Fire rescue try fails, 3 die

By SHANE O'NEILL Times-News writer

RUPERT — Two teen-aged boys died with their handicapped younger brother as they tried to save him from fire that engulfed the family home in Rupert early today.

Dead are 14-year-old Jose "Jojo" Palomarez and his older brothers, Manillo, 16, and Francisco, 19.

Mindoka County Coroner Kim Christensen said the three youths died of smoke inhalation.

Rupert and Mindoka rural firemen battled the blaze for about 20 minutes before they were able to remove the bodies of the youths through a window in Jojo's bedroom at the side of the house.

Christensen said there were only superficial burns on the bodies and the bedroom did not burn until after the bodies had been removed.

The other 11 members of the Guadalupe and Margarita Palomarez family escaped the house without injury.

Guadalupe said this morning the fire broke out about 3 a.m. He said he was sleeping at the front of the house where the fire apparently erupted and was the first to awake.

Guadalupe roused the rest of the family and all escaped except young Jojo, a mentally retarded boy.

When the family discovered Jojo had not come out of the house, Manillo went back into the flames to rescue him.

When Manillo himself failed to come out of the house, Francisco started in after both brothers.

Guadalupe said he tried to stop his older son, but Francisco shoved him aside and rushed into the house.

Guadalupe said his daughters slept in the middle of the house and his sons in the rear. The surviving children escaped through the front and back doors of the three-bedroom house.

Members of the family went to the home of Don and Linda Price, the rear next door neighbors, where the fire department was called.

Guadalupe's son, Luje, said the only phone in the Palomarez home was in a front corner of the house where the fire erupted.

Guadalupe said he tried to fight the fire with a garden hose but could make no progress against the flames. He said he didn't know what caused the fire. The home was heated by a gas furnace at the middle of the house. There were no space heaters.

Guadalupe said there was no explosion when the fire erupted.

Kenneth Ennis, assistant Rupert fire chief, said the Fire Department received the alarm shortly after 3 a.m. Ennis said the department had 20 men at the scene and four trucks, including two pumps. The Mindoka Rural Fire Department also sent a tanker and pumper and about 10 firemen.

The family is now staying at the Rupert home of Luje and Fred Palomarez. Two other sons of Guadalupe, Francisco and Jose, are being arranged through Wash Hansen Mortuary, Rupert.

CHARRED WRECKAGE is all that remains today of the Guadalupe Palomarez home in Rupert which was destroyed by an early morning fire. Three brothers died as a result of the fire, two losing their lives in a vain attempt to save the third.

2 TF residents die in Jerome collision

By LORAYNE O. SMITH Times-News writer

JEROME — Two Twin Falls senior citizens were killed and two others hospitalized in an automobile accident Sunday afternoon south-west of Jerome.

Howard Harry Burkhardt, 83, a former Twin Falls city councilman, and Rose Dunaway Allen, 87, died in a two-car crash at a rural intersection.

Mardicle Leveke, 81, was reported in critical condition today at the Twin Falls Clinic Hospital, Leon Strain, 82, was listed in fair condition at St. Benedict's Hospital, Jerome. All three women lived at Heritage Manor, Twin Falls.

Investigating state police said Burkhardt's car was struck broadside in the intersection three miles south and two miles west of Jerome when he went through a stop sign. His car was struck by a vehicle driven by Cricket L. Hinz, 14, Jerome, about 4 p.m. Sunday.

Miss Hinz and her passenger, Tonya Pederson, also 14, Jerome, were taken to St. Benedict's Hospital for emergency treatment. Both have been dismissed.

Personnel at Heritage Manor said Mr. Burkhardt often took elderly residents from the rest home for a ride on Sunday afternoon. He was a friend of Mrs. Strain and would take "whoever else wanted to go."

When Mrs. Allen saw him pull up, she got out her car, according to Mrs. Trudy Anderson, administrator at Heritage Manor.

Mr. Burkhardt was a longtime Twin Falls resident, serving on the City Council from 1952 to 1960. He was interested in sports and had been involved in baseball and bowling over the years. At the time of his death he was active in the Senior Citizens Organization.

Mrs. Allen and her husband, Granville Allen, lived on a farm west of town for many years. Mrs. Allen was known for quilting and had recently completed a quilt of intricate design, Mrs. Anderson said.

White Mortuary will announce funeral arrangements.

Negotiator choice scored

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Paul H. Nitze, a former delegate to the strategic arms limitation talks, said today that Paul Warnke had a "reavaler attitude of imprudence" toward national security and therefore should not be the chief U.S. arms negotiator.

Warnke, who calls himself a "dove," has said the United States contributed to the nuclear arms race by deploying new weapons and that U.S. restraint might be reciprocated by the Russians.

Nitze, a former deputy secretary of defense who has said the Soviet Union was trying to dominate the world through nuclear superiority, criticized Warnke's appointment as head of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency and chief SALT negotiator during today's third "educational" session of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee approved Warnke's nomination 12 to 2 and the whole Senate may vote by Thursday.

"I suggest that his past positions have been consistent, not with prudence, but with imprudence," Nitze said of Warnke.

"It is this cavalier attitude of imprudence which I think disqualifies Mr. Warnke for a critical role in the search for prudent arms control, a search for which I believe many of us have been far more dedicated than the record would suggest had been true of Mr. Warnke."

Nitze said his experience on the arms team headed by Ambassador Gerard Smith in the Nixon administration led him to conclude the Soviet Union was seeking "strategic preponderance on the basis of which they can aspire to lay down the direction of world events to their advantage, and, step by step, to achieve eventual socialist triumph."

Nitze said Warnke, in the past, minimized this long-term threat and opposed most major weapons systems the United States sought to build.

Hansen stirs fuss

REP. GEORGE HANSEN ... claims 'taint'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sol Linowitz says an objection to his appointment as President Carter's special representative to the team negotiating a new Panama Canal Treaty comes from persons opposed to a new pact.

Linowitz responded Sunday to charges by Rep. George Hansen, a House Banking Committee member, that Linowitz was on the board of directors of a bank which makes loans to Panama and which was revealed on Jan. 22, 1976, to be on a federal "problem" list.

The Senate, never could examine possible conflicts of interest, because Carter gave Linowitz a "short-term" (less-than-six-months) appointment to the negotiating team, Hansen said.

Linowitz, former ambassador to the Organization of American States, said the State Department found no conflict of interest in his bank connection. He noted conservative opposition to surrendering U.S. control of the canal, and said: "It's a case of somebody taking a position because they don't like the (new) treaty."

Hansen of Idaho, ranking Republican on the subcommittee on domestic monetary policy, made his charges in a letter to subcommittee Chairman Parren Mitchell, D-MD. UPI obtained a copy of the letter.

Linowitz's appointment as Carter's "special representative" to the team headed by Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker was tainted, Hansen said, because he is an opponent of the Panama Canal Treaty.

Linowitz returned from Panama last week after eight days, saying "major problems" remain.

Hansen said Congress should investigate whether Linowitz had a "stake in the Panama Canal dictatorship" of Gen. Omar Torrijos. He indicated Linowitz might want a treaty protecting bank loans to Panama, which spends almost 40 percent of its budget to pay $1.5 billion in debts.

Marine Midland — one of the nation's 15 largest banks — was "at the top of the list" in a Federal Reserve Board report of banks which had loaned too much money, and neither the board nor the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. denies that Marine Midland is still on the problem list," he said.

Amin says order 'misunderstood'

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — President Idi Amin today assured a meeting of whites — mostly Americans — at Entebbe airport that he had "nothing against them," partially easing the suspense over Wednesday's scheduled showdown meeting with some 200 Americans barred from leaving the country.

Radio Uganda said Amin met informally with the group of whites at the airport and told them the world media had "misunderstood" his orders summoning all Americans in Uganda to a meeting.

"Ugandans are your brothers and sisters... enjoy yourselves," Amin told his guests, the radio said. "The white party was composed mostly of American employees at Uganda Airlines. Amin said he proposed to hand out "honor medals" at Wednesday's meeting.

The radio said Amin was anxious to thank Americans for the "good work."

The broadcast said Amin was in a jovial mood and explained he had ordered Americans not to leave only so he could "see them all jointly." Earlier, the radio said holding them hostage "never has crossed his (Amin's) mind."

Amin issued the order last Friday and at the same time firing off an angry cable to President Carter describing as "false" Carter's criticism of recent events in Uganda.

Amin then raised the tension when he charged 5,000 U.S. Marines were poised off the east African coast and issued a nationwide alert for a possible "invasion."

January deficit in trade US worst

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States suffered its worst monthly trade deficit in history in January as imports exceeded exports by $1.67 billion, the Commerce Department reported today.

Cold weather, which forced plant closings and hampered the movement of goods, was the major reason for the record deficit, the report said.

Exports in January totaled $9.6 billion, down sharply from the record total of $10.4 billion in December. On the other hand, imports last month were valued at $11.3 billion, the highest level ever recorded.

January was the eighth consecutive month that imports have exceeded exports, the second successive month in which the $1 billion level was exceeded.

The January deficit of $1.67 billion compared to a $610 million deficit in December.

Other large imports gains were coffee, up $59.9 million; food and live animals, up $34.4 million; mineral fuels, lubricants and related materials, up $183.6 million; telecommunications apparatus, up $77.6 million and machinery and transport equipment, up $59.8 million.

On the export side of the trade ledger, food and live animals were valued at just over $1 billion, down $143.8 million from December; coals exports dropped $36.3 million to $146 million; chemicals totaled $292.3 million; down $121.4 million; and machinery and transport equipment as a group declined $261.6 million to $1.5 billion.

The $1.67 billion trade deficit in January accounted for $261.9 million of the decrease.

The last time the United States recorded a positive trade balance was in May, 1976. Since then, deficits have been registered in each month. Until January, the main reason for the deficits was a relatively quick recovery of the U.S. economy compared to its trading partners.

That increased demand for foreign goods in the country far outweighs demand for U.S. exports picked up.

The January trade performance was marked by an increase of $210 million in petroleum imports over the December level. The United States imported $3.1 billion in petroleum products, last month.

The pilot of that plane was previously identified as Mike Loening, 44. Boise, an aircraft sales company executive.

The CAP said the Air Force helicopters were bringing the bodies down from the crash site at 11,000 feet 40 miles northwest of here.

The plane was reported overdue Sunday night, and another aircraft picked up signals from an emergency locator transmitter over Vernal Sunday.

Loening made radio contact with Grand Junction, Colo., and Roosevelt, Utah, before his plane was reported missing at 9 p.m.

A twin-engine CAP plane with electronic and radio equipment aboard, aided by the helicopters from Hill Air Force Base, pinpointed the location of the 221-T signal this morning and located the wreckage.

Thoughts of spring faded today as snow and cold, gusty winds edged across the Midwest and the East, ending a reign of record warmth.

Spring fever was cooled by snow over much of the midlands Sunday and the new round of cold weather spread to the East today after a balmy Sunday.

But a flash flood watch was continued for portions of New York and New Jersey — where the balmy weather melted mountains of snow, glutting rivers and streams.

Temperatures dropped steadily as winter extended its grip.

The wintry storm dumped two to seven inches of snow across wide areas Sunday in a push from Kansas to Michigan that decimated previously springlike weather.

Ice knocked a live powerline onto a passing car in Springfield, Ill., nearly electrocuting two 17-year-old girls. The girls escaped with minor burns.

Springfield city maintenance workers were left without salt for the slippery roads because the latest shipment was stuck in barges on the clogged Illinois River.

Gale-force winds powered snow across western Lake Erie while Coast Guard rescue teams searched for eight ice fishermen stranded on an ice floe. A helicopter from Detroit rescued two of the fishermen and a local rescue squad took the others to safety.

Warm weather graced the East Sunday before the cold arrived.

Identical 79-degree readings set records in Norfolk, Va., and Raleigh, N.C.

Other records included a 77 at Richmond, Va. and a 73 at Baltimore.

The Weather Service reported the temperature hit a record 57 degrees Sunday at Buffalo, N.Y., breaking an 80-year-old record of 54 degrees for Feb. 27, melting mountains of snow and boosting flood danger.

Residents along ice-lammed streams and rivers were asked to keep a watchful eye for a sudden rise in water levels. The flash flood watch was continued today but the return of cold weather eased the situation and only localized ice jam flooding and poor drainage flooding appeared possible.

Tanker limits to court

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court today agreed to examine whether states can ban supertankers from entering ports as a safeguard against disastrous oil spills.

The justices announced they will hear arguments in an appeal brought by Washington State after a lower federal court struck down a state statute barring supertankers from entering Puget Sound and putting lesser restrictions on smaller oil tankers.

Washington state argued that the law was an appropriate exercise of state power "to preserve and enhance the environmental quality" of the sound, particularly in light of the growing rash of major oil spills elsewhere.

But the lower court agreed with Atlantic Richfield that only federal regulations could apply to the tankers even in state-owned ports.

In other action today, the justices:

- Agreed to decide, in a case involving the Pacific Maritime Association and a longshoremen's union, whether all collective bargaining agreements are exempt from regulation by the Federal Maritime Commission.
- Agreed to decide whether state courts have any powers left under federal labor law to resolve trespassing charges filed by an employer against a picketing union.
- Let stand the federal gambling conviction of alleged Kansas City organized crime leader Nicholas Gvella.

Wrong Roles

Female parts on the English stage were always "taken" by boys until the Restoration. Charles II, in 1662 issued a license granting women the privilege of acting upon the stage. The first actress to perform in public was Margaret Hughes, playing Desdemona in Othello at the theater in Clare Market, London, on Dec. 8, 1660.

Question

What are your duties as a funeral director?

Answer

Since the beginning of time close friends have been called upon at the time of death to carry out the necessary religious and legal requirements of burial. Our funeral establishment actually evolved from this need on the part of people to turn to someone thoroughly qualified. Although our facilities have been continually updated throughout the years, our responsibility to function as a friend has remained constant.

We are charged with arranging the details of a funeral service. Death certificates, Social Security and Veterans forms, newspaper notices, burial or transit permits, cemetery authorization forms... all are routinely processed by us.

A funeral is essentially a religious ceremony. Because of this fact we must maintain a constant awareness of the funeral and burial requirements of all religious denominations. In our present day pattern of living we furnish the place, the technical knowledge and the mobility required to assist the family and the clergyman in the proper conduct of a funeral service.

Paris 'pray-in' lasts all night

Occupy church

LED BY Roman Catholic Archbishop Marcel Lefebvre, left, more than 1,000 "traditionalists" occupy a Paris church on the Left Bank Sunday, vowing to stay until they get a church of their own. The traditionalists say Mass in Latin rather than in the vernacular as ordered by the Vatican. (UPI)

PARIS (UPI) — More than 1,000 followers of rebel Archbishop Marcel Lefebvre occupying a Paris church prayed through the night and sang a "traditionalist" Latin mass today in defiance of church authorities.

A cafe near the church of St. Nicolas du Chardonnet on the Left Bank stayed open all night to care for the worldly needs of the traditionalists, who say they will not end their "pray-in" until the authorities give them a church of their own.

City authorities retaliated Sunday night by cutting off electricity to the church and plunging the nave in darkness. The traditionalists kept their spirits high with coffee served from tables near the main entrance and by relaying one another through the night in prayer.

The traditionalists, who have been holding their services in sports stadiums and banquet halls, occupied the church Sunday and staged a Latin mass despite attempts by the organ player to drown them out.

