Valley site supported for coal fired plant

By BILL LAZARUS
Times-News writer

BLISS — About 60 prominent citizens from Gooding and Lincoln Counties overwhelmingly supported construction of a huge coal-fired power plant in their counties at a breakfast meeting today with Idaho Power officials.

Idaho Power Vice-President Logan Lanham told the group of mayors, city councilmen, county commissioners, legislators, ranchers and businessmen that utility expects to apply for a new 500,000-kilowatt plant within the next "30 to 60 to 90 days." Lanham did not specify a location, but one of the primary sites being considered reportedly is just three miles north of Bliss.

In a showing of hands, the group expressed almost unanimous support for building a coal plant nearby. Only three persons raised their hands to oppose such a plant.

Lincoln County Commission Chairman Everett Ward, on behalf of the commission, invited Idaho Power to build the plant in Lincoln County.

Lanham told the group that communities near the coal-fired plant would have to provide housing for at least 125 permanent families.

The permanent work force, he said, would have an annual payroll of $1 million to $1.5 million. The plant would add about $5.5 million to a county's property tax, he said.

About 700 workers would be employed during the year of construction, he said.

"We know that there is always a certain segment that's going to oppose," he said. "That's where the leaders are going to come in."

Earl Haroldson, retired Twin Falls area manager for Idaho Power, said he arranged the meeting between the company and the local leaders because of his concern for adequate energy production in the future.

Haroldson said he understood four or five sites were now being considered by Idaho Power for a coal-fired power plant, including a site north of Bliss and one near Dietrich.

Idaho Power President James Bruce said in Boise Wednesday that the company has narrowed the number of potential sites to a half dozen out of the 21 alternate sites being considered. "But we are not ready to announce a final decision," Bruce said.

Lanham told the Times-News he does not know which sites are now being considered. But he believed sites in both Lincoln and Gooding Counties as well as near American Falls were possible locations for a plant.

During the meeting, several of the community leaders stood up and expressed their views on a coal-fired power plant.

"I feel that it's a good thing and that we've possibly been led astray a little bit on what the environment will be like," one person from Shoshone said. "When Bruce said they don't want... we got our application in early," he said.

One person objected, however, that while the plant is being constructed "people live in cardboard boxes, shacks." He said even after the plant is built "the debris stays."

Lanham responded that city and county planning would be very important if a plant were built.

Idaho Power's original proposal to build a million kilowatt plant southeast of Boise was rejected last fall by the Idaho Public Utilities Commission because of the proposed location.

Demand increasing Idaho hay prices

By KEN HODGE
Times-News writer

MAGIC VALLEY — A desperate need for hay, has forced Minnesota farmers to look as far as Idaho for supplies of the forage crop to feed their livestock, according to officials here.

Idaho officials and hay buyers say the pressure from Minnesota and other states such as Washington, Oregon and California have combined to raise hay prices in this state.

"We've been scrounging all over the North American continent for hay," Robert Swanson, information officer for the Minnesota Department of Agriculture, said.

"Minnesota has had three years of drought and 1976 was the worst," Swanson added. "It was hardest on our hay and pasture. We had zilch on hay and pasture and we are the fifth largest livestock state in the nation."

Of the 87 counties in the state of Minnesota, 78 have been declared presidential emergency areas, according to Swanson.

Farmers in Minnesota cannot, however, afford to haul hay from Idaho, according to F.B. Daniel of the Minnesota Farmers Union who has been coordinating the Farmers Union "hay bill."

"I don't think you would call it an excessive amount of hay," Daniel said about hay purchased in Idaho.

Daniel said there are several loading operations in Montana moving hay to Minnesota and one man who has contacts in Idaho is trying to implement a hay commuting operation.

"There is a way that hay can be somehow baled more firmly so we can get greater tonnage per load. It then will become more practical," Daniel added.

He said to date only about 3,000 tons of hay have been purchased from Idaho for Minnesota livestock producers.

Minnesotans have been taking advantage of federal transportation reimbursement for hay, but are still paying $65 to $70 per ton even with the maximum reimbursement of $50 per ton, Daniel said.

He said Minnesota is presently nearing the end of its heavy hay demand and does not expect much more need for Idaho hay from his state.

Pressure from other drought-stricken states has been forcing hay prices in Idaho upward in recent weeks, according to local buyers and cattle feeders.

"The highest price has come in about the last week," according to Glen Capps, Jerome hay buyer who said he has been paying from $53 to $60 a ton in the stack for last year's hay crop in the area.

"This outside market from California, Washington and Oregon has about used up our available supplies," Capps added. "There are still some available, but they're getting quite short."

Another hay buyer near Filer said he paid $52 per ton about three weeks ago and expects the price to be about $55 next time he buys.

Capps said he heard of growers in eastern Idaho selling to Minnesota buyers and also large shipments he made to California.

Capps said part of the market pressure in recent months has come from Japanese buyers, too.

"Quite a bit of hay has been pressed into smaller containers and shipped from Portland and Seattle to Japan," he said.

He said Japanese buyers have been coming farther inland to buy hay this year because of higher prices near the coast.

Drought conditions in Idaho are expected to have a major effect on the supplies of hay available in the fall, according to figures compiled by the Drought Task Force.

About 1.1 million acres of Idaho farmland will be at least 25 per cent short of water this year, according to predictions of the task force. Of that total, about 630,000 acres, or 60 per cent, were planted in forage crops last year.

"If we are going to lose that many acres of forage crops, it should be looked at by the livestock industry," drought coordinator C. Stephen Alfred said.

He said drought conditions in the forest fires, and fights between farmers over water.

"We're not saying these type of problems are going to develop," Barnett said. "We don't know what the effects of drought will be, but we just want to be ready in advance just in case."

Barnett would not give specifics.

Drought problems pondered

TWIN FALLS — About 40 law enforcement officials from throughout Magic Valley met here Wednesday to map approaches to problems which could be caused by drought.

Twin Falls Police Chief Frank Barnett, who chaired the meeting, said today the meeting focused on possible electrical shortages, farm worker layoffs, curtailment of forest access, forest fires, and fights between farmers over water.

"We're not saying these type of problems are going to develop," Barnett said. "We don't know what the effects of drought will be, but we just want to be ready in advance just in case."

Barnett would not give specifics.

Hike set Saturday

"MARCH-DIM" on Saturday may produce some food for some participants, but for Tony Gansel, left, it shouldn't. He's made the walk for the past three years. Joining in a bit of preliminary hammering are Soren Anderson, center, Walkabout chairman, and Dr. Robert Bettigheim. The 20-mile walk will benefit the March of Dimes. Participants are asked to meet at Twin Falls City Park at 8 a.m. to register. (Times-News color photo by Charles Lemmon.)

Asbestos hazards bring double ban

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Citing well-documented cancer hazards, the Consumer Product Safety Commission today banned speckling compounds and other wall patching mixtures with asbestos as well as asbestos-containing imitation logs and ash used in gasstirring fireplaces.

The agency left open, however, the question of whether consumers will be able to get refunds for such products now in their possession.

One thing the agency said it wanted to consider was how to tell consumers they could return fake fireplace materials safely to the store if a refund is eventually ordered for such material.

In addition, the commission ordered its staff to conduct an investigation into whether other asbestos-containing products ranging from modeling clay to vinyl floor tile should also be banned. "This is probably one of the most well-documented toxic substances around," said Commissioner David Pille of asbestos, a known carcinogen. "You don't have to look at the rats, just look at the people."

The commission had been urged to ban speckling compounds and similar mixtures with asbestos by the Natural Resources Defense Council. The group contended millions of consumers were being exposed to a needless hazard when such materials are installed, sanded or removed.

The commission granted that petition today by a vote of 4 to 0, with one member absent. By the same vote, the commissioners also banned speckling compounds containing a specific form of asbestos called tremolite talc.

The request to ban logs and ash made of asbestos, which glow to simulate wood burning in gas fireplaces, came from Rachel Scott of Overland Park, Kan., a freelance writer who is now associated with the Environmental Defense Fund.

She told the commission that she first encountered the asbestos problem when workmen were installing a fake fireplace in her father's house and told her the ashes were made of asbestos.

The NRDC said that in 1975 consumers purchased $7 million worth of gas fire logs but no breakdown was available on how many of those were made of asbestos or had fake ash made from the same substance.

The commission, in leaving open until possibly next week the question of which law to order the ban under, also left unresolved whether there should be a recall and a refund for consumers who have the banned materials in their home.

Kille commission decides to act under one law it enforces, no refund would be automatic. A second law, however, could require a repurchase.

Return of 'dark ages' not all bad

WILMINGTON, Ohio (UPI) — It could be back to the Dark Ages in the wake of the energy crisis, but "that might not be all that bad," says a Wilmington College sociologist.

Nell Snarr, chairman of the sociology department at the southwestern Ohio school, said it may be necessary for America and the rest of the world to go back to a decentralized way of life because of the energy shortage.

"Such a way of life was characteristic of the Dark Ages," he said.

"A contemporary Balkan historian has just recently published a book in which he says society may be forced to return to a period much like the Dark Ages," said Snarr. "He says that this might not be bad, and I tend to agree with him."

Snarr said decentralization in what he calls the "post-modern era" might be good for society.

"We won't abandon our modern technology, but we might return to a pre-modern form of social organization," he said. Societal units would be smaller "and people would be able to have a greater sense of control over their own lives."

For example, factories would tend to break into smaller units, to be close to both their customers and their labor supply.

"Something like this is already happening in England," said Snarr. "Brick-making firms are going back to using smaller factories because they are finding such units to be cheaper."

Along with a decentralization of industrial production, the energy crisis could affect government and education the same way, he said.

"We are already finding that students do not want to travel far from home to attend college. It is possible that colleges will soon be more locally oriented than many of them are now."

But, Snarr notes there could be some contradictions in a new decentralized society.

"National defense calls for centralization, as does modern communications. These might continue to be centralized while other societal units are decentralized.

"And, it is possible that the large, international business firms might continue. During the Dark Ages, the Catholic Church remained international while the rest of society went the other way."

A decentralized society might also be less polluted and less blighted.

"Small production units tend to produce less pollution in total than do a few large ones," said Snarr. "And small factories, close to workers' homes, tend to be a more congenial part of the landscape than do massive factories."

Blaze darkens center

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — City fire department crews using their emergency generators, restored power to sophisticated equipment in the University Medical Center's intensive care units operating after a fire blacked out the entire facility today.

But a hospital spokesman said the damage to the plant facility's main power supply center was so great that it would take repair crews into the afternoon to restore full power.

The blaze was quickly controlled, but damage to the electrical system also shorted out emergency generators, leaving the entire hospital and its clinics and emergency room without power.

Firefighters used their emergency generators to feed standby electrical power into the intensive care units and operating rooms, while Utah Power & Light Co. crews helped hospital technicians in their effort to restore full power.

A spokesman said patients in the hospital's largest hospital were remaining calm but said several persons were trapped in elevators, and all regular treatment rooms and clinics were without power since about 6 a.m. Four newborn babies were transferred to other hospitals.

At least two men were treated in the hospital's emergency room for smoke inhalation, but no other injuries were reported. None of the patients were reported in critical condition due to the power failure.

GM lists record profits

DETROIT (UPI) — Buoyed by renewed interest in large cars, General Motors Corp. said Wednesday it recorded the highest first quarter profits ever for a U.S. automaker — $993 million — and the best sales for any three-month period in its history.

In the process, GM's hold on the U.S. auto market increased with the higher big-car sales. The results would have been even better, except for a harsh winter which cost the auto giant production of 150,000 cars and trucks.

The record profit, equal to $3.14 a share, was up 13 percent from last year's $890 million, and erased the previous record of $816.9 million earned in 1973, the auto industry's banner year for auto sales.

Sales also were a record $18.4 billion up 19 percent from $11.4 billion a year ago, and the best for any quarter in GM's 65-year history.

Despite the record earnings and predictions that combined car and truck sales this year will topple the record 1973 million sold in 1973, Chairman Thomas A. Murphy and President Elliott M. Estes anticipated the "automobile industry will continue to benefit from the broadly based economic expansion now occurring," but noted the unexpected loss of 1973's record production was caused by lack of congressional action on automotive emission standards for 1978-model cars.

As a percentage of sales, profits slipped to 6.7 percent this year from 7.7 percent last year and 8.5 percent in 1975.

Murphy and Estes said they anticipate the "automobile industry will continue to benefit from the broadly based economic expansion now occurring," but noted the unexpected loss of 1973's record production was caused by lack of congressional action on automotive emission standards for 1978-model cars.

Benefit bid asked

WASHINGTON — Rep. George Hansen, R-Idaho, has introduced legislation which would deny any increase in GI benefits to Vietnam veterans discharged under President Carter's review program.

Hansen said 10,000 Vietnam veterans applied during the first week of the program for better discharge status.

Under the Carter program, Vietnam veterans who were given less than honorable discharges — such as dishonorable or general — could apply for honorable discharges and be eligible for full GI benefits.

There should be a sharp distinction between those who have served fully and honorably and those who did not," Hansen said. "The benefits of the Veterans' Administration makes that distinction and I join the millions of Americans who want to see that way."

"The GI Bill benefits developed over the years were out of moral commitments from a grateful nation to those who served her honorably. We must continue to recognize this fact and not cheapen such a creditable program."

Crash hurts woman, boy

TWIN FALLS — A woman and her child received cuts and bruises in a car-motorcycle accident at the intersection of Shoshone Falls Road and Falls Avenue East Sunday night, sheriff's deputies have reported.

The woman, Terry Lynn Tipton, 22, Twin Falls, and child, Charles Tipton, 6, were traveling west on a motorcycle when their vehicle collided with a car driven south by Raymond Eugene Fellows, 21, Brigham City, Utah, about 6:30 p.m. Sunday.

Fellows was cited for failure to yield at a stop sign.

The Tiptons were treated and released at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital.

Damage to the car was estimated at $500 and to the cycle at $500.

Innocent plea filed

JEROME — Rito H. Terrazas, 30, pleaded innocent to second degree murder charges when he was arraigned in district court here before Judge James Cunningham.

No date has been set for his hearing on charges resulting from a fatal stabbing March 28 behind El Sombbrero Cafe.

Jose Lopez, 43, died the morning of March 28 at St. Benedict's Hospital allegedly from wounds received in the altercation.

Terrazas remains in sheriff's custody.

Rites held for crash victims

WESTMINSTER, Calif. (UPI) — A funeral director called the roll, from Achaiz Wilma to Zibell, Charles. As each name rolled over the ranks of white concrete burial vaults, a woman placed a long stemmed rose in a large vase before three clergymen.

Finally, there were 114 roses.

"To every thing there is a season," a Catholic priest read from the well known Bible verses of Ecclesiastes. "And a time to every purpose under heaven."

A rabbi threw rose petals over the coffins. The priest offered benediction, and a protestant minister preached:

"We will carry their memories, and in that way immortalize them."

A month to the day after history's worst aviation disaster killed 580 persons when a KLM jettliner rammed a Pan American 747 on a runway in the Canary Islands, the three clergymen performed a mass funeral service Wednesday over the remains that were so mangled and burned they still could not be identified, and probably never will be.

They were placed in 114 caskets, representing the 114 passengers whose bodies were never identified. Three more were identified recently and relatives decided they should be buried with the others, bringing the number to 117.

Six caskets, ringed with floral displays and with the U.S. flag on one, stood before the speakers platform at the edge of a small pond. The others, sealed in the concrete burial vaults, were massed in a rectangle eight vaults deep and 14 across, each topped with a single rose tied to a fern by a ribbon.

A spokesman for Westminster Memorial park estimated it would take work crews all day today to dig 117 graves in the 10,000 square foot site the cemetery donated.

The graves will not be marked individually, he said, but a monument may be erected bearing the names of all the passengers, whose bodies were not identified.

Numbered metal tags were affixed to the caskets so that if any of the remains are identified later by laboratory work or other tests, relatives can claim them for reburial.

Pan American Airways paid the cost of the funeral and transported five hundreds of relatives and other mourners to the services.

Fuel fume trap next on EPA list

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — The Environmental Protection Agency plans to force "virtually all" service stations in Connecticut to install equipment by 1978 to trap gasoline fumes which escape each time a car pulls in for fuel.

A regional EPA official made the announcement Wednesday after a legislative committee voted down state legislation requiring only large stations to install the gas fume traps.

"Because of this action, Connecticut will be subject to a regulation forcing virtually all gasoline retailers to install the equipment," said Merrill S. Hohman.

Connecticut has the second worst air pollution in the nation, California is first.

This is not the first time Hohman has threatened Connecticut with stiff federal punishment.

Earlier this year, Hohman warned the EPA would halt virtually all new economic development in the state unless the legislature agreed to set strict, new auto emission standards.

Lawmakers ignored the threat and defeated the measure on two occasions.

Wednesday, the Legislative Regulations Review Committee also voted, 12-2, to reject the anti-fumes proposal.

"We were willing to accept a state (gas fumes) regulation, even if it was not as severe as federal standards," said Hohman. "But Connecticut will now be severely regulated to make it conform to federal standards, because the state is unwilling to do the regulating itself," Hohman said after the vote.

Voter plan scored

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ronald Reagan and other conservative Republicans warn President Carter's plan for instant voter registration could mean permanent Democratic majorities and the doom of the GOP.

Additionally, local election officials claim the proposal would mean added financial burdens on local governments, long lines at the polls and increased voter fraud.

Carter's plan to allow voters to register by showing up on election day with a drivers license or other identification was the subject of a hearing by the House Administration Committee and a forum of the American Conservative Union both Wednesday.

The plan has been endorsed by "good" government groups, but condemned by some Republicans and viewed with caution by election officials. It has wide Democratic support in Congress and is expected to be passed this year.

Good guess for Carter

NEW YORK (UPI) — Several weeks before President Carter introduced his energy program he predicted the package would result in a 10 to 15 per cent loss in popularity.

According to an NBC poll released Wednesday he wasn't too far off the mark.

The poll, taken after he outlined his stringent energy program, indicated the number of Americans who believed Carter "was doing an excellent or good job overall" dropped to 53 per cent in April — a 10 per cent loss over the 63 per cent he held in March.

Solar best

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A solar power breakthrough will solve the energy crisis "once and for all," says a top Carter administration official.

"It's coming down the pike on a much closer timetable than anyone would have expected," said John F. O'Leary of the Federal Energy Administration.

A viable plan to use the inexhaustible solar power source is reachable within five years, O'Leary, administrator of the FEA, told the convention of the American Newspaper Publishers Association Wednesday.

Flexibility needed

Why would a president who champions the cause of human rights throughout the world adamantly oppose a little help from Congress?

The answer is simple. The proffered aid from the Legislative Branch denies President Jimmy Carter flexibility he deems necessary in the human rights crusade.

The Harkin Amendment would require American representatives at the World Bank and other lending agencies to vote against credits for governments that violate human rights. It was adopted by the House but the Senate Foreign Relations Committee this week rejected it.

Like similar attempts by Congress to impose its will in an across the board fashion, the amendment proposed by Rep. Thomas R. Harkin, D-Iowa, is a potential source of great embarrassment for the United States. It could result in American delegates effectively vetoing financial aid to a critical ally because the law said this must be done regardless of special circumstances.

Some time ago a similar provision involving penalties to nations which seized U.S. fishing ships resulted in denying American aid to some South American countries which the United States wanted to shore up against the threat of subversion. Later, a blanket ban on offensive use of American military aid triggered a still troublesome impasse with Turkey.

Focusing American economic pressure on nations which abuse human rights can be effective. But it is a weapon that must be used with discretion if it can do more harm than good.

President Carter should not be saddled with an economic cannon manned by Congress when a high powered rifle he can fire himself when needed would be more effective in promoting human rights sanctity.

Citizens railroaded

Professional environmentalists in Washington, D.C. have cleverly devised a plan to prevent environmentally destructive navigation dams that will actually foster navigation dams and be destructive to the environment. It is not the first time they have shown such genius.

Environmental lobbyists in Washington — who are no longer to be confused with rank and file citizens across America who care about the environment — have thrown in with the demand of the nation's railroads that tolls be charged to barges passing through navigation dams. Through that means, it is their expectation that they will make the construction of more such dams less desirable. There are a few flaws in that logic:

1. The toll money will be earmarked for the construction of more dams, thereby having the opposite effect to what the professional environmentalists intend.

2. The tolls reverse the proper thrust of taxation in an energy-short age. Water transportation is far more energy efficient than railroads, yet the aim of the legislation is to drive freight away from water transportation and toward the railroads. What a wonderful contribution to the energy crisis.

3. The tugboat companies will pay the tolls, but will quickly pass them on in higher freight rates that will be as quickly passed on in the form of higher prices to consumers. Thus the consumers will be faced with regressive price increases rather than subsidizing the waterways as they do now through the progressive federal income tax.

The Washington environmentalists are being railroaded, and they're taking the rest of us along for the ride.

Cuba in serious economic trouble

By JERRY FLINT

© 1977 N.Y. Times News Service

HAVANA — "Miracles simply do not occur in a country's economy," said Angel Gomez-Trueta, first deputy minister for Cuba's Committee for Economic Cooperation, a major ministry.

"We also have deficiencies," said Fidel Castro, President of Cuba's State Council, speaking of the economy. "Lots of deficiencies." In five days of frank talk with Minnesota businessmen last week, Cuban officials made it clear that their Communist nation is in serious economic trouble, and they dropped messages in almost every meeting that they want to make deals — economic and quite possibly political.

Indeed, Castro, at one moment, linked the ending of the American embargo with his willingness to discuss Cuba's activities in Africa and the Middle East, and he assured the Americans that the Cubans had fixed a date for their military withdrawal from Angola, although he did not divulge that date.

Even without the Cubans' many admissions of trouble, the visiting businessmen could see these signs of economic problems:

— Havana itself, despite construction in progress, is shabby, with many buildings in an apparent state of semi-disintegration.

— Consumer goods are scarce and high-priced. A pair of pink galoshes sells for 5 pesos, or $6.25 at the official exchange rate. That is the low price for rationed goods and practically everything is rationed to assure fair distribution. Goods sold outside the rationing system legally may cost three to eight times as much.

— The coffee ration (and coffee is a favorite Cuban drink) has been squeezed down to about an ounce a week for some beans for export.

