Right to die into effect in Idaho

TWIN FALLS—Quietly and with little fanfare, one of Idaho's more controversial laws took effect July 1.

And because of it Idahoans now have a right to die.

The law in question originated in this year's legislature as Senate Bill 114, "the death with dignity bill." The measure allows a terminally ill patient to refuse the use of artificial devices to keep him alive. The law does not, however, allow relatives or next-of-kin to make that decision for a patient who through medical disability is no longer capable of making such a choice.

The Idaho law, patterned after a similar statute in California, was written to meet what supporters of the idea said was a failure of the Idaho Code to address the problem.

"The situation was in doubt; there was no law," Deputy Atty. Gen. Lynn Thomas noted. "Because the code was silent on the question, someone who unplugged a machine at the request of a patient or his next of kin might be accused of murder or manslaughter. And without some law on the point most doctors, I would imagine, would be reluctant to act."

There were no cases in Idaho of doctors having been sued for discontinuing life support systems, Thomas said, but such lawsuits had taken place in other states.

The new law would prevent both civil suits against doctors for damages and criminal suits for homicide, Thomas said, "although a question of malpractice might still arise."

But during the debates earlier this year on SB-114, arguments covered more than legal technicalities.

"I have dealt with dying people many times," Rep. Michael S. Black, D-Craigmont, an ordained minister argued during the legislative session, "and I have never heard one say they wanted to be kept alive once they reached the point where without machines they would not be alive."

Black said he believed in "life with dignity," but added, "I also believe that people as part of their God-given heritage deserve dignity in death. I know if I were advised I was going to die and had no chance of recovering, I would be very glad to sign something like this bill."

Sen. Larry Craig, D-Craigmont, agreed with Black, stating he knew of a family spending $20,000 a year to keep their mother alive after a stroke had turned her into "a vegetable."

Arguments against the measure were also strong, and heated. Noting several states had rejected such measures, Sen. Mike Mitchell, D-Lewiston, argued removing life support systems might prevent recovery of some patients thought to be terminally ill. He knew of one such recovery, Mitchell said.

Under the new law a patient may sign a form, with two witnesses to his signature, which states he, "being of sound mind, willfully and voluntarily make known my desire that my life shall not be voluntarily prolonged under the circumstances below."

"In the absence of my ability to give directions regarding the use of artificial life sustaining procedures as a result of the disabling process of my terminal condition, it is my intention that such artificial life sustaining procedures should not be used when they would serve only to artificially prolong the moment of my death, and where my attending physician determines that my death is imminent whether or not the artificial life sustaining procedures are utilized."

The statement may be revoked at any time by the patient and stays in effect a maximum of five years.

WASHINGTON—Remember how you used to bring a note to teacher from home telling why you were late, absent, or otherwise explaining something?

So did Illinois Gov. James R. Thompson Tuesday when he went to the White House for an energy meeting.

Seems there was an "accident" on his American Airlines flight on the way, and the governor came armed with a note, in case he should run into President Carter.

The note, on airline stationery, said:

"Dear President Carter,

"This is a note from Gov. Thompson's flight attendant. I wish to attest to the fact that he was immaculately attired upon boarding the flight this morning and the fact that he is currently wearing orange juice in no way reflects his stance on any issues concerning human rights.

"Sincerely,
"Carol Rose."

An aide said Ms. Rose accidentally spilled orange juice under the Governor's back.

This explained why the governor continued wearing his suit jacket in 20-plus humidity while others were eating trainers.

Siting bill passage likely

By LARRY SWISHER
Times-News writer

JEROME—Rep. Gordon Hofffield, R-Jerome, says a power plant siting bill almost surely will pass the Idaho legislature next term.

Hofffield says Idaho Power Company's request to build a coal-fired electrical generating plant in Magic Valley will prompt the legislature into passing a plant-siting bill.

But the Jerome legislator says he personally opposes such a bill even though most Magic Valley legislators favor a plant siting bill.

While admitting the bill's chances of passing now are "considerably greater" than last session, Hofffield said, "I am very much opposed to a plant siting bill, any plant siting bill. The IPUC should not be in the business of developing criteria for plant location."

The Jerome legislator said, "People say company developed criteria may be biased in favor of the stockholders, but I think state criteria would be more apt to be biased by political influence."

"That would be a serious situation, more serious than with the power company," he added and cited the Teton Dam as an example.

He said, "Despite the fact that the dam was passed in a hurry" by the Idaho Congressional delegation.

"I think it's fair to say the building of the dam was influenced by political bias," Hofffield said.

Calling Idaho Power's application listing three possible sites a "mistake," Hofffield said the IPUC should either approve or disapprove applications.

"Let the company and the people who are opposed to it be the experts," Hofffield said. "Certainly the people have the facilities to counteract what the company says."

He added if Idaho Power failed to meet standards, such as those of the Environmental Protection Agency, the IPUC could "shut them down."

Hofffield, along with a representative from Idaho Power and two leaders of Citizens for Alternatives to Coal Power, spoke to the Jerome Chamber of Commerce today at Wood Cafe on the issue of a coal-fired power plant.

Sen. Phil Batt, R-Wilder, Senate president pro-tem, has announced he will introduce a power plant siting bill in the 1978 Idaho legislature outlining procedures to be followed by the IPUC in selecting a site and requiring utilities to pay $150,000 to $300,000 for site studies.

Most Magic Valley legislators say they approve the concept of Batt's bill, which passed the Idaho Senate 35-0 but died in the House of Representatives in the final days of last session, reportedly because lawmakers felt it was being considered too quickly.

Dual postal rate sought

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Postmaster General Benjamin Ballar today asked the Postal Service Board of Governors to set up a 13 cent "citizen rate" for personal letters even if the business rate rises to 16 cents next spring.

He also pointed out that an end to Saturday mail delivery could save taxpayers $500 million a year, but said postal officials were still studying that proposal. He made no recommendation on it.

President Carter is pushing to keep the 13 cents first class mail rate for private letters and Ballar strongly supported the move today, saying "It is in the public interest."

Both the proposed postage rate increases with the citizen mail provision and eliminating Saturday delivery would require legislation by the Postal Rate Commission, an independent public agency which has 10 months in which to make its recommendations.

"I am sure you recognize that the concept of a citizen rate represents a marked departure from past postal rate-making policy," Ballar told the board in a public meeting. "It is being offered for your consideration of whether such a rate is in the public interest. I believe it is."

"There is no question that a three-cent price increase would impose something of a hardship on a large segment of our postal customers — customers who do not use the postal service in large volume but who depend on it when they do," Ballar said.

The Postal Service lost $1.2 billion in the last fiscal year. It has since achieved periods of break-even operation.

A congressional commission has reported that a nationwide public opinion poll showed 80 per cent of mail users are willing to sacrifice Saturday deliveries if it would mean avoiding another rate increase.

The cost of sending a first class letter jumped from 10 cents to 13 cents in the last rate increase which went into effect in early 1976.

Ballar told a Senate subcommittee in May he was considering a boost to 16 cents. He said last week the Postal Service needs a rate increase next year.

Today, Ballar pointed out the rate commission will conduct extensive hearings which will give the public a voice in the final decision on both rates and the proposed five-day delivery week.

Ex-'Y' director returns, arraigned on 12 charges

By BOB ZUCKERMAN
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — Deborah A. Henson, wanted on 12 counts of embezzlement in connection with the disappearance of about $2,000 from YWCA coffers, turned herself in to city police Tuesday.

Henson, who has been missing since she resigned as YWCA director May 27, has been living with her family in Sacramento, Calif., and always planned to return to face the charges against her, her attorney, William L. Hofffield, said this morning.

He said she had been in contact with the county prosecutor's office since before she resigned.

In a complaint filed in magistrate court, Henson is charged with embezzling money during a 10- to 12-month period.

The complaint charges Henson embezzled $250 on Oct. 12, 1976; $200 on Dec. 24, 1976; $252 on Jan. 11, 1977; $252 on Jan. 20, 1977; $252 on Jan. 29, 1977; $252 on Feb. 11, 1977; $252 on Feb. 28, 1977; $205 on March 16, 1977; $125 and $171 on March 22, 1977; $252.67 on April 10, 1977, and $252 on May 1, 1977.

According to the police report filed with the complaint, check stubs found by police were marked with the check itself would be payable to Deborah Henson.

"Other checks would show a business with fictitious amounts, but checks would be payable to Deborah Henson," the police report said. Police have refused to discuss details. Hofffield said he could not talk about the report "at this time."

At her arraignment Tuesday afternoon, Henson pleaded not guilty. Bond was originally set at $20,000, but after Hofffield argued Henson "voluntarily drove back here to clear herself and wasn't going to run away," bond was reduced to $5,000.

Henson, who was released on her own recognizance for 24 hours Tuesday afternoon so she could obtain bond, posted it this morning, Hofffield said.

When asked if the charges were the result of a reported personality conflict with YWCA director Terry Castaneda, Hofffield said, "I think that there may be some basis to that."

Castaneda has refused to comment.

Hofffield said he'd "also heard" that records had not been kept accurately at the "Y" for a number of years before Henson became director. Henson had been director for 10 months before she resigned.

A preliminary hearing in the case to determine whether there is enough evidence to have Henson bound over to district court for trial is expected within the next 20 days.

"Y" board members said earlier they were shocked and unsure why Henson resigned.

"It wasn't until after she left that we first had a chance to look at the books, because she had had them in her possession all the time," board vice-president Joline Tuma said.

She said police were called in to look at the books during the weekend after Henson left.

The board hired Sally Molyneux, Kimberly, another former director, to work part-time in Henson's place "until a new director" can be selected, Tuma said.

Gasoline rationing setup in works

© Chicago Daily News

WASHINGTON — President Carter is preparing a mandatory gasoline rationing program designed to slash consumption by as much as 25 per cent in the event of any major disruption of oil supplies.

Administration sources, who disclosed the Carter plan late Tuesday said its details would be presented in advance to Congress and the American people so they know what is in store for them in case of another Arab oil embargo or other crisis.

At the same time, it was learned, Carter now feels there is little likelihood of an early, long-acquainted meeting between him and Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev despite recent speculation about such a meeting being held in August in Alaska.

Brezhnev, it was learned, indicated in a letter to Carter that he would prefer to wait for his first summit session with the President until after some major agreement, such as on strategic arms limitations, is reached between the two countries.

On another issue of major concern to the administration, Carter would like to see the maximum income tax rate, now 70 per cent reduced by as much as 34 to 40 per cent.

This could be accomplished in the tax reform program he is putting together, he is said to believe, by closing loopholes and cutting down on the present vast range of deductions and exemptions.

The President also feels tax reform should include some provision for requiring all Americans in his own 1976 income bracket of around $55,000 a year to pay some minimum income tax.

Under present law Carter wound up not owing any tax at all for 1976, a politically embarrassing situation which he resolved by making a $6,000 voluntary contribution to the Internal Revenue Service.

Administration sources said Carter directed his top energy adviser, Dr. James Schlesinger, to put together a comprehensive gasoline rationing program that would reduce U.S. consumption by up to 25 per cent.

They said the standby rationing program left over from the Ford administration was inadequate for the crisis that would hit the country in the event of another Arab embargo, a disruption of the sea lanes through which foreign oil arrives in the United States, or a war in the Middle East.

The President already has authority to impose rationing, but the administration feels the authority too may be inadequate for an emergency.

So part of Schlesinger's assignment is to analyze the present limits of the President's authority. Then the White House will propose legislation to Congress to extend the authority or remove those constraints on the President

B1 kill displays pragmatism

By CHARLES MOHR
© 1977 N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON—President Carter's decision not to build an expensive fleet of B-1 bombers showed vividly that he is a pragmatist almost devoid of ideology and an atypical politician who seems to prefer the role of manager.

There was widespread surprise in Washington over the decision not to produce the B-1. One reason other politicians were startled by Thursday's announcement was that there was a simple split-the-difference sort of "solution" available.

Rather than either scrap the project to develop a 233-plane new-generation, advanced manned bomber fleet at an ultimate cost that might have approached $100 billion or going ahead full speed with the program, Carter could have ordered the production of, say, 120 aircraft with the argument that they "might" after all be needed. So altering is that kind of compromise that much of Washington seemed to assume almost automatically that Carter would select.

Instead, by killing B-1 production, Carter drew a barrage of outraged and dismayed criticism from conservatives and a rather stunned wave of applause from liberals, who had been increasingly estranged of late from Carter. This was rather ironic.

One of his close associates said that the President's innate fiscal conservatism and desire to balance the budget—both of them "major factors" in encouraging him to look at pro-B-1 arguments with a critical eye. Thus he may have delighted liberals—for now—partly because of a fiscally conservative motive.

It was also doubtful that political motives really played a highly significant part in Carter's decision. Rather, with apparent relish, he seemed to have turned what could have been a compromise into the kind of difficult "yes or no" question which sorely tests presidents and which can be made only by them. With apparent serenity he told his new conference simply that the B-1 "is not necessary."

What that really meant is that, taking the approach of an engineer and immersing himself in data and statistics, and in the face of a preponderance of contrary expert military opinion, Carter was willing to make his own judgment, and to make it a definitive one.

Some of Carter's associates at the White House said that purely military considerations were paramount. Both the President and his aides also tried to make clear that the decision had not been merely to scrap the B-1, but to substitute something else for it.

Carter stressed that the United States should deploy the drone aircraft called "cruise missiles." Possibly these will be launched from "modernized" existing B-52 bombers, but he also raised the possibility of developing new "cruise missile carriers," perhaps based on existing military or civilian aircraft.

"People should be warned," said a White House source, "that this doesn't mean that all of the B-1 funds are simply going to be 'saved.'"

Expenditures on the cruise missile launching system may be significantly smaller than the B-1 would have required, but still be substantial, and this may ultimately disappoint some of the liberal, environmentalist and even civil rights groups, who tended to see the B-1 controversy as a "people versus weapons" argument about national priorities. There seemed to be little of that ideology in Carter's decision-making process.

"He wouldn't have hesitated to spend the money if he thought it was needed," said the White House press secretary, Jody Powell, who added, "the cruise missile system will give better penetration" of an enemy's air space and provides "the biggest defense for the dollar." Powell—and the President—said Thursday that they doubted Congress would try to overturn the decision or succeed in doing so, by voting to keep the B-1 program alive. However, many Republicans and some Democrats expressed strong opposition and a disposition to fight.

There was a thunderstorm of rhetoric from proponents of the expensive bomber. Rep. Robert K. Dornan, a Republican who represents the California district where the B-1 was being developed, said he was "appalled and shocked."

Where free press and obscenity meet

Bob Guccione's Penthouse magazine makes more money for news dealers than any other magazine in America.

The slick girls publication has a higher circulation than Family Handyman, Christianity Today, Science Digest and Outdoor Life combined.

Each month, an estimated 4.5 million Americans buy Guccione's sex magazine, Penthouse, like Playboy, Oui and the other sex magazines are here to stay.

In fact, four of the top ten bestselling magazines in the nation sell nudity within their covers.

Still, many Americans aren't comfortable with seeing nude men and women displayed on magazine covers in grocery stores and newsstands.

While most citizens recognize the protection of the First Amendment which grants Guccione and others the right to publish their skin magazines, many citizens resent being bombarded by blatant displays of nudity in public places.

Interestingly, Penthouse publisher Guccione recently has shown some understanding of this problem.

Guccione doesn't object to state laws which would permit the display of skin magazines only at adult height in grocery stores and newsstands.

And he thinks it would be OK to put his kind of magazine in special racks which obscure the covers.

The publisher of Penthouse apparently is well aware of the problem of trying to square First Amendment protection with obscenity laws.