Red power still growing

LONDON (UPI) — The military power of the Soviet Union and its Warsaw Pact allies continues to grow both in quantity and quality but there is no indication they contemplate aggression against the West, the British government said today.

The Soviets are spending 11 to 12 per cent of their national income on military programs compared with 6.4 per cent in the United States and 5.5 per cent in Britain, the government said in its annual official white paper on its defense plans.

Soviet forces in Europe are being boosted with massive reinforcements of tanks, artillery and planes, and Russia's northern fleet — the main threat to NATO — has been drastically reinforced, the white paper said.

"The military power of the Warsaw Pact continues to grow both in quantity and quality," the white paper said.

"There is no evidence to show that NATO's policy of deterrence is failing and that the Warsaw Pact is contemplating aggression against NATO. But political intentions can change rapidly, whereas military capability can only be altered over a long period."

Despite $340 million in economy cuts in defense spending this year, the white paper said, Britain still plans to spend $16.8 billion on defense in 1977-78 or about 5.5 per cent of its gross national product. The white paper said that, regardless of economy demands, Britain will not slash her crack 55,000 man, Rhine army and air force in West Germany.

The white paper said the Soviet Union currently has 14 armored and 13 motorized rifle divisions stationed in East Germany, Poland and Czechoslovakia. It said this is the same number as at the time of the invasion of Czechoslovakia in 1968.

Move urged on rights

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — A former Ugandan government official has called for human rights organizations throughout the world to move against Ugandan President Idi Amin "before it's too late."

Andrew Lutakome Kaylira, said as long as Amin is in power, violence in Uganda will continue and innocent people will die. The British-trained Kaylira is Amin's former superintendent of prisons.

Soviet aide heads home

HONG KONG (UPI) — Vice Foreign Minister Leonid Ilchev, the Soviet Union's chief negotiator at Sino-Soviet border talks, left Peking today after three months of fruitless negotiations.

Ilchev arrived in the Chinese capital three months ago, ending an 18-month break in the deadlocked negotiations and raising speculation that he might be able to achieve a breakthrough with the new leadership lineup in China.

Diplomatic sources in Peking said there was "no indication at all" that any progress was made during his talks this time.

Arab power ties sought

KHARTOUM, The Sudan (UPI) — The leaders of Egypt, Syria and The Sudan met today in a "historic" summit to forge a new alliance aimed at building up Arab power against Israel.

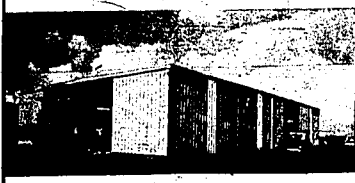

It was the second and final day of talks on ways of forging closer ties among their countries; and counteracting reported Israeli threats to Red Sea security.

Islands hit

MANILA, The Philippines (UPI) — A mild earthquake hit parts of the central and southern Philippines today.

The Geological Observatory in Manila said there were no immediate reports of casualties or damage.

'Nobody wants to bite the bite the bullet on energy'

By WILLIAM R. DIEM
Cleveland Plain Dealer

WASHINGTON — There will be a great hubbub here this year over a national energy policy. There will be bills to reorganize federal energy agencies into one department. There will be pronouncements, and maybe some laws, calling for energy conservation. There will be declarations that the nation has to depend more on plentiful coal and less on oil and gas, which are running out.

There will be investigations of allegations that gas is being deliberately withheld from the market in order to drive up prices. And that will get a lot of ink in the nation's press. And there will be moves to deregulate the price of gas. And that will make a big splash, too.

But in the end — in the view of William A. Johnson, an energy expert here, almost nothing meaningful will be done to solve the nation's energy problem.

Johnson is director of the energy policy project of George Washington University here. He has good reasons for his pessimism. He served the federal government as an energy adviser from 1972 to 1974 and during his tenure saw the appointment and demise of no less than nine energy czars.

He watched the last Congress, and the one before it, debate energy policy with bipartisan administration and end up passing little bits of policy, when great bold changes were required. There was an extension of daylight saving time. It saved a few thousand barrels of oil a day when the nation was burning nearly 13 million barrels a day.

There was a 55 miles per hour speed limit, now largely ignored. The 55 m.p.h. limit was adopted, Johnson says, because of the nation's trucks. They average 60 m.p.h., he said, and figured their speed would be less efficient if the limit were 55 rather than 50 m.p.h.

There was a mandate that 1971 build cars that get better mileage. It had them but can't sell them.

There was a mandate that new buildings be constructed with insulation and other materials and techniques to minimize heat loss. That has not yet been implemented.

Johnson, like many other economists, believes the way to achieve energy conservation is by through price. Let the price of natural gas rise or the price of gasoline or of heating oil, and people will use less. Or, alternately, tax natural gas, gasoline and fuel oil so that the perceived price is higher and people will use less of them.

He prefers to let the price rise. It will stimulate not only conservation but development of new supplies, he believes.

One can ask himself, to test Johnson's theory, why do I turn down the thermostat to 65 degrees? Is it because Jimmy Carter asked me to do it, or is it because I know if I do, I will save some money on my heating bill?

This is the dilemma involved in formation of a national energy policy. No one wants to bite the bullet and say: Let energy prices rise, either through deregulation of gas and oil prices or through taxation. It is unpalatable.

As John F. O'Leary, administrator of the Federal Energy Administration, puts it: "As an energy specialist, I should not agree more (that energy prices) could be freed. But as a responsible government official, I could not agree less. Outright deregulation and going to equilibrium would have very severe consequences for this economy."

Johnson says the basic problem is this: The United States is running out of domestic oil and gas. As a consequence, it is depending more and more each year on imports of petroleum products from abroad — mostly from Arab countries in the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC).

In 1973, Johnson says, the United States was importing from Arab nations 8 per cent of the oil it consumed. The Arab-Israeli war broke out that year, and the Arab nations embargoed oil deliveries to Western nations. It was a loss, he said, but even so, there were long lines at gasoline stations in the United States.

Today, he says, U.S. dependence on Arab oil is twice as high — totaling about 16 per cent of the oil consumed. He suggests that a new Arab embargo on oil would create problems twice as severe. And, he says a new embargo is assured if there were to be a new war in the Mideast, and to Johnson's view, the major energy problem facing the United States is not deregulation of petroleum prices, or conservation, or any other domestic policy. It is, he says, what might happen in the Middle East.

Hassan Y. Yassin, a representative of the Saudi Arabia embassy in Washington, describes what might happen. In effect, he says, Saudi Arabia might decide the United States is not putting enough pressure on Israel to settle the Middle East conflict and decide to reduce its oil exports to the West.

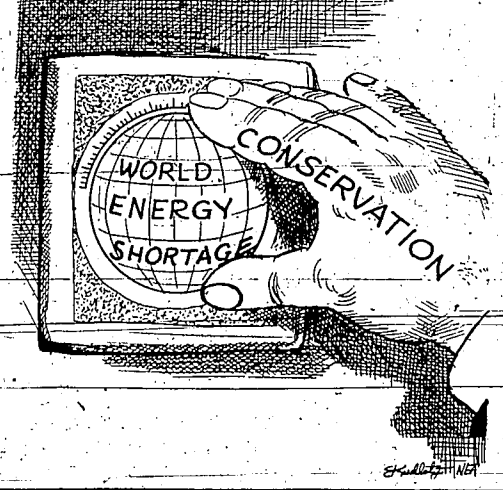

Because Saudi Arabia has enormous oil resources, it can, almost alone, dictate world oil prices and can bring to its knees any Western nation dependent on its oil deliveries.

If Saudi Arabia decides the importing nations, and particularly the United States, are not pressuring Israel for a settlement, it could reduce petroleum production from the current nine-million-barrels-a-day-to-three-million-barrels. That's all we need for our economic needs — the says — and pay the United States, Europe and Japan in a big way.

What Saudi Arabia wants in the Middle East, he says, is for Israel to give up land captured in the 1967 Six-Day War, and establishment of a Palestinian state.

If Saudi Arabia cuts its production to three million barrels a day, the United States will get very little oil, and there will be long lines at the gasoline stations again, Yassin suggests.

He warns: "Every barrel of oil is 90 per cent politics and 10 per cent commodity."

Still a dry year in Mill Valley, Ca.

By ROBERT L. ROSE
Chicago Daily News

MILL VALLEY, Calif. — Four years ago Tom McEachern literally swam down the main street of Mill Valley. This year he saves his used bathwater to flush the toilet.

"It's crazy. It's unbelievable. I'm doing things I never did before. Nobody thought things would get this tough," McEachern said.

McEachern, who runs the Small World Travel Agency here, pointed out the window and recalled how it was in 1973 when it rained nearly a month straight and the creek backed up at high tide.

"The water was four feet deep downtown. It was easier to swim it than walk it," he said. "Look at us now. Every time I drink a glass of water I feel guilty."

Mill Valley is a funky little town in Marin County, across the bay from San Francisco, where the water shortage is so severe mandatory rationing has been imposed, and there's no hope in sight for much relief.

"You have these beautiful, beautiful sunny days, and it seems a crime to complain," said Beverly Liebrock, a secretary at the Chamber of Commerce office. "But you've got to pray for rain."

Mrs. Liebrock is separated from her husband and she is raising three girls, 11, 15 and 16, in their valley home. The water shortage has made the job extra tough.

"The girls' father lives in San Francisco. They visit him every other week. These weeks I make them wait to take their showers, at his place," she laughed.

"I really don't think they're taking it seriously enough yet. They had some friends over at our house last weekend and they let them take showers. That has to stop."

It's now a normal, friendly gesture. If you live some place that's water-rich, and your visitors are from Marin, to invite them to take a shower, possibly for the sake of your own nose.

"I used to kid that I'd go visiting just to get a bath, but it's no joke," McEachern said. "The other night I went to a friend's place in San Francisco for dinner and the first thing they asked was, 'Would you like to take a shower?'"

"They had the towels and everything all laid out. Believe me, I took advantage of it. Let the shower run full blast. It was great."

The water shortage has been great for business over at Varney's Hardware. Manager Sam Schneider sells all kinds of water savers, everything from plastic buckets to submersible pumps which you can use to drain your laundry or bath tubs.

"We've gone through literally hundreds and hundreds of buckets, as fast as we could get them in," Schneider said.

The pumps for $28, a dime-sized water restrictor to put in the shower head sells for $1.79, a fancier volume control shower head is $4.69, a five-gallon storage bucket is $5.99, the 15-gallon size is $22.

Or you can take a 30-gallon plastic garbage can and Schneider will put a faucet in it. Total price $13.75. He'll also sell you a new rig for the ball and cock gizmo in your toilet, to cut water flow, for $5.99.

"The water company was giving away thousands of water bottles to put in the toilet tank to cut down the flow and free plastic restricted flow shower heads," he said.

"But they ran out of them."

The water shortage has cut business nearly in half for the Mill Valley Laundromat, run by Wendy Robertson. But she has more customers, people who want to save on their own-water allotment.

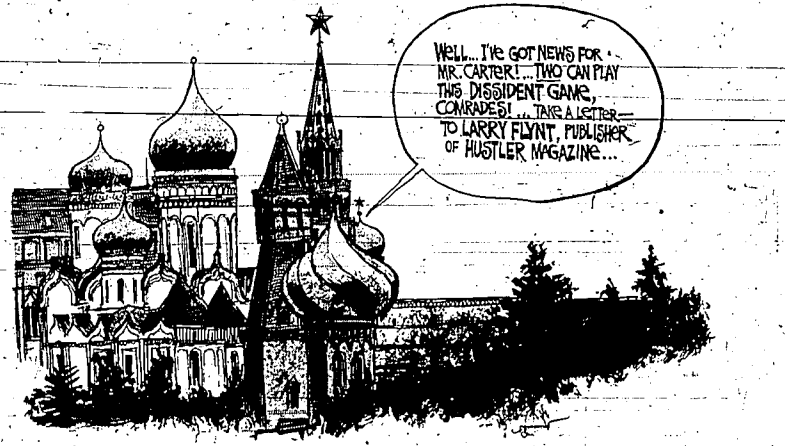

"I just tell people to bring in smaller loads and not to expect one-day service anymore. I had to let my extra help go," she said. "I also raised prices. We used to do blankets for $3. Now it's $4. Sleeping bags are $5 instead of $4. It's up on everything."

"I try to persuade people to keep their shoes on their beds an extra week and wear those jeans an extra day. Also we close on Saturday. The regular customers have been fine. But some of the new ones say, 'What do you mean $10 a bundle of laundry? What do you mean I have to wait three days?'"

"I tell them to pray for rain."

Florist Norman Black is mad at the media for reporting, he said, that roses in water-dry Marin are up to $40 a dozen.

Mondale takes selected jobs

By FRED BARNES
Washington Star

WASHINGTON — Vice President Walter Mondale has taken on a special project for President Carter — the drafting of a legislative package on election law changes — but apparently it will be one of the few assignments he accepts.

Rather than concentrate, for weeks on a particular project, Mondale prefers to serve as an all-purpose adviser to the President, according to Richard Moe, the chief of the vice presidential staff.

And this is the way in which Carter wants him to operate as well, Moe said. Carter has often said that he wants Mondale to be involved in all presidential business, so he would be ready to take over as president.

The vice president, Moe said, "has been resisting to a certain extent project assignments. A lot of people come to him and say, 'You ought to be chairman of the Space Council' or, 'You ought to deal with the mayors.'"

According to the aide, Mondale wants to be "free to roam to where the action is." Besides, the election law project is the only one for assignment Mondale undertook since his trip to Europe and Japan shortly after inauguration.

In a television interview Tuesday night, Mondale noted that vice presidents "can get bogged down" on projects. Though the assignments may be important, "they're often things that other people can do and often do better than a vice president."

"But the one thing that I can do for my president is to be his adviser on crucial, broad issues affecting government, to be the bearer of bad news," Mondale said in "The McNeill-Looker Report."

The President most avoid being isolated in the White House, the vice president said. "And I try to be his adviser and to bring in the news as it is, unvarnished, and I haven't been thrown out yet."

To emphasize the uniqueness of his vice presidency, Mondale said, "I'm hierarchically privy to all of the information that the President is. Some days I'll spend five hours with the President Carter."

Mondale is physically nearer to the President than other vice presidents have been: he has an office in the West Wing of the White House down the hall from the Oval Office. Past vice presidents had offices in the Executive Office Building.

Raise for 'clowns' irritates some

By JACK W. GERMOND
Washington Star

ROCKFORD, Ill. — She was a small woman in a bright red hat, unimposing in appearance but clearly a forceful personality.

"Those clowns," she exclaimed. "Those absolute clowns. A $13,000 raise, can you imagine. That's as much as my husband makes in a whole damned year and those clowns just take it and walk away."

The "clowns" to whom she was referring are, it turns out, the members of Congress who have just allowed their salary increase to take effect without voting on the question. And the woman, like many other voters here, is outraged by both the money and the method. Indeed, in four dozen random interviews here in the last two days, almost half of those questioned raised the subject of congressional salaries without prompting.

"You're from Washington?" A small businessman said, all smiles. "That's nice. Now you go back there, and tell those big-jawed senators and congressmen that people aren't going to stand for this. You tell them that, even if it won't do any good."

"When I give somebody a raise," a proprietor of another small shop said, "I have to look at the books and make sure the money's there. That's elementary, my dear Watson, but Congress doesn't work that way. I guess because there's nothing there in the federal bill and they're still getting that big raise."