— A modification of the five-year plan is under way, stretching out industrialization but emphasizing anything that will reduce imports and increase exports.

— Young Cubans are willing to buy practically anything from the visiting Americans — their shoes, hats, even sunglasses — for more cash than these items cost back home.

But, possibly the most obvious symbol of economic troubles was the lavish display of hospitality that the Cubans put on for the Americans. There were two elaborate meetings with Castro. One was an hour-and-a-half session of handshaking and answering questions from the 52-member group; the second was a four-hour run-and-lobster meeting with 16 of the Minnesotans in his office. He also sent a truckload of gifts for them on departure. Other high-level officials led day-long discussions on the Cuban business climate, and the Cubans staged two impressive banquets for their guests.

Some foreigners stationed in Havana say the economic troubles have intensified because a massive administrative decentralization reform is causing confusion in the bureaucracy, which they say is relatively inefficient, at the lower levels anyway.

But the heart of Cuba's economic troubles lies in the poverty of the island itself, its low level of natural and energy resources and its blessing and its curse — sugar. Three years ago sugar brought more than 60 cents a pound. Today it is about 10 cents a pound, and recently it was as low as 7 or 8 cents.

"Seven cents is below the cost of production," Castro told the American visitors during a half-hour explanation of why Cuba grows sugar instead of other food crops for its low consumption. "It is more profitable." The Soviet Union pays three times the current world price for Cuban sugar, and Westerners say the total Soviet subsidy here runs about $3 million a day. But Cuba still has 2 million metric tons or possibly 2.5 million, more than a third the crop, available for the world market.

Sugar is the nation's major export and source of hard currency. In 1971, before the big sugar boom, Cuba's exports to the non-Communist world (mostly sugar) were valued at $300 million. In 1974 they soared above $1 billion. Last year they were down to $600 million.

Cuba needs exports to buy products and technology. The nation's manufacturing ability is low. Even some of Cuba's national garment, the guayabera ("guava picker") shirt, is imported from Panama. And the promotional literature for Havana cigars is printed in Spain.

Although Cuba is short of housing, future buildings are to be kept to five stories in height, Castro said, to hold down the cost of spending foreign currency for such things as elevators.

"We cannot develop our own technologies. We must bring it to our country. There is no other way," said Gomez-Trueta. Castro said his first priority for importing from America, should the trade embargo be lifted, is technology.

'Adult' greeting cards boom

© 1977 Chicago Daily News

CHICAGO — Raymond Shapiro is not a prince. But his jaw dropped when he found an "adult" greeting card store on Michigan Avenue.

Because he was curious, not prurient, he picked up one of the greeting cards.

On the outside was a cheerful cartoon character, saying: "I wanted to be the first to tell you..."

Shapiro opened the card to get the rest of the message, which was "... go f your self."

Horrified, Mr. Shapiro brought the card to my attention. He said: "Is this a greeting card? I would hate to have my 13-year-old niece walk in and innocently see something like that."

Until Mr. Shapiro found the store, he said, "I was under the impression that crude and obscene greeting cards were being marketed."

So I dropped him at the Pioneer Gift Shop and looked over their selection.

Boy, are they dirty. And crude and vile and insulting. Any lump?

It is impossible to paraphrase, or describe them in modest language, because even that would be foul.

However, I can't share Mr. Shapiro's outrage. For one thing, there is a visible sign in the dirty greeting card section that says

"adult cards."

"That should be a suitable warning to anyone of a delicate nature who might get the vapors."

"That's why I put the sign up there," said the shop owner, Sam Light. "If people don't want to be offended, they don't have to look."

And not many 13-year-old nieces buy the cards. Mr. Light says most of his customers are up in years.

"Elderly women like them," he said. "And elderly men, too. And we get a lot of advertising men like them."

Light says that when the cards first hit the market, he refused to carry them.

"At first it was just risqué cards. But people asked for some that were worse and worse."

Now he sells about 150 dirty cards each week.

But a truly awesome statistic was provided by the man who makes the cards. Joel Weil, president of Joll Greeting Cards.

He now sells 3 million of the foul and obscene cards each year.

According to my arithmetic, that means that every 10 seconds, someone somewhere is sending or receiving an obscene greeting card.

This line of cards represents 10 per cent of Mr. Weil's total greeting card business.

Big question not Carter's policy

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — The big question, when it comes to formulating an energy policy, is not the survival of Jimmy Carter. It is the survival of our country.

Our natural tendency to personalize public issues tends to obscure the larger purpose. Last week in Washington the talk was mostly of Mr. Carter — would his popularity suffer? Could he whip dissenting senators into line? Would his leadership succeed in marshaling public support for his legislative measures?

Mr. Carter's fortunes don't really matter — or at least they ought not to matter. If a national energy policy is approached in terms of a "Carter policy" or a "Democratic policy," everyone will lose in the resulting partisanship. Precisely as wars are too serious to be left to generals, so an energy policy is too vital to entrust to presidents. If this critical problem is to be solved, it will demand a level of statesmanship seldom seen around our town, and it will demand a maturity not yet demonstrated by our free-wheeling people.

Mr. Carter, in my own view, is plainly right in his general perception. In terms of our energy requirements, we are indeed on a collision course with disaster. This is no novel perception. Spokesmen for the utilities and the petroleum companies have been sounding the same Cantonian warnings for 20 years.

It is an oversimplification to say that "the world is swiftly running out of oil." Enough oil could be recovered from western shale, or from deep offshore wells, or from other processes, to last for generations. What we are running out of is oil at a price that can be absorbed without worldwide economic upheaval and without grave risk of environmental catastrophe.

But if Mr. Carter is clearly right in his general perception, he is woefully wrong in his specific proposals. At bottom, he is proposing to use the taxing power in order to tinker, tinker, tinker with the marketplace. He proposes a plan of tax credits and tax rebates that would produce an administrative nightmare. His deterrents are mostly puny; his incentives are generally feeble. Nothing in his program would contribute significantly to capital formation within the energy industry; the gestures toward the development of new forms of energy are merely gestures.

The program is a mishmash, compounded of wise concern on the one hand and political palaver on the other. Conservation is essential — of course it is essential — but the kind of conservation Mr. Carter is talking about cannot be achieved on the cheap.

It is absurd to say that his measures would add only 0.4 to the rate of inflation; a more accurate projection is twice or three times that figure. It is misleading to suggest that these things can be done without adverse environmental impact. Mr. Carter is guilting the people with his notion that their easy and extravagant "way of life" and "standard of living" can be maintained.

The power of government ought to be used, it seems to me, incisively and boldly, in a few areas only. We need realistic deterrents against waste and inefficiency in the use of fuel. And we need realistic incentives for the rapid development of alternative sources. If Congress will provide this much, the free marketplace can do the rest.

Minister's view of abortion letters

Editor, Times-News:
I read with interest the series of articles on abortion and particularly the one relating the views of religious leaders.

I was interested to read that Father Dotts was quoted as saying that "there may be 'marginal' cases where abortions may be considered."

For instance, women who are too young or too old to bear children, without dying in the process."

I was also glad to see that Bishop Thorneycroft was quoted as saying that the LDS Church "may consider abortions in two cases: when a woman is raped and when a doctor says a woman will die if she attempts to give birth."

This says to me that the real question is not "Who is in favor of abortions and who is not?" But the real question is then, "Since most of us will permit abortions under certain conditions, to what degree do we favor abortions within the limits of our personal or group, moral code?"

Apparently, the reason for consenting to abortions in these cases is because of special compassion on the individuals who find themselves in a difficult position not of their own making. If these churches can consent to abortion in these instances, I would appeal to them to take just one step further and also show compassion on other women who also find themselves in difficult positions?

Is a woman who has been raped in any worse position than a pregnant ghetto mother of ten children whose husband has left her to struggle alone in a rat-infested tenement? Hasn't the second woman also been taken advantage of, and abused, just as much as the first?

Or, is a woman who is "too old" to bear children any more a candidate for abortion than a 40-45 year old affluent housewife who has many children already, who may have had trouble giving birth? Aren't they both "old enough" to know better? (I don't really see any difference between these hypothetical situations. I believe that all are worthy of our compassion and understanding.

I do not believe, particularly after reading your articles, that many adult women today who consent to an abortion do so flippantly or casually. For those who do have an abortion there will often be severe mental strains and the need for extensive counseling both before and after. Abortion is not pleasant. We all know that. And the decision to go through one is not easy for any conscientious person.

I can't believe in what has been called "abortion on demand" but I do believe that there should be more understanding given to women who are faced with this awesome and traumatic decision. If a woman has gone through this terrible time of decision, I don't believe we should continue to condemn her. She has already suffered enough and may suffer some more.

To me, the Christian stance is not to condemn her, even if we don't agree that Jesus demonstrated this kind of forgiving spirit toward Mary Magdalene, the woman at the well, and the woman caught in the act of adultery.

All had offended the moral code of their day. "I came that they may have life and have it abundantly" John 10:10.

And one more thing. As a man who will never have to go through the trauma, or possible danger of childbirth, and who will never have to decide whether or not to have an abortion, I don't feel that I am in any position to decide for a woman that she should not have an abortion. As a Christian minister, I would rather try to counsel her to come to a responsible decision which she has seriously thought through, and once she has decided, to then help her live with that decision.

Thank you for trying to raise our sensitivities to a very emotional and difficult and controversial subject.

'Gate memo filing asked

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Counsel for the Watergate coverup defendants Wednesday asked the Supreme Court to allow filing of a special memorandum dealing with a news report about the justices' secret vote on their appeals.

Lawyers for former Attorney General John Mitchell and former White House aide H.R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman said they would like to have until May 7 to prepare of an additional paper spelling out the report's possible impact on their rights.

Nina Totenberg, a reporter for National Public Radio, reported last week that the justices at their routine conference on April 15 voted 5 to 3 to reject the three appeals.

The report said that since four votes are required for acceptance, Chief Justice Warren Burger was holding up the cases in the hope of winning a fourth vote.

The court did not act on the cases on Monday of this week, when other orders were issued.

Mitchell, Haldeman and Ehrlichman were convicted of conspiracy, obstruction of justice and giving false testimony under oath in an effort to cover up White House involvement in the 1972 break-in at national Democratic headquarters in the Watergate complex.

The Totenberg report said the three members of the court voting to review the cases — Chief Justice Warren Burger and Justices Harry Blackmun and Lewis Powell — were concerned with the refusal of District Judge John Sirica to disqualify himself from presiding at the trial.

All three men were appointed to the court by President Richard Nixon.

Regulators note tactics

Editor, Times-News:

The recent blast in the press by a spokesman for J.R. Simplot Co. regarding flouting the rates proposed by Intermountain Gas Co. should be noted as much for what it did not say as for what it did. Especially when the old sob story trite approach of industry impediment and bearing an undue proportion of utility revenue requirements is concerned. These tactics have been worn paper thin and are fooling very few regulatory commissions who have granted residential customers priority I status.

The most absurd part of the article was when he interred such rate reform could impede the growing and processing of fewer potatoes in Idaho, and failed to mention that his company, or its principal owners will grow hundreds of acres of potatoes near the Columbia River and have trucked thousands of tons of Washington or Oregon grown potatoes for processing in plants located in Idaho.

Just how does this help the Idaho potato farmer? ? ?

This brings to mind the outcry made when the Idaho Public Utilities Commission refused to allow the purchase of the over-priced Zama Gas for boiler fuel when these customers would not agree to pay the extra cost of the gas in case they did not use the full allotment purchased by Intermountain Gas or to pay the cost differential for Zama Gas to make up Intermountain's revenue shortfall.

Another important point regarding the natural gas situation in our area is that Northwest Pipeline has never received its full contract allocation of Canadian gas for some mysterious reason, but now Northwest pipeline will receive an additional 258 million cubic feet daily, and of course Intermountain Gas will receive its share of this extra gas.

Idaho taxpayers are fortunate to have public utility Commissioners who can see through all the foibles, if not outright chicanery of energy suppliers; also who will reasonably protect the interests of the residential as well as the small commercial users of the energy coming under their Idaho jurisdiction.

Grain sale to Lebanon

BEIRUT (UPI) — Prime Minister Sallim al Hoss and U.S. Ambassador Richard Parker Monday signed an agreement under which the United States will provide Lebanon with $72 million worth of wheat and rice, the U.S. Embassy announced.

The United States is financing the shipments with a low-interest loan, and the Lebanese government is to use proceeds from the sale of the grain to rebuild the country's agriculture after two years of civil war, an embassy spokesman said.

He said the agreement was part of a board aid agreement under which the United States has also made a $5 million grant to help rebuild the port of Beirut, destroyed in months of fighting.

Powell denies screaming

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Press Secretary Jody Powell says he does not scream at President Carter. In fact, he says, the idea "boggles the mind."

Newsweek magazine has a special report on Carter in which Powell is described as a close confidant of Carter. It quotes an insider as saying Powell is "the only person I know who screams at him."

Powell told reporters that anyone with any knowledge of Carter's style "knows very well that one of his outstanding characteristics is his ability to ... get your attention without raising his voice."

Wrigley heirs named

CHICAGO (UPI) — Jelen Wrigley, widow of Philip K. Wrigley, owner of the Chicago Cubs and the Wrigley Chewing Gum Co., has named half of his $60.3 million estate, attorneys said Wednesday.

Wrigley's son, William, filed suit to be appointed executor of the estate, which includes $60 million in personal assets and $350,000 in real estate.

Also named as beneficiaries were William; daughters, Ada W. Schreiner, Mary Richard, Wash., and Dorothy W. Chaney, Scottsdale, Ariz.; grandchildren and the University of Southern California.

Wrigley was 72 at the age of 82.

Brown pushes gun law

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Former California Gov. Edmund G. "Pat" Brown Wednesday announced he is forming a new lobbying group to press for a federal law against possession of pistols.

Brown, father of the present governor, said the group, The Coalition for Hangan Control, would not oppose possession of rifles and shotguns, but would press for a law limiting possession of pistols to police, military and members of licensed gun clubs.

He said the chances for passage of such a law soon are dim, and that members should figure it will take 10 years to accomplish.

Demo caps reserve units

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — U.S. military reserve units are useless as long as the money they cost the government, Rep. Pete Stark said Wednesday.

Reserve units are "costing us $100 million a year and doing nothing except sit and play pool and drink beer and put in their time so they get big and fat," he said on a radio interview show, saying reserve units are "physically and morally bankrupt."

"There are no military reserve units in the United States that could fight at the end of a tough weekend."

Horowitz plans performance

NEW YORK (UPI) — Pianist Vladimir Horowitz will perform with an orchestra for the first time since 1953 when he celebrates the 50th anniversary of his debut in the United States on Jan. 8, 1928. It was on Wednesday.

The 72-year-old pianist will play Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 2 with the New York Philharmonic, conducted by Leonard Bernstein, music director of the Philadelphia Orchestra. Horowitz will perform here at Carnegie Hall on Jan. 12, 1978.

Doctors remain puzzled over youngster's recovery

SEATTLE (UPI) — Three years ago, Cheryl Fellows of Pasco, Wash., was struck with a rare form of cancer — one so deadly her doctors knew of no one who had survived it.

Now doctors say Cheryl, 9, may have it beat, although they are still monitoring her condition closely at Seattle's Children's Hospital.

The doctors have a number of medical theories on what has happened, at least for the time being, the highly malignant cancer. Her mother is certain.

"I feel nobody has done this but God," Marva Fellows said. "He guided the hand of the surgeon. And all the people at the hospital have been wonderful. A great weight has lifted."

Dr. Robert Schaller, who performed six of Cheryl's eight operations, said "She may be the only survivor in the world" of the rare cancer.

Cheryl's disease began as an embryonic teratoma of the ovary. The tumor had one type of cell only, with the potential for developing into any kind of body tissue.

Early surgery, first at Oklahoma City, and later at the Seattle hospital, plus every known combination of chemotherapy failed.

"We really gave up on her," said Schaller. "We had tried everything that's available."

Schaller and Dr. Ron Chard, chemotherapist, decided to try one thing more — the experimental new drug VM26. The tumors stopped growing.

But after seven months of weekly injections, the doctors had to discontinue use of the drug because of side effects. The tumors began to grow again.

"That's when we decided to do more surgery," Schaller said.

In February, he removed four massive sections packed in Cheryl's abdomen from her pelvis to diaphragm — one more than 10 inches in diameter. One kidney and her ovaries also were removed.

"It seemed hopeless when we started the operation," Schaller said. "All the internal organs were stuck to the tumors."

But the doctors discovered the tumors had changed from malignant — cancerous — to benign.

The operation was a success, although Cheryl still has a tumor in the chest area and some microscopic remains of the initial highly malignant cells.

"We decided not to remove the chest tumor because it hasn't been growing," Schaller said.

Schaller said "the most

City to get their goat

DALLAS (UPI) — Nanny is gentle and neat, popular with kids in the neighborhood, and great at keeping the lawn trimmed.

But a neighbor apparently decided the Green family's goat just was not a proper pet and blew the whistle on her. The city told the Greens they had until Friday to get rid of Nanny.

Molly Green contends that's going to break the hearts of her 6-year-old son and 8-year-old daughter, not to mention what it's going to do to her husband, Tommy, who suffers from asthma.

Nanny cuts the lawn for him, a task that worsens his asthmatic condition. Just the smell of cut grass, Mrs. Green said, sends him to medication and use of a breathing machine.

"The thing that really upset us was that exactly one year ago I called up the city and asked them about keeping a goat and explained that Tommy couldn't trim the lawn because of his asthma," Mrs. Green said.

"They said — and these are their exact words — 'You can have anything but a pig.'"

That settled it for the Greens. They bought Nanny for $20 at a flea market and brought her home.

"And all the children on the block have fallen in love with her," Mrs. Green said. "She's exceptionally clean — cleaner than a dog. She doesn't smell. She just grazes all day long and hasn't bothered anybody."

Except that one disgruntled neighbor.

"This particular person, bless her heart, she's just a loner and doesn't get along too well. If something doesn't hit her just right, well ... I don't even think she knows that I know it was her that complained."

The complaint brought health inspector A.L. Prather to the Oak Cliff residence. He told them that under a city ordinance farm animals require three acres of ground, except for horses, which need only one-third of an acre.

Newest idea may work

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A new phrase is emerging in the lexicon of code words that seem to trigger fear, hope and anger in the Middle East. It's "a Palestinian state in cooperation with Jordan" and it may have been the key in the talks between King Hussein and President Carter this week.

It is an ingenious idea which appears to satisfy Egypt, Israel and Jordan. Syria has not expressed its view, and the Palestine Liberation Organization is apparently opposed. But anything accepted by three major adversaries in the Middle East must be looked at carefully and long, and that is what is now occurring.

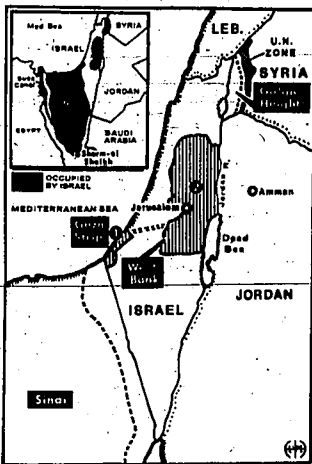

The plan was first proposed publicly by Hussein March 15, 1972, when he suggested restructuring his country into two autonomous regions, Transjordan and the West Bank.

The Gaza strip, which lies on the Mediterranean at the eastern end of the Sinai would be included, probably connected to the West Bank area (the Biblical Judea) by a land corridor through Israeli territory.

Although it would have its own police force, the Palestinian mini-state would not have a separate army nor any heavy weapons of its own. The government in Amman would be responsible for defense and foreign affairs.

The state, as Hussein described it, would be called the United Arab Kingdom.

At first, the Israelis were cool to the idea, but they have since come to see its benefits.

Under study

NEWEST Palestinian state idea would restructure Jordan into two autonomous regions, Transjordan and the West Bank. The Gaza Strip (1) would be included, probably linked to the West Bank (2) by a land corridor through Israeli territory. (UPI)

It would not be the end, and for a Palestinian homeland without the danger of a Palestinian army, few miles from Israel's capital.

The PLO members opposed, seeing it as a poor substitute for the dream of a "secular, democratic state of Palestine," which would presumably include all of the present state of Israel.

The territory which would be included in the confederated mini-state amounts to about 16 per cent of the area the Palestinians think of as Palestine.

There are now nearly 3 million Palestinians in the Middle East, almost as many as the total population of Jordan (which includes about 700,000 Palestinians). A separate state would mean the Palestinians would not be able to take over all of Jordan by means of the ballot box.

During the talks between Hussein and Carter, administration sources said, the discussion centered on how the state would be set up.

Hussein gave two hints of that discussion when he said, in a speech at American University, the establishment of the state would depend on the Palestinians exercising their right of self-determination.

This would mean, sources say, that after a plan for settlement is agreed, the Israelis would withdraw from the West Bank and the Gaza strip and there would be international supervised elections in the new Palestinian homeland.

Palestinians forced to leave their homeland, but who do not want to return to a state that will be small and dependent on Jordan, will be compensated financially. How much compensation remains to be worked out, but the United States has agreed in the past to contribute generously to such a program.

The plan is a complicated compromise which does not totally please anybody. But it comes close enough to give a new spark of hope to the Middle East negotiations.

Party flack?

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev has been issued membership card No. 1 in the Soviet Journalists' Union. Card No. 1 belonged to Lenin.

The official Soviet news agency Tass reported Brezhnev had received the card in a dispatch headlined "True to Leninist Tradition."

S. Africa outbreak subsides

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — The sprawling black shantytown of Soweto was reported calm today following the first serious outbreak of unrest in several months, which police broke up with shotguns and tear gas.

Three of about 2,000 students demonstrating against rent increases in the black township were injured by shotgun blasts Wednesday and were admitted to the black-only hospital, Police Chief Brig. Jan Visser said. A man and a woman were arrested.

Officials said the students were back in school today and police reported bus and rail commuter services were operating normally. The streets were quiet.

Visser said 47 blacks were arrested during the demonstration Wednesday and would appear in court today on charges of public violence and theft.

He said students tried to have a peaceful demonstration "but they were joined by (so-called) black thugs and looters, and then it becomes not so peaceful."

Oil price talks open

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Venezuelan President Carlos Andres Perez and Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi began talks today on ways to resolve the oil price dispute among members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Perez is on a tour of the Middle East to persuade OPEC members to agree on a single price for oil.

