Too much

WHEELING, W. Va. (UPI)—The ordeal was just too much for Buffalo Beth. Beth, a 600-pound buffalo, escaped from the New Good Zoo at Oglebay Park June 18. She roamed the countryside, and wasn't seen again until Tuesday night when she startled a motorist by jumping on the hood of the car as the woman was driving on a road north of the park. The driver escaped injury but Beth injured her leg. Park officials found Beth Wednesday morning. After immobilizing her leg and injecting her with tranquilizers, she was returned to the zoo in a van. But Beth died Wednesday night, apparently from the stress of her brief freedom.

NEW YORK (UPI)—In the glare of light, New York's "night of the animals" seemed just a fleeting nightmare. If the President, the mayor and the governor were demanding investigations into a blackout which virtually closed America's largest city for about 24 hours, most New Yorkers were just happy to see their TV sets flicker to life, feel the cool of their air conditioners and listen to the rumble of the subway train.

At one sweating bar they broke into song like Londoners during the blitz as the Con Ed juice surged back into the power lines late Thursday. "When the lights go on again, all over the world. It had been a nasty ordeal for many. More than 10,000 policemen — four times the normal night force — patrolled the streets Thursday night to head off a recurrence of the looting, sniping fire and arson which had shaken Harlem, the South Bronx, Brooklyn's Bedford-Stuyvesant district and other neighborhoods the night before on a scale not seen since the riots of the mid-1960s.

As police reported isolated instances of looting in the Bronx and Brooklyn, Consolidated Edison at 10:30 p.m. reported electric service had been restored to virtually all the 9 million residents of the city and its northern suburbs.

Nearly 3,000 persons were arrested by Thursday night. Estimates of the losses to small businesses ranged into the billions of dollars.

In the South Bronx about 100 persons picketed a police stationhouse to protest the arrest of their neighbors for looting.

Gov. Hugh Carey sent in 250 state troopers to help direct traffic and take some pressure off beleaguered city police.

Politicians were spitting mad, demanding explanations of why the power company allowed an extended replay of the 11-hour blackout of 1965.

Mayor Abraham Beame accused Con Ed of "gross negligence."

"Sometimes I think we ought to condemn them to hang," snapped the mayor at one point in a troubled day. Con Ed said it was just one of these things. Three belts of lightning shot out of a thunderstorm 50 miles north of the city, playing havoc with key lines, transformers and generators.

"It was an act of God," said Joyce Tucker, a spokeswoman for the power company.

Charles Luce, chairman of the board of Con Ed, was more specific.

"A fail-safe mechanism, installed after the 1965 blackout, which is designed to reduce 50 percent of the system's load during power crises, was inadequate," he said.

The Federal Power Commission, under orders from President Carter, began an investigation and said it would have an initial report within two weeks.

"Since the Northeast blackout of Nov. 9, 1965," said FPC Chairman Richard Durham, "many steps have been taken by the electric industry to avoid the serious recurrence of that very unfortunate episode. Recent events indicate those preventative measures have been insufficient in Con Ed's service area."

When power came at night, the darkness provided cover for the night stalkers, the looters — men, women and children.

Guns, liquor, furniture, and clothing, including one store's entire stock of tuxedos, were carted away.

No one was able to put an exact value on the losses, but unofficial estimates put it in the billions. Many of the small businesses in the city's high crime areas had been unable to obtain insurance.

N. Korea 'forced' to fire at 'copter

SEOUL, South Korea (UPI) — North Korea said Friday it was "compelled to fire" at an unarmed U.S. Army helicopter that strayed across the truce border, but denied any of the three Americans who died in the resulting crash was hit by gunfire.

U.S. officers identified the two sergeants and two chief warrant officers aboard the CH-7 "Chinook" helicopter, but did not say which one of the four men survived.

There was no information on the prisoner's condition, North Korea said he was receiving medical treatment. Officials in Washington had said he was hit by North Korean gunfire.

North Korea agreed to discuss the incident Saturday at a meeting of the Korean Military Armistice Commission in the Panmunjom truce village. The U.N. Command asked the Communists to free the wounded soldier and release the bodies of his three colleagues.

Political sources in South Korea said the unusually restrained tone in messages exchanged with North Korea indicated the Communists would release the American survivor, but they were not certain if they would do so by Saturday.

North Korea said "the unhappy incident resulted entirely from the errors of the military personnel of the U.S. side" but the Communists avoided their usual denunciations of "imperialist aggressors and warmongers."

The U.N. Command message to North Korea said the incident was "regrettable" and President Carter said in Washington he hoped to prevent a navigation mistake from "escalating into a confrontation."

The unarmed helicopter strayed into North Korean airspace and was shot down at about 10 a.m. Thursday (9 p.m. EDT Wednesday) near Kosong, about 165 miles northeast of Seoul on the eastern coast. It landed briefly, then tried to take off again when it was forced down by North Korean fire, according to South Korean troops who witnessed the incident.

North Korea radio broadcast its version of the shooting of the American craft Friday, confirming the Chinook landed once and then took off again.

The broadcast said anti-aircraft guns of the North Korean army forced the helicopter to land.

"Soldiers of the (North) Korean peoples army repeatedly signaled the enemy helicopter to stop there to be investigated," the radio said. "But the helicopter, refusing lifts, started taking off and flying. Our side was compelled to fire again. The U.S. military helicopter was hit by the fire and brought down."

"Two crewmen of the U.S. forces fell and died while attempting to escape while the helicopter was crashing," the broadcast said.

Olds found guilty

LA GRANDE, Ore. (UPI) — Michael Anthony Olds, 34, said by the defense to bear the "mark of Cain" because he was convicted in the rape of his mother, was found guilty Thursday of murder in the shooting death of a cab driver.

The jury deliberated about three hours in finding Olds, Walla-Walla, Wash., guilty of murder in the death of Steven Schmeer, 23, College Place, Wash., on April 5. Schmeer's body with two bullet wounds in it was found in his cab in a wheat field near Helix in Northeastern Oregon.

Circuit Judge Jack Olson sentenced Olds to life in prison after the defendant waived his right to a 48-hour delay in sentencing.

Olds held his head in his hands and made no sound during the reading of the verdict and the sentencing.

The murder charge was one of several facing Olds around the country — the result of an alleged crime spree that also left Mary Lindsay, 75, Tione, Ore., dead and included several kidnappings in his flight from his hometown to Pennsylvania, where he was captured. The kidnapping included a Hazelton woman.

The jury, before handing up the verdict, returned to the courtroom to get further instructions on possible verdicts of manslaughter or innocence — by reason of mental disease or defect. Twenty minutes after receiving the instruction, the jury returned with the murder verdict.

District Attorney Fred Bennet said in summing up that there was no evidence Olds had a mental problem, but considerable indication of premeditation on his part in shooting Schmeer in a plowed field a half mile off a road.

"I submit to you that Michael Olds forced the cab driver some distance off the road to a place that goes nowhere for Steven Frederick Schmeer," Bennet said. "Defense attorney Dennis Hatcher held a black, dog-eared leather bound Bible in pleading for his court-appointed client."

Probe set for Rupert lagoon

By SHANE O'NEILL
Times-News writer

RUPERT — State and federal officials today launched an investigation into engineering miscalculations which showed only five per cent of the rock at the site of a sewer lagoon pond northeast of Rupert.

Officials also temporarily shunted two Rupert proposals for completion of the lagoon cell and, directed the city to investigate other possibilities before a final decision is made on the method for completing the $5 million project.

Ian Von Lindern, project officer and environmental specialist for Idaho Department of Health and Welfare (DHW) in Magic Valley, said Thursday DHW and Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) "have decided to undertake a complete investigation" of the sudden appearance of 62,500 yards of rock.

Consulting engineers Hamilton and Voeller had estimated only 3000 yards of rock would need to be removed to reach design level for the lagoon.

Von Lindern will notify the Rupert officials and the investigation of the engineering study. He said he has requested information that includes design calculations and rock estimates, the drill log and "any information pertaining to it."

Von Lindern said there is no precedent for investigation of such a major mistake for either DHW or EPA in Idaho. He said the calculations will first be reviewed "in house" by the two agencies and then, if gross error is determined, it may be turned over to other agencies or a private firm for confirming evaluation.

The environmental specialist said that state and federal officials "are not ready to dismiss the city's proposal but we're not completely comfortable with it either."

The city had suggested blasting out the excess rock and also proposed sealing around the existing rock and raising banks of the cell.

"We just feel that it could cause serious operational and maintenance problems that could substantially increase the risk of excess seepage," Von Lindern said. "That in turn could cause ground water contamination."

State and federal officials have directed the city of Rupert to investigate relocation of the lagoon cell "to avoid the rock so that they may meet the original bidding and sealing specifications," Von Lindern said.

A second proposal by DHW and EPA is that Rupert reduce the size of the cell and provide an alternate means of disposal, either by additional irrigation or by emptying into the Mindoka Irrigation District canal, so that less water would have to be stored on the site.

Von Lindern said the sewage would be "pretty clean water by the time it comes out of that third cell and both (land application or canal dumping) would be acceptable."

Von Lindern said, "If that turns out not to be feasible, we may fall back on what they proposed, but we do want some written assurance from them."