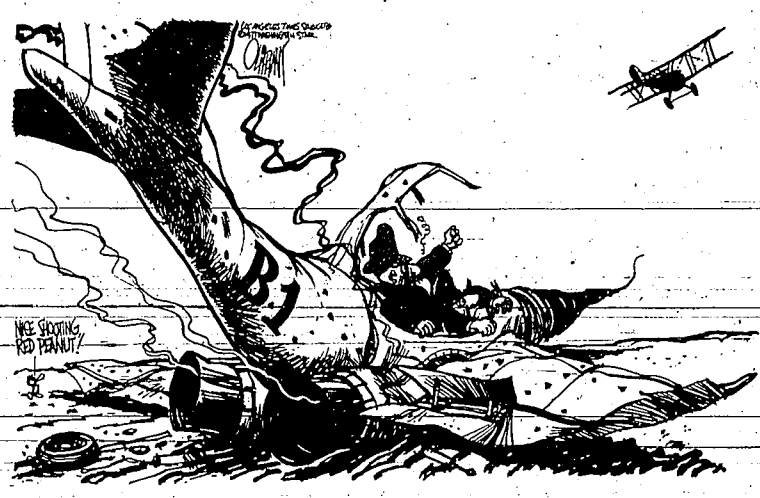

As more X-rated movie houses and hard-core pornography publications spring up in America, the Penthouse publisher also must feel the growing frustration with all kinds of pornography in America.

Perhaps he knows in many states, including Idaho, there is a significant feeling even soft-core pornography should be removed from public view.

Most Americans recognize the rights of adults to read whatever they wish, but many of the same citizens do not want to be confronted with offensive publications on every newsstand and street corner.

Penthouse publisher Guccione makes an important distinction when he argues his right to publish his magazine but recognizes the rights of store owners and newsstands to prudently display his publication.

The U.S. Supreme Court should continue to make a distinction between the rights of a free press and the rights of the public which may not want to see objectionable material.

Court decides church school aid

By JACK G. LANDAU
© 1977, NewHouse News Service

WASHINGTON—It was taken 30 years, but the Supreme Court has now issued a fairly consistent formula for judging the constitutionality of all major aspects of state aid to church-related primary and secondary schools.

What may be the last of the major church school cases was decided when the court recently upheld some sections of an Ohio law providing aid to parochial schools while striking down other sections.

Upheld were provisions for loaning of standardized non-religious textbooks to private school pupils, for supplying and for speech and psychological testing and counseling—as long as these services are not performed in the private school but in some "neutral" location.

Voided were provisions for state aid for educational field trips and for providing non-textbook instructional materials.

The Rev. Patrick Farrell, an official of the United States Catholic Conference, said that while he welcomed the decision he believed that the "ban against instructional materials, equipment and field trips is deplorable."

At the other end of the spectrum, Americans United for the Separation of Church and State said the case represents a victory. "There has been no fundamental departure from the principle that religious education may not be supported by tax funds," the group said.

Both organizations appear to have overestimated the case, which was generally much more of a victory—certainly in terms of dollars and lost cases—than a defeat for proponents of state aid to religious schools.

For example, three years ago the court prohibited Pennsylvania from paying for counselors and therapists at Church schools.

In the Ohio case, the court permitted the state to pay for therapists and counselors—as long as they were on "neutral" ground, which could be a mobile unit near the private school.

The difference between the two cases, the court said, was that the therapists were not being paid by or on the staff of the church school, and the health service to the child was not being performed in the atmosphere of the church school.

In addition, therapy, guidance counseling and diagnostic tests are not "education in furtherance of religion" but are social services every child should have.

What the cases say is that the state cannot pay for teachers' salaries, for tuition, for buildings and building maintenance, for instructional materials, for support services performed on private school property by its staff, or for non-standardized texts or tests generally not used by the public schools.

But the state can pay for health and welfare services given directly to the student, such as transportation, counseling, therapy and diagnostic tests (performed off school property), standardized texts used by public schools, standardized tests and scoring, and medical and dental examinations.

In the early 1970s, Catholic schools were suffering from a combination of increased costs and the end of the baby boom. In 1973, schools were closing at the rate of almost one a day.

Catholic educators, fearing the worst, put on a strong political and legal campaign to obtain direct state funds for salaries and tuition.

But time after time the court rejected their efforts, except for textbook loans. Meanwhile, Catholic school closings stabilized at about 3 per cent a year and Catholic educators started to say that the parochial school system would remain healthy without massive public funding.

The Supreme Court's resolution of the problem leaves the private school and the individual parent with the heaviest financial burden. But offers some minimal help for secular welfare and education aimed primarily at the individual student.

Golden Gate Bridge lures suicides

By MURRAY OLDERMAN

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—It's the favorite jumping off spot in the world, more magnetic than the Empire State Building, more dramatic than the Eiffel Tower.

The "known people" who have leaped now number in the 600s, and counting. Another numeral is added virtually every week.

You read about them now in obscure little paragraphs at the end of the obituary notices in the San Francisco newspapers. When the figure reaches 700, which by current calculation should be some time in 1981, it will be a front page story again—just as it was when Sharon Ungewitter, 24, an unemployed medical laboratory technician, plummeted to her death on Saturday, May 29. She was victim No. 628.

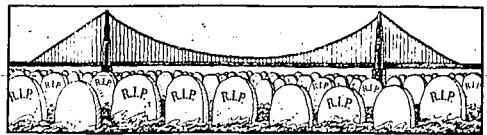

It was the day after the 40th anniversary of the opening of the Golden Gate Bridge, which spans the straits between the peninsulas of San Francisco and the headlands of Marin County.

Such attention to the morbidity of the bridge as a suicide site could be media overkill. After all, in San Francisco, which has the highest suicide rate in the nation, at 29.1 deaths per 100,000 population (the national rate is 14.6 and the California rate is 16.3), only three per cent of the people who kill themselves use the Golden Gate Bridge as their death instrument. But it's by far the most publicized suicide site in the world.

"The bridge has an aesthetic symbolic appeal," says Dr. Jerome Motto of the University of California medical school. "It's the simple, stylish way to go."

"It's a dramatic, romantic image," says Abbey Goodman of San Francisco Suicide Prevention, Inc. "Unlike an overdose of drugs alone in a squabbed bed."

The high incidence of suicide in San Francisco is attributable to four factors: a transient population, the highest alcohol consumption in the nation, wide drug abuse and a generally older age group of residents.

"I think the fact that the bridge is considered the greatest suicide attraction in the city has a lot to do with why people choose it," continues Goodman. "But actually it's a myth: Barbiturates and alcohol are the leading attractions."

Yet the Golden Gate span remains the magnet of interest in this area and a focal point for studies by such scientists as Richard Seiden, a psychologist in the University of California-Berkeley Department of Public Health, who has published several papers on bridge suicides, and Dr. David Rosen of the Langley-Porter Neuropsychiatric Institute, who has interviewed six of the 10 known survivors of bridge leaps.

Seiden notes a manifest trend toward younger suicides, with the median age of bridge jumpers going from the 50s in the earlier years to below 30. "Suicide," he says, "is usually the result of a temporary crisis which lasts a few hours to a day. It is the permanent solution to a temporary problem."

Rosen, who would like to see a barrier erected to prevent such suicides from scaling the tower, says a half-foot railing to five feet in the waters below, notes that fewer than five per cent of people prevented from suicide ever try it again.

What the known survivors of bridge jumps told him runs counter to what most people think about that kind of suicide, he says. "They live, do not flash in front of their eyes, all but two hacked out before they hit the water. None remember the impact. Of the six we interviewed, two later attempted other forms of suicide. Both attempts were half-hearted and unsuccessful."

Tom Towzer was just 16 years old when he stepped off the bridge at mid-span and fell 233 feet to the icy, salty water below. "The hardest thing was sleeping over the rail," he said later. "Once I pushed off, it was different. I really remember the air I was flying. The wind lifted my arms up over my head. It was a free feeling."

The leap takes just three seconds, generating a speed of 80 miles per hour when the victim hits the water, which is almost like a concrete pad at collision.

The men and women who have made the drastic plunge, authorities estimate that the number of deaths is probably a couple of hundred more than reported because the official count includes only recovered bodies—have little in common. They can be the sons of the famous or near famous, like Marc Sullinger, 21, whose father Pierre was President John F. Kennedy's press secretary. They are mostly obscure, starting with Harold Wobber, who was the first to choose the bridge for suicide in August, 1937, just 73 days after it opened.

He was walking across with a friend on a foggy, scenic day, with the island of Alcatraz and the piers of the city shimmering below them, when he suddenly said, "This is where I get off." And hurled the rail to his death.

The youngest suicide was 15, the oldest 87. One was a real estate agent who had just closed a $25 million deal; many were hit broke. They have included criminals and attorneys, mechanics and writers, housewives and students, and even a pastor.

The idea of a barricade to thwart suicidal attempts is still debated. The cost would be $2 or $3 million for a governing authority already strapped with mounting costs of operation.

Since the Golden Gate bridge remains a prime tourist attraction and is used extensively for strolling, there are aesthetic objections as well. Executive director Carney Campton of the Golden Gate-bridge states, "If we could stop them here, they would only go somewhere else."

Dr. Rosen disagrees. "The people we studied chose the Golden Gate bridge," he says, "because it is there. None of them had the means or imagination to kill themselves any other way than by jumping. It was the bridge or nothing."

A study at the University of California emphasizes the phenomenon of "suicide epidemic"—how a particular place can gain a reputation for suicides so much that it can cause those deaths.

In its first 16 years the Empire State Building was the scene of 16 death leaps. Since a barrier was installed on the observation deck in 1947, there have been no suicides. From 1913 to 1936, the Arroyo Seco bridge near the Rose Bowl in southern California was the site of 80 fatal jumps. In the 40 years since barricades were installed, there has been none.

Meanwhile, at the Golden Gate Bridge, the count goes on. "The numbers don't mean a damn thing—until one of the diabolical happens to represent your son," said Edward Wilson, who lives in Marin county north of the span. His son, Samuel, 22, jumped to his death four years ago. Another student.

Chilean hijackers gain aid

LIMA, Peru (UPI) — Four Chileans armed with pistols hijacked a jetliner with 56 persons aboard and forced it to fly to Peru where the Venezuelan embassy granted them political asylum.

The LADCO airlines Boeing 727, the second Chilean jetliner hijacked in two weeks, was on a domestic flight Tuesday from the northern city of Arica to Santiago when it was seized by the three men and a woman.

PETAH TIKVA, Israel (UPI) — A pipe bomb apparently planted by an Arab saboteur exploded in the open-air vegetable market of a Tel Aviv suburb today, injuring 20 customers and peddlers.

Witnesses said peddlers screamed out after the blast that no more Arabs should be employed in the market. Police sources said the area was crowded with stands and pushcarts and hard to patrol for possible bombs.

PLO proposes cease-fire

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — The Palestine Liberation Organization has offered to call off its military operations in the Middle East's most explosive flashpoint if Lebanese Christians do the same, sources say.

PLO chief Yasser Arafat's top political advisor made the offer in a meeting Tuesday with the Muslim National Front for the Safeguard of the South, said the sources, who attended the meeting.

GEN. M.Z. UL-HAQ ... want fair vote

RAWALPINDI, Pakistan (UPI) — The U.S.-trained army general who overthrew Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto says he acted to quash political violence that was ravaging Pakistan and will step down after elections in October.

"My chief mission is to hold free and fair general elections which would be held in October," Gen. Mohammad Zia Ul-Haq said Tuesday in a radio broadcast only hours after his swift and bloodless early morning coup.

They arrested Bhutto and about 50 political leaders of all stripes at the start of the coup, then imposed martial law, outlawed all political activity and set up a four-man military council with himself as chairman to run the country.

Army troops stood guard in street corners in Rawalpindi and the neighboring capital city of Islamabad, but the country was calm, shops were open and internal and international traffic went on as usual.

Lone item of unity at African summit

LIBREVILLE, Gabon (UPI) — African heads of state, winding up a four-day summit, have endorsed a single Rhodesian black nationalist group in a bid to forestall a civil war once Rhodesia's white minority regime falls.

The Organization of African Unity, which ended its 14th annual conference Tuesday, unanimously adopted a resolution urging all Rhodesians "devoted to the struggle for the liberation of their country to do so within the Patriotic Front."

But the delegates representing 49 nations were deeply divided on most other issues and took no action on alleged atrocities by Ugandan President Idi Amin or border squabbles affecting Somalia, Ethiopia, Sudan and other nations.

Rhodesia spurns peace force

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI) — Prime Minister Ian Smith today rejected the prospect of a Commonwealth peacekeeping force to keep order in Rhodesia during a transition to black majority rule.

Smith was asked at a news conference if he would allow a force consisting of troops from British Commonwealth countries such as Nigeria, Ghana, India and Canada, to come to Rhodesia during the transition period.

"The sort of thing we've been reading about in the newspapers is a nonstarter," he said.

Britain has said it and the United States were exploring the possibility of such a peacekeeping force, which the State Department said would not involve American troops.

Cuba holds Florida yachtsmen

KEY WEST, Fla. (UPI) — Two Florida yachtsmen are being held by the Castro government for allegedly firing on a Cuban ship, according to the skipper of a California sailing ketch just released from capture by the Cubans.

Donald Reidt, skipper of the 48-foot ketch Musica, and his four-member crew told Coast Guard interrogators and newsmen Tuesday night how Cuban-Soviet MIGs, one of them firing across his bow last Sunday, interrupted his voyage to California via the Panama Canal.

Reidt said his radar-equipped ketch was in international waters at the time, 35 miles from the Cuban coast, but the Cubans insisted he was in Cuban waters.

The 42-year-old immunology professor, on leave from the University of California at Irvine, said Cuban officials told him the Musica was seized "because another American vessel had fired on a Cuban fishing vessel" in international waters.

First Lady gains jets for Ecuador

WASHINGTON—Following the intervention of Rosalynn Carter, the administration is reviewing a decision that blocked the sale to Ecuador of 24 Israeli fighter-bombers equipped with American engines.

Congressional sources said that officials of the military junta in Ecuador discussed the administration's decision with Mrs. Carter in Quito, during her diplomatic tour to Latin America last month. The officials urged a reversal of the decision, and told Mrs. Carter that Ecuador sought the Israeli Kfir aircraft because of the Soviet Union's deliveries of advanced Sukhoi-20 fighters to Peru, Ecuador's neighbor. Ecuador and Peru have been engaged in a bitter-at times violent—territorial rivalry for decades.

Mrs. Carter later discussed the issue with President

Carter, and the subject is now under review within the State Department, the Pentagon and the National Security Council, according to congressional sources.

Mrs. Carter's press secretary, Mary F. Hoyt, said Tuesday, in reply to a question, that Mrs. Carter "did not interfere" in the matter.

"She talked regularly with her husband on the trip and she talked to him at some length since she's been home," said Mrs. Hoyt. "She wanted to make it clear that she did not interfere."

All the specific requests were confidential, said Mrs. Hoyt. "She communicated these requests from the heads of state. She was a channel of communication. That's what her role was in this whole trip."

Congressional sources said that the Israelis were told by American officials recently to resubmit their request to the State Department to sell the Kfir aircraft to Ecuador. Last Friday, the sources said, the Israelis did so.

"Mrs. Carter was definitely involved," said a Congressional source. "She discussed this with the President. She told him what they wanted in Ecuador; she relayed that argument."

One of the arguments voiced by the officials in Ecuador to Mrs. Carter was that they sought either the Kfir, a supersonic, single-seat fighter plane, or would buy the French Dassault-Breguet E1 fighter.

Sources said that Ecuador brushed aside a possible sale of United States Air Force F5E's. In place of the Kfirs, the sources said that officials in Ecuador have said that the F5E's had neither the range nor speed of the Kfir, a Hebrew word meaning Lion Cub.

Gays face charges

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (UPI)—Two admitted homosexuals, possibly involved in 28 mutilation slayings, were charged with two counts of murder Tuesday but they did not enter pleas.

Patrick Kearney, 37, and David Hill, 31, were handcuffed to deputies for their Municipal Court arraignment. Judge Phillip LaRocca set a preliminary hearing for July 15 when they will enter pleas. They were held on $500,000 bond each.

The two Redondo Beach men were charged with the murders of Arturo Marquez, 31, Oxnard, whose body was found March 3 near Bonning, and John Otis LaMay, 12, El Segundo, whose body was found March 18 near Corona.