The talks opened at the Shah's Naqar Palace in the north of the city.

Tehran newspapers said the Shah would say Perez's offer to find a compromise between the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries members that raised oil prices 5 percent Jan. 1 and those that demand that increase and plan another 5 percent hike July 1.

Amin back in Zaire for aid talks

KINSHASA, Zaire (UPI) — Uganda President Idi Amin flew to Zaire today for a second meeting with President Mobutu Sese Seko concerning the government's fight against a rebel invasion in Shaba Province, the government news agency Azapa said.

Azapa said it was "understood" Amin would be bringing food supplies for Mobutu's front-line troops.

A Uganda radio report monitored in Nairobi today told of Amin's trip, but also said a "Ugandan suicide striking force" left for Zaire today to bolster the Zairean and 1,500 Moroccan troops.

Amin made a surprise visit to Kinshasa a week ago and promised aid for Mobutu in the fight against Katangan rebels who swarmed across the Angolan border nearly eight weeks ago, winning a large chunk of territory in Shaba, the copper-rich province formerly named Katanga.

Amin's second visit comes after Mobutu's forces regained lost ground in the southern province, including the key railroad town of Mushiashala, which had been Zaire's military headquarters before the rebels seized it March 25.

Western diplomatic sources reported today that the Zairean advance seemed to have bogged down some 35 miles west of Mushiashala because of lack of supplies.

The Zaireans and Mobutuans are meeting little or no resistance in their battle against a phantom enemy, the sources said.

The sources said Mobutu's tour of the front had caused a major problem for the troops because most of the logistical efforts were devoted to his movements. Thus, front-line troops advancing along the one road and rail link to the Angolan border were having to wait for supplies.

There also seemed to have been little progress by a force based in Kasaji, which was told a week ago to head south to Kapanga, possibly also because of lack of supplies.

Eight American missionaries were in Kapanga and none has been heard from directly for more than a week.

A Western source, however, said Zairean missionaries 60 miles to the east had received a message from them saying they were all alive and well.

Wednesday, Mobutu, slipping champagne with his military leaders, held talks with Nigerian mediator Joseph Garba in Kinshasa.

He showed Garba Soviet military equipment he said was captured from rebel invaders. Mobutu has repeatedly charged the invasion was backed by the Soviet Union and Cuba. Both nations have denied the charges.

Viet sets eye on US fund aid

PARIS (UPI) — Vietnamese Premier Phan Van Dong said today he is "optimistic" that the coming talks with the United States in Paris will begin a new era in their two countries' relationship.

Dong's aides later told UPI that Hanoi will demand in the talks, opening next Tuesday, that the Carter administration abide by the Nixon administration's pledge to grant Vietnam $3.5 billion in reconstruction aid.

A promise put into cold storage after North Vietnam's invasion of the South in 1975.

Bruised up by France's decision to give hard-pressed, war-ravaged Vietnam help worth $264 million, Dong told a news conference he was looking forward to a successful conclusion of the talks with the Americans aimed at normalizing their relations.

The news conference was held at the end of a four-day official visit Dong made to France. He will be staying on for a two-day private visit.

"We will be discussing all kind of problems," Dong said when asked about the coming talks. "I am optimistic about the successful result of the talks."

Nguyen Co Thach, a Vietnamese Deputy Foreign Minister, later said that Vietnam will be represented at the bilateral parity by Pham Hien, another deputy foreign minister.

Hien and the U.S. negotiator, Richard Holbrooke, Assistant Secretary of State for East Asian and Pacific Affairs, will be holding the talks alternately in their two Paris embassies.

Both men were associated with the 1968-1973 Vietnam peace talks.

"We expect the United States to abide by their pledge to provide $3.5 billion in aid" for reconstruction of Vietnam, Thach said.

Senior citizen bazaars set

TWIN FALLS — When a group of senior citizens make up their collective minds to do something it usually gets done. Senior citizens of Twin Falls are going to move into their new home but they need some community help.

Saturday the group from Twin Falls Senior Citizens Center will be holding two bazaars in an effort to increase their building fund and make the new home a reality.

The bazaars will be underway simultaneously at the Lynwood Mall and the Downtown Mall from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Senior citizens are asking shoppers to check their displays for needed items during those hours.

Many of the seniors have been making items for the bazaars since last Christmas. They will be offering hand-crafted jewelry, needlework, novelty items for use around the home and for gifts. In addition there will be many home cooked food items made from long time favorite recipes.

About a year ago the Twin Falls Senior Citizens began trying to find a building adequate for their needs. The present building at 421 2nd Ave. W. is too small for existing programs much less for any expansions, the organization members say.

In August of last year a possible building was located. This is more than three times the size of the existing facility. The building will be available through the community development project.

However, the seniors have been informed they must provide an overhead sprinkler system for fire protection before they will be allowed to occupy the structure. There will also have to be more chairs, tables and other furnishings as well as kitchen equipment purchased by the seniors themselves in order to utilize the new building.

The Saturday bazaars are part of a long range fund raising program under taken last August. Since then the seniors have been holding numerous fund raising events. Each has helped swell the building fund, but the goal is still not in sight.

In addition to the seniors who use the center, programs provide meals for those unable to leave their homes and a "dial-a-ride" bus service to take seniors to shopping areas, doctors or even just visit a shut-in friend.

In the new center, the old Chateau building, there will be room for dining, reading and conversation rooms, craft room, a pool room, wood working shop, dancing area, kitchen and offices.

Several other fund raising events are planned including weekly pinocle parties each Wednesday evening at the center, dances twice a month and special craft sales. Each Wednesday is crafts day at the center. Women are making patch work quilts and other items which can be sold for the building fund.

Tough oil tanker rules proposed

BOSTON (UPI) — The world soon must convert to solar power, but in the meantime the danger of using fossil fuels like coal and oil must be faced, according to Jacques Cousteau, one of the world's leading experts on marine life.

At a news conference on one of Boston Harbor's picturesque islands, Cousteau Tuesday urged Congress to impose stringent regulations on oil tankers, most of which sail under so-called flags of convenience, thereby eluding the higher safety standards imposed by the United States.

"When you destroy nature, people are the first victims," he said.

Cousteau said he was not opposed to offshore oil drilling, provided it was part of a program which would lead to increased use of solar and other alternative power sources.

Later, in an address to a joint session of the Massachusetts Legislature, Cousteau said "enough energy — equivalent to 1,500 nuclear power plants — could be obtained from solar energy." The United States developed the technology to do so by the year 2000.

Meanwhile, he said, massive changes also are necessary in the way oil is transported.

"Unfortunately the safety of oil tankers is left in the hands of the oil companies," he said. "It must be regulated."

He claimed oil companies were saving money in oil transportation costs at the expense of U.S. jobs. Ships which sail under flags of convenience usually have foreign crews which work for very low wages, he said.

"A shoemaker can buy a captain's license for $150 in a flag of convenience country like Liberia or Panama. Cousteau told the lawmakers. "Twenty oil tankers were totally lost last year," he said. "Of these, 10 were Liberian with American shipowners."

He urged Congress to force tankers to fly the flags of their true owners.

Cousteau was in Boston to tout a planned May 14th "Involvement Day." The day-long conference will include a series of open forums on topics affecting the environment.

Election officials score instant voter signup

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Local election officials complained Wednesday that President Carter's plan for instant voter registration will trigger long lines at the polls, impose financial burdens on local government and increase voter fraud.

Despite the complaints, the proposal was generally backed by election officials from Maryland, Michigan, New York and California who testified on the plan before the House Administration Committee.

The Carter plan allows a person to register and vote just by showing up on election day with a driver's license or other identification.

"There will be congestion at most polling places because the unregistered person will first have to be registered," said James Chiavaroli, commissioner of the Monroe County (Rochester) N.Y. Board of Elections.

He said he was also concerned that false identification cards would be widely used.

"They will use empty lots, empty homes or stores as addresses," he warned. "This practice will flourish in political jurisdictions where one party is firmly entrenched."

Bernard J. Apol, Michigan State Director of Elections, said he supported the plan, but warned it will require additional administrators and voting equipment. He said the bill should encourage early registration to keep lines on election day as short as possible.

Leonard Panish, registrar-recorder of Los Angeles County, said funds in the bill were not sufficient. He said the bill would cost the county $3 million more for congressional elections, but provided only $500,000.

In earlier hearings, the proposal drew strong criticism from James Harby, chairman of the Chicago Board of Election Commissioners, and Cook County Clerk Stanley Kasper.

Yellowstone aides mum about report

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (UPI) — Park officials are remaining silent on a report concerning the concessionaire at Yellowstone National Park until a final, edited version is released May 6.

Acting park superintendent Jerry Phillips said Wednesday a copyrighted New York Times story based on a preliminary version of the report was "embarrassing," although it had not created any immediate problems between the NPS and the concessionaire, Yellowstone Park Co.

The copyrighted New York Times story said a study by a National Park Service Team was highly critical of the Yellowstone Park Co., contending the firm was concerned only with making money and not about serving visitors.

"It's unfortunate and a little unfair to those involved that this got out before we had a chance to give it a final review," said Phillips. "We are reviewing the final version at the time to make sure we are not putting out something that would be detrimental, unfair or unlawful. The final version will be edited in light of the Freedom of Information Act and to protect rights of privacy."

The article said the report found decried, unpleasant and potentially unhealthy conditions in facilities operated by Yellowstone Park Co.

The Times said a portion of the report concluded, "visitors are not getting the same quality of service that would be received in most other national parks."

John Amerman, president and general manager of Yellowstone Park Co., said he had no immediate comment on the report.

Phillips also declined to comment further on the report. He said the final version of the report would be released by the NPS in Washington May 6.

"Asked whether the report would result in changes between the NPS and Yellowstone Park Co., Phillips said there were "always changes being made."

"We are trying to work with the concessionaire at all times to improve services and this will continue," he said. "Beyond that, I would not care to comment."

The Times said the report it obtained cited unsanitary conditions in restaurants at the park, concluded that lodgings are in poor repair and said company employees are underpaid, badly trained and fed in dirty cafeterias. The Times said the report concluded that as a result of the conditions, company employees are "often rude or indifferent to guests and impede bad reputation to Yellowstone National Park in general."

Yellowstone Park Co. is operating the concessions at the park under a 30-year agreement signed in 1966.

12% Head Start enrollees handicapped, HEW says

WASHINGTON (UPI) — More than 12 per cent of the children enrolled in preschool Head Start programs last year were handicapped, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare said today.

Individual findings ranged from a low of 2.85 per cent of the Head Start children in the Trust Territory of the Pacific to 38.05 per cent in North Dakota.

Full-year Head Start programs last year included 36,671 handicapped children, or 12.2 per cent of the 298,602 enrolled children, HEW said Congress.

HEW released an annual report on the status of handicapped children in the Head Start preschool enrichment program for low income families.

"The premise behind the Head Start handicapped effort is that children are more alike than they are different," the report said.

"Handicapped children, like (other) children, learn, play and need the organized support of parents and caregivers."

The report said enrollment of handicapped children last year increased 2 per cent over 1975 and now exceeds a 1972 Congressional order that at least 10 per cent of Head Start children should be handicapped.

Head Start enrollment by states is still short of a Congressional requirement, however, HEW said.

Speech impaired children represent 48 per cent of the enrolled handicapped children. Other handicapped Head Start youngsters are health or developmentally impaired 16 per cent; physically handicapped 8 per cent; seriously emotionally disturbed 6 per cent; hearing impaired 6 per cent; mentally retarded 6 per cent; learning disabled 4 per cent; learning impaired 4 per cent; deaf 0.6 per cent, and blind 0.3 per cent.

Merchants hauled to court on century-old state law

BEVERLY, Mass. (UPI) — Representatives of two major discount drug chains will be in court Friday to explain why they should not be prosecuted for displaying condoms and selling them without requiring prescriptions.

Summonses were issued last week against the Consumer Value Store and the Big L discount store, based on the state's century-old Crimes Against Chastity law, at the request of Essex County Special Assistant Dist. Atty. Paul Cunney. They were ordered to show cause why criminal complaints should not be issued.

"There should be some discretion where condoms are displayed. They shouldn't be hanging next to candy bars," Cunney said last week.

Birth control advocate Bill Baird said he would enter Big L today with a cardboard display of birth control devices and challenge police to arrest him.

Baird said he spent three months in jail 10 years ago for showing a display of birth control pills to a crowd of 2,000 at Boston University. The U.S. Supreme Court declared the law unconstitutional on March 22, 1972, he said.

"I promise if they do arrest me that I will sue the police department and every public official connected with this for all they are worth," he said.

"I don't understand the whole thing myself," Denise

Karnholz, manager of CVS at the North Beverly Shopping Plaza, said Wednesday after she received her summonses. "I've also had customers come in the store and tell me it's ridiculous."

Ex-Nazi to face US order

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Andrija Artukovic, a former Nazi wanted in Yugoslavia on charges of murdering thousands of Serbs, Jews and gypsies, faces deportation within 30 days, the Los Angeles Times reported today.

Immigration and Naturalization Service officials told the Times that an order preventing Artukovic's deportation for 18 years will be removed unless he can justify it continuance within 30 days.

Artukovic, now 76, of Seal Beach, Calif., avoided deportation for more than 20 years by claiming that he would be politically persecuted if he were returned to Yugoslavia, a communist country.

Yugoslavia has been seeking since 1951 to extradite Artukovic, who served as security minister of the Nazi-controlled World War II Croatian Republic. The government charged the Croatian government with killing 750,000 persons.

In fighting deportation, Artukovic cited immigration laws stating deportation may be withheld when the alien would be subject to persecution on account of race, religion or political opinion in the country to which he would be deported.

Plans made

Johnny Horizon Day May 7

TWIN FALLS — The eighth annual Johnny Horizon Cleanup Day in Twin Falls County May 7 will have the support and assistance from about 25 organizations.

William L. Chancey, county commissioner, and Don Lovett, Burley, Bureau of Land Management, met Tuesday night with representatives of youth and adult groups, city government and state and federal agency representatives.

"We are pretty well going to follow the same plans we have used in the past several years.

Our participating organizations are reporting in and saying they will work the same area as last year and there isn't much of a problem organizing," Chancey said.

About 25 persons attended the organizational meeting Tuesday night and will meet again next Tuesday to make a final report on number of workers and equipment items they will have available.

Buhl schools will close on Friday before the Johnny Horizon Saturday to allow students to participate in a clean-up of school property, park and other city areas. The Buhl Jaycees, under the direction of Candy Duran, will direct the Saturday campaign to complete areas in and around Buhl which are not covered by the students.

In Castleford, the FFA Chapter, assisted by other youth organizations will head the cleanup.

Chancey said others who are ready to assist include the Boy Scouts, Twin Falls Grange, three churches, including the Immanuel Lutheran, Methodist and LDS in Twin Falls, the U.S. Forest Service, Twin Falls City, Twin Falls Canal Co., National Guard with two large trucks and a number of men, about 75 persons from O'Leary Junior High School, Job's Daughters, Camp Fire Girls, and in Murtaugh the Water Ski Club officials are working their area.

The "troops" will mobilize at 8:30 a.m. in their various battle stations, Chancey said, and will work until noon. Lunch will be served free to all volunteers at the Filer Fair Grounds and at the LDS Church in Murtaugh.

Man follows Lindy's route

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI) — Fifty years after aviator Charles Lindbergh flew his "Spirit of St. Louis" to Paris, the transatlantic trip in a single-engine airplane still is a grand adventure even to the most practiced flier.

"Incredible, absolutely incredible," says attorney Phillip D. Hardberger, a former Strategic Air Command pilot and a Lindbergh buff who next month will embark on the trip in a one-prop job of his own.

Hardberger plans to follow Lindbergh's route and reach Paris on May 21, the Golden Anniversary of the pioneer aviator's triumphant arrival in France.

Hardberger, 42, president of the San Antonio Trial Lawyers Association, will leave in a Belanca Viking airplane on May 14 on the 14,000-mile solo flight.

The lawyer said since he read Lindbergh's book, "Spirit of St. Louis," 10 years ago, flying the same route has been an obsession with him.

"There are several books about North Atlantic flying and I've read them all, I think," Hardberger said. "There's an air museum up in Gander, Newfoundland, and I flew up here three years ago to look at the people who made the crossing."

"There have been several since Lindbergh," he said. "I'm by no means the second or the third. There have been a fair number through the years, but I'll say this, it's still a pretty unusual undertaking in a single-engine plane."

Hardberger plans to fly from San Antonio to New York City, then on to Newfoundland, Greenland, Iceland, Ireland and Paris where he will check into the Ritz Hotel which put Lindbergh up in style 50 years ago.

He will dub his airplane, which has been modified to carry almost twice its normal load of fuel, the "Spirit of San Antonio," lettered on the fuselage in both English and Spanish.

Hardberger says his flight will be somewhat less daring than Lindbergh's because the Federal Aviation Administration would not approve a flight directly from Newfoundland to Paris.

"That's for fuel purposes. The FAA did not want me to put on enough fuel to go straight across, because I would have had to overgross the airplane something terrible."

Lindbergh didn't have to worry about the FAA.

Hardberger estimates it will cost him $1,500 to $2,000 to retrace the Lindbergh flight — twice the price of an airline ticket.

"It's a personal challenge. It's something I always wanted to do," he said. "About this time of my life, and I think probably of most people's lives, you start thinking about getting old. When my hair's gotten a lot thinner than it is now, I'd like to sit back and say that, by golly, I did this. I think it'll mean a lot to me."

Hussein agrees to peace proposal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — King Hussein of Jordan said Wednesday that he would go along with a Mideast peace proposal to create a confederation between his country and a homeland for Palestinian Arabs on the west bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip.

At the end of two days of talks with President Carter and other U.S. officials, Hussein said his visit "heightens my hopes" and he is daring to think of the day when weapons can be put down in the Middle East.

In a speech prepared for a ceremony at American University, Hussein said Jordan accepts the idea of a confederation with a homeland for Palestinian Arabs on the west bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip, land now controlled by Israel.

This territory would keep its own identity in the confederation with Jordan. Hussein said Tuesday the confederation idea "appears to be emerging" in his talks. He told a news conference Jordan would not yield any territory on the river's east bank, and said the Palestinians must retain the right of self determination.

In the speech, Hussein said: "We in Jordan support the right of the Palestinian people to self determination in their own homeland. We are ready to establish strong ties with the Palestinian national entity on a voluntary and brotherly basis."

The King was optimistic as he accepted an honorary degree. "My current visit to Washington heightens my hopes. I dare to contemplate that soon weapons can be put down," said Hussein.

"I want to hear the tracks of bulldozers, not tanks; the footsteps of travelers, not troops."

Although both Hussein and Carter have cautioned against "overly optimistic" expectations of a quick peace, the President apparently has been less hopeful than the King.

Political prisoners meet

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (UPI) — Imprisoned opposition leaders met under guard Wednesday to decide whether to negotiate with Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto on ending nationwide political violence which has killed more than 300.

At least eight leaders of the Pakistan National Alliance met at a government rest house. Only one, Acting Alliance President Pir Of Pagaro, has not been jailed by Bhutto.

"The only demand is for his (Bhutto's) resignation," Pir Of Pagaro said before the meeting. "The other actions will follow."

He was alluding to his party's demands for new national and provincial elections. The opposition has claimed ballot rigging in the March 7 voting that gave an overwhelming victory to the ruling Pakistani People's party.

Significantly, retired Air Marshal Asghar Khan, who led the National Alliance election campaign, was one of those brought from his prison cell for Wednesday's meeting.

Khan had previously insisted there should be no consultations with Bhutto. His presence indicated a possible new opposition strategy of forging a united stand first and then negotiating with the prime minister.

Following last month's elections, the National Alliance launched a nationwide protest campaign, and subsequent rioting and political clashes killed an estimated 300 persons and injured more than 1,000, according to opposition sources.

The violence has crippled the nation's economy, virtually paralyzing trade and industry and sharply curtailing communications.

The government, cracking down hard, has declared martial law in four major cities, arrested opposition leaders and supporters and imposed censorship on some news.

The opposition has said little about this Saturday's planned "long march" to Rawalpindi, 15 miles south of here, and a mass demonstration outside Bhutto's house there.

If a settlement is reached in the next day or two, the march could be scrapped. Otherwise, the government is considered certain to take steps to stop it.

There were no further reports of violence Wednesday.

N test 'thumps' Nevada

YUCCA FLAT, Nev. (UPI) — The second U.S. nuclear test of the year was detonated 650 feet underground Wednesday, causing "quite a thump" at the test site but apparently going unfeel 70 miles away in Las Vegas.

The federal Energy Research and Development Administration said no radiation escaped from the test which was detonated at 8 a.m. EDT (9 a.m. MDT).

An ERDA spokesman said the test went as expected and was a "success."

The earth above ground zero leaped upward when the nuclear device exploded, causing "quite a thump," according to observers on the perimeter of the test site. The observers said they could feel ground motion but were unable to determine its direction.

Two helicopters circled ground zero at detonation, one with radiation monitoring equipment and the other with closed circuit television cameras.

There were no reports of the test being felt in the Las Vegas gambling resort 70 miles south of the test site. Construction workers on high rise buildings had been notified to find a secure place to stand until after the test.

Miners in the area of the test site also were warned to be "above ground" at blast time.

Carter considered doctor fee ceilings

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The administration considered a proposal to impose ceilings on doctors' fees, but dropped the idea, officials said today.

"A staff proposal was briefly considered in February and dropped," said Eileen Shanahan, spokeswoman for the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. "There is no such proposal under consideration in HEW and the White House."

Stuart Eizenstat, White House domestic adviser, said, "We are not seriously considering it. It may be that some junior person is looking into it, but not seriously at this time," he said.

The New York Times reported in today's edition the Carter administration is studying a proposal to impose ceilings on doctors' fees. The newspaper said a planning document prepared by health policy specialists at HEW six weeks ago urged Carter to "jawbone" to get doctors to cut their bills.

Carter on Monday proposed a ceiling of 8 percent a year on hospital price increases. His plan drew an immediate attack from the hospital industry, which said patient services would be cut if the President succeeded in limiting price hikes to 8 percent.