He said he has informed the city that DHW and EPA want a written statement from the city that no excess seepage beyond one-tenth of an inch per day is expected and has called for an outline of all methods to be undertaken to limit that seepage.

Von Lindern said he also has called for a written statement that the city will accept "full responsibility for any excess seepage and damages" and that the city "wholly and at their own expense would undertake all action necessary to correct or eliminate all excess seepage."

Von Lindern said DHW and EPA have made no commitments to provide any additional funds for engineering of a cell move or construction of that cell "until our investigation is complete."

"Whether we would supply funds then would depend on the results of the investigation," Von Lindern said.

Von Lindern said the investigation would be completed under EPA and DHW grants, but that possibility does exist. "The severity of whatever actions we do take will depend on what we do find," Von Lindern said.

Ray says illegally confined

PETROS, Tenn. (UPI) — James Earl Ray, the convicted assassin of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., pleaded innocent today to charges he escaped from the fortress-like Brushy Mountain State Prison June 10.

Ray claimed he was illegally confined in the remote-East Tennessee facility.

General Sessions Court Judge John M. Davis of Wartburg permitted one representative each from a radio station, a television network and a newspaper to attend the arraignment in a small office inside the prison walls.

About 20 other news personnel were kept outside the main prison gate during the hearing.

Warden Stanley Lane had said earlier that he would seek to have the hearing closed because of "security precautions."

New Yorkers joked, cursed, looted, danced

NEW YORK (UPI) — They joked in bars and cursed the power company. They stood fiercely in doorways, waiting with clubs for the looters. They danced in the dark and brushed their teeth with orange juice. They were New Yorkers. Coping is their birthright.

From Yonkers to Coney Island during the frightful night of the blackout of '77, the only glitter left on the Big Apple came from car headlights and match sticks.

It was a catastrophe tailor-made for the city's special brand of gallows humor.

"It's so dark, I can't even see the hookers," said one West Side resident.

At Shea Stadium, the night baseball game between the Mets and the Chicago Cubs was called off because of darkness. The 25,000 fans stayed in their seats and, for whatever reason, sang "Ingle Bells."

Darrell Naquin, 23, of Manhattan, was in a Manhattan restaurant when the lights went out. Someone said it was a Russian plot but the eating continued. "It was a French restaurant," he explained.

A barrage of one-liners, of course, was directed at Consolidated Edison, the power utility which went kaput and delivered the city to the darkness and the heat.

In the Bronx, District Attorney Mario Merola postponed for a week a news conference at which he planned to announce the arrests of 13 businessmen who allegedly had tampered with Con Ed meters. "They ought to give 'em medals," said one New Yorker.

And there were the sounds of police sirens and smashing glass and gunfire piercing the darkness as looters stalked the neighborhoods of the poor.

It was the night of the animals," said one patrolman. By midnight Thursday, more than 3,400 persons had been arrested and city officials reckoned a shattered ramshackle jail known as "The Tombs" to house them.

Shop owners stood fiercely on the littered sidewalks in front of their stores in the 90-degree heat and the dark, ready to fight off the vandals. Some had guns. Others stood guard with baseball bats and homemade spears.

"What else can they do?"

said a police spokesman.

The ordeal had begun gradually, almost gently, as the lights dimmed and then went out completely like a brief sunset.

All over town, people linked hands and groped down pitch black stairwells to the streets to wait for the dawn and to worry, to line up at phone booths and to order another beer in candlelit saloons.

Thousands of highrise dwellers panted up endless flights of stairs using birthday candles to find their way in the city's worst blackout since 1965.

And when they reached their soggy apartments, often there was no water because electric pumps had failed. Some washed out toothpaste with milk or orange juice.

On Broadway, the casts of "Otherwise Engaged" and "Grease" played on with the help of flashlights.

A few blocks away at the Roseland Dance Hall, dancers still swayed when the lights went out and the band struck up, of course, "Dancing in the Dark."

The Long Island Railroad said 4,000 persons were stranded in 12 hot and stuffy trains for up to 9½ hours. Tens of thousands more on Conrail commuter lines and city subways also were affected. Buses continued to run, but taxis were scarce and some drivers scalped for higher prices.

It was a night to improvise and laze around.

Consider the dilemma of the funeral home operator suddenly deprived of refrigeration.

"We were all set to have a candlelight service," said a spokesman for the Unity Funeral Chapels Inc. in Manhattan. "We got our power back around 10 a.m. today but we didn't have to worry because all the bodies were embalmed anyway."

More than 13 persons, including two babies, were trapped on the 6th floor observatory of the Empire State Building when the blackout hit. Two teams of building mechanics walked up more

Gem Board rejects drink ban

BOISE (UPI) — Fearing it would become smared by the Administrative Procedures Act, the Idaho State Board of Education today rejected by a single vote a new policy banning alcohol on college and university campuses in the state.

By the same margin, the board also decided against applying a decision that its earlier rule against campus drinking violated the act. The trustees did, however, decide to try to win an exemption from the State Legislature from certain portions of the procedures act so that it can adopt rules and set fees and tuition without having to follow cumbersome hearing provisions.

Board president A.L. Alford Jr. cast the tie-breaking votes on the two tie-choking decisions.

In other action, the board appointed R. Richard E. Bullington interim president of Boise State University. His salary will be $38,000 annually. It also authorized Bullington a monthly housing allowance of $500.

And the board named Gerald R. Wallace, retired dean of the RSU College of Education, interim executive vice president at an annual salary $34,500. Bullington temporarily succeeds Dr. John B. Barnes who resigned as president to become a professor of education at Northern Arizona University this fall. Wallace will replace Bullington as executive vice president.

The board also voted to name a Boise River foot-bridge, between the university campus and the city's Julia Davis Park. In memory of the late Idaho educator, Robert Glibb.

And the trustees approved a request from Boise State to seek a $2.75 million federal housing loan for construction of new student apartments. The university is also seeking a federal loan of $475,000 to renovate existing student housing to save energy costs.

Control on natural gas prices passes hurdle

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter's plan to keep federal controls on natural gas prices has taken a big step toward law.

The House Commerce Committee gave him a big victory Thursday by approving his plan, rejecting proposals to phase out controls and let prices seek their own level.

The committee sent the nontax portions of Carter's energy program to a special energy committee that will put them with the tax portions and present the whole package to the House in August.

The tax portions, chiefly levies on industrial use of oil and gas, on crude oil, and on cars with low gasoline mileage, have been completed by the Ways and Means Committee.

By a 22-19 vote Thursday, the Commerce Committee confirmed an earlier tentative vote in favor of Carter's natural gas plan. Under it, gas would be allowed a new higher ceiling price of $1.75 per thousand cubic feet in interstate sales, compared with the current $1.45 ceiling.

Carter's plan also would extend controls for the first time to sales in the states where gas is produced.

Proponents of deregulation lost in several attempts, once on a technically that threw out their plan, then 23-20 on a plan giving higher prices to profits controls, and finally on a resounding "no" voice vote on a more sweeping deregulation proposal.

The key vote for Carter was by a Carter-Rep. Tim Lee Carter, R-Ky., no relation — who voted with the President. In June on a tentative vote, Carter had voted against the President. Since then, he had said he felt unregulated prices could be a "ripoff" for gas producers.

The non-tax energy bill includes provisions:

- To help homeowners improve the energy efficiency of their homes through inspections and loans.
- To force utilities and industry away from oil and gas toward coal, nuclear energy and the like.
- To end the bargain electricity rates that industry often gets for bulk use.
- To force electric power systems to tie together in some cases, for reliability of service to prevent blackouts and "brownouts."
- And to set energy efficiency standards for appliances.

ASK THE EXPERTS

An Ottawa reader wants to know if it is ever good defense to open a trump, and if so, when.

Today's hand is a good example of a very successful trump opening. There is no general rule as to when, but the usual time is when you think declarer may need to use dummy's trumps to ruff losses in his own hand.

Phil Batt will seek state post

BOISE (UPI)—Saying he couldn't talk himself into being a "full time politician" Phil Batt, president pro tem of the Idaho senate, registered his political committee for the office of lieutenant governor Thursday with the Secretary of State.

Batt, R-Wilder, who had been mentioned as a possible gubernatorial candidate, said he had "been in contact" with other Republican hopefuls and all of them "seemed happy to get rid of my opponent."

He said he had made no deals with Attorney General Wayne Kidwell and resigning Republican State Chairman Vernon Ravenscroft, adding, "I'm not tending my support to anyone. I think it would be improper at this time."

"I have enjoyed being a part-time politician too much," he said, adding, "I could still farm and write my column, I presume, if I am elected lieutenant governor."

Inspired defense usually starts with the choice of the opening lead. Today's hand shows Belladonna and Garozzo of Italy beating an expert declarer at an apparently unbeatable contract.

Both South players arrived at four spades in an IMP match. The king of clubs was opposed against the Italian declarer who proceeded to make five odd by eventually discarding three of dummy's diamonds on clubs.

Belladonna opened a trump. His unfortunate opponent won in his hand and played the king of hearts.

Belladonna was in with the ace, and promptly led the seven of diamonds.

