WASHINGTON, D.C. — In his first six months as secretary of the Interior, Cecil D. Andrus has established himself as a protector of his domain which includes everything from giant redwood trees to a two-foot-high snapper called the Furfish housewren.

Working grueling 16-hour days, Andrus took a decisive grip on the Interior Department helm and is attempting to make the "three R's" — rape, ruin and run — a thing of the past in America.

His work to preserve the environment so far has brought cheers from the environmentalist bleachers. "It's been like a breath of fresh air after eight long hard years from an environmental standpoint," Brock Evans, director of the Sierra Club's Washington, D.C. office, said. "He has certainly set a new tone."

Evans said Andrus has backed them up with action.

One action lauded by the Sierra Club involves an addition to the Redwood National Park in northern California, according to Evans.

Andrus tried to stop lumber companies from chopping down redwoods in an area which may soon be annexed to the park, "before all the trees get cut down," Evans said. The secretary later asked for "immediate taking" of the area for park expansion to thwart the lumber industry.

Andrus's position on strip mining for coal has been praised by environmentalists, too.

"We are very impressed and pleased with the position the secretary has taken on the strip mining bill before Congress," Sheldon Kinsel, assistant conservation director for the National Wildlife Federation, said.

In the early days of his new reign, Andrus proposed a five-year moratorium on all new strip-mining ventures if they involved prime agricultural land.

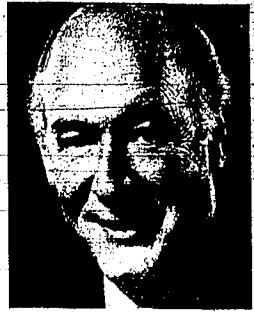

He also slapped a 90-day moratorium on offshore oil and gas drilling leases in the lower Cook Inlet off Alaska. That move brought a standing ovation from defenders of the environment.

"I think it's fair to say that we view his cautious approach to many of the large energy questions such as offshore oil development as very necessary and positive," said Pamela Rich, Alaska Public Lands Coordinator for Friends of the Earth.

Kinsel said, "We're pleased for postponed oil lease up in Alaska, because there was insufficient information to see if it would have an unacceptable impact on the environment."

Kinsel said the National Wildlife Federation is also very pleased with the Carter administration stance on water projects and dam construction, a position Andrus defended in the face of overwhelming objections by Western governors and congressmen alike.

Carter and Andrus both took a political beating and only about nine of the original "lit list" projects may be cut back. (Continued on p. 14)

Car injures 30 at rally

PLAINS, Ga. (UPI) — A late-model Jaguar sports car driven by a young white man slammed into a speaker's platform during a Ku Klux Klan rally in president Carter's hometown Saturday, injuring about 30 persons, according to UPI reporter Matthew C. Quinn.

Quinn suffered a broken leg and facial injuries in the incident, which occurred during a speech by Klan Imperial Wizard Bill Wilkinson of Denton Springs, La.

Jim Griffin, a spokesman for Americus-Sumter County General Hospital, said there were about 30 injured.

Quinn telephoned UPI-Atlanta from the hospital. He was unable to convey much of what had happened before he was taken away for further treatment. "They're taking me away. They're taking me away," Quinn said.

A Jaguar came plowing through the stand, said Quinn. "It went under the stage—I was standing in front of the stage. It put people under the hood."

Police arrested the driver, who was not identified.

Ed Light, a reporter for WALB-TV in nearby Albany, said he was standing about five feet from the platform when he heard a loud noise behind him.

"The car came screaming for the platform," said Light. "It crashed through the platform."

Light said there was a gunshot and a state patrolman pulled the man from the car and handcuffed him. At the same time, Light said the patrolman arrested a KKK member in a white robe.

The incident occurred during a traditional cross-burning ceremony called to "show support for white people" and to call for the firing of United Nations Ambassador Andrew Young.

The Klansmen erected six white flags with the red and black Klan emblem along the road and constructed a speaker's platform. They tagged down passing motorists, urging them to stay for the rally.

Wilkinson claimed several Plains residents had asked that the rally be held here, but two local state legislators said that was unlikely. "The people of Plains didn't know anything about it," said state Sen. Hugh Carter, the President's cousin. "I hate to see it come. Most of the townspeople have just ignored it."

State Rep. Bill Murray of nearby Americus said, "I don't know of any active Klan activity in Plains. The Klan is something I read about in history books."

Several law enforcement officers from the Sumter County Sheriff's Department and the Plains Police Department were at the field which is next to "Television City," a trailer site where camera crews set up their equipment during the President's visit.

Wheat panel fuss grows

WILDER — State Sen. Phil Batt Friday accused Gov. John Evans of "playing politics" in delaying appointment of a wheat commissioner to replace Sam Tyler, whose five-year term expired June 30.

"It's blatantly political," the Wilder Republican, who is president pro tempore of the Idaho Senate, said. "It saddens me to see politics get mixed up in the (Idaho Wheat) commission."

Batt charged that Evans, by delaying the appointment, would force the resignation of commission administrator Harold West and would "flout the wishes of the growers."

On June 7, by a three to two vote, the five-member commission requested West turn in his resignation by Sept. 1.

Tyler's vote is crucial to that decision. The vote, however, is contrary to the wishes of the 700-member Idaho Wheat Growers Association (IWGA), according to association president Robert Goddes, Preston.

"The consensus of the wheat growers is they would like to see West retained," Goddes said.

The growers have asserted their power by failing to nominate Tyler to another term on the commission. They have instead, as required by Idaho law, nominated three men as possible replacements: Alvin Lindsay, Moscow; John Burton, Worley; and Veril Hubbard, Bonners Ferry. (Continued on p. 14)

'Hero' definition excludes women

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN
Times-News writer

SUN VALLEY — One of the few places where women aren't found, is in the dictionary among definitions of the word "hero."

Flipping through the Oxford English Dictionary, you will find four basic definitions for the word "hero."

All ascribe qualities of strength, courage and valor to "a man."

No where is there reference to a woman to indicate the qualities might refer to her as well.

It is no surprise that feminist writer Kate Millet quarrel with sexist attitudes implicit in our language, as well as quarrel with the men's club on the corner that keeps women from its membership list.

Speaking Saturday at the "American Hero: Myths and Realities" symposium presided by the Sun Valley Center for the Arts and Humanities, Millet said "Women are excluded from the nation of heroism itself."

The six-day conference, which concludes today, has brought more than 30 prominent cultural figures to the resort town for an exploration of the myth of the American Hero.

The women among the panelists have ranged from Millet to TV's "Bionic Woman," Lindsay Wagner, to Yvonne Wanrow, a Spokane, Wash., Indian woman whose controversial murder trial may provide the basis for a landmark precedent on a woman's right to defend herself forcibly from physical attack in circumstances in which a man might be legally required to refrain from force.

Searching the landscape of American literary and social history, one is hard put to find many women who stand securely as heroes.

And according to Leslie Fiedler, a professor of American literature and culture who appeared with Millet to discuss the topic "Does the American Hero Have to Be a Misogynist?" women are "far more excluded from traditional conceptions of American heroism, but they often serve as the enemies and evil spirits which turn men into heroes."

Fiedler says the definition of American heroism is to run away from home and escape the image of the mother or other elements of female tyranny. He argues this definition in vignettes nearly all our culture's literary and media heroes.

Historians writing about the first settlers to set foot on this continent note how our ancestors were "cutting away" from lower class settings and "Mother England" and "Mother France" to seek a land of opportunity.

They weren't rich or from European landed gentry. They were the poor and the landless who left their homes to seek a dream.

So, Fiedler says, a basic American archetype story emerges around our heroes. From Rip Van Winkle, regarded as the first truly American literary hero, to Huck Finn and Star Trek and even to such hard chargers as Randall McMurphy, of the recent award-winning movie "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest," our heroes are elevated by overcoming a "petty tyrant."

"Our heroes are larger than life figures. Fiedler says they share certain human limitations but more importantly they transcend many others. They stand outside the laws of man and even though they die, they die better and more beautifully and eloquently than the rest of us."

"We admire and love heroes because we recognize in them qualities of ourselves which we must deny in order to get through the day to day drudgeries of our lives," Fiedler observes.

But here, the feminist is bitterly object, because as Millet says, "We women cannot be the protagonists of the race."

"We can't be at the center," she continues. "We can't be the 'human condition.' In her absence from the ranks of our heroes, the woman is depicted as a lesser person, Millet argues."

A petty tyrant from which our male heroes are created has turned into a tyranny of human possibilities for American women.

Ike's letters support family

MAMIE EISENHOWER stayed at home; DWIGHT EISENHOWER, no divorce; KAY SUMMERSBY, third party.

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Johns Hopkins University researchers have found letters by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower that support the Eisenhower family's contention that he never intended to divorce his wife Mamie and marry Lt. Kay Summersby.

According to an article in the Los Angeles Times, the letters between Eisenhower and Gen. George C. Marshall, the second set found in as many weeks, bolster the family's contention that Eisenhower did not intend to divorce his wife.

The first set, Eisenhower's wartime love letters to his wife, were made available to The Times by the Eisenhower family, which is reportedly angry over a program ABC-TV is preparing, the newspaper said.

The program will be based on an account by the late President Harry S. Truman after World War II.

Eisenhower wrote to Marshall, who was Army Chief of Staff in Washington, and asked to be relieved of duty so he could return to the United States to marry—Lt. Summersby, an attractive, British divorcee who served as his wartime driver and secretary.

The Truman account was revived by Summersby herself in her 1976 book, "I Was Forgetting: My Love Affair with Dwight D. Eisenhower," in which she said her love affair with Eisenhower never was consummated because he was impotent, which she said he blamed on Mamie.

Summersby died of cancer soon after writing her account. The correspondence—just found at Johns Hopkins—indicates that Eisenhower wrote to Marshall about bringing Mrs. Eisenhower to Europe rather than about returning home to marry Lt. Summersby, the paper said.

In Eisenhower's letter to Marshall dated June 4, 1945, he said the last six weeks were the hardest of his year, he said: "I presume that aside from disappointment in being unable to solve in clear-cut fashion some of the nagging problems that seem to be always with us, part of my trouble is that I just plain miss my family."

"The strain of the past three years has also been very considerable so far as my wife is concerned and because of the fact that she has had trouble with her general nervous system for many years."

Eisenhower asked that he be permitted to bring Mamie to Europe to live with him, even if the privilege was denied other Americans in uniform.

"I would feel far more comfortable about her if she could be with me. In the event that no policy of any kind could be approved by the War Department at this time, the personal question would become whether his whole command or public opinion would resent my arranging to bring my own wife here."

"This is something that, of course, I cannot fully determine, but my real feeling is that 'most people would understand that after three years continued separation at my age and with no opportunity to engage, except on extraordinary occasions, in normal social activity they would be sympathetic about the matter.'"

Eisenhower then said that regardless of the War Department's decision, he would be willing to continue his assignment as long as the Department wanted.

Marshall replied in a letter on June 8, 1945, that he could not assent to extending to a select group in the Army the privilege of bringing wives to Europe.

Latin backs canal return

CHICAGO (UPI)—The Panama Canal is "as much Panamanian as it is American," and should be returned to Panama, Venezuelan President Carlos Andres Perez said during a visit to Chicago.

Peretz, on the last leg of a whirlwind United States tour, made the comment during an interview with the editorial board of the Chicago Tribune. The newspaper published the account in Saturday's edition.

"It is a common interest for Panama and the U.S. to develop a politically stable regime in Panama," Perez said. He said all of Latin America supports the Central American nation's desire for sovereign control over the Canal Zone.

Peretz said the United States, in return for surrendering sovereignty, should get a "guarantee of continued security in the area and continued access to the canal."

Peretz stressed his country's desire for a "stable government and society which will attract foreign investment capital."

Peretz said he hopes his trip will "turn into a new stimulus for businessmen of the United States so they will be more interested in my country and other Latin American countries."

Rains soak Kansas

By United Press International Heavy rains drenched parts of the nation's breadbasket Saturday, putting the damper on outdoor activities during the first day of the Fourth of July holiday weekend.

Chicago, Kan., was hit with 2 1/2 inches during the morning hours, and Clements and Lincolnville each received more than three inches of rain. Marble-sized hail was reported at Lincoln, Neb.

Thunderstorms rumbled in the southeast across the coast of the Carolinas into Florida and the southern parts of Alabama and Georgia. In southeast Georgia, Albany received 50 miles an hour winds and half-inch hail.

At the other end of the nation, 2 1/2 inches was recorded at San Francisco International Airport, setting a new July rainfall record for the city. It broke the old record of 2 1/8 inches.

Judicial proceedings, the guidelines allow only one audio system, one television camera and operator and one still photographer, using only two cameras and four lenses, in any trial court. Two television cameras and operators.

Georgia, Washington and Alabama allow cameras in courts, but only with the consent of every trial participant — a restriction that has limited trial coverage.

The Supreme Court authorized an experimental filming of a civil and criminal trial in a Tallahassee court. When that effort runs with minor hitches, the justices on April 7, 1977, issued this historic order.

After weeks of consulting with the media, trial judges and attorneys, the Supreme Court issued media guidelines it said would insure adequate trial coverage without disrupting the courtroom or distracting with proceedings. However, they will be allowed in Florida's appellate courts. Cameras cannot use artificial lighting devices in court or change film and lenses during formal proceedings. They must take a fixed position in a designated area and remain there until a court break or recess.

Defense costs rise with F-18

By Art Buchwald

Cruise missiles, not B-1, essential

The supersonic B-1 bomber, most expensive and deadly fighter plane ever conceived by the United States, won't get off the ground anytime soon.

President Carter a few days ago announced he is halting construction of the B-1, a decision which drew angry response from three of Idaho's Washington delegation.

Rep. George Hansen called Carter's decision "contrary to the security of the nation." Sen. James McClure called the President's opposition to the B-1 a mistake because the aging B-52 bombers now in use by the military are "vulnerable."

Rep. Steve Symms called Carter's scotching of the B-1 "one more nail in the coffin of liberty." To hear these politicians talk—the President has pulled a major blunder—even though Carter has saved taxpayers the $25 billion needed to deploy the 241 B-1 bombers requested by the Pentagon.

Idaho's politicians aren't carefully analyzing the effects of Carter's indefinite postponement of the B-1.

It's clear the President only has postponed, not unequivocally terminated, work on the B-1.

At the press conference announcing his decision on deployment of the bomber, Carter noted testing of the few B-1 prototypes would continue.

And, in coming years, if relations with the Soviet Union deteriorate, construction could begin on a large batch of B-1s.

No Americans should be misled into believing discontinuance of the B-1 bomber leaves the nation vulnerable to attack or weakens our ability to strike an enemy anywhere in the world.

The B-1 bomber has never worried the Soviets very much.

Today, the USSR is developing a radar system which, within a few years, is expected to be able to spot and destroy low-flying supersonic aircraft with accuracy.

The Soviets, recognizing the limited use of manned bombers in the missile age, haven't themselves developed a plan which is equivalent to the B-1. They could, but they don't think they need it.

A much more worrisome part of the American defensive and offensive weapons arsenal to the Soviets is the so-called "cruise missile."

While they are developing a defensive system to combat planes like the B-1, U.S. Military intelligence says the Soviets are veering away from finding an effective defense for self-guided cruise missiles.

The cruise missiles, basically self-propelled, highly accurate jets, can carry nuclear payloads anywhere into the Soviet Union virtually without detection.

They can be fired from land, sea and soon, from the air.

Interestingly, the U.S. can build 100 cruise missiles for the price of a single B-1 bomber.

The estimated $25 billion cost to replace existing B-52 bombers with the B-1 isn't needed to keep America safe.

While construction of the B-1 on a large scale would provide many jobs in California and elsewhere, the prime consideration, when judging this weapon is the importance it plays in America's defensive system.

The B-1 isn't critical to America's defense. Within a decade, the plane probably would be obsolete.

In coming years, should the Soviets begin building their own long-range supersonic bomber or should other circumstances require construction of the B-1, American engineers can get right on it.

WASHINGTON — If you're wondering why it's impossible to keep defense costs down in this country, perhaps I can help you.

The U.S. Navy wanted a new plane and, after budget considerations, opted for the F-11 made by Grumman Aerospace Corp. in Bethpage, Long Island.

The F-16 designed by McDonnell-Douglas was scrubbed because it was too expensive and too controversial. This might have been the end of it except that the engines for the F-16 would be made by General Electric in Lynn, Mass. Stuart Rumor has it that House Majority Leader Tip O'Neill of Massachusetts and Sen. Ted Kennedy and Ed Brooke learned on the White House and the Pentagon to keep the F-16 alive.

And after several telephone calls, through Secretary Harold Brown decided the F-16 might not be a bad plane after all.

Four hundred and nineteen million dollars has been set aside for "Research and development" for the F-18, but a spokesman for the secretary said the decision was made "on its own merits" and had nothing to do with Rep. O'Neill and Sen. Kennedy and Brooke's interest in the project.

Believe it or not, the reason is that I talked to an expert who advises O'Neill and Kennedy and Brooke on military affairs, and he advised me the last thing any of the three legislators would want to do is waste money on an airplane the Navy said it didn't want.

"The Navy needs this plane," he told me. "In the worst way. They just don't know they need it. But once it's sitting on their flight decks they'll be grateful to Tip and Teddy and Ed for persuing it to the point."

"What makes the F-18 so great?" I asked. "The General Electric engines which are produced in Lynn, Mass., by the finest technicians and engineers in the country."

"How do O'Neill, Kennedy and Brooke know that?" "They all have GE appliances in their homes and they're aware of what a great product GE makes."

"Some people have said that if the engines for the plane were not made in Massachusetts, none of the three would have gone to bat for it."

"That's ridiculous. Tip has always wanted a multi-mission fighter that could do anything the Soviets have. Teddy has dreamed of this country someday having an aircraft with an increased wing area and a wider and longer fuselage to provide greater internal fuel capacity. And I've heard Ed Brooke say many times, 'What this country needs more than anything else is a fighter plane with a main engine on its nose.'"

"When it comes to national security, these three men would never let politics stand in the way of the Navy getting the best plane that money can buy."

"Even if the Navy doesn't want it?" "What does the Navy know about fighter planes? Tip and Teddy and Ed couldn't have put it any better."

"What will it cost the taxpayer?" "If you have to ask what it costs to have a new fighter plane, you shouldn't own one."

WASHINGTON — President Carter's home weatherization program is popular at Congress, but critics fear it will attract home improvement racketeers like flies to a honeypot.

The fast buck boys will be swarming all over to get in on this, said Rep. William Steiger (R-Wis.) as the House Ways and Means Committee this week met to reauthorize the program.

The rebate program is an invitation to the shrewd, shrew operators. According to the Wisconsin businessman who wrote to Steiger, the average attic would cost not much over $200 to insulate.

Steiger read other members of the panel a letter he received from a home improvement company in his own district predicting that the multi-billion-dollar national program may become a "financial fiasco."

Director brings CIA more problems

By Keyes Beech

WASHINGTON — CIA veterans, who thought the worst was over, were wrong.

Their newest problem is not the typing reform bent on exposing CIA secrets. Nor is it reform-minded congressmen hauling them over the coals for past misdeeds.

Instead, it is their new director, Adm. Stansfield Turner, 53, the President's choice for the job. The problem is one of communications. They don't understand him and he doesn't understand them.

No solution is in sight. Regardless of who is right, one thing is certain: Morale has seldom if ever lower among the elite corps of civilian professionals who make up the core of what once probably was the roughest and most effective agency of the U.S. Government operating overseas.

"We needed a breathing spell, a time to regroup and rebuild, maybe a little longer needed," said one 25-year CIA veteran. "Then Turner got us."

One CIA source said there would be a flood of resignations among senior and middle echelon officials were it not for the fact that they, along with some other government employees, got a 20 per cent pay increase last February.

"If you have kids in college and don't want to sell real estate for a living, you can put up with almost anything, even Turner," one of them said. "Besides, your pension is determined by your highest pay average over a three-year period, so most of us will hang on until 1980."

Those who can't take it will quit. Career CIA men's complaints about Turner are perhaps best summarized in the words of one contributor:

"He's trying to run the agency like a battlefield."

"Specifically their criticism of the admiral is that he is remote to the point of being inaccessible."

"That he operates by memo."

"That he has never met more than a handful of the 12 division or section chiefs who make up the backbone of the agency."

"That he deliberately keeps them off balance with a flood of paperwork demanding instant answers."

"That he makes no attempt to understand our culture."

"That he is personally vindictive."

"The admiral is not sensitive to the problem," said Herbert Hutz, a retired Navy captain who heads the agency's expanded human affairs staff. "And neither am I." It is frequently discussed.

"We have asked for constructive suggestions on what can be done," he continued. "and to be frank we haven't got much."

As Hutz points out, it wouldn't be surprising if, after 20 years in the Navy, Turner didn't act and operate like a Navy man. Even in eyes, Turner looks so much like an admiral that some can play at CIA headquarters in Langley, Va., across the river from Washington instinctively salute when they see him in the corridors.

"If the admiral doesn't understand CIA culture," Hutz said, "it is fair to ask how much (CIA) culture the Navy culture—besides—added. This place is so strange to military men." Turner, Hutz said, is the fourth admiral to head the agency.

Such as the CIA veterans may dislike Turner, the agency's problems go far beyond one man.

The CIA has had five different directors in as many years, testifying to the turbulence of the times.

CIA men complain that Turner has overstuffed himself with Navy men. His executive assistant, two special assistants, his speechwriter and his schedule-makers all are Navy men on active duty and, according to critics, so representative of the admiral's fine as to add to his inaccessibility.

The admiral has a right to choose his own men, his aides say. What galls the CIA career men most is their inability to have a normal conversational exchange with Turner. "He aims memos at options," one of them said bitterly. "Then he checks off the option he likes best."

Unlike his predecessors, Turner is making more and more of his second half. He is the first to spend so much time away from Langley in his second office—in the Old Executive Office Building next to the White House.

He spends at least a fourth of his time there. He sees the President regularly twice a week, more often if something urgent comes up, and he is the first director to sit in on cabinet meetings.

All this is part of what one of the called a "major buildup," by making Turner czar of the entire intelligence community, a reorganization move being steadfastly resisted by Defense Sec. Harold Brown.

"If the admiral is going to have the responsibility," says Hutz, "he wants the authority."

If Turner is successful, he will win control over the Pentagon's intelligence system which accounts for 70 per cent of the intelligence budget to CIA's 30 per cent.

The prize would be control over the $5 billion budget of the National Security Agency, with its multitude of sophisticated electronic intelligence devices, and the National Reconnaissance office, which controls spy satellites that are constantly circling the Earth.

Not one yet known who will emerge as the winner, although Turner has some strong support on Capitol Hill. President Carter has said that if the issue cannot be resolved on a lower level, he will make the final decision.

