN FALLS — Construction of the new Bliss Bridge over the Snake River is progressing on schedule in spite of high water in the river throughout the winter.

Engineers Douglas Howard and Gerald Martens of the firm of Edwards and Howard Engineers, Inc. met Thursday afternoon with the County Commissioners in report on the project. Normally, winter weather means lower water levels and work would be easier on the concrete work and bridge piling.

Warm weather has kept the river flow pretty much constant, the engineers reported. Target date for completion of the project is the end of May. The bridge is being built cooperatively by Twin Falls and Gooding counties and the Twin Falls and Bliss highway districts.

County Commissioner Merl E. Leonard said the commissioners and engineers also discussed the availability of federal funds for possible replacement of the old Murtaugh Bridge. This structure is deteriorating and should be replaced in the future. Load limits have been imposed because of the condition of the structure, he said.

If a 90 per cent federal funding is available, commissioners and the Jerome County officials may meet to discuss going ahead with this project as soon as possible, Leonard said.

Fund drive aids SLC hospital

TWIN FALLS — Mrs. Stanley Snow and Mrs. Tom Condit, Twin Falls, will head the annual fund drive to support the Primary Children's Medical Center in Salt Lake City.

The drive will begin Monday and be completed by Saturday. Each year volunteers in the Magic Valley area collect donations to help maintain the center for the assistance of children who need such assistance as care and treatment of birth defects, cancer, speech and hearing diagnosis and many other crippling illnesses or defects.

All children receive treatment at the center, regardless of race, religion and ability to pay.

Last year 294 Idaho children benefited from services offered at the center and others from throughout the Intermountain West also received care.

Mrs. Snow and Mrs. Condit are appealing to families to contribute one or more pennies for each inch of height for each family member. This year the drive, formerly the Penny Parade, has changed the format from a penny per year in the family members ages and the campaign is called "The Pennies by the Inch" effort.

Part of the campaign is also to inform the residents of Magic Valley of the programs and services available at the medical center in Salt Lake City.

Wheat loan hike sought

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The National Association of Wheat Growers have recommended Secretary of Agriculture Robert Anderson increase the loan level and initiate a resale program for grain currently in producer ownership.

Don Howe, association president, called for an immediate increase in the wheat loan to not less than 65 per cent of parity in addition to the resale program to "provide producers the interim financing necessary to preserve their productive capacity and enable them to shoulder economic pressures which would otherwise force sales at prices below the cost of production."

Howe, a Banners Ferry, Idaho, wheat producer, said the resale program would prevent heavy accumulation of loan inventories by the government and "would preserve these supplies in producer hands until marketing prospects improve."

State gives lobby costs

BOISE (UPI) — Lobbyists spent more than $78,000 in January trying to get their point across to state legislators — and more than $40,000 of that total was spent by the Idaho Freedom to Work Committee, Inc.

The secretary of state's office reported today 230 lobbyists spent a total of $12,254.66 on entertainment, food and refreshments in the process of persuading legislators.

Japan eats more wheat.

© Chicago Daily News TOKYO.—The Japanese are eating more bread and less rice, which is good news for the American wheat grower but bad news for the Japanese rice grower.

It also is a headache for the Japanese government, which has to spend $1.2 billion a year on expensive wheat imports when, figuratively speaking, it has rice running out of its ears. To cope with the imbalance, the government food agency has launched a year-long campaign to encourage people to eat more rice. Children are getting more rice in their school lunches. Food processors willing to develop new foodstuffs using rice are supplied with free rice.

Cooking seminars, detailing the virtues of Japan's traditional staple are being held all over the country. The government has spent more than $1 million on an advertising campaign stressing the nutritional value of rice and what just one more bowl a day will do for the country's economy.

Nothing seems to help. Although Japanese still eat far more rice than wheat, wheat is gaining and there is no sign the course of battle will be reversed. Rice has been a three-meal-per day staple since the dawn of Japanese history. But statistics show that per capita rice consumption peaked in 1962 and since that time wheat has been inching ahead. To large measure the Japanese have themselves to blame.

After World War II the Japanese, with American encouragement, set out to improve their traditional rice and fish diet by eating more body-building Western food including dairy, wheat and meat products.

The results were soon visible as Japanese teenagers began to tower above their astonished parents. In many Japanese homes the traditional breakfast of rice, bean paste soup and pickles has been replaced by coffee, toast and eggs.

Instead of lunching on rice balls dutifully prepared by his wife, the busy white-collar worker may slurp down a bowl of noodles or pick up a hamburger at the fast-food stand.

Most families will eat rice for dinner, but in today's Japan, rice has to share the table with more meat, fish and vegetables. This is especially true of younger Japanese who have decided that man doesn't live by rice alone.

And despite a chronic rice surplus, Japan's cheap government rice subsidies have pushed the price to four times the world level.

Food officials have a sign of relief when the 1976 rice harvest was the lowest in five years, thanks to bad weather. But that still left the government with a surplus of 2.6 million tons from the year before.

Meanwhile, rice consumption in the big cities has dropped to half what it was in 1962.

Government efforts to persuade Japanese farmers to grow less rice and more wheat have been notoriously unsuccessful, one reason being that the rice subsidy is more than twice as much as the wheat subsidy. More important, mountainous Japan is far more suited to growing rice than wheat. So is the climate.

As a result, Japan has to import 97 per cent of the wheat it uses for bread, cakes, noodles, spaghetti, and livestock feed. More than half of this comes from the United States.

The government food agency, which handles the purchase of foreign wheat, tries to keep enough on hand to regardless of market fluctuations. The result is that the government often sells wheat for less than the purchase price.

This, in turn, has caused Japan's fiercely assertive rice farmers to charge the government with subsidizing foreign wheat farmers at their expense. Food and agriculture officials are often pelted with rice by angry farmers.

Prices of beef in store holding

DENVER (UPI) — Retail beef prices showed no change since the first of the year, the American National Cattlemen's Association said today but added that financial losses to the industry will reduce supplies and trigger higher prices.

The industry association president said a 19-city supermarket survey showed that the national average price of live representative beef cuts was $1.40 per pound on Feb. 10, unchanged from the January average.

"We still have large production of beef and other meats and this has kept meat prices relatively low for some time," he said.

But he added, "Because of continuing financial losses in the cattle industry there have been herd liquidations and cutbacks in cattle numbers that eventually will bring reduced beef supplies and higher prices. For now, though, beef prices continue to lag behind increases in most other food items."

A continuation of the western drought, he said, which already has badly hurt many western cattlemen could reduce 1977 pasture and crop production.

Finney said, in the short term this could cause still more herd liquidation, increase beef supplies and probably lower prices. But it would cause still sharper reductions in beef supplies later.

Bean demand 'good'

By KEN HODGE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — There should be a good demand for bean contracts in Magic Valley for 1977, according to the chairman of the board of Northrop-King Seed Co.

D. Kenneth Christensen, Minneapolis, Minn. told bean growers at the N-K annual awards dinner at the Holiday Inn Thursday night his company is working on getting its large inventory worked down and will be looking for a lot of acreage for seed contracts this year.

"We got more pounds than we had sales," Christensen told the audience about surpluses this company has experienced in the last two years.

"We'd be working on those and getting back to normal," he said.

Christensen said exports in seeds were up last year and current bookings for seed and export are up.

He said vegetable seed amounts to 44 per cent of the total seed export business in the U.S.

Christensen said the purchase of N-K by Swiss-based Sanloz Corp., signifies a trend for future growth in the seed business which should be good for the American farmer.

"We think we're moving," he said about the seed industry.

He predicted the future would see a consolidation of seed companies so there would be fewer of them and they would be more international in scope.

He said they would be better financed and would be more "research-oriented."

He predicted U.S. farms would gradually become fewer in number and more efficient to meet the growing demands of food for the world.

He also said government

funts for agricultural research have been shrinking lately and urged farmers to use "what influence we have to press for more research."

He predicted President Carter who once grew pounds for seed, would be an asset to farmers during his administration in helping insure more agricultural research.

Petersburg's the place for law-abiding

By MIKE ROVKO
Chicago Daily News

CHICAGO — Those who believe that criminals are always getting off with a slap on the wrist might consider moving to a small town in fact, I have just the place.

Petersburg, Ill., population 2,600. It's a couple of hundred miles south of Chicago. I have to admit that I don't know much more than that about Petersburg. But I do know that it is not the place to go if you aren't law-abiding.

That was made clear in a case recently disposed of by the Illinois Appellate Court.

It involved an apparent ne'er-do-well named Daniel L. Wallace, who is about 29. He seems that Wallace dropped into Oat and Eva's Cafe one afternoon for a bit to eat.

He had himself a couple of sandwiches, some French fries and a few Cokes.

After he ate, he hung around the cafe for about an hour and a half. There isn't too much going on in Petersburg, so hanging around Oat and Eva's Cafe will give you about as much excitement as anything else.

According to the Appellate Court opinion, Wallace, while loafing in the cafe, "bummed cigarettes from Otis Lynn, the husband of the proprietor, and was also seen asking other customers for cigarettes."

Now comes the exciting part:

"The waitress gave the defendant his check for the amount of the bill — $2.89. The defendant then informed her that he did not have the money."

"Then he asked: 'Can I go up to my grandmother's and get my money? I will be back within an hour.'"

"The waitress conferred with Otis Lynn. He advised her to have the defendant sign the back of the ticket so that they would know he owed the money. The defendant signed his name on the back of the ticket and left. The ticket for the amount of $2.89 was placed in the cash drawer."

At this point, let us sum up the action. Just in case somebody got mixed up on some of the legal points.

Dan Wallace went in the cafe and ate Cokes and french fries and sandwiches. But he didn't have $2.89 to pay the check. He said he would get it from his grandma. He signed the check and said he would return with the $2.89.

Let us return to the court records for the exciting developments.

"At a later unspecified date, Otis Lynn saw the defendant in a pool hall."

"He told the defendant to get down to the restaurant and take care of the bill."

"The latter (Wallace) made no response, but grinned."

Well, Otis Lynn apparently is not the kind of man who you grin at after you have done him out of $2.89. Otis went to the courthouse and signed a complaint against Wallace for theft.

You would think that at that point, Wallace would have stopped grinning and paid the $2.89. But apparently neither he nor his grandma had that kind of cash.

