Court swats obscenity

WASHINGTON — States won even broader permission from the Supreme Court Thursday to control obscenity.

By a 5-4 vote, the court relaxed one part of its five-year-old set of constitutional requirements for state obscenity laws.

In the 1973 decision spelling out the court's current approach on this issue, the justices said that state laws would have to spell-out specifically the kind of sexual conduct that could not be shown or described.

Thursday, the court said that state laws need not provide an "exhaustive list" of the kinds of sexual behavior covered by laws against dirty publications or films.

Rather, according to the court majority, states may simply refer to "the kinds of sexual conduct which may not be represented or depicted."

Under this new standard, state laws or state court decision interpreting those laws may only have to provide examples of the kinds of explicit sexual displays or descriptions that would make a magazine, book or movie illegal.

The four dissenting justices argued that the new ruling "abandons one of the cornerstones of the 1973 ruling."

Even so the dissenters said that the new decision offered "a mixed blessing."

because they thought it hinted that the court was moving toward abandoning all of the 1973 standards.

By withdrawing the "cornerstone" of the 1973 ruling, the dissenters said in an opinion by Justice John Paul Stevens, the court majority "ultimately hastens its ultimate downfall."

Justice Byron R. White wrote the court's opinion Thursday. It was supported by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justices Harry E. Blackmun, Lewis H. Powell Jr., and William H. Rehnquist. Besides allowing states wider authority to control obscenity, the new decision makes it clear that "sado-masochistic" sexual conduct is included in the kinds of displays that may be banned.

"Sado-masochism" is, in general, the practice of using "flagellation" and other forms of pain-producing activity to achieve sexual stimulation.

Justice White said that "flagellatory materials" are among those that the court considers to be obscene and thus beyond constitutional protection.

Thursday's ruling upholds the conviction of Wesley Ward, the operator of a bookstore in Peoria, Ill.

He was convicted on charges of selling two magazines, titled "Bizarre World" and "Illustrated Case Histories, a Study of Sado-Masochism." He was fined $200 and sentenced to one day in jail.

Right to work healthy

By DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News Writer

BOISE — The right-to-work issue is not dead in Idaho.

Supporters of a right-to-work law are now considering spending at least $30,000 in Idaho's 1978 election contests, the Times-News has learned.

The money will finance a speakers bureau, mass mailings and radio, television and newspaper advertising. Field organizers may also be hired to come to Idaho and organize voters in support of a right to work law. Direct financial contributions to legislative, gubernatorial and congressional candidates are also being considered.

This assessment was made by Reed Larson, president of the National Right-to-Work Committee, who acknowledged the figure of $30,000 was still "tentative" and could go higher. Larson was in Boise Wednesday and Thursday for a private meeting with key Idaho and national right-to-work supporters.

A right-to-work law passed both houses of the Idaho Legislature in 1977, but died in a joint conference committee. Such a law would make union membership completely voluntary, and would outlaw the "union shop" job contract in Idaho. Under the union shop contract an employee must join a union within a specified period of time after obtaining employment.

During the 1977 legislature right-to-work supporters spent over $13,000 in lobbying for House Bill 67 — the right-to-work bill. Union expenses were believed to also be near this total. Unions opposed the measure.

At the Boise meeting Larson met with 30 supporters of right-to-work. Attending that meeting were Rep. John Brooks, R-Gooding; Rep. Gordon Hollifield, R-Jerome; and Sen. Kenneth Bradshaw, R-Wendell.

Larson told the Times-News the meeting was both to thank recent supporters of the right to work drive in Idaho, and "to make sure they don't let down, and make sure this is an issue in 1978."

Larson said the major thrust of both the Idaho and National right-to-work supporters will be at "educational" efforts. But he added it is probable $30,000 will be given in direct contributions from right-to-work political action committees to Idaho candidates. Larson said $10,000 each may be spent on Idaho's gubernatorial, legislative and congressional contests, but added little money would be spent in the primary elections "because, in the Republican primary, as I understand it, there are at least a couple of candidates who would like to have some identification with us."

Larson's comments were made during the course of an extensive interview with the Times-News. This interview will be published this Tuesday. On that date the Times-News will also publish an interview with Al Zack, assistant director of public relations for the AFL-CIO, and secretary of the International Labor-Press Association. Zack will also discuss right-to-work laws.

Coal fines set

WINDOW ROCK, Ariz. (UPI) — The Navajo Tribal Council decided Thursday to fine power plants that discharge large amounts of sulfur into the air.

The council unanimously adopted legislation requiring plants that discharge more than 100 pounds of sulfur or sulfur compounds into the atmosphere annually to purchase a permit from the tribe. Each plant will be required to file quarterly reports on sulfur emissions.

Navajo general counsel George Vlasits said plants that do not reduce their sulfur emissions will be fined from $20 million the first year to $100 million a year if the violations continue.

The legislation is aimed at the Navajo Power Plant near Page and the Four Corners Power Plant near Farmington, N.M. Tribal officials said both plants discharge large quantities of sulfur and sulfur compounds.

Vlasits said equipment to reduce sulfur emissions has been available since 1955, but that few power plants purchase it unless they are forced to do so.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Commodity Services Administration has awarded a $126,000 grant to the South-Central Community Action Agency of Twin Falls. Sen. James A. McClure said today.

Withdrawal in 5 years

WASHINGTON (UPI) — America will maintain significant air and naval forces in and around South Korea while U.S. ground troops are withdrawn over a five-year period, Undersecretary of State Philip Habib said today.

After meeting with President Carter at the White House, Habib and Gen. George S. Brown, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, went to Capitol Hill and declared the United States intends to stand by its mutual defense treaty with South Korea.

Testifying before the House International Relations Committee, Habib said a basic consideration before the initial withdrawal of 6,000 ground troops was "to keep a significant force presence in Korea, consisting mainly of air and key support units, after the ground force withdrawal is completed."

"Additionally, our naval units will remain in the area," he said. "We believe these forces, coupled with the major U.S. forces remaining in the Western Pacific, provide a clear, visible U.S. deterrent to any possible North Korean miscalculation."

Carter, keeping a campaign promise, wants to withdraw all 6,000 U.S. ground troops over the next five years. The plan has sparked considerable controversy in Congress.

Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker said in a statement "I do not believe the President and his administration have fully considered the national security implications of its Korean policy."

"We are withdrawing from Korea on the basis of a campaign promise, and not a careful and comprehensive review by the U.S. government," Baker said.

"I believe that withdrawing our ground forces without countervailing moves by the North Koreans will create uncertainty throughout free Asia, stimulate regional tensions and risk a major outbreak of hostilities on the Korean peninsula."

Baker said he would offer an amendment to a House-passed bill to "provide the Senate with a proper opportunity to fully assess the impact of any proposed changes in our Korean policy."

Habib told the committee that South Korean President Chung Hee Park prefers U.S. troops remain, but is willing to accept withdrawal decision if assured of continued help in making the South Korean forces more combat-ready.

Carter summoned Habib and Brown and other top military advisers to the White House for an early morning meeting. He told them Defense Secretary Harold Brown would go to Seoul next month to discuss with Park "actions and programs" necessary to maintain a military balance in the Pacific.

Gen. Brown disassociated military leaders from the claim of Maj. Gen. John Singlaub that withdrawing ground troops "will lead to war." For his remarks, Singlaub was fired as the third-ranking U.S. military officer in Korea.

The Joint Chiefs of Staff do not share Gen. Singlaub's statement that a withdrawal in the manner proposed by the President will lead to war," Brown said.

He said he believed the withdrawal can be handled without endangering peace and stability in the region and "so that United States will remain a 'Pacific power.'"

He said that while some risk is involved, it is "an acceptable degree of risk." Brown added that while a rational decision by North Korea will not lead to war, "we cannot account for irrational acts on the part of the other side."

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — The U.S. Department of Agriculture said Wednesday May rains brought about a small improvement in the outlook for the drought-plagued Northwest winter wheat crop.

State traffic deaths up

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho's new law enforcement chief told a legislative committee in Boise Thursday that the state's traffic fatalities in the first five months of this year had "dramatically increased" over last year.

Kelly Pearce, who took over as Idaho Law Enforcement Director on May 1, met with the Legislative Interim Transportation Needs Study Committee.

Pearce said through May this year there had been 121 highway deaths in Idaho, which compared with 95 in the same period of 1976.

Although Pearce did not single out one factor, he said that violation of the 55 miles per hour speed limit on the state's major highways was one of several reasons.

Pearce said state patrolmen were enforcing the law, but because of the minor penalties many motorists were not adhering to it. A motorist caught speeding under the previously posted 70 miles per hour on an interstate section or under the previously 60 mph for a secondary route is fined $5, plus court costs and receives no traffic penalty points.

The law enforcement director said he didn't feel that people were taking serious Idaho's law because of the low penalties. He indicated there was a need to modify the Idaho law.

But Sen. Reed Budge, R-Soda Springs, disagreed with the director.

Budge said he felt that motorists were not flagrantly violating the speed limit and the increase in Idaho highway deaths was occurring on secondary roads.

Kenneth DeYoung, head of the Idaho State Police, said

Budge was probably right about secondary roads. DeYoung admitted that some patrolmen had been pulled off of secondary roads and put of the interstate and "there seems to be an increase in fatalities on the secondary."

"That is one of the problems today," DeYoung said.

Idaho lawmakers back nuclear power

BOISE (UPI) — Accolades of nuclear power plants to offset use of fuel vital to the transportation needs of the nation was expounded Thursday by members of an interim Idaho legislative high energy committee.

The committee, which was formed last year, has been studying government restrictions on private industry in the development of new energy sources.

Committee members felt that environmentalists and government restrictions were causing roadblocks in the development of additional energy sources and construction of nuclear power plants.

Sen. Richard Egbert, D-Teton, urged a resolution calling for construction of additional nuclear power plants. He said other nations were constructing them in five years or less, while delay in construction in the United States was upward to 10 years.

He said 40 percent of the electricity in the nation was being generated from oil and natural gas. He said this consumption was putting into fuel needed for the nation's transportation.

Egbert said the safety of nuclear plants was unimpaired by other industries.

Rep. W. Rusty Barlow, R-Pocatello, said "previous legislation was not even enough to get the state out of the transportation crisis."

The members also said it was time for deregulation of industries so they could develop additional energy.

Rep. B. E. "Bud" Lewis, R-Salt Lake, said it was the consensus of the Western Conference of State Governments that regulations against industry was one of "greatest drawbacks" in providing new energy.

He said if Congress would do away with many of the present restrictions, industry could proceed with providing the new energy that the nation needs.

Sen. Reed Budge, R-Soda Springs, agreed, saying that "we should allow free enterprise to function."

Budge said it was an obligation of the legislature to

Idaho and the nation to push for the removal of "governmental restrictions and let industry get-out-and-do-the-job."

Barlow noted that much of the problem was created by the Environmental Protection Agency, which he said even created laws that it even created.

"I don't think we have to follow the dictate of an agency not created by Congress," he said.

Earlier, the committee met with the Idaho Transportation Board and learned that 94 percent of the proposed interstate highway system in the state was open to travel.

State Highway Administrator Dean Tisdale the two groups had 575 miles of interstate in use, including 50 miles of two-lane standard road.

When completed, Idaho will have 612 miles of interstate.

Tisdale said delay in finishing the interstate would be in North Idaho. He said it would be several years before Interstate 10 across the northern portion of the state was completed because of court delays caused by environmental problems.

He said there still was three sections of I-10 — Coeur d'Alene east, Wallace and upgrading of Fourth of July Canyon — to be finished. He said "we won't see much work in the next five years."

Tisdale also outlined for the board and committee work presently being done by the Idaho Division of Highways and projects which were ready to be let for construction.

Mother makes plea

TACOMA, Wash. (UPI) — The mother of a suspected murder suspect, Theodore Bundy, is pleading with him to give up and says she was afraid searchers would shoot first and ask questions later.

Mrs. Louise Bundy, in an interview with Tacoma station KSTW-TV, said she was worried about her son being out in the mountains of Colorado, "but most of all, I'm worried about the people who are out looking for him not using good common sense and pulling the trigger first and asking questions later."

Bundy, a 30-year-old former University of Utah law student, escaped Tuesday when he was left alone during a recess in a pretrial hearing in the Pitkin County Courthouse in Aspen, Colo. Trace of him had been found by Thursday night.

Mrs. Bundy said she thought her son was awake but told his case in Colorado, where Bundy was awaiting trial on a charge of first-degree murder in the slaying of a Michigan nurse, whose nude body was found in 1975.

"People will think, 'oh, he must be guilty, that's why he's running.' But I think just all the frustrations piled up and he saw an open window and decided to go. I'm sure by now he's probably sorry he did," said Mrs. Bundy.

Bundy was extradited to Colorado from Utah, where he was serving a prison term on a kidnapping conviction, jumped from the second floor law library of the courthouse Tuesday and eluded bloodhounds and roadblocks in the mountains near the ski resort town.

"I would plead with him to please turn himself in," said Mrs. Bundy. "Nothing can be gained by trying to run. It will just make people feel he's guilty and I think he should come back."

Mrs. Bundy stuck to her defense of her son, a suspect in several kidnappings in the West, saying he was not armed, nor dangerous, and "has never hurt anyone."

Carter said leaning to B-1

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter today told congressional opponents of the B1 bomber he will "go into seclusion" to decide whether to build the plane, but at least two congressmen said they are convinced Carter will go ahead with the controversial project.

Rep. Robert Drinan, D-Mass., and Ronald Dellums, D-Calif., talking with reporters after a half-hour White House meeting, said Carter "cryptically" cited new "secret" information, which they took to mean he had decided to proceed with construction.

Both congressmen noted that Carter, a presidential candidate, had called the supersonic B1 "an exotic, wasteful" weapon.

Opponents of the B1 project, a multi-billion-dollar effort which has been strongly endorsed by the Pentagon as necessary to replace the aging B52 bomber, claim a new manned bomber is an unnecessary expense in the missile age.

Drinan and Dellums said Carter reported his new information came from the CIA. "I'm convinced the President is leaning definitely to authorize it," Drinan said. "He spoke very cryptically of secret information now available to them."

"He announced something that, frankly, I and some of the senators had not known — that Defense Secretary Harold Brown is in favor of it," Drinan said. "Brown was there, and he didn't contradict it."

Both Drinan and Dellums said Carter told the group that when he makes "this lonely decision" about the B1 he will be in a position to explain it to the American people.

"I don't think that would be necessary to add that unless he were going the other way (and approving the new war plane)," Drinan said.

Carter met Tuesday with proponents of the B1. Some present at that meeting, like Drinan and Dellums, came away believing Carter would order production of at least some of the B1s sought by the Pentagon.

Hut Sen. Clifford Case, R-N.J., another of the opponents, said he detected no indication in how Carter would decide.

Among the opponents who met with Carter also were Rep. Thomas Downey, D-N.Y., and Sens. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and George McGovern, D-S.D. They said they argued that the $25 billion to $30 billion cost of the B1 program would be better spent on other defense measures.

Drinan and Dellums both said Carter did not elaborate on the nature of his new information.

Rep. Bob Carr, D-Mich., said members of the group pointed out to Carter his testimony to the Democratic platform committee as a presidential candidate a year ago the B1 was "wasteful, exotic." Carr said Carter replied that as President he now has access to CIA information which he lacked then.

Members of the group said they told Carter of their belief the B1 "at best would only contribute marginally to our nuclear strategic deterrent."

"That is the one area where the President announced we are relatively strong," said Sen. John Culver, D-Iowa. "We have a great amount of missiles, more than the Soviet Union in terms of nuclear warheads. We have invulnerable submarines. We have a B52 by the Air Force testimony is good into the 1990s."

First Lady visits Colombian leader

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — Rosalynn Carter has arrived in Colombia, where she met President Alfonso Lopez Michelsen and gave him a leather-bound, autographed copy of her husband's autobiography, "Why Not the Best?"

The First Lady, who arrived Thursday after a tough diplomatic assignment in Brazil, was scheduled to spend a pleasant one-day stay in Colombia before leaving later today for Venezuela, the last stop of her two-week tour.

