Alaskan oil flows

VALDEZ, Alaska (UPI) — A thick river of North Slope crude oil, vanguard of a 10 billion barrel supply that will last into the 21st Century, completed a troubled 800-mile journey across the nation's largest state early today, gushing into the Southern terminal of the $9 billion trans-Alaska pipeline.

The oil finally reached Valdez at 2:02 P.M. MDT (11:02 p.m. Thursday, Valdez time), after a 38-day run during which the line was shut down six times.

A bomb-shaped "pig" scooting ahead of the oil struck with a sharp "blunk" into a recovery trap to complete the trip from Prudhoe Bay.

The black crude then gushed past into huge storage tanks at a rate of 200 barrels per minute. Energy-hungry Americans will tap those barrels for the next 25 to 30 years to heat their homes, run their machinery, and provide countless other modern necessities.

Seconds after word was phoned from behind the tight security of the terminal, a siren atop the Valdez police department wailed long and loud that bounced off the steep snow-capped mountains which nearly surround the new oil superport.

Cars drove through the dusty streets of Valdez, horns blaring, and firecrackers exploded in sporadic rapid-fire cracks. Terminal workers immediately began filling 10 storage tanks with an estimated 2 million barrels before the first load is pumped into a tanker, probably during the weekend.

"At this time, all systems are going smoothly and, of course, we are very happy about the arrival of the oil here in Valdez," said a spokesman for Alyeska Pipeline Service Co., Inc.

The oil rushed the final few miles Thursday like a tired horse headed for the barn. The downhill grade doubled the flow rate to 600,000 barrels a day before brakes were applied with compressed gas pumped into the pipeline near the terminal entrance.

Alyeska workers at the Pipeline Club went about their drinking and pool playing with little reaction to the arrival of the oil, save for one bearded fellow who said "the gray train is dead" and his high-paying job would soon be over.

Tourists mingled with Valdez residents in other bars and cafes to toast the arrival and enjoy the attention of television interviews.

Before the river of oil completed its journey, it took one life, soaked a section of delicate tundra and destroyed a $20-million pump building. "There'll be more trouble, you can count on that," said one worker from the pipeline terminal. "How do I know? Because there are men running this thing, and somebody will screw up."

Flaws in the system and human mistakes were blamed for the six halts in the initial run, the last stoppage ending early Thursday with 18 miles of empty pipe left to fill.

Alyeska officials were careful not to rule out further troubles even though the oil has arrived at the terminal to end a nine-year project that included three years of actual construction.

"We don't expect any problems, but then we never did. So who can say if everything will go smoothly?" asked Tom Mierzejewski, another Alyeska spokesman in Valdez.

The cost — in money and lives — of getting the oil across Alaska was staggering.

Alyeska has admitted to more than 30 deaths over the construction period, but officials agreed there were "numerous" others killed on the pipeline project, which the toll company consultants did not directly control.

Those who watched the pipeline from its beginning said the toll mere likely was 150 or so.

Brush fires continue

By United Press International
The latest in a series of Southern California fires raged out of control today in dense brush, scorching 1,000 acres and keeping Corona, residents alert for possible evacuation.

Seventy homes in Corona, about 40 miles southeast of Los Angeles, but shifting winds drove the flames away from the city, into Tin Mine and Haggard Canyons of the Santa Ana Mountains.

Winds normally blow down canyon in the afternoon, however, and fire officials expressed concern for later in the day.

"If the fire continues to burn and we get the normal wind pattern, the fire could threaten additional homes," a U.S. Forest Service spokeswoman said. "It's a possibility."

She said one of the "biggest concerns" of the fire fighters was the heavy brush in Tin Mine and Haggard Canyons which has been growing unchecked for more than 60 years.

"Our fire records go back to 1910 and it has never burned," she said. "It has been growing and growing, getting thicker and thicker for 60 years."

Investigators said the fire was started shortly after noon Thursday by an illegal campfire in a fire closure area of Tin Mine Canyon behind a locked and posted gate.

At least one avocado grove and a barn were destroyed. Some 900 fire fighters, many rushed in from the Santa Barbara fire earlier in the week, fought the fire in temperatures expected to approach 100 degrees later today.

In Santa Barbara, officials tallied the destruction at 385 buildings; 234 homes destroyed and damaged, plus another 125 structures — barns, stables, garages and others — damaged or destroyed.

Mayor David Stillman called it the city's "worst natural disaster since the 1923 earth quake." With at least two or three months of fire season still remaining, officials began worrying about another danger — the floods and lethal mudslides that pour down fire-denuded slopes when the winter rains come.

"We've had floods here after every major fire in our history and a heavy rain could cause a worse catastrophe than the fire," warned county Flood Control Officer Jim Stuchess.

Senators rap Panama treaty

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two senators today accused the administration of trying to write a new Panama Canal treaty on its own, leaving open the possibility of a military confrontation if Congress refuses to implement it.

The charge was made at a Senate hearing shortly before President Carter told U.S. and Panamanian negotiators at the White House they have made "good progress" and he is "eager to conclude an agreement for the treaty itself."

Carter, opening a meeting with the negotiators at the White House, said he planned to write a letter today to Gen. Omar Torrijos, Panama's chief of government, expressing his views on the issues still separating the two sides.

At a hearing of Sen. James B. Allen's Judiciary subcommittee, on separation of powers, Allen accused the administration of planning to "present the Congress with an accomplished fact and then say, 'now you have to administer it with whatever powers you have."

Allen, D-Ala., also expressed concern to State Department officials that "if you go ahead with a new Panama Treaty, knowing that a dictatorship down there depends on that treaty, you may be creating an irreparable problem."

Cool it!

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., urged President Carter today to curb his "meddling" in foreign affairs and turn his energies to pressing domestic problems.

Goldwater suggested that Carter "cool it in the field of foreign relations until such time as circumstances and conditions lend themselves to reasonable adjustment."

"I believe that haste, for the mere sake of reaching agreements in complicated disputes, can do more harm than good," Goldwater said. "I suspect that the overzealous attempts on the part of President Carter and his advisers are creating an impression in many areas that our government wants agreements at any price and that it will do anything but deep trouble for the United States."

In a Senate speech, Goldwater suggested that Carter's eagerness to reach agreements may have led some foreign countries to take actions without fear of angering the United States.

Boiseans killed in Blaine crash

KETCHUM — A 31-year-old man and a 26-year-old woman, both Boise, died after the motorcycle they were riding collided head-on with a car on U.S. 93 four miles north of here Thursday afternoon.

The man, Robert Emmett Lord Jr., was driving a 1975 BMC 900 south when he slowed to avoid hitting another vehicle in the southbound lane, Blaine County Sheriff Orville Drexler said this morning. Lord apparently lost control of the cycle and slid into the northbound lane where he collided with an oncoming car driven by Robert Nelson, 54, San Clemente, Calif., at about 4:40 p.m., Thursday. The woman, Jean Spits, was rushed to Moritz Community Hospital in Sun Valley, where she died about 11 p.m.

"Incidents are there was excessive speed involved," Drexler said of the motorcycle.

Passengers in the Nelson car were John Nelson, 14, and Gene Nelson, 56, both San Clemente, and John Reichert, 11, and Becky Reichert, 12, both Twin Falls.

No other injuries were reported. Police estimated damage to the cycle at $1,500 and to the car at $1,000.

$32 billion for paperwork

WASHINGTON (UPI) — American businesses spend up to $32 billion a year meeting federal paperwork requirements and are "drowning in a sea of red tape," the Commission on Federal Paperwork said today.

The commission said it costs the 10,000 largest firms more than $1 million a year each to comply with federal paperwork requirements, and 5 million small businesses spend over $3,000 each.

"Federal red tape must be significantly reduced, both to cut costs and to bring better-managed programs," it said, adding, "Businesses rightly complain that more information than necessary is collected. As a result they are drowning in a sea of paperwork and red tape."

The commission described its figure of $32 billion as a "broad estimate," but that nevertheless "it is surely a high price" for businesses to pay to meet federal requirements, and "the consumer and the taxpayer foot the bill."

The commission asked businesses for their assessment of the situation and found "there was no blanket indictment of all paperwork."

Firms large and small recognize the need for government information-collecting programs, but "it was the excess of paperwork, the countless forms, the duplication of effort, the redundancy of questions and the seemingly never-ending flow of requests that they found burdensome."

The commission said small businesses which complete forms by hand — especially the "Mom and Pop" operations — reacted with "annoyance, anxiety, even anger" to the morass of paperwork.

The paperwork commission is nearing the end of its three-year battle to simplify government record-keeping in hopes of cutting costs and improving efficiency.