They also are suspects in six similar slayings—in four counties. Most of the victims had homosexual backgrounds and most were dismembered and stuffed into plastic trash bags left along highways. All had been shot in the head and were dead.

Riverside County Sheriff Ben Clark said authorities also have "15 workable cases" and 13 "possible homicides" connected with the two suspects.

"There may be more, there may be less," Clark said.

Clark said Kearney showed investigators "six" possible locations where he may have disposed of bodies. "In two of the areas, bodies already have been found—one in 1973 and one in 1976."

Imperial County Coroner Lon Hettlinger said Kearney helped identify the bodies and said names of the victims will be released after relatives have been notified.

No progress in strike talks

PHOENIX (UPI)—No progress was reported Tuesday in attempts to end the strike by an estimated 20,000 workers against the nation's major copper producers.

A reported meeting between the Phelps Dodge Corp., and the negotiating committee representing 26 unions failed to materialize Tuesday.

Tom Striegel of the United Steelworkers said Anconda representatives met Tuesday with union bargainers at Helena, Mont. Talks were scheduled today at San Francisco with officials of ASARCO, Inc.

Pat Scanlon, assistant vice president of Phelps Dodge, said neither side had contacted the other to request a negotiating session.

"I'm confident there'll be a meeting fairly promptly," Scanlon said. He said he could not estimate, when that meeting might be held.

Besides Phelps Dodge, no talks have been scheduled with Inspiration consolidated Copper Co. Cities Service and U.S. Metals.

The Nonferrous Industry Conference voted approval Saturday of three-year contracts with Kennecott Copper Co. and Magma Copper Co. The contracts provided $1.01 in additional wage and fringe benefits.

National

US approves New York loan

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Treasury Department Tuesday approved a $300 million loan to New York City, the first federal loan to the city in fiscal 1978.

A department statement said Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal "determined that there is a reasonable prospect that the loan will be repaid."

Under the New York Seasonal Finance Act, Blumenthal is required to make that determination before extending any loans. The seasonal loan act expires in mid-1978.

According to the statement, Blumenthal "accepted the city's certification that it had used its best efforts to meet its seasonal financing needs without resort to borrowing from the U.S. Treasury."

However, the statement said, "the certification states that the city had been unable to reenter the private short-term credit market in July but would continue to work to resolve the 'financial uncertainties'—especially the status of $919 million in city notes held by banks and pension funds—that impede its access to private credit."

"The U.S. Treasury will continue to monitor these efforts closely," the statement said.

Garment sale ban plan brings blast

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A group representing the manufacturers of tris-treated children's nightgowns says John Byington's suggestion for a U.N. ban on the sale of such garments overseas is an "unlawful overreaching" of authority.

Byington is chairman of the Consumer Product Safety Commission. He wrote a letter to U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young June 24, suggesting that the World Health Organization look into the tris question.

He said the commission was concerned that U.S. manufacturers would dump tris-treated nightgowns in foreign markets if the agency succeeds in banning their sale in the United States.

The American Apparel Manufacturers Association told Young in response that Byington's call for U.N. intervention is inappropriate, illegal and "mystifying." Its letter, also to Young, was released Tuesday.

The commission earlier this year banned "the sale of tris-treated children's sleepwear, citing claims that the controversial flame-retardant chemical could be a cancer-causer.

A federal judge on June 23, acting on the suit filed by a textile mill, scrapped the ban, however, and it is now technically legal to sell tris-treated material. The Justice Department is expected to appeal that ruling this week.

The apparel manufacturers said the law which the commission used for its ban specifically exempts exports.

"It should be realized that chairman Byington's attempt to extend the jurisdiction of the Consumer Product Safety Commission into the international arena constitutes an unlawful overreaching of the commission's lawful authority," the group told Young.

"We do not believe the United States has the moral or legal right to impose on other nations its judgments as to the relative benefits and hazards of certain products."

Psychiatric exam ordered

... multiple charges

NEW YORK (UPI)—Luis Robinson, who hijacked an interstate bus to Kennedy Airport and killed the driver and a woman passenger, has been ordered to undergo a psychiatric examination.

Robinson's attorney, David Addison, told Judge Maxwell Gallant during a 5-minute hearing in Queens Criminal Court Tuesday that the 29-year-old Navy apprentice seaman had seen a psychiatrist in 1973 for a "minor problem."

Robinson, a native of Panama who is a registered alien, was described by Addison as a college-educated, "articulate young man."

Gallant ordered Robinson to undergo a psychiatric examination.

Robinson, assigned to the USS Detroit, based in Bath, Maine, was charged with two counts of murder, two counts of attempted murder and 23 counts of kidnapping.

Newton bail set at $100,000

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI)—Bail has been set at $100,000 for jailed Black Panther leader Huey P. Newton, who forfeited $42,000 when he jumped bail and fled to Cuba three years ago.

But there is a chance Newton may be released on his own recognizance.

Newton's lawyer, Sheldon Otis, said he had no plans to try to raise the $100,000 because he is concentrating on obtaining his client's freedom without bond.

Newton, 35, returned to the United States Sunday night to stand trial on murder and assault charges. He appeared Tuesday before Municipal Judge Courtland D. Arne for arraignment, but the proceeding was delayed until July 19 when the judge will also set a trial date.

Arne asked for a Probation Department report on whether Newton's request for release without bail should be granted.

"We will concentrate on getting him out on his own recognizance," Otis said after the court hearing that was attended by a large number of Black Panthers.

In arguing for Newton's release, Otis noted the Black Panther leader came back to face trial voluntarily.

Tax charges dropped

TULSA, Okla. (UPI)—A federal judge Tuesday dismissed charges of conspiracy and tax evasion against the Phillips Petroleum Co. because prosecutors failed to honor a plea bargaining agreement.

Judge Allen E. Barrow sustained two defense motions and dismissed the indictment returned Sept. 6, 1976, against Phillips; its board chairman, William F. Martin, and past board chairman W.W. Keeler and Stanley Learned.

The conspiracy count accused the firm and its leaders of raising about $3 million in overreous bank accounts. Some of that money was used to make an illegal campaign contribution to former President Richard Nixon in 1972.

DETROIT (UPI)—A federal judge has refused to halt a federal grand jury investigation of the fraud charges against General Motors Corp. while the world's largest auto company appeals the case.

U.S. District Judge James Churchill's decision came Tuesday in a sudden hearing prompted by GM's challenge of grand jury subpoenas.

The grand jury was called into session today to begin hearing evidence against GM.

Gas export plan drawn by Mexico

© Newhouse News Service
WASHINGTON — Gas starved utilities across the country may soon get help from south of the border.
 Mexico, destined to become one of the world's foremost gas producers, is preparing to export surplus gas to the United States through a 750-mile gas pipeline that will be one of the biggest in the Western Hemisphere.
 Petroleos Mexicanos (Pemex)—the Mexican government oil and gas agency—plans to begin construction of the 48-inch pipeline in the fall. The pipeline will carry gas now being produced at the giant Reforma field in the Yucatan northwest through Corroba and Tampico to the border, where it would hook up with existing transmission lines in Texas.
 The pipeline is expected to carry 1 billion cubic feet a day when it begins operating in 1979. The capacity would be doubled by 1981 as gas production expands at Reforma, regarded by geologists as a major new oil and gas reserve. The Reforma gas currently is being flared off because the Mexicans have no way to export it.
 Pemex Director General Jorge Diaz Serrano said that the Reforma field "might be more important, according to what we know, than the North Slope of Alaska... and at the same time be less expensive to produce."
 The Mexican gas is eagerly sought by gas transmission lines in the United States. The interstate pipelines expect to have less gas available for delivery to wholesale industry customers next winter than they had during last winter's critical heating season.

 Pemex is counting on U.S. pipeline firms to help finance construction of the gas line. The firms would pay in advance for the gas, thereby raising the necessary $1 billion.
 Preliminary talks have been held with such potential gas buyers as Texas Eastern Transmission Corp., Tennessee Inc., Pacific Lighting Corp., United Gas Pipe Line Co., Transcontinental Gas Pipe Line Corp. and El Paso Natural Gas Co.
 Pemex also is exploring an alternative financing plan in which it would obtain the required construction supplies and pipeline from Japanese manufacturers and repay them with oil after 1980.
 Saddled with a $20-billion debt, Mexico was having difficulty raising money for its resource development plans even before it began searching for capital to finance the gas pipeline. Following devaluation of the peso last year, the International Monetary Fund clamped down on Mexico's freedom to borrow abroad. However, Mexico has been able to bypass the International Monetary Fund's ruling by launching short-term money-making projects to provide fast and easy financing.

 Within a few years, the gas output at the Reforma field is expected to soar to 10 million cubic feet a day. But Mexico will be able to export only a small fraction of this gas.

Hospital adds birthing rooms

Living

DEAR ABBY: Maybe you can tell me what's wrong with my husband. He lives in a room all by himself, saying he could never sleep with anyone. Yet he came from a family of 10 kids. They were poor as church mice, and you can't tell me HE had a room all to himself.

He says he's not hungry at mealtimes, so I eat with the kids. Then 10 minutes after we finish eating, he eats alone. He goes off to work at 7 in the morning and stays up until 6 a.m. reading. Then he goes to sleep and gets up at 2 p.m., and all this time I am trying to keep five children under 8 years old quiet.

After nine years, I am getting used to it, but what do I tell my children when they say, "Our families do things together, why don't we?"

LONELY

Lives need to intersect

DEAR LONELY: Your biggest problem is not what to tell the children, but to establish communications between you and your husband and his family. You are not actually living together. You are living parallel lives. Why? He is either sick or selfish. Only his doctor can tell you.

DEAR ABBY: About three weeks ago, all of our relatives and several of our friends received wedding invitations to a certain wedding in town. We received no invitation and felt put out, but said nothing, because you don't tell us people and ask them how come you weren't invited, do you?

Three days before the wedding, I got this tearful phone call from the bride, apologizing all over the place because she'd heard we didn't get an invitation.

She said we were on her guest list, and the invitation must have been "lost" in the mail. She begged us to come, but I hadn't thought of a gift, and I had nothing to wear, so I declined. Many of our relatives said they thought we should have gone. I would like your opinion.

OVERLOOKED

DEAR OVERLOOKED: I think you should have attended. If you had not been wanted, the bride wouldn't have telephoned you personally. Your gift could have come later, and your attire would have been of little importance.

CONFIDENTIAL TO WORRIED IN WORTHINGTON, MINN.: You have sufficient reason to worry. Minnesota Statutes No. 609.342 says:

"Criminal sexual conduct in the first degree provides a 20-year prison sentence for sexual penetration with another person where the sex partner is 13 years of age and the defendant is more than three years older. If the sex partner is 13 years of age and the defendant is more than two years older, the offense is in the third degree (No. 609.344), and the penalty is 10 years in prison. Consent to the act by the sex partner is NOT a defense."

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY, Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Your health

BY LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb—

I am 15 years old and I guess I'm in that age group when boys seem to have lots of trouble with their faces. Mine is really bad. I have quite a few pimples and they are really embarrassing. It's embarrassing when you have them and it is not the nicest thing to live with if you are interested in girls and want to have any success and make the situation worse.

I've tried everything and take a shower every day and try to keep clean but still I have them. Would taking a lot of Vitamin A help? I've heard that it will and would like your opinion on this or any suggestions you might have that will help me.

Also I've heard that foods make the face break out. I've stayed away from all chocolate but that hasn't helped. I've used different face creams but none seem to do any good.

Acne help

Dear Reader—

Yes, you are in that age. About 90 per cent of the boys and 60 per cent of the girls in their teens to mid-20s have some problem with acne — black heads, white heads, and pimples. Almost all cases of acne can be helped. Unfortunately most people do it the wrong way and make the situation worse.

First, you had better forget about that Vitamin A idea. Too much Vitamin A used for this purpose can actually be harmful. In excess doses it can even cause your hair to fall out. It is a fat soluble vitamin and is stored in excess amounts in the body if you are taking large doses.

In younger children excess Vitamin A can even cause accumulation of fluid in the brain, causing changes similar to a brain tumor. I am aware that there is a widespread idea among young people that Vitamin A is good for acne but it is not. Years ago some doctors thought it was useful and did prescribe it but more recent studies have shown it is useless in the treatment of acne.

Let me add that Vitamin A acid used on the skin is not the same thing and is very useful in some cases. It has to be prescribed and its application supervised by a physician. I am sending you The Health Letter, number 32, Acne Can Be Treated. It gives you more detailed information about this and other agents used to peel the skin. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

The basic problem causing acne is an excess production of sebum, the greasy substance from the sebaceous glands in your skin. Your goal should be to decrease the oil on your face. You do that with frequent washing two or three times a day. Too vigorous or too frequent washing can injure the skin and make the problem worse. You should not use any oily or greasy creams whatever. There are a number of drying or peeling agents that doctors use — including Vitamin A acid. Let your doctor help you with these.

Another helpful tip is to eat that live inside the pores of the skin. These bacteria split the fat in the sebum releasing fatty acids that are irritating to the skin. This is what causes the inflammation in most cases.

Those stories about avoiding chocolate, nuts, sweets and other foods are not based on good information. Controlled studies that permit analysis and conclusions have shown that the diet does not make any difference.

Dr. Lamb will answer representative letters of general interest in his column.

London contemplates taxing tourists

LONDON (UPI) — Don't look now if you are planning to visit Britain this year, but some Londoners are getting pretty fed up with you. There even have been suggestions that tourists pay a tax for being allowed to visit.

"Tourists, tourists everywhere," wailed a London newspaper recently.

"It's enough to turn your warm beer sour if the glass and reduce your stout British knees to liquid."

Most people are keeping a stiff upper lip, but there is one sign that some are cracking under an astonishing surge in the number of visitors to the country.

This year — spurred by celebrations of Queen Elizabeth's 25 years on the throne — the British Tourist Authority expects 11.1 million of them.

That's one tourist for every five men, women and children who live here.

And all of them come to London.

"What does the average Londoner get out of it?" asked Max Webster bitterly in the London Evening Standard. "Packed buses and packed lunches, unbearable shopping and unobtainable taxis."

"We Londoners are going to go completely berserk," said E.B. Kitchen, an accountant.

"Last year was bad enough, but this Silver Jubilee year would appear to be even more depressing. There will be even less room on the buses and tubes (subways) for us, who subsidize them, and congestion in shopping streets will be even more impossible."

Behind such complaints rolls a tidal wave of tourists, a flood of camera-clicking sightseers which has more than doubled recently.

"Tourism is one of our few really successful growth industries," said financial writer David Green.

The B.T.A. estimates Britain will earn $1.9 billion a day in 1977 from overseas visitors.

There are many reasons why Britain has become the Costa Brava of the north. The main one must be economic.

Despite inflation, this country is still a bargain basement, particularly for European — and seven million Europeans are expected this year, double the number seven years ago. And more and more Americans are coming, too.

British Tourist Authority officials first estimated that tourist spending this year will amount to five per cent of everything Britain exports overseas.

Then it looked at first quarter figures, blinked and upped its forecast of total tourist spending for the year by 10 per cent — to $3.7 billion.

"Another day, another 10 million dollars," commented the Daily Telegraph.

"No one could deny that central government is doing very well out of the tourists, as are many of the service industries," said Webster.

"But there is no immediate benefit to those who have to put up with the inconvenience of a major tourist city."

To benefit Londoners far playing host, Webster revived an often-mooted proposal.

"It is time," he said, "for a tourist tax."

hospital staff.

"The facilities are secondary to the attitudes. You have to have the right type of bed and everything, but you also have to have a staff willing to tell Dad he is important and should stick around."

"The mother is allowed to sit in the pre-labor lounge before the whole process gets too far along, and she can walk around or read. This is harder on the nurses than when Mom is in bed under their eyes at all times."

The birthing rooms are part of a recent $2.35-million renovation program. They were introduced after a member of the Lutheran staff visited a Milwaukee hospital for ideas on family-oriented maternity care.

"The key feature in the rooms is a special bed used for labor, delivery and recovery."

"A lot of the techniques are things we were already doing," Mrs. Cook said. "We were already letting fathers into the delivery room. We just hadn't thought of moving the delivery itself into a special room."