She was scheduled to meet Lopez again today to discuss human rights and the Panama Canal dispute.

Mrs. Carter was greeted Thursday night at the lavish Palacio de San Carlos, once the home of "The Liberator" Simon Bolivar, by Mrs. Cecilia Lopez, wife of the president, who hosted a champagne reception to welcome her to Bogota.

Immediately afterwards, Mrs. Carter was ushered into the president's private office for an unscheduled 15-minute meeting.

The First Lady said they chatted and exchanged gifts. Lopez gave the Carters a large color photograph of his family, autographed and in a silver frame.

Mrs. Carter gave Lopez three books — a leather-bound copy of Carter's speech to the Organization of American States — a book on American space exploration and the leather-bound copy of "Why Not the Best?"

She said Lopez told her, "I'm so glad to have it. I have it in paperback already."

Mrs. Carter said "nearly every" foreign leader to whom she has given the book has mentioned already reading it.

"It's that nice gift edition which Jimmy autographed for them," she said.

Her Colombian visit may be the most pleasant and least challenging of her two-week trip, marked so far by sensitive talks with military leaders on such subjects as human rights, the arms race and nuclear proliferation.

The reception hosted by Mrs. Lopez was dominated by women — the first social event of the trip where one sex took precedence over the other. Of about 200 guests, less than 20 were men, most of whom were members of the Lopez cabinet or Mrs. Carter's official party.

Midway through the receiving line, Mrs. Carter greeted Olga Samper, daughter of Lopez's step-mother, who was wearing a salmon-colored dress identical to Mrs. Carter's, which was turquoise.

Tax break lost

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Ways and Means Committee has voted narrowly to eliminate one of the favorite deductions of taxpayers who itemize: the line that lists state and local gasoline taxes.

By an 18-17 vote, the committee adopted an amendment by Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., to the tax parts of President Carter's energy program. The amendment eliminates the individual federal income tax deduction for the state and local excise taxes on gasoline.

A Gephardt aide said approximately one-fourth the taxpayers itemize deductions, and removing the local gasoline deduction would raise approximately $700 million more in revenue per year.

But he stressed that the change will not hurt the poor because the poor do not itemize.

Trucks plunge off bridge

NEW YORK (UPI) — Two tractor-trailer trucks plunged through a guard rail on the George Washington Bridge high over the Hudson River Thursday and were saved from falling by a steel safety net. The drivers were treated in a hospital for minor injuries and released.

It was the first time in the 46-year history of the bridge, the world's fourth longest suspension bridge, that a truck had been saved from diving into the river by the net, a police spokesman said.

The freak accident occurred in rain on the lower level of the double-decked bridge which soars nearly a mile from the heights of upper Manhattan across the wide Hudson to the top of the Palisades cliffs on the Jersey shore.

Police said the incident began when a third truck jackknifed on the westbound lanes, which is separated from the eastbound lane by a gap in the road not hung. Apparently the drivers of two trucks following took evasive action to avoid the jackknifed truck, police said, and both smashed through the guard rail in the center.

One truck fell completely into the net; the cab and part of the trailer of the second also wound up in the net more than 100 feet above the water.

The accident caused a massive traffic jam lasting more than five hours.

The drivers involved in the mishap were not identified.

Hansen errs again

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. George Hansen "technically" violated the campaign contribution reporting laws again last year, but the Federal Election Commission said the violation was a trivial one.

FEC attorneys said Hansen failed to report loans made in his committee in 1976, the same kind of violation that netted him a $2,000 fine in 1974. But they said his committee accurately disclosed the transactions and the commission does not intend to take any further action.

The FEC said, however, it wants Hansen to request formally a waiver from the personal filing requirement.

London, scrubbed and flying flags

By JAMES RESTON
N.Y. Times News Service

LONDON — We will go to London for the Queen's Jubilee, he said, and since there has been so much discord over Concordo, we will fly that supersonic bird and find out whether it was worth all the fuss. Confusion: Very expensive, very convenient, very steady, very noisy, but worth it, Yes!

It was George Orwell who, in one of his many liveliest moods, said the British had an infallible instinct for doing the wrong thing and that the most stirring battle poem in the English language was about a cavalry brigade that charged in the wrong direction, but it seems a bit hard to blame them for this one spectacular effort to fly ahead of the rest of the modern world.

Out of the Washington countryside at half past noon, leached down outside London three hours and 33 minutes later in time for a walk in the old city and a good night's sleep.

No jet lag, no fuss, no sweat, getting on or getting away. Lashings of caviar, good wine and a fillet of the size of an official American league baseball. At first, it seems a little crowded, like sitting in a long bright hotel lobby with low ceilings and light little port-hole windows that almost obliterate the terrestrial world below.

It is, in short, an expensive account plane for people in a hurry who don't like to talk to one another, for it's not the noise outside but the noise inside that stops all normal conversation.

Those extra hours in London these days, however, are worth a lot. The old stately buildings have been scrubbed in the central city. The place is ablaze with flags as if the British had just gained instead of lost an empire. The fancy hotels are crowded at prices that are bound to restore the nation's sagging balance of payments, and while the National Theater is closed because of a strike over a plumber and two wash-basins, the rest of London is a costume party.

Is inflation running at 17.5 per cent this year? Hard to tell, old boy, we'll think about that later! Will Scotland secede? They've been talking about that since the days of Robert the Bruce! Will Margaret Thatcher become Britain's first woman Prime Minister? Couldn't do worse than these bloody men!

Mrs. Thatcher sits in her new quarters as Conservative leader in the House of Commons, blinking under the vast portrait of Winston Churchill and talking about the New Britain after the Socialists are defeated, as she insists they will be at the next election.

Capitalism hasn't had a chance in Britain, she says, because the left wing of the Labor party was determined that it wouldn't work. But later, she predicts, a Tory government will get the government out of the housing business and the workers will have something to work for except taxes.

Denis Healey, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, says Mrs. Thatcher will lose, not because she is a woman but because she would run the country like a head mistress. He also exudes the optimism of the Queen's Jubilee, and predicts he will get a workable third-round wages policy, that there will be no election this year, that the Liberals will stick with Labor, and that Labor will be returned to power next year.

Peter Jay, the newly appointed British ambassador to the United States, takes a more cautious view on his first day at the Foreign Office, but he sees the Labor party in the process of rejuvenation, and the industrial world working toward a more stable economic order under the leadership of the United States.

For the moment, however, politics is scarcely Britain's favorite subject. It is Derby time, Strawberries are in season. The shops in Mayfair are full of wedding hats in rainbow colors, as if even marriage were making a comeback, and here and there some of the old black London taxicabs, still the best in the world, have been painted a bright maroon.

There is still a lot of obstinate clinging to everything that's out of date and a nuisance, but at least the monarchy is spared for the time being. The queen has presided here during the hardest 25 years in this century, and is still smiling her way through crowds at the opera and the races.

One is tempted to say that Lord Action was only half right, and that it is not only power but the absence of power that corrupts, but for these next few weeks, the British will be thinking happier thoughts. They will be going to the horses and the concerts and maybe to the plays at the National. If plumbers go back to work. And after these past 25 years, they deserve all the fun they can get.

Visions of a skeleton waltzing backwards

Earlier this week the Twin Falls City Council approved a drive-in window for McDonalds.

The approval required no small amount of backwards waltzing these last three months.

On March 22, the City Council voted to nix the drive-in window because residents living near the golden arches complained.

These townspeople didn't like the idea of additional traffic and litter on Blue Lakes Boulevard North. They felt one more drive-in window would add another layer of plastic soft-drink cups to the busy street.

The council listened, then agreed.

Their first decision was a courageous one. The denial of the window was the first time a conditional use permit had ever been turned down as far as anyone could remember.

But McDonalds wasn't happy with the idea of being denied a drive-in window when everybody else on the block already had one.

The hamburger stand threatened to sue.

That sobered up the City Council right quick. A suit? Gulp.

Time to do some backtracking.

Backtrack they did.

Three councilmen decided to do some more thinking about the McDonalds' drive-in window. Chris Talkington, always a vocal opponent of the window, publicly said he would fight it to the end.

But this week, on the critical night of the vote to reconsider the window, Talkington was vacationing in Mexico.

Councilman Steve Bancroft abstained from the first McDonalds vote, citing a "business conflict."

After threat of the lawsuit, Bancroft decided his conflict of interest wasn't really that big and said he would vote to reconsider the window, if need be.

Finally, Mayor Paul Ostyn, a consistent opponent of the drive-in window, quietly changed his vote on a key parliamentary question this week which allowed the drive-in window to come before the council and be approved.

These three steps backward by the council probably saved taxpayers the cost of a lawsuit over the McDonalds window.

Being realistic, Blue Lakes Boulevard North already is a neon jungle and half a dozen drive-in windows assure the busy street will be a hamburger alley for many years.

For these reasons, the City Council's change of heart won't significantly increase the traffic or even the litter on Blue Lakes Boulevard North.

But the council didn't show much spine on this issue. They didn't listen very well to the complaints of the people who elected them.

In the end, when even more difficult questions come before them, the vision of a governmental body waltzing backwards will hang like a skeleton in the council chambers.

Olympic peninsula worried about oil

By MICHAEL SATCHELL
Washington Star

PORT ANGELES, Wash. — The first salmon steak, thick and pink and succulent, that filled Howard Durant's dinner plate in the dockside restaurant stated his case with simple eloquence.

Likely caught this day, certainly no earlier than yesterday, and with a sight of the kitchen where it had just been lightly broiled, it was a piece of fish to make an East Coast seafood gourmet forget he was paying for Pacific salmon instead of Iranian caviar, and thank the good Lord for making little fishes that grow into dinners like this.

"Imagine what this would taste like," he said, "cooked in Alaskan crude. That's what it comes down to."

His dining companion, Jarvis Garst, a man of plain facts, shoveled down a plate of chicken-fried french fries and put it in somewhat different, but for him equally convincing, terms.

"You can sit on Charlie Fitzgerald's front porch over in Sequim and point a shotgun at 10,000 ducks," Garst said. "How many do you think there'd be with an oil spill?"

Oil, Alaskan oil, millions and millions of gallons of it, is very much thought about these days. It is here, in an idyllic little coastal town on the environmentally pristine Olympic Peninsula of Washington State that a consortium of business and industry interests is trying to build a supertanker terminal and pipeline to unload Alaskan oil and ship it to the Midwest.

The people of Port Angeles, caught in a classic energy-versus-environment squeeze, want a supertanker port about as much as they want a turnpike intersection on Main Street.

They fear their very lifestyles are threatened, envisioning the quiet streets of their little town filled with roustabout pipeline crews and roughneck sailors; their fresh air polluted with industrial fumes; their picture postcard vistas marred by huge oil tank farms and refinery stacks, their picturesque harbor jammed with giant ships, their waters besmirched with oil, their salmon tasting as though they had been raised on sump oil in the Cleveland barge canal.

So they are fighting the port plan in the courts, but the odds are stacked heavily against them. Their opposition seems destined to be drowned in a flood of oil, big money and, in a bizarre twist, environmental trade-offs by the clean earth and water people willing to "sacrifice" Port Angeles by supporting an oil terminal here so that oil tankers would be forever banished from the inner waters of Puget Sound.

The pressures on Port Angeles are intensifying because sometime around the first of next month engineers will open the valves and switch on the pumps to start thick, sour crude from deep beneath Prudhoe Bay flowing 900 miles south down the Alyeska pipeline to the port of Valdez, Alaska.

By August tankers will begin delivering the oil to West Coast ports, but by November the refineries in the Pacific Northwest and California will be absorbing as much as they can handle, leaving an anticipated half-million barrels a day surplus.

That oil will have to be loaded into tincup tankers small enough to squeeze through the Panama Canal, and be delivered to Gulf Ports. And some will likely be shipped to Japan, traded for its Middle Eastern supplies.

The smaller the tankers and the farther the oil is shipped, the more expensive it becomes. A barrel of Alaskan will cost about 55 cents to ship from Valdez to refineries in Washington State, compared with $2.75 a barrel to Houston via the Panama Canal. A 250,000-ton oil supertanker will use only 20 per cent more fuel than, say a 100,000-ton tanker, a compelling reason to cut shipping costs by using the behemoth vessels.

Enter the pipeline proponents. With some 2 million gallons of Alaskan oil expected to flow daily when production peaks, a West Coast pipeline terminal makes sound economic sense, and presently there are four possible locations.

Two of the proposed terminals would be located in Canada, the oil to be sent down to the U.S. through pipeline networks largely in place. Observers foresee problems with the Canadian proposals, though, because the largely autonomous Canadian provinces have the power to slap tariffs on each barrel of oil regardless of what Ottawa dictates.

Solo, a major North Slope producer, wants to build a supertanker terminal at the port of Long Beach, Calif., and ship the oil to Midland, Tex., through an existing natural gas pipeline. The major hang-up here involves air pollution.

Tankers and tank farms that store oil give off hydrocarbon emissions and the air in the Los Angeles basin is well on its way to swamp gas anyway, as any Southern Californian will happily inform you.

Before the California Air Resources Board will allow Solo to construct terminal facilities — if indeed it and the environmental Protection Agency do grant permission — the company would have to, in effect, figure out how much additional pollution it will create, then go out and reduce existing air pollution by twice that amount. It could be accomplished by retrofitting clean air devices onto plants and industries throughout Southern California, a complex and costly proposition.

Which leaves Port Angeles.

This is the kind of town with the kind of appeal that prompts Wall Street lawyers to trade their pinstripes for a small shingle or Los Angeles executives their Mercedes for a four-wheel-drive pickup and a hardware store apron, as indeed has happened.

Its 18,000 inhabitants live in the shadow of Olympic National Park, two million acres of dense rain forest and spectacular, snow-crowned peaks.

The air is pure. The ocean is clear and clean and teems with oysters, shrimp, halibut, mackerel and salmon.

Lumber, two paper mills, fishing and tourism keep the dollars coming in.

From an oilman's point of view, Port Angeles is an ideal choice for a pipeline terminal because it is blessed — or cursed, as townspeople see it — with one of the finest natural deepwater harbors in the world.

Geography is the friend of Port Angeles, too, in its fight to keep the tankers out.

Parent involvement in education

A wise person once said that our nation's defense is too important to be entrusted to military professionals alone. And that's the way I feel about education. Education is too important to be entrusted to us "professional educators" alone. In an age of changing values and beliefs where individual social rights are constantly being redefined, we need more than ever to open communications among parents, students and teachers.

I look at the structure of education as resembling a pyramid. The state board of education and the state superintendent are at the top, followed by other layers — the local school board and school administration, teachers, students and parents. Parents are the foundation upon which the pyramid rests, and if the foundation crumbles, the whole system falls apart.

Parents are the first teachers of children, and research shows that money spent on education unrelated to the home brings only temporary gains. This is why the whole thrust of Headstart has been changed to Homestart.

It has been said that the 1970's was the decade of the student dropout, while in the 1970's we have the decade of the parent dropout. But national polls, including the Gallup Poll on Education, indicate that parents are now willing to work closely with educators to improve the quality of education for their children. A 1976 Gallup Poll showed that parents are willing to pay additional taxes to support a program of courses that will enable parents to help their kids with schoolwork.

Mario Panfili, Dean of Education, State University College, New York, summed up the temper of the times by saying, "The public is seeking to repossess its schools."

I think we in Idaho are beginning to get the attention of the rest of the nation as we attempt to find creative ways to involve parents. The Minidoka County Schools, for example, joined our Right to Read effort by holding a contest involving nearly 2,000 children asking parents to read 15 minutes each evening, five days a week for nine weeks. Parents were asked to sign coupons and turn them in to the schools stating whether they had read to their children each evening. That's parent accountability. They had 366 first-place winners who didn't miss one reading session in nine weeks, and they had approximately 700 second-place winners. I had the pleasure of giving out the awards, and believe me, all of the students, parents and teachers were winners in this contest!