Some observers argue that if Carter accepts Turner's plans, he risks reorganization of the intelligence community to suit the needs of one man rather than the needs of the nation.

In any event, it seems safe to say the CIA never will be the same again.

Views Hansen's money troubles

By Rep. Gordon Hollifield

Congressman George Hansen's financial problems have been kicked around more than any other individuals I know. He got into trouble for improper campaign disclosure, for not filing his income tax on time—and now he's in debt up to his ears and he's asking for help.

George and his wife, Cramer, claim his predicament has been caused by harassment from political left wingers. While that claim may be true, a good way to get deeper and deeper into trouble is to blame someone else for your problems. So Mr. Hansen has personal financial problems that he blames on others, which does that mean to you and me?

Well, it doesn't mean much if anything. I don't agree with the left. I agree with his personal finances but his money problems don't affect the 11 he subsidizes funds for his personal use, no one has to contribute. In other words citizens are free to choose of their own free will whether to contribute or not.

The Congressman's voting record, though brings up another more serious situation. When a bill passes the United States Congress and is signed into law by the President, citizens have no choice. The law of the land rules and controls the citizen on you. Freedom is detrimental when you just abide by the law.

Idaho Republicans who praise Congressman Hansen's voting record but cite his financial problems as the reason for their siding to another man or to the uncommitted position had better take a long look at their priorities. If they're willing to sacrifice a voting record they believe in that affects all the people of Idaho and the United States for the good personal affairs of one man, then we've got real problems.

There are plenty of politicians who have their personal finances in order, to meet most of them by the way they do their job as an elected official is what really counts. When the people of the Second Congressional District elected George Hansen, they elected a conservative Representative to the United States Congress, a conservative who votes right.

He's doing the job he was elected to do despite his financial woes.

House Minority Leader John L. Rhodes said, "Congressman Hansen in Washington stands very well," and he added that he didn't think Hansen's campaign finance and income tax problems have hurt his effectiveness in Congress.

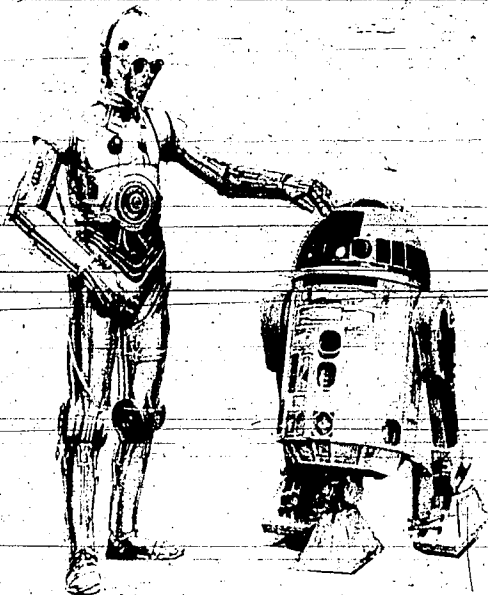

Would it be better to have a man in Washington whose personal financial affairs were in order, or one who votes right according to your political philosophy? How much does George Hansen's personal debt affect you?

It's quite possible the news about George has clouded the real issue. But after all who wants to read about a Congressman who has no problems?

REP. GORDON HOLLIFIELD

'Star Wars' a good western

ROBOT STARS OF 'STAR WARS' ... modern day Tontos

MOVIE NOTES — Think of a movie where a bad guy wearing black kidnap a beautiful gal who finally is rescued by a ...

Of course, there's a star scene a chase and a shootout before the good guys finally win. Sounds like the plot of a hundred western movies, doesn't it?

Oddly, it's also the plot of the hottest Hollywood smash of the year — "Star Wars."

The story line of the $110-million extravaganza in outer space is as odd as the title.

Yet "Star Wars" grossed over $100 million in its first month in American theaters.

Here in Twin Falls, where "Star Wars" opened a few days ago, the flick may surpass "Jaws" as the longest-running movie in history.

The props in "Star Wars" aren't much like Dodge City.

Instead of Roy Rogers riding Trigger, "Star Wars" features Han Solo astride his faster-than-light spaceship.

The "Star Wars" gunfighter, Obi-Wan Kenobi, ends up trapping his laser beam instead of a cat.

And the trusty sidekick in "Star Wars" isn't Tonto, but a stubby, fire-plug of a robot called R2D2.

Still, the plot and main characters of "Star Wars" are as well-worn as the fistic of Wyatt Earp's holster. So why is this misplaced genre, or stereotype, film a success?

The easiest answer is simply to say, American moviegoers have been waiting for a good shoot 'em up western for years and "Star Wars" comes closest to filling the bill.

Westerns with happy endings died a bloody death a few years ago, somewhere between "The Wild Bunch" and "A Fistful of Dollars."

Back when Hollywood was young and America could remember the frontier days, westerns were the mainstay of the neighborhood theater.

In those films, when William S. Hart, Tim McCoy and Tom Mix rode across the screen, westerns recreated the spirit of the American frontier.

Good men won out over evil in those days and opportunities were as wide as the horizon.

People once liked that kind of movie.

By the 1930s, western movies started to change. The Depression soured movie audiences toward simplistic western themes.

A few cowboys still rode into the sunset, but the whole western genre changed. The bad guys started winning. The good guys didn't wear white hats anymore.

Then came Marilyn Monroe, the Vietnam War and "Bonnie and Clyde." By the 1960s it was a long way from the Red River Valley. Authentic westerns, in the mold of the early dramas, were as rare as the Lone Ranger without his mask.

Until "Star Wars" ... Don't misunderstand "Star Wars." It's the story of spacemen wearing conbo hats. That Gibson isn't kidnapped by Martians.

But the "Star Wars" plot reflects the same kind of good guys, bad guys struggle of the early western movies.

More importantly, "Star Wars" also rekindles a frontier setting which offers great opportunities for hardworking heroes.

Space, just like the American West once did, offers a backdrop for good guys to overcome bad guys and still be heroic.

Director George Lucas even offers a name for the extraordinary power of good will, called, guess what, evil in "Star Wars." He calls it "the force."

Somewhat "the force" manages to guide laser beams into the Achilles' heel of the most mighty weapon of the lions called the Death Star.

Just as Tom Mix never missed a laser beam, generally, "the force" never misses.

A movie utilizing "the force" couldn't be made anywhere but in outer space in this age of skepticism and diminished human spirit.

Only space — like the West used to do — offers an unknown frontier where human efforts bring results of galactic proportion.

"Star Wars" offers an imaginative look at what great deeds may be done by man in his last frontier.

May the force be with you, George Lucas and the "Star Wars" gang.

You've given moviegoers a reason to re-live the best of the West in the last of known frontiers.

Sees special interest group power in Congress

Blitter, Times-News:
In the 1974 Congressional elections special interest groups contributed $12.5 million to congressional candidates. In 1976 this amount increased to more than $22 million.

These figures indicate that special interest groups wield far more influence in Congress than do individual citizens. With the average expenditure for campaigning being $617,000 for the Senate, and $30,000 for the House, candidates are forced to engage in the degrading and scandal-ridden practice of soliciting donations from special interest groups.

Candidates who accept this money must consider the wishes of the interest groups who support them. In effect, congressional seats are up for sale to the highest bidder. The real losers are the American people, whose needs are considered secondary to those of the interest groups.

Who are some of these special interest groups that are bought up more and more of Congress each year? Labor groups contributed approximately $7 million in 1976. Business groups contributed $7 million. Health and doctor groups contributed $2.5 million. The lists goes on and on with at least one common goal. That is to promote their interests, often at the expense of the average citizen.

There is a way to ensure better representation for the average citizen. Presently there is legislation before Congress which would provide public financing for congressional campaigns. This legislation is similar to that in effect for the 1976 presidential campaign. It would provide for a $1 check-off program on your income tax forms if you wanted to direct that money to the congressional campaigns. These donations would be used to match small private donations, thus providing the candidates with sufficient campaign funds.

This money would be provided with no strings attached so that the candidates would not be obligated to all of their constituents and not just those who financed their campaigns. The 1976 presidential campaign is proof of the volatility and importance of the public financing law. In contrast to the 1972 election scandals, including Watergate and 29 major corporations pleading guilty to making illegal campaign contributions, the 1976 presidential election provided Congress with an example of a fair and just campaign.

Presently Congress is facing its own Watergate, including sex scandals, conflicts of interest, violations of election laws and payoffs from Korean officials. These scandals have even touched Idaho.

Time is of the essence if the public intends to demand that Congress — who in 1974 agreed to public financing for the President but not for itself — now take itself off the auction block.

To do this, Congress must pass public financing legislation THIS YEAR — if a new system is to be in place for the 1978 congressional campaigns.

If you are in favor of public financing to ensure fair campaign practices and fair representation in Congress, write your congressman, (House of Representatives, Washington, D.C. 20515; U.S. Senate, Washington, D.C. 20510)

Says irrigators' complaint motivated by greed

Editor, Times-News:
Open letter to John Peavey, et al.

You may fool some of the people with your demand that Idaho Power Co. use its water rights to stop depletion of Snake River flows for putting new desert land under irrigation.

Your complaint is that if the company prevented irrigators from taking water out of the Snake above its dams, there would be more water for hydro-generation and there wouldn't be any need to build a coal-fired plant.

That's because I probably know the irrigators among you better than most people who've read and heard about your complaint. I helped many of you get started in irrigation pumping, and I know you aren't the small, defenseless farmers you'd like people to believe. Some of you are among the biggest farmers in Idaho today.

The real reason you're fussing at Idaho Power is that you're greedy. Now that you have it made, you want to shut off any further development of Idaho's land and water. You're aboard, so now you want to pull in the greenback, sit back and watch the price of your crops and land go up.

If you had your selfish way, Idaho's farm boys who want to stay on the land like their fathers would be unable to realize their youthful ambition. Instead they'd have to get jobs in town. And — or the reason that John Peavey and his friends want Idaho Power to shut off any more irrigation development.

That's tragedy enough in a state whose economic progress has been built on agriculture. But you guys want to add insult to injury by making Idaho Power do your dirty work for you. That's a cheap shot if I've ever seen one.

I'm not a champion of Idaho Power, but you attempt to put the monkey on its back is certainly hitting below the belt.

If you're so interested in trying to impose your strange economic goals on the area where you've made it big and stopping others from making a living on the land, take your arguments to the state legislature. It's the proper body to determine whether growth in Idaho should be stopped in its tracks.

Wants IPUC salaries equal to district judge's

Editor, Times-News:
The president of the Idaho State Bar Association has made a good case for an annual salary of $37,000 for Idaho's district judges, as well as better pay for the governor and other state elected officials.

This writer would like to request the Idaho Legislature to increase the salaries of the Idaho Public Utility commissioners to the district judge level.

In all probability the Idaho Public Utility commissioners hear more cases, render more decisions affecting the welfare of more Idaho citizens, put in longer hours and spend more time away from their homes to accommodate Idaho citizens by holding hearings near the town where the question to be decided is located, than the combined time of several of the Idaho district judges.

The May 1, 1977, issue of the Boise Statesman lists 100 Idaho state officials, the five supreme court judges, the 21 district judges who receive annual salaries larger than the three Idaho Public Utility commissioners, which is $22,000.

The chairman of the board of Idaho Power Co. received an annual salary and fringe benefits greater than the combined salaries of the three IPUC commissioners in 1976. Idaho Power Co. president's salary and fringe benefits nearly equaled the three commissioners' combined salary in 1976, and eight other IPUC corporate officers had salaries nearly double or equal to the three IPUC commissioners' salaries in 1976.

The same also holds true for the salaries of the top 17 officers of the Utah Power Co. The top 17 officers of the Washington Water Power Co. and the top 7 officers of the Intermountain Gas Co.

The suggestion resulting in 100,000 megawatt hours of Bonneville Power to be received by Idaho Power Co. during 1977-78, which would save Idaho ratepayers nearly $10 million for the two years, was made originally by Commissioner Lowmeyer, and passed along through proper channels to Interior Secretary Earl Anderson.

Idaho legislators should recognize the IPUC commissioners are intelligent men leaving the public's interest foremost in mind. Consequently, they should receive salaries equal to Idaho district judges.

Otter confused?

Editor, Times-News:
It appears to me that gubernatorial candidate Otter is somewhat confused by the meaning of the word "freedom." What he is talking about is not freedom; it is anarchy, which has never worked anywhere in the world.

For Freedom to exist, there must be a climate for it. The climate for freedom in America has always been created by our Constitution and our traditions. Mr. Otter's prescription would destroy the rules for our society and freedom would perish.

He may feel using nine- and ten-year-old children in pornography publications is freedom, but it is not. It is just as immoral as murder, and theft and all of our other moral laws. Society has a right to protect itself from such atrocities and a society that doesn't will cease to be civilized.

Society also has a right to protect itself from the drug pushers and anyone else who would exploit the weaker among us, most notably children. I hope Mr. Otter will reconsider his opinion on these and other issues.

Girl wants class

Editor, Times-News:
This is a letter of protest against many Maple Valley Schools. In particular, Kimberly High School.

I am only starting my high school year, but I plan a career in the Navy. Any wise person knows many services require mechanical and shop experiences. Shop I can take, but mechanics is not allowing girls to be heard.

I personally believe mechanics is a needed subject for girls, to learn and to experience things with cars and so forth.

I write this letter in hopes that someone will agree that women are sleeping forth in the world. That we need the knowledge of this work.

I write this letter for some person on the school board to read and think about. We need some help!

Criticizes article

Editor, Times-News:
I am extremely upset and distressed by the thoughtlessness of the people who get the news items to your paper and the headlines that are printed by the paper, whoever may be concerned.

I worked with Richard Richmond and to see the blaring headlines saying this was suicide not only unnecessary but cruel and inhuman to the members of the family and his many friends, and I do hope this was a one-time thing.

It was a fine person to work with, contented and quiet and so talented. Perhaps he has had personal problems that have overwhelmed him, but were you or they aware that Rich had been working long hours for the past two weeks on a very large job that was very challenging to him but at the same time, drained him at rest.

Whether this was intentional or otherwise, WHY do you have to put such headlines in the paper when really no one knows. Newspaper people have a living to make but they certainly could be much more courteous and thoughtful of people's feelings.

I have become more and more disappointed in the Times-News since Gus Kotler left the paper and wonder if it is even worth paying for. I have the disgusting items and articles in the paper.

Nation's standards lower

Editor, Times-News:
In the June 19 Times-News an article from Nashville, Tenn. about the Presbyterian Church in the 'S' defending the rigidity of homosexual laws for our nation's Christian media has taken from the standards of our founding fathers and the Holy Scriptures.

If you would take a little time and read the 24th chapter of the book of Matthew and check all the center references in the King James version, you will find that the scriptures are being fulfilled and time is running out.

CLARENCE C. ROBINSON

I feel we have had our last presidential election as a nation and that if our government passes laws to give homosexuals free way, you will see sin rampant in the open as never seen since the days of Sodom and Gomorrah.

Read the 19th chapter of the Book of Genesis, verses 1 through 25.

Matthew 21:25 was fulfilled in the dark day of May 19, 1980, and the moon was blood red that night. Then the falling of the stars Nov. 13, 1933. Read also Luke 17:26 through 37.

Prayer for today

It may be Independence Day, God, but we aren't independent any more. We've lost that independent spirit. It seems we're too lethargic to care whether we're free. We're like the man who had been in prison so long that he wanted to stay.

We've become so accustomed to the encroachments on our freedoms that, as long as we have the comforts of life, we're pretty willing to let things stay as they are. As long as the rising crime rate and the threat of communism don't affect us too much, we aren't going to worry.

We don't really want to be free of our sins, either, as long as we enjoy sinning.

Dear God, give us back our love for freedom.

Boise meet probe asked

WASHINGTON, D.C. (UPI) — Rep. George Hansen, R-Idaho, has asked the General Accounting Office to investigate the International Women's Year meeting held in Boise in May.

Hansen asked the GAO to look into alleged illegal lobbying with appropriated federal funds and the possibility of deliberate evasion of statutory requirements that officers made to get 3 Idaho women at the meeting.

Hansen also said that he has directed his own attorneys to prepare a lawsuit to enjoin further lobbying by the International Women's Year Commission. Hansen was apparently referring to support expressed for the Equal Rights Amendment in his accusations of illegal lobbying.

Organizers of the May meeting denied that any lobbying was conducted by the women at the meeting and defended their efforts to involve a representative cross-section of Idaho women in the conference.

Betsy Park, Boise, executive director of the coordinating committee for the May meeting, said, "We were not involved in lobbying issues."

"Our job was to plan the conference. The purpose was for the women to come together and make recommendations in areas of concern to women," she added.

Janet Hay, a member of the State Board of Education, who also participated in the planning of the conference, called Hansen's charges

"totally untrue."

As for the lobbying charges, Hay added, "There was no lobbying. We made it clear through all the proceedings that the funds could not be used for lobbying."

The International Women's Year conference in Idaho received $25,000 from the national commission to put on the May meeting. The federal law setting up the national commission specifically prohibits lobbying by the group or by any activities it funds.

Search committee for BSU job set

BOISE (UPI) — The president of the State Board of Education announced selection Friday of an 18-member search committee to screen candidates and choose finalists for the presidency of Boise State University.

A. L. Alford Jr., Lewiston, said the committee, chaired by board member John W. Swartley, Boise, will begin immediately to seek a successor to Dr. John Barnes whose resignation takes 30 years as president's effective Sept. 1.

The group will hold its orientation session at 9 a.m. Thursday in the conference room of the Boise State University School of Liberal Arts. The meeting is open to the public.

Swartley said the committee will spend its first session discussing qualifications of candidates and drafting a job description. The committee is expected to develop a timetable for its search, although Swartley already told the board he hoped it could choose from among final candidates by February of 1978.

The chairman said the committee represents Boise State University, faculty, students, alumni and the Boise community.

— State Rep. Kathleen Gurnsey of Boise.

— State Rep. Larry Jackson, Boise, representing the alumni association.

— BSU administrators Asa Ruyte, vice president for financial affairs; Dr. Gerald Wallace, dean of the School of Education; and Dr. David Taylor, vice president for student affairs.

— Robert Hansberger, chairman and chief executive, officer of Futura Industries, and Ralph J. Comstock, president of First Security Bank, representing the business community.

— Dr. Jerry Tucker, chairman of the BSU Faculty Senate.

— students Mike Hoffman, studentbody president, Linda Norberg, representing vocational/technical students, and faculty members Roland Bonachea, Monte Wilson, Robert McWilliams, John Dahlberg, June Penner, Glenda Trumbo.

Also attending will be Rosalee Nadeau, director of Affirmative Action and Phyllis Carnahan, search committee coordinator.

Gas line report pleases company

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Northwest Pipeline Friday said it was pleased with reports from federal agencies that the Alcan-natural gas pipeline proposal was the least environmentally damaging method of delivering gas from Alaska, but ignored the fact that two agencies urged President Carter to reject building the pipeline altogether.

The President's Council on Environmental Quality said proposals by Alcan competitors, El Paso Natural Gas and Arctic Gas, were "uncertain" and "unacceptable" respectively.

The council recommended Alcan as the least environmentally damaging way of bringing North Slope gas to the lower 48 states if there is "a compelling need for gas from Alaska."

But both the council and the Interior Department urged Carter to reject any gas pipeline through the "unspoiled beauty" of the Arctic and questioned the "compelling need" for Alaskan gas.

In a news release Friday, Northwest President John McMillan said, "We are extremely pleased by the many favorable comments made by respect federal agencies with respect to our proposed Alcan pipeline project."

"Today's reports dramatically support our long-standing conviction that the Alcan project is the most efficient, most economical and most environmentally suited plan for delivering Alaska gas to the east, midwest and western U.S.," he said. But the release did not mention the recommendation that Carter rebuff any pipeline.

Health grant due

BOISE (UPI) — Governor John Evans announced Friday that he has received assurances from the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) that the Idaho Health System Agency will receive approval for its second-year planning grant.

The Seattle regional office of HEW in June had indicated that it planned to disapprove the planning grant and thus raised the possibility that Idaho would lose $7 to $5 million in funds for health care manpower, equipment and facilities.

Evans said that the assurance of approval for the agency's planning grant came directly from Joseph A. Callifano Jr., Secretary of the federal department.

Callifano also indicated the following conditions for the approval:

— The governor must review the Statewide Health Coordinating Council membership and add new members to the council who have no direct involvement with the Health Systems Agency.

— The governor must direct the State Health Planning and Development Agency directly to assist the Health Systems Agency but insure that the state agency is not taking responsibility for functions the Health Systems Agency is supposed to perform.

Parma mediator asked

PARMA (UPI) — The State Board of Education has been asked to supply a teacher representative to the Parma school board negotiations in Parma, according to the Parma Education Association (PEA).

Joe O'Neill, chief PEA negotiator, said his teacher organization, requested the mediation between the organization and the school board "because we're poles apart, and we need some help to settle this thing."

However, Craig Zaiss, chief negotiator for the school board, said the board considered it unnecessary at this point.

Negotiations between the two groups broke off Thursday over the same issue that has bedeviled the talks from the beginning. The two sides have so far been unable to agree on what matters should be subject to negotiation.

Strikers refuse offer

KELLOGG, Idaho (UPI) — Striking Bunker Hill miners Friday rejected what the company termed was its "final offer" in balloting.

A general membership meeting was held in Kellogg Friday morning.

The strike began May 6 and will enter its ninth week next week.

The action rejecting the offer came as no surprise.

The Union Local 2854 said in its strike bulletin that the offer contained "no substantial improvement from our original offer and our negotiating committee does not recommend passage."

Rejection was nearly unanimous among the 1,000 strikers, according to one source.

Gibb honor proposed

BOISE (UPI) — Boise State University President John Barnes said Friday he will recommend the new "bridge between" Boise State University and Julia Davis Park be named the Robert Gibb Friendship Bridge.

Barnes made the suggestion after Robert Gibb, assistant director of the university's extended day and summer school program, died Friday morning.

Gibb, 65, died the day he was due to retire after suffering a recent heart attack.

Gibb led Boise High School through a record six successful football seasons while coaching there in the 1940s and 1950s.

Waiver OK for guides

WASHINGTON, D.C. (UPI) — The U.S. Forest Service has decided to grant insurance waivers to outfitters and guides leading special-use permits on recreational rivers, according to a statement released from the office of Idaho's Senator James McClure.

All forest supervisors have been directed to waive insurance requirements when presented with evidence by the outfitter or guide that insurance is not available or available only at such a high cost as to make the operation of his or her business financially impossible.

Congressman Hansen is a marked man

If you listen to the political experts, Congressman George Hansen is a marked man.

Marked to the extent that no matter who runs against him in the Republican primaries in 1978 Hansen will lose.

