Minimum pay $800

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The minimum wage has risen to more than $800 — for television actors.

The Screen Actors Guild and the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists Wednesday announced a new three-year contract has been worked out with the three major television networks and the Association of Motion Picture and Television Producers.

The wage scales apply to lesser roles. Stars and prominent supporting players negotiate their own higher salaries.

Minimum pay for appearing in a 30-minute series segment rose from $604 to $842, for a one hour program from $725 to $943, and for a 90-minute installment, from $966 to $1,256.

Death bomb tests in Nevada

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — The controversial neutron bomb has already been exploded under the Nevada desert, according to sources close to the U.S. nuclear weapons testing program.

At least one neutron bomb has been detonated at the Nevada Test Site 70 miles north of Las Vegas, the sources confirmed late Wednesday. "The neutron bomb has been tested at the Nevada Test site, and probably within the past year," one expert familiar with the program said.

He declined to say whether there had been more than one test, or how long testing of the bomb has been under way.

— A spokesman for the Energy Research and Development Administration indicated that tests may have been carried out but would not explicitly say so.

"The Lance enhanced radiation warhead is under development now," he said. "Nuclear weapons are tested in the development stage before they go into production."

The spokesman would not say whether this meant that the neutron warhead had actually been tested or that it would be.

"I can't go any further," he said.

The Pentagon had no immediate comment on the story.

The White House said Wednesday President Carter plans to decide in mid-August whether to go ahead with production of the radiation warhead, center of a dispute in Congress.

A dozen or more nuclear warheads a year are exploded at the test site, and the explosions have become almost routine in the lightly populated desert area, where residents feel nuclear shock waves ripple through the earth like an earthquake several times a year.

Las Vegas is the only stable city in the area. Plans for most such tests are publicly announced days in advance, and publicly confirmed after the explosion.

Since a treaty with Russia outlawed tests in the atmosphere many years ago, all U.S. nuclear tests have been conducted deep underground, where the neutron bomb's lethal burst of radiation would be contained by thousands of feet of earth.

The Energy Research and Development Administration, which took over the activities of the defunct Atomic Energy Commission, has reported after all recent blasts that no radiation escaped into the atmosphere.

An ERDA spokesman would neither confirm nor deny the report that the neutron weapon had been tested.

"If any nuclear weapon is tested by the United States it is tested at the Test Site," he said. "I cannot confirm or deny the test of any (specific) weapon."

INJURED PRISONER RETURNED TO DANBURY CELL ON STRETCHER
... one of 62 hurt when fire breaks out in federal institution today

Prison fire kills 5 inmates

DANBURY, Conn. (UPI) — Fast spreading flames and thick smoke early today trapped screaming inmates in a locked cell block at the Federal Correctional Institute. Five prisoners were killed and 62 others injured.

Inmates joined police and firemen to rescue an estimated 80 prisoners trapped in the cell block, located on the second floor of the minimum-security prison, in a rural area of Danbury.

A spokeswoman for Danbury Hospital said the cause of death was smoke inhalation.

The injured included a prison guard and a fireman. A policeman who arrived with firemen at the prison about 1:30 a. m. said he was told the blaze was set. Fire officials said later, however, the cause of the fire in cell block G was undetermined, although they suspect it started in a washroom area.

Danbury Fire Capt. Antonio Lagarto said "there was talk of the fire being set but we don't know that for a fact."

Some inmates complained prison officials did not act fast enough in opening the cell block area and were more concerned with security problems. They said a woman security officer ignored orders from a superior and opened a door to the compound to help free the trapped men.

"The Fire Department tells me the fire was set," said Police Sgt. Robert Lovell, one of the first at the scene.

"You could hear people screaming to get them out," he said. "There were open flames showing at the rear of the building. There was yelling and screaming when we got there. At least 18 people were trapped in their cell block area."

Lovell said firefighters had to enter a center courtyard by a side entrance and had difficulty getting inside because the steel gate was locked.

"We had a hell of a problem getting fire apparatus to the fire itself," he said. "It seemed to me to take about three hours to get into the fire, but it probably took five minutes."

Fire Capt. Lagarto said the heaviest concentration of fire appeared to have come from a washroom area. He said the heavy smoke may have been caused by burning insulation and other materials. He said the bedding in the dormitory was not near the center of the fire.

A fire flared up again in the area about 6:30 a. m. and firemen still on the scene quelled the flames.

State police called on to provide additional security conducted a search of the area to determine if anyone escaped during the fire but apparently all of the more than 800 inmates were accounted for.

Former inmates at the prison in recent years have included Watergate burglar G. Gordon Liddy and hoaxer Clifford Irving who served time there as a result of a fraud conviction stemming from his counterfeit biography of Howard Hughes.

Irving since has been paroled, and Liddy, 46, was moved several months ago to the Federal Prison Camp at Allenwood, Pa.

Live court coverage proposed

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN
Times-News writer

SUN VALLEY — Idaho Supreme Court Chief Justice Joseph J. McFadden dropped a series of bombshells today at an Idaho Bar Association convention.

In a State of the Judiciary Message at the joint annual meeting of the Idaho and Utah state bar associations, McFadden:

— Said "litigation explosion," in which case filings in Idaho trial courts have more than doubled since 1971, is putting strain on the Idaho trial courts and the Supreme Court.

— Called for the state Supreme Court to consider opening the courts to photographers and live radio and television broadcasting.

— Said he will ask that the Bench-Bar Press Advisory Committee be reactivated in Idaho.

— Pointed out Idaho judges are now ranked 49th in the nation in judicial salaries, and predicted if salary increases are not forthcoming in the 1978 legislature, Idaho judges will be the lowest paid in the nation.

Although McFadden said there was much good news in the state of Idaho's judiciary in 1977, he admitted the bad news "somewhat outshadows the good items."

The litigation explosion in Idaho, coupled with the fact that litigation is becoming more complex, is making it more difficult to promptly dispose of cases, he said in Sun Valley.

McFadden said not only are case loads in trial courts rising but the percentage of cases which are appealed to the supreme court also has doubled.

Last year, Idaho saw a 21 per cent increase in the backlog of pending appeal before the high court, he said.

When McFadden suggested the supreme court allow media coverage of its proceedings, he acknowledged it was controversial suggestion.

"Most of our state's citizens have no direct contact with the courts and thus are unfamiliar with and even suspicious of the judicial process and the legal community," the chief justice said.

"There is a need to open judicial proceedings to the public and provide heightened awareness of legal rights and responsibilities. Television drama movies and government scandals involving lawyers are not the best conveyors of understanding about the courts and the legal community."

However, McFadden stopped short of recommending such open coverage policies in the trial courts or in bar discipline matters until further study can be made.

Aspirin labels under fire

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Scientists reviewing the $720 million worth of non-prescription pain relievers taken by American every year said today aspirin should not be labeled for the treatment of arthritis.

The scientists, according to a report released by the Food and Drug Administration, said aspirin does relieve pain and inflammation caused by arthritis. But they said labels on such products, should not say so because it could cause persons to incorrectly self-diagnose their illnesses.

The group also said warnings should be placed on aspirin labels telling women not to take the medicine during the last three months of pregnancy. They also recommended more specific and graduated dosage instruction for children.

The panel, which since 1972 has been studying aspirin and acetaminophen, the two prime pain and fever relievers, said both are safe and effective for temporary relief of minor aches and pains and for reducing fever."

There is at least one product on the market, "Arthritis Pain Formula," which might have to change its name if that recommendation is adopted.

"Consumers who self-treat with an over-the-counter pain reliever for these diseases, without first seeking medical attention, may be risking irreversible damage to joints and other tissues," the report said.

Dr. J. Weldon Bellville, chairman of the panel, said the group recognized that the stand on arthritis claims "will generate a lot of comment" but "the physician must make the diagnosis. The consumer cannot and harms himself in doing so."

The panel also recommended that one ingredient — plicinacin — be made available for prescription use only because chronic use of it can cause kidney damage. It is one of the ingredients in the "APC" tablets which the FDA said "at one time were popular but which are no longer widely sold."

In addition, the panel questioned the value of caffeine in combination with aspirin. Caffeine was listed in the report as an ingredient in several products, including Excedrin, Vanquish, Cope, Anacin and Bromo Seltzer.

The report also said that some advertising for products with acetaminophen "gives the impression that it is much safer than aspirin . . . but there is no basis for this claim." One product which contains acetaminophen as its main ingredient is Tylenol.

The pregnancy warning is necessary in aspirin products, the panel said, because the medicine can prolong labor and change the bleeding and clotting time of both the mother and her baby.

Dr. Donald Kennedy, FDA commissioner, predicted the "report will lead to more explicit labeling and essential new warnings that will make it easier for consumers to select a product to relieve pain and fever, and to use that product safely and effectively without physician supervision."

Air study tower rising

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

DIETRICH — Construction has begun at the Sid Crossing site of a meteorological tower to gather weather data to help determine where Idaho Power Co. should place its proposed 500 megawatt combined generating plant.

The site, 23 miles east of Shoshone near State Highway 24, is one of three suggested by Idaho Power in an application filed June 17 with the Idaho Public Utilities Commission (IPUC) for construction of the plant.

The electric utility currently is seeking a permit from the Bureau of Land Management to construct a similar tower north of Bliss, another of the proposed plant sites, and eventually one at the American Falls site.

Footings for the 100-foot structure will be poured this week. Don Brown, Boise public relations official for the firm, said Wednesday. By Wednesday afternoon several holes had been dug on land farmed by Morris Newbold and owned by R. Tom Church, Burley.

Brown said the tower will have strobe warning lights and will be painted red and white for visibility.

It will be equipped with two sets of recording instruments which will store data on wind speed and direction, temperatures, relative humidity, precipitation and evaporation rates for a period of about a year.

One set will be at the top of the tower, Brown said.

Raft River Co-op granted water OK

BOISE (UPI) — The Raft River Rural Electric Co-op of Malla has received a permit from the State Department of Water Resources for Snake River water it wants for power generation.

The cooperative wants to build a dam between 40 and 50 feet high and about 2,000 feet wide at Eagle Rock to generate 50 megawatts of electricity. The water — 11,122 cubic feet per second — would be used solely for power generation.

In granting the permit, the department said it felt there was sufficient water — especially since it is for a nonconsumptive use.

Although the cooperative has a permit from the state it still needs approval of the Federal Power Commission and possibly from the State Land Department. It also must build the dam according to safety standards of the Water Resources Department.

Raft River filed March 3 for a preliminary permit. A spokesman for the FPC said action on the application could take as long as six months and even then there is no guarantee the FPC will authorize construction.

"A preliminary permit does not authorize any construction," James Stout, chief of the Licensed Projects Division, said. "It's simply issued for a maximum term of three years."

He said the preliminary permit does, however, give the applicants priority for development of that particular site and that no one can take it away from them. Applicants generally use the three-year period to make engineering and environmental studies and check out the feasibility of their project, he said.

Idaho

Cassia ground water use applications being taken

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Department of Water Resources said today it will accept applications immediately for well drilling and groundwater use in the Yost, Almo, Elba and upper Raft River sub-basins.

"The reopened areas are located west of the township-line dividing ranges 25 east and 25 east Boise Meridian," the department director Stephen

Alfred said, adding, "Applications will be accepted immediately by the department but assigned a priority date when the opening is effective as of 8 a.m. July 22."

Groundwater development will be monitored "so water users do not exceed the local supply in those individual sub-basins," Alfred said.

"The department has denied new development in the critical area since 1963 to protect water users then who felt more pumping of groundwater would endanger their supply," he said.

The director reported that the testimony in May indicated local support is unanimous for reopening the sub-basins to further pumping.

"However if prior rights of other water users are affected in the future, including endangering prior rights of those in the lower valley of the Raft River, restrictive action could be taken to prevent pumping the reserves," Alfred said.

Applications still are not allowed in the main Raft River Valley to the east which "remains the critical area," he warned.

The remaining closed area boundaries could possibly be modified "if local water users would join in forming a valley water users management group that would have authority to operate the large wells jointly."

"Such a management operation could tend to lessen declines over the whole valley," the director said, adding that the department would assist in forming the necessary organization.

Idaho court reverses commission

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Supreme Court reversed a ruling Wednesday made by the State Industrial Commission which denied a request for workmen's compensation because it did not consider an application for hearing a request for compensation.

"It is difficult to imagine a writing more clearly intended as a demand for compensation than an application to a hearing on the question of compensation," the court said in an unanimous opinion.

The case concerned Kenneth Hattenberg, an injured employee, who filed an application for a hearing within the prescribed one-year period but not make a claim for compensation. As a result, the commission "dismissed" the application for benefits.

Public works projects face tough future road

MOSCOW, Idaho (UPI) — Bureau of Reclamation Commissioner R. Keith Higginson warned a conference of engineers that because of the new administration and past performance records of a few public works projects, future projects face a hard road ahead.

Higginson, former Idaho Department of Water Resources Director, spoke in the opening session of the American Society of Civil Engineers Conference at the University of Idaho.

The reclamation chief said the president's concern for balancing the federal budget by 1980 means he has mandated a thorough review of all public works projects with an eye to cutting those which have not been developed or administered in the public interest.

"At the present time those who benefit from public works projects such as flood control do not pay for their protection," he said. "If local beneficiaries are willing to share that cost in the future, then such projects can continue."

Higginson said three reasons could be given for the changes: the Teton Dam disaster, which brought into question the safety of such projects; the drought, which brought into question the need for any water projects — which are rendered useless in a drought; and the new administration "which is dedicated to reviewing all public projects to determine if they are in the public interest."

Regarding the Teton Dam disaster, Higginson seemed tired of discussing it.