Parent associations need stronger support from school boards and school administrators. Based on what I have seen over the years, parents develop an alliance to an individual school they could never have for a whole school district. And the key person in building a strong parent association is often the school principal, with the help of the teachers in the school system. We must deal with critical issues. We must talk with parents about teaching and learning, services available to kids, discipline, fostering respect for teachers in the home, grading and many other subjects related to education. There's nothing wrong with having bake sales and holding carnivals, but fund raising should not be the "tail wagging the dog" of parent involvement.

Winston Churchill once said, "Problems do not go away by being left alone. They simply gather steam until something explodes."

Too many times we see parent involvement only after there has been a crisis of confidence among parents and professional educators come together as adversaries. We can change all that. But school boards, school administrators and teachers must actively solicit citizen and parent involvement, and not merely be passive recipients. Parent involvement has to be carefully planned and implemented. Professional educators must see that issues are identified, clearly stated and discussed in an atmosphere of mutual respect.

I truly believe that if we can involve members of the community who sense a need and concern for education, Idaho can become the "Maya Clinic" for education in the United States.

(Mr. Truby is Idaho State Superintendent of Public Instruction.)

Rapid City memory long

RAPID CITY, S.D. (UPI) — Rapid City bore little resemblance Thursday to the raging torrent that killed 238 people and destroyed 900 homes five years ago.

Sixteen inches of rain and a collapsed dam turned the Black Hills creek, popular for its rainbow trout, into a 14-foot wall of water June 9, 1972. Five persons are still listed as missing.

Although few physical reminders of the devastation remain, Rapid City residents haven't forgotten.

"The people have displayed so much fortitude," Mayor Art LaCroix said. "We asked for a $3 million dollar wastewater treatment plant, $10 million for a new high school and $14 million for a new civic center, and all of that passed. We had a moral commitment to make the most of a dire situation."

Clearing Rapid Creek shores of homes and businesses met some resistance, however. Four residents filed suit on grounds they were not paid enough for their property and were not consulted by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers before the property was condemned.

US tariff on woollens under fire

LONDON (UPI) — America's tariff barrier against wool cloth imports from Britain was strongly criticized Thursday in an annual report of the National Wool Textile Export Corp., which represents nearly 500 exporting companies.

The report said that despite the recovery in U.S. sales last year, exports of British woollen and worsted fabrics were only about one-fifth of the volume sold to America 20 years ago.

The contraction in trade following raising in 1961 of U.S. duties on wool cloth showed that the United States imports of cloth from all sources were now only one-third of the 1956 total, due to the tariff and controls on imports from the Far East.

The report showed that last year's export figure of 3.4 million square meters compared unfavorably with the 1960 level of 8.2 million square meters and 16.6 million in 1956.

The Export corporation has put a case to President Carter which, if accepted, would show that the import of British cloth was essential for survival of the American clothing industry.

14-year-old top speller

WASHINGTON (UPI) — John Paola of Glenview, Pa., spelled "Svengali" last year and came in 22nd in the National Spelling Bee.

On Thursday the 14-year-old representative of the Pittsburgh Press was a champion by correctly spelling "cum-blist" — a money changer — and wound up with a $1,000 prize.

The words are getting harder... This year was a lot harder than last year," he said.

Svengali was not among the 603 words spelled correctly in the two days of the contest sponsored by Scripps-Howard Newspapers in 13 cities and 77 other newspapers.

Runner-up Joan O'Leary, 14, of Yonkers, N.Y., representing the New York Daily News, spelled "seraphim," meaning a "word" with many syllables.

The two outlasted 94 contestants — a record number — in the bee. Twenty-six survived the first day and were on the platform when spelling resumed Thursday.

In the final rounds, both O'Leary and Paola misspelled fultock — the curved timber on old ships — and Yizkor, a Jewish service commemorating the dead. Under bee rules they were allowed to continue until one missed a word, the second spelled it correctly, and then went on to spell a new word correctly.

Paola, president of his eighth-grade class, won $1,000, a plaque and a television set for his school.

He fingered lucky charms even after he was presented the gold spelling trophy. The charms included a skeleton key, a small rock and a plastic monster he got in a cereal box four years ago. Around his neck he wore a religious medal and a gold horseshoe that his grandmother gave him.

The son of a natural gas company employee, Joan said he was frightened "mostly today when I started to miss."

Several candidates said their key to spelling success was a "love of reading, with many contestants admitting to reading a book a day."

The mother of a tearful Miss O'Leary said the girl began to read at age three and now prefers murder mysteries and books on the occult. Joan said she would like to be a surgeon.

Some spellers said they relied on a "sharp cut" for sounding out words about which they were uncertain. Others said they relied on memorizing difficult words.

The mother of one contestant, Torin Owens, 13, of Fernandina Beach, Fla., said she never told her son how to spell a word. Mrs. Owens, an English teacher, said when Torin was four she showed him how to look up the word "quintessence" and "his" been hooked on dictionaries ever since.

'Men's rights' bill considered

BOSTON (UPI) — The Massachusetts House is considering a series of bills making it illegal to "entice" an unmarried man away from his mother's house for the purpose of "effecting a clandestine marriage."

The "men's rights" bills would extend protection of the state's century-old chastity laws to men and boys.

"The bills were intended to give men equal rights under the laws," said Rep. W. Paul White, D-Boston, a member of the Judiciary Committee.

One bill would penalize anyone who "fraudulently and deceitfully entices or takes away an unmarried male or female from his or her father's and/or mother's house or elsewhere, without the consent of the parent or guardian, if any, under whose care and custody he or she is living for the purpose of effecting a clandestine marriage."

Other proposals make it illegal for the owner or manager of a "place" to induce or allow a male to engage in unlawful sexual intercourse; make it illegal to administer a drug to a male "with intent to stupefy or overpower" him "so as thereby to enable any person to have unlawful sexual intercourse with him."

Ex-baseball player receives diploma

NEW YORK (UPI) — For years, every time they called his name, they'd hand Ron Taylor a baseball and tell him to go out there and do what he could to save someone.

Today, it'll be a little different.

"They're still hoping he'll save someone, but instead of a baseball they'll hand him a diploma at the University of Toronto Medical School's commencement exercises for the Class of '77 this afternoon. And as soon as he receives it he'll be automatically certified as a medical doctor."

Taylor had to put in a lot of sweat and hard work to become one. At 39, he's the oldest graduate in his class.

"I feel kind of relieved," he says. "Now I want to become a competent physician."

Taylor pitched 10 years in the big leagues, almost entirely in relief. He was with the Indians, Cardinals, Astros, Mets, Expos and Padres, spanning a period from 1962 to 1972, during which time he was credited with 60 saves and 35 victories while working in 491 games.

Between baseball seasons, he earned an engineering degree, quite a trick in itself.

Career swapped for wife role

SCOTT AIR FORCE BASE, Ill. (UPI) — West Point Fourth Classwoman Martha Beeson has decided she'd rather be an Army wife than an Army officer.

The West Point honor student has resigned from the academy to marry Lt. Joseph R. Sullivan, a recent West Point graduate.

The two, who were not allowed to talk to each other because of West Point rules, exchanged love letters during the past class year at West Point.

First Classman Sullivan wrote Fourth Classwoman

Beeson four or five letters per week and she wrote him from two to three.

"When we met on post, we just smirked," she said. Miss Beeson plans to attend McKendree College in Lebanon, Ill., next year. The couple plans to marry next June.

Sullivan, who received his commission Wednesday, said he was willing to wait it out three years for her to graduate. West Point does not permit cadets to wed.

But Miss Beeson decided to resign.

Center man meets queen

GREENWICH, England (UPI) — One-hundred-year-old Florence Stead got to meet her second queen Thursday when Queen Elizabeth stopped to chat with her during a "river progress" walkabout.

Mrs. Stead, who gave the queen a bouquet of yellow roses, told her how she met her great-great-grandmother Queen Victoria during her golden jubilee year of 1897.

"I told the Queen that I met Queen Victoria when I ran up to her outside Buckingham Palace. Queen Victoria said to me, 'What are you doing, my little maid?' And I answered I was with my dad. It was only 10," Mrs. Stead said.

She said Queen Elizabeth laughed at her story.

"I thought the queen was lovely. She had the same manner as her great, great grandmother," Mrs. Stead said.

She met the queen at Greenwich, where Elizabeth and Prince Philip boarded a launch and began their day-long "progress" up the River Thames.

Marriage has its ups, downs

VALENCIA, Calif. (UPI) — If you think marriage doesn't have its ups and downs, consider the wedding of David Baysinger and Linda Crane.

The two 29-year-olds, described themselves as "rollercoaster brides," were married Thursday while riding the rollercoaster at Magic Mountain. They were pronounced man and wife as they hurtled along upside down at the top of the ride's 360-degree loop.

"It's something to tell our grandchildren about one day," said Baysinger, who recently moved here from Phoenix, Ariz. Miss Crane, a recent arrival from Baton Rouge, La., wore a long white lace wedding gown with the veil fastened securely — very securely — to her hair.

The Rev. Roger Walker sat sideways in the back car to perform the ceremony.

The first act by the newweds was to go for another ride, so the bride could hurt her bouquet to onlookers from the top of the loop.

Jubilee meeting

Queen caps silver jubilee

LONDON (UPI) — Queen Elizabeth waved goodnight Thursday to thousands of cheering subjects gathered beneath her Buckingham Palace balcony, capping a day of Silver Jubilee celebrations on the River Thames that ended in a blaze of red, white and blue fireworks.

The thousands, celebrating the Queen's 25 years on the throne walked to the palace from the 20th-century balcony of the Shell building on the South Bank of the Thames.

Thousands of spectators lined the riverbanks, cheering and clapping as the brilliant fireworks whizzed overhead.

A 150-raft river procession of sleek military ships, commercial cruise boats, barges and historical craft proceeded the fireworks, saluting the Queen as they passed with a dip of a leading crane or the toot of a ship's horn.

The fireworks display climaxed a busy day on the Thames for the Queen, who delighted hundreds of Londoners as she stepped to chat riverside stops.

Police estimated that 1 million persons stood along the river route — umbrellas unfurled against the rain — as the smiling Queen and her husband cruised from Greenwich to Lambeth in a river patrol boat.

Her river "progress" echoed the stately progressions made 400 years ago by her ancestor, the first Queen Elizabeth, and other English monarchs in the days when the Thames was the capital's main thoroughfare.

Royal watermen in crimson livery rode with the queen and a flotilla of small boats bobbed along as escort.

She and Philip stopped first at Deptford Steps where Sir Francis Drake knelt in 1580 to be knighted by Elizabeth I as the first Englishman to circumnavigate the world.

Then, stopping frequently to visit local housing estates and chat with her subjects, Elizabeth II continued on to Cherry Garden Pier in Southwark and onto Tower Hamlets at London's edge.

The royal party lunched aboard the royal yacht Britannia to a salute from the 900-year-old Tower of London.

They continued in the patrol boat after lunch to Lambeth, where the queen reviewed the London Fire Brigade and then walked to Lambeth Palace to have tea with the archbishop, primate of the Anglican faith, who is pledged to defend.

The three-mile-long river pageant of ships — military, civil, commercial and historic — took the queen's place on the river as she returned to Buckingham Palace to prepare for the evening festivities.

Elizabeth makes her next jubilee appearance Saturday when she rides in the Trooping of the Color ceremony to mark her official birthday.

Dutch hostages signal SOS

ASSEN, The Netherlands (UPI) — The 51 hostages held by Moluccan gunmen on a hijacked train have made a dramatic Morse code plea for help and the government says their 19-day ordeal cannot be allowed to continue much longer.

But militant Moluccan leaders, seeking independence for their Indonesian-ruled island homeland, warned

Thursday they will stage new terrorist actions if authorities use troops against their colleagues.

A military attack on the train, however, seemed more likely than ever in view of the deteriorating psychological and physical condition of the hostages and the apparent failure of negotiations to end their ordeal.

After a second attempt

Thursday to coax the gunmen out through Moluccan intermediaries, a Justice Ministry spokesman said the situation remained one of "undiminished seriousness."

A clandestine message, flashed in Morse code Thursday with a mirror from a gap in one of the train's shaded windows, appealed to authorities to "get us out of here."

But authorities also had to weigh the plight of four teachers held by a second band of Moluccan gunmen in the nearby Boyensmilde Elementary School before deciding on any action to free the train hostages.

In The Hague, government officials indicated force would be used if the sieges continued much longer.

"The government has made it clear it considers the hostages will be mentally and physically damaged by an indefinite prolongation of the sieges," one official said. "We cannot tolerate this situation much longer."

A group of militant Moluccans describing themselves as members of the "Free South Moluccan Youth of Assen" and the "Moluccan Liberation Front" issued a statement early today urging the government to continue seeking a negotiated solution.

Amin surfaces

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — A Briton arrested on espionage charges will be executed by firing squad by the end of next week if found guilty and his body will not be handed back to relatives, Radio Uganda said today.

The broadcast came a day after President Idi Amin surfaced in Uganda after a three-day game of international cat-and-mouse.

The Briton was identified as a Mr. Cullen, a longtime resident of Uganda who had been fired as manager of the Uganda Transport Company and another private motor company "because of his negative attitude toward Africans."

"Because of the seriousness of the charges against him, he will be tried by the revolutionary members of the military tribunal and if found guilty will be executed by firing squad by the end of next week," the radio said.

"There will be no question of handing over his body to anyone as with the mercenaries in Angola," the radio said. "Likewise no time announcement will be made about the time or place of execution which will not be made known to anyone."

Cullen was one of 300 Britons still trapped in Uganda today as virtual hostages of the government.

Costly blowout

PARIS (UPI) — Texas oil well "troublemaker" Paul "Red" Adair, got $6.6 million for stopping the blowout of the Ekotik oil rig in the North Sea in March, the French Elf Aquitaine oil company said Thursday.

The figure was disclosed at a meeting of Elf-Aquitaine management and financial analysts who estimated the cost of the blowout on the "Bravo" platform of the Ekotik field at $12.6 million — $6.6 million to Adair and $6 million for cleaning up the resulting pollution.

In addition, the experts estimated that the companies had lost $13 million in production since the blowout. Production is scheduled to resume July 2.

Octuplets dead

ATHENS, Greece (UPI) — The last two octuplets born to a Greek woman who took fertility drugs died today, 34 hours after their birth, a hospital spokesman said.

One died at 6:30 a.m. and the other half an hour later, the spokesman for Hygeia hospital in suburban Athens said. "They both were in critical condition and we had not expected them to last through the night."

Doctors had mounted a desperate attempt to save the two infants who were suffering respiratory difficulties and were being cared for in incubators.

The mother, Cleo Zerbin, 35, had quadruplets two years ago, all of whom died shortly after birth.

"We wanted a child very much, and that was why my wife continued with the hormones, but we will never try this way of having children again," her husband Nicholas, 35, said. "I only wish all eight were alive."

Mrs. Zerbin's from the Aegean island of Mytilene, had been taking the drugs for several years.

Mrs. Zerbin gave birth to five girls and three boys in a 10-minute delivery Wednesday night. Six of the children — two months premature — weighed 1 pound, 5 ounces and two weighed 1 pound, 12 ounces.

Two girls died immediately after birth. Two more girls and one boy died a few hours later. Another boy died late Thursday, all from respiratory complications.

"Mrs. Zerbin is in good condition, but we will tell her later that the last two babies have died — for psychological reasons," the spokesman said.

Panayiotis Malakes, who delivered the octuplets, the second recorded case in medical history, said "We were never very hopeful that any could survive."

In a paper on the medical history of multiple births, Theodore Edipides, professor of hygiene at Salonica University, said only one previous case of octuplets was known — in Mexico in 1967.

Hospital sources said the octuplets would probably be embalmed and kept in a medical museum in Athens.

Police suspect Armenian killer

ROME (UPI) — Police say the gunman who shot and killed the Turkish ambassador to the Vatican may have been an Armenian seeking revenge for Turkey's slaughter of more than 1 million Armenians during World War I.

A young man in a dark suit followed Ambassador Taha Carim from his chauffeur-driven car into the courtyard of his home in the exclusive Parioli district. Thursday and fired two shots, hitting him in the face and chest.

