

River float trips cut by drought

By JEFF SHER
Times-News Writer
KETCHUM — River guide Bob Sevy recently got a panicked phone call from one of his whitewater float trip customers.
A New York woman had read the Big Wood River had gone dry and was calling to find out if the Snake River was too low to float.
Sevy assured the woman she could still plan her vacation to Idaho and float through Hells Canyon later this year.
But this is one of the happier stories Idaho's whitewater guides have to tell this spring.
Outfitters of river trips throughout Idaho are losing thousands of dollars because nationwide publicity about the drought in Western states has resulted in dozens of cancelled bookings.
Last week alone, 13 river customers cancelled trips with Norris Guth, Salmon outfitter Bob Guth, $5,000. "My business looks like it's gonna be off 30 per cent from what it was last year, probably about $15-20,000," Guth, President of the Idaho Outfitters and Guides Association said in a Times-News interview.

Elwood Masoner, Twin Falls outfitter, said his business is off over $20,000. Another Twin Falls outfitter, Roy Nicholson, said his bookings are only 30 per cent of normal.
"It's our lowest booking season ever," Ketchum's Jan Sevy, wife of outfitter Bob Sevy, explained.
The Sevys have received panicked calls from both Idahoans and out-of-staters who are worried about the low water.
None of the outfitters contacted singled out any particular information source to blame for misconceptions about the conditions because of the general impact of all the drought-related news.

But outfitters do resent people with no river-running experience making predictions about the floatability of Idaho's rivers, Masoner said.
He said only outfitters who are familiar with a river at all its stages are competent to make pronouncements about whether floating is possible.
The outfitters may be qualified to predict floating conditions, but they don't all agree about what will happen later this summer.
Guth and Masoner think the Middle Fork will be floatable all summer, but Nicholson says he hasn't even accepted any reservations for August because he doesn't think the river will be floatable in its upper reaches after the first week in August.

Challis National Forest District Ranger Sam Warren would not make a prediction on late summer flows. "In the past it (the Middle Fork of the Salmon River) always has been floatable (all summer long), but the snowpack was less this year than ever before," Warren admitted.
Everyone agrees the main Salmon will be floatable all summer.
Private rafting parties are also abandoning their river-tripping plans this summer, Warren said.
Only about half the private parties that had reservations to float the Middle Fork have showed up and taken their trip so far this year.
The rash of cancellations is creating openings for people who want to float the river

Dutch siege stalemated

ASSEN, The Netherlands (UPI) — The 56 persons captive in a train and school seized by South Moluccan guerrillas in a bloody battle held hostages in Dutch siege history today.

By late morning they surpassed the 30-hour mark set by hostages in the December, 1975, siege of the Dutch consulate in Amsterdam by now-jailed South Moluccan extremists.

The gunmen held 16 women and 36 men hostage aboard the hijacked train for the 10th day and a second band of South

Moluccan terrorists held four teachers at gunpoint in nearby Bovensmilde elementary school.

Negotiations for a peaceful end to the ordeal remained frozen.

The government was still trying to decide whether to seek a second round of talks between the gunmen and South Moluccan intermediaries.

"The situation is only getting more serious as it continues without any noticeable positive development," a spokesman at the government crisis center in the Hague said Monday night.

In the Hague, meanwhile, the newspaper De Telegraaf said today a South Moluccan woman sharpshooter police call the "Dutch Patty Hearst" is one of the terrorists holding the hostage on the hijacked train.

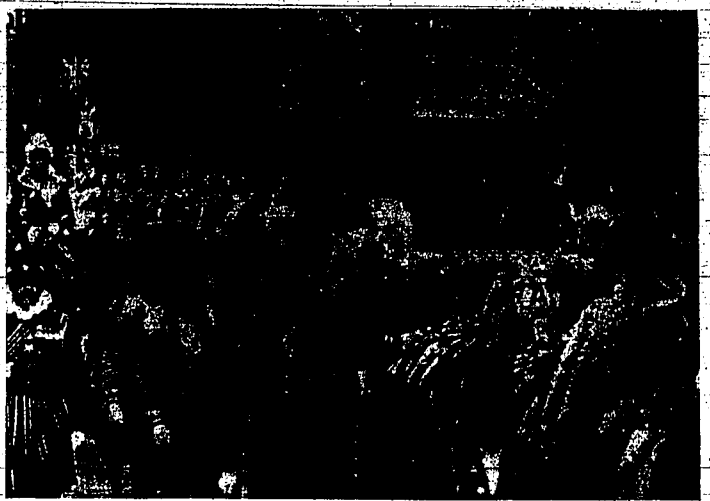

The newspaper said love apparently motivated Hansfa Oktoseja, a 22-year-old Bovensmilde dental assistant, to play a key role in the siege.

Hansfa, known as "Hansje" to her colleagues, is the fiancée of Jozef Hudy, 25, a South Moluccan serving a six-year jail term for his part in the 1975 attack on the Indonesian consulate in Amsterdam.

The terrorists are demanding the release of Hudy and 20 other jailed South Moluccans.

For the 10th day the hostages waited and sweated in the sun-baked train, working puzzles, reading and knitting under the guns of South Moluccan terrorists. Knitting has become so popular among both men and women the government has sent in extra wool.

Regal procession

Queen marks 25th year

LONDON (UPI) — Queen Elizabeth rode in a golden coach to St. Paul's Cathedral today to give thanks for her Silver Jubilee on the throne and then walked among her people — deliberately prolonging her stroll apparently because security officials refused to permit closer contact with the crowds.

Tens of thousands of persons, many of whom spent the night out in cold and rain, lined the two-mile route from Buckingham Palace along which the Queen and her husband, Prince Philip, were drawn in the state coach after white horses to join a service of national thanksgiving for her 25 years on the throne.

The religious and secular celebrations climaxing Silver Jubilee year filled the streets of the capital with colorful processions and immense crowds, especially around the great cathedral from which the Queen walked.

The Queen signed the visitors book at the statue of Capt. John Smith of Pocomantas fame who is buried nearby.

After lunch the Queen made a brief broadcast to the Commonwealth recollecting: "My Lord Mayor, when I was 21, I pledged my life to the service of our people and I asked for God's help to make good that vow. Although that vow was made in my salad days when I was green in judgment, I do not regret nor retract a word of it."

She said: "During these 25 years I have traveled widely throughout the Commonwealth as its head. And during those years, I have seen from a unique position of advantage, the last great phase of the transformation of the Empire into Commonwealth and the transformation of the Crown into a symbol of free and voluntary association.

"In all history this has no precedent."

In addition to the vast crowds in the streets the British Broadcasting Corporation said it had mounted the greatest outside broadcast in history and that more than 300 million people in Europe, North America and the Commonwealth probably watched the first Silver Jubilee of the TV age on their screens. The last ruler to celebrate 25 years on the throne was King George V — Elizabeth's grandfather — in 1935.

Big vote turns out in Miami

MIAMI (UPI) — Anita Bryant, who led the fight against "Dade County's" gay rights ordinance, cast her vote today in the referendum which she helped bring about. She predicted an overwhelming victory for repeal forces.

Dressed in light blue overalls with a flower kerchief pinned around her neck by a five-point star, Miss Bryant told spectators "people are going to be surprised at the election's outcome."

"I am confident of an overwhelming victory," Miss Bryant said. "We've done everything we can to educate the people. There are a lot of hard-working people out there who are tired of the noise."

A 50 per cent chance of rain and thunderstorms had been forecast for most of the day, but sunny skies and temperatures in the high 70s greeted voters.

Coast squalls claim 5

By United Press International

Deadly thunderstorms roamed the Atlantic coast Monday, producing tornadoes, hail and gale-force winds that flipped over a 42-foot fishing boat.

At least five persons were killed and nine others were missing in storm-related accidents. Numerous injuries also were reported.

The National Weather Service said today 30 severe thunderstorms and 17 tornadoes swept the Atlantic coast area Monday.

At least four persons drowned when the fishing boat Dixie Lee II, buffeted by high seas and gale-force winds, overturned in Chesapeake Bay. Fourteen passengers were pulled to safety but rescue workers searched through the night with helicopters and ships for nine persons still missing.

One of the survivors, Jay Gallagher, 21, said "It was one big wave, maybe 15 feet" which flipped the craft.

The thundersquall, accompanied by golfball-sized hail and gusts of up to 58 miles per hour, also caused extensive damage throughout Tidewater Virginia. The storm downed power lines, collapsed a 600-foot section of a fishing pier, uprooted trees and sent scaffolding crashing down at a shipbuilding dock.

One man who watched the storm from the 11th floor of the Norfolk City Hall said, "The wind was blowing the trees almost to the ground and elderly people were holding onto things to keep from falling down. Then it started to rain and it got very, very dark."

A Georgia man, heading for a lakeside honeymoon cabin with his bride of two days, was killed Monday night when high winds toppled a huge tree on top of the couple's car.

Gas firm's fund flow under fire

BOISE (UPI) — A Public Utilities Commission staff accountant testified Monday that Intermountain Gas Co. has misallocated funds between its utility and non-utility activities.

Key Faussey testified at a hearing before the commission that she found non-utility expenses from the company's HomeGuard Systems, a former company division, recorded in utility accounts.

Mrs. Faussey's audit report recommended that the way the expenses are allocated between the two accounts be corrected.

She said the company had misallocated funds in HomeGuard personnel practices, salaries and expense accounts, office supplies, rent, depreciation of office space, data processing, depreciation or rental on fixed assets and advertising expenses.

The complaint was filed by the commission staff on the basis of a month and one-half audit of the HomeGuard's November, 1976, transactions. HomeGuard Systems handles insulation, space heating products and appliances.

Mrs. Faussey cited a number of instances she called an "understatement of expenses for HomeGuard and the overstatement of income for HomeGuard."

"Also these misplaced expenses result in overstatement of expenses for the utility and understatement of income," she said.

"Corrections in the areas of supplies expenses, data processing allocations, accurate time allocation of utility personnel functioning in non-utility capacities and depreciation or rent expenses for fixed assets are still necessary, to the best of my knowledge," Mrs. Faussey said.

Gem court favors broader payments

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Supreme Court said Monday an insurer having multiple insurance policies should be allowed to collect from more than one policy.

In a 4-1 ruling, the Supreme Court ruled conflicting "other insurance" clauses, which the majority opinion said are devices used by insurance companies to avoid coverage on a claim when coverage is provided by another insurance policy, are mutually repugnant and should be disallowed.

Justice Alan Shepard, Robert Bakes and Stephen Blittine agreed with the majority opinion by Justice Charles Donaldson, Chief Justice Joseph McFadden was the lone dissenter.

McFadden said the result of the opinion would be increased premiums.

The Supreme Court reversed a judgement by Fourth District Judge J. Ray Dursch denying insurers' liability under uninsured motorist provisions in a case by W.G. and Sandra Slovacek for the traffic deaths of two of their children.

The Slovaceks were compensated by one insurance policy. They contended their actual damages exceeded the policy limits of four policies they had in force and that they, therefore, should be able to stack all the policies to satisfy their losses.

In the majority ruling, the high court agreed, saying that once the "other insurance" clauses were disallowed it followed that the Slovaceks were entitled to stack the four policies.

The majority opinion said in the case all of the companies have collected premiums for their coverage and should bear responsibility.

"We are aware that insurance rates are adjusted according to the amount of coverage requested and the anticipated liability,"

Judge appointed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court Monday appointed Jean Breitenstein, senior judge for the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals, as a special master to take testimony in Idaho's suit against Washington and Oregon over the sharing of salmon and steelhead trout in the Columbia River.

The states had asked that the case be dismissed and Oregon suggested a three-year delay as an alternative.

Breitenstein will have authority to fix the time and conditions for proceedings on the matter and authority to summon witnesses, issue subpoenas and take evidence.

the justices said.

After hearing arguments, the court on Dec. 7, 1976, allowed Idaho to sue the other states in order to obtain apportionment of the fish among the three. Suits among states are filed directly in the high court.

The complaint said because of the several dams, plus overzealous commercial fishing, the fish resources of Idaho are being reduced drastically while huge sums of money continue to be invested in fisheries. Idaho Atty. Gen. Wayne Kidwell said Idaho has been forced to curtail sport fishing and close the season earlier than it wishes.

Reversal foreseen

IDAHO FALLS (UPI) — Idaho Sen. James McClure says Congress may be able to stop President Carter's scuttling of the fast breeder reactor program.

McClure made the prediction before leaving Idaho Sunday for Washington, D.C. He also forecast at a National Contract Management Association meeting a bright future for the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

The senator said employment at the facility and funding for it were at an all-time high and predicted Congress probably could halt plans to do away with the fast breeder reactor program.

Evans plans address

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. John V. Evans will outline the goals of his administration for the Association of Idaho Cities at the group's 20th annual convention June 14-17 in Boise.

Evans will address the second day of the convention, which is expected to be attended by 600-700 elected and appointed city officials.