"I don't know of any other man-made failure so thoroughly investigated. At some point we have to stop conducting the autopsy, sew the carcass back together and get on with the job."

He defended water projects in spite of the drought, noting that if the Boise Valley did not have three reservoirs, the water supply there would be 25-30 per cent of normal instead of 50-60 per cent of normal this drought year.

HANSEN — Hansen residents are being asked by Mayor Galen Stimpson and the city council to help plan sewage treatment facilities in their community.

The city's present lagoon system was built in 1970 for a community of 415 people and included a growth factor to adequately serve 600 persons. Today Hansen has a population of about 1,000.

Hansen officials have received a federal grant of about $12,000 for use in making a study of needs and solutions to the problem.

Mayor Stimpson said the city wants to inform residents of the pending expansion of the system and to obtain all views and comments from residents of the committee so these may be given full consideration during the planning process.

He urged residents to consider all social, economic and environmental factors and make their views known to the council. The council meets the second Monday of each month and residents are urged to attend these meetings or to contact the city by letter, P.O. Box 112, Hansen 83334.

The next meeting of the council is Monday night.

Stimpson said the city will be studying a number of treatment alternatives such as regional treatment, modifying the present lagoons, a package treatment plant, land application and total containment.

City Engineer Gary Marshall said when studies on these alternatives are complete, information on each will be available at the city hall for public review.

"We will advertise a public hearing in four to six months to obtain additional public comment to assist us in selecting the treatment alternative that will be proposed for construction," Stimpson said.

He urged residents to make comments in writing concerning the social, economic, environmental impacts of the project within 30 days so the views of the community can be used in preparing information on alternative plans for improving the system.

Marshall said the city of Hansen, because of sudden growth, has been exceeding its discharge limits set by the state and the Environmental Protection Agency.

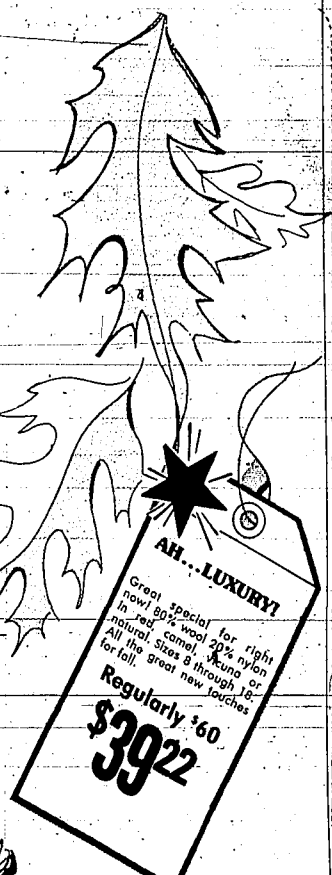

He said the present system functions properly and is satisfactory as to the purpose and capacity for which it was built.

Lawyer advertising an overdue service

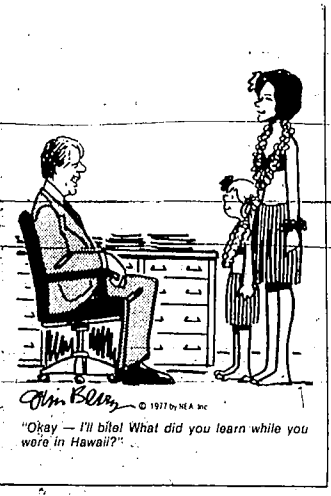

And the Lord said, "Woe unto you also, ye lawyers! For ye lade men with burdens grievous to be borne, and yet yourselves touch not the burdens unto of one of your fingers!" (Luke xi: 46)
To hear some lawyers tell it, you'd think it was Judgment Day, and the wrath of God had been visited upon them in the 5-4 Supreme Court decision last week that permits advertising of attorneys' fees for certain services such as writing wills and handling uncontested divorces.

The American public, however, — especially the middle-income group — should regard the high court's ruling as a blessing. In a society of increasingly expensive law firms and expanding free legal-aid programs, people of average means often find themselves going without legal counsel.
An American Bar Association study quoted in the court's decision said: "The middle 70 per cent of our population is not being reached or served adequately by the legal profession."
Nonetheless, the 200,000-member A.B.A. is on record in opposition to the court's position. Delegates to an A.B.A. convention last year did vote to allow limited advertising of legal fees and specialties, but only in bar-association directories and telephone books, not in more widely available consumer publications.

ATHENS—Greece is quietly tightening its links with NATO without waiting for agreement with Turkey over Cyprus and other issues.
Prime Minister Constantine Karamanlis hopes for agreement this summer for a special military relationship with the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.
Greece walked out of NATO's integrated military command in August, 1974, to protest the alliance's failure to roll back Turkey's occupation of 40 per cent of Cyprus.
Greek military officers were withdrawn from NATO commands at Ismir, Turkey, where they had reported through Turkey to NATO commanders in Italy and Belgium.
NATO officials are studying Greek proposals to restore the command links, skipping Turkey and going straight to Naples.

NEW YORK — When Menahem Begin surprisedly won election in Israel last month, the American Jewish community registered stunned disbelief. When he visits Washington, Begin will find a deep measure of support among the rank and file of Israel's supporters.

January, February and March. The legislature convened on Jan. 10, and adjourned sine die March 21. The itemization required by the reports shows the single largest chunk of this money went into the category marked "entertainment, food and refreshment."
Office expenses totaled just over $44,000 while travel, advertising, living accommodations, telephone and "other" expenses were all less than $40,000 each.
It should be noted that under Idaho's Sunshine Law, lobbyists are required to list the names of legislators they feed only if the total price of the dinner exceeds $50. For dinners costing less than this, the cost of the meal — not the names of any politicians eating — need be listed. The total of 1,292 free dinners is compiled from those names listed only for the more expensive meals. There is no way of determining how many dinners were not recorded.

Lobbyists have for years operated as an unofficial arm of government. They provide detailed information frequently unavailable to legislators. Their expertise often prevents shoddy legislation from being enacted. More than once the quick eye of a veteran lobbyist has detected a fatal flaw in a pre-filed bill. The information offered by the best lobbyist is often accepted at face value, for legislators realize most lobbyists hold themselves to high standards of professional ethics.
Yet there is increasing scepticism toward the practice of lobbyist wine and dine legislators. Some spies have now placed stringent limitations on what lobbyists may spend in this category. The "third house" of the legislature, as lobbyists are wont to call themselves, is increasingly being asked to provide information without indigestion — facts without food. The lobbyist role of advocating a definite position by presenting information. It is now argued by many, should not also require the care and feeding of lawmakers.

Part of this attitude stems from the suspicion free diners may lead to the compromising of a legislator. More important than this rather slight possibility, however, is the realization legislators are granted a salary for day to day sustenance.

An Idaho lawmaker who is forced to maintain a second home during the session receives $40 a day for "board, necessary committee expenses and the necessary expenses of maintaining the office of a legislator." A legislator who commutes to and from the chambers receives travel expenses plus $30 a day.

When not in session or on official business, legislators receive $5 a day.

Idaho legislators this year took full advantage of the ever present lobbyist free lunch. Senators averaged just under 14 free meals each during the 10-week session, while Representatives averaged about 12.
In the Senate, Pocatello Democrat Bob Kinglinton topped the best-fed list, with a recorded 25 free meals. J. Wilson Steen, R-Glenns Ferry, ate his way to second place consuming 22 free meals in 71 days. Third place of the best fed list went to Art Murphy, D-Idaho Falls, who tallied 21 meals.

In the House of Representatives another Pocatello Democrat claimed first place on the unclean list — House Minority Leader

Patricia McDermott. The outspoken legislator was treated to 22 meals. But Republican Elaine Keams of Idaho Falls was right on her heels with a grand total of 20 dinners. Marion Davidson, D-Bonners Ferry, made third place with his 19 meals.

Magic Valley legislators were apparently dining during the session; at least few placed among the best fed finalists. For the record, here's a list of area lawmakers and the number of free dinners each received:

John J. Gock (Bell, R-Rupert — 9), Steve Antone, R-Rupert — 14, Mack Wm. Neibaur, R-Paul — 6, DISTRICT 22 (Camas, Elmore, Gooding and Twin Falls Counties):

US Jewish groups support Begin partially the result of a highly structured "information" campaign.

It has moved to the offensive in the past few weeks, diverting attention to the White House and President Carter's statements on the Middle East. Jewish leaders are now concentrating on persuading the administration to avoid a confrontation with Begin's new government.
After a recent all-day closed meeting of the Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations, the word being passed was that "a strong Israel" is essential for American strategic interests.
That has long been Israel's argument, but as several of the leaders said later in separate but similar interviews, "We are fearful that the White House is formulating blueprints, not just concepts, for a Middle East settlement.
This was coupled with an oblique political threat, "We feel there is no need for confrontation," said Schneider, the chairman of the conference, "but we have made it very clear that the White House could find an aroused American Jewish community if it established preconditions for negotiation."

The remodeling of public opinion began several days after the election when organization leaders, astonished by the results, were further distressed by news accounts of Begin's background. Shmuel Katz, a personal emissary of Begin, said that "he was depicted as a wild-eyed, wild-haired fanatic with horns, who was about to declare war on the world."
The first response to counter these impressions, and it was generally uncoordinated at the beginning, was to concentrate on what Begin shared politically and philosophically with previous labor government.
Josef Benhararon, the deputy consul general in New York, said, "We concentrated on the basics of the Arab-Israeli conflict."
Israeli and Jewish officials here began to note that a Labor-dominated Knesset had passed the law after the 1967 war enabling Israel to incorporate any of the occupied territories, an observation intended to narrow the apparent differences between Labor and Likud.

Officials who had been close to the right-wing leader found audiences for their stories. One described him as a man with a relatively small but intensely loyal following, "like a Hasidic rabbi with his court," one Zionist leader said.
The image of Menahem Begin also took new shape in Jewish publications. The June 12 issue of Jewish Week, which has a wide readership, contained "Glimpses of Begin," which portrayed him as folksy, wise and president.
The American Israel Public Affairs Committee, a small but effective domestic lobby in Washington, also swung into action, producing a memorandum on Begin "explaining him to our lay leadership and to the press," a spokesman said.
"We had to deal with three or four myths," the spokesman said.
"that Begin was a terrorist, that he ordered the massacre of civilians, that he ordered the blowing up of the King David Hotel" during the British mandate period. The corrections often consisted of either refutation, modification or explanation.

Envoy studies China's peace strategy

By CLARE HOLLINGWORTH
London Telegraph
LONDON Foreign visitors to Peking are frequently shocked at first by the Communist jargon used by their hosts, who claim in almost every official toast that the peoples of the world want "revolution."
But after a time the Chinese Marxist-Leninist line melts into the focking scene and only when they hear boasts proposed to "world revolution" by former Red Guard leaders do foreign visitors begin to feel embarrassed.
It is therefore both useful and salutary that a distinguished Chinese scholar with a wealth of experience as a senior diplomat in Eastern Asia should tackle the problem of what is the real "peace-time strategy of the Chinese Peoples Republic."

Dennis Duncanson has produced an interesting and easy to read study on the subject for the Institute for the Study of Conflict which is published today (Thursday).
The author has made an attempt to discover whether Chinese leaders really plan to work toward true Communism in a world in which money does not exist and each person enjoys food, housing, medical attention, books and recreations "according to his needs."

In other words, whether the Red Guards and other extremists during the Cultural Revolution represented not only the then current thoughts of Chairman Mao Tse-tung but the basic long-term Chinese government strategy as opposed to the policies advocated by the late Premier Chou. En-lai—who wanted to march from "Socialism toward Communism" to cause the minimum of suffering and national and international disaffection.
Chairman Mao believed in recurring political upheavals to get rid of entrenched bureaucrats and his political enemies and to move toward the left in order not to revert slowly and inconsciously to traditional ways of political thinking.

Moderation prevailed after the Cultural Revolution, thanks largely to Premier Chou, until after his death in January, 1976. Then the aging chairman was subjected to intense pressure to support radical views by the "Gang of Four" who were led by his wife Chiang Ching-Chen.
Duncanson concludes that it is tempting to identify the tactics of post-Cultural Revolution China as less extremist than Mao's tactics at the height of the cold war.
But there is no evidence of a change in Communist Party strategy.

DETROIT CITY WORKERS PICKET but they are back at work today.

DETROIT (UPI) — June was a record month in all respects for Detroit and foreign automakers as Americans in a buying mood pushed new car sales above the 1 million mark for a fourth straight month.

Pointing out the strengthening U.S. economy, Americans bought 4.8 million new cars in the first six months of 1977. Industry executives are predicting the year will go down as the second best ever, just missing the 11.4 million cars sold in 1973.

Figures released Wednesday showed combined sales of 1,115,870 cars in June, up by nearly 17 per cent from the 955,000 cars sold in June 1976, when the industry was beginning to recover from a two-year slump.

General Motors, with sales of 530,949 in June, recorded its best single month in history, and the four U.S. automakers recorded their first monthly sales record since September, 1973 — the month before the start of the Arab oil embargo. They sold 919,142 cars, up 11 per cent from a year ago.

GM jumped 17 per cent and Ford 1 per cent, while Chrysler slipped 0.5 per cent and American Motors, 2.5 per cent.

imports, mostly the small economy models, grabbed a record 196,728 sales, up 56 per cent from last June to take 17.6 per cent of total sales. It was the fourth straight monthly sales mark for the imports.

Analysts said the strong sales for four straight months were the result of a combination of factors, including the promise of higher prices on the 1978 models this fall.