Theft, waste, lack of readiness found in Israeli army

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Government investigators found large-scale theft, waste and lack of preparedness in Israeli army units, the comptroller general said today.

"There was a significant lack of various items of equipment," Comptroller Yitzhak Nibenzahl said in his report, released less than a month before the Israeli general elections.

Emergency depots were disorganized and personnel procedures slow and unproductive, the report said.

Spot checks of two infantry brigades found that drugs were missing from first-aid kits, armored equipment was suffering from exposure to bad weather and mobilization procedures did not work.

In one callup exercise in June, 1976, some 54 percent of reservists failed to check in to confirm they got their mobilization papers, the report said.

The air force was criticized for allowing high-ranking officers to use light planes for private flights home two or three times a week at government expense despite regular passenger flights over the same routes.

In response, military sources acknowledged inefficiencies but said internal accounting procedures had been increased greatly.

"There are shortcomings in the Israel Defense Forces and a great deal remains to be done," one source said.

But he noted that one of the brigades criticized for inefficiency had been cited for its high standard of readiness in a recent examination by the chief armaments officer.

The sources said the army will take the controller's report seriously.

A number of officers and men involved in laziness or pilfering have been punished, they said.

The controller also criticized the treasury for allowing the government to spend more than allowed in the budget and for failure to collect much of the money owed in income tax.

Idaho begins highway projects

SHOSHONE — Sixteen highway and bridge projects are under contract in Southern Idaho by the Idaho Transportation Department.

The projects represent a total cost in excess of $14 million.

Major projects include improvements on Interstate 80N, in addition to the $14 million in improvements, the $8.4 million Perrine Bridge is still under contract but scheduled for completion within a few days.

A $2.5 million project on I-180N is underway between Bliss and the Malad River. This includes roadway construction, drainage and a 397-foot steel underpass and a 212-foot pedestrian bridge on 4.94 miles of the Interstate. Miller Construction Co., Twin Falls, is the general contractor.

The contractor is completing roadway grading and preparing for a concrete deck on the steel underpass. Minor traffic interference can be expected.

Largest project in the Twin Falls area is the $1.3 million improvement on U.S. 93 between the Perrine Bridge and I-80N. Peter Kiewit Sons Co. is general contractor. Construction of the northbound lanes along a 2.3-mile section is underway with minor traffic interferences.

Another I-80 N project involves 3.28 miles of new construction and a 302-foot post tensioned concrete underpass between the Malad River east of Tuttle and the Railroad underpass. Western Construction Co. Boise, is contractor for the $2.29 million project. The project covers a total of 8.1 miles and includes parking area for the Malad Gorge State Park. Work has not started on the project, however.

Construction of roadway and surfacing of about 3 miles of roadway and parking area within the Malad Gorge State Park is also under contract to Western Construction for $2.85 million.

Construction of a bridge over Snake River on U.S. 30-30S represents another $1.6 million and is under contract to Miller Construction Co., Twin Falls.

The project, the Heyburn Bridge, also includes roadway and drainage structures approaching the 1,313-foot bridge which will be built of prestressed concrete.

Pillings are now being driven and bridge approaches are under construction. Controlled traffic can be anticipated by motorists.

Other projects are underway for parts of U.S. 93, I-80N and in Owyhee County 6.64 miles of

ISU's history museum begins visit on wheels

POCATELLO (ISU) — The Idaho State University Museum of Natural History will put exhibits on wheels to visit rural communities throughout the state during the coming school year.

The museum's "Hall of Discovery" is an 8 foot by 40 foot semi-trailer which will carry exhibits to Twin Falls as well as diverse places as Montpelier, Rexburg, Salmon, Caldwell, Coeur d'Alene and Sandpoint.

Plans are to make two-day stops at each community with a short course available to the public on the second day of each stop.

The "Hall of Discovery" is currently under construction, and Dr. David Wright, ISU Museum Director, hopes to have it available for its maiden voyage this fall.

"Initially we'll visit nearby places, such as area schools and businesses, to get feedback before we take the trailer on any long trips," he says.

Wright notes there is no existing means by which rural citizens can directly benefit from the collections and information gathered by the Museum.

"The museum is aware of the situation and recognizes its responsibility to provide public access to, and interpretation of, the collections it holds in the public trust," he says.

"There is currently no such program available in Idaho. To our knowledge this would be the first university-owned facility of this type in the United States," he says.

Two initial programs are planned. The first will be about early man in Idaho dating from about 15,000 years ago. The second will deal with the impact of the white man on both the natural environment and the Indians through successive periods, beginning with the fur trappers. The early man program will include objects relating to tool-making, bison hunting and butchering sites, and bones from extinct mammals used by early man.

This conservation effort is needed because electric supplies will be short this summer — if the present drought continues and reservoirs fail to fill.

Calling on individual customers, house-to-house and business-to-business, Idaho Power energy advisers are offering these and other helpful hints:

- Set heating thermostats back to 65 degrees during cold weather.

- Move air-conditioning thermostats up to 78 during hot weather.

- Reduce consumption of hot water for bathing and washing dishes and clothes.

- Install more insulation, weatherstripping and double-pane windows.

LOS ANGELES — Major energy savings may result from widespread use of the "controlled torque motor," according to its inventor, who said that it reduces electrical consumption by as much as 20 per cent while producing the same power output as conventional electrical motors.

Cravens L. Wanlass, an electrical engineer and former director of electronics research for the Philco Corp., developed the motor, which, he said, can be used in everything from household appliances to industrial installations.

Tests by the Southern California Edison Co. indicate that motors converted to the Wanlass design were 10 to 18 per cent more efficient than existing motors. He estimated that if half a billion electric motors were converted to his design, the United States could save at least a million barrels of oil a day.

The inventor said that in his design he moved away from the standard technology developed in the late 1800s by Nikola Tesla, a European researcher. Wanlass said that his motor used more capacitors, devices that store energy in the motor, than conventional motors. He added that he had made his motor more efficient by changing the way the copper wiring was wound.

Production of the new units may be years away, however. Wanlass said that he had shown his invention to several motor manufacturers, but they had turned him down because of a disagreement over an arrangement on confidentiality.

"I didn't want to give up any of my rights, to the process," he added.

Drought limits water, power

MOSCOW, Idaho (UPI) — Stephen Allred, Director of the Idaho Department of Water Resources, predicted this year's drought will force the Gem state and other Pacific Northwest States to endure mandatory curtailments in power and water use.

Stephen Allred, told the 1977 Idaho Water Conference he suspects most power companies will prefer turning to "rolling blackouts" to conserve energy this summer for use in the winter.

That means spot blackouts in different areas for, say, 24 hours at a time as a means of keeping other areas going.

Allred said it is possible to avoid such circumstances but he doubted from recent experience whether rolling blackouts could be avoided.

"Our first effort must be for voluntary curtailment. But we're not getting what we need."

Utilities in Washington and Oregon have been applying the same thing: the voluntary programs are not working.

Allred said new water data in Idaho released today shows more of the same and dramatizes further the seriousness of the situation.

Data shows no precipitation during month of April. The 30 day outlook has been the same the last 60 days.

"Average or above average precipitation is expected in May. I hope that's right, but it hasn't come to pass in the past two months. We'll just have to wait and see."

But Allred stressed it would take unheard of amounts of rain just to maintain. In other words, whether or not it rains cats and dogs during May will not affect the fact that there is 40 per cent of normal snowpack in the mountains which means 60 per cent or less water turning turbines and producing power for electricity and water for irrigation.

"There was three inches of snowmelt in the first two weeks of April in the Boise drainage. Most of it is soaking into the parched ground rather than running into streams."

"Satellite pictures show that below 5700 feet elevation, the ground throughout almost all of Idaho is already snow free."

"In the Clearwater drainage, the snowmelt is going on in all but highest elevation. That's a month earlier than normal. That's the runoff already occurring and no one is seeing the results."

Allred said if anything can be done it must be done this summer and it begins with individuals.

"Voluntary curtailment is the only way we could prevent shortages in the fall, when more demands will be made than there is power."

A rolling blackout wouldn't work in the winter because of the tremendous load shifts caused by switching on and off in areas."

He predicted the curtailments would also affect industrial users. This means jobs will be affected.

The Idaho Public Utilities Commission has scheduled a public hearing on the matter Monday in Boise.

Asked if the matter returned to normal by next year what the effect would be, Allred said "assuming the best, the reservoirs would probably be half full because of this year's severe drought."

"This year is the worst on record for lack of precipitation. Unfortunately, many droughts are followed by two to three years of more drought. Our policy will be to assume and prepare for the worst."

The water conference continues through Thursday. Other speakers were to include Myron Katz, Director of the Northwest Energy Policy Project.

Boise dam center opens

BOISE (UPI) — The Bureau of Reclamation announced today it will open the visitor center at the Boise River Diversion dam and powerplant this Friday.

Bob Brown, bureau project superintendent, said the facility will be open to the public at no admission charge from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. daily. He said a powerplant operator and interpretive signs will be available for information about the plant, located seven miles east of Boise adjacent to State Highway 21.

"The center had approximately 4,000 visitors during the 1976 visitation season," Brown said. The dam was constructed in 1908 to divert water into the New York Canal for irrigation purposes and the powerplant was put into operation in 1912 to supply power for the construction of Arrowrock dam.

Minico reappoints one commissioner

RUPERT — Minidoka County commissioners reappointed one zoning commission member Monday, but voted not to reappoint two others.

Elvira Richan was named to a new four-year term on the zoning commission. Henry Schodde and George Hedlin were not reappointed.

Commission Chairman Lyle Barton said he favored cutting the commission to a six-man board at this time.

Commissioners agreed to leave the spots open indefinitely. Commissioner Fred Maier said "commissioners could not later."

"If we decide to reappoint them or pick up a couple of new ones,"

Barton said, "These men are reappointed; they have done a good job for this county as long as possible could."

"But I wonder if, from time to time, we shouldn't make some changes and get some new horses in the race. We should get a little broader representation out of the county."

Commissioner Max Garner had held up reappointment of all three members in March. He said Monday he would "like to see the attitudes a little more individualized."

Referring to the zoning commission's action on the controversial proposed commercial park south of Paul, Garner commented that the members sat and looked at each other, waiting for someone to give an indication they could follow.

"The way I took it from Roy (Chairman Roy Honsinger) the other night, I think we're going to have some new appointments anyway," Maier said.

Both Maier and Garner said that Honsinger, Schodde and O.O. "Rick" Ulander apparently want to retire from the commission. They said Mrs. Richan, a recent appointee to the commission, wanted to be retained.

Registration begins for kindergarten

TWIN FALLS — Kindergarten registration will be held next week in Twin Falls.

Registration for all children who will be five years old on or before Oct. 15 will be held at elementary schools, Monday through Friday, May 2 through 6, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Parents should register their child and one person at the school the child will be attending.

Birth certificate and health records should be presented at enrollment.

Parents who need information on which school zone they should register their child in should call the school district office at 733-6900.

Any child who did not attend kindergarten this year but who will be six years old on or before Oct. 15 should be registered for first grade next week in the same manner that kindergartners are enrolled.

Rate increase causes CSI to cut power use

By GEORGE WILEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Facing an additional $15,000 to $16,000 in electricity costs next year, College of Southern Idaho officials are taking steps to cut down on power.

According to CSI President James L. Taylor, the college actually began restricting electricity use last year and was able to reduce consumption by about 27 percent under last year.

Part of the savings was achieved through a reduction in outside lighting of about 33 percent, Taylor said.

With a 9 percent hike in power bills now a certainly, however, the school is taking further steps to cut power use.

Taylor said the rate hike allowed Idaho Power Co. by the Idaho Public Utilities Commission last week will boost the college's electric bill to $15,000 to $16,000, bringing the total CSI electric bill next year to an estimated $180,000.

If Idaho Power is successful in achieving a rate hike close to 23 percent — the amount it had asked the IPUC to approve — the CSI bill could go to $200,000, Taylor added.

In minutes from an administrative meeting released as a memo to CSI staff last month, Taylor declared an emergency and outlined eight steps the college might take to cut down on power usage.

Those steps included curtailment of classes to four days per week, cutbacks in community service programs, budget cuts and reduction in campus activities.

Taylor said Monday he no longer thinks an emergency exists, and he added that many of the actions, such as program reductions and a four-day week, won't be taken.

"I do admit the memo may have overplayed the need for drastic action in an attempt to call to the staff's attention 'that we ourselves must effect economies in that (power) usage,'"

Taylor said further cutbacks in outside lighting at the school might prove hazardous or open the way for increased vandalism, but added the college will take several steps to cut electricity consumption.

Among those steps will be closing the school library on Saturdays next year. The college also plans to reduce weekend food service operations. Most food preparation will be completed by Friday, Taylor said, so that kitchens won't have to be completely fired up on weekends.

Students and faculty can also expect warmer classrooms this summer and chiller classrooms next winter.

Thermostats, set this winter at 68 degrees, will be lowered to 65 degrees next winter, Taylor said.

In addition, the college will keep air conditioning shut down this summer until 1 p.m. This will allow retention of cool morning air, with no artificial cooling before afternoon.

Buildings with minimum use will not be air conditioned at all, Taylor added.

Taylor said the college staff has also been instructed to shut down vocational equipment, and other power-draining machinery when it is not directly in use, Taylor said.

India, USSR call disarmament

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — India and the Soviet Union Wednesday called for total disarmament, including nuclear weapons, and the elimination of all foreign bases by the Indian Ocean. They also signed three agreements including a $300 million, 20-year Soviet loan.

The agreements and disarmament call came at the end of an official visit by Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko — the first by a ranking Kremlin member since the defeat of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi in national elections.

Gromyko conferred for three days with Prime Minister Morarji Desai, Foreign Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee and Indian leaders of the former opposition who assumed power after Mrs. Gandhi's defeat.

The Soviets, through the Indian Communist party, had supported Mrs. Gandhi's Congress Party in the elections.

Hours before flying home, Gromyko and Vajpayee signed the three agreements. One gives India a credit of $300 million for import of equipment for steel plants and coal mines, and other developmental projects of India's choice.

The credit is a soft loan, repayable in 20 years with a three-year grace period, and carries a nominal interest of 2.5 percent. It is the first credit given by the Soviet Union to India since the last general purpose loan of $350 million in 1968.

The second agreement finalizes arrangements for import of one million tons of Soviet crude oil in 1977.

The third agreement establishes of a 12-channel, all-weather, year-round communication link between New Delhi and Moscow, augmenting present facilities.

"The two sides reaffirm their determination to facilitate the achievement of general and complete disarmament, including nuclear disarmament, under effective international control," the communique said.

"The communique asked for the elimination of all 'existing foreign military bases from the Indian Ocean and the prohibition of new ones,' in a move to make the area a zone of peace."

Richard Lux, 35, a Marine Corps veteran whose glaucoma is service connected, told Bell current medication is not controlling his condition.

Glaucoma cases seek marijuana

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Their backgrounds were diverse, as were their ages and political views. Almost the only thing 13 people petitioning Attorney General Griffin Bell had in common was a disease they think marijuana might help cure.

"Dear Sir," read a letter written by Mrs. Ann R. Cron of Wichita, Kan., "I am a 62-year-old, retired because of glaucoma and arthritis. Marijuana has proved effective in treating glaucoma and should be made available to doctors for this purpose."

Each of the 13 petitioned Bell for open hearings aimed at reclassifying marijuana.

Marijuana now is classed as a Schedule I drug, meaning it has "high toxicity" and "no recognized medical applications."

Mrs. Cron and the 12 other victims of glaucoma, cancer and multiple sclerosis believe on the basis of medical research — some of it government supported — the drug may help treat their diseases.

They said the present classification "prevents, delays, retards and hinders aggressive medical and scientific research by restricting access to the drug."

"Please believe me," wrote Larry K. Purkey, 32, of Richmond, Ohio, "I do not ingest drugs of any nature now (not nicotine, not alcohol, not even caffeine)."

Purkey, the father of two children, a high school English teacher and member of the Church of Christ who is blind in one eye and glaucoma in the other, said, "This is not a letter to legalize pot. This is an appeal for you in your position to release marijuana for medical study."

Richard Lux, 35, a Marine Corps veteran whose glaucoma is service connected, told Bell current medication is not controlling his condition.

'Revenge flogging' brings arrest

LAKE WORTH, Fla. (UPI) — A "ritualistic revenge" flogging has led to the arrest of five men and seizure of a cache of arms. Also confiscated was a book on "How to Kill" belonging to one of the suspects.

Lake Worth Police Lt. Don Sargent said the five were charged Tuesday with kidnapping, aggravated battery and armed burglary. Sargent said Lake Worth taxi-driver James Compton was abducted, handcuffed to a tree, flogged with tree branches and leather thongs, and shocked with an electric cattle prod. Police said the men believed Compton had raped one of their wives.

"It was a ritual-type thing," Sargent said.

When Lake Worth Police moved in to arrest John William Blank, 23, they brought along an animal control officer. "We heard he had three dobermans, at least one of them attack trained. He cooperated and let us in without any problem. We were prepared to sedate the animals," Sargent said.

At Blank's four-bedroom house, where he lives alone, police found "about 30 guns," Sargent said. "There were shotguns, semi-automatic rifles, .45s, .38s, hatchets, swords, gas, billy clubs, several pairs of handcuffs, billy clubs and mace canisters."

All the weapons, except one that may possibly be a fully automatic rifle, were legal, Sargent said.

"Hanging in the closet we found two Klan robes, one white and one black," he said. He said a book titled "How To Kill" was found in Blank's house that "clearly shows how to chop a man's head off, gouge his eyes, choke him, stab him — all with pictures. The inside cover shows it's published by Paldani Press in Boulder, Colorado, written by John Minery."

The other men charged along with Blank were identified as Dennis Marion Cason, 36, West Palm Beach; Michael Edward Costello, 34, West Palm Beach; Bruce Ahlgren, 34, of Greenacres; and John Hammel, 30, of Boynton Beach.

All were being held in the Lake Worth jail.

3 youths picked up in theft

TWIN FALLS — Sheriff's officers have recovered two motorcycles and arrested three 17-year-old youths following several weeks of investigation.

Officers said the cycles, one almost new and the other relatively new, were reportedly stolen from the Ben Madron property east of Twin Falls. They were recovered Thursday from where they had been hidden in the South Hills.

Later investigation led to the arrest of the three juveniles. Officers said the trio will be petitioned into juvenile court.

'Spud' boosts reading

TWIN FALLS — Teachers and administrators from Magic Valley schools where Right-to-Read programs are being conducted met this week at the College of Southern Idaho for a two-day workshop and exchange of ideas.

One of the new innovations of the program will be the "Great Potato." State program director, Elizabeth Schaeffe, Boise, said the potato costume is used in the program to create interest for the young elementary students.

She suggested having a high school student wear the costume to class during the reading period, and read stories to the small children.

Mrs. Schaeffe said about 30 schools in the state have adopted the program following needs assessment studies last year. She said another 40 will be adopting programs next year and by the end of the third year all 118 school districts in the state should be conducting some form of right-to-read programs.

Under the program everyone in the school from principal to student to district office personnel have a certain time each day to read. In addition, each school works out its own incentive programs to increase reading.

"It includes everyone from elementary and pre-school youngsters through adult education," Mrs. Schaeffe said.

During the first day of the workshop, teachers working with the Right-to-Read programs in their individual programs met to exchange ideas and report on program progress. The second day, school administrators were invited to attend.

The Great Potato costume was donated by Simplot Potato Processing Co.

THE "Great Potato" will be showing up in elementary reading classes in Magic Valley. Modeled by Mary Ann Rasmussen, Wendell, the costume is one of the new ideas in the Right-to-Read program adopted by many Magic Valley schools. Elizabeth Schaeffe, Boise, state program director, and Lawrence LaRue, Wendell, school superintendent, discuss the program success during workshop sessions.

US to reveal budget

WASHINGTON (UPI) — CIA Director Stansfield Turner said today President Carter would not object to public disclosure of the total U.S. intelligence budget, but thinks a detailed breakdown of budget figures would provide "a powerful weapon" to the nation's enemies.

"It is here that, regrettably, we must draw the line between openness and necessary secrecy," he told the Senate Intelligence Committee.

The total intelligence budget has not been made public previously.

Turner said Carter "directed that I not object to your releasing to the public the single overall budget figures of the U.S. intelligence community."

But he said a breakdown or explanation of budget figures would provide enemies with "a powerful weapon which would make further (intelligence) collection more difficult, more hazardous to life, and more costly."

Turner said the budget reflects the changing nature of intelligence activities.

"Over time, it can reveal to an interested observer our areas of interest and the technologies on which we depend most," he said. "From such information they would know where they would place emphasis in countermeasures and effectively nullify any advantage we might have."

Wendell boys face charges

WENDELL — No date has been set yet for a hearing of four Wendell youths charged with disturbing the peace last week outside Wendell High School.

Marty Blanchard, Paul Strong, Lynn Morgan and Gaylan Ponciano are charged with the misdemeanor of disturbing the peace April 19 outside the high school for "loud noise, threatening, quarreling, challenging to fight and fighting." The complaint was signed by Ron Yost, a teacher.

The altercation occurred about 1 p.m. when the defendants allegedly got into a fight with school students.

SWENSEN'S OWN THE SPARE TIRE

When you see one of the big Associated Food Store trucks and Semi-Trailers with the Big A surrounding a lady with a shopping cart, you may or may not know, or care, that Swensen's Magic Markets own the spare tire on every one of those trucks. Actually the price of the spare tire is Swensen's rough estimate of the proportional share of A.F. Stores that Swensen's own. In as much as Swensen's are co-owners, along with more than 800 other independent grocers, of A.F.S., the largest wholesale grocery distributor in the Intermountain West which is also the 18th largest grocery wholesaler in the entire country with warehouses in Salt Lake City, Boise, Pocatello, Helena and Billings. Total sales last year were more than $363,000,000. That's pretty heavy isn't it! WHEW!

THE GREAT MYTH — Our only reason for raving on about spare tires, trucks, trailers, etc. is to dispel from your minds the myth that large out of town chain stores have greater buying power, larger volume discounts and more efficient distribution than locally-owned independent stores like Swensen's. ## Basins work

AERATION BASINS at the Twin Falls Waste Water Treatment Plant have recently been repaired, bringing pollutant levels of treated waste down for the most part, to allowable levels. Here, plant superintendent Kim Durham points to water in one of the plant's two basins, which aerate waste water to reduce the water's demand for oxygen.