A young mother trying to control an essentially uncontrollable red-haired little boy reflected a common attitude here — that Congress might have been entitled to a raise, but not one of such magnitude and not one approved without a roll-call vote in the open.

"I would have thought they should get something," she said, tugging her son's arm. "I read all about it and they deserved more money, all right. They had to keep two Tausacs and it's been a long time, but this was too much. It was outrageous, and then to top it off, they sneak around and don't vote on it."

"I guess they think we won't know who is to blame, but they're wrong about that."

The basic question, of course, is whether this political anger will last 20 months until the next congressional elections, and that is extremely doubtful. But pollsters' professionals suspect that congressmen may have misjudged the potential for damage down the road.

"It will die down," a Democratic office-holder said, "but it's the kind of thing the opposition can revive. There isn't much sympathy for somebody who's getting $57,000 a year. That's outside the experience of most voters."

What has always saved Congress in the past has been the simple diffusion of the blame in a situation in which there are 535 possible targets. Somehow, the public opinion surveys always seem to fare better, than the institution as a whole.

To a degree, this is the case this time — or at least it seems to be here in the 16th District of Illinois. The congressman is an influential Republican, John B. Anderson, who usually wins by such huge margins that the Democrats make only a token effort to defeat him. And that strength is reflected here in a reluctance on the part of voters to blame him for the pay raises.

Only eight of 30 persons critical of the increase and the method used for bringing it were willing to assign the blame to their own representative. Others seemed to think it ought to be charged to the other guys.

"We know John B.," a lawyer said, "and he can make three times the money he's making in Congress. And I think he's got enough guts to say so if he thinks he's worth more money."

"It just doesn't sound like Mr. Anderson," a housewife said. "It's not the kind of thing he would do, sneaking around like that."

But the majority view, whether or not Anderson is blamed, suggests that Congress made a mistake in its handling of the pay increase and can't escape paying the piper only because the election is so far away.

"Those clowns" the woman in the red hat went on, "I wish the election was tomorrow. I'd vote against all of them three times."

Vance defends CIA gifts

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance defended as "appropriate" the

Cy advises calm

SECRETARY of State Cyrus Vance, appearing on a television interview program Sunday, said "no alarming conclusion" should be drawn from a two-day delay in Uganda President Idi Amin's meeting with Americans in his country. (UPI) practice of channeling secret funds to foreign leaders through the Central Intelligence Agency for common intelligence operations.

Appearing on the CBS television show, "Face the Nation," Vance alluded to the disclosures that King Hussein of Jordan had received millions of dollars over the years and said "these kinds of things cannot be done in the glare of public publicity."

He said, as President Carter last week, that "to the best of my knowledge, there was nothing improper or illegal" about the payments to Hussein and others.

Meanwhile, Hussein, in his first comment on the reports, told Newsweek magazine that the money he received was not for his personal benefit.

"For a number of years, we have been offered security and intelligence assistance which the government of Jordan accepted gratefully," he said.

"The king also said that despite a report in the Washington Post that the arrangement had been ended by President Carter, 'I have not been advised about its suspension, either officially or unofficially.'"

Hussein also denied that the funds were improper, and said they were "designed only to enhance our intelligence and security capabilities, period."

He said he had received the money from the last five Presidents.

"To us, the CIA is a part of the United States government," the Newsweek report quoted him as saying. "We have sought to acquire know-how, equipment and new capabilities to defend ourselves in the face of a world-wide battle, one that is still with us. And wherever there is an identity of interests between our two countries, I will continue to advocate fruitful and mutual cooperation."

Vance was asked about a published report by the syndicated columnist Joseph Kraft that suggested that the Carter administration had not been told in detail about all the discussions held by President Nixon and Henry A. Kissinger with Chinese leaders.

He replied that "we received the fullest cooperation from Secretary Kissinger" and he "couldn't have been more cooperative in working with us in every way."

Vance said, as to the Chinese talks, which when Kissinger was the White House national security affairs adviser, "We are checking to see whether we have all the papers in the State Department; if we do not, we will obtain them elsewhere."

A former Kissinger aide said Sunday that the Carter administration has been briefed on all facets of the Chinese relationship and has access to all papers on the subject, including those in Kissinger's possession. He denied that there was "anything withheld from the new administration about China."

Vance, in discussing the administration's outspokenness on human rights violations abroad, said there was "always the possibility" that the Soviet Union might delay progress on a strategic arms limitation accord out of pique with the comments made on violations of human rights in the Soviet Union.

"But from my conversations with the Soviet diplomats here and from our other information, it would seem quite clear to me that it is not going to," he said. Vance said the Russians would receive him in Moscow on March 28 "and discuss seriously the questions on arms control which will be the main subject of my discussions in the Soviet Union."

On human rights in general, the secretary said the issue "is really grounded in the fundamental values which lay at the root of the founding of this country."

Vance was asked about his since Franklin Roosevelt, assigned most of his Cabinet to meet with the conference participants.

The President will host his former colleagues and their wives at a reception and dinner Tuesday night.

Carter chose one governor, Cecil Andrus of Idaho, as Interior Secretary.

Loan bid stalls

C.N.Y. Times Service
NEW YORK — Secretary of the Treasury W. Michael Blumenthal warned New York City Sunday that he could not approve its emergency loan application — aimed at averting a default next month — until the city had secured an accord on a package to redeem its $1 billion in moratorium debts.

The secretary's statement, conveyed to Mayor Abraham D. Beame by telephone Sunday afternoon, brought the city closer than it has been since late 1975 to being unable to pay its bills and placed heavy pressure on union leaders, bankers and the mayor himself to reach the moratorium solution that has eluded them for months.

Blumenthal's warning followed by two days an urgent request from the State Emergency Financial Control Board for a $25 million loan to tide the city through early March.

Revamp, ethics before Congress

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter's first reorganization plan and a new code of ethics designed to expose and cut own congressmen's outside income are on the congressional docket this week.

Carter's proposal to consolidate all non-nuclear energy programs into one department is to be sent to Capitol Hill Tuesday. The Senate and House are expected to consider it promptly, although inclusion of the Federal Power Commission in the new department could run into trouble.

House leaders have scheduled action on the new code of ethics starting Wednesday, and it is expected to win overwhelming approval despite resistance to a limit on outside earned income.

The Senate, which originally scheduled action on the code of ethics starting Wednesday, and it is expected to win overwhelming approval despite resistance to a limit on outside earned income.

The Senate and House dockets are relatively clear — normal for this time in a new Congress — and leaders are urging committee chairmen to begin work on bills which can be moved to the floor.

The creation of a new Cabinet-level energy department requires special legislation and cannot be carried out under the broad reorganization authority Carter has requested.

Bold course advised

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI) — Ronald Reagan says the United States should be as bold as Israel was last year in protecting its citizens if American lives are threatened by Ugandan President Idi Amin.

Reagan referred to the Israeli attack on Entebbe Airport when asked during a weekend news conference what action the United States should take if Amin threatens 175 Americans who have been barred from leaving Uganda.

Governors go lobbying

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The nation's governors — most of whom are Democrats — were expected to spend a large part of their three-day winter meeting lobbying with Carter administration Cabinet members.

The governors gathered in the nation's capital Sunday for preliminary meetings, and the serious business of their annual winter conference begins today.

All but three of the 50 state governors were joined by four territorial chief executives to discuss energy, welfare reform and health care — the main items on their agenda. Western governors wanted to talk about water, and aid for their drought-stricken states.

Republicans control only 12 statehouses. The winter meeting is the first time in many years the governors' conference has been heavily controlled by Democrats with one of its own in the White House at the same time.

Feds' tactics on trial

DETROIT (UPI) — The government may find itself on the defensive in the trial of two Filipino nurses accused of poisoning six patients — two fatally — at the Anna Arbor Veterans Administration Hospital.

The defense is expected to attack tactics used by the FBI to conduct the government's case against nurses Erlinda Narciso, 30, and Leonora Perez, 32.

The two were indicted last June for allegedly injecting a powerful muscle relaxant, Pavulon, into patients at the VA hospital during the summer of 1975. The victims suffered breathing failures, some fatal.

Jury selection in the case begins Tuesday before U.S. District Court Judge Philip Pratt.

The original indictments issued last June charged the nurses with killing five patients and poisoning 10 others who recovered. A series of technical setbacks caused a reduction in the charges to two murder counts and four poisoning counts.

The latest dropped charge related to the case of Richard Neely, 61, of Omaha, the one of several witnesses who was hypnotized to recall his breathing failure.

Attorney Laurence Burgess, who has succeeded in getting several other bits of evidence banned from the trial, speculated the Neely count was scrapped because the defense could use him as "a vehicle" to reveal the kinds of tactics used by the FBI to get the information they wanted.

NY schools open again

NEW YORK (UPI) — New York's public school system resumed full-time schedules for its 1.1 million pupils today as 2,500 maintenance men returned to work, ending a strike that crippled the school system.

Dr. Robert Christen, president of the Board of Education, said 91 of the 994 schools scheduled a full day of classes and would serve hot lunches today.

The strike, which began Wednesday, shortened class schedules in most schools for three days and forced some schools to close altogether. Many schools were unable to serve hot lunches.

Schools that did stay open were plagued by piled-up trash, unstacked furnaces and backed-up plumbing.

A new contract worked out Saturday gives the maintenance men an estimated raise of 61 cents an hour over two years. The union's members now make an average $5 an hour.

URGENT... CITIZENS OF TWIN FALLS COUNTY

The following open letter has been submitted to the County Commissioners in regards to the proposed Comprehensive Land Use Plan. We encourage your participation because... THIS AFFECTS YOU!

February 24th, 1977
 County Commissioners
 County Courthouse
 Twin Falls, Idaho 83301

Commissioners:

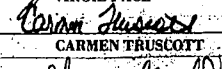

The Twin Falls County Property Owners Association, newly organized, recognize an infringement to the rights and way of life of all citizens in Twin Falls County. This takes the form of Comprehensive Land Use Plan ideas to limit population growth and prevent normal development.

Having surveyed the people in person and at the four public meetings, we find a great majority support the right to own and control their property. We will be calling on citizens to help circulate petitions which we will present to you at a later time which will help demonstrate that this is indeed the sentiment of the majority of the county. We call upon the commissioners to do the will of the people and to alter their present course by doing the following:

1. Do away with any planning and zoning commission thereby retaining powers under the planning Act to yourselves who are duly Elected.
2. Do not set any minimum acreage requirements such as 5, 40, or 80 acres, which have proven to raise land prices and taxes and which take up more farm land.
3. Do not install any necessity for more permits on a people overburdened with licenses and permits.
4. Do not put upon good people the inappropriate enforcement method of fines and imprisonment for non-compliance with proposed planning and zoning ideas.

This association supports the rights of property owners in this county and will firmly support any elected leader of the people who will stand for these rights.

Sincerely,
 THE STEERING COMMITTEE

Cover deceiving

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Andrew McNair now is convinced you can't judge a book by its cover. McNair recently bought a copy of Alex Haley's book "Roots." About 10 pages into the book, he realized something was wrong. He was reading, not about Kunta Kinte, but about Scarlett O'Hara and Rhett Butler, the main characters in "Gone With the Wind." Representations of Doubleday, which published both books, theorize the mistake of putting the "Roots" cover on a copy of "Gone With the Wind" was an accident at the printing plant.

Study shows weapon use

DENVER (UPI) — A survey by three sociologists shows 4 per cent of the couples in this country have at one time or another attacked their spouses with a deadly weapon.

And the scientists said a million youngsters "are growing up facing parents who are using guns and knives on them, not just threatening but they have actually used a gun or knife on them."

"I think this is an astoundingly high level of violence used on kids and I'm not sure society is capable of dealing with it," Dr. Richard J. Gelles of the University of Rhode Island said in an interview Friday during the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Gelles and his colleagues, Drs. Suzanne K. Steinmetz, University of Delaware, and Murray A. Straus, University of New Hampshire, said the survey indicated more physical violence occurs between family members than between other individuals. That means, they said, the American home is the most violent place in the country.

Straus said application of the survey results to the entire population would mean one in every six American couples had a violent episode during the year the survey was taken.

"About one out of every 100 husbands and wives had gone beyond slapping, kicking or throwing things at a spouse," he said and they had been beaten up or had beat up their spouse in the previous year," he said.

Dr. Steinmetz said her analysis of violence between brothers and sisters in 1,224 families showed three of four youngsters aged 3 to 17 had used some sort of violence against each other during the year.

Settlement due Cyprus dispute

NICOSIA, Cyprus (UPI) — U.S. envoy Clark Clifford, ending his Mediterranean factfinding mission today, says he believes the Cyprus dispute can be settled this year.

Clifford, who scheduled a brief stop in London before returning to Washington, met Friday with Turkish Cypriot leader Kaul Denktash.

"There is a definite possibility that a Cyprus settlement can be arranged in 1977 ... with the present momentum, with the feeling by both parties that the time is right for negotiations, with their willingness to put it on the table," Clifford said.

"I leave with a sense of optimism."

The 70-year-old envoy visited Greece, Turkey and Cyprus in a trip aimed at exploring the problems created by the Turkish invasion of the island in 1974, leaving it divided into Greek and Turkish sectors.

The Cyprus problem, and Greek-Turkish confrontation in the Aegean Sea, have contributed to the United States' uneasy relations with the two NATO allies in the strategic eastern Mediterranean.

An American diplomat said Clifford's talks with Greek Premier Constantine Karamanlis and Greek Cypriot President Archbishop Makarios were "encouraging." Both reportedly showed some willingness to compromise on the regional disputes with Turkey.

But the diplomat said Clifford was "less successful" in settling the U.S. Turkish rift. A bill to aid him is stalled because of Congressional demands for significant progress on Cyprus before the resumption of aid.

Denktash said after meeting Clifford, "I am glad to say that that fear — that suspicion — has been dispelled."

This was a reference to Turkish Cypriot fears the United States would inject itself into attempts to settle the Cyprus problem.

IPUC hearing set for rates increase

BOISE — Idaho Public Utilities Commission (IPUC) has scheduled further hearings on an application by Continental Telephone Co. of the West for an increase in rates charged for intrastate toll service (long distance).

Continental provides service to several Idaho communities, including Pattee and Carco.

In its application, Continental is requesting a 39.9 per cent surcharge on all billings to customers in its service area.

According to the application, no increase in local exchange rates is being sought.

A public hearing will be conducted March 8 in the commission hearing room, 472 W. Washington St., Boise, beginning at 9:30 a.m.

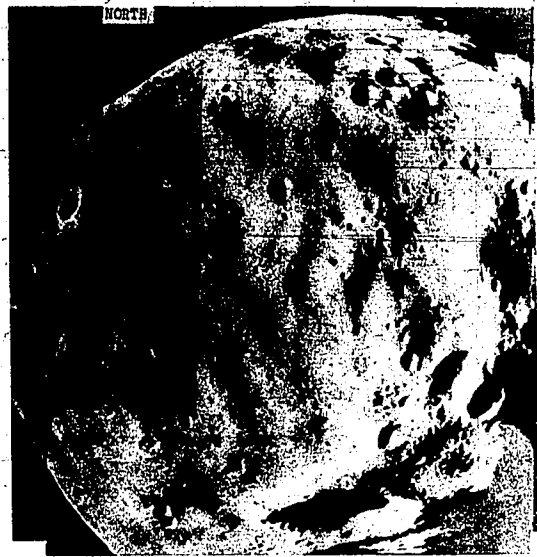

The March 8 hearing will be limited to cross-examination of witnesses for the utility company and statements in protest to or support of the application by the public. The commission heard the company's direct case in support of the increase Jan. 19.

