

Surgery increase found

By GEORGE WILEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Like women across the nation, more and more southern Idaho women are having their reproductive systems removed surgically.

While local doctors say they haven't noticed much change in the number of hysterectomies performed locally, statistics show hysterectomies done at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital have increased dramatically in the last 15 years.

One local doctor says part of the reason for any increase may be that the uterus has lost value in an age of casual attitudes toward birth control and abortion.

Whatever the reason, the growth in the number of hysterectomies is striking.

In the five-year period from 1962 to 1966, according to MVMH administrator James Rosenbaum, 480 hysterectomies were performed at the hospital. In the next five years that figure increased to 724, a jump of about 5.68 per cent. In the following five years from 1972 to 1976, the hospital admitted 1,023 patients for hysterectomies, a gain of about 41.2 per cent over the previous five years and a gain of about 113 per cent over the original figure.

Gynecologist Dr. George H. Miller says the increase isn't due to surgeons trying to make money.

"We make money from doing hysterectomies, there's no doubt about that," he said. "We like to make money, we like to do hysterectomies. I don't believe I've ever done a hysterectomy with that (money) as a motivating factor or just for the profit involved."

Gynecologist Dr. Fen Covington agrees with Miller, as does gynecologist Dr. Stephen Green.

"There has to be a fine ethical line as to how you present the situation to the patient," said Green. "I wouldn't attempt to coerce a patient into having a hysterectomy done who didn't want it done."

"I don't think anyone here would do that for that purpose (simply to make money)," Covington added. "We've been accused of it sometimes by disgruntled patients."

The charge for a hysterectomy runs to $500 to

...which is also a sterilizing procedure.

"All three doctors say they don't notice a significantly higher number of hysterectomies being done even though statistics at the hospital suggest otherwise.

While the doctors say they don't pressure patients into hysterectomies for sterilization purposes, although they do advocate the procedure strongly in life-saving cases of tumors, bleeding and other problems.

While the doctors say they don't push hysterectomies, they agree more women are requesting them.

The reason is often simple — the women have finished having children and they want to rid themselves of the discomfort of continuing menstrual cycles.

"If the uterus could be taken out with no risk in every woman who is done having her children, she'd be better off," Miller said. "But the risk of major surgery has to be balanced with how bad the patient is bothered by her symptoms.

And as a side benefit from the surgery, the patient will never get two of the most common forms of cancer in females, cancer of the cervix and the uterus, which includes the cervix."

Miller argues most critics of the rise in the number of hysterectomies are males, who simply don't understand the discomforts some women experience with their periods.

"I would venture to guess that if Ralph Nader (one critic of the increase) had bleeding hemorrhoids and he had to wear 10 pads a month, and he knew an operation would do away with that bleeding, he would go ahead and have it done," Miller said. "And how do you think a woman feels who not only has to change the pads but has pain associated with it or is bleeding so heavily she doesn't dare venture out that day?"

Miller also points out the surgery is safer now than it was 10 years ago. "I've never had a patient die post operatively in 300 to 400 procedures."

She smiles for spring

LONELY AND neglected through the months of winter, this swinging horse gallops into life under the laughing guidance of Shelley Roemer, 6, Filer. While the wind, rain and chill of the past few weeks have retarded the feeling of spring in the atmosphere of the Magic Valley, the season is as much a state of mind as a physical appearance and seldom can be denied.

Idaho rivers may go 'wild'

WASHINGTON — President Carter, as part of his environmental program, made a series of proposals Monday which should please wilderness supporters and enlarge off-road vehicle users.

Carter proposed immediate inclusion of eight rivers in the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System, including about 121 miles of the Bruneau River in southwestern Idaho and about 50 miles of the Salmon River, from east of Riggs to Macka Bar.

Carter also proposed the establishment of three new wilderness areas and the enlargement of several others, including the Idaho and Salmon River Breaks Primitive Areas in Idaho.

Martel Morache, environmental coordinator with the Idaho Department of Fish and Game who has worked closely with the Carter administration in developing the proposal for the contemplated Central Idaho Wilderness Area, said he has not yet had any contact with the Carter administration or the Forest Service as to the exact size of the proposed Idaho wilderness, but he speculated that it would be somewhere between 1.8 and 2.3 million acres.

The 1.8 million acre area is the size backed by Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus and the latter figure is the size proposed by the River of No Return Wilderness Council.

Carter also ordered federal agencies to immediately halt the use of ORV's on federal lands where they are causing environmental damage, a move which will infuriate ORV buffs.

Larry Woodard, associate Idaho director of the Bureau of Land Management, said his office has not yet received the executive order, but added, "Right now we know of no areas where we will take immediate steps to restrict ORV use."

The BLM, Woodard continued, will look closely at areas surrounding metropolitan areas and will work closely with ORV groups to establish use guidelines and with the Idaho Wildlife Federation and the Fish and Game Department to insure the protection of wildlife.

The new wilderness areas proposed by Carter are the Arches National Park, Canyonlands National Park and Capitol Reef National Park, all in Utah.

The wilderness areas earmarked for expansion are the Idaho and Salmon River Breaks Primitive Areas, the Beartooth-Abasarka area in Montana and Wyoming, and the Grand Canyon National Park wilderness proposal in Arizona, including the Colorado River and additional lands.

Soviets 'free' Podgorny

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet President Nikolai V. Podgorny was dropped from the Communist party's ruling politburo today in a surprise move that could be the prelude to his retirement as Soviet head of state.

The move was taken by the powerful 290-member Soviet Communist party Central Committee at a closed meeting in the Kremlin today.

Moscow Radio said the central committee had "freed" Podgorny of his duties on the 15-man politburo which rules the nation. It gave no explanation for the move.

Diplomatic observers said the decision was likely the prelude to retirement of the 74-year-old Soviet head of state.

Since 1965 Podgorny has held the least powerful of the three top Soviet leadership positions — with party General Secretary Leonid I. Brezhnev in the top job and Premier Alexei N. Kosygin in the next most important position.

Observers said if Podgorny remained as president after losing his seat on the politburo it would be as a totally powerless figurehead.

They believed it more likely that the formal retirement of Podgorny would be announced when the nation's parliament, the Supreme Soviet, convenes on June 16.

Today's session of the Central Committee was its first since Oct. 26, 1976.

Although there has been speculation about a Podgorny retirement in recent years, today's action by the central committee caught most observers off guard.

Podgorny during March made an arduous two-week tour through Africa and returned home looking healthier than either Brezhnev or Kosygin.

In other organizational changes disclosed by Moscow Radio the Central Committee announced the appointment of Konstantin V. Rusakov, 67, a close aide of Brezhnev, as a Secretary of the Central Committee.

Rusakov replaced Deputy Premier Konstantin Kalushiev, 60, who was dropped from the Central Committee in connection with his recent assignment as Soviet chief delegate to Comecon, the East European economic bloc.

Spud king's plea could prove costly

BOISE (UPI) — J. R. Simplot lost a lot more than $40,000 in a fine, $1 million in back taxes, civil penalties and interest, when he pleaded no contest to falsely filing federal income tax returns.

A check with state and federal agencies indicated Monday he still may be liable to state prosecution if the filed improper returns with the State of Idaho and may lose several citizenship privileges as a result of the federal charges.

Acting U. S. Attorney Paul L. Westburg said that when Simplot stood before Federal Judge A. Andrew Hink and pleaded nolo contendere to four felony counts against him a judgment of conviction was entered against him.

Although the judge did not find the 68-year-old millionaire Idaho industrialist guilty of the effect of the judgment was the same as though Simplot had pleaded guilty or been convicted, Westburg said.

"That can deprive him of the right to vote; the right to hold public office and the right, in certain cases, to carry firearms. The latter could deprive Simplot of some if not all his hunting privileges.

A spokesman for the Boise office of the Treasury Department's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms said it is unlawful for anyone under indictment for, or who has been convicted of a felony to receive any firearms which are transported in interstate commerce.

He said Simplot might be able to retain guns he owned prior to his court appearance. But, unless Simplot gets special dispensation from Uncle Sam, he said, "his hunting days are going to be pretty severely restricted."

That could be a blow to man who has been an avid hunter.

To be cleared for firearm possession and use he will have to apply to the Bureau of Washington, D. C., headquarters for "relief of disability." An investigation then will have to be conducted to determine whether his possession or use of firearms would be detrimental to the public.

"Each case is decided on its own merits," the spokesman said.

In addition to these problems, Simplot also may have passport problems with some countries who consider convicted felons undesirable and will not admit them. His case, because of his international holdings, business interests and great wealth, possibly, might be different.

State officials also are taking a look at the Simplot case. Tax Commissioner Jenkin Palmer said the Internal Revenue Service normally shares its information with state tax authorities. Attorney General Wayne L. Kidwell said he intends to ask the Tax Commission if there are any potential state charges against the potato king.

And Palmer said the commission will definitely look into the case.

human insulin genes in bacteria as well," the announcement said.

"These experiments are a major step toward mass producing human insulin biologically," the university said.

Insulin is a life-saving hormone created by the pancreas, which must be supplied artificially for diabetics. It is now obtained from beef and pigs, but these sources are insufficient to meet the worldwide demand, and some diabetics are allergic to beef and pig insulin.

Research is still required before it will be possible to make proteins, like insulin, from the basic chemical genetic material, which has now been isolated, they said.

However, scientists added, "It may soon become possible to grow insulin-producing bacteria in large quantities. Such bacteria could become a very important source of the life-saving hormone."

From the study of rat genes the researchers "have deduced the exact chemical composition of the original insulin protein in rats, including parts of the protein whose chemical structure had never been determined before," the announcement said.

The research was carried out by seven members of two laboratory teams headed by Dr. William J. Rutter, chairman of the department of biochemistry and biophysics, and Dr. Howard M. Goodman, professor of biochemistry.

They were able to achieve the breakthrough by using the controversial "recombinant DNA" technology in which the basic chemicals of heredity are studied, the university said. This requires that research with human genes be undertaken only under very strict conditions imposed to prevent the accidental creation of substances that could pose a threat to mankind.

Moluccan terrorists fire on woman; quiet on train

ASSEN, The Netherlands (UPI) — South Moluccan gunmen threatening to kill 105 children and teachers unless the government freed 72 jailed comrades opened fire today on a woman approaching the school but she was unharmed.

A few miles to the north, another group of gunmen held most hostages aboard a train where all was reported quiet. The two groups were demanding to be flown out of Holland along with several jailed comrades.

The Dutch justice ministry said "quite a number of shots" were "fired from the school after which children began crying. The gunmen then rang a bell on a telephone to say the body of a woman was lying in a bicycle shed by the school."

They called on two policemen to remove the woman, who police said was unharmed although she appeared mentally disturbed. The government said there was no indication the woman had children in the school.

Officials had no immediate explanation of how the woman got past the light police barrier around the school.

The spokeswoman said the Rev. Semol Meliary, a Protestant minister who mediated during a train seizure by Moluccans in December of 1975, offered to take a go-between even though the "South Moluccans" had already rejected any kind of mediation.

The gunman, who fired several shots twice earlier today, once for no apparent reason and the second time when two Moluccan women approached with food. Witnesses said children had been heard crying inside the school just before the first shots rang out.

Washington (UPI) — The nation has a new tax law, and its first impact will come in early June when withholding rates are adjusted to add up to $4 per week to most paychecks, while subtracting $1 per week from middle and upper income single persons.

But the real impact is expected between Jan. 1 and April 15 next year when almost 30 million Americans who use the standard deduction discover that tax filing has been made simple, and some of the others find they owe money because of that withholding change.

President Carter, surrounded by congressmen in a Rose Garden ceremony Monday, appeared happy with his task of signing the bill.

Washington (UPI) — The new tax law, which takes effect in early June, will allow a tax credit for business of $600 to $1,800 for each new employee hired above last year's employment levels.

If all goes as planned, one look at the table which lists the number of family members will be all that is required to figure how much tax is owed. All credits, exemptions and the standard deduction will be folded into these tables, eliminating the need for arithmetic.

Even those who itemize deductions will be able to use the new tables, although they still face the task of assembling and adding deductions. Those who itemize also will benefit initially from the change in withholding rates. Although the tax cut is intended only for those who use the standard deduction.

Environmentalists endorse new Carter policy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A program the White House calls the most important shift in environmental policy since the days of Theodore Roosevelt is drawing happy comment from environmentalists.

"It's like a breeze of fresh air after an eight-year pollution alert," said Peter Harnik of Environmental Action. "We feel the President understands the problems and is moving in the right direction towards solving them."

Charles Warren, head of the Council on Environment

Quality which advises the President on such matters said President Carter's message to Congress Monday is a break with the past because it recognizes a "higher level of concern" about the environment beyond simply setting aside land for conservation's sake.

"It's the sharpest shift on environmental matters since Theodore Roosevelt was president," Warren said, noting that Roosevelt began the National Parks system.

Harnik said his group is pleased with the emphasis on the health effects of pollution singled out in the message, especially those dealing with environmentally-caused cancer.

One area in which Harnik's group was disappointed, however, was Carter's decision to order a six-month study on the whole issue of recycling, including whether bans on throw-away beverage cans and bottles are needed.

"We don't need another study," Harnik said. "There have been five federal government studies already!"

But he said EA is pleased at the President's call for a study of the concept of disposal charges — making the buyer pay in some way for the ultimate disposal of a product.

One move likely to draw fire from some quarters was Carter's tightening of rules governing the use of four-wheel drive vehicles, trail bikes, snowmobiles and the like on public lands.

Under an executive order signed Monday the agencies controlling such lands may now rule them off limits to such use while studies are being made to determine if the use is appropriate in terms of the environmental impact.

Previously the study had to be completed before the land could be restricted.

Carter's message proposed no new spending programs but a number of administrative changes and strict enforcement of existing regulations with emphasis on stemming public health hazards.

Pledges help

USING SIGN language in his address opening a White House Conference on Handicapped Individuals, President Carter promised to "tear down the barriers" against handicapped persons in building, transportation and education.

The conference backed an appeal from Ralph Nader to support creation of a consumer advocacy agency and will draft recommendations to Congress on jobs and health care. (UPI)

Sour on substitute

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Food and Drug Administration has turned thumbs down on one possible substitute for saccharin as an artificial sweetener.

It rejected Monday a request for permission to use a sweetener made from the African "miracle-fruit" in candy, gum, pudding and other food.

The fruit is a berry which when chewed makes sour things taste sweet. Interest in the fruit had been revived in the wake of the proposed saccharin ban but the FDA said it has been unable to prove it is safe.

The berries reportedly have been used in West-Africa for hundreds of years, the agency said.

Laetrile 'field tests' proposed

NEW YORK (UPI) — The head of the prestigious Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center recommended Monday the controversial drug Laetrile be "field tested" to determine whether it is of any value in cancer therapy.

"I think proper clinical trials have to be undertaken," Dr. Lewis Thomas, president of the cancer center, said.

Dr. Vincent DeVita, director of cancer treatment at the National Cancer Institute, made a similar suggestion in talks with reporters in Denver last Friday during a meeting of the American Association for Cancer Research.

Thomas and DeVita proposed that "during such trials, Laetrile should be given to human cancer victims and progress — or the lack of it — noted."