Its staff report said smaller businesses, although spending less to meet federal regulations often lack the expertise necessary to comply and some avoid doing business with the government because the paperwork is too costly.

The commission said it has devised a concept — "service management" — to turn government around so that its primary concern is for the people it serves rather than the government itself.

"Programs have to be redesigned, agencies reorganized, laws and regulations modified, management objectives restated and new control disciplines instituted to take more closely into account the burdens that government places upon people," it said.

The commission said some burdens can be tangible, such as hours spent and costs incurred in filling-out requirement government paperwork. But equally damaging, it said, is the frustration and anger caused individual citizens by "complex, duplicative or unintelligible information requests."

Revised price on hamburgers

TWIN FALLS — The Times-News has received complaints from the Arctic Circle and the Dairy Queen restaurants that a Sunday (July 24) story on hamburger weights in Twin Falls was inaccurate, reports Panama Times-News reporter David Morrissey inadvertently was overcharged at those two restaurants while purchasing burgers for his survey. # Care quality survey begins

MAGIC VALLEY—About 300 Magic Valley families will get a chance to speak their minds on health care quality next week as the state begins a survey of illness and treatment and health needs.

The survey, jointly conducted several state agencies and the private Idaho Health Systems Agency (IHSA), will focus on the availability and quality of health care and the perceived health care needs in the state's population.

According to Dr. James Meade, chief of health data for the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare (DHW), survey respondents will be asked to detail the illnesses in their family during the past year, the number of times they have had physicals and what other steps toward prevention medicine have been taken.

The respondents will also be asked what they feel is needed to improve health care services in their area.

Meade said the survey will be conducted largely by telephone, using trained interviewers from the state's area development councils.

He called the survey "vitality important" to Idaho health agencies, since the results will help guide the disbursement of federal education. Meade said, "We will probably allocate more money to health education than to build care centers for instance."

He said the survey will also provide Idaho with its first frequency data on morbidity—the frequency and distribution of acute and chronic illnesses in the state's population on a regional scale.

"For the first time we'll be able to take a look on a county basis or a region by region basis to see how we compare the national average," he said.

He said the survey will touch rural families equally with urban families to determine the variations in rural and urban health and health care needs.

"The survey will give health care consumers a chance to express their needs," Meade said.

He noted that most previous needs assessments had been done under the banner of some special interest group.

Meade said the new survey had been distributed to the Idaho Hospital Association and other medical groups and they had been "more than surprised and pleased that it was not slanted against the medical community. It's as unbiased as you can get."

Meade admitted, however, that the survey contains no data on medical costs or the public reaction to medical cost increases.

He said the intent of the survey was to gather public opinion on the quality of medical care in health, not economic, terms.

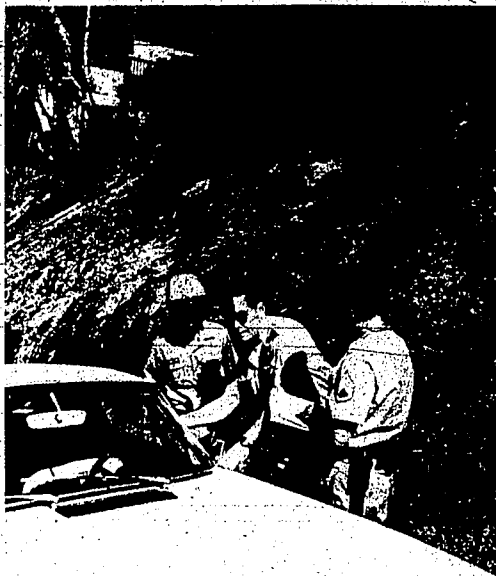

The impact of the survey results on the medical community "should be good," he said.

"I think we have good health care, and I think the survey will reflect that," he said.

The survey is being conducted through IDA, IHA, the economic development councils, the Idaho Office of Aging and the Governor's office, Meade said.

He said the survey is being produced "on a shoestring" and may cost less than $10,000 statewide. About 1,000 families will be interviewed across the state.

A preliminary report on the results should be ready by Sept. 1, with a final report to follow in November or December, Meade said.

pipeline class. "I'm stunned," Mrs. Mahoney said after hearing of her win early today (late Thursday Anchorage time), just moments after the oil hit the Valdez terminal.

"I'm overcome! I don't know what to say. I don't know whether I'm happy or sad. I've never won anything in my life but a plant at a church game."

Msgr. Francis Murphy, whose parish originated the classic, is a long time friend of the winner. "She's a wonderful, wonderful lady. Her husband died a year ago and she's gone through a rough year. This should buoy her spirits."

Mrs. Mahoney, an unemployed health field worker, said she bought 10 of the five dollar tickets "to help the church," although she is a member of a different parish.

Still stunned over her prize, she said: "I don't even have it spent. I don't know, I'll probably take a trip."

She was alone when she received the news. Her 16-year-old son was working at a nearby service station. "I really wish there was someone here," she said. "I'm walking out the door now to go tell him."

Unemployed widow wins oil flow closest guess

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (UPI)—An unemployed Anchorage widow who walks with the aid of crutches won $30,000 today by submitting the closest guess as to how long it would take the first oil to flow from Prudhoe Bay to Valdez.

Mrs. Jean Mahoney, 53, said she had a "lucky hunch" and just missed the official time—38 days, 12 hours and 56 minutes—by just one minute.

The contest was sponsored by St. Patrick's Roman Catholic Parish in Anchorage to raise money for its building fund. The church made $33,000 in the winner-take-all one time operation and reclamation plans prior to mining royalties for the use of public lands, and integration of mining into land-use plans developed for public lands.

Raymond Giles, Day Mines, Inc., and proponent of the 1972 law, told the group that the federal government was encroaching on personal freedoms and the mining industry must form its own "council of war."

New mining law planned to replace 1872 statute

SUN VALLEY, Idaho (UPI)—A Department of Interior spokesman told the Idaho Mining Association convention in Sun Valley Thursday a new bill will be written to replace the mining law of 1872, one of the oldest governing statutes in the United States.

R.J. Brunning said three different bills have been introduced in Congress to change the 1872 law.

He said the 1872 mining law was good at the time it was enacted because it helped open up the new frontier. He added, however, there is no longer a need for that incentive.

Bruning said several items will be contained in the new law, directed by President Carter. The proposed legislation contains a leasing system for hard-rock minerals; explicit federal discretionary authority over mineral exploration and development; approval of parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Butler and two sisters, Judy Astott and Brenda Butler, all Twin Falls, and grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Joslin, Buhl; Rose Kincy, Twin Falls, and Mr. and Mrs. A.W. Butler, Elizabeth City, N.C.

Funeral services for Mrs. Farnworth will be at 1 p.m. Saturday at White Mortuary Chapel by Bishop Robert King. Burial will be in the Filer IOOF Cemetery. Friends may call at the mortuary today and until 12:45 p.m. Saturday.

Man pleads guilty in Jerome death

By LARRY SWISHER Times-News writer

JEROME—Rito H. Terrazas, 31, pleaded guilty Tuesday in Fifth District Court in Jerome to a reduced charge of voluntary manslaughter in the stabbing death of Jose Lopez, about 40, on March 28.

Both men were citizens of Mexico, illegally in the United States, according to Robert Williams, Jerome County deputy prosecutor.

Williams said there was no eyewitness to the actual killing, which took place in the alley behind what was then the El Saborito Cafeteria on west Main Street in Jerome. A regular weekly dance attended by Mexican-Americans and Mexican Nationals was being held at the cafe.

Arthur Lopez, a friend of the murdered man, testified at a preliminary hearing he followed the two men from the cafe where they had been drinking.

The witness said he turned his back on the two men for a moment and when he turned around he saw Terrazas running away. He then noticed Lopez was injured.

Jose Lopez later died in St. Benedict's Hospital of several knife wounds. The dead man was not yet 30 years old.

Williams said he believed the state probably could not prove the element of malice necessary for a second-degree murder conviction and indicated this to public defender Roger Burdick. Williams said the two men's argument started over a spilled glass of beer.

Burdick said he also believed the state had only a slight chance of proving second-degree murder, which carries a penalty of 10 years to life in prison. He said the voluntary manslaughter charge, which carries a maximum penalty of 10 years in prison, "fit the situation."

Terrazas pleaded guilty to the lesser charge and Judge James Cunningham ordered a pre-sentence investigation now under way.

During court proceedings, an interpreter was required for Terrazas who spoke a little English. Burdick estimated this doubled the length of the court session but said it did not influence the outcome of the plea negotiations.

Terrazas had been deported by the U.S. Border Patrol last year but had returned prior to the killing, according to Williams.