"First off, the economy is rebounding and consumer confidence is high," one Detroit analyst said. "Besides that, there is the strong push for fuel economy that is really boosting the imports as well as the smaller American products."

"There still is that near-record demand for the big cars because all people hear is that there won't be any large cars in another couple of years," he said. "That's what's bringing all those people who haven't bought a car since 1972 or 1973 into the market now."

Sales of 5.0 million domestic and imported cars in the first six months of the year were up 12 per cent from the 5.2 million cars sold in the first half of 1976. But they did not equal the record 6.2 million pace in the January-June period in 1973, when the industry was headed for its best year ever.

Price order under fire

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — A co-owner of the Trans-Alaska Pipeline has told a federal court the Interstate Commerce Commission lacked authority to order an average 1.9 per cent reduction in rates charged to pump crude oil from North Slope oilfields.

Mobil Alaska Pipeline Co., a 5 per cent owner of the pipeline, Wednesday filed a petition with the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals asking the June 23 ICC ruling be overturned.

The ICC reduced rates for seven of the eight owners for the first crude to flow through the 800-mile pipe line. The reductions averaged 1 from 16.5 per cent for BP Pipeline Inc. to 24.7 per cent for Amerasia Hess Pipeline Corp. Mobil's rate was reduced by 23 per cent.

Mobil said the ICC illegally suspended comparable rates without a full evidentiary hearing. Mobil's petition said the ICC could suspend rate changes for existing pipelines in that manner, but lacked authority to suspend rates for a new facility without hearing evidence.

The ICC suspended the rates, and ordered temporary reduced rates, for a period of up to seven months so an investigation of the charges could be conducted.

Mobil asked the 5th Circuit to immediately slash the ICC's rate structure on a temporary basis until the court can consider the request to permanently nullify the ICC order.

The company said environmental precautions and special problems due to the cold climate around the pipeline required factors to be considered that had never been dealt with in rate structures for other pipelines.

Four parties objected to the ICC about the tariffs proposed by the owners. They were the state of Alaska, the Arctic Slope Regional Corp., the Justice Department and the ICC. Each party said the tariffs were unlawfully high.

Mobil contends its only alternatives are to delay the flow of crude through the pipeline or lose 23 per cent of the revenues it needs during the investigation period. Mobil estimates it would lose between $44,100 and $88,200 a day if it ceases its share of the operation for seven months.

Other owners of the line are Arco Pipeline Co., Exxon Pipeline Co., Phillips Alaska Pipeline Corp., Sohio Pipeline Co. and Union Alaska Pipeline Co. The ICC has not ruled on Phillips proposed rates.

New missiles asked

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Paul Nitze, former strategic arms limitation negotiator, says the United States should deploy a new generation of ballistic missiles to fill the gap left by President Carter's decision to scrap the B1 bomber.

Criticizing Carter's decision at a Wednesday news conference, Nitze advocated use of the MX missile, which could be deployable in the late 1980s.

But even with it, he said, "I believe it will be hard to maintain — essentially it strategic equivalence with the Soviet Union without the B1."

The B1, said Nitze, would put the United States "in a more flexible situation in which you can respond to developments as they arise."

"With the B1 excluded now, it's very hard to see how you can put together a defense program that will assure rough equivalence and assure crisis stability without the MX missile," he said.

Nitze is a former high-level defense official in the Johnson administration who was a Nixon administration negotiator in U.S.-Soviet SALT negotiations.

Strike ends in Detroit

DETROIT (UPI) — A tentative agreement was reached early today between negotiators for the city of Detroit and its municipal employees.

The agreement on a new three-year contract ends the largest municipal workers' strike in the city's history.

"Our bargaining team voted unanimously to recommend ratification," said Lloyd Simpson, director of Council 77 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, which represented the strikers.

"We feel we have reached a settlement that is fair to both city employees and Detroit taxpayers."

The tentative agreement came between 1 a.m. and 2 a.m. (EDT) following a marathon bargaining session, a union spokesman said.

The strike, which began early Wednesday when the old pact expired, took most city officials by surprise. It left an estimated 180,000 bus riders without transportation and garbage piling up in 100-degree heat.

Simpson ordered the 8,000 workers to return immediately to work, pending full membership ratification of the agreement. Ratification sessions will "take place as soon as possible," the union said.

"The agreement retained the cost of living allowance increase as well as health coverage and sick leave provisions in the union's previous pact with the city," the union said.

Wage increases were believed to be about 4 per cent per year over the three-year life of the pact, according to one source.

Friends defending environmental agency

NEW YORK (UPI) — Environmental groups are rallying to defend the Council on Environmental Quality in the face of a recommendation by President Carter's reorganization advisory group that the White House agency be eliminated or stripped of its most important functions.

The environmentalists argue that without a strong council inside the Executive Office of the President, the federal departments would go their own way on environmental policy matters and there would be no effective oversight or long range planning on environmental policy.

The Reorganization Project, an advisory group known in the White House, prepared three "recommended options" for the President, any of which would either abolish or reduce the council. The options, prepared under the direction of W. Harrison Wolford, an executive associate director of the Office of Management and Budget were sent to Carter.

The President will meet with his reorganization team today to discuss environmental matters. Carter has not made a decision yet, and an aide said he still might decide to keep or even beef up the White House unit, which is an option that will be presented without a recommendation.

New primary joins slate

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Gov. Ella T. Grasso Wednesday signed legislation creating a Connecticut presidential primary on the first Tuesday in March, a day Connecticut will share with several other New England states.

New Hampshire would still have the nation's first primary in February.

Massachusetts and Vermont already hold primaries then, and efforts are also underway in Rhode Island and Maine to change their balloting to that date.

Traditionally, the earliest primaries have featured widespread grass roots campaigning by candidates, which has never occurred in Connecticut because the state picked its delegates much later in the year.

Agent walks out on Anita

ANITA BRYANT

MIAMI (UPI) — Anita Bryant's theatrical agent, Dick Shack, quit Wednesday upon learning the singer has written a book on her anti-homosexual crusade.

Shack's wife, Dade County Commissioner Ruth Shack, was the woman who introduced the original equal rights for gays ordinance in January, and the Shacks have been at odds with Miss Bryant ever since.

Shack said the book, titled "Save Our Children," is "exploiting the recent vicious, anti-homosexual rights campaign that was filled with lies and myths."

Bryant accused homosexuals of planning recruitment of children through a law that banned discrimination in housing and employment because of sexual preferences.

Wisconsin governor surprised

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Wisconsin Gov. Patrick Lucey was being sworn in as the new U.S. ambassador to Mexico Wednesday when an unannounced guest — President Carter — arrived.

The President's appearance brought tears to the eyes of the governor's wife Jean and many of Lucey's friends on hand for the ceremony.

"Well, as I was saying before I was interrupted," quipped Lucey, "this is a serious responsibility. I've been surprised this is not a ceremonial office. There are problems to be solved...for our mutual benefit."

Carter said Lucey "will bring to this assignment superb knowledge of human beings. I'm very proud of Pat and his family."

Majors returns to series TV

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Hal the Fawcett-Majors pair has returned to series television.

Lee Majors has agreed to return to the "Six Million Dollar Man" series, a spokesman for Majors announced Wednesday, after remaining off the set for several weeks. Universal Studios had sued him for breach of contract.

He was not talking but for more money.

the spokesman said, but for opportunities to expand his own production firm, Fawcett-Majors Productions. He returned when Universal agreed to make the company coproducer of the popular series and drop its suit.

His wife, Farrah Fawcett-Majors, dropped out of the "Charlie's Angels" series, reportedly because she was interested in movie roles.

Parole request meet delayed

G. GORDON LIDDY

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Parole Commission meeting which would decide the parole request of Watergate burglar G. Gordon Liddy has been postponed until next Wednesday.

Only two members were able to attend today's meeting, a spokesman said. The commission must have three members present to act on parole requests.

Liddy, 46, now confined to the Federal Prison Camp at Allenwood, Pa., became eligible for parole July 9 after President Carter commuted his original 20-year prison sentence to 8 years last April.

Liddy received the heaviest original sentence of any of the Watergate conspirators and has served the most time in prison.

He was convicted of conspiracy, attempted wiretapping and bugging at the Democratic National Headquarters in the Watergate Office Building, and for his role in the break-in at the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

Once in a century

Today is 'super seventh'

BONN (UPI) — For those who believe in the magic of numbers, this Super Seventh is the chance of a lifetime.

Throughout Europe, believers arranged to be married today. Pregnant women nearing their time asked physicians to induce birth this day. Philatelists had letters stamped 7-7-77, 7 a.m., in towns with the zip code number of 7, 7, 777, or 7777.

Those with a gambling urge put a little extra money today on number seven, or perhaps on seven times seven.

And well they might; for man has believed since history began that the number seven has a special, sacred, lucky quality.

Man first honored the number seven when he looked up and saw seven heavenly bodies — the sun, the moon and five planets. To the ancients, this represented perfection.

Probably with this ancient belief in mind, Moses reported in his account of the creation of the world that "on the seventh day, God ended his work which he had made."

Need one say more? Let scoff who will. But even a scoffer must get a frigate if he discovers that his birthdate can be divided by seven which, as the rest of us know, means Good Luck.

Who does not know that the seventh son of a seventh son probably possesses second sight and can foretell the future? Even cynics who insist breaking a mirror will not bring seven years bad luck are careful not to drop the glass.

And who will deny that seven fat years often are followed by seven lean?

The ancients never questioned the power of seven. Asked to swear an oath, a man did so seven times. If still suspected of perjury, the fellow would swear it "seven times seven times." No-one could doubt such a powerful pledge.

Since Pharaonic times, Egyptian mothers lay a seven-day old child on the floor, light seven candles, and then step over the infant seven times, to ward off evil spirits.

In London a century ago, to be "more than seven" meant to be alert, wide awake, all-knowing, hip, with it, or whatever the phrase is now.

"You're More Than Seven" was a popular London music hall song in 1896.

But all numbers have an evil element as well. The devil lurks everywhere. The dragon, symbolizing the devil, had seven heads. John in Revelations saw "seven angels... pour out the vials of the wrath of God upon the earth." Modern Germans still speak of "the evil seven."

Opposition

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Singer Jaye P. Morgan says she opposes singer Anita Bryant's campaign against homosexual rights laws.

"Somebody has to say to that woman, 'Now look, you're not sophisticated enough to be making these statements,'" Miss Morgan told a news conference Wednesday.

Red Chinese pilot defects

TAIPEI, Taiwan (UPI) — A defecting Communist Chinese pilot landed his MIG 19 jet fighter at an air base in southern Taiwan today in the first such defection in more than a decade. Nationalist Chinese Air Force officials said.

The unidentified pilot, who will receive 5,000 ounces of gold under a standing offer by the Taiwan government, was quoted as telling Nationalist military officials he wanted to defect because "there are no human rights on the China mainland."

The 41-year-old pilot, identified as Fan Yuan-yen, was a squadron leader based at Taikiang, located in Fukien Province on the east coast, almost directly opposite Taiwan across the Taiwan Strait.

The pilot, interrogated immediately after he landed at an undisclosed air base, said he had been planning his defection "for a long time."

"I defected to seek freedom and human rights," the spokesman quoted him as saying. The spokesman said the pilot told of hearing foreign broadcasts, mainly those beamed from Taiwan about human rights, and decided to leave China.

Germans may get ex-Nazi

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — A Nazi "war criminal" known as the "Executioner of Rigra" for his role in the murder of 40,000 Jews is being sought by West German authorities in a tangle of official confusion.

A West German embassy spokesman said Wednesday that Bonn originally requested the extradition of Eduard Roschmann, 69, last October, even though it was not certain he was living in Argentina.

Koreans rap US pullout plan

SEOUL, South Korea (UPI) — Parliament has unanimously opposed the planned withdrawal of American troops from South Korea and demanded curbs on "anti-Korea" activities in the United States.

The lawmakers also urged President Park Chung-hee Wednesday to "reinforce the foundation of freedom and democracy" in South Korea, sparking speculation Park may release many of the 200 political dissidents he has imprisoned.

One resolution adopted by parliament said President Carter's proposal to withdraw U.S. troops from South Korea would threaten peace on the peninsula and expressed hope that the south's security and freedom would be safeguarded.

It opposed the extradition of withdrawal of the U.S. ground forces at this juncture with the risk of inviting a grave threat to peace in this area, until tensions remain unmitigated on the Korean Peninsula.

Hot words flying

By United Press International
Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, in the midst of a major Middle East peace initiative, says Israel has an atom bomb but threatened to "finish off" the Jewish state if such a weapon is used in a new Middle East war.

Sadat's statement came as Egypt and Israel seemed in agreement over when to resume the Geneva peace conference, which had led President Carter to say a Arab-Israeli peace agreement could be realized "within the next number of months."

Carter's optimism was countered by former Israeli Foreign Minister Yigal Alon, who told UPI in an exclusive interview that "irresponsible" demands on Israel by the United States and other western nations made peace less likely.

He referred to repeated calls by Carter and European Common Market nations for Israeli withdrawal from occupied Arab lands, which hardened Prime Minister Menahem Begin has said is impossible.

"I have certain information that Israel possesses an atom bomb," Sadat told reporters Wednesday on a flight to Cairo from Morocco, where he had met with King Hassan.

"If Israel uses these weapons against us, we may lose 1 million Egyptians, but 3 million will survive," he said.

"My plan is to destroy 1 million Israelis in return for the 1 million Egyptians killed."

"In my opinion, this will finish off Israel."

In Washington, Carter told a group of American Jewish leaders, "My overriding purpose and goal in the Middle East is permanent peace and the security of Israel."

"I know all of you share that hope, which is not I think beyond the bounds of realization within the next number of months," he said. He did not elaborate.