And of course if Hansen manages to defeat his fellow GOP candidate in the primary, he'll surely go down to defeat in the general election.

Congressman Hansen, in Idaho last week, says he is a marked man, but for a different reason than political forecasters are giving.

There is little doubt that Hansen has lost support of many of his supporters in the Second Congressional District.

There is little doubt he faces a hard, uphill battle if he hopes to retain his Congressional seat.

But the question Idahoans in the Second Congressional District should be asking themselves is — if George Hansen is a marked man in Washington and is heavily in debt because he has gone to Washington and did what we sent him to do, should it be his responsibility to bear alone?

Congressman George Hansen represents Idaho. His voting record shows he represents Idaho very well.

His attendance record and his reputation prove he is not in Washington to enjoy the sights or bask in the luxury of benefits. Hansen has been told that he cannot solicit funds, that his family cannot solicit funds nor can a committee solicit funds for him.

While you may not agree with the principle of Congressmen accepting funds from outside sources, surely you must question why Hansen is being singled out as a Congressman who cannot obtain outside funds from any source.

In Idaho, Hansen's wife and family would become responsible for all personal debts, should something happen to the Congressman.

That is a heavy burden to put on a man and his family, especially when the debt was acquired doing what we elected him to do.

George Hansen is a hard-working, dedicated Congressman. If you disagree with his record or his philosophy, then you'll have every opportunity to vote him out of office.

But few, if any, can challenge George Hansen's honesty and dedication. If Hansen is a marked man for doing what we elected him to do, what would we have in office if we replaced him?

When George Hansen tells the Washington set what to do with their decision to not allow his wife or an independent committee to solicit funds to pay off campaign-related expenses it will once again get a lot of attention from the media and from both political parties.

But one has got to wonder, just how much sacrifice, just how much indebtedness, just how much restriction can be placed on a job?

And when the Washington set makes George Hansen a marked man, they are making you a marked man also.

Maybe Hansen hasn't complained enough about what is taking place. Maybe he has carried too much weight on his shoulders for you, maybe, we haven't paid enough attention.

But one thing we do know, in order to keep the position from the Second Congressional District of Idaho a strong one, one we can be proud of and one that will promote the ideas we endorse, we should help Congressman George Hansen defeat this attempt to sink him under the weight of continual harassment that keeps him tied both financially and in time consumed.

Otherwise we will have no representation in the future.

Hansen says he is a marked man by labor and by the Democratic party because he is (1) a Republican, (2) conservative (3) a man who stands against social giveaways, wild government spending, federal bureaucracy (such as OSHA, food stamps to strikers) and excessive federal benefits.

The Congressman is in trouble. He is in debt to the tune of $44,000 politically and to the tune of hundreds of thousands of dollars personally. However, the personal debt can be traced directly to his political career and his four-year-long battle to prove he was not guilty of wrongdoing in his campaign and political career.

Congressman Hansen says it should cost $75,000 to run a campaign for the Congressional seat he now holds. For the past two campaigns it should have cost him around $150,000.

The two campaigns — because of accusations of misuse of funds — actually cost the Congressman over $400,000.

Hansen feels the costs and the charges were directed related to the fact he intended to work against labor and against federal bureaucracy. His argument picks up steam when court records reveal that Hansen was nearly beaten down because he (1) was late filing election forms and (2) had $2150 listed on a wrong form.

Yet other political figures, appearing in the same court and almost at the same time were given a light slap on the hand and sent on their way.

And the man who led the attack (Wayne Hays of Ohio) against Hansen, got off very lightly when he himself got into trouble in a scandal that shook the elite of Washington.

As a result of Hansen's four-year battle he is now personally in debt. He acquired that debt in hiring attorneys and accountants to defend his personal reputation. The law said the Congressman could not appear himself, he had to hire attorneys and accountants.

When Hansen went before a committee recently to ask for the right to solicit funds for his personal use he was attacked by the news media and many of his constituents.

But now one must wonder if the attacks were entirely justified.

How does a Congressman who does not abuse the wonderful world of free political benefits get into trouble?

Hansen doesn't blink the taxpayer by taking advantage of all the freebies Congressmen get these days.

No, our Congressman got into trouble trying to do what we elected him to do — fight bureaucracy and runaway federal spending.

And as a result, he is indeed a marked man.

negotiations between the two groups broke off Thursday over the same issue that has bedeviled the talks from the beginning. The two sides have so far been unable to agree on what matters should be subject to negotiation.

Highway official retires

BOISE — Norman Crossley, local roads supervisor for the Idaho Division of Highways, has retired after 19 years of service to the state.

Well-known among city officials throughout Idaho, Crossley supervised the urban and secondary roads programs on the 5,000-mile state highway system. Crossley joined the Idaho Division of Highways in 1958 as urban engineer and became local roads supervisor in 1974 with reorganization of state government.

He was born in Lowell, Mass., attended high school in New Hampshire and received his civil engineering degree from Northwestern at Boston.

He was a commissioned officer in the U.S. Navy in World War II where he gained experience in structural, railroad and municipal engineering and administration.

Before employment with the state, Crossley held municipal engineering posts at Lewiston and Twin Falls.

Growers eligible for trip

TWIN FALLS — Bakker Bros. an Idaho seed company, is offering a free trip for two to the Bakker headquarters in Noord, Saskatchewan, Holland, to its best contract bean grower this year.

John Decorde, manager of the Idaho branch of Bakker Bros., says he is offering the trip to the grower who has the best overall production and quality of any given seed crop. The company decides in bean seed.

Decorde says yield per acre will be measured in terms of total return and will be compared to norms for the particular kind of seed grown.

"Each variety is a little different," Decorde says. "We'll have to base it on the overall average of the variety."

"He says quality will be given special consideration."

"To get the yield is good, but to get really top quality is something else," Decorde explains. "The one that wins is going to really be the one that has the most quality. It will be judged on uniformity of seed, germination, whether the seed was cracked in the combine and other factors, he adds.

The winner may take his wife to Holland at Bakker's expense."

Sugar firm pays dividend

SALT LAKE CITY — A quarterly dividend of five cents a share was declared by U and I Inc. Wednesday on its outstanding common stock.

The dividend was a further cut from the 15 cents declared each of the two preceding quarters. A common dividend of 30 cents a share had been paid in each of the six fiscal quarters preceding "An extra dividend of 30 cents a share was declared in March, 1976."

Ronald M. Cannon, president and chief executive officer, said the dividend declaration reflected the continued severe price depression for refined sugar in the United States which diminishes earnings prospects and thus dividends. He expressed hope the federal government would take meaningful action soon to improve market conditions.

A quarterly dividend of 31-5/8 cents a share was declared on preferred stock in the company.

U and I is a major beet sugar processor with refineries in Washington, Idaho and Utah and is majority stock owner in a potato processing firm with two plants in Oregon. The company also engages in diversified irrigated farming.

Can buyer near million mark

TWIN FALLS — Coors of Magic Valley, Inc. is approaching the million pound mark in aluminum can purchases in the Magic Valley area.

According to Dick Burwell, owner, Coors started purchasing all aluminum beverage cans in January 1970.

"The program was instituted by the Coors brewery in 1970 and Western Beverage Corp., the distributor from whom I purchased the business last fall.

We announce that the million pound mark will be reached in July," Burwell said.

He added, "972,455 pounds of aluminum have been purchased from January 1970 through the end of May this year. We are currently showing a 53% increase in collections compared to last year."

In addition to purchasing all aluminum beverage cans, Coors purchases all Coors bottles.

Meeting slated

TWIN FALLS — Charles R. Murphy, loan officer from the Boise office of the Small Business Administration, will be in Twin Falls July 14 to provide information and assist area farmers, ranchers and business people with SBA programs.

Murphy will be available for appointments from 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. at the chamber of commerce office, according to Ray Rostrom, chamber manager.

Appointments should be made in advance by calling the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce Office at 733-2974.

Stockpile pushed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Legislation to establish a system of priorities and mandatory stockpiling of strategic materials was introduced today by Idaho Sen. James McClure.

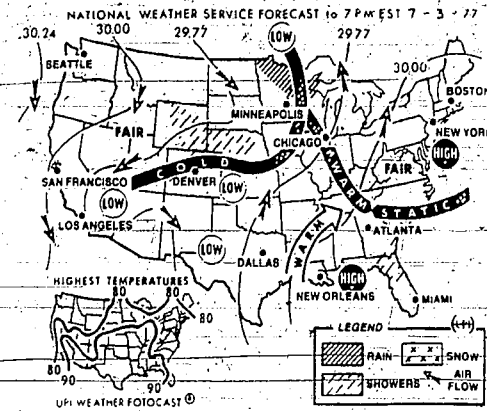

He said the bill would end the chaotic buying and selling of strategic stockpile materials based on considerations other than national security.

McClure said the taxpayer has ultimately taken the brunt of past "hodgepodge" purchasing and selling of stockpile materials at the discretion of the administration.

Fireworks won't fizzle in showers

Twin Falls, North Side, Burley-Rupert areas:

Partly cloudy today. Widely scattered thundershowers tonight and on Monday. Highs both days 75 to 80 and lows tonight in the 50s. Precipitation—probably increasing to 20 per cent late today and tonight.

Hatley, Camas Prairie, Lower Wood River Valley: Partly cloudy today with widely scattered thundershowers late today and tonight with gradual clearing and cooler on the Fourth.

Highs in the low to mid 70s. Lows tonight in the 40s.

Synopsis: Cool temperatures and unsettled weather will prevail through the remainder of the holiday weekend. A flow of cool air aloft from the northeast Pacific over the northwest states has now been established and will continue for the next few days at least. There are disturbances imbedded in this flow aloft which will bring some scattered showers or thundershowers as they pass over Idaho. One of these disturbances is expected to reach Idaho late today, continuing eastward tonight and early Monday.

Temperatures will warm a little today ahead of this next disturbance but should lower slightly again Monday. Highs for the next two days will generally range from the 70s into the low 80s in the lower valleys with overnight lows in the mid 40s to mid 50s. In the higher mountain valleys, cooler 65 to 75 highs and mid-30 to mid-40s lows will prevail.

The extended outlook for Tuesday through Thursday calls for some warming, but continuing a little unsettled with slight chance of showers mainly towards the beginning and end of the period. Highs 80s Tuesday, then 85 to 95 and overnight lows 50s.

Options funds pick up steam

Chicago Daily News

CHICAGO — The mutual-funds folks think they've got just the ticket for times like this when the stock market is skidding sideways. It's called an options fund, and it works simply:

The fund acquires a portfolio of widely held common stocks, and writes covered call options on nearly every share. (A covered call lets the buyer purchase 100 shares of stock at a fixed price within a specified time.)

The fund makes its money from stock dividends, option premiums and any short-term gain in the value of the underlying stock itself.

Even when the market is in the doldrums, say the men behind the new funds, they believe they can deliver a return of 10 per cent or more. Indeed, says Richard Palmer, a vice-president of the Colonial Option Income Fund, "This kind of worthy market is the best kind for options funds."

Palmer's Boston-based firm was the first of three companies to pioneer options funds, jumping in right behind Colonial—were Boston's Pat-nam group and Chicago's Kemper Financial Services.

Each fund's assets now range between $50 million and $60 million, and shares in each open-end fund will be "loaded," that is, sold by stockbrokers for an 8 1/2 per cent commission. The funds themselves will take a service charge of six tenths of 1 per cent and buy and sell shares in the funds.

Only the shares of the Colonial fund are available to the public at this time. They have come to be traded around $12 a share since being offered for the first time on June 10. The shares for the other two funds, of which Kemper is the latest, can't be offered until the funds are fully invested and a new prospectus can be printed. Once they're on the market, however, their prices will fluctuate daily and be quoted in newspapers along with those of the Colonial fund.

Even though the Colonial fund has been operating only a few weeks, said Palmer, almost 100 per cent of its assets have been invested in optionable stock and options expiring in five to six months have been written on almost all of the holdings. Colonial's preliminary projection—and it is preliminary, Palmer emphasizes—is that the fund could deliver 16 per cent for the year.

At Kemper, the portfolio managers have yet to commit all $50 million netted in the original underwritings of 3.6 million shares at an initial $15 each. Kemper plans to begin selling shares publicly on Sept. 1.

Neither the Kemper officials, nor the executives of any other fund, can guarantee the return they'll deliver.

"You can only talk about a yield after you have a history," said Thomas R. Anderson, the Kemper executive vice-president who becomes president July 1. "We can say only that the objective of the fund is a high current return, but our expectation is that 10 per cent is available."

When Kemper was studying the feasibility of the fund this spring, however, a model portfolio of 50 stocks yielded 11 per cent, said vice president Thomas M. Perkins, the portfolio manager. That was only on paper, he said, but it was achieved "in late April, with premiums above as low as the market."

Perkins feels the option-fund idea can weather the peaks and valleys in stock prices that inevitably "lie ahead. But some experts aren't sure they agree, and they have begun wondering how well the funds will fare once stock prices get moving again.

UP chief retires

OMAHA, Neb. (UPI) — Frank E. Barnett, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Union Pacific Corporation, will retire effective Aug. 7, the company announced Friday.

At their monthly meeting in New York, the board of directors elected James H. Evans, 57, now president, to succeed Barnett as chairman of the board and chief executive officer.

William S. Cook, 51, executive vice president, was named to succeed Evans as president. Cook will also serve as chief operating officer.

Barnett, who will be 60 in July, will continue as director of the $2-billion transportation and natural resources corporation and will serve as a consultant, the company said in a statement released by the Omaha office.

Barnett joined the Union Pacific Railroad Company in 1951 and was elected chairman of the executive committee and chief executive officer in 1967.

Barnett has occupied the post of chairman of the board since the Union Pacific Corporation was formed in 1964. Evans was elected a director of the railroad in 1965 and was named president when the Union Pacific Corporation was formed.

Cook joined the corporation as vice president in June, 1962. He was elected executive vice president in October 1973, and a director in 1974.

PUC to set up rules

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Public Utilities Commission decided Friday to determine whether there should be a uniform set of service deposit and termination rules covering utilities under its jurisdiction.

The commission said it has received numerous complaints the past two years dealing with deposit and termination practices of natural gas, electric, water and communication utilities.

In the past, the commission has approved various rules and regulations submitted by utilities on a case-by-case basis and finds the various rules have not been consistent between companies.

A rulemaking hearing was set by the commission for Aug. 29 in Boise to consider rules and regulations to be proposed by the commission staff and those utilities under PUC jurisdiction.

BOARD of Realtor members from Twin Falls, Betty Miller, Jeff Robbins and Lorraine Wills, from left, inspect the Don and Penny Matteson home, 395 9th Ave. N., one of 30 entered in the Make America Better Home Beautification Contest. Entries in the contest have closed and home owners have another 30 days to complete beautification projects. Prizes of $150, $125, and $100 will be awarded to the top three winners. Judging will be between Aug. 1 and 7.

Firm pays penalties

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The country's largest grocery store chain has paid a $130,000 penalty for misrepresenting the fat and calorie content of one of its breads, the Federal Trade Commission's said today.

The bread, "Skyland Diet Bread," had been the subject of an order issued by the FTC in 1963. The agency claimed Safeway violated that order by saying the bread was less fattening and lower in calories than other bread.

A federal court ruled last year that Safeway had violated the order and now the grocery store chain has agreed to pay $120,000 to the U.S. Treasury as the result of an out-of-court settlement, the agency announced.

Soviets seek solidarity

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union appealed Saturday to European Communist parties to join them in the struggle against a "united anti-Communist front" in an effort to head the growing rift between Western Communist parties and the Kremlin.

The appeal for unity came at the end of a visit by an Italian Communist delegation and follows a direct challenge to Moscow from Hungary — one of the first from a Soviet bloc nation.

The Soviet appeal, written by Vadim Zagladin, first deputy of the Central Committee's international department which deals with foreign parties, appealed for cooperation of European Communist countries to overcome what it called a "united anti-Communist front."

Under present conditions, such cooperation and solidarity of fraternal parties of Europe and of the whole world becomes especially vital and maneuvers directed at weakening cooperation becomes especially dangerous," Zagladin said.

"Even more because our adversaries are striving to set one Communist party against another and to use the independence and integrity of each party to oppose fraternal cooperation," he wrote.

Amin attends African summit

LIBREVILLE, Gabon (UPI) — Uganda's unpredictable President Idi Amin, a pistol strapped to his hip, made an unexpected appearance Saturday at the start of an OAU summit meeting and grinning broadly, straddled onto the hall to cheer.

Amin stroked into the $23 million copper-domed Conference Palace minutes before the start of the 49-nation summit of the Organization of African Unity.

The hairy Ugandan dictator smiled broadly and erected the auditorium to the applause of delegates before the opening speeches began.

Amin, resplendent in blue Air Force uniform with an array of medals emblazoned on his chest, was the only head of state to receive an ovation as he walked into the meeting hall.

It was yet another of Amin's famous surprises. This time played on his fellow African leaders. For the most secret of secrets, Radio Uganda had insisted Amin would not attend the annual OAU summit.

President Omar Bongo of Gabon, whom he just succeeded to the OAU chairmanship for a year, urged the African leaders to forget their differences and "to turn the conference into a session of reunion and solidarity."

Bongo said the supreme goal was the elimination of white minority regimes in southern Africa, but he also denounced Israel's pullout from the occupied Arab territories.

At least 21 African Presidents and five heads of government — one of the largest numbers in recent OAU history — attended the opening of the summit in this steamy West African capital which was still undergoing a massive $1 billion influx.

Israel denies battle report

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — A battalion-sized Israeli force backed by eight tanks crossed one mile into Lebanon Saturday to help Christian right-wing forces overrun the Palestinian-held village of Yarin, reports from the region said. Israel denied the report.

Palestinian sources said they destroyed one Israeli tank and recaptured the town after "bitter house-to-house fighting."

The Israeli Army denied its forces were involved in the attack. "This is sheer fantasy," an army spokesman said. "Everyday they are coming up with something new. We are getting tired of denying it."

Conflicting reports claimed control of the town, about one mile from the Israeli border, by nightfall.

A spokesman for the rightwing National Liberal party said the assault had led to the capture of the village. But the Palestinians claimed to have inflicted "heavy human and material losses" and said they had recaptured it.

No reliable casualty figures were available.

Both the rightists and Palestinians said the size of the Israeli force that reportedly joined in the attack was battalion strength, and the Palestinian news agency Wafa said it was backed by eight tanks.

Ancient Roman temple found

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — A German archaeologist believes he has located the site of the temple of Janus, which ancient Romans kept unbroken in wartime and locked in their brief periods of peace, the Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano said Saturday.

It said Prof. Heinrich Bauer reported his conclusions at the closing session of the Pontifical Roman Archaeological Academy's 51st annual meeting.

The newspaper said Bauer located what he thinks are the foundations of the temple of the two-faced god Janus in reconstructing the map of the Forum Transitorium, a section of the Roman Forum whose center is now buried under the 20th century Via dei Fori Imperiali.

He said a comparison with Renaissance sketches of the area led him to conclude that a wall at the north end of the Forum Transitorium belonged to the temple of the goddess Minerva.

From this he deduced that two curved walls at the south end were the foundations of the temple of Janus, the only other shrine mentioned by ancient Roman authors "as being in the Forum Transitorium."

Under the administration plan, as conveyed to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Lebanon would be granted $75 million to $100 million in credits to purchase light infantry weapons for a force of 3,000 to 5,000 men.

Albert J. Albertson Jr., assistant secretary of state for Near Eastern and South Asian affairs, outlined the administration's ideas on the subject to the Foreign Relations Committee on Thursday, department officials said.

Under the plan outlined by Albertson, Senate sources said, the United States would sell Lebanon communications equipment, vehicles such as jeeps, trucks and personnel carriers, and light infantry weapons such as rifles, carbines, machine guns, automatic rifles, mortars, and 100-millimeter artillery.

Clerics urge end to revolt

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — A Brazilian archbishop and two African cardinals have urged French traditionalist Archbishop Marcel Lefebvre to end his rebellion against Pope Paul VI, Vatican Radio said Saturday.

It was the Vatican's only reference Saturday to Lefebvre, who ordained 11 priests at his Swiss sanctuary three days ago in defiance of a papal ban and threat of excommunication.

Lefebvre, 71, has been in talks with the Vatican for three years because of his opposition to the modern language Mass and efforts toward unity with other Christian churches.

Vatican sources said earlier this week Pope Paul may seek an opinion from the Sacred Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith — once known as the Inquisition — on whether Lefebvre should be excommunicated.

Spain offers areas autonomy

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — The Spanish government Saturday announced its approval of autonomy for the rich industrial region of Catalonia and other independence-minded regions of Spain.

An Interior Ministry communiqué said ultimate decision to the home rule question must come from the newly elected Cortes (parliament) but offered a transitional formula to start regarding regional institutions "beginning now."

The government announcement followed a visit to Madrid by the president of the Catalan government in exile, Josep Tarradellas.

In the last five days Tarradellas held numerous meetings with King Juan Carlos, Premier Adolfo Suarez and Interior Minister Indalecio Maria Villa.

The Interior Ministry communiqué said, "The premier stated, and Mr. Tarradellas agreed, that autonomy should be offered to all the Spanish regions." But it said that the home rule statutes should not be granted for each region because of sociological and historical differences.

The communiqué said that until the Cortes has prepared autonomy legislation, the current local government statute could be used to temporarily unite the four Catalan provinces in an autonomous unit.

This institution would assume duties of the provincial assemblies and of the "Junta" of the commune, said. It would permit the restoration of the Generalitat (the Catalan autonomous government founded in 1312 and abolished by Tarradellas) as a legal, representative and regulatory body to regulate the transitional phase of the Generalitat.

Late strongman Francisco Franco abolished the autonomy laws that Catalonia and the Basque region had in the 1930's under the republic. Other regions that also seek some amount of home rule include Valencia and Galicia.

Pro-annex political forces swung to victory in the industrial northern region of Catalonia in the May 15 general elections. The parties led by the socialists, who have ruled since Franco's 1975 civil war, set a Catalan government

US mulls Lebanese arms aid

WASHINGTON — The Carter administration has begun unpublicized consultations with Congress on providing about $100 million in military aid to Lebanon to help the war-ravaged country create a light infantry force to maintain internal order.

State Department and Senate sources said Saturday that the administration would like to underscore its support for the government of President Elias Sarkis by contributing to the new force now being organized in Lebanon.

Lebanon's army was disbanded during the country's lengthy civil strife and order is now maintained by a 20,000-man Arab League force, made up mostly of Syrian units.

Under the administration plan, as conveyed to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Lebanon would be granted $75 million to $100 million in credits to purchase light infantry weapons for a force of 3,000 to 5,000 men.

Albert J. Albertson Jr., assistant secretary of state for Near Eastern and South Asian affairs, outlined the administration's ideas on the subject to the Foreign Relations Committee on Thursday, department officials said.