Instead, he went into court and demanded to be tried by a jury of his peers, which is his right.

The jury heard the evidence, none of which was presented by Wallace, and they brought in a verdict of guilty.

Wallace then stood in front of Judge Lyle E. Lippe to be sentenced.

Judge Lippe obviously does not think much of a man who would eat two sandwiches, french fries, and Cokes, and doesn't pay the warrant.

He sentenced Wallace to 364 days in jail. In some parts of the country, a movie actress gets less than that for shooting her boyfriend.

Wallace decided to appeal the case. Unfortunately, he didn't have any money to get out on bond while the case was appealed. So by the time the appeal was filed and heard, he had already served his sentence. Besides, the Appellate Court decided he was guilty anyway.

I don't know what Wallace is doing now that he is out of jail, but the man who was his prosecutor says he doesn't regret sending Wallace away for 364 days.

"This guy would have gotten a slap on the wrist in Chicago," chuckled Homer Tice, who was the prosecutor. "Things are a little different down here."

"You have to understand the background of this case—it wasn't the first time he did that rate sandwiches without paying. He's done that three or four other times."

"When he did it to another cafe, the lady who owned it called her son-in-law. He's a deputy sheriff. And he took Wallace by the scruff of the neck and told him to pay or else he would take it out of his hide. I think he paid that one."

"But when Otis came up to him in the pool hall, why, he just grinned at him and just went on shooting pool. He had no intention of paying."

"Could it have been that the fellow was famished, and he and his grammy were both broke?"

Tice snorted. "Then what was he doing playing pool a month later? He always found money somewhere for drinking and playing pool. No, he was just a common criminal. And there was no way you could rehabilitate a fellow like that."

Pupils study, party

Forty-eight students of the 4th grade class taught by Marsha Eden and Judy Watson, team leaders at Harrison Elementary School, capped their studies of foreign countries with a United Nations party this week.

The class was divided into groups of two or three students with each group studying a different country.

During the party each group, dressed in costume and displaying flags, gave a brief summary of the economics and customs of the country studied, and served a small portion of food typical to that country to the rest of the class, which was gathered in a large circle.

Each group of students was responsible for making the costumes and flags of their chosen country and providing a sample of its food.

Carl Fisher, right, dressed in a German costume, serves a portion of "Himmel und Erde," a dish of cooked potatoes and apples, to Mark Olson, left, and Matt Harr. Mark and Matt are painted and costumed as bearded natives from the Brazilian jungle. The Harrison Elementary 4th graders capped a study of foreign countries with a United Nations party.

TF County highway aides turn down traffic study

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Highway district officials in Twin Falls County have turned down an opportunity to participate in a pilot traffic accident and injury study under the Idaho Department of Transportation Bureau of Highway Safety Division.

Meeting with the Twin Falls County commissioners Thursday, representatives of the Twin Falls, Buhl and Filer highway districts and the city of Twin Falls voted to decline the invitation at this time.

The program, outlined here recently by state officials, would be totally funded by federal money, which would be reimbursed later.

Highway district officials said since the districts would have to pay for the project, initially and then submit reports for reimbursement, they would have to revise their budgets to cover the initial expenditures.

Several highway board representatives said they feel the same type of program can be conducted locally by law enforcement and highway officials without jirng a consulting firm.

A meeting will be held Friday with highway district directors, Idaho State Police, county sheriff's officers and other interested persons to discuss collecting accident statistics.

Parke Garrard, Boise, representing the traffic safety division, department of transportation, proposed a pilot traffic safety study in this area of Twin Falls, Jerome, Minidoka and Cassia counties in a meeting in Twin Falls earlier this month.

He said Rupert is already conducting such a study with Dale Riedesel, Twin Falls consulting engineer, in charge of the collection of material.

Purpose of the study, he said, would be to review all accidents.

Parking ban aired in Rupert

RUPERT — An overnight parking ban at a paved city lot near the Union Pacific Railroad depot has run into council opposition.

The council directed the city staff to discuss the matter with Union Pacific officials and determine if the ban would cause a problem for railroad employees.

The parking lot has been posted. Police Chief Ed Culver told the council. That action was the result of an earlier council directive.

Culver said the major parking abuses were by auto dealers in the area, who frequently park their merchandise and vehicles brought in for repair in the lot.

One auto dealer had last sought to lease the lot from the city, but the lease was awarded to Major Lynn, operator of the adjacent Panace House. Lynn then paved the lot as part of the agreement, leaving it open to public parking.

Councilman W.F. "Bill" Whitton and Dwinelle Alfred Tuesday voiced concern for nighttime railroad employees who might park in the lot.

City opens street by building site

WENDELL — Wendell has opened East Avenue D through the area where Boise Cascade Gooding, has five new homes under construction.

Bon Wallstrom of the Gooding Lumber firm said Thursday, previously stalled negotiations between his firm to get the city to open the street have been successful.

He asked councilmen at the Wednesday night council meeting to write a letter confirming that the street now conforms to city street standards and that the city will maintain it. The letter is necessary for Boise Cascade to obtain financing on the construction project, Wallstrom said. Councilmen agreed to have the letter sent.

He said the city had "dragged its feet" over the firm's request, but he understood, the reason was lack of funds. The street is not paved, but it conforms to requirements of many other streets in town which are not paved.

Bill Block of J-U-B Engineers, Twin Falls, attended the meeting. The council decided to hire the firm on a retainer basis but not sign a contract.

"Two citizens attending with requests" about building problems were referred to the city planning and zoning commission.

The council agreed to set a public hearing-March 10 on a request from Jim Roundtree for a variance on construction he plans on his property.

Buhl pupils 'tell' tales

BUHL — Youngsters in the second through sixth grades of the Buhl Elementary School have just completed their "Celebrate a Book" reading program with some seven students winning awards for their illustrations.

Each child was allowed to select a book of his or her choice, read it and then prepare an original "illustration" of the story. Steve Erickson, a second grader, prepared an illustration of "101 Dalmatians." His miniature handmade Dalmatian figures were real enough to win him first place in the contest.

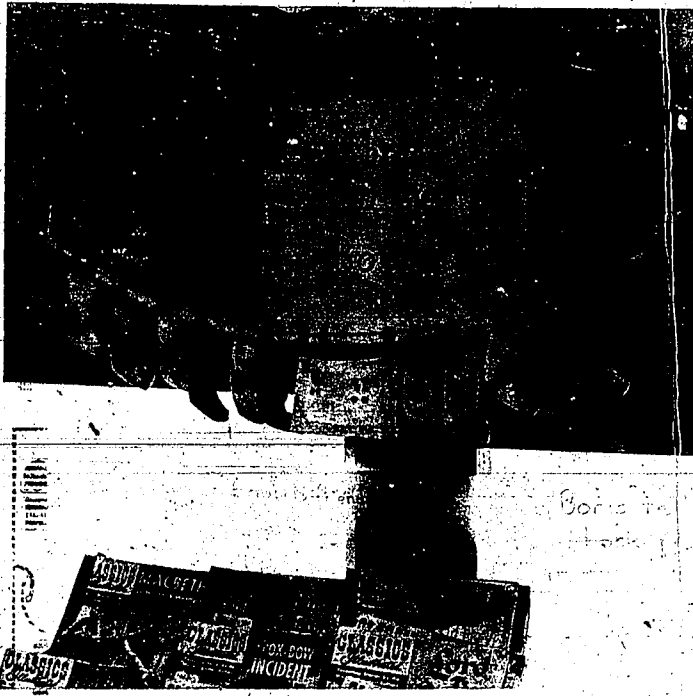

Youngsters used all types of material in their illustrations. One 11-year-old girl embroidered a piece of linen with a horse's head, placed gold sewing around the cloth, monogrammed "Misty" on it after reading the story of the horse "Misty."

Some used drawing paper and crayons and some built houses and stage scenes. "Pippi Longstockings" was illustrated with a cardboard box fashioned into a room complete with cloth drapes and a bed on which Pippi reclined.

Another young reader illustrated "The China Doll" by drawing a garden scene. A magnet attached to a small paper figure of the "doll" followed the path as the young reader's finger on the back of the drawing moved in that direction.

US mineral plans urged

(Editor's Note: The following article is excerpted from the January/February issue of Context, The University of Idaho alumni news magazine.)

MOSCOW — Without some farsighted U.S. planning soon, Soviet Russia may ultimately gain an economic stranglehold over the United States with sales of vital mineral resources and oil, several University of Idaho professors think.

Dr. Maynard Miller, dean of the college of mines, says much of the world's known metal and petroleum reserves are in Siberia. "With 65 per cent of the total oil in the polar basin lying on the North Siberian coast — when the Alaskan oil is depleted in about 30 years, I see the possibility of a pipeline across the Bering Sea from Siberia with the United States paying for Russian oil," he says.

Dr. Peter Siems, economic geologist, and Dr. William Green, mining engineer, both said they are also concerned about Soviet domination of mineral supplies. "They point out that Soviet Russia has not only a direct control on the Siberian reserves, but also an indirect influence in so-called Third World countries such as some African nations with large supplies of vital mineral ores."

Dr. Miller said the United States, with its Alaskan resources, has access to only 15 per cent of the oil in the Arctic basin. Canada controls the remaining 25 per cent above the Russian reserves.

He said there are rich areas of mineral resources in the sub-arctic and even above the Arctic Circle in North America which are yet to be explored so that plans may be made for their judicious use. He said planners should guard against allowing these mineral rich areas to be set aside in a manner which would not allow mining or exploration of eventually needed resources.

"If U.S. planners aren't careful, we can strangle ourselves with the present relatively uncoordinated and ineffectual minerals policy in Washington which doesn't take fully into account the total long range needs of our nation," he said.

He said Alaska and Canada are facing pressure for the same kind of legislation which has set aside recreation and wilderness areas in Idaho's mineral-rich White Clouds area and others. Miller said such legislation must be carefully designed to allow use of the most needed of these resources while guarding the area being preserved.

what's what

L.W. Boyd

Approximately 175 years ago, there were said to be only seven vocations, outside the home, that were considered suitable for women. Ask the historian in your family for names; said vocations. They were: 1. Teaching. 2. Needle work. 3. Knapping boarders. 4. Weaving. 5. Type setting. 6. Book binding page folding. And 7. Book bindery stitching.