The medical center is receiving inquiries about the rooms from hospitals in other states, plus "underground referrals" from local hospitals that don't offer the program, but tell women who want it they can find it at Lutheran.

"The number of women choosing birthing rooms is growing all the time," Mrs. Cook said, although at times they may feel as if they are fighting traditions stronger than they are.

"People are bound to the doctor, they have always had. If a woman's doctor is on the staff here, it's easy to get into the birthing room, but if she has three or four kids and a doctor she's comfortable with, it wouldn't be easy for her to change."

"It's not easy for a woman to say to her doctor, 'You were fine then, but I want someone else now.' I'm not sure I could do that."

Shop owner deals in southpaw items

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Rulers, corkscrews, manual adding machines, diaper pins, checkbooks, school notebooks, scissors, garden hand tools, can openers and most auto ash trays.

All those items have one thing in common: most are designed to be used by right-handed persons.

Shop owner Lynn Sherkow would like to see that changed. Her store, Left Hand Ltd., sells hundreds of items for south-paws.

"I'm a hard-core lefty," Miss Sherkow said in an interview.

"Some even had their left hand tied down to make them use the right."

"I never use my right hand for anything. I can't drive a stick shift car. I roll the window down instead of up. I screw out the light bulb instead of screwing it in. I'm always uncapping the jar instead of capping it."

"I won't even take a pot out of the oven with my right hand because I don't have the strength."

Miss Sherkow said she opened the shop last year to promote items designed for lefties because of the frustration of living in a world designed for right-handers and because of misconceptions about them. She said estimates place the total of left-handed Americans at 10 million, but the number is probably a lot higher because of no one keeps statistics.

"I am 30 years old and nobody has ever asked me if I'm left-handed."

She puts lefties in three classes: "hard-core," those who have to do everything left-handed; "cynical lefties," who have learned to adapt; and "closet lefties," who were forced to use their right hands as children.

"Some even had their left hand tied down to make them use the right."

Many persons also feel being left-handed is somehow connected to evil, she said.

"There are 36 references in the Bible that God is right-handed. That means the devil is left-handed. You sit at the right hand of God, and you say things like 'right on,' because you don't want to be 'left out.' And 'right makes might.'"

Many people have serious problems, she said, because teachers or parents insist they use their right hands.

"When you force a person to use the right hand when he is a natural lefty you cause an imbalance. It is not natural. You have to think about it when you are forced to use the opposite hand."

"If a kid is born with blue eyes would you change the color of his eyes? There isn't a thing you can do about it. It's a natural thing."

"Some parents say their four or five year old hasn't decided if he will be right or left-handed. The kid decided when he was a year old. The parents are the ones who can't decide. The schools don't know what to do. The kid uses the left hand for strength things: eating, throwing, picking up, cutting, drawing, 90 per cent of the time."

"The only reason they use their right hand for some things is that Mom and Daddy use it, and that's the way they see it."

Some manufacturers design products to be used with either hand. Others make left-handed items. Most products in Miss Sherkow's shop are European because American companies require huge orders before they will make a specific item.

Gas export plan drawn by Mexico

© Newhouse News Service
WASHINGTON — Gas starved utilities across the country may soon get help from south of the border. Mexico, destined to become one of the world's foremost gas producers, is preparing to export surplus gas to the United States through a 750-mile gas pipeline that will be one of the biggest in the Western Hemisphere.

Petroleos Mexicanos (PEMEX), the Mexican government oil and gas agency, plans to begin construction of the 48-inch pipeline in the fall. The pipeline will carry gas now being produced at the giant Reforma field in the Yucatan northwest through Cordoba and Tampico to the border, where it would look up with existing transmission lines in Texas.

The pipeline is expected to carry 1 billion cubic feet a day when it begins operating in 1978. The capacity would be doubled by 1981 as gas production expands at Reforma, regarded by geologists as a major new oil and gas reserve. The Reforma gas currently is being flared off because the Mexicans have no way to export it.

PEMEX Director General Jorge Diaz Serrano said that the Reforma field "might be more important, according to what we know, than the North Slope of Alaska . . . and at the same time be less expensive to produce."

The Mexican gas is eagerly sought by gas transmission lines in the United States. The interstate pipelines expect to have less gas available for delivery to wholesale industry customers next winter than they had during last winter's critical heating season.

PEMEX is counting on U.S. pipeline firms to help finance construction of the gas line. The firms would pay in advance for the gas, thereby raising the necessary $1 billion.

Preliminary talks have been held with such potential gas buyers as Texas Eastern Transmission Corp., Tennessee Inc., Pacific Lighting Corp., United Gas Pipe Line Co., Transcontinental Gas Pipe Line Corp. and El Paso Natural Gas Co.

PEMEX also is exploring an alternative financing plan in which it would obtain the required construction supplies and pipeline from Japanese manufacturers and repay them with oil after 1980.

Saddled with a $20-billion debt, Mexico was having difficulty raising money for its resource development plans even before it began searching for capital to finance the gas pipeline. Following devaluation of the peso last year, the International Monetary Fund clamped down on Mexico's freedom to borrow abroad. However, Mexico has been able to bypass the International Monetary Fund's ruling by launching short-term money-making projects to provide fast and easy financing.

Within a few years, the gas output at the Reforma field is expected to soar to 10 million cubic feet a day. But Mexico will be able to export only a small fraction of this, says

It's embarrassing when you have them and it is not the nicest thing to live with if you are interested in girls and want to have any social life at all.

I've tried everything and take a shower every day and try to keep clean but still I have them. Would taking a lot of Vitamin A help? I've heard that it will and would like your opinion on this and any suggestions you might have that will help me.

Also I've heard that foods make the face break out. I've stayed away from all chocolate but that hasn't helped. I've used different face creams but none seem to do any good.

Acne help

Dear Reader—

Yes, you are in that age. About 90 per cent of the boys and 80 per cent of the girls in their teens to mid-20s have some problem with acne — black heads, white heads, and pimples. Almost all cases of acne can be helped. Unfortunately most people do not do the right things to help their acne. Sometimes what they do is harmful and makes the situation worse.

First, you had better forget about that Vitamin A idea. Too much Vitamin A used for this purpose can actually be harmful. In excess doses it can even cause your hair to fall out. It is a fat soluble vitamin and is stored in excess amounts in the body if you are taking large doses.

In younger children excess Vitamin A can even cause accumulation of fluid in the brain, causing changes similar to a brain tumor. I am aware that there is a widespread idea among young people that Vitamin A is good for some but it is not. Years ago some doctors thought it was useful and did prescribe it but more recent studies have shown it is useless in the treatment of acne.

Let me add that Vitamin A acid used on the skin is not the same thing and is very useful in some cases. It has to be prescribed and its application supervised by a physician. I am sending you the Health Letter number, 322, "Vitamin A — Be Treated," to give you more detailed information about this and other agents used to peel the skin. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

The basic problem causing acne is an excess production of sebum, the greasy substance from the sebaceous glands in your skin. You goal should be to decrease the oil on your face. You do that with gentle washing twice a day, twice a day, using a fatty acid or too frequent washing can injure the skin and make the problem worse. You should not use any oily or greasy creams whatever. There are a number of drying or peeling agents that doctors use — including Vitamin A acid. Let your doctor help you with these.

Antibiotics help kill bacteria that live inside the pores of the skin. These bacteria split the fat in the pores into fatty acids that are irritating to the skin. This is what causes the inflammation in most cases.

Those stories about avoiding chocolate, nuts, sweets and other foods are not based on good information. Controlled studies that permit analysis and conclusions have shown that the diet does not make any difference.

Dr. Lamb will answer representative letters of general interest in his column.

London contemplates taxing tourists

LONDON (UPI) — Don't hark now if you are planning to visit Britain this year, but some Londoners are getting pretty fed up with you all. There even have been suggestions that tourists pay a tax for being allowed to visit.

"Tourists, tourists everywhere," wailed a London newspaper recently.

"It's enough to turn your warm beer sour in the glass and reduce your stout British knees to liquid."

Most people are keeping a stiff upper lip, but there are signs that some are creaking under an astonishing surge in the number of visitors to this country.

This year — spurred by celebrations of Queen Elizabeth's 25 years on the throne — the British Tourist Authority expects 11.4 million of them.

That's one tourist for every five men, women and children who live here.

And all of them come to London.

"What does the average Londoner get out of it?" asked Max Webster bitterly in the London Evening Standard. "Packed buses and packed lunches, unbearable shopping and unobtainable taxis."

"We Londoners are going to go completely berserk," said E.B. Kitchen, an accountant.

"Last year was bad enough, but this Silver Jubilee year would appear to be even more depressing. There will be even less room for the buses and tubes (subways) for us, who subsidize them, and congestion in shopping streets will be even more impossible."

Behind such complaints rolls a tidal wave of tourists, a flood of camera-clinking sightseers which has more than doubled recently.

"Tourism is one of our few really successful growth industries," said financial writer David Green.

The BTA estimates Britain will earn $119 million a day in 1977 from overseas visitors.

There are, many reasons why Britain has become the Costa Brava of the north. The main one may be economic.

Despite inflation, this country is still a bargain basement, particularly for Europeans — and seven million Europeans are expected this year, double the number seven years ago. And more and more Americans are coming, too.

British Tourist Authority officials first estimated that tourist spending this year will amount to five per cent of everything Britain consumes overseas.

Then it looked at first quarter figures, blinked and upped its forecast of total tourist spending for the year by 10 per cent — to $3.7 billion.

"Another day, another $10 million dollars," commented the Daily Telegraph.

"No one could deny that central government is doing very well out of the tourists, as are many of the service industries," said Webster.

But there is no immediate benefit to those who have to put up with the inconvenience of a major tourist city.

To benefit Londoners for playing host, Webster revived an often-mooted proposal.

"It is time," he said, "for a tourist tax."

He suggested "a small charge levied on each overseas visitor to London." It might be collected, he said, as an extra charge of $1.72 per night on every hotel bed in the capital.

Kitchen agreed but suggested a higher assessment. "If tourists wish to visit our capital, make them pay for the pleasure," he said. "Collect $17.20 off every tourist who comes through passport control."

A tourist tax was formally considered as early as 1973. It is opposed by tax administrators and tourist officials whose job it is to lure visitors here.

"But I don't think the tourist would mind paying," said Lilyd Harrington of the Greater London Council, the city government.

"I think London is riding out a major visitation with a certain amount of grace and elegance," he said.

But it may be that "the saturation point has been reached," he said. London already has become "a city under pressure."

Shop owner deals in southpaw items

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Rulers, pens, screwdrivers, manual adding machines, diaper pins, checkbooks, school notebooks, scissors, garden hand tools, can openers and most auto ash trays.

All those items have one thing in common: most are designed to be used by right-handed persons.

Shop owner Lynn Sherkow would like to see that changed. Her store, Left Hand Ltd., sells hundreds of items for southpaws.

"I'm a hard-core lefty," Miss Sherkow said in an interview.

"Some even had their left hand tied down to make them use the right."

"I never use my right hand for anything."

"I can't drive a stick shift car — roll the window down instead of up. I screw out the light bulb instead of screwing it in. I'm always uncapping the jar instead of capping it."

"I won't even take a pot out of the oven with my right hand because I don't have the strength."

Miss Sherkow said she opened the shop last year to promote items designed for lefties because of the frustration of living in a world designed for right-handers and because of misconceptions about them. She said estimates place the total of left-handed Americans at 18 million, but the number is probably a lot higher because many keep it a secret.

"I am 30 years old and nobody has ever asked me if I'm left-handed."

MILWAUKEE shop owner, Lynn Sherkow, a "hard-core lefty," shows some of the items she sells for southpaws. She is holding left-handed playing cards in her left hand as compared to regular cards in her right hand. (UPI)

Buhl-miss, Romesburg-wed

BUIH — Debbie Jean Howard and David Scott Romesburg exchanged wedding vows in a double-ring candlelight ceremony on May 29 in the Buhl Methodist Church.

Rev. George Trough, Buhl, and Rev. Leman Messey, Burley, performed the ceremony before an altar decorated with brass candleabra held multi-colored candles and were accented with apricot-colored glads, orange and yellow roses, yellow chrysanthemums and baby's breath.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Howard, Buhl, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Nelson, Lewiston.

orange and apricot roses, accented with greenery and tied with apricot ribbon.

Linda Johnson, Castletford, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Other attendants were Karen Nelson, Lewiston, sister of the bridegroom; Cathy Howard, Murtaugh, sister-in-law of the bride; Kris Eames, Colorado Springs, Colo., and Stephanie Lynn, Moscow, sorority sister of the bride.

Dan Romesburg, Kennewick, Wash., brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Other attendants were Jim Miller and Kevin Dammereit, Lewiston, fraternity brothers of the bridegroom, Mark Howard, Murtaugh, and Mike Howard, Castletford, brothers of the bride, served as groom's attendants, candlelighters and ushers.

Pom Reynolds, Buhl, played the prelude music and the wedding march, "Vow Song" was sung by Peggy Asbo, Pocatello, and Pam Briggs, Boise, Alpha Chi sisters of the bride, accompanied by Miss Reynolds.

The couple was honored at a reception in the fellowship hall following the ceremony.

The bride and bridegroom, parents, best man and matron of honor welcomed guests

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of sheer organza. The dress featured a scalloped neckline, accented with embroidered lace, and baby pearls. The long sleeves were accented with inset lace and lace cuffs. A chapel train fell from the bridal illusion veil into the long train of her wedding dress, both trimmed with lace.

The bride wore a drop pearl necklace, a gift of the bridegroom, and carried a cascade bouquet of yellow, before a white Austrian puit back drop trimmed with an apricot overlay and apricot bows.

The bride's table featured a cloth of white sheer overlay trimmed with apricot ribbons and bows. Two large bouquets of apricot carnations and yellow and orange roses, centered with orange candles, accented the four-tiered Kansas wedding cake, which was trimmed in apricot and topped with white bells.

Renee Romesburg, Kennewick, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, cut and served the cake. Sheila Howard, Castletford, sister-in-law of the bride, served punch and Karla Spence, Moscow, sorority sister, served coffee. The United Methodist Women of the church assisted at the bride's table. Mrs. Don Howard, aunt of the bride, and Mrs. Marvin Cox also assisted.

Sidney and Deanie Howard, cousins of the bride, carried gifts.

Brandy snifters, with floating apricot-colored carnations, centered the reception tables which were covered with white cloths.

Vickie Hartruff, Filer, sorority sister, was seated at the guest book. A hurricane lamp surrounded by apricot, orange and yellow flowers, centered the table which was covered with an apricot-colored cloth.

Pre-nuptial showers for the bride were hosted by Mrs. Ray McFarland, Murtaugh, and Mrs. Roger Johnson, Castletford.

Following a honeymoon trip to Phoenix, Ariz., where the couple visited Romesburg's grandparents and the bride's aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. C.O. Smith, the couple is at home at 702 Ripon, Lewiston.

Both the bride and bridegroom received B.S. degrees from the University of Idaho on May 14.

Here is a hand that caused a lot of comment in Memphis when it was played in a duplicate game. North became the declarer at some spade contract at every table but one. East always opened the 10 of diamonds and every declarer struggled along and just made 12 tricks.

The one South player who went to six, notrump made seven against a spade-lead. When asked how he did it he replied: "I just took the first thirteen tricks." That is just about as easy a way to describe a successful squeeze as there is. Not that the spade declarer missed a squeeze. The diamond lead killed it for them.

South started by running the spade suit while chucking a club and a diamond. Then he cashed his ace and king of clubs, and ace of hearts. A heart was led to dummy and the king and queen "castled" while South chucked his last club.

West had to unguard his queen of diamonds to keep the queen of clubs and the ace, king and jack of diamonds top the last three tricks.

Ask the Jacobys

We recently explained that a bid of eight was illegal. A New York bidder wants to know if the laws ever allowed it.

The answer is that one set of laws promulgated around 1890 did not forbid impossible bids, but the next laws corrected the oversight. Incidentally that next set (1935) was the first set that Oswald Jacoby had a hand in.