Alon charged that the United States was trying to bully Begin's new government into a Middle East peace settlement. He also warned against a premature resumption of the Geneva Middle East peace conference, which he said could result in failure.

Paris envoy wounded

PARIS (UPI) — Two gunmen shot and seriously wounded the Mauritanian ambassador to France today as he was driving to work down a busy Paris street. An anonymous caller said the attackers were Spanish Sahara "freedom fighters."

Ambassador Ahmed Ould Ganahallih, 36, who was hit by bullets in the head, shoulder and leg, was reported out of danger after emergency surgery at the American Hospital.

Financier testifies

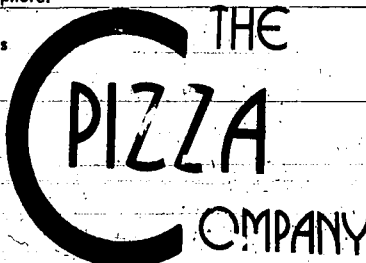

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (UPI) — Fugitive American financier Robert Vesco says he was founded out of the United States because of his "Italian origin" and for refusing to join political factions seeking to destroy Richard Nixon.

Vesco testified Wednesday before a Costa Rican legislative investigation committee looking into reports he made illegal contributions to Costa Rican President Daniel Oduber's 1974 election campaign.

Mourners jam streets

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — Tens of thousands of mourners, sobbing and shouting "There is no God but Allah!" marched through the narrow streets of Cairo today in the funeral procession for a former cabinet minister kidnapped and slain by a fanatic Moslem sect.

Prayers for the soul of Sheikh Mohammed Hussein Al-Zahaby were offered at the Al Azhar mosque as thousands looked on. In a gesture of Christian-Islamic solidarity, churches in other sections of Cairo rang their bells.

The former minister's body was found Wednesday in a deserted villa near the Pyramids.

Horse races begin tonight in Jerome

JEROME—More than 150 race horses from Idaho, Utah, Nevada and Oregon will begin tearing up the track at the Jerome County Fairgrounds today and parimutuel bettors can start tearing up tickets after the first race at 7 p.m.

In the four-day event, horses will chase fat purses of $7500 in the Intermountain Derby, $15,000 in the Magic Valley Futurity, and $2500 in the Jerome Stallion Service Futurity, according to Jim Rupert, secretary of the Jerome Recreation Commission.

This afternoon 72 colts will run in the futurity trials beginning at 10 a.m. The trials are open to the public free of charge.

Post times for the racing events are 7 p.m. today, Friday and Saturday and 1:30 p.m. Sunday. Eighty horses will run tonight, half in time trials for the derby and half in regular races. Admission fees are $1.50 for adults and 75 cents for children.

Friday night there will be a regular race card, with allowance, maiden and claiming races.

The eight fastest horses from the time trials will run Saturday night in the finals of the Intermountain Derby and Sunday afternoon the finals of the two futurities take place.

Rupert said programs have been printed with the past performances of all the horses and the windows will be open to take any bets from $2 on up.

Water abusers face citations in Jerome

JEROME—In order to get tough with abusers of irrigation water, the Jerome City Council Tuesday authorized the city ditchrider to issue warning citations.

Acting Mayor Walter Bentzinger said the city first will issue a warning citation to violators of the irrigation water ordinance, but the second time police will issue another citation and "they go to court."

He said the city is having trouble delivering water due to cutbacks caused by the drought but added "if people cooperate, leave the gates alone and not steal water, the ditchrider thinks he can make do."

If the new crackdown on violators is not successful, the acting mayor said the city may have to go to alternate week watering instead of the present once-a-week schedule.

"We've got practically half as much water as usual," he said.

Violations include changing a headgate or altering the flow of water in any way, using water on the wrong day and allowing water to run down the street. Police Chief Howard Dubois said these are misdemeanors that could bring a maximum penalty of $100, 30 days in jail or both.

"We need cooperation in getting through," Bentzinger said about the short water year. He said the city would appreciate those who could irrigate in the shortest time possible, make sure of their watering day and tend their irrigating properly.

2 men escape injury in helicopter crash

GOODING—Two employees of Anderson-Nafziger Farms, Tuttle, escaped uninjured when the crop dusting helicopter they were flying crashed into a telephone line and was demolished Tuesday morning.

Gooding Sheriff Earl Brown said Steve Goodwin and an unidentified passenger were flying four miles east of Gooding over a farm leased by the firm when the helicopter struck a telephone line.

There was nothing left of the helicopter, the sheriff said. The officer said he understood Goodwin was surveying the fields to be sprayed when the accident occurred about 8:30 a.m.

Water lack hurting Idaho crops

BOISE (UPI) — Some crops already have received their last irrigation as streams and ponds are drying up early this summer, the Idaho Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said Tuesday.
Hot winds last week depleted soil moisture and stressed dryland crops in many areas of the state, the agency reported.
In northern Idaho, crops depending primarily on rain were especially hurt, a report released Tuesday said.

The first cutting of alfalfa was 65 per cent complete and wheat development continued ahead of last year's pace.
Winter wheat development was 95 per cent headed with 25 per cent turning by the weekend. That compared with 90 per cent headed and 10 per cent turning last year.

Spring wheat and oats were 75 per cent headed compared with 45 per cent and 60 per cent, respectively, last year.
The agency said northern Idaho is in "serious need of rain as grain crops are at the critical stage." Some wheat fields have been plowed under.
In southwestern Idaho, crops were reported in good condition. But grain and hay crops in dryland areas were expected to be short if more rain was not received soon.

Crops in the southeastern part of the state were said to be in good condition as winter wheat was 95 per cent headed and 35 per cent turned by the weekend. Spring wheat was 80 per cent headed and 20 per cent turned.

Record low for runoff

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — The expected runoff figure for the Columbia River Basin has been revised downward again to another record low, D. W. Kuehl, acting director of the National Weather Service River Forecast Center, said Tuesday.
Despite lower than predicted 5th of power the region still will have a critical power shortage this winter, according to a spokesman for the Army Corps of Engineers.
Total runoff, measured at The Dalles, is now estimated at 54.3 million acre feet below Jan. 1 and Aug. 1, Kuehl said.
That is nearly 3 million acre feet lower than the June 1 prediction.
Previous record low runoff was 60.6 million acre feet in 1944. Normal runoff is about 100 million acre feet.

BOISE (UPI) — Water coolers are back in again but pop machines are out in the Capitol Mall.
In a letter to all department heads with offices in the mall, Building Services Administrator Tom Payne said all pop machines there will be disconnected Friday.
"It has been brought to our attention that while we have had the water coolers disconnected that pop machines are running," he said. "These machines use more energy than the water coolers."
"Therefore, we are going to reconnect the water coolers but we will disconnect the pop machines."

Abby

DEAR ABBY: When Lenny came home from a convention trip, I thought he acted kind of funny. In the two weeks before I found out why, it seems a bunch of the guys went out one night and got tattooed. Well, Lenny had a pair of vivid lips tattooed on his behind. (He said he asked for a rose, but the artist gave him the lips.) Lenny says he is sorry, and he wears a large band-aid over it so it won't make me mad every time I see it. Is there any way to get that tattoo off his behind?

LENNY'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Yes, Lenny should see a dermatologist (skin specialist).

Wife not amused

DEAR ABBY: My mother is the moodiest person on earth. She can wake up feeling fine, and then if anyone does one thing wrong, she's mad for the day. I am 16 years old, and I am sick and tired of her actions. So are my brothers and sisters.

DEAR SHERI: Some women have a difficult time when they reach 40, but enough is enough. Can you please give me some advice on how to get along with her? (Thank you.)

SHERI

DEAR SHERI: Yes. Just for one day, refrain from doing the things you know will irritate her. And try to do the things you know will please her, such as: cleaning your room; initiating your telephone conversations; keeping the radio and TV low; desisting from complaints about what you don't have or can't do; remaining silent when you don't like to talk back or argue; and keeping the peace with your brothers and sisters. You will then find that living with your mother is so much more enjoyable, you'll thank you're in the wrong house. (You're welcome.)

DEAR ABBY: My children are just average, but they are good kids. I have no outstanding beauties among my daughters, and while they do have friends, none of them is wildly popular. My sons are average students, just fair in sports, but none of them ever made the team. A relative of mine has outstanding children. They are popular, good looking and gets lots of honors—and he doesn't let me forget it for a moment. What can I say when he collars me and brags on and on about his kids?

SLOW BURIN

DEAR SLOW: Nothing. Just because a jackass brays doesn't mean you have to answer him.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "WRONG SIDE OF THE TRACKS" IN CLEVELAND: If after all these years her parents refuse to accept you, quit trying. It would be easier to move the tracks.

Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," sent to Abigail Van Burien, 152 Lasky Drive, Fullerton, Calif. 92612. Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (24¢) envelope.

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Dear Mr. Lamb: I am writing you a few lines. I want to know when sex leaves a man and he doesn't want a woman anymore, or does it?

Dear Reader: In general both males and females are sexual creatures from birth. How this is expressed depends upon many social and psychological factors. Health is also a factor. However, an elderly woman dying of cancer of the breast, and receiving male hormone to help control the cancer may still have an overwhelming sex desire.

Sexual desire of a man for one particular woman may vary in relation to their more basic relationship. If he is bored, or if the couple have basic problems the desire for sex in that situation may disappear.

When does desire wane?

Being impotent is not the same thing as not having any sex interest. Relatively young, diligent men may be impotent because of damage to the nerves that control the mechanical aspects of sex. That same man can be emotionally aroused and have an orgasm.

Some older men have vascular disease that affects mechanical reaction but the desire may still be there. To give you more information on impotence I am sending you the Health Letter number 342, Impotence. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to 1600, Box 155, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. You may be surprised to learn that men who live in good health into their 80s still have sexual interest and some are still capable of sex relations in the conventional sense.

Dear Mr. Lamb: I can't get the courage to ask my family doctor, but I need advice. What should a man do when he and his wife both have had a very strong sex drive all their lives and now she absolutely refuses sex. She started acting like this after a D and C to stop bleeding.

My teenage daughter is driving me up the wall, encouraging me to give her sexual response. She claims many of her school friends do it at home, why not us?

Is there any physical wrong with this type of relationship? How long can a man hold his composure under this sort of pressure?

Dear Reader: You need to be very firm with your daughter. In fact all three of you need professional help. I appreciate your reluctance to talk to your family doctor, but perhaps you could tell him that you and your wife need family counseling and that you would like to have the whole family see a psychiatrist.

Your daughter is not correct in saying that relations between father and daughter are that common. The long-term effects on the daughter psychologically can be very bad.

The situation you describe suggests that all three of you have played a role in the situation that has come about. Your wife is not behaving normally, nor is she fulfilling the role of a wife. The reason may be related to you or she may have more basic problems.

So my advice is for all of you to see a psychiatrist. If you can't manage that easily, I think you should go yourself and in the course of the interview perhaps you can get some help in finding out how to get assistance for all three.

CLOWNING AROUND IS GREAT FUN FOR SEVERAL MEMBERS OF THE NEW CLOWN TROUPE

Company I 'clowning around'

By Irene Link
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS—Everyone loves a clown! People of all ages are attracted to anyone who can make them laugh.

Mark Twain often confessed to an ambition of becoming a clown. He said, "I think it would be a very satisfying sensation when you come to a ripe old age, to feel and know that you had made people happy — children especially."

A group of young actors in Twin Falls share the same sentiments. The theater group, Company I, has just begun a Clown Troupe. The initial crew consists of Randy Powell, Vicki Steffen, Charlie Spurgeon and Trudy Dilworth, all Twin Falls.

While the idea has been brewing for some time, it just began to take shape several weeks ago. Powell says that, "Some of us have wanted to try clown characters for a long time. We're doing this primarily as a workshop for ourselves. And we would like to do a public workshop sometime in the future for anyone who would like to learn how to be a clown."

Why do these young actors want to learn to be clowns? Dilworth says, "It allows me to display some feelings I've always wanted to express. When you're a clown, you can do things that you can't do otherwise. And it's part of my experience in acting."

Charlie Spurgeon, an experienced actor and new-comer to Twin Falls, explains, "As a clown, I can extend an aspect of my personality I would ordinarily be reluctant to show. Basically, I'm a ham. It's a way to expand myself as an actor."

Steffen is open about why she wants to be a clown. "I want to express my hidden zaniness. This may sound corny, but I feel that most people don't laugh enough and I want to help people laugh." Powell agrees with Vicki and adds, "You don't see enough clowns who just want to make people laugh. I want to be successful at just that."

Being a clown probably isn't as easy as it appears to be. There are certain personality traits that are important and need to be cultivated in order to be proficient as a clown.

Powell says, "It definitely takes a good sense of humor. It helps to know the basic psychology of how to work with a crowd. And you need to know yourself well so you can develop a clown character that you can handle. Steffen adds that, "You must be outgoing and gregarious and you must like being around a lot of people."

"As a fledgling clown," says Spurgeon, "you must be able to take constructive criticism. If you don't always make people laugh, then you must not take it personally, but just realize that you must develop further your clown personality. It is like any other character an actor assumes. It takes work to bring it to perfection."

Developing a convincing clown character takes time. Steffen says, "I spent over two hours just practicing my walk for 'Keystone Kelly.'" And it took me an hour to learn the basics of how to take a pie-in-the face."

Randy adds that, "To be a clown and make people laugh for 15 minutes is not difficult, but to continue for eight hours would be a different problem." Trudy continues with, "I don't think it will be easy to stay in character. And it will be difficult to keep on when you fail to make someone laugh."