Proponents of Laetrile, which is made from apricot kernels, claim it helps some cancer victims. But the Food and Drug Administration, the National Cancer Institute and the American Cancer Society maintain the substance is worthless, is potentially poisonous and causes false hopes in cancer victims.

In recent weeks, legislatures in Arizona, Nevada, Florida and Indiana have voted to legalize the use of Laetrile, even though the FDA has banned its import. Similar proposals are before the legislatures of 23 additional states.

Thomas suggested "there should be double blind studies (of Laetrile's effects) to insure objectivity."

"Secondly," he said, "a retrospective study should be initiated by an epidemiological team to determine the facts about those persons who have claimed benefit from Laetrile."

Thomas said a special committee should be established to reveal the results of these two programs and that this committee should be comprised of both professionals and laymen."

Larry Balzer, a spokesman for the National Cancer Institute, said DeVita believes it would be unreasonable to do clinical trials with Laetrile.

The main problem foreseen by observers at the National Cancer Institute is that many cancer sufferers would take the existence of the field trials as proof that Laetrile is worthwhile.

They might, as a result, snub conventional therapy such as surgery, radiation treatments or approved chemotherapy.

Balzer also said any field trial drawn by the National Cancer Institute would need to be approved by the FDA.

Vet aid passes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House has approved three bills increasing compensation to disabled veterans; despite administration objections to two of them.

The principal measure would grant 15 percent cost-of-living increase in general compensation for disability and survivors benefits, along with a $10 increase in annual clothing allowance for veterans who must wear protective devices.

The hike in monthly payments would become effective Oct. 1.

Two other bills, which the administration opposed, also were passed.

One would increase compensation to veterans who lost an arm or leg in the service, then later lost the surviving paired limb later. The other would provide up to $300 each for some World War I disabled veterans to purchase specially equipped automobiles.

The bills were estimated to cost $1 million each in the next year.

Spy aloft

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — An Atlas Agena rocket launched a secret spy satellite into orbit from Cape Canaveral Monday afternoon in what military sources said was a move to enhance the early warning system against missile attack.

The launching had not been announced in advance of the 12:13 p.m. EDT liftoff and the Air Force made only a terse statement afterward, describing the satellite as "an experimental payload."

Idaho Energy Office gets good director

Gov. John Evans seems to have chosen a good man to head the walloping Idaho Office of Energy. Kirk Hall arrived in Boise only three weeks ago but he isn't wasting any time unpacking...

Why will Hall get an energy plan rolling when others have failed? More than anything else, he seems capable of asking the kinds of energy questions Idaho must answer before the state formulates its long term energy scenario.

Should the state rely on independent utility companies like Idaho Power for its energy? If Idaho Power is asked to provide energy for the entire state are residents ready to put up with coal-fired generating plants within the state's borders?

If, as the Idaho Tomorrow survey shows, Idahoans want alternative energy systems developed, are they ready to pay the high prices for these systems?

And, if Idaho residents sincerely want to maintain their rural, uncluttered lifestyle are they willing to put strict controls on growth?

Hall wants the legislature and the people of Idaho to answer these questions before the state begins its comprehensive energy planning.

He sincerely seems to believe the demographics of Idaho allow the people to decide how they want the next quarter of a century to be.

Only if a consensus can be reached. When he talks about Idaho's energy demands, never does Hall sound like a dreamer. He's realistic, pragmatic, and looking at the systemic problems of energy use, not the hundred smaller bits and pieces which make up the energy jigsaw.

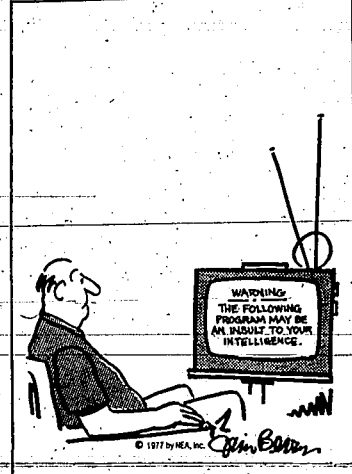

Idaho can use a man like Hall right now. He's somebody who won't easily become alienated from the utilities, the consumers or the legislature. He's too steady to start firing potshots at individuals or corporations who often are blamed for Idaho's energy ills.

Instead, Kirk Hall, if he is as solid as his first impression suggests, will dish out facts and pose questions this state must answer before formulating an energy policy for the next 30 years.

With a bit of luck and by avoiding protracted debates which could leave the state in an energy-short corner, Hall may be a man who helps us avoid an energy disaster in the next decades.

TV may be hazardous to your health

Berry's World

People are getting violent about violence on television. It's time for a call to arms, said Michael Rothenberg of the University of Washington Medical School at the recent annual meeting of the American Orthopsychiatric Association.

The American Medical Association has declared television violence to be "an environmental health risk."

In California, the state medical association has filed a friend-of-the-court brief on behalf of the nine-year-old victim in a rape case. The defendants (all adolescents) are claiming that they were inspired to the act by a similar episode they saw in a television movie.

Television has become "a school of violence and a college for crime," says the association's brief. "It is in the interests of the health of all Americans, especially our children, to hold broadcasters civilly accountable for acts which lead to foreseeable harm."

The National Parent Teachers Association has given the networks notice that it is putting them on six-months "probation" beginning July 1. If there is no "substantial response" during that time to demands for less TV gore and more diversity and quality in programming, the PTA will consider such alternative courses of action as boycotts of sponsors and local stations, selected test cases to deny license renewals and civil litigation.

While not all researchers are convinced of a direct cause-and-effect relationship between television watching and violent or antisocial behavior, there seems to be general agreement that many children are unable to understand the contexts in which televised acts of violence occur. Nor is there any doubt about the tremendous importance television has come to play in children's lives.

One survey has found that young children watch more than 2 1/2 hours of television a week and that teenagers watch nearly 20 — as much time as most of them spend in classrooms and much more time than they spend reading.

"Television is ubiquitous," says the Council for Basic Education. "If kids ever had a frame of reference, they have one now in television, which provides them with the language, the models and the tastes they share with each other. Whether adults like it or not, television is their medium."

Realizing this, some groups are taking a different approach. Rather than attempting to reform either television or children's viewing habits, they are working with what is good about the medium.

For example, "Teachers Television," which is published twice a year in New York, has launched pilot projects in three cities called Parent Participation TV workshops. Parents come to school to watch a television broadcast with their children. Teachers then serve as moderators of a cross-generation discussion about the program and demonstrate to parents how to use television at home to encourage family communication.

The aim of the workshops is to teach parents to use television not as a babysitter but as a way to open a dialogue with their children, to encourage discussions about values and morals and to stay in touch with their children's feeling. As the Council for Basic Education points out, the ultimate responsibility for what children watch on television rests with parents. No one is in a better position to provide supervision and guidance.

"Not all commercial television is trash," says the Council, "and even some that is trashy can have positive educational value. If parents will give the interest, the time and the effort sometimes to watch with their children, often to talk with them about whatever they watch."

Is Carter liberal? Do dogs bark?

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — Before last November's election, according to a CBS-New York Times poll, 32 percent of the people regarded Jimmy Carter as a liberal. Now only 20 percent so regard him.

What this suggests, among other things, is that the vanishing 12 percent have lost their powers of discernment.

Is Mr. Carter a liberal? Do fish swim? Do dogs bark? Do the birds go tweet-tweet-tweet? Merciful heavens! To the extent that our Leader evidences any political philosophy at all, he is about as liberal as they come. Senator George McGovern, who has been hollering that Mr. Carter is not liberal enough, is indeed "very hard to please."

The notion that Mr. Carter is a conservative — a conservative in any true sense — is a notion compounded of moonbeams, hot air and cotton candy. Yes, the gentleman has made conservative noises; he has talked many times of balancing the federal budget. And, yes, the gentleman has made conservative gestures: He has cozied up at the White House on booze, bands and limousines.

But when the noise and the gestures and the gimmicks have been duly acknowledged, what remains? If it is all head and no beer, in every substantive, significant — Mr. Carter — has taken, the gentleman has acted as a licensed, certified, gilt-edged, leather-bound liberal of the old Democratic school. Look at the record.

By "liberal," I mean to suggest a cast of political thought that inclines toward the public sector rather than the private sector, that believes in using government to redistribute the wealth, that distrusts a free market economy, and that advocates a bogus egalitarianism in American life. Two or three examples come instantly to mind.

Take Mr. Carter's energy program. This is his big baby. He took to television three times in a single week to sell it. The plan contains virtually nothing to encourage production, nothing to stimulate the formation of capital, pitifully little to promote new forms of energy. The plan would scoop up $75 billion in taxes, to be redistributed sometime, somehow; it would create a prodigious bureaucracy to monitor, enforce, collect, disburse and generally to tinker with the whole system of supply and demand.

Take a second example. When Mr. Carter wants to charm the business community, he delves all the ritual incantations: Trim the bureaucracy! Reduce the paperwork! But he has dispatched his arm-twisters to Capitol Hill, led by Vice President Mondale, to create his new Agency for Consumer Protection. The agency would have unprecedented powers to harass, to delay, to interfere, to meddle, and generally to bleed itself throughout the departments of government.

Try a third example. In the lily of a one man, one vote, Mr. Carter would abolish an electoral system based upon the sound principles of federalism. He would effectively repeal the Hatch Act, thus giving unions of public employees free rein to work actively for the Democratic party. Mr. Carter would further promote the fortunes of good Democrats, among them Mr. Carter in 1980, by subsidizing the states in the cause of "electoral reform." He is hot for instant registration on election day. He wants to bribe the states, three-fourths of them now in Democratic hands, to engage in "outreach" programs to register more Democratic voters. How could George McGovern ask for anything more?

Mr. Carter signed an act a few days ago to reduce federal taxes. Flooray! It will make the people happy — some of the people, anyhow. But their savings would soon be dissipated by inflation, or snatched back by the increases he wants in Social Security taxes. On down the road is Mr. Carter's comprehensive, mandatory program of national health insurance — a program that will demand massive taxes to finance it, and a monumental bureaucracy to mishandle it.

Look around the sprawling federal government after four months of Mr. Carter's administration. Is there evidence of "conservatism" in education? In health? In housing? None appears. His Department of Transportation is tying new work with compulsory airbags in automobiles. His secretary of labor is fumbling with makework jobs at scrapping plants. His budget director is ruthlessly saving money. He would ban oil portraits of Cabinet members and outdoor color plates in stores.

Mr. Carter, in brief, is great on rhetoric. He stands up to the Soviets, in terms of federal regulations, he is for clarity; he is against globebook. He is for efficiency; he is against waste. But if the issue turns on his liberalism, his actions speak louder than his words.

Laetrile bill amazes Indiana solons

By RICHARD D. LYONS

INDIANAPOLIS — Indiana's Republican and Democratic leaders are expressing amazement and embarrassment that a small right-wing group has succeeded in pushing through the legislature a law legalizing the sale of Laetrile, the purported anticancer nostrum.

The legislative coup by the group, which probably has fewer than 1,000 members and has been linked to the John Birch Society, has national overtones because legislatures in a dozen other states are considering similar measures and being subjected to similar campaigns.

But the success of the pro-Laetrile forces in Indiana has been particularly telling because they overcame the strong opposition of the governor, the Democratic and Republican leaders of the state senate and house, the politically powerful Indiana State Medical Association and the faculty of the big medical school at Indiana University.

As a result of what some politicians here have called "the slickest grass-roots lobbying campaign we've ever seen," the production and sale of Laetrile will be legal next month in Indiana, one of the three states to have approved its use despite federal prohibitions.

One chemical company here is floating a $4.5 million stock offering, and an official of the company hinted that the funds were to be used for the manufacture of Laetrile, a substance derived from apricot pits that has been condemned as worthless in treating cancer by virtually every major medical and scientific organization in the country.

The backers and opponents of Laetrile, in interviews, professed astonishment over the victory of the chemical's supporters, who appeared to have little out-of-state financial or logistical aid.

"It's unbelievable," said Gov. Otis R. Bowen, a Republican. He is the only physician serving as a governor in the United States, and the Laetrile bill was enacted over his veto.

"It's unbelievable," said Gov. Otis "It's the biggest embarrassment I've had in public office," said Sen. Robert J. Fair, a Democrat, president of the senate, who used every available legislative tactic in an attempt to kill the bill.

"It's the will of the people," said State Rep. Danny Burton, a Republican, who sponsored the bill and guided it through the legislature.

"It's God's will," said Bob Phillips, the truck driver who is president of the central Indiana chapter of the Committee for Freedom of choice in Cancer Therapy, the California-based lobby pushing for enactment of state Laetrile laws.

Four members of this group will be sentenced in Federal District Court in San Diego Monday after their conviction on charges of importing Laetrile from Mexico and selling it in violation of regulations of the Food and Drug Administration. Fifteen other persons were indicted there on similar charges a year ago.

The Laetrile issue dates back half a century to the first description of the chemical by Dr. Ernst T. Krebs Sr., a California physician. It generated little interest until it was popularized in the 1950s by his son, Ernst T. Krebs Jr., a biochemist.

The Food and Drug Administration banned the use of the drug in 1963 on the ground that it was of no value in treating cancer, and subsequent panels of the FDA, the American Medical Association, the National Cancer Institute and the American Cancer Society have rejected claims of efficacy.

"After 20 years of testing, there is still not one shred of valid scientific evidence that laetrile has any benefit in the treatment or prevention of cancer or in the control of the pain of cancer," the National Cancer Institute said in a report.

But as more persons developed cancer and died from the disease, public demand for a cure intensified, and the popularity of the drug increased. The federal ban led to the establishment of laetrile clinics in Mexico and the arrests of scores of persons who were bringing the substance across the border.

As in the days of prohibition, the demand for Laetrile seemed directly the distribution and sale of the chemical.

Last year Alaska became the first state to legalize the prescription of Laetrile by doctors, but provisions in other state laws there prohibit physicians from selling or distributing the chemical.

At the State Capitol here, the campaign to legalize Laetrile started last fall with appearances and speeches by Krebs and several other prominent supporters of the chemical. Burton's bill to legalize the substance was introduced in January but produced little interest.

"I was told I was crazy," said Burton, who is before the Laetrile controversy was a staunch ally of the state medical society, which convened a highly successful race for Congress three years ago.

But Burton, who chews five apricot pits each morning with breakfast as prophylaxis against cancer, said that an increasing number of persons who said they had been cured of cancer at Laetrile clinics in Mexico forced him to overcome doubts about the chemical's usefulness.

"You've got to allow cancer patients to take what they want for their disease," he said, adding, "What else is there to do but say, 'Sorry, fella, go home and die?'"

Burton and others seeking passage of the bill marshaled their forces to produce hundreds of cancer patients and Laetrile sympathizers who in February presented legislators with petitions containing 40,000 signatures.

The halls of the State Capitol were filled with hymn-singing, slogan-chanting, placard-waving Laetrile proponents and, in a move that took the anti-Laetrile forces by surprise, the house adopted the bill by a vote of 85 to 10.

A slightly different form of the bill passed the Senate in March, 44 to 4. The differences were resolved by a Senate-House conference committee and the amended version sailed through both houses again by huge margins.