Keep quiet, Korean told

NEW YORK Times Service — WASHINGTON — The former director of the Korean Central Intelligence Agency, Kim Hyung Wook, who testified here June 22 on the Korean bribery scandal, disclosed Saturday that President Park Chung Hee had sent a cabinet minister to dissuade him from speaking out.

Kim, interviewed by the House Select Committee on Assassinations in Northern New Jersey, also asserted that President Park had ordered him to be kidnapped or assassinated in the event the discussion failed to prevent his appearance before a House subcommittee.

Kim's disclosures, coupled with the vehement reaction to his testimony from Korean officials, appeared to underscore the importance and credibility of the evidence he presented to the subcommittee headed by Rep. Donald M. Fraser, D-Minn.

In that day-long session on June 22, Kim provided the first public, authoritative details of the origins and scope of the six-year Korean operation intended to sway American policy, legislation and attitudes in favor of Korea and Park's government.

Over the last few days, that testimony has stimulated the federal and congressional investigations here, caused friction in Korea's relations with the United States, generated political animosity in South Korea, and reopened the controversy over the Kim Dae Jung kidnapping in Japan just before a crucial election.

Kim Hyung Wook, who was among the inner circle of young colonels who led the military coup that brought Park to power in 1961, said in the interview that Park had sent a permanent member of his cabinet, Min Byung Kwon, from Seoul to New Jersey to persuade him not to testify.

Villa scene for service

LISBON, Portugal (UPI) — A simple ecumenical funeral service was held Saturday for Margot Lapouse, widow of exiled King Carol of Romania, at the seaside villa in Estoril she shared with him in their final years together.

Mme. Lapouse, a vivacious Italian-haired beauty, who captivated the gossip columns for years when she followed the king into exile, died Wednesday at the age of 71. She had been bedridden for more than two years and ill for eight, a friend said.

Only one relative, Princess Maria Adele Von Hohenzollern of Bavaria, a niece of King Carol, was present among the small group of mourners.

Arabs may hike oil price

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates may announce their oil prices, the Middle East News Agency reported from Abu Dhabi Saturday.

The price increase announcement will follow a meeting in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia Sunday between Saudi Oil Minister Ahmed Zaki Yamani and his United Arab Emirates Oil Minister Mansour Odeh, the Egyptian news agency said.

While there was no immediate confirmation of the report from Emirates and Saudi official news media, the Qatar News Agency said Odeh will visit Riyadh today for "oil policy coordination talks" with Yamani and other Saudi Arabian government officials.

Discussions will cover possible oil price increases. The OPEC majority has decided to abstain on another 5 per cent oil price increase this month, the agency said.

Despite the majority decision, the cartel's hardliners, Iraq and Libya, have said their future moves depended on whether the Saudis and Emirates increased their oil prices by 5 per cent to bring their prices in line with the other OPEC members and end price war.

The six-month old price war started during last December's OPEC meeting in Doha, Qatar when 11 of the cartel's 13 members introduced a 10 per cent price increase coupled with plans to further boost prices by another 5 per cent July 1.

Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates broke away from the OPEC majority and increased prices by only 5 per cent.

The Kuwaiti newspaper Al Anba said on Thursday that Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates would raise their prices by 5 per cent on Friday.

The Kuwaiti newspaper report followed a public declaration Wednesday by nine other OPEC members canceling the previous plan to implement a 5 per cent price increase of their own on Friday.

Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates made no such announcement on Friday, the Muslim sabbath, however, and Libya and Iraq held up implementing any increases pending action by the Saudis and the Emirates.

Iraqi Oil Minister Tayeb

Abdel Karim had told the Wall Street Journal his country would not forego the scheduled increase until the Saudis and Emirates raised their prices to the level of the other members of the OPEC.

Sniper captured

FAYETTEVILLE, Pa. (UPI) — A former Marine suspected of being the sniper who shot and killed a police chief and a Fayetteville man near a burning cabin Saturday was captured hours later in a heavily wooded area.

Police said the suspect, 22-year-old Gary Rock, was wounded and taken to nearby Chambersburg Hospital. He was tracked down by 30 law officers, using dogs and a helicopter in this heavily wooded area in south central Pennsylvania.

State Police Lt. Herman Faiola said Fire Chief James C. Cutchall, 33, and Wilbur Brookens, about 50, were cut down by the sniper firing from an ambush near the burning cabin in rural Fayetteville. Faiola said Rock owned the cabin.

Fireman Scott Reichenbach, 38, was shot in the arm and was in guarded condition at Chambersburg Hospital.

Faiola said the incident began about 12:45 p.m. when Brookens, visiting a friend, heard an explosion in a cabin about 100 yards away.

As they ran to the scene, the sniper opened fire and Brookens was killed instantly with a bullet through the chest, Faiola said.

Stunt flier dies

UKIAH, Ore. (UPI) — A Seattle part-time flying instructor in her first air show was killed Saturday afternoon as her single engine plane crashed a half mile from where a crowd of people was watching her do aerobatics.

A spokesman for Queen City Aviation in Seattle identified the victim as Filomena Reed, 30. He said she had been a pilot for three or four years but that this was the first time she had done stunt flying for pay.

He said she was flying her own Decathlon model aircraft at the time of the crash.

Ruth Foyal, co-operator of the Trail Room Cafe and Bar, said that she had talked to the pilot before she went up to perform as a special event during the Basque Barbecue program.

"I told her I'd be scared to go, and she said it was the 'safest thing there is,'" Mrs. Foyal said. "Then there is this cloud of dust — and there she is dead."

Geddes said he "wouldn't want to speculate" how the vote would go for West if one of the three nominees were appointed and given a vote at the July 7 commission meeting.

Lindsay said he was uncommitted since he doesn't know all the facts and the other two nominees could not be reached for comment.

Idaho directs that a retiring commissioner must continue to serve until a new commissioner has been appointed, even though the retiring commissioner's term has expired.

West's job hangs in a balance because if Tyler votes again at the July 7 meeting, the vote will remain three-two against West.

If, however, a new commissioner is appointed in time to vote at the July 7 meeting, the penultimate commissioner and West could be retained.

"I don't know if Evans is going to appoint a new commissioner in time for the July 7 meeting," Batt said.

Carol Humphries, a secretary in Gov. Evans' of-rice, said Evans "has not set a date" for making the appointment. Evans was on a trip to speak to the Idaho Pharmaceutical Association and could not be reached for comment.

Asked if he would resign if directed, West said he is "not committed" at this time and has no decisions.

Batt said, "I happen to think Harold West has done a fine job, and I haven't heard or seen any reasons yet why he should be dismissed. I would prefer a new commissioner who would retain him."

"We always felt the growers should have an unqualified say in what goes on in the commission," Batt added. "I think it is apparent that the growers want to retain Harold West, and that the action of the Governor and some of the commission members are not consistent with what the growers want."

On the other side of the issue, Tyler said Saturday he is asking the state auditor to conduct an audit of the commission.

"Tyler said more facts are needed to determine whether the money contributed by the state's 15,000 wheat growers to the commission is being fully utilized."

In his statement, Tyler charged that West withheld information from the commission until just before action was necessary, giving the commission no opportunity to consult with its members. No examples were mentioned in the statement.

According to Tyler, West's behavior made working with him difficult. "Both the past president of the Idaho Wheat Growers, Robert Stack, and the current president, Robert Geddes, have complained to me of these problems," Tyler said.

Tyler also questioned West's expenditure of commission funds on lobbying activities at the legislature "in defiance of the commission."

Andrus emerging as domain guard

"We would like to see more of the projects which passed the review be eliminated," Kinsel said. "A number of the worst Bureau of Reclamation projects did survive. We have strongly supported the President in that effort to cut back some projects."

Kinsel predicted optimistically Carter would veto the water projects bill if it did not make sufficient cutbacks.

Cetta Hunter, executive director of the Wilderness Society, said members of her group "are very much encouraged by Andrus' attitudes and the stands he has taken on matters of concern to the conservation community."

Hunter said Andrus still has to take a stand on the D-2 wilderness lands in Alaska, an issue of great concern to the Wilderness Society and other conservation groups.

"We're very much concerned about having some of public domain put into wilderness," Hunter said.

"We'll be pressing him on that," Evans of the Sierra Club said about the Alaskan wilderness. "It's the last time in any of our lifetimes we'll have a chance to save so much (land) in such a short time."

Evans said the Sierra Club supports a bill which would set aside about 114 million acres of Alaskan public lands as wilderness. He said competing bills set aside as low as only 20 million acres.

Andrus is scheduled to make a policy decision on the issue by September, and Evans said he expects legislation to clear the House within the next 12 months.

"Time is running out fast," Evans said. "It's a big chance, like Teddy Roosevelt all over again, for the last time."

"It's so much we want to write the history books about Cvetil Andrus," Evans concluded. "But he has taken a strong position so far."

Homeowners warned on tax bite

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Idaho's assessors are warning homeowners and other property holders to look out for rising tax bills as mandatory steps are taken to increase assessments for tax purposes.

With more properties coming on the tax rolls and property assessments required to increase, the state's taxing units will find themselves getting rich while taxpayers are getting poor if steps aren't taken to cut levies somewhat, many assessors say.

Twin Falls assessor Bill Clark is one of those resisting further burdens on taxpayers.

Between 500 and 600 new or extensively remodeled homes or other properties have been added to the county tax rolls in the past year, Clark noted.

He said construction in the county is moving at such a rapid pace it is difficult for his deputies to keep up with the on-site appraisals required by law.

On his desk Wednesday were a stack of about 250 cards on new and remodeled buildings which are still awaiting appraisal.

"When a new home is built it does not go on the tax rolls until the following year. A home which is completed in June or July of 1977 will not be taxed until the January assessment and the owner will have to pay his first tax bill by the Dec. 20 deadline of 1978.

Construction has been growing for several years, Clark said, and many new properties are added each year. On the basis of the present assessment methods, the 500 new homes, at an average of $30,000 per home, would represent about $15 million in true value but only about $7.5 million in "market value for assessment purposes." The present rate used in Twin Falls County is about 50 per cent of true value, Clark said.

The new properties should increase the county's assessed value by about $1.5 million, Clark added.

When the assessor goes to a new home to make an assessment, he requests permission to enter the home for an inspection. In this way he can determine type of construction, quality of materials, the number of bedrooms, baths, fireplaces and built-in appliances or fixtures.

Clark said some home owners do not admit the assessor to the home, which may work to their disadvantage. Only if the assessor can make this first hand inspection can the property owner be assured of a fair assessment.

The assessor explained the deputy will also take measurements of the home and based on type of construction and features uses a manual to determine a per-foot value and arrive at a total assessment for the building.

"This year a 17.5 per cent assessment ratio will be used to reach the final assessed value of the home.

Although the state tax commission has ruled all counties in Idaho should be assessing at 100 per cent of market value by 1982, Clark said he, like his predecessor Ronald Taylor, is continuing to resist this.

"I just don't think the taxing units will reduce levies accordingly. I don't see how we can expect this to happen when they could all use additional revenue."

"There is no law requiring levies to be reduced consistent with the increase in assessed value."

Clark said with increasing demands on taxing units for more public services and higher salaries for teachers and other public employees it is doubtful the taxing units would hold the line with such an opportunity for expansion of revenue.

Clark said with increasing demands on taxing units for more public services and higher salaries for teachers and other public employees it is doubtful the taxing units would hold the line with such an opportunity for expansion of revenue.

Clark said most county assessors are in agreement with his stand and he said he doubts if the change to 100 per cent of actual value can be accomplished by 1982.

"They have been talking about it since 1912 and most of us are still a long way from the 100 per cent level," Clark said.

Clark said he has four full time appraisers working out of his office and will add another July 11, a land and property appraisal graduate from Boise State University.

The second five-year reappraisal program is now underway in Twin Falls county with the assessor's staff doing the reappraisal. The initial reappraisal, required by state law, was completed a year ago under contract. County officials felt the new values on all property in the county had been set reappraisal work would not be as complicated and can be handled by regular appraisals.

Power plant site bill due next year

By LORAYNE SMITH
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — A Republican state senator from Wilder says he plans to reintroduce a power plant siting bill in the 1978 Idaho Legislature.

The legislation, sponsored by Phil Batt, senate president pro tem, passed the senate 35-0 last year, but was lost in the confusion of the final days of the session in the House.

Most Magic Valley legislators say they approve the concept of Batt's bill which would require a utility firm wanting to build a costly generating facility to pay fees from $150,000 to $350,000 to pay for studies on plant sites.

The plant siting bill also would outline procedures to be followed in selecting a location for a power plant.

Since Idaho Power Co. has filed for permission to build a 500-megawatt coal-fired electrical generating plant, naming three possible locations, Idaho Public Utilities Commission (IPUC) officials have urged passage of a plant siting act.

Robert Loughen, president of the IPUC, has said while the commission has the legal authority to choose a site as well as deny or issue permission to construct a plant, he feels a decision on the one aspect held up in court.

Loughen said the law is insufficient in establishing criteria for determination of a site. Also under current statutes the IPUC does not have resources of personnel to conduct independent preliminary studies and must rely on power company financial studies.

Batt said this week he has "interted the utilities to discuss any changes they would like." He also said he intends to talk to IPUC officials and the Idaho Conservation League.

"It will be my position not to make any changes in last year's bill unless they are agreed to by all parties concerned," the Wilder senator said.

He does not anticipate any problem in the bill's passage this year, with the added impetus of Idaho Power's pending application for a coal-fired plant.

Sen. Dean Van Engelen, R-Turley, said he felt Batt's bill was "good for both the IPUC and for the power company" and that under present legislation the site selection is "in a grove area."

All but one of Magic Valley legislators polled said they either favored Batt's bill from last year, or at least approved the concept and would want to examine the specifics of a new bill before committing themselves.

"Disregard for private property" is what it boils down to, said James F. Smith, who lives across the street from the ballfield on Highland Drive.

Smith said Friday baseballers were playing catch across the street from his house in such a way that when they missed the ball it hit his car or rolled into his front yard.

"Then the ballplayers came into his yard, searching for the balls without any regard for his plants or grass," Smith said.

Smith couldn't point to specific damage done to his yard Friday but he said plants had been stepped on and mangled in the past.

He also complained about people parking their cars on his grass and using his driveway as a turnaround.

The Rev. Robert Seaman, who runs the all-terrain church league that plays off South Park, said he thinks those are the hazards of living across the street from a ballfield.

"I don't think there's anything you can really do about it," he said.

However, Seaman said he had discussed the problems with all the coaches and asked them to keep their players from running through Smith's yard.

"He has a definite persecution complex," Seaman said of Smith. "I don't think my players are guilty of any vandalism."

Gordon Hollifield, R-Jerome, said he was against a power plant siting bill because it would be "duplication."

"There's no reason not to trust the studies made by the Idaho Power Co.," Hollifield said. He also feels that the IPUC already has adequate power to decide on a site.

Another South Park neighbor, Gene Helms, also complained about ballplayers running through his yard, and he said the lights on the ball park field are on until midnight.

Seaman said he thought Smith was "taking a cheap shot" blaming it on the churches. "I went out last night to talk to him, but I couldn't even get to first base."

The season will end in four weeks, and then "the Lord willing," the problem will be over, Seaman said. Next summer the league plans to play at Frontier Field, where baseball diamonds are currently under construction.

Events set for 4th

MAGIC VALLEY — For Magic Valley residents who don't take to the highways or mountains, there's a wide variety of entertainment today and Monday at Fourth of July celebrations.

Everything from horse racing and rodeos to parades, fireworks and joint church services are being offered in Magic Valley communities.

The schedule of events today in Rupert includes horse racing featuring a Quarter horse derby at 7 p.m. and a religious program in the city square at 2 p.m. Festivities will conclude with a rodeo at 8:30 p.m. in the fairgrounds.

On Monday, Rupert's Fourth of July parade gets underway at 11 a.m. followed by more horse racing and the evening of a new rodeo queen.

Days of the Old West continue in Hilday today and Monday with shoot outs staged on Main Street. The Hilday rodeo will begin at 4 p.m. followed by fireworks about 9:30.

Monday, holiday crowds in the Wood River Valley can start the day with an old fashioned breakfast at the Wood River Grange Hall. The annual parade will begin at noon with the rodeo at 2 p.m. and a final holiday event — the Hilday Barbecue at Hilday City Park beginning at 5 p.m.

Sagebrush Days in Buhl will continue through Monday night when the annual fireworks display at Paris Field will close Buhl's four-day celebration.

On top today are a horse show tournament and watermelon race at 2 p.m. in Eastman Park at 2 p.m. the Buhl Quilt and Rodeo Club will give a demonstration in disaster response. The American Legion Baseball Tournament will be held at 5 p.m. with the rodeo at 8 p.m.

Monday's agenda in Buhl will feature the annual parade at 11 a.m. followed by a free concert in Eastman Park and the night rodeo finals at 8 p.m. followed by the fireworks display.

In Twin Falls, church services Sunday in the city park will be held at 11 a.m. and a fire works display is planned at 10 p.m. Monday at the College of Southern Idaho campus.

The Jerome Chamber of Commerce had to be begging for fireworks. To celebrate its independence Day this year.

The chamber had contracted for fireworks with a Japanese firm, but the firm could not make delivery in time, according to Ellen Nelson, chamber secretary-treasurer.

She said fortunately the chamber was able to buy some from the city of Twin Falls and the Boise Jaycees. Lynn Bingham, Jerome fire chief, who will direct the show, made a special trip to Boise for the fireworks.

The all-aerial display begins at 10 p.m. Monday at the Jerome County Fairgrounds.

Angry residents post lawns on softballers

By BOB ZUCKERMAN
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — Residents near South Park were complaining bitterly this week about errant softballs and players tramping through their yards, disregarding signs posted to keep them out.

But officials who run the church softball league that plays on the ball field across from the complaining residents' homes, said they were doing all they could to take care of the problem. Sometimes, they said, neighbors of a ball park just have to put up with such problems.

But the angry residents didn't think so.

"Disregard for private property" is what it boils down to, said James F. Smith, who lives across the street from the ballfield on Highland Drive.

Smith said Friday baseballers were playing catch across the street from his house in such a way that when they missed the ball it hit his car or rolled into his front yard.

"I don't think there's anything you can really do about it," he said.

However, Seaman said he had discussed the problems with all the coaches and asked them to keep their players from running through Smith's yard.

"He has a definite persecution complex," Seaman said of Smith. "I don't think my players are guilty of any vandalism."

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, JULY 3, 1977.

GENERAL TENDENCIES: An unusually interesting time in which the planetary forces at one moment are benign and favorable and the next in conflict with what is to your best interests. Make it a point to be wary and not argue with others while at the same time looking for new ways and means by which to go forward.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Be with good friends but only those who can be trusted and are not greedy. Don't harp about some former error with a friend.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Study how to improve your income and don't scatter your forces in all directions. Forget the social for a bit and concentrate on the practical.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You have good judgment where the personal side of life is concerned, so see good friends. Feel more sorry for others than for yourself.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Confide in a friend about a business venture and get a different viewpoint. Avoid those who are too demanding.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Contacting good friends will bring fine benefits your way now. Have a good time but don't take risks with reputation.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Not a good time to think of new ventures, when you have other important ones to wind up first. Carry through with promises and show others you are a loyal person.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Put new ideas to work that will help you become more successful in the future. Don't assume some responsibility that you do not like or you could regret it later.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Keep promises and gain respect therefor. Avoid demanding partners and be happy with male, loved one.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Fine day for talking over with associates just how you can be mutually more successful in the future. Avoid arguments, get more done.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You have some work to take care of now, so forget pleasure which could prove to be a fizzle, anyway.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Avoid arguments at home and save the day. Put more music into your life and be happier.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Use that fine artistic talent you possess to improve your surroundings. Try to be more thoughtful of others as well as of yourself now.

YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY—he or she will require a fine academic education in order to fulfill the great promise here, one which will stress the logic and theory behind all motivations. Teach early to work with the hands and not be afraid of honest work.

Abby

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1977 by The Chicago Tribune. All Rights Reserved.

DEAR ABBY: At the age of 44, I'm stumped. All my life I've worked with the public and thought I had seen and heard everything, but my own situation has me completely baffled.

After 12 years as a divorcee, I remarried. My problem is sex. When I dated my husband our sex was great, but as soon as we got married it started to go downhill, until now it is nothing. Six months of nothing, and I am ready to climb the walls.

I love my husband, Abby, and he claims he loves me. What is wrong? I am his fourth wife. His three previous wives told me not to get with him as he would not let they got married! They all admitted that they had cheated on him. (One he caught in bed.)

I don't want this to happen to us. Or me. When I mention seeing a doctor he flares up and throws a tantrum like a kid.

He is 50, drives a truck and looks like a stud, but since our marriage he has been a dud. Help me.

ME IN N.J.

He's a lover, not husband

DEAR "ME": It's psychological. Some men are turned on only by illicit sex. But as soon as it becomes legal (and therefore no longer forbidden), it loses all its excitement and appeal. In extreme cases, they are unable to perform. Psychotherapy could help. If your husband refuses, you have no choice but to climb the walls until you reach the top—and then go over to join his three former wives.

DEAR ABBY: I have been trying to teach my children, ages 4 and 8, NEVER to accept any kind of gift from a stranger.

My problem is that many times when we are on a bus, or shopping in some public place, some well-meaning person will admire my children and offer them candy, gum and even money!

I hate to hurt their feelings, but, Abby, it makes it so hard for mothers to train children NOT to accept anything from strangers when strangers keep offering them goodies and money.

Can you please say something to help our cause?

ONE MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: I'll try. Perhaps it hasn't occurred to all you generous, well-meaning people who "love children" and can't resist offering them goodies or money, that this is the technique used by child molesters who hope to gain a child's confidence in order to get him to "go for a ride" or "not tell" after improper advances have been made.

So if you love children, please don't offer them candy, money or gifts of any kind.

DEAR ABBY: One of the girls I work with is constantly talking about her sex life with her husband. She's not a young kid, either. Some of us are bored and others are embarrassed by her daily morning reports of what went on in her bedroom, but no one has the nerve to tell her.

Who knows what reads your column, so if you can't think of a better solution, how about running this letter?

THE OFFICE GANG

DEAR GANG: If no one has the courage to speak up, you all deserve to be bored or embarrassed. I'll run your letter, not as a "solution" to your problem, but as a reminder that the meek are destined to put up with a lot.

Rate to write letters? Send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212, for Abby's booklet "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (24¢) envelope.

your health

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb: Is cutting the vagus nerve a cure for ulcers? I'm 67 and had an operation for the removal of an ulcer and 70 per cent of my stomach five years ago.

I developed another ulcer and finally had another operation with a little more of my stomach being removed and they cut the vagus nerve.