Charlie Spurgeon admits that, "Being a clown won't be easy. But we have worked up some routines that will help us move along. However, most of what we do will be improvisationalism."

The Company I Clown Troupe plans to work hard. The members will develop their individual characters by experimenting and trying a variety of routines. By trial and error they will soon learn what works and what doesn't. They are also learning by doing research on clowning at the Twin Falls Public Library.

For practical experience, they plan to volunteer their services in and around Twin Falls. Their first appearance will be on Saturday at Albertson's Clown Days promotion. They would like to perform at local benefits, parades, city promotions and anywhere else clowns are needed. By performing locally, they will have the opportunity to develop their clown skills and perform valuable services to the community. If all goes well, in the future they would like to form a Rent-A-Clown business.

Emmett Kelly, one of the most famous clowns who ever lived, once said, "All in all, the clown's is a noble calling. The world is full of tears, and man by nature is a sorrowing creature. It requires infinitely more to send us into gates of laughter than it does to make us cry."

Assumes character

Doctors give critical assessments to nation's top 10 diets

The Stillman Diet theory "is nonsense," the Atkins Diet is "planned malnutrition," and Dr. Frank's No Aging Diet is "a massive network of scientific gobbledygook."

These and other critical assessments of the nation's top 10 diets are detailed in the July issue of Harper's Bazaar by Drs. Frederick Stare and Elizabeth M. Whelan.

Professors of nutrition at the Harvard School of Public Health.

Following are their appraisals of the seven other leading diets:

- The Crenshaw Super Diet - You lose in every way, because it includes staying on a low calorie diet - and that's all the dieting you really need without Crenshaw's supplements of cider vinegar, kelp, lecithin and vitamin B6 at every meal.
- The Pritikin Diet - The intent is admirable, but its extremism is unrealistic, because it is an impossible diet to live with, and without scientific evidence that such a drastic cutback in fat is necessary or desirable.
- The Save Your Life Diet

The high fiber content is O.K. if it is not overdone. However, a marked increase in dietary fiber can bind with other nutrients in the intestines, interfering with the ability of vital elements to perform their biological functions in the body.

-The HCG Diet (calling for a 500 calorie-a-day intake plus regular shots of the hormone

HCG, extracted from the urine of pregnant women - Side effects of HCG therapy include headache, restlessness, depression. In addition to possible long-term effects of exposure to such a potent hormone.

-The Macrobiotic Diet - Its name translates in "long life," but should you follow it strictly, its effect will be the opposite. If taken to or near the 100 per cent brown rice level. Several young Americans reached that ultimate level and died of starvation, apparently unaware that the diet is deficient in virtually all nutrients.

The 10th Diet, The Prudent Diet, fares much better, and followed in moderation is ideal for weight control. It comprises limited amounts of eggs, a restriction of foods containing saturated fats (beef, whole dairy products), an increase of fruits and vegetables, and more cereals, especially crude cereals and enriched rice.

Workshop planned for July

TWIN FALLS - The YWCA is sponsoring a workshop on personality July 21st from 9 a.m. to noon in the Women's Center.

The lecturer will be Katie Peterson from Salt Lake City. Mrs. Peterson has a degree in this science and has been practicing for 25 years.

Personology is a study of human behavior according to the structure/function principle. This means a person will automatically relate to a stimulus or situation according to the way his body is built to react.

Mrs. Peterson "reads" the personality traits from the shape, size and proportion of the facial features, the head and the entire body. Through her knowledge, she is able to spot such traits as stubbornness, skepticism, generosity and optimism. She can also tell whether a person is built to sit or stand, if they enjoy people or being alone and many other fascinating traits of human behavior.

Mrs. Peterson has done a great deal of work with juvenile delinquents, couples having marital problems, people wondering what profession to choose and people just wanting a better understanding of themselves.

The cost of the workshop is $10 and pre-registration will be appreciated.

Mrs. Peterson will also be available to do personal charts and counseling during the week of July 18th through the 22nd. To make an appointment, to register for the workshop or for further information, please contact Melinda Miller, women's center coordinator, at 733-4381.

Spud growers watch for aphids

By KEN HODGE
Times-News Writer

MAGIC VALLEY — Only a few green peach aphids, dangerous to potato crops, have shown up in Magic Valley to date but potato growers and extension experts fear the insects could reach dangerous levels later this year.

Spot field checks in Magic Valley for the tiny lemon-yellow insects which helped spread a potato leaf roll virus epidemic last summer have not yet revealed aphid infestations.

But warm temperatures and mild weather experienced and conducive to aphid growth and have put growers and extension personnel alike on the alert for the approaching aphid season in late July.

"I am extremely worried about it," Tuttle potato grower James Nafziger said. "I think the farmers should be aware."

If the presence of large numbers of other kinds of early aphids is any indication, Robert Stoltz, University of Idaho extension entomologist, says farmers can expect an onslaught of dangerous peach aphids later in the season.

"This seems to be the year of the aphid," Stoltz said. "We're having problems with aphids all over the place."

Hatches of aphids can be seen all over Magic Valley, according to Stoltz.

"We have had the pea aphid in the lay," Stoltz explained. "And we've had some other kind of aphid, called the 'green bug' in the barley on Bell Rapids."

"We're still worrying about peach aphids, but we're just going to have to wait and see what happens," he continued. "Everybody's kind of getting antsy about it."

Green peach aphids last year helped spread leaf roll virus which causes a rot called necrosis. Some growers lost as much as 30 per cent of their crop in storage.

The losses sparked a massive preventive effort early this spring to combat the 1977 hatch of aphids.

"This year's aphid surge is expected in mid-July, according to Gary Kleinschmidt, extension potato specialist, who is coordinating the aphid control program.

With the help of about $25,000 contributed by local growers and $25,000 from the Idaho Potato Commission, Kleinschmidt coordinated a spray effort to hit the aphids where it should hurt most — in their winter homes.

Spray crews headed by valley orchardist Richard Kelley, applied chemical to some 6,300 peach and apricot trees, where aphids lay their tiny, black eggs, in Jerome, Gooding and Elmore counties. The crews also sprayed about 365 fruit trees in Twin Falls to help thwart an impending aphid explosion.

"I'm sure the program has done some good. We had some check trees we didn't spray, then we went back and checked them and they were just full of aphids," Kleinschmidt reported. "But the ones we sprayed, we've got good control of them."

In this, the first year of Magic Valley's aphid control program, the organization could not cover all fronts which represent an aphid threat, Kleinschmidt says.

"We had somebody go around and check the greenhouses," he explained. "But it was hard to confiscate the plants with aphids on them this first year like they do in southeastern Idaho."

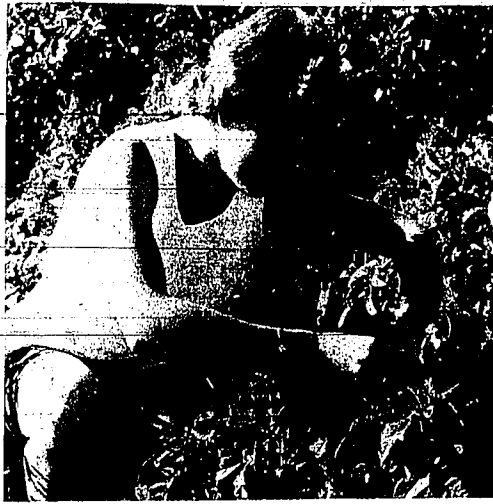

He said homeowners can help the situation, too, by taking care of aphid populations in their yards.

Although the full force of a hatch of aphids should hit Magic Valley in early August, extension personnel are now monitoring valley potato fields and growers should keep a watchful eye on their own fields.

"The people who have sprayed have done a real good job," Nafziger said. "They have deterred any early infestations, but the extreme temperatures and the mild weather we're having could be conducive to a build-up of aphids."

Nafziger warns local potato growers to "go out every day with the idea of checking their fields."

The extension service recommends taking a leaf count in potato fields on a weekly basis. A grower should start at one corner of his field, move toward the center and collect 50 leaves at random from the top, middle and bottom portion of the potato plants.

Doyle blasts press, attorneys

Hymas named to post

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. John V. Evans today named Cheryl Hymas, 39, Jerome, to succeed Ed Benoit, Twin Falls, on the State Board of Education.

Mrs. Hymas holds an Idaho teacher's certificate and has been a member of the Jerome School Board. A native of Twin Falls and a graduate of the former Idaho State College, she taught at Salt Lake City, Utah, South Junior High School and Borah High School in Boise.

Active in civic affairs, she has served as the Jerome County chairman of the March of Dimes. For two years she was the legislative chairman of the Idaho League of Women Voters.

Mrs. Hymas and her husband Forrest own and operate a ranch near Jerome. Benoit, an attorney, is retiring from the board prior to completion of his term.

Sawin views sought

TWIN FALLS — Representatives for the Twin Falls Education Association (TFEA) may break the ice with new school superintendent James Sawin next week, but it's doubtful Sawin's presence will keep deadlocked negotiations between the teachers' union and the school board from going to mediation.

TFEA president Al Ware said he plans to contact Sawin, probably the early part of the week, to sound out the new superintendent on the subject of negotiations and to present the TFEA's side of the stalled talks.

"Everything we've been able to hear on him (from Arizona sources) has been good," Ware said of the former Prescott, Ariz., assistant superintendent. "I think one of the major things that impresses me is that the past three presidents in the local here say he is very open-minded."

Ware applauded Sawin's watchful approach to involvement in the tenet negotiations.

"I was kind of concerned that he would be getting right into negotiations with mediation coming up," Ware said, "but it appears he's not going to get into it. I think this shows his willingness to judge a situation before he takes a stand on it."

Ware said he doubted Sawin's takeover as superintendent alone would prevent the negotiations from going into mediation or bring both sides back to the bargaining table, but he added, "from what I've heard about Dr. Sawin he might be some help. If he can get the background material on it, which I think is going to have to come from both sides, both viewpoints."

Demo chief to resign

TWIN FALLS — Stephen Carter, chairman of the Twin Falls County Democratic Central Committee the past three years, today announced his resignation effective July 15.

Carter said his resignation is for "personal and political reasons" but that he plans to continue active work in the party.

Hinting he may seek political office, Carter said, "I want to clear the boards. There are things I may want to do that I can't do as chairman of the party and besides that, I think it is time to give someone else an opportunity to serve as Democratic chairman. I have served three years and after a while you lose momentum. It's time to turn it over to someone with new enthusiasm," Carter said this morning.

He said he may seek some political office at some future time, but he has not made any decisions as to whether it would be at the county or state level.

Carter said his resignation is being announced now to give a new chairman an opportunity to take over in a quiet time and work up his or her organization well ahead of the political campaigns next year.

Carter took over after the death of the former chairman, Vincent Smezal, in August, 1974.

Carter also announced a meeting of the Twin Falls County Democratic Central Committee for July 15 at 7:30 p.m. in the county courthouse. He said he hopes a new chairman can be elected at that time and urged all interested party members to attend.

The retiring chairman said he has no idea as to who the party members may select as his successor.

Carter said he feels the Democratic Party in Twin Falls County has made tremendous strides in the last few years, but new energy and devotion can bring more improvement. The said the party is in good shape financially and is growing.

Revised law okayed

GOODING — Gooding City council members have approved a revised subdivision ordinance which spells out more stringent requirements for developers.

The ordinance was taken at this week's council meeting. No one presented the proposal at the hearing, according to Deputy City Clerk Isabelle Caloun.

Most of Tuesday night's council meeting was occupied with haggling over the engineer's agreement with Dale Riedesel, of J-U-B Engineering, Twin Falls, on the application for $195,000 in Economic Development Administration (EDA) funds

TWIN FALLS — Mrs. Bertina Doyle, 65, arrested Wednesday on charges she has been operating an illegal shelter home, today lashed out against the press, the county prosecutor, the city attorney and her neighbors for treating her unfairly.

"I should never have been arrested," Mrs. Doyle said from her home on Elizabeth Boulevard.

Mrs. Doyle, who lives in a recently purchased duplex, admitted last week she was taking care of three mentally handicapped men at her home in a residential zone.

Twin Falls County Prosecutor Frank J. Dykas Friday filed a misdemeanor complaint against Mrs. Doyle, charging she is providing the three men with shelter home care without the required state license.

State law requires anyone offering shelter home care to more than two persons must have a license from the state health and welfare department.

Department officials said today they would send officials to Mrs. Doyle's home to determine if Mrs. Doyle is providing them with shelter home care.

Mrs. Doyle today blamed the news media for "screwing things up."

The Times-News earlier reported county prosecutor Dykas filed the charge because he could not allow illegal shelter homes to exist, especially since she has publically announced she is in violation and plans to say in violation."

"I never publically announced any such thing," Mrs. Doyle said. "I'd said I may be operating illegally but that I wasn't doing anything wrong, just trying to make a living and help some people."

Mrs. Doyle also blamed Twin Falls city atty. Charles Brumbach for asking the county prosecutor to file a charge just on the basis of complaints from her neighbors.

Seventeen residents, who live near Mrs. Doyle's $65,300 duplex, earlier presented a petition to the city attorney saying they didn't mind Mrs. Doyle taking care of the three handicapped persons, but did not want her to be allowed to take care of any more.

Mrs. Doyle has applied with state health officials for a license so she can take care of eight handicapped persons at her home.

"We don't object to three handicapped persons," David W. Lentz, 2158 Elizabeth Blvd., said. "We just don't want the whole situation to get out of hand."

After her arraignment Wednesday, Mrs. Doyle was released on her own recognizance.

When asked if she planned to continue taking care of the three handicapped men at her home given the charges against her, she said, "It's none of your damn business."