Williams said when Terrazas finishes his term in prison he will be deported again. He said Terrazas stands little chance of becoming a U.S. citizen after being convicted of a felony.

Mountain Home promotion project halted by feds

MOUNTAIN HOME, Idaho (UPI)—The Secret Service Department has put a halt to a promotion by the Mountain Home Chamber of Commerce.

The chamber promotion of passing out "Lucky Bucks" to stimulate business in Mountain Home apparently was in violation of the federal counterfeit law.

The bucks had a picture of the mayor on the front and the county courthouse on the back. They were good for $1 off in trade from participating Mountain Home merchants.

But the "Lucky Bucks" didn't meet with the approval of the Secret Service.

Mack Richardson, Secret Service resident agent, said the federal counterfeit law apparently was violated, but no charges would be pressed.

"This kind of thing happens every once in a while," Richardson said. "There have been trade dollars and the like used all over the country. They are an economy stimulus, but are illegal if any kind of coupon has a similarity to U.S. currency. Even if they didn't look like it, if they use it in exchange for merchandise where change is exchanged it is a violation."

Chamber president Jim Jones said chamber members were collecting the illegal coupons and were planning another business promotion—a legal one this time.

"We found out we were sort of in violation of federal law so we are discontinuing it," Jones said. "It's too bad. Everyone was enthusiastic about it, and things were going good."

Money paid to keep Hoffa out of union, FBI claims

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The FBI has information that organized crime figures and Teamsters union officials paid more than $250,000 to the Nixon administration to make sure that Jimmy Hoffa was kept out of the union when he got out of prison, it was reported today.

NBC-TV said federal investigators turned up the evidence while probing Hoffa's apparent abduction on July 30, 1975, from a suburban Detroit parking lot. The former Teamsters leader has not been seen or heard from since.

Investigators now are focusing on the possibility that Hoffa's Teamsters rivals first arranged his prison release and later arranged his disappearance when he began a bid to return to union power, according to the report on NBC's "Today" program.

The network said the FBI learned that two separate payments were made to members of the Nixon administration to influence the decision to release Hoffa in 1971 but prohibit him from union activities. Investigators reportedly have questioned former Nixon White House counsel Charles Colson, although Colson denies he was questioned, the report said.

They also want to question three other Watergate figures investigating Hoffa's disappearance. NBC said investigators believe they can show what happened to Hoffa if the administration allows them to pursue all of their leads.

While House advisers H.R. Haldeman and John Dean, and former Attorney General John Mitchell, NBC said.

The broadcast report said investigators also have asked the Carter administration for permission to question Teamsters President Frank Fitzsimmons, Hoffa's rival, and the administration is conducting a "high level inquiry" into the case.

Under the Ford administration, NBC said, investigators twice were ordered, not to call Fitzsimmons before a federal grand jury in-

Free food stamp plan OK'd

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An alliance of rural and city lawmakers spurred the House to overwhelming approval of an $11 billion bill carrying a free food stamp system for the needy and higher price supports for depressed farmers.

With the threat of a presidential veto hanging over the measure, conferees prepared to meet next week to compromise the House measure with a more costly Senate version passed in May.

House Agriculture Committee chairman Thomas Foley, D-Wash., called Thursday's product — approved 294 to 114 — a "very balanced bill" giving farmers "substantial improvements in agricultural programs along with action which makes food stamps more accessible to the truly needy."

Although the House raised 1977 grain supports above the levels President Carter sought, there were indications Carter would sign the measure as long as the eventual compromise contained the House grain support levels for 1978 and future years instead of higher Senate figures.

Carter still could find fault with the bill on another point, however: raw sugar prices. The House approved, 246 to 165, a new price support program to boost these prices from the current level of less than 11 cents to 14 cents a pound.

Rep. Raymond Lederer, D-Pa., after talking to the Agriculture Department, warned, "It is extremely doubtful that the president will sign the bill" unless the sugar program is scrapped in a Senate-House conference. Rep. Fred Richmond, D-N.Y., a stamp plan booster, told reporters Thursday's voting pattern showed "we have forged a real, working, urban-rural coalition."

"If food stamps were not in the farm bill, you wouldn't have a farm bill or a food stamp bill," he said.

The food stamp section includes Carter's plan to allow qualified needy people free stamps without first having to buy additional stamps — for cash, as they now must do.

Supporters said the plan will allow 2 to 3 million people, once unable to buy stamps, into the program.

But the bill also would lighten income eligibility and unaffordable standards, drop college students with no dependents unless the students are working or looking for a job, and launch a "pilot" test under which some able-bodied stamp recipients would have to work out the value of their free stamps on public service jobs.

Experts estimated up to 1.5 million present stamp recipients would be pared from the program and another 4.4 million would have their benefits reduced.

The bill's farm sections include higher basic crop supports for four years beginning in 1978 plus an increase in grain supports for 1977. Farm spokesmen hailed the 1977 action, as a lifeline for wheat and corn farmers facing low prices because of bumper crops.

Arrests made

A PROTESTER is carried away by Kent State University campus police in Ohio following a takeover of Blanket Hill late Thursday. About 60 protesters were arrested early today.

Kent State protesters arrested

KENT, Ohio (UPI) — Sixty demonstrators, protesting construction of a gymnasium where four Kent State University students were shot to death in 1970, were arrested early today by sheriff's deputies who formed a wedge to break through a group of spectators trying to hold them back.

Buildozers then moved into the fenced-off area and started grading land for the $6 million gymnasium complex.

The demonstrators, members of the May 4th Coalition, believe the complex will desecrate the site where the students were shot to death by National Guardsmen during an antiwar demonstration seven years ago.

"The action taken this morning by the Portage County sheriff, with the assistance of campus security and local police, had the full support of the administration of Kent State University," said Interim KSU President Michael Schwartz.

"The action was prompted by a clear and flagrant violation of a court order by individuals who had been advised clearly and repeatedly of the consequences of trespassing upon the land under the judge's jurisdiction," said Schwartz. "Most of those people are not Kent State University students."

Portage County Common Pleas Court Judge Joseph Kaiman last Monday ruled the university should be allowed to continue construction of the facility. That decision has been appealed to the 11th Ohio District Court of Appeals in Painesville, Ohio.

Demonstrators late Thursday night marched on "Blanket Hill," the site of the proposed facility, and early today scaled a six-foot fence, vowing to set up another "Tent City" in an attempt to halt the construction project.

Portage County deputy sheriffs and campus police, armed only with riot clubs and wearing helmets, carried the demonstrators to waiting buses for transport to the Portage County jail in nearby Ravenna.

Some 80 spectators stood by, chanting and heckling authorities, while police removed the demonstrators, who had formed a circle on the ground with their arms entwined.

A group of about 30 spectators attempted to block deputies who were hauling demonstrators to the waiting buses. The deputies formed a wedge and broke through the spectators amid cries of "police harassment." One newsman was knocked to the ground when he attempted to question a deputy.

Massive Lewiston fire under control

LEWISTON, Idaho (UPI) — A massive fire that roared through the Polatch Corp. timber yards early today was brought under control at about 2 a.m. No injuries were reported.

The fire prompted Idaho Gov. John Evans to declare a state of emergency and offer firemen the assistance of the Idaho National Guard.

The blaze started in the plant's hog fuel (wood chip) pile. At its height, flames leaped 300 feet into the air and could be seen 30 miles away in Moscow, Idaho.

A company spokesman said the pile was 4.5 acres in size and about 34 stories high. Flames, pushed by strong winds, spread across the firm's timber yards, engulfed 10 railroad cars, jumped a two-lane gravel road and spread up a hillside. Several homes near the yard were evacuated. At one point, a 100 acre grass fire was burning south of the main blaze.

"Unless we get some wind that would push the fire the other way, we've got a pretty good handle on things," Lewiston Fire Department Battalion Chief Marion Edmondson said. "If it starts blowing the other way, we could be in trouble again."

Educators to convene in Blaine

BOISE (UPI) — More than 600 Idaho educators will discuss what should be taught and what must be taught in the state's public schools when they meet next week at Sun Valley.

George Weber, Washington D.C., associate director of the Council for Basic Education: "What Is It?"

The three-day convention will open Wednesday with presentations on the rights of teachers and students and the Idaho tax structure.

Topics for small group discussions, which will highlight the conference, include, "How Do We Fund and Implement a Curriculum Based on the Distinction Between What Must Be and Should Be Taught?" "Who Determines What Must Be Taught?" "Parental Rights to Control, Education of Their Own Children" and "Federal, State and Local Interests in and Influence on Curriculum."

Johnston's mass transit system was running again Thursday, but private cars were still barred from downtown. And ham radio operations were less in demand because local telephone service was slowly being restored.