The three-day convention also will include a dozen workshops on subjects ranging from land use planning to property appraisal to city hall and the news media to energy for Idaho's future and double taxation of city residents.

Barnes Arizona bound

BOISE (UPI) — Outgoing President John B. Barnes of Boise State University will join the faculty of Northern Arizona University at Flagstaff as professor of higher education this September, BSU announced Monday.

Barnes, president of Boise State for the past 10 years, announced his resignation last month. It is effective Sept. 1, but he will leave the school July 15 and will draw a salary until Dec. 1.

Emphasis on style not a bad idea

President Carter responded with refreshing candor when asked at his news conference the other day whether we agreed with his adviser who warned him against the perils of "substituting substance for style" in his conduct of the presidency.

The instinctive reaction of most politicians would have been to insist—in the face of overwhelming evidence to the contrary, that they were so busy grappling with grave public problems that they gave little thought to style.

Carter, however, admitted cheerfully that he paid quite a lot of attention to style. He observed that in recent years there had been a loss of public confidence in the competence and integrity of government; he said he regarded the restoration of this lost confidence as a prerequisite for effective national leadership.

Carter described his concern with style—his calculated efforts to project an image of an open and down-to-earth Presidency—as a key element in the confidence-building process.

There is always danger that style will come to be used as a self-serving substitute for substance, that a President will worry too much about what is good for his image and not enough about what is good for the country. The Carter White House, like any other, will bear watching.

So far, though, such an accusation cannot fairly be made against Carter.

Nixon got TV contract, his pals got jail

John Mitchell and H.R. Haldeman wielded considerable power in the Nixon White House. But they clearly didn't possess the power of Nixon himself.

On June 22, Haldeman, former chief of staff in the Nixon administration, and Mitchell, former Attorney General and head of the Nixon re-election committee, begin serving jail sentences for their roles in Watergate.

But former President Nixon, the man who employed Haldeman and Mitchell, hasn't spent a day in jail and recently has cashed in on an estimated $500,000 television contract for his interviews with David Frost.

After Nixon's interviews with Frost, Haldeman angrily challenged some of the former President's recollections about the events surrounding the worst American political scandal.

Not many people heard him.

Haldeman, for all his power, finally will be remembered more as the fall guy in Watergate. He, John Ehrlichman and John Mitchell will symbolize what happens when loyal lieutenants are cut loose by their general and left to fend for themselves.

Haldeman, Ehrlichman and Mitchell should go to jail. Their conspiracies to hide the President's dirty laundry from Congress and the public are punishable offenses.

Their sentencing shows the American judicial system can almost work.

But Richard Nixon's continued sovereignty suggests American justice isn't without some flaws.

The boss got off the hook, and signed on as a TV personality.

His subordinates got nailed with prison terms.

Hottest meeting yet in Plains

By PAT LEWIS
Washington Star

PLAINS, Ga. — It was the hottest City Council meeting ever. Before it ended Billy Carter threatened to sue the council, then took aim at the city clerk and finally failed to hit him when the strong arms of a friend held Carter back.

The next morning a council member resigned "in utter disgust at the three-ring circus," he said. "Everybody's got dollar signs in their eyes."

On the heels of an accusation that he was accepting money under the table for favors from Town Hall, the city clerk resigned a week later.

A block from Town Hall at Plains Baptist Church, attendance sank lower than ever. Between 40 and 50 members picked up their Bibles and held services at an abandoned country church nearby.

In one sense, though in outward appearances it may not look like it, Plains is getting back to normal. Back to the life of a small town where everybody knows each other and each other's business and has for years. And back to the old jealousies.

Now that the Jimmy Carter spotlight is beaming from Washington, some of the truths reporters hungered for during the campaign, the ones Sumter County residents were masters at concealing, are emerging. The truth is that the recurring conflict in Plains—between two families called the Carters and the Williams—is taking its toll now more than ever.

Rivals in business, they have vied for the dollars in Plains' biggest commercial enterprise: peanuts. They buy peanuts from the same farmers. They compete in both instances, in pricing. And in a town of only 603 people, everyone knows they're fierce competitors.

"The two big factions in town have always been the Carters and Williams," says Ralph Wiggins. "They've always been competitive and antagonistic."

Now, again, the Carters and the Williams forces are at odds.

Some say the current struggles have been brought on by Jimmy Carter, who profited from Plains by making his hometown and church an essential part of his image.

Some say Albert Williams, who quietly opposed Carter's election, has taken advantage of that election, and Carter's absence from town. They point out he has charged into the souvenir business. They say he was wielding his power within the Plains Baptist Church.

How has the latest installment in the continuing saga of Carter vs Williams affected this place?

Badly. The proceedings at May's town council meeting are a testimony to that.

Albert Williams' nephew, John Williams, who is entrusted with Albert's souvenir interests, sat high atop a table at one end of the room. Sybil Carter sat in a folding chair. Billy paced.

There were four City Council members, plus the mayor, the city clerk and a lawyer, Bill Murray from Americus, the only one in suit and tie. Everyone swatted gnats and mosquitoes.

Also present was Sybil's nephew, Rick Harrison, Harrison, who worked for the Red Cross in Huntington, W. V., came back to his native Plains two months ago to publish Plains' third newspaper—they have all been established by out-of-towners since the election. Harrison's plan for a 12-foot-by-12-foot building to be built on Billy Carter's property had not been approved by the council in three weeks.

The Carters and Harrison were there to see what they could do.

Harrison told the council he would make any alteration they wanted to make it comply. There was silence. Harrison asked them what they wanted. There was silence.

Then there was a break in the meeting while the volunteer fire truck rushed off to fight a minor fire.

Then there was more silence. Suddenly Billy Carter announced he was withdrawing the application. Harrison got up. Sybil got up. The three stamped to the back of the hall together.

From there, Sybil Carter charged the council with inefficiency and told them they'd better get someone to "know what they're doing. People applauded and cheered. Billy Carter chain-smoked. He paced.

Before the three-hour session was over, Billy Carter was in a rage. He tried to hit W.C. Lamb, charged him with accepting a percentage of the tour business (which operates off Albert Williams' land), and charged the whole council with keeping Harrison from building his newspaper office because he is Billy's relative. They were promised to file suit.

The next morning, everyone was talking about it. Council members were in and out of Lamb's office. Council member Wiggins resigned. There were whispered conversations on street corners.

Over at the Williams warehouse, the Williams clan played cool. And Albert Williams tried to joke his way around the subject of a feud.

Though many people in Plains say they have heard Albert Williams say he hates Jimmy Carter, Williams says he doesn't.

"We were raised together. Our fathers were competitors. Does that make anybody hate anybody? I don't think so. No ma'am. I don't hate the Carters. I'd be stupid to say I hated the President. I don't want the Secret Service down here poking its nose."

Williams knows about the Secret Service.

On Nov. 8, 1975, Jimmy Carter publicly announced his candidacy in Plains, and as Carter was making a speech, Albert's son Larry was seized by Secret Service men and handcuffed to a light pole. He was peering through the scope of a rifle—the better, he said, to get a look at Carter. It is reported there was a bullet in the chamber, but the Secret Service won't say for sure. What is sure is that the Secret Service retained Williams at the Plains jail for several hours. Plains residents say Jimmy Carter pleaded that young Williams be released without arrest. He was.

Albert Williams won't talk about his opposition to the Carter candidacy. "That comes in the category of none of your business," he says.

The souvenir battelions look like this:

The Williams family now operates the Peanut Patch and the Peanut Museum, two souvenir shops on Main Street.

They also rent some tourist properties in town, and are tied to Sid Corrie, who operates the Plains Tour Service.

John Williams is busy getting a new facility built that will sell more souvenirs—or "junk," as he calls it—and will provide parking and bicycle rental.

On the other side, there is Hugh Carter's antique store—"World's Best Known Antique Shop. Owned and operated by State Senator Hugh Carter, first cousin of President Jimmy Carter."

And Billy Carter has a percentage of a tour company that parks its buses right next to the famed Pine Depot.

The church battle looks like this:

Forty or so members of the Plains Baptist Church, who are now holding separate services say they have gone away to have a "peaceful service and to avoid the hateful stares." They plan to continue attending separate services until troubles at the Plains church are ironed out. It will be a long time, they say.

For years the Williamses and Carters have taken opposite stands in the church. The loud tests come over racial issues.

The last time that came up—last winter—was when they got the national publicity on the subject of admitting blacks to the congregation. Carter, then the president-elect, favored letting blacks in. So did the pastor, the Rev. Bruce Edwards. Albert Williams was against it. The church voted—120 to 66—to open its doors to blacks.

But by February Edwards was forced to resign.

Says Sandra Edwards: "Albert Williams has attacked the last three preachers at the church."

He makes it so hard to live here you can't stay.

The gossip. He puts pressure on people in an indirect way because he rents out a lot of land, and people depend on that land. He's very powerful in this town."

Here is how one recent development in the feud broke.

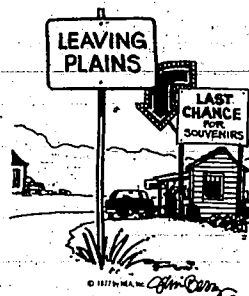

Sid Corrie, formerly of Savannah, Ga., now operates the Plains Tour Service on some of Albert Williams' property.

Kevin Bell came with Corrie from Savannah when Corrie offered him a job running one of the tour buses in Plains. At the rate of 50 percent of his bus's profits. "When there are lots of tourists in Plains, the three buses gross about $1,500 a day," says Bell.

While working for Corrie, Bell was asked to pay the drivers of large bus lines $5 to have them park at the Country Store lot, where Corrie's Plains Tours operate. In an effort to get the tourists on those buses to take Corrie's tour of Plains, Bell was told to pay each driver $5 as an incentive to come back, and to spread the word to other bus drivers.

Bell says that Corrie decided early to monopolize the tour services in Plains. So, says Bell, he made a deal with Lamb, the city clerk. Lamb would keep Corrie informed of any complaints or violations against his tour service.

Every evening, Bell said, he would give Lamb the day's receipts from one of the tour buses, and Lamb would get a percentage. When it was noticed that Bell and Lamb were meeting every night, they changed the procedure. Bell giving the receipts instead to Mrs. Lamb, who works as a clerk in the Country Store.

'Sensible' welfare solution offered

By RUSSELL BAKER
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — The idea that welfare people ought to have to work for their checks is sound so far as it goes, but it does not go far enough. It has two great weaknesses. One, most of the welfare population is almost worthless in today's labor market and would, therefore, not be worth the welfare benefits that accompany its toll. Two, the present outrageous cost of the welfare program would remain as outrageous as ever.

The solution here, as always, lies in a return to the American free-market tradition. If we look upon the welfare population as a commodity (for which there is bound to be a market, the problem ceases to be a problem and becomes an opportunity).

The first step is to abolish the welfare office and replace it with a welfare auction market. This market would differ from conventional markets, since its operator—the government—would not be trying to make a profit, but to cut costs.

Let us say that the government has on its welfare rolls, Client X, who is, hardly an irresistible bargain in the labor market, being a half-blind arthritic grandmother with no computer skills. The most benign employer would hardly be justified in paying her more than 50 cents a week, whereas the government is paying her, say, $100 a month in welfare.

Obviously, the government is losing $150 per month by keeping her on welfare instead of putting her into the labor market. This loss could be cut dramatically by putting her up for auction.

The trick is to auction her to the lowest bidder. You might, for example, reason that you could keep her shined in the attic and get some decent floor scrubbing out of her. If the government would pay you $10 a month—A competitive bidder might come back with an offer of $7.50.

Do you dare go to $6? You might lose money on the food bill, but if you could get some dishwashing out of her in addition to the scrubbing she might still be a bargain, considering the present cost of household help. If she is knocked down at $6, the government has cut its losses on her by $154 per month. A substantial government saving. If comparable per capita savings could be made on the entire welfare population, welfare would cease to be a significant government cost.

Aside from cost reduction, other benefits are obvious. The money paid out by government no longer goes into the hands of the irresponsible to be wasted on television sets, muscled and potato chips. It goes, instead, to that substantial element of the population which knows the value of money and how to handle it with respect.

Best of all, the present welfare population receives the benefit of the physical and spiritual improvement which results from work. The present faint-hearted proposals for putting to work those who are employable in the present labor market would limit the physical and spiritual benefits of labor market to the few who are robust enough to pass inspection by employment-service bureaucrats.

Thus, it is discriminatory in denying these benefits to the infirm. Moreover, the spiritual improvement which comes from honest labor may be diminished by the suspicion that one's labor is not altogether honest.

It is a dreadful thing for a man's spiritual state to have to live with the suspicion that the government is paying him $150 for work that would earn him only $35 on the free labor market. Far better for his spiritual health to be auctioned off to a private sponsor at $5.50 and know his true worth than to live, month in and month out, with the suspicion of being government-subsidized labor.