Continental claims the surcharge would provide additional annual revenues of approximately $900,000.

Youth jobs expand

SEATTLE — Secretary of Labor Ray Marshall has announced that more than 4 million disadvantaged youths 14 through 21 will be hired across the nation this summer under an expanded summer jobs program.

Marshall said that $618 million was being allocated to 45 states and local governments serving as prime sponsors under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA).

Phobos, Mars' moon

THE Viking Orbiter flew within 300 miles of Mars and photographed the largest of two Mars moons. This three-photo sequence mosaic shows the asteroid-size moon named Phobos. Phobos is about 75 per cent illuminated and is 13 miles across and 11.9 miles from top to bottom. (UPI)

Viking orbiter focuses on Phobos, Mars' moon

PASADENA, Calif. — It is a dark and lumpy place, pocked by craters and grooved in some mysterious way, ancient and rugged, deeply ridged and hummocky, roughly like the highlands of Earth's moon.

It may well be an asteroid captured by Martian gravity, in which case it would be man's first close-up look at one of those small, rocky bodies usually found in the solar system between Mars and Jupiter.

Asteroid or whatever, this is Phobos, the larger of the two small moons of Mars, as seen by the cameras of the Viking 1 spacecraft. The picture of Phobos, released here Wednesday, represents the best look yet at a satellite of another planet in the solar system.

Viking's first close-up photograph of Phobos was taken from a distance of 300 miles last Friday. Other, even closer pictures were taken over the weekend and are being processed. More pictures will be taken during daily encounters until Feb. 28. The results should be the first photographic mosaic and map of most of Phobos.

As seen in the new view of Phobos, the satellite is about 13 miles across and 11.8 miles from top to bottom. It thus seems to be slightly smaller than earlier estimates.

Thomas C. Duxbury, a

Viking project scientist at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory here, said that the photographs revealed a number of surprises. One was the presence of apparently fresh craters. The other was the presence of small "positive" features that appear to rest on the surface. They could be meteorites or boulders, about 150 feet wide, or some kind of jagged ridges to the potato-shaped satellite.

Based on the apparent density of Phobos and the color of its surface, Duxbury said: "We may be looking toward Phobos being a captured asteroid rather than the accretion of material from the leftover dust that created Mars. But we really don't know where Phobos came from on the basis of one picture."

The density of Phobos seems to be less than estimated and less than that of Mars. The satellite's surface is a uniform gray, whereas Mars is reddish. The moon thus seems to be different than its parent planet. Scientists would like to discover what Phobos or its companion satellite Deimos are captured asteroids or fragments of asteroids. This would mean that they now have their first opportunity to study asteroidal material up close.

Dr. Joseph Veverka, an associate professor of astronomy at Cornell University, said in an article in the February issue of Scientific American that Phobos and Deimos gave the best glimpse of "the kind of body that populates the asteroid belt in counted numbers."

Cuba, US studied

Monday, February 28, 1977 Times-News, Twin Falls, Idaho 7

GARDEN CITY, N.Y. (UPI) — William Atwood, publisher of the Long Island newspaper Newsday, said Saturday a recent visit to Cuba gave him the impression that prospects for normalizing Cuban-U.S. relations are rapidly evaporating.

"In fact, it is likely that one more public reference by President Carter to Cuba's internal or foreign policies will provoke an emotional response from Havana that could scuttle the first real opportunity in more than a decade for ending the 17-year-old cold war between the two countries," said Atwood.

Atwood said he talked with Cuban government leaders, including President Fidel Castro, during a five-day visit to Cuba last week.

"Moreover, there is little if any chance right now that the Cubans will even renew the anti-jacking agreement that expires in April unless Washington at least indicates a willingness to lift the economic blockade of Cuba which the U.S. imposed in 1962 and which the Cubans regard as unjustified," Atwood said.

"This, in brief, is the message that came across loud and clear to me during five days of talks with ranking Cuban government officials, including a three-hour, free-wheeling but off-the-record conversation with ... Castro in his private office."

"As one foreign ministry official put it ... Just, stop telling us to behave like good little boys after being bullied, harassed and invaded by Americans for nearly 20 years, we can only take so much lecturing from Washington before telling you to mind your own business."

"Another said: 'Why does Carter demand special standards of behavior from us when the United States maintains cordial relations with China and Russia as well as all kinds of repressive fascist regimes?'"

"And a third: 'How would you like us to harp on the ...'"

Get ahead, marry American?

LONDON (UPI) — When Foreign Secretary Anthony Crosland died recently, the wife at his bedside was an American.

When Dr. David Owen was named as Crosland's successor, the first person he told was an American wife.

Mrs. Debbie Owen and Mrs. Susan Crosland are anything but alone. There is a surprisingly large coterie of American women married to British men in high or prominent places.

"They are surely the best imports that Britain has ever brought from across the Atlantic," says Washington Post correspondent Alfred Friendly, now living in Britain.

There is a long tradition of American women, mostly rich, seeking out and marrying

English aristocrats, mostly poor.

Sir Winston Churchill's mother, Jennie Jerome, was American. Lady Nancy Astor, the first woman member of Britain's House of Commons, was American. There is a great legion of other examples from roughly the 1880s onwards.

"Today you can look at almost any section of British society and find a prominent Briton with an American wife."

The 13th Earl of Arville's lady is the former Virginia Fortune Ryan of Newport, R.I.

The estranged wife of Malcolm Williamson, the new Master of the Queen's Music, is the former Delores Daniel of Minnesota.

The determinedly public wife of ex-Beate Paul McCartney is the former Linda Eastman of New York.

But it is in politics that American wives are most prominent. A recent study noted "a curiously high proportion of British politicians endowed with an American wife."

At the level of Prime Minister James Callaghan's cabinet, besides Mrs. Owen and Mrs. Crosland, there is Caroline de Camp of Ohio, wife of Energy Minister Anthony Wedgwood Benn.

At least three cabinet ministers in former Conservative party governments — the Earl of Bessborough, Sir Peter Rawlinson and Sir Keith Joseph — are married to Americans.

So are John Moore, a vice chairman of the Conservative party, Robert Maclean, a Prices department undersecretary, and Maurice Orbach, a Labor party member of parliament.

"When you're the wife of a politician you take on his job as well," says Lady Harlech, the American wife of the former British ambassador to Washington.

"Americans have a certain vitality and energy," Lady Harlech says. "It's a national characteristic."

"American women are probably brought up with the idea that one should do something in life, not just sit around, and to take an active interest in their husbands' interests."

"This supportive vitality obviously works as well in fields other than politics," Sir Freddie Ayer, the philosopher, is now estranged from American wife Dee Wells. Justin de Villeneuve, who promoted a slip of a thing into Twiggy, Britain's top model, is now married to American Jan Waru. Tom Montague Meyer, a wealthy timber merchant and friend of the famous, is married to American artist and writer Fleur Cowles.

"The Englishman who has little awareness can marry either a French woman or an American," said a recent study of Americans in Britain by the humor magazine Punch.

"After all, who ever heard of an Englishman actually marrying a Swiss or a Finn for status?"

BULLDOZERS and other heavy equipment are working about seven miles of the final uncompleted stretch of I-80N in Idaho. The road work should be completed by early summer and will complete Idaho's share of the four-lane highway which runs from the Utah-Idaho border to the Idaho-Oregon border.

2 developers file suit in SV property argument

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN

HAILEY — A Fifth District Court judge took under advisement Friday motions which would prevent Sun Valley Co. from selling its resort properties or assigning rents from the Sun Valley mall.

Judge Douglas Kramer took the motions filed by two Sun Valley developers under advisement after nearly three hours of legal arguments.

The motions, filed by attorneys for Charles Dwight and Dick Fenton, are part of a multi-million dollar law suit between Sun Valley Co. and Dwight, Fenton and Co. The suit concerns former plans Dwight Fenton and Co. had to rent the Sun Valley Mall and to develop an expanded village area there.

Lawyers for both parties spent all morning Friday in Fifth District Court hearing arguments the points and merits of motions that the court appoint a receiver to collect all "rents, issues, and profits" from the Sun Valley Mall and that the court order a preliminary injunction prohibiting Sun Valley Co. from selling or leasing any of its resort properties.

Dwight, Fenton and Co.'s attorney, Howard Ellman, a leading real estate and trial lawyer from San Francisco, began the arguments. Ellman said his clients entered into contracts with Sun Valley Co. to further develop the mall and surrounding area so that an "architecturally integrated" core area in the style of a European village would be created.

The plans for this "village center project" were carried out "in the concept of a president for Sun Valley Co. (president) Bill Jannis, Ellman said.

But, according to Sun Valley attorneys, when Dwight, Fenton and Co. failed to make timely lease payments the suit was negated in accordance with the contract.

Ellman, however, claimed his clients were "wrongfully ousted from possession of the property" and were "deprived from going ahead with the work."

There exists "a serious and unfortunately bitter controversy" over who was responsible for the default of payment, Ellman said.

"It's going to require a trial to settle the issue," he said.

"We contest the default, we contest it seriously," he told the judge.

Ellman argued there were three central issues in the case: First, is Dwight, Fenton Co. in default?

"We claim our performance was prevented by the wrongful acts of Sun Valley," Ellman said.

Secondly, if in default, is the lease between Dwight, Fenton and Co. and Sun Valley terminated?

"Third, if the lease is terminated, are all rights for indemnity and relief from forfeiture expired?"

"The question of a receiver," Ellman said, about the first motion, "turns on whether or not we have an interest in the mall property."

If the court says no, there is no right to appoint a receiver, Ellman said. But if the court says yes, then there should be one.

But the purpose of these motions is not to settle these issues, Ellman told the judge. These issues will be settled in trial. The purpose of the motions is simply "to preserve the status quo," the San Francisco attorney said.

"The plain fact is that these places (Sun Valley Mall center project) were being operated in the manner of an equality operation," Ellman said.

"We move for receivership out of the honesty held, good faith fear that the property is being deteriorated," he added.

"We fear if we win, we will receive damaged property."

Ellman likened the situation to the sale of a race horse.

"They agreed to sell us a race horse and the hind leg to someone else," he said. "Well, we don't want a three-legged horse."

"All we are seeking here today is the preservation of the status quo," he stated finally to the judge. If after trial the court should judge Dwight and Fenton to have an interest in the property, then the ground lease should be reinstated, he said.

Sun Valley's attorneys, in turn, presented counter arguments to deny the motions.

"Under the law of the state and the acts of this case, there's not a (trace) of evidence to support receivership," attorney Carl Burke said.

"They claim a right to possessory interest on the mall, for which they have never put up a penny," he added.

One argument presented by Burke said simply that after six months of extensions, Dwight, Fenton and Co. failed to make a March 31, 1976, lease payment and this default broke all village center project contracts between the two parties.

The contract stated in "clear cut language," Burke said, that "in event of the failure of timely payment, such action constitutes default and the lessee may break the contract."

"It's clear cut," Burke said, "and that's what was done."

"They've never paid a penny and they never moved a spade full of dirt and they're asking to renew the contract?" Burke asked incredulously at the conclusion of the argument to deny the motions.

Judge Kramer took the case under advisement and gave both parties until March 15 to provide the court with any further records concerning the motions.

US rights in Africa discussed

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI) — Ronald Reagan said Saturday the United States should be as bold as Israel in protecting its citizens if their lives are endangered by Ugandan President Idi Amin.

"There is no excuse for government even existing if it is not willing to pledge the total resources of a nation to protect the constitutional rights of even a single citizen, no matter where that citizen might be in the world, if the rights of that citizen are being violated," he said.

Asked during a news conference what action the United States should take if Amin threatens 200 Americans who have been prohibited from leaving Uganda, Reagan referred to an Israeli raid on a Ugandan airport last year to rescue persons held hostage by terrorists.

"If there is any intent to do that with our citizens, I hope that the United States will behave with the same courage and resoluteness that the Israelis displayed under the same circumstances a short time ago," he said.

SE Asia blames press

MANILA, The Philippines (UPI) — Like the proverbial messenger who was slain by his master for delivering bad news, the foreign press corps is the villain in the eyes of Southeast Asian governments intent on projecting a positive image of their development to the rest of the world.

Only recently, however, have certain governments, notably those comprising the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN), taken direct action to express their displeasure over the reporting of events in their countries.

The Philippines started the ball rolling last November by refusing to grant a re-entry visa to the Associated Press Manila bureau chief, Arnold Zellin, on the ground that the veteran correspondent was a risk to national security.

Zellin, who was refused the right to answer the charges against him, was accused of distorting his stories to the detriment of the Philippines and actively supporting subversive elements opposed to the martial law regime of President Ferdinand E. Marcos.

Indonesia followed up by banning the sale of Newsweek magazine since had published a detailed article on corruption in the Jakarta government.

The Indonesian government demanded an apology from Newsweek and asked that disciplinary action be taken against the author of the article, Senior Editor Richard Smith.

In January, Ho Kwon Ping, Singapore correspondent for the Hong Kong-based Far Eastern Economic Review, was arrested and charged with disclosing sensitive military data. The data reportedly had been "purchased" earlier in another publication.

Ho, a Singaporean, was fined and he resigned from the Review "with regret."

Several weeks later, Thailand's military-backed government ordered the deportation of Norman Peagam, another Far Eastern Economic Review reporter, for an article which disclosed a split in the government and suggested a possible coup in the making.

Thai Prime Minister Thanin Kraivixien charged the Western press was "dancing to the Communist tune" during a visit to the Philippines last December. He claimed the Western press inaccurately reported the bloody coup which ended the latest experiment with democracy in Thailand last October.

Early in January, the Philippines deported Stephen Teich, who claimed to represent a New York City radio station. Teich, the government said, was interfering in the peaceful settlement of the Moslem secessionist movement in the Southern Philippines.

Teich also asked several pointed questions of Marcos regarding his personal wealth during a televised press conference.

The Philippines followed the Teich expulsion by granting only a 20-day visa to another American journalist, Bernard Wideman, who has worked in the Philippines for three years.

Bruce 'Utah' Phillips takes bow

Rosalie Sorrels performs

Folksingers repeat 'history' in songs

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN
Times-News writer

SUN VALLEY — After watching the serialization of "Roots" on television several weeks ago, millions of people learned that history is not always a dull subject told only in the dusty pages of a book.

Sun Valley audience of some 100 people learned this again recently when they had the chance to hear folksingers Rosalie Sorrels and Bruce "Utah" Phillips perform in concert.

Just as the history of "Roots" was passed on by word of mouth in stories told from one generation to another, this Sun Valley audience was engaged in a similar oral tradition passed on through song.

"Folk music is the music of the folk," Phillips told the audience about the songs he sings. "It's of the public domain."

"Go ahead and put me out of business," he challenged them good-humoredly. "Go make your own music. I defy you."

Phillips is a big man with a bushy gray beard and gray hair that puffs out over his ears from beneath a brown felt fedora hat he wears. He spends a lot of his time "just travellin' round and singin' and tellin' stories."

At 42 he is a storytelling, wisecracking folksinger in the tradition of Mark Twain and Will Rogers. With a rich and timber southwestern accent, he's been described as "an intriguing mingling of cowhand and orator, preacher and rascal . . ."

Dressed in a flannel shirt and brown leather pants with wide suspenders, his gray hair and beard add to the image of downhome sageness, and the stories he tells and the songs he sings back it all up.