Breakdowns force plant changes

By BOB ZUCKERMAN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Recurring breakdowns of the heat treatment facility at the Twin Falls Waste Water Treatment Plant have forced plant designers to consider new ways to treat certain plant waste.

Jack Hammond, engineer for Hamilton and Voeller, Inc., the engineering firm which designed the $6 million plant, said Wednesday he was considering new processes that might be added by the plant for treating some waste after it leaves the heat treatment facility.

The heat treatment facility, which sterilizes and kills the smell of the sludge after the sludge travels through earlier treatment stages, has broken down repeatedly in recent months.

Officials Tuesday finally repaired it for what they hope is the last time.

However, the build up of a highly polluted chemical called portrate liquor at the heat treatment facility has forced officials to seek new methods of treatment.

The portrate liquor, produced in the heat treating process, normally doesn't build up to excessive levels because the heat treatment facility only operates 16 hours per day.

However, because of mechanical failures, plant officials have been forced to run the heat treatment apparatus constantly when it is not shut down for repairs. This has caused the build up of portrate liquor, Hammond explained.

Officials currently are studying two processes of treating the liquor, Hammond said. First, officials could recycle it through a primary digester, a large basin used during one of the first stages of plant treatment, he said.

Another alternative, sending the liquor through a new aeration basin in the secondary portion of the plant, could be tried, Hammond said.

The first alternative would require construction of two pipes at a cost of $500, Hammond said. The second alternative would require construction of a new aeration basin at a cost of $20,000, he said.

"Obviously we're going to try to achieve what we need to achieve at the least cost," he said.

Because the two processes are virtually untested, officials will experiment with them in the plant laboratory for the next month, Hammond said. After that, one will be tried, he said.

Meanwhile, the Environmental Protection Agency's May 11 deadline for getting the plant to discharge treated waste into the Snake River at acceptable levels creeps closer.

From October through March, plant discharges exceeded maximum levels established by the EPA, according to plant records. Specifically, levels of suspended solids and oxygen demand were too high.

This month pollutant levels dropped below EPA maximums, though some violations were still occurring. Plant Supt. Kim Durham said repair of pipes and turbines in the plant's aeration basins was responsible for the lower levels of pollutants.

However, plant officials and designers said they do not expect to make the EPA's deadline.

"We just can't institute changes" in the treatment process, "that quickly," Hammond said. But "We'll be very close to continuing compliance by June 1."

Hammond earlier said he expects the plant to be operating with no excessive discharges by Aug. 1. "We're looking at June and July as two months for refinements," after the new method of portrate liquor treatment is added, he said.

Under a permit issued by the EPA, the plant was supposed to operate without excessive levels of pollutants in treated waste since May 16, 1976. EPA officials have threatened to sue the city, seeking civil penalties of up to $10,000 per day for each violation of the permit.

Blaine granted disaster label

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN
Times-News writer

HAILEY — Drought-stricken Blaine and adjacent counties were declared economic and physical disaster areas today by the Small Business Administration (SBA) in Washington, D.C.

The disaster designation will make low-interest long-term SBA loans, available to area businesses and farmers and some private homeowners who have suffered economic losses and physical disasters because of the drought, according to Paul Lodato, SBA's director of information in Washington.

The disaster designation for Blaine and adjacent counties was signed by SBA administrator Vernon Warren, early this morning, SBA officials announced.

The SBA disaster designation here makes only SBA loan programs available, Lodato said. A similar designation must be made by President Carter or the Secretary of Agriculture to trigger other federal disaster aid programs.

State officials said they were hopeful a Presidential disaster declaration for Blaine County might be made by the end of the week.

County businessmen, farmers and ranchers are now eligible to receive direct loans under SBA's economic injury disaster loan program, Lodato said.

"The economic injury disaster loan is available to businesses who have or will suffer economic injury because of the drought," Lodato stated. "They can borrow money from SBA at an interest rate of 6 1/2 per cent up to 30 years."

According to Idaho Senator James Mc Clure, farmers and businessmen able to prove economic damage based on their volume of business in past years as compared with this year, will be able to receive the loan.

McClure stated that small businesses and agri-businesses would be eligible for the loans providing they can demonstrate that current liabilities can now be paid because of drought conditions but could have been paid in a normal year.

Lodato cited as an example a situation where a businessman could say that his business has averaged an income of "X" dollars, and now as a result of the drought; he has lost a certain amount of money and anticipates losing a certain amount more.

The SBA loan granted to this businessman would be equivalent to his loss, Lodato said. A business profit cannot be taken into consideration. The aim of the program is to return the business to a pre-disaster situation and to help the businessman retire his debt until his cash flow has returned to normal.

SBA also declared the county a physical disaster area, according to Lodato. Homeowners who can prove a physical disaster, such as a well running dry, will be eligible for the physical disaster loan program through SBA.

These loans are granted at an interest rate of 6 1/2 per cent a year. A maximum of $50,000 is set for these loans.

The adjacent counties believed to be eligible for the SBA disaster assistance include Cassia, Lincoln, Butte, Bingham, Goshute, Power, Camas, Elmore, Boise, Minidoka and Cassia counties.

Members of the Blaine County Drought Emergency Committee estimate the county's tourism and agricultural industry will suffer a minimum loss of $15,000,000 this year because of drought conditions. Without federal assistance, they say the loss could not be absorbed.

According to county officials, the area's tourism industry suffered an $8-million loss this winter because of the lack of snow.

Power use doubles

TWIN FALLS — Electrical consumption for irrigation pumping the first two weeks of April was double the amount used for the same period last year, Idaho Power Co. officials said today.

The increased use for pumping caused by the drought brought more than half of the 21 per cent increase in current electricity use, compared to a year ago, according to company officials.

Despite calls for a 10 per cent cutback in consumption to avoid rationing customers are now using 21 per cent more electricity, according to James Bruce, company president.

Early irrigation because of extremely dry conditions, new customers and increased use of electricity for heating all contributed to the jump in electricity use, the report shows.

Company spokesman Bob Brown said today conservation efforts had less than a 2 per cent effect on total power usage.

Brown said usage breakdown among residential, agricultural, commercial and industrial users was not immediately available.

He said, however, that "more than 50 per cent" of the increased usage came from early irrigation because of the drought.

One category, commercial users, actually showed a decline in consumption. He said these users used about two per cent less power than a year ago.

During the past 12 months, Bruce said, the company started serving 10,500 new customers, the greatest increase in its history. The company's total customers as of March 31 stood at 219,411.

Of the new customers, more than 8,800 were residential and 865 were small commercial, the company reported. Last month, residential power use increased by 15 per cent over the same month a year ago despite higher average temperatures than in March 1976.

In mid-February Idaho Power, and other Northwest utilities, told their customers to cut electricity consumption by 10 per cent because of the bleak hydro-electric power outlook due to drought.

Based on April 1 stream flow forecasts, Idaho Power estimates that its hydro generation this year will be 5.6 billion kilowatt hours. In contrast, the company's hydro production is about 7.5 billion kilowatt hours in each of the last two years.

"Substantial conservation by our customers is absolutely essential if we are to get through the summer without mandatory curtailment and to solve the long-range problems of generating deficiencies that our forecasts indicate will occur in the future if the present rate of load growth continues," Bruce said.

"Load growth not only is complicating our short-term problems of adequate supplies during the present drought, but will add to our long-term problems if it continues as our projections indicate," he said.

He cited various new power projects Idaho Power has joined and said the company's studies indicate that these will suffice until the late 1970s or early 1980s.

However, he said, the company "must obtain major new resources after that."

Hotel offered to Blaine

HAILEY — Fighting financial difficulties, owners recently offered the historic Hiawatha Hotel in Hailey for sale to Blaine County for use as a new courthouse.

In a letter to the Blaine County Commission, the owners of the hotel said they will sell the building to the county for $225,000.

Hailey attorney, Steve Bolter, who served as chairman of a county courthouse committee to locate a site and fund for a new judicial building, met with the Blaine County Commission Monday on behalf of the hotel owners.

Speaking for the Hiawatha Hotel Corporation, Bolter reportedly said a purchase of the hotel would be advantageous because the county would get "a white elephant" off the back of Hailey and obtain all the money needed for a new courthouse with a minimum amount of renovations.

In 1975, Fifth District Judge Douglas Kramer issued a court order demanding the construction of a new courthouse because of cramped and inadequate facilities in the old one.

The Blaine County Commissioners have been searching for two years in a way to fund the construction of a new judicial building. The county has already spent close to $100,000 to purchase private lots for a courthouse complex and has about $200,000 in federal revenue sharing funds in this year's budget, some of which is earmarked for a new courthouse.

Candidates file

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls School District voters in zone 4 will have their choice of at least three candidates in next month's school board elections.

In zone 3 only incumbent Ruth Day has filed for reelection. The deadline for filing petitions of candidacy is Friday at 5 p.m.

In zone 4, Carolyn Daigh and Bob Knighton are challenging incumbent Clayton Rudd, who has filed for reelection.

Rudd, a vice president of Sierra Life Insurance Co., was appointed last winter to complete the unexpired term of board member Tom Kiley, who resigned.

Daigh, the single parent of four children, is a Twin Falls native now self-employed in real estate. A graduate in education from the University of Idaho, she is membership chairman of Parents Without Partners.

Knighton, who played the role of intermediary for a citizens group in settling last fall's teachers strike, is a speech pathologist and audiologist for the Department of Health and Welfare.

The 33-year-old father of two holds a B.A. from Idaho State University and a M.A. from the University of Washington, both in speech pathology.

A Pocatello native, Knighton has lived in Twin Falls the past five years.

Mrs. Day, the long-term incumbent from zone 3, was the only person to have filed from her district as of this morning.

Zone 3 encompasses the northwestern section of the city and zone 4 the northeastern.

Both the open seats are for three-year terms.

Also serving on the school board but not up for reelection this year are chairman Howard Runk and board members Byron Snyder and Richard Ryall.

Sex discrimination charge without foundation at CSI

By CHRIS PECK
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A former College of Southern Idaho language instructor whose contract was not renewed in 1973 has lost a sex discrimination appeal she made to the federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

The decision by the EEOC all but ends the sex discrimination case brought by Terrill L. Castaneda against the College of Southern Idaho.

Ms. Castaneda may further challenge the college's decision not to renew her contract only by filing suit in Federal District Court. She was not available today to comment about her plans for continuing the case in federal court.

Between 1970 and 1972 Ms. Castaneda taught French and English at CSI.

After two evaluations of her work in 1971 which ranked her in the bottom fourth of the faculty, the school did not offer her a contract in 1973.

Ms. Castaneda objected to the evaluations placing her in the lowest quartile of the faculty, saying the evaluations were colored by sex discrimination.

In the fall of 1972 she brought her case to the Idaho Human Rights Commission. At that time she charged CSI discriminated against her under the provisions of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

The former French teacher charged CSI with: — Discharging her by failing to renew her contract.

— Hiring a male to replace her and assigning her duties to male instructors.

— Giving her unfair and untrue evaluations.

— Creating and maintaining a repressive atmosphere for female faculty members and staff.

— Engaging in reprisal actions against her because she filed a charge against the college.

But the Human Rights Commission found no basis for her charges. At that time, Castaneda appealed to the EEOC office in Seattle.

In its ruling today, the EEOC agreed with the Idaho Human Rights Commission that Ms. Castaneda had not been the victim of sex discrimination at CSI.

Noting that CSI ranked many women professors in the top 25 per cent of its faculty, the EEOC concluded it was not discriminatory or improper for the college to rank Ms. Castaneda in the bottom quarter of the faculty.

"Having considered the evidence . . . we are unable to believe that the treatment accorded Ms. Castaneda was either influenced by her sex or was different from which CSF extended to males," the EEOC report said.

The EEOC report noted that CSI previously had fired male instructors who consistently were ranked by the school evaluation team in the bottom fourth of the faculty.

The EEOC also noted many female faculty members at CSI disputed Ms. Castaneda's claim that the college fostered a repressive atmosphere toward women instructors.

Instead, the EEOC said the evidence in the Castaneda case "overwhelmingly" indicated CSI treats women fairly.

And, the EEOC said the college was well within its rights to redistribute Ms. Castaneda's teaching duties to other male faculty members.

TF Republicans seek higher county worker pay

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls County Republican Party wants higher salaries and benefits for Twin Falls County workers.

A Republican study group report issued today compared county worker pay and benefits with comparable jobs in other counties and cities and found the Twin Falls County workers generally underpaid.

The study group recommendations followed a three-month review of county salaries and were unanimously adopted Wednesday night by the Twin Falls County Republican Central Committee.

Bill Roberts, Buhl, former legislator, who chaired the Idaho House Appropriations Committee, headed the study group.

The committee also called for upgrading of the county employee retirement plan before county workers vote on whether to retain the present plan or join the state retirement plan.

Members of the committee said annual salaries of the Twin Falls County clerk, assessor, treasurer and sheriff are below pay for similar elected officials in other counties.

"We recommended the annual salaries be increased to $13,500 when the foregoing recommendations are accomplished," the report states.

Committee members called for creation of a personnel system in the county which will include job descriptions, periodic written employee performance evaluation, pay classification, maintenance of detailed personnel records and the establishment of a merit and longevity pay schedule for all county positions.

Committee members said it is difficult to compare salaries of Twin Falls County employees with those of cities and many other counties because job descriptions are lacking.

Salaries for the Twin Falls County officials now include $11,654 for the clerk; $11,200, assessor; $11,000 the treasurer; $11,650, sheriff; $10,000 county commissioners and $10,000 prosecuting attorney.

Bannock County pays $13,500 to the clerk, assessor, treasurer and sheriff.

Bonneville County pays $12,000 for the clerk, assessor, treasurer and sheriff positions while Kootenai pays $15,000 and Canyon, $13,500.

The smaller Cassia and Latah counties pay more than Twin Falls County. In Cassia the figure is $11,738 except for sheriff which is $12,000. Latah pays $14,000.

With the exception of Kootenai, all pay the prosecuting attorney less than Twin Falls and the county commissioners the same or more. Cassia County, however, pays commissioners only $3,840 and Latah only $7,000 but commissioners are not full time in those counties.

A chief district clerk in Twin Falls County is paid $655 per month compared to $808 in Bonneville, but compared to an average of $225 in region 1, $400 in region 2 and $615 in region 3.

County workers in Twin Falls County are paid $10,000 a year compared to $12,000 in Bannock County.

A sheriff in Twin Falls County is paid $700 per month but in Bannock County, $677.50 and averages of $595, $497 and $627 in these regions.

The committee recommended Twin Falls County commissioners set pay levels after consideration of salaries in counties of comparable size and population.

Further, the committee expressed a belief salaries of county commissioners and prosecuting attorneys be taken out of the "political arena" and be subject to local review.

Twin Falls County is one of three counties in Idaho not subscribing of the state retirement program. The past session of the legislature required counties to join the state plan if county employees vote in favor of such action.

Members of the Republican study committee stated, "We have concluded the county employees should have immediate attention to their retirement plan." The committee said the plan must be improved.

Committee members found the county plan advantageous in that it is not mandatory while the state plan requires all employees to join.

It was the feeling of the committee the county plan should be retained, but that it be improved to provide the benefits of the best of a new retirement system for Idaho Public Employees providing the cost of the county plan does not increase significantly over that of the state plan.

County Commissioners said they received the report only this morning and have not had an opportunity to discuss or act on it.

Nader raps White House influence

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ralph Nader accused the auto industry Wednesday of "reaching into the White House" during the Nixon and Ford administrations to avoid placing safety airbags in new cars.

If the Carter administration does not take strong action now, Nader said, auto industry leaders "will think they can get away from the reach of any auto pollution, auto mileage and auto safety laws."

At a Transportation Department hearing on the reopened issue of safety restraints, the consumer advocate urged a return to a strong enforcement standard by requiring airbags in new cars by 1980.

He said 75,000 deaths could have been prevented if the industry had continued its initial efforts.

Nader and officials of the insurance industry pushed for mandatory airbag requirements. U.S. automakers challenged the safety value of airbags and said standards would be required to adopt mandatory seat belt laws instead or face a cutoff of federal funds.

Nader said the auto industry felt under the Johnson ad-

Flight restored

LEWISTON (UPI) — Hughes Airwest announced it will restore its Seattle-Lewiston morning flight beginning July 1.

The flight was temporarily canceled when schedules were changed Sunday.

Under the present schedule the flight from Seattle arrives at Spokane 10 minutes after the Spokane-Lewiston flight leaves Spokane.

Before Sunday, those two flights connected, giving Seattle commuters the opportunity to fly to Lewiston and return the same day.

Sunshine net loser

WALLACE, Idaho (UPI) — Sunshine Consolidated Mining Co., realized a net loss of $27,481 during the year ending in December, 1976 as compared to a net income of $12,683 in 1975.

The difference, according to the company's report, was the year-long strike at the Sunshine, which closed Sun Con's Big Creek Apex Mining Co.

House dumps budget work, starts again

WASHINGTON (UPI) — After laboring two days and half a night on a $46.7 billion budget for 1978, the House early today rejected its work and decided to start over.

Wary legislators voted 320 to 64 shortly before 1 a.m. EDT against a completed budget resolution and asked the House Budget Committee to bring in another proposal later in the week. During the debate the budget deficit rose $4.4 billion, to $68.4 billion, as amendments were passed adding money for defense, agriculture, law enforcement and veterans.

The final version pleased almost no one. Republicans said the deficit was too high. They had been defeated in an attempt to cut it to $47 billion.

And many Democrats said the defense budget was too big and objected that the House, in killing President Carter's $500-per-person rebate at his request, left in tax cuts for business.

The House voted 225 to 184 to give Carter the full $120 billion defense budget he requested.

The vote restored $4.1 billion in cuts proposed by the Budget Committee. $2.3 billion of which would have come out of 1978 spending and the rest in later years.

It added $1.5 billion for agricultural price supports, $75 million to restore cuts proposed by the committee in federal aid for local law enforcement and $500 million to increase pensions for World War I veterans.

It cut $7 million in congressional pay raises, although many said that symbolic vote would have no legal effect. Congress earlier in this year accepted without a vote a $12,900 pay hike per member.

The House action was the first rejection of a budget resolution. It was the first serious hitch in a new congressional budget process now in its second full year and through which Congress has wrestled much of the control over the budget from the executive branch.

Davis bill gains

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate has voted to restore the U.S. citizenship he did not want to Jefferson Davis, president of the Confederate States.

A resolution sponsored by a Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., was approved without dissent at the end of a lengthy evening session on a tax bill. It now goes to the House.

Hatfield said he got the idea of restoring citizenship to Davis after reading a three-volume history of Davis' life. Hatfield said he was struck by the poor treatment afforded to Davis, who served two years in prison after the Civil War.

Fund raising hindered

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Most 1976 congressional candidates think the post-Watergate federal election law did a good job in forcing disclosure of campaign spending, but hindered political fundraising, a survey reported today.

Commissioned by the Federal Election Commission, the cross-section survey of 650 candidates and campaign officials also showed:

— An even split (36 per cent on each side) between candidates and managers who thought the 1974 campaign law helped or hurt their campaigns.

— 90 per cent believed the law needs changes, especially a reduction of reports and red tape.

— Nearly 70 per cent thought the law reduced the influence of "fat cat" contributors on campaigns, but almost the same percentage felt it also failed to encourage small donors.

— A majority felt the law put independents at more of a disadvantage than before it was passed and less than a third thought the law strengthened political parties.

Disclosure of campaign spending was the biggest benefit credited to the law, with 50 per cent of those surveyed rating its requirements as an improvement.

But 52 per cent thought the law hindered fundraising and 31 per cent said the law made it harder to get candidates in their offices.

However, the candidates and managers did not blame all their troubles on the law. Asked to name the factors that had the biggest impact on their campaigns, voters' apathy, disinterest in issues, and "anti-Washington" feeling among voters, and domination of the presidential race all were given more importance than the new federal law.

In fact, there was a dead heat on the question of whether the law helped or hurt the campaign process. A total 36 per cent said it helped, 36 per cent said it hurt and 24 per cent said it made little difference.

Nuclear penalty powers proposed

O.N.Y. Times Service

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter submitted legislation to Congress Wednesday that would give him the power to impose drastic penalties on countries that violated international and bilateral agreements designed to prevent the spread of nuclear weapons.

However, in an accompanying statement and in an interpretation provided by Jody Powell, his press secretary, the President sought to assure Congress that he would use the powers he is seeking with discretion.

Carter's message, a companion piece to his statement April 7 on domestic nuclear technology policy, comes at a time of international turbulence over nuclear energy developments in a number of countries.

The President, on April 7, said the United States would not support a breeder program, in part to discourage the spread of technology incorporating the potential for the manufacture of weapons-grade nuclear material.

Carter, in his message to Congress, said the goal of his legislative proposal was "to find ways of controlling the spread of nuclear explosive capability without depriving any nation of the means to satisfy its energy needs."

In effect, the bill, if passed, would enable the United States to guarantee nuclear fuel supplies to countries that have reactors, but no fuel, while imposing tight safeguards on the nuclear energy programs of the recipient countries.

It would also authorize the United States to renegotiate nuclear cooperation agreements with more than 20 countries with a view to adding stronger safeguards over their nuclear technology.

Rowland, who first proposed the theory of the fluorocarbon effect in the ozone layer with Dr. Mario Molina in 1974, said the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency had given him the "unmistakable" for federal action last year in Switzerland.

Chill sweeps Midwest

By United Press International

Balmy Midwest spring temperatures were replaced today by a cold front that triggered showers, thunderstorms and gusty winds.

Temperatures plunged 21 degrees in one hour at Glenview and Palatine, Ill. They also dipped into the 20s in upper Michigan and northern lower Michigan, where frost warnings were posted. A few snow flurries were expected to be mixed with the showers in northern Wisconsin and upper Michigan.

Showers and thunderstorms were spread from the Great Lakes across the middle Mississippi Valley into the central Plains.

Thunderstorms in Iowa where five cities recorded record highs Wednesday — produced heavy rainfall. Scattered rainshowers also dampened northeastern New York and northern Vermont.

Thunderstorms in northeastern Nebraska Wednesday night nearly covered the ground with pea-size hail at Pierce City.