We can anticipate objections from the gentle-hearted to the idea of putting people on the auction block, but any attempt to draw analogies to the distasteful slavery system is easily dismissed as fatuous and illogical. The slave auction existed to make profits from human beings. The welfare auction would exist not only to reduce government spending, but also to give every human being, no matter how unfortunate, a chance to enjoy the dignity of honest labor.

The government would certainly not want to allow people to whip or otherwise brutalize runaway welfare auctionees if recaptured. In any case, this would surely be a negligible problem, in view of the fact that the great majority of them are in no shape to do much effective running.

Egypt, Russia take sides on Somalia

By JOHN BULLOCH
London Express

CAIRO — New efforts are being made by Egypt, Saudi Arabia and their allies to woo Somalia away from the Russian orbit.

The latest move, announced "in Cairo yesterday, will be another conference to discuss Red Sea security. But on this occasion, Ethiopia will be barred, and it is possible that representatives of the Eritrean Liberation Front will be invited instead.

With a state of near-war existing between Ethiopia and Somalia, this is a demonstration of public Arab support for Somalia. It is also an effort to stiffen Somalia's will to break with Russia, which supplies all its arms and has 6,000 "advisors" with the Somali army.

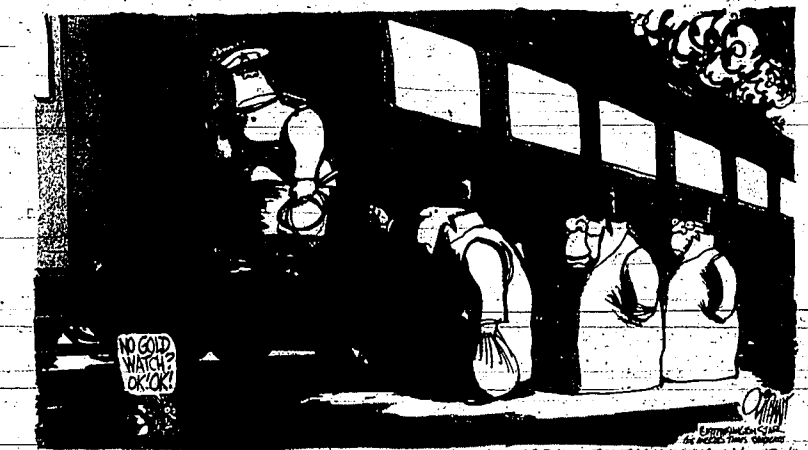

This new snub to the Soviet Union comes at a time when the more radical Arab countries had been expecting Egypt to try to mend its relations with Russia so as to begin the process of rearming.

Arab extremists believe the election of Menachem Begin to be prime minister of Israel makes any negotiations impossible, and had expected Egypt to take the same view. But President Anwar Sadat has made it clear he still believes a peaceful settlement is possible, and is pinning all his hopes on Washington.

President Carter has told Sadat this is to be a crucial year for achieving peace in the Middle East, and that the United States will play its part.

"That is enough for me," Sadat said. More practically, Sadat also noted that it was unlikely the Russians would "just turn on the arms tap" after a pause of 3½ years. Any talk of resumed Soviet arms shipments is going too far, he said.

Egyptians have been impressed by President Carter's statements on the Middle East and believe they have already caused Begin to retreat from some of his more extreme positions, particularly over the West Bank. Because of this Sadat and Prince Fahd of Saudi Arabia are quite prepared to do nothing—at least until the end of this year.

"HAVE A NICE RETIREMENT, PRESIDENT PODGORNÝ... WE'LL LET DAVID FROST KNOW WHERE YOU ARE!"

Some precautions are being taken, however. After weeks of haggling, Egypt and Russia now have agreed to a "reconciliation meeting" between their foreign ministers to be held in Europe in two weeks time.

As long as the United States continues its pressure on Israel for a settlement roughly in line with United Nations resolution, little will come of the Egyptian-Russian rapprochement. But the Egyptian calculation is that an alternative will be ready if President Carter's policies do not succeed. Only at the beginning of next year will there be any real thought of rearming and preparing for a new war.

Keep Utah air clean, Andrus asks

Tuesday, June 7, 1977 - Times News-Tribune, Salt Lake City, Utah

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus asked the Senate Monday to drop a clean air provision passed by the House that would allow a proposed southern Utah power plant to exceed air pollution standards for up to 18 days a year.

The exemption was placed in a clean air bill at the urging of the developers of the Intermountain Power Project — a 3,000 megawatt coal-fired generating plant that would supply electricity to six Los Angeles suburbs and several Utah communities.

In a letter to Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, Andrus said the change "in effect would result in higher levels of pollution around parks all the time."

"The unique scenic and natural values... would be put in unacceptable jeopardy," he told Muskie.

The Senate is scheduled to begin floor consideration of the bill later this week.

Andrus specifically cited a danger to the Capitol Reef National Park and said he would take "appropriate steps" to ensure that values of natural parks, wilderness areas and the like were properly protected.

The IPP plant would be located near Capitol Reef in the Wayne County. The prevailing winds would blow pollution from the plant away from the park most of the year.

But the developers estimate it would send pollution into the park from 10-13 days annually. The exemption would also benefit other power companies contemplating plants in Utah and Nevada — where the close proximity of several national parks has proved a stumbling block to construction.

National Concorde trial asked

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Carter administration, sharply critical of local policy, has asked federal appeals court to order the states of New York and New Jersey to permit trial landings of the supersonic Anglo-French Concorde airplane at Kennedy Airport.

In a 27-page brief submitted Monday to the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, the government scored the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey for being "unfair, dilatory, arbitrary and unreasonable."

The authority, a bi-state agency which operates the airport, never formally banned the Concorde from its facilities, but has insisted the plane be tested elsewhere to determine if it could meet local noise standards.

The government brief, prepared at the court's request by the State Department and the Transportation Administration, said it recognized the Port Authority's right to regulate noise levels at Kennedy.

But, it said, "it is unreasonable for that authority to deny airlines an opportunity to prove that their aircraft can meet these noise levels."

The British and French have spent a reported $1 million in a lobbying effort to win landing rights at Kennedy for the luxury plane that can accommodate only 100 passengers and which costs $27 for a one-way trip from Washington to Paris — 20 per cent above first-class fares on subsonic flights.

Haig silent on Nixon

TRENTON, N.J. (UPI) — Former President Nixon's White House chief of staff, Gen. Alexander M. Haig Jr., refused Monday night to give his reaction to Nixon's account of the events that brought about his downfall.

Asked at a news conference about the Nixon-David Frost interview, in which the deposed President said his rights as chief executive allowed him to "break laws," Haig replied: "I have had a long-standing policy of not talking about my years in the White House."

He refused to field any other questions on the subject.

An aide said it was the first time in the United States that Haig had been asked about the Nixon-David Frost interviews.

Still dirty

CHICAGO Daily News — The Great Lakes "are still dirty" and chemically polluted five years after the U.S. and Canadian governments launched clean-up programs, according to a citizens group.

Richard L. Robbins, executive director of Great Lakes Tomorrow, said the "Water Quality Agreement" of 1972 "is the strongest of any authoritative decision-making apparatus now in place in the Great Lakes area," but that "much remains to be done."

He was one of only two speakers at a public hearing here on the progress of clearing pollution from the Great Lakes.

Home energy rules sought

WASHINGTON (UPI) — You won't be able to sell your house after 1982 without making sure it's energy-efficient, if a House Commerce subcommittee has its way.

Convinced that President Carter approves, the subcommittee adopted the tough mandatory provision Monday by a 12-8 vote.

If the provision survives the full committee and both houses of Congress, it would mean that before a buyer can get a home loan in 1982 or later, from virtually any lending institution, the home would have to be certified as energy-efficient.

The restriction covers all federal home loans or even home loans made by banks and other lending institutions that are under federal regulation or insurance.

It would cover single-family or condominium dwellings. But the provision has some exemptions added by the subcommittee for such things as extremely old homes for which energy improvements would cost more than they saved in energy bills.

Tighter deduction rule?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Jerome Kurtz, new head of the Internal Revenue Service, says taxpayers may be asked to identify questionable items when they file their income tax returns, with stiff money fines for taxpayers who fail to comply.

A taxpayer with a questionable deduction now has a nine-to-one chance of escaping an audit, Kurtz said. Even if the taxpayer is only "a per cent sure" of the deduction, the slight chance of discovery encourages the taxpayer to take the write-off.

Kurtz said a questionable item is any that has not been proven by courts or an IRS ruling to be a legal deduction. Identifying questionable items would strengthen the ruling procedure and IRS audits, he said.

Kurtz said many questionable items now deducted for income tax purposes, "many are being disclosed to the Securities and Exchange Commission, particularly in regard to large tax shelters."

Kurtz said operators of the tax shelters tell the investor the SEC and the accountants that the deduction might be questionable, but never the IRS.

Abby

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1977 by The Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: After 16 years of marriage, I discovered that my husband was having an affair with a young woman he works with. I carried on like a mad woman, told him I wouldn't put up with it and gave him a choice—her or me! He chose me, but our relationship has been miserable ever since.

He spends all his evenings and spare time with me, but there is no physical contact between us. His conversation is all about superficial things, and he refuses to talk about anything really bothering him. I want to know what's going on while the tension within me is building. Should I let him go ahead and continue the affair in order to improve the atmosphere at home? (I'm sure that's what he's trying to accomplish.) We have three children to raise. Perhaps if you print this it will initiate some dialogue between us. I feel as though I'm...

LIVING WITH A ROBOT

Miserable relationship

DEAR LIVING: Don't let your husband blackmail you. He's saying, "Either you let me come and go as I please with no questions asked, or I'll sit around like a zombie and be in my mother's den."

There is a third choice. Get some counseling—both of you and try to put your marriage back on the track. If he refuses, you'd be ahead to sweep up the debris while he's still young enough and make a life without him.

DEAR ABBY: I see so many letters in your column from people complaining because some of their friends or relatives don't have good table manners. I once read that Albert Einstein wanted a good laugh, he'd curl up with an etiquette book and go into hysterics. He thought the "rules of etiquette" were the funniest things ever written. So do I.

Why should there be only one "proper" way to eat a meal of asparagus? How ridiculous to judge a person by his table manners. My husband is the kindest, most gentleman to all this waste, and if he wants to butter a dinner roll without breaking it into three pieces first, or eat peas with a spoon instead of a fork, I say, who cares? He paid for it himself, which is more than you can say for a lot of society members.

JOHANNA

DEAR JOHANNA: Some rules of etiquette are indeed ridiculous. If we would concern ourselves more with how we treat our fellow human beings and less with which fork we use, society would be better served.

DEAR ABBY: I foolishly married for a second time, thinking I would have companionship for the rest of my life but I was wrong. All Abby wanted was a cook and a housemaid. He has a lot more than I have, but he doesn't want any of his. Only money. I live in MY house, and I don't let him have anything to do with it. He has a lot of money, but he will leave to HIS children. At age 64 would you advise a separation?

SARAH

DEAR SARAH: I would advise a separation of money, not of Abby. If he has money, let him spend it. Talk in money terms. If he isn't any happier with this arrangement than you are, separate everything else.

DEAR ABBY: new booklet, "What Teen-agers Want to Know," send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 152 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (24¢) envelope.

Your health

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

DEAR Dr. Lamb:
I'm 61 years old, 5 feet 3 and I weigh 170 pounds. I would so like to lose some weight, especially around my hips and stomach. I had a complete hysterectomy six weeks ago and I'm afraid to do exercises. Could you help me on this problem? I have become very depressed and discouraged. I have high blood pressure and my nerves are about gone.

What I want is not to do exercises that involve an area where surgery has been done until your doctor tells you it is O.K. for me. That means you will need to wait on doing sit ups and leg lifts. But if you feel fairly good you could start a walking program.

Start by walking 15 minutes a day and gradually increase it until you can walk an hour every day. If you have time you may be able to walk even more. The more you can build up your walking program and keep it up the easier it will be for you to lose weight.

There is no such thing as spot reducing, despite all the money that's spent on this. If you lose fat you lose it because you are using more calories than you are taking in. Just doing sit ups or leg lifts will not decrease your weight around your hips and stomach unless you are losing fat all over. Such exercises sometimes help tighten up sagging muscles but that is about all.

Just sending you my weight losing diet that you can follow in the Health Letter number 47. Others who want this issue can get 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for a diet that is a balanced 1200 calorie program that works best with some regular exercise too.

DEAR Dr. Lamb:
I'm a man of 69 and have a problem. The ring of muscles around my anus pop out after relieving myself and stay out, in order to be comfortable I have to push them back in several times.

The doctor tells me those are tired muscles and recommends surgery. There are so many drugs and other things to cure many ailments I would think some doctor or drug manufacturer would develop a salve or ointment which would make these muscles relax to normal.

Could you advise me if there is such a salve or ointment so I would not have to have surgery.

DEAR Dr. Lamb:
I'm describing prolapse of the rectum. We all have layers of muscles attached to the large pelvic bones to hold in the abdominal contents. The pelvis is really like a basket with the bottom part being the crest of the hip bones, and the bottom being the pelvic arch in front and the bony structures you sit on. The bottom of the front arch to the areas you sit on are lined with muscles. These go around the rectum and genitalia and also support them.