It's nine weeks after the operation, and I feel fairly good with a little soreness in the stomach. The problem is I have diarrhea. I have been following a low residue diet.

Is this normal after an operation of this sort? I have a paper that says there is positively no evidence of any malignancy in any part of my intestines or bowels. Could you give me your opinion in regard to this diarrhea?

Dear Reader: Yes, you are in a bit of a hurry. That small stomach cannot store food as it once did and the food is "dumped" too soon into the small intestine. This is called a dumping syndrome. As many as 80 per cent of patients may have similar problems in the immediate post-operative period after such surgery. The symptoms gradually disappear in most cases.

Two tips you can use to help you are to either eat lying down or lie down immediately after eating, and avoid carbohydrates. Some patients have temporary milk intolerance after surgery. You'll do better on a high protein diet of frequent small meals.

You'll need to arrange your life to prevent ulcers as much as you can despite your operation. Of course, you should not smoke or use coffee in any form. I am sending you The Health Letter number 15, 15¢. Dunder, Stomach to give you more information on this. Usually people who have stressful situations will not respond well unless they do something about their life situations. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing to P. O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Dear Dr. Lamb: My husband and I are 60 and 65 and we have been trying to have a baby for about a year now. My husband had his sperm count taken and the doctor informed us that half of the sperm cells were abnormal and half of the sperm cells give not motile. What does this mean? Can it be corrected?

Is there any hope for us to ever have a baby? We would appreciate any information you can give us as we would really like to have a child!

Dear Reader: Some men with low sperm counts are helped a great deal with thyroid hormone. There is some work now on the use of the fertility pill compared with the sperm count. Men with low sperm counts. Some success has been reported by reputable scientists. Your doctor may want to try this for your husband.

The causes of low sperm counts or abnormal cells are many and varied, including damage to the testicles from an attack of mumps to having just been born that way. Often no one is able to say for certain what the cause really is.

Dr. Lamb answers representative letters of general interest in his column.

Winter wakes up Magic Valley

By DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS.—He bounced into the radio station at 4:45 in the morning, singing to himself, smiling and flipping light switches with a practiced twist of the wrist.

With his ruddy red cheeks, snap-tail western cut shirt and brown cowboy boots he reminds you of a farm kid from Aberdeen, eagerly leaping out to the barn to milk his prize winning Guernsey.

You almost want to ask him how many blue ribbons he won in this year's county fair.

There's a disconcerting cheerfulness to Dave Winter at 4:45 in the morning. And as he prepares to begin his 5 a.m. morning radio program for KLI-X, you wonder how anyone could function, much less be happy at an hour when your only company is that of a couple of sleepy cows and the constellations Cassiopeia...

But to Dave Winter—the voice that wakes up the Magic Valley—an early morning radio program isn't that much different from when he was farming. He got up early then too.

"Early" for Dave Winter is some time between 3:45 and 4 a.m.—when his two alarm clocks sound their dual reveille. "I used to have three clocks, but I didn't need that many alarms." As a final assurance, the morning D.I. is out of the sack. Doug Van Tuyl, who holds down KLI-X between 4 and 5 a.m., gives Winter a call, informing him another day has arrived.

By 4:45 Winter trots into the KLI-X station. Sometimes carrying a can or two of diet Squirrel. Grabbing a cup of last night's coffee he begins springing 45¢ albums and taped commercial messages—preparing for his four-hour wake-up/breakfast program.

Between sips of strong coffee (from a cup proclaiming he is "allergic to morning") and manipulation of dials on a control board sufficiently complicated to pass as a vest-off from a NASA space slot, Winter talked about the life of a morning disc jockey.

"I've been in radio since I was 15." It's the 30-year-old announcer says. "and this is the best job I've ever had. I farmed for a while and I liked it but it's hard to make any money doing that. And I love my work."

On the wall in front of Winter hangs a large white clock, bordered by promotional pictures of radio performers—and a poster of Raquel Welch, guaranteed to open most always eyes no matter what the time of day. The minute hand reaches 4:49 and Winter flips a switch. The Star Spangled Banner fills the airwaves. A moment later a tape recorded message announces, "KLI-X is on the air for another exciting day with Dave Winter."

On the wall above Winter's head a red light blinks on—signaling live broadcasting is taking place. Winter leans into the padded microphone, suddenly...a...radio personality... "Goodness gracious! Here we are on a Monday morning, with a clear sky and let's go to news."

The corned-voice of a Washington, D.C. newsreader swirls through the heavy loud speaker, and Winter reaches over to turn the sound to a low muffle. "I will have been doing this shift five years in October," he says, "and I can't help but like morning. I enjoy getting up. It's beautiful outside then. The only thing I wish is that I could be outside in the morning."

Winter scratches his neatly trimmed beard and sips his coffee. "I used to drink coffee 24 hours in my shift. I've cut back to four 15¢. Through the outside window, visible from the control room, the first signs of a sunrise paint pink and azure streaks across the sky.

"Monday isn't my best day," he says. "But then I realize everyone hates to get up on a Monday and so I get up and try to make people listening to me feel a little better. That's the part of my job I really like, making people a little happier, making them smile."

"I am the morning dj at WOLD, bringing all the hits to you, where ever you might be. The bright 'good morning' voice that's heard but never seen..."

— Harry Chapin
1978 popular song

The news cast reaches its final slot and with some instinct acquired over the past half decade Winter senses he has just 15 seconds of time left.

He pulls an album from the selection of several thousand discs filed in slots around the KLI-X newsroom.

"And it's time for weather. Not quite so warm today—whoa—that's all right with me. Let's get going with some good of country."

Donna Fargo and a foot-tapping melody swell into the tiny control room. Winter silently sings along as he maintains a flurry of activity, sonnet tapes, pulling records, popping the tab on a can of diet Squirrel. I ask if he's ever been late to work. He laughs.

"Oh yeah, a couple of times. Once I had mechanical trouble, and I missed a few times. It's funny, some of your audience will always remember that. They won't remember all the things you made it. They'll remember the one you missed three months ago."

Winter seems to personally his largely farm and rural audience. Living in Eden, where he keeps a Guernsey cow and two calves ("I'll rich milk; we get a lot of cream.") he's also a country-western music fan—as are most of his listeners. And as he reads commercials for farm equipment and rural supply houses he often ad lib a comment relating how they helped me a while back; and they are goodaids."

It may be this identification with his listeners that has given him a large audience for a morning radio program in the Magic Valley. Station general manager, Charlie Tuma estimates Winter reaches "some 22,000 different persons" on an average morning.

But there's more to it than just understanding his listeners—"It's not just playing records they like." Winter says. "we provide a lot of information. And we give a listener use his imagination. You can do that with radio; you can't with TV. You talk, but you gotta' interest them, hopefully make people feel better."

Winter breaks away an adjusts the padded earphones gripping his head. "It's second called to breakfast," he says, grabbing and ringing an old cow bell sitting on the desk. "Come and get it." (I'm on the air four hours in the morning so I give four calls to breakfast—once each hour.)

The sun is up. Barely. And KLI-X newsman Jimmy Morrison has arrived to begin sorting through the "copy" sent over the Associated Press news wire during the night. Shortly after seven he and Winter have a few minutes of friendly after-hour banter. "I...and you took a little sunbanned..." and then move into the news.

Other radio staffers, in various stages of wakefulness, begin arriving. As they head for the coffee pot they pass a glass panel set in the wall of the control room. Inside they can see Winter, picking out the next album, nearing the end of this shift.

Through the open door you can hear him faintly humming a popular Lynn Anderson song. "I'm on the top of the world, looking down at creation..."

MORNING-DISC JOGKEY DAVE WINTER GREETS THE VALLEY likes making people a little happier, making them smile

Radio: Crystal sets to conglomerates

By DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News writer

BOISE.—It began in Boise 56 years ago, an experiment jerryrigged from mail-order parts, a generator borrowed from the Signal Corps, and the passionate dedication of two dozen Boise High School students.

Assembled in a room beneath the high school auditorium, a room better known as "Aides Verne fantasy, hopelessly primitive by current standards."

But it worked—and amidst crackles, pops and an occasional ear-shattering whine station 7YA went on the air, bringing radio to the 35,000 persons living in Ada County in November of 1921.

Idaho's first radio station was on the air. Radio was a noisy toy in 1921, dismissed by many as an expensive extravagance with certain select, and highly limited uses.

Not that a few dreamers didn't understand its potential. As far back as 1920, initial radio theory was published. And in 1905 Marconi actually transmitted radio signals for a short distance.

But the first commercial radio broadcasts didn't appear until 1920, when a Pittsburgh station read the returns of the Harding-Cox presidential contest. What radio listeners there were tuned the tiny audience would today barely fill a CBS radio audience hall! struggled with companies, trying to discern sound from the ever-present static of their crystal radios.

Several months later, radio found its way to Idaho—where it was enthusiastically received by a handful of "wireless" enthusiasts. Station 7YA—later KFAU—was the result.

Radio has since blossomed in the Gem State, where today it is a multi-million dollar industry of different stations. National networks compete for their share of the corporate conglomerate, battling for the AM, FM and all news market. "Easy listening," "rock," "country," and "classical jazz" stations have turned the Idaho radio dial into a cornucopia of sound.

But it wasn't that long ago radio was a struggling infant in the communications media. And many of Idaho's early radio operators are still involved in the world of electronic sound.

This past week the Times-News interviewed several of these radio pioneers, questioning them on the beginning of radio in Idaho, and the changes the medium has undergone.

The man who started it all now lives in Burlington, Calif. Dr. Harry E. Redeker, 86, recalled his years of tending at Boise High School, where he supervised the construction of Idaho's first radio station.

"We had a five watt rig built with parts we had ordered and borrowed," Redeker said, "and we were on the air a couple of hours a day at first, in 1921. We broadcast classroom work, news and market reports... which we got out of the old Evening Capital News."

Asked about competing stations and the size of his listening audience, Redeker laughed. "I don't imagine there were more than 50 stations on the air in the country when we quit, and not more than a dozen when we started. And I'll bet that first Sunday night we broadcast there weren't more than a dozen listeners, mostly boys in the class who listened to see just what it was like."

"Did Redeker see what radio would become?" "Heck no," he said. "My opinion was that it was essentially for communication from ship to shore and to a few time stations."

In 1928, the Boise High station was sold, becoming KIDO. Today, 49 years later, KIDO boasts a listening audience of over 300,000 and a value of 400,000.

If Idaho has a "dean" of radio broadcasters, it would be Henry Fletcher, now living in Pocatello. Fletcher was a gangling 14 year old Boise High School freshman in 1921, when he learned of Redeker's student radio club. Fletcher was immediately enthralled, and began a love affair with radio that has lasted half a century.

Fletcher recalled the early broadcasts of the Boise High station, which he described as "primitive." To transmit music, he said, it was necessary to set a microphone in front of a record player which was spinning a 78 disc.

If somebody knocked over a chair, or coughed, that sound went out to the radio audience—along with the music.

Following his stint at KFAU, Fletcher taught radio instruction, worked at an early station in Jerome, and then moved to station KSEI in Pocatello in 1936—making a total of 56 years in radio.

Fletcher also vividly remembers the early days of information transmission—when news broadcasts were sent by Morse Code to nearby stations.

"They'd start sending at 15 words per minute and by the time they finished they were at 50 words per minute transmission speed. If there was a burst of static or the signal would fade, you kept on typing guessing what they were saying. Of course, if it was war was declared or war was not declared, you had to be a little careful."

One of Magic Valley's radio pioneers was Florence Gardner, who worked as manager of Twin Falls station KTFI from 1930 to 1940. Now retired, Gardner commented on her years in radio, saying "it wasn't so much excitement as it was a lot of hard work."

Gardner said she questions whether radio is as good as it used to be. "Too many radio stations today, she said, lack the dedication present in the early days of radio. "I think they're after the almighty buck, like newspapers."

Gardner noted that much of the 1930 and 1940 format of KTFI was five broadcasting when the station would sponsor local and national "questioners. One of the questioners she must of loved, Gardner said, was a then relatively unknown conductor named Lawrence Welk. Welk and his orchestra came to Twin Falls

Society re-elects officers

FILER—All officers of the St. Andrews Society of Southern Idaho have been re-elected.

Re-elected by unanimous ballot at the annual picnic of the society were Robert Leitch, Bull president; Frank Finlayson, Shoshone, just vice president; Don Fenwick, Twin Falls, second vice president; Peggy Davis, Jerome, third vice president; and Jean Machacek, Buhl, secretary-treasurer.

Named to the board of directors were Frank McEneaney, Buhl; Donald McKay, Idaho Falls; and Robert Leitch II, Buhl.

The group made plans for the annual St. Andrews Night Dinner Dec. 3 at 7:30 p.m. at the Blue Lakes Inn in Twin Falls, and the Robert Burns Night potluck dinner at 7:30 p.m. at the Buhl VFW Hall.

Members of the group decided to award a life membership in the society to William MacLeod, Twin Falls, and to give the same privileges to deceased members' spouses.

Purpose of the St. Andrews Society, which is open to all peoples of Scottish descent and their spouses, is to perpetuate the customs, dress, music, dance and history of Scotland.

Jobies attend grand session

GLENNIS FERRY—Fourteen members of the Job's Daughters Bellini No. 23 attended the grand session of the International Order of Job's Daughters in Pocatello.

The sessions guardians were Mrs. Russell Sandstrom, Mrs. K. Atkinson, Mrs. Fred Grafte and Mrs. Shrader.

A Job's Daughters pageant was held this year for the first time. A representative and an alternate from each Bellini participated in the pageant with Wendie Shrader being chosen as the representative and Lisa Atkinson the alternate. Teresa Hoagland was chosen as representative to Wisconsin and Lisa Atkinson as representative to Arkansas.

Teresa Anderson, just honored queen of Glennis Ferry, received her majority degree.

The grand session will be in Lewiston next year and the supreme session in Boise.

The G.F. Jobies have planned a camping trip to Pine, a baked-food sale and a car wash in the near future.

King Hill Grange sets picnic

KING HILL—Plans were made at the Tuesday evening meeting of the King Hill Grange for the annual subordinate picnic on July 12th at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Davis.

It will be a potluck dinner at 7:30 p.m. with Mr. and Mrs. Dick Foley assisting.

The main business of the evening from the refuse of the Magic West Potato Processing Plant, which is being dumped a scant half mile from the town of King Hill. Petitions are being signed protesting the dumping so close to town.

The Elmore County Fair Board has announced that they are not sponsoring a fair queen this year. The Three Island Rodeo group will be entering a senior and junior queen with their princesses. The fair will be Aug. 11-13 and all Grangers are urged to be planning entries of flowers, fruits and vegetables.

The Grangers voted to have a display booth for produce at the fair.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Viner served the refreshments at the end of the meeting.

Filer Grange honors members

FILER—The Filer Grange honored six 50-year members at a special meeting this past week.

Ira Kistler, Gooding, longtime state Grange official, presiding; to Margaret Stroud, Irene, Joelson, Grace Walker, Margaret Engobright and Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Thomas, honored for 25 years of membership was Mrs. Irene Childers.

Clinton Dougherty, state deputy, served as master of ceremonies for a potluck dinner preceding the meeting.

Many changes seen

several times, Gardner said.

One of Idaho's most respected radio newsmen is Boise's Vern Moore, who joined the staff of KIDO in 1935—remaining there until early this year. A fixture in Boise, Moore reported a quarter century of state legislature, covered a beat which took him all over Idaho. Now working for Boise city government, Moore recalled some of his early radio experiences.

"I interviewed Franklin Roosevelt once. It was during the campaign of 1936. We broadcast live then, and anyone who came in just had a mike set in front of them." Other persons Moore interviewed included Joe Louis, Robert Taylor and Eleanor Roosevelt.

A thoughtful, analytic man, Moore reflected on some of the changes radio has undergone since its beginning. "At first we were just entertainment," Moore noted. "This was during the heyday of Amos and Andy, Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy, Fibber McGee and Molly, and the daytime soap operas. At one time we used to run two to three hours a day of soap operas."

"But when television was developed, following World War II, radio had to re-examine itself," Moore said. "In order to compete it had to come up with something TV didn't have, and that was immediacy. We had mobile units that went out to interview, cover accidents, and we presented it live or as soon as we could."

Radio, Moore said, has also become "a forum for local controversy, for questions of community impact. Our news impact has increased and gotten better."

Still, not all the changes have been to Moore's liking, and with Gardner he directs his scorn at today's "top 40" discjockeys.

"They overstep their bounds," he says angrily. "You can be sitting at your dinner table with your family and an on-air some of it with very explicit language. It's offensive and unprofessional."

The veteran broadcaster recalled the famous radio newsmen he has known, comparing them with the d.j.'s of 1977.

"Look at Edward R. Murray or H. V. Kaltenborn. They attained a stature and a professional skill that went along with their attitude of not losing their dignity and not interfering with that of the listener. And they did reporting that could stand up to today's standards. We've lost a lessening of quality in their regard, we've lost the standard of being gentlemen as well as professionals."

There is, however, an excitement in Moore's voice when he talks of the future of radio. Like most radio veterans he sees enormous potential for the world of sound, describing scenes that once were found only in Buck Rogers' comic books.

"I think radio and TV are blending, technology is getting to where radio will become visual. Can you imagine broadcasting a stereo picture as well as stereo sound? How about quadraphonic pictures, projecting images that have depth as well as color. I think eventually you'll have walking into your room and talking to you, and they'll be hundreds of miles away. The basic technology is here."

Coffman, Harder married

KING HILL, Nancy Coffman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Coffman, Irrigon, Ore., became the bride of Steven Lee Harder, 331 East Kelko, Nev.

Steve is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Harder of King Hill.

Justice of the Peace E.H. Crawford performed the 11:30 double-ring ceremony. The bride chose a floor-length pink velveteen gown with white accessories.

A sister of the bride, Mrs. Connie Haskins, and Denise Willock, both Glennis Ferry, and Alvin Hill of King Hill were attendants, with James Harder, father of the bride, groom, acting as the best man.

The bride has attended Glennis Ferry High School. The bridegroom is a 1977 graduate of the High School and is employed at the Magic West Potato processing plant.

The young couple is at home in King Hill at the T.M. Timbers rental apartment.

Bishops to celebrate golden wedding date

WENDELL—An open house in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Bishop's 50th wedding anniversary will be held July 10 from 2:00-5 p.m.

The celebration will be held in the Bishop home, 447 S. Wendell St.

The couple was married July 14, 1927, at Texhoma, Okla., where they formed for several years before moving to Wendell in 1933.

Bishop owned and operated a repair shop for many years before retiring 10 years ago.

Children of the couple, Jack C. Bishop, Boise, Mrs. Charles Baum, Orem, Utah; Mrs. Allan Powell, Spokane, Wash.; and Mrs. James Ward, Rochester, N.Y., will host the reception.

Mr. and Mrs. Bishop have 11 grandchildren and 5 great-grandchildren. Friends and relatives are invited to attend the open house. The couple requests no gifts.

TF button club hosts state confab

TWIN FALLS—The Pioneer Button Club, Twin Falls, will sponsor the 1977-78 Idaho State Button Convention next June.

The decision to hold the meeting in Twin Falls was made at the state meeting at Coeur d'Alene, which was attended by members from all state clubs and a number from other state clubs.

Twin Falls club members will discuss plans for the coming convention at their July 6 meeting at the home of Mrs. Wayne King, Twin Falls. The meeting is scheduled for 1:30 p.m.

Persons interested in becoming members of this club may contact Mrs. Roy Teuber, Pioneer Club president, at 326-4586 or Mrs. Earl B. Peck, secretary-treasurer at 733-4950.

Mrs. Milo Sheldon, a former resident of Jerome and state club president for the past two years, presided over three-day Button Fanciers activities.

July 4 musical scheduled by Dilettantes, city band

TWIN FALLS—Everyone in Magic Valley is invited to attend a free outdoor musical presentation on the Fourth of July in the City Park Band Shell at 8 p.m.

The Dilettantes of Magic Valley, with the cooperation of the Twin Falls City Band, will present more than an hour's musical and comedy entertainment to celebrate the nation's 81st birthday.

Starting off with "Once a Year Day," a musical number from the hit Broadway show "Paloma Game," the Dilettantes, directed by Jim LaGrone, Castleford, will tickle viewers' fancies with "golden oldies" from the Gay Nineties and early 1900s.

They will honor the nation's birthday with a series of patriotic tunes accompanied by the 25-member city band directed by Del Slaughter.

The city band will also present about a 20-minute concert featuring patriotic selections designed to match the spirit of the day.

"The Dilettante cast includes Betty Kelly, Rex Reed, Jeanne Ratchford, Jim LaGrone, Rosemary Wall, Donna Brown, Ila LaGrone, Richard Young, Alice Anderson, Terry Wood, Rex LaGrone, Donna Hoover, Ken Hodge, Roger Vincent and John Theibert.

With a sense of humor, Ila LaGrone will sing "I'm Forever Blowing Bubbles" and Jim Latham and Jeanne Ratchford will perform their own humorous rendition of "Moonlight Bay."

Tenor Rex Reed, Filler, will sing "Iris" favorites including "Harrigan" and "My Wild Irish Rose" while bass Roger Vincent—Filler—will join soprano Alice Anderson in singing "Bess, You Is My Woman," from the famous musical "Porgy and Bess."

The entire group will join in singing "The Star Spangled Banner" and "The Flying Saucers." "Last Night on the Back Porch," "Jeepers Creepers," "Ma, He's Making Eyes at Me" and "Ta Ra Ra Boom De Ay."

Rich Young will sing "All the Things You Are" and Jim Latham will sing "Hello, My Baby."

Liz Pierce, Castleford, will accompany the group on the piano and Mary Baun is rehearsal accompanist. Dave Willis, Twin Falls, will play drums for the group.

After the performance, local audiences can attend a free fireworks display at 10 p.m. sponsored by the city of Twin Falls.

City Engineer Tom Courtney, said the fireworks display will last for one hour at a cost of $3,000 to the city.

Ann Landers polls married couples

Family Circle Press Service

"If you had it to do all over again, would you marry the same person?"

When Ann Landers asked this question in her syndicated column, the results came pouring back from 50,000 readers: 52 percent said NO; 48 percent said YES.

Writing her reactions to this survey in the July 26 Family Circle, she named "humans waiting will" calls the results a "devastating commentary on marriage, American-style."

"Marriage is the only way where you sleep with the enemy. And sleep is all I get," lamented one husband quoted in the article. Another husband read what his wife wrote on the postcard he was supposed to mail — "We are the happiest couple in town. I love a big YES," — and scribbled his own note at the bottom: "That's what she thinks, I vote NO."

Despite the similar rates of marital malice and malaise she's heard for years, Landers says in Family Circle that she still believes marriage is here to stay. "I believe in marriage with every fiber of my being," she avows. "Nothing is so joyous or energizing as a healthy marriage. Man was made for woman and woman was made for man. This is the central theme of the divine plan."