The 63-year-old envoy slumped bleeding to the ground and died six hours later after brain surgery.

Telephone callers told international news agencies in Beirut that the shooting was the work of the "Armenian Genocide Organization" bent on avenging Turkey's slaying of up to 1.5 million Armenians in 1915.

Carim was the fourth Turkish diplomat assassinated within two years. The Turkish ambassadors to Vienna and Paris were shot dead in October, 1975, and the first secretary of the Turkish embassy in Beirut was killed in February, 1976.

Police said they were looking among Armenian residents of Rome for Carim's slayer and had obtained information from the Turkish embassy about Turkish citizens of Armenian descent living in Italy.

Investigators said a clandestine Armenian group in Turkey last March threatened an attack on a prominent Turk in Italy if political prisoners in Turkey were not released.

At that time graffiti also appeared on Rome's walls saying the Turkish government was responsible for the oppression of the Armenian people.

Armenia is a region in eastern Turkey and the southernmost portion of the Soviet Union. During World War I Turkey carried out the Armenian massacres as part of its attempt to deport the Armenians because of fears they were allied with the Soviets.

Carim had carried a gun ever since the March threats, but had no time to pull it before his assailant shot him. Carim's police bodyguards were withdrawn only a short while ago.

Diplomats from several countries and Archbishop Giovanni Benelli, the Vatican's No. 3 man who is about to leave his post to become archbishop of Florence, called at Carim's bedside before he died.

Kissinger warns US

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger has warned that the United States needs to curb Communist participation in Western European governments as "inevitable" it will only be helping wreck the western alliance.

"We must not delude ourselves about what the accession of communist leaders to executive power will mean to the most basic premises of American foreign policy," Kissinger said Thursday night in his first public policy speech in Washington since he left office last January.

He said communist participation in any Western European government "would be disastrous" to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Kissinger said the United States must not weaken the resolve of foes of communism in allied nations "by treating a communist victory as inevitable."

"We should not ignore them, or demoralize them — or undercut them," he said.

He told a conference on Italy and Eurocommunism that Communist electoral victories in Italy, France, Spain and Portugal can be avoided.

Orders Vesco out

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (UPI) — Costa Rica has ordered fugitive American financier Robert Vesco to leave the country so that his presence does not "dirty Costa Rica's name."

President Daniel Oduber made the announcement on nationwide television Thursday night, shortly after the State Department in Washington said Vesco should be extradited to the United States.

Some time ago, I told Mr. Vesco that he had to leave Costa Rica — and he'll go," Oduber told the nation.

"I told him so, not because I believe he's done great harm to the country," I told him so because I don't want him used as an excuse permanently to dirty Costa Rica's name abroad."

Oduber's remarks came hours after the State Department said the Central American nation should return Vesco for prosecution before he becomes eligible for Costa Rican citizenship next month.

Vesco moved to Costa Rica in 1972, the same year he was indicted on charges of making an illegal $200,000 contribution to Richard Nixon's presidential campaign.

The indictment charged the 41-year-old financier made the contribution as part of an attempt to cut off a federal investigation into charges he embezzled funds from his Swiss-based, Investors Overseas Services mutual fund company.

Thousands attend meeting in Boston

BOSTON — Several thousand members, representing Christian Science congregations in the United States, Canada, and overseas, attended the 52nd annual meeting of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, here June 6.

Church officers reported on the denomination's healing ministry, its reading room and publishing activities, and the work of its branch congregations.

Boston is the home of the denomination's international headquarters. The church was founded here in 1879 by American religious leader Mary Baker Eddy.

David E. Sleeper and others who spoke acknowledged a continuing need for steady church attendance by those of all ages. But, as with primitive Christianity, said Sleeper, mere surface conditions do not discourage "committed followers of the Master."

LDS Church sued by excommunicated member

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI)—Excommunicated Mormon Douglas Wallace has filed another $200,000 suit against the First Presidency of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, charging that it conspired to deprive him of his religious rights. Filed Wednesday in U.S. District Court, the suit asks $200,000 from the Corporation of the Presidency of the LDS Church. It alleges that a temporary restraining order granted the church March 28 to keep the Vancouver, Wash., man off Temple Square during Mormon conference was issued illegally.

Wallace charged that the order was "wrongfully issued with the sole purpose of defendants to limit and prevent Wallace from the exercise of his religion and religious beliefs, and from the exercise of his First Amendment rights of free speech and assembly."

As a direct result of the restraining order, Wallace charged, he was prevented from practicing his religious beliefs and "fulfilling his missionary beliefs."

A district court judge dismissed a $200,000 Wallace suit in March but a $2 million action against the church is still unresolved. In that suit, Wallace charged that the church conspired to prevent him from helping to free members of the Mormon Church from "mind bondage and control" by President Spencer W. Kimball and other church leaders.

Wallace was excommunicated for attempting to ordain a black man into the Mormon priesthood, an act forbidden by church doctrine.

While Wallace was in Salt Lake City for April Mormon conference, he was under surveillance by city police officers, one of whom was accidentally shot by his partner and paralyzed for life while watching Wallace's apartment.

EMANON, a youth

Abby

By Abigail Van Buren
©1977 by The Chicago Tribune. All Rights Reserved.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been having a little domestic trouble, so I finally got him to go to a marriage counselor with me. We were advised to take an interest in each other's hobbies. Well, I'm trying, but it makes me sick to go down to the city dump and shoot rats. My husband gets into training for deer hunting this way, and that's how he spends every spare minute. Abby, do I have to go along and join him in this sickening sport? Haven't got the heart for it.

GREG'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: You not only haven't the heart; you haven't the stomach for it. Pack Greg a lunch, kiss him goodbye and wish him happy hunting!

Let him shoot solo

DEAR ABBY: I am a teenager. Both my parents are deaf, but they are very intelligent. They can't hear, but they can speak fairly well and manage to communicate very well with friends and neighbors.

The problem is when we go to the store or travel somewhere, and people ask stupid questions, such as, "Can they read and write?" "Can they look after themselves, or must they always have someone with them?" Then they end up by saying, "Take good care of your parents. They need your help."

Abby, I want all these people to know that my parents are not idiots. They are just like everybody else, except they can't hear. In fact, their other senses are better developed because they're deaf.

My parents tell me not to let such questions bother me, but they do. Please print this so people will realize how dumb and mean such questions are.

BUGGED

DEAR BUGGED: Most people don't mean to be unkind; they are simply uninformed and curious. But here's your letter, and I hope it helps.

DEAR ABBY: My brother spansks his 3-year-old son and will not allow the little guy to cry. If he cries, he gets spanked again and again. I have seen this go on for hours. (He says this will make a "man" out of him.) He also spansks the child much too hard.

My brother won't listen to anyone. And my sister-in-law doesn't do anything about it. Or maybe she can't.

What can I do? If I report my relatives to the authorities, and the child is taken from his parents' home, I'm afraid it might do him more harm than those spankings will. What can be done? This situation is worrying me to death.

SICK AT HEART

DEAR SICK: To be aware of such cruelty and do nothing is usually wrong. Your brother sounds as though he is desperately in need of treatment. And his wife couldn't be too well either to allow such goings on.

Phone PARENTS ANONYMOUS at this toll-free number: 1-800-421-0363, and tell them what you've told me. Your call will be confidential, and you need not tell them your name. And write again and let me know how it was handled. I care.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box 99700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

your health

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb: I have a friend who won't eat red meats. She says that eating too much meat will cause cancer and that it causes heart disease too. I do know people who limit the amount of meat they eat because they are afraid of a heart attack.

Also, if meat contains so much fat, how come people on some weight losing diets eat lots of meat? I thought losing weight was good for you, that it would help you from having a heart attack.

Dear Reader: Some of what you say is true and some is not. In the first place, meat does not cause cancer just because it is meat. There have been some suggestions that high protein diets may increase the chances of having cancer, but the facts certainly don't permit such a sweeping conclusion. A study of the Mormons in Utah showed that they had less cancer of the digestive system than other Americans and they eat the same amount of red meat.

There has been some question about the preservatives used in some cured meats, particularly the nitrates used to prevent the growth of botulism, but the minimal amount used seems to be quite safe.

People think of meat as fat because of our tendency to eat marbled beef. The truth is that lean beef with all the visible fat removed contains less than 35 per cent of its calories as fat. That qualifies it to be used in reasonable amounts in low-fat diets. Round steak with all the visible fat removed is a good choice here.

Of course how the meat is prepared does make a difference. If you cover it with a flour panicle and fry it in fat the crust is likely to contain more fat than the meat. You can broil lean meats or cut away all the fat for a roast and have a fairly fat-free item. Often the fat in steaks with all the visible fat removed is less than the fat found in devil's food chocolate cake, and many bakery items that people don't realize are really sources of fat in the diet.

To give you a better picture of the good and bad points about red meats I am sending you The Health Letter number 8-12, Red Meats: Good and Bad. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long-stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. I will give you more values for different types of meat and how to prepare them.

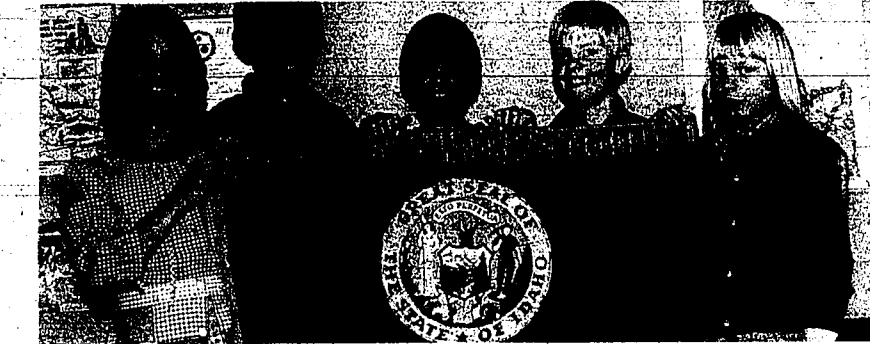

The Health Letter I am sending you tells you, lean meat — muscle part only — is really a low calorie food. It is over 70 per cent water. A whole pound of the separable lean of round steak only contains a little more than 600 calories. That is the reason lean meats can be used on reducing diets. If you could stand it you could eat two whole pounds of lean round steak a day and consume only 1200 calories.

I think people often forget that a large part of the meat and other food they eat is water. It is not all just fat, protein and carbohydrates. Even butter is about 20 per cent water. Fat does contain very little water which is another reason why it contains so many calories.

Yes, keeping your weight down is usually helpful in preventing heart disease. For a meat dish I recommend alternating red meats, fish and poultry and using the lean products of all three.

Make flag

Prospector Clubs win state honors

MAGIC VALLEY — Four classes of fourth graders in the Magic Valley were recently named among the 11 best "Prospector Clubs" in the state by the Idaho Historical Society.

Twin Falls was the only place in the state with two winners.

Every year fourth graders in the state's public schools study Idaho history, and each classroom forms a Prospector Club and adopts a name. There are 242 chapters in Idaho.

The Idaho Historical Society gives awards to the 10 best based on the activities of the club during the school year. This year two clubs tied bringing the number to 11.

In Richfield, Patricia Aiken's fourth graders garnered the award. The club called itself the Richfield Buckaroos and began their year with the study of Indians. The students spent many hours and much effort on making beadwork with Indian design.

The Wendell chapter of the Prospector Club, the second Magic Valley winner, earned prospector badges by making contour maps of Idaho, bringing objects from home to show and tell about Idaho, and taking part in a program for parents, among other activities. President of the club was Richard Schraft, vice-president, Jill Chandler; secretary, Diane Watts; and historian, Malcolm Bennett.

"The classes are always very interested when it comes to Idaho history, but I think this was an outstanding one," Wendell teacher Carolyn Mason said about her class. As a culmination of the year's study, the class went to Boise as most classes do, she said.

The two Twin Falls winners were Lynn Poppewell's class at Morningside Elementary School and Mary Ferrell's at Lincoln Elementary School.

The Morningside fourth graders made puppets depicting 25 people from Idaho's past and put on a play with them. The students started with wire skeletons, laid papier mache over them, molded the faces and made costumes for the puppets according to the era in Idaho history the characters came from.

The second Twin Falls fourth grade Prospector club to be named one of the best in Idaho called themselves the Gold Dust Kids. President of the Lincoln Elementary School class was Marlene Olsen; vice-president, Joe Hernandez; secretary, Sherri Carlson; treasurer, John Gibbs; and editor, Clark Berg.

Mrs. Ferrell said the class made a state flag as one of its projects.

2nd graders create gourmet specials

EDEN — "Chocklate Cake," spogety and sandwiches with bone, manes and mestrd were among the recipes recently written by a second grade class at Eden Elementary School. Barbara Upton, a first year teacher at the school, gave her class a recipe writing assignment.

The gourmet creations produced were entirely of the children's own making. Upton says they had exposure to recipes from a previous assignment. Each child brought a recipe and printed it for a Mother's Day recipe booklet.

For this assignment, Upton asked the students to write recipes of their own "to see what they would come up with, what kind of measurements they would have."

Desserts were the overwhelming favorites with the kids. The unedited recipes follow:

Cancer Society plans free clinic

TWIN FALLS — The American Cancer Society will offer a free public clinic Saturday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital for instruction in self breast examinations.

Nurses who will conduct the clinic attended Cancer Society training programs at the hospital Wednesday and Thursday conducted by Pam Lewis, R.N., Boise.

In addition to the Saturday clinic, open to all interested women, there will be monthly breast screening clinics held at the South Central Health District. The first will be July 8.

"Our goal is to educate every woman in Magic Valley in the importance of performing breast self examinations each month and to train them how to make the examinations," Mrs. Lewis said.

Doctors will be available at the Saturday screening clinic and to advise the woman if she should see her physician.

There will be a follow up in three months to determine if the women who attended the clinic are continuing to practice the examinations.

Ronnie Fraeich, R.N., Twin Falls, said there will also be educational films showing procedure of the exams and nurses and doctors to answer any questions.

Women will be able to go into a private room for examinations and individual teaching of the examination.

"Nearly all lumps in the breast are non-cancerous but they should be checked by a doctor as soon as discovered. If we can catch cancer early the woman's chances of survival are excellent," Mrs. Fraeich said.

She urged all women to take a few minutes to attend the free clinic and to make an appointment by calling 734-6290.

Training sessions

NURSES who will conduct a free breast screening clinic for all interested women in Magic Valley Saturday, received training in sessions Wednesday and Thursday at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital.

From left are Pam Lewis, R.N., Boise, who conducted the training, and Connie Eslinger and Ronnie Fraeich, Twin Falls nurses.

By Oswald & James Jacoby

It is a cinch to make four spades. It is almost as easy to lose the contract.

West leads the queen of hearts and the contract hinges on the very first play from dummy.

If you cover the queen with the king, East will win with the ace and lead a heart back. You will have to ruff and go after trumps. East will win the first trump with his king and lead another heart. You will have to ruff again.

West will win the next trump lead and lay down his jack of hearts. You will have to ruff for the third time and will be left with just one trump against West's two. West will score another trump trick and you will be left to complain about 4-1 trump breaks.

If you just let West's queen of hearts hold the first trick, the birds will sing for you. If West continues hearts dummy's 10 will knockout East's ace. You will ruff and go about your business without the need to ruff three times. If West shifts you will have even less trouble.

Mitchell to experience 'Maxwell Country Club'

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) — Charles Colson found the food "surprisingly good." Now John Mitchell will learn what life is like at the prison known as the "Maxwell Country Club."

It was announced Wednesday that the former attorney general will serve his Watergate sentence at the federal prison camp at Maxwell Air Force Base, known as one of the more pleasant prisons in the country.

"They refer to this as Maxwell Country Club," Tom Stidham, the chief correctional supervisor at the prison, said Wednesday. He quickly added that he didn't approve of the name.

"They have to work," he said. "They can't just run off to town on the weekends."

Actually, they can run off if they want to, although few do. There are no walls at the minimum security prison and it does look something like a country club. It is almost surrounded by golf courses, and just over a fence horses romp in the field.