These muscles are also connected to the muscles directly surrounding the rectum. When these muscles get weak a prolapse can occur.

New wave in music?

SOME PUNK rock fans wreck clubs and theaters and go through most of the violent antics that accompanied the birth and growth of Beatles-type music. But they are a small minority and ripping out 200 seats at the biggest punk concert yet in London the other night may incur some "displeasure" from their elders but doesn't hide the fact that a new wave in music is beginning to swell. (UPI)

Punk rock beginning to swell enough to buy it.

"While we walk the streets too chicken to even try it."

"White riot. I wanna white riot. A riot of my own."

A scattering of their fans gave them a good-natured riot, ripping out the seats and tossing them onstage perilously close to vocalist Joe Strummer.

Among the witnesses were some men who had seen it all before, in the 1960s. They were record company and music publishing executives still trying to make up their minds whether punk rock was also here to stay.

Maurice Oberstein of the giant CBS Records had no doubts.

"The record business has been looking around for a long time for something new and this has to be it," he said. "I remember when the public was horrified by the Bill Haley-Elvis Presley era. Punk rock is just a new fashion and a new music. It is perfectly harmless."

Oberstein spoke from strength. He has signed two punk rock groups — called New Wave groups by his publicists — "The Clash and the Vibrators. The first album by The Clash broke into the best selling charts at number 12.

Oberstein described this as "unprecedented."

Also in the theater was Malcolm McLaren, owner of a unisex boutique called Seditionaries.

It is famous for notorious, depending on your point of view, as the hangout of McLaren's pioneer punk group, the Sex Pistols.

The Pistols were barred from many venues in the country after being prodded into using four-letter words on a television program last December.

Nevertheless, they were signed for records on the basis of their album "Anarchy in the U.K.," whose title song begins:

"I am an anti-Christ

"I am an anarchist

"Don't know what I want but I know how to get it."

"I wanna destroy the passerby.

"Cos I want to be anarchy..."

Two record companies signed and promptly terminated their contracts with the Sex Pistols in the face of withering publicity.

According to McLaren, they received a total of $121,000 as final payoffs. But he is upset that his groundbreakers are not at the moment sharing in the new acceptance given the music.

He feels too much stress was placed by the media on non-essentials.

What did it matter if punk musicians called themselves Sid Vicious, Rat Scabies or Johnny Rotten? Or, if two of them were lavatory cleaners and another a gravedigger? Or that their fanzines — Fan magazines — were titled "Sniff! Glue!" or "Vomit!"

What mattered was the music. What about the music?

Punk rock is rock stripped to its musical skeleton, probably what it was like in the very beginning.

Punk rockers have no time (or money) for the complicated arrangements, the ceiling-high banks of amplifiers, the elaborate lighting effects and other paraphernalia of the stage shows of present day stars.

As ticket prices for star concerts rose, partly because of the high cost of reproducing recording studio sound on stage, more and more youngsters turned to the cheaper entertainment of pubs and small clubs.

Sociologist Peter Marsh says:

"There must be thousands of people in London alone who could play as well as the Sex Pistols or Clash, and that's what it's all about. It's about people having access to their own music because the music is within reach of their own competence."

"We feel closer to them (Sex Pistols) than to people like Rod Stewart and other famous stars with all their swimming pools," said Jill Taylor, 18. "They don't treat us like dirt like top stars do."

Barbara's Arabian night

Arabs touch blond hair for good luck

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI)—Tiny country singer Barbara Mandrell couldn't help but worry when a half dozen Arabs yanked her long, blond hair as she strolled the streets of Saudi Arabia.

She was making the first country music tour of that nation, where live entertainment usually is banned. Conscious of her role as goodwill ambassador, she dressed conservatively, not wanting to offend Arabs accustomed to veiled women.

"One American woman told me they sprayed her legs with black paint five years ago because her mini-skirt was too short," she said. "I'm an extrovert, but I tried to tone it down in respect for their customs."

Her fair complexion and blue eyes drew stares from the dark-skinned Arabs, but Miss Mandrell could not understand why they wanted to pull her hair. A guide explained.

"They believe it's good luck to touch blond hair," she said. "I sure was relieved to find out that was what all that hair pulling meant."

She sang for employees of an American oil company on the 12-day tour of places like Dhahran, Safwa and Uthmaniyah. People of 20 different nationalities filled high school gyms and "dining halls" where the concerts were staged.

"It was so nice to learn that country music is appreciated everywhere," she said, "even though everyone doesn't appreciate it in the same way."

Americans and Europeans in her audiences shouted their approval. Arabs shook their heads in time to the music, but clapped little. And visitors from the Philippines tapped their feet instead of applauding.

The crowds were so enthusiastic they nearly pulled Miss Mandrell through a bus window as she signed autographs.

"If I live to be 100, I'll never encounter audiences like that again," she said.

But few women turned out to hear her sing.

"It was a rude awakening," she said. "Women there are treated more like property or fifth class citizens, though things do seem to be improving."

Unlike the shy Arab women, Barbara Mandrell considers herself liberated. Though she looks fragile, even in blue jeans and sweat socks, she is accustomed to shouldering a heavy load.

"You can't just look ladylike and sing your songs," she said. "I'm a businesswoman, as well as a mother, and I sweat like everyone else involved in this business. I have a hard job to do and I work hard to do it."

"I know there are those who say country singers are loving Hicks who get beat up by their husbands. But there are any liberated women. It's the ladies in country music."

Walton regular juggles 4 careers

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Joe Conley, who plays storekeeper Iko Godsey in "The Waltons," juggles several careers.

In addition to his role in the CBS-TV series, Conley runs a reality business, gives motivational speeches, and has organized a song and dance act with Eric Scott (who plays Ben Walton in the show).

Conley is, moreover, active in the Catholic church and community affairs in the San Fernando valley.

Eight months ago he and his wife of eight years, Louise, moved into a brand new Spanish-ranch-style house. The grounds include a swimming pool and tennis court. They bought the house because they wanted to take up tennis but didn't want to wait in line for public courts.

Before moving in, Conley had the builder add a den to the four-bedroom dwelling to house his pool table.

One of the first things Conley did was plant a vegetable garden along with a small orchard of plum, apple, peach and citrus trees. A member of the Hollywood Hackers golf group, Joe installed a putting green on the property, too.

If the Conley lifestyle appears grandiose for a supporting player in a television series, it should be remembered that Joe has had his own real estate firm for 16 years and finds it more remunerative than acting.

While Joe tends to the garden and putting green, Louise devotes her time to daughters Erin, 5, and Jana, 2. She also is busy decorating the house with emphasis on oak furniture which prevails in almost every room.

Louise did the wallpapering herself, except the living room which rises to a 20-foot-high ceiling and features a free standing fireplace located in the center of the room. Her color schemes are mostly warm tones of browns and soft yellows and oranges.

Joe, who does some woodworking and cabinet building, refinished the antique walnut dining room table and chairs.

Because his role is not one of the leads, Conley isn't required to be at the Burbank Studios for every scene. His hours differ from day to day but he averages three days a week on the show.

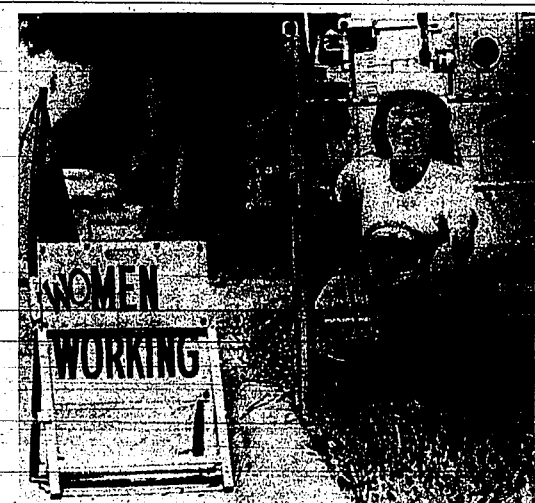

The rest of his work week is devoted to real estate business. Joe no longer sells property himself, saying, "The challenge for me now is managing the firm and training new people to make them professionals."

He squeezes in a game of tennis almost every day, often playing in the evenings under the lights.

Weekends are frequently taken up with speeches to service clubs, high schools and church groups. He recently addressed the national Audio-Visual Association Religious Council.

"I'm a motivator," says Conley. "My speeches are about character building and selling. I believe everyone in the world is a salesman. During my speeches I break into song and use some film clips from 'The Waltons' to keep things rolling."

This summer Conley and young Eric Scott will appear at fairs and conventions during breaks in the series.

Aspiration for Amy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter said today he would like to see his daughter Amy become a page on Capitol Hill some day.

The President gave some sidelights on Amy's life when he spoke with the 38 graduates of the Capital Page School in the State Dining Room.

Asked if he would like to see his daughter become a Capitol Page, Carter said, "I used to have that aspiration myself, and I think it would be very good for Amy. I'd like to see her do it some day."

The Lukas-Rubens book is on play only. If it were on bidding, they would find some way to get North and South to seven clubs or seven spades. Seven clubs is the best contract. It makes unless spades break 5-0 or East holds five clubs. However, this time you are South and you find yourself in six spades.

The ordinary declarer says something like, "We just missed the big bid," ruffs the heart lead, plays a spade to his ace and finds that a 4-1 break in trumps has caused

Antismoking act sparks tempers

ST. PAUL, Minn. (UPI) — In August, 1975, Minnesota put into effect what was said to be the nation's toughest antismoking act to protect the lungs and dispositions of the two out of three persons who do not smoke.

It banned all smoking in public places and called for smoking areas in commercial establishments, including business offices.

But the state legislature failed to provide funds to enforce what is called the Minnesota Clean Indoor Air Act. The act has since lapsed about as many arguments as it has settled.

Nonsmoking office workers have feuded with smoking coworkers. There have been disputes over when a bar is a restaurant and whether you can smoke in a line at a bank or not (no, unless the line is in a smoking-permitted area).

A bar can allow smoking throughout the promises unless it also serves meals to more than 50 diners. Then it must provide no-smoking areas. After meals are over it can revert to a bar. Therein lies an area for argument.

To aid nonsmokers in winning their rights, the Association for Non-Smokers' Rights, a program of the Lung Association of Minnesota, has put out a question and answer booklet.

It suggests patrons of nonsmoking restaurants ask the owner why he's not obeying the law.

If an owner continues to flout the law, patrons are urged to write the appropriate local health department and list the irregularities; the dates they spoke with the owner, his name and the establishment's address. Follow up on your complaint, the booklet says. Check with the establishment within two months. If the proprietor indicates no changes, file another complaint.

The booklet defines a bar as "any establishment or portion of an establishment where one can purchase and consume alcoholic beverages." It excludes any such establishment or part of it that has tables and eating facilities for serving of meals to more than 50 people at one time and where meals actually are served at tables to the public.

An establishment that serves alcoholic beverages and has food service facilities it does not use for that purpose should be considered a bar, the booklet says, adding that no public place other than a bar shall be designated as a smoking area in its entirety.

The State Board of Health, a local board of health, or any affected party can enforce the law.

NASA asks planetary missions

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The space agency is developing a planetary exploration plan that proposes a 1984 launch of two roving Mars vehicles, a possible robot landing on Mercury, and flights to Venus, Jupiter, Saturn, Venus's Comet and four asteroids.

The plan also envisions a 1990 launch of automated ships to land on Mars, collect samples of rocks and soil, and return them to Earth.

"These are possible candidates for the future — high priority mission opportunities," said A. Thomas Young, head of planetary and lunar programs, in an interview following a series of presentations to a meeting of the American Geophysical Union last week.

In addition to the Mars expeditions, the plan includes:

- A spacecraft for launch in 1986 at the earliest to orbit Mercury and possibly land a simple exploratory robot on the surface of the planet nearest the sun;
- A satellite to set out in 1983 to orbit Venus and map its cloud-shrouded surface with advanced imaging radar;
- A spacecraft to be launched in early 1982 to orbit Jupiter and send an instrument probe deep into its dense, hot atmosphere;
- A spacecraft for launch in 1985 to orbit Saturn and launch two probes, one to study the planet's atmosphere and one to examine the atmosphere of the Saturn moon, Titan;
- A spacecraft to set out in 1982 to rendezvous with and examine Halley's comet;
- A probe for launch in 1985 to survey the 216-mile thick asteroid Vesta and three smaller asteroids.

Young emphasized only one of those missions is currently approved by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration management and the White House. It is the $285 million Jupiter orbiter-probe, mission and it has run into budgetary trouble in Congress.

As it now stands, NASA has two planetary exploration projects in the works. One is the launch of two Voyager spacecraft this summer from Cape Canaveral, Fla., to explore Jupiter, Saturn and possibly Uranus. The other is a flight of a Pioneer spacecraft and an atmospheric probe to Venus next year.