Colder temperatures also settled over the northern Plains through most of the Atlantic Coast states and the Appalachians today. But warm temperatures extended from the south and central Plains eastward through the Ohio and the mid and lower Mississippi Valley.

Solar satellite seen by 2000

COCOA BEACH, Fla. (UPI)

A mammoth solar power plant satellite could be assembled in space to beam energy back to earth by the start of the 21st century, an aerospace engineer told the 14th Space Congress Wednesday.

Dr. Roger Johnson, assistant to the director of Manned

Space for Gramman

Aerospace Corp., said the satellite could collect energy from the sun and transmit it to receiving antennas on earth by microwave at a price competitive with other energy sources.

Johnson said it would cost approximately $15 billion to $20 billion to develop a

He said a five-gigawatt solar plant probably could power a "reasonably-sized city" in the year 2025. Such a plant, he said, might be five to seven miles square and weigh 75,000 tons.

YOUR PROPERTY RIGHTS ARE BEING TAKEN!

A BILL OF GOODS

Our research has proven that the bureaucratic land planners and zoners have made fools of us with their claims. Land controls won't save us from becoming like California. California has had land-use controls & zoning for almost half a century. Government land controls created the California mess! It is doing the same thing here. Look around you and see the effect of only a few years of Bureaucratic controls. Not only is the County becoming like California's mess but lot prices and contracting expenses have sky-rocketed because of minimum acreage requirements, building permits and red tape. Individual property owners make the best use of their land when free to do so. Any real abuses or land use incompatibility can be more justly controlled by land-use covenants, the law-of-eminent-domain, nuisance-law-enforcement-and, of course, improving the economic health of the general citizenry. We are being sweet talked out of our right to control our property, and away from better and more just remedies.

THE REAL PLAN

The real plan is to take away our Right to freely use and sell our property. To give control of our property to a government bureaucracy. The Planning Council and the Zoning Commission will be the privileged few who will tell us if we can do something with our property. Talk of plans or laws is only whitewash. All of these pseudo laws and so-called plans are not binding and can be changed almost instantly to accommodate influential persons, relatives, and friends of the bureaucrats.

THEY DON'T REALLY WANT YOUR "INPUT"

Unless you agree with their ideas to dominate others, the Government planners and zoners don't want to hear what you have to say. In fact, they won't hear what you have to say! Four public meetings have proven the majority of the people do not want land-use controls. Their expressed opinions have been ignored by the bureaucratic planners and zoners and they are going ahead as if nothing happened. As if there had been no public meetings at all.

UNITED WE STAND

Here is how we can stop them. The government planners and zoners are not elected — we can't vote them out. But the County Commissioners are elected. Under the law they have absolute powers to dissolve the planning council and zoning board. There are terrific Federal pressures on them not to do this. We must apply greater pressure. Our elected officers must know that we will join together at the polls in 1978 and only those who have fought hard and long for individual property rights will receive our support. We property owners are an overwhelming majority. But if we do not stand together now, we will have no influence and we will have our rights taken by the planners and zoners. Join together now as the Twin Falls County Property Owners Association until there are thousands of us speaking with one voice for what is rightfully ours. By working together we can be rid of Government "planning" and zoning boards in our county once and for all.

THE TRUTH ABOUT LAND-USE "PLANNING!"

"ARE WE RUNNING OUT OF FARMLAND? THE ANSWER IS NO!"

"Are we running out of land? The answer is no. The United States possesses a very comfortable supply of land (11 acres-per-person). Although the world average is roughly the same, our land is far more productive than the average, with not more than 12 percent classes as having only slight value for surface development." League of Women Voters (LAND USE LETTER: Can we keep public and private rights in balance?)

Land in urban uses doubled between 1950 and 1969 but still occupied only 1 1/2 percent of the 50-state land area. In 1969 there were 333 million acres in cropland. By 1974, however, cropland INCREASED to 369 million acres. Between 1949 and 1974, crop production per acre INCREASED more than 60 percent. This increase in productivity was more than enough to maintain stable food and fiber prices despite population increases. Farm output increased 40 percent between 1950 and 1970, while population only increased 34 percent. The amount of agricultural land taken each year for urban uses has had little effect on the total supply of U.S. cropland. Irrigation, drainage, and clearing add THREE TIMES as much land annually to the cropland base as urbanization absorbs. The above information was received through Congressional Research Service, Library of Congress. It clearly illustrates we are not anywhere near crisis in land needs — and there IS NO LAND CRUNCH! In T.F. County 97,984 new acres went into farm production between 1969-1974.

"IT IS TIME THAT WE APPLY THE CLEAR AND UNMISTAKABLE LESSON OF THE PAST" FIFTY YEARS: ZONING HAS BEEN A FAILURE AND SHOULD BE ELIMINATED!

"It is time that we apply the clear and unmistakable lesson of the past fifty years: zoning has been a failure and should be eliminated! Governmental control over land use through zoning has been unworkable, inequitable and a serious impediment to the operation of the real estate market and the satisfaction of its consumers."

"New zoning solutions abound, but they will have little or adverse effect unless they largely remove government from the control of land use. Governmental land use regulations at any level mean that politics and political power will continue making decisions for reasons that have minimum or no relationship to the best and most efficient use of the land, and that precious resources will continue to be wasted. In the absence of most governmental controls, the private sector is much more likely to utilize the land to provide better for the environmental and material needs of the people. In eliminating zoning, we shall be eliminating many of our pressing problems of land use."

"... the U.S. Supreme Court interpreting the U.S. Constitution, could declare zoning unconstitutional for the entire country, and a state supreme court could hold zoning unconstitutional under its state constitution."

"Zoning is being used as an escape hatch ('loophole') from the costs of eminent domain." The above comments are from Mr. Bernard H. Siegan, Lawyer. In 1968 he was appointed a research fellow in law and economics at the University of Chicago Law School.

"FOR WHAT ARE OUR FACILITIES BUT THE EXTENSION OF OUR INDIVIDUALITY? AND WHAT IS PROPERTY BUT AN EXTENSION OF OUR FACILITIES?"

"Life, liberty, and property do not exist because men have made laws. On the contrary, it was the fact that life, liberty, and property existed beforehand that caused men to make laws in the first place." "Each of us has a natural right — from God — to defend his person, his liberty, and his property. These are the three basic requirements of life, and the preservation of any one of them is completely dependent upon the preservation of the other two. For what are our faculties but the extension of our individuality? And what is property but an extension of our faculties?"

"... I deem it a violation of the right of private property guaranteed under the Constitution for the government to forcibly deprive the citizens of this nation of their property through taxation or otherwise..."

FREDERICK BASTIAT
EZRA TAFT BENSON (God, Family and Country)

"IN THE UNITED STATES ZONING GENERALLY WORKS TO THE DETRIMENT OF THE POOR"

"In the United States zoning generally works to the detriment of the poor and near poor, racial minorities and renters; it operates for the benefit of the well-to-do."

Professor Robert C. Ellickson, University of Southern California Law School "Zoning law for agriculture does not produce a farm any more than zoning for industry produces a shoe factory or zoning for high-rise development produces a 16-story building." William D. Anderson, Atty., Gregory C. Gustafson, Economist and Robert F. Boxley, Leader of the Resource Organization on a Control Program.

"MY EXPERIENCE WOULD SUGGEST THAT ANY FIXED PLAN IS INEVITABLY WRONG!"

John Rahenkamp, Rahenkamp, Sachs, Wells, & Asso., Inc. planning and environmental consulting firm. "My experience would suggest that any fixed plan is inevitably wrong. In fact, they have no logical or legal basis and no sensitivity over time to the fundamental changes which can occur. I think it is extraordinarily clear — as a matter of fact, I am amazed that we have to keep talking about it — that our attempts to project social need or technological change have been historically inaccurate. Our long term projections are grossly out of line every time. The best we can work with is something approximating three to five years. At best we can simulate within brackets. But even so, the brackets are so broad that if we are asking society to believe we are operating a system strictly within those brackets, I think we are grossly misleading them. Our basic approach would suggest that our Constitution and Common Law tradition protect the individual from the state, unless there is some overriding and defensible public need for intervention. I think this Constitutional position has not been reflected enough in the planning we have done. Zoning is an unjustified extension of the need to intervene, and grossly indefensible."

"CAN THE LIBERTIES OF A NATION BE THOUGHT SECURE WHEN WE HAVE REMOVED THEIR ONLY FIRM BASIS; A CONVICTION IN THE MINDS OF THE PEOPLE THAT THESE LIBERTIES ARE THE GIFT OF GOD?"

Thomas Jefferson, Notes, 1781

"WE MUST RECOGNIZE THAT PROPERTY RIGHTS ARE ESSENTIAL TO HUMAN LIBERTY"

Thus, today, brethren, we are in danger of actually surrendering our personal and property rights. This development, if it does occur in full, will be a sad tragedy for our people.

DAVID O. MCKAY

"TO GIVE LIBERTY, BUT TAKE FROM HIM THE PROPERTY WHICH IS THE FRUIT AND BADGE OF HIS LIBERTY, IS TO STILL LEAVE HIM A SLAVE"

It is not the right of property which is protected, but the right to property. Property, per se, has no rights; but the individual — the man — has three great rights, equally sacred from arbitrary interference: the right to his life, the right to his liberty, and the right to his property. The three rights are so bound together as to be essentially ONE right. FROM GEORGE SUTHERLAND'S SPEECH AT NEW YORK STATE BAR, 1921.

Grain trader advocates commodity reserve plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A leading private grain trader Wednesday criticized the Carter administration's plan to seek negotiation of international grain and ceiling prices for wheat and advanced a policy of building commodity reserves.

Michael J. Berglund, president of the Continental Grain Company, said the plan is hard to believe the administration is reviving proposals for a grain price agreement "at the same time that the government objects to a grain of cartel based on the same monopolistic price-fixing principle."

Agriculture Secretary Bob Berglund disclosed last week talks on a possible international grain agreement will get under way this summer. He said the administration favors such an agreement, if one can be worked out, as a step toward promoting more stability in world grain prices.

Berglund earlier had said, however, he would be glad to drop the idea of fixing floors and ceilings under international wheat prices if oil nations would break up their cartel.

Fribourg, in a speech prepared for delivery in London and made available to reporters here, added that world agreements on commodity prices had been tried repeatedly in the past, and had always failed.

"I have not the slightest doubt that history will repeat itself, if pricing provisions materialize (in a proposed new international wheat agreement)...and I strongly oppose such a step," Fribourg said.

The grain trade executive said building commodity reserves — held by farmers in stockpiles close to production areas — would be a better method of reducing fluctuations in world supplies and prices of grain.

"Governments in each large producing country should provide financial assistance and pay the cost of storage, but should only be an owner of last resort," Fribourg said.

Bertrand already has set up machinery for a 300 million bushel American wheat reserve to be owned by farmers who will hold the grain under extended federal price support loans with the government paying storage costs.

Administration officials have indicated in policy papers they are urging other governments to set up their own national grain reserve programs.

Fribourg said rules setting prices at which grain can be released from reserves should be flexible enough to allow market prices to influence farm production and food consumption.

Beef referendum may be in July

TWIN FALLS — The U.S. Department of Agriculture has tentatively set July 5 to 15 for the beef referendum this year, according to Jim Fackner, Elms.

Fackner, member of Idaho's Beef Development Task Force, told members of the Magic Valley Cattlemen's Association registration for the vote will be from June 6 to 17 at county ASBC offices.

If two-thirds of the cattlemen voting in the referendum approve the plan, the price of all cattle sold in the U.S. will be assessed to fund programs to be established under the Beef Research and Development Act.

The funds raised for the program will be administered by a beef board composed of 33 cattlemen from cattle-producing areas. "It looks good in Idaho," Fackner told Magic Valley cattlemen. "I know of no organized resistance to the plan."

Talks on sugar still deadlocked

TOKYO (UPI) —

Negotiations over sugar price reductions appeared to be deadlocked Wednesday as Japan expressed dissatisfaction with the price cut offer made by Australia.

John W. Laurie, general manager of Australia's Colonial Sugar Refining (CSR), presented Japanese importers with a package deal calling for a two-stage price reduction but increases in the new contract for shipments after 1980.

Japanese importers said after receiving the Australian proposal that they could "absolutely" not accept the offer.

The third session of the private-level negotiations involving CSR and representatives of 33 Japanese sugar importing firms is meeting in Tokyo primarily to adjust the prices of imported sugar toward current sugar prices on world markets.

Japan is committed to import 600,000 tons of sugar a year from Australia under a fixed price system specified in a contract signed three years ago.

Japanese sources said Laurie proposed that Australia drop the current price of about $498 per ton by 15 per cent for shipments made before September next year and further reduce it by 6.5 per cent for shipments in 1979.

The Australian proposal, according to Japanese sources, also included an "escalation clause" which called for 4.6 per cent and 17.7 per cent increases in shipments to be made between September, 1979, and September, 1983.

The Australians were reported to have asked the Japanese to respond to the proposal by June 10.

The domestic Japanese sugar industry currently is faced with total deficits running at $433 million.

Rain improves grain view

By BERNARD BRENNER

UPI Farm Editor

WASHINGTON (UPI) —

The Agriculture Department's crop weather report this week carried more news which tends to bolster the cautious, tentative predictions of government specialists that 1977 crop prospects are looking much better than they did a month or so ago.

Tuesday's report noted for the second straight week that rains in the Great Plains again have improved the outlook for the winter wheat crop. This, in turn, has strengthened prospects that continuing good weather could reach production close to 2 billion bushels, only slightly below last year's record 2.1 billion bushel crop.

Government farm analysts recently said if growers do harvest a 2 billion bushel wheat crop this year, and if growing conditions also are generally good about, farmers again will find themselves with more wheat than customers.

The analysts said that under these conditions, the nation's stockpile of surplus wheat could mount from a predicted 1.1 billion bushels this summer to nearly 1.5 billion bushels in mid-1978, and wheat prices could be held down to whatever level the government sets as a support floor.

Earlier this season, there had been fears that moisture shortages in the Plains and other western areas could cut wheat production severely this year. Recent forecasts, however, have used a more optimistic tone although the Agriculture Department said again last week that the 1977 crop could be cut to 1.75 billion bushels if dry conditions return.

The weekly crop weather report Tuesday said that in areas east of the Plains, this year's crop is now in "good" condition. In the western states, conditions were generally rated as "fair to good" although some non-irrigated wheat was still described as poor and stunted.

In other major farming areas around the world, the Agriculture Department report indicated a mixture of good and poor moisture conditions — but with more emphasis on the good side.

In China, where drought has been plaguing crop prospects, officials said there have been moderate to heavy rains bringing some relief to wheat areas in the northern part of the country. Moisture was sparse, however, in China's most important rice region and in Manchuria — a key region for spring wheat, soybeans and livestock feed grains.

Farmers in European areas of the Soviet Union got moderate to heavy rains last week, officials added. For the second straight week, heavy rains fell to greatly improve the outlook in parts of the Ukraine and the lower Volga valley, officials said.

Generally, soil moisture conditions were described as good to excellent through the main Soviet winter grain areas with "perhaps even excessive" moisture in some localized areas.

Officials added that in major spring wheat areas, including North Dakota and adjacent Canadian prairie provinces, only light showers fell last week and moisture "was short." There was no break, also, in severe drought conditions in California and the Pacific Northwest, officials said.

Maize native named

MOSCOW — Glenn F. Carnahan, a native of Maize, has been appointed superintendent of the University of Idaho Research and Extension Center at Teton effective May 1.

Carnahan has been employed by the Soil Conservation Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture for the past 18 years. Since June, 1975, he has been in charge of establishing a new plant materials center near Maize, Colo.

In his post with the University of Idaho, Carnahan will conduct research on field crops and will supervise production of foundation and breeder seed of cereals and potatoes.

Drawdown planned

BOISE (UPI) — It will not be possible to maintain Lucky Peak reservoir at its full recreation level after Friday because of severe drought conditions and decreasing supply of water. Arrowrock reservoir, the Bureau of Reclamation said today.

Bob Brown, bureau project superintendent, said the water level in Lucky Peak, which has been maintained at full recreation level since April 8 by releases from Arrowrock, will start dropping Saturday.

Brown said the drawdown of Lucky Peak will be slow at first and will accelerate as the season progresses. He said it is estimated the reservoir will have dropped in elevation by approximately 25 feet on Memorial Day and 70 feet by the Fourth of July.

Arrowrock, which has a full capacity of 285,600 acre-feet, will be down by Saturday to approximately 18,000 acre-feet, Brown said.

FOR SILAGE

OR GRAIN

FUNK'S G-HYBRIDS Come Through For Your Specific Water Situations

FOR SILAGE:

G-4567 115 Days

The silage specialist where an earlier maturity than G-5757 is desired. This high performance hybrid has an impressive yield record with high grain content. It stands tall and stands well. Fast, early growth. Proven grain potential for high quality silage!

G-4366 105 Days

An outstanding proven silage variety for areas where water will be short. G-4366 has been extensively tested for the past 3 years and has proved its high yield silage potential. It is leafy and tall with large, uniform ears and good standability! Plant it for quality silage!

G-4288 105 Days

Try this new outstanding companion hybrid to G-4366. Extensively tested for the past 3 years, it has proved its high yield potential. Leafy, tall with large, uniform ears and good standability!

FOR GRAIN:

G-4195 95 Days

Early maturing G-4195 is becoming the big favorite with grain growers. It out-yields competitive hybrids in its maturity and even later varieties. Produces high yields of quality grain, stands well and harvests easily. Big, sturdy ears. Also proved excellent for early silage!

G-4141 95 Days

A tremendous early maturing hybrid that's proving its ability to outyield its competition. Plant G-4141 where water may be short. It has excellent standability, uniformity, long ears of quality grain that dries down fast. A very easy hybrid to combine.

G-4040 85 Days

Fast becoming one of Idaho's most popular hybrids for its outstanding yields and where an early maturity is desired. Extensively tested for the past 3 years, G-4040 has fast dry-down, a short stalk with low ear placement, and responds to fertility. Plant it this year!

*Days are estimated based on temperatures required for physiological maturity.

Bliss entry rates high in contest

TWIN FALLS — Students of eight Western universities competed in the annual regional livestock and meat judging contest here, with New Mexico State University winning top honors.

Texas A & M University placed second in the overall ratings. Washington State University ranked third and the University of Idaho was in fourth place.

Two University of Idaho students were among the top 10 judges in the market animal division. They were Art Butler, Bliss, and Diana Rackham, Salmon.

Butler also earned second-place honors in the breeding animal division. In overall scores, Butler attained ninth place among 59 individuals competing in the judging competitions.

Traders thresh out grain reserve idea

N.Y. Times Service
NEW YORK — An administration proposal to create a national grain reserve against possible future shortages is stirring fierce intramural contention in the commodity trade.

The reason is that the reserve plan would also allow the nation's farm cooperatives — some of them billion dollar enterprises — to take advantage of the Federal crop loan program for the first time.

Currently, only producers are permitted to, in effect, pawn their eligible crops — use them as collateral to obtain relatively low-cost loans from the government.

The White House proposal, however, would allow the co-ops to pool their members' crops and place them in the loan program. Critics of the plan contend it would not only give the co-ops access to low-cost federal loans, but also would give them powerful control over the pawned commodity during the life of the loan.

As it works now, a farmer may offer his wheat, say, to the Commodity Credit Corp., which manages the loan program, and receive $2.25 for each bushel at an interest charge of 6 per cent a year. Wheat for delivery next month is selling at about $2.60 a bushel.

The farmer may redeem his grain at any time during the loan period by paying off the loan, or he may let it lapse and have the government take possession of the commodity.

The proposal to extend this program include the co-ops, broached earlier this month by Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland, is being resisted by commodity futures exchanges, private grain elevator operators, exporters and processors.

According to an official of the Kansas City Board of Trade, the plan would "knock out the private crop storage outfits because the co-ops would be able to offer better prices to members and non-members alike."

His view is sharply disputed, however, by a spokesman for Farmland Industries Inc., the nation's largest farm cooperative.

"No one seems to complain when the big export houses or food companies have control over basic crops," the official said. "Why shouldn't the people who produce the crops control their marketing?" He also contended that nothing in the plan would prevent other enterprises from doing the same as the cooperatives.

The futures exchanges fear that a return to the days of huge commodity supplies in government loan programs would reduce their volume of business.

The co-op officials dispute this, saying they would continue to use the futures markets to hedge the produce received from their members or others against adverse price moves.

A similar plan to expand the role of the co-ops was put forth by the Nixon administration four years ago. The proposal was dropped, however, because the massive Soviet grain purchases in 1972 had wiped out the nation's surpluses. With the exception of minor grains in the crop loan program then, farmers had redeemed their loans and were selling their produce to more than eager buyers around the globe.

Today there is again an oversupply of wheat, rice and some other crops, and prices are depressed. But one major change has been made: Washington has sharply curtailed its overseas sales of farm products under compulsory terms.

Last week, the first of the season's winter wheat, which is planted in the fall, was being harvested in Texas. With private and co-op elevators still choked with last year's crops, most Midwest farm specialists say they do not know where the new crop will be stored. Some railroads are discussing an embargo on shipments of new crop winter wheat to prevent terminals from being choked with rail cars that cannot be unloaded for lack of elevator space.

Many grain co-op managers are asking their members to keep large portions of their crops on the farm for the same reason.

Given this situation, Bergland has extended the crop loan from the usual one-year period to four years and cut the interest rate on pawned produce to 6 per cent a year from 7.5 per cent.

Moreover, farmers would be eligible to receive "storage payments," equal to those they would pay their co-ops or private elevator operators, if they keep the grain on the farm.

Bergland's proposed national reserve of key crops angered many in the trade who remember the depressing effect of pre-1972 Federal stockpiles. But the proposed co-op plan turned the anger into outrage.

Soybeans decline, drag most futures near limit

CHICAGO — Western russet potato futures joined a downward trend Wednesday, but Maine spuds bucked the stream.

The May delivery of Western russets lost 20 cents, closing at 7.35 per hundredweight. The opening of 7.55 was 40 cents above the day's low.

Commodity News Service said Maine spud opened mixed, expiring May off 7 cents and new crop months up 1 to 6 cents. Traders concentrated on liquidating expiring May, which goes off the board Friday. It moved sharply up and down, hitting a low of 8.20 and then settled up 11 cents at 8.92 cent. Other months were up 8 to 11 cents to 1.550 cars traded.