South studied the situation for a long time. He knew that Belladonna was perfectly capable of undocking the ace-king of a suit. He also

Abortion rule will hurt poor

By RUSSELL BAKER
© N.Y. Times Service

NEW YORK — After many an arduous day, our leaders have finally come clean about where they really stand on abortion. They are against it for poor people.

All of them are agreed on this point. President Carter. Congress. The Supreme Court. That's a unanimity you don't often see in Washington. As a result, poor people must now produce more unwanted children.

What is behind this decision to boost the unwanted child supply? How do unwanted children and the poor feel about it? Will it throw a monkey wrench into the SALT talks? What does it mean for the future of prize fighting?

To answer these and a host of similar questions, we interviewed the usual broad spectrum of American society, starting with Sims Lovelace, a 49-year-old pauper and father of 17 children, 15 of them unwanted, except by the FBI.

Actually, I'm kind of glad the government wants me to get back into production," said Lovelace. "For three of four years there, what with the missus getting government subsidized abortions every time another unwanted little nipper threatened to boom on the horizon, I felt like the government didn't want my work. I was being punished more often than a politician's indictments.

Now, ready to resume grinding out unwanted children at his nation's call, Lovelace believes the new policy means war is in the offing. Not so, insists Ursula Wegg, unwanted child.

Ursula believes the new policy is part of a government conspiracy involving the neutron bomb, which has been secretly developed and tested at the time the politicians were pretending that the right to life — at least for unwanted paupers — was the thing uppermost in their minds.

"Face it," said cynical 7-year-old Ursula. "Those hypocrites down in Washington will pay billions for the latest bomb, but not one cent for holding down the flow of unwanted paupers. Why? If you ask me, I think they want to have plenty of unwanted paupers on hand to test their neutron bomb on."

The coarse cynicism of these remarks from a mere 7-year-old reveals how severely a child may be scarred by being unwanted. It also reinforces the argument that persons of this sort would make appropriate subjects for the testing of neutron bombs.

A more profound insight came from Yelberton Crankshaw, swindler. For years Crankshaw has made millions by bilking the government of funds earmarked for life's losers.

"What you've got here basically," said Crankshaw, "is a government effort to fill a gap for us swindlers. You've got your government old age programs, which enrich crooked doctors and nursing home thieves.

"And you've got your mid-life programs, where a hard-working crook can rip off the welfare, the unemployment, the food stamps, and so forth. Up to now, however, the government has provided very little help for the swindler who hopes to get rich by abusing children."

Crankshaw foresees a federal child adoption program aimed at changing unwanted children into wanted children.

"And if I know the government," he said, "they will try to do it with money. You take an unwanted kid, put it up for adoption and nobody wants it. Why? It's an unwanted kid, that's why. So what do you do? If you're the government, you put the kid on the block, stuff a wad of money in his pocket, and suddenly, that unwanted kid is wanted. Crooks like me will be adopting unwanted kids by the thousands."

Crankshaw's belief that the new program is designed to encourage fresh ventures in racketeering may be far-fetched. There already are so many opportunities for swindling the government's welfare programs that there aren't nearly enough crooks to operate federal swindles efficiently.

With a big surge in the production of unwanted paupers, however, this deficiency can be overcome and the nation can attain maximum efficiency in criminal acquisition of federal funds by the end of the century.

One does not fancy today's unwanted pauper children becoming tomorrow's well-heeled crooks. One prefers them to remain sweet, miserable, unwanted, little children, about whose existence one can feel tender and morally upright. It is annoying that such rewarding creatures should turn to swindling, particularly if they do so successfully.

Don Kester's gleeful words

It wasn't just another uninformed resident and a handful of other Rupert residents kept telling engineers of the new Rupert sewage lagoon that the site of the treatment facility was one big rockpile.

But the Environmental Protection Agency, the city of Rupert and others were determined to locate the $5 million sewage treatment facility north of town.

All went well until the construction crews began blasting out the third pond for the sewage plant. Blast as they did, the construction crews couldn't get rid of the rock out of the ground.

The engineers had predicted only 3,000 cubic yards of rock would have to be removed to build the third sewage pond.

That wasn't even a close guess. An investigation of the sewage site after the blasting began found more than 60,000 cubic yards of rock would have to be taken out of the ground to make the storage pond usable.

Once the rock was removed, engineers conceded the treated sewage possibly could filter into the underground water supply used by much of southern Idaho.

Realtor Kester and other residents in north Rupert have complained for two years about the location of the sewage treatment lagoons over the rockpile.

City officials tired of the constant moaning about the sewage plant and pressed ahead with its development. They thought the grumbling about the plant was only a self-interested complaining of residents who disliked the idea of living next to a sewage treatment lagoon.

But there was more than self-interest involved in the grumbling.

Don Kester and his friends knew the terrain where the plant was being built. They knew something the engineers couldn't or wouldn't believe.

Now, the engineering firm of Hamilton and Voeller literally is caught between a rock and a hard spot.

Rupert city officials and the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare should ask some hard questions about why Hamilton and Voeller underestimated by 20 times the amount of rock at the sewage lagoon site.

Sure, Don Kester was a pain to the City of Rupert and Hamilton and Voeller engineers.

But the Don Kesters of the world play an important part in this age.

Whether they battle land-use planning, the Idaho Power Company, Sun Valley or some other figure, Don Kesters usually won't go along with the crowd and self-interest.

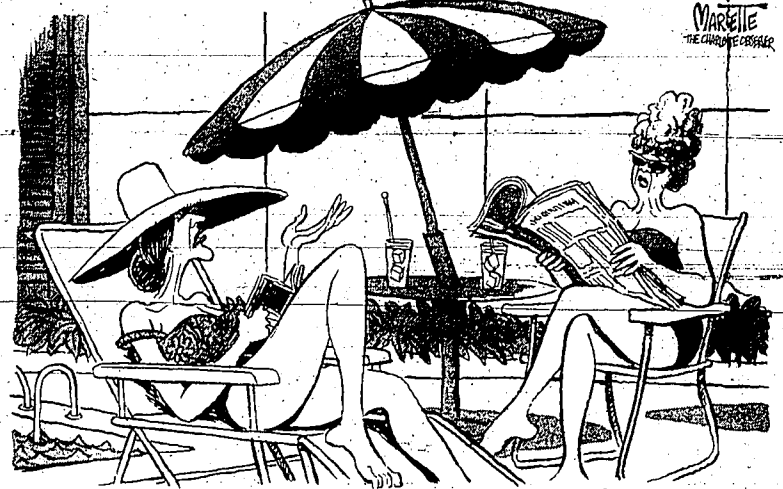

But every so often they get the satisfaction of uttering the most gleeful words ever thrown at a bureaucracy or recognized authority.

These words are: "I told you so."

Africans pose communist paradox

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

LIBREVILLE, Gabon — The recently concluded African summit here posed this seeming paradox: while lionizing Idi Amin and choosing Communist-backed guerrillas to rule Rhodesia, the conference was actually dominated by Conservatives worried about deepening Soviet penetration in Africa.

The Organization of African Unity's (OAU) annual meeting, therefore, revealed this face for black Africa: no real regard for human rights; irrepensible enjoyment in kicking the white man around; a right-of-center orientation that views the Kremlin's African offensive with far more gravity than does Andy Young.

This disagreement about the Soviet threat is not the only difference between the reality at Libreville and the Carter administration's idealization. Apart from coincidental agreement on Rhodesia, the black Africans here have no more interest in President Carter's crusade for world-human-rights-than-does Moscow or Pretoria.

While Amin and Rhodesia dominated the headlines, the Libreville summit moved rightward from OAU meetings of recent years. The conference went on record, though euphemistically, against spreading Soviet interference in African affairs. An Algerian effort to muddy the language picked up only 10 votes (including the five "front-line" states) out of 49.

U.S. diplomats, discreetly watching from the corridors here, attributed this rejection of the radical bloc to new U.S. initiatives against white minority rule in southern Africa. Hardly anybody else agreed. Rather, the Russian hand in last spring's rebel invasion of Zaire has set most of the continent — especially French-speaking Africa — eyeing the Russian bear with suspicion.

But the triumph here by Uganda's President Amin shows anti-Soviet attitudes do not mean African leaders are with the West in heart or mind. Not only was Marshal Amin cheered whenever he set foot into the conference center, but his comic opera allegation of a Western plot to kill him and other African leaders drew sustained applause. Amin's colleagues said nothing about mass murder in Uganda. Nor would they say a word against him privately to reporters.

The giveaway was the delighted laughter and applause with which Amin's self-description as "conqueror of British imperialism" was greeted. "Any policy that bolittes the white man will always find favor with the black African." An Arab African delegate confided to us.

Delight with Amin's twisting of the poor old British lion's tail is not mitigated by concern that the splendidly uniformed marshal kills people. Nor were the statesmen here interested in lesser crimes against humanity: an accelerating level of killings by Ethiopia's militant leftist regime; slave labor in Equatorial Guinea; political repression in Burundi, Guinea, and in varying degrees in other countries throughout Africa.

Save for Somalia's complaint about Ethiopian genocide, none of this was considered by the four-day summit. Therefore, a controlling principle in Africa: human rights are violated only if a white man abuses a black man; a black man repressing, imprisoning, another black man is worthy of no attention.