"We did a hell of a selling job and swamped them in both houses," Burton said.

The measure was vetoed by Governor Bowen in April, but both houses overrode the veto by a wide margin on April 30, the last day of the regular legislative session.

"I got globered, and I'm still looking for the answer to how they did it," the governor said several days ago while sitting in his large office in the Capitol.

Bowen, who characterized some of the Laetrile leaders as "a bunch of nuts," credited them with an immensely skillful and effective lobbying campaign.

"Every time a senator or representative stuck his head out the door they were after him," the governor said. He added that legislators had been inundated with letters, telephone calls and telegrams in support of Laetrile.

"WELL, I SAY IF THEY WON'T WORK FOR US DOCTORS, THEY'RE NO DAMN GOOD!"

Smoke haze hangs over ruins of 120 mining town homes

Fire destroys half Canadian town

COBALT, Ont. (UPI) — Fire marshalls were investigating the possibility arson was behind a spectacular fire that destroyed half this northern mining town of 2,120 inhabitants Monday, leaving hundreds homeless.

The fire, visible for 20 miles, burned out of control for six hours and gutted as many as 120 buildings.

Rumors of arson were rife among townspeople, but Ontario Provincial Police officials refused comment on the cause of the Victoria Day blaze.

Firefighters from six towns and three water bombers battled the fire that broke out shortly after noon in a partly demolished warehouse in the center of town. Whipped by 35 mile an hour winds, it spread rapidly.

Sections of the town and nearby settlements were placed on an alert to evacuate, before firemen succeeded in containing the blaze at 8 p.m. at a bridge on the north side of town.

"It's an awful mess. All that's left of maybe a hundred houses are chimneys and a few sticks of furniture on the street," Edward Sivan, a miner at the Sherman iron mine in nearby Temagami, said Monday night.

"I'd say 500 people are without a roof over their heads. A relief center's been set up in the nearby Halleybury arena and calls have been sent out for blankets and coats. They're being billeted in private homes too."

"The thing about Cobalt, though, is it's a poor town with lots of unemployment, and old wooden houses. I imagine none of the people had insurance. Most lost everything."

"People are hoping for government help of some kind. I saw on the television the mayor (Bruce Lonsdale) wants the government to declare the town a disaster area."

Swann added ruefully, "Of course with the provincial election coming up, all the candidates were there, looking for votes. I guess the fire's good for a vote with them."

Spanish campaign posters blossom

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — Political workers plastered Madrid with thousands of posters today in the official start of campaigning for Spain's first free elections in 41 years.

Campaign workers hit the streets almost immediately after the 12:01 a.m. start of 21 days of campaigning and put up posters seeking votes in the June 15 parliamentary balloting.

An increase in terrorism by Basque nationalists spread fears of political violence and one local news agency moved a dispatch at 2 a.m. saying that the first two hours of the campaign produced no clashes between rival poster posters.

Later, at least two right-wingers brandishing pistols unsuccessfully attempted to remove a few Socialist and Communist posters, witnesses said. But no serious incidents were reported.

A new poll showed Premier Adolfo Suarez' middle-of-the-road coalition in the lead with Socialist parties second and the Communist party third, one-tenth of a per cent ahead of the right-wing Popular Alliance.

The poll published in the newspaper El Pais showed that of the 59.5 per cent of Spaniards who have made up their minds, 20.1 per cent favored Suarez' Democratic Center Union.

The poll showed the Socialist Workers and Socialist parties received 17.3 per cent; the Communists 5.5 per cent; and the Popular Alliance 5.7 per cent.

Israeli bloc pushes for coalition

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — Israel's right-wing Likud bloc pressed ahead today with plans to form a coalition government despite the hospitalization of prospective prime minister Menachem Begin.

"Nobody is indispensable," said Ezer Weizman, a 32-year-old member of the Likud, in Begin's Herut faction within the Likud. "He (Begin) doesn't think so himself."

The 63-year-old Begin, who suffered a near-fatal heart attack two months ago, entered the intensive care unit of Tel Aviv's Ichilov Hospital early Monday, complaining that he was not feeling well. Doctors said preliminary tests did not indicate another heart attack.

But it still was not clear today whether Begin would be physically able to take charge of the Likud's efforts to form a coalition government. His doctor said he was instructing Begin to "slow down at the time he is released."

French on strike

PARIS (UPI) — French trade unions reduced the nation's economic life to a crawl today in a 24-hour general strike aimed at protesting the government's austerity policies.

It was the first time since 1964 that all French trade unions had joined forces in a display of power. The protest was aimed in part at a government wage freeze limiting increases to 5.5 per cent in 1977.

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (UPI) — Pakistan's opposition has given Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto a "last warning" and threatened to besiege the homes of parliament members if the nation's political crisis is not resolved in a week.

At least 296 persons have

'Last warning' given died in political violence since the March 7 parliamentary elections, which Bhutto's Pakistan People's Party won by a landslide.

The opposition charged massive vote fraud and has demanded Bhutto's resignation and new elections.

Viet talks set

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Talks on normalizing relations between Vietnam and the United States will resume June 2 in Paris.

State Department spokesman Hooding Carter III said Monday the U.S. delegation again will be headed by Assistant Secretary of State for Southeast Asian Affairs Richard Holbrock. It is believed the South Vietnamese delegation will be headed again by Phan Hien, a vice foreign minister of the Hanoi government.

Young lauds Sudan

KHARTOUM, Sudan (UPI) — U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young says the United States is beginning a "long, fruitful relationship" with Sudan, which has expelled Moscow's military advisers and some of its diplomats.

Young, Monday flew from Lusaka, Zambia to Khartoum on the last stop of his African tour.

"Sudan is a very important nation among developing nations," Young told reporters at the airport. "The United States recognizes that. This is the beginning of a long fruitful relationship between the U.S. and Sudan and the region that Sudan influences strongly."

He said he was looking forward to seeing "your great president (Jaafar Numery)." "

Drawing power

NEW YORK (UPI) — Frank Sinatra and Dean Martin got together on stage again Monday, but the star of the show was a 61-year-old Long Island widow whose name the singers drew in the final of the New York State instant lottery.

Maria A. Bisiluen won the top prize of $1,000 a week for the rest of her life. She and her heirs are guaranteed at least $1 million.

$1 million given

MALIBU, Calif. (UPI) — The Shah of Iran has given $1 million to Pepperdine University, the biggest gift in the school's history, to finance teaching-studies-school-of-faculty aid Monday.

The money will be used to finance the "Empress Farah of Iran" chair in educational studies to be awarded a scholar of international reputation and other programs, such as scholarships for Iranian and other students.

Hearings open today

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — First Lady Rosalynn Carter today opens the first of four public hearings around the country on the treatment of the mentally ill.

The 20-member President's Commission on Mental Health, of which Mrs. Carter is the honorary chairperson, is trying to determine what is being done for the mentally ill, what improvements should be made and what the federal government can do to help.

Tommy gets his last wish

GREENFIELD, Mass. (UPI) — The bright spring sun dropped below the horizon as a convoy of 150 trucks and cars quietly wound its way down the Mohawk Trail to fulfill the last wish of 11-year-old Tommy Copley.

Tommy's voice had been a familiar one to area Citizens Band radio users the last two years. His last wish was another tribute from the caravan that visited him last year when he was dying of cancer.

More than 350 of his friends from Connecticut, New York and Vermont gathered Monday night at the local high school and drove single file and without disrupting traffic down Route 2, the Mohawk Trail, to a Shelburne Falls funeral home. Six 18-wheel trucks were among the vehicles that arrived at the funeral home where drivers got out and filed silently past the casket.

The funeral for the fifth-grader, known as "Wonder Dog" to his CB radio friends, was to be held today. He died last Saturday.

"These are working people," said Ron Weller of Greenfield, whose handle — or CB nickname — is "Batman."

"See these trucks?" Weller said. "They've come off the road just to be here today."

Tommy had been sick for four years, but managed to win an outstanding player award in Little League baseball last year. He also competed in youth basketball and was visited by Boston Celtics center Dave Cowens in a Boston hospital last season.

Weller's son, Jimmy, 14, "Black Stallion" on the CB, was a schoolmate of Tommy's and told his parents about Tommy two years ago.

"When we found out we decided to have a benefit and give him a CB radio," said Jimmy's mother, Judith. A local shop donated the antenna.

When Tommy was alive "just about everyone when they went through Shelburne Falls gave him a shout," she said. "He loved truckers. He rode in an 18-wheeler in our last convoy."

Navy paper work, rules spark ire of landlord

RICHMOND, Ind. (UPI) — Irwin R. Rose says he had to raise the rent $4 a month before the Navy would lease the place. He's mad about it.

"It's not the money — $4 is a piddling amount of money really," he said. "But it's the idea that money doesn't mean anything to them. It's only their regulations and paper-work that mean anything."

Rose offered to lease a one-bedroom flat, including electric utilities, to a Navy recruiter and his wife for $265 a month. He said the Navy insisted he charge at least $269.

"Even a 10-year-old can understand the basic idea — you don't pay more for anything than you have to pay," leave him and his partners a profit.

"We filled out the standard General Services Administration lease and submitted it to the Navy," Rose said. "Then a few weeks ago, the recruiter called back with the astonishing news that the lease was generally acceptable and would go into effect if I were agreeable to making one change."

"I had to agree to take at least $269. According to their regulations, $265 was too low under his rank, term of service, cost-of-living index for Richmond and other considerations."

"He told me I could have charged up to $345 for the same apartment, and the government would have paid it gladly," Rose said.

Would-be robbers

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Three teen-aged robbers came out second best when they tangled with two women mechanics for the Bay Area Rapid Transit District.

Police said Monday that ruff, Stack, 22, and Susan Weiss, 28, were sitting in their car when the young toughs approached them.

One stuck a pistol through an open window and demanded money. Police said Ms. Weiss quickly rolled up the window, causing the gunman to scream in pain. He dropped the pistol into her lap.

Ms. Stack started the engine and drove off, leaving the would-be robbers standing on a street corner.

Club may continue to keep women out

NEW YORK (UPI) — A politically influential club in a New York City suburb may continue to ban women members as it has for 73 years without violating anyone's constitutional rights, a federal judge says.

U.S. District Judge William C. Conner ruled Monday that the Town Club of Scarsdale, N.Y., "performs pure administrative chores in no way affecting the result of the electoral process."

Conner said that to order the club to admit women to its ranks "would deprive the members of that organization of their constitutionally protected freedom of association — even on a discriminatory basis."

The non-partisan Town Club was organized in 1904 by a group of men interested in the affluent community's civic and political affairs, and has banned women since its inception.

Eight women residents of the Village of Scarsdale claimed that because of the club's restriction on local politics, their exclusion violated their franchise. A nonjury trial was held before Conner in September.

The club's restriction against women, the judge ruled, "does not deprive them, as they claim, of their constitutional right to equal protection."

"The fact that the club is rendering important public services is not sufficient to condemn its sexual exclusiveness," he said. "The barring of women is not an exclusion from the actual process of 'nominating' candidates."

He cited the participation in that process of the Scarsdale Women's Club and the Village Club of Scarsdale, a women's group organized as the female counterpart of the Town Club.

The non-partisan system of nominating village officials was approved by the club in 1930. It dispenses with election campaigns and was designed to make political service more attractive.

Conner conceded that to be an officer in the Town Club "represents an excellent springboard to village office."

Of 37 mayors-and-trustees elected during the past 24 years, he said, 31 have been past presidents or members of the board of governors of the Town Club, while two of the remaining six have been chairmen of club committees.

The Town Club, Conner said, has 1,500 members; or one-third of all the men of voting age in the village.

Kenton ailing

READING, Pa., (UPI) — Stan Kenton, whose creativity as a conductor and arranger made his group one of the great big bands of the post-war years, underwent surgery today in an attempt to correct a cerebral hemorrhage he suffered Sunday night.

A spokesman at the Reading Hospital and Medical Center, where Kenton, 65, was listed in poor condition, said a computerized brain scan and other tests determined the blood vessel rupture was "operable."

Twin Falls, North Side, Burley-Rupert areas — Rain decreasing to a few scattered showers this evening. Partial clearing tonight. Low temperatures 40-45, partly sunny Wednesday with a few scattered afternoon and evening showers. A little warmer Wednesday with highs 60-64.

Idaho, Camas Prairie, Lower Wood River Valley — Rain decreasing to a few scattered showers this evening. Partial clearing tonight. Low temperatures 40-45, and highs Wednesday in the mid-50s. Partly sunny Wednesday with a few scattered afternoon and evening showers.

Synopsis: A large upper air disturbance continues to dominate the weather over Idaho and most of the other western states. Widespread rain fell over Idaho Monday night and this morning. The two-day total precipitation in Boise is now over one inch. At the weather service office in Kimberly it is near one-half inch. And, generally, it is less than one-quarter inch in the upper Snake River Valley — Rain was falling at most reporting stations at mid-morning today. Temporary surface high pressure is expected to build back into Magic Valley tonight and Wednesday and bring a return to partly sunny skies Wednesday.

Abby

By Abigail Van Buren
©1977 by The Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Our 9-year-old daughter, who is in the fourth grade, loves to read. Each week she goes to the library and brings home books, which she devours. She also loves to read your column.

Abby, I can explain murders and riots to her, but how can I explain some of the things she reads about in your column? This week she asked me what a "homosexual" was. She also wanted to know how you get a "venereal" disease, and what "rape" was!

I told her that a homosexual was a person who had a problem getting along with the opposite sex, that a venereal disease was a serious infection, and that rape meant overpowering and hurting a woman.

Must I hide the newspaper from my child? Do you really receive a sufficient number of letters of this kind to justify printing them? Or was this just a bad week?

UPSET DAD

Can't hide the facts

DEAR DAD: Yes, I really receive a sufficient number of letters of "this kind" to justify printing them. You are fortunate to have a child who loves to read and doubly fortunate that she asks you to explain things she does not understand.

Few children reach maturity without hearing a good deal about the outside world, and what a better place than home is there for them to learn the facts! You can "hide" the newspaper from your child, but you cannot hide from her the realities of life.

Children who are old enough to ask are old enough to know. Answer all her questions truthfully.

DEAR ABBY: I've been married for four months, and everything is perfect except one small detail. My wife insists that I sleep in pajamas. Abby, I've been sleeping in the nude since I was a freshman in college. My wife says that only animals sleep in the nude.

I don't insist that my wife NOT sleep in nightgowns. The other night she gave me a present—a pair of silk pajamas, and when I refused to wear them and told her to return them and get her money back, she became hysterical.

Abby, my wife is not a prude and our sex life is fine, so I can't understand why she doesn't want me to sleep in the nude.

Maybe you or your readers can convince my wife that I'm no animal—that millions of men sleep nude. NO ANIMAL.

DEAR NO ANIMAL: What you sleep in is between you and your wife, but some men (women, too) find greater freedom and comfort sleeping in a natural.

DEAR ABBY: I wrote to you six weeks ago asking if the Salvation Army could locate my missing brother, and I still haven't heard from you. You say that you answer all your mail. What happened?

STILL WAITING

DEAR STILL: I am under no obligation to answer a letter that is not accompanied by a stamped, addressed envelope for my reply.