The horses and the golf courses are for officers at the Air Force base. Inmates have to content themselves with a miniature golf course, as well as a softball field, a weightlifting area and shuffleboard, basketball and volleyball courts.

In the evenings and on weekends, inmates can walk down to the Alabama River, which runs by the camp, and catch bass, bream, catfish and carp. The prison kitchen loans out knives to clean the fish and there is a grill to cook them on.

For all that, it is a prison. Mitchell will live in one of seven dormitories, each with more than 40 inmates in one room. Some in double bunks. There are partitions, but inmates still have little privacy. A separate room in each dormitory has a television set.

FBI dig goes on

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Attorney General Griffin Bell said Thursday he is considering "further proceedings" before a New York grand jury which heard evidence on past illegal investigations by FBI agents.

Bell made the disclosure in a statement issued to a House Government Operations subcommittee during a hearing on the Justice Department's policies on illegal FBI and CIA investigative techniques.

Chairman Richardson Preyer, D-N.C., said the hearing was triggered in part by the New York grand jury's indictment of John Kearney, a retired FBI supervisor, on charges he used illegal wiretaps and mail openings to track down members of the terrorist Weatherman organization.

Bell told the subcommittee he does not condone illegal investigative tactics and does not know of any being used now — although he cannot be sure because the FBI is so large. He said he is setting up internal controls so he can give such assurances in the future.

Evans disciplines secretary for speeding

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. John V. Evans said today he has disciplined his press secretary for speeding in his official limousine by admonishing him not to do so again when on state business.

"I've already taken it," he said, when asked what discipline he planned for Steve Leroy, under terms of a memorandum issued to state employees March 31, "read him out — told him not to speed any more."

Evans said that considering the circumstances he felt this was punishment enough for Leroy who was stopped by state police for driving 61 miles per hour in a 35 m.p.h. construction zone recently.

Leroy got off with an oral warning from Col. Richard Wills May 24 when stopped for speeding in the governor's car.

near Hammett, Craig L. Jensen, a Twin Falls motorist stopped by the same officer the same day and in the same area for going 60 m.p.h. got a ticket.

Asked if he felt it was fair for the officer to let Leroy off with a warning and to ticket the other motorist Jensen said the judgment call was that of the patrolman.

Two months ago Evans issued a three-page energy conservation memorandum in which he urged state employees to observe the 55 m.p.h. maximum speed limit. In it he said:

"All state employees are reminded of the importance of observing the 55 mile an hour speed limit and disciplinary actions will be taken against employees on state business convicted of speeding violations."

When first asked about the matter Leroy denied that Evans' office had issued any such warning. Evans, when pressed, also could not at first recall having issued such a statement. So United Press International produced a photocopy of it.

Then he was asked if it applied to his own staff. He said it did.

"I think this is appropriate disciplinary action (a bawling out), considering the facts involved," he said. "With no excuses the proper disciplinary action might be more severe."

"He can't be excused entirely for missing that sign," he added. "Unfortunately, I was taking a nap at the time."

Terrorists endanger oil, gas pipelines

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The trans-Alaska and other oil and gas pipelines are in danger from terrorist attacks and sabotage and a "major effort" by the federal government is needed to safeguard them.

That's the conclusion reached by a Senate subcommittee on internal security based on yearlong hearings at which many experts testified that the trans-Alaska pipeline could be easily shut down by a handful of saboteurs.

In a report released Wednesday, the subcommittee recommended that Congress create an Office of Energy Security which would coordinate federal activities to maintain the integrity of not only the trans-Alaska pipeline, but all other gas and oil resources.

"It should be apparent that if the Alaska pipeline system and other pipeline systems in the United States, with all their implications for the well-being and security of our country are to be adequately protected against sabotage and terrorism by hostile elements in our society," the report said, "there will have to be a major federal effort...."

Seasoned Citizens recall that Frank Sinatra was an exceedingly thin young man, and not too tall, either. So they may be surprised to read the published report that he weighed 133 pounds at birth. Hard to believe. Just don't know if that's true or one of those numerous wild tales that leaped with alacrity 35 years ago from the fertile minds of the publicity boys. Will check further.

The word "platinum" was named by Spaniards who discovered it in the 18th Century along Colombia's Rio Pinto, so called it "platina del pinto." Platina translates "little silver."

If the winter loss on that lake isn't at least eight inches thick, it won't support an ordinary car, sir.

Old method works

USING AN old-fashioned implement powered by three Belgians work horses, James Culver, 46, works in a corn field northwest of Joliet, Ill. His manner of crop work is much like that used by his great-great-grandfather, Daniel Culver, who established the farm in 1854. Culver says his corn will be waist high by July 4. (UPI)

Weevils tackle Utah thistles

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — With the help of Italian weevils, Utah State University scientists are waging a biological war on noxious thistle weeds that grow in prickly stands so thick "a rattlesnake can't wriggle through."

Agonomist Louis Jensen and entomologist Jay Karren are releasing 8,000 tiny weevils this week in musk and thistle stands across Utah.

Jensen searched canals and wetlands in Salt Lake County Wednesday for the weeds and was scheduled to move on to Utah and Sevier counties later.

"Using biological controls is cheaper and easier than spraying," explained Wayne Rose, Salt Lake area coordinator for the USU Extension Service. "The weevils are also less dangerous to the environment than chemicals."

The weevils, Rhinocyllus conicus imported from Italy, have been used in Montana for thistle control since 1929, according to Jensen. The weevil larvae have a voracious appetite for thistle seeds, preventing the plant from reproducing.

"Authorities who have studied this weevil assure us that it does not feed on any other plants in the United States, so there is no danger of it becoming a pest," said Jensen.

"The larvae feed on the immature seeds, especially from the taller flowers," he added. "They are effective in achieving about 800 per cent control on the thistles."

The thistle is a relatively new plant in Utah. It first appeared in the state about five years ago and was becoming a problem in about three fourths of Utah's 29 counties.

"It's a weed that grows about 12 feet high. It grows so thick, rattlesnakes couldn't wriggle through," said Rose.

"You can get an idea of how fast the musk thistle spread when you realize that one plant may contain 15,000 seeds," added Jensen. "And each seed has an attached light feathery growth that can carry it many miles in the wind, floating like a parachute. The seeds are also moved by water and other means."

"The weevils have been used primarily to control musk thistle. But the scientists believe they may also work on Scotch thistle, which is much more common in Utah."

Jensen and Karren recently went to Bozeman, Mont., and collected about 8,000 of the tiny long-nosed beetles. They plan to release them in Cache, Summit, Morgan, Wasatch, Salt Lake, Sevier, Sanpete and Iron counties.

Biological warfare on agricultural pests is nothing new in Utah, said Rose. "A few years ago, we had an infestation of alfalfa aphids from Texas. To combat them, we released a tiny wasp. Now the aphids are uncollectable."

Renaming in works

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A possible change in the name of the reservoir behind Ririe Dam to Oscar Johnson Reservoir in honor of the Idaho pioneer whose ranch was inundated in the waters of Ririe Dam is being studied by Sen. James McClure.

McClure said the Board of Geographic Names has the authority to change such names if they aren't named through legislation. If the board determines they can't change the name through an application process, then legislation would be required, he added.

The site of the Ririe Dam and Reservoir had been the Oscar Johnson home for 65 years and Johnson at the age of 18 began buying the land that eventually totaled 5,000 acres — the majority of which the reservoir encompassed.

effectiveness of federal drought aid programs.

"Farmers and ranchers in Idaho told me that federal funding for conservation programs to mitigate the harmful effects of the drought is proving inadequate," the Idaho Democrat said.

Church said the funds will be used for a program to help farmers and ranchers undertake needed conservation programs. He said eligibility is determined by local ASCS committees, elected by farmers on an individual, farm-by-farm basis.

Disaster victims will need tax aid

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An estimate of more than 2,500 victims of the Teton Dam flood will need assistance in preparing disaster tax forms next year, Sen. Frank Church, Idaho, said today.

"There is a clear need to develop an assistance program in each community and provide trained tax personnel for each area during January, February, March and April," Church said.

—Letter to Internal Revenue Service Commissioner Jerome Kurtz.

Church said the Teton Interfaith Council of volunteers estimates the number of persons needing assistance for taxable year 1977 will be about 1,500, with 500 follow-up victims from 1976, adding the number of persons requiring assistance in 1978, "will probably exceed 2,500."

Extra drought funds sought

WASHINGTON (UPI) — One may receive some $2.5 million in drought-related funds for agricultural conservation measures, Sen. Frank Church said Wednesday.

Church said he requested the extra funds from the Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service after meetings in Idaho during the past two weeks on the effects of the drought.

Church said the funds will be used for a program to help farmers and ranchers undertake needed conservation programs. He said eligibility is determined by local ASCS committees, elected by farmers on an individual, farm-by-farm basis.

He said the extra $2.5 million will bring to nearly $7 million the amount of federal aid made available in Idaho for this type of conservation assistance.

"These extra funds are both welcome and needed in our efforts to cope with the drought," Church said. "I hope they will be targeted in those areas of the state most severely afflicted by drought conditions."

Chicken pets mark for flight

AGANA, Guam (UPI) — A chicken from the northern Mariana Islands set a world record by flying a distance of 329.15 miles.

Officer Mayor Antonio C. Antillag said Wednesday the chicken, named Antillag, is owned by Thomas M. Calvo, an Agana resident.

Antillag said the record was established Tuesday at a chicken-flying meet on Rota, another island in the northern Marianas.

The previous record was set in May of this year by a chicken that flew 293.9 feet in Rio Grande, Ohio.

HOW TO BEAT THE OIL SHORTAGE...

Oil is the protective ingredient in exterior stains. It keeps the wood from drying out and cracking — particularly in the dry climates of the Intermountain west.

Bennett's El Rancho penetrating stain has several times as much oil as Olympic — an important consideration if you want protection and beauty. El Rancho is available in 21 colors — natural colors such as thundercloud blue, autumn rust, bramble bush and leather.

US agency 'Noah's Ark'

JEROME—The U.S. Commerce Department has been compared to Noah's Ark only once, but one of everything," one of its few Idaho employees says.

William Glassford, Boise, the sole employee in the huge department's Domestic and International Business Administration (DIBA) in Idaho, described some of the umbrella agencies in his bureau for Jerome Chamber of Commerce members.

Other Idahoans drawing paychecks from the department include employees at weather stations, he said.

"Nobody loves me because we have no grant money," he said, "but then no one hates us because we are not a regulatory agency."

Some of the "Noah's Ark" assortment of activity under the Commerce Department, Glassford said, includes the National Weather Service, Patent office, Census Bureau, Economic Development Administration and many others. Total employment is 27,000, he said.

The DIBA which Glassford represents tries to promote international trade and "tries to take the business position to Congress."

Services his agency provides include updated census publications and market research which would help small businesses, he said. Eighteen trade centers are maintained in major world cities and periodicals list items

4 men sentenced

JEROME—Four men were sentenced by Judge Theron Ward in Jerome district court Tuesday for burglary, forgery or grand larceny.

Sentences of three of the offenders were suspended and the men placed on probation.

Joseph Severon received 15 years sentence for first degree burglary at Dino's Tavern at the intersection of Highways 93 and 25.

Dale Sellers, 19, Harrisburg, Ore., was sentenced to 14 years for taking a snowmobile machine. His grand larceny sentence was suspended and he was put on 18-months probation.

Reason not valid enough

DENVER (UPI)—A former security guard has told the Colorado Court of Appeals he had a valid reason for falling asleep on the job — the work was boring.

The court was not convinced. The man's employers, Wright & McGill Co., felt they'd rather have their guards wide awake so they fired the employee. He showed up in the unemployment line, but Wright & McGill said they didn't feel he should be paid.

Records showed the guard, whose name was not released by the court, fell asleep a number of times while working the day shift. He told the State Division of Labor and Employment he was entitled to unemployment benefits because the work had a "hypnotic effect" on him. State labor officials agreed and awarded the man benefits.

"These mental, sit-down tasks (had) such a boring and hypnotic effect on him that (they) made him become drowsy and at times catnap very short periods of sleep," said state labor referee John Black, who decided to award the guard benefits.

In overruling the labor decision, the court said it was a nice try, but agreed with the employer. It said giving a man benefits for being tired for sleeping was a "dangerous precedent."

Plant pool opens Monday

JEROME—Jerome area youngsters anxious to cool off these hot days or learn to swim need only wait until Monday — if their parents work for Upperware.

The plant's entire recreation area opens Monday also, Ken Baumgartner, personnel manager for the plant, told Chamber of Commerce members Wednesday noon.

"We're sorry, but we have too many children of our own employees to take anyone else in the pool," he said.

Eligible youngsters must have a physical exam first, he said, and can obtain one at the plant Saturday morning.

Buses will take swimmers to the plant at 12:30 and again at 2:30 p.m. from the Jerome city park.

No place to go

ALEXANDRIA, La. (UPI) — The architect of the new Rapides Parish jail says there's nothing wrong with his design, even though there have been two recent escapes from the $7 million structure.

"You just have a high class prisoner here," architect Thilo Steinschulte said Wednesday.

Two prisoners recently escaped through the ceiling by removing light fixtures.

After the escapes, officials ordered a wall built in the attic to block the escape path. Prisoners may still crawl through the light fixtures, but now all they can do is sit in the attic.

Tiny Tim located

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI) — Tiny Tim, the ukulele-plunking, falsetto-singing singer reported missing in Hawaii, was located Thursday in a bankrupt hotel in Orlando — taking a shower.

He's always in the shower — he takes at least five showers a day," said agent Peter Ward, when newsmen first asked to speak with the string-haired entertainer.

Later Tiny Tim admitted to UPI that, "I did tip toe out of Honolulu fast."

He said he had been in Hawaii to attend a wedding, and that he left without telling his hosts. He said he left some personal belongings behind.

"They (his hosts) were on their honeymoon and I had to leave quick," he said. "I couldn't take all my stuff with me, so I packed everything I needed in one shopping bag and got out. I travel with shopping bags so I can carry them with me on the plane."

Sewage line bids coming in JEROME—Bids are now being received for construction of the sewage lines for an 88 unit motel and restaurant complex at the intersection of Idaho Highway 70 and Interstate 80 south of Jerome.

Gerald Martens, of the Twin Falls engineering firm of Edwards and Howard, said the Jerome City Council's acceptance of sewage from the complex into the city sewer system was a "key factor" to development of the project.

Martens told the council that the agreement about accepting the sewage into the Jerome system was needed so the Crystal Investment Co. could have the sewer pipes installed in the same trench the telephone company will dig later this month along Highway 70.

The developers can save an estimated 40 per cent in trenching costs, Martens said.

by having the sewer pipes laid in the same trench as the telephone cable conduits. The phone company is beginning an expansion program, replacing above ground lines with underground cable and adding extra conduits to allow for growth.

Martens said construction of the sewer for the planned motel will begin in mid-July.

Council members said they did not accept responsibility for maintenance or construction of the sewer line and the developers would have to get the sewage to a street where it will connect with the city system. Martens said the present plans are to use a pressure system to pump the sewage from the motel to a street.

Efforts are now under way to form a sewer district by property owners south of Jerome. The district would encompass a half mile east and one-fourth mile west of Highway 70 from the city limits to Interstate 80.

Signatures of 10 per cent of the property owners in the area involved are needed before a date can be set for a public hearing. If the hearing is favorable an election would be called. A simply majority would create the sewer district.

Martens said he hopes the district becomes a reality. This would mean other residents and businesses in the area could also look onto the line.

Badges required

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Lobbyists may be easier to spot at the Connecticut state Capitol next year.

Under a bill approved by the legislature Wednesday and sent to Gov. Ella Grasso, the lobbyists would have to wear badges.

In addition to requiring the identification, the bill would bar lobbyists from giving any lawmaker or state official more than $25 in gifts, except food and drink, in one year. Lobbyists also would have to submit financial statements detailing their spending.

The bill was approved 143-1 by the House and 32-1 in the Senate.