But food, water and sewage continued to be a problem.

Crews seek Johnstown flood victims

JOHNSTOWN, Pa. (UPI) — Disaster crews today focused on a square-mile pile of debris floating in the Conemaugh River where they expected to find the bodies of many of the 100 persons still listed as missing in last week's floods.

The debris had gathered behind the 900-foot-wide Conemaugh Dam, about 35 miles northwest of here, during the 12-inch rainfall of July 19-20. The dam was the final barrier to the millions of tons of water that flooded the area and killed at least 68 persons.

Under that pressure the dam finally burst and the flood swept through the dam's crumbling concrete walls in one huge mass. Officials said the bodies of many of the nearly 100 persons still missing may have been swept down the winding river and trapped in the debris.

A small crew of Civil Defense volunteers and Pennsylvania National Guardsmen recovered three bodies from the edges of the island of rubble Thursday, prompting volunteer firemen in Indiana County to meet with the Civil Defense to work out a way today to search the pileup, estimated to be six feet thick.

The recovery of those bodies raised the death count from the floods to 68, but state police were still listing the official toll at 65 until those victims could be processed.

On Thursday morning workers dug in nearby Seward where four scent dogs had indicated there might be victims. No bodies were found.

State officials said property recovery efforts were proceeding more quickly than expected, and Lt. Gov. Ernest Kline was expected to arrive here today to sign three contracts worth over $10 million with the Department of Transportation for repair of washed-out highways.

Patricia Harris, secretary of the Department of Housing and Urban Development, also planned to tour the area today to make sure social service agencies were operating properly.

Johnston's mass transit system was running again Thursday, but private cars were still barred from downtown. And ham radio operations were less in demand because local telephone service was slowly being restored.

But food, water and sewage continued to be a problem.

US aid unappreciated

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — A Sudanese physicist says that developing countries believe the United States wants them to stay "dependent" by giving them food instead of teaching them how to produce it themselves.

Dr. Mohamed O.H. El Karouri, director of the Soba Agricultural Research Station, toured the United States and studied its agriculture for four months on an Eisenhower Exchange Fellowship.

At the fellowship's headquarters in Philadelphia last week, El Karouri said U.S. aid to developing countries is "not appreciated by those countries because they always think it's given for political reasons."

"The U.S. should give technology, not food," he said. "That's why they are often accused of wanting these countries dependent — that's why they are suspicious."

Sexual harassment brings suit

By RUSSELL BAKER
© N.Y. Times Service

NEW YORK — An lawsuit against Yale University alleges that women students have been sexually harassed by the Yale faculty. The court is asked to make the university make the faculty behave itself, as indeed the faculty should, if in fact it has been misbehaving, which Yale officials deny.

Is this the kind of problem that really requires solution by the ponderous and expensive machinery of the courthouse? There are surely quicker and cheaper ways of making professors mind their manners. In a more imaginative past when Americans were accustomed to dispose of such nuisances without help from Blackstone, the problem would have been solved handsily with a private initiative.

A robust father might have appeared carrying a shotgun at the office of the one of the more obnoxious offenders. A large brother or boyfriend might have blackened his eye. A small woman might have cooled his passion with a hot pin, and an only slightly clever small woman might have crushed his ego with a few simple words thrust nearly into his vulnerable smile. To be sure, these solutions have defects. Damaging a man's ego is a cruel act of violence. So are bruising his eyes, puncturing his buttock and unleashing a father with bloodshot eyes to wander the campus. On the other hand, all provide immediate relief and cost nothing. Moreover, and most importantly, they afford the woman with a problem a healthy sense of self-reliance and ingenuity.

The courthouse solution is not only expensive, troublesome to the victim and time-consuming, but also debilitating to her self-esteem, for it reminds her that to cope with the problem which her mother could solve in an afternoon she requires the aid of lawyers, a judge, a jury, witnesses, transcripts, three years of litigation and two appeals courts.

The Yale women who have taken this route are amply conforming to a new national habit, of course. Hand an American a problem and he immediately takes it to court. Half the population over the age of 30 is at law because it lacks the ingenuity to solve such humdrum problems as how to live with somebody who snores or dislikes your taste in television, and how to divide up the dishes, the children, the house and the jewelry before plodding on into middle age.

As a result, these people are often well advanced toward senility before the law has straightened out their problems for them. Everybody knows some aging bankrupt who got that way because he and his former wife didn't think they could solve the problem of what to do on Saturday night without hiring lawyers.

This is not the fault of the law or the courts. They are expensive luxuries. No sensible person would go to them to solve anything unless he was obscenely rich and had years to kill. And yet, we do.

In the past 20 years this tendency to tell all problems to the court has become pronounced in politics. It seems to have begun with the race issue. For the best part of a century most politicians simply declined to try to solve the race problem, and for good political reason.

They feared that any constitutional solution to which they subscribed might destroy their careers. By the end of World War II, this reasoning had become dubious, but by that time the political habit of ignoring the race problem had become purely political reflex.

The Supreme Court's desegregation decision of 1954 opened a new way out for the politicians. If the courts could be forced to make the more troublesome political decisions, the politicians could escape retribution, at least in this world, and even profit from denouncing those court decisions, which particularly annoyed the electorate. Everyone could have a grand time abusing Earl Warren for coming to grips with national problems so urgent that the politicians were afraid to deal with them.

Since 1954 American politics increasingly shifted to the courts, with the tacit consent of the politicians, as the various "rights movements" that altered society looked less and less to Congress for their success and fought for their goals through the court system.

Politicians profess unhappiness with this, but their lamentations are not to be taken too seriously. The activity of the courts, after all, gives the politician not only the chance to escape blame for inescapable social changes that enrage the people of a conservative land, but also the opportunity for some politically profitable abuse of the courts as mediators in political business. Thus in Boston, the local politicians flourish on the luxury of being able to denounce the court-ordered desegregation because the court has relieved them of responsibility for carrying out the desegregation law.

This hardly makes for a healthy political system, for it encourages politicians not to deal with problems politicians ought to be dealing with. The courts become their place of first resort, as they have with the sexually harassed women of Yale. It encourages the failure of imagination.

US offers contrast to much of world

New York's freshman Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan told a Newsweek reporter a few days ago what he feared most in the world was the totalitarian shift of many world governments.

Moynihan, who once served as the United States ambassador to the United Nations, clearly has identified one of the grimmest and most discouraging trends in the world today.

Rarely does a week pass without some refugee from a totalitarian nation recounting horrible stories of pain, human torture and regimentation in Asia, Africa, or South America.

One of the worst tales of human misery recently emerged from Cambodia.

Refugees from this troubled land say their country may be the worst nation in the world to live in.

Doctors in Cambodia are afraid to practice western medicine and have taken to treating disease with coconut oil and Pepsi-Cola, the refugees say.

Cambodian workers live on two bowls of rice a day and all men in the country are required to wear black because the outfits hide dirt better than other colors.

In Africa, Idi Amin continues his reign of terror and seems to captivate other African leaders with his brutality.

Amin dominated a recent African summit and precipitated the collapse of the East African Community, a multi-nation economic and political coalition which vainly tried to forge a moderate African political climate.

South America isn't much different.

In Brazil, Argentina, Chile, Peru and elsewhere political prisoners fill the jails in militaristic regimes.

The plight of Tom McGinnis, an Idahoan unfairly arrested for violating Bolivian drug laws and now in jail without a trial, offers a much too vivid example of worldwide insensitivity to human rights.

Of all nations on Earth, none is more considerate of human rights than the United States. Ours is a country with a vigorous free press, a judicial system which presumes innocence instead of guilt and a government which, with all its faults, remains democratic and ultimately responsive to the citizenry.

These three factors — a free press, a cautious judicial system, and an elected government — separate this nation from most on Earth.

The free press allows independent analysis of government, private business and society. No one is immune from scrutiny by the press.

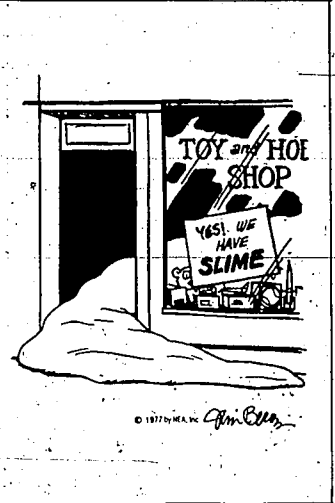

A judicial system which assumes innocence until guilt is proven makes the jailing of dissident political gadflies difficult.

A government which is held accountable by voters every few years cannot concentrate power in the hands of a few.

Periodically, some elements of American society call for more restrictions on the press, more severity in judicial chambers and identify government as the enemy of the people.