For Abby's new booklet, "What Teen-agers Want to Know," send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped ($4) envelope.

your health

Dear Dr. Lamb: I suffer from an overabundance of gas. I have had X rays of my digestive tract, including a barium enema and gall bladder tests. The doctor, a gastroenterologist, says it is a spastic colon. He has given me three different kinds of medicines which have not helped me at all.

I am 54 years old. I don't know what to do. I pass gas all day long. It is very annoying and embarrassing. Could you please advise me what can be done?

I also have arthritis in my spine. I am wearing a surgical girdle. It is much worse when I get up in the morning. The gas and the girdle combined are quite a problem. I have never had so much gas as in the past few months.

Dear Reader: A spastic colon is often part of the picture of gaseousness. Your colon is a muscular tube and the muscles constantly contract and relax in a rhythmic fashion to move food residue. When these muscles contract forcibly as a spasm it causes pain. This closes off the colon and traps any gas that is accumulating in the colon. Because of the spasm the trapped gas is under tension.

That is what causes the pain. I am sending you The Health Letter number 24, Irritable or Spastic Colon and Constipation. It will give you basic information on what you can do to train your bowel so you won't have so much trouble. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Just send your request to me in care of this newspaper.

P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10101.

You may profit by increasing the bulk in your diet. Cereal bulk, particularly bran, is helpful. A large bowl of bran flakes each day is a good way to start. There is more to it than just eating bran. Try to stay away from chemical laxatives, as they cause more-harm than good and can cause you to develop a laxative habit.

Gas comes from several sources. Many people swallow air. We know that because the gas has been withdrawn and analysed. Because it is mostly oxygen and nitrogen we know it comes from air. In other people fermented gases are important. These gases are hydrogen, methane and carbon dioxide. Bacterial action on undigested food is important here. Good bowel habits will help relieve this problem in many cases.

Intolerance to milk and milk products is a rather common source of gas. As people get older they often do not digest carbohydrates as well as before. You might try leaving off milk for a while, including ALL milk products used in cooking and see what happens. Coffee is also a frequent factor.

To give you more information on gas problems I am also sending you The Health Letter number 6-B, Controlling Gaseousness. It is available to readers as noted about the issue on spastic colon.

Opening slated

EXPLAINING a stage direction to Trudy Dilworth, left, and Jenny Lesley, right, Edward Brill, Company director, helps get a scene straight for Wednesday evening's opening night for "The Haunting of Hill House." Brill says the play is a "super thriller" about psychic phenomena in a "haunted" house. Show time is 8 p.m. at O'Leary Auditorium Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights. Tickets are $2.50 per adult and $1.50 for students and senior citizens.

Opening night set by TF Company I

By KEN HODGE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—A haunted house can have an insidious effect on the people in it, and if they are not strong of character, they can fall victim to its supernatural powers.

That is exactly what happens to one of the young women who comes to Hill House as part of a team organized by Dr. Montague to make a scientific study of the reputedly "strange" house.

"It may seem incomprehensible to you now, but a place like this... sometimes it can begin to affect you without your really being aware," Montague tells Theodora, Eleanor and Luke, three young people he has brought to the house to help him obtain facts about the strange things he has heard about it.

The scene is part of "The Haunting of Hill House," a super thriller to be presented Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights in the O'Leary Junior High School Auditorium by Company I.

"Essentially the evil is in the house itself," Dr. Montague explains to the small group clustered in the dreary parlor of the huge mansion hidden in the deep woods of an Eastern state six miles from town.

Montague, a man interested in exploring supernatural manifestations, has heard many unusual tales about Hill House and how it "has enmeshed and destroyed its people and their lives."

He has invited a group of people who have had psychic experiences to help him investigate the eerie house.

Eleanor, played by Jenny Lesley, is a young woman who experienced poltergeists or ghosts, which rattle dishes and shower stones on houses.

Theodora, played by Trudy Dilworth, is a young woman whose extra sensory perception (ESP) enables her to sense 19 out of 20 cards hidden from her view.

They are the first to arrive and immediately notice the unpleasant atmosphere pervading the house.

Dr. Montague, played by Tom Costello, arrives later with Luke, played by Curt Lesley. Luke is a young man whose mother owns Hill House and he expects to inherit the mansion some day, although he says he is not excited about the prospect.

During the course of the play, the house clearly manifests that it wants Eleanor to join it by remaining in the house.

Eleanor, who really had no home or possessions to speak of before arriving at Hill House, is a prime target for the house and it makes several attempts to take her.

Soon, she is completely taken in by the powers manifested in the house—and is in a near-brainwashed state, believing she should remain at the house after the others leave.

Mrs. Montague, played by Vicki Childs, complicates matters by taking messages by "planchette," a form of spirit writing similar to a ouija board.

Tension caused by the eerie happenings in the haunted house builds throughout the play and tragedy finally befalls Eleanor as the house takes her for its own.

Show time is 8 p.m. each evening. Tickets are $2.50 for adults and $1.50 for students and senior citizens.

Practice scene

READING planchette notes to Arthur, left, played by Ted Winkle, Mrs. Montague, played by Vicki Childs, center, leans over his shoulder. She noticed Theodora, played by Trudy Dilworth, making a subtle pass at Arthur and decided to break it up.

Final rehearsals

INTERRUPTING a chess game between Dr. Montague, Tom Costello, left, and Luke, played by Curt Lesley, Mrs. Montague brings them a message that a nun and a monk are buried somewhere in the haunted Hill House. She is constantly getting wrong information from planchette writing a psychic medium similar to the ouija board. The scene is from Company I's production of "The Haunting of Hill House."

 Milton Berle is returning to the tube. He plays a theatrical agent in a new series based on Gail Parent's book "Stella Levine Is Dead and Living in New York."

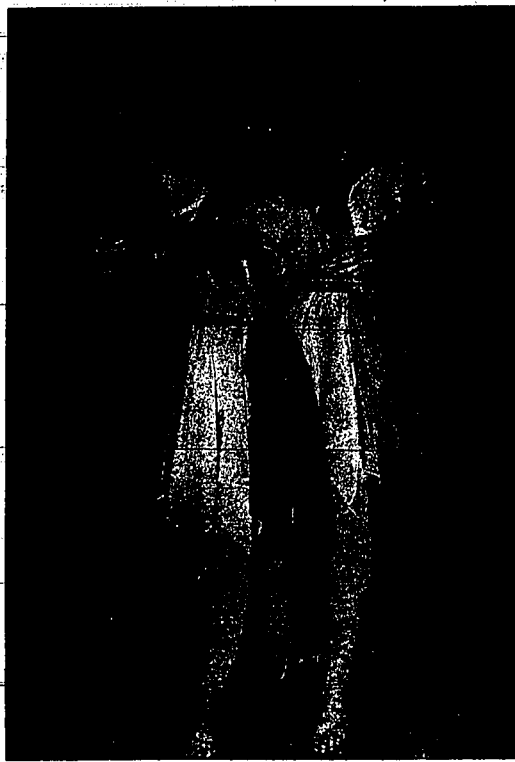

James Garner, still going strong in his "Rockford Files" detective series, just signed a lucrative contract to do TV commercials for a U.S. camera company.

Sid Caesar, Patty Duke Astin, Vic Morrow and June Allyson are the stars of Dan Curtis' new TV thriller movie, "Black Widow."

Abe Vigoda, of the "Fish" and "Barney Miller" comedy series, is in Noll Simon's new movie comedy "The Cheap Detective."

Dance recital

PRACTICING for Willa Dean Nielsen's annual dance recital are Lori Christensen, 17, left, and Cheryl Day, 17. The recital is slated for 7 p.m. Saturday at the CSI Fine Arts Auditorium. The event will feature four acts: "On Stage Everybody," "Perfect Day," "Watch Us Go" and "Showtime." The students range in age from three-up and will be dancing tap, jazz and modern with about 200 participants. The public is invited and proceeds will go for dance scholarships. Further information concerning the event can be obtained by calling 733-6343.

East follows with the deuce and South plays the queen or jack only to have West win with the ace and lead a second spade. South wins that in his own hand, enters dummy with a diamond and leads a second heart. East plays the six and South must decide whether to play the nine or the remaining face card.

It looks like a guess, but it isn't. The principle of restricted choice applies here. If West had been dealt both ace and king he might well have won the first heart with the king. Hence the odds are that East holds the king and South should play his face card.

If he does play the face card the rest of the hand is easy and he winds up making either nine or 10 tricks. If he plays the nine he may still scramble in that ninth trick, but he may also wind up with just eight.

Ask the Jacobys

A New York reader wants to know if modern players will play the jump response in a new suit by an unpassed hand as a force to game.

The answer is that except for a small, and in our opinion, almost lunatic fringe they do.

(Do you have a question for the experts? Write "Ask the Jacobys" care of this newspaper. The Jacobys will answer individual questions if stamped, self-addressed envelopes are enclosed. The most interesting questions will be used in this column and will receive two copies of JACOBY MODERN.)

'Child porno' ban urged

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A New York City psychiatrist, displaying sick pornographic magazines, said Monday that children's pornography is "such an atrocity" that she would be willing to give up "a portion of my First Amendment rights to stop this stuff."

Dr. Judianne Derksen-Gerber, who heads Oddsey House in New York, testified that when the Bill of Rights was written the fathers of the country were guaranteeing rights of religious, political and philosophical debate.

They did not wish "to publish a primer instructing a sex molester on how to pick up a child in the park," Dr. Densen-Gerber said. "There is many a scoundrel wrapped in the American flag."

Dr. Densen-Gerber was one of several witnesses to testify before a House subcommittee studying legislation to outlaw "child porno" books, photographs and films of sexual acts involving children under 16.

Equipped with a shopping bag full of such titles as "Baby

Dolls," Lollipop," and "Boy Lusting Mothers," Dr. Densen-Gerber said her 17-year-old son was able to purchase the material in a downtown Washington adult book store.

"Common sense" and maternal instinct tell me that this goes way beyond free speech. Such conduct utilizes children's spirits — they aren't consenting adults, they're victims," she said. "The First Amendment is an absolute. Furthermore, even if I had to give up a portion of my First Amendment rights to stop this stuff, then I'd be willing to do it."

Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., in an opening statement called child pornography "a despicable practice" and said there is evidence that "even parents are inducing or permitting their own children" to participate.

Conyers' crime subcommittee is considering several bills designed to counter the rapidly increasing child pornography business and the rising number of child prostitution rings — both of which find most of their victims among the estimated 1 million runaways reported each year.

Although penalties differ, each bill sets fines and prison terms for individuals who cause or knowingly permit a child to engage in a prohibited sexual act or the simulation of such an act for photographs or films.

Reimplant of limb termed successful

READING, Mass. (UPI) — Fifteen years ago Monday, the Everett Knowles case became medical history when surgeons at Massachusetts General Hospital reimplanted his right arm.

The arm had been severed in a train accident.

Knowles, now 27, said recently, "My arm improved continually during most of that time. The leveling off seemed to come only a couple of years ago. I don't think I can build it up any more."

Knowles said he plays tennis, drives a six-wheel, refrigerator truck more than a thousand miles a week and lifts 200-pound sides of beef regularly.

On May 23, 1962, Knowles was a 12-year-old, freckle-faced, red-haired Little League pitcher who hopped on a freight train "just to see what it was like." He fell from the train and hit an abutment.

Staying conscious despite the massive injury, Knowles gripped the severed arm in his left hand and walked to a nearby street where a passerby helped him.

The technology existed for reimplanting a limb, but it was untried. Dr. Ronald Malt had been waiting for months for a chance to use the surgical method. Knowles met two major prerequisites — he was not in shock and the wound was clean.

Malt and his team of surgeons worked 8 1/2 hours to reimplant the arm. Later surgery concentrated on reattaching nerves, and Malt still examines Knowles regularly.

It was the first successful reattachment of a severed human extremity. Malt said at least 600 hands or arms have since been reimplanted in operations around the world.

As a driver for a Woburn, Mass., meat company, Knowles regularly lifts sides of beef. He says his left arm is stronger, but his right arm alone can hoist up to 80 pounds. He drives his six-wheeled refrigerator truck some 1,100 miles a week, shifting gears with his right hand.

Gas line delay pondered

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The President's Council on Environmental Quality may recommend a delay in plans to build a controversial Alaskan natural gas pipeline to supply the lower 48 states, a council member said today.

"I stress that we have made no judgment yet," council member Gas Speth told a hearing on three pipeline proposals. "But we must address the delay option because it has been brought up by several witnesses at these hearings."

Some environmental and consumer groups have warned that there may not be enough natural gas under Alaska's north slope to warrant a pipeline, that the cost will be too high and that the environmental dangers are too great.

The council must report to President Carter by July 1 on the adequacy of environmental impact statements prepared by the Federal Power Commission and the Interior Department on the proposed pipeline. The report will include environmental considerations.

Carter is expected to make a recommendation to Congress by Sept. 1 and the lawmakers will have 60 days to accept or reject his plan.

Pamela Rich, Alaska coordinator of the Friends of the Earth environmental group, testified today that studies have shown there is less gas in reserve in Alaska than originally believed.

Sidney Wolf of the Environmental Policy Center of the state said the cost of piped-in Alaska natural gas would be high for consumers. And he said, the taxpayer would have to bear the cost of the pipeline even if it is abandoned before it is completed.

The three plans are under consideration by the council.

— The El Paso-Alaska proposal for a short pipeline with liquefaction of the natural gas for tanker delivery to California.

— The Alcan Pipeline Co. would move gas by pipeline built along the right-of-way of the Alcan Highway.

— The Alaskan Pipeline Co. would build pipeline through Canada to U.S. Midwest.

Land fuss to courts?

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Land Board said today it was prepared to go to court to resolve in-land exchange with the federal government, but would delay action until the matter was fully discussed with Secretary of Interior Cecil D. Andrus.

Andrus had been scheduled to meet with board members June 17, but Gov. John V. Evans informed the board that the former Idaho governor would be unable to keep the commitment.

Evans said other matters forced Andrus to cancel his plans to come to Idaho.

The governor asked board members their feeling about a trip to Washington, D.C., to meet with Andrus; but this was rejected in favor of another meeting date.

Attorney General Wayne Kidwell suggested the board would Andrus, seeking his help because of the problem of exchanges of land between the state and federal government was with the Department of Interior.

He said Andrus, who was chairman of the Idaho Land Board as governor, "knows the problem as well as anybody at this table."

Kidwell said the secretary should be told "now's the time to get off the dime and help us."

State Auditor Joe R. Williams said he didn't think Idaho would get anywhere "unless we go to court."

Kidwell agreed, saying "nobody will move back there (Washington, D.C.) until we go to court." Kidwell added, however, that out of respect for Andrus "we should talk to him first, but let him know we are prepared to go to court."

Evans said because of Andrus' background in the battle between the state and the Bureau of Land Management over exchange of federal and state lands that the Interior Secretary "will solve the problem."

incidentally.

Truby said the government still owes the state 27,000 acres in fee land and the delay in these selections is in favor of the government. He explained there is a penalty against the government for not giving the state the land and they are receiving benefits from the vesting.