More to it than meets the eye

By BOB ZUCKERMAN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—The students sit in the brightly-lit classroom, leaning forward in their chairs to pick up every word from their instructor, their hands firmly grasping pencils, ready to jot down notes.

A high-powered college class in theoretical physics? No, it's a group of custodians and managers learning about new custodial products and new methods of floor care.

The teacher, a man in a pin-striped suit from San Francisco representing Johnson Wax, is demonstrating how to apply wax to a floor with a mop.

"When pulling the mop off the floor, do so lightly, as if you're using a paint brush," he says. "That way you won't leave any bubbles" in the wax at the end of the stroke.

It was all part of the Second Annual Custodial Clinic sponsored by Gem State Paper and Supply Co. and presented at the College of Southern Idaho to more than 100 custodially-minded persons Thursday.

Instructors from nationally-known manufacturers in Denver, Chicago, Seattle, Los Angeles and San Francisco were on hand to demonstrate the latest in custodial equipment including mops, brooms, vacuums, wax, polish, sponges and soaps.

The students from Wyoming, Idaho and Montana listened eagerly as their instructors imparted such helpful hints as always use hot water when stripping off wax from floors and use lithium paper to check the acid alkali level of a mopped floor.

That's right, the Johnson Wax people told the eager students to use lithium paper to check the "ph" level of the floor. A floor must be neutralized for wax to work properly, they said.

And if the science of cleaning floors, removing carpet spots and maintaining custodial equipment might have seemed a little too simple to need teaching in a classroom, the students, who clean floors and wash windows in schools, hospitals, churches and other buildings throughout the Intermountain West, were learning something.

"Oh, yes," said Rosemarie Roach, a custodian for one school district in Pocatello. "One thing I'm even going to use at home."

For the first time, she has learned vacuum cleaner bags can be cleaned, not just emptied, she said.

"I knew a lot of this before," admitted Willie Braddock, custodian-security manager for Hewlett-Packard Corp. in Boise. But Braddock said it wasn't because the material being taught was old hat.

Braddock said he knows about the technicalities and most of the new products because a man in his position (he heads a staff of 13 custodians that are responsible for some 250,000 square feet of floor space) is always receiving calls from products distributors.

"There's a lot of potential (for sales) so people come to see me," he explained.

Contrary to popular opinion, a custodian's job has become a very technical one, he said. "We're more particular about the people we hire," Braddock said. "They've got to be self-reliant, have initiative and be dependable."

In one course entitled "Proper Floor Mopping Systems," Bob Schultz, factory representative for Greenlee Winger and Seco Mop, explained why the Seco Mop is the most durable.

He also showed the janitors an example of the hog's hair floor polishers which he said were "fabulous."

"How many of you have been in the Boise airport?" he asked. "They have beautiful floors."

"And that's the pad that maintains those floors," he said holding up a floor polishing pad made from hog's hair.

"It gives them a chance to make a sales pitch, and us a chance to learn a little technique," said Jim Avichouser, Auto Vu, Inc., official from Pocatello. Auto Vu runs several drive-in and movie theaters in Pocatello.

Avichouser said he was attending the clinic to learn enough to teach his staff.

"It's like taking a college course," he said. "There are things you know and things you don't. Some of it you'll want to learn, some pass by."

But according to Braddock, "There's a lot more to it than handling a mop."

Schools unworried on teacher turnover

By GEORGE WILEY
Times-News Writer

MAGIC VALLEY — More than 150 new teachers will be coming into Magic Valley classrooms next fall, yet administrators say that turnover is about what they expected.

Although the Gooding School District leads the list with about 20 per cent of its teachers resigning or retiring this year, in the main it is the larger school districts which are experiencing the highest percentages of turnover. Most of the smaller districts remain relatively stable.

A survey of 10 school districts in the Valley shows: — Twin Falls is losing at least 40 of its current teachers, about 15.6 per cent of its total faculty of 313, which ranks it fourth among districts in percentage lost.

Acting superintendent Carl Snow says morale problems stemming from last fall's teachers' strike have little to do with the turnover rate as far as he can determine. He notes that last year, before the strike turmoil, the district lost 51 of its teachers in natural turnover.

— Gooding is losing about 11 of its current staff of 55 teachers for a 20 per cent turnover rate, the highest of any district surveyed. Superintendent Eugene Gibbons says turnover at the elementary school "has been high the last couple of years." Three of his grade school teachers became pregnant this year, he notes, a common reason for resignation.

— The Blaine County School District, which boasts the second highest turnover of the districts surveyed, is losing about 19.8 per cent of its faculty, or about 22 of a staff of 111. Superintendent Wayne Fagg, who is himself resigning to take over as Minidoka superintendent next year, says the turnover is slightly higher than normal but adds, "I don't think it's anything unusual yet."

— Jerome, which ranks third on the list with a percentage of about 16.9 per cent of its teachers departing, will lose 20 or 21 of its 118 faculty members. Superintendent Percy Christiansen says he doesn't know how that compares with prior years. "It's hard to predict what's going to happen. I don't look at this to be an excessive amount here."

— Kimberly's school district is fifth on the list with a 10.8 per cent turnover rate. It is losing five of its 46-member teaching staff. Superintendent Vernon Exner says the rate was lower last year. Two of the five teachers leaving are pregnant, he said, and one retired.

— In the Cassia School District superintendent Harold Blauer estimates he will lose 10 per cent of his teaching staff of 200. That's about average, he said. "We range all the way from 20 to 40 depending on the year."

— Piler is expecting to lose five members of its staff, about 9.2 per cent of the 54 teachers employed by the district. "We didn't think we were going to have any turnover, but just in the last couple of weeks we've had five..." said superintendent Ray Baker. "We have three to four per year, so that's just about normal."

— Eighth on the list is the Wendell School District with a turnover of about 8.5 per cent. The district is losing four elementary teachers but none at the secondary level. It employs 47 teachers. "This is low. We hired about eight last year," said Superintendent Lawrence LaRue. He noted that two of the hirings last year were for new staff positions, however. "In a small school like this we have some people who have been here up to 30 years, so we do pretty well," he added.

— Next to last on the list is the Buhl School District, which expects a turnover of only about 5.6 per cent, or four-and-a-half of its 79 salaried teachers. Superintendent Dan Mabe says he is surprised by the small number of teachers leaving this year. "We'd normally expect about 16 to 22 per cent," he said. "We used to expect that. The turnover percentage has really come down the last few years."

— Last on the list is the Minidoka School District, where Assistant Superintendent Doyle Lowder says he expects turnover to be "very small." He estimated 12 of the district's 230 teachers might leave, a rate of 5.2 per cent. "We haven't had much turnover," Lowder said. "Our percentage never gets very high."

But even if their districts rank high in percentages of teachers leaving, school superintendents are not too concerned. Except for specialized posts, they know a ready supply of new recruits awaits them, either from the ranks of out-of-work teachers in other areas or from the flood of new graduates applying for jobs.

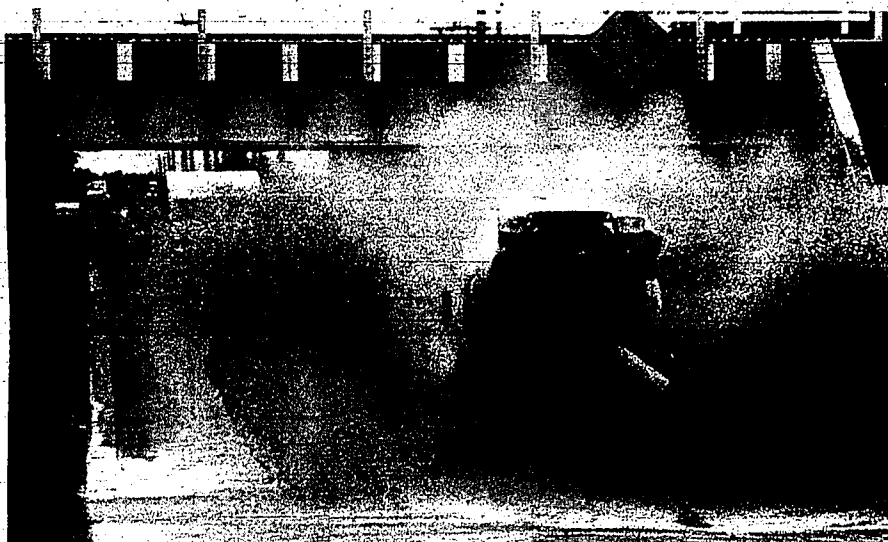

"We have more applications than we've ever had before," said Twin Falls superintendent Snow.

He added that more than 400 applications had been filed by last week for spots in Twin Falls this year.

Other superintendents agree that they can enjoy the luxury of a buyer's market. All agree also, however, that they like to hold onto good teachers, even though the district must pay out more in salaries for experienced personnel.

"Sure, we want to keep good, experienced, qualified teachers," said Buhl's superintendent Mabe. "That's the name of the game." The superintendents say they do not encourage good teachers to leave, even though they can save thousands of dollars in salaries by hiring young beginners as replacements.

"I never hire for that reason," said Snow. "I try to get the best person I can get."

A BRIEF but watery cloudburst Thursday afternoon flooded Twin Falls streets and sent people scurrying for shelter. Above, a cement truck splashes water from the flooded underpass on South Eastland Drive as high as the railway 15 feet above the road.

Floating farm pollution queried

By JEFF SHER
Times-News writer

HAGERMAN — Magic Valley trout producers doubt floating trout farms in the Snake River can operate without introducing significant amounts of waste material into the river.

Valley Trout Farms earlier this spring announced plans to construct 13 floating trout farms in the Snake River between Twin Falls and below Hagerman.

If constructed, the floating trout farms would double the trout production in southern Idaho. The region already is the world's largest producer of trout.

The Environmental Protection Agency so far has not issued any definite statement on their opinion on how critical the pollution from the floating farms would be.

Harold Geren, chief of the EPA's northwest water compliance and permits branch, Seattle, said, "We're kind of in a quandary as to how that (the floating farms) should be handled."

Geren said the problem arises because all other hatcheries in Magic Valley accumulate solids at a particular point before the solids are discharged into the river. With a floating hatchery, however, there is no accumulation of waste which is then discharged into a stream. Therefore, there is no way to monitor amounts of discharge.

Some food and fish excretions will undoubtedly escape from the cages into the Snake River.

Because the EPA has established regulations limiting the amount of waste material stationary hatcheries may dump into the river, many Magic Valley trout producers feel the EPA should do the same with the floating trout farms.

Percy Greene, owner of the Blue Lakes Trout Farm, Twin Falls, said, "I was hoping the EPA would pass that and let those guys (Valley Trout Farms) throw that feed directly into the river. How can they retrieve it? If the EPA lets them do that, they (EPA) might as well button up their drawers and go home."

Earl Hardy, owner of the Clear Lakes Trout Co., Rainbow Trout Farms, Rim View Trout Co., and the Idaho Trout Processors Co., all Buhl, commented, "I think it would be inequitable for them (EPA) to impose the restrictions on us and not on them (floating hatcheries)."

Hardy said that his operation will have to devote valuable production space, about the last 20 feet of each raceway, to the collection of waste in order to meet the EPA standards. Hardy adds the capital cost of installation of screens in his ponds and of pumping equipment and pipes along with the cost of one man's continuous labor to the costs he will incur in meeting the EPA regulations.

The EPA is seeking information from Valley Trout Farms on the number of fish they would be holding and the feeding rates and how they could operate to take care of the excess food and fish waste before making a decision on what standards to apply to the floating facilities.

County employees to study revised retirement plan

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A revised and upgraded retirement plan for Twin Falls County employees which would cost taxpayers about $10,000 more per year is being offered as an alternate to the state retirement program. William L. Chaney, county commissioner and chairman of a county retirement committee, says several major changes have been made in the existing county retirement coverage to make it more beneficial to all workers and more competitive with the state retirement plan.

A 15-page booklet detailing the revised county plan will be presented to county employees. County workers must vote before 1978 on whether to retain the upgraded county plan or join the state retirement program.

Twin Falls County is one of three counties in Idaho not part of the Idaho State Retirement Plan.

In 1976, the Idaho legislature ordered counties not in the state retirement plan to hold an election to see if county workers would like to be part of the state plan.

Until the Twin Falls County plan was upgraded, supporters of the state retirement plan said the state plan offered significantly better benefits to workers than the county plan.

A major difference between the state and county plans is that all county workers would be members of the state retirement plan if the workers vote to join the state plan.

If the county plan remains in force, county workers would have the option not to join it. Chaney said he and several other members of the retirement committee plan to go to Boise soon to meet with State Retirement Program representatives to discuss what the state plan would cost county taxpayers and county workers.

"We have some rough estimates, and they are only estimates, indicating the state plan could cost us $65,000 to $75,000 a year," the chairman said.

As of the present time, with the same number of employees and their current pay scale, the upgraded plan would cost the county $52,500 per year, compared to $42,884 annually for the original county coverage. As the employee, the county pays a 5.5 per cent of each salary each month as its share of the plan.

In addition, each county worker would be paying two per cent of the first $50 of his or her salary and three and a half per cent of all income over $500 per month. This is the same rate at which workers are now paying and would increase only if the individual salary increased.

Chaney said some of the improvements in plan now offered by the county include being fully vested in the program after five years service with the county rather than 10 years as in the past.

The employee and retiree who reaches age 60 and has completed 30 years or more service will suffer no reduction in retirement pay because of the early retirement.

Employees may retire anytime after age 55 and after 15 years service but those below 60 and without 30 or more years credited service will have payments reduced accordingly.

Under the revised program, a worker who becomes disabled after 10 years service and is eligible for disability income under Social Security regulations, may also qualify for county pension. The payment would be based on final average earnings when the individual became disabled and the total credited service.

Another improvement provides the worker may leave the county after five years of credited service, may continue to be covered under the plan or may withdraw his contributions and receive no pension benefits.

Seattle Slew owner doesn't foresee loss

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mickey Taylor and Dr. Jim Hill, who have brought Seattle Slew to the brink of becoming the first undefeated Triple Crown champion by wisely recognizing the young colt's limitations, have discounted completely the possibility of his losing the Belmont Stakes.

When a surprisingly large field of 10 was entered Thursday morning for Saturday's 101st running of the Belmont, Taylor was asked if he thought it indicated a continuing skepticism of Seattle Slew's talents.

"No," said Taylor, who shares ownership of Seattle Slew with his veterinarian friend, Hill. "It just means a lot of people are running for second or third money."

Before the Triple Crown campaign began, Mickey and his wife, Karen, said they realized if Seattle Slew kept racing, eventually he would have to lose. With this realistic attitude, the young couple would have been disappointed, but somewhat psychologically prepared, if Seattle Slew had been upset in the Kentucky Derby or the Preakness.

However, they will be shattered if Seattle Slew does not win the 1 1/2-mile Belmont Stakes Saturday to record the ninth consecutive victory of his brilliant career. And Mickey admits it.

"I think I'd have been more prepared some other time than the Belmont," said the 31-year-old lumberman from White Swan, Wash. "I could have accepted his losing the Derby or the Preakness, but I just can't see him getting beat in the Belmont."

"It would be tough to accept."

But, raised in logging camps and used to a few hard knocks, Mickey Taylor takes things rather stoically. It would be more difficult for Karen, a 32-year-old former stewardess.

"That's where I think you have to go back to Lexington, La." said Mickey, referring to one of the first horses they owned. Lexington Laugh broke a bone and had to be destroyed.

"Jim and I wanted to put him down," Mickey said. "We could look at him and see he wouldn't make it, but Karen said save him. He looked terrible after a week and a half, looked like a scarecrow and covered with sores, and I took her to see Lex. It was horrible, but she realized he was in misery and should be put down."

"If she can get over that, she'll get over losing. It wouldn't be easy on Sally, Jim's wife, either. But the ones it probably would be toughest on is their kids."

But Hill, the 35-year-old vet from the sloughy island area of Florida, is confident his children can continue to believe the good guys always win.

"I can't see him losing," he said. "I think I could have accepted more easily his being beaten in the Derby and Preakness."