Heros do a lot of snoring, that you know. Am told that's to keep their always clear, because they breathe only through their nostrils, not through their mouths.

Maybe it's fortunate for that French wit Monsieur Voltaire that he isn't around right now. He claimed he drank 70 cups of coffee every day.

Did you know your ears tend to pump out more wax when you're scared?

LONG ARM

Q: "How long is the Statue of Liberty's upraised arm?"
A: About 42 feet.

Any good tavernkeeper will tell you that once a full 59 a beer is tapped, it ought not be drawn upon for more than 48 hours. That's why those home beer taps so rarely work out. Even with the tittest-kegs, much-beer-goes-flat-before-it-gets-to-glasses.

If you buy a new boat, you can expect to get mail from all sorts of sellers of goods. The direct mail advertising boys figure the boat-owners lists of names-and addresses make just about as dandy a market as there is. Those lists, as you know, are sold. And few other lists cost more.

CABLE CARS

Everybody who's been to San Francisco knows the colorful trains are powered by underground cables. But not all are aware of how those cables came to be. Credit a Scotsman named Andrew Smith Hallidie with that. In 1869, he watched a team of horses strain mightily to pull a car up one of the city's steepest hills. One horse slipped on the wet cobblestones, and fell. The car brakes failed. The other horses lunged, but collapsed, and the heavy strectear lurched backwards, plunging, and pulled all the horses to their deaths. Hallidie thought, designed, sought backing, and two years later his widely mocked "Hallidie's Folly" was started.

It's almost a certainty that there's more oil in the tires of your car than in its crankcase.

Did I mention a common housefly needs only 60 days to become a grandmother?

Would take 135 newborn possums to weigh an ounce, please note.

Recreation permits topic of hearing

BOISE (UPI) — The recreational use of Bureau of Land Management lands will be the subject of a public hearing on proposed regulations March 9 at Boise State University.

Dean Bibbes, BLM Boise District manager, said the proposed changes would include procedures for recreational permits and fees on public lands other than in developed campgrounds.

The regulations under consideration call for:

- Permits for the use of BLM land for commercial, competitive or motorized vehicle events.
- Permits for any organized use, non-commercial or noncompetitive.
- Family groups or individuals who wish to travel across or picnic on most public lands would not be required to have a permit, Bibbes said.

The regulations will be discussed fully at the public hearing beginning at 7:30 p.m. in the Nez Perce Room of the Boise State University Student Union Building.

1920's Buhl movie palace chosen for national historical listing

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES Times-News writer

Buhl. — To most residents of Buhl, the Ramona Theater is just an old building, but it has rare historic values, say Idaho Historical Society officials.

"The theater, now vacant and unused except for occasional special events and large gatherings, has been selected for listing in the National Register of Historical Places," U.S. Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, announced the selection last week in Washington, D.C.

Recommendations for including the old theater in the historical register came from the Idaho Historical Society.

Dr. Merle Wells, Boise representative of the society, said the theater is probably the only remaining movie palace of the 1920s in Idaho which features a Moorish design. He said the old Ada Theater in Boise is also a historic structure, but features an Egyptian design as did most of the "show houses" of that day.

Purpose of listing the theater in the historical places register, Dr. Wells said is to help protect it from demolition or damage in the face of community progress.

In the event of any federally-funded project such as highway construction, urban renewal or other programs, it will now be necessary for the historical value of the building to come into consideration.

"This isn't to say it won't fall to progress," Dr. Wells said, "but at least now it will require that the public have a voice in whether or not it should be destroyed or changed."

The theater was built, Dr. Wells estimated, in about 1920, judging by the design and type of structure. At that time he said, "elaborate 'movie palaces' were being built for vaudeville shows and showings of early movies."

Dr. Wells, 61, is a representative of the Antique

Festival Theater, said the theater group used the old Ramona Theater from about 1964 to 1969 for summer drama programs. The Antique Festival Theater now presents its summer shows on the road and no longer needs a permanent local location.

She said at that time she collected information on the old theater and found it to be the only one of its kind in the state.

Carter, Andrus back new status for US Indians

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter said today American Indians will have a new status under his administration and he promised to immediately press negotiations to do more for deaf television viewers.

Carter visited the Interior Department today and stopped by the Bureau of Indian Affairs to stress his concern for the government's responsibilities to Indians.

He said Indian affairs will, at the least, be placed under an assistant secretary in the Interior Department rather than under the present commissioner setup.

"I would hope that we could establish a major position more quickly," for Indian Affairs, he said.

There have been proposals to make Indian affairs an independent agency, reporting directly to the president. Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus has said he will back such a move if that is what Indian leaders want.

Carter was chatting with government employees at the Interior Department and one asked him a question using sign language. He replied with a sign which he said meant "I love you."

The questioner asked what could be done to help deaf viewers and Carter promised to "direct a letter to the leaders of all the television networks in this country asking them to make a special effort in the future and ask them to open up their programs" to deaf viewers.

"Before the day is over this letter will be in the mail to those networks," Carter promised.

He did not elaborate on how the networks might help deaf viewers, although a number of local news programs around the country use "hand talk" along with broadcasters to help deaf viewers follow programs.

Shoppers unhappy over food stores

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Most of the consumers contacted in a nationwide survey are dissatisfied with the quality and nutritional value of food in American supermarkets, a farm group said today.

"Those who expressed dissatisfaction were especially articulate on this issue," said Dale Hendricks, chairman of the Agriculture Council of America. "The most frequent written comments dealt with additives, preservatives, overprocessing, pesticides, dyes and waxes."

"Putting it bluntly, a Denver consumer said: 'We'd probably fare better eating the packages and throwing the food away,'" he told a news conference.

Over three-quarters indicated a willingness to forego convenience packaging and preparation of foods as well as buy more food "in bulk," Hendricks said.

The council describes itself as a non-partisan, non-legislative organization founded by farmers and supported by them as well as commodity groups and farm suppliers, to try to improve communications between farmers and city dwellers.

The group said questionnaires were handed out to 2,500 consumers in supermarkets and shopping centers in Pittsburgh; Albany, N.Y.; Boston; Kansas City, and St. Louis, Mo.; Dallas; Denver; Minneapolis; Chicago; Phoenix, Ariz.; Sacramento and Berkeley, Calif.; Portland, Ore.; Atlanta; Memphis, Tenn.; Jacksonville, Fla., and Northern Virginia.

The results showed that 50 percent of those surveyed were dissatisfied with the quality and nutritional value of food, while 46 per cent were satisfied. It also said that 66 per cent thought that more bulk purchasing and less convenience packaging would bring food prices down.

Historical "Moorish" theater

PROBABLY the only remaining movie palace of the 1920's in Idaho that features a Moorish design, the Ramona Theater in Buhl, now used only occasionally, has been selected for listing in the National Register of Historical Places.

1920's Buhl movie palace chosen for national historical listing

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES Times-News writer.

BUHL. — To most residents of Buhl, the Ramona Theater is just an old building, but it has rare historic values, say Idaho Historical Society officials.

The theater, now vacant and unused except for occasional special events and large gatherings, has been selected for listing in the National Register of Historical Places.

U.S. Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, announced the selection last week in Washington, D.C.

Recommendations for including the old theater in the historical register came from the Idaho Historical Society.

Dr. Merte Wells, Boise, representative of the society, said the theater is probably the only remaining movie palace of the 1920's in Idaho which features a Moorish design. He said the old Adia Theater in Boise is also a historic structure, but features an Egyptian design as did most of the "showhouses" of that day.

Purpose of listing the theater in the historical places register, Dr. Wells said, is to help protect it from demolition or damage in the face of community progress.

In the event of any federally-funded project such as highway construction, urban renewal or other programs, it will now be necessary for the historical value of the building to come into consideration.

"This isn't to say it won't fall to progress," Dr. Wells said, "but at least now it will require that the public have a voice in whether or not it should be destroyed or changed."

The theater was built, Dr. Wells estimated, in about 1926. Judging by the design and type of structure. At that time, he said, elaborate "movie palaces" were being built for vaudeville shows and showings of early movies.

Di Bowler Bliss, a representative of the Antique Festival Theater, said the theater group used the old Ramona Theater from about 1964 to 1969 for summer drama programs. The Antique Festival Theater now presents its summer shows on the road and no longer needs a permanent local location.

She said at that time she collected information on the old theater and found it to be the only one of its kind in the state.

MV musicians tune up for shows

By NORMA HERZINGER
Times-News writer

FILER—It's country music time again. The Magic Valley Country Music Association is tuning up for its 16th annual Country Music Jamboree with three big shows planned. Show time is 8 p.m. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at the Filer High School Auditorium. The auditorium brings back many memories for some of the old-timers on the shows, because Filer is where many of the earlier shows were presented.

Musicians from throughout Magic Valley will participate in the jamboree with several newcomers and groups making their debut. One newcomer, who will add another new twist to the entertainment—is Bill Southwick, Gooding, a magician, Southwick, a radiological technician at Gooding Memorial Hospital, has performed with the Ted Mack Amateur Hour on television and was affiliated with the Grand Ole Opry.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Southwick, Buhl, he was graduated from the Buhl High School and the University of Idaho where he spent five years. He spent two years each at the LDS Hospital, Salt Lake City and at the University of Utah studying radiology.

Southwick said he toured night clubs for a year with his magic act and country music singing and has resided in Gooding for the past year.

One of the new groups to be featured will be the Country Gospels, Jim Wallis, Doug Albrethson, Larry Henman, Jeanne Wilson and Kay Wall. Although this will be the first time the group has performed in the jamboree it is familiar to many Magic Valley church groups.

Many of the regulars will be back again this year including the yodeling Buzz Goertzen, High Country, Nevada Gamblers and Last Resorts, to name a few. Gene Bosserman will play lead guitar with the Common People.

The shows will be presented under the direction of Rudy Williamson and Ted Winkle, with proceeds earmarked for the Easter Seal Center and the Buhl Rodeo Association.

Over the years, the music association has donated more than $10,000 to the Easter Seal Center.

In 1976 the jamboree made $4,456 for the center to purchase an audiometer for testing pure-tone hearing, and a tympanometer for testing middle-ear damage. After getting the tympanometer, the Easter Seal Center found seven children who needed surgery to correct hearing losses.