In addition, two Viking Mars landing craft continue to operate on the red planet, although their life detection experiments have been completed without conclusive results and other investigations have been reduced for the long cold Martian winter.

The 1984 Mars expedition would cost about the same as the Viking project — $1 billion — and expand the search for life and conduct much more detailed and extensive investigations of the planet's surface and environment. The two vehicles would be capable of roaming at least 60 miles across Mars.

As now planned, the rover would be accompanied by two Mars satellites and six spearlike penetrators to be dropped from orbit to stick in the surface with special cushioned instruments.

'Racist' comment assailed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Republican National Chairman Bill Brock said Monday U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young should be fired for calling former Presidents Gerald Ford and Richard Nixon racists.

Brock said Young's statements about Ford and Nixon "is an outrageous comment that further points up the fact that he is a diplomatic incompetent who should be fired."

Young made the statements in an interview published in the July issue of Playboy Magazine.

In the interview, Young said Nixon and Ford were racists. "They were racists not in the aggressive sense but that they had no understanding of the problems of colored peoples anywhere," Young said.

'Neutron bomb' coming

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Funds for a new tactical nuclear weapon specifically designed to kill people through the release of neutrons are buried in a huge public works bill now before Congress, the Washington Post reported today.

The $6-mile-range Lance missile for the first time implements the so-called neutron bomb theory which scientists have spent years developing, the newspaper said. Army generals have sought the mininuclear device rather than nuclear bombs too devastating to put into practical use.

The Post quoted one nuclear expert as saying the missile

"cuts down on blast and heat and thus total destruction, leaving buildings and tanks standing. But the great quantities of neutrons it releases kill people."

The weapon gives off massive amounts of neutrons which attack the central nervous system, and according to "The Effects of Nuclear Weapons" published by the New England Atomic Energy Commission, causes "almost immediate incapacitation."

Victims are stricken with convulsions, intermittent stupor and a lack of muscle coordination, and death is inevitable within a few hours to a few days, the Post said.

The appropriation for the warhead is included in the Energy Research and Development Administration portfolio of a $10.2 billion public works bill to be considered by the House Rules Committee today, the newspaper said. ERDA, as successor to the AEC, finances and supervises research and production on nuclear warheads.

The Post said American generals who have "commanded the North Atlantic Treaty Organization theater have argued for years that the 7,000 nuclear warheads now in Europe are old, pack too large a nuclear yield and would therefore never be used in a war."

Limited mail inspection OK'd

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court ruled 6 to 3 today that customs officials may inspect incoming international mail when they have reasonable cause to suspect it contains illegally imported material such as narcotics.

The majority said postal regulations allowing the officials to open envelopes without a search warrant "all but not to read the correspondence inside cause only a minimal 'chill' to the exercise of free speech."

The court, in the majority opinion by Justice William Rehnquist, based its decision on finding that post offices are where places of mail enter and leave the country. The government is permitted to limit who and what enters the country at its borders and search people entering there without a search warrant, Rehnquist said.

No different constitutional standards should apply simply because envelopes were mailed, not carried, he said.

Justice John Stevens, in a dissenting opinion joined by Justices William Brennan and Thurgood Marshall, said Congress through history has respected the individual's interest in private communication and did not intend to "authorize the kind of secret searches of private mail" that occurred in this case. He said the language of the law was ambiguous.

allowed to exercise the power it claims, the door will be open to the wholesale, secret examination of all incoming international letter mail," Stevens said. "No notice would be necessary either before or after the search."

About one billion pieces of international mail enter the United States annually. The Postal Service refers about 27 million envelopes to customs officials, who open 270,000 a year.

Postal regulations allow customs officials to inspect incoming international mail when they have a "reasonable cause to suspect" it contains illegally imported merchandise. They may not read correspondence inside, however, unless they get a search warrant.

In this case, the court reversed a decision by the Circuit Court of Appeals in the District of Columbia, which had thrown out the convictions of two men for receiving heroin sent through the mails from Thailand.

Seven envelopes were opened by a New York City customs inspector, who noted they were heavier and bulkier than most letters and came from Thailand — an important source of heroin. He did not have a search warrant.

But as a result of the evidence he discovered, Charles W. Ramsey and James W. Kelley were arrested and convicted of drug-related offenses and sentenced to 10 to 30 years in prison.

The divided circuit court upset their convictions, saying the Constitution prohibited opening of such mail without a showing of probable cause and a search warrant.

The high court also agreed in an Illinois case to straighten out a major dispute over public assistance to needy families with children in the case of fire or other disaster.

Agreed in a Kentucky case to decide next term whether a prosecutor may threaten to bring more severe charges against a defendant who refuses to plead guilty.

Three dissenters in the death sentence case — Justices Harry Blackmun, Byron White and William Rehnquist — said they do not read the majority as forbidding a mandatory death sentence for a killer of a peace officer "for all cases and all times."

They said the case must be viewed in the context of the court's previous criticism of the Louisiana system, which was found to impose "cruel and unusual punishment" in violation of the constitution.

"It need not freeze the court into a position that condemns every statute with a mandatory death penalty for the intentional killing of a peace officer," they said.

Chief Justice Warren Burger was the fourth dissenter.

In other actions, the court: — Ruled 7 to 1 that a felon may be convicted for possession of a firearm even though the weapon has been obtained and carried across state lines before the felony conviction.

Let stand a ruling that Congress, not state courts, is the final arbiter in disputes over elections to the House of Representatives.

Panama students protest

PANAMA CITY, Panama (UPI) — Thousands of high school students shouting "Yankee go home" marched on the Panama Canal Zone Monday, ripped down a U.S. flag and blocked railroad tracks, a Panama Canal Co. spokesman said.

About 6,000 students converged on a small public park on the Pacific side of the Canal at about 8 a.m. (7 a.m. MDT). The park is part of the U.S.-owned Zone but files both the Panamanian and American flags.

The demonstrators took down the American flag and raised a Panamanian banner in its place, the spokesman said. They left peacefully after making some speeches.

At the same time, another 200 students marched on the town of Colon, on the Atlantic side of the zone. Several demonstrators lay across the tracks of the Panama Railroad Co., detaining one of its trains for a short time, the spokesman said, and others painted walls and railroad cars with anti-American slogans.

No one was injured, a Panamanian government spokesman said.

The demonstrations were organized to honor the memory of a student who was injured in the 1964 anti-American riots here that killed 21 students.

The student's body was found on June 6, 1966, five months after the riots, but the circumstances of his death have never been clarified.

Lipizzaners to Filer

TWIN FALLS — The white horses appearing at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds, June 17th at 8 p.m. have a unique history.

The rare and noble breed, created in the 16th century for Austria's royal house of Hapsburg, has been imported for this show. Only a few hundred Lipizzaners have been alive at any one time since their breeding was originally controlled by the monarch.

No commoner was allowed to own one, but nobles serving with the Austrian army were given Lipizzaners to ride. The exacting balance movements and great leaps called the "airs above the ground," which today are performed solely for their beauty, were originally a tactic of war, used by mounted men to inspire terror in foot soldiers. No other breed can duplicate these maneuvers.

Known for its conformation, beauty and intelligence, the Lipizzaner is the result of centuries of crossbreeding of Spanish and Arabic-Oriental bloodlines. The horses were first bred by Spanish Moors from Andalusian and Arabian stock and the line remained essentially stable for the 700 years of the Moorish occupation.

During the Renaissance, the art of classical horsemanship was revived and several European countries established studs to preserve the Spanish strain. Emperor Maximilian II brought the Spanish horses to Austria in 1562. His brother, Archduke Charles, established a similar stud in 1580 in Lipizza near Trieste. The Lipizzan stud flourished and was infused toward the end of the 18th century with additional oriental blood.

After 400 years of peaceful development, the stud was forced to flee, on three occasions during the Napoleonic Wars, and was again evacuated in 1915.

In 1942 the Lipizzan stud was shipped for safekeeping to Czechoslovakia where without the mares, the breed faced extinction. The dramatic tale of the stud's rescue and return to Austria by the forces of General Patton is vividly recounted in Walt Disney's film, "The Miracle of the White Stallions."

"A person may buy the kit and put the car together himself. Sometimes they want a part of themselves in the car. Or they can contract it. They may want the prestige of saying someone hand built it for them."

While the original classic cars may go for more than $50,000 now — and possibly twice that figure — a fiberglass Replicar goes for much less.

RICHARDSON, Tex. (UPI) — The first chore each morning is to clean the windows of the showroom. The finger and nose prints left overnight by those pressing to get a better look.

Rae Hill speculates that the prints formed higher on the glass are made by men. The older ones peeling at their past, the younger ones looking at a status symbol. She says the lower prints come from children looking at something they've never seen before.

Man shot retrieving Frisbee

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — A Miami man playing frisbee with friends was shot in the back and killed Sunday while attempting to retrieve the toy from a neighbor's tree.

Police killed Benjamin Sherwood, 72, on an open charge of homicide in the death of Alex Ledergerber, 25. Ledergerber died in the emergency room of Margate Hospital from a single wound in the back from a .410 gauge shotgun.

Sgt. Jim Wolkup of the Broward County sheriff's department, said Ledergerber's three friends and other witnesses reported Sherwood had been sitting in a lawn chair outside his home watching the four young men playing frisbee. He was waiting for his wife to return from church.

When the toy sailed into a tree in his yard, witnesses said Sherwood went inside the house and moments later fired the shotgun from the doorway, hitting Ledergerber.

Brezhnev blames Chinese for Soviet-China rift

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev said Monday the new leadership in Peking has blocked Soviet attempts to end the rift with China.

In an interview with a Japanese newspaper, released by the official Soviet news agency Tass, Brezhnev said:

"The absence of any changes for the better in Soviet-Chinese relations is the responsibility of the other side. The new Chinese leadership unfortunately follows the old, and I would say, well-trodden road.

"It is a fact that the campaign of attacks on the policy of detente is being continued and any measures in the area of disarmament are being impeded."

Brezhnev said the Soviets wanted a "normalization of relations with China and added, "A restoration of genuine good neighborliness between our countries would be of much importance not only to the U.S.S.R. and the People's Republic of China but also for an improvement of the international situation as a whole."

"But are not attempts being made to sow discord between states under the cover of this (hegemony) thesis?" the Soviet leader asked.

The Brezhnev remarks were prepared in response to questions submitted by the editor of the Japanese daily Asahi Shimbun.

The Brezhnev remarks on China underscored the recent escalation of the propaganda war between the two Communist giants, following a full after the death of Chairman Mao Tse-tung last year.

Report says officers safer traveling alone

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Police officers who have been patrolling their beats in pairs for safety reasons in most U.S. cities are now told they are just as safe — or safer — working alone.

This was the major finding of a 12-month study conducted in San Diego in 1975-76 by the Police Foundation, a non-profit organization devoted to improving police work.

The report, released Sunday, said officers riding patrol cars alone not only had a better safety record but fewer troubles making arrests, caused fewer citizen complaints and were more efficient.

Foundation President Patrick Murphy said the study provides the first factual basis for resolving the "emotional" charged claims and counter claims about riding patrol cars.

The report offered no reason for the troubles paired officers have, but Joseph Lewis, evaluation director for the study, told UPI he believes they provoke much of it themselves.

"In a single officer situation," Lewis said, "the officer tends to use persuasion and a number of other means short of force. When there are two paired, as partners, they tend to use force earlier."

"People speculate that is because officers can't tolerate a challenge to their authority when another officer is present," Lewis said. "There is no need to persuade. If there is resistance, they overcome it."

While patrolmen in most cities want to double up for safety reasons, especially at night, the San Diego investigators found officers there favored paired patrols by only a small margin.

Murphy said the most important result of the study is that it uncovered a potential huge saving for tight city budgets. In San Diego, it was found 18 one-cop patrols cost less than 10 paired patrols.

Negotiation relaxed

TWIN FALLS — Teachers and school board members in Twin Falls avoided an impasse in negotiations Monday when teachers agreed to revamp their proposal for extra-duty pay.

Monday, board members agreed to entertain a new proposal from the Twin Falls Education Association (TFEA), and the teachers' union representatives promised a new document for sessions coming up Wednesday.

Both sides this morning appeared pleased with the mood of Monday's session.

School district acting Supt. Carl Snow said the session was relaxed enough that both sides ended eating cantaloupe together.

Chief TFEA negotiator Nick Nicholson agreed.

"It was a very pleasant negotiations session, and the problems I thought might arrive did not," Nicholson said. "We weren't even close to impasse. The board does not want to go to impasse, and particularly the teachers don't, so it looks like the negotiations will continue in good faith. I'm very pleased."

He said the new TFEA proposal would probably "try to come up with a little more money" for extra duty pay.

Last week at which both sides presented extra pay proposals, the school board issued a press release calling the TFEA's proposal inequitable because it would distribute extra pay increases to "only 27 high school positions."

The board's proposal offered "equitable distribution of the additional funds available for the extra-pay positions among all schools," the press release said.