These paranoid, often uninformed minorities should look beyond the borders of their country to the rest of the world to see the alternatives to a free press, a judicial system which sides with defendants and a government elected by popular vote. This nation isn't perfect. But we're a heck of a long way ahead of most of our earthly neighbors.

Congress debates genetic research

By CRISTINE RUSSELL
© 1977 Washington Star

WASHINGTON — The group of seven men in suits standing in the hall outside Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's office were not seasoned lobbyists.

Instead they had come from their laboratories around the country to express concern about legislation pending before Congress which they claim could seriously hamper scientific pursuit of a controversial new form of genetic research.

Their credentials were impressive and their titles lengthy.

—A University of Rochester microbiology department chairman representing the Association of American Medical Colleges.

—A past-president of the Genetics Society of America from the University of Wisconsin.

—A Connecticut Agricultural Experiment Station geneticist sent by the American Institute of Biological Sciences.

—A respected Indiana University zoologist.

—A Harvard plant biochemist appearing on behalf of the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology.

—And a past-president of the American Society of Microbiology, Dr. Harlyn O. Halvorson, a Brandeis University professor who has led a carefully orchestrated campaign to help influence the course of legislation which would for the first time impose national controls on recombinant DNA research.

The group represented an unusual coalition which they said represented more than 500,000 researchers, many of whom have grown concerned about the prospect of a federal regulatory net tangling their efforts to explore a revolutionary new technique for joining genetic material from different organisms in combinations not found in nature.

The object of their concern is a Kennedy-sponsored bill, which would create an 11-member presidentially-appointed National Recombinant DNA Safety Regulation Commission — the majority of members "public representatives" — to oversee the conduct of such research by issuing regulations, licensing facilities and monitoring compliance.

They complain that this would create a new, unnecessary bureaucracy duplicating efforts already under way in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. HEW's National Institutes of Health fund much of the research and have been in charge of policing federally funded research with stringent guidelines worked out largely by federal officials in conjunction with the scientists themselves.

The seven scientists took this argument to Kennedy, but after a 45-minute session last week with the senator and his top health subcommittee staff aides, it became clear that little had been accomplished in terms of changing either Kennedy's stance.

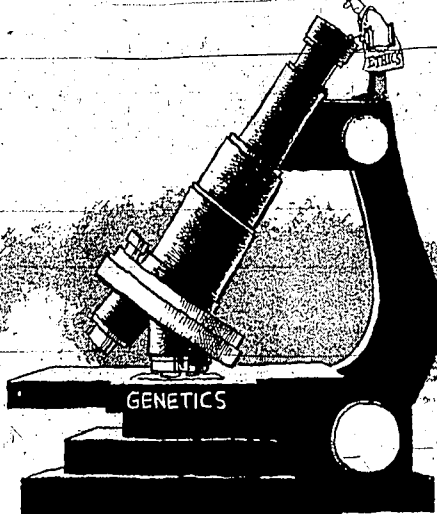

When Kennedy emerged, he played down the differences to a reporter, but defended the idea of a new recombinant DNA commission as a useful mechanism for creating a larger public role.

But Halvorson and his colleagues came out of the Senate office, still debating with the Kennedy staffers and left looking discouraged.

It was scientists who originally raised concerns about the potential dangers of conducting such research, raising the possibility that virulent new microorganisms carrying cancer genes or other toxic agents might be inadvertently unleashed into the environment.

"They sounded the alarm in 1974 — calling

Personal data files plague citizens

By ANN REISFELD
© Newsweek News Service

WASHINGTON — A hundred years ago, records kept about the average American contained little more than when and where he was born, when he died, whether he owned land and how he got title to it.

That was before mass education, commercial credit, Social Security, Medicare and life and health insurance, when an individual's financial and medical records could be securely filed in the memories of neighborhood merchants and family doctors.

Today, mass social programs combined with computer technology have made it possible to compile and store detailed personal information about millions of people. It can be retrieved in seconds.

Federal agencies alone have 3.8 billion personal files in 6,753 categories, and private organizations are estimated to have three times that figure. The five largest credit bureaus together keep more than 150 million individuals' credit records, and they share the contents with other record-keeping organizations in what one observer calls "an information buddy system."

In the files are details of citizens' family sizes, incomes, debts, medical histories, purchases, charitable and political contributions, reading and entertainment patterns, religious affiliations, heights, weights, hair and eye colors — in short, comprehensive personality profiles. Access to the information, routinely obtained without the knowledge of the persons concerned, has set the stage for scores of abuses of privacy — both unintentional and deliberate.

Item: In filling out a group health insurance claim, an employee was required to disclose on a form that went through the personnel office that he had had a vasectomy. He was subsequently harassed by his employer, who for religious reasons did not approve of such surgery. Other employees turned down their benefits rather than give information that might cause them to be ridiculed, fired, or denied promotions.

Item: A journalist who relocated to assume the editorship of a Midwestern newspaper was refused auto insurance on the basis of false information. A former neighbor who had resented the journalist's liberal views told an insurance investigator that the man was a "hippie" and probable drug user who wore shoulder-length hair and a beard and had been evicted from three previous residences. It was learned that the investigator, who did not make a habit of checking his facts, averaged from 70 to 80 reports a week and spent from 10 to 30 minutes on each insurance investigation.

No one questions that personal information must be collected and stored. Administrators must have data to determine eligibility for services, ranging from Medicaid and food stamps to private health insurance and instant, worldwide credit. But there must be a balance between the organization's need to manage efficiently and the individual's right to privacy, says David F. Linnow, chairman of the Privacy Protection Study Commission, a seven-member panel established by the Privacy Act of 1974 to report to the President and Congress.

In a 654-page report, the product of a two-year, $1.8-million investigation, the commission said the balance is dangerously tipping toward the erosion of personal privacy.

Computer technology now exists to store a 4,000-word biography on every man, woman and child in the country. It also is possible to retrieve the information in one site at the speed of light. Like the steam engine and the printing press, the computer has spurred a revolution, says Linnow. But our laws still reflect a "file cabinet" mentality, as if personal data were on paper and needed only physical security.

One of the commission's "most striking" findings, according to its report, is how difficult it can be for a person to find out how records about him are developed and used. Once an individual yields personal data — on bank loan applications, medical forms and the like — they are forever beyond his reach.

Although people do have legal access to their credit bureau records, few know their rights or how to exercise them. An executive of Equifax, one of the nation's largest credit bureaus, boasts that 225,000 people have inspected their files in the last six years. Considering the company maintains more than 60 million files, that figure represents less than half of 1 percent.

The greatest abuses are found in medical records. In testimony from more than 300 witnesses, the commission learned that it is not uncommon for insurance investigators checking the validity of a claim to pose as doctors, nurses or clerks to obtain confidential information. The potential for abuse is endless," says Linnow. "Yet only 10 percent of computer capacity has so far been applied to the workings of our economy."

The commission recommended 162 reforms designed to balance the need for information with the right to privacy. They call for federal and state laws imposed on medical, financial and educational records and for voluntary compliance from employers and mailing-list compilers. Some of the provisions would:

—Permit people to see and copy records held by insurance companies, banks, credit bureaus and private investigators and to correct, amend or comment on the contents.

—Require government agencies to get subpoenas for private files or federal tax returns in civil cases.

—Require schools to respect the confidentiality of students' files or risk the loss of federal funds. Students and applicants also would be allowed to see their letters of recommendation unless they agreed in advance to forfeit the right.

—Outlaw use of the detectors on job applicants by prospective employers and "pretext" interviews in which investigators misrepresent their identities.

—Require companies to tell people how and from whom information will be collected about them and to get approval from the individuals before sharing the information with anyone else.

Trusteeship proposed

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — Secretary of State Cyrus Vance will propose Israeli trusteeship for several years over the occupied West Bank of Jordan prior to a referendum by the Arab population there to decide its future, an Israeli newspaper report said today.

The newspaper Ma'ariv, in a dispatch from Washington, said the proposal is one of several Vance is planning to present to Israel and the Arabs on his Middle East spring beginning next week. It gave no source for its report.

Government spokesman Dan Patil said to his knowledge President Carter did not mention such a proposal to Prime Minister Menahem Begin during their White House talks last week.

A proposal for an Israeli trusteeship over Judea and Samaria (the West Bank) is among the proposals Vance will bring to Israel and the Arabs, Ma'ariv said. The Israeli mandate would last several years, until a referendum is held.

Such a trusteeship would be similar in structure to the mandate Britain held over Palestine before Israeli independence in 1948. The West Bank Arabs would manage their own local affairs, which they largely do now.