"Without this equipment these children could have been missed and serious hearing losses could have resulted," Merie Stoddard, center director, said.

Efforts of the musicians have assisted with the purchase of a new office chair, fire extinguishers, paid for the wiring on a new water heater, bought all the paper supplies for at least one year and bought pre-school supplies used in therapy in language stimulation.

According to Mrs. Stoddard, jamboree proceeds have paid for extra help and the wages of the summer therapist at the Magic Valley Easter Seal Center and for two years the funds were donated to set up a building fund. The other years the money was donated to the general fund for maintenance and wages for the Easter Seal staff in Twin Falls.

The other recipient of this year's proceeds, the Buhl Rodeo Association, was formed in 1966 by a small group of people to build a safe place for the junior and adult riding clubs to ride.

DEAR ABBY: I don't know who to turn to. I just found out that my 15-year-old daughter is on the Pill. I am nearly crazy with heartbreak, disappointment and shame. She has a steady boyfriend I don't want was nice. I never dreamed this warring on.

Should I confront her and tell her I know? I'm so upset I can hardly sleep or eat. My daughter works steady, and lives at home, and she's always been a clean, and decent girl. Please help me.

NEARLY CRAZY IN PENNA.

'Pill' dilemma

DEAR NEARLY: What are your alternatives? Confront her and demand that she stop having sex? It won't work. Once a girl becomes sexually active, she's not likely to abstain from sex because her mother asks her to. Besides, she's of age. You could kick her out of the house, but what would that accomplish?

As long as she has chosen to be sexually active, isn't it better that she is taking precautions to prevent pregnancy that could lead to a premature marriage, and abortion or an unwanted child?

DEAR ABBY: I have been married to Paul for only six months, but one of his habits is really driving me out of my mind.

When he sits down to eat (whether we are at home, dining out, or are guests in someone's home), the first thing Paul does is to salt everything that requires seasoning—and I mean he salts it up but good! Abby, he doesn't even TRY it first; he just pours the salt on.

People look at him in disbelief. At the home of friends, I'm sure they think there's something wrong with their food. Shouldn't he take a little taste first? And then if he likes things saltier, he could add a bit more salt instead of doing it in these great broad gestures.

Or am I wrong to criticize him?

PAUL'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: If your husband likes salt, he should be a little more subtle in applying it, especially when he's a dinner guest. And he should take a taste first, even though he knows he's going to add more salt.

Paul's craving for salt may be embarrassing for you, but it could have more serious implications. Tell him to mention this to his physician.

DEAR ABBY: Is it possible for a man to be in love with two women at the same time?

I'm a divorcee, and this man I'm dating has never been married. When we met, he told me quite honestly that he had been seeing another woman, but that he wanted to date me anyway.

I agreed, thinking that if anything serious developed between us, he'd quit seeing her. Well, something serious DID develop, but he's still seeing her. He has us on a schedule. Some days are "hers" and some are "mine." He's taken me on some nice trips but he's also taken her on several since he met me. She knows about me, but she hasn't given him up.

I am not insisting on marriage, but I would like a man who's mine exclusively. Should I give him an ultimatum?

I really love him and don't want to lose him, but his running between me and this other woman is getting me down. What's wrong with him anyway?

FRUSTRATED

DEAR FRUSTRATED: How far "down" you are willing to get before demanding exclusive rights is up to you. The quickest way to lose him is to give him an ultimatum, so don't go that route unless you're willing to surrender your 50 per cent of this illusive Romeo. I think he's marriage shy, and finds safety in numbers.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Laaky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212, for Abby's booklet "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (24¢) envelope.

Final review

MAGIC Valley Country Music Association President, Bill Taylor, and Joyce Wallis, publicity chairman, review sheets of music as final preparations are made for the annual Jamboree.

New twist to show

BILL Southwick, Gooding, will introduce his entertaining magician's act along with some country music during this year's shows. Show time is 8 p.m. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at the Filer High School Auditorium.

Country music shows set at Filer HS Auditorium

At the organizational meeting, approximately six-and-one-half acres of land was leased and through auction sales, music shows and donated labor and material the riding arena fence was built.

The community showed so much interest in the association a loan was obtained and seating, bucking chairs, rest rooms and lights were installed.

In 1975 more seating was added, bringing arena capacity to 250.

Each year a rodeo is held in conjunction with Bull Sagebrush Days drawing top amateur boys and cowgirls from the northwest. In 1975 and 1976, more than 250 contestants were entered in the July 4 rodeo. The rodeo is an Idaho Cowboys Association approved show and for the last three years the Bull Rodeo Association has paid to the contestants more than $7,500 each year.

The group sponsors the Sagebrush Days Rodeo Queen in the Miss Rodeo Idaho competition in Filer. In 1970, Lana Brackenbury was the Bull rodeo winner and went on to win the Miss Rodeo Idaho contest. This made her eligible to enter the Miss Rodeo America contest in Oklahoma City which she was.

Betty Schnell, also a former Bull rodeo queen, won the Miss Rodeo America title in 1976.

Masters of ceremonies for the forthcoming shows are Zeb Bell, Kimberly; Jim Winkle, Twin Falls, and Virgil Maritt, Bull.

Tickets for the performances can be obtained from Blue Lakes Sporting Goods, Petersen Western Apparel, Twin Falls Music Center, Sullivan's and Claude Brown's, all Twin Falls; Film's Inn-Filer; Jordan Music; Gooding; Sam Mar Drug and Larry's Quick Service, Bull; from any association member or at the door the nights of the shows.

Officers serving the association this year are Bill Taylor, Twin Falls, president; Chuck Daniels, Bull, vice president; Wilma Maritt, Bull, secretary; Irish Daniels, Bull, treasurer, and Wes Stewart and Jim Wallis, both Twin Falls, and Lester Garrison, Bull, board of directors.

Forget the thermostat: throw more wood on fire

(PARTLOW, Va. (UPI) — In this sprawling and generally poor rural community midway between Richmond and Washington, most of the families years ago rejected electricity or gas for heat. They were happy with their wood stoves.

And while the rest of the nation fought to stay warm and still conserve fuel during the Big Freeze in January, Roosevelt and Angeline Johnson were warm and comfortable.

The elderly couple, their families and neighbors are surviving the cold and energy shortage, just fine, keeping warm by burning wood in their stoves and heaters.

"We're as warm as we can get," Mrs. Johnson said as she dried chicken wings atop her white stove. "We haven't had to turn our thermostats back. We don't even have one.

Most of the people who live in Partlow, are black, many of them descendants of slaves who once toiled on plantations in the area. Some old plantation houses switched to electric or gas heat while both were cheap and abundant.

But now they are much cooler than the Johnson home — the others, heated by wood stoves. "We haven't had any energy shortage," Mrs. Johnson said. "Wood is plenty and our wood-burning stoves and heaters work just fine."

Slipping a supply of wood into the stove, her husband offered another reason for using the wood stoves.

"Food tastes best on a wood-burning stove. Those new electric and gas stoves cook food too fast," he said.

The gas shortage and cold has had severe effects in Virginia, shutting down hundreds of schools and industries. Gov. Mills E. Godwin declared a state of emergency last month. For a time most businesses were not allowed to stay open for more than 40 hours a week.

But as with the Johnsons, the state of emergency hasn't been much of a bother to him and Coleman Thompson. Mrs. Thompson has an electric stove, but for heat she depends on her wood heaters and wood-

Local seamstress wins new machine

(TWIN FALLS — Mrs. Agnes Rieger, Twin Falls, recently won a sewing machine in a contest, sponsored by the American Home Sewing Council.

Mrs. Rieger entered a black, gray and red wool tweed suit with blouse and vest that she made for her daughter, Sherie. She placed sixth in the "separates and sportswear" division.

After entering the contest last May with photographs of the suit, Mrs. Rieger heard nothing until September when notified that she was in the finals and to send the suit. She was informed in January that she had won a Viking sewing machine. The sewing machine was presented to her recently from Moyes Sewing Center.

There were about 90,000 participants in the Great American Sewing Contest which was judged by personnel from several publications, including Harper's Bazaar, Ladies Home Journal, Family Weekly and Mademoiselle.

Mrs. Rieger came from a family with eight girls, and her mother made all their clothes. She naturally helped and has made all of Sherie's clothes.

Mrs. Rieger said Sherie will "inherit" her old sewing machine.

Drug doses vary

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Doctors write prescriptions for medicine saying "take one teaspoonful every six hours" and 1,000 patients may wind up taking 1,000 different amounts, especially kids who spill half of it.

Some experts say it's a serious matter.

"The problem is right in the silverware drawer in the kitchen," said Darrow H. Beaton, president of a Bloomington, Minn., medical supply firm.

Beaton said his company, Apex Medical Supply Co., did research in the subject and found that teaspoon sizes vary greatly.

How much medicine a patient gets down his throat also depends on whether his hand is shaky or steady, he said. And in the case of babies, some medicine usually spills out of their mouths.

The problem may be the most serious in giving medicine to babies and pre-adolescents, he said.

So his company has come up with a "spill-proof" spoon calibrated in both teaspoons and cubic centimeters, plus an oral syringe to make sure medicine gets into children's mouths and not on their faces.

Beaton said many pharmacists are giving away calibrated spoons and syringes with medication.

Calibrated spoons come in various colors for psychological reasons.

"Bright colors help overcome fear in young children," Beaton said.

"Nice defense partner," said both East and West simultaneously.

It was nice defense and each one made his contribution.

Things started out simply enough: West opened the king of clubs and continued with the trey after East signaled with the nine. Declarer dropped the jack on the second club but East was not fooled. He knew that his partner's three of clubs was the fourth best of his original holding and hence South had at least one more club. East also wanted to get rid of dummy's fourth spade so he continued clubs to force dummy to ruff.

Now South could do nothing better than to play out three rounds of trumps before leading a diamond.

At this point it was up to West to do something for his side and West came through nobly. He played his eight of diamonds!

This was the start of an echo designed to show that he held an even number of diamonds. If that even number happened to be two, East could do nothing. But if it were four then East was in action. He ducked one diamond, won the next and led a heart. South was out of diamonds with no way to get to his good diamond in dummy. He had to lose a heart in the cool of the GENE Starr from the Tai Kung-Fu School of Karate gives Shawna Fuller a demonstration as they prepare for the Junior Club-sponsored Women's Fair. Starr will conduct classes on self-defense. The all-day fair is set Saturday at Robert Stuart Junior High School.