The TFEA countered that it had accepted the board's offer of only $4,000 in additional money — down from its request of about $12,000 — and that it therefore wanted to oversee how the funds were distributed.

Both sides said this morning a compromise might be reached through the TFEA's proposal to come Wednesday.

Agreement was reached Monday night in three areas, team spokesmen said. The board agreed to raise mileage expenses from 14 to 15 cents per mile, and the TFEA agreed to strike some clauses from last year's master agreement detailing outside credit for incoming teachers and to add the positions of athletic director and special education director to the list of administrative jobs not negotiable by the TFEA.

Buhl budget up 5.25%

BUHL — School board members in Buhl Monday approved the 1977-78 budget of $1.43 million, or an increase of about 5.25 percent over the 1976-77 budget.

Approval of the proposed budget followed a public hearing for the district based on a $2.5 estimated mill levy which will raise $616,536 in local revenue. The remaining portion of the budget is based on state funding and special federally funded programs.

This year the levy in the Buhl district goes up by about 13 mills because of the $2.5 million bond issue to finance the new Buhl High School.

Bids for the construction of the school will be opened tonight.

The levy will provide $200,780 for bond payment and interest.

Also included in the 1977-78 budget is a teacher salary scale giving an overall increase of 7.85 percent to the teachers, depending on their education, experience and tenure with the district. Salaries represent a total of $887,148 of the budget compared to $822,575 a year ago.

Teachers have approved the Buhl salary schedule following a series of meetings in which teacher representatives and board members determined the pay scale. Beginning teachers will be paid $8,650 per year if they have a B.A. degree. Master degree beginning teachers in Buhl will receive $9,600 per year with 15 additional semester credits and $10,210 with 30 additional credits.

Top salary in the district, for a master degree teacher with 12 years experience and 30 additional credits, would be $13,070.

The bachelor degree teacher with 10 years experience and 30 additional credits would receive $11,770.

MV cattlemen to register

MAGIC VALLEY — Cattlemen in Magic Valley can register for the national beef referendum at local offices of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) during the two-week period from June 6 through 17.

If the measure passes, the Beef Research and Development Act will get funding from a value-added tax voluntarily placed on all cattle sales by the cattle industry.

The actual vote, for cattlemen only, will be held at the ASCS offices between July 5 and 15. Only those registered during the coming two weeks can vote and the measure must pass by a two-thirds vote of at least half those registered.

If passed, the resulting 68-man beef board will administer some $30 million in annual revenue for promotion and research in the beef industry.

Council OK's drive-in window

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls City Council Monday night changed its mind, giving McDonald's hamburger officials permission to construct a drive-in window at the fast-food eatery.

The close vote approving the drive-in window at McDonald's, 305 Blue Lakes Blvd. N., ended a three-month controversy in which persons who live near the hamburger restaurant denounced the proposed window.

When the council voted 3-3, effectively denying the request in March, McDonald's officials threatened to sue the city.

Later, Kyle Enterprises Inc., local operators of McDonald's, asked the city to reconsider the request.

McDonald's officials argued the city's vote had been so close the request should be reconsidered. Officials also argued under city ordinance the council could not deny the request because it was a "conditional use" request.

When such a request is made, officials may only place "reasonable" conditions on approval, officials said.

However, others, including Mayor Paul Oatyn and Councilman Christopher B. Talkington, argued a conditional use request could be denied if public safety was in danger.

The two agree addition of a drive-in window at McDonald's would only aggravate an already dangerous traffic problem on Blue Lakes Boulevard North. They noted state transportation officials recently deemed Blue Lakes the second most dangerous road in Idaho.

When the question for reconsideration came up, Councilman Stephen Bancroft, who earlier abstained from the voting because he had been an accountant for McDonald's, decided to vote for reconsideration.

Bancroft, who will resign next week for personal reasons, said he decided to vote on the reconsideration motion because he felt the traffic problem on Blue Lakes could be improved if McDonald's received permission for the drive-in window.

McDonald's officials agreed earlier to give up 10 feet of frontage on Blue Lakes to add in the city's plans to widen their accident-prone street, but only if the city would allow them to add a drive-in window.

After voting 4-3 to reconsider the request last month, it became apparent the request would be granted.

At a council lunch Monday, the mayor announced Talkington, who has opposed the window, would not attend the Monday night meeting and Bancroft who supported the window, said he would vote if needed.

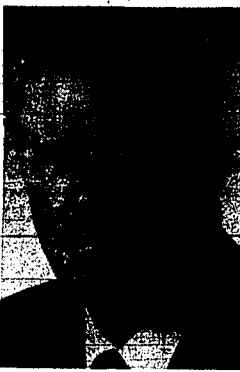

Talkington said earlier he had planned a vacation in Mexico for the week.

With Bancroft abstaining and Talkington absent, the council voted 3-2 to approve the

Vern tests waters

TUTTLE — Vernon Ravenscroft, state Republican party chairman, said today he is "strongly considering" running against Representative George Hansen, R-Idaho, in the 1978 race for Idaho's second Congressional seat.

While he has not yet decided firmly on his position, Ravenscroft told the Times-News he intends to "get around most of southern Idaho in the next two weeks" to test political waters.

Ravenscroft announced Friday that he will resign soon as GOP chairman, a post he has held since October, 1975.

Ravenscroft said he is being urged by Republicans throughout the state to challenge Hansen, now reportedly in financial trouble.

"We're examining three things," Ravenscroft said. "The opportunity to be of service, mechanics of the election and finding the necessary financing."

The potential candidate served 12 years in the state legislature and ran unsuccessfully for governor in 1970. He lost the Democratic primary by 5,000 to Cecil Andrus.

Two years later the Tuttle rancher-businessman switched to the GOP. Twin Falls Republican officials say he has done a good job in that position, and the fact he was once a Democrat should create no problems.

Ravenscroft's professional training was in forestry. He operated the Penta post business in Tuttle for many years. His sons now have taken over management of the business, leaving him "free to be in politics, manage our ranch properties and do consulting work," Ravenscroft said.

He said he believes agriculture and natural resource questions are the most vital facing Idaho, and both give the areas with which he is most familiar.

"The drought period has not altered their importance, but has made the public more aware of the policy decisions needing to be made in those fields," Ravenscroft said.

While he has no deadline for making up his mind, Ravenscroft said he "doesn't want to agonize too long," and, as his business and ranch operations permit, he "intends to be traveling."

Refuse troubles Gooding

By LORAYNE O. SMITH

Times-News writer

GOODING — Gooding County commissioners are considering eliminating most of the county's trash collection sites. Commissioner Jim Wilkins told the Gooding City Council Monday night.

The reason is continued lack of cooperation by a small minority of the public, he said.

Despite "about 15 newspaper stories" Wilkins said some people insist on putting huge limbs, rocks and even bedsprings into the dumpsters at the pickup sites. This means normal type trash dumped there falls onto the ground.

"The longer we have them, the worse the problem becomes," Wilkins told the council Monday.

City councilmen agreed to extend the lease for a pickup site north of Gooding, but urged Wilkins to hire a student to watch the site so visitors could be caught.

Wilkins said the county had expended the entire amount budgeted for this project on the contractor who hauls the trash to the county sanitary landfill.

Familiar scenes take on new look from train seat

By DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News writer

SHOSHONE — If you've never taken the train across southern Idaho, then you've missed a lot of southern Idaho.

From the train the familiar scenes change. Sand dunes and sagebrush take on new perspective, and the view seen so many times from the interstate somehow becomes a new vista, fascinating and entertaining.

It's not just the different mode of transportation. Part of the rail route avoids the land crossed by highways, giving the traveler sights he hasn't seen before. Even familiar cities change, as the train cuts through foot-hills, avoiding traditional routes, and slices directly into the heart of a community.

Some 200 persons crossed southern Idaho Monday on the Pioneer — the Amtrak line which has given this area its first rail passenger service since April 30, 1971. On that date the Portland Rose made its last run, and was then retired by the Union Pacific Railroad, written off as a money losing enterprise.

The crowds were large — and enthusiastic. Over 5,000 cheering spectators lined the brick walkways outside the Boise's ornate Spanish Villa depot.

When the Portland Rose made its last run, barely 50 witnessed the event. Six years of absence apparently made a difference in the capital city's attitude toward rail passenger service.

From Boise the inaugural run of the Pioneer took the politicians, Amtrak officials and newspapermen (who constituted well over 90 per cent of this first run) to Mountain Home, Shoshone and Pocatello. At Mountain Home so large were the crowds they delayed the departure of the sleek new engine and its six cars for almost five minutes.

No matter, though. Almost one tenth of the population of Shoshone waited patiently, expectantly for the Pioneer's arrival. Children placed their ears on the rails, listening for the sound of the approaching train. Their cries of "Here it comes!" triggered the waiting musicians, and sounds of "Casey Jones," and "The Wabash Cannonball," rose over the applause and shouting.

At Pocatello, once so significant a railroad connection that it boasted of being "The Gate City" to the West, nearly 500 persons swarmed through the doors of the two-story red brick train depot. Nearly all were enthusiastic, although six employees of the nearby Greyhound Bus station picketed the Pioneer's arrival, charging railroad passenger service was a waste of the taxpayer's dollar.

The politicians spoke, of course. But at most stops they were of secondary interest. The waiting crowds came not for speeches, but to see the train, to climb aboard what had been just a memory for over half a decade.

And who were the crowds?

From conversations overheard, the persons interviewed, several patterns emerged. Many parents brought children, and snatches of conversation could be overheard as they walked down the carpeted dark blue and orange train aisles. "During World War II we rode . . ." "We used to go down to California all the time . . ." and here and there a reference to the now dead Portland Rose.

Then there were the train enthusiasts.

They were the ones who talked of the advantages of pre-stressed concrete rail-ties over more traditional wooden ties; who rattled off names of famous trains: the Japanese Bullet Trains, Le Mistral, The Orient Express.

But most seemed to be the curious, and the hopeful. Aware that rail passenger service would probably not turn a profit, and skeptical, perhaps of whether the Pioneer would survive, still, they hoped. And when Sen. Frank Church, and Gov. John Evans spoke of the return of the train to Idaho, they cheered.

The Pioneer is an experimental Amtrak route. It justifies its existence.

The real test of this will not be in yesterday's crowds and enthusiasm, but in next year's ridership. And no one knows what the size of those crowds will be.

Livelier balls, more homers

NEW YORK (UPI) — There really is more life in this year's baseballs.

Scientific tests using radar and an air cannon that shot baseballs against a solid board have confirmed that "the coefficient of restitution" of the balls used in the major leagues this year is up 1.3 percent over last year.

Which means, as every player already knew, that this year's baseball bounces a little higher and travels a little farther than last year's model. The 1977 baseball, manufactured by Rawlings, travels an additional 21 feet on a drive of 400 or more feet, tests conducted at the University of Missouri revealed.

But the tests confirmed that the ball "still remains well within the specifications of the baseball which have been produced in the same manner for many years," according to a joint announcement Monday by Lee MacPhail, president of the American League and Charles Feeney, president of the National League.

The tests were conducted under the supervision of Dr. Lee J. Bain, Professor of Mathematics, Dr. Max Engelhardt, Associate Professor of Mathematics and Dr. Terry F.

Leinhoff, Associate Professor of Mechanical and Aerospace Engineering. Baseballs were shot from an air cannon against a solid board made of ash baseball bat blanks. The velocity of the ball was measured by a radar gun under controlled conditions.

"The current Rawlings baseball was well within the specifications determined by the major leagues while the 1976 baseballs were in the low range of the specifications," the statement said.

Home run production in both leagues is up this year with the American League averaging 1.75 homers per game against 1.16 a year ago, which would project to a record total of 1584 homers over the season. However, part of this home run increase is due to the expansion of the AL to 14 clubs. The National League has been hitting homers at a rate of 1.64 per game, while the NL averaged 1.15 in 1976.

Home run production, though increased, is not at a record pace in either league. The all-time per game high was set by the National League in 1965 with a 1.95 per game rate while the American League high was in 1962 with 1.92 homers per game.

Oregon goes crazy over first ever world crown

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — It was Mardi Gras and New Year's Eve rolled into one for the NBA champion Portland Trail Blazers Monday.

The crowd that turned out to honor the champs was, perhaps, the biggest ever in the city's history to turn out for a single group. Portland Mayor Neil Goldschmidt said the throng was larger than the 7,000 persons who showed up to get a glimpse of Jimmy Carter during his presidential campaign swing through Oregon.

"We've got more here than we've had for anybody here," Goldschmidt said.

A lastly prepared parade, arranged by the Mayor's office with an hour and a half notice, wended its way through a crowd that built up before noon and stayed at the Plaza until the afternoon.

The Blazer players, their wives and children as well as the coaches rode through the downtown area to the Plaza where they were greeted by Oregon Gov. Bob Straub, Goldschmidt and a number of city commissioners.

Star center Bill Walton rode a bicycle in the parade and later joked that he was afraid "some guy" would make off with it for a souvenir.