The soaring divorce rate—the million-plus in 1976, which surpassed the total number of new marriages—does not, says the columnist, signal the collapse of marriage as an institution so much as it signals the emergence of a new honesty and ability to admit mistakes.

In the past, she says, mistake or no, strict divorce laws combined with the second-rate status of women to keep unhappy couples married. Landers gives, the following example in the magazine: "Thirty-five years ago, if grandpa was galled by grandpa's stinginess, his alcoholism, his roving eye or a tendency to crack her across the mouth, she hoped the neighbors didn't hear, and, put up with the humiliation and abuse."

Arts, craft festival slated

SUN VALLEY—Elkhorn at Sun Valley will hold its first annual Arts and Crafts Festival July 3 and 4.

About 35 artists and craftsmen from Idaho, Oregon, Washington, California, Nevada, Utah, Montana and Colorado will display their work in the Elkhorn Village Mall.

In addition to the sale of paintings, ceramics, textiles, stained glass, wood work, jewelry and metal sculpture, groups of dancers, musicians and actors will perform daily.

"Ding Copps's Theatre Productions," Boise, will perform scenes from "Taming of the Shrew," "The Tempest" and "Mid-Summer Night's Dream," Saturday and Sunday at noon, 3 p.m. and 6 p.m.

The Blackstone Playhouse from Pocatello will present commedia dell'arte Saturday and Sunday.

The Antique Festival Theatre will perform "Honkey Tonk No. 2" Thursday evening in the Elkhorn Mall. The group will also present "The Drunkard" Friday evening, July 8 at the opening ceremony of the arts festival.

Samantha Timmas, dance instructor for the Sun Valley Center for the Arts and Humanities, will perform several dance selections each day along with her students.

Echo Film Productions, Boise, will present Idaho motion pictures, films produced through the Idaho State Commission on the Arts, and—Independently produced environmental films on birds of prey.

Each evening at 7:30 a concert/sos review will be held in the Idaho Room.

Local musicians will also perform each day.

 Opening lead — 5 ♣

BY Oswald & James Jacoby

South's six-club contract was of the optimistic variety, because it depended on a successful spade finesse in addition to reasonable breaks in other suits. Still, the finesse was on the reasonable break side there and under normal circumstances, South would have wrapped up his contract and taken 11 home.

What happened to South was that West led the five of diamonds against the club slam. This lead away from a king and into a suit bid strongly by dummy is not really unusual in expert circles. The idea is to give declarer a problem at trick one.

Declarer had no problem at trick one. He rose with dummy's ace. Then he took the spade finesse, cashed his ace of spades, ruffed his last spade, cashed dummy's ace of trumps and led around for a way to get back to his hand.

The way was to ruff a diamond. He thought a while. He finally decided that the five of diamonds lead had been a singleton, ruffed the diamond high and had to lose a trump trick to West's 10, plus the heart he had to lose at the time.

Ask the Jacobys

An Ohio reader wants to know what she should bid in response to partner's one-spade opening with:

♠ x x x A 8 7 4 3 2 x x x x x
 ♥ x x x x x

This is a really tough one. The correct response is to pass because any bid is too likely to lead to trouble, but if you do pass you may well be missing a heart game. Bridge is still not an exact science.

Fitzpatrick, Hohnhorst married

TWIN FALLS—Diane Fitzpatrick and Mark Hohnhorst were married in a 7:30 p.m. ceremony June 18 at the Twin Falls Church of Christ.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Fitzpatrick, Eden, and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Tom Hohnhorst, Hazelton.

Minister Bill McFarland, Green Forest, Ark., conducted the double-ring candle-light ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a white gown of shirting and re-embroidered lace. The fitted bodice with a long-sleeved cummerbund of lace was finished with a mandarin collar and tiny seed pearls in the design of the bodice.

The bishop sleeves of shirting were finished with re-embroidered lace cuffs with small covered buttons. The lace cummerbund flowed from the bodice into a full shirting skirt, which continued into a semi-cathedral train, finished with trim of narrow vertical lines of re-embroidered lace.

The hemline of the skirt and train was of a wide matching lace.

The mantilla was long, long cathedral length and was outlined with narrow lace.

The bride carried a white lace Bible covered with a colonial bouquet of white daisies and pink white carnations, trimmed with long white streamers. Her veil was mid-length. Her bridesmaids were Darlene McKee, Wanda Yamagata and Janice Dixon.

Candy Jo Fitzpatrick, niece of the bride, was flower girl.

Frank McDonald was best man and groomsmen were Darrell Fitzpatrick, Owen Edwards and John Hohnhorst.

Ringbearers were Jon Rife, cousin of the bride.

Two candelabra holding nine white candles and decorated with mixed daisies were lit by Dwight and Mark Hogley, nephews of the bride.

The church was decorated with two baskets of yellow, blue, green and orange daisies and yellow pom poms. The pews were decorated with yellow ribbons and mixed daisies.

Following the ceremony, the couple was honored at a reception.

The three-tiered cake, decorated with yellow and white daisies, was circled by six heart-shaped cakes.

Guests were greeted by Randy Hogley, nephew of the bride, and Tom Hohnhorst, cousin of the bridegroom.

Mrs. Rueben Stelmets was in charge of the guest book and Mrs. Merlin Rife, Margaret Green and Mrs. Veri Rife served at the bride's table.

Caring for gifts were Heeey Craig Laurie and Lisa Fitzpatrick and Anita McFarland.

The bride was honored at a lingerie shower given by Mrs. Larry Craig and Mrs. Les McNeil. A pound shower was given by the ladies of the Church of Christ, Eden, and a miscellaneous shower was given by Mrs. Francis Ditt and Mrs. Ronald McNeil.

Following a short wedding trip to Jackson Hole, Wyo., and Yellowstone, the couple will reside in Eden, then return to Moscow this fall where the bridegroom is attending the University of Idaho.

Trail Creek Cabin site of annual Basque Festival

SUN VALLEY—The eighth annual Basque Festival will be held July 8 at 6 p.m. at Trail Creek Cabin.

A traditional Basque dinner of roast lamb with gravy, tossed salad, garbanzo soup, arracozon pollo, french bread, wine and soft drinks will be served.

The Ohikari Basque Dancers will perform after dinner. A weight-carrying competition, won last year by Ketchum police officer Jerry Engelbert, will also highlight the evening.

Three or four live sheep will be auctioned off. Basque games will be played, and sheep stuggles will be on display.

Tickets are $1 and are limited to 1,500 people. Tickets are available at the Sports Center, at Sun Valley and the chamber of commerce on Main Street.

Some of the festival proceeds go to Altkinson Park, which will be formally dedicated July 10.

This event is sponsored by Sun Valley Resorts, Inc. and the Ketchum-Sun Valley Chamber of Commerce.

Also on July 9 will be the first Friday night shoot-out, which will take place on Ketchum's Main Street at 7 p.m. Included in the shoot-out will be guys and gals in Old West costumes who will enact a heavy drama with a mock gun fight.

Festival benefit planned

SUN VALLEY—A Music Festival Patron's Breakfast for the benefit of the Sun Valley Music Festival will be held Thursday from 8:30 to 10 a.m.

The breakfast, which was planned by Mrs. Glenn Janss, will feature the Estorby Quartet. The group will perform the concert in the Ram dining room on the Sun Valley Mall.

Menu for the affair, which was designed by Mrs. Janss and Kay Curran, includes a complete fruit in pineapple shell, banana or chicken cream, muffins, sweet rolls and champagne sorbet.

The Estorby Quartet, established in 1950 as the resident ensemble at the University of Missouri, Columbia, has been said to have "an unusually warm sensuous sound...a stellar interpretation."

During the breakfast, Eva Society, first violinist—Holly Stern, second violinist—Carolyn Reeson, violinist, and Carleton Spauls, cellist, will play Shostakovich's String Quartet No. 1 and Hydan's Opus 2, No. 3.

Individual patron's tickets are $25 and may be obtained by telephoning 622-9771 or writing to the Sun Valley Center—far—the Arts—and Humanities, P.O. Box 656, Sun Valley, Idaho 83353.

Catholic rites unite Buhl couple

Buhl—Brenda Hahn and Robert Caughey were married June 18 at 2 p.m. in the Church of the Immaculate Conception, Buhl.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Hahn and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lynn Canigley, all Buhl.

Father M. McNeill performed the double-ring ceremony before an altar decorated with white gladiolus, blue and white daisies and blue carnations.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown featuring a square neck, empire waist and yellow lace inserts in the long sleeves and three-tiered skirt.

The bride's shoulder-length veil and gown were sewn by the bride's sister, Chris Fern.

The floral bouquet was made of yellow roses, yellow carnations and blue and white daisies.

"The Wedding Song" was sung by Martin Behm and Carl Hahn and Mrs. Robert Thornbarron played the wedding music.

Matron of honor was Chris Fern and bridesmaids were Kitty Dillon and Mary Lewis.

Flower girl was Angela Bridge, niece of the bride.

Ring bearer was Nicky Wagner.

Following the ceremony the couple was honored at a reception in the church hall.

Fresh flowers in shades of blue and yellow decorated the hall.

The wedding cake was three-tiered with four side cakes. Shannon Cantrell was in charge of the guest book.

Chris Sept., Suzanne Graesch, Tami Frita and Honee Stetten served at the bride's table. Kathleen, Karen and Kristi Loomis received the gifts.

Out-of-town guests were from Boise, Pocatello and Lamonia, Calif.

The wedding party attended a rehearsal dinner in the Fireside Room at the R and B Cafe, Buhl, as guests of the bridegroom's parents.

The bride was honored at a luncheon luncheon given by Mrs. Gary Loomis.

The honeymoon will live in Phoenix, Ariz.

Another record corn crop possible

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Timely rains in this summer could produce a second straight record corn crop, and could force consideration of an acreage reduction program for 1978, the Agriculture Department's chief economist says.

Economist Howard Hjort, meeting with reporters after the department issued a report showing farmers intend to harvest nearly as many corn acres as in 1976 plus a new record soybean acreage, said continued good weather could also ease retail food inflation.

The acreage figures provide no grounds for any basic change in current forecasts that 1977 retail food prices will average about 6 percent above last year, but they probably argue for a very slight sliding to the minus side of the 6 percent, he said.

The corn crop is the bellwether of the U.S. farm economy and has more long-run influence on consumer prices than any other crop because it is the chief raw material for farmers producing livestock foods like milk, dairy products and poultry.

Hjort warned strongly against taking the corn crop for granted despite an estimate that farmers will harvest 70.1 million acres, only 0.4 per cent below 1976 when a record 6.2 billion bushel crop was harvested.

"If the weather is favorable, production could easily be as high as last year and could move above it," he said. But he cautioned that timely rains during the next six to eight weeks will be "absolutely crucial" because, should moisture reserves are short in the upper Midwest and South and a dry spell could lower yield prospects drastically.

Soybean farmers planted a record 59 million acres and will harvest 58 million acres for beans, up 17 per cent from last year in contrast to an earlier forecast of an 11 per cent gain, the acreage report showed.

"With good weather, Hjort said production of soybeans, as well as wheat and feed grains, could exceed demand and lead to a buildup in stocks by late 1977. In the case of beans, however, he noted, stocks will be at bare-bones levels this fall.

In other highlights of the acreage report, officials said that:

- Acreage for harvest of all livestock feed grains, including corn, barley, oats and sorghum, is estimated at 109.9 million acres, up 2 per cent from last year.
- Planting of all wheat is estimated at 74.3 million acres, down 7 per cent from last year.
- Durum wheat acreage is down 33 per cent and other spring wheat acreage is down 12 per cent.
- Planted acreage of cotton is estimated at 12.4 million acres, up 15 per cent from last year but 2 per cent less than forecast in April.
- Tobacco acreage is estimated at 962,900 acres, down 8 per cent from last year because of cuts in government marketing quotas.
- Sugarcane acreage is up 1 per cent from last year. But sugarbeet growers have cut acreage 16 per cent.
- Hay acreage is estimated at 61.7 million acres, up 1 per cent from 1976.
- Looking at total acreage of all livestock feed grains — corn, sorghum, barley and oats — officials estimated, farmers would harvest 108.9 million acres, up 2 per cent from last year.
- Harvested acreage of sorghum was forecast at 14.17 million acres, down 5 per cent from last year. April planting surveys had indicated plans for an 11 per cent gain.

The report also estimated that farmers will harvest 2.011 million acres of durum wheat compared with 1.581 million acres last year, and 15,032 million acres of other spring wheat compared with 16,705 million acres last year.

Analysts have been saying the total winter and spring wheat crops combined could reach about 2 billion bushels this year, more than enough to add to a currently large surplus.

Cotton planting this year was estimated at 13,555 million acres, up 15 per cent from last year compared with a 17 per cent increase forecast in April.

Officials estimated farmers planted 62.7 million acres of corn compared with 61.1 million acres planted last year and 81.9 million acres indicated for 1977 in April. Planted acreage of soybeans was estimated at 59,551 million acres compared with last year's 59.3 million acres and an April forecast of 57.7 million acres.

Harvested acreage for other crops, with 1976 figures shown in parentheses, included:

- Oats 14.3 million acres (12,292 million); barley 9.6 million acres (18,417 million); all tobacco 962,900 acres (1,014 million); peanuts 1,512 million acres (1,522 million); rice 2,202 million acres (2,201 million); all hay 61,729 million acres (60,975 million); dry beans 1,320 million acres (1,465 million); sugarcane 94,000 acres (756,000); sugarbeets 1,247 million acres (1,479 million); summer potatoes 117,500 acres (120,000); and sweet potatoes 115,800 acres (119,600).

Wild burro hunt bag passes 50

MANDELER NATIONAL MONUMENT, N.M. (UPI)—Hunters armed with big game rifles had killed 50 burros in the backcountry of Mandelner National Monument by late Thursday. In an expedition to destroy the wild burros overgrowing the parched canyon country.

The 15 National Park Service hunters started the burro-hunting expedition Wednesday. Thirty-three burros were killed during the first day. Another 17 were killed Thursday by the walking hunters.

A service spokesman, Frank Mentzer, said the hunt for more of the estimated 100 burros living in the monument would continue Friday.

"It is our policy to have complete removal of exotic species in natural areas," Mentzer said. "The ideal would be to have no burros at all, but we accept the fact that this would be impossible."

The service allowed anyone to apply for permits last spring to trap burros in the monument. The trappers only succeeded in capturing nine burros during a two-month period and the Park Service decided to kill the animals.

Mentzer said a recent forest fire which burned the upper reaches of the monument had forced deer into competition with the burros. He said this made it more urgent to remove the burros.

The hunters are flown into the backcountry by helicopter, but must by law hunt the burros on foot. The carcasses of the dead animals are left for predators, Mentzer said.

Upper Snake irrigation water supplies improve

BURLEY—Irrigation water supplies have improved on the Upper Snake River watershed, Bureau of Reclamation officials said here Friday.

The improvement is due to conservation practices by irrigators, farmers and municipalities as well as some effect from improved weather conditions.

Officials said the water situation still remains critical and all Idahoans are encouraged to continue conserving water and power. Within the next two weeks, the peak of the irrigation season will arrive as small grains mature. Farmers are encouraged to check closely on their last irrigation on small grains to avoid unnecessary water use at that time.

Irrigation water is currently being moved from Jackson to Palisades to meet downstream irrigation demands and to assist electrical power production at Palisades. Status of storage reservoirs on the Snake River is as follows:

- Jackson, 672,500 acre feet, 61 per cent full, dropping 35 foot per day.
- Palisades, 631,000 acre feet, 53 per cent full, dropping 6 foot per day.
- Island Park, 110,600 acre feet, 87 per cent full, dropping 3 foot per day.
- Grassy, 15,000 acre feet, 99 per cent full, dropping 6 foot per day.
- American Falls, 625,900 acre feet, 56 per cent full, dropping 45 foot per day.
- Ririe, 13,400 acre feet, 17 per cent full, dropping 2 foot per day.
- Mindoka, 93,500 acre feet, 97 per cent full, not dropping.

Bureau officials said American Falls Reservoir drawdown is continuing as construction of the new dam remains ahead of schedule. Irrigators, below American Falls have been notified again that due to construction some curtailment of irrigation water releases should be expected during August and early September.

Weather patterns during the next few weeks will determine to a large degree whether water supplies will be sufficient for the rest of the irrigation season. Officials said water and power conservation are being encouraged to assure water to finish row crops to maturity.

World dependence on US food production nearing

CHICAGO—The founders of the prestigious Club of Rome warn that the rest of the world could be dependent on U.S. food production within two decades.

Aurelio Peccei and Alexander King maintained American dominance will be akin to the oil superiority enjoyed by the OPEC nations. They spoke at the National Exposition of Contract Purchasing at the Merchandise Mart here.

The Club of Rome is an international, worldwide association of 100 scientists, educators, economists and government officials, which examines world population, production and consumption trends, and then makes extensive suggestions.

"It rose to international prominence in 1972 with publication of 'The Limits to Growth,' a study examining widespread cutbacks in economic growth due to quickly diminishing world resources, such as energy.

It is "inevitable" that the food issue will become an integral part of U.S. foreign policy, King said, particularly since the United Nations estimates a doubling of world population within 35 years.

"There are horrible problems on the horizon and a great deal of political wisdom will be necessary," King said.

"When real hunger starts for instance, will the U.S. deprive the Russians?"

At a press conference between the two men held at an American willingness to assist foreign lands could be tempered by financial, distribution and transportation questions.

"It's all well and good growing a lot of food and regulating internal price levels, but how do you get it to the starving lands?" King asked. "How do you ship it, who pays and who distributes it?"

King, chairman of the International Federation of Institutes of Advanced Studies in Stockholm, underlined that Southeast Asia, Canada and the Soviet Union have substantial food-growing capacities. But he said climate changes threaten Canadian and Soviet production for many years.

King said that transforming the economies of underdeveloped Asian countries "can be a terribly slow process."

Peccei, a well-known Italian industrialist and economist, reiterated American strength.

"This country is so well endowed by nature, so rich, so successful and talented. It is by far the best position."

They feel the Western democracies have a moral obligation to foster the necessary global planning, as well as overseeing a more equal distribution of the world's products. "There is a tendency in the West to demand privileges without a commensurate sense of responsibility," King said.

"As they have in the past, the two men sought to impress their audience with the recognition of earthly limits.

"We suffer from the success of the past," King concluded. "Our demands are entirely unrealistic."

"We simply cannot provide for 6 billion people the prosperity we now enjoy."

Rules into effect

BOISE (UPI)—Updated regulations governing dairy standards for manufacturing milk went into effect Friday, the Idaho-Wheat Commission said.

Beginning July 1 dairy product manufacturers receiving milk from producers will test it for the presence of mastitis milk and will establish an education and follow up program for producers.

Milk will be tested for residues of drugs, specifically antibiotics and hormones, and any milk that shows traces will be rejected from all markets, Jaye Nichols, Boise, chief of the Agriculture Department's dairy bureau, said.

Idaho oil seed crop display set

MOSCOW—Sunflowers and crabs—grown for their oil-rich seeds—will be on display along with other new crops at the University of Idaho field day near Grangeville on Saturday.

The new crops will also be spotlighted during a tour of the UI Plant Science Farm at Moscow Thursday evening. The public is invited to both events.

Dr. Dick Auld, assistant professor of plant science, said UI researchers are studying the possible advantages new alternate crops might bring to the Idaho—agriculture economy.

New crops under test include safflower, wax mulberry, sunflowers and crabs. In addition, varieties of winter and spring rape are being grown to determine possibilities for increasing rapeseed production in the state.

The Grangeville field day begins at 9:30 a.m. Saturday at the UI research plots four miles west of Grangeville on U.S. 95.

Research reports on cereal crops and winter and spring peas will be presented. Dr. Glen Murray, UI agronomist, will review work on pea diseases and trials of spring-planted winter peas.

The tour of the UI Plant Science Farm at Moscow has been scheduled for 6:30 p.m. Thursday. The tour will begin at the seed house and will include wheat breeding, cereal testing, ornamentals, peas and

Pea exports boosted

BOISE (UPI)—Dry peas should be given equal consideration with other commodities for government export programs, Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, said Thursday.

Church urged Agriculture Secretary Robert Bergland to reverse an earlier decision and approve the purchase of 30 million pounds of dry peas under foreign assistance programs.

The Idaho senator said such a move would relieve "a severely depressed market situation" caused by high crop yields of dry peas this year.

Lambs sell lower

Borg nips Connors to keep Wimbledon title

WIMBLEDON (UPI) — Bjorn Borg, admitting he had never felt so tired in his life, snuffed out a sensational fifth-set comeback by Jimmy Connors Saturday to retain his Wimbledon singles title, 3-6, 6-3, 6-1, 5-7, 6-4.

Borg, only the third player to win back-to-back titles here in 30 years, cruised to a 4-0 lead in the final set and appeared to have the $25,000 first prize wrapped up when the American left-hander suddenly rallied to reel off four games and even the score.

"When he went from 0-4 to 4-1 I thought the game might slip away," said Borg. "If he had won his service to 3-1, I was in big trouble."

But Connors lost that vital fifth game and said a double fault on the second point turned the tide. "If I wouldn't have done that double fault, I could have won," said Connors. "The momentum kind of dropped and I made a couple of unforced errors."

Connors had looked as though he would sweep straight through to take the title from the 21-year-old Swede, who later said, "I have never been so tired before."

Borg said the win was more satisfying than last year's three-set triumph over life Nastase "because I wanted to beat Jimmy very badly. Now for the moment I am the world No. 1."

The women's doubles title saw unseeded Helen Gourlay Cawley of Australia team up with John Russell of England, Fla., to upset top seeds Martina Navratilova, U.S., and Betty Stove, Holland's losing women's singles finalist Friday to Virginia Wade, 6-3, 6-3, in 45 minutes.

Connors took the opening set in 35 minutes in authoritative style, breaking Borg's service in the eighth game.

"But then I was pretty spotty for the next three sets," conceded the top seed and pre-tournament favorite who had to settle for the $13,000 loser's money.

There was only one service break in the second set and Borg took it in the sixth game when Connors' forehand went astray. Connors played himself into trouble with his uncompromising style. He tried to hit winners off almost every ball and they would not come. He lost 11 out of 12 games at one stage to lose the second and third sets.

But despite the scareline, he was making the Stevede fight and Borg looked very tired as he lost the fourth set, dropping his service game to love in the final game.

Borg, who blamed his tiredness on a grueling five set semifinal against Vitas Gerulaitis, summoned his reserves to race to a 4-0 lead when Connors' ground strokes began let him down.

Then it was Connors' turn to hit a hot streak, clawing his way back to 4-4 with the help of some lucky net cords and "some shots I was pretty proud of."