Under the trusteeship, sovereignty over the West Bank and Gaza territory never would be recognized officially but Israel would have the right to defend the area even if the Arabs decide in the referendum to become part of Jordan.

If such a plan would be acceptable to the Arabs, the trusteeship concept would meet Israel's often-repeated demand that it retain the region for the defense of Israel proper, which lies to the west.

"The Palestinians could develop their own homeland in the region under the trusteeship just as the Jews developed what was to become Israel during the British mandatory period. Britain expelled the Turks in Palestine during World War I, and occupied it militarily until the League of Nations gave it mandatory rights over the area in 1922.

Ma'ariv also said Vance would propose the inclusion of Palestinian representatives in a Jordanian or other Arab delegation to the Middle East peace talks in Geneva. Israel has made a similar proposal in an attempt to keep the Palestine Liberation Organization out of the talks. The Arab states have been demanding PLO inclusion.

Police patrol outbreaks in S. Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Riot police in armored cars moved through the dusty streets of Soweto today to put down another outbreak of violence on the fifth day of a student boycott.

Soweto's acting police chief, Brig. Jan Gerber said the township was "quiet but tense." In the only incident of violence reported during the morning, black youths looted a meal delivery truck near the Orlando high school.

Few pupils appeared to be in their classrooms, but dozens stood on street corners or in small groups, talking.

Ma. Gen. Dawid Kriel, deputy police commissioner, in charge of nationwide riot control operations issued a warning saying police would take "more stern action against hooliganism" in Soweto. He was referring to the looting of a soft drink truck and the slashing of tractor tires.

"I am going to use all the means at my disposal to stop this hooliganism," he said. Police arrested more than 100 black youths near Pretoria and dispersed hundreds with tear gas in Soweto Thursday in an attempt to break the boycott.

The new unrest began Monday when students in the black belts of Atteridgeville and Sautsville outside of Pretoria walked out of their classes in a boycott they hope will topple the hated system of Bantu (African) Education.

They maintain the Bantu educational system gives black students an inferior education, but white officials deny this.

More than 20,000 students at schools in Pretoria's black townships continued their boycott of classes for the fourth day Thursday, but pupils at Mamelodi, who walked out in a show of sympathy Wednesday, returned to their classes.

Police said 183 youths, all of them under 18, were detained in Atteridgeville and Mamelodi.

Students in Soweto on the outskirts of Johannesburg deserted their classrooms at midmorning Thursday and milled around in the dusty streets.

There were incidents of sporadic stone-throwing but no action was taken by police until a large group formed. Riot police fired canisters of tear gas to scatter the crowd.

The students later regrouped and decided to return to school today but not to study. School officials are threatening to shut down their schools unless the students return immediately.

In the black township of New Brighton outside Port Elizabeth, black students stoned buses, broke up windows and injured a driver Thursday in what police called an "isolated incident" of violence.

Belgrade meet agenda stymied

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (UPI) — Western and Soviet-bloc diplomats argued into the early morning hours today but failed to reach a compromise on an agenda for this fall's Belgrade conference.

One envoy said Communist Romania apparently blocked a key concession to the Russians to limit committee debate on such issues as human rights.

"We narrowed the gap a little bit," an American delegate said. "But there are still an awful lot of different versions floating around in there."

The diplomats, from 17 of the 33 countries at the preparatory meeting, emerged drawn and downcast from a smoke-filled conference room just before 1 a.m. after more than nine hours of sometimes-heated negotiations.

They said the deadlock centered on two points: whether the fall conference, to review the 1975 Helsinki agreement, will have a fixed cut-off date and how long the meeting's five "working groups" or subcommittees will meet.

"I'm not sure what went wrong," a disappointed Austrian delegate said. "I'm sorry — I really thought we were on the verge of a compromise."

The Soviet Union, apparently fearing endless debates on its human rights record, has insisted that this preparatory meeting must set a cut-off date for the fall conference.

The Russians also want a firm ending date for the sessions of the five working groups, one of which will discuss the Helsinki pact's rights guarantees.

Western and neutral countries have disagreed. They want to ensure that the fall meeting will continue as long as necessary for all 33 delegations to agree by consensus on a final declaration, and prefer not to limit the working groups' time.

Market group OK's nuclear research

BRUSSELS, Belgium (UPI) — The European Common Market, fearing that reliance on oil could bring about an energy disaster, has rejected an appeal by President Carter and voted to go ahead with research into fast breeder nuclear reactors.

The Market's Executive Commission issued a statement Thursday approving the development of the controversial device for the nine-member body in the 1990s.

At the same time, it called for close cooperation among the member countries in safety disposing of the waste from the breeder as well as scores of conventional nuclear reactors.

Carter has called for a two-year moratorium on the development of fast breeder reactors — which produce more fuel than they burn and thus pose the danger of nuclear proliferation — to give the industrial nations time to study the problem.

Guido Brunner of West Germany, the Common Market's energy commissioner, said the Community has "no choice" but to go ahead with its development program.

Peru's military regime may end

LIMA, Peru (UPI) — Peru's military regime says it will end 12 years of often hard-fisted rule and hand power back to civilians in 1980 if the nation's economic situation permits.

President Gen. Francisco Morales Bermudez announced the timetable for democracy — his most concrete statement yet on the prospects for civilian rule — in a televised speech Thursday marking Peru's 15th independence anniversary.

Morales said a special assembly will be elected and convened in the second quarter of 1978 to draft a new constitution for civilian rule.

"The way of electing it has not yet been determined," he said. "It will draw up a new constitution to be in force, without question, in time to call elections in 1980."

He said the primary aim of the new constitution will be to insure "a social democracy with full participation by the people, in contrast with the false democracy before the military takeover in Peru in 1968."

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance will visit Peking next month and is expected to discuss the Carter administration's desire to reach a "full normalization" of relations with Peking.

"Instead of profiting, the United States would have a lot to lose," Chiang said. "Instead of ensuring peace, normalization would lead to a war of crisis" in Asia.

Chiang did not elaborate, but he apparently was referring to what the Taiwan government regards as the strong possibility that the Chinese Communists will attack Taiwan. They have long vowed to do.

US normalization with Peking rapped

TAIPEI, Taiwan (UPI) — Taiwan Premier Chiang Ching-kuo warned that normalization of relations between Peking and the United States will lead to a "war of crisis" in Asia.

Chiang, son of the late Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, made the remarks at a cabinet meeting Thursday. The speech was released today.

Rosenberg sons vs. Nizer

NEW YORK (UPI) — A U.S. Appeals Court has reinstated one element in a legal complaint by the sons of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg against a book written by attorney Louis Nizer about their parents' trial and execution in 1953.

Nizer, was accused by Michael and Robert Meeropol, of using, without authorization, substantial portions of copyrighted letters written by the Rosenbergs, called the "Death House Letters," in his novel, "The Implosion Conspiracy."

US gold dazzles Blumenthal

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — W. Michael Blumenthal Thursday became the first Treasury Secretary in 30 years to visit the Ft. Knox gold depository and, though dazzled by the $2.1 billion hoard, said it means little on the world money market.

"Today," he told a Louisville Area Chamber of Commerce luncheon, "it plays no role at all in U.S. domestic monetary policy ... We understand today that the value of our currency, at home and internationally, depends not on our holdings of those metals, but on our fundamental economic performance."

FORMER CONGRESSMAN RICHARD TONRY before being sentenced for election law violation

Tonry goes to jail

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Former Rep. Richard Tonry, D-La., says his sentence of a year in prison and a $10,000 fine for violating federal election laws makes him wish he had never sought a seat in Congress.

Family and children, that makes the answer no," said Tonry, dressed in a white three-piece suit. "Up until then it would have been yes."

Outside the courtroom, Tonry was asked by reporters whether he would have given up his congressional seat if he knew the outcome.

Three-year probation period during which Tonry can neither run for office nor participate in politics.

Miami police find murderers' auto

MIAMI (UPI) — Police have found the getaway car used by three men posing as power company repairmen to gain entry into a suburban home, execute six men and wound the other two occupants Wednesday night.

The car, a rented 1977 Ford Thunderbird, was found abandoned late Thursday afternoon in the parking lot of a garment plant about 10 miles from the shooting scene.

Police refused to say if the car, which had been rented by one of the victims, produced any leads to the killers involved in Florida's worst mass murder.

The motive for the slayings remained a mystery. Some officers speculated it may have involved narcotics involved because one of the eight victims — they did not say who — had needle marks on his arms. Others said robbery may have been the motive.

Angered feminists ask judge's recall

MADISON, Wis. (UPI) — Feminists angered over a judge's suggestion that rape is a "normal" reaction in a permissive society have succeeded in making him the first Wisconsin official ever forced to run in a special "recall" election.