Coming out on stage and sitting down in a chair with his guitar, he starts picking a song and talking informally to the audience. Then, he begins winking a first verse, and when he's gone through it he starts talking again, all the while picking the tune on his guitar.

Sometime ago people started calling Phillips "The golden voice of the great Southwest," because his voice is so soft and rich. Both when he sings and talks it is this way, like honey poured over a hot, buttered roll just out of the oven. And he is as much a storyteller as he is a singer.

Between nearly every verse he sings, he pauses and runs on with a story. First it's to talk about his Pennsylvania Long rifle and then to say he does some farming, although he's not sure he can rightly call it farming because it's either "light farming or heavy gardening."

Sometimes he stops his guitar picking altogether and begins chewing on a licorice root he carries with him, as he decides to tell a joke.

Phillips jokes a lot — about everyone and everything. He dedicated one song to some "blind, drunk Rosierians cruising for burgers well after 4 a.m."

And he's not above spoofing himself, too. After one song, he commented, "I was out late last night to get a cigar and somebody stepped on my fingers."

Yet, there is a serious side to him as well, a concerned intelligence behind the wisecracks. One part of his performance consisted of several old American folk songs about the working classes.

There was a song written by Joe Hill about labor unions in Spokane, Wash., and how they tried to break the power of the labor sharks there at the turn of the century.

Phillips also sang several Woodie Guthrie songs about such things as sharecropping and the dustbowl. And with every song he presented in a lively way — a small history lesson, so incorporating the audience's sense of the past.

But he never allowed himself to grow too serious, and one of the last Woodie Guthrie songs he sang — a song called "Old Chicago" — he admitted was good only if you were "blue blind, fallin' down, comode-huggin' drunk."

Rosalie Sorrels performed after Phillips, and she was just as funny and loved a good story equally as well. But her kind of oral history was much more personal.

Coming out on stage in a loose fitting flower print dress, she carried a small silver shot glass and a bottle of Wild Turkey whiskey along with her, and after each song she would take a sip from her silver glass.

In a soft, sweet-voiced voice, she started her set with a song written by Phillips and as she sang she closed her eyes and embraced each note and her foot was always gently tapping.

When through, she chuckled over a comment Phillips once made about her: "Thin Rosalie, she does not sing a song, she takes it around the bend."

A native of Boise, Sorrels talks warmly about her memories of growing up there, although that warmth leaves her voice when she talks about the place today.

"Everytime I go to Boise," she says, "here's just notin' there that was there when I was there. They keep tearing it down and putting up all this other stuff, and what's more, they're proud of it."

But this edge to her talk quickly vanishes when she describes a food animal where she and her friends used to hang out when she was 11. They'd set around just watching the food belts swing by. And she says they had a lot of fun just "watching the Jello."

Now, grown up, she doesn't visit the automats anymore. And so she says she's starting doing "old lady research."

"I can't be a little old lady because I'm too big," she tells her audience. "I can't be somebody's old lady because I'm too hard to live with. But I can be a crotchety old lady and that appeals to me a lot."

"Or, I could be a dirty old lady," she's ready to revise. "So I've been doing my old lady research."

But if she is a crotchety or dirty old lady, she still can be touched emotionally and her response comes in song. She sang a beautiful little song called "Pella Rose," which she wrote about her granddaughter.

Sorrels presents personal history to her audience. What she means to evoke for them through her stories and songs is clearly thought out.

"I have a certain set of ethical intentions," she once commented about herself as a performer, "and they have to do with how I want to affect the people I play to."

Her histories, told both in story and song, are living, breathing things. When they become fixed and stagnant, she says it will be regarded as a performer.

"The day I've done a definitive statement of it (a song) is the day I'm gone die."

Her performance of songs and stories is continually changing, and that's how she keeps them alive.

"I don't have a finished product," she insists. "The day I have a finished product, it's time for me to pack up and go away."

Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My Irish wife isn't speaking to me. Here's what happened: Her father, who lived to a ripe old age, was buried last week. I was a pallbearer. It was pouring down rain when we got to the cemetery, and we were all ankle-deep in mud.

After the final rites, we were advised of the mistake, and the funeral party had to walk a very long way to the right hole. What a mess! All the pallbearers took turns slipping and falling in the mud as we carried the casket, and the priest fell twice.

I held an umbrella over the priest's head as he started the prayers again, and I leaned over and whispered, "Father, let's have the short version."

Short funeral irks daughter

My wife heard me and claims I was very disrespectful to her father. Also she thinks that because of me the priest left out a lot, and her father didn't have a proper funeral. How can I get my wife to start talking to me?

SORRY IN BOSTON

DEAR SORRY: Send her some flowers. They're 'the best bloomin' alliance-breaker known to man.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I have a bit on, and we need you to settle it. Are you divorced, or aren't you? I say you are, and my wife says you aren't.

The pastor has agreed to send $25 to a charity of your choice. Thank you.

MAC

DEAR MAC: You lose. I am NOT divorced, and God willing, come July I'll be married to the same wonderful man for 39 years. (P.S. Send your contribution to your local animal shelter.)

Film under fire for moral laxity

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Artistic considerations aside, motion pictures most often come under the gun for moral laxity.

Almost without exception, critical plaudit and public outcry are focused on sex and violence. Occasionally a deeper moral question is asked, as is the case with a new comedy, "Fun With Dick & Jane," starring George Segal and Jane Fonda.

The ads read: "Bonnie and Clyde They Ain't!" — and therein lies the beef.

"Bonnie and Clyde" followed the criminal exploits of Clyde Barrow and Bonnie Parker, a pair of real-life armed robbers who came to sudden and violent deaths.

Dick and Jane are a contemporary married couple who turn to robbery when Dick loses his executive job in an aerospace company.

Dick can't find another job. Jane flops as a fashion model. They tire of fighting the battle for food stamps and cheating on unemployment insurance. Rather than abandon their new home and swimming pool they turn to robbery.

It's all for laughs. But in the end, Dick and Jane do not repay society for their crimes. They are, in fact, rewarded. Dick becomes president of the aerospace firm after stealing "It's stush funds."

He wins the job because of the company's board of directors deems him the acme of corporate executives — a clever thief.

"Fun With Dick & Jane" clearly says crime does pay and that corruption, and outright criminality are sterling assets of America's industrial bigwigs.

Peter Bart, who produced the picture with Max Palevsky (himself the president of a multi-million-dollar computer firm), is reeling from the avalanche of criticism his picture has elicited.

"We've been catching hell because crime is not punished in the end," said Bart, a Columbia University graduate and former New York Timesman.

"My God, this is a comedy. It's not to be taken all that seriously. Audiences are supposed to suspend realities when they go to see a comedy."

"Anyway, Dick and Jane hate being criminals. They want to quit. They're a middle class couple suffering a nervous breakdown."

"It's not like 'The Getaway' which depicted a hardened criminal couple who stole get away with a crime spree."

A man can get fired no matter how talented or loyal to a firm.

The moral is that most Americans aspire to lofty expectation which can't be fulfilled. There's a good chance you'll be elbowed 40-steps of rewarded if you do what society expects of you."

Bart turned from defending his movie on the basis of morality to some facts. He said police data show light white collar crime is a "growth industry."

"Police files prove that an intelligent person without a criminal record can really succeed in breaking the law," he said. "It's being done every day. The truth is more people get away with crime than you know."

"Fun With Dick & Jane" also was rapped by critics for lack of taste. In particular a bathroom scene involving Miss Fonda relieving herself during a bit of dialogue with Segal.

The critics were appalled. But even more upset were feminists around the country who called the scene a typical case of male chauvinism, exploiting the female.

Bart thought the scene was funny. Apparently audiences do, too. If the fear of laughter in theaters is any indication.

"What the women's liberation people don't know," he said, "is that scene wasn't written in the script for the bathroom."

"It was all Jane Fonda's idea. And God knows there isn't a better known feminist in the country than Jane Fonda. She didn't tell us in advance."

"On the day we shot the scene Jane told the director she had a great idea how to play it. She said, 'Watch me.' Then she set up the shot, sat down on the bowl and did the whole number."

"I played very naturally and it was funny, so we kept it in the picture."

"Say 'Dick and Jane' is a funny movie, and that's really all it was meant to be."

Retirees unable to cope with problems

Cleveland Plain Dealer

CLEVELAND — Every day 1,000 persons reach the age of 65 in the United States.

More and more employees are being required to retire at that age.

There is also an increased trend toward early retirement.

More older persons are living longer and more older persons who are still able to work are without jobs. Some are unable to cope with their problems.

The sudden thrust from a regular, active routine to an unstructured, aimless existence is blamed by psychologists for the high rate of alcoholism, suicide and physical deterioration among retirees.

Their frustrations are heightened by a lack of preparation for a completely new style of living.

Dr. Ruth Glick, director of the Institute for Retirement Studies at Case Western Reserve University here, says many companies are becoming interested in retirement planning.

Mrs. Glick tried to organize a training seminar on corporate retirement planning a year ago. It was canceled for lack of interest.

Recently, she held a training seminar attended by representatives of eight companies and four other organizations. Five more companies were turned away for lack of classroom space, she said.

This sudden, increased interest in retirement planning is hard to explain, even for Mrs. Glick.

She organized the institute at Case Western, the first of its kind in the United States, six years ago.

Various companies have been engaged in retirement counseling of some kind for many years.

But most deal only with the immediate financial areas of retirement — pension funds, Social Security benefits, hospital and medical benefits, and life insurance.

Few cover investment and medical counseling. And most do not consider the sociological or psychological aspects of retirement.

Nonetheless, these are the areas in which business and industry are going to have to become more involved; it is a corporate social responsibility that government cannot be expected to handle, said Mrs. Glick.

Cleveland Trust Co., which has operated a training program for about two years, is one of the few companies whose counseling involves both the psychological and financial aspects of transition from a working life to a life of retirement.

The Cleveland Trust program also aims at getting the spouses of future retirees to participate in the counseling sessions, which are conducted both individually and in groups.

A Cleveland Trust spokesman said the company initiated its program "because we felt it was a responsibility of the company to get involved in the problems faced by retirees in utilizing a lot of free time."

Cleveland Trust, one of the participants in the seminar at Case Western, also intends to keep part in another training session expected to be held in April.

your health

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb:
I got married recently and my husband and I agreed to wait before starting a family. I went to my doctor for birth control pills. He gave me a Pap test, but while doing it he casually said I have a tipped womb. I bombarded him with questions as to my chances of getting pregnant and if I do conceive will I be able to carry my child for nine months. He said it was nothing and not to worry about it. He gave me a prescription for the pills. I told him I would not take them because he was so vague in responding to my questions.
I told my husband about my doctor's visit and my fears about not being able to get pregnant. My husband said to take the pills; if I couldn't get pregnant, the doctor would not have given them to me. I love my husband and would like to think that he and the doctor are correct, but I'm worried and not satisfied with either. I consulted a gynecologist and she was even vaguer than my regular doctor.

Curious about tipped uterus.

What I want to know from you is, with a tipped womb, considering my health to be excellent, will I get pregnant? I am not taking the pills and I haven't gotten pregnant. I haven't told my husband because I don't want to have his children and have it planted in my mind that it will take me years to conceive and if I take the pills it will take even longer. Am I wrong? Or will I have to have my womb straight before I can conceive?

Dear Reader:
By the time you get my reply you may have already found out that you can get pregnant. Won't your husband be surprised! I suspect your doctors have been reluctant to promise you that you will get pregnant because 15 per cent of couples do not have children—that is, having nothing to do with a "tipped womb."

A tipped womb simply refers to the fact that the uterus is not positioned so that its dome (blind end) is pointed above or toward the pubic bone. In the adult female the uterus is like a pear with the blind end pointed toward the wall of the abdomen and the stem end or cervix directed downward, opening at the top or neck the blind end of the vaginal canal. When the uterus is tipped it usually "retrodisplaced," meaning the uterus has fallen backward.

The point you need to know is that studies have been done to see if displacement of the uterus would affect fertility. While some "tipped wombs" were observed in infertile couples this was not the cause of the infertility. After all, since 15 per cent of the couples are infertile it would be surprising if all of these women had perfect reproductive systems.

Even if displacement of the uterus changes the location of the cervix to some extent this will not prevent pregnancy. All that has to happen is for sperm to get to the opening, wherever it is, and they will migrate to the uterus. A normal pregnancy is then just as likely to occur as in a woman without a tipped uterus.

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Young American adults are waiting longer before entering married life, the Bureau of the Census confirmed in a report released Monday.

During 1969-76, the average age at which young men and women first marry increased by about one full year, from 22.8 years to 23.8 years for men and from 20.3 to 21.3 years for women.

The report says that this and other trends reflect a general movement among young adults away from early marriages. For example, there is a trend toward longer periods of singleness among young adults than in the past.

The percentage of single among men in the 20-

34 year age bracket increased in the past 16 years from 53 per cent to 62 per cent in 1976, and from 38 to 43 per cent for the same age group for women.

Also, since 1970 the percentage of single among persons 25 to 39 years has increased, perhaps indicating that not only has later marriage gained general acceptance but also that a higher proportion of adults may never marry during their lifetime than in the recent past.

Women are waiting longer before their first marriages, thereby increasing their opportunities to advance their education or to gain employment experience.

Dakota ranchers fear Dust Bowl

© 1977 Washington Star
SIOUX FALLS, S.D. — Lornie Schleiter raises cattle on 2,700 acres in eastern South Dakota, and he does not remember how it was in the "Dirty Thirties," when drought and wind took away much of Middle West's topsoil.

But today, Schleiter is nearly at the end of his rope, because a new Dust Bowl is afflicting America's heartland.

"If we don't get some heavy snow soon and a good, soaking rain in the spring, soaking rain in the spring, they might as well draw a curtain around Hand County, because there won't nobody be here," Schleiter says.

His spread is near the tiny town of Polo, 90 miles northeast of Pierre, the state capital.

Ed Martinmaas usually has 90 head of Black Angus on his 1,000 acres. Since the drought came, he has had to sell off 40 of his best animals at distress prices, because he cannot afford to feed them.

"I haul alfalfa 200 miles from North Dakota to feed what I've got left because I can't grow enough corn, oats, prairie hay and alfalfa myself," Martinmaas says.

"We have to plant the other feed crops, but usually the alfalfa just comes off. Then last May we had four consecutive frozes that stopped the alfalfa... We had a good shower in June... but then the hot winds started blowing from the south... when it was 100 degrees... after that, all I could do was turn the stock loose in the cornfields to eat the little that grew."

This winter's cold, dry winds have brought little snow to an area where 9 degrees at noon is considered a lovely day. The three-year drought region covers an elliptical area from South Dakota's Black Hills through major regions of Minnesota, Nebraska, Iowa and Wisconsin.

"It's a real drought," says Tom Daschle, who runs an office here for Sens. George McGovern and James Abourezk. "Normal rainfall is 24 inches a year, and in 1976 we only had 6 inches. This started three years ago—and it's getting steadily worse."

Usually, a thick blanket of snow covers these prairies from December through March, insulating the soil and protecting winter wheat. Now, there's more snow on the Washington Monument grounds than on South Dakota fields.

"What we've got out here now is half ice and half dirt," says Schleiter. "The wind blows it away. The dugouts (cattle ponds) are either dry or too muddy for the cattle to drink. I can't pay $50 a ton for hay to feed a cow that is only worth $170 in this depressed market."