Whoopers increase

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Twelve of the 16 whooping crane eggs flown to Grays Lake National Wildlife Refuge in Idaho and placed in nests under greater sandhill cranes have hatched and survived, the Department of Interior reported Tuesday.

The 1977 production has exceeded all expectations and the outlook for the endangered bird has never been brighter. Keith M. Schreiner, associate director of the department's Fish and Wildlife Service announced.

A record number of whoopers have survived the breeding season and there may be 128 whooping cranes in existence in the wild and in captivity. Of that number, 29 were hatched this spring.

Biologists believe that even if half die from weather, predators, accidents and other causes, 1977 still will be an outstanding year for the species.

The final 1977 tally of whooping cranes won't be until the late fall when the Grays Lake Flock migrates 800 miles to New Mexico near the Bosque del Apache National Wildlife Refuge and the Canadian flock goes south to the Arkansas National Wildlife Refuge in Texas.

Baptist aide urges Graham to 'clear air'

GREENSBORO, N.C. (UPI) — The state's Baptist news magazine, "The Biblical Recorder," will urge evangelist Billy Graham to "clear the air" about a recently disclosed $22.9 million fund made up of laid-off workers' savings.

James Grant, editor of the magazine, has prepared an editorial for publication this week urging Graham to hold a news conference about the money, saying accountability in this age is a "must."

The fund, disclosed in recent news reports, is the World Evangelism and Christian Education Fund, an arm of the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association in Minneapolis, Minn.

Following disclosure of the fund's existence, Graham said the money will be used to build a women's training center on a 1,200-acre site near Asheville, for scholarships, and for a graduate school for biblical studies at Wheaton College.

Grant's editorial questioned the need for the women's training center. He said the state now has the world's greatest concentration of church camps and assemblies, many of which are closed for most of the year. He added most of them are available at minimal cost for all types of conferences and retreats.

Grant, who acknowledged that he is a long-time Graham supporter, said it was disappointing to learn of the $22.9 million which two million contributors were not aware of.

Grant said the secrecy surrounding the fund is evident when he, as editor of a major religious periodical, knew nothing of the fund's existence.

"Big business men who are directors of the fund do not normally give such information to the news media and this may have been a factor in so few people knowing about it," said the editorial. "Billy may want to keep closer control over such actions in the future for too much is at stake."

Grant also said Graham should hold a news conference, explain about the fund and the secrecy around it because "defensive statements" by his associates will not suffice.

"To remain too long on the defensive indicates that indeed there is a problem," said Grant's editorial.

New atomic power plant rules proposed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — At the end of an estimated 16-year operating life of an atomic power plant, it will take up to 500,000 years for the radioactivity of some of its abandoned parts to die down to acceptable levels.

Now a coalition of consumer and environmental groups want to force the utility companies to pay in advance for decommissioning the radioactive reactors instead of placing the burden on future generations.

If the request is granted by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, a coalition spokesman said, consumers would pay more for electricity generated by nuclear power. Decommissioning costs have been estimated at up to $30 million per reactor.

An official with the Atomic Industrial Forum, the nuclear industry trade association, said the coalition proposal "would not be a terrible blow to the industry." He said some states already have similar requirements.

The request was sponsored by two Ralph Nader organizations, Critical Mass and the Public Interest Research Group; two independent environmental groups, the Environmental Action Foundation and Environmental Action Inc.; and two state citizen organizations, the Community Action Research Group of Ames, Iowa, and the New York Public Interest Research Group.

A spokesman said the request was delivered to the commission Friday with an effective filing date of Tuesday.

"At the end of its useful life, a nuclear power reactor and associated structures are contaminated with radioactive isotopes that take thousands of years to decay and which will require several millions of dollars to isolate," the request said.

The coalition asked NRC to make utilities post a performance bond and set up an escrow account for decommissioning costs.

Company recalls defective tires

AKRON, Ohio (UPI) — Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. said Tuesday it was searching for about 100 original equipment, steel-belted radial passenger car tires which were under-cured during production in mid-May.

The HT28-15 white sidewall tires could develop a flex crack in the lower sidewall area which, in continued operation, could lead to air loss.

Most were for one auto manufacturer, and known owners are being notified, Firestone said. The tires have the curing stand identification numbers A93A or A93B plus serial numbers W2VYX3197 or W2VY1B2P,2.

New criminal law has 'slight effect'

BOYD (UPI) — A poll conducted by the Idaho Parole and Pardon Commission indicates that Idaho judges do not plan to herd convicts into the state penitentiary for long terms under a new law limiting them to imprisonment or deny parole.

The law, which went into effect Friday, has been lited by proponents as a way to cut crime by hardened offenders who are paroled early. Opponents have labeled it an attempt at the rehabilitative approach underlying penal theory.

The survey district judges were asked how much prison time they would give certain defendants they previously sentenced if the new law had been in effect when they imposed the sentence and the average was five years. That is "slightly" more time than the average hardened inmate serves, Parole Commission Ralph Marshall estimated.

The respondents said they would have used fixed terms in one-third of the 203 cases in the poll. The defendants all were felons—they had been sentenced to prison in a one-year period that ended last February.

The judges said they still would have given indeterminate sentences to 59 per cent of the felons, but were uncertain about which method to use in the remaining nine per cent of the cases.

Parole commissioners have made it plain they object to the fixed-term sentences because it ties their hands.

Only five of the judges surveyed said they would not use fixed sentences.

Stone skippers tie 1975 world record

MCKINAC ISLAND, Mich. (UPI) — Two young men shared the title in the 1975 Stone Island Skimming Tournament Monday by sharing the trophy, which was a bit difficult.

Kolar Jr., 19, of Birmingham, Mich., and Glenn Lopez, 22, of Grand Rapids, Mich., both managed to make stones skip 24 times in the choppy waters of Lake Huron. Lopez, the world record set in 1975 by Warren Klope of Troy, Mich.

First prize in the annual Fourth of July event on this tourist island was a year's supply of famed Mackinac Island fudge, a trophy fashioned from a 75-pound rock.

Tournament officials offered the pair a ham roast and a chance to split the rock in half, but the co-winners, arrived at a mutual decision to share the trophy and Kolar took the wooden stand and plaque attached to it.

'Daredevils' rounded up by helicopter

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ronald DiGiovanni found himself being chased by a police helicopter again Tuesday.

The 21-year-old ballroomist and a companion, Jerry Hewitt, both members of a loosely knit daredevil club whose membership includes World Trade Center "human fly" George Willig, soared over several New York City communities to protest the proposed landing of the Concorde supersonic jet.

For his trouble Tuesday, the ballroomist was given two summonses for an unauthorized takeoff and landing, and failure to notify aviation authorities of his flight intentions.

Police aviation unit officers said DiGiovanni and Hewitt took off about 8 a.m. near Flushing Airport and minutes later were seen heading over nearby Elmhurst, Queens.

A police helicopter swooped down on them from the department's aviation unit headquarters at Floyd Bennett Field in Brooklyn.

DiGiovanni stayed inside the gondola of the 45-foot tall balloon during the flight. Hewitt stood outside the basket holding a banner that read, "Ban the SST."

The trip ended about 4:45 a.m., when both the helicopter and the balloon landed at the St. John's University football field in Jamaica, Queens, rec three miles from where DiGiovanni lifted off.

The two ballroomists were "interviewed" by police and investigators from the Federal Aviation Administration.

The Anglo-French operators of the Concorde SST have been trying to obtain landing rights for the craft at Kennedy Airport, but are opposed by residents in the airport vicinity who claim the plane is too noisy and presents an environmental hazard.

DiGiovanni is a friend of Willig, who thrilled the nation by scaling the sheer face of the 1,350-foot World Trade Center last May.

The club's exploits date back to last Dec. 23, when DiGiovanni led police on a 10-mile chase in his balloon, which he launched from St. George on Staten Island skimming over the East River before finally bringing it down at a power plant in Queens.

DiGiovanni was pursued by Coast Guard patrol boats launches in the harbor and the East River, patrol cars in Manhattan and Queens and four police helicopters.

DiGiovanni said at the time, "I did it to show the people of New York City what a balloon looks like."

Welfare program blunders reduced

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Government efforts to find bureaucratic blunders have reduced the mistakes, but nearly one in four welfare families still are ineligible or improperly paid, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare said Tuesday.

There was a 23.3 per cent "error rate" in the nation's largest welfare program, Aid to Families with Dependent Children, for the six months ending last Dec. 31, a HEW report said. The rate was 26 per cent for all welfare cases a year ago.

"During the period ending last December, HEW said, 798,660 of the 2.6 million families getting welfare aid were ineligible or paid incorrectly."

HEW has said previously that welfare agencies or social workers make 51 per cent of the errors and recipients the rest. How much represents actual cheating never has been determined, but fraud prosecutions represent less than 1 per cent of all cases.

The report said 5.3 per cent of the 11.2 million AFDC recipients were ineligible, 13.1 per cent were overpaid and 4.9 per cent were underpaid. The District of Columbia had the highest proportions both of ineligible, 15.3 per cent, and overpaid recipients, 23.2 per cent. Indiana had the lowest percentage of ineligible recipients, 0.9, and Nevada the lowest percentage of overpaid recipients, 1.9.

Delaware had the most underpaid recipients, with 10.1

per cent, and Nevada the fewest with 0.6 per cent.

Money spent improperly because of errors in the $10 billion a year program fell from $457.5 million to $423.4 million during the same period.

The federal share of AFDC spending averages 55 per cent with states making up the difference.

"The result of three full years of federal and state efforts to reduce welfare errors has been a 48.5 per cent cut in payment error rates and a cost reduction of $1.4 billion," HEW said.

HEW's original goal in the "quality control" effort undertaken Jan. 1, 1974, was to reduce welfare errors to no more than 13 per cent of all cases by July, 1975.

A federal court ruled last year in a suit brought by several states and counties that HEW's method of determining penalties for states falling short of the goal was invalid. At that time, welfare officials said the deadline for meeting the 13 per cent goal was "unrealistic."

Jurisdictions which recorded increases in ineligible AFDC recipients during the six months ending in December included Alaska, California, Colorado, Delaware, Iowa, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Mississippi, New Hampshire, New Mexico, North Dakota, Ohio, South Dakota, Texas, Utah, Virginia, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

Distressed dad says son must be 'crazy'

NEW YORK (UPI) — "This sounded like he was always being up with his mother and I was deep before," Ernest Robinson said.

The 50-year-old truck driver who lives in Somerset, N.J., was trying to understand why his son Luis, 26, a Vermont-born bus driver at Kennedy Airport, killed the driver and a woman passenger and demanded a $5 million ransom and a plane to take him to safety.

"Luis must have been crazy," the father concluded. "He had to be. If just doesn't sound like Luis. He was very rational."

"He once said this was a white society. That was about a year ago. But it was not anything in particular — it was just that there was a lot of prejudice against non-whites," Robinson said his wife Doris 36, came to the United States from France, and that he and Luis, when he last saw in February or March, came here the following year. He said Luis, one of five children had hoped to pursue an electronics career in the Navy.

But Monday the 26-year-old NYC's enlisted him forgot his dreams and turned to violence to purge his bitterness. Commandeering the bus in the Bronx, Robinson diverted it to Kennedy Airport where he saw Luis in the cockpit running and leaping in the vehicle, firing his .12-caliber handgun at pursuing police cars.

At one point he showed to dump the dead woman's body from the plane. He was another, he stopped to release the wounded driver, who died of his wounds at a hospital.

School aid given boost by Vatican

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — The Vatican called on Roman Catholic clergy and laymen Tuesday to pressure their governments to provide money for Catholic schools, which are in financial trouble in many countries, so that the schools can accept more poor children.

"In some countries, Catholic schools have been obliged to restrict their educational activities to wealthier social classes, thus giving an impression of social and economic discrimination in education," said a 31-page document issued by the Vatican Sacred Congregation for Catholic Education.

It said this was mainly in countries where church schools get no money from the state and must of necessity accept a greater proportion of children of well-to-do parents to remain financially self-sufficient.

"This situation is of great concern to those responsible for Catholic education because first and foremost the church offers its educational service to the poor or those who are deprived of family help and affection or those who are far from the faith," the document said.

The U.S. Supreme Court has wrestled with the basic issue of aid to church-related schools since 1947 when it said parents of nonpublic school students could be reimbursed for rides on city buses. Since then, the court has ruled selectively on various publicly financed programs to help pupils of church-related schools.

The most recent ruling was June 24 when the court sustained most of Ohio's latest attempt to help parochial schools with an $88 million appropriation to help pupils, separately from the schools themselves.

Idahoans file suit to avoid tax hike

IDAHO FALLS, Idaho (UPI) — The Idaho Department of Employment filed a $673,000 claim today against the U.S. Interior Department to prevent employers from facing a higher tax rate as a result of unemployment related to the Teton Dam collapse.

"This claim against the U.S. Department of Interior is on behalf of all Idaho employers for the losses to the Idaho Unemployment Insurance Fund," Department Director Glenn Nichols said.

Nichols said since employer tax rates are calculated on the basis of layoffs if the claim is not paid more than 350 employers throughout the state potentially face a higher tax rate.

Gov. John V. Evans said 1,091 claimants have drawn from $1 to $3,219 from the fund, as a result of job losses following the failure of the dam.

Doctor has one day to find legal counsel

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Chief Federal Judge Willis W. Ritter today gave Dr. L.S. Brown one more day to obtain legal counsel before his trial is scheduled to begin on charges he failed to file federal income tax returns for the years 1971, 1972 and 1973.

The Richfield dentist, who ran unsuccessfully for governor of Utah on the American Party ticket in 1976, appeared before Ritter today and asked the judge to allow him to be represented by counsel of his choice, regardless of the lawyer's standing with any state bar association.

Ritter denied the motion and told Brown to appear Wednesday morning with an attorney recognized by the Utah State Bar, and to be ready to begin jury selection. The trial on the three misdemeanor charges had been scheduled for today.

Welfare package 'shocking'

© Newhouse News Service
 WASHINGTON — New York City and the fiscally-strapped states of the Northeast and Midwest may be in for a rude shock when President Carter unveils his welfare reform package next month.
 "The proposals will not include a federal take-over of welfare costs — despite Carter's pledge of such fiscal relief for New York City and states with high welfare costs — according to a chief architect of the reform plan.
 Larry Orr, director of research in the Office of Income Security Policy at the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, disclosed the administration's intentions at a recent meeting of social scientists at the National Academy of Sciences.
 "In the very high benefit states there will be no financial relief, because of the numbers involved," Orr said, referring to Carter's pledge to keep at least the initial costs of welfare reform at current levels of Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) and Food Stamp funding.

 "The relief will be only to the low-benefit states," Orr said. Because the individual states currently decide the level of benefits paid through the AFDC program, there is a 42 per cent difference in the welfare families in Southern or Rocky Mountain states and those in Northeast and Midwest states.
 "If we get any welfare package through this Congress, the proposal will provide for higher federal levels of support; but I don't think you can have total federalization of welfare and equalization of payments throughout the country without making Northeastern recipients worse off," Orr said.

 That problem was a major stumbling block for the last effort to overhaul the nation's welfare system — the ill-fated Family Assistance Plan proposed by the Nixon administration.
 Under that scheme benefits would have gone up in the states of the new Sun Belt, but there would have been cutbacks in the Northeast and Midwest.
 According to Orr, Carter's plan will keep benefits at current levels in high-benefit states while greatly increasing benefits in low-benefit states. There will still be regional differences, however.

Under the current welfare system, the federal government picks up about half the costs and the states — in some states like California and New York, the cities — pay the rest.
 "The growing cost of welfare has played a role in the fiscal crisis in New York City, where officials have lobbied hard for federal take-over of the burden of providing for the poor.
 "Orr, on leave from the Brookings Institution, argues on the task force that is drawing up a welfare package according to specifications Carter outlined in May. Key among them was the goal of keeping the initial federal cost of the scheme within current funding levels.
 The reform package is due to be submitted to Congress in August.