The school chief said he had not favor signing the agreement because "we don't know what we are getting," and the government does not want about the land it already has.

Board raps Dworshak land trade

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho Land Board Members said today they are not willing at this time to exchange prime forest land in the Dworshak Dam area with the federal government until the government cooperates in past land exchanges.

The government seeks 4,700 acres in the Smith Ridge area as a wildlife range to replace big game ranges lost by flooding following completion of Dworshak Dam near Orofino.

Board members did agree to continue negotiations to see if a solution couldn't be worked out.

But State Auditor Joe R. Williams said "now isn't the time to exchange this land." He said it involved nearly 5,000 of "prime timber," which produces an estimated 24 million board feet of timber per year from each acre.

"It's not the time with conditions the way they are," Williams said, explaining "down around the state and we stand to lose more money."

The auditor said he couldn't see any benefit from the exchange at the sacrifice of the lumber industry and the state's schools, which benefit from timber sales.

"Why rob Peter to pay Paul," said Williams.

State Land Commissioner Gordon Trombley said in dealing with the Bureau of Land Management on other fee land exchange, the land received from the bureau was not "comparable to the land we are giving up."

State Public Instruction Supt. Roy Truby said he saw no reason to discuss the matter. He called the idea

"incredible."

Truby said the government still owes the state 27,000 acres in fee land and the delay in these selections is in favor of the government. He explained there is a penalty against the government for not giving the state the land and they are receiving benefits from the vesting.

The school chief said he had not favor signing the agreement because "we don't know what we are getting," and the government does not want about the land it already has.

Breakfast launches McClure Gem visit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. James McClure will begin a series of Idaho activities Friday with attendance at the annual St. Anthony's Pilgrimage Breakfast. His office announced today.

After the breakfast, McClure travels to Ashton for a luncheon with local businessmen and then proceeds to the Island Park area for a little fishing.

McClure leaves eastern Idaho the following day for Payette, where he will address the Payette High School graduating class on Sunday.

Monday, the senator will speak at the Boise Veterans Memorial Day celebration, visit the VA Hospital and speak at Gem Boys State at Boise State University. He will speak to the youth on the importance of the two-party system and federal-state relationship.

McClure goes to Lewiston the next day for a meeting with doctors at St. Joseph's Hospital, an address to the Lewiston Chamber of Commerce and a "legislative session" with the Nez Perce County Commissioners.

He will attend an Agriculture Symposium on June 1 at Grangeville and the following three days make appearances in Boise, McCall, Twin Falls and Redburg. At McCall McClure will conduct U.S. Senate hearings with Sen. Frank Church regarding the closure of the Boise Cascade lumber mill and U.S. Forest timber harvesting.

Road meet slated

BOISE (UPI) — Current vital energy and highway issues will be discussed Wednesday at the annual meeting of the Idaho Highway Users Conference in Boise.

Economics Professor Barry Asmus of Boise State University will talk on the economic impact of national energy proposals. Idaho Transportation Director Darrell Manning and former state highway engineer Edith Mathas also will be on the program.

Civil servants may query payment use, court rules

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court ruled Monday that individual employees of local governments cannot be required to contribute to a union's political activity to which they are opposed.

Sixteen states and the District of Columbia permit the state government to negotiate contracts which require employees to pay a service fee equivalent to union dues even if they do not join.

This arrangement, common in private industry, is known as the agency shop.

The court's opinion said the agency shop is permissible, but that individuals may challenge the use to which their money is paid.

This brings the law governing union activity on behalf of civil servants in line with earlier opinions dealing with private employers.

The court also ruled: In a lower case, that individuals are subject to the federal ban on mailing obscene material even though the state where they are acting has more permissive standards.

The agency shop case was brought in 1969 by some Detroit teachers who claimed their payments were being used for ideological purposes with which they do not agree.

Justice Potter Stewart, who spoke for the court, suggested that since the teachers union has now adopted an internal remedy for dissenters, further proceedings may be appropriately deferred pending a possible settlement by this means.

If not, they can ask Michigan courts for the same kind of remedy accorded members of non-government unions — a proportionate refund.

In other actions the court:

- Agreed to decide whether news reporters and cameramen should be given access to prison inmates and allowed to view jail conditions under different rules than the public.
- Rejected a Jacksonville,

Fla. woman's appeal that newspaper photographers and a business entering her home after a fire and taking pictures in a room where her daughter's body was found.

— Struck down Congress' neglectful regulation requiring neglected and dependent girls committed to the care of the state to obtain an official's written consent for an elective abortion.

— Denied a hearing to Penthouse Magazine, which claimed that operators of a California resort which filed a $50 million libel suit against it should be considered "public figures" who would have a hard time proving their case.

— Unanimously overturned a Virginia law barring nonresidents from commercial fishing in inland waters and aliens from obtaining commercial fishing licenses in the state.

Pit quiets beam plant steam hiss

SALMON, Idaho (UPI) — How do you hush a hiss? Holton Quinn, plant manager, and Jim Banla, production supervisor at the Champlin Building Products laminated beam plant in Salmon, have found that one way is with a hissing pit.

Quinn said the plant has developed an excess-of-slavings which must be burned at the plant and the result has been more steam. Because of noise from the "escaping steam" especially at night — they needed a way to muffle the sound.

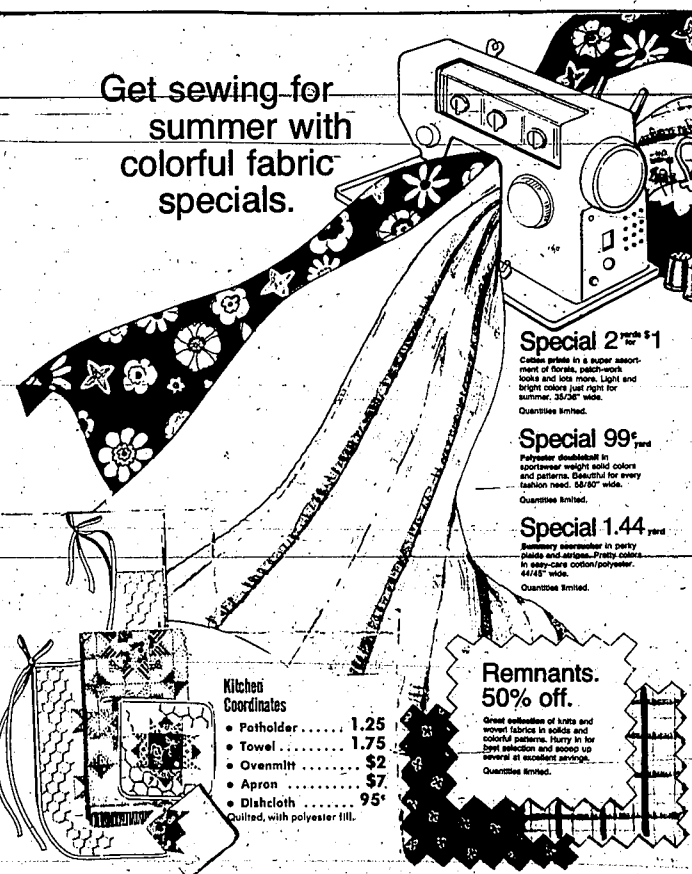

So, they said, they built this hissing pit. They constructed it eight feet deep and buried an eight-foot culvert into which the steam is released.

Washington (UPI) — Effective today, the United States is cracking down on imports of plants and animals — including turtle oil used for cooking and hunters' rhinoceros trophies — protected by an international endangered species treaty.

The Fish and Wildlife Service now requires statements of origin from wildlife officials in the native country — for ivory, furs, antiques, crocodilian products, snakes, lizards and sea turtles.

Agents at Kennedy Airport in New York the largest of eight U.S. ports for wildlife entry, anticipate a 25 to 30 percent increase in the number of shipments refused entry.

Probe may end toxaphene use

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Environmental Protection Agency Monday began an investigation into the most widely used insecticide in the nation which could lead to its banning as a cancer-causing health hazard.

The chemical, toxaphene, which was developed in 1947, was applied at a rate of 100 million pounds a year in 1975, the latest figure available.

It is an ingredient of many bromans used for insect control on cotton, soybeans, peanuts, cattle and pigs and to a lesser extent on corn, tobacco, wheat, alfalfa, tomatoes, beans, lettuce, huy, potatoes and numerous other commodities.

The chemical, however, is rarely used in household bug killers.

According to the EPA, tests show (toxaphene) increases tumors in mice and rats, thus suggesting that it may also be a cancer threat to people. Other tests demonstrate the insecticide may also be lethal to certain fish and shell fish.

"Since 1956, toxaphene has led to 94 reported fish kills around the country," according to EPA statistics.

Tests have also shown that toxaphene may interfere with bone development in higher life forms," EPA reported.

It is a persistent pesticide. Almost one-half of the applied amount remained in sandy soil for 14 years and can retain its toxic effects in water for up to six years, studies showed. The EPA reported that it also "bioaccumulates," meaning it builds up in increasing amounts in the food chain, for example, from water to small fish to larger fish to man.

The EPA action is officially a "notice of rebuttable presumption" under which manufacturers and other interested parties may attempt to disprove the government evaluation of the chemical as a health hazard, that human exposure is insignificant or that economic and social benefits outweigh the risks of continued use.

"This simply signals a public investigation into the advantages and disadvantages of the pesticide," according to EPA pesticides chief Edwin L.

Johnson. "It means that there are studies — in this case quite a few — that indicate that toxaphene may be hazardous to people or the environment" to allow continued use.

"But we want to give the makers of toxaphene and other interested people the chance to comment on these studies and argue the compound's benefits before we decide whether to take further action," he continued.

In the meantime, toxaphene may be continued to be sold and used.

Sugar agreement unlikely

GENEVA (UPI) — Delegates at the international sugar conference now all but rule out the chances of reaching an agreement between producers and consumers during the last week of talks which began Monday.

"It would take a miracle to get an agreement," a South African negotiator said.

So far, he said, there has not been enough progress to even warrant the holding a second round of negotiations although there could be a sudden breakthrough at the end of this week to justify a reconvening of the conference later in the year.

In its five weeks so far the conference has almost exclusively discussed a stocking arrangement as demanded by the European Community and although with more flexibility, the United States. Neither side has yet made any concrete proposals on floor and ceiling prices or quotas.

"We had three years advance work and went into the conference with more preparation than ever before," the South African delegate said. "Suddenly, it all went down the drain."

Diet report may be revised

By BERNARD BRENNER
UPI Farm Editor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Senate report advising consumers to eat less meat probably will be revised later this year after a study later of "additional evidence" from a panel of 50 scientists, congressional sources say.

"Dietary Goals for the United States," was issued last February by the Senate nutrition committee headed by George McGovern, D-S.D., and it has become controversial.

The report reviewed evidence on issues including cholesterol and fat in the diet and related health problems and concluded that Americans could improve their prospects for good health by eating less meat.

That prompted a bitter rejoinder from livestock producers and meat industry groups. As a result, following a hearing in March at which several medical experts said it was "premature" to recommend sweeping changes in national diet patterns, McGovern ordered a fresh look.

A committee spokesman said McGovern held a private meeting with livestock industry leaders several weeks ago and wrote 50 prominent scientists asking for their opinion.

Twenty-four names of experts on the list were suggested by the American National Cattlemen's Association and the National Livestock Feeders' Association.

The committee aide said the experts have been asked to reply by June 3. After that, he said, their responses will be published, and the committee staff will review the information to pave the way for possible rewriting of portions of the "eat less meat" advice in the panel's initial report.

Another congressional source said McGovern is "committed to revising the report," but there is no firm indication yet as to what form the changes may take. The source predicted the result would be advice aimed at reducing consumer intake of fat without attacking the use of lean, high-protein meat.

In effect, the source said, an effort may be made to get together on advice which recognizes that livestock producers themselves have been putting increasing emphasis in recent years on production of leaner beef and pork.

A committee staff member, meanwhile, denied a recent statement by the National Livestock and Meat Board that the original Dietary Goals report "is being withdrawn from circulation in its present form."

The fact is, the aide said, that although the nutrition committee itself has run out of copies and has not reordered additional printings, some copies are still sold by the Government Printing Office.

The aide conceded the original report is in a "holding status" as far as the committee is concerned. He said the committee will not distribute further copies until it has determined what changes should be made in the document.

Several nutrition committee members earlier had said they emphatically did not intend in the report to advise consumers to eat less beef. Those disclaimers did little to satisfy the National Livestock and Meat Board which said the original report states that during the last seven years, most of the extra fat added to American diets came from meat.

The board complained that made beef the "primary target" for a recommendation in the original report to "decrease consumption of foods high in fat and partially substitute polyunsaturated ... fat."

Restriction delay sought by McClure

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. James A. McClure has asked President Carter to delay implementation of additional Army Corps of Engineers restrictions on streams and waterways that are scheduled to go into effect July 1.

McClure, joining senators from several states, requested Carter issue a 90-day moratorium on the Corps' permit program. McClure said this new group of regulations would force farmers, ranchers and loggers to obtain federal permits for work on nearly all waterways in Idaho, including irrigation ditches.

"The Congress is already working towards a legislative solution to this problem," he said. "The House has already passed legislation and the Senate Public Works Committee, of which I am a member, will begin hearings on this question early in June."

"We have asked President Carter to delay implementation of this federal Corps of Engineers' permit program until we have a chance to act," he said.

Farm safety topic

FILER — A report on how farm machinery can be operated more safely was given by Frances Wells Friday at the Filer Grange meeting.

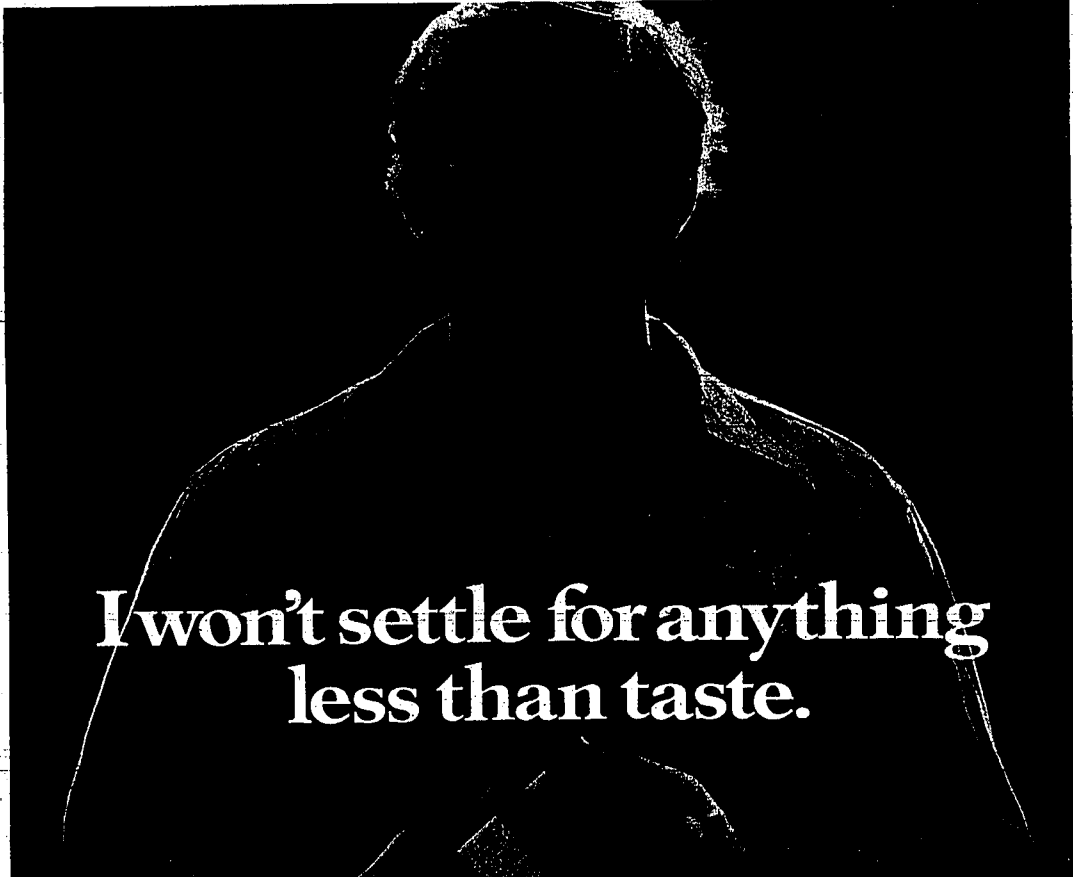

Eilon Fessenden gave a report on the legislature and announced Sen. James McClure would be in Twin Falls June 3.