Everything was to hinge on the ninth game, Connors' double fault, only the third he served, leveled the score at 15-15 but deflated the American's game. He was beaten by Borg's stop volley on the next point and then overhit two forehands to drop his service.

Borg put everything into his service game and won it to love, taking the title point by a backhand passing shot that Connors could only grope at.

Connors was far from being subdued after his second loss at Wimbledon in three titles. He won the title in 1974 but lost to Arthur Ashe a year later.

"I'll fight my guts out to be No. 1 and if I lose I'll come back again," the Belleville, Ill., player said.

Three Australians — Lew Hoad, Rod Laver and John Newcombe — are the only past winners to have reached back-to-back titles here and at 21 Borg was the youngest to achieve it in the 100 years of the tournament.

The women's doubles final was curiously one-sided and gave Russell, 22, her first major title with Gourlay, who twice has won the Australian doubles title.

The two junior titles were all-American affairs. Van Winitsky, North Miami Beach, Fla., defeated Elliot Teltscher, Palms Verdes, Calif., 6-1, 1-6, 8-6, in a controversial final in which the California was foul-faulted 20 times on his service.

Teltscher had a running battle with the linesman and at one point appeared to be about to strike him with his fist. The linesman tried to show Teltscher what he was doing wrong and the American drew a warning from the umpire when he went into a comedy routine by taking giant strides into the court at service.

In the women's junior final, Lea Antonopoul, Glendora, Calif., downed Marceen Laue of San Francisco, 7-5, 6-1.

The 17,219 crowd on the final day swelled to a total of 336,287 for the 12-day centennial tournament, some 2,000 short of the record 1976 crowds.

VICTORIOUS Bjorn Borg of Sweden accepts the accolades of the crowd Saturday after defeating Jimmy Connors of the U.S. for his second straight Wimbledon tennis championship. (UPI)

Empey's fivesome nabs scramble title

TWIN FALLS — Young Jay Empey piloted his fivesome around Twin Falls municipal in 56.2 Saturday to win the opening phase of the first-annual Twin Falls Businessmen's mixed scramble.

The tournament continues Sunday with the entire field rearing and placed on a second round. The final round of the two-day event will open from a shotgun start at 10 a.m.

Wind proved bothersome to those teeing off Saturday morning and those in the afternoon played under the threat of rain but without much more than a breeze.

The mixed scramble is designed as a mid-summer social-type event with the highlight being a dinner-dance and special events get-together at Blue Lakes Inn.

Empey's crew of Arnold DePaul, Marv Aslett, Charlotte Van Engelen and Mike Cowan fired the best round of the day with a gross 57. Based on the negligible handicap differentials that account for the fractions, they won the all-out thing at 66.2.

A tie developed for second place at 57.6. These teams included Ron Boyd, Ralph Conant, Bruce Cameron, Jeanne Alban and Gary Roberts and Harold Huston, Bill Long, Pat Williams, Weldon Taskins and Gary Meyer.

Alone in fourth at 57.8 was the fivesome of Ray Wight, Jim Murray, Chris Williams, Hi Long and Dave Chandler while at 58 were Dell Timpson, Ardith Morgan, George Williams, Louie Denison and Ruth Duggan.

Another tie at 58.6 developed among Mike Courtwright, Don Long, Hank Willis, Wayne King and Vera Amende and Danne Schlenberger, Bob Mehl, Lee Howell, Al Mingo and Marge Hurlbert. Mrs. Hurlbert fashioned that tie with a 15-foot uphill putt on the final hole.

Along in eighth was the group of Gary Jenkins, Gary Baum, Glen Sparks, Al Empey and Pat Doshier.

The tournament incorporated a little different twist with one woman playing on each team. The average skill accepted by their more team makes after they showed off some sharp approach and putting techniques.

Seattle Slew risks unbeaten reputation

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI) — Triple Crown winner Seattle Slew puts his unbeaten record and his reputation on the line Sunday in the $300,000 Swaps Stakes at Hollywood Park, his California debut.

Track officials predicted a standing-room only crowd of more than 70,000 would turn out to watch the champion 3-year-old go for his 11th straight victory against six rivals.

"We remember (Hollywood Park manager) Bob Benoit's kindness when we didn't have anything and because of it we've always had special fondness for Hollywood Park," said Karen Taylor, explaining why she and her husband, Mickey, would risk running the horse here after his latest victory at Belmont.

Considered a prime challenge to Seattle Slew for the $194,000 winner's purse is J.O. Tobin, who was a champion 2-year-old in England and established a Hollywood track record for nine furlongs on turf.

Standley medalist in tri-club meet

TWIN FALLS — Vinnie Standley put together one of her best competitive rounds Friday afternoon to take top honors in the tri-club women's tournament at Blue Lakes Country Club.

Mrs. Standley posted an 89 to win the gross award by one stroke over Shirley Strangman and Christine Messersmith. But McClain grabbed net honors with a 63, followed by Judy Lawley, Ruth Barlow and Judy Silvers at 66.

The tournament was open to members of Blue Lakes, Twin Falls many and Canyon Springs women's golf associations.

T.F. women aim for major tournament

TWIN FALLS — Added women's tournaments are becoming the vogue of the amateur golf trail these days, and the women are getting in on some of the action.

The Twin Falls Women's Golf Association is putting together what it hopes will be the biggest women's amateur of the year in mid-August.

Pat Williams, reports the group already has committed for several hundred dollars from Twin Falls businessmen and she says the association will do all it can to bring in the strongest and biggest possible field.

It is a little difficult for the businessmen to turn down the ladies. For instance, Saturday, Ace Hansen, playing in the Twin Falls mixed scramble, was approached by Jackie Gasser. Mrs. Gasser explained it was going to be a biggy and would honor her to contribute.

"Anything for the ladies," Hansen said, and the listening crew at Mrs. Gasser's table beamed.

Similarly, the Canyon Springs amateur is offering something in the area of $200 added. Director Jim Packard, who began turning down entries before the first tournament was over last year, felt it would only be fair to put off the entire deadline until July 1, to give everyone an equal shot.

"Actually, we did have six or seven guys walk up to the chairman during the tournament last year and say to them even to put them in for next year. Some of them even had twenty-dollar bills in their hands," Packard said.

"Other guys wanted to enter as soon as we opened the clubhouse. We're a little limited to the number we can take because we just have the one hole. If we had 18 and could handle 200 or so it wouldn't have been a problem."

"But I've found that early entries don't always show up for their first tee times especially, if they haven't paid," he smiled.

"This way I felt everyone would know for sure if they could play and if he wanted to play."

Packard said that while it might be possible for him to push 125 around the course, he was limiting it to 100 because it makes for a much more relaxed tournament. No one's being pushed all the time, and they enjoy it more.

Still on the golf subject, the dry winter and lack of snow cover severely cramped the Jackpot golf course. The lack of snow cover led to a huge winter kill in the greens and the continued coolness of the spring compounded things.

"We turned the water out of the sprinkler system in November and put it back on in January, but I guess it didn't work," says Professional Bill Downs, who had to cancel the annual Silver Star Classic this week.

"When we went through the middle of May with only a couple of duffles that it didn't freeze. We tried everything we could think of. We oversodded a couple of times and it looked for a while like the old grass was going to come back. Some of it did, but not as quick as we'd have liked."

"You have to remember that the Jackpot golf course is about as high as the Sun Valley course. The Jackpot airport is 5,853 feet in altitude. You don't get the feeling of playing in purified air — but you are at Jackpot."

Downs reports the reseeding now appears to be paying off, and he's hopeful he can pick up

Russians collect fifth straight track and field victory over U.S.

SOCHI, USSR (UPI) — The Soviet Union registered its fifth straight victory in the annual outdoor Soviet-U.S. track and field meet Saturday, defeating a young and inexperienced U.S. team that showed promise of better things to come, 207-171.

The Soviet men won 118-105, and the women, 89-66, after two days of competition on the rain-soaked grounds of the small Central Sports Stadium at this Black Sea resort.

In the 15 years the event has been held the Soviets have dominated overall 12-2-1, but this was only the fifth defeat for the U.S. men's team.

The American men took the 110-meter hurdles, the 400-meter relay, first and second places in the 200-meter dash and five other second places.

The American women came out one-two in the long jump and took three other second places. They just overwhelmed us in the second day," said Heleodoro Rico, the American Athletic Union (AAU) representative traveling with the team.

Many of the Americans are still in their teens and just beginning international competition. They faced three Soviet Olympic gold medalists and the men's world record holder in the high jump.

"You hate to lose," Rico said, "but we have great prospects for the future."

Two of those prospects participated in the men's 200 meters. U.S. coaches said it was a "toss-up" whether Bill Collins or Cliff Wiley would finish first. Collins, 23, of Houston did it in 23.52 seconds, followed closely by Wiley, 21, of Baltimore and the University of Kansas, with a 24.63.

The same intra-team rivalry paid off in the women's high jump with Jodi Anderson of California State at Northridge clearing 21 feet-11 inches and Kathy McMillan, 18, of Raeford, N.C., and Tennessee State, placing second with 21-9.

In the 3,000-meter steeplechase George Malley of Glenville, Md., crossed the tape in a photo-finish with Vladimir Filonov in 8:29.5 minutes but Filonov was declared the winner with Malley second.

The Americans also had high hopes for Evelyn Ashford of Los Angeles and California State who set the U.S. record of 22:62 in the 200 meters earlier this month. But, slowed by a bad leg, she finished last.

The Soviets highly rated Marina Sidorova won in 22:81 seconds and Chandra Cheesborough, 18, of Jacksonville and Tennessee State, followed in 22:83.

Tatyana Kazankina, 25, the Olympic double gold medalist who holds the world record in the 800 meters, won the event in 2:00.7 minutes but Julie Brown of Santa Monica, Calif., and California State, was right behind her in 2:00.9.

Another Soviet gold medalist, Palina Velera Melnik, 31, had no competition, winning the 200-meter race with a throw of 224-1. Lyudmila Isayeva was second with 208-8.

The Soviets also finished one-two in the men's high jump with world record holder Alexander Grigoryev clearing 7-0, Sergel Senyukov next with 7-7.

Another new American face won the men's 910 high hurdles. Robert Gaines, 20, of Richmond, Calif., edged Soviet runner Vyacheslav Kulebyakin in 13.69 minutes. Kulebyakin's time was 13.77.

Rankin takes lead into final round

LACIUTE, Quebec (UPI) — Judy Rankin, leading money winner on the LPGA tour, fired six birdies Saturday and came from behind to take a one-stroke lead going into the final round of the $80,000 Peter Jackson Classic with 139 for 36 holes.

Rankin, with $70,000 already this year, shot a 6-under-par 66 over the 6,300-yard Lachute Golf and Country Club course to overtake rookie Pat Meyers, who faltered on the final two holes and dropped into second place at 129. Meyers shot 69 Saturday.

Three shots back of Rankin is Sandra Palmer, who had a 69 for 142. South Africa's Sally Little (69) is at even par 144, with Hollis Stacy (70) and Beth Stange (71) at 145.

"I could have been at least three shots better than I was," Rankin said. "People ask me how I can miss two-footers. Well, I missed a couple today forties."

Strong winds gusting to 20 MPH again sent some of the scores soaring, and first-round leader Chiko Higuchi of Japan suffered the most. She remained at four under par through the first nine holes, and then collapsed to a seven-overpar 43 on the back nine, for 79 and 147 total.

Meyers, making her strongest showing since joining the tour 11 months ago, had seven birdies and two bogeys, two of them coming at 47 and 48 when her approaches sailed over the greens.

"I just want to concentrate on my game and not on Judy's," she said. "My target is to play as well as I have for the last two days."

Palmer, a two-tournament winner this year, birdied three of the final six holes, but said, "Judy Rankin is playing so well, my 69 looks like nothing."

Italian sprinter clocks best 200

MILAN, Italy (UPI) — Italian favorite Pietro Mennea turned in the top performance of the City of Milan track and field meet Saturday, clocking 20.11 seconds in the 200 meter sprint, the best time in the world this year.

Mennea edged Olympic champion Don Quarrie of Jamaica, who finished in 20.41. The long awaited 800 meter matchup between Olympic champion Alberto Juantorena of Cuba and Mike Bolt of Kenya failed to take place as neither man entered the event. The two did not compete against each other at Montreal because Bolt was held out by the African boycott of the Olympics.

Juantorena easily won the 400 meters in 55.58 seconds. Bob Taylor of the United States finished second in 46.10, and Bolt won the 1,500 meters in 3:29.9.

American Dwight Stones won the high jump with a leap of 6 feet 10 1/2 inches, and Olympic champion Mac Wilkins of the United States won the discus with a throw of 205-1 1/2.

Dan Ripley and Mike Tully of the United States finished 1-2 in the pole vault. Ripley won the event with a leap of 17-8 1/2 inches, and Tully cleared 17-4 1/2.

The 800 meter event, run without Bolt and Juantorena, was won by Yugoslavia's Milovan Savic to broke the tape in 1:46.60.

Samson Kimbumba of Kenya, the world 10,000 meter record holder, easily took the 5,000 meters in 13:21.9.

Cuba's Alejandro Casanas outlasted America's Charlie Foster in the 110 meter hurdles, winning in 13.50 to Foster's 13.70.

Another Cuban, Silvio Leonardo, won the 100 meters in 10.27.

Italy's Rita Battiglieri was meet's top woman performer, setting a new Italian record in winning the 200 meters in 23.38 seconds. Rosie Bryant of the United States was second in 24.44.

Italy's Sara Simeoni, who won the women's high jump silver medal at Montreal, too her event by clearing 6-2. Debbie Brill of the United States was second at 6-0 1/2.

U.S. stars trip Japan

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Doug La Trenta of St. John's singled with two out in the eighth inning to score Rick Peters, giving the United States team a 4-3 victory over the Japanese All-Stars Saturday in the opening game of the sixth annual U.S.-Japan College Baseball series Saturday.

With two out in the eighth, Peters, of Arizona State, singled, stole second and went to third on a bad throw.

La Trenta had a 3-0 lead in the fifth inning, but the Americans got out in the bottom of the fifth and yielded the score in the sixth on a single by Rick Peters and a wild pitch that scored Gerald Price.

Reds hike gate record

CINCINNATI (UPI) — The Cincinnati Reds attracted 630,722 fans to Riverfront Stadium in June to boost the season total to 1,250,086 and the Reds' seven-year record since moving to the stadium over the 16 million mark.

The attendance totals represent the club's biggest June in history and best season to date in history.

Club spokesmen boast that the Red's are well on the way to their fifth consecutive two million attendance total and, only two teams, the Yankees and the Dodgers, representing the nation's two largest cities of New York and Los Angeles, have ever drawn two million fans for five seasons in a row

Andretti takes pole spot

DIJON, France (UPI) — American driver Mario Andretti overcame tire and suspension problems Saturday to grab the pole position for Sunday's French Formula One Grand Prix auto race with a qualifying time of one minute, 12.21 seconds in a Lotus.

With temperatures rising to

Reigning world champion James Hunt of Britain, in a McLaren, by more than half a second.

Mariners equal 1969 total

SEATTLE (UPI) — It took the Seattle Mariners less than half a season to draw more home fans than the total which watched the Seattle Pilots of the American League in 1969.

A crowd of 16,119 saw Seattle lose to the Milwaukee Brewers 2-1 Saturday night, swelling the home attendance to 678,886.

The 37 home appearances, including one doubleheader, give the Mariners an average of 17,865 a game with 43 more home contests left.

The Pilots drew 677,944 fans through the turnstiles of dilapidated Stek's Stadium before making an 11 to Milwaukee to become the Brewers in 1970.

Painted Wagon surprises

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI) — Painted Wagon scored a surprise neck victory Saturday in the 20th running of the $43,750 Lakes and Flavors Handicap at Hollywood Park for his first stakes triumph.

Jockey Chuck Baltazar let the winner settle into stride in the early stages of the race as Best Inflation and Mark's Place battled for the early lead. It was not until the field of seven went around the turn that Painted Wagon closed on the leaders and went to the front midway down the stretch for his surprise win.

Painted Wagon traced seven furlongs in 1:26 1/4 to clip two-fifths of a second off the stakes record set by Woodland Pines in 1974. Sent off at odds of 16-1, Painted Wagon paid $435.01, $242 and $12.

Park music set

SHOSHONE - Next Sunday the population of Shoshone will increase by several thousand for the day.

The Oldtime Fiddlers Jambooree, the biggest event of the year for the community, will see the city park filled to overflowing for the annual Oldtime Fiddlers Jambooree, July 10.

The 50-day jambooree attracts fiddlers, guitar players, accordions and spectators from throughout Idaho and beyond.

The music begins by mid-morning and lasts well into the night, according to officials of the Shoshone Chamber of Commerce, which sponsors the jambooree. Chamber members man the show-cane and food booths, the only commercialization allowed at the festival.

Some members and other civic-minded cooks bake home-made pies for the booth but most of the jambooree spectators bring their own food.

Families and even organizations plan reunions and annual picnics on the second Sunday of July to take advantage of the top entertainment and the chance to renew old acquaintances.

The music lasts well into the night as long as there are people to listen or dance, and the musicians have energy to play.

ATTRACTIVE SHOSHONE CITY PARK ... will attract thousands July 10

4-H show

GLENN'S FERRY - The High Country Riders 4-H Club is sponsoring an open house show July 17 at the Elmore County Fairgrounds at Glenn's Ferry.

Activities will commence at 9 a.m. with fitting and showing and will continue through the day.

Classes are fitting and showing, bareback equitation, western pleasure, snaffle bit equitation, tinny top costume, pee wee, trail class, reining, keyhole race, pole bending, jacket barrel race and ribbon race.

An entry fee of $1 per class will be charged. Entry deadline is set for July 14 and any entries received after this date will be 50 cents per class extra.

Checks are payable to High Country Riders, Glenn's Ferry, Box 626. Ribbons will be given to the first five places and trophies to high point male and female in each age division.

Aid asked

BOISE (UPI) - Idaho has applied to the federal Energy Research and Development Administration for establishment of a pilot energy extension service Gov. John V. Evans said Friday.

Congress last year passed legislation financing pilot programs for the extension services, and, Idaho, will compete to become one of the states selected.

Another Sooner manhunt

PURCELL, Okla. (UPI) - Highway patrolmen, already busy with Fourth of July holiday traffic, used five airplanes Saturday to search for a manhunt taxidermy believed to have been manufactured by two men suspected of at least two killings in a three-state time spree.

Officers also were looking for the taxi driver, believed to have been kidnaped by the two armed men.

"We're still looking for the vehicle and we still haven't had any reports," said Highway Patrol Lt. Kenneth Vanhook. "We're doing a lot of looking and not much finding."

"We will continue the efforts as long as we feel there is a possibility the vehicle and subjects are in the area," he said. "We use all the people available on a holiday weekend anyway so we have everybody available working on it already."

He said officers were assuming James Short, 40, the cab driver, had been kidnaped because he had not been accounted for since answering a call to a Purcell service station Friday.

Officers found a truck reported stolen in Arkansas about six blocks from the service station where Short had been sent. The truck bearing Arkansas tags, was stuck in the mud and abandoned, officers said.

Officials said they believed two men killed a Magazine, Ark., town marshal and wounded an Arkansas forest ranger Wednesday. Kidnaped another Arkansas forest ranger, whose body was found Friday, stole the pickup in Oden, Ark. and left it in Purcell.

Magazine town marshal Marvin Ritchie, 39, was killed and ranger David Small, 26, of Russellville, was wounded Wednesday. They were found handcuffed in the trunk of Richie's patrol car near Booneville in southwest Arkansas.

'Loot' found

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) - Two packets containing $2 million believed stolen from slain heiress Marjorie Jackson have been dug up in the Arizona desert, authorities said Friday.

Marion County Prosecutor James Kelley said FBI agents recovered the loot - one information provided by Maurice Polk of Mooresville, Ind., one of three persons accused in the slaying of the eccentric widow, who had hidden millions in her home.

Kelley said Mr. Polk told investigators who were responsible for the May 3 killing described events leading up to the robbery, discussed where the murder weapon was abandoned and pinpointed the location of the buried loot.

Leaders accused of 'lip service'

BOISE (UPI) - State legislators and municipal leaders "pay nothing more than lip service" to the concept of local government control, the director of the Idaho Legislative Council said Friday.

"That is neither good nor bad - it is a simple statement of fact," Myron Scheldt told members of the Governor's Task Force on Local Governmental Involvement in Boise.

Scheldt said the legislature is "reluctant to allow innovative procedures, innovative structures and innovative functions to go to local government."

Legislators "pay nothing more than lip service to the concept of local control," he said, adding that such an attitude has "permeated the legislature for the last 20 years."

Constitutional and statutory constraints stand in the way of innovation as does the attitude of local authorities who "give lip service to let us do it" but are very glad to let the state provide mill levy restraints and taxing restraints.

"There may need to be an attitude shift on the part of local officials to accept the responsibility that may be needed," Scheldt said.

One of the "critical needs" he outlined was "organization of government structure to provide services."

"It is not the needs of local, state and federal government but the needs of the citizens" that should be considered, the director said, urging the task force members to "explore the possibilities of existing structures of government to meet the needs of the people and if they're not adequate look at something else."

Dam safety overlooked

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress' investigative arm reported Thursday that despite several dam disasters here, dam safety legislation has not even the first steps have been taken toward implementation, according to the General Accounting Office.

Congress' investigative arm reported Thursday that despite several dam disasters here, dam safety legislation has not even the first steps have been taken toward implementation, according to the General Accounting Office.

When Martin responded the administration bill probably would be ready by the end of the year, Ryan replied: "You're living on borrowed time... There is serious danger to life and property in this country."

The GAO said it believed dam inspectors "are essential to protect human life and property by identifying unsafe dam structures and determining remedial measures."

Soviets blame US for ocean arms race

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union today accused the United States of starting an arms race in the Indian Ocean and called on Washington to dismantle its military bases in the strategic area.

A commentary by the Tass news agency said the Soviets were "tiring of discussing military attacks in the Indian Ocean region, but denied Moscow had established bases there."

The article said the Soviet comment to appear on the issue since the United States and Soviet Union began talks on demilitarizing the region.

U.S. arms control negotiator Paul Warnke, who led the American side during the first round of discussions that ended Monday in Moscow, said he was "quite encouraged" by the talks.

Population increased

BELLEVUE — The population of Bellevue increased from 577 people in 1970 to 629 people in 1977, according to preliminary figures gathered in a recent county-wide census. The small city in the Wood River valley therefore has experienced 7.1 per cent growth in the last seven years, all of which is due to resilient changes.

The Times-News incorrectly reported the growth was in part due to annexations by the city. According to Bellevue Mayor Pete Johnson, the city has made no annexations during the past seven years.

Preliminary census figures also show that 4,108 permanent residents live north of the East Fork area, a figure about 26 percent less than half of the preliminary population total of 8,730 people.