"I think this horse will enter home."

The odds-maker at Belmont Park indicated his agreement by installing Seattle Slew, with Jean Cruguet aboard, as the 1-5 early line favorite.

Golden Chance Farm's Run Dusty Run, who was second in the Kentucky Derby and third in the Preakness, was next at 6-1. Trainer Smiley Adams, dismayed by jockey Darrel McFargue's performance in both those races, has turned to Sandy Hawley for the Belmont.

Darby Dan Farm's Samhridin, a strong-closing third in the Derby, was listed at 8-1. He will be ridden by Jorge Velazquez, who will wear a protective cast for the hairline ankle fractures suffered in the same spill which seriously injured Steve Cauthen.

Harry Mangurian's Iron Constitution and Meadow Stable's Spirit Level were the only two other colts in the field given a serious shot at upsetting Seattle Slew. Iron Constitution, ridden by last year's winning jockey, Angel Cordero, was second in the Preakness. Spirit Level, owned by Mrs. Penny "Tweedy"

Ringquist, who had the last Triple Crown champion in Secretariat, defeated Samhridin in the Peter Pan last week.

Completing the field were John L. Greer's Mr. Red Wing, La Luna Stable's Sir Sir, Elaine Brinsky's Leading Scorer and the Johnny Campo-trained only of Fast Plerina Stable's Hey Hey J.P. and Elmdorff's Make Amends.

If 10 horses make it to the 5:42 p.m. EDT post, the Belmont will have a gross purse of $183,000 with a winner's share of $110,280.

Lakers swap Neumann

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI) — The Los Angeles Lakers Thursday traded guard Johnny Neumann to the Buffalo Braves in exchange for the Braves' third-round selection in the National Basketball Association college draft Friday.

The pick will be No. 46 overall.

The Lakers acquired Neumann after he was waived by Buffalo early in the season. In 59 games with Los Angeles, Neumann averaged 5.9 points while averaging 15 minutes of playing time per game.

Benson, Birdsong, Johnson expected to go as top three in NBA college draft

NEW YORK (UPI) — After Milwaukee opens the National Basketball Association college draft Friday by selecting Indiana center Kent Benson, Kansas City follows by taking Houston guard Otis Birdsong and the Bucks use their No. 3 pick to take UCLA forward Marques Johnson. The other NBA teams will proceed to run up the biggest telephone bill in league history.

Beginning at 1 p.m. EDT, the annual search for basketball talent commences with all 22 teams hooked up to a conference phone at Commissioner Larry O'Brien's office for 10 long rounds.

After about four hours, the NBA will have a $1,500 phone bill and every eligible college player in the country who ever dreamed of wearing a pro uniform will be waiting anxiously to hear the results.

There was no secret draft this year as there often was in previous years when the NBA and ABA were at war. Now it's all one league and every team for itself.

Two teams — Milwaukee, Los Angeles — hope to virtually rebuild themselves through the draft with three selections each in the first round. Washington, Golden State and Denver have two first round choices each. But after the first half-dozen players are gone, pro scouts say there will be few players capable of starting next season anywhere in the NBA.

The last time Milwaukee won the coin toss and picked first in the draft was 1969 when it selected Kareem Abdul-Jabbar. The Bucks will be thankful if Benson can come even close to doing for them what Jabbar did before going to Los Angeles two years ago.

"We hope to announce we've signed Kent Benson right after the draft begins," said Milwaukee Vice-President Wayne Embury. "We're working out the final details now. He'll have a multi-year contract but it's not our policy to say how much."

Embury said the Bucks have received a medical report on the oft-injured Hoosier star and he is in sound condition. The wrist he mangled in a fall last season is healed and the torn muscles in his back no longer bother him.

"Kent is a quality center and a quality person," Embury said. "He is not to be compared as a player with Jabbar or Bill Walton. He has his own unique style and we feel he'll be able to compete with the best in the NBA."

Washington, looking for reinforcement at center or forward, is expected to use its No. 4 pick to take either 6-10 Tom LaGarde of North Carolina or 6-8 Kenny Carr of North Carolina State. Phoenix, needing to replace retired Tom and Dick Van Arsdale at forward, may use its No. 5 pick to take Greg Ballard of Oregon or Ernie Grunfeld of Tennessee.

Los Angeles, with Jabbar in the middle, is one of the few teams which can afford to strengthen itself in the first round by taking only guards and forwards. Picking 6th, 15th and 22nd, the Lakers have their eyes on the likes of Grunfeld or his teammate Bernard King.

Two withdraw from draft

NEW YORK (UPI) — Brad Holland of UCLA and Frank Sanders of Southern University formally withdrew Thursday from eligibility for Friday's National Basketball Association college draft.

An NBA spokesman had said at the 1 p.m. EDT deadline that none of the original eight undergraduates eligible for the draft had requested their names be dropped.

Celts obtain Johnson

BOSTON (UPI) — The Boston Celtics Thursday announced they had traded their second round draft choices for the next two years to the Houston Rockets in exchange for 6-foot-7 swingman John Johnson.

Johnson, who has averaged 14.1 points a game through his seven-year NBA career, could do a lot to alleviate Boston's backcourt problems. The Celtics went through the past season badly undermanned at the guard position.

Fans greet arrival of racing yachts

NEWPORT, R.I. (UPI) — Yachting fans greeted Independence and Courageous Thursday night as the sleek 12-meter yachts arrived at Bannister's Wharf for a long America's Cup summer.

"It's really started," one gent said as the two boats tied up, after the all-day tow from sailmaker Ted Hood's Marblehead, Mass., boatyard.

Tom O'Brien, mainsail trimmer aboard Independence, said the tow was a "rather uneventful trip with reasonably good weather."

The 11-member crew was preparing to resume practice off Newport on Friday.

"On each boat, we each assume that we have the best boat," O'Brien said. "Those of us on Independence are absolutely sure we are going to win. That's the only attitude to have."

Hood, skipper and designer of Independence, has been training his boat and crew off Marblehead since last autumn. He led the Courageous team to victory 4-0 over Southern Cross in the 1974 cup series.

World objects to U.S. tennis influence

By NEIL ANDUR
© N.Y. Times News Service

PARIS — At a time when organized tennis is enjoying unparalleled popularity, bitter feelings have surfaced over American money and influence in the sport.

Arthur Ashe calls the reaction "an American backlash." Other players and officials see the large investments by U.S. corporations, network television and promoters as an attempt at manipulation. Still others fear that tennis is drifting toward the same Americanization that now dominates the pro-golf tour.

Bob Briner, the executive director of the Association of Tennis Professionals, acknowledged that the "United States" is perceived by many foreign players as Big Daddy rather than Uncle Sam. ATP is the largest single voice in the sport, speaking for more than 200 men players from 40 countries.

"That's the biggest problem we face," Briner said, during an interview in the closing days of the $300,000 French Open tennis championship.

"The sense that Americans are controlling everything and trying to do everything in America."

Some of the strongest anti-American sentiment raised by foreign players in interviews during the French championship concerned administration, with key decisions and appointments being made by and for Americans, with an eye toward the U.S. money market. The decision to play the Colgate Grand Prix finals at Madison Square Garden in New York City for the next three years, instead of following previous policy and rotating the site, is given as another example.

The influence of promoters, agents, and management corporations in setting up special prize money events for their clients in the United States also is seen as unhealthy, and several players said the scandal over so-called "winner take all" matches was only one phase in a network of private deals where players, promoters and officials were "ripping each other off."

"There is a lot of grumbling among the players," conceded Nisteh Oprea, the Romanian manager of Ilie Nastase, who lives in New York City but has close ties to many Europeans. "The money is available for tournaments in Europe, but the sponsors and promoters are afraid to get into a bidding war with the Americans."

To head off a potential player revolt, Briner said ATP extended the playing season in Europe this year and held an "all-day seminar" for European tournament directors in Nice, France. Briner, who normally is based at ATP headquarters in Dallas, Tex., already has spent two months visiting various tournaments in Europe and will continue his tour through the Wimbledon championships next month.

"Right now, Europe is looking for things to be concerned about," he said. "They see the Masters in New York for the next three years as the grand Americanization of the scheme."

Ashe, the ATP representative from the United States, said the problem would be discussed at all levels at the first meeting of "American" players on June 19, two days before the start of the 100th Wimbledon championship.

"Some American players, particularly guys in college, have been complaining about Europeans coming over to the United States and taking spots in our satellite tournaments," Ashe said recently, during an interview in New York. "But you can't have a protectionist policy."

The anti-American atmosphere is not confined to the men's tour. Florenta Mihai of Romania, who finished runner-up to Mima Jausovec of Yugoslavia in the women's singles here, criticized the "women's Tennis Association computer rankings for their inconsistencies and added bluntly, "They don't like Eastern Europeans."

"You are better if you don't play," Miss Mihai said, during an unusually frank post-match news conference after the women's final, citing her recent tournament record as an example. She said she had finished no worse than the round of 16 in her last three tournaments but was dropped from number 4 to number 36 in the monthly rankings, behind some players who were idle, many of them Americans.

"Betsy Nagelsen was No. 40 last month and didn't play a tournament," Miss Mihai said. "Now she's number 36. I play the tournaments and I dropped to 36."

Pierre Darmon, the tournament director of the French Open, defended the focus on the men's circuit. He said sponsors of the French championships were prepared to raise the women's prize money from $5,000 to $150,000 for the next year if all the top players would participate. None of the leading women pros played here this year because of contracts with World Team Tennis.

"I think what the girls are doing by playing team tennis in the United States, and I'm not blaming the organizations," said Darmon, "is drawing 80 per cent of women's tennis to the United States and doesn't develop women's events in world tennis."

A number of prominent European players, including Adriano Panatta and Paolo Bertucchi of Italy, already have told fans they will skip the American-summer-clay-court circuit. Efforts are under way privately among a group of players to present a solid view on the Americanization of the tour at the annual ATP meeting later this month.

Not all foreigners are bitter, however. "We should be grateful to the American tournaments for raising the prize money," said Zoltan Kramlic of Yugoslavia.

"I personally like playing in the states," said Bob Hewitt, the baldish Australian, who now plays out of South Africa. "I like the environment."

Hewitt, however, objects strongly to the schedule that shifts back and forth between the United States and Europe with little option for playing in one place for an entire season.

Many American players see the anti-Americanism as jealousy, "timed to coincide with the alignment of next year's 'super' series of grand prix tournaments that will be played primarily in the United States. 'I would hope it won't set like golf, but I don't think it will,'" added Raul Ramirez of Mexico.

Basketball part of peer group acceptance

By JOE LAPORTE

© 1977 Chicago Sun-Times
His book isn't scientific sociology and Rick Telander, a young Chicago author, doesn't claim to know all the answers. The title is "Heaven is a Playground", but its story leads the reader to wonder "What is hell?"

To write this remarkable book, Telander spent the summer of 1974 on a Brooklyn playground, Foster Park, in the Flatbush ghetto. He grew to know many young inner city athletes — the hopefuls, the failures, the dreamers and the realists.

He portrays people who are living with two strikes or four fouls — against them. Basketball is their life. Some think it's a tragic mistake they make, putting all their eggs in one basket 10 feet above the lot asphalt. Instead of pursuing education and alternative ambition.

Telander doesn't think so.

He believes "If you told them they can't play, do something worthwhile." It would tamper them and break their spirit. They may suffer from basketball addiction, but Telander argues that life surrounding Foster Park makes them what they are.

"As long as a ghetto is a ghetto, no kid wants to be an outcast," he says. "In the ghetto, if you spend all your time studying, you'd be very isolated in your peer group. The pressure would be more severe if they were carrying books. That would be carrying to have your butt beat every block."

So he sees basketball as the best thing they have going. That the parade of failures and wasted lives in his book seems to contradict that assertion.

Most vivid of them is James (Fly) Williams, an elder of the playground. Feats of the Fly are proclaimed by a graffiti scrawled on walls and subway cars. A legend in Brooklyn, he struggles briefly in college, bombs out in the American Basketball Association and returns home to be the big fish in the playground pond.

"At times," Telander wrote, "Fly seemed the near parody of the ghetto man. Defensive, wild, unpredictable, his psyche seemed so entrapped by environment that it was nearly impossible to discern where personality left off and act began. Fly bragged about the gunshot wounds in his legs and fought whenever it suited him. During games he sometimes dribbled off the court to get a drink of water."

By the time the book ends, Williams is hardly seen around the playground "except from time to time, usually riding around in the flots with Country James." Williams has since found employment with the Eastern professional league.

Worse is the case of a character known as "Little Ernie." He tries to make a Foster Park team called The Subway Stars. "A totally disorganized, brawling, feisty, cursing group of selfish people."

Little Ernie was "just too small," Telander says. "And not making that team just crushed him. He was a junkie by the end of the summer." Success can be difficult to endure, Telander presents a young Albert King — 14 years old when the book was written. His brother, Bernard, is a college star at Tennessee, but Albert has more talent than many college players. He is surrounded and hounded by coaches, agents and hustlers and he becomes withdrawn and sullen, a prisoner of his own ability.

Since then, King has finished high school in Brooklyn, and will attend Maryland.

One of King's attempted benefactors is Rodney Parker, a 36-year-old, black, self-educated ticket scalper, street hustler who spent most of his time scouting young playground stars.

Parker makes his living as a scalper on a grand scale. He flew to Chicago last weekend to work the Emerson, Lake & Palmer concert at Soldier Field. Parker plays father-figure to the boys and uses his money to support them. "Half the subway stars are not living with their fathers," Telander says. "And several others have fathers only in the token sense."

Parker steers them to various high schools and colleges via his grapevine of connections throughout the United States. He is a "hyperthyroid Samaritan in gym shoes." Telander concludes, and his devotion to the kids is prompted not by greed, but from a desire to better their lives.

One kid Parker can't help is Calvin Franks, one of the book's most pathetic people. Franks wanders about the ghetto with his high school transcript in a cheap, battered briefcase.

He begs Parker for his "last chance." It never comes, and Franks can't take it. He becomes surly, resentful, distorted and lost — except in rare moments when he breaks out in eerie optimism. "I'll turn hardship after two years," Franks suddenly explains. "Aaaaaah! Rod said they wouldn't take me at the Florida school so I'll hit St. John's for a couple years, then the big time."

Still, Telander says the kids who play ball at Foster Park are better off for it, even if they don't make the big leagues. "Sports can give you a discipline and a sense of direction," he said. "Arthur

Ashe (who urges black parents to send your children to the libraries) suggests they play basketball to live it."

It's healthy, he feels, "as long as you are not crushed, ultimately, when your skills reach the limit, as long as you aren't told unwittingly 'to believe a fairy tale ending, as long as you know the chances are slim. Not many white kids spend their days in the libraries.'"

Telander, 28, is white and says as a kid he played sports for 12 months a year while growing up in Florida. He finished his athletic life as a football player for Northwestern. Telander has written another book, "Joe Namath and the Other Guys," and he is a regular contributor to Sports Illustrated. Telander admits his attitudes are white attitudes, but he says the black kids in Foster Park are realistic.

Women's record broken in AAU 10,000 meters

LOS ANGELES (UPI)

Peg Neppel, a 23-year-old Iowa State graduate student, set a world record in the women's 10,000-meter run of 33:14.9 Thursday on the opening day of the national AAU track and field championships.

Neppel lowered the world mark of 33:42.2 of Denmark's Loe Oltissoon set at Copenhagen March 19. Neppel's previous best 10,000-meter time was 34:17.0.

When Neppel finished at 7:30 p.m. PDT before a sparse crowd, it was almost dark and beginning to get cold.

"I strained a tendon in my right foot three days ago," said Neppel, who was limping following her race. "I ran one minute faster today than I did last week's 10,000-meter road race in New York."

Neppel, who is pursuing a master's degree in animal science, plans to attend the University of Georgia and get a Ph.D. in fruit science and is aiming for an academic career in teaching and research.

An American record of 24:10.1 was set by Sue Brodock of the Rio Alto, Calif., Roadrunners in the women's 5,000-meter walk on June 8. Susan Liders was second in 25:30.9 followed by Brodock's younger sister, Joyce, in 26:01.1.