Mrs. Craig Dunlap reported on the women's activities committee and asked women to bring discarded eyeglasses to upcoming Grange meetings. Hostesses for the evening were Mr. and Mrs. Loren Drake and Mr. and Mrs. Craig Dunlap.

The June meeting of the Pomona Grange, consisting of all 13 Grange chapters in Twin Falls County, is scheduled for the Haggler Grange Hall.

June Skinner, winner of the Idaho State Grange Sewing Contest, attended the meeting with the local Grange members who sponsored her.

"SELLING YOUR BUSINESS IS OUR BUSINESS"

Twin Falls Denturist Lee Barnes, pictured here in his office inspecting a set of dentures, has been defying a court order and supplying dentures directly to the public. Barnes, president of the National Denturists Association, said his organization feels that by defying the law it is helping people who otherwise could not afford dental care.

Flores trial postponed

JEROME — A jury trial for Gilbert Flores, 30, Jerome, charged with second degree murder in the Nov. 13, 1976, death of Manuel O. Solis, 37, Kimberly, has been continued until a later date.

The trial was scheduled to open Monday. District Court clerks said today the trial date has been delayed but a new opening date has not been set.

Flores is charged with shooting Manuel Solis to death in a Jerome tavern late on the night of Nov. 13. A Wendell woman, Arleen Ray, 37, was also wounded in the leg.

Flores was bound over to district court for trial following a preliminary hearing in magistrate court Nov. 24.

Teachers reconsidering

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls teachers meet today to reconsider a school board proposal for a base pay salary of $9,000 next year tied to special override election.

Teachers rejected the same proposal last week because it calls for a base salary of only $8,600 if the override election fails. Negotiators for the teachers had asked a base pay of $8,000 if the election fails. District officials argued money was not available to meet the request.

The agreement to reconsider the board's offer followed negotiations Monday night.

Under the proposal a seven-mill override levy election, possible held as early as mid-June, would be held to provide money for both salary increases for all school district and to add the district's deficit-ridden general fund.

The tax increase, which would have to be approved by a majority of voters in the school district, would provide additional revenue of about $315,000. Of that, $247,500 would go for salary increases, and the remainder would be used for maintenance and operation in the district.

The district Friday issued teachers' contracts for next year offering a base pay of $8,600.

Those contracts would be amended to a base pay of $9,000 if the teachers accept the board's proposal and if the override election passed.

Street closure delayed

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls City Council agreed Monday to give downtown merchants and others until its June 20 council meeting to prepare information on a plan to stop through traffic on Main Avenue.

Earlier this month city officials unveiled plans to block traffic from crossing Shoshone Street on Main Avenue. The plan was seen as an effort to induce through traffic to use the Main Avenue mall and use the one-way Second Avenues.

At a council meeting last week, mall merchants request the city consider other alternatives to setting up barriers on Shoshone Street, including stop signs and traffic lights.

More water for MID

RUPERT — The Minidoka Irrigation District has ordered all supplemental water "turned back on."

Leonard Scheer, manager of the district, said today that MID now has water for farmers with supplemental water rights.

The MID board of directors ordered a cut off of supplemental water in April because of drought in order to protect the rights of water users with primary rights.

Scheer said today that MID has been able to lease water from the Bureau of Reclamation for the use of supplemental irrigators.

Scheer declined to say how many acre feet of water have been leased.

"We want them to take care of it," he said. "We worked hard to get it for them."

Charles Randolph, superintendent for the bureau at Burley, declined to comment on the leasing. He said all information should come from MID.

Gem denturists defy law, provide service to patients

By JEFF SHER Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls denturist Lee Barnes says he can provide upper and lower dentures for $285 with satisfaction guaranteed.

According to figures published by Consumer Reports magazine an Idaho dentist would charge $450 for the same dentures.

There is only one catch in getting low-cost dentures from Barnes.

Under Idaho law, Barnes cannot legally provide dentures directly to a patient. It is a misdemeanor in Idaho to practice dentistry unless you are a licensed dentist and that includes performing any procedure "with respect to dental prosthetic appliances which requires or necessitates the presence, aid, assistance or cooperation of the . . . wearer of such appliance." Idaho Code section 54-901.

So even though denturists actually make the dentures which the vast majority of patients wear, denturists cannot provide dentures directly to a patient.

Barnes and other denturists in Idaho feel the law prohibiting them to fit dentures is a disservice to denture wearers.

Barnes argues when a patient buys a pair of dentures, he or she pays not only for the services of the denturist who makes the appliance, but also pays for a dentist who puts the dentures in.

A Twin Falls denturist for over twenty years and the current president of the National Denturists Association (NDA), Barnes says denturists feel that they are capable of fitting replacement dentures to patients' mouths and of repairing dentures—as well as dentists can.

The NDA has taken the position that section 54-901 of the Idaho Code and similar laws in other states are unconstitutional and that denturists "have a constitutional right to defy an unconstitutional law."

As a result, Barnes says denturists in Idaho and across the country are "defying the law, working for the public, and making our own money."

Barnes is in the forefront of the struggle to allow denturists to deal directly with the public.

In June 1970, the Twin Falls District Court permanently enjoined Barnes from performing acts constituting the practice of dentistry. Barnes appealed the order to the Idaho Supreme Court, which affirmed the restraining order.

But Barnes continued to supply services directly to his patients.

Thus, the Twin Falls District Court ordered Barnes to show cause why he should not be held in contempt of court for violating the restraining order.

During the last session of the Idaho legislature, while Barnes was lobbying to change the Idaho law relating to denturists. District Court Judge Ward found Barnes guilty of a violation of the restraining order and sentenced him to five days in jail and a fine of $500, the penalty to be set aside if the law was changed during the legislative session.

When Barnes' bill died in the House Health Education and Welfare Committee and the session ended, Barnes paid his fine and served his time.

But Lee Barnes continues to treat patients directly.

Why does he defy the court?

Barnes claims that by defying the law denturists are saving their patients significant sums of money and making dentures available to people who could not otherwise afford them.

Barnes maintains that if patients could deal directly with denturists each would save at least $150 on a set of dentures.

Consumer reports, in a report published in 1975 on dental fees charged in 1973 on a state-by-state basis, cited figures which support Barnes' estimation of the cost of dentures purchased from a dentist in Idaho at about $447.

Denturists maintain that if they were allowed to deal directly with the public, the lower prices they would charge would make dentures available to twice as many people as currently have them, and dentists would be freed to spend more time solving the dental problems of people who can't now get dentures.

According to Idaho dentists, however, the lower price you pay for dentures from a denturist may not be a bargain.

Dr. Gerald Woodworth, Rupert, president of the South Central Dental Association, says it is not worth sacrificing treatment by a trained professional just to save money.

Woodworth says denturists simply don't have the training and knowledge necessary to provide dentures directly to patients.

Woodworth says denturists lack training in pathology, anatomy, bacteriology, and prosthetics and are not qualified to tell a patient if he needs dentures or to identify abnormalities in the mouth which would complicate the installation of a denture, such as gum diseases or infections resulting from improper fits.

Barnes, however, says denturists don't want to provide dentures to patients who have never had them before. They only want to provide replacement dentures and repair dentures.

The denturist would even be in favor of referring patients who come in for replacement dentures to dentists for an oral examination to determine the health of the mouth, Barnes says.

Barnes says "We (denturists) feel we are qualified; and if we are not qualified, give us a course in it."

Dairies change tune on ban bid

By KEN HODGE Times-News Writer

BOISE — Three Idaho and Utah dairies which earlier petitioned for a ban on raw milk sales in Idaho have done an abrupt about-face and have petitioned the Department of Health for the right to bottle raw milk at their own plants and sell it.

The day before the May 20 hearing on their original petition to ban the sale of raw milk in Idaho grocery stores, Western General Dairies, Associated Dairies and Meadow-Gold Dairies changed their tune.

The three presented an amended petition asking for the right to ship raw-milk from their premises where it is produced to their plants for bottling and subsequent sale in grocery stores.

"The Department of Health refused to hear it and said they would set up a subsequent hearing," Walker explained.

Walker said he and his clients had always felt the purpose of the proposed ban was to infringe on the market held by small dairies selling raw milk.

"The ironic thing is that they already have the right to sell raw milk themselves," Walker said. "But they are requesting the bottling regulations be relaxed to allow them to ship the raw milk."

Walker said present regulations do not allow shipping of raw milk to new location for bottling because of the danger of contamination.

Thermal power possible, costly

By CHRIS PECK Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — Idaho's present and future energy requirements could be met by geothermal power, the new director of the Idaho Office of Energy says.

But a hot water-powered state wouldn't mean lower electricity bills for consumers. Kirk Hall said Monday.

Hall, only three weeks on the job as the state's top energy official, believes alternative energy systems such as geothermal power and solar energy could satisfy Idaho's energy hunger by the end of the century.

"Geothermal is possible if we want to pay for it," the energy chief said.

"The techniques for developing Idaho's geothermal potential are available now, but it is very expensive. Developing these resources won't mean Idaho will have lower energy bills," the 33-year-old energy officer director added.

For Idaho to tap its widespread geothermal capabilities Hall said the state legislature and the utility companies would have to agree to buy the hot water energy before it was generated.

"If the state would say it would pay for geothermal then it could be developed right now," Hall said.

"The developer has to find someone to buy the power. If Idaho told some developer I wanted to buy the power and could negotiate a price that it could be done," Hall explained.

"Such a contract wouldn't be any cheaper than conventional energy systems such as coal-fired or nuclear plants. Hall added.

But the geothermal systems would have the advantage of keeping Idaho largely untouched by the impact of developing coal or nuclear-fired plants.

Hall hasn't yet determined whether he will support or oppose a coal-fired electrical generating plant in Idaho.

He did say his preference between coal and nuclear plants would be nuclear because atomic plants produce much more energy than coal-fired plants.

While he advocates a careful energy conservation program which "wouldn't change anything in the state," Hall predicted additional energy probably would have to be found for Idaho.

"When you build a new house and ask the utilities to hook it up, they can't refuse," he quipped.

If Idaho Power is asked to provide virtually all of the electricity used in Idaho without going into a regional energy-sharing system, Hall predicted the company would need a coal-fired plant before the 1980s.

But an independent arrangement where Idaho Power joined with other northwest utilities to provide regional electricity could avoid construction of a coal-fired plant at the present time, he said.

EPA standards met

By BOB ZUCKERMAN Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — City Manager Jean Millar said Monday the Twin Falls Waste Water Treatment Plant has met Environmental Protection Agency standards for the last two weeks.

He said, however, he still expected some "minor violations" of those standards until the city's self-imposed deadline of July 1 arrives.

From October through April, the plant was discharging pollutants into the Snake River at levels exceeding Environmental Protection Agency standards, according to plant reports. And during one week in January, discharged pollutant levels were more than 20 times higher than those permitted by EPA.

Last week the federal agency set a deadline for the city to stop discharging excessive pollutants of those standards to fine the city $10,000 per day for each violation after that.

Millar earlier said he formally asked the EPA to extend the deadline until July 1 but he said the agency has yet "to have the courtesy to respond."

Brent Athlouson, EPA legal section, told the Times-News last week the agency was still evaluating the request.

In other developments, Millar said:

- Officials would repair a conveyor belt this week which lifts dry sludge bricks into trucks for hauling. The belt has not been working correctly for at least a week.
- Fifteen of the plant's 18 employees will complete formal training in plant operations by the end of this week, making it "easier" for plant officials to maintain plant machinery.
- Officials have decided to recycle portage liquor, one form of highly-polluted waste liquid through other plant machinery rather than construct a new basin for treating the waste.
- All other plant equipment is functioning correctly, though the plant's heat treatment facility, which sterilizes and kills the smell of sludge, is currently shutdown for regular maintenance.

Hysterectomies common for Magic Valley women

Covington also says perhaps half the hysterectomies being done are for health conditions not involving life-and-death situations.

While Covington said he didn't think the number of hysterectomies being done now is "any greater than it was 10 years ago," he added that changes in attitude on birth control may have popularized the procedure.

"Certain factors have entered in the last 10 years which make the uterus less valuable to people," Covington said. "We have clipped the value of procreative power compared to how we used to regard it."

"It's a sad commentary on the times," Covington added. "We used to fight like hell to save a baby, and now we wonder if we're wise. We still fight like hell, but with all the abortions . . . The general effect of the population explosion is to diminish the value of the uterus."

Covington admits that some doctors faced with uterine trouble in a patient would not try so hard to save the uterus as they did in the past. But he adds that a doctor would be foolish to do indiscriminate hysterectomies.

"A man in my business is cutting his own throat to do a lot of hysterectomies," he said. "We're destroying our own business. I feel in this community we have a real good standard of medicine practice, and we have some real good practitioners here."

Like Miller and Covington, Green agrees that a hysterectomy is often offered as one medical alternative to a patient.

"The hysterectomy would be put there on the table, and she could pick it up if she wants it," Green said.

He takes strong exception, however, to the criticism that hysterectomies are being done widely.

"I don't think anybody's chopping up on anybody or taking advantage of anybody at all," he said. "I think this is something that a large segment of women ask for and they receive."

Green estimates that perhaps 10 per cent of his income comes from hysterectomies, but he adds that many patients who request the operation are talked out of it.

"For every one hysterectomy that you do, you may talk five people out of it. After you've counseled and talked alternative therapy, probably four out of the five will change their minds," he said. "It's far more common for us to try to counsel the patient out of getting the hysterectomy done than to con her into getting it done."

"I personally would never attempt to pressure or coerce a patient into a hysterectomy," Green added, echoing the statements of his colleagues.

Dairies change tune on ban bid

Walker said the new petition asked for the total ban of raw milk sales in Idaho or, "in the alternative that the petitioners be allowed the right to sell raw milk themselves."