TWIN FALLS — A Women's Fair sponsored by the Junior Club is scheduled Feb. 26 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Robert Stuart Junior High School.

The fair will feature one and two-hour classes introducing participants to various crafts, skills and points of interest.

Although this event is called the Women's Fair, men will be most welcome. There is an age limit of 13, and no babysitting service will be available.

It is important to pre-register as most of the classes will be limited in size. For tickets and information contact John Howard Realty, 734-2294 through Feb. 25. Tickets will also be available at the door. The cost for attending a half day is $3 and a full day $5. Ditios from the various classes will be on sale with recipes, instructions and information. Hot dogs, coffee, soft drinks and homebaked foods will be available for lunch or snacking.

Proceeds from the event will go to Beverly Sturgill's Children's Theater.

Women's Fair set Feb. 26

Anti-blood clot drug may save many lives

CHICAGO (UPI) — If doctors administer a drug to prevent blood clots to certain surgical patients, it could save the lives of 4,000 to 8,000 persons a year, the American Heart Association says.

That's the same benefit for the entire polio program," Dr. Stanford Wessler, professor of medicine at the New York University School of Medicine, said in announcing the association's policy statement at a news conference Wednesday.

There are some risks of increased bleeding," Wessler said of the latest breakthrough in preventive therapy. "But we think it's a risk worth taking in terms of saving lives."

The association said low doses of the anticoagulant drug heparin, given before, during and after surgery could eliminate eight of 10 deaths resulting from blood clotting in abdominal and chest surgery. An estimated 5 million persons undergo general surgery each year, the association said.

The statement said the discovery could save the lives of one to two of every 1,000 persons over 40 undergoing major surgery. Wessler said heparin also could reduce the risk of death for women on birth control pills who undergo surgery.

Heparin, a blood thinner, prevents clots called thrombi from forming within the deep veins of the legs. The thrombi can sometimes break loose and travel via the bloodstream through the heart to the lungs where they block the lung arteries and may cause death.

This condition, called a pulmonary embolism, occurs most frequently after an operation and Wessler estimated that 50,000 persons a year die of pulmonary emboli.

GLENS FERRY — Colleen Harrington of Vancouver, Wash., and David Phillips, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Phillips, were married on Jan. 29th.

The double ring ceremony in the Glens Ferry Moose Hall was performed at 2 p.m. by Pastor Thomas Benington of Kings Hill.

The bride chose a floor-length gown of turquoise chiffon over nylon and a shoulder-length veil with a headpiece decorated with yellow and white daisies. Her bridal corsage was of yellow daisies and white chrysthemums with long ribbon streamers.

Mrs. Victor Phillips, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, Glens Ferry, was the matron of honor. Victor Phillips acted as best man.

Baskets of yellow daisies and white chrysanthemums greeted the hall. Mrs. Dale Campbell, Glens Ferry, played background music.

A reception was held in the Moose Hall following the ceremony. The bride's table was covered with a white linen cloth and centered with a three-tiered cake decorated with turquoise and white rosebuds and white doves. The cake was made and decorated by Mrs. William Phillips of Caldwell, aunt of the bridegroom.

Mrs. Dale Campbell cut and served the cake. Mrs. James Kitchin, Caldwell, aunt of the bridegroom, served the punch. Coral Kitchin, Caldwell, cousin of the bridegroom, served the coffee. Mrs. Charles Heath, Hammett, was in charge of the guest book, and Mrs. Victor Phillip of the gift table.

The bride attended schools in Vancouver and the bridegroom attended Glens Ferry schools.

The young couple took a honeymoon trip to Worland, Wyo., where the bridegroom is employed in the oil fields.

Earth Heat
Geothermal energy literally means "earth-heat" energy, and geothermal areas are those areas where the heat is great enough and close enough to the surface, to provide a heat source. In addition, the heat source must be in or near an area of permeable rock which contains enough water to transfer the heat to the surface — either along fractures or through drill holes.

Beans good source of natural fiber

TWIN FALLS — Dried beans are an important natural food for today's diet and a widely grown farm crop in Idaho.

The Idaho Bean Commission reports dried beans are an excellent source of vegetable protein, a good source of natural fiber and contain "good amounts of B vitamins and minerals."

"The importance of fiber in the diet has been recently emphasized."

An article, "Beneficial physiologic action of beans," by E.W. Hellebrand, Ph. D., printed in the Journal of the American Dietetic Association, reported: "Fiber (non-digestible food residue) is an essential food component for maintaining optimal health in human subjects."

"Among diseases the fiber traced to lack of dietary fiber are non-infectious appendicitis, cancer of colon and rectum, benign polyps and ulcerative colitis; gall bladder disease; venous disorders (hemorrhoids, varicose veins, deep vein thrombosis) and hiatus hernia."

Dr. Hellebrand concluded, "Both the stimulating action of fiber on peristalsis and the lowering effect on serum cholesterol can be demonstrated by incorporating beans in the diet. Therefore, people should have more dry beans and peas in their daily diet."

Vitamins and minerals contained in cooked dried beans, according to the Dry Bean Advisory Board, are B-complex vitamins, Thiamin, riboflavin, pyridoxine and niacin and minerals, calcium, iron, phosphorus and zinc.

The board recommended using beans to save on meat by substituting the traditional meat stretchers with baked or simmered dried beans. To obtain the most nutrition from dried beans, cook the beans in their soaking liquid just until tender and save any leftover cooking liquid for adding to gravies and soups.

Suggested serving combinations include: "Baked beans with whole wheat muffins; a rice and bean salad and chili-flavored beans over corn bread."

Here are several recipe suggestions that may prove to be a favorite.

BASQUE BEAN STEW
1 pound Idaho Great Northern beans
Meaty ham bone or ham hocks

2 bay leaves
1 large onion, quartered
4 potatoes
4 carrots
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 teaspoon thyme
1 bay leaf
1/2 pound fully-cooked sausages
Salt and pepper
Chopped parsley
Soak beans overnight in 5 cups water. Or, for quick-soak method, add beans to 5 cups boiling water, boil 2 minutes and let stand 1 hour. Measure soaking liquid and add water to make 4 cups. Cook beans, ham bone or hocks, 2 bay leaves and onion in 4 cups reserved liquid about 2 hours or until beans are tender. Drain, reserving liquid. Peel and chop 2 dice potatoes and carrots. Cook in bean liquid with garlic, thyme and bay leaf until tender. Add beans, meat from ham bone and sausages, thickly sliced. Cook just until heated through. Add salt and pepper to taste. Remove bay leaves. Before serving sprinkle with chopped parsley. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

BEAN TAMALE PIE

3 cups cooked pinto beans or 2 cans (16 oz.) pinto beans
1 large onion, chopped
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 pound ground beef
1 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons chili powder
1/2 teaspoon oregano
1/2 teaspoon basil
2 tablespoons sugar
1 can (29 oz.) tomatoes
1 can (6 oz.) tomato paste
1/2 cup sliced ripe olives
1 cup cornmeal
4 cups water
1 teaspoon salt
1/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese

Drain beans. Sauté onion in oil until tender. Add ground beef and cook until brown, breaking apart with fork. Add salt, chili powder, oregano, basil, sugar, tomatoes, tomato paste, olives and beans. Simmer one hour.

Combine cornmeal with 1/2 cup water. Bring remaining 3 1/2 cups water to boil. Add salt and cornmeal. Cook 10 minutes. Spread half of cornmeal in bottom of deep casserole. Add bean mixture. Spread remaining cornmeal on top. Sprinkle with Parmesan cheese. Bake in 350 degree oven for 25 to 30 minutes. Makes six to eight servings.

TO COOK DRY BEANS
Soak beans overnight in water, using 3 cups water per 1 cup beans. Or, for quick-soak method, add measured amount of water to beans. Bring to boil; boil 2 minutes. Cover and let stand one hour. Add 1 teaspoon salt per cup dry beans. Cover and simmer until tender, about 1 1/2 hours. One cup dry beans yields about 2 1/2 cups when cooked.

ART FORM
NEW YORK (UPI) — A major show of resist dyeing as an art form at the Museum of Contemporary Crafts of the National Crafts Council will travel nationally after it closes here Jan. 2, 1977. The tour will be run through the American Federation of Arts.

Resist dyeing consists of ikat, batik and plangi. Ikat (tik tik) is the process of wrapping-to-pattern, then dyeing segments of yarn before the cloth is made. In batik, liquid wax is applied to fabric to create a resist pattern when dyed. Plangi includes the art of tie dyeing.

Choir trip approved at Burley

BURLEY — Burley High School's Bel Canto Choir received approval this for a four-day trip to the Salt Lake City area during Easter vacation.

The Cassia County School Board approved the shortened trip Monday night, although business carrier indicated they favored trips no longer than three days.

The board had failed to approve an earlier request that the choir be allowed to make a five-day trip, said Harold Blauer, brought the matter back to the board this week with a strong recommendation that it be approved.

He said the choir would leave on Saturday, rather than Good Friday morning, but wanted to visit the Children's Hospital as a service project and would perform in the evening at the Utah prison.

Sunday morning the choir members would observe a Mormon Tabernacle Choir practice and that evening would perform the Messiah at the American Fork Tabernacle.

Cocoa prices hit record high levels

Chicago Daily News
While coffee prices have been grabbing the headlines recently, another commodity desired by American consumers is selling at record high levels.

World cocoa prices have more than tripled in the last 13 months meaning that shoppers will be paying higher prices for cocoa and chocolate products this year.

Many of the big chocolate manufacturers in the United States have boosted the price of candy bars from 15 to 20 cents, and analysts don't discount the possibility of the quarter candy bar unless cocoa prices stabilize.

"The cocoa prices are out of hand and the impact on the chocolate industry is tremendous," said Melvin Stillman, a senior vice president of Toole's Rod's Industries. "It's going to be tough for everybody to hold the line on prices."

Cocoa producers have been plagued with the same bad weather that has crippled the coffee industry. Foul climatic conditions especially hurt the West African nations, which grow two-thirds of the world's cocoa.