Sue Brodock earned the right to represent the United States in the inaugural World Cup at Dusseldorf, West Germany, Sept. 24.

In the men's 200-meter semifinal heats, 19-year-old Donald Harris of Las Medanos College of Pittsburg, Calif., and James Gilkes of Guyana won in 20.70 and 20.85 seconds, respectively.

A notable casualty was Steve Williams, a former two-time AAU 100-yard dash champion, who was fifth in the heat won by Harris.

"I don't have it together with the 200," Williams said. "I don't know what it is. I guess I'm not in any kind of shape at this time to run a proper 200 but I feel pretty confident about the 100."

Said Harris, who was the California state high school quarter-mile champion last year:

"I'm just coming off a strained hamstring in my right leg. I missed three weeks of workouts and I just began training about a week ago, I hope to do well in the finals." Gilkes, formerly of the University of Southern California, ran second to Milton Hampton in the AAU 200 a year ago. Hampton, a silver medalist in the event at the Montreal Olympics, was not able to defend his championship.

Storey fires 65 to lead first round at Memphis

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI)

Tom Storey, a sometime professional golfer, capitalized on the only eagle of the day and shot a seven-under-par 65 Thursday to take the first round lead in the Memphis Golf Classic.

The former song-and-dance man from Las Vegas, Nev., finished two strokes ahead of Gary Player, the South African pro who won this tournament in 1974.

Storey, who is an on-again-off-again participant on the pro tour, began his round in the $20,000 event with a birdie on the first hole, followed by five other birdies and the eagle on the 563-yard, par-five 16th hole. He bogeyed only one hole.

"I just happened to be my day," said the 35-year-old player, who sponsors himself and had never led in a major tournament before. "When it's your day, you're gonna play good."

Storey, who was relaxed but a bit surprised by his showing, said the eagle came easily for him. "I clipped in from about 25 feet out," he said. "It was a pretty easy eagle."

A bedraggled Player, who won the event in 1974, said the weather got to him. "I even thought he did finish with five birdies and only one bogey."

"I really felt the heat today because it's winter back home," the Johannesburg player said. "But I've been hitting the ball better this year than I ever have. I have really been knocking at the door all the time."

In third place was Mike Hill, younger brother of Dave Hill, a four-time winner of the Memphis tournament. Hill birdied five holes on the 7,193-yard Colonial Country Club course and had only one bogey for a four-under-par 68.

Irae Irwin, who won the Atlanta Classic two weeks ago, was one of seven players tied with 69s. The others were Woody Blackburn, Tom Shaw, John Schroeder, Sam Adams, Mike Morley and Gary McCord.

Tom Weiskopf, who won last week's Kemper Open in Charlotte, N.C., was one of 18 players shooting one-under-par 71s. Also in the group were former Memphis winner Gene Littler, former U.S. Open winner Lou Graham and Johnny Miller.

Ben Crenshaw, who is the fourth-leading money winner on the PGA tour this week, dropped out Thursday after going eight-over par on the first eight holes.

A total of 37 players broke par, including Bruce Lietzke, third-leading PGA money winner, who was one of nine players finishing with two-under-par 70s.

NHL OKs Cleveland sale, nixes merger

MONTREAL (UPI) — The National Hockey League Board of Governors concluded its 60th annual meeting Thursday by approving transfer of the Cleveland Barons franchise to new owners but without agreement on any merger with the World Hockey Association.

The Barons, whose name NHL President Clarence Campbell said could be changed to the Ohio Barons, were given the necessary approval to complete the sale and transfer of ownership from Mel Swig to a group headed by Randy Greenberg and George Gunde.

A special committee has been set up by the NHL to work with Swig to complete the takeover of the financially troubled Barons.

"As far as I am concerned we have no reason to believe that the Barons won't operate this coming season," Campbell said.

The NHL's fact-finding committee, formed to discuss the possible association with the WHA, will report to the Board of Governors at a special meeting in Chicago on June 22.

Toronto Maple Leaf owner Harold Ballard said there will not be a merger but Philadelphia owner Ed Snider, who heads the fact-finding committee, said he believes there will be some formal links between the two leagues.

"Let's face it, there will be some sort of association one of these days so the sooner the better," said Snider.

The NHL Board of Governors rejected a proposed change by the rules committee which would have forced players on the ice during an altercation between two individuals to move to their respective benches.

"As one governor said, we don't even have those problems involving brawl anymore, so why bother with the rule," said Campbell.

The governors, who hold their semi-annual meeting in Toronto in August, will pursue another rule change regarding the forward pass.

Barry, Greenberg take Dewar cup

LAS VEGAS (UPI) — It was a perfect blend of speed and ability as Rick Barry, an aging NBA superstar, and ageless baseball Hall of Famer Hank Greenberg, who at 66 is twice Barry's age, captured the seventh annual Dewar's Cup sports celebrity tennis tournament Thursday at the Hotel Riviera courts.

They blanketed the NFL quarterback combination of James Harris of the Los Angeles Rams and Jim Hart of the St. Louis Cardinals, 6-0, in the semifinals and then scored a 9-2 win over Lynn Swann of the Pittsburgh Steelers and Earl Monroe of the New York Knicks. Swann and Monroe rallied to win over Bob Klein, recently retired Ram, and Ken Anderson of the Cincinnati Bengals, 7-6.

It was the fourth Dewar's Cup title for Greenberg and the second for Barry. They are the only two who have played in all seven of the tournaments. A total of 32 stars participated.

"If Rick decides to play professional tennis when he retires from the Golden State Warriors, he could make it," said Greenberg. "He has it all, the fastest serve of anyone I've seen plus the agility. And I've seen 'em all."

Spurs bemoan trade that left them without draft or player

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI) — A gof by the San Antonio Spurs last November comes back to haunt the team Friday when they will watch the major college talent snapped up by opposing teams in the NBA draft.

Because the Spurs gave the Los Angeles Lakers their first-round draft choice, along with $50,000 in cash, for guard Mack Calvin seven months ago, San Antonio will have to wait until the 37th pick before making a selection.

"In retrospect, the deal for Mack was a mistake because we don't have him now and he wasn't able to help us when we had him," said Coach Doug Moe.

"But I still say that at the time it was a good move on our part. We needed some help because (guard) James Silles was injured and we had no idea how long it would be before he could play again. We gambled on Mack and he just wasn't the player we used to be."

After failing to provide the spark the Spurs expected in a bench role, Calvin was placed on waivers last February and was immediately claimed by the Denver Nuggets.

The deal put the Spurs in the unenviable position of waiting until the 15th spot of the second round before getting a chance to take a player at a time it appears the team would lose the services of forward Allan Bristow, who is now a free agent.

Moe said he expects Bristow, who started part of the time last season, can be re-signed for next season, but Spurs President Angelo Drossos is not so sure.

"I've heard nothing from Allan since submitting my proposal at the end of the season," Drossos said. "I'd like to have Allan back but it's up to him."

Bristow was not available for comment but his agent, Don DeJordan, said the chances of him returning to San Antonio were "remote."

"I'm sure the Spurs think they've made a good effort to sign Allan and we've told them why we don't think the offer is acceptable," DeJordan said. "I think there's going to be at least one or two players available when we get our chance," said Bob Bass, assistant coach.

Three subs stand in for Walton

NEW YORK (UPI) — There were more substitutes at New York's Plaza Hotel Thursday than there are in a game between the Denver Nuggets and the Golden State Warriors.

Portland Trail Blazer center Bill Walton, selected Most Valuable Player of the NBA final playoffs by Sport Magazine and UCLA forward Marques Johnson, the magazine's College Basketball Player-of-the-Year, were honored by that publication at a dinner, where they also were awarded with 1977 captain of the year. Johnson was in New York to receive his award. Walton was somewhere in Idaho, embarking on a wilderness foot trip.

Walton: the first Sport MVP in 1977, he finished his career as the top rebounding forward in UCLA history. Johnson is expected to be the third player selected in Friday's NBA college draft, behind Kent Benson of Indiana and Otis Birdsong of Houston.

and Johnny Davis substituted for the substitute.

In six games against Philadelphia, Walton, who led Portland to its first NBA title, scored 111 points, made 113 rebounds, had 31 assists and 22 blocked shots. In the clincher, Walton scored 20 points, picked up 22 rebounds and had seven assists and eight blocked shots.

Johnson, who was a teammate of Walton's at UCLA in 1974—the center's senior year—became the first player ever honored by Sport as College Basketball Player of the Year. This past season he averaged 21.4 points and 11.1 rebounds per game, as the Bruins compiled a 24-5 record and won their 11th straight Pacific-8 Conference Championship. Johnson was selected to the team for the top rebounding forward in UCLA history.

Johnson is expected to be the third player selected in Friday's NBA college draft, behind Kent Benson of Indiana and Otis Birdsong of Houston.

Arizona State guns for 4th NCAA title

OMAHA (UPI) — The Arizona State Sun Devils will be trying for their fourth national collegiate baseball championship when the 31st annual College World Series opens Friday.

The Sun Devils, who finished third last year in a three-team playoff, are looking to win the title in 1965, 1967, and 1969, record the team with a 51-11 record and five Clemson in Friday night.

Clemson, with a 41-8 record, has a 57 CWS record and finished out of the running last year.

Southern Illinois, at 38-10 on the season, tangles with Temple, 34-7 on the year, in Friday's opener. Saturday's card shows California State at Los Angeles meeting Minnesota, and Baylor clashing with South Carolina.

California State has a 40-20 record, Minnesota is 38-10, Baylor 42-13 and South Carolina 40-10.

Southern Illinois' right-handed pitcher Randy Martz was the 12th pick in baseball's annual summer free agent draft when he was chosen by the Chicago Cubs. He enters the series with a 12-9 season record and leads the team with 11 individual earned run averages of 1.80.

Arizona State will be without the services of first baseman Dave Hudgens, who was hospitalized in Tempe, Ariz., following extensive surgery Wednesday after he was struck in the knee by a hard ball during Tuesday night's final home practice. Hudgens was second in RBI with 73, third in home runs with seven and was .372 at the plate.

The series is becoming a family affair for Sun Devils catcher Chris Banda, whose other brother Sal played third base for ASU in 1965 when the Sun Devils pocketed their first series championship.

Chris Banda served nearly the entire season as an Arizona State batboy in 1966. His brother, Sal, is now the Milwaukee Brewers' third baseman.

The series will be a homecoming of sorts for Southern Illinois' freshman right-hander Bob Knezevich, a Council Bluffs, Iowa, product who pitched the Salukis to a 5-1 Missouri Valley Conference championship in Omaha May 22.

Mechanic's death may mean auto recall

DETROIT (UPI) — The death of an auto mechanic, fatally injured when an engine fan blade flew off and struck him in the chest, could force the Ford Motor Co. to recall 6.2 million 1970-77 automobiles equipped with flexible fans.

It would be Ford's largest recall and the second largest in U.S. auto history, topped only by the 7.3 million 1965-69 Chevrolet's recalled by General Motors in 1971 because of deteriorating engine mounts.

A Ford spokesman said Thursday the company now has plans only to recall only 425,000 of its 1972-model Ford Torino, Mercury Montego and Lincoln Continental cars equipped with 302, 351 and 400-cubic inch V-8 engines and air conditioning. But Joan Claybrook, director of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, said the hazard may exist on 6.2 million cars and trucks. She said the safety agency would step up its investigation with the possibility of a larger recall being ordered.

"We are going to speed up our own investigation and see if we need an additional warning to the public on this," she said. "This is a very severe problem that needs to be brought to the public's attention immediately."

There have been 185 complaints of breaking fans, including 13 reports of injuries before the report of the death of Roger Dale Keyes, a 24-year-old suburban Rockwood mechanic.

He was struck in the chest and throat on May 22 as he worked on a 1972 Ford Torino. He died Saturday and was buried Tuesday.

"He was a nice family man. He had a wife Judy and a baby boy who is just 3 weeks old," said Raymond Digue Sr., a neighbor. "It's a damn shame this had to happen."

"Ford ought to recall those cars before they have another tragedy like this," he said.

A Ford spokesman said the firm did not know of Keyes' death and said there were no plans for enlarging the earlier recall announced last week. The problem, he said, is limited mainly to mechanics and people who work on their own cars.

"When driving the car, there is no danger if the fan breaks," the Ford spokesman said. "It is only when the hood is up and a mechanic is working under it that there is a danger if the fan breaks."

The fan has five or seven flexible blades that flatten as the speed of the car and engine increases. The result is a quieter fan that uses less power from the engine.

"But the constant flexing of the blades results in fatigue which causes them to break," Miss Claybrook said. "The broken pieces are propelled with great velocity, but you can detect the cracks in the blade before the fan breaks."

Turkish diplomat to Italy killed by lone assailant

ROME (UPI) — A gunman shot and mortally wounded the Turkish ambassador to the Vatican today in the fourth slaying of a Turkish diplomat since 1975.

Ambassador Taha Carim, 63, was gunned down as he walked from his car to the entrance of his Rome residence. His assailant, dressed in a dark suit, ran into the courtyard of the residence and fired twice, then fled on foot.

The ambassador slumped to the ground, blood spurting from his wounds in the left cheek and left shoulder. Servants rushed from the house to cushion his head with a pillow until an ambulance arrived.

Carim's chauffeur told police that the ambassador had just left his car and entered the courtyard of his house when the youthful gunman ran in after him from the street.

Carim, who began carrying a gun following telephone threats, had no time to pull his own pistol before two bullets from a 9mm pistol hit him.

Carim, whose wife and children are in Turkey, was underwent what doctors described as "delicate" surgery in Rome's Policlinic.

Police investigators said Carim had received threats from a clandestine Armenian group in Turkey last March, warning that if political prisoners in Turkey were not released there would be an attack on a leading Turk in Italy.

At that time graffiti also appeared on Roman walls saying the Turkish government was responsible for the oppression of the Armenian people.

Until recently Carim had a police escort as a result of the threats.

Carim, who has been accredited to the Vatican since Dec. 6, 1973, is the third Turkish envoy to be attacked in Europe in the less than two years.

On Oct. 22, 1975, the Turkish envoy to Vienna, Danis Tunalioglu, was killed by sub machinegunners. Two days later the Turkish ambassador to Paris, Ismail Erez, and his driver were shot dead by assassins near the Bir Hakeim Bridge over the Seine in the heart of the city.

US helps unite refugees with Bulgarian children

© Washington Star

WASHINGTON — The daughters of a couple who fled Bulgaria a decade ago and picked the State Department for help were allowed to leave the Balkan Communist nation Wednesday and were reunited with their parents in New York Wednesday night.

The happy ending to the long efforts of Spas and Ivanka Marev was regarded by some U.S. officials as an example of successful "quiet diplomacy." U.S. diplomats had been trying since last autumn to persuade Bulgaria to release Rumyana, 12, and Yordanka, 10.

The Bulgarian government's sudden reversal of its position on the case came amid moves by several East European countries to clear up cases of divided families. Preparations will begin next Wednesday for review of the 1975 Helsinki agreement, by which European nations committed themselves to try to reunite families.

State Department officials said the girls, who had been living in an orphanage in Bulgaria, were put on a plane at the capital, Sofia, Wednesday morning by relatives. They had been given Bulgarian passports and U.S. visas were issued on Tuesday when a lawyer took the passports to the U.S. Embassy in Sofia.

The girls flew straight through to New York, arriving late Wednesday for a meeting at Kennedy Airport with parents they had not seen since they were 1 and 3 years old. U.S. officials kept the plans secret to avoid airport publicity.

The Marevs went on an authorized tourist trip from Varna to Istanbul, Turkey, in 1967. According to standard practice of Communist countries, they had to leave their children behind with a grandmother as hostages who would supposedly insure their return from abroad. But they jumped ship and became political refugees.

They came to the United States, became citizens, and Spas-Marev joined a sheet metal workers' union in Chicago. Throughout the years they petitioned the United Nations, the White House and others for help in getting their daughters out of Bulgaria.