While everybody expressed outrage against Rhodesia's white minority government, there was early opposition when the "front-line" states wanted to annoint Communist-backed "patriotic front" states wanted to annoint Communist-backed "patriotic front" guerrillas as rulers of the future Zimbabwe, Senegal and other French-speaking countries worried about additional Marxist influence in southern Africa that would deepen Soviet penetration.

President Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia, the only "front-line" chief here, turned the tide. Working behind the scenes, Kaunda convinced his colleagues that their endorsement would prevent Angola-style civil war in Zimbabwe after Ian Smith's regime falls.

But if the summit endorsed the "patriotic front" with lingering misgivings about its Communist support, the notion of proclaiming one-party control for Zimbabwe would benefit of elections certainly did not bother the conservatives — typically the host president, Omar Bongo of Gabon.

Intimately allied with France and on good terms with the U.S., Bongo welcomes private enterprise, decries the presence of the Russian backed Cubans in Africa and opposed the invasion of Zaire.

Post-war babies hit labor force

By STEPHEN GOOD
© Chicago Daily News

There's a bulge in the nation's population, and it's beginning to put some pressures on the business world. A bumper crop of young Americans, born in the post-war baby boom, are pushing their way into the labor force. They're competing for better jobs, better pay and, often, more power.

The competition is intense for these better jobs, and some observers say it's bound to get even more intense.

Will the grown-up babies of the baby boom — now aged 25 to 35 — be able to pursue the careers they choose, or will they have to settle for less in the population bulge? Will the baby boom doom the Horatio Alger success story?

Not necessarily. But one thing's for sure, the baby boom babies far outnumber their elders in the work force.

"We really have a shortage of top executive talent now, and the shortage comes from the Depression years and war years," said James A. Kuhns, a partner at the management consulting firm of Hewitt & Associates. "It's going to be a lot more competitive" for these in the baby boom generation, he added.

Figures from the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics back up Kuhns' prediction. According to 1976 estimates, there are 3.23 million men and women in the 55-to-64 age bracket hold white-collar jobs. They possess a lion's share of the top executive posts.

In the 45-to-54 age bracket, 8.48 million Americans hold white-collar jobs. And in the 35-to-44 bracket, the white-collar workers number 8.5 million.

In the baby boom bracket, ages 25 to 34, a whopping 12.73 million men and women hold white-collar jobs. That's almost 2 1/2 baby-boom workers for every worker in the senior age bracket. But the glut of young workers was caused by more than just a baby boom. Nowadays, young women and minorities are vying for the same jobs that once went regularly to white males.

Still, there's always room for an enterprising few at the top of the business pyramid.

"I have never found a company that has an excess of good management talent," said Fred Teague, a vice president at Booz, Allen & Hamilton Inc. management consultants.

"They're created more than anything by experience and opportunity," he said. "It doesn't seem to relate proportionately to the numbers."

Many workers gain valuable experience as companies grow and add new positions, Teague said. Whenever the economy improves, so do job opportunities.

And it appears that many young workers are moving up the corporate ladder faster than their predecessors.

"In today's market situation, you're finding younger people in higher positions than you might have found 15 years ago," said Grant Chandler, vice president of human resources at International Harvester. "They're well-qualified people and they have a generally good educational background." But for the best and the brightest, job competition will become stiffer, Chandler added.

"I think there will be more competition for the younger people in the next 10 to 15 years," he said. "We have a larger number of well-educated people than we had in the past."

Chandler predicted, however, that workers won't stay frustrated when their careers are blundered at the higher levels.

Instead, they'll move more freely to other companies.

"There will be more mobility from company to company and from industry to industry," he said. "People will intelligently make decisions with respect to their futures."

Salaries for the top executives of the future are as impossible to predict as the company. But it seems logical that if more talent becomes available, the pay will drop.

Hewitt's Kuhns believes there is "a distinct possibility" that salaries will dip for top executives in the future. Even if a surplus of talent doesn't develop at the upper levels, taxes may take bigger chunks out of top executives' earnings.

"The trend is to spread the wealth," Kuhns said. "There may not be much in the way of capital accumulation opportunities."

But whatever happens to taxes, top executives probably will keep pocketing hefty salaries. Very few employes acquire the experience needed to run a business in the upper levels of the corporate pyramid. This rare experience always commands a high price.

On the other side of the baby boom, demographers see another shortage, and — you guessed it — possibly another baby boom.

Back in 1948, the baby boom was producing 21.1 births per 1,000 population. But the birth rate began falling in the 1960s to last year's rate of 14.7 births per 1,000 population — the lowest level in the nation's history.

This trend won't stop population growth, however, because the original baby boom babies are now in their child-producing years.

Dr. William Lazer, a Michigan State University marketing professor, predicts that 80 per cent of those in the 25-to-34 age group will have children within the next decade. So, by the year 2000, these yet-unborn members of Baby Boom II will be entering the work force.

Lazer believes that the nation's economy, as well as the work force, will be affected by the original baby boom. By 1985, more than half of all married women will be working, he said. They will increase the average family's purchasing power and boost the standard of living. The nation's upper middle class will grow, and half of all families will have yearly incomes above $25,000.

What other effects will the baby boom have on the economy? Plenty.

Unemployment, for example, could rise and fall along with the work force population. The health of the economy, however, will affect unemployment more than any population bulge.

Housing, currently in short supply, could get even more scarce as the baby boom babies settle down to start families. Taxes and Social Security will have to adjust for the population bulge that should reach its prime earning years by the year 2000 and later move into retirement.

Teachers, less in demand today than they were several years ago, may be needed again as Baby Boom II gets under way.

Unknown events in the future — like politics, economic depression, another world war and natural catastrophes — could throw some of these predictions off-kilter. But it's obvious that whenever a baby boom comes along, all of society has to make room.

Magic Valley school boards organize for new year

MAGIC VALLEY — It was reorganization time for Magic Valley school boards which held annual meetings Monday and Tuesday.

At the meetings, officers of the board were chosen, and in Bliss, Richfield, and Jerome the chairmanship changed hands.

Bliss, Richfield and Dietrich had new school superintendents attending, and several boards swore in new trustees.

Other, regular business conducted at the meetings ranged from hiring new teachers to planning to refinancing bond issues.

Gooding

Supt. Gene Gibbons said the Gooding board Tuesday approved allowing non-resident students to attend Gooding schools tuition free. However, if the court rules in favor of the Gooding School District in a suit being brought against parents of non-resident students to collect tuition fees, tuition will be billed retroactively for 1977-78.

Rod Glaumer was re-elected chairman of the board. Walter Nelson, vice chairman, and Francis Gutin was reappointed treasurer-clerk. Cecil Hobbes was hired as attorney for the board which also retained the second Tuesday of the month as its meeting day.

The board approved new contracts for Karen Gilmore, Bessie Pagnine, Kathy Peirce, Janet Dennis, Marci Daines, Donna Murphy, Cheryl Reed and Mike Rozant.

Superintendent Gibbons said the extra curricular activity teacher pay schedule was adjusted.

Bliss

The Bliss school board hired superintendent T. R. "Dick" Flores, an Idaho native who, for the past five years, was deputy director of a six-state education program for low income adults. Flores holds a Ph.D. in educational administration from the University of Texas at Austin.

Larry Graves was elected chairman of the school boards, a position he assumed when Charlene Stroud resigned last year. New trustee Mick Hobbes was sworn in to replace Sterling Bray, who retired after serving 33 years on the board.

The board hired Linda Peterson, home economics, and Carol Pyle, social studies.

The board meets on the second Monday of each month at 8 p.m. in the school library.

Wendell

Vard-McHan was re-elected chairman of the Wendell school board; with Jim Campbell named vice chairman. Three new trustees were sworn in.

They are Vernon Mason, who had served out the unexpired term of Grant Zollinger; Ed Christopherson, replacing Bill Fleming, and John Harbison, who defeated Evelyn Campbell.

The board decided to refinance its physical education building bond issue of $905,000 at a lower interest rate to save $128,000.

Superintendent Lawrence LaRue said.

LaRue said a special meeting of the board will be held July 25 to discuss the need for additional elementary classrooms. He also said bids will be opened on portable classrooms. Depending on the bids received, he said, the school district would like to buy three units.

Hagerman

Dean Williams was re-elected chairman of the Hagerman Board of Trustees. Lou Koopman was named vice chairman, and Jim Henstee was named treasurer.

Clarice "Kitty" Jones joined the board replacing Vern Cox.

The board raised but lunch prices five cents, bringing the cost of lunches at Hagerman High School to 50¢ and 45¢ for grades one through six.

The board hired special education teacher Ben Christensen and two special education aides.

Next month the Hagerman board will meet August 4 but will return to meeting on the second Monday of each month following that.

Richfield

Richfield School Board, which hired new superintendent Craig Hall, decided Monday to put its fifth and sixth grades together under Mrs. Furtado. Mrs. Hope will teach fourth grade.

The board named Heber Kirkland new high school basketball coach. Kirkland teaches seventh grade, and Wayne Humphreys, who resigned as high school basketball coach, was not replaced in an effort to conserve. Hall said.

New members on the Richfield board are Stan Naylor, who replaced Jay Ward and Maxine Striwo, who replaced Peggy Robinson.