Parks bare can plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Visitors to national parks now must pay a nickel deposit on beverages sold in cans or bottles, in an Interior Department effort to reduce littering.
 The department announced the 5 cent refundable deposit Monday. Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus said in a statement, beverage containers represent a substantial share of the increasing amount of litter picked up in parks.
 A test program at Yosemite National Park, Calif., from May to September of last year, showed seven of 10 containers were returned of the 1.3 million beverages sold.
 The program accounted for 30 tons of recycled aluminum, glass and steel. When the program was voluntary, only a ton of aluminum cans was recycled each year.

Oldest American celebrates 135th

BARTOW, Fla. (UPI) — Charlie Smith, the oldest American, was a bit grumpy on his 135th birthday Monday, but he perked up when the presents and the cake and the Kool-Aid showed up.
 He swigged a cup of Kool-Aid, munched a slice of red, white and blue birthday cake, and announced "I feel good and I look good. The cake is good and so am I."
 The former slave, one-time cowboy and alleged associate of outlaw Jesse James opened a few gifts as his son, Chester, 78, looked on. Chester gave him a shirt, pajamas and a robe.
 The nursing home at which he has lived for 30 months gave Smith a new cowboy hat. Friends sent a handpainted wall plaque in the shape of an eagle, a pen and ink portrait of Charlie, and a box of candy.
 Then he chatted with a family from Galveston, Tex., who stopped off to see him at the Bartow Convalescent Center after visiting Walt Disney World at nearby Lake Buena Vista.
 The 12-by-18-inch cake was decorated with three candles and the numerals "135" and tiny plastic replicas of the Liberty Bell. It sat on a table festooned with small American flags. Smith's son lit the candles and Charlie blew them out.
 Charlie says he was born in Liberia in 1842 and sold at a slave auction in New Orleans 12 years later to a Texas rancher who later set him free. He took the rancher's name as his own.
 Charlie doesn't know the day of his birth so he celebrates it on Independence Day. The Social Security Administration attests that Smith is, indeed, the nation's oldest citizen.

Pot holding no right

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Supreme Court rejected Tuesday an argument that the right to privacy protects the possession of marijuana in a person's home.
 Opposing a ruling by Justice Brian Kincaid, charged with possession of marijuana contended that the Constitutional right to privacy protects the possession of marijuana in the confines of an individual's home.
 The court rejected the argument in an unanimous decision holding that possession of marijuana is not a fundamental Constitutional right and is not made, so by being confined to the home.

Tot drowns in ditch

PAUL—The 1½-year-old daughter of a farm worker drowned Tuesday evening in an irrigation ditch.

Dead is Maria Gundalupa Urena. She is the daughter of Toribio and Estrella Urena, Burley, Minidoka County Coroner Kim Christensen said.

The victim drowned about 5:50 p.m. Tuesday in about two-and-one-half feet of water in an irrigation lateral on the Aldo Dallolio farm northwest of Paul.

The girl's parents were thinning beets and left the child and her 3-year-old brother at the end of the rows, according to the Minidoka County Sheriff's Department.

Mrs. Urena told deputies the brother tried to tell his parents something and they stopped thinning beets to investigate. They found the girl lying in the water.

Dallolio unsuccessfully applied artificial respiration. The girl was then rushed to Minidoka Memorial Hospital, where doctors were unable to revive her.

Council OK's fee hike

TWIN FALLS—The Twin Falls City Council Tuesday night unanimously approved an increase in fees charged for inspection of electrical installations.

City Manager Jean Millar said the rate increase, as much as 50 per cent in some cases, was approved to bring city rates in line with recently changed state rates for electrical installation inspections.

All electrical installations in new structures must be inspected by city officials before they can be occupied.

Under the new ordinance which will become effective about July 15, service rates for new residences with 100 amperes or less will be $10, a rise of $2.50, plus $2, instead of $1, for each room in which any wiring is installed.

Service rates for new residences over 200 amperes went from $10 to $15, plus $2, instead of $1, for each wired room.

For electrical space heating, charges will go from $3 to $10 for inspection of residences from one to five kilowatts.

During its roughly two-hour meeting, the council also: —Unanimously approved a request by Mormon Church officials to construct a church education building and add parking at 421 Maurice St. N.

During discussion before approval, disagreement arose between Mayor Paul Ostyn and Councilman Chris B. Talkington on whether church officials should be required to notify neighbors of the impending construction. The requirement was made a condition of council approval.

—Placed on first reading an ordinance allowing Cosgriff Sign Co. to keep up several billboards as a conditional use in the downtown area and allowing the sign company to relocate two roof-top signs elsewhere.

Local woman arraigned

TWIN FALLS—Mrs. Bertina Doyle, 60, Twin Falls, was arraigned this morning in magistrate court here on a misdemeanor charge that she is operating an illegal shelter home.

Randy Stoker, Mrs. Doyle's attorney, said Mrs. Doyle pleaded not guilty to the charge that she has been housing three mentally handicapped persons who require shelter care without the required license.

Mrs. Doyle was expected to be released on her own recognizance. It remained unclear whether she would continue to house three men in their 20s, all who she said earlier have the mental capacity of children, in her home at 2160A and 2160B Elizabeth Blvd.

Twin Falls County Prosecutor Frank J. Dykas Friday filed a complaint against Mrs. Doyle after receiving a request to do so from City Atty. Charles Brumbach.

Brumbach said he requested the prosecutor take action after residents near Mrs. Doyle's home presented him with a petition signed by 17 of them, asking that Mrs. Doyle not be allowed to house more than three handicapped persons in her home.

Mrs. Doyle has applied with state health and welfare officials for a license to provide shelter home care to eight persons at her home.

New landlord-tenant law now in effect

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—If your landlord won't fix the plumbing or waterproof the roof he may be violating Idaho's new landlord-tenant law.

The new landlord-tenant statute went into effect July 1. Tom Vanderford, attorney general, said the new law generally gives tenants an opportunity to go to court to force landlords to upgrade their rentals.

The new law requires landlords provide habitable quarters by maintaining such things as electrical service, weather and water proofing of the building, sanitation, heating and cooling and other facilities.

Vanderford said the extent of these services depends on the lease agreement at the time the property is rented, and the law simply gives the tenant, and the landlord, legal recourse.

One of the major provisions of the law, he said, is that it requires a trial to be set within 12 days of filing of the complaint providing the complaint is based on the specific performance aspect.

In addition, the law governs security deposits, requiring the landlord to return all such deposit money unless there is damage to the property beyond the normal wear from use and if the rent is paid at the time the agreement is terminated.

The money must be returned within 20 to 30 days after termination, the law states. Vanderford said he feels the new law will make landlords more aware of their responsibility and more speedy in making repairs. He said the law is tenant oriented but does require tenants to meet terms of the lease.

J. James Koutnik, owner of a number of rental properties in Twin Falls, said he does not see any changes in rental-landlord relations as a result of the law.

"It doesn't call for anything we are not already doing. If you don't make repairs you lose a renter and can't rent it again until you do provide all of the facilities expected by a tenant," he said.

"We already return security deposits to the renter when he leaves, providing there is no damage to the building and providing the rent is paid. Many tenants, however, move out without paying and let the deposit cover what they owe the landlord," he said.

Koutnik said unfortunately for the landlord, many times the deposit doesn't cover the amount the renter owes.

He said the property owners also face a problem of how to get an undesirable renter and one who isn't current in his rent payments to move out.

Koutnik said there are very few substandard rentals in areas such as Twin Falls and if there are, people simply move to another home as there are a number of rentals available here at most times.

McDonald

Enjoys scenery

"I'M CLIMBING a ladder to those golden arches" is one line of a well-known spiritual. It's doubtful the composer was referring to a sign repairman at McDonald's Tuesday afternoon. Working 30 feet off the ground, this Yesso Sign's employee decided to take a moment to enjoy the scenery. After all, even he deserves a break today.

Water thefts could lead to court disputes

By LORAYNE O. SMITH Times-News writer

SHOSHONE—Reports of water thefts in the parched prairies of Gooding and Lincoln counties this summer recall the days when people caught stealing irrigation water were shot.

American Falls Reservoir District officers and waterusers say the problem of water theft is extremely serious this month and could lead to fights—both in court and on the range.

Broken locks on canal gates in the Gooding area raised the blood pressure of directors of the American Falls Reservoir District No. 2 Tuesday during a lengthy, animated meeting in Shoshone.

"It's about as serious a situation as we can get," Wendell Johnson, board chairman, declared.

Equitable distribution of irrigation water has always been a problem canal company officials agree.

In this short-water year, tampering with allotments of other waterusers has become literally a matter of economic life and death to farmers, canal company officials say.

The American Falls No. 2 board unanimously adopted a resolution Tuesday instructing manager Leon Grieve to "get the ditchriders in line or replace them."

Grieve reported problem areas in Gooding County where some farmers allegedly are still receiving 100 per cent delivery or more, even though the reservoir district has been on 60 and 75 per cent delivery.

Grieve said he had called a "ditchbank meeting" of farmers in the Gooding area to try to determine who was stealing the water.

He said "I" took him and Robert Johansen, Gooding board member, nearly a week to "run the situation down because everyone was blaming someone else."

Anderson-Nafziger Farms, which owns or leases farmland throughout the North Side, and Clive A. Pope, Gooding, were among the users involved, Grieve said.

Johnson instructed Grieve to immediately turn off the water at any canal gates where irregularities have occurred.

"Let them come to you, instead of your running around to see who's at fault," the chairman said. "We're not to be in control of the situation."

"We're not only behind you in cracking down, but we're even pushing a little," Johnson said.

Cecil Tropper, another board member from Gooding, said there are still gates with no locks on them, even though it is board policy that each wateruser should have locks.

Most directors reported incidents during the afternoon in which the ditchriders were either negligent or playing favorites among certain farmers.

"We pay the ditchriders enough that they should be able to work a full day," Johnson declared. A typical salary, including mileage, is $600 monthly, he said.

Charles Barnes, Hunt, said "Everyone in the neighborhood" knows the ditchrider there is home every day before noon.

Other tales of ditchriders warning farmers to get their gates in proper position because there would be an inspection called the afternoon discussion.

"The ditchriders are no more concerned (about the water delivery) than if this was a normal year," Barnes said.

Ted Diehl, manager of the North Side Canal Co., admitting water theft has "always been a problem," said. "You just have to be an SOB and crack down if you're not going to continually have these problems."

He said in areas of his system where there was reported tampering he had "given the ditchriders just four days to get things straightened out."

American Falls Reservoir District No. 2 directors said if their ditchriders "aren't working for Leon (Grieve) they're creating a problem."

No one would dispute there's a problem. Waterusers in the Gooding area say part of the current hassle is because there are farmers at the end of the line who have no water shares but in past years have always used waste water.

This year, because of the drought, there is no waste water.

It even has been reported in past water meetings that throughout recorded history of murders in Idaho there were only three more killings over women than over water.

Vertical winds blamed for crash

PICABO—Severe vertical winds originating from "roll clouds" are believed to have slapped a small single engine airplane out of the air Monday causing the deaths of two men in the crash on a 4½-mile southeast of Picabo.

After a crash-site investigation, Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) officials said today it looked as if strong up and down storm drafts in Monday's thunder and lightning cloudburst had slapped the small plane down to the ground.

The plane's pilot, Faun Smith, 47, Caldwell, and the sole passenger Harry Gibson, 34, Jerome, apparently were killed instantly.

The men were making a research patrol flight for the Idaho Fish and Game Dept. over Silver Creek when the plane went down.

Gibson was a senior fisheries research biologist and was making an angler survey Monday to check fishing pressures in the area on Silver Creek, one of Idaho's most famous trout streams.

The Piper Super Cub was discovered about 5 p.m. Monday on the McGlochlin Ranch.

The plane was pancaked flat in a single crash spot. The propeller was bent and driven into the ground, while the landing gear were bent on impact nearly parallel to the plane's wings. The underside of the aircraft was flattened and the two passenger cockpit had collapsed.

Doyle Rice, aviation operations inspector for the FAA in Boise, inspected the crash site Tuesday.

"Evidently, the plane got into a wind that slammed it right into the ground," Rice said after his investigation. "If there hadn't been a wind around, you couldn't have flown it into the ground that way."

The FAA official explained that in the heart of a storm there are terrific up and down drafts. These winds are sometimes called "roll clouds" and are classed as a kind of tornado. They can travel as much as five miles ahead of a storm front and, according to Rice, they can take "a whole town and grind it up and spit it out."

Rice said he had never seen a plane that had been flattened as a crash as badly as the small Piper Cub.

The aircraft and pilot from Clark's Air Service, Inc., Nampa, were contacted by the fish and game department to make the patrol flight. Rice said the two men left the Nampa airport early Monday morning and had refueled at the Bailey airport at about 4 p.m. Monday.

The wreckage was first spotted about 5 p.m. on the ranch of Mrs. Maggie McGlochlin by the woman's son-in-law, C.J. Kelly.

Amtrak on-time record draws praise

TWIN FALLS—It won't get you there quite as quickly as did the crack City of Portland which once zipped along the rails between Portland and Salt Lake City, but the on-time record is something to be envied.

And while it isn't breaking even yet, it's attracting more riders than railroad experts expected.

That's a 30-day assessment of the train which gave Idaho its first rail passenger service since 1971 when Union Pacific discontinued its sleeper and coach cars.

"We've been averaging between 100 and 120 persons a day," Amtrak regional manager Lloyd Arthur said. "We feel that at 90 (persons) our train is more energy-efficient than two buses would be to handle the same number of people."

Lloyd said the financial "break-even point" would be reached if the route receives "about 200 persons a day, roughly."

Lloyd said Amtrak was "well satisfied" with the first month of the Pioneer route, saying ridership was "better than expected." The only major passenger complaints so far, he said, were that Amtrak didn't stock enough food on the first few runs.

Lloyd praised the on-time performance of the Pioneer. Saying the sleek new cars arrived when expected "about 90 per cent of the time." Few Amtrak lines in the country have such a high on-time average.

Still, the schedule is a bit slower than similar passenger trains which once traveled the same rails. According to a 1970 timetable, Union Pacific's City of Portland made the Pocatello to Portland run in 14 hours and 35 minutes. The Pioneer lags slightly behind the once highly rated UP service, covering the same route in 15 hours and 45 minutes.

Stocks at Midday

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices opened mixed Wednesday in moderate trading of New York Stock Exchange issues.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average, which managed to gain 0.64 point Tuesday, was off 0.50 to 912.99 shortly after the opening. Advances led declines, 117 to 106, among the 39 issues crossing the tape.

There was little in the news background to influence the market in either direction. There were some published reports investors were anticipating the government's wholesale price index report due Friday would show a decline.

At the same time, however, investors have been concerned about the prospects of the economy slowing down in 1977's second half. First half figures have been much stronger than anticipated. But many economists insist the price will stay.

A 2.2 percent cent drop in steel production last week added to the slowdown concern spanned by a 0.2 percent slide in the government's leading economic indicators, the first decline in four months.

However, the Commerce Department said Tuesday the U.S. economy has grown at the highest rate of any major industrial nation. The Carter administration last week said the "Gross National Product" would rise at a 3.1 percent rate this year instead of 4.9 originally predicted.

today's weather

Sunny, slightly warmer Thursday

Twin Falls, Northside, Burley-Rupert area — Fair tonight, sunny and a little warmer Thursday. High temperatures Thursday near 80 and overnight lows tonight near 45.

Friday's outlook, fair and warmer.

Spraying and dusting conditions will be generally light to variable during the early morning and late evening hours increasing to 10 to 15 miles an hour during the afternoon.

Halley, Camas Prairie, lower Wood River Valley — Mostly fair tonight except for slight chance of an afternoon shower near the mountain areas, sunny and a little warmer Thursday. High temperatures mid-70s Thursday and overnight lows 35 to 40.

Friday's outlook, fair and little warmer.

Temperatures across the Magic Valley continue well below normal and will be generally in the 70s. However, Wendell did climb to 86 degrees and Gooding was close behind with 82.

Very little change is taking place in the overall weather pattern. A low pressure area over the Pacific Northwest continues to circulate off the coast.