"I've sent some of my cattle to Iowa and I pay for them to pasture there. But like most farmers out here, I've had to sell off cattle that I can't feed and we lost $100 a head, because the buyers know we're in a bind."

"If something doesn't happen fast, there'll be farm sales around here you wouldn't believe. Sure, there are some government programs, but you can't borrow yourself out of debt. My grandfather homesteaded this place, but if things don't change quick, I'm going to have to pack up and get out."

Martinmaas and other South Dakota farmers are going to give it one more try when spring comes. "We'll plant even if it's dry, and just hope the rain comes," Martinmaas says. "It's a gamble, but we don't have any other choice."

Wireless electricity in USSR?

© 1977 Washington Star
WASHINGTON — Have the Russians learned how to transmit electric power without the use of wires?

For months, now, some mysterious Russian radio signals have been disrupting worldwide communications, and a number of Canadians who have been monitoring the signals are speculating that the Russians may have accomplished that feat.

Questions concerning the possibilities of the Russian experiments were brought to the Canadian Department of Communications last winter by Andrew Michrowski, who has been working with a Canadian senator on the question of resurrecting Tesla's experiments as a means of helping alleviate some electric energy problems in eastern Canada.

W.W. Scott, director of operations at the department, said that after Michrowski's request for help, all nine of the agency's listening posts were asked to analyze the Russian signals. By this time, however, the Russians, in response to a barriage of complaints primarily from other European governments, had begun to limit the duration of the transmissions that were causing the interference.

In what he considered his most important discovery, Tesla in 1890 proved that the earth could be used as a conductor of electricity and would be as responsive as a tuning fork to electrical vibrations of a certain pitch.

His experiments succeeded in lighting 250 electric lamps from a distance of 25 miles without wires. Some use was made of his process for many years in Canada.

Tesla gave a number of possible uses for his experiment, including power transmission, geological exploration, national defense and weather modification.

Alaska officials said they had not yet decided how to get rid of the goods, but Moses Lake, Wash., a former air base, has been discussed as a possible staging area for refurbishing and selling the project's leftovers.

Pipeline leftovers to be sold

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — It will be one of the biggest going-out-of-business sales in history.

The merchandise, valued at about $800 million when new, ranges from 1,500 deluxe two-hole outhouses that cost $10,000 apiece new to 1,557 trucks of all types.

The Alyeska Pipeline Service Co., the concern responsible for building and operating the 800-mile $7.2 billion Trans-Alaska Oil Pipeline, is going out of the construction business.

The company will still be charged with running the pipeline when it starts getting oil from Alaska's North Slope to a southern Alaska port in the middle of this year. But it plans to dispose of more than 20,000 units of equipment that are no longer needed.

Oil cartel bill given no chance

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — A bill to break up the nation's 18 largest oil companies so they can no longer control oil from the drilling site to the gasoline tank has less chance this year than last, its sponsor, Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., said Saturday.

Bayh said time for action on the bill ran out last session. "I think we probably had a better chance to pass it last year than this year, because the companies have done a fantastic job lobbying," Bayh told a news conference.

Me said advertisements showing shrimp caught off ocean drilling platforms and pleasers at refinery sites inland have "made it very difficult for us to keep the public interest on what the issue is."

Bomb tests may cost dairymen

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Nuclear bomb tests by China could cost American dairymen large amounts of money in the future, a spokesman for northeastern farmers says.

To protect dairy producers, adds spokesman John Noakes, Congress should amend an existing indemnity law to allow federal payments to farmers if they are forced to move their cows off normal pastures because of radioactive fallout.

Noakes is general counsel for the Dairymen Cooperative, which markets milk for 6,500 farmers in New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and part of New England.

Testifying before the House Agriculture Committee last week, Noakes said radioactive fallout from Chinese bomb tests has worried farmers and increased their operating costs twice within the past 18 months.

Last September, for example, farmers in some northeastern areas were asked to feed their cattle indoors on stored feed for a brief time because of the possibility that pastures might be contaminated by fallout from iodine 131, a radioactive product released by hydrogen bomb explosions.

Iodine 131 thrown into the stratosphere by a nuclear blast circles the earth, mainly in the northern hemisphere. Usually it descends gradually, but it can be brought down in potentially dangerous amounts by storms, Noakes said.

Up to now we have been lucky. Although some farmers in the northeast did take their cows off pasture and barned them for a few days last fall, we have been spared any significant contamination. Yet, the limited exposure to what could happen has demonstrated that farmers are expected to act to protect the health of the public,"

Noakes said.

The answer, Noakes added, is to amend a 1965 law under which dairy farmers can get federal indemnity payments if their milk is contaminated — through no fault of their own — by pesticides.

The new proposal would apply in cases where local health officials ask farmers to take their cows off pasture because of possible fallout contamination of grass. The extra cost of barn feeding would be computed, and farmers would be given an indemnity payment "for protecting the public interest," Noakes said.

Agriculture Department officials said their records show the indemnity program for pesticide contamination has cost comparatively little since it started in 1965. In most years, annual payments have totaled less than the estimated $300,000 cost for the 1977 fiscal year.

Spokesmen for beekeepers also are asking the House and Senate Agriculture Committees to extend a bee indemnity program which — like the existing dairy law — expires this year. The program covers payments to beekeepers whose bees are killed by pesticides.

Carter plans drought aid

CAMP DAVID, Md. (UPI) — President Carter, Saturday announced White House aide Jack Watson will serve as coordinator of the federal drought assistance program.

Carter also requested information from governors regarding the impact of the drought in their states.

The President said a special drought assistance group has been formed to receive information from the governors of affected states in the West with respect to their particular situations.

In addition, he said heads of federal agencies and departments have been ordered to review assistance programs "to insure that all appropriate assistance is made available fairly and rapidly."

He said a special staff group has been formed with the membership including White House aides, officials of the Budget Bureau and federal agencies as well as the staff of appropriate congressional committees to assist in evaluating drought reports and to monitor day-to-day activities in the states to help resolve some of the problems.

Federal regional officials also will be involved in the new crash drought assistance program.

Soviet scientist deported

OTTAWA (UPI) — Solicitor General Francis Fox says a Soviet scientist was expelled

because Canada did not have enough evidence to prosecute him for espionage and if feared action against Canadian visitors in the Soviet Union.

Lev Grigoryevich Khvostantsev, 39, was deported Thursday after being arrested on charges of having attempted to purchase classified information from a fellow scientist at the National Research Council.

prosecuting, he said, "the risk of some Canadian over there being arrested on trumped-up charges."

"Everyone knows retaliation occurs in these areas. It is the whole scenario. If one country does it, you are likely to have it happen to a Canadian in the other country. I think it is better to close this thing off quickly."

Royal Canadian Mounted Police said Khvostantsev, who entered Canada Nov. 17, in conduct unclassified research at the NRC, approached an unidentified scientist early this month asking for secret information.

The second scientist went to the police, RCMP said, and it was arranged for him to make two sales of unclassified material to the Soviet. Khvostantsev was arrested after making a second purchase of what he thought was classified information, police said.

Drought work

AN Illinois official reported that 30 to 35 percent of Illinois livestock farmers are forced to haul water because of the continuing drought.

Herchel Miller, 64, of Loam, Ill., hauls water to farmers and rural residents, has worked 14 hours a day, seven days a week for the last several months. (UPI)

TWIN FALLS—An 18-year-old Twin Falls man was arrested on a charge of driving while under the influence of an intoxicating beverage after the pickup he was driving went through two garages and knocked over a street sign Saturday.

The driver, Donald Brian Watson, was being held in county jail pending arraignment today.

Police said Watson was headed east on the 1400 block of Third Ave. East when he crashed his vehicle into the two garages, knocking both of them over.

Damage to the pickup was put at $4,000, to the first garage, owned by Laura Haynes, at $5,000, to the second garage, owned by Dave Hemmen, at $5,000. A boat and trailer in the second garage also sustained an estimated $1,400 damage.

Magic Valley Boise S & L seeks TF branch

By BILL LAZARUS
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—An application by First Federal Savings and Loan of Boise to establish a branch office in Twin Falls has sparked objections from a company with a similar name, First Federal Savings and Loan of Twin Falls. The Boise firm applied to the Federal Home Loan Bank in Seattle on Friday to establish a branch office near the intersection of Blue Lakes Boulevard and Addison Avenue East.

"We will protest their name," Jim Sinclair, president of First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Twin Falls, said this morning. He said his company has not filed a formal protest yet, but plans to.

"There's too much confusion" with having two First Federal Savings and Loans in town, Sinclair maintained.

He said Home Federal Savings and Loan of Nampa also has applied to build an office in Twin Falls. Sinclair said his business would not protest this application.

Currently, he said, First Federal of Twin Falls makes about 75 per cent of the home loans throughout the Magic Valley. Competition from other savings and loans would have some effect on its business, he said.

But, Sinclair said he does not expect interest rates on home loans would drop because of the competition.

He said First Federal of Twin Falls already loans money for homes at one-half per cent less than rates in Boise.

"I don't see why they would want to come here other than to pick up savings that they can funnel into Treasure Valley" for home loans, Sinclair said.

Officers at First Federal Savings and Loan of Boise could not be reached for comment this morning on their application to establish an office here.

Sinclair said if First Federal of Boise changed its name for the Twin Falls office, he would not protest the application.

Despite the confusion generated by the names, he said that some good for First Federal of Twin Falls had come out of First Federal of Boise establishing an office in Jerome in recent years.

"We get more good out of their ads than they do," Sinclair said. He said First Federal of Twin Falls cut its advertising budget 15 per cent because "there's no use duplicating" the ads of First Federal of Boise.

MV gem show slated in TF

TWIN FALLS—The 26th annual Magic Valley Gem Show will be held from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, and from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday, in the National Guard Armory Building on Frontier Road.

Twin Falls Gem Club members will demonstrate silver-rolling, semi-precious stone faceting, and cabochon-making, a stone-cutting process.

Diamond cutter Gary H. Peterson, Robinson, was appearing, along with dealers from Twin Falls, Lewiston and North Dakota.

The local gem club will sponsor an auction to raise funds for students in the area who want to study mineralogy in college. The club, which has about 150 members, is a member of the Northwest Federation of the Mineralogical Society, part of a national gem organization.

Chicken, cookies and soft drinks will be sold at the show. Admission is 50 cents.

Tighter laws seen for farmland use

By KEN HODGE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—Development of new farmland along the Snake River will be subject to stricter regulations and possibly restricted by energy shortages, experts said at a two-day conference here.

State officials and University of Idaho professors attending an Idaho Conservation League sponsored conference on "The Challenges of Snake River Plains Agricultural Development" pointed out the complicated nature of further desert land development.

An impending energy shortage poses problems which could limit land development in the future, according to a surprise guest at the conference, Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho.

And limits on water supply for irrigating further land developments are rapidly becoming an issue, according to R. Keith Higginson, director of the Idaho Department of Water Resources, although some 4.6 million acre feet of unused Snake River water could be available.

The only commodity available in large quantities seems to be land, since there are eight million acres of potentially irrigable lands in Idaho.

The recent passage of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 (the BLM Organic Act) stipulates the federally-owned land can only be developed for agriculture if it is in "the public interest," according to William Mathews, Idaho state BLM director.

The act determined the BLM would continue to control the lands instead of turning them over to the states in which they lie. It gives detailed regulations for continued maintenance of the lands by the BLM.

The law is especially important to Idaho since about 64 per cent of the state is federally owned.

But complications can arise in determining the nature of public interest.

A proposed development must be economically feasible, must be needed in the total picture of agricultural production in the area and must be within local and state planning regulations, Mathews said.

And energy plays an important part in determining whether new farmland is in the public interest.

"Surprise guest McClure said, 'We're going to have an energy shortage. We don't have an energy policy that is far-reaching enough.'"

Surface irrigation may save energy

TWIN FALLS—Increasing the efficiency of surface irrigation systems, not further development of sprinkler irrigation, may be the key to continued development of Idaho lands into farmland, a USDA scientist said here.

High costs of electrical pumping used at present in pressurized sprinkler systems could become prohibitive in future development projects, according to Dr. Marvin E. Jensen, director of the USDA research center in Kimberly.

Jensen told a conference on Snake River lands development sponsored by the Idaho Conservation League, traditional surface irrigation methods have lower energy requirements than sprinkler irrigation—and may present advantages in times of soaring energy costs.

He said sprinklers are much more water efficient, but with improvements surface systems which use gravity flow could be improved to create more efficiency in water use.

There are many opportunities for mismanagement without present surface irrigation systems," Jensen told the group. "In contrast, sprinkler irrigation has water control built into it."

Jensen cited recent studies at the Snake River Conservation Research Center in developing alternative irrigation methods. A burial lateral system, being developed at the center, which could help to shorten water runs could make surface irrigation more water efficient.

"If the surface systems can be made more efficient and usable, further development of desert lands could become feasible, Jensen said.

"Higher power costs could slow down the development of new high-lift irrigation in Idaho," Dr. Joel Hamilton, another speaker at the conference, said.

Fire razes MV home

KIMBERLY—A fire ripped through a house seven miles south of here Sunday morning, causing more than $10,000 damage, Kimberly fire officials reported.

Seven fire fighters and one fire truck battled the half-hour blaze which began about 8:04 a.m. Sunday, near an oil-burning stove.

House owner Bill Kinsey, a rancher, and his wife were away for the weekend.

Gooding woman hurt

GOODING—Tina McCormack, 21, Gooding, was dismissed from Gooding Memorial Hospital Monday morning after being treated for injuries received in a two-car collision here Sunday. Gooding Police Chief Dwayne Walker said the McCormack car collided with a vehicle driven by Rodney Potter, Gooding, at 12:11 p.m. Sunday in Gooding. Potter reportedly received superficial injuries, but was not hospitalized, the chief said.

Advance notice of actions asked

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Idaho Gov. John V. Evans, in Washington to meet today with President Carter about the western drought, said states facing the drought should be advised of significant federal actions before, not after, they are taken.

In a memorandum to Presidential Assistant Jack Watson, coordinator for western drought programs, Evans said he hopes that federal agencies will be as responsive to the implementation of action as they have been to drought planning. Evans, who will meet with President Carter to discuss the existing conditions in Idaho brought on by the drought, stressed the importance of communication between the states and federal government.

"I support the formation of a federal-state task force to provide a vehicle for close communication and coordination, between agencies of the federal and state government," Evans said.

Evans likened the consequences of poor drought disaster coordination with the Teton Dam disaster.

"It was Idaho's experience during the aftermath of the Teton disaster that often some federal agencies were even less aware of what other federal agencies could do than were we in state government who were facing a major disaster for the first time," Evans said.

Evans left for Washington Saturday and will return late Wednesday afternoon.

Panel keeps school bill

BOISE (UPI)—The House State Affairs Committee refused today to introduce a non-compulsory school attendance bill.

Shirley McVague, Meridian, urged the committee to help print the bill, saying it would make school administrators "more responsive" to parents. She said the federal government, with its special financial programs, was making it difficult for parents to be heard.

But Rep. J. Ward Chalmers, R-Albion, said the bill as drafted did nothing about the problem of parents who do not care about their children and would let them just "run around" if they were not in school.

Educators honored

The Twin Falls Masonic Lodge, 45 AF and AM has honored two Magic Valley educators during its annual Past Master's banquet.

Anna Cook, who retired last May after 42 years in the teaching profession, and Anna Davis, home-making instructor at O'Leary Junior High School in Twin Falls, received certificates of recognition for their outstanding services in the field of education.