Chuck Erwin is the new chairman, and Jim Wellhausen, new vice chairman.

Hall was previously the principal at Valley High School.

Valley

Arlan Bodily, superintendent of Valley schools, said the Valley School Board re-elected Roy Coulson, chairman, and Keith Huettig, vice chairman.

The board meets at 7 p.m. from November through March and 8 p.m. April through October on the second Monday of each month.

Bodily said the district has vacancies in kindergarten, special education, elementary school librarian and high school principal. Former principal Craig Hall left to become superintendent at Richfield.

Fairfield

Lefty Packham was re-elected chairman of the Fairfield School Board and Thomas Spackman, vice chairman. Marvin France was sworn in as the new trustee to replace Joe McCarter, who resigned after serving 10 years.

The Fairfield board hired three new teachers: Gail Potter, kindergarten, Robert Briggs, fifth grade, and Pete Guiches, high school business education, girls track and junior varsity basketball.

The board meets the second Monday of each month at 8 p.m. at the high school.

Dietrich

The Dietrich School Board membership stayed the same, but the chairman's gavel changed hands from John Power to Lois Stoddard. Arnold Bridge replaced Mrs. Stoddard as vice chairman.

The board hired Sally Lanham, English teacher; Supt. Wayne Perrow said roof repairs at the Dietrich school are complete and remodeling of the hallways will begin soon.

He said the district will offer a shop class this year and will rent facilities in town for welding instruction.

German leader ends US talks

WASHINGTON (UPI)—West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt flew to Iceland today, ending an official visit in which he and President Carter pledged closer consultations on major issues and claimed their reported differences were exaggerated.

A 19-gun salute boomed out as protocol officials paid farewell to Schmidt on the Washington Monument grounds shortly before 9 a.m. EDT. He then flew by Marine helicopter to Andrews Air Force Base to board his special jet.

In two days of talks, Carter and Schmidt emphasized the closeness of the consultations between their two governments and their basic agreement on major issues," according to a White House statement released Thursday.

Schmidt also disclosed that Carter had accepted his invitation to visit West Germany, but set no date for the trip.

"They expressed the belief that the small differences between their governments in recent months have often been exaggerated in public accounts, and they committed themselves to be in direct touch with one another in the future to make sure that exaggeration does not recur," the statement said.

Royal birth hailed by salute

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (UPI)—Queen Silvia has given birth to King Carl Gustaf's first child, Victoria Ingrid Alice Desirée. The 7-pound, 20-ounce girl is not eligible to succeed her father under Sweden's existing laws, but they may be changed.

The royal birth Thursday was hailed early this morning with a special 21-gun salute across the harbor from the Royal Palace and cannons later boomed across Sweden in salute.

Flags were flown from all public buildings in honor of the baby's arrival.

King Carl Gustaf announced the child's name at a special meeting of the cabinet today. Afterwards, a thanksgiving service was conducted in the Palace Chapel by Archbishop Sundby in the presence of His Majesty and 600 invited guests, including members of the government and parliament.

Queen Silvia, 33, a former German commoner, had the baby at Karolinska Hospital in Stockholm. The 37-year-old king attended the delivery and four hours later the royal couple and the baby went home to the palace.

"She looked tired and was resting her head on her husband's shoulder," said Maj. Lars Gunnar Winterfeldt, commander of the palace guard.

Two sisters give guilty pleas

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI)—Two sisters accused of hauling $2 million in loot across country from the home of slain mistress Marjorie Jackson have pleaded guilty to a federal conspiracy charge.

Marjorie Pollitt, 49, of Mooresville, Ind., and her sister, Robertina Harrell, 53, of Hingogdo, Ga., Thursday changed their original innocent pleas to guilty of conspiracy to transport stolen money.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Kennard Foster recommended dismissal of charges of interstate transportation of more than $5,000 in stolen funds against them.

Mrs. Pollitt, whose former husband is one of two men charged with killing Mrs. Jackson, has been cooperating with authorities in recent weeks. She led FBI agents to the alleged murder weapon and to $1.6 million in loot buried in the Arizona desert.

The sisters pleaded guilty to charges carrying maximum penalties of five years in prison and $10,000 fines. U.S. District Judge James Noland, who ordered a presentence report, did not set a date for sentencing.

Noland accepted the pleas after making sure both women had been advised of their rights and were happy with their attorneys.

Graham wants to go to Russia

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (UPI)—Evangelist Billy Graham will hold a series of religious meetings in Hungary and has discussed the possibility of a crusade in Russia, a spokesman for Graham announced Thursday.

Graham's accepted an invitation for the visit, which is tentatively scheduled for this fall, from a group of Hungarian church officials at a recent Baptist World Alliance Meeting in Miami.

"It is hoped that a visit by Dr. Graham to a socialist country like Hungary would help promote a mutual understanding between the people of the United States and the people of Hungary," said a spokesman for Graham.

The spokesman also met in Miami with several Russian church officials about the possibility of Graham conducting a similar series of meetings in the Soviet Union.

"The Billy Graham Evangelistic Association and the Russian brethren are ready to join forces to make such a visit a reality," the spokesman said.

Single official blamed for ban

MOSCOW (UPI)—An unorthodox Soviet artist who called off his one-man show because one of his controversial paintings was banned now says his dispute was with a single Soviet official, not the whole system.

Painter Ilya Glazunov also complained Thursday that the meaning of the banned painting—a montage of historical images including Josef Stalin, Mao Tse-tung and the Playboy bunny—had been distorted by Western journalists.

Glazunov, who last year painted an official birthday portrait of President Leonid Brezhnev, was the subject of many Western news reports last month when his painting was banned by a Cultural Ministry panel.

The 47-year-old artist said the work—"The Mystery of the 20th Century"—was his "masterpiece" and his one-man show, scheduled to open only hours after the panel inspected it, could not open without it.

At the time, Glazunov had said he was certain the Culture Ministry panel "will understand that for me human rights means the right to paint as I want and to show my works."

200 nurses protest conviction

DETROIT (UPI)—More than 200 Filipino nurses, some carrying signs that read "Nurses are here to heal—Not to kill. Not to poison," Thursday protested the convictions of two of their countrywomen for poisoning patients at a veterans hospital.

Filipina Marcia, 31, and Leonora Perez, 33, who were found guilty Wednesday of poisoning the patients with injections of the muscle-relaxant drug, Pavulon, also got support from one of their vietnams.

William Loesch, 28, one of the five patients the nurses were convicted of poisoning at the Ann Arbor VA Hospital two years ago, said he is convinced the women are innocent.

"I really feel bad for the girls," said Loesch, a Vietnam veteran who testified for the defense in the nurses' trial in U.S. District Court. "They saved my life and now I'm going to do whatever I can to save them from going to jail."

Many of the nurses who massed at the federal courthouse building in downtown Detroit to protest the guilty verdict were dressed in their uniforms.

Spruce Goose to museum

CULVER CITY, Calif. (UPI)—The "Spruce Goose," Howard Hughes' unique wooden flying boat and the largest airplane ever built, will become part of an aviation museum after 30 years under wraps.

The plane, one of Hughes' most treasured possessions, will be turned over to the operators of an air museum to be built on the Long Beach waterfront near another giant leftover from another era, the Queen Mary, now a floating hotel.

The announcement was made Thursday by the Summa Corp., the Hughes holding company that administers much of his empire while the courts try to decide what should become of it.

The non-profit "Air Museum of the West" will be built by a group of Los Angeles area businessmen who plan to ask the Long Beach City Council next week to back a donation drive, said group spokesman Gilbert Alston.

The plane is a monument both to Hughes' genius and eccentricity.

Originally conceived as a troop transport early in World War II, when enemy submarines menaced Atlantic and Pacific shipping, the plane's unprecedented size created such technical problems that it was not finished until 1947.

Made of wood because of wartime metal shortages, it was dubbed "The Spruce Goose." Actually the wood is birch.

Few but Hughes called it by its official name, the HK1 Hercules Flying Boat.

At 229 feet long, the plane is only 11 feet shorter than a Boeing 747, but has a 326-foot wing span, a three-foot-half breadth that is 60 per cent larger than a 747's.

It was designed to carry 750 fully equipped combat troops, twice the 747's load, lifted by eight 28-cylinder gasoline engines producing 24,000 horsepower.

Lib foes picket session

HOUSTON (UPI)—A planning session for an international women's conference is being picketed by some women who say the directors of the conference are discriminating against those who oppose women's lib.

Among those participating in the U.S. International Women's Year Commission planning session Thursday were feminist Gloria Steinem, publisher of Ms. magazine, and former Rep. Bella Abzug, D-N.Y.

Among the non-participating were Mary Fran Horgan and Donna Heame, who said they were elected delegates from Missouri women.

"Some 50 pickets outside the hotel where the conference will be held carried signs opposing abortion and the proposed Equal Rights Amendment."

One woman waved a sign that read, "HWY does not represent all women."

In a news conference, Nellie J. Gray, president of an anti-abortion group called "March for Life," objected to the appropriation of $5 million in federal funds for the series of conferences culminating in Houston Nov. 18-21.

"We don't want that $5 million being used to tear America apart," Miss Gray said.