Pacific air over Idaho. As this low moves slowly eastward, the flow aloft will change to a more southerly direction for a slow warming trend into the weekend.

The extended outlook for Friday through Sunday calls for near normal temperatures and mostly dry except for a slight chance for a few showers developing along the South Hills. High temperatures generally in the 80s and overnight lows dropping into the 50s.

Questions answered about: BANANAS AND AVOCADOS

CAROLYN DUNN
 Consumer and Customer Advisor
 The President of Smith's Food King

The red phone rings with many questions about Bananas and Avocados. How are they best stored to preserve quality? What are they at peak of ripeness? It's all in these brief answers:

Here are some of the questions we hear most and their answers:

1. Can you store bananas LATELY in the refrigerator? Only, yes! However, bananas ripen faster when refrigerated. After all, the banana is a tropical fruit, meant to be eaten at its normal temperature. Some people prefer bananas chilled in the refrigerator. The skin may go dark but the inside is still good and SAFE to eat until it becomes over-ripe. (Then use in bread or cake mix.)
2. What is the ideal ripening temperature? Between 70 and 75 degrees (F) (refrigerator temperatures are in the 40's).
3. Are bananas frostproof? Yes, if you want to use them as ingredients. Some of our customers remove the peels on medium to ripe bananas, place them in plastic bags and freeze for use later in breads and cakes. (One banana equals frozen fruit 1 to 2 medium.)

AVOCADOS

1. What has happened to the avocados on the market? They were once black, probably stolen from May to November. The Hovav Avocado is the variety you will see on the market. Some people think it's the best because it's a tropical fruit. Good! It is your "hard" and "green" avocado. If it goes slightly to ripeness it's ready to eat.
2. What is the best way to ripen an avocado at home? Avocados arrive at the market with no preservatives may ripen to suit their needs. Leave at room temperature for one to two days. Or hasten ripening in a brown paper bag, or wrap in food. Then store in refrigerator.
3. Can you freeze avocados? Yes, but only as an ingredient. Remove skins, wash and freeze.

We want to be your favorite store.

COACH Denny Crum shunned an offer to coach basketball at UCLA to remain in Louisville Tuesday. He cited his love for Kentucky as the reason. (UPI)

Crum chooses Louisville over UCLA post

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI)— Denny Crum, stunning an offer from UCLA where he starred as a player and served as John Wooden's top assistant, Tuesday announced he would remain as head coach at the University of Louisville.

Crum told a news conference he had weighed the Bruins' offer that was made last week for "two or three long" days and made what he described as one of the toughest decisions he has ever made in deciding to remain at Louisville.

"While this decision is probably the toughest one I ever had to make, I decided to stay at Louisville," Crum said.

He cited his love for the state of Kentucky, the city of Louisville and the University of Louisville "but most of all, the love for the people and fans of Louisville" as the major reasons for his decision to remain for a seventh season.

Speculation arose that U of L Athletic Director Dave Hart convinced Crum to stay at Louisville rather than returning to UCLA at a Tuesday morning meeting at the school, but Hart denied any promises were made during that meeting.

"Let me make it clear that at no time did Coach Crum use the UCLA offer for bargaining power or personal gain," Hart said. "His major concern was for his basketball program and its position at and with this university and this community."

Hart added he believed Crum agreed with school officials that the future was better for basketball at Louisville than at UCLA.

"Their (UCLA's) program has peaked," Hart predicted. "No coach is ever going to win 10 national championships. UCLA already has reached its peak while Louisville is still building toward reaching its peak."

Crum's six-year record at Louisville is 139-37, and his winning percentage is one of the tops among active coaches. However, his teams have failed to win the Metro 7 Conference title the past two years and his team has advanced to the final four teams in the NCAA tourney only once.

That was in 1975, when his club lost to a UCLA team that went on to win the national title in Wooden's last collegiate game to Louisville's arch rival, Kentucky.

"While we've had a lot of great moments and heartbreaks over the past six years," Crum noted, "I don't know of any university where this would not be true. We'll do our best to keep the University of Louisville at the top of the athletic world."

Although Crum and Hart did not mention it, some sources indicated Crum's salary and fringe benefits are better at Louisville than they would be at UCLA. Crum earns a reported $35,000 to $40,000 a year as head coach and also earns revenue from television appearances.

Looking ahead to next season, Crum painted a rosy future for his squad.

"We are extremely happy with our recruiting year and the people we have signed and we will have a basketball team next year that will be competitive with any team in the country," Crum said. "I and my staff, and in my opinion it is the tops in the country, will continue to do everything in our power to keep Louisville basketball among the top in the collegiate athletic world."

Sox complete boom-bust June about average

BOSTON (UPI)— For the first time in a month, the Boston Red Sox can look forward to "just another ballgame" when they resume their three-game series Wednesday against the Toronto Blue Jays.

After winning 13 of 14 games in June and setting seven home run records, the Red Sox dropped nine straight games. Finally, they beat the Blue Jays Monday, 9-6, with an eight-homer barrage.

When they get back to baseball Wednesday night, all they will be working on is a one-game winning streak.

"At least our hitters got going again in that game," said Boston manager Don Zimmer, who gave his team the day off Tuesday. "We still got to get better pitching. You can't win a title with 17-11, 14-10 or 9-6 games. When we get it, like we did three weeks ago, we'll win some ballgames."

The Red Sox have not had a complete game by a member of their staff since Ferguson Jenkins beat the Orioles June 23 — 11 games ago. And except for the continued fine work of Bill Campbell, the Boston relief corps has been shelled the past two weeks.

Yet team captain Carl Yastrzemski feels consistent hitting can bring Boston its share of victories — as long as the pitchers keep the game close.

"There's a lot less pressure on the hitters when we know one run can mean the difference, rather than being five or six runs down and you need a big inning to catch up," said Yastrzemski who had one of the Boston homers Sunday in the comeback win.

While Yastrzemski looks to the hitters to keep the Red Sox winning, first baseman George Scott has sought help from a higher source.

"I did a lot of praying Sunday night. I hope the Good Man heard me and He's going to tighten things up for us," said Scott, the major league home run leader with 23.

Latham, Stewart, Smith win derbies

TWIN FALLS — Bob Latham, Bob Stewart and Matt Smith proved the top horses in the annual Blue Lakes golf elimination derbies.

Latham won the first race with Dave Dirsoll finishing second and Ralph Carpenter third. In the second leg, Stewart was chased home by Jack Chaborg and John Rogers while Dick Kirkman and Egon Kroll finished second and third behind Smith in the third heat.

TF nips Burley 2-1 or wins by forfeit

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls Legion had a 2-1 victory over Burley nailed down on a forfeit call at Jaycee Park Tuesday night.

The game came to an abrupt end as the sixth inning was concluded when Burley Coach Bruce Coles thumped plate umpire Bill Miller in the chest. Miller immediately waved the game off.

The thing stemmed from a call at the end of Burley's half of the inning when a Burley runner was called out at the plate on the back end of a double play. Burley protested at that time, then put Twin Falls out without incident.

Between innings Coach Coles again protested the earlier call, claiming the Twin Falls catcher had dropped the ball. The ump was somewhere between a finger jab and a short wrist break.

Twin Falls had taken the lead in the first inning when Rebb Gfanti lived on an error and eventually scored on winning pitcher Scott Williams' sacrifice fly. In the third, Easy singled, moved up on a ground out and scored on Marty Lakey's hit.

Burley cut the deficit to 2-1 in the fifth when Gary Byington walked, moved up on Frank Heckenroth's single and scored on a throwing error.

Twin Falls entertains Jerome in a single seven-inning game at 8 p.m. Wednesday and hosts the Boise Gems in a pair of seven-inning battles starting at 6:30 p.m. Thursday to wind up the week's schedule.

Boise Optimists track meet set

BOISE — The 1977 Westside Optimists track and field season begins Thursday evening with two evenings of competition at Capital High School.

Meet director Al Henderson said the banquet division for nine-year-olds and young, midjet division (10 and 11) and junior division (12 and 13) will be held Thursday. The intermediate division (14 and 15) and senior (16 and 17) along with a new division for 18-years and older, will be run Friday.

Admission may register at Capital High School starting at 5:30 p.m. Field events will go at 6:30 with running events at 7:30 both days.

Henderson noted that the Westside Optimists Club does not charge for participation or spectators and the meets are open to both girls and boys.

ISU selects coach

Pocatello — Jim Klein, 5 successful college track and field coach in the Santa Barbara, CA area since 1950, is the new Head Track Coach at Idaho State University.

Klein succeeds Bob Ifferton, who resigned in May to accept a post with the U.S. Olympic Committee.

Klein comes to ISU from the University of California, Santa Barbara, where he coached runners and swimmers and led cross-country coach in 1977. He had coached at Westmont College from 1969-76 with outstanding results.

Among the 44-year old member's achievements were 12 track and cross country All-Americans at Westmont, including Olympians Paul Herman (1961, U.S. decathlon) and Jean Louis (Olympian/runner 1968-1972, Maratagascar, 100 meters). He also won the NAIA Award of Merit in track in 1969, 1971, and 1972. He was selected NAIA District III's Outstanding Coach of the Year in track three times, 1962, 1969 and 1971, and in cross country twice 1968 and 1969.

Klein led Westmont to fourth place in the 1976 NCAA Dist. III nationals. His cross country teams in 1963 and 1966 placed fourth and third in the NAIA. In 1976 he won the Jim Howard book (best in both east and west) in both NAIA and NCAA Dist. III nationals and placed fifth in the NCAA Day I in the discs despite weighing only 205 lbs.

"Nationally known as an expert on the decathlon as well as a former great in the event himself, Klein has been head director of numerous national and regional decathlon championships and Olympic development meets.

He served as coach of the Sri Lanka and Pakistan teams at the 1971 Asian Games.

Norton, Young OK richest non-title bout

NEW YORK (UPI) — Top-ranked contender Ken Norton has signed to fight seven-ranked Jimmy Young, an outcast television in the richest non-title bout in ring history Nov. 5, with the winner promised a shot at Muhammad Ali's world championship, it was learned Tuesday.

Norton, guaranteed $1.75 million with $100,000 "nesting" in the bank, and Young, guaranteed about $1.5 million, are scheduled to appear at a news conference with promoter Don King in New York Thursday afternoon.

ABC-TV, which dumped King's scandal-plagued U.S. Boxing Championships this year, is back in business with the controversial promoter and has signed to bankroll the 12-round Norton-Young fight.

Three sites are being considered for the bout: Madison Square Garden in New York, Las Vegas and the Capital Center in Landover, Md. Young is said to favor the Garden or the Capital Center, while Norton and ABC favor Las Vegas, where a new Hilton convention center is scheduled to open in October.

"I badly wanted Norton to fight Young because otherwise we couldn't fight Ali," said Bob Bloom, Norton's manager. "I'm his office in Lodi, Calif. I was afraid Ali would say we were ducking Young if we held out for a fight with Ali and then Ali might fight Young and retire without giving us another shot."

"Ken is supremely confident about being able to beat Young. He knows his style well. Jimmy was his sparring partner for his second fight with Ali in Las Angeles in 1973 and even though Ken liked Jimmy, and I liked Jimmy, we're eager to fight him. Hey, that's a lot of money we're talking about and it means another shot at the championship."

Jack Levin, Young's manager, said in Philadelphia, "Jimmy's in great shape. He's ready to fight anybody. He knows how to beat Norton and it's gonna be a great fight."

Both Norton and Young are expected to take time up fights before they meet. Norton, who kaymed Duane Bobick in 56 seconds in May and is now in training at his headquarters at Massacre Canyons, Calif., is considering a bout with Lorenzo Zanon of Italy, currently ranked 10th by the World Boxing Council. Young, who last fought and defeated George Foreman earlier this year, may take on one of the other American challengers, such as Scott LeDoux.

Ali is still signed to fight 5th-ranked contender Earnie Stover at the Garden on Sept. 20 but that has led to litigation between the Garden and rival promoter Top Rank, Inc. and may never take place. Ali also has a contract with King to fight 3th-ranked Italian Alfio Righetti after Oct. 1. Both the WBC and the World Boxing Association have insisted Ali sign to fight the top-ranked contender, Norton or Young, within 60 days of his next title defense.

Ali has told King and representatives of Norton and Young that he will fight the winner of their bout.

Crandall well able to appreciate majors

ANAHEIM (UPI) — After one season in the bushes, Del Crandall is one crack in the major leagues who appreciates where he is.

A former big league manager who was an eight-time All-Star catcher, Crandall did a unique thing a year ago — he quit a well-paying job in the dental supply business and went all the way to the baseball depths to manage the California Angels' farm club at Salinas.

"It's great to be back," Crandall says. "It's particularly nice to be with this ball club because it's a good club and it's a contender."

"But I enjoyed last year. A lot of people don't believe that but that's the honest truth. Things are a lot different down at that level but there's nothing wrong with it if you enjoy the game of baseball and I enjoy the game of baseball."

"Yes, I'd like to try to be a manager on the major league level again. But right now I want to coach and I want to do as good as I can for the Angels."

"In the beginning," he admits, "you have an emotional reaction to being fired. You not so sure it's directed so much toward baseball as it is toward that period of time when you lose your job."

"You know when you're hired that you're going to get fired some day. You know the people who run the ball club have the right to do whatever they're going to do. And you prepare yourself for the day it happens because there are signs."

"But when it happens, it's still a shock. Yes, I did look around to stay out of the game. But as time went by I realized the bad experiences shouldn't overshadow the good things that do happen to you."

At Salinas, Crandall piloted his team to a first-half championship in the California League and came within 100 percentage points of repeating during the second half.

After the acquisition of free agents Joe Rudi, Bobby Grich and Don Baylor for $5.2 million during the off-season, the Angels were installed as the team to beat in the American League manager Norm Sherry is expected to win with the expensive material owner Gene Autry and general manager Harry Dalton provided him.

Crandall was asked if Sherry considered him a threat.

"When you hear Norm talk," the Angels' first base coach replies, "he's just glad he got an opportunity to manage on a big league level."

"He's doing the same things he did as a minor league manager and he hasn't indicated at all to me that he's looking around for anything except to do his job. All he expects from his coaches is to do their jobs, too."

However, Crandall disclosed that he once looked for a manager in the big leagues who was playing for his splintered at heart.

"He gave every indication," he recalls, "that he thought I was a threat. I simply couldn't understand it because I was still a player."

"Two of my other managers, Alvin Dark and Harry Walker, did not view me that way at all. I really think that if you're a secure person inside that all these outside things don't really mean too much. You go about your job and do it the very best you can.

"Of course, if somebody is around backbiting and talking about you and the whole thing, he's not a good man to have on your ball club or on your coaching staff. As long as the manager is a secure person and he feels that the people he hired are doing their jobs, I don't think they should feel threatened by anybody."

"I think," he explains, "from year to year you're kind of a different manager because of the things that your ball club dictates to you that you have to change. I'm talking about either your own personality or your own approach."

"You don't change your basic personality but I think you can make certain adjustments. If your ball club demands that you change the way you operate, I think you have to do it."

"I'm not a hard-nosed guy. I'm not a tough guy by any stretch of the imagination. But when you have rules and you have things that you want done, I think your ball club should do it. If they don't, then you have to take whatever

BOB ROSSO, owner of the Elephant's Perch mountaineering shop in Ketchum and an avid climber himself, explains the use of a skyhook, a device designed to give a climber purchase without the use of pillows on minute ledges where free climbing is not possible.

This one works

Work's okay, but only after mountaineering

KETCHUM — Bob Rosso, owner of the Elephant's Perch mountaineering shop, could have been a very successful backpacking equipment retailer in Southern California, but he made one mistake. He spent way too much time in the mountains as a young boy.

All those summers in the Sierra Nevadas around Lake Tahoe perked Rosso's impressionable young consciousness with an unshakable love for the mountains and a commitment to quality mountaineering equipment which eventually led him to Ketchum and the Elephant's Perch.

In 1972 Rosso, 30, was in Newport Beach, Calif., managing the backpacking section of an outdoor equipment store. Business was booming, but Rosso found that more business meant less time in the mountains and less familiarity with the equipment he was selling.