American Falls Dam dilemma

SHOSHONE — North Side waterusers have been warned they must withdraw a lawsuit if they want cooperation in requesting federal aid for their share of construction costs of the American Falls replacement dam.

John M. Barker, Bull, president of the American Falls Reservoir District No. 4, issued the warning in a letter to members of District No. 2 directors.

Several Shoshone area farmers, including Burd Williams, Lincoln County commissioner; Corvyn Silva and Floyd Silva, last month presented a petition to the American Falls Reservoir District No. 2 directors asking them to request President Carter, Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus and Congress to approve drought-related funds to pay for the District No. 2 shareholders' costs.

District No. 2 officials were also asked to contact District No. 4, the contracting agency for the replacement project and have them join in the request.

At a meeting of the District No. 2 board Tuesday in Shoshone, Wendell Johnson, chairman, read a lengthy letter from Barker in which he outlined the long but successful effort to obtain congressional action to clear the way "we could go ahead on our own."

Financing of the replacement dam, now nearing completion, was discussed back in 1973, Barker wrote, but reservoir district officials felt there was no possibility of federal funding for many years through the Bureau of Reclamation which built the original dam.

Barker wrote that area farmers would realize $42 million savings in crops between private funding or waiting for public money to replace the American Falls Dam.

He said the only way District No. 1 board would consider cooperating with the Shoshone farmers' request for drought-related funds now would be to have them withdraw their lawsuit which is holding up sale of bonds to finance the project.

A 70 per cent majority of shareholders voted for the construction project Jan. 12, 1976, but some water groups, such as the Mindoka and Burley Irrigation Districts and some individual waterusers within several other water districts have opposed the project from the start.

The dissidents brought legal action to stop the project, but a district court ruling upheld plans to proceed with the dam replacement. However, the case was appealed to the Idaho Supreme Court where action is now pending.

Since the bonds approved by shareholders cannot be sold until the court case is finally determined, the American Falls Reservoir District No. 1 officials apparently see the offer as "a good way to get off the hook," according to Corvyn Silva.

After reading Barker's letter at the District 2 directors meeting Tuesday, Johnson told Silva, "The next move is up to you. You'll have to either pass, punt or kick."

Labor center faces possible closure

By GEORGE WILEY
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Labor Center barracks may be closed early next month despite efforts to keep the migrant housing units open.

The labor center board has asked its attorneys to determine if keeping the facility open beyond the best season — when the migrants would go to work for other employers — would force the beet growers to follow cumbersome regulations in the running of the camp.

If the answer to that question is that the barracks would have to be spruced up to meet regulations, the board is likely to close them.

The barracks will probably be closed also if some source of outside income can't be found to support them.

The beet growers now make up the difference between the cost of keeping units open and the rents collected from migrant residents. But the growers don't want to put out the money once they no longer need the migrant labor for their crops.

The irony is that Green Giant Co. would be happy to have the migrants as a labor source during its two-month corn crop. The migrants, plinched by smaller beet crops locally and drought-diminished work in other areas, would like to work for the Jolly Green Giant, but if the labor camp barracks are closed the migrants will have no place to live.

Green Giant, which has a 250-bed barracks of its own, can't accommodate families and won't open all of its barracks to local migrants because it has to have the beds if contract Mexicans from Texas have to be brought in to finish off the corn crop.

Because of the run-down condition of the labor camp, Green Giant is also inclined to put any funds into keeping those barracks open, even though to do so might help with its labor supply.

Officials at the Idaho Migrant Council, which has been searching out local housing for the transient laborers who would stay for the corn pack, say sufficient legal housing is simply not available to meet migrant needs if the barracks are closed.

About the only alternative which hasn't been explored to keep the barracks open is to ask the migrants themselves to pay more rent, but camp board members say rents have already been raised and they aren't eager to make another increase.

Despite the dilemma concerning the barracks, however, both the migrants and representatives of the labor-board say the tone at the camp has changed from prior years when mood of distrust between the camp management and the migrants prevailed.

New camp manager Richard Sweet says the county needs the migrants as a labor source and adds, "These people need a place to live — without the labor camp, where are they going to live?"

By the same token, the Idaho Migrant Council, often an adversary of camp management in the past, now applauds Sweet.

"We are very happy with the camp manager this year," said IMC social service worker Angela Vargas. "He is very sensitive and more cooperative with all the migrants' problems and all that, plus the board members of the labor camp."

Camp board member Gaylord Drown says a decision on the barracks closure could come at the board's meeting July 19.

"We understand that these people have no place to go because of the drought, and we are concerned about why we're doing some research on it," Drown said.

If the camp lawyers say the camp can stay open without additional regulations being imposed once the migrants no longer work for the camp sponsors, "we'll do anything we can to help these people," Drown added.

Stocks at Midday

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices opened mixed Thursday in active trading of New York Stock Exchange issues.

The Dow Jones industrial average was ahead 0.17 point to 907.50 shortly after the opening. Declines led advances, hitting 12 to 96, among the 35 issues crossing the tape.

The market has been torn between traders who are fearful the Federal Reserve Board's latest money supply report will show a sharp rise and investors who anticipate the government's next wholesale price index will show a decline. The money figures, up $1.5 billion a week ago, are to be released later in the day and the wholesale price index is due Friday.

Generally, a dip in the government's leading indicators and a 2.2 percent drop in steel production last week have underscored Wall Street's concerns the economy, after a strong first half, would moderate the second half of 1977.

The slower turnover lately indicated that June's so-called "summer" rally has ended. There has been little in the news background to make an investor interrupt vacation plans.

Spud, grain futures up

CHICAGO — Potatoes and grains recovered in commodity futures trading Wednesday while meats wound up mixed.

Commodity News Service said Maine potatoes settled 2 to 7 cents higher as prices hit contract life lows on early selling, then reversed on trade buying. May hit 6.94 per hundredweight, off 10 cents, then settled at 7.08, up 4 cents and the day's high. Volume was 1,233 contracts.

Early commercial buying put wheat on the plus side and it stayed there as professional demand absorbed reported hedge sales. Prices 3/4 to 1 1/2 cents higher. Cash call basis was nominally 2 cents higher, hard wheat at 11 cents under September and soft white 15 cents under.

Corn recovered at the close after being on the downside most of the day, closing 1/2 to 3/4 cents higher. With corn tasselings earlier than normal, moisture is a concern in the corn belt where hot, dry weather continues. Chicago cash basis was nominally a cent higher for boxcars at 2 cents under July and nominally unchanged for

Other months were narrowly mixed, from up 1/2 to 1 1/2 cents to down 7 to 8 cents. Easter live and dressed markets produced selling.

A late recovery in new crop soybean options narrowed the July-November spread about 40 cents to 34 1/2 cents by the close. Beans closed mixed, 39 cents 1/2 lower in the two nearby to 1 1/2 cents higher. Deferred meal advanced solidly in the final minutes, closing from 60.00 to 4.00 higher. Oil was weak all day, closing 10 to 20 points lower with two options limit down.

August live cattle were under heavy selling pressure, ending 57 cents cwt. lower.

points down, near the middle of the day's range.

Live hogs ignored limit advances in bellies, most contracts settling off 2 to 22 points although July ended higher on the discount of futures contracts.

Pork bellies ended limit up in nearby and slumped higher in other contracts. Most deferred contracts touched limit up but liquidation trimmed gains back to 15 to 167 points. Light liquidation exerted pressure.

New York Sugar #1 closed 6 to 4 points lower on a trade of 4,850 lots. Late buying helped steady prices before the close.

Schroeder cards record 66 to cop first-round lead in British open

TURNBERRY, Scotland (UPI) — John Schroeder of La Jolla, Calif., marched along deserted fairways in the gathering gloom Wednesday to shoot a record four-under-par 66 and snatch the first round lead in the 10th British Open.

Schroeder, the 31-year-old son of former U.S. tennis star Ted Schroeder, grabbed the lead from Martin Foster, 25, the Briton who set the early pace with a round of 67 on the remodeled Alisa course at Turnberry.

Schroeder came home in style, blasting out of the bunker on the 17th to within a foot of the pin for a birdie four and picking up another birdie on the 43rd yard 18th. He went out in a regulation 35 after one birdie and one bogey but totalled four birdies on the front section for 31.

Jack Nicklaus, the tournament favorite at 6-1, tied for third place at 68 along with Tom Watson and Lee Trevino.

Reigning champion Johnny Miller joined the man he beat for the title last year, Spain's Severiano Ballesteros, and Gaylord Burrows of Mississippi a stroke farther back at 69.

Schroeder, currently 33th in the U.S. list of money-winners, had to qualify for the $170,000 tournament with rounds of 67 and 74. Earlier this year he finished second to Watson in the Andy Williams tournament in San Diego and led for three rounds in the Colonial National before finishing second to Ben Crenshaw.

Since turning professional in 1969, Schroeder, a graduate of the University of Michigan, has career earnings of $221,017 and enjoyed his best year in 1973 when he finished 42nd in the American list.

Most of the 16,000 spectators who had packed the course were long gone when Schroeder began his charge. The blistering sun and strong winds had also dissipated and Schroeder said, "It was a bit cold out there at the end."

He said he had trouble with his swing last year and had to seek advice from a teaching pro to straighten out his game and failed to win a cent for eight months. It was only after he was satisfied he was in form again that he decided to enter the British Open.

"I didn't want to shoot in the 80s in the world's greatest tournament," he said. "I wanted to be a contender."

He said he would like to duplicate the sporting achievement of his father — who won Wimbledon on his only visit to Britain in 1949.

"I would kind of like to do the same on my first visit," Schroeder said.

Foster also had trouble with his game and only a week ago had to rebuild his swing in time for this tournament.

The 6-foot 4 Fowler said he was hitting the ball so badly after missing the cut in the last tournament in which he played, he "put down the clubs, lit a cigarette and started to think again."

"I had to start right from scratch, checking how I was standing and swinging," Foster said. Finally a close friend told Foster he had regained his old style and put him "on the right track."

Foster fired three birdies and two bogeys before stepping onto the longest hole on the course — the 500-yard-long 17th.

"My caddy and I decided we needed an eagle to make up for the bogie on the 16th," Foster said.

After a good drive, a two iron to the green and an 18-foot putt, Foster had his eagle and was three under par.

"I decided no more heroics and played safe for a par on the 18th," he said.

Searing heat and strong winds hampered the early starters among the 156 strong field but the wind dropped in the afternoon favoring the long-hitting Americans.

Nicklaus had a two-over par 37 on the back nine, including a double bogey at the par four 18th hole; but recovered at the turn and said "I kept playing better as I went along."

He picked up four birdies for a sub-par total of 31 on the homebound section despite trouble on the grounds.

"The pin placings were very difficult and on most of the holes, every putt is impossible on the wrong side," Nicklaus said. "The greens are getting slick and have that glassy look."

His disaster at the 47-yard 8th hole came when he hit his drive "in the only place you shouldn't — the bunker."

"All I could do was take an 8 iron and hit out just short of the green," Nicklaus said. "I tried to pick up with a 9 iron about two-thirds up the bank but it rolled back down the hill about 40 feet and I three-putted. It was a nice six."

Putting was no better for 35-year-old Trevino who the night before the championship started declared he had no chance of ending up a winner unless all the other players were struck by lightning.

Trevino said he had so many one-putt greens "I can't remember — at least nine." His journey into the rough and into bunkers were saved repeatedly when "those putts just kept going down."

Boston makes plans for sport complex

BOSTON (UPI) — For the second time in five years Boston Mayor Kevin H. White Wednesday announced plans to build a multipurpose sports facility and convention center in the heart of the city.

White held a press conference in his office to announce the appointment "of an Arena Task Force to formulate plans for a new sports facility to house the city's major league hockey and basketball franchises."

The Mayor conceded he has not held discussions yet with Sports Systems, Inc., owners of the Boston Bruins and Boston Garden, but added that the Boston Celtics have shown interest in the complex.

The two sites under consideration are South Station and North Station, both located on rapid transit lines.

The volunteer task force, which has six months to study the feasibility of building a $30-35 million complex, includes developer Mortimer Zuckerman of Boston Urban Associates, chairman; William M. Powell, chief executive officer of the Kendall Co. of Boston; and George E. Platon, director and executive vice president of the First National Bank of Boston.

The group will try to discover a method of building the facility — a method which escaped those persons involved in a similar attempt in 1972.

Members of the task force felt that a different economic climate, along with cooperation from both teams, the city, and the state, could make the arena-convention center complex a reality.

White said an arena built in the city "is not going to be any great, oversized superdome that will place a financial drain on the city."

"We want this arena to be financially self-sustaining," said White, who pledged the city's credit to sell the necessary bonds. He added that the revenues from the complex must totally cover their cost.

The mayor would like a 20,000-seat arena in addition to a hotel and convention center and a parking facility which might be run by the city. Citing the 50-year-old home of the Bruins, White said, "We have clung to the Boston Garden for too long out of some sentimental attachment. It was a wonderful facility in its time, but now we have to look to the future."

As recently as last month Boston Bruins' President Paul Money said his company was happy enough with the 15,000-seat Boston Garden. Money made the comment in explaining that the Bruins would not be interested in a proposed arena that Celtics' President Irving Levin was hoping to build in nearby North Quincy.

The North Quincy site no longer appears feasible according to city officials.

Nets announce move to New Jersey

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (UPI) — The New York Nets announced Wednesday they have signed a letter of intent to play next season at the soon-to-be completed Rutgers University arena in New Brunswick, N.J., and will move to a proposed arena, adjacent to Giants Stadium in the Hackensack Meadowslands in 1979 pending approval of the National Basketball Association and some of an antitrust battle with the New York Knicks.