"It was the dumbest thing I ever did," he said of riding the bike, "but it felt good."

"This is as much fun as I've ever had in pro sports, any sports. I can't think it will get any better, but I'm sure that the fans will find a way."

Walton, a physical fitness buff, was in a party mood, getting a beer from someone in the crowd, taking a slug and then giving some to fellow vegetarian Maurice Lucas. He then sprinkled some suds on Assistant Coach Jack McKeen.

Later, Walton poured beer on the NBA trophy and Goldschmidt, with some of the liquid splattering the governor.

To commemorate the Blazers' win over Philadelphia in six games Lucas said:

"While Ali was up to his old tricks,

I predicted it would go in a...

Coach Jack Ramsay said that not only was this the greatest season he ever had in the NBA but it could be the "greatest season" that professional basketball has ever seen.

BILL WALTON, star center of the Portland Trail Blazers, is not walking, nor is he being carried by the cheering crowd. He is riding in a car in the parade staged by the city of Portland to honor the NBA champion Trail Blazers, who brought the first ever world athletic championship to Oregon.

Young: Ali should quit before he's knocked off

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Jimmy Young doesn't mind fighting Ken Norton in "semifinal" for the right to a rematch with heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali, but he had a familiar suggestion for the 35-year-old Ali Monday — that the champ should quit.

"All has slipped a little, and he's just tired of fighting guys three or four times," said Young. "What the guy should really do is quit."

"I think it's time for him to step aside, and not just because I'm looking for the title. He's done a lot for boxing and I'd hate to see him pushed aside. But he'll reign champion until somebody matches his crown — not just lifts it, matches it."

The 23-year-old Philadelphia, who drove George Foreman into retirement in March and gave Ali a tough 15 rounds a year ago, thinks the title is in his future. But Ali's managers have set the conditions: In order for Young to earn another title shot, he must beat Norton.

Promoter Don King says he has signed Young for a 12-round with Norton. But Norton has reportedly signed with King's rival, Bob Arum, for the same fight, meaning the two promoters must have to strike a deal.

"I think the fight will come off because it's what the public and boxing officials want," said one of Young's managers, Jack Levin. "We're hoping Ali will retire, making it a title fight."

Young's attitude about a possible Norton fight borders on overconfidence, even though he's 15 pounds over his fighting weight of 210 and Norton's last fight was a 58-second mugging of Duane Bobick.

"The only way Norton will be able to beat me is to catch me like this," he said, putting his misdirection. If he doesn't get me inside of eight rounds, he's lost.

"I can see it in the stars. I can see it in my imagination...me, beating up Kenny Norton. A man isn't going to sit down and gamble unless he thinks he's going to win. This is a gamble. I think I should be the No. 1 challenger, but after I take care of Norton, nobody else will be in my way."

"Don't get me wrong, I respect the man in every way. Maybe I'm overconfident, but so far it's been working pretty good."

He said he has been watching films of Norton and will be ready for the overhand hooks with which he stung Bobick. "When I see him duck, I'll know that right hand is coming," he said. "I also found out he needs room to punch."

Young was in Washington to accept an "Outstanding Contribution to Pro Boxing" award from the Washington Touchdown Club.

Guests at the head table included U.S. District Court Judge John Sirico, who a few hours earlier ordered John Mitchell and H.R. Haldeman to start serving their Watergate prison sentences June 22.

Big man stands out

Pros: Arnie should be exempt

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — It's not official but Arnold Palmer, one of the best known names in golf, apparently qualified Monday for his 25th consecutive U.S. Open golf tournament.

Despite his 61-four victories, the 47-year-old Palmer did not receive one of the many exemptions, offered for the prestigious tournament and had to play a 36-hole qualifying round Monday.

A severe thunderstorm blew over the Myers Park Country Club late Monday afternoon just as Palmer's threesome was on the finishing hole. The group finished play in gusty wind and driving rain. But more than half of the 129 golfers competing for 40 berths were still on the course. Play was to resume Tuesday morning at the Myers Park and Charlotte Country Club courses.

Palmer had an even-par 71 in a morning round over the Charlotte Country Club course after three-putting on the final hole. On his second round, he came in with a one-under-par 71 at Myers Park even though he lost a couple of strokes by rushing his play to finish and bogeying the final hole.

"I wanted to finish play and I thought I was in (qualified) so I rushed it on the last hole," Palmer said. "If there had been some question whether I had qualified I would have stopped play."

Only three of the 25 golfers who finished 36 holes scored better than Palmer's 142. Bob E. Smith had the lowest score posted at 139.

Other former U.S. Open champions competing in qualifying here include Billy Casper (1959, 1960) and Ed Furgol (1954). Former Masters champions Charles Coody, George Archer and Bob Goulby and former PGA champion Bobby Nichols also had to qualify.

Archer finished with a 141 total and should make the field. It appeared that the cutoff for qualifying would fall in the 146-45 range.

It was the first time Palmer had been required to play a qualifying round for the U.S. Open, which he won in 1960, since 1969.

"I played very well today," he said. "There's still a lot of zip left," he said.

He made three birdies and two bogeys on his final round missed several birdie putts. His wood and iron play was superb.

Palmer played quickly and walked faster than the 100 persons following him around the hilly course. He jogged up the steep hill to the 18th green and later said he was not particularly tired after playing 36 holes.

"I played very well today," he said.

He dodged comment on whether he felt he should be required to qualify for the U.S. Open in view of his brilliant career.

"I have no comment on that at all," Palmer said.

He later added he wanted to play in the U.S. Open at Tulsa "very much" and almost broke his silence on the qualifying requirement.

"I have a very offhand remark to make but I'm not going to make it because it takes in other players," he said. But Joe Imman, former winner of the Kemper Open, who also had to qualify Monday, did comment on it.

"Arnold Palmer should never have to qualify for anything, ever," Imman said. "Not one man on the tour would say a word if Palmer was exempt for anything. He's the one man who made our living."

IRS denies probing amateur stars' taxes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Internal Revenue Service Monday denied it has started an investigation into under-the-table income allegedly received by some of the nation's top amateur athletes.

Time magazine reported that Dwight Stones, who holds the world record for the high jump, is already under investigation by the IRS and several other world class American athletes in track and field events would also be the subject of future tax probes.

The magazine said the probes could keep the athletes out of the 1980 Olympic Games in Moscow.

"There is no national program with respect to auditing income received by amateur athletes," an IRS spokesman said.

He said if income tax discrepancies turned up in a routine audit of an amateur athlete, "he or she would be treated in the same way as a professional athlete or any other citizen, for that matter."

"It is just not true that we have singled out amateur athletes and the IRS."

Time reported that the IRS is suspicious that many athletes scooped money and merchandise from "sporting goods manufacturers and fees for appearing in track and field meets and then hid the earnings from amateur sporting officials and the IRS."

The spokesman would not confirm or deny that Stones was under investigation because it would breach IRS regulations to identify a specific taxpayer.

Lakers trade Lucius Allen

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — The Kansas City Kings Monday solidified their guard strength by acquiring Lucius Allen from the Los Angeles Lakers for forward Otis Johnson and first and second picks from the 1978 draft.

Allen, 28, is an eight-year veteran from UCLA who averaged 14.8 points as a regular with the Lakers last season. Allen had played out his option with the Lakers and had indicated he wanted to play for the Kings because he is from Kansas City, Kan., where he was a star player for Wyandotte High School.

The Kings already have indicated they will use their No. 2 pick in Friday's NBA draft to select All-American guard Otis Birdsong. The Kings traded guard Brian Taylor to Denver but still have in reserve Ron Boone, the team's leading scorer, last season with a 22-point average.

Lucius Allen will give us the ideal running mate to complement Boone and Birdsong," said Kings' Coach Phil Johnson. "He has the ability to penetrate, score and run a club. His experience, quickness and court savvy will undoubtedly strengthen our back court for the coming years."

"I feel that this trade gives us the strongest nucleus we have had since the franchise moved to Kansas City," added Kings' General Manager Joe Axelson. "We hate to part with Otis Johnson, but the need for three outstanding scoring guards made the move important to our future."

Allen teamed with Lew Alcindor, now Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, to help bring UCLA national championships in his junior and senior years and was the third player taken in the college draft in 1969, behind Alcindor and Neal Walk, who was selected by Seattle.

Allen was traded to Milwaukee the following season where he again joined Abdul-Jabbar to win the NBA title. He played with the Bucks for a 4 1/2 seasons before being traded to the Lakers.

Johnson was the No. 4 forward of the Kings last season, averaging 6.6 points and 2.6 rebounds per game.

Allen is the second major acquisition of the Kings in the past two weeks. Kansas City traded for 7-foot-2 center Tom Burleson in late May to fill another problem area.

SEATTLE (UPI) — Major league baseball, which had trouble attracting a street corner gathering in Seattle eight years ago, has pulled half a million fans through the Kingdome turnstiles this season.

"We have a million-two as a goal and we're right on, almost to the letter," says Dick Vertlieb, who directs the Seattle Mariners business operations.

The expansion Mariners opened the American League season with a Kingdom crowd of 57,762 — the largest in the majors so far — and have totaled 50,044 for their first 27 home appearances.

The average of nearly 20,000 per game places Seattle fourth in the AL behind Boston, Toronto and New York.

"I think we'll wind up about the middle of the pack," Vertlieb projects. "I would guess Kansas City should pass us and the California Angels." But then we should maintain that position.

The Mariners could end the first half of their home season this month with more paid fans than the 677,944 who watched the Seattle Pilots in the entire 1969 season, the American League's first experiment in the Northwest market.

"If it doesn't fall by then, the Pilot mark for sure will be passed the first week in July," says a manager of sales and promotions for the Pilots' single season, "It's the dome that does it. It completely eliminates two of our biggest problems — the facility and rain, which has always been a pain in this area."

Sears is a manager of sales and promotions for the Kingdome, and he's not going to knock his employer, but his analysis of the Mariners success seems straight.

"We've had this big, beautiful building to show people," says Vertlieb. "We've had some really attractive visiting teams here like the Yankees and Boston. And we've had three major promotions — opening day plus two Boeing nights."

The Boeing promotion, which totaled 100,000 in consecutive evenings, was part of a Mariners plan to create fans early in the season in the hope they will return. Vertlieb contends the return factor will be determined by the quality of the Mariner team.

"We made certain assumptions when we started," he explains. "One of them was that we would be a 400 team. That was a big assumption. When you draft, no matter how bright you are or how hard you work or how lucky you are, you never really know until you put those people together."

With Lou Gorman directing the overall baseball operations and Darrell Johnson managing a group of enthusiastic and likeable young players, the Mariners began this week at 23-4 for a .893 mark, barely under Vertlieb's target.

"I feel if we maintain 400 baseball, if we continue to play at that rate, then we will draw that million-two," he adds.

But Vertlieb's analysis, like Sears', continually returns to the new covered stadium.

"The dome is a big advantage for us," says the Mariner official. "We're trying to make the whole Northwest, from Portland to Vancouver, part of what we're trying to do. The dome means someone can leave from Vancouver and know there is going to be a game."

Sears watched the Pilots average 8,920 in Sicks Stadium, an uncovered land uncomfortable minor league park that no amount of paint and props could transform into a major league facility.

"The threat of rain has been evaluated as meaning the difference between 300,000 and 500,000 people a year, depending on your team," he says. "People could look out the window and say, 'Oh, hell, we'll go next week.'"

"The clouds would start piling up about 4 or 5 o'clock and it would just murder us. We averaged only five or six rainouts a year with the Seattle Rainiers of the Pacific Coast League, but we sure got rained out a lot while we played."

He calls the dome "the optimum facility for a team playing baseball in this part of the country."

"Someone from Olympia, where it might be pouring down rain, can say, 'Hell, let's go to the ball game,' and they know they'll see one."

"The dome's got to mean something. Look at last Sunday. It was gorgeous outside, the NBA final was on TV and still 14,000 showed up. It was a photo day promotion. But let's face it, while I'm not degrading these kids, they're still in last place, and last place teams are not known for drawing a million fans on their own."

Golf scramble set

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Men's Golf Association will hold a meeting Wednesday night following a four-man scramble event.

The scramble will begin at 6 p.m. with a shotgun start. Players must sign up by 5:30 p.m. to play.

Drag fans can beat the heat in Pocatello

POCATELLO — Drag racing fans will be able to enjoy Intermountain Raceway's second event of the year in the cool of the evening.

With the heat running over the 90 degree mark the past several days, the fans will undoubtedly be looking forward to the night time action.

Last summer track manager Jim Hennessey installed lights in an effort to escape the desert heat. The installation was well worth the effort as attendance nearly doubled over previous years.

Nearly $1500 in cash will be awarded this Saturday night to qualifiers and victors in the various brackets. Gary Masterson, Hamilton, Mont. intends to grab his share with his potent A-dragster. The Chevrolet-powered rail will well into the process of defeating the Utah group of racers in the last meeting at Intermountain when rain stopped the event. Masterson drove through the standing quarter mile in 8.17 seconds at over 175 mph, the fastest time on the Pocatello asphalt in three years.