The Dane County clerk's office said Thursday that 33,019 of the 39,393 signatures filed Monday in demanding the recall of County Judge Arthur E. Simonson were declared valid.

The recall election was set for Sept. 7. With Aug. 10 the deadline for circulating nomination papers, Simonson now is serving a six-year term to which he was elected in 1972.

Simonson's name will be on the ballot unless he resigns within 10 days. He has refused to do so since he made the rape remarks, despite demands from the city Council, county board and school board.

Ravenscroft raps plan

BOISE (UPI) — Public hearings are being held Thursday and Friday on a report of water resources study that could be devastating to Idaho, the state chairman of the Republican Party said Thursday.

Vernon Ravenscroft, Tuttle, said one proposal made in the Water Resource Policy Study by the Federal Water Resource Council, "would enable federal condemnation of existing Idaho water rights on the whim of some government bureaucrat," he decided that it was more "politically desirable" to use the water elsewhere.

"The report contains several such stunted definitions and extreme solutions, all of which imply two things," Ravenscroft said. "The state chairman said those implications are:

- 1. State water rights would be subjected to some degree of federal supervision or to outright nationalization."
- 2. "Water projects and water policy should be manipulated to provide social benefits."

"The plan gives a totally inadequate hearing period," Ravenscroft said.

It was published July 15 and hearings are being held Thursday and Friday in Denver and Los Angeles, he said.

"Parts of this report are so objectionable to Idaho people, our economy, and our resource management, that I submit our opposition should be near unanimous," Ravenscroft said in a letter Thursday to Gov. John V. Evans.

"Leadership to marshal that kind of cooperation and coordination can come best from the office of the governor," Ravenscroft said.

He concluded, "It seems to me that we will best serve Idaho if we can present a totally united front against the federalization of water rights and the social experimentation with water projects."

NYC awaits killer anniversary

NEW YORK (UPI) — Today a tense New York City holds its breath and waits.

Everywhere New Yorkers asked each other, "Where is he?" "Where will he strike next?"

"He" is the psychopathic killer who calls himself "Son of Sam."

It was a year ago today that he first struck, killing 18-year-old Donna Laura as she sat chatting with 19-year-old Jody Valenti in a car outside a Bronx apartment house.

In the last year, Son of Sam has struck six more times, using the same .44-caliber bulldog revolver that he calls "Sam." He has killed five and injured six others. He usually attacks late at night, on the weekends, and in quiet residential streets in the Bronx or Queens.

His victims have usually been young white women with long dark hair. Three of his victims have been young men with long hair. All his victims have been Catholic.

Son of Sam promised in a letter to columnist Jimmy Breslin in May that he would strike again on the first anniversary of his spree.

"Tell me, Jim, what will you have for July Twenty-Ninth?" he wrote. "You can forget about me if you like because I don't care for publicity."

However, you must not forget Donna Laura and you cannot let the people forget her either.

"She was a very sweet girl, but Sam's a thirsy tad and he won't let me stop killing until he gets his fill of blood."

"Mr. Breslin, sir, don't think that because you haven't heard from (me) for a while that I went to sleep. No, rather, I am still here. Like a split running the night. Thirsty, hungry, seldom stopping to rest, anxious to please Sam. I love my work. Now, the void has been filled."

Police patrols were boosted up for the anniversary, but the department declined to recall its preparations in order not to tip off the killer.

A number of detectives volunteered to work without pay this weekend, each hoping to be the one to capture "the At-Calliber killer."

In suburban Nassau County, extra police patrols were ordered to maintain a special watch, an disbelievers and other amusement places frequented by the young.

A 50-man detective task force has been working to track down Son of Sam since the spring. Twenty more detectives worked in Queens and the Bronx on weekends. At night another 100 patrolmen, both in and out of uniform, comb the streets.

More than 2,000 persons have been interviewed and 5,000 leads followed up.

Weather aids LDS pageant

PALMYRA, N.Y. (UPI) — Favorable weather continues to encourage greater attendance at the Mormon Church's annual Hill Cumorah Pageant, taking place this week near the western New York community.

A large gathering of some 23,000 persons watched the program unfold on 25 hillside stages on Hill Cumorah, where church legend says that Joseph Smith, in 1827, received "documents which led him to found the sect."

A pageant spokesman said the highest one-day attendance figure in previous years has been about 30,000, and that about that many are expected on the final two nights before the program concludes Saturday evening.

Thursday night, the parking lot was filled to overflowing with more than 2,500 cars and 40 buses, many of which carried senior citizens or tour groups to the famous event. Some persons found that the closest parking spot was more than a mile away. More than 3,000 of the spectators were pedestrians.

White original attendance estimates said that up to 200,000 persons may attend this year, pageant officials are now predicting a total turnout of about 150,000.

MY Baptists schedule movie

BUHL—A Christian movie, "The Conversion of Colonel Buttermilk" will be shown on two dates this week at Magic Valley Baptist Church, Buhl.

The first showing will be today at 7:30 p.m. Everyone is welcome to attend this first showing, but a special invitation is given to Jr. high through college-age young people. After the movie, there will be some special entertainment and refreshments.

The second showing will be Sunday at 7 p.m. With the movie, a special speaker, Rev. Leroy Eldridge from Kingsport, Tenn., is scheduled.

The movie is the story of a man who glorified in being self-reliant, a "master of his own fate...captain of his own soul," and who had faith only in his own abilities. Then this tough Air Force colonel was brought up for court martial and found all his dreams and aspirations falling around him. The true story tells the dramatic change that took place in the life of this man.

Magic Valley Baptist Church's air conditioned building is located on Clear Lakes Road in Buhl. Everyone is welcome to the services, according to Clinton R. Keaton, pastor.

Rupert woman delegate to meet

RUPERT—Mrs. Leo Jarolimek, Trinity Lutheran Church, is the Rupert woman who has been chosen as one of the delegates representing the Utah-Idaho district to the 17th biennial convention of the International Lutheran Women's Missionary League to be held on the University of Wyoming Campus, Laramie, Aug. 8 to 11th.

The LWML, women's auxiliary of the Lutheran Church, Missouri Synod, has 6,000 local societies with 200,000 membership in the United States and Canada. About 4,000 delegates and guests are expected to attend the convention.

Delegates will vote on new projects for the coming two-year period and elect new officers.

It is estimated that 50 to 60 women from the Utah-Idaho District will attend the convention. A bus has been chartered to pick up the women at Immanuel Lutheran Church in Twin Falls and the Ramada Inn in Burley on Aug. 7th.

Mrs. Elmer Fischer of Piler is district president.

Grace Baptist group sets concert

TWIN FALLS—The Chorales of Grace Baptist Church of Twin Falls will present a concert at the church, 298 Eastland Ave. N., Sunday at 8 p.m.

The Chorales is a group of high school students who perform the year around in rest homes, at youth rallies, in churches nearby and in the home church.

They will leave Aug. 6 on a 3,500-mile tour of California. Their program consists basically of many of the old familiar songs especially arranged for teenage voices. A women's trio, brass instrumental numbers, lend refreshing variety to the program.

Rev. Robert J. Seaman, pastor of the church, directs the group. He extends an invitation to the community to hear these people present the gospel in music.

Adventists will walk to Church

TWIN FALLS—Members of the Eden Seventh Day Adventist Church will be joining with other Adventists all over the world in walking to church this Saturday.

Catholics break traditions

NEW YORK (UPI) — A four-year study of sexual practices among Roman Catholics in the United States indicates increasing numbers of them are turning away from traditional church teachings and "have taken charge of their own sex lives."

In addition to the widespread revolt against tradition, the report cited another survey indicating only a small percentage of American priests now are willing to support the church's absolute ban on birth control.

The study was launched four years ago by the Catholic Theological Society of America's Committee on Human Sexuality in the face of what Sister Agnes Cunningham, society president, called "a massive breakdown of Catholic adherence to traditional church teachings."

Sister Agnes and four other theologians authored the report and sided with the dissenters.

"No priest, bishop, archbishop, cardinal — not even a pope — can interfere with the relationship between a person, his well-informed conscience and his God on sexual matters," the report concluded.

Sister Agnes said she and her fellow authors do not consider the report controversial, even though it breaks with traditional doctrine on such things as artificial contraception and premarital sex, which she said, at times "can be morally justified."

Not all would agree on the point of controversy. Observers at the Vatican said Pope Paul VI is believed to have had the report in mind when he told nearly 100 American cardinals and bishops to beware of challenges to the teaching of sexual morality.

And Cardinal William Baum of Washington, D.C., head of the Bishops' Doctrine Committee, said his group is preparing a "detailed analysis" of the study.