Heavy liquidation sent soybeans tumbling with old crop meal and beans falling the limit for the third straight day. Oil was also weak, all options down the limit. Weakness in May beans started the slide, and final prices were 30 to 19 cents lower. Daily limit today moved to 45 cents. Speculators and commercials also sold heavily in meal, with the close 10.60 to 3.20 lower.

Early gains in corn were wiped out by traders selling corn when they couldn't sell beans, with final losses 2 1/2 to 1 1/2 cents, and prices at our

near the day's lows. Liquidation developed when it appeared beans would close limit down. Chicago cash basis was 3 cents under May for boxcars and May price for hoppers.

Live cattle broke sharply late in the day, closing on the lows with losses of 37 to 107 points. August and October led the decline, with trading extremely active for the second straight day at 24.65. The decline followed soybeans although early strength came from higher cash markets.

Feeder cattle turned lower, settling 40 to 105 points down near the day's lows on a trade of 820 contracts. Profit taking and trade selling in sympathy with bean weakness weight on the market.

Live hogs closed with large most active June down 75. Distant February ended 30 higher. Volume was 6,148 contracts.

Pork bellies settled sharply lower after nearing limit declines in nearby months. A late break following soybeans added pressure the final half hour. Final quotes were off 110 to 177 points, May and July within 7 to 20 points of limit down for a time. Volume was heavy at 7,705 contracts.

New York Sugar 11 weakened during the day, first dropping 14 points, then recovering slightly. By the close, prices were 58 to 39 points off.

Chicago Board of Trade silver traded on the upside most of the day, then sagged when soybeans collapsed. Prices closed off the lows but 230 to 150 points down.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, APRIL 29, 1977

GENERAL TENDENCIES: There could be some confusion in your mind early in the day, but overall everything seems to be under control. You find it possible to be hit by doing good deeds for others.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You have new ideas which are good but you have to do some research before you put them in operation. Obtain the data you need.

Taurus (Apr. 20 to May 20) Make sure you first improve your appearance before you go out socially and make the right impression on others.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Arrange to entertain good friends at your abode. Ask them to bring their friends who can also become yours.

MINOR CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Exercise much caution everywhere today and avoid danger and expense. Sidestep one who is troublesome.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Study your financial status and whatever will add to your present abundance. A new project needs careful analysis.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You can easily gain a personal goal by seeking the advice of a good friend. Be sensible when dealing with others.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Attend to small chores that have been piling up so you will have time for recreation later in the day. Strive for more harmony with mate.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Try not to criticize a loyal friend who may be upset over own problems now. Forgive a small affair where arguments could erupt.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Study the tasks ahead of you and figure out the best way to handle them. Relax at home with family tonight.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) A new set of circumstances present themselves now so be sure to obtain the right advice from an expert. Widen your horizons.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Your hunches are erroneous today so be sure to use only your mature judgment or you could easily get into trouble.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Talk over future plans with a confidante now and come to a fine understanding. Sidekick, one who stands in the way of progress.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... ...he or she will have to learn to stay away from persons who are not doing right, otherwise the fine promise in this chart will be lost because of wrong associations. There is much ability in this chart and a good education is essential.

If the youngster seems to be a compulsive liar, odds run high he'll turn out years later to be a compulsive gambler. Or such be the indications revealed in a University of Houston study. Interesting, if true. The why of it is a mystery. But the researchers say most though not all the compulsive gamblers who consented to interviews admitted they'd repeatedly prevaricated about almost everything for no clear reason as children.

When the surveytakers asked women in general how they felt about using "Ms." instead of "Miss" or "Mrs.", only 9 per cent said they preferred "Ms." Another 83 per cent said they'd rather use "Miss" or "Mrs." And the rest expressed no opinion.

Did I tell you only one man in every 19 wears boxer type shorts?

SACCHARIN

Q. "How long have we known about saccharin? Has any human cancer ever been traced to it? Who would benefit most, financially, by the new FDA rulings on saccharin?"

A. Saccharin was discovered 88 years ago. There's no record it has ever caused cancer in people. As for who might benefit most, I'd guess the citrus fruit interests, because of the recent development of a sugar substitute found in grapefruit rinds. Also, the sugar industry, possibly. Who knows?

Q. "How many stitches are taken in National Hockey League players every year?"

A. About 4,200 altogether is the last estimate.

Q. "Who was John Sedges?"

A. A pseudonym used by Pearl Buck on some of her writings.

OLD LAW

An old Seattle law makes it illegal for a woman habitually to drink with men in taverns, but no law there makes it illegal for a man habitually to drink with women in taverns. An advised one woman once defended herself successfully against the charge by saying, "I wasn't drinking with the men. They were drinking with me."

If you want to catch small-mouth bass, why don't you drop a thermometer in the water to see if it's between 60 and 70 degrees F.? That's the temperature range in which said bass is most likely to bite. More specifically, 67 degrees F. Or so the scientists report. But if it's a large-mouth bass you're after, the best temperature is from 70 to 72 degrees F., they say.

Bond evolves into one of nation's top halfmilers

TWIN FALLS — Track fans will get a look at one of the nation's top junior, college halfmilers this Saturday when College of Southern Idaho hosts a four-way track meet.

The feature of course, is CSI's own Leo Bond who has shifted to the half in the past three weeks and found out he likes it. And there still is a question in the mind of everyone who has seen the sophomore leaver especially on just how good he can be.

Bond made the conversion as part of a point play for the Ricks-CSI dual meet. Coach Jim Blaisdell figured Ricks might score heavily in the event and having some likely point-getters in the quarter, took Bond from that race to the halfmile.

He won it in 1:57.7 and it was obvious that he wasn't running that hard — just hard enough to keep from hearing footsteps. He stayed there for the Oregon trip where Coach Blaisdell wanted him to have the advantage of sea-level oxygen for a try at the national qualifying time. He clicked off a 1:52.8, easily beating the qualifying mark.

Last week at Idaho State he ran a 1:52.1. And, in all three races one thing was evident. If anyone moved up to challenge him in the straight-away, the St. Paul, Minn., product had enough to nip the bid right away and stay ahead.

"Believe the national junior college record is something like 1:48.1 and I believe that is within Leo's reach," Coach Blaisdell said. "I mean, in a low altitude situation and with the kind of competition he would need to run that kind of time."

"I'm very hopeful that Leo will become our first national track champion. We've had a second in the mile relay but never a champion and never an individual champion. The more I watch Leo run, the more I am certain I am that he can get into national championship times."

Luckily for Bond he's come to like the race. Usually sprinters detest the longer distances. The larger per centage of them would prefer to forego the quarter.

It seems that Bond can now rest assured that he will run the halfmile in nationals. He had the nation's best quarter-mile time for junior colleges, a sharp 47.1. The halfmile qualifying try was an option situation in which he and Coach Blaisdell could size up the competition at nationals and so where it appeared success was within easier reach.

The coach gives no thoughts to allowing the youngster to double up.

"He'll have to run three halfmiles, one each day, a preliminary, semi-final and the finals," Blaisdell says. "We're also hoping to qualify a relay team and Leo will be on that. That would be enough effort without considering any other events. The semi-finals at nationals are usually just about as tough as the finals. In the preliminaries sometimes you can bide your time, but after that you have to run a pretty good race to qualify."

Bond has caught the eye of many dozens of NCAA track coaches with his tremendous versatility. He can provide help in everything from the 100-yard dash through the halfmile.

But the youngster won't have his shot at going to the school and program of his choice because he is deaf.

"I don't know how many coaches have expressed interest in Leo and then had to back off when they realized he was deaf simply because their schools don't have academic programs for deaf," Coach Blaisdell said.

"Oh yeah," he smiled, "there have been those who said they'd seen one was started at their school if Leo would sign with them. But in all practicality, it's surprising how many simply can't offer him anything academically."

Coach Blaisdell said he and Bond would tour Brigham Young University next weekend to look at the possibility of something there. BYU, perhaps not coincidentally, is Coach Blaisdell's alma mater.

CSI's Goetz signs with San Diego State

TWIN FALLS — College of Southern Idaho all-American Kim Goetz signed a letter of intent with San Diego State Wednesday.

The action came as Goetz turned his back on University of Colorado and before he visited Fresno State, where his SCI basketball coach Boyd Grant has moved for the upcoming season.

"San Diego State best filled my own personal goals as a player," said Goetz of his decision. "San Diego State is in a position of winning now. They have three redshirts who will be eligible to play this year ... a two-year starter at USC and a three-year starter at University of California. Plus a point guard who is a good player."

"They're really a very good team with a lot of good talent. They don't have a player who goes the way I play who can get on the break on the wings and hit from the outside. Mostly, they're a very strong rebounding team."

Goetz said he made the decision earlier than he anticipated because, as so many recruited players have found before, the colleges they were enrolling in had employed a lot of half-truths and flat-out lies in wooing him.

"It was very disappointing to me," said Goetz, who led the Eagles in scoring for two years. "I mean, here are people who claim to be concerned about my life and my future and they don't mean a word of it. I just got tired of it."

Also helping to hasten Goetz's decision was the fact he plans to wed Claudia McCreary, a high-school sweetheart, on Aug. 20.

"It wasn't just my future (he the NCAA coaches) were messing with, but Claudia's, too," Goetz said.

Goetz was asked why he didn't follow his junior college coach to Fresno.

"I think that Fresno will be good. That it's on its way and Coach Grant will be building a strong program. But I wanted in a winning program now ... over the next two years. San Diego State has a bunch of talented juniors and sophomores and I think they're going to do very well. I know Coach Grant will turn the program around at Fresno State but probably not within the next two years. After that I'll be out of school."

Goetz said he planned to leave for San Diego "immediately after leaving CSI" within the next three or four weeks.

"They've got a job lined up for me this summer. And it will give me a chance to play with the guys I'll be playing with next winter."

Goetz' decision also means that Magic Valley fans won't be totally in the dark about his future progress. As a senior he'll be playing in the Western Athletic Conference and that league's games are televised each Saturday into this area.

CSI baseball team's winning skein enough to challenge cage prowess

By JEFF SHIER

Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho baseball team is working on a winning streak to rival the one piled up by the Golden Eagle cage squad.

The Eagles have won 19 straight games (28 overall) and have clinched a spot in the National Junior College Athletic Association on Northwest regional tournament to be played in Oregon next month.

Earlier in the year the Eagles defeated the team which is currently ranked first in the NCAA, Yavapai, Ariz.

The Eagle success can be attributed to a well-balanced combination of all the ingredients necessary for winning baseball, according to coach Jim Walker. The Eagles have speed, power, consistent enough hitting to bail out the pitchers when necessary, and good enough pitching to keep the opposition off the basepaths while the hitters are trying to solve an ace pitcher.

Pitchers facing the CSI batting order had better not study up on the stats before the game. There are no easy outs in the Eagle lineup.

The Eagle team batting average as of last week was an incredible .333. When a team is getting one hit out of every three batters sent to the plate, it's tough for an opposing pitcher to get out of an inning without sweating a little.

Center fielder Rusty McNeely leads off for the Eagles, and he's the kind of guy you want to keep off the bases. Going into last weekend's game he'd stolen 21 bases. But McNeely and coach Walker has given a permanent green light the bases is not that easy to keep off the bases. He's hitting .334.

Following McNeely in the order in shortstop Mark Sardar. People who hit second behind good runners aren't supposed to hit for an average. They're expected to unselishly move the leadoff man along with sacrifices or hit-and-run. But Sardar has managed to hit a .333 clip so far.

Second baseman Steve McManan hits third in the order. McManan, a 6'2", 180 pound Idaho Falls product, is the leading home run hitter in the NJCAA. He has banged out 12 round trippers, knocked in 35 runs and is hitting .384. His batting percentage is an astronomical .516.

So you pitch around McManan, right? Okay. First baseman Bobby Acord bats fourth, and his average is .400 with eight homers and 33 RBI's.

Is there any let-up farther down the order. Right fielder Jerry Hollett hits fifth. He's batting .333 with eight homers and 33 RBI's. Jim Dawson, left field, bats sixth and is hitting at a .409 clip. Third sacker Gene Hitter Pete Booras is next with a .293 average and 32 RBI's. Paddy Hamilton, catcher, rounds out the order at .318.

"We've scored a lot of runs," deadpans Walker. "We've had it tough because our pitching has been suspect at times."

The pitching staff may be weaker than the hitters, but not by much. The ace of the staff is Mike Munns, Caldwell. Minns' record is 7-2, and the two losses were to third-ranked Central Arizona, last year's NCAA champs.

"(Mike Munns) is the kid we would look to win the big game or stop a losing streak," Walker said. Munns throws nothing but heat; Walker continued, and he's got a slow windup with an explosive delivery that is tough for batters to anticipate.

Munns' strikeout average of 12 per inning (45 in 33 innings) speaks for itself.

Backing up Munns in the rotation are freshman Scott Job (5-0), Scott Wells (4-0), Tim Mueller (4-1) and sophomore Tim Martin (3-1).

Steve Forge (soph) and Monty Crabtree (F), are the club's firemen.

So with all this talent, why isn't CSI nationally ranked? Coach Walker feels that it doesn't matter what you're ranked when you get to the regionals or nationals. "I kind of like to be a sleeper and not have people worrying about us. We can be accused and it could hurt us," Walker explains.

Walker feels the Eagles have a good shot at making the nationals this year, but he's not too worried about next year either, except for one thing.

Eight of Walker's starters are freshman pitchers, are freshmen this year, and the only cloud that dims next year's bright prospects are the tempting offers which may be forthcoming from major colleges or the major leagues.

Munns is definitely major college material, Walker said, but will probably sign with the pros in the June draft. Both Cincinnati and Los Angeles are high on Munns, according to Walker.

McManan, also a

Network studying ranking of boxer

NEW YORK (UPI) — ABC sports said Wednesday the No. 10 world ranking of Alfredo Evangelista is under investigation, but denied the network is "on the verge" of cancelling its telecast of the May 18 heavyweight title fight between the Spaniard and champion Muhammad Ali.

"We are investigating the ranking," said Jim Spence, vice president of ABC Sports, "and if there is wrongdoing in the ranking that could well end in cancelling the telecast. But so far there is no evidence of wrongdoing."

Evangelista is ranked 10th by both the World Boxing Council and World Boxing Association.

"We have had communication with the WBA and WBC and they have said the ranking is legitimate. What we are still studying is the evolution of those rankings. If they were not proper, that would lead us to make a decision whether to go ahead with the telecast. We need the investigation to be completed by the end of the week."

"My feeling is we will go ahead with the telecast. We are at present committed to a telecast on May 18."

The fight is scheduled for the Capital Centre in Lansdowne, Md.

"We are not on the verge of cancelling," Spence added. "If the Evangelista ranking is not proper, then the fight would not be sanctioned by the WBA and WBC. We would have to find a heavyweight champion, and our agreement calls for the fight to be sanctioned by the WBA and WBC."

Nicklaus heads Houston field

WOODLANDS, Tex. (UPI) — Jack Nicklaus heads a strong field which begins play Thursday in the $200,000 Houston Open Golf Tournament — made popular the past few years by a pleasant country atmosphere, an arm-twisting local pro and a manicured course.

The irony this week is that The Woodlands course shows five pretty greens.

"Not bad," said Arnold Palmer of the 7,000-yard, pinelined course 30 miles north of Houston. "But not as good as last year. Looks like it had a bad winter, that's all."

Palmer has been a regular since the Houston Open moved to The Woodlands three years ago, but many pros in the 156-player field have not.

Nicklaus, 37, and six of the other top 10 PGA money winners will play. Those six are former University of Houston golfer Bruce Lietzke, former University of Texas golfer Rik Massengale, Mark Hayes, Andy Bean, Larry Nelson and Jim Simons, the New Orleans champion.

Nicklaus has not played in town since the 1969 U.S. Open was held in Houston. He has never played The Woodlands course, but neither had defending champion Lee Elder until the week of his tournament victory last year.

Dave Stockton, the PGA winner who will not play at Houston, was in town this week for a Tournament Policy Board meeting.

"Gotta strong field here," he said. "Ought to be some kind of record. I thought they were awful quick about releasing me early. Didn't even put up a fight."

Stockton said his son's religious communion caused him to cancel.

Colorful host pro Doug Sanders will be playing, but by tee time he will have done his work. He is credited with luring many of the top names back to the tournament.

The golf course superintendent, Carlton Gipson, said the greens were in the best shape possible following January's 20-degree weather.

"I've been baby-sitting with these greens for the last three weeks," Gipson said. "We've done everything humanly possible."

Elder, 42, won the rain-delayed 1976 Houston Open by making six strokes on the 36-hole final day with rounds of 67 and 69 for a 136-under-par 278. Forrest Feeler was second, one stroke back; and George Burns tied for third with second-round leader Wally Armstrong, two strokes off the pace.

"I'm crazy about that course," Elder said. "It's a thinking man's course, with a variety of shots. You have to drive well, but you don't have to be a long driver in order to conquer it."

U.S. favored in Davis Cup matches

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — Experts are making the United States a slight favorite over Argentina in the American Zone Davis Cup final, but the home court advantage and a repeat performance by a lightly regarded newcomer could give the U.S. team a nasty surprise.

The five-match final will open Friday on the crushed brick courts of the venerable Buenos Aires Lawn Tennis Club, a Tudor-style sports facility that has hosted international tournaments for 90 years.

Argentina's team is led by left-hander Guillermo Vilas, currently ranked number three in the world, and the local press concedes that he will probably have to win both his singles matches for the U.S. team to have a chance of winning the tournament.

This could turn out to be difficult, particularly when Vilas pits his top spin forehand against offensive-minded Brian Gottfried, number five internationally and one of the hottest players on the professional tour. Still, Vilas has not lost in singles in his home country in five years.

Gottfried, who arrived here Monday on the same airplane with Vilas, said the series "will be very hard," especially since "Vilas is one of the best in the world." He added that the U.S. team "are very well prepared and we hope to win."

Argentina got a small break when Harold Solomon, the United States' best player on clay, was forced to miss the series because of illness. Captain Tony Trabert picked Dick Stockton to play second singles, and Stockton's experience should give him a definite edge over Argentina's Ricardo Cano.

However, the stubby Cano, little known and lightly regarded before the South American zone final against Chile last month, defeated 22-year-old veteran Pat Cornejo in an agonizing five-setter, then swamped top-rated Chilean Jaime Pillot in straight sets to win the decisive third point in the Argentine's 4-1 victory.

NY sends malcontents to A's

BALTIMORE (UPI) — The New York Yankees, in line with their policy of unloading potential free agents, Wednesday traded controversial righthanded pitcher, Dock Ellis, and shortstop Marty Perez, their last two unsigned players, to the Oakland Athletics. The deal was announced by Yankees manager Tom Post, who said the team was "not in a hurry" to sign the players.

Ellis, 27, was 17-6 with New York last year, his only season with the team following eight years with Pittsburgh, and had a 3.10 ERA. In recent weeks Ellis had blasted — Yankee owner George Steinbrenner for failing to provide the pitcher with what he felt was a "respectable" raise based on his 1976 statistics.

This spring, Ellis had a 1-1 mark and 1.80 ERA. His best season was 1971 when he had a 19-9 record and 3.05 ERA with the Pirates and was the starting pitcher for the National League in the All-Star Game.

Perez, 30, acquired from the San Francisco Giants during spring training for Terry Whitfield, had batted only four times with two hits. Last season Perez, who also plays second and third base, batted .257 in 124 games with the Giants and Atlanta Braves. He had expressed discontent with the amount of playing time he was receiving.

Murray, with Syracuse of the International League, is a speed merchant. The 24-year-old outfielder stole 59 bases last year with West Haven of the AA Eastern League, his second minor league stolen base title, and added two more steals in eight games with the Yankees. He is signed to a one-year contract, the only one of the three players acquired by Oakland Wednesday who can not become a free agent at the end of the season. The A's lost eight free agents at the end of the 1976 season.

Torrez is off to a 3-1 start at Oakland this year after a 16-12, 2.50 ERA season in 1976. The 30-year-old right-hander just recently signed a one-year contract. Torrez pitched previously for Montreal and Baltimore. His best season was 1975 when he had a 17-20 record and 3.06 ERA for the Orioles, who sent him to Oakland during the week before Opening Day last season.

The trade was announced here by the Yankees before their game with the Orioles Wednesday night.

As owner Charlie Finley said Murray was the key man in the trade for his club.

"We like the young man's speed and we are going to give him a chance to make the club right now," said Finley. "As for Ellis and Perez, I don't anticipate trouble signing either one of them."

Torrez signed for 1977 but can become a free agent at the end of the season, and since he has told Finley personally he will not return to the A's, the owner has been trying to deal him.

Finley said he is working on another deal and expects to complete it within 72 hours.

Nuggets need win only three straight

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — "There's only one thing left for us — win three in a row," Denver Coach Larry Brown said Wednesday in sizing up the remainder of the NBA quarterfinal series with Portland, which has the Nuggets down 3-1 and a game away from elimination.

The fifth, and possibly decisive game, is scheduled Sunday at the Nuggets home arena, and we need the four wins," said Brown.

Captain Dan Issel needs the title to heal his painfully injured little toe on his right foot. Guard Jim Brown is nursing a twisted ankle.

Issel played in spots in Tuesday night's 105-96 loss to Portland, which got a 25-point game from unheralded small forward Bob Gross. Issel scored 19 points, but the Blazers defense held hot-shooting David Thompson in check with but 10 points.

While Brown tries to regroup his Nuggets, Portland Coach Jack Ramsay gave his Blazers a day off Wednesday from the intensity of the playoffs.

Portland beat Chicago two games to one in a mini-series before taking on Denver.

"You don't win until it's 4-1," he said after victory number three. "I know. When I was general manager at Philadelphia we were 3-1 on Boston but the Celtics came back and won. If you let down, you can get blown out and we can't give Denver a life in the fifth game."

Ramsay called the performance by Gross in the Tuesday night victory, "the best game I've ever seen him play. He was magnificent on offense, steals, deflecting passes, and showing total court awareness."