The Nets franchise started out in Teaneck, N.J., in 1967 as one of the original American Basketball Association teams and then moved to Comack, N.Y. the following year before settling into the Nassau Coliseum in Uniondale, N.Y., in 1969.

The team will no longer be called the New York Nets, but a spokesman for the team said it was not yet decided whether it will be called the "New Jersey Nets" or just "the Nets."

Wednesday morning the Nets said they were still negotiating a 15-year renewal of their lease at Nassau Coliseum, but later in the afternoon announced they had decided to accept the letter of intent offered by the New Jersey Sports and Exposition Authority.

"The New York Nets have advised me that they have signed a Letter of Intent with the New Jersey Meadowslands authority calling for the construction of a facility in New Jersey with the Nets as the professional basketball tenant,"

NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien said in a statement.

O'Brien further said the NBA is "awaiting a formal submission by the Nets concerning the appropriateness of the Rutgers facility for professional basketball, which submission is subject to NBA approval."

"The New York Knicks have advised that an agreement between them and the Nets, to which the NBA is not a party, prevents a move by the Nets to Rutgers. The Nets disagree with the Knicks' position. At a meeting called by me today, each team declined to submit the dispute for my resolution, and the Nets advised me that they would commence an action alleging, among other things, that enforcement by the Knicks of their 'territorial rights' violates the antitrust laws."

Roy Boe, principal owner of the NBA Nets, is also principal owner of the New York Islanders of the NHL, but Pass said negotiations for a new lease were being handled by Nets' Senior Vice President Mike Manzer.

David A. "Sonny" Werblin, the Authority chairman who brought the New York Glens football team to New Jersey, had been trying to get the Nets to play at Rutgers' new gym until an indoor arena can be built at the Hackensack Meadowslands Sports Complex.

The Rutgers gym, with permanent seats for 8,500 fans and 2,000 temporary seats, will be open in the fall. The state has started a study on the feasibility of building a 20,000-seat arena in the Meadowslands for basketball and other indoor sports but has not made a commitment to build such an arena.

The Nets drew an average of 6,000 fans for each of their home games at the Nassau Coliseum last year.

Boe said, "It is hoped that we will be able to play at least one-half of the 1978-79 season in the new Meadowslands arena. In the interim, we plan to play our games at the new Rutgers University arena in New Brunswick."

Boe also confirmed the Nets had earlier Wednesday filed in the Federal District Court in New Jersey an action against Madison Square Garden, which owns the New York Knicks, seeking to affirm the Nets' right to play in New Jersey and seeking relief under the antitrust laws as well.

"We have received assurances from our counsel that we are legally entitled to move to New Jersey and that protestations by the New York Knicks (of the contrary) are wholly without merit," Boe said.

"Our hockey fans in Long Island have been great and they deserve the continued enjoyment of the Islanders," Boe said. "It is unfortunate that basketball has not, and apparently will not, attract fan support in Nassau County."

Pro rodeo team loop slates March opener

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Rodeo will make its debut as a professional team sport during a seven-month season beginning in March of 1978, it was announced by league President Michael Shapiro Wednesday.

The league will field coed teams in Denver, Kansas City, Los Angeles, Oklahoma, Salt Lake City and San Antonio for its inaugural season that will run through September.

"There are 47 million followers of the rodeo," Shapiro said. "We expect to draw our support from them. We can't possibly expect to get all 47 million to attend our events but we think we can get a good percentage of them."

The league has been in the works for more than 2 1/2 years, according to Shapiro, and will stock its teams this September through a draft of professional, college and high school cowboys and cowgirls.

Kermit Alexander, the former All-Pro co-owner of the San Francisco 49ers and past president of the NFL Players Association, has been hired by the league to serve as a coordinator of the draft and as the league's director of player-management relations.

Alexander said each team will have a nucleus of six to eight performers with additional cowboys for home events and journeymen to fill the roster of away events.

The competition will include bull riding, calf and team roping, barrel race and saddlebronc riding and barrel racing, with individual points by the competitors tallied to determine a team score.

Milton Riechman Homerun increase spins turnstiles

NEW YORK (UPI) — Home runs up 15 per cent in the American League and 32 per cent in the National League this year, but it's certainly popular with the fans. Distance tests from tee to green prove conclusively people love seeing home runs even if "sluggers" like Fred Stanley, Jerry Remy, Ted Martinez and Mike Tyson are the ones hitting them.

Money hasn't gone to Califf Hunter's head and judging by the way he handles himself, it probably never will. Despite all his troubles this year, beginning with when he was hit on the leg by Jon Joshua's liner in the season opener, Hunter hasn't gotten into any arguments with management or his teammates, nor has he become cranky or irritable with anyone else. He is patient and courteous with kids who want his autograph and talks as easily and readily with the Yankees' ground crew as he does with the club's brass. Califf conducts himself no differently today than he did when Charlie Finley first signed him for $75,000 back in 1964 or when the Yankees signed him for $3 million three years ago. Califf Hunter is still plain old Califf Hunter. Another way of putting it is that regardless of the money he has made, the basic human being continues to come through — without any superciliousness or other embroidery. Some others who became overnight millionaires could take lessons from the Yankee rightlander.

Seattle Slew's veterinarian and part owner, Jim Hill, calls him "a gentle horse," but also says he acts up, once in a while. "After the Kentucky Derby, he was really wound up," Hill says. "He had a rough trip, and I've never seen him act so savagely. He was actually making lunges at me, the groom and the hot walker, just saying get away and leave me alone."

Frank Latchetti wasn't happy losing his job as Texas manager but he isn't going around grumbling over it. He's in Sarasota, Fla., looking over some of the Rangers' newest signees. Of all the calls he received after he was fired, none cheered him more than one he got from former Texas owner Bob Short in Minneapolis.

Red Sox made a wise move in extending Don Zimmerman's contract through next year, and a smarter one yet announcing it during their nine-game backslide. Nobody ever has come up with a stronger morale booster than a new contract with a raise in it. That doesn't only reassure the manager, but his players as well and has much more effect than a half dozen votes of confidence.

Big league managers no longer get in the middle of salary battles between the front office and players, primarily because a lot of them feel many of the players are overpaid as it is. When Leo Durocher was managing the Dodgers, he thought "and Eddie Stanky was his second baseman, he voluntarily interceded in a salary struggle between Branch Rickey and Stanky. Rickey was offering Stanky $12,000 and Stanky was asking $15,000. The three men got together in Rickey's office and after a long flowery speech designed to persuade Durocher how fair he was being with Stanky, Hickey turned to Durocher and said, "all right, you've heard both sides now. You be the judge, and whatever you say, I'll do." Durocher said "I'd give him the $15,000." Rickey glowered a moment and bit on his cigar, hard. "Okay," he said, "and I'm not going to forget this." He didn't, either, and the first chance he had, he traded Stanky to the Braves.

Most books on golf put me to sleep. Best one I've read in a long time, though, is Colman McCarthy's "The Pleasures of the Game," which is absolutely delightful, different, breezy and exceptionally well written. McCarthy, who writes some corking editorials for The Washington Post, knows his golf. One of the passages in his book that intrigued me particularly was how during a match with Bobby Riggs, the master of all hustlers used the rifics to induce McCarthy to his best shot out of bounds. Another excellent book, just out, is Jonathan Yardley's "Hitting," an especially penetrating biography of the late King Learner. If you like baseball or the newspaper business, you'll enjoy this splendid piece of work.

Mets manager Joe Torre has a close friend of his who doesn't know the first thing about baseball. When Torre was named manager back in May his friend wanted to know what the difference was between being a manager and a player. "I even have an office of my own now," Torre said, trying to explain. "Where is it?" his friend expressed curiosity. "I mean, have the address and I'll come up to visit you some day."

Crum finds life easier after making decision

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — University of Louisville Head Basketball Coach Denny Crum says he came "very close" to accepting the head coaching job at UCLA, his alma mater, but decided to stay at Louisville because it was "best for my family and me."

Crum, 40, said in an interview Wednesday he was "very relieved and a lot more relaxed" now that his professional and personal future in Louisville were fixed. The former No. 1 assistant for UCLA's legendary John Wooden said he was committed to keeping his Cardinals among the "top of the collegiate athletic world."

Crum, who in six years at the helm at Louisville has completed a 159-37 record, said he decided to remain in the Big-East State late Monday after, teetering on the brink of agreeing to return to UCLA during the weekend.

"I came very close to accepting the job," he declared. "It was a very, very tough decision, but there comes a time in your life when you have to view the whole situation, not just the professional part of it."

UCLA officials were "very nice and gracious about the whole thing," he said, adding, "I guess they were a little disappointed."

Crum, a native Californian whose winning percentage at Louisville is among the tops in college basketball, said he made the decision without any inducements being offered by U of L to sweeten his already lucrative contract and side benefits. He noted that he and Louisville athletic officials had discussed possible construction of a new sports complex that could house the Cardinals' basketball games and other sporting events, but added the facility is still in the talking stage.

"Sure we talked about a new complex, but we've talked about it for six years," he said. "Hopefully we'll get it one of these days."

Asked to compare programs at Louisville and UCLA, Crum said he felt there was "no question" the Bruins "will be competitive every year for the national championship."

UCLA defeated Louisville in the finals of the 1975 NCAA championships and eliminated the Cardinals in the opening round of the Far West Regional this year.

"I came very close to accepting the job," he declared. "It was a very, very tough decision, but there comes a time in your life when you have to view the whole situation, not just the professional part of it."

Hamblin tops list in insurance meet

TWIN FALLS — Mike Hamblin fired a two-under par 68 Wednesday to lead qualifying in the Twin Falls portion of the Insurance Youth Classic golf tournament.

Hamblin, the only freshman in a small field to break par on the municipal course, said later however he might not be able to compete in the state playoffs at Elgin on July 18-19. That is because he already has qualified to play in the World Junior tournament in San Diego at that same time.

Rounding out the list of qualifiers were Dean Dorland, Twin Falls, at 75; Chris Meyerhoeffer, Twin Falls, at 84; Bill Long, Twin Falls, 87, and Mark Spalding, Wendell, 88.

Those four will travel to state if Hamblin is unable to go. The state top qualifiers will advance to the national classic finals in August. The event is sponsored by the independent insurance agents throughout America.

76ers sign Harris

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The Philadelphia 76ers Wednesday signed guard-forward Herman Harris, a second round draft choice from the University of Arizona.

Harris, of suburban Chester, was the leading scorer for Arizona last season with 53 points for a game average of 20 points.

While at Chester High School, the 6-5, 22-year-old swingman scored 1,725 points including 64 points in one game.

Jones and Denkers grab Thunder Bluff victories

TWIN FALLS — Norm Jones breezed to an easy win and Roger Denker barely nosed out Roy Harms in the main events of the Thunder Bluff Raceway Monday.

Jones drove a light, controlled race on the slick track to easily outdistance the rest of the field in the super-stock main event.

Denker, however, won the J-stock main event only after a running battle with Boyd Harms, Wendell, Denker and Harms were paired to each other throughout most of the race, entering the curves side-by-side and even glancing off each other on several occasions due to the wet track.

Coming out of the final curve, Denker held a slight advantage and maintained it to the finish line, which he crossed a mere two feet ahead of Harms.

Pocatello drags draw top field

POCATELLO — Drag racing fans from Southcentral and Southeastern Idaho can watch their favorite drag cars from throughout the Intermountain area this Saturday night at Intermountain Raceway in Pocatello.

All of the National Hot Rod Association's Sportsman Brackets are filled with competitors in every race at the Pocatello facility. Jim Hennessy, track owner, guarantees a large enough cash purse that each bracket always finds racers from at least two states and often from Utah, Montana and throughout Idaho.

One of the fastest fuel injected gasoline powered dragsters in the western U.S. will again be at Saturday's race. The Wilkinson-Masterson A/Dragster from Hamilton, Montana, will be back to take on the rails from Utah as well as Idaho Falls resident Alan Bloom. When asked why their car runs so fast (8.17 e.t. and 175 miles per hour) Gary Masterson replied, "We've put $21,000 in the car and Wilkinson has been wrenching race cars for twenty years. We should go faster than your local guys."

Although the Super Stock division found an all-out-of-state finale at the last event, Jerome's Larry Dekker was the number one qualifier in his newly built Chevrole, running in the Super Stock/R class. Dekker is hoping to be the first area winner in the tough category this season.

While Bill Spens, Salt Lake City, has dominated Modified Eliminator, Al Slemmetts has kept the Stock trophy in Pocatello, running hard and consistent. Gates will open for time trials at 3 p.m. with eliminations scheduled to begin at 8 p.m. All children under age 12 will be admitted free when accompanied by an adult. General admission is $3.50.

Bob's Lobs and Backhand Comments

Bob Zuckerman

Are you tired of waiting for a tennis court so long that the grass beneath your seat dies or transfers to your tennis shorts? Have you developed other interests like fiddle, winks, chess or checkers to pass the time while you're sitting out there waiting? Or maybe you've given up playing tennis altogether and now just watch it on television.

Well, then Bob's Lobs may have the answer for you. Chad Browning, city recreation director, says recreation officials will make the three old tennis nets being stored in the recreation building at Harmon Park available for the player who wants to operate a court himself.

Now wait a minute, you say. What good is a net if you don't have a court?

The answer is you make one, just by stringing up a net between two trees at the park and lining out a tennis court on the grass with kite string.

Maybe it's not official, but for those times when it seems like everybody and his mother is out at Harmon wanting to use a tennis court or when the tennis association is throwing a tournament, it may be worthwhile.