So in the winter of 1971, Rosso chucked the scenic scene and moved to Ketchum for a winter of skiing. When he discovered the opportunities around Ketchum for skiing, climbing and kayaking, he decided to settle in.

He spent his first few years in Ketchum climbing throughout the Sawtooth, Boulder and Pioneer mountains. He had previously climbed extensively in the Sierra Nevadas, including ascents of the west buttress of El Capitan, the northwest face of Half Dome, and the Leaning Tower, three of Yosemite Valley's most towering walls. He also worked for Snug Mountaineering both in the shop and in the field, guiding and instructing other climbers.

Then in May, 1976, he opened his own shop, the Elephant's Perch. Rosso's addition to the high-mountain experience and to keeping that experience intact, both for himself and others, is clear in the way he operates his shop.

The product line Rosso stocks is purposely limited to gear that he and his employees have used successfully themselves. This approach satisfies Rosso's ethics ("I don't do it, and I'm not a believer in it, — I can't sell it"), and it gives him more chance to get out in the field, to test equipment, of course. "When I find some new gadget, I take it out in the field and try and tear it apart."

This also means that the people who work in the Elephant's Perch are intimately familiar with what they sell in a high-risk sport like climbing. This kind of sales expertise could save your life. "When people come in, they know we're just into quality gear, and they know the salesmen do it themselves (the sports shop specializes in backpacking, climbing and cross-country skiing)," Rosso said.

Rosso figures the more enjoyable the experience that people have in the mountains, the more likely they will be to respect the mountains with their people, come in, they know we're just into quality gear, and they know the salesmen do it themselves (the sports shop specializes in backpacking, climbing and cross-country skiing)," Rosso said.

mountains. Before you begin to think Rosso is the American equivalent of the monks of St. Bernard, remember his dedication to his customers is partially motivated by a desire to preserve the wild places for himself.

His approach to business also allows Rosso to put time into achieving his own personal goals in the sports he loves. Rosso for years a Southern California beach lifeguard, swims, runs, or hikes every day in the summer, and sometimes all three, in the winter it's cross-country skiing.

Rosso is working toward a first-place finish in the citizen class of this year's American Birkebeiner cross-country ski race in Telemark, Wis., perhaps America's most famous cross-country race, a 50 kilometer marathon patterned after his Norwegian ancestor. 2,500 skiers started last year's Birkebeiner, and Rosso came in third in the citizen class.

Rosso's style of business is calculated to preserve his style of life. He figures he'll stay happy that way, but he doesn't ignore making a lot of money. He also figures his priorities are just about where they should be.

Slowly, steadily, baseball disenchanting Texas owner

ARLINGTON, Tex. (UPI) — There is nothing about baseball these days that appeals to Brad Corbett.

He is sick and tired of ineptness on the field, he is weary of the criticism heaped upon him by the fans and the press and he is far from happy with the credit-debit ratio of the 1977 Texas Rangers.

For all these reasons, Corbett has decided he wants more to do with the sport. Anyone with $6 million who is willing to keep the Rangers in the Dallas-Fort Worth area can purchase Corbett's 60 per cent interest in the club.

But Corbett's decision to unload his part of the Rangers was not a decision he made overnight.

His distaste for baseball has been setting in for some time.

"The owners of other teams" have really disappointed me," Corbett said. "They are living in the dark ages."

"Everybody said we would win the Catfish Hunter court case and we lost it. Everybody said we would win the Andy Messersmith case and we lost it.

"There are owners who sit behind their desks like they are kings and the players are serfs. There are tyrants like (Oakland owner) Charlie Finley who treat their players like trash. It's owners like that who got us the reserve clause and Marvin Miller because they wouldn't get out and deal on a personal level with their players."

Corbett, in his first emotional outburst during which he announced he would sell the club, cited an editorial in a Fort Worth newspaper as being part of the reason for his decision.

The editorial said, in part: "Majority owner Brad Corbett and executive vice president Eddie Robinson have made the Rangers look more like a circus run amok than a major league baseball franchise."

Purina will study Blues' money plight

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Ralston Purina Co. said Tuesday it will investigate the "rather desperate situation" of the St. Louis Blues and consider rescue of the financially troubled National Hockey League franchise to keep it in St. Louis.

H. Hal Dean, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of the giant pet food and agricultural firm, confirmed that his company has begun studying the possible purchase of the team.

One potential buyer, a local hospital building and equipment firm, dropped out of the picture about 10 days ago and team officials said at that time that the future of the franchise looked bleak.

Among the obstacles to the sale are $25,000 in back taxes which the city is trying to recover in a lawsuit and several financial and contractual obligations to players no longer on the team's roster.

"The St. Louis Blues franchise is a positive civic asset for the St. Louis area," Dean said. "There is a responsibility to preserve and enhance our community assets, and we at Ralston Purina Co. traditionally recognize that we must share in this responsibility."

"There are many demands today upon all institutions in terms of civic and social responsibility. We do our best to measure and assess them."

Tupperware slates swim meet Thursday

JEROME — Some 14 teams will converge on the Tupperware swimming pool Thursday for the day-long Tupperware swimming invitational.

All teams from southern and southeastern Idaho plus Payette have been invited, reports meet director Jim Thackeray. Thackeray said warmups would begin at 7 a.m. with the meet beginning at 8 a.m.

"I expect it will go through the evening but we hope to be done as early as possible," he said.

Swimmers will be eligible to compete only in those events for which they have not qualified (through times) for the state finals. "It is a 'B' meet and we hope to have a lot of swimmers qualify for state during the day," Thackeray said.

Trophies will be awarded winning teams plus the high individual boy and girl point-winners by age classification.

Quax misses timetable by year but still sets mark

STOCKHOLM, (UPI) — It took Dick Quax, the 29-year-old 5,000 meters Olympic silver medal winner from New Zealand, one year longer than he'd hoped to set a world record.

Quax slashed Belgian Emile Puttemans' 1972 world record by one-tenth of a second Tuesday at the International Track and Field meet at Stockholm Olympic Stadium, a record he barely missed one year ago.

"I have really looked forward to this race. Last year I was one-tenth of a second from beating Puttemans' record and I have been thinking of this failure ever since," a relieved Quax said.

"I was indeed determined to make up for what I lost last year and I have to thank my fellow countryman Hod Dixon.

Karl Fleschen of West Germany and the wonderful crowd here that I managed to get my revenge," Quax said.

Quax was correct in thanking Dixon and Fleschen for the successful world record attempt. Dixon, fourth man in the Montreal 5,000 meters final last summer, paced Quax during the first 3,000 meters of the race, before abandoning it.

"This was according to our plans," Dixon said. "We had made plans beforehand for me to pace Quax to a good time at 3,000 meters and I think I just did it."

The intermediate time at 1,000 meters was 2:29.21, at 2,000 meters 5:18.42, and at 3,000 meters 7:55.98.

Quax went to the top at 3,000 meters but did not manage to keep up the record speed.

Fleschen, the 22-year-old West

German who missed his new world record by one-tenth of a second, surged into the lead to help Quax in his record effort.

The West German increased the speed and the 4,000 meter mark was passed in 10:38.92 — 3.3 seconds behind Puttemans' intermediate time in 1972.

Quax trailed the West German until two laps from the end, when he exploded. When the bell rang Quax had one minute left to beat the record, and he did it — by one-tenth of a second.

The 11,203 spectators gave the New Zealander a standing ovation when the loudspeaker announced the record.

"You can understand my feelings now. I feel on top of the world at the moment," Quax said.

"Asked if he could run even faster, he said:

"Yes I think I could better this record. The conditions were not perfect tonight. It was a bit too chilly, but the wonderful crowd warmed me."

Former world record holder Dwight Stones promised before the high jump competition to take back the record he lost two days ago to Vladimir Yashinskiy of the Soviet Union.

To the delight of the stadium spectators Stone said in Swedish, "I aim to jump 7-8', here tonight." But the talkative American failed. He won in 75' after three good tries at 77.

"I know I could get the record back if I trained properly and concentrated. In two weeks I would take the record back to whom it belongs."

PGA slates regionals

NEW YORK (UPI) — Deane R. Beman, Commissioner of the PGA tour, has announced the dates and sites of the Regional Qualifying Rounds and the Fall Qualifying School for approved tournament players.

Four regionals will be conducted concurrently October 18 to 21. The Western Regional will be held at Torrey Pines South, San Diego, Calif.; the Mid-South Regional at Timberland Country Club, Groton, La.; the Florida Regional at Barmore Country Club, Tampa; and the Mid-Atlantic Regional at International Town and Country Club, Fairfax, Va.

Qualifiers from the Regionals will compete in the School proper the week of November 9 at Pinehurst Country Club, Pinehurst, N.C.

Candidates for the school will first compete in Sectional Qualifying rounds in late September. The schedule has not yet been finalized.

Denver waives punter

DENVER (UPI) — Wide receiver-punter Billy Van Heusen, who earlier this year was one of several players urging the ouster of John Ralston as head coach of the Denver Broncos, has elected to become a free agent, a team spokesman said Tuesday.

The action was announced by Bronco General Manager Fred Gettrick. Gettrick said Van Heusen, a nine-year veteran with the Broncos, now was free to deal with any club in the National Football League.

The Maryland University graduate punter for a 35.3-yard average last year with Denver.

Van Heusen complained last month that he was losing his job because of his role in the player uprising. The player-incident led to the ouster of Ralston as Bronco coach and his being replaced by Red Miller.

Skidding Cubs drop third game to Expos

CHICAGO (UPI) —

Andre Dawson belted two home runs and batted in four runs Tuesday to lead the blinding Montreal Expos to their seventh straight victory in a 9-8 triumph over the Chicago Cubs.

The Expos have now scored 35 runs off Chicago pitching while sweeping the first three games of their four-game series.

The Cubs, losing for the seventh time in the last eight games, never managed to tie after the Expos grabbed a 5-1 lead in the first three innings. Two unearned runs came on Montreal's plus an error in the first and another pair on three singles and a walk in the second. Dawson hit his first home run of the game in the third. Dawson's 10th homer of the season came in the eighth after a walk to Tony Perez. Perez also had three hits and drove in two runs.

Foreman left ring to serve his faith

HAYWARD, Calif. (UPI) — Seeing George Foreman give up hopes of regaining the world heavyweight boxing championship doesn't sadden Dick Sadler.

Although the veteran trainer is positive he could guide Foreman to the top again, Sadler is more pleased with the one-time Olympic gold medal winner's decision to quit the ring in the name of Christianity.

"There's no doubt in my mind that George could easily be the heavyweight champion again," Sadler said recently while helping organize a group activity at a community youth center. "He has the talent and he has the ability."

"But I'm not really surprised at his decision and I think it is wonderful that he wants to serve the Lord. Please believe me when I say I'm proud of George Foreman and happy for him."

"It takes a great deal of courage to do what he did and I'm glad he has something like helping others in mind as he leaves boxing and starts in a new direction."

After a disappointing loss to Jimmy Young in May and prior to his retirement announcement a month ago, Foreman had persuaded Sadler to be his manager, again.

Under Sadler's careful tutelage, Foreman, who paraded around the Mexico City ring after winning the gold medal waving an American flag in the strifeorn 1968 Olympics, rose from a clumsy plodder to world champion within three years.

But after being dethroned by Muhammad Ali three years ago, Sadler was unceremoniously dismissed.

"I guess you could say I'm not glad he's quitting the ring because he is — at least, in my opinion — the heavyweight champion of the world. But I am glad he's quitting the ring because of his new goal of dedicating his life to Christianity and helping others. That part I'm happy for him. He can't do both — fight and serve the Lord. It has to be one or the other."

"We need more people like George. He's made his mark in the world. He's accomplished his goals in life. There are no other areas for George Foreman to conquer. Now, he wants to go where there's a need and his need in this world is in helping the less fortunate. For George Foreman, my thoughts are 'A man makes his own.' Believe me, I'm quite pleased."

In announcing his retirement to a Texas audience, the 28-year-old Foreman said "I go where God leads me ... I have found the truth ... I am like a little child ... I just want to go around the country, telling people what happened to me so it could happen to them."

"George now has set his goals and found new priorities," said Sadler, who, because of a series of recent heart attacks would have served only in an advisory capacity to Foreman. "He's dedicating himself, his talents and energy to Christianity."

"It's the best way, too, because I always taught my fighters you have to be totally dedicated to succeed. There's no halfway. He's turning his life in a new direction and, as I said earlier, I'm very proud of him."

"My mother never really wanted me to fight," said Foreman when he quit. "She was always worried and nervous when I was in the ring, about my 'losing' or 'getting hurt.'"

"And thanks to God, she will not have to worry about it anymore because I'm not fighting anymore."

After winning the 1968 Olympic title, Foreman ran up 37 consecutive professional victories which included an astounding 34 by knockouts. Then, in 1973, Foreman demolished Joe Frazier in two rounds to win the heavyweight title.

He made only two successful defenses — quick knockouts over Joe "King" Roman and Ken Norton — before being kayoed for the first time in his career by Ali. Since losing the title, Foreman scored four more wins before dropping the decision to Young last March.

Cattle, grains losers

CHICAGO — Cattle futures broke sharply Tuesday while corn soared. Limit gains were sagged and soybeans suffered heavy losses.
 Commodity News Service said Maine potatoes settled 16 to 32 cents lower. November lifting a life of contract low at 1.85 and July finished off 32 cents at 7.94 per hundredweight. Most of the losses were on hedge selling in response to good growing conditions in most fall production area. Volume was 2,333 trades, with over 2,000 in May.

Live cattle broke 1.00 from early highs, closing mixed, from down 42 cents cwt. in October, to up 12 in January. Feeder cattle closed at or near the day's lows, off 70 to 35 points after day-long liquidation.
 Live hogs closed mixed, near the day's lows, after a stronger opening. Heavy profit taking pressure left July and 1978 contracts 20 to 30 points lower with other months up 5 to 30 points. Frozen pork bellies settled near the day's lows after liquidation pressure, early near limit gains back to advances of 22 to 100 points.
 Erratic harvest pressure combined with hedge selling in the last minutes to knock wheat 6 to 2 1/2 cents lower. Corn closed 2 to 3 cents higher. July registered limit gains during the session. Short covering was apparent all day. Additional limit losses were sustained in the soybean complex, where July 1978 beans lost 23 1/2 cents, and some deferred months came back from those heavy losses with stimulus from corn. Meal settlements ranged from 10.00 down for August to 1.00 down in deferred May. Nearby July closed 2.80 with covering support of settling speculative contracts moved limit down although local short covering in July allowed a close 6 points higher.

New York Sugar JJ closed with sharp losses of 16 to 45 points, reflecting continued weakness. September closed at 7.50 cents a pound, off 45 points.
 International Monetary Market gold was depressed by commercial and arbitrage selling, losing 120 to 150 points on heavy volume placed at 2,889 contracts.

Slaughter produces

BOISE (UPI) — Livestock slaughter produced a record volume 164.4 million pounds of red meat in Idaho during the month of May, the Idaho Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said today.
 That was 11 per cent more than the previous record set in 1974, the reporting service said. The report said the large slaughter was due to a record 29.8 million pounds of beef butchered during the month.
 The 50,000-cattle slaughtered during May was 33 per cent greater than the previous year. But call slaughter, at 100 head, was the same as last year. Hog slaughter for May at 6,500 head was at the same as last year while sheep slaughter totaled 50 head.

Cane agency scores plan

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — The American Sugar Cane League dislikes President Carter's proposal for a two-cent sugar subsidy.
 The league, representing sugar farmers and processors, said the program is inadequate since sugar mills will get no part of the subsidy payments. It said mills may be forced to shut down unless they receive help.
 The league recommended import quotas as the means to raise sugar prices to a suitable level.

Silver

NEW YORK (UPI) — Handy and Harman Tuesday quoted silver at $4.95 per fine ounce down 2 cents.
 Engelhard quoted a silver base price of $4.355 down 2.0 cents and a price for fabricated silver of $4.955 down 2.0 cents.