Bobby Jones, named NBA defensive player of the year by Basketball Digest, was assigned to guard Gross. "He blends so well into what Portland does," said Jones. "I expected him to be a good player, but to the degree he's doing it in the playoffs. Maybe psychologically I underestimated him and thought I could sag off and help Paul Silas check Maurice Lucas."

Cey sets record as Dodgers edge Padres

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Ron Cey, continuing his torrid hitting drive home Tuesday to set a major league record for the month of April and took over the major league lead in home runs with his eighth of the season Wednesday night to key a 7-6 victory by the Los Angeles Dodgers over the San Diego Padres.

Cey, who also leads the Dodgers in batting with a .469 average following his three hits against San Diego, drove in Bill Russell from second base with a one-out single in the seventh to equal the April RBI mark of 27 set by Pittsburgh's Willie Stargatz in 1971 and by Reggie Jackson, then with Oakland, three years later.

Cey, who opened the fourth inning with his eighth homer, now has 29 hits to lead the lead in that department also. He has extended his hitting streak to 16 straight games.

The victory was the 12th in the last 13 outings for the Dodgers who are off to their best start since shifting to the west coast in 1958. Left-hander Doug Rau, with eight innings held by Charlie Hough, got the win to boost his record to 3-0 while the Dodgers boast a 14-5 mark.

ANAHEIM, Cal. (UPI) — Manny Sanguillen, on a 12-for-16 tear for the last three games, homered and singled to drive in three runs Wednesday night in helping the Oakland A's rebound from a 5-0 deficit for a 7-5 victory over the California Angels.

Sanguillen, the A's designated hitter, singled in a run in the third before stroking a two-run homer to put Oakland ahead for good, 6-5, in the fifth.

Anderson backs settlement with pro-grid owners

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Strong safety Dick Anderson of the Miami Dolphins said Wednesday a collective bargaining agreement with the National Football League owners was fair for a majority of football players.

Anderson, NFL Players Association president, testified in U.S. District Court to support a tentative $15.8 million financial award announced by Judge Earl Larson.

The terms of the financial settlement and collective bargaining agreement, reached earlier this year between the Players Association and club owners, are intertwined, attorneys for the two groups said.

"We tried to get something best for a majority of the players," Anderson said under cross examination. He said more than 2,000 players and former players benefited from the settlement and bargaining agreement.

Attorneys for 14 players contested the money settlement, or the bargaining agreement in the three-day hearing before Larson. They said certain provisions of the bargaining agreement are no better than the old Rozelle rule.

Before the rule was struck down by Larson, NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle would set the compensation a club would receive for losing a free agent.

Eugene Clements, an attorney one of the dissenting players, Elmo Wright, said several famous players such as Dick Butkus, formerly of the Chicago Bears, never were informed of the settlement.

Larson ruled Clements out of order for extending his questions beyond his client's interests.

Before sitting down, Clements said, "Your honor, I was prepared to show that the settlement is not fair and reasonable. The role of this court is to prevent collusion — I would never charge collusion between the Players Association and the owners — but damage to football over the next 30 years."

The preliminary findings awarded $2.1 million to plaintiffs in the John Mackey suit and $13.7 million for the Kermitt Alexander case, which was a class action to cover all football players.

Court to decide on Turner suspension

ATLANTA (UPI) — Ted Turner's battle to sidestep a year's suspension as president of the Atlanta Braves returns to court Thursday.

Turner's plea for a permanent injunction against the suspension handed down by Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn on Jan. 25 will be heard by Federal Judge Newell Eidson, who got Kuhn to lift the suspension until he rules on the matter.

Turner stopped Turner with the suspension and penalized the Braves a draft choice because the Atlanta Braves allegedly tampered with former San Francisco outfielder Gary Matthews before he went on the market in last fall's free agent reentry draft.

The Atlanta Braves Board of Directors filed suit against Kuhn last month, charging the INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI) — Time and place seem to be on the side of the Los Angeles Lakers in their NBA playoff series with the Golden State Warriors, tied at two games apiece.

The next game in the best-of-seven series is Friday night on the Lakers' home court, the Forum. They have a few days to rest their injured, particularly Lucius Allen, a key offensive cog, who dislocated a toe in the first game a week ago.

Allen led the Lakers in assists and was the third leading scorer during the regular season so it's easy to understand why Coach Jerry West wants him in the lineup.

The place is important to the Lakers too since they set an NBA record during the regular season for victories on a home court. They went 37-4 at the Forum. At one point, they took 21 in a row at home. They have won their last 12 at home including the first two playoff games over the Warriors.

In the fourth game of the series Tuesday night at Oakland, the Lakers weren't really in it. Although they got 41 points from Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, they trailed practically all the way, losing 114-103. The big Laker center also grabbed 18 rebounds.

"This was the best we've played in the series," said Rick Barry, who got 26 points for Golden State. "We played good defense and got the ball up court quickly which is our game."

Cazzie Russell, the Lakers' second leading scorer, got only six points. He has a bruised thigh, due to contact with an opponent's knee. By Lamar has a similar injury so the gap between games should help him as well as Russell and Allen.

West was happy to be back home with his crew.

"The Warriors, simply played excellent basketball in Oakland," he said. "They were very aggressive and shot well while we were simply careless in the game that tied the playoffs."

"They were able to run because they played good

Blyleven admits throwing beanball

KANSAS CITY (UPI) — Bert Blyleven, after hurling his sixth career shutout against Kansas City, admitted Wednesday night he deliberately hit Royals' catcher Darrell Porter with a pitch in the ninth inning.

Blyleven said his action stemmed from an incident in the top of the inning when Kansas City pitcher Marty Pattin sailed a pitch over the head of Texas outfielder Juan Beniquez.

Beniquez earlier in the game hit a three-run homer to help the Rangers post a 5-0 victory.

"I've got to protect my players or you can lose your respect," said Blyleven. "I didn't care who I hit. It so happens that Porter was the one — he's their catcher and he calls them in and out."

"I went for his thigh, the middle part of his body. If it had been a 1-0 game it might have been different. It had to be wild that was the inning to be in."

"I'd rather have the respect of my teammates than a shutout."

The incident cleared both benches but no punches were thrown — and the umpires restored order in a matter of minutes.

Suspension threat told by Aaron

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI) — Hank Aaron says he was threatened with suspension only weeks after he broke Babe Ruth's career home run record in 1974.

Aaron told the Orlando Sentinel Star that he was reprimanded by National League President Charles Feeney in a telegram and threatened with suspension after he signed a cup of strawberries into the face of Atlanta sportswriter Frank Hyland.

"I got the telegram from Feeney the next day," Aaron said. "I can't remember the exact wording, but he said he would suspend me if anything like that happened again."

Aaron, now the Braves farm director, was here to watch Atlanta's Southern League Savannah farm team play the Orlando Tigers.

"The story about Feeney's suspension threat has never been told," Aaron said. "I don't know why it hasn't, though. I think there were a number of people who knew about it."

"I guess it doesn't make any difference now."

He said he regrets the strawberry incident and later apologized and reestablished a friendship with Hyland.

Aaron said he had been under tremendous pressure from reporters from all media during his successful assault on Ruth's record of 714 home runs. He retired at the end of last season after hitting 755.

"I was just trying to be a man through all of that," Aaron said. "I had to take a lot of abuse, but I did my best to stay cool and not let any of it get to me. I was trying to be as cooperative as I could be and get along."

DEAR ABBY: I am a 23-year-old woman with a problem almost ashamed to admit, but I need an answer, and the only one I can ask without embarrassing myself, is goes:

I've been seeing a 16-year-old boy, and we really dig each other. He's very mature for his age (physically, that's when he told me he was 20, I believed him). But, it was dumb of me, but we were at his house and his parents walked in on us and caught us in "the act." Now that an adult male who is caught having relations with a minor girl can be arrested for statutory rape, but the same hold true for an adult female and an underage boy?

His parents said they are going to have me arrested. Can they get me for statutory rape?

WORRIED IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR WORRIED: No, but in California, you can be charged with "contributing to the delinquency of a minor."

Worried Californian

DEAR ABBY: As a lawyer, I would like to comment on your answer to SPEECHLESS, wherein you advised her to tell Grandma to "write down" how she wanted her money, silver and heirlooms to be divided after she died.

Abby, please tell your readers that unless Grandma writes it down in the form of a will, the only way her favorite loved ones are going to get what she wanted them to get is to climb through the back window while they're sleeping Grandma out the front door.

Please correct this as soon as possible, or all my clients for whom I have prepared wills will think I have overcharged them, and they'll be out in the parking lot flashing my tires.

LAWYER

DEAR LAWYER: You're right. I should have told SPEECHLESS to advise Grandma to engage a lawyer to draw up a proper will because most of those handwritten do-it-yourself wills aren't worth the paper they're written on. In matters having to do with the law, it's wise (and cheaper in the long run) to hire a lawyer and pay him for what he knows.

DEAR ABBY: I have just experienced one of the most uncomfortable afternoons of my life. I had a luncheon for three close friends, one of whom is a widow. The other two women spent the entire afternoon bragging about the gifts their husbands had given them, the trips they had taken and their plans for future trips. The little widow had nothing to contribute to the conversation, so she just sat and listened. I could tell she was hurt.

Don't women realize how often they do this? I am furious because this happened in my home. I haven't as yet had the opportunity to tell those women how inconsiderate they were, but I hope you will mention it in your column because they both read it.

DISGUSTED IN DALLAS

DEAR DISGUSTED: I shall. But don't hesitate to let the offending women know your feelings. And should you ever find yourself in the company of such thoughtless and insensitive people, steer the conversation to another subject.

your health

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb,

I am 59 and my problem is my back. I have osteoporosis. It started about 10 months ago. I had pains in my back and difficulty getting up from a chair. I didn't see my doctor for about two months. By then the pain was unbearable. I was X-rayed and they showed I had three collapsed vertebrae and my upper spine was beginning to bend forward.

I was fitted with an orthopedic back brace and I wore it for seven months. I didn't think it helped. My stomach was protruding. My waist was 26 inches all my life and now it is 34. I haven't gained any weight; I'm still 116 pounds.

The hunch in my back is worse. In fact I'm pushed forward so much that it is affecting my heart. It has a rapid irregular beat. I'm taking Inderal.

Now I have started having leg cramps at night. So bad I can't sleep. Last month I went to see an orthopedic specialist. He took X-rays and told me the same thing as my own doctor — there is no cure for osteoporosis.

He told me to walk two or three miles a day, take calcium, stick to a high protein diet which I can't because of my high cholesterol count — no eggs, whole milk, cheeses or anything with oils.

He prescribed Premarin. I still have all my female organs, and I have gone through the menopause with no problems. Why should I take Premarin and take a chance on getting cancer?

I hope you have some suggestions as I am at my wit's end.

Dear Reader,

Osteoporosis, dissolving bones, is hard to treat. It can progress to cause the type of problems you describe. That is why I urge women to be sure they get enough calcium in their diet. This problem is five times as common in women on calcium deficient diets.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 6-10 which outlines what we know about the treatment of osteoporosis. You may want to discuss the possibility of taking fluoride tablets, vitamin D and calcium treatments with your doctor. This method has been used with some success at the Mayo Clinic and the references to the work are included in that issue. How much reversal you can get is questionable but it is important to you that the progression be stopped. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it.

You are probably not getting enough calcium. You can take calcium pills if you need to do so. Despite your high cholesterol you can use fortified skim milk — almost devoid of fat and cholesterol and rich in calcium. You can use low-fat cottage cheese — the type that is questionable but it is important to you that the progression be stopped. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it.

Meats do not contain much calcium. If you use lean meats, fish and poultry you will not be getting too much cholesterol. The lean flesh raw contains only about 70 milligrams in a three-and-a-half ounce (100 gram) portion. You can consume 300 milligrams of cholesterol a day and not exceed the usual allowance.

Hemingway display

Hemingway 'popular gringo in Cuba'

HAVANA, Cuba (UPI) — The late novelist Ernest Hemingway is more revered in Cuba today than any American.

"He was very close to us," Cuban leader Fidel Castro once said in a televised interview. "It is incredible how wide-spread his popularity is."

Castro credits Hemingway's Spanish Civil War novel, "For Whom the Bell Tolls," with giving him tips on guerrilla warfare, when the revolutionaries were waging a successful battle against dictator Fulgencio Batista during the late 1950s.

"I can tell you," Castro said, "that of the works that helped me develop tactics for fighting against Batista's army, this novel by Hemingway was one of them."

There's a plaque on the wall of the Ambos Mundos Hotel where Hemingway wrote much of "For Whom the Bell Tolls."

There's another plaque in the Floridita bar —

"The Cradle of the Dalguin" — over the spot where Hemingway used to sit.

The gold medal he received with his 1954 Nobel Prize for Literature is in the Shrine of Our Lady of Charity in El Cobre, a gift of the author to the Cuban people.

Hemingway's bust looks out over the Bay of Caiman, the tiny fishing village near Havana where he spent much of his time and where the film version of "The Old Man and the Sea" was made.

It was also at Caiman where Castro and Hemingway met for the only time. The two tall, burly, bearded men were handing out awards at the Hemingway fishing tournament which is still held every July.

Castro was the man who rescued Hemingway's own shrine, his beloved farm, El Vigia, in nearby San Francisco de Paula, which had fallen into ruin after the author's suicide in 1961. The following year Castro ordered the one-story, white colonial house, bought in 1939 with the proceeds of "For Whom the Bell Tolls," made into a museum.

Now, between 4,000 and 5,000 people a month visit the museum, according to its curator, Maximo Gomez. He expects the number to increase greatly once American tourists start returning to Cuba with the lifting of travel restrictions by President Carter.

The house is laid out as if Hemingway had just stepped out for a walk around the eight-acre property. The bar cart is set up. The bed is covered with the magazines he used to read and on top of a worn bookcase is the typewriter at which he wrote standing up in his stocking feet.

"He was very much beloved by us Cubans," said Gomez.

At the white, pillared gate to the property is one of the Cubans who knew him best, Gavino Enrique Souza, who entered Hemingway's employ in 1952 as a 17-year-old gardener.

"He had 11 servants at one time and he treated us all as if we were members of his family," said Souza. "If anyone in town ever needed help, he'd give it to them."

"He was a generous, human man," he added. "He was the most popular gringo in Cuba and still is."

Souza, a silver-haired man with a shirt open to his waist, recalled some of the celebrities who passed through the gate he now tends, such as actress Ava Gardner, Spanish bullfighter Dominiquin and baseball player Jackie Robinson.

Stretched out in the sun in the driveway were three other vestiges of the past, cats descended from the ones which Hemingway used to pamper. Souza said Hemingway used to have up to 50 cats roaming the property.

Great sport

ANIMALS like to ride on motorcycles as much as humans. Here, Benji sits at attention as he rides with his mistress, Ann Wannamaker, Portland, Ore. To make Benji's ride a bit more comfortable Ann puts a piece of rug on the gas tank for padding. (UPI)

Travel companion

CATS as well as dogs like motorcycling. Karl Mitchell, San Pedro, Calif., takes "Mitten the Kitten," his 1 1/2-year-old black cat, for a ride. Mitten, perched on the handlebars, has ridden more than 1,000 miles with Karl, who says he is not at all superstitious about black cats. (UPI)

Guild hears review

TWIN FALLS — The Booklore Literary Art Guild held its April meeting at the home of Mrs. Verna Cox with a review of the book "Imperial Woman" by Pearl S. Buck. Mrs. Katherine Cook gave the book review and Mrs. Helen Horzinger gave the author's sketch. A gifted thought was presented by Mrs. Ruby Victor.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Reva Clark and Mrs. Trena Vandenberg, co-hostesses.

Wendell miss appointed

WENDELL — Helen Nelson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Maltz, Wendell, has been appointed acting administrator to the 103-bed Panorama City Convalescent Center, Olympia, Wash. She is a 1971 graduate of Wendell High School and received her bachelor of science degree in community health and gerontology from the University of Utah in 1975. Nelson has been on the Panorama administrative staff for the past year.

She is married to TS B.K. Nelson, Ft. Lewis, Wash. Her appointment was effective April 18.

Secretaries elect

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley Legal Secretaries Association elected officers for the 1977-1978 year. The new officers are Maureen McClung, president; Ruth Thrall, vice president; Barbara Morse, secretary; Lucinda Reichert, treasurer; Charlene Hine, Nals representative, and Billy Joe Fairchild, director.

The chapter legal secretary of the year is Barbara Morse, secretary for the firm of Hart and Burdick, Jerome. Mrs. Morse will complete at the upcoming fifth annual meeting and legal education seminar in Pocatello April 29-30 and May 1 for the title of legal secretary of the year for the state of Idaho.

"Bosses Night" will be May 6 at the Ramada Inn in Burley.

4-H club holds meet

TWIN FALLS — The Tip-Top Livestock 4-H Club held its meeting this past week.

Officers elected were Brenda Sayers, president; vice president was Stan White, and Carrie Peterson was named secretary. Scott Sayers was named treasurer.

Club members were also given project books, and the collection of newspapers and beer cans to raise money was discussed.

The club will put up a window display on the downtown mall during 4-H Week, May 1 to 7.

The next meeting will be held April 28 at the home of Mary Peterson.

Denim Dudes meet

TWIN FALLS — The Denim Dudes 4-H Club held the April meeting at the home of Travis Erickson.

There were 10 present and the minutes were read.

The group discussed a rocket launching date and decided to participate in the Johnny Horizon Day cleanup. Also discussed was a trip to Tandy's Leathercraft Store.

Erickson gave a demonstration on leather tools and patterns. Refreshments were served by Danny Guenther.

The next meeting will be at the home of Lincoln Cowan May 10th at 7:30 p.m.

Buddy Poppy Day set

GLENN'S FERRY — April 29th was picked for Buddy Poppy Day at the Thursday evening meeting of the auxiliary to the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Election of officers was held with Mrs. Leslie Beam chosen as president; Mrs. Homer Hanke, vice president; Mrs. Clifford Mitchell, treasurer; Mrs. William Owen, chaplain; Gloria Owens, conductor; Mrs. David Ickes, guard, and Mrs. William Peterson, trustee.

The group decided to have a potluck post and auxiliary dinner on May 12th. Mrs. Zoe Hull was named as poppy chairman.

Valley Briefs

TWIN FALLS — David McIntyre, Idaho State University undergraduate student in physics, received an award for excellence in presentation of a sci-miffic paper at the Idaho Academy Science meeting over the weekend at ISU. McIntyre, a junior, spoke on "Radiation Effects on DNA-histone."

MR. AND MRS. RICHARD FOGERSON

Couple marries in Boise rites

HUNT — Rose Marie O'Connor and Richard Fogerson were united in marriage in a double-ring ceremony April 15 at St. John's Cathedral, Boise.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tom O'Connor, Hunt. The bridegroom is the son of Lloyd Fogerson and Mrs. Fern Burton, Boise.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length, knit gown with high-lace neckline and long sleeves with lace cuffs. The elbow-length veil was made by the bride and featured an orange blossom headpiece from her mother's bridal veil.

The bride carried a cascade of pink and yellow baby roses with aqua elegance, white baby's breath and ivy trail.

Darlene Foukal, Boise, was maid of honor. Helen Spain, and Johnnie Burton, sister of the bridegroom, both Boise, were bridesmaids.

Randy Harris, Boise, cousin of the bridegroom, served as best man with John O'Connor, Hunt, brother of the bride, and Phil LaMont, Kennewick, Wash., as ushers.

Linda Colvin and Beverly Pyke, Boise, were soloist and guitarist respectively.

Donna Shriner, Boise, sister of the bridegroom, was in charge of the guestbook.

A reception was held in the parish hall. Guests were served at tables covered with lace and centered with floral arrangements.

The bride's table was covered with white lace and centered with a traditional three-tiered wedding cake topped with yellow satin bells and decorated with pink, yellow and aqua roses. Two chocolate bridegroom's cakes topped with white icing and matching roses flanked the wedding cake.

Mrs. Randy Harris, Boise, cut and served the cake.

Sisters of the bride, Angela and Jenny O'Connor, poured coffee and punch.

Monica O'Connor, Hunt, sister of the bride, and Mary Anne Keegan, Salt Lake City, arranged gifts.

Out-of-town guests attended from Richland and Kennewick, Wash.; Mountain Home, Twin Falls, Jerome, Eden and Hazelton; San Francisco, Calif.; and Frederick, Md.

Bridal showers were given by Helen Spain, Darlene Foukal and Linda Colvin and friends of the bride from St. Alphonsus Hospital, Boise, where she was employed as a registered nurse.

The couple lives in Richland, Wash., where the bridegroom is employed by ERDA as a chemical engineer.

diamond finesse that he would take later.

So, as soon as the bidding ended, West led his deuce of diamonds. There was no diamond finesse, but the lead did cause South to go wrong another way.

South went up with dummy's ace, led a spade, finessed the queen, cashed the ace, ruffed his last spade, cashed dummy's ace of trumps, and was faced with the problem of getting back to his hand. He had to ruff a diamond.

He should have ruffed low. A 5-4 diamond break was less likely than a 4-1 trump break, but he did ruff high. This established West's 10 as a defensive trick and there was no way to pick up East's queen of clubs.

Ask the Jacobys

♠ Axxx ♥ QJx ♦ KQx ♣ Jxx

The answer is that this is one 13 high-card-point hand that we pass in any seat. An opening bid is too likely to lead to a minus score.

By Oswald & James Jacoby

North and South really staggered into six hearts. Not that their bidding was bad, but rather that they almost stopped several times along the way.

While they were moving slowly on, West was doing some thinking of his own and came to the conclusion that if they did bid a heart his best chance to beat the contract would be to lead his deuce of diamond in the hope that he might cause South to refuse a

GRANOLA CANDY BARS

1/2 cup butter or margarine
1/2 cup packed brown sugar
1/4 cup honey
1 tsp. vanilla
1/2 tsp. salt
4 1/2 cups granola-type cereal
2/3 cup chopped nuts, unsweetened shredded coconut or sunflower seeds.
Melt butter or margarine over low heat in a 3-quart or larger pan. Remove from heat and add sugar, honey, vanilla and salt and stir until blended. Stir in the cereal, nuts, coconut or sunflower seeds.

Turn into a well-greased 10 by 15 inch baking pan. Press firmly to form even layer. Bake uncovered in a 400-degree oven until browned and bubbly — about 15 to 20 minutes.

Cool completely and cut into bars. Makes about 32.