The idea is not as unusual as it might sound. Players are known to do it on a regular basis with fishing nets in California parks. And it does have the added attraction of allowing you to play hardfoot in sandlots or while drinking a beer.

And one can always set up a barbecue nearby and waffle down hamburgers in between points.

Last summer, Mike Leonetti, Marco Valdivinos, Jess Olivarrin, a few others and I set up just such a court in Harmon. The ball didn't always bounce correctly and the court was anything but regulation size, but we had a good time.

There's something amazingly football-like about diving for a tennis ball across busy green grass, and for a man who was never big enough to play football even in junior high school, grass tennis does have a certain gusto.

To build your court on grass, you need the net, a roll of kite string, 15 nails and a couple of friends. You also need a couple trees or similar objects that are about a court's width apart on a large plain of grass.

Tie the net to the trees using kite string to avoid any damage to the trees. Next lay out your court.

The court should be about regulation size with kite string lines tacked to the ground with nails. Be sure to get the string and nails as close to the ground as possible so you don't trip over them later.

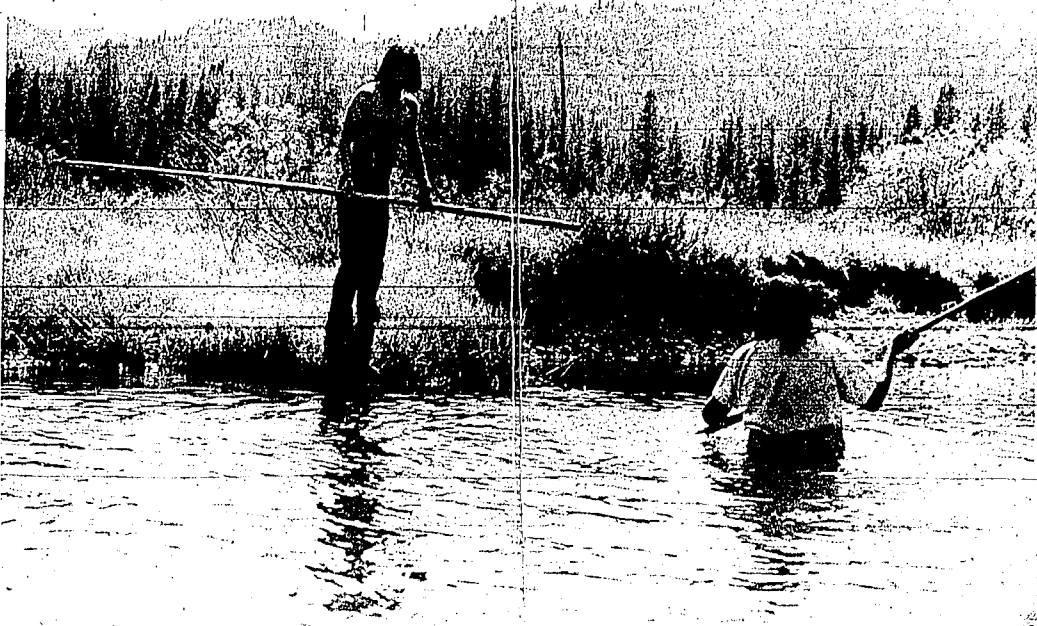

While there are numerous spots to play this game, two of the best are in Harmon on the north and south sides of the three new courts. There the grass is flat, relatively smooth, and the trees just happen to be the right distance apart.

The jury is still out on whether this type of tennis helps your game. Since the ball doesn't bounce correctly most of the time, the game becomes one of reflexes rather than consistent smooth strokes.

Getting the serve in becomes even more important on a lawn court than on an asphalt one, because once a ball hits grass, it's awful hard to tell which direction it will bounce if it bounces at all a distinct advantage to the server.

But while the grass game will help improve your reflexes and make you concentrate on your serve, it won't do much for your game if you're not lucky if you get to hit one ball the way you were taught.

And dousing a few beers while playing will do absolutely nothing for your stamina, though it may help your tolerance for alcohol.

WAYLAND CODY and Dean Preacher (on bank) fish for chinook salmon with spears in the traditional Indian fashion on Elk Creek in Bear Valley north of Stanley. Cody probes beneath undercut banks with his spear to dislodge hiding fish while Preacher waits for a sign of movement. Indians are allowed to fish in the traditional way by the terms of an 1863 treaty. Below, the spear used by Indians to take salmon, a long wooden shaft with barbs attached to the end. Effective use of this tool requires sharp reflexes and great quickness afoot to pursue, impale, and land large, powerful salmon.

Idaho Indians still use old ways to catch salmon

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN
Times-News writer

SALMON RIVER HEADWATERS — Nino Bear, a young Indian living on the Fort Hall reservation near Pocatello, learned to spear salmon from his father.

Nino's father, like Indian fathers for 200 years, took his sons to the Stanley Basin as young boys and taught them the traditional ways of catching salmon with wooden spears and hooks.

For the past few weeks, Indians from southern Idaho have converged on the headwaters of the Salmon river — stalking Chinook salmon.

Usually hunting in family groups just as their ancestors did, the Indians wade into the clear running waters and their long spears, poking under fallen trees and into deep pools trying to flush out the fish.

As this old technique has been passed down through generations of Bannock and Shoshone Indians, it has become a part of their culture and tradition.

Yet, if a white man was found taking a salmon in this way, he would be breaking the law and could be fined up to $200 and sent to jail for as long as six months.

An 1863 peace agreement called the Fort Bridger Treaty gave the Bannock and the eastern band of the Shoshone Indians the right to fish the head waters of the Salmon River.

In the language of the treaty, Idaho Indians "shall have the right to hunt on unoccupied lands of the United States, so long as game may be found thereon, and so long as peace subsists among the whites and Indians on the borders of the hunting districts."

The courts have ruled "the right to hunt" includes the right to fish and that the Indians may fish in the manner their tradition has taught them.

Yet even though peace has subsisted between Indians and whites, a mood of resentment and hostility has recently come over many whites who believe it unfair the Indians should be able to take salmon by a method they cannot use and in places where they are forbidden by law to fish. This feeling of injustice is especially inflamed now that the salmon runs have been so drastically reduced because of the many dams built on the Columbia River drainage.

But the Indians' treaty has neither the power nor the authority to protect the salmon run from man-made dams along the river. Their treaty only insures their right to fish.

Nowadays, Indian fishing rights on the upper Salmon River have become a delicate subject between Indians and non-Indians. Unfortunately, conservationist questions before the general public have too often been clouded or altogether obscured by subtle forms of prejudice and racism.

Many whites claim the Indians are taking all the salmon out of the river and are destroying this year's spawn.

There are stories of angry whites drawing guns on Indians fishing in the restricted tributaries.

The Indians, meanwhile, fear whites will try to break their treaty rights, and they complain bitterly about the white man's dams which have destroyed the salmon runs.

"All these salmon want to do is come up here and spawn and die," Nino Bear said emotionally on the banks of a creek north of Stanley. "Nature made them and brought them this way. Now the dams block their coming."

Neither Indian nor white argues that the number of salmon returning to these waters to spawn has been tragically reduced in the past 15 years.

"You could just walk across the stream on their backs," one old Indian recalled recently. The salmon runs once were so large Idaho rivers and streams were said to turn pink.

However, this is no longer the case. One field officer with the State Fish and Game Department said he swam the length of one eight mile creek in a wet suit and he counted only 15 salmon where 50-200 could once have spawned.

The same story is true of most other streams and creeks in the Salmon River drainage. Large numbers of salmon are simply not returning to the waters where they were spawned.

But, the rumors of Indians pulling fish out of the streams as fast as they can spear them are simply untrue. Game wardens from the Fort Hall Reservation who patrolled salmon fishing grounds this season say Indians have caught only about 20 to 50 salmon over the past two weekends.

However, State Fish and Game Department officials estimate a total of 700 to 800 salmon have been taken from the upper Salmon River since May 21 when the season opened, indicating that far more fish have been caught by non-Indian fishermen.

The Indians have game restrictions imposed on them by their own tribal council. The council determined the head-of-tribe Indian family may take a limit of four salmon over the course of a season.

Indian officials say there are about 450 families, not all of who fish, on the Fort Hall Reservation.

In view of the many accusations that their people are destroying the already poor salmon run, the Indians often react defensively and remain aloof from whites while fishing.

"I believe the salmon should be kept free for the Indian," Nino Bear observed. "They are part of the natural habitat. They (the white man) try to keep us away from here. Now always we're having a hard time finding salmon. God, 400 years from now my kids won't even have any salmon to fish. They used to be just lying in there. Pretty soon we'll just be going to the ocean to get them."

For the Indians, hunting the salmon is more than just a sport or a means of providing food. It is an ancient aspect of their relationship with nature, which they respect and revere.

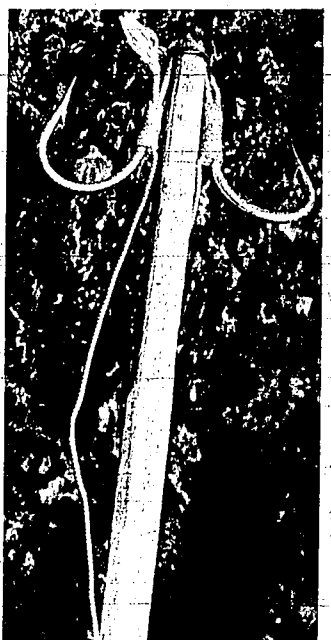

"Without Nature, I don't know where the Indian would be," Bear says. "It provides us with food and water. In it we want to be free."

Recently, state officials with the Fish and Game Department have been negotiating with members of the Fort Hall Tribal Council over a management program on the upper Salmon River.

Lanada Bayer, a member of the tribal council, says the Indians want to act in good faith in this issue and that they do not want to hurt the salmon run.

She remarked about these negotiations and the Indians' general view of this heated issue about fishing on the Salmon River headwaters. "Our ancestors certainly wouldn't have jeopardized the spawning grounds in the area."

"Our families have been fishing there for generations, and if we are endangering the spawning grounds, I would like to correct that."

Holiday crowds gone

All roads on the Sawtooth National Forest are now open with the exception of Clear Creek Meadows road on the Burley Ranger District and Trail Creek summit on the Kelchum Ranger District, which is temporarily closed by a mud slide. The Back Creek road on the Twin Falls Ranger District will continue to be restricted to trucks from 8 a.m. Monday morning to 5 p.m. Friday evening. Each weekend, it will be opened for traffic, but it is quite rough and narrow on the portion that is undergoing construction.

Logging trucks may be encountered coming over Couch Summit from the Waresack Hot Springs area on the Fairfield district every day except Sunday. Campsites should be available at most Sawtooth National Forest campgrounds including those at the lakes as crowds have diminished considerably. Pipet water is not available at Minnie Lake Inlet, Baumgartner or Galena Overlook because of broken waterlines.

Point campground at Redfish is closed from 2 p.m. Tuesday to 8 a.m. each Wednesday for irrigation and resource protection. This campsite is designated for tent camping only.

Mom-daughter camp set

TWIN FALLS The Twin Falls YWCA will sponsor a Mother-Daughter Camp at Camp Bradley Boy Scout Camp in the Stanley Basin August 6-10.

The camp will last for four days and three nights. Transportation will be up to the individual, but a car pool will be arranged.

Tents and ropes will be set up for sleeping quarters and meals will be served in the dining hall. You must provide your own sleeping bags and personal items. Activities available include fishing, boating, canoeing, and swimming on the two lakes near the camp, plus archery, a rifle range, hiking, and games.

Parenting classes for mothers will also be offered.

The cost will be $50 per mother-daughter couple (includes nine meals, $20 of which will be required as a non-refundable deposit).

Registration must be made by July 22. For information call Caryn Thompson at the YWCA, 733-4384.

Wouldn't be wise for a single girl to set her heart on finding a tall, blond, handsome man. Odds run 13 to one against her getting a six-footer. They go three to one against her meeting a blond. And as for handsome, don't know the odds exactly, but they're about the same as for beautiful.

In a churchyard near Boston, Mass., is a tombstone that reads in part: "... of pneumonia, supervening consumption, complicated by other diseases, the main symptom of which was inanity."

A study of various records shows the average cowboy 100 years ago worked the range only seven years before settling down. And his average age, 24.

SURGERY

Q. "How many people in this country every year now get surgical operations to change their sexes?"
A. Probably about 400. In 1975, at least 300 did so. It's no longer uncommon surgery. About 40 medical centers nationwide are into the thing now.

Q. "How many books had Marilyn Durham written before she wrote the bestseller 'The Man Who Loved Cat Dancing'?"
A. None.

Did I mention seven out of 10 crimes in this country are committed by people under age 25?

Under early English common law, any neighbor who heard a "human cry" was obliged to investigate, and if it came from the victim of a crime, to pursue, and if possible, subdue the criminal. Our Language man says this legal term "human cry" evolved in the vernacular as "hate and cry."

RATS!

In the polite societies of 100 years ago, "trousers" was considered a vulgar word as was "legs." And in fact, piano "limbs" were clothed. What nonsense! Today, between the TV ads about feminine-hygiene-and-hemorrhoids, you hear the game show wits deliver the exploits of sex and scatology, the lewd, winkings of jailhouse lingo, the rape of simple comfort in conversation. Clearly, those Victorian tidy tongues of yesteryear were so dirty minded that they had to bend double backwards. And clearly, too, these loose-tipped TV talkers with the cravings of whip-and-spur deviates are so dirty minded that they have to bend double forwards. Whatever happened to that Prince of decency and reason, Huckleberry Finn? Aren't there any Mark Twain mentalities left? Where's Will Rogers? Rats!