Stokes said the position of the DHW will remain the same about the shipping of raw milk to new premises for bottling.

"We will continue the prohibition of raw milk sales in restaurants, but it is not prohibited in grocery stores," Stokes said.

He said his department will also petition for a change in the language of regulations covering raw milk sales to prohibit its sale in restaurants, but the department's position on shipping will remain the same.

The attorney for the three large dairies was not available for comment.

Howe family jumps to new team

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Hockey great Gordie Howe and his two sons Monday switched their World Hockey Association show from the Houston Aeros to the New England Whalers.

"They signed a long-term contract club officials described only as 'multi-million dollar.' Two National Hockey League clubs, the Boston Bruins and Detroit Red Wings, courted the Howes; those contracts with Houston expire June 1.

Gordie Howe, 49, and the sport's all-time leading scorer, said he was not sure if he would play for the Whalers.

"I'll go to training camp and see how I feel," he said. "I'm coming here with all my options open."

Howe, eight-times the NHL's Most Valuable Player before joining the WHA where he also won the honor, said if he decided not to play any more he would join the team's management.

Mark Howe, a U.S. Olympian in 1972, averaged more than 37 goals in his first three WHA seasons, but dipped last season due to injuries.

"Many astute hockey men have tagged Mark to be the nearest thing to a Bobby Orr and, at 22 years of age, his best years are still ahead of him," said Jack Kelley, the Whalers' director of hockey operations.

Marty Howe, a 23-year-old defenseman, scored 17 goals last season.

"Mark and Marty Howe could play for and star for any club in either league," said Howard Baldwin, the Whalers' managing general partner. He said the signing by the Whalers, fourth in a five-team division last season, was "a giant step towards a championship."

Whaler officials said they were talking with Houston about compensation for the Howes.

Kelley said the signing would hasten a hockey merger because the Whalers had stuffed the older NHL from taking away established WHA stars. Baldwin said the signing proved the WHA could survive without a merger.

Kelley said the Howes' presence at Hartford almost would guarantee, in the case of a merger, the Whalers would be taken in by the NHL.

The Howes and Whalers were light-headed about the contract, answering questions about how long it was by saying, "four pages."

"There's two things we don't want to talk about and that's our sex life and our contracts," said the elder Howe with his wife Colleen, the family's chief negotiator, at his side.

television audience he has hit full stride in the playoffs.

Bill Walton, the Blazers' big man, led his team with 28 points and 29 rebounds, but was unable to fire off many passes to his cutting team, an integral part of Portland's game plan all season.

"I think the other four guys are responsible for that," Jones said. "Our defense was doing a good job on their men and he didn't have anyone to pass to."

The fast break attack which took the Blazers to their first appearance in the finals went scattershot at times Sunday, resulting in 34 turnovers. Ramsey refused to blame the poor performance on a nine-day layoff following Portland's division-clinching victory over the Lakers.

"We weren't stale — we were overzealous," he said. "I wasn't pleased with our overall game. We can play better than we did today."

Hollins and Herm Gilliam, both whom are 6-3.

"Their guards double team well on the press," Stue said. "We had the center bring the ball up because we felt Walton would be their weakest link on the press. To succeed against Portland, you must take away their pressure."

"I thought that was a good tactic," agreed Portland Coach Jack Ramsay, who will try to think up a way to counter the move when the series resumes Thursday night.

Another problem Ramsey must cope with is Julius Erving, who scored 33 points Sunday and showed a national

The Philadelphia 76ers' quiet center had scored only eight points while teammates Julius Erving and Doug Collins had provided the firepower Wednesday night.

Low water limits some whitewater opportunities

MAGIC VALLEY — Wouldn't it be disappointing to travel hours to a particular stretch of good whitewater in search of the speed and excitement only whitewater canoeing, rafting or floating can offer. Only to find when you get there that there wasn't enough water in the river to float your bath-tubs.

The Idaho Drought Committee recommends that you check with local officials of the Forest Service or Bureau of Reclamation before planning a whitewater trip.

Based on projected water flows for this summer, the following information on anticipated conditions has been compiled by the committee:

Owyhee River: Not usable.

Jarbridge River: Not usable. High country still has snow, but the speed with which it melts will determine the length of the use period.

Bruner River: Limited to expert kayakers. No float boats. Snowpack could keep the river usable another week if it melts fast.

Lower Salmon River: Expected to drop to 2,000 cfs later this summer. At this flow level, boating would be marginal.

Snake River (C.J. Strike area): Flow levels' good through September.

Snake River (Murphy area): Flow levels should remain good.

Reggie earns pay

Back-to-back second-inning homers by Dwight Evans and Butch Hobson and Jim Rice's RBI single in the eighth Monday night kept a 4-3 victory by the Boston Red Sox over the New York Yankees.

Bill Lee, who gave up five hits in seven innings and was the victim of two unearned runs, was the winner, aided by two innings of relief from Bill Campbell.

After Reggie Jackson's two-run solo homer tied the score at 2-2 in the seventh, the Red Sox staged their winning rally in the eighth when Hobson doubled and moved to third on a bunt single by Denay Doyle. Rick Burleson followed with a tie-breaking sacrifice fly and, one out later, Rice singled home Doyle with the winning run.

Millionaire outfielder Reggie Jackson slides home safely in the second inning, scoring from second on a wild throw by Boston third baseman Butch Hobson on a Lou Piniella grounder. Jackson had a double and a homer in the game, but the Red Sox won 4-3.

his first in five decisions. Tomlin's record is now 9-2. Atlanta tied the score at 5-5 with a run in the eighth on singles by Tom Paciorek and Bonelli. Darrel Chaney's sacrifice and Rod Gilbreath's infield out.

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Rookie Barry Bonnell's fourth hit of the night, a bouncing single through the box, drove in Jeff Burroughs from second base with the tie-breaking run in the top of the 11th Monday night when the Atlanta Braves nipped the San Diego Padres 5-5.

Bonnell, called up from Richmond in three weeks ago, punched his hit through the middle with two out after losing pitcher Dave Tomlin had issued a lead-off walk to Burroughs and an intentional pass to Tom Paciorek.

The win went to Buzz Capra.

Robinson's managing days numbered at Cleveland?

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Frank Robinson was left waiting slowly in the wind today, waiting for a possible announcement of his dismissal as manager of the Cleveland Indians.

Indians president Alva "Ted" Bonda and general manager Phil Seghi could not be reached for comment on Robinson's future Monday night, but Seghi dropped a large hint earlier in the day. Asked if Robinson would be managing the Indians in Tuesday night's game against Seattle, Seghi said, "I couldn't say for sure. I don't know." At the same time, Bonda was insisting that the situation was "unchanged from last week."

Seghi's lack of support for Robinson went also demonstrated Monday when he turned down the manager's request for a fine against pitcher Al Fitzmorris for alleged malingering. After meeting with Robinson and Fitzmorris, Seghi said there would be no fine or suspension. "I told him to go out and throw for 20-30 minutes to see how the arm feels and to let us know," Seghi said.

Robinson wanted Fitzmorris suspended without pay because Fitzmorris took himself out of Saturday night's game in Kansas City after facing only one batter. He indicated he had a sore arm and told other players he would go on the disabled list rather than pitch in relief.

Fitzmorris called the condition "silliness which is coming in to face only one batter. I make those decisions, not him. If Fitz had a sore arm, how come he never went to the trainer for treatment? And he hasn't pitched in 10 days anyway." Robinson did manage to fine utility man-Larvell Blanks Monday without any infraction. He criticized Blanks for "putting" when he is not playing and "putting" and "falling" to give 100 percent "when he does play."

Robinson's grip on the manager's post was weakened by Cleveland's skid into the cellar of the American League East. The Tribe, now on a rare two-game winning streak, has managed only a 19-21 start after springtime talk about being a "darkhorse contender."

Some fans blamed the bad start on Robinson—but others were disenchanted with Seghi because of the $2.5 million deal he made for free agent Wayne Garland. Garland, hailed as the keystone of the pitching staff coming off last year's 20-7 finish at Baltimore, has struggled to a 1-3 record with a swollen ERA this year.

PRD tennis star Rosemary Casals was involved in a scratching and pushing brawl with a male motorist who ran into her at San Francisco International Airport last Friday, police records disclosed Monday.

Casals involved in airport brawl

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Rosemary Casals, of the Los Angeles Strings professional tennis team, and former tennis pro Shari Barman, got into a scratching, punching fracas with a male motorist and a policeman at San Francisco International Airport, police records disclosed today.

Casals and Barman, both 28, who live at the same address in Sausalito, Calif., face assault charges in connection with the incident last Friday.

The airport police account, filed with authorities in San Mateo County, where the airport is located, gives this sequence of events:

Casals and Barman arrived at the airport at 1:15 p.m. for Casals to catch a flight to Los Angeles where the Strings were meeting the New York Apples that night.

Another motorist, pulling away from the terminal, brushed the car of the two tennis celebrities.

Casals jumped out of her car yelling profanities at the other driver, Glenn Wolfe of San Francisco. "You hit me," she screamed, going to his car and scratching and pounding him as he got out, according to the report.

The row ended with Casals under citizen's arrest, charged by Wolfe with assault, and Barman in custody of the San Mateo County sheriff for about four hours on charges of assaulting an officer. She finally was halted out by Casals for $1,000 cash.

Both face court hearings. Rosemary made a flight to Los Angeles that got her there just in time to play. She won both her singles and doubles 10-match losing streak by the Strings.

Idaho Power will aid salmon

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho Power Co. announced Monday it is ready to increase water releases from its Hells Canyon dam to develop the next two weeks to maintain Snake River flows to help young salmon and steelhead migrate downstream.

L.E. Garlinghouse, assistant vice president for power operations, said the company will release enough water to maintain an average daily flow of 13,000 cubic feet per second at Lime Point in combination with Salmon River flows.

Idaho Power's Hells Canyon license requires it to maintain a minimum flow of 5,000 cfs and the amount of additional releases will depend on flows in the Salmon River, which enters the Snake above Lime Point.

"The Salmon River now is running about 10,000 cubic feet because of recent snow and rain in the mountains and Idaho Power has been able to release less water than it otherwise would and store a small additional amount in Brownlee reservoir," Garlinghouse said.

But he said if the Salmon River flows drop off in the next two weeks, "we will be forced to increase releases from the Hells Canyon development and this will further hurt our chances of building up Brownlee storage."

Idaho Power agreed to maintain the average flow for the fish protection when it obtained a drought-emergency order from the Federal Power Commission—modifying flow requirements in an attempt to fill Brownlee in April. The temporary PFC waiver, which expires July 1, permits the company to reduce flows during light load hours at night and store the water in Brownlee.

Garlinghouse also said the firm was cooperating with Lewiston area boaters "to the fullest possible extent under constantly changing conditions."

It is said the company has been releasing additional water for eight hours daily on Wednesdays and Thursdays to maintain a minimum flow of 8,400 cubic feet upstream from the Salmon River to Johnson's Bar, the upper limit of navigation.

SEC gets fat on TV revenues

ST. SIMONS, Ga. (UPI) — Each of the 10 schools in the Southeastern Conference got at least $220,000 as its share of bowl and television money during the current school year.

Commissioner Boyd McWhorter told conference athletic directors at their spring meeting each school got $58,000 from the bowls, not counting the expenses of those schools which competed in postseason football games, and another $19,500 from basketball television revenues.

The balance of $220,000 to $300,000 received by SEC schools came from televised regular season football games. The Southeastern Conference participated in four bowls last winter — Georgia in the Sugar, Alabama in the Liberty, Florida in the Sun and Kentucky in the Peach.

SEC athletic directors, football and basketball coaches held separate meetings Monday—and will meet as a group on Tuesday to make recommendations to the SEC presidents on proposed rules changes.

The football coaches said the present no-scouting rule did not save money last season, and they would like to scout each opponent one time with one man.

Georgia Coach Vince Dooley, chairman of the SEC Football Coaches Committee, said his group agreed to propose the current overall 92-player limit be lifted and they be allowed to restore two part-time coaches to full-time status.

Kentucky Coach Joe Hall said the basketball coaches here had a proposal to televise SEC basketball games other times than just Saturday afternoon as has been the case. A recommendation on that proposal and a proposed postseason SEC basketball tournament will be made at Tuesday morning's joint session.

There's more to hunting than just the kill

STU MURRELL
Regional Conservation Educator

We did not connect on a recent spring bear hunt but considered the expedition a great success. Too often hunters in Idaho feel they must bag game everytime or the trip was a failure. There are many other events that make a trip enjoyable besides the kill. Wildlife activity is at a peak during the spring period and our trip into the Salmon River Country was no exception. It is a wonderful time of year to enjoy observing wildlife. My partner and I took a jet boat up the Main Salmon, camped on the sandbar, and hunted the side drainages. We did a lot of sitting and watching open, grassy hillsides where spring bear like to graze. During these periods we had deer and elk feeding around us constantly and it was great fun to watch their behavior through binoculars. On the hillsides I saw a male deer come at a dead run out of the timber. I immediately thought something was chasing her and got ready to shoot a bear or coyote. Instead, another doe came running playfully after her. The first deer then turned around and chased the second deer back into the timber. They played like this for several minutes. I have seen whitetails commonly indulge in play but never a mule deer. Male spruce grouse and blue grouse were constantly "hooting" around us while strutting in their mating display. They would spread their tails like a fan, raise their necks and come out with a "hoot." This sound has a ventriloquist quality and it was difficult to determine where it was coming from. We were lucky to find a blue grouse, hen on the nest (my first in all the years in the woods) and took pictures of her. She was so determined to remain on the nest and I was pushing the grass back within inches of her body to get a better picture and all she did was blink her eyes. Her nest site was under a clump of bunch grass on a steep, open hillside with mixed ponderosa pine and some of the most beautiful range I've ever seen. The ground was covered with a mixture of grasses, clover, wild pen, and an assortment of wild flowers in full bloom. The Main Salmon River was open to fishing and we spent a considerable amount of time idly lying on a sandbar with a fishing rod in our hands. Fishing was good for large Dolly Varden trout and we had two meals from the smaller ones. My partner prefers to fly fish but the trout would only take "Murrell's combination" and he finally gave in and caught several fish with my technique. "Murrell's combination" is a piece of belly from a sucker topped by a nightcrawler. Select a large, deep hole in the bank and let this bait drift around on the bottom with very little weight. I caught fish to six pounds on my little four pound test ultralight spinning outfit and had a ball. The bears were around and we both missed our chances; I am not normally a magnum advocate but a long range rifle could be used to good advantage in that big country. My partner had a .370 Weatherby but my lightweight mountain rifle in .308 was not quite enough. The shots were long across the canyons and many were difficult to judge since even a small bear shows up like a bullseye on the hill. If I did a considerable amount of this hunting I would practice judging range and shooting at 300-400 yards to determine my gun's capability. Much of the enjoyment in a hunt is camping in a wilderness setting and relating stories of past experiences with a hunting partner. A considerable amount of this activity took place and both of us felt it was one of our more successful hunts though we did not take home the "bacon."