The Magic Valley area produced a legitimate contender in modified eliminator in the last race. Dave Austin, TF, was one of three contenders left in the bracket when the bad weather broke loose. Austin, running a new engine, in his F-35 Chevy, made several passes down the track in the 11-second zone.

Other tough runners from the Magic Valley include the Mays and Dickey Chevrolet in the Superstock bracket and Larry Davis and his Olds 442 in stock eliminator.

Harley Noe, Rigby, will be a heavy favorite in E.T. bracket competition. Noe recently defeated over 100 contenders in his class from 10 different states to receive runner-up honors in a major race over the Memorial Holiday weekend at Firebird Raceway in Boise.

Gates will open at 3 p.m. for qualifying and tune-up runs with eliminations scheduled to begin at 6 p.m.

Trap shoot-feed set

POCATELLO — All trap shooters are invited to the Annual June Barbecue Shoot sponsored by the Pocatello Trap Club Sunday.

The shoot will begin at 8:30 a.m. at the Trap Club, located near the airport, and free barbecue sandwiches will be available to all contestants following the singles event.

Shooters are urged to arrive early for registration, and pre-squading will be accepted

Friday at 2:30-7:00.

The ATA registered shoot is a sanctioned meet designed for rookies and experienced shooters.

Thirty trophies will be awarded to men, women, juniors, and rookie winners in classes A, B, C, and D of singles, doubles and handicaps.

New Jets leader named

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jim Kensil, executive director of the National Football League for the past 10 years, has been appointed president and chief operating officer of the New York Jets, the team ownership announced Monday.

Kensil, a 46-year-old resident of Massachusetts, was given full responsibility for running the NFL team and he will assume his new responsibilities next Monday.

Leon Hess, a principal owner of the Jets who has served as acting president since last January, will take on the responsibilities of chairman of the board and chief executive officer for corporate affairs.

IOC called on carpet

NEW YORK (UPI) — Justice Arnold Guy Fraiman of New York State Supreme Court Monday granted Sutra Corporation's application ordering the International Olympic Committee to show cause on June 16 why it should not be held liable for $275 million for deceit.

The court also froze all IOC books, records and papers pertaining to the 1980 Summer Olympic broadcast rights to prevent destruction of evidence.

Court papers revealed that the IOC, which failed to appear in court, refused to accept legal papers and dodged their service and that Swiss police, with Swiss court approval, interceded to compel the IOC to accept Swiss and U.S. court papers.

Harvey Rubin, president of Sutra, said, "We have always believed that our agreement for the 1980 Olympic broadcast was valid and we look forward to the International Olympic Committee's explanation of its conduct. The American public has a right to know the facts."

"The IOC first approved Sutra's okay to bid, then approved Sutra's rights and asked Sutra to come to its headquarters in Lausanne, Switzerland," said Sutra lawyer Michael Lusher. "And while we were on the way to Lausanne the IOC resumed the bidding."

Sutra, a New York-based international trading and manufacturing corporation, signed a preliminary agreement Dec. 21 with the Soviet Union for American television rights after none of the three major networks — NBC, ABC or CBS — preliminarily failed to come to terms with the Russians separately or in a pool arrangement.

NBC subsequently awarded the rights to the 1980 Games for $85 million. Sutra thereupon filed separate legal actions against NBC and the IOC, with a court decision delayed until now.

Celts ponder Heinsohn

BOSTON (UPI) — A decision on the future of Boston Celtics' Basketball Coach Tom Heinsohn was put off one more day Monday after club owner Irvin Levin arrived in town late from the West Coast.

Levin, head of a Los Angeles based movie, publishing and financial services firm, was to meet Tuesday at Boston Garden with Heinsohn, and Club President Red Auerbach.

The meeting, the third between Auerbach and Heinsohn but the first with Levin present, originally had been scheduled for Monday.

Reports are that Levin and Auerbach want Heinsohn back for a ninth season but that details of the contract must be worked out.

Heinsohn, president of the NBA Coaches' Association, had hoped to sign a three-year contract at approximately $100,000 per year. The Celtics reportedly were willing to give him a two-year pact for slightly less money.

A key in the talks was a redefinition of Heinsohn's control over the players. In past years, disgruntled players have gone over Heinsohn's head and have taken their complaints to Auerbach.

Kings get draft pick

DENVER (UPI) — The Denver Nuggets will give the second-round draft pick in this week's NBA collegiate draft to complete the three-team trade of May 25, the Nuggets' management said Monday.

In the May 25 trade, which also involved the Seattle SuperSonics, Denver acquired guard Brian Taylor and the No. 9 pick of the first round from the Kings for center Tom Burleson and future considerations.

Foreman will not play for Vikings

NEW YORK (UPI) — Chuck Foreman Monday reiterated his desire to leave the Minnesota Vikings and vowed he would miss the 1977 season if he is not traded.

"I'm through with it," said Foreman, here to receive the National Conference Player of the Year award from the New York chapter of the Pro Football Writers Association. "I won't be back in a Viking uniform. Maybe not in any uniform if they won't trade me."

Foreman has two years remaining on a three-year contract worth an estimated $150,000 a year. He says he is grossly underpaid and is asking a reported $300,000 a year.

"My competitive spirit for the Vikings is not there anymore," Foreman said. "I don't think I can give them all I've got. I need a change. I'd like to be on the West Coast."

Foreman was accompanied by his attorney, Tom Reich of Pittsburgh.

"We've spent a lot of time trying to work it out with management," Reich said. "Chuck didn't want to go to camp last year and I persuaded him against his will. Now it's far beyond money. It's a question of an irreparable difference between Chuck and management."

"We've asked for a trade for the last year and a half. If they don't trade Chuck Foreman they won't have Chuck Foreman or the talent he would bring."

Foreman said he informed the Vikings Friday that he would not play for them next season.

"It's just a matter of pride," Foreman said. "I've shown year after year what I can do. I don't know what more I can do to prove myself. It's sickening. The sickening part is it's well known the type of player I am and it's also well known I'm making a mediocre salary."

Asked what he would do instead of playing football, Foreman said, "I'll pursue other things. I'd rather do that and be happy than play and be unhappy."

Expos take 4th straight

MONTREAL (UPI) — Jackie Brown tossed a five-hitter in his first routine game since being traded from the Montreal Expos to the Atlanta Braves for their fourth consecutive victory.

Brown walked four batters and struck out four in raising his record to 2-4. He also contributed a run-scoring single in the second inning.

Carlier hammered off losing pitcher Frank Leflore with one out in the second to give Montreal a 1-0 lead, and the Expos added another run in the inning on a two-base error by Junior Moore and Brown's single.

Walton to miss dinner

NEW YORK (UPI) — Bill Walton, chosen as the Most Valuable Player of the NBA championship series, Monday declined an invitation to come to New York Thursday to pick up a new car and plaque and be the guest of honor at a dinner.

Walton, citing "a previous commitment," has designated Maurice Lucas, his good friend and teammate with the Portland Trail Blazers, to accept for him.

Yastrzemski leads star voting

NEW YORK (UPI) — Boston's Carl Yastrzemski, a 34-time All-Star, heads a quintet of Red Sox players leading in the voting for the American League All-Star team after the first week of tabulations. It was announced Monday by baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

In addition to Yastrzemski, who holds down an early outfield spot with 10 most votes of any player — 131,131 — top Boston votegetors at their positions include catcher Carlton Fisk, outfielders Fred Lynn and Dwight Evans and shortstop Rick Burleson.

Also drawing the most votes at their position are Minnesota's Rod Carew, a 10-time selection, at first base; third baseman George Brett of Kansas City; and second baseman Don Money of Milwaukee.

Woman leads coed superstars

LAS VEGAS (UPI) — Kathy Schmidt, winner of the bronze medal in the javelin throw in the Montreal Olympics, threw a jolt at the star men athletes when she took a first day lead for the Dewar's Cup in the sports celebrity tennis tournament Monday at the Hotel Flamingo courts.

The 6-1, 175-pound Long Beach State University athlete amassed 19 points in this round-robin, mixed doubles event for 32 outstanding athletes from 10 different sports. The event ends Thursday.

Rick Barry, Golden State Warriors superstar who was a television commentator for the NBA championship in Portland, land, flew here in time to take second place with 18 points.

Baseball Hall of Famer Hank Greenberg, who is 66, John Havlicek, Boston Celtics, and Bob Klein, Los Angeles Rams (tie) are who won the Dewar's Cup last year with Brad Park of the Boston Bruins are next with 17.

$2.7 million paid for trotter

NEW YORK (UPI) — The world champion pacer Oil Burner, who as a 3-year-old took a record of 1:54.4 for the mile, has been syndicated by Alan J. Leavitt, president of Leona Lobell Farms, Hanover, Pa., for $2,700,000.

According to the U.S.

Trotting Association, that is the second highest price ever paid for a pacer.

Oil Burner was previously owned by William Brooks of Wilmington, Del., and Ben Webster of Franklin Lakes, N.J., both of whom are shareholders in the syndicate.

The horse, now four, will continue to be driven by Webster and trained by Charlie Wingate.

Oil Burner was purchased by Brooks from Stanley Dancer for $35,000 in May of 1976, upon the advice of Wingate.

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, JUNE 8, 1977

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day when you need to use the utmost tact and diplomacy in dealing with other persons since there is an unusual sensitivity in the air. As the day progresses you find conditions improving.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Attend to those duties ahead of you without delay and don't ask others for help. Not a good day to ask for advice.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Be sure not to tread on the rights of others today or you could meet with stiff opposition. You can now gain a long-cherished desire.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Anything of a civic nature needs to be handled carefully at this time. Be certain you handle credit affairs wisely.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July) You feel you will derive into new projects that are interesting, but it is better to wait a better day.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 22) Don't neglect obligations you must meet today. Your mate may be moody, but don't antagonize. Think clearly and speak concisely.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) Pay close attention to the wishes of others today, particularly where your associates are concerned. Strive for increased success.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Take extra time to delve in and handle important tasks. Fellow workers are not very cooperative now, so carry on by yourself.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Be cheerful, even though those around you may be morose for some reason. Don't spend too lavishly on amusements that appeal to you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) An outside venture should await a better time before going ahead with it. Establish more harmony with kin.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Refresh a routine matter today and avoid a costly mistake. Being critical of an associate could bring unpleasant results now.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Not a good day for deriving into financial matters since your judgment now is not up to par. Try to be helpful to others.

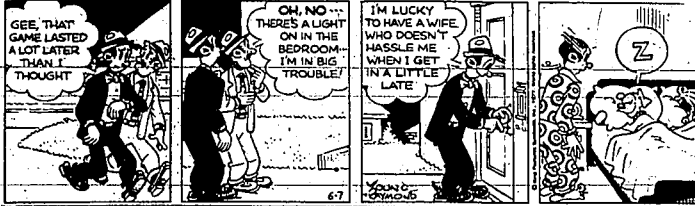

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Be positive in any business dealings you may have today. Not a good day for group affairs. Avoid one who is your nemesis.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will have a knack for getting into all sorts of trouble, so teach to solve problems instead of creating them and then this becomes a successful chart. There is musical talent here that should be well trained.

The slang word "smooch" wasn't coined until after the invention of modern lipstick. Came from the German "smutze" meaning to smear. I said "modern" lipstick, please note. In just about every century, somebody invented that again, all the way back. Lipstick of sorts has been found on Egyptian mummies.

According to the statisticians, lawyers, house painters and barbers drink more liquor than most other occupational types.

Were you aware you can't taste anything placed exactly in the center of your tongue? No taste buds there.

The disease germs that cause leprosy have never been found growing outside the human body.

A third of the land in New York City is untaxed.

GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY

Q. "My wife—the 10- and I—I'm 21—just got married this week. What are the statistical odds we'll celebrate our 50th wedding anniversary together?"
A. About 42 out of 100. That's not bad. Only 75 years ago a bride and groom of your ages had only 19 chances out of 100 to survive together that long.

Q. "Are fireflies hot?"
A. No, sir, fireflies are cool. Very cool. In contrast to a lightbulb, which wastes most of its energy in heat, the firefly burns with better than a 90-percent efficiency. Did I mention it would take 137,000 fireflies to equal one 60-watt lightbulb?

MEMORY

Remarkable how many things we can't remember, even though we see them every day, or almost. Years ago in New York City, a city editor assigned me to ask commuters on the Staten Island ferry in which hand the Statue of Liberty holds the torch. Nine out of 10 didn't know without looking. Right. Even though they may be chain smokers, few citizens can tell you offhand how many matches come in the small standard matchbook. Figure 20. And can you sketch from memory the instrument panel on your car? Neither can I.

Our Love and War man has been informed that half the husbands in this country have been married no longer than four years.

There are more 10-year-old children in China than people of all ages in Australia.

The law of Portland, Ore., prohibits the wearing of roller skates in public restaurants.