Jesus Christ's divinity challenged

LONDON (UPI)—Seven prominent British Protestant theologians have challenged the divinity of Jesus Christ, saying he never claimed to be the son of God but was promoted to that status by pagan and other influences on early Christians.

The theologians launched their jointly written book, "The Myth of God Incarnate," which they said was an attempt to present a view now held by all theologians "gently and responsibly."

The book was edited by John Hick, professor of theology at Birmingham University and a member of the United Reform Church.

Other contributors included Canon Maurice Wiles, professor of divinity at Christ Church, Oxford, and former chairman of the Church of England's doctrine commission.

In one section of the book, Frances Young, lecturer in New Testament studies at Birmingham University, suggested belief in the incarnation of Christ arose in the early church through a fusion of existing pagan and Jewish traditions of the "coming of an angel in disguise."

The book discusses the related Christian tradition that Christ was also the son of God and concludes these early references were "essentially poetic language," Hick said. He cautioned against "excessive alarm" over the theologians' views.

Bryant, Bible, gay conflict continues

By DAVID E. ANDERSON
UPI Religion Writer

The conflict between Florida orange juice promoter Anita Bryant and Miami's homosexual community shows no sign of abating despite the resounding defeat of the Dade County ordinance banning discrimination against gays.

Indeed, most of the signs point to an escalation of the battle to the national level. If that does occur, and if the debate in Dade County is any indication of the future, one of the frontlines of the struggle will be the Bible and allegations from both sides about what the Bible does and does not say about homosexuality.

For the most part, the two sides will be talking past one another because the religious community is of two very separate and irreconcilable minds not only about what the Bible says but how to interpret what it says.

On the one hand, there are those who believe that the Bible is the literal, inspired, inerrant word of God, unconditioned by time, history or human culture. On the other, there are those who, while still believing the Bible to be the word of God, also read it as an historical document, written by men and strongly conditioned by their cultural situation.

These two readings clash strongly when applied to such an emotionally explosive and intimate issue as that of human sexuality. Entering the debate now is the already controversial study, "Human Sexuality," (Paulist Press) commissioned by the Catholic Theological Society of America and seeking to give voice to "new directions in American Catholic thought."

Some of the conclusions of the study — on birth control, marriage and divorce and homosexuality are considered by many to be permissive and a sharp break with normative Catholic teaching — have already been criticized. Little attention, however, has been given to the volume's view of the Bible and how it should be read. Given the nature of the current debate on sexuality, the Catholic theologians' views bear consideration.

"Although there are numerous allusions to sexuality in the Bible, the Sacred Scriptures are not concerned with sexuality as such," the book said. It argues that the Bible is not a "textbook of ethics" and "should not be seen as giving absolute prescriptions with regard to sex."

As the Old Testament patriarchal society developed, the Catholic scholars noted contradictory and conflicting views of sexuality as well as what practices could and could not be permitted.

"The social purpose of marriage in Israel, as in other ancient societies, was not so much the legitimization or regulation of sexual intercourse as the procreation of children," the study said. It added that the need to bear children, especially male heirs, "was so crucial an aspect of the institution of marriage that a barren wife would not hesitate to provide her husband with a concubine to produce an heir in her stead."

"The Old Testament contains such a plurality of customs, laws, and insights related to sexuality, that no single voice can be said to prevail," the study concluded. "As in the Old Testament, every statement in the New Testament regarding human sexuality, is historically occasioned and conditioned."

"In view of the weight of contrary historical evidence," the scholars said, "anyone who maintains that the Bible absolutely forbids certain forms of sexual behavior, regardless of circumstances, must likewise bear the burden of proof."

Moon church labeled

KATHLEEN COLEMAN

LaWYNN ARRINGTON

SHARIE STOUT

CHICAGO Daily News
 CHICAGO—Sun Myung Moon's Unification Church, one of the better known sects to attract young people in recent years, is not a Christian church, says a National Council of Churches commission.

It's known officially as the Holy Spirit Association for the Unification of the World Christianity. In 1975 it applied for membership in the (Christian) Council of Churches of the City of New York, but the council's Faith and Order Commission said it wasn't Christian.

The commission last week released an 11-page report on Moon's teachings with full approval of its 53 members representing 25 "mainline" Protestant, evangelical, Orthodox and Roman Catholic church bodies.

Among teachings from Moon's book, "Divine Principle," cited by the report were:

• Jesus "can by no means be God himself," but is "a second God (image of God)."

• Moon's revelations have more authority than the Bible and indeed replace all religious teachings that went before them.

• Jesus was a failure because of his death by crucifixion and must be replaced by a second Messiah, to be born in Korea.

• Chief author of the report is Sister Agnes Cunningham, professor at St. Mary of the Lake Seminary, Mundelein, Ill., the theological seminary of the Chicago Roman Catholic archdiocese.

• We hope the report helps people know where to place their religious movement among many other religious signals in society today," Sister Cunningham told the Chicago Daily News.

Three local youths perform in pageant

THIS scene shown will be repeated many times at the historic Hill Cumorah Pageant in Palmyra, N.Y. Among the 600 participants will be three local youths — Kathleen Coleman and LaWynn Arrington of Twin Falls and Sharie Stout of Kimberly. Kathleen is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Coleman. She graduated from Twin Falls in 1975 and she is a junior at Brigham Young University majoring in elementary education and minoring in music. LaWynn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Arrington, will be attending BYU this fall studying business education. She attended Ricks last year. Sharie, a junior at BYU, is majoring in early childhood education with a minor in music and hopes to teach elementary music in the public school system. Sharie is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Stodt. The participants were selected from a long waiting list by Dr. Harold I. Hansen of the BYU drama department who is the director for the production. The group of 264 young people will depart from Salt Lake on July 14 and return on Aug. 5. Each participant will be cast for a role upon arriving. The pageant which plays July 22, 23 and 28, 30 is a re-enactment of historical events taken from the Bible and Book of Mormon.

DEAR ABBY: Someone asked you if a 13-year-old boy could get a girl pregnant, and I'm glad you said yes because I am living proof of it.

DEAR THIRTEEN: And might I add that you aren't the only 13-year-old boy who wrote to confirm that fact? I also heard from several girls stating that they had become pregnant at the age of 12.

Statement confirmed

DEAR ABBY: I am a fourth grade teacher employed in a suburb of Minneapolis, Minn. During the past few years I have found that most of my students seem to appreciate physical contact.

DEAR CONFUSED: I had allowed some of my students to occasionally sit on my lap. I had occasionally given a student a back rub. I had occasionally given a student a hug.

HAW sidesteps use of laetrile

By GEORGE WILEY
Times-News Writer

BOISE — Idaho's top health official says his department "wants" nothing to do with distributing or regulating the controversial cancer drug laetrile.

A bill to legalize the substance, which is extracted from apricot pits, will be introduced in the next session of the legislature by Rep. James Golder, R-Boise, a member of the House Health and Welfare Committee.

As presently drafted, Golder's proposal doesn't strictly require involvement of the Department of Health and Welfare (HAW). It says HAW "MAY" regulate the manufacture, distribution and sale of the substance to ensure it "is not adulterated or misbranded."

Dr. John Ashley, Idaho Health officer, whose bureau is a division of HAW, said Thursday he would like to see the agency kept out of the laetrile picture.

"I don't think we have the ability or the desire to get in the business of determining whether laetrile is any good, either as a food substance or a drug, even (to the extent of determining) if it's chemically pure," Ashley said. "We want nothing to do with laetrile. That's about as simple as I can put it."

He called potential HAW involvement with laetrile "a totally no-win proposition."

"The issue of laetrile has nothing to do with people's health," Ashley said. "It's become a human rights issue... Laetrile, for me, has been proven to have nothing to do with cancer cure. Interjecting us into the controversy is just going to end up wasting a lot of my time. I can already see that. I'm going to be wasting time testifying to the value of this bill in the legislature."

Ashley repeated his earlier position that the laetrile controversy involves two separate issues.

The first, he said, is human health, and in that guise he called laetrile "absolutely worthless" as a cancer treatment.

The second, he said, is human rights — as a freedom of choice persons wanting laetrile should be able to get it, Ashley said.

He had earlier said laetrile should be made available as a food substance and people "ought to be able to eat as much of it as they want."

Golder said he would not make HAW participation binding "at this point." He said HAW "should want" to become involved in overseeing laetrile.

The final role of HAW was something we can resolve later," Golder added.

He said the first step is legalization, and HAW involvement "technically which can be ironed out."

For firefighters

Contract prepared

By BOB ZUCKERMAN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — City officials said Thursday they will prepare a contract for city firefighters by Tuesday, and will give firefighters one week to decide whether to sign it.

Firefighters have asked for an average $14 per month increase for each man, to begin Oct. 1, 1977, and run through Oct. 1, 1978. The increase would cost the city about $65,844 in salary alone, not including increases in wage benefits.

During negotiations Thursday afternoon, Lloyd Almond, president of Local 1556, International Association of Fire Fighters, said the increase was necessary to bring firefighters' pay here up to averages of other Idaho cities this year.

Almond said the increases would bring Twin Falls firefighters' salaries in line with 1977 averages for firefighters in Idaho Falls, Lewiston, Nampa and Pocatello.

City Councilman Stephen R. Lincoln warned firefighter negotiators that the City Council may delete or add some cities to the list when figuring a state average, but would likely use some kind of state average to determine an increase in salaries.