First American wins hockey MVP

NEW YORK (UPI) — Using the top floor of the second biggest office building in the world as his stage, the smallest player in the World Hockey Association completed a series of imponderables Monday by collecting the league's most prestigious award.

"Robbie Florek," a most unlikely of candidates received the WHA's Most Valuable Player award in a presentation atop the World Trade Center in a city where deep holes are played, proving once again that almost anything can happen in sports.

Among the obstacles—the bearded, 25-year-old Florek had to overcome to attain the Gordie Howe Trophy were: his team, the Phoenix Roadrunners, finished last in their division and then folded; at 5-9 and 165 pounds, he is the smallest man in the league; and he was born in the United States.

No other U.S.-born player ever won an MVP in either the WHA or National Hockey League, and only once before did it go to someone on a last place team. Ironically, that player was Florek's coach at Phoenix, Al Rollins, who was named the NHL MVP after his Chicago Black Hawks finished last in 1953-54.

Florek, whose contract was purchased by the Cincinnati Stingers after Phoenix went out of business, downplayed the fact that he is the first American-born player to win an MVP. "It's a great honor," he said, "but I'm just a hockey player. I don't think of myself as an American player, or a Canadian, a Russian, a Swede. If you can do something, do it. Don't think of it in terms of nationality. In 1972 I played on the American team in the Olympics at Sapporo, and that was an honor. Now I'm just a hockey player."

Still, Florek, who grew up and still lives in Needham, Mass., predicted that more and more U.S. players will be finding jobs in the two major leagues. "Florek, who in 1975-76 became the first American-born player to exceed 100 points for a season with 113 points, bettered that mark last season at Phoenix with 46 goals and 71 assists for 117 points. In the MVP voting conducted among WHA media, he edged Winnipeg's Anders Hedberg by a single point, 168-167, with Real Cloutier of Quebec finishing third with 80 points.

"Florek, who played in '72 in the World Bantam of '72 in 1973-74 before jumping to the WHA, said he feels no impulse to improve his image or prove his ability in the older and better recognized National League. "I'm a hockey player. I'm not after a lot of prestige," he said. "I'm after winning a game. Does it matter if I'm written up in New York or Chicago papers? People enter and in our league can read about it. I'm after playing the best hockey of my ability in a league that is recognized. People are going to have to recognize the WHA because it's a good league, always has been and it's getting better all the time."

Atlantic salmon make comeback

BY NELSON BRYANT
© N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — American anglers are rejoicing that the Nation's Province of New Brunswick has announced that it does not contemplate "any major changes or cancellations" in the present system of Crown leases of salmon rivers. In recent years, Canada has cancelled some of the leases held by private groups of individuals, an understandable move generated by the desire of the average Canadian to have more salmon rivers to fish.

Along with this announcement comes the news that the partial ban on commercial fishing for salmon in New Brunswick and the Gaspé Peninsula of Quebec will be extended through 1977. Compensation, which amounts to $1.5 million annually, will be continued to the 700 commercial fishermen affected by the ban. The intent of this is to give salmon stocks a chance to recover from the relentless pressure placed on them prior to 1972 when the ban was instituted.

Meanwhile, efforts are continuing to restore the once-great salmon runs of New England rivers. Construction of the $5.3 million White River National Fish Hatchery in Bethel, Vt., is scheduled for completion in 1979. This hatchery will provide most of the young salmon needed for the Connecticut River restoration program. The Connecticut was the southernmost of the once-highly productive Atlantic salmon rivers of the Northeast, and during the last decade a great deal of effort has gone into stocking that river with young fish. One of the major difficulties encountered by those who had restored Atlantic salmon to a given river is that the fish — which are born in fresh water, then dropped down to the sea to reach maturity before returning to repeat the cycle — zero in on the streams of their birth on the return trip. The trick, then is to get salmon to return to a river so that their eggs and mill may be combined and raised in a hatchery for future release in that stream. (The hatchery procedure, rather than the natural one, greatly increases the chances of survival of the young fish.) The only way to start this is to stock a river with salmon and hope that a few return after getting to sea. There was great rejoicing when a 23-pound female salmon was captured in the Connecticut last year. She was taken to a fish hatchery but died a week later. In the same year, an 8-pound male was caught from the river and his mill was mixed with eggs from six females from Maine's Penobscot River.

BJORN BORG, Swedish tennis star, relaxes with his fiancée, Mariana Simonescu of Romania, during the first World Racquets Championship at Spring Glen, N.Y. Borg finished second in the event, which included play in tennis, squash, table tennis, racquetball and badminton.

Trying a new racquet

Borg second in racquets play

SPRING GLEN, N.Y. (UPI) — Sharif Kahn, a 32-year-old native of Pakistan, who now resides in Toronto, won the first World Racquets Championship Monday night at the Homewick Lodge. The event was taped for play on CBS TV on May 29. Khan, the world 1-squash champion, won three of the five events in the unique racquets tournament that was ineligible to play in his specialty, squash, by the rules of the competition and scored 27 points. He collected prize money of $15,000. Khan, 32, is a teaching pro in Toronto and is a member of "the first family of squash," as his father is the sport's patriarch 61-year-old Hashim Khan. Khan was the winner of the racquet-ball, tennis and badminton competitions. He lost only the table tennis final to Bjorn Borg of Sweden, the tennis representative, 21-18. Borg, 20, tied for second place with Charles Brumfield, 28, of San Diego, with 11 points. However, Brumfield was awarded second place and the purse sum of $6,500, as he beat Borg in two of the three events in which they met—winning the squash division with Borg, 15-4, and badminton in the semifinal, 15-3.

Injured Brett still hopes for 200 hits

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Third baseman George Brett has been out of the Kansas City Royals line-up for 11 games now, but he does not think the absence will prevent him from reaching the 200-hit plateau for the second straight season. Brett suffered a hyperextended right elbow in the brawl with the Texas Rangers May 7, and has not played since then. He hopes to return to the lineup for the Royals' doubleheader Wednesday in Baltimore. "I'm still confident," said Brett. "I'm just going to have to be awfully consistent. The only reason I had 200 last year was because I got 29 three-hit games. I've only had one this year. "For some dumb, dumb reason, I still think I can get it. I know once I get back into the line-up, I'll play 130 straight games." Brett missed only three games last season as he recorded 215 hits to win the American League batting crown with a .333 average. He had 35 hits in the first 27 games this season before his injury. "Batting leadoff, I'll be up a lot more and will make up a lot of the at-bats I've missed during the past 11 games," he said. "It seems every time you turn around, you're on deck. I'll make up about one-third of what I've missed. "If I can hit .330, I'll have a shot at the batting title and I can probably do that this year with 180 hits. If I start bad and go down to the number six or seven spot in the line-up, it won't be in trouble. But I don't forget that." Brett said he plans to take batting practice Tuesday and, if his arm doesn't bother him, he will be ready to play against the Orioles. "They're being very cautious with me," Brett said. "They'd rather see me miss two or three weeks than two or three months. They saw what happened to (Steve) Busby last year. The elbow is a very delicate area." Busby, once the ace of the Kansas City staff, came back prematurely from a shoulder injury last season and now is struggling to regain his form in the Florida Instructional League.

Memorial golf set

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Men's Golf Association Annual Memorial Day Golf Tournament will be held Saturday and Sunday at the Twin Falls municipal course.

Golfers play 36 holes of medal play for low gross and low net awards.

The field is limited to members of the association, who are instructed to make their own foursomes and call the pro shop for a Saturday starting time. Contestants will be paired by score on Sunday.

On Monday, a Scotch Derby will be held for the 10 low gross and 10 low net finishers in the weekend tourney, and additional derbies will be held for the balance of the weekend field.

Thunder Bluff results

TWIN FALLS — Paul Warner, Burlley, Jim Hyde, Mountain Home, and Gene Hamilton, Twin Falls, outran their competition to take the trophy dashes at the Thunder Bluff Raceway Saturday.

Warner won the J-stock dash, Hyde took the superstock event, and Hamilton won the sprints race.

Verlin McArthur, Rupert, Bill Mohr, Rupert, and Webb Pierce, finished 1-2-3 in the J-stock class show heat; and Roger Dinker, Rupert, Dean Jones, Rupert, and Bob Powers, Twin Falls, topped the fast heat of the J-stock class.

In superstock action, Rick Combs, Twin Falls, Robert Reid, Burlley, and Ron Metzger took the top three slots. In the main events, JR Miller, Twin Falls, Rick Coombs and Jim Hyde finished at the head of the pack in the superstock class; and Dean Jones, Dan Warner, Verlin McArthur, Webb Pierce and Chuck Rose ran the fastest in the J-stock division.

On Sunday a benefit race for the Eye Foundation sponsored by the Snake River Lions Club will be held, with regular racing action following on Monday.

Putting record set

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — While most of the attention at the Tournament Players Championship in March was directed toward winner Mark Hayes, Bob Menne was quietly setting an all-time PGA tour record.

Menne, 35, of Lawrence, Mass., needed only 99 putts during the 72-hole tournament at Sawgrass, thus breaking by three the four-round record set by Bert Yancey in the 1956 Portland Open.

Menne's feat came to light weeks after the TPC when he was discussing his score at Sawgrass with some PGA tour officials. Scorecards were reviewed and Menne recalled his rounds (74-78-75-76) on a stroke-by-stroke basis.

Later the number of putts was substantiated by the golfers who played with Menne in the TPC.

Merrill sets records

WATERFORD, Conn. (UPI) — American Olympian Ian Merrill of Waterford has set a pair of world and American track records during an AAU Region I developmental meet.

Merrill, 20, eclipsed the world and American marks in the 5,000 meters and three-mile runs. She was clocked at a stunning time of 15:41.8 for 5,000 meters, smashing by nearly seven seconds the former world best of 15:48.5 set in 1972 by Australian Adrian Beams.

The American record for 5,000 meters by Merrill was 15:52.27, set earlier this spring by Iowa State's Peg Neppel. In setting the 5,000-meter record, Merrill also ran for the fastest woman's three-mile time ever recorded. She covered the first three miles of the course in 15:13.27, nine seconds faster than the former world record.

Merrill's effort Sunday at West Point, N.Y., brought her total for eight days of competition to three American records and two new world marks.

Last week she set an American record for the one-mile run with a time of 4:30.98.

Rookie runs 4.35 forty

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (UPI) — Wide receiver Wesley Walker was the most impressive of the New York Jets' rookies Monday when he firmed in a sizzling 4.35 time for the 40-yard dash at the club's preseason rookie camp.

Walker, a 6-foot-0, 172-pounder from the University of California who was drafted on the second round, needed only one run to turn in this sparkling time.

"When a guy can run under a 4.4," said new coach Walt Michaels, "he doesn't have to show me any more."

Which is it in your family who's mostly likely to be awakened at night by barking dogs, the husband or the wife? Surveys indicate that women tend to get to sleep more easily than men, but are inclined to have a more difficult time staying there. Women, it's said, are three times as sensitive as men to odd noises that rouse them.

NEW NAMES

Those scholars who make a study of given names predict a large number of little girls called Farrah will show up in kindergartens five years from now. And a sizable number of little boys called Jimmy, too. That happens after somebody like Farrah Fawcett-Majors reaches stardom or a Jimmy Carter becomes president.

CHILDREN AT PARTIES

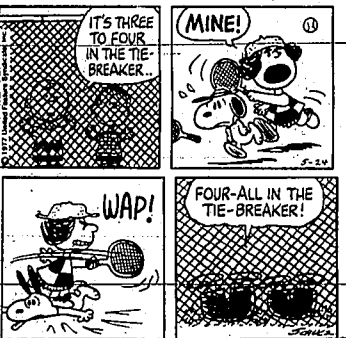

What's your stand on those couples who insist on bringing their youngsters to grown-up parties? The credo of many is: "If we're good enough to be invited, so are our children." Can't argue with that outlook, personally. For some reason, though, we've lost touch with any such pairs. Just don't see them anymore. Odd, don't you?

The old high German word "hari" meant war. The old English word "loddere" meant beggar. Our Language man says that's where we got our word "harlot," a trimmed-down combination of hari and loddere. The first harlots were "war beggars" more recently known as camp followers.

Item No. 683-B in our Love and War man's file labeled "Blondes" reads: "It's not enough to understand that gentlemen prefer blondes. You have to realize, too, that blondes prefer gentlemen."

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 24, 1977

GENERAL TENDENCIES

A day for thinking and adopting new policies and principles under which you like to operate in the days ahead. Also, fine for arranging a specific plan of action that could result in success.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Plan how to put your finest talents to work and then go ahead in a most positive fashion. Make sure you spend money wisely.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) First make your home. Life more harmonious and then study new projects that could be profitable. Obtain the data you need.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Explain your ideas to associates before going ahead with a plan you have in mind. Make the evening relaxing one.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Engage in business activities that will bring in more revenue in the future. A financial expert can give fine ideas.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Handle important business matters, then talk to a money expert who can be helpful to you. Don't neglect personal affairs.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Listening to what an adviser has to say now can help gain a desirable goal. Use common sense when dealing with your mate.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Study your personal affairs and make plans for improvements. Make long-range plans that will provide more abundance in the future.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Know what it is that higher-ups expect of you, and then do your best to please them. Strive to be a happier person.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You can easily advance in your line of endeavor now if you apply yourself to the difficult tasks at hand. Be wise.

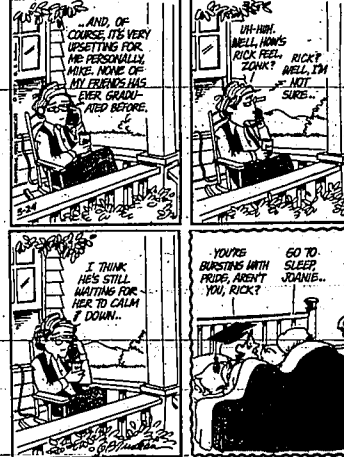

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Use modern methods in handling regular routines—low best results. Any argument with mate should settled as soon as possible.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) A new situation of a pleasant nature crops up but you have to be quick on the uptake to benefit. Show others you have poise.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You are enthused about the work you have to do, but first confer with associates before making any definite plan.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be delightful to others, but you should guard against spoiling your progeny. A good college education is required in this chart to bring out the many fine talents. Don't neglect good ethical training early in life.

Sears highway passenger tire warranty

Full warranty during first 25% of usable treadlife

If the tire falls apparently due to a defect in material or workmanship during the first 25% of the original usable tread (original tread less 2/32"), Sears will replace the tire, free of charge, or refund the purchase price.

Limited warranty

Tire failure. If the tire falls apparently due to a defect in material or workmanship after 25% of the tread is worn, and for the remaining 75% of the original usable tread, Sears will replace the tire or give you a refund, charging you only the proportion of the current price plus Federal Excise Tax that represents the portion of the usable tread used.

Tread wearout. If the tread wears out (2/32" or less remaining) before you receive the miles specified, Sears will, at its option, either replace the tire or give a refund, charging in either case the proportion of the current price plus Federal Excise Tax that represents the ratio of miles of usage actually received to the miles specified. This does not apply to wearout caused by improper inflation, misalignment, or failure to use and maintain the tire as recommended.

To obtain warranty service, simply return the tire to the nearest Sears store throughout the United States.