Another factor contributing to higher prices have been British currency problems, which has resulted in traders buying cocoa futures as a hedge against the declining value of the pound, according to the Agriculture Department.

World production for 1976-77 is estimated at 1.36 million tons, about 10 per cent less than the annual average production in the last five years.

The tight supplies and high prices are expected to last for some time. More cocoa beans have been planted, but it takes about five years for a tree to bear fruit. And the worldwide demand for cocoa products continues to increase, especially in Russia and Eastern European nations where rising incomes and more liberal import policies have helped to develop their sweet teeth.

The price of cocoa contracts on the New York Cocoa Exchange traded at more than $1.60 a pound last week and analysts say the price may soon sprout to $ a pound.

"I would guess that there will be another adjustment made by the end of the year," a spokesman for M&M Mars said. "We may raise the price. It's a sad situation. We don't want chocolate to become a luxury product."

Chocolate makes up about 40 per cent of most candy bars.

Nationwide FFA WEEK Celebration February 19-26, 1977

Members of the Twin Falls Chapter join with the other FFA chapters in the Magic Valley in celebrating National FFA WEEK which starts February 19.

National FFA WEEK always includes George Washington's birthday in observance of his leadership in promoting scientific farming practices. Washington is considered the patron saint of the FFA and has come to symbolize the FFA treasurer. Throughout the week, Idaho's 72 chapters are planning activities to support the theme, "FFA, Agriculture's New Generation".

Organized in 1928, the FFA promotes leadership, cooperation and citizenship among high school vocational agriculture students. The 49 year traditions of the FFA have held strong and produced a mighty work force for food and fiber to meet the needs of our nation and the world. Successful agricultural leaders of today are the testimony. "Agriculture's New Generation" is in the making. They're FFA member's today.

This year over 500,000 FFA members are enrolled in high school agriculture courses. Instruction in areas of livestock, soils, crops and farm mechanics will provide skills which may help an FFA member secure one of the many jobs that must be filled in agriculture each year. Education is the key to agricultural efficiency. The FFA helps provide that education.

QUESTION: Do you support a right-to-work law for Idaho?

Gaylene Anderson, Twin Falls:

No, I can't give you any reason, but I don't support it at all. I'd like to see the unions stay.

Eddie Martiner, Burley:
I'd support the unions so that people could go on strike. You know, if bad times came and they needed more money.

Bill Ruffell, Kimberly:

Yes, I do. I don't think a person should be forced to join a union. I also feel if a union is that good they shouldn't have to force people to join it. They would join for the benefits. I also believe that a person who doesn't join a union shouldn't expect union benefits.

Marty Iverson, Bellevue:
Definitely, because I worked for Hughes Air West for five years and you had to join the union. That's a bunch of bull.

Robert Williams, Twin Falls:

Yes, because I'm against compulsory membership in labor unions. I don't think that's democracy, forcing a person to join a union. For instance, if the employees want to go on strike... I don't like the idea of being compelled to stay away from work when I want to work. I just plain don't think that's fair.

Craig Hill, Twin Falls:
I don't particularly like unions at all. I've worked for a lot of them. Some of them cost me money.

Pam Noel, Twin Falls:

Yes, I don't agree with that at all. I think if you want to work someplace you shouldn't have to join a union.

Martha Webb, Murtaugh:
I don't think you should have to join the union. I think you should have the right to choose what you want. If you want to join a union, fine. If you don't want to, that's fine too.

 KITCHEN CARPETING was unheard of even a few years ago, except for the occasional small rug (more often a rubber mat) in front of the sink—to serve as housewife's feet from a day of standing on hard floors.
 The reasons are easy to find. Not only is the average kitchen a busy place with lots of traffic in and out, building up soil in heavy traffic lanes, but the fumes and spattering from daily cooking create quick build-up of soil. Carpeting just wasn't practical.
 That was before the day of man-made fibers... and especially of the development of closely packed, hard-wearing carpets that are easy to clean, shed most soils, stand up to daily heavy traffic, and are ideal for the kitchen.
 Kitchen carpeting adds color and warmth to any kitchen. It's great for young children (no cold floor), and it's a real boon to Mom's tired feet. And it "picks up" the whole room.
 You'll find our selection of kitchen carpeting is economical and easy to install, too, and available in a delightful range of colors and combinations. Come in... for the finest carpet values for every room!

LONDON (UPI) — Platinum could soon take over from diamonds as a jeweler's best friend. Jewelry manufacturers are rushing to buy the metal and the price could double from its present level. The 22-carat advice came Tuesday from Inter Commodities, which said the present price of $154 a troy ounce could hit $204 by the middle of this year and even touch $225 in the second half of 1978. "Since two-thirds of world platinum comes from South Africa, the political uncertainty, and the possibility of industrial disruption in that country could have a profound effect on the supply of the metal and could double the platinum price from the present levels," the firm said. The jewelry market, which abandoned platinum after the second World War, is expected to stimulate a rapidly increasing consumption for the metal. Inter Commodities said.

Did bear upstage actor in 'Grizzly'?

NEW YORK (UPI) — It will be humiliating to be upstaged, not to mention outwitted, by a bear. But that's Dan Haggerty's fate in the opening episode of "The Life and Times of Grizzly Adams," a new NBC show that makes its debut Feb. 9, 8-9 p.m., Eastern time. Since he was a wild animal trainer before he was an actor, perhaps he won't mind.

You can see of his face looks immobile. He isn't aided by an untrained voice. Perhaps he'll grow in the role.

Meanwhile some of the most gorgeous shots of outdoor scenery this side of a travelogue, along with a zoo-full of animals, steal the show.

Best of the animal lot is Ben, a bear that Adams befriended as a cub (the bear was a cub, Adams was a tenderfoot). Now Ben's grown and he's furry, intelligent, shuffles when he walks and makes growling noises on cue just like any graduate of Actors Studio. The "he" is possible license since the role is played by a female bear named Boz.

The opening episode concerns a little girl who has gotten lost in the wilderness, separated from her parents' wagon as it stopped briefly on the journey west.

Adams teaches the girl about life in the wilderness, and with precocious feminine wiles she gets him to bathe and clean house. A kid pushing bath and brooms doesn't add to the realism.

Grady sends his friend Mad Jack, played by Denver Pyle who has played at least a thousand such roles in the past, to find the girl's parents and eventually they are reunited.

All's well that ends. The Joseph Schiltz Brewing Company has issued instructions to its four advertising agencies to reject sponsorship of episodes of television programs that show excessive violence. The beer company doesn't want to give up such shows entirely, since it believes the beer drinkers of America like adventurous. The idea is to get the agencies to screen episodes for excessive violence.

The "shack"

By Swen

It's just a shack in an unlikely place. What, could possibly be of interest in it?

But, for many years I have wondered about the "shack". Questions to some of the old timers have given me some interesting, but unproven answers.

This particular shack is located downstream from the Malad river in the Hagerman valley.

You cannot see it from this area. You must go downstream to the large irrigation pipe that crosses the Snake river and cross the river on a foot bridge attached to the pipe.

From this point proceed downstream about 3/4 of a mile over some rock outcroppings and gulys.

You come upon the shack suddenly. Your first impression is "Why in the hell, there?"

On closer examination of the shack and the surrounding area you will notice that an area has been cleared of rock to land a boat. Still, the water in the Snake river at this point, and two miles up and down stream are some of the roughest water in the Snake river.

The "shack" is just, that a shack. The boards have been patched over the years with metal pieces and small boards. Inside the shack, the impression is that it was used for a chicken house. There are nesting platforms and some evidence of roosts. The roof is covered with dirt and may give evidence of a past sod roof.

Several years back I started asking questions about the little "shack". Why was it built? Why was it built in such an inaccessible place? Who used it?

One of the first I asked was a long time resident of the valley and now advertising manager of the Times-

News, Wiley Dodds. Wiley's father owned and operated Cigar stores in the area for years and knew about most of the incidents and people in the area.

Wiley says that the first thing that comes to mind when the "shack" is mentioned is a two-some of characters of early Twin Falls.

A local doctor and lawyer who liked the sauce. But, they preferred to nip the bud away from the general public. So, with much effort they built a hideaway to have the bouts with John Barleycorn.

This arrangement ended in tragedy. As Wiley recalls, one, either the doctor or the lawyer was killed while engaging in one of their drinking bouts.

Wiley doesn't recall how he was killed, or even, what their names were. But he thinks that could possibly be the reason for the "shack."

"Horsefeathers", say some of the old timers in Hagerman valley. Patrons of a local tavern gave Swen another story of the "shack" that will stand the test of time.

The local tavern customers say the "shack" was used by Salmon fishermen when the salmon did make runs up the Snake river. This was of course long before any of the dams were built on the Snake river to impede the upriver migration of the salmon.

My bar informants say that the "shack" was used as a home for at least two fishermen who caught salmon in the fast water in the area and because they used a boat of sorts they had to clear a beach area for their boat. Thus, the boat beaching area that was painfully made below the "shack".

Very logical, thought I, and proceeded to accept this story as fact.

"Markey!" say others. Other old timers in the area say they know why the "shack" was built and of course they too have the logic to prove the reason of the "shack".

Their theory: During the 1930's the Hagerman area was a hot-bed of Cock fighting. But, the law frowned upon the practice and many had their fighting cocks taken by the law and some spent time in the local jails for cock-fighting.

So, some bright and resourceful advocates of cock-fighting built the "shack", as a hideaway for their prized cocks.

Again, the logic tells me that this is the true meaning of the "shack".

They claimed that access to this "shack" could only be gained by crossing the fast running river in a boat and it was safe from the long arm of the local law.

The cockfighters kept their fighting cocks in the "shack", and built the boat beaching area to have access for feeding and taking care of their fighting cocks.

This of course is the most reasonable story of the "shack", because of the evidence of the chicken house barns, for example, the nesting platforms and chicken roosts.

But, if the "shack" was a chicken house why the evidence of the stove, the chimney outlet on the side of the shack?

Who would keep a fire going in a chicken house?

This writer hopes that all the stories are true. Perhaps they are, or perhaps none of the stories are true.

Many of you reading this article will of course know the "true" story of the "shack".

If you think you do, I would appreciate your dropping me a line at the Times-News and giving your impressions of the "shack".