Dr. Ernest England, Junior warden of the Twin Falls lodge, presented the awards.

Tanker crewmen rescued

HONOLULU (UPI) — A freighter with flammable cargo and live ammunition aboard rescued all but one of the 32 crewmen aboard a leaking tanker which exploded in the Pacific Thursday, igniting an oil slick.

The crew abandoned the 816-foot Hawaiian Patriot as it went up in flames 300 miles west of Honolulu. It had leaked more than 5 million of its 30 million gallons of crude oil, creating a 50-mile slick.

A Coast Guard C130 plane dropped rafts and survival gear to the sailors. The 500-foot merchantman Philippine Bataan picked up the survivors. A Coast Guard spokesman said the slick made it easier for the Philippine Bataan to see the men in the water.

The Coast Guard also praised the Philippine Bataan for standing by to pick up the men even though its skipper reported he was carrying flammable goods and live ammunition aboard.

Lt. Cmdr. Rick Gallien, who piloted the C130, was asked what contributed to the success of the rescue and he said: "One, that we were there. The Patriot would have lost half her crew if we weren't there."

Secondly, that the Philippine Bataan was there. A lot of the crew might still be floating in rafts now if it weren't for her.

The master of the Hawaiian Patriot, owned by Indo-Pacific Carriers, Monrovia, Liberia, said the lost crewman was last seen engulfed in flames, according to the Coast Guard. His body was not recovered.

Feds bust fencing operation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Federal and local authorities announced Saturday they had recovered $2 million in stolen securities and merchandise since the first successful fencing operation located in the nation's capital in the past year.

They issued 16 arrest warrants for suspects in five East Coast states and the District of Columbia following the 14-month joint undercover fencing operation.

The operation, dubbed "High Roller" because it catered to more sophisticated thieves, used a Washington hotel suite as its base, where police and FBI agents posed as fences, buying stolen securities, cars, jewelry, weapons and paintings.

The fenced merchandise was bought for $169,000 in federal Law Enforcement Assistance Administration funds.

District of Columbia Police Chief Maurice Cullane, Nick Simms, special agent in charge of the Washington FBI office, and Earl Silbert, U.S. attorney for the District, disclosed the results of the operation at a joint news conference.

All 65 transactions were either recorded or videotaped. Authorities said more arrests were expected.

In two similar operations previously, the agency recovered $3.6 million in stolen goods and issued warrants for more than 300 suspects.

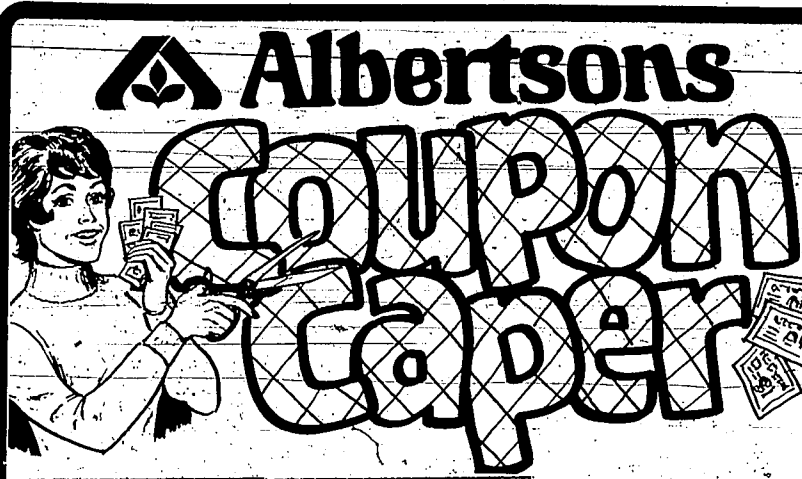

Police find fatal candy

TOKYO (UPI) — Some of the 40 almond-chocolate bars found in a box of candy in a derelict shopping mart on Valentine's Day contained fatal doses of cyanide accompanied by a warning to "haughty Japanese," police said Saturday.

The Japanese National Police Agency issued a nationwide alert warning against any food or beverage left in public places.

A high school student and a middle-aged man died of cyanide poisoning in early January when they drank soft drinks they found in downtown Tokyo's public telephone booths.

The authorities were still investigating the source of the 40 chocolate bars, four of which were found to contain lethal doses of the poison.

Yarborough wins wet Richmond 400

RICHMOND (UPI) — Cale Yarborough drove his 1976 Chevrolet to victory Sunday in the rain-slicked 400th Grand National Stock race at the Virginia State Fairgrounds.

Yarborough, the defending Grand National champion from Timmonsville, S.C., was declared the winner with an average speed of 73.084 miles an hour after rain stopped the race following 245 laps. The winning time was one hour, 49 minutes, one second.

Second place was claimed by Darrell Waltrip of Daytona Beach, Fla., while Benny Parsons of Ellerbe, N.C. was third.

The race was stopped twice because of quick showers. The slick track contributed to an eight-car pile-up on lap 142 after Junior Miller's Chevrolet went into a tailspin. Two cars were removed from the race, but no injuries were reported.

Jackie Gleason of New York finished in 12th place, the highest spot for a rookie driver.

Guthrie became the first woman to compete on a NASCAR Grand National short track. Her qualifying time of 96.505 miles an hour was 13th best of the 30 competitors.

Top qualifier Neil Bennett, who drove his Dodge, finished 31.632 miles an hour to claim the pole position, finished in seventh place.

Dave Marvis, Bobby Allison and Richard Petty finished fourth, fifth and sixth, respectively.

The rest of the top ten finishers included: Bobby Hylan, Buddy Baker and Richard Childress.

Rankin triumphs in Bent Tree golf

SARASOTA, Fla. (UPI) — Judy Rankin scrambled back from a poor second round and shot a 3-under-par 69 through blustery winds Sunday to win the $100,000 LPGA Bent Tree Classic by four strokes.

It was the second straight tour victory for the slender, 32-year-old blonde, who had the best round of her career with a 63 Friday only to follow it with a dismal 77 Saturday.

Rankin got off to a shaky start in the final round of the 54-hole event on the 6,124-yard Bent Tree Golf and Racquet Club course when she bogeyed three straight holes on the front nine.

But she birdied the second and eighth holes to make the turn at one-over and then on the back nine she fired four birdies and five pars to finish with a three-day total of 209 — seven under par.

Clifford Am Creed shot a 69 Sunday to finish second, four strokes off the pace. Pam Higgins was third with a two-under par 214 after shooting a final round 73. The rest of the 60-woman field had three-day totals far over par.

Rankin said she was worried going into Sunday's round because "I was so disappointed yesterday in the way I handled my success from Friday."

"There's no doubt I had it in my head that if I had after shooting a 63, I was a turkey of some sort," Rankin said. "It's a matter of pride."

The victory boosted Rankin's winnings for the year by $15,000 to $27,500 after only three tournaments.

Rankin, who led the tour in earnings last year with $150,734, finished second in the American Cancer Society Classic at Miami two weeks ago and first in the Grange Blossom Classic in St. Petersburg last week.

She was asked if she had revised her opinion of last week that it would be difficult for one woman to dominate the tour.

"I still think it's difficult to do," she said. "Money-wise, I did last year, but we still had a lot of different winners."

"I won six tournaments last year. I said it would be difficult for any one player to win more than six — but we can always try."

"Most of the golfers complained of the swirling winds that gust up to 30 miles per hour Sunday but the conditions worked to Rankin's advantage."

"I'm able to work the ball both ways," Rankin said. "I'm able to use the wind to my advantage."

She said Higgins, her playing partner, had trouble with the wind during the afternoon. Higgins was co-leader at one point but fell back sharply on the back nine despite an eagle on the par-five 11th hole.

Rankin confirmed that she had been ill and was probably catching a cold or the flu.

"I really felt bad on Friday," she said, adding that she felt better Saturday when she shot a five-over-par 77, so she could not use illness as an excuse for her bad round.

"I don't feel good now," she said. "I'm really tired. Sometimes you feel like you've spent half your life in a wind tunnel. I'm just sore all over."

Three golfers — Jane Blalock, Sandra Palmer and Beth Stone — were tied for fourth at one under.

Jan Stephenson and Beth Solomon finished at two over.

Golden Eagles go after perfect season record

TWIN FALLS — Another night of history presents itself at the CSI gymnasium tonight.

The College of Southern Idaho Golden Eagles host the Eastern Utah Golden Eagles with an opportunity of becoming the school's first team to ever complete a regular season with a perfect record.

Of course, the old national record is still there and can be pushed to 45 if the Eagles win and raise Coach Boyd Grant's two-year record to 62-1. A far cry from his "missable" 32-3 in his first season here.

It is the start of an interesting week for the Eagles who now have three final games before the home crowd regardless of what happens.

Following Monday night's contest, CSI glides to the regional Friday and Saturday night. That is the first and final step toward the national playoffs in Hutchinson, Kan., where CSI will be going after a second straight title.

Of interest is the fact two of the three games will come against teams that aren't yet convinced that CSI is in fact the No. 1 junior college team in the nation as the final poll already has established.

The Eagles actually appeared headed for a loss at Eastern Utah earlier but the Utahns got a little greedy, it seemed. In the closing minutes, they had CSI down by nine and instead of getting smart with the ball and seeing if CSI would indeed force turnovers and steals, they decided to beat CSI by 11. That cost them a defeat.

back line in the ICAAC, and Coach Grant believes that. The Utah Eagles have three sophomores with good size underneath and they stuck with a zone that prevented CSI from getting many, if any, penetrating passes.

Coach Grant also reports that Central Oregon definitely wants another shot at the Eagles. The Bend crew ran through the Oregon Community College Conference undefeated.

CSI ripped them by 50 points in November but Central added a pair of sophomores and got that and the Eagles just barely escaped with a one-point decision in the final game before the holidays.

Still, neither of these teams has played the Eagles since frosh Art Williams decided to become a 6.5, going on 7-foot, playing on defense and the Eagles, plus increase his scoring average by five points per game — not a mean feat after playing 20.

Central Oregon, however, had better not overlook either Ricks or North Idaho in that first game Friday night. The Oregonians will have an advantage of the Idaho teams playing the night before and possibly being a little fresh. But they also face the matter of perhaps having tournament jitters on Friday which the Idaho teams should have overcome Thursday night.

Although Coach Grant is a little apprehensive because of the single elimination nature of post-season competition, he feels considerably better about playing on the home floor. His Eagles never have lost in Twin Falls.

JACK NICKLAUS raises his arms in triumph after knocking in a 20-foot putt for an eagle on the 552 yard, par five fifteenth hole in the Jackie Gleason Inverrary Classic Sunday.

Nicklaus' eagle gave him an insurmountable five-shot lead with four holes to play over his playing partner, Gary Player.

Triumphant gesture

Nicklaus rallies for 5-shot win

LAUDERHILL, Fla. (UPI) — Jack Nicklaus, eagling the par five 15th hole, shot a two-under par 70 Sunday to run away with the $50,000 first prize in the Jackie Gleason Inverrary Classic by a whopping five shots.

Gil Morgan had gone into the round trailing by one stroke and Gary Player was two behind. Both golfers stayed within range most of the afternoon and all three were tied at nine-under par at the turn.

But Nicklaus made his move on the back nine, birdying the par five 11th hole, the par four 13th, before opening the 20-foot eagle putt on the 552-yard 15th. He increased his lead to six with a birdie three on the 17th, but dropped back to five under with a meaningless bogey on the 18th hole.

Player finished second, five shots behind Nicklaus' winning total of 15 under par 275. Player, shot a 73 Sunday over the par 72, 7,127-yard Inverrary Country Club course.

Morgan shot a 76 and tied Jim Simons and Fuzzy Zoeller at six under par 282.

It was Nicklaus' 21st tour win and ties him with Arnold Palmer for most career victories behind Sam Snead, who has 84, and Ben Hogan, who won 62 tour events.

Nicklaus also won here a year ago when the Gleason tournament was played in conjunction with the Tournament Players Championship.

Player, who was in the same threesome with Nicklaus, faded quickly while Nicklaus was making his charge, bogeying the 14th and 16th holes. Morgan dropped out of the chase at the 15th when his second shot nestled next to a fence, forcing him to push it out and costing him a double bogey seven.

Nicklaus, who turned 37 last Jan. 21, seemed to be trying to give the lead away on the front nine, scrambling out of sand through par on the first two holes and bogeying the seventh and eighth.

His second bogey, temporarily, cost him the lead, with Player moving in front. But on the ninth hole, Player's second shot found a sand trap. He exploded to six feet but missed the putt for a bogey five.

Morgan, however, was birdying the hole, sinking a five-footer, and the three golfers went into the final nine holes of the $25,000 tournament locked in a tie.

The 40-year-old Player had been seeking his 19th U.S. win and his first tour victory since 1974 when he won the Masters, the British Open and the Memphis Open.

Morgan, an accredited eye doctor, was going after his first victory, although he ranked 42nd on the money list last year with $61,372.

Nicklaus' win was his first since the World Series of Golf last summer — it was only his third tour appearance of the year. In the other two, he finished 11th and missed the cut.

The $50,000 check increases his earnings for this year to $54,600 and raises his all-time record career winnings to $2,862,811.

Denver stops Celts

DENVER (UPI) — David Thompson and Dan Issel combined for 58 points and helped hold Boston to only 17 points in the fourth quarter, giving Denver a 121-100 victory over the Boston Celtics Sunday.

Thompson finished with a game-high 31 points, including 19 in the first half, and Issel added 27 as the Nuggets avenged one of only three home losses suffered early in the season.

Boston, now 31-30, was led by center Dave Cowens, who had 24 points, 16 rebounds, 10 assists, four steals and four blocked shots. Guard Jo Jo White finished with 20 and veteran John Havlicek had 19 points.

Denver led most of the game, jumping to an 11-point lead early in the second quarter as they opened the period with eight unanswered points. The final score was the largest margin for the Nuggets, who have won six of their last seven games.

The Big E hits 40

LANDOVER, Md. (UPI) — Elvin Hayes scored 40 points, including 11 in final 3 1/2 minutes, and pulled down 14 rebounds Sunday to lead the Washington Bullets to a 117-105 NBA victory over the Buffalo Braves.

Phil Chenier added 27 points and Mitch Kupchak had 18 for the Bullets, who have won 23 of their last 30 games and lead the NBA's Central Division.

Adrian Dantley led Buffalo with 33 points, while Randy Smith had 21.

The Bullets, who trailed by as many as 17 points in the first quarter and 63-54 at halftime, finally tied the game 79-all with 1:26 left in the third period. Two free throws by Tom Henderson, who also had 13 assists, capped an eight-point run.

The game remained close until Henderson turned a three-point play with 4:08 remaining to give the Bullets a 100-98 lead. Hayes followed with a basket and two foul shots and reserve guard Bob Weiss sank a 20-foot jump shot to make it 106-98 and Hayes' shooting made sure Buffalo never got no closer than six.