The Times-News earlier reported incorrectly that 4,108 permanent residents lived north of Hailey.

Walk-in assistance given

TWIN FALLS — Beginning Monday the Twin Falls office of the Internal Revenue Service is offering "walk-in" taxpayer assistance three days a week — Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

Local taxpayers may, however, obtain federal tax assistance five days a week by calling the toll free number 800-632-2099.

Office hours for the Twin Falls office will remain open from 8 a.m. to 4:15 p.m. Monday through Friday.

QUESTION: Do you approve or disapprove of Anita Bryant's campaign against homosexuality?

Arlene Clawson, Twin Falls:

"I approve. She is for the idea that our children should not be taught by homosexuals in school and I agree with that."

Ralph Lyons, Jerome:

"I approve of it. I don't believe in that."

Marvin Glasscock, Twin Falls:

"I firmly approve. I believe that anything the gays are doing is contrary to God's law."

Mrs. Liz Johnson, Hansen:

"I think she's doing the right thing. She's doing a good job, but I haven't read enough about it to know enough about it."

Bob Peterson, Twin Falls:

"I haven't paid much attention to it. I've been too busy in meetings to really read the paper."

Mrs. Shirley Thomas, Kimberly:

"I approve of it. I just don't think it's right according to the laws in the Bible."

Jim Blake, Twin Falls:

"She's entitled to her opinion. I don't necessarily agree with their practices but this is still a free country and I suppose they're entitled to conduct their own way of life as they see fit."

Randall Brewer, Three Creek:

"I approve. I feel they have their own place but I don't think they should have the same rights."

CEILING INTEREST

BY COLLEEN TOUPIN

Walls and ceiling should, of course, be coordinated in some way, whether by color or pattern. You might pick up a wall color in the ceiling pattern, for example. The alternative is to make the ceiling neutral in color and quiet in pattern, so that it simply sets off the rest of the room. For instance, a small pattern on the walls will be set off by using a large pattern on the ceiling.

For instance, a small pattern on the walls will be set off by using a large pattern on the ceiling.

An old tradition that is finding new favor in today's decorating is the wallpapered ceiling... and the wallpaper manufacturers have kept up with this trend, even offering papers with designs that lend themselves beautifully to ceiling interest.

You can use the same paper on walls and ceiling, but contrast may be more effective. For instance, a small pattern on the walls will be set off by using a large pattern on the ceiling.

Fourth of July promises action

TWIN FALLS—Picnics and fireworks, baseball and rodeos, contests and carnivals.

The United States of America celebrates its 201st birthday tomorrow.

Independence Day, the Fourth of July, means a long weekend for most Americans. Once again the parks will fill with picnickers, the highways with travelers.

If you've got the television blues, cure them: Turn off the TV and leave the house.

Those hankering for rodeo action can grab a ten-gallon hat and head for Bull, Rupert or Halley.

A picnic basket makes a party at Shoshone Falls or the Twin Falls, and just south of the border there's a happening in Jackpot or Jarbidge.

Today and tomorrow Bull is holding Sagebrush Days. Activities begin at 1 p.m. today in Eastman Park with a horseshoe tournament, and at 2 p.m. the Bull Chamber of Commerce will hold a "watermelon bust" with free watermelon for the public.

8 Times-News, Twin Falls, Idaho Sunday, July 3, 1977

There will also be games and contests for the kids and carnival rides on the Bull High School grounds will be in operation today and tomorrow.

If baseball and hotdogs are your idea of a good time, take in the Bull American Legion doubleheader tonight with games at 5 and 8 p.m.

A Fourth of July parade at 10 a.m. will kick off tomorrow's activities. The parade will begin at the West End garage and wind through town ending at the fairgrounds.

8 p.m. is rodeo time in the Bull Rodeo Arena. The rodeo will continue Tuesday at 8 p.m. when the Sagebrush Days queen will be crowned.

Fourth of July fireworks will be set off at 9:30 p.m. in Farris Field.

Halley's annual Days of the Old West continues today with an old west shootout in downtown Halley at 5 p.m. and a rodeo at 8 p.m. A fireworks display will follow the rodeo.

Tomorrow at 8 a.m. an old west breakfast will be held in the Halley

Grange Hall. Another old west shootout will take place downtown at 11 a.m.

The Mile-Long Parade will wind down Main Street at noon, and the final Halley rodeo show will start at 2 p.m. when "Miss Days of the Old West" will be crowned.

The culmination of Days of the Old West will be the Button Barbecue at 4:30 p.m. in the Halley City Park.

The folks in Jarbidge promise a Sunday barbecue at "break-even prices." The barbecue begins at 1 p.m. in the Outdoor Inn.

There will be contests for children and adults. If you stay until after sundown, you will be treated to free dancing at the Outdoor Inn.

The Rupert rodeo will begin at 8:30 p.m. at the Minidoka County Fairgrounds both tonight and tomorrow night. The rodeo will feature the 1976 saddle bronc of the National Finals rodeo, "Sunday Punch."

The El Capa bareback riders will perform both nights. Tonight the Weber County Sheriff's Posse from Utah will perform and tomorrow night the Cassia County Mounted Posse will perform.

The Rupert Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring programs in the city park for today and tomorrow.

At 2:30 today, a program of gospel music will be presented by several local churches.

After the parade tomorrow morning, the Minle High School band will play until 1:30 p.m. The Minico Alumni choir will perform from 2 to 2:30 p.m.

Three shows will be presented by the Nazarene College puppeteers at 1:30, 2:30 and 3:30 p.m. The puppeteers which were organized at the college in Nampa have appeared on television.

If you stay in Twin Falls you won't find much action until tomorrow night. The Fourth of July fireworks display is scheduled for 10 p.m. in Frontier Park. Those attending can park in the College of Southern Idaho lots or along Falls, Washington or Harrison Streets.

Cajuns remain the race apart

NEW ORLEANS — For 200 years, in the watery land south of New Orleans and in the western Louisiana prairie, the Cajuns have been a race apart.

Although there have been fears, especially among older Cajuns, that their culture is dying, they have managed to preserve their identity more successfully than most American minorities. The reason for this success is probably their common language, a modified version of 17th century French.

Now they have what is believed to be the first textbook for teaching the Cajun language, in an effort to strengthen Cajun culture.

The book will be the basic text for a new sophomore course in the foreign language department at Louisiana State University in Baton Rouge this fall and will be taught in the next school year in one south Louisiana High School, possibly three.

The author, James Donald Faulk, 52, who lives in a country cottage near Abbeville, La., sees his book as a tool that can stop the steady erosion of the Cajun culture and language. The public interest in his book, Faulk feels, is a hopeful sign that the Cajuns are ready to resist further assimilation.

Cajun French has traditionally been a spoken but not a written language. In recent years, it has become primarily a language of the old. Few young persons speak Cajun French fluently, and many of them speak very little or none at all.

The new textbook, based on a course of study Faulk developed to teach his high school language students, is selling briskly for $18.95

a copy, he said, even though he has not had time to advertise it. "People are buying two and three at a time," he said. "Our language has been disappearing. Mothers and fathers are concerned about that."

Faulk and many other Cajuns can remember when their native language was banned from their schools to encourage assimilation. But in recent years French as spoken by Parisians, has been taught to Louisiana school children by teachers from France, Belgium, Switzerland and Haiti, in an effort to reestablish the language among the young.

Some Cajuns grumbled that the modern French their children were learning was not true Cajun. For example, the French "yes" becomes, "ou" or "I drink," or "I'm in." "In Cajun, they feared the culture was only being further eroded by the French lessons.

Faulk said that he decided to develop a course in Cajun after one of his students in the high school standard French class complained to him one day, "I've been learning French so long and I still can't speak to my grandma."

After he began to offer Cajun French to his students at Crowley High School, he said, they "flocked in hordes to the classes. I just couldn't keep them all. Nobody wanted to take standard French."

To gather material for his course, Faulk traveled through the countryside, interviewing old persons, he said, who were "walking dictionaries." There were no written dictionaries and the dialect varied from parish to parish.

California wine rises on scene

NEW YORK — A phenomenon unique to California wine scene is to rise in recent years of the winemaker as celebrity. In most of the world's wine regions, the winemakers toil unobtrusively among their vines and presses.

In Burgundy, it is true, some producers of fine estate-bottled wines have gained reputations in the world beyond their cellars, but who, for instance, knows the name of the winemaker at Chateau Lafite-Bordeaux?

In California it's just the opposite. The pedigrees of a winemaker such as Dick Peterson, once of Beaulieu and now of Monterey; Vinnyand, formerly Philip Fogel, formerly of Chateau Lascombes; Chappellet vineyards and other assorted wineries and now of Cavalson, are chronicled at great length in the wine press. In their newfound enthusiasm for wine, Americans have perceived winemaking as a romantic business and the people who make it as fascinating, and adventuresome, some are. They are men who gave up successful careers in business or engineering or law to go back to the soil and build a new life in the vineyards and the wine cellar. Who among us does not dream of doing that and who can help but admire someone who really pulls it off?

Now there is a book of interviews with some of the best-known winemakers in California. In some ways it tells more about winemaking and the California wine scene than anything written recently.

A lot of it is banal stuff, at least to the uninitiated, with long answers to such dramatic, probing questions as: "Do you ever adjust acid levels?" or "is your Zinfandel mechanically harvested?" But a lot of it is fascinating. Here is Joe Heltz on whether the best California wines are equal to the best European wines: "Is the best blonde as much fun as the best brunette?" Or, on the use of scientific skills to make better wine: "Mother Nature is a mean old lady and mankind had to help make wine."

The book, called "Great Winemakers of California," by Robert Benson is a bit fawning in its adulation of these men (and one woman), but the men themselves generally overcome that time with their own good sense. Here is August Sebastian after being asked about revealing his blending techniques: "Look, my dad taught me this stuff and some of it

I don't tell anybody but my kids."

Here is Louis P. Martini on whether the best California wines are better than the best European wines: "No, they are not. The reason is that we haven't really found the places to grow the grapes."

I don't think Europeans know anything we don't know, except that for 500 or 1,000 years they've been growing grapes and they know which grape does best on which soil.

Martini, by the way, is in the minority in this group. Almost everyone believes that California does indeed make wines as good as the best in Europe.

"Great Winemakers of California" is a fascinating insight into wine and the men who make it. It is published by Capra Press, Santa Barbara, Calif., at $12.50.

Speaking of California wines, the Treasury Department's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms last week announced a set of new regulations for wine labeling. Gone is the proposal advanced earlier this year, that would have created a government seal for certain quality wines.

The seal was widely opposed by the wine industry and, in fact, probably would have created more problems than that it would have solved.

Most important of all the bureau's proposals was one requiring that a varietal wine (cabernet, sauvignon, zinfandel, etc.) derive at least 75 per cent of its volume from the labeled grape type. At present the rule requires no more than 51 per cent, so that a bottle of so-called chardonnay may contain 49 per cent of wine from other, cheaper grapes.

The proposed new regulations would require that a bottle listed as from a specific county or state contain 75 per cent of wine from that county or state. If a specific viticultural area such as Alexander Valley or Carmelitas listed, 85 per cent of the wine in the bottle should come from that viticultural area.

The new rules would phase out, by 1983, the use of the term "estate bottled" on wines produced in this country. The reason: There are so many interpretations of the term that it has become virtually meaningless. Also, the proposed rules would ban the use of terms such as "spatlese" and "auslese" to denote late picking or the condition of the grapes at the time of harvest. Many California winners already have switched to "late harvested" or "late harvested" to replace the German phrases.

YELLOWSTONE — It is a landscape from the day after creation. The earth seems still new; heaving here hot water boils to the surface, trembling as geysers thunder skyward. Mist drifts across the countryside, softening its features as time has softened the details of prehistory.

Today Yellowstone Lake basin, a turquoise gem in its setting of dark green spruce and fir. Sightseers cruising the lake are treated to an intimate glimpse into the lives—some of Yellowstone's abundant wildlife. Deer and elk graze the lakeshore meadows. Moose wade the shallows; browsing on aquatic plants. Nesting waterfowl shoo their scuttling young along reed-lined inlets.

Yellowstone's petrified forest—one of the largest in the world—gives modern visitors a glimpse into eons past. There was a hardwood forest here fifty-five million years ago.

Wildlife teemed on the sun-dappled floor beneath the spreading canopies of huge sycamores, walnuts, and chestnuts. Some of the animals would have seemed strange among modern species.

Today that forest—still stands, buried alive by volcanic ash and lava, preserved for millions of years by absorbed silica. One well-preserved stump is easily accessible along the "Petrified Tree Road" north of Roosevelt Lodge.

Geologists are puzzled that the rugged Grand Canyon of the Yellowstone somehow escaped the general action that created much of the gently rolling terrain of Yellowstone National Park. Most visitors are simply glad this golden river-carved canyon exists to provide sightings in America.

Here Yellowstone River cradles 24 miles in furious conflict with the enclosing 1,200 foot cliffs. At the head of the canyon the waterfall thunders from twice as high as Niagara. Visitors riding horseback or hiking along the rim have an eye level view of osprey circling high above the river.

Yellowstone's 10,000 thermal wonders, perhaps more than any other feature of the park, give visitors a hint of the tremendous forces alive beneath the earth's crust. Here, superheated water is forced to the surface to appear as thousands of boiling hot pools and springs, shimmering highly colored "palm pots" and roaring geysers.

Most famous of these, of course, is Old Faithful Geyser, still erupting predictably about every 60 minutes.

By ROBIN ADAMS SLOAN

Q: What's become of comedian Alan Young—the one who starred in the "Mister Ed" TV series?—R.T., St. Paul, Minn.

A: Young has been living off his investments from the successful series that ran from 1962 to 1964. Now Young, 54, has decided to come out of retirement and will play a veterinarian in the new Disney movie called "The Cat from Outer Space."

SHORT AND SWEET: Rosalynn Carter now has her own official hairdresser. Just the way Pat Nixon used to. He's Eivind Bjerke of Lucien and Elvind, a Washington, D.C., hair salon. Bjerke will go on all trips with the First Lady. Quiet pressure by black groups is being put on Redd-Fox and ABC

Q: I saw Lauren Bacall on the recent Tony Awards TV show and she looked terrific. How does she do it?—T.Y., Isla Vista, Calif.

A: Lauren, who'll be 53 in September, not only leads the good life but has that lean, classic look which ages well, but not well enough that she hasn't had to resort to a recent complete face lift.

Q: We've been reading about Bobby Kennedy's son getting interested in politics but what about his oldest married daughter, Kathleen? She's the one who went to Radcliffe.—W.P., Hartford, Conn.

A: Kathleen Kennedy Townsend is working for a Washington law firm this summer and will go back to law school at the University of New Mexico in the fall.

WALK, DON'T RIDE: Sen. William Proxmire has locked the elevator in his Washington home. Proxmire, a well-known fitness nut, has decided that his wife and their young son need the exercise they can get by running up and down the three flights of stairs in the $300,000 mansion.

Q: You mentioned an old love of mine, Gina-Lollobrigida—in a column—is she a successful photographer? Does she have any money? How does she fare as an artist?—P.O., San Francisco, Calif.

A: Gina is one of the few famous actresses who has made a graceful exit. Used to flowers and red carpets everywhere, she doesn't seem to mind leaving her own suitcases and calling a taxi. She owns a whitening firm and does quite well with her photography.

Q: Is it true the Osmonds want to work only in their home state of Utah?—P.F., Council Bluffs, Iowa.

A: That would be impossible since the Osmond family is committed to play Las Vegas at least once a year and also give concerts around the country.

However, construction is underway on an ultramodern TV studio complex in their hometown of Provo from which the Donny and Marie TV show will originate. Also, the family would love to find some good, wholesome movie scripts to film in their new studio.

CHANGING: Elizabeth Ray, the sex bomb who sank Wayne Hays' career in Congress, is converting to Catholicism. She goes to Mass every day. She was a Baptist.

Q: Are any of Lyndon Johnson's old buddies rallying around to help the late president's son-in-law, Chuck—Robb's campaign in Virginia?—T.O., Washington, D.C.

A: Robb, 37, a Washington lawyer and Lynda Bird's husband, is tapping all the big LBJ contributors in his race for lieutenant governor.

MARIE and DONNY
... planning shows in Provo

So far, a number of them have come through, including philanthropist Mary Lasker, ex-LBJ aide Jack Valenti, Averell Harriman, and D.C. lawyers, Thomas Corcoran, Abe Fortas, and Edward Bennett Williams.

Q: I'm totally fascinated by Diane von Furstenberg. Will she marry movie exec Barry Diller? Who takes care of the children of such a high-powered businesswoman?—K.D., Chicago.

A: We doubt if the wedding bells will ring out for Diane and Barry. Her partner, as you ask, is that marriage would be the romance. Diane is very attentive to her children, and now that her mother and father are divorced, she has her mother living with her, and the two women share the responsibility for Alexandra and Tatiana, who are a governess. Diane, incidentally, has been trying to persuade her mother to do a book on her experiences in a Nazi concentration camp.

Q: With Carrie Fisher's success in "Star Wars," I'm wondering what kind of relationship she has with her famous parents.—C.L., Newport News, Va.

A: Carrie has been on her own for the last two years, though Debbie Reynolds has always supported her and her schooling at London's prestigious Central Acting School. Mother and daughter don't see eye-to-eye about Eddie Fisher.

Carrie has tried to be supportive of her father, though he was not the most attentive parent. She's always been willing to come to his side and do such things as appear in magazine photograph sessions with him.

Debbie would prefer that Carrie stay out of Eddie's controversies and lawsuits, but so far she has failed to alienate daughter and father.

CHANGE OF HEART: Remember we told you that ex-President Ford's son, Steve, was going to be in the movie version of "Grease"? Well, he dropped out after rehearsal for just one day, even before the casting announcement was made public. You can't get a straight answer for the walk, but some insiders don't think it was the money (reportedly only $25,000) or that Steve decided he didn't like acting.

They believe the ex-President is planning to get back into politics and didn't want his son connected with the film.

TAKING IT EASY: We hear Truman Capote spent a week at the Palm-Aire Spd in Pompano Beach, Fla. recently. He was just taking it easy and fellow guests were surprised that Capote did not take advantage of any of the facilities at the expensive spa. All he did was get a daily manicure and pedicure.

Q: Who's the girl who finally laid and married Jeff Bridges?—B.M., San Mateo, Calif.

A: She's a non-professional named Sue Cream, with whom Jeff has been living for almost three years. He met Sue in her native state of Montana when he was on location making "Redeemed Luxe."

MODESTY PREVAILS: When Pat Nixon lived in New York her license plate read "NXX." But we hear that in San Clemente she refuses to have those letters on the plates of the car at her disposal.

Q: Are Bette Midler and Barry Manilow close friends or have the two gone their separate ways?—W.S., Salem, Ore.

A: Bette and Barry are not the closest of friends. Her former accompanist's career has topped her popularity in both record sales and personal income, thanks to all of Barry's hit songs—both are highly-temperamental types and fiercely competitive. Bette, of course, still hopes to make it sometime later in the movies, and now Barry has secured a Los Angeles mansion hoping that maybe Hollywood will put an welcome mat for him, too.

Q: We can't figure out how come Barbara Walters didn't go to London for the Silver Jubilee. The Today Show was there.—A.A., New York.

A: Barbara was pleased at Buckingham Palace. She requested an interview with Queen Elizabeth and when she was turned down, ABC decided not to send anyone special to cover the Jubilee—just their regular staff in London.

TEHRAN TERROR: Ambassador Ardeshir Zahedi has rounded nearly every interesting woman who has walked through Washington, including Liz Taylor. Right now, the envoy from Iran is dating Mary Finch Hoyt, 53, the once widowed, twice divorced press secretary for Mrs. Rosalynn Carter.

Benji: Dog act using human cues

By CHRISTINE NIELAND

Chicago Daily News
CHICAGO — Benji, canine star of the 1973 smash film, has retired, but his puppy carries on in "For the Love of Benji." The film plays like a slick, efficient dog act, framing tricks with something of a story, and using humans as little more than two-legged cues for the next routine.

This time the dog gets lost in Atlanta, and is chased about by assorted sinister men and women. Benji tries to elude them and regain his owner, gets kicked around by strangers, steals food, runs around the ruins and performs a number of other tricks before the happy ending.

"Benji" movies resemble Pavlovian revenge. The dog rings the bell, and the humans produce the conditioned response. Benji walks along a street alone, photographed from a high up and far away to make him look as forlorn as possible; schmaltzy music plays, and we are supposed to see "aw look at the poor unhappy little doggie."

Granted, effective music and photography enhance any film performer, but when the human characters in a movie have almost no dimensions at all, and the animals have more than real-life animals. The movie raises a legitimate question of proportion. Also of attention span. The dog acts on the old Ed Sullivan Show ran for a briskly entertaining two or three minutes. "Benji" does so for an hour and a half. Can any animal act hold up that long?

Now, before the Benji fans out there form a mob and leash me to a fire hydrant, I confess to being a prime sucker for animals — cats, dogs, parrots, horses, you name it. However, I do not confuse them with people.

Benji and his movies never get as interesting as their creator, Joe Camp. The former commercial director is attempting to found a new "family film" empire, with visions of the Disney factory dancing in his head.

Benji — his trainer Frank Inn and Joe Camp visited Chicago recently. When I arrived, the adults in the room were leaning forward, trying to get a glimpse of the pooch on the 6 o'clock news. Benji was sprawled on the floor, and somebody patted his head, and he squirmed away.

Camp spoke about his plans:

"The beginning of the ratings system and the loosening of standards left a void where pictures had been for 50 years. When ratings came in, movie makers said, 'Hey, we can show some skin, some sex — as long as we can legitimately exclude children."

"Then a few people jumped into that children's market, and made these dumb, shoddy pictures as soon as Saturday afternoon baby-sitters. So now the G has become a dirty word.

The latest 'Pink Panther' movie — and 'What's Up, Doc?' are G pictures, but they buried the G as if they were ashamed of it. People don't want clean pictures. They want good entertainment.

"We want to develop Mulberry Square

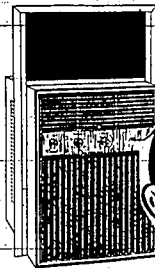

Productions (Camp's production company) as a long-term entity; we want people to identify with it the way they identified with Disney. We ultimately want to stand for something... realistic rhetoric flows from one side of Camp's mouth; shrewd marketing strategy falls from the other. His comedy about a camel cavalry corps, "Hawmps," fell spectacularly short of "Benji" at the box office, yet was still No. 31 at the box office last year. "It was extremely popular in areas of the country, mainly the Southwest. Right now we're having the picture thoroughly researched and test-marketed. We're going to retitle it, do a whole new ad campaign, and rerelease it when the time is right."