Oh, the mysteries of our area that should be told.

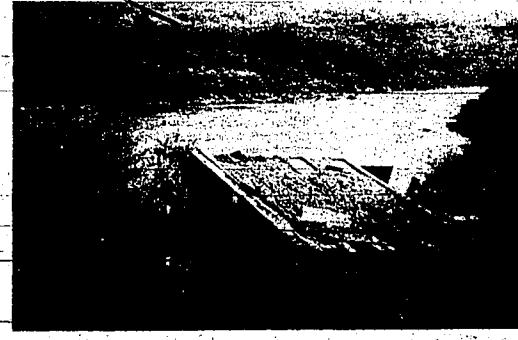

The "shack" as viewed from the front corner, facing downstream.

The first glimpse you will get of the "shack" as you walk down stream from the Malad river's entrance to the Snake river.

The boat basin built to provide access to the "shack". Notice the neatly piled rocks dredged from the basin. The shack is 25 yards from this basin.

A view of the top side of the "shack" overlooking the fast running Snake river.

There really is such a thing as mind over matter.

Your mind. Over your matter. Getting susceptible minds in the mood to combat physical ills without pills is the business of biofeedback therapists operating on fat principle, in hundreds of hospitals and clinics across America, these days.

Only the drug companies may not like it. Many persons with high blood pressure, for one example, have been trained to lower their blood pressure with biofeedback techniques. Those good at it don't gulp blood pressure-lowering pills anymore. They just let their minds tell their blood pressure to go down. And it does.

"Biofeedback appears to be the closest thing to a panacea ever discovered," Dr. Barbara H. Brown said in an interview. She is the nation's top authority on biofeedback, a science that emerged in America in the sixties.

"Biofeedback" is what Dr. Brown calls a shorthand expression. It describes the process of "feeding back" physiological information to the individual generating the information.

There are more than 50 major medical and psychological problems in which biofeedback had been used with either greater success than conventional treatments, Dr. Brown said.

Dr. Brown said the ailments that respond to biofeedback treatment span the spectrum of illnesses human beings suffer: emotional, psychosomatic, and physical.

"Probably no discovery in medicine or psychology compares in breadth of application or in scope of implications to the biofeedback phenomenon," she said.

Hindu gurus and fakirs have known about biofeedback for centuries, according to Dr. Brown.

"She practiced the mind over matter therapy on herself about 20 years ago before and while having her tonsils out. 'I told myself it wouldn't hurt and I told my body not to bleed when it was cut,' she recalled.

"I didn't have any anesthesia, it didn't hurt and there was no bleeding." Dr. Brown is an expert in psychiatry, pharmacology, and cardiovascular physiology. She is associated with the Sepulveda Veterans Hospital and with the University of California at Los Angeles Medical School.

mind and body. Dr. Brown also is a founder of the Biofeedback Society of America. Members include doctors and psychologists.

Biofeedback therapists use instruments that tell people about electrical activity on the surface of their skin, blood pressure, heart rates and other physiological functions.

A thermometer is a simple biofeedback instrument. It tells your temperature.

Instrumentation used in biofeedback training usually is more complex. In addition to a visual signal it may deliver an auditory signal — a tone that moves up or down in concert with the rising or falling pulse or blood pressure.

Making the tone go up or down by just telling the mind to slow down or speed up the pulse, for example, gives the patient practice, making his mind control some part of his matter.

"This phenomenon," Dr. Brown said, "has made science face the fact that higher mental activities, literally intellectual activities, can affect the body's physiological processes and direct them."

Dr. Brown tells about biofeedback therapy in a new book "Stress and The Art of Biofeedback" (Harper and Row). It is a sequel to her first book on the subject, "New Mind, New Body."

Both books are for therapists; the medical profession, and patients. For biofeedback to work, the patient must be in on all that's going on in this unprecedented therapy.

"It is the patient whose mindbrain does the work," Dr. Brown said.

The therapists and machines give him the right information and guide and assist him, but the process itself is a remarkable reversal of the patient-therapist or patient-doctor roles.

"The implications of this role reversal are striking. The patient is no longer the object of the treatment. The patient is the treatment."

Biofeedback took hold in America during the era of self-realization and exploring one's own consciousness.

It matured, according to Dr. Brown, as eastern religions, requiring one to search the inner being, were being embraced by growing numbers of seekers in the United States.

"Paralleling the public's interest in mind and consciousness and relief from stress by meditation, biofeedback and psychological scientists explored the mind-body control systems," she said.

"For the first time the materially oriented intellect of Western science is being satisfied that mind, 'generated of brain,' is indeed a powerful controller of health and illness."

Biofeedback seems to evoke complex mental processes to regulate and normalize even the most complicated functions of the human body.

That the biofeedback movement took root in America at the peak of the social revolution of the sixties strikes Dr. Brown as remarkable.

"Possibly the search for biofeedback was caused by the upheaval," she said.

"It happened in a country beset by problems of stress, heat by soaring medical costs, and a growing restlessness with therapeutic inefficiencies."

The implications of the biofeedback phenomenon — there is no other word for it — are so vast there is no question that it will stand as a landmark in changing attitudes about mind and body, about health, and illness and about human consciousness.

Dr. Brown believes every human being is a candidate for biofeedback therapy.

"It helps people to stay well, too, don't forget," she said.

Among stress-related disorders improved by biofeedback are tension and migraine headache, insomnia, hypertension, heart-beat irregularities, colitis, hyperactivity, asthma, alcoholism and other addictions.

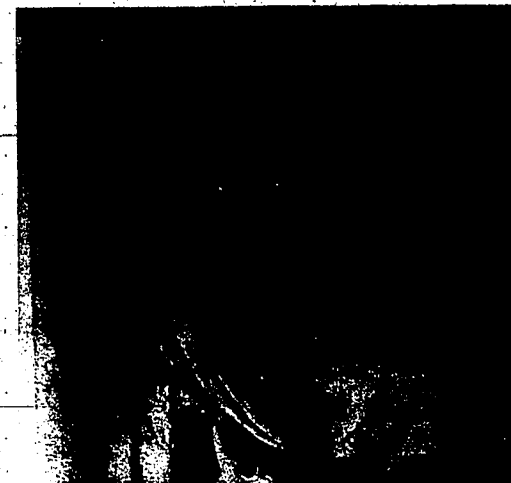

"Even more remarkable," Dr. Brown said, "biofeedback is proving to be a primary approach in the treatment of some disorders, including paralysis resulting from stroke."

"It may even prove of use in the treatment of some illnesses of unknown origin, such as epilepsy."

If you want to demonstrate how biofeedback works, Dr. Brown suggested this experiment:

—Take a thermometer—six to eight inches long and filled with red fluid. Tape bulb part to fat pad of the middle finger.

—Make good skin contact but do not constrict circulation.

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The wailing may be somewhat subdued—but Mae West is still a siren, at least in her own mind, and she's back at work in a new movie appropriately titled "Sextette."
 At 84, Mae is making only her 12th motion picture. Her first was "Night After Night" in 1931.
 "I know it seems like I've made more, honey," said Mae. Her voice heavy with the allure of the yumps of old, "I could have made a hundred pictures. But I didn't want to saturate the public with myself."
 "Some of the other ladies made one picture after another and the first thing they knew it all stopped."
 Mae apparently is unstoppable. Her most recent movie was "Myra Breckinridge with Blanked Welch in 1970. It was a bomb. Prior to that she hadn't made a picture since "The Heat's On" in 1945.
 "In all her films Mae is an unabashed sex symbol. She continues to play the siren in "Sextette"—a lady who goes through six husbands.
 Mae plays the part to the hilt. In her trailer dressing room at Paramount Studios, Mae lounged on a couch. She wore a white, satinylike dress with a blue and purple fur-like material at the collar and cuffs.
 Part of her blonde hair was gilded atop her head, long tresses tumbled past her shoulders. Her hairdo hasn't changed in 45 years. One could not detect a wrinkle on the smooth textured skin of her face, impossible though it may seem.
 To all outward appearances the octogenarian sex symbol also retains her hourglass figure, a molten fact which stretches credulity.
 Her dainty, manicured fingers were heavy with diamonds—the size of searchlights.
 Mae still single and living in the same fancy apartment she has inhabited for almost a half century, looks like a Reubens' painting. One suspects, in the case of Dorian Gray that in a closet somewhere her portrait is in tatters.
 When, if ever, will the old sex appeal fade for Mae? "Age has nothing to do with it," she said in a throaty contralto. "Look at the young actresses today. I don't know why none of them are sex symbols."
 "It's all in a girl's personality and her movements. It's also in the voice and mind.
 "Sex is an attitude. I can read a line one way and get it to trouble with the censor. Another actress can read the same line and nothing happens. Maybe it's just that I'm aware of sex."
 "I'm not a saint, women's lib but I believe in maintaining the differences between the sexes. A woman is never too old for romance and neither is a man.
 Mae quoted from an old song she wrote:
 "I've got a style that's all my own. I've got a smile that stands alone. I've got a different walk, a peculiar way. I'm not acting. I was born that way."
 She smiled enigmatically and added, "I never was nude anywhere near my pictures. And there was never any naughty language, not even a damn 'H' or 'B' when the censors were after me all the time."
 Mae recalled that her three most famous lines are still quoted the world over: "Come up and see me 'til I'm 40," "Feel me a grape," and "When I'm good I'm very good and when I'm bad, I'm better."
 She was one of the few actresses who had full control of her scripts. In the old days The Days Of '45 were through her script, searching for blatantly sexy lines. Mae outfoxed them.
 "I'd put in lines I knew I'd never use," she said. "I'd say, 'You'd better take out while the ones reading me—the tamer, but fancier ones—were left in. That kept the censors happy and didn't ruin the picture."
 "I wrote this script, "Sextette," a long time ago and played it in summer stock for 10 weeks back in 1969.
 "Among my leading men in the picture are Ringo Starr, George Hamilton, Keith Moon and Alice Cooper. Also fine muses: me, just to keep things interesting."
 Why, Mae was asked, has she chosen to return to the strain of movie work?
 "I owe it to my fans," she said. "I get hundreds and hundreds of letters from people begging me to make another movie. It's not hard work. In fact, I'm enjoying it."
 "When the isn't acting she busies herself writing. Her most recent epic, "Sex, Health and ESP," recently was published in England. She's also completed a novel, "The Pleasure Man."
 An assistant director knocked on the door and beckoned Mae back to work.
 As she rose to leave, Mae said, "Come back and see me sometime. Bill Boy

By ROBIN ADAMS SLOAN

Q: I loved Ben Vereen in "Roots" and wonder if it's true this talented black actor once dated Liza Minnelli. — R.H., Great Falls, Mont.