Specifically, firefighters have asked for an increase of $100 per month for battalion chiefs, $177 per month for captains; $150 per month for drivers and alarm operators, $110 per month for second-year firefighters and an $80 increase for probationers.

Raises would bring salaries of each of the three battalion chiefs to $1,263 per month; 11 captains to $1,150 per month; eight drivers to $1,075 per month; 11 second-year firefighters to $950 per month; three alarm operators to $1,100 per month and two probationers to $900 per month.

During the 1½-hour negotiating session at the Outlaw Inn Thursday, Larry Wahl, union secretary-treasurer, presented statistics showing detail care to firefighters would cost the city about $8,700 per year.

Firefighters also have requested the city pay for annual physical checkups; Almond presented statistics for two different plans.

He estimated it would cost the city an average of $3,000 or $2,016 per year.

Families plan fight against evictions

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — Seven young families who have received eviction notices from the Skyline Mobile Home park say they are contemplating legal action and at least some plan to fight the eviction.

Skyline Mobile Home Park, south of Twin Falls on Airport Road, is one of only a few Twin Falls parks where children are allowed, but the families being evicted say they all have young children.

Mrs. Stanley May said they were given no warnings that they would be asked to move and a list of rules given her family when they moved to the park two years ago has not been changed to her knowledge.

"We have not broken any of the rules," she said. "I think they just want to get rid of all the small children. Our children have to play somewhere and they usually play near our trailer or at the home of one of the other families," Mrs. May said.

Both Mrs. May and Mrs. Val Jenkins contend they do not let their small children "roam" the trailer park and they are always under parent supervision. Both women work afternoon and evening shifts but say when they are gone the children are supervised by their fathers or other adults. Mrs. Jenkins' children are five and seven.

Both women blame their problems on new management of the park, saying the new managers do not like children. They said there were no problems under previous management.

Families asked to move admit for the most part they will move because they do not want to live where there is a strong feeling against them and where further problems would probably result. Mrs. May, however, says her family plans to stay because the eviction notice was served illegally. It was left with her seven-year-old child who answered the door when the constable arrived.

Mrs. Jenkins said the persons who received eviction notices have been unsuccessful in attempts to meet and talk with park owner Robert Wills of Wills Inc. Families said they have an attorney researching the situation to see if they have any recourse.

Mrs. May said she and her family plan to stay where they are and see what happens.

"We were not legally served. The constable served the eviction notice on my seven-year-old daughter who went to the door," Mrs. May said. "We have not broken a single rule and I don't think they have grounds for asking us to move," she said.

Wills, of Wills Inc., owners of the park, said he would make no accusations or derogatory statements about the residents of the park.

Gooding reunion set

Those planning to attend should meet at 5 p.m. A potluck dinner will begin at 6 p.m., and employees should bring their own table service. Coffee and punch will be provided.

A small donation will be taken to cover expenses. Families of employees are welcome to attend.

In case of rain, the reunion will be held at the Masonic or War Memorial Hall.

Firm airs 'penny' plan

TWIN FALLS — Reynolds Metals Co. will donate one penny to the Muscular Dystrophy Association for every pound of aluminum recycled during August in the company's nationwide recycling program.

Theme of the program is "Pennies from Heaven" for Jerry Lewis and MDA. Reynolds officials say they expect collections to exceed 10 million pounds in August, with the penny donation being in addition to the 17 cents a pound normally paid the public for aluminum. The recycler may keep that money or donate it to MDA.

The "Pennies from Heaven" campaign begins Aug. 1 and continues through Labor Day, Sept. 5, when Reynolds mobile units will be located at many of the TV stations participating in the Jerry Lewis Labor Day Telethon for Muscular Dystrophy.

In the Twin Falls area, Reynolds aluminum recycling center is located at 319 Maxwell Ave., Twin Falls, and is open to the public from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m., Tuesday through Saturday.

Livestock group observes 60th year

THREE CREEK — One of Idaho's oldest livestock organizations — one with the unusual combination of both sheep and cattle owners in its membership — the 71 Livestock Association, observed its 60th anniversary here Thursday.

A crowd, estimated at 1,200 persons, and representing Idaho, Nevada, California, Colorado and Utah attended the range tour, barbecue and program. The stockmen and their guests finished the day with a dance at Jarbridge, Nev., which lasted through most of the night.

Bureau of Land Management and U.S. Forest Service officials, businessmen and women, cattle and sheep ranchers and a number of politicians were among the delegates.

During the morning participants visited the Murphy Hot Springs fire area, which burned nearly 16,000 acres of range cover in June, 1974.

Robert Mitchell, Bureau of Land Management District manager for the Jarbridge area, said the area was reseeded in the summer immediately following the fire. Several kinds of grass were used and some blitter brush was replanted for the 500 head of deer and antelope which range in the area.

Despite drought conditions this year, several varieties of wheat grass stand about three feet high. Tour members were shown the reseeded area, another area where natural grass was allowed to reestablish without seeding, and an area representative of the 16,000 acres prior to the fire.

Jerry Harryman, range conservationist for the BLM, estimated the forage on the reseeded area is about seven times that provided before the fire.

Frank Bachman, another BLM range conservationist said additional range improvements are planned in the area, such as piping water to new areas where livestock can congregate for water.

Noy Brackett, secretary of the 71 Association for 37 years, and a state legislator, leases much of the range the group toured Thursday. He explained installation of a water line carrying water from Flat Creek where it is pumped to the range. The 10-mile water line helps distribute stock more evenly over the range.

Although he paid for the pipe and maintains it, installation was on a cooperative basis with the BLM.

Mitchell said this year 500 cows grazed the area prior to February, 200 steers were turned in in April to May and 800 cows were on the range from May 15 to June 30.

With an estimated 12 to 15 inches of rainfall per year, he said, there is enough moisture to produce a good stand of natural grass. This year only about one third that amount has fallen, but the range is in excellent condition, and is still green with several varieties of grass and Ladak alfalfa showing an excellent stand.

William Evans, Washington, D.C., director of range management for the U.S. Forest Service, was principal speaker in the program which followed the barbecue. William Clark, association member and rancher who is now Twin Falls County assessor, furnished music for the program and Bill Swan, Three Creek rancher, was master of ceremonies.

Stocks at Midday

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices opened higher Friday in active trading of New York Stock Exchange issues following a one-day holiday because of New York City's power crisis.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which slipped .032 point Wednesday, was ahead 0.93 point to 903.92 shortly after the opening. A late rally Wednesday prevented the Dow, which had been off four points, from closing below the 900 level. It had dipped beneath the level twice during the session.

Although the Dow had lost 6.52 points the previous four sessions, tape watchers were encouraged the indicator was able to hold at the psychologically important 900 level.

Advances led declines, 124 to 82, among the 330 issues crossing the tape in the early going.

Analysis said institutions have been selling basic industry stocks represented by the Dow because many observers believe the economy will slow down later this year from a strong first half. But smaller investors have been buying.

Analysis said investors had anticipated the Federal Reserve Board's report late Thursday that the nation's basic money supply surged $3.2 billion in the latest week.

South Hills showers may develop

Twin Falls, Northside, Burley, Riggins areas: Clear and cool tonight mostly sunny and light showers Saturday with chance of developing thundershowers over the South Hills by the afternoon. High temperatures Saturday 90 to 95, and overnight lows 50 to 55. Sunday's outlook: continued warm but scattered afternoon and evening thundershowers. Spraying and dusting conditions; winds will generally be under 5 miles an hour during the early morning hours increasing to 10 miles an hour during the afternoon. Saturday gusts are likely Saturday near thundershowers activities.

Halley, Camas Prairie, lower Wood River Valley: Clear and cool tonight, sunny and warm Saturday. High temperatures Saturday near 90 and overnight lows tonight 40 to 45. Sunday's outlook calls for chance of scattered thundershowers. Synopses: Under sunny skies and light winds, Thursday temperatures climbed well into the 80s. The warmest spots in the valley were 91 degrees at Gooding and Hagerman while Wendell followed close behind with a 90-degree reading. This warm summer weather is being caused by a strong high pressure ridge along the Pacific Coast, which will dominate the weather pattern for the next several days. Temperatures this weekend will continue well into the 90s in the lower agricultural valleys; however, most unstable air from the south will be moving into the Magic Valley by Saturday afternoon causing some thundershower activity.

Customs agency to auction off 2 tons African coffee

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The U.S. Customs Service had intriguing news Wednesday for coffee lovers fighting ever-increasing prices. It said it has 2 tons of African coffee beans they have collected in recent months, said Dennis Orphan, public information officer for the department. But he cautioned, it may not be a big bargain. "It's going to get a good price," he said. Orphan said the coffee is among many unusual items the Customs Service will offer at one of its periodic auctions.

"We can't get home," they told him. "Phil In," said Stearns, "is supposed to be a throwback to the old-time breed, one of those rugged, rough-as-a-bob hard-nosed. As a ballplayer he is; otherwise he is anything but."

That isn't what you would call a big fault. I'd have to say he's the future leader of this club." Stearns is aware he has to learn how to channel his aggressiveness and being intelligent and anxious to learn, he undoubtedly will.