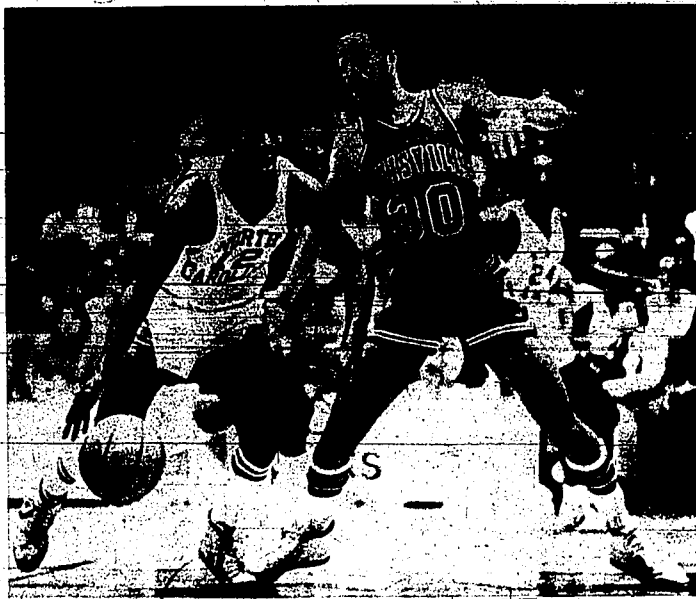

Hayes hit 15 of 26 shots from the floor. He had 22 points in the first half, 18 in the second.

Sixers edge Sonics

SEATTLE (UPI) — Julius Erving scored 22 points Sunday in leading the Philadelphia 76ers to a 93-85 victory over the Seattle SuperSonics.

George McGinnis and Lloyd Free each scored 18 points for the 76ers.

Fred Brown led Seattle with 22 points.

North Carolina downs Louisville

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — Phil Ford and Mike O'Koren scored 25 points each as eighth-ranked North Carolina rode a big first half margin to a 96-89 victory over 10th-ranked Louisville Sunday afternoon.

North Carolina held a 37-33 lead with 7:55 to play in the first half before the Tar Heels outscored Louisville 18-2 to roll up a 67-38 halftime lead in the nationally televised game.

O'Koren, a freshman, scored 15 points in the first half and Ford scored 12 in the opening period, but Ford had a spectacular day handling the ball and finished the game with nine assists.

Louisville made only two field goals in the final 19 minutes of the first half.

Rick Wilson scored 30 points to pace Louisville, and Westley Cox added 27 for the Cardinals before fouling out with 3:30 to play. Louisville is now 21-5 in the season.

Spurs crush Jazz

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — George Gervin and Billy Paulz combined for 58 points, 39 in the second half, to spark the San Antonio Spurs to a 135-118 win over the New Orleans Jazz Sunday.

Gervin and Paulz accounted for 29 points in a third quarter Spurs surge that put San Antonio in front 100-83 at the end of the quarter. The Spurs, who trailed New Orleans 67-43 at the start of the quarter, scored 12 consecutive points in the next 3:30, the last six by Gervin to open a 75-67 lead.

Gervin scored 10 consecutive Spur points later in the quarter and Paulz added 11 of his 31 points in the third quarter. Gervin finished with 27.

San Antonio converted three Jazz turnovers into six points and ran off the first eight points in the final period to open a 23-point lead and coast to the win.

Pete Maravich of the Jazz, coming off a record-setting 60-point game against the New York Knicks Friday, scored 40 points. Ma Howard added 17 points for the Jazz.

Warriors top Nets

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (UPI) — Phil Smith scored nine of his game-high 24 points in the fourth quarter Sunday afternoon to give the Golden State Warriors a 106-84 victory over the New York Nets.

Smith led the Warriors with 13 first-half points, but missed his first 10 shots in the second half before scoring nine straight points late in the fourth quarter. Smith turned an 89-87 deficit with 5:22 to play into a five-point lead for Golden State.

Golden State outscored the Nets 14-1 midway through the first period to take a 27-16 lead and led by as many as 15 in the second period.

The Nets rallied in the third period behind Bubba Hawkins, who finished with 18 points, to take a 74-73 lead at the end of the period.

Jamaal Wilkes added 18 points for Golden State.

Munson reports, Hunter's arm OK

FT. LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) — The New York Yankees signed more players, welcomed pitcher Thurman Munson to camp and got some good news from outfielder Hunter in a biggy Sunday workout.

The signs, all for one year, are outfielders Carlos May, Paul Blair and Kerry Dineen and pitchers Ed Ricks, Dewey Hoy and Ken Clay, bringing the number of satisfied Yankees to 29 and leaving nine players unsigned.

Munson, the American League's most valuable player, was two days late because he was honored Saturday at his All-Star home, Kent State. He went right to work, catching batting practice and hitting several balls out of the park.

Hunter, who felt some tenderness in his right arm Saturday, threw again Sunday and felt no pain. He was bothered most last season by tendinitis in his right shoulder which accounted for his disappointing 17-15 record — his poorest in five seasons.

Atlantic all-star team announced

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Three members of the gold medal winning U.S. Olympic team highlighted the 1977 Atlantic Coast Conference basketball team.

Chosen by a vote of the Atlantic Coast Sports Writers Association for the first team were North Carolina Olympians Phil Ford and Walter Davis, as well as Olympic teammate Kenny Carr of North Carolina State.

Wake Forest had forward Rod Griffin and guard Skip Brown on the first team.

Ford, who was on the first team last year, and Griffin, the most accurate shooter in the league, were close to unanimous choices of the 134 voters who made it a seven-man race for the five places on the first team.

Griffin placed on all but three first-team ballots, and Ford missed on four. On the basis of two points for a first-team vote and one-point for a second team, Griffin had 265 points to 264 for Ford.

Davis, Griffin and Brown moved up to the first team after being chosen for the 1976 second team.

Brown and Carr polled 218 and 217 votes, respectively. There was an extremely close fight for the fifth spot, with Davis winning over 71 Wayne "Tree" Rollins of Clemson by only three points.

Jim Spanarkel of Duke was another strong vote-getter, trailed Rollins by only 14 points.

The other second team choices are Brad Davis of Maryland, Tommy LaGarde of North Carolina, and Stan Rome of Clemson.

Three of the five first-team members had made the team in other years. Brown was on the 1975 team as a sophomore, and Ford and Carr were honored last season.

White U.S. Olympic champions Tate Armstrong of Duke and Steve Sheppard of Maryland got some second team support, most voters figured the "two had" been sidelined by injuries too much to merit consideration.

Carr averaged 21.1 points for the season-to-finish-a-rhyme-ahead of Griffin's 20.9, but the rugged Deacon made 61.7 per cent of his field-goal tries to lead the league.

The teams and the votes they received are:

(First Team):
Rod Griffin, Wake Forest, 265; Phil Ford, North Carolina, 264; Skip Brown, Wake Forest, 218; Kenny Carr, North Carolina State, 217; and Walter Davis, North Carolina, 203.

(Second Team):
Wayne Rollins, Clemson, 200; Jim Spanarkel, Duke, 186; Brad Davis, Maryland, 94; Tom LaGarde, North Carolina, 60; and Stan Rome, Clemson, 55.

Gottfried wins, molds new image

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (UPI) — Brian Gottfried, besting to shed his image as just a doubles player and establish himself as a first-rate single pro, came from behind Sunday to beat favored Guillermo Vilas 2-6, 6-1, 6-3 and capture the $225,000 tennis tournament.

"I'm in a state of shock right now," the 25-year-old Gottfried said immediately following his upset.

Gottfried, a product of Trinity of Texas who came back to beat 20-year-old Billy Scanlon 2-6, 6-3, 6-1 in the semifinals Saturday night, won $35,200 first prize money.

Better known as the doubles partner of Raul Ramirez of Mexico, Gottfried first in the Grand Slam which Jimmy Connors, Bjorn Borg and the Nistars made up.

Vilas, who knocked off Ramirez in the semifinals, attempted to rush the net against the moustachioed underdog on the concrete court at Mission Hills but his volleys fooled him.

"On a court as fast as this, that didn't surprise me," said Gottfried. "But he just didn't seem to have the confidence in his volleys and that was the difference."

"Right now my confidence is pretty high. A win like this really does something for you."

The tournament was sponsored by American Airlines.

A sellout crowd estimated at 7,000 watched the No. 6-seeded Gottfried, a serve-and-volley-type player, handle the No. 3-seeded Argentine in one hour and 40 minutes.

In contrast to poor weather earlier in the week here, the finals were played in near-perfect 75-degree weather with no wind.

Vilas said a linesman's call on his serve in the seventh game of the third set might have been the turning point. The third set was knotted at 3-3 after each man had held his serve three times.

Vilas lost the first point on his serve when the linesman first said Vilas' backhand was in and then changed his mind and said the ball was out, making the score love-15.

"It was very important that I've had to get used to that kind of thing all week long," remarked Vilas.

Vilas went on to lose his serve after the game was tied at 30-all when Gottfried aimed a forehand smack into the center of Vilas' stomach while the South American was at the net.

Gottfried then held his serve for a 5-3 lead, winning the game at 40-30 with a great volley that left Vilas flat footed. On the ninth game of the third set, Gottfried broke his opponent again. The game was tied at 30-30 and again at deuce when Gottfried gained match point with a vicious smash of a desperation lob by Vilas.

Gottfried won the match when he lashed a great passing shot off his forehand that went down the line.

Vilas won $12,600. For Gottfried, it was his second victory of the year. He won a tournament at Baltimore.

In the doubles finale, Frew McMillan of South Africa teamed with Bob Hewitt, of Australia, to beat Marty Riessen and Roscoe Tanner 7-6, 7-6. McMillan and Hewitt won the first set with a 7-2 tiebreaker and the second with a 7-5 tiebreaker.

They split $13,200, while Riessen and Tanner divided $6,600.

MARTINA Navratilova won the Virginia Slims of Detroit Tennis Tournament Sunday by defeating Sue Barker of England 6-4, 6-4. Navratilova's win made her the first woman this year to pass the $100,000 plateau in earnings.

Martina passes $100,000 mark

DETROIT (UPI) — Top-seeded Martina Navratilova picked up her fourth victory on the Virginia Slims circuit this season Sunday when she turned back second-seeded Sue Barker, 6-4, 6-4, to become the first woman tennis player to win more than $100,000 this year.

Janet Newberry of La Jolla, Calif., and JoAnne Russell of Naples, Fla., also pushed her past Chris Evert, who declined to defend the Detroit title she won last year, in the Ginny point standings. Navratilova now has 1,210 to Evert's 990.

Virginia Wade of England took third prize money of $5,800 by downing Franciscus Durr of Phoenix, Ariz., 8-3, in a pro set.

"Towards the end I was just trying to get my first serve in," she said. "And it's not really my game to be careful."

It was the third time the 20-year-olds have met in the finals of a Slims tournament this season and the transplanted Czechoslovakian has beaten the Englishwoman every time. Barker topped Navratilova in the quarterfinals one.

"I'm going to take next week off," Navratilova said. "But I will be playing in the rest of them."

"I've only lost once against Sue and twice against Chris," Navratilova said. "That's pretty good for me. I usually lose to someone I shouldn't lose to somewhere along the line."

"The Mission Hills, Calif., resident credited improved confidence and a safer game with helping her reach the finals in six of the seven Slims tournaments she has played in this season. She also gave a plug to Team Tennis.

The win boosted Navratilova's earnings to $102,500 in singles and $120,700 overall after she teamed with Betty Stove of Holland to take the doubles, too, 6-3, 6-4, over

"I'm playing percentage shots more," she said. "I'm not trying to hit so many big shots. Team Tennis taught me that. Every point is so important you can't take chances."

"I assured Dave I would not drag our salary dispute into the newspapers," said McDonald. "All I can tell you is that we are still very far apart."

"I asked if he had any meeting set with the club's lone major holdout, McDonald, said: "I have no meeting set but I'm sure I will meet with him. He's going to be around, obviously. This was not the place to talk. I don't want to do anything to jeopardize this signing at this time."

Kingman asks for $1 million to sign

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (UPI) — Dave Kingman, the New York Mets' unsigned home run hitter, arrived in camp at the conclusion of Sunday's workout and left immediately without talking to General Manager Joe McDonald or the waiting New York press corps.

Although nothing was set, the Mets expect Kingman to work out with the club on Monday.

"I'm not supposed to be here and I don't want to talk to anyone," said Kingman, who officially is not due to report until Mar. 1. However, he had told the Mets he would report on opening day, which was last Friday.

The Mets did sign two of their lesser players Sunday when Pitcher Nino Espinoza and Outfielder Benny Ayala agreed to terms.

Kingman, who hit 37 home runs last season, second highest total in the majors, reportedly is asking for a $1 million bonus just to sign and another $2 million spread out over five years.

Dolphins moving?

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI) — Mayor David Vann confirmed Sunday he has spoken with Miami Dolphins officials about a possible move of the NFL team to Birmingham.

Neither Dolphins officials nor park board Superintendent Frank Wagner were available for comment.

Vann responded to a report Sunday by Jimmy "The Grack" Snyder that it was "almost even money" the Dolphins will move to Birmingham before the start of the 1977 season.

Snyder said arrangements already were being made for the club to play pre-season games in Birmingham.

Vann said, "I don't know of any definite plans, but then I wouldn't necessarily have to know. Any final decision would have to be made by the Birmingham Park Board."

Snyder said arrangements already were being made for the club to play pre-season games in Birmingham.

In Middleton, Tenn., a bumbling bank robber, pursued in a running gunfight, strewed $18,000 in bills and coins all up and down the street. In 1952, that was. The townspeople mobilized to gather up the scattered money and return it to the bank. An audit then showed the bank collected 60 cents more than had been stolen. Police statisticians think it's the only case in history where a bank showed a profit from a robbery.

Suicide notes have been found in the effects of thousands of persons who've died natural deaths. They'd changed their minds, evidently. But hadn't destroyed the notes. Believe it, already mentioned that suicide notes are rarely dated.

Was George Jean Nathan who observed: "When a man encounters a woman in a mood he does not understand, he wants to know if she is tired?"

The only animal, besides man, that has learned to play a xylophone is the seal.

PLANTAR WARTS

Q. "Do planter warts show up anywhere but on the soles of the feet?"
A. No, the word planter itself alludes to the foot sole; surface, not to the type of wart growth. If you have planter callouses, planter blisters or planter wrinkles, that means they're on the soles of your feet.

Q. "What's the difference between steel and freezing rain?"
A. If the raindrop freezes before it hits the ground, it's steel. If it freezes on impact, it's freezing rain.

Q. "That notorious gangster of the Prohibition Era, Al Capone, what did his business card identify him as?"
A. A second-hand furniture dealer.

LOVE AND WAR

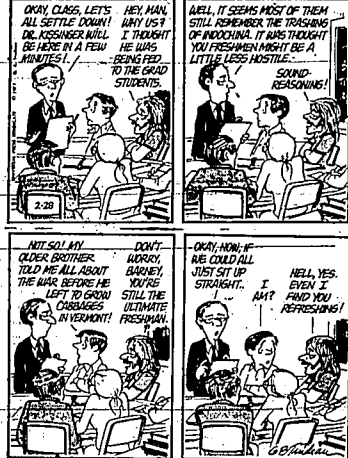

Consider the wife who vacations with her husband in Hawaii. Observe that renowned Love-and-War expert Dr. Joseph Peck: If typical, she'll probably remind you to watch out for the dancer if he has because they tell such a beautiful story in sign language, not realizing that you didn't make the trip to look at hands, and like most men, you would prefer that the dancer keep her hands over her head all of the time so that the view will not be obstructed.

When the great Albert Einstein fled Nazi Germany, he turned up in London with only the clothes on his back and his violin. A friend said: "You still play the violin, Albert?" The math genius said, "Yes, but not too well. My teacher says I can't count." Or so goes the tale.