A: Liza and Ben were a duo during the winter of 1974-75.

They posed semi-nude for photographer Scavullo (the picture appeared in a national magazine) and for a time, Liza wore a single earring to match Ben's. Each got lots of hate mail during the short-lived relationship.

Q: I keep reading about Burt Reynolds and his new girl friends, but what about Dinah Shore's romance since they broke up? — D.C., Savannah, Ga.

A: It's been two years since the Shore-Reynolds love affair ended but Dinah rarely dates except for the obvious social necessities while Burt's been busy playing the field.

Dinah's friends are beginning to get concerned about her.

Q: Do you think anyone will ever get the Beatles to hold a musical reunion or is that possibility dead forever? — V.Z., Sacramento, Calif.

A: Since they turned down Bill Sargent's offer of $30 million for a closed-circuit, world-wide TV appearance, the group will never be lured by money.

However, there is a possibility that none other than Queen Elizabeth may accomplish this miracle.

The Queen reportedly would like to see a reunion and if she makes the request, the Beatles probably would not refuse her.

Q: Is it true that Robert Redford stopped the presses on a book about him because he didn't like the contents? — E.M., St. Louis.

A: Not quite. When Redford discovered a new book about his films was in the final stages he made a deal with the publisher to make some changes.

He willingly put out more than $10,000 to cover the cost of changes in the book which was already set in type.

He toned down some quoted material about his colleagues in the film world and made his childhood appear less unhappy.

Q: I've read that the Sonny and Cher TV show is doomed. If true, what plans does Cher have for continuing her career? — W.F., Centerville, Iowa.

A: Cher is just as ambitious as Sonny, despite numerous stories to the contrary. Cher has no plans to take a rest if CBS drops her show. Cher hopes to turn her attention to the movies.

She has her eye on the plum lead in the new version of "The Merry Widow," which Ingmar Bergman wants to make as his first American production. The great Swedish director is seriously considering Cher and her chief competition, believe it or not, is Diana Ross.

Q: With all the noise about Howard Hughes these days, why hasn't Jane Russell spoken out or written a book about being his protégée? — D.G., Denver.

A: Jane's terribly loyal to the memory of the man who made her a big sex star with "The Outlaw" back in the '40s. Still, Jane's a shrewd business woman, making as much money in real estate these days as she did as a movie star.

She is now seeking bids for her autobiography, which, of course, will be dominated by Hughes.

Q: What's Robert Humphrey's mood now? I imagine the "Happy Warrior" is a bitter old man now that the political parade has passed him by. — J.C., La Jolla, Calif.

A: We'll tell you a poignant and exclusive story: The night after Ford lost the election, the defeated president and Humphrey had a quiet dinner together at the White House.

"I would have given five years of my life," Humphrey said to Ford, "to have spent two months or two weeks or even two days in this house. And you've had two-and-one-half years." Humphrey added, "Please don't be bitter. You know those people whose brow is always furrowed? They're not intellectuals. They're just miserable." The happy warrior isn't bitter and is still preaching a message of hope.

Q: I know "Barry Lyndon" was a flop, but does that mean it's talented director, Stanley Kubrick, will not be able to get another film assignment? That would be such a loss. — A.H., Old Greenwich, Conn.

A: While "Barry Lyndon" lost millions, director Kubrick, a reclusive-type genius, has decided his next work must be a sure-fire money picture so he's going to make wonderful film hit, "Rocky" — W.F., New Britain, Conn.

"The Shining" by Stephen King, the mystery writer of the current horror hit "Carrie."

As it may be just a passing phase but the word we got is that success is going straight to Stallone's head.

Impressed by his importance as the new show business sensation, he seems to be going the route some Hollywood stars used to follow years ago.

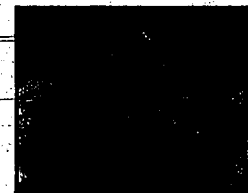

He's throwing his weight around and acting overly aggressive with a lot of people.

Q: I think it's wonderful Henry Kissinger's being offered all those terrific jobs and piles of money for writing his memoirs. But what about poor wife Nancy, who's gotten used to winning and dining with royalty? Is it back to the dishwasher for her like the rest of us housewives? — H.T., Nashville, Tenn.

A: Not exactly. Nancy has quietly agreed to go back to the Rockefeller's — her original bosses.

DIPLOMATIC ERROR? Almost everyone agrees the President made an excellent choice in picking Andrew Young as our ambassador to the United Nations. But Young's coming in for behind-the-scenes criticism from some old pros at the State Department.

What they're questioning is his judgment in accepting an invitation to attend a small dinner where the other guests included representatives of three guerrilla groups who are striving to overthrow U.N. member governments.

ANDREW YOUNG

... a wrong move, perhaps?

A: Since divorcing O'Neal (she was his second wife), Leigh has virtually given up her promising career in films and taken to Eastern mystic religions. She and her son, By-Ryan, live in New Mexico.

She's made some trips to India to study, but has not returned to her old Hollywood stamping grounds.

SCANDAL OF THE WEEK: A story flashing around Hollywood, is that there is one person whose name has never been mentioned who figured prominently in the life and death of Freddie Prince.

Q: I just read a wonderful book, "Raise the Titanic," and would like to find out even more about this ship. — M.H., Paterson, N.J.

A: The Titanic struck an iceberg in the North Atlantic on its maiden voyage from England to New York in 1912. It sank with a loss of 1,500 lives. There were only 700 survivors.

You can join the Titanic Historical Society, Inc., by writing to P.O. Box 53, Indian Orchard, Mass. 01051.

As well as publishing a magazine, the society reprints books on the Titanic and researchers "salvage" possibilities as in "Raise the Titanic." Some members of the organization are survivors of the disaster.

Incidentally, British entertainment mogul Sir Lew Grade is going to start the movie version of the book this summer, probably starring Charles Bronson.

WILLIAM GOLDMAN

Q: How come writer William Goldman seems to do the scripts for so many of Robert Redford's films? — J.A., Rye, N.Y.

A: Goldman is one of the top screenwriters in Hollywood. Redford likes Goldman's work and maybe even regards him as a lucky charm. After all, Goldman wrote "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid" and Redford's latest hit, "All the President's Men."

The actor is also set to do "Mr. Horn" with a script by Goldman. And coming up next is Joe Levine's epic, "A Bridge Too Far" also with Redford and scripted by — guess who?

South got caught in 'Rootsmania'

N.Y. Times Service
NEW YORK — In 1957, when the late popular singer Nat (King) Cole became the first black performer to have his own network television series, several Southern stations refused to carry it, and sponsors avoided it for fear of a Southern boycott. The show was canceled within a year.

A dozen years later, some public television stations in the South declined to carry the celebrated children's series "Sesame Street" because of its racially integrated cast.

As recently as 1973, a syndicated series featuring Barbara McNair ceased production when the distributor despaired of being able to sell it to a single station in the South.

But two weeks ago, virtually every station affiliated with ABC-TV — including those below the Mason-Dixon line, some in two-station markets whose primary commitment is to CBS or NBC — put on the air the 12-hour adaptation of Alex Haley's best-selling novel, "Roots," and reaped the benefits of the program that attracted the largest audience in television history.

Although the program dealt with slavery in the United States from the black point of view, and had a predominantly black cast (the whites almost invariably portraying "heavies"), "Roots" was carried without serious incident in all the capitals of the civil rights violence of the 1960s.

From Jan. 23 to Jan. 30, when the program was on the air, the South was caught up in what some local newspapers termed "Rootsmania." The mayors of Birmingham, Ala., and more than 20 other Southern cities proclaimed the eight-day period "Roots' Week."

From Montgomery, Ala., to Little Rock, Ark., "Roots" dominated conversations, radio call-in shows, classroom discussions and pulpit sermons, according to a survey of dozens of Southern broadcasters.

In Winston-Salem, N.C., a Boy Scouts meeting was rescheduled and several week-night church functions cut short to allow people to return home in time for the new "Roots" episode.

"It was a remarkable phenomenon," commented Eugene Bohi, general manager of WGHF-TV, High Point, N.C. "Over and over we kept hearing people remark that the enthusiasm for 'Roots' proved how far we've come in black-white acceptance."

"The world's changed down here since I arrived 15 years ago," said Morton S. Cohn, president of WLOS-TV, Asheville, N.C. "I'd guess the program caused more racial friction in the North than in the South."

Most broadcasters conceded that a program such as "Roots" would have had an explosive effect in the South five years ago, but none admitted to any apprehension about putting "Roots" on the air now. Fred Pierce, general manager of WJCL-TV, Savannah, Ga., told of receiving some calls from people saying, "We don't need to open up those old scars." But he and others noted that there was no advance pressure to keep the program from being televised.

Expectedly, some hate mail was received by the ABC affiliates, and blacks as well as whites wrote in to complain about aspects of the show. Many of the complaints concerned the partial nudity, the sex scenes, the coarse language and the violence in the program.

In some communities, there were reports of racial tensions in the schools, marked by white and black pupils hurling at each other such terms as "massa" and "yassuh," popularized by the television serial, but these reports of scuffles could not be verified by the news departments of the local stations.

Similar reports of minor racial disturbances in the schools, believed to have been prompted by "Roots," came from the Northern cities too, several of them.

Although "Roots" was a prodigious television hit, not all Southern broadcasters believe it contributed to changing racial attitudes. All, however, regarded the showing itself as a measure of the progress that has been made in the South.

"I answered calls from some people who had serious difficulties with the program," said Robert Doubleday, president of KATV, Little Rock. "We asked those who were upset to look at the show in perspective."

"We expained," he continued, "that they were accepting the show as factual, rather than as a fictionalized account of one man's family history."

William H. Dilday Jr., a black broadcaster who heads WLBT-TV, Jackson, Miss., expressed doubt that the serial provoked shame in whites or that it made a significant difference in race relations among adults.