Martin adds Boston, NY players to team

NEW YORK (UPI) — Billy Martin named two of his own New York Yankee players and three members of the Boston Red Sox Thursday in compiling the American League squad for Tuesday's All-Star game at Yankee Stadium.

The three Red Sox — first baseman George Scott and outfielders Fred Lynn and Jim Rice — give Boston seven players on the squad, more than any team since Cleveland placed seven on the 1952 squad. Catcher Carlton Fisk, shortstop Rick Burleson and outfielder Carl Yastrzemski all won starting berths in the fan voting. Martin then named reliever Bill Campbell to the pitching staff.

Thurman Munson, who finished a close second to Fisk, and third baseman Craig Nettles will represent the Yankees. Second baseman Willie Randolph and outfielder Reggie Jackson will start and Martin named reliever Sparky Lyle as a pitcher. Martin also has said that he plans to use Nettles, who finished behind George Brett, as much as possible.

Martin decided to replace only one of his injured starting pitchers. Nolan Ryan will fill in for sore-armed California teammate Frank Tanana but Martin named Detroit first baseman Jason Thompson to replace pitcher Mark Fidrych. That leaves the AL with only eight pitchers, of which only Baltimore's Jim Palmer, Oakland's Vida Blue and Ryan are starters.

Ryan, however, said he would refuse to go.

"Tell him to make another selection," said Ryan. "If I'm not good enough to be picked on the merits of the season I've had, I'm not going.

"My wife and I are making other plans. We're going to spend a couple of days at the beach."

Martin also picked two players generally considered to have been snubbed in the fan balloting. Outfielder Ken Singleton, the leading batter for the surprising Baltimore Orioles, and outfielder Larry Hise of Minnesota, a top AL run producer, will be on the squad. Ruppert Jones, an impressive rookie outfielder from the expansion Seattle Mariners, also earned a berth.

Other Martin picks included Minnesota catcher Butch Wynegar, first baseman Ron Fairly of Toronto, second baseman Don Money of Milwaukee and shortstop Bert Campaneris of Texas.

Ol' Lefty

Ryan rejects all-star offer

ANAHEIM (UPI) — Nolan Ryan, left off the American League All-Star team by Billy Martin and then selected as a replacement, said Thursday night he would refuse to play in next Tuesday night's game against the National League.

"Tell him to make another selection," said Ryan, who shares the AL lead in victories with 12, leads the majors in strikeouts with 222 in 181 2/3 innings and has a 2.58 earned run average.

"If I'm not good enough to be picked on the merits of the season I've had, I'm not going," Ryan said.

Martin, the manager of the New York Yankees, selected four starting pitchers and four relievers in his original choices for the AL staff. The starters, however, included injured Frank Tanana of the Angels and Mark Fidrych of the Tigers and when they officially were scratched Thursday, Ryan was named as a replacement.

"I only have one bad statistic and that's my walks (127)," Ryan said, adding with a big grin: "The rest of my statistics are comparable to anybody's."

Ryan, who could be headed for the first 400-strikeout season of any pitcher in history, appeared to be a certain choice for the team but Martin gave no explanation for passing him over and loading his team with relief pitchers like Dave LaRoche and Jim Kern, hardly the big names that would lend drama to the game.

"A week ago, I had anticipated going, but after getting the results, I'm disappointed," Ryan said. "My wife and I are making other plans. We're going to spend a couple of days at the beach."

General Manager Harry Dalton of the Angels said it was a "major oversight" to leave Ryan off the team in the first place, "but I think he should go," Dalton said he planned to discuss it with Ryan, but Ryan said he doubted his mind could be changed.

"I'd be surprised if it happened," Ryan said.

Gilliam happy for new chance

VERO BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Quarterback Joe Gilliam, who booted the New Orleans Saints training camp last year and subsequently was arrested on narcotics and weapons charges in Nashville, Tenn., is back for his second try with the team.

Gilliam, 15 pounds heavier than when he disappeared from the Saints camp last year, has signed a standard player contract which has been approved by NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle.

Couch Hank Stram said Gilliam will be given the same chance as any player in camp to make the team.

Gilliam, who admitted addiction to heroin and cocaine, has spent 5½ months at a drug rehabilitation center in Virginia and said he is "thankful to God for a second chance."

"It's the sort of thing that nobody can relate to unless it has happened to them," the former Pittsburgh Steeler quarterback said Thursday. "I got involved with drugs because of curiosity and certain associates. Nobody can help you with this thing except yourself and God almighty. With God, anything is possible."

After leaving the Saints camp last summer, Gilliam was arrested in Nashville on a traffic violation. A subsequent investigation turned up narcotics and a pistol in his car.

Gilliam was placed on probation on the condition that he report for treatment for his drug addiction. Before moving to the Saints last year, Gilliam played four years for Pittsburgh in a backup role, hitting 147 of 331 passes for 2,103 yards and nine touchdowns.

Saints rookies must report to camp by Friday when they will undergo physical examinations. Deadline for veterans is July 22 with some seven veterans expected to report late with permission for various reasons.

Broncos sign two veterans

DENVER (UPI) — The Denver Broncos announced the signings Thursday of veteran linebackers Randy Gradishar and Joe Rizzo plus rookie punter Larry Swider, the last of the team's 1977 college draft choices to sign a contract.

The club said its list of unsigned veterans has dwindled to two: wide receiver Haven Moses and cornerback Calvin Jones, yet to reach contract terms.

Gradishar, the team's starting middle linebacker and first round draft choice in 1974, signed a series of three one-year contracts.

Swider, the Broncos' seventh round draft pick out of Pittsburgh, signed a series of three one-year contracts.

Blackout outlasted sing-along and phantom infield at Shea

NEW YORK (UPI) — And then there was darkness: The massive power failure that struck New York City Tuesday night suspended play of the game between the New York Mets and the Chicago Cubs but it gave birth to a bit of fun called "Phantom Infield."

The creation of Mets' rightshander Craig Swan and utility outfielder Joel Youngblood, "Phantom Infield" intrigued fans crowded into Shea during the power blackout which left Shea Stadium and the entire New York area in total darkness. The Cubs led 2-1 in the bottom of the sixth inning when the lights went out.

On the instructions of Mets Manager Joe Torre, Swan and Youngblood drove their cars onto the field in left-center and, with engines running, flipped on their headlights to illuminate the newly conceived game.

"We call it 'Phantom Infield' because all we do is hit grounders and execute double plays with an imaginary ball."

rum but I was afraid they might turn the lights on and I'd be standing there looking awful foolish."

The Mets could have used some of that fantasy carried over into real life. New York was down by a run despite 11 strikeouts by Mets pitcher Jerry Koosman when the lights failed throughout the city with one out in the bottom of the sixth.

Most of the fans took the blackout in stride and remained in their seats while Mets management rushed to restore order.

"Ladies and gentlemen," boomed the public address system, "we have been informed that this is a brownout affecting the entire area. Con Edison is working to restore the power as soon as possible."

Meanwhile, long-time Mets rightshander Joe Jarvis began playing some familiar standards in a sing-along, which resounded through the eerie darkness of Shea. Included was a rendition in 94-degree heat of "Jingle Bells."

Although the crowd joined in lustily, not all fans had their minds on the unexpected festivities.

"Never mind that," said one fan, "what about Koosman? He's got a chance to break the season high of 13 strikeouts in a game."

At 10:55 p.m. EDT, nearly an hour and a half after the blackout struck, the game was officially suspended. By then, many of the fans had grown weary of waiting and were heading slowly for the exits home.

The game was supposed to be continued Thursday but complications arising from the continuing power failure led officials to call off both that game and the regularly scheduled game though power was restored at Shea. Both games are expected to be made up when the Cubs return to New York in mid-September.

Corn, wheat crops down

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There was possible good news for consumers but bad news for farmers as the Agriculture Department's preliminary corn and wheat production estimates.

American farmers appear headed for a third straight record corn harvest, which could help dampen food price increases and ease the long production restraints on next year.

The Agriculture Department's crop reporting board lifted its first 1977 corn estimate on the basis of July conditions and forecast the crop at 6.331 billion bushels — up 2 percent from the previous record 1976 harvest and 9 percent above the then-record 1975 crop.

Corn plays a key role in shaping future retail food prices because it is the most important livestock feed for producing meat, milk and eggs.

Experts cautioned, however, that the actual size of the corn harvest depends heavily on timely rainfall during the critical weeks of late July and early August. Dry weather could cut back the prospects.

The department's first estimate of the full 1977 wheat crop — including both winter wheat and the spring wheat which was forecast for the first time Tuesday — pointed to a near record 2.644 billion bushels.

The wheat estimate was down 5 percent from last year, but it was the third biggest crop in history and the third consecutive 2 billion bushel-plus harvest, and at a time when record wheat crops are being posted around the world.

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland, who earlier said he probably will have to raise an average retirement plan for the 1978 wheat crop if global prospects don't change soon added after the crop report that he may also have to consider a cutback program for corn next year.

Much depends on the weather and how the Agriculture Department's important August crop estimates a month from now assess the outlook, Bergland said in an interview.

The 6.3 billion bushel corn crop forecast on the basis of current conditions "is probably bigger than we can use" and may depress prices to farmers, Bergland said.