The authors said "questions and crises occur these days among both laymen and pastors." But most laymen, according to the theologians, "already have taken charge of their own sex lives."

Some of the proof cited: —Eighty-five per cent of United States Catholics reject the church's official teaching on birth control.

—A study among American priests, commissioned by the National Council of Catholic Bishops, showed only a minority are willing to support the church's official teaching on birth control.

The study was published by the Paulist Press under the title, "Human Sexuality: New Directions in American Catholic thought."

Church of Christ seeks TV reform

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Describing "television's exploitative use of sex and violence" as "poles apart" from "God's purpose," the general synod of the United Church of Christ has unanimously directed the office of communication, its agency devoted to mass communication, to act to eliminate "the misuse of violence and sexual imagery in television programming."

It warned that such activity should be "consistent with freedom of speech and of the press." The General Synod thus endorsed and expanded the decade-long commitment of the Office of Communication to citizen reform in broadcasting.

In denouncing the "manipulation of audiences for profit" and the teaching of "false systems of value," the Synod delegates all called for "new cooperation among church bodies" in fighting misuse of the public airwaves.

The general synod's "Pronouncement of Exploitative Broadcasting Practices" further directs "continuous study of constitutional rights, regulatory codes and procedures and freedom of access by publics to the electronic spectrum."

Public interest requirements set forth in the Federal Communications Act are often violated through "desire for excessive profits on the part of the broadcasters, lack of knowledge on the part of the public, irresponsibility in filling its regulatory role on the part of the Federal Communications Commission and indifference on the part of Congress," the pronouncement states.

While television has the capability for "deepening human sympathies and increasing dignity" among its viewers, the pronouncement states that this potential is ignored in favor of degrading portrayals of men, women and children.

The pronouncement specifically rejects censorship in any form. "It is a genuine attempt by the United Church of Christ to express itself in support of the traditional values in American life."

Charismatics demonstrate strong piety

Chicago Sun-Times
KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Ken Fossan of Hastings, Minn., is a charismatic truck driver for Armour & Co. the meat-packer.

Fossan, his wife and his two daughters, Jenie, 10, and Julie, 14, spent four days of their vacation last week in this crowded, hot and humid metropolis.

They were among the 45,000 "spirit-filled" Catholics and Protestants attending the 1977 Conference on Charismatic Renewal in the Christian Churches. The huge pentecostal camp meeting ended with separate denominational services in various parts of the city.

Fossan and his family, like 45 per cent of the other conference-goers here, are Roman Catholics. They are members of the Servants of Life, a disciplined community of Catholic charismatics in their hometown.

By day, the Fossans attended Catholic workshops and teach-ins. By night, they joined their Protestant "brothers and sisters" in three-hour charismatic services at Arrowhead Stadium, the home of the Kansas City Chiefs professional football team.

Charismatics demonstrate a strong piety for Jesus Christ, have a conservative view of the Bible and practice the "gifts" of the Holy Spirit (freed to the Day of Pentecost described in the New Testament Book of Acts, these include supernatural healing, visions, prophecy and speaking in tongues).

"We're here," Fossan said, "to do our prayer groups such a part of our lives that we couldn't be anywhere else this week."

A few years ago, an ecumenical conference like this never could have taken place. In Protestantism, the ecumenists were a fringe sect sometimes derisively called "holier rollers." In Roman Catholicism, the charismatic renewal movement, which attracted 500,000 persons last summer to the campus of the University of Dayton, did not get started until 1967. The pentecostal spirit invaded mainline Protestant churches about that time.

For four nights last week, an unusual mix of people gathered at the stadium to "praise God," sing foot-stomping hymns, listen to personal testimonies, speak in ecstatic tongues and raise their arms toward the sky in prayer.

The leaders of the conference described in different ways the ecumenical significance of this Christian love feast.

Memnonite, Bishop Nelson Litwiler said: "The walls that once divided Christians are falling down."

Kevin M. Ranaghan, conference chairman and a major leader in the Catholic charismatic movement, observed, "What you're seeing here is grass-roots ecumenism. It's a heart-to-heart kind of Christian unity."

Several contrasted this populist form of ecumenism with the kind of ecumenism represented by the work of the World Council of Churches and the National Council of Churches.

The Rev. Bob Mumford, a Protestant pentecostal, put it this way: "The unity you see here was not proposed from the top. It was birthed from below."

A Lutheran charismatic, the Rev. Larry Christenson, commented, "Lay people, ordinary Christians are interested here. This is not true of other forms of ecumenism."

A few leaders were more cautious in their appraisal of the movement's prospects. "Ten years from now," said the Rev. Charles H. Murphy, a Nashville Episcopalian, "our parishes are either going to be charismatic or dead."

An important leader in the Church of England's charismatic movement since 1964, the Rev. Michael Harper, said Father Murphy's view as "absurd. I was around 10 years ago, and people were saying the same thing then."

In Father Harper's judgment, it's possible the charismatic movement, instead of uniting all Christians, could produce "the third largest schism in the history of the church. Or, it could completely revolutionize the whole church."

The British cleric took the view that the renewal movement still is not mature. One of its shortcomings, he said, is its lack of concern for social justice. "I'm concerned," he stated, "about the absence of the Third World at this meeting. I'm sure God is in Kansas City, but I think his heart is in the ghettos of the world."

Assembly sets date for choir

THE "Life Saver's First Choir," a youthful choral group from First Assembly of God in Colorado Springs, Colo., will sing at the First Assembly of God, 180 W. Locust, Twin Falls, at 11 a.m. Sunday. According to Rev. James Hicks, host pastor, the choir, under the direction of Mrs. Beverly Lunford, will present a program of sacred, gospel and contemporary music. The 40-voice choir, composed of teen-age members of the church, is on a 4,500-mile, 11-day summer tour through five western states. The choir is seen in southern Colorado each week on the telecast "A New Song," produced by the First Assembly of God. They are singing at conventions and youth rallies as well as in services at the church every other Sunday night. Traveling with the choir are Pastor and Mrs. Don Lunford, who for 12 years, traveled as "The Singing Lunfords" and the church's youth pastors, Rev. and Mrs. Tom Beniga. The local service is open to the public.

Torah inspectors travel, seek jobs

N.Y. Times Service
NEW YORK — Moshe and Abba Klein are brothers who manage mechanics all they manage travel and goodbye. When one is in Brooklyn minding the store, the other can be halfway across the country inspecting Torahs.

"Are your Torahs in a kosher condition?" the brothers ask in letters to rabbis and congregations. When were they last examined? ... We will come down to your synagogue in place in the United States and Canada at your convenience to give you an estimate free of charge."

Along with one prayer for kashof and another for lanning, the traveling Torah inspectors from Brooklyn bring expertise and tools of the trade — turkey-quill pen-washable ink and congot repair for on-the-spot repairs in some sheets of Torahs in silver and kosher utensils for use.

It is often difficult to find kosher food in small towns when in large hotels. The brothers remember to bring their own sandwiches, and in a salad.

When we leave behind the children, we look for business to do — we don't come to eat," said Moshe. "Sometimes we have to get up at 6 o'clock to catch a flight, or 6 o'clock to catch a flight. If it's a synagogue and it belongs to Jews, we are there."

When the repair estimate — usually $150 to $500 a Torah — satisfies rabbi and board of directors, the scrolls go into the trunk of a rented car. From Florida, the Kleins buy, or accept as a gift, the cardboard boxes used for the longest-stemmed flowers: Torahs travel in the boxes as registered baggage.

They have repaired Torahs all over Canada and have sold others to Puerto Rico, Curacao, Venezuela, Brazil, Alaska, Hawaii, even Israel. "The other day Moshe was astonished to discover business two blocks from home. 'I'm going to work in California and here at the back of my nose I have eight Torahs to work on,' he said. 'It's like the Talmud says, sometimes you have to go a long way to go a short way, and sometimes a short way to go a long way.'"

Travel is hard. Inspecting is difficult, and even repairs with a "five-year guarantee don't grow on trees. The Kleins have struggled to their embezzlement, but they have also had help. Born in pre-Israel Palestine 34 and 32 years ago, they are fourth-generation scribes.

what's what

L.M. Boyd

About those unusual names you see now and then. In a 1950 issue of a national magazine appeared an item wherein the writer incredulously made note of some girl with the improbable name of Fawcett. Doesn't seem so astonishing at the moment, does it? That was the place in which appeared also the names of girls called Chlorine, Lacey, Dewdrop, Dinette, Set, Zippe, Blooma and Mecca.

"He's not so much a person as a Civil War," H. G. Wells said that. Do you know anybody it spits describes? Likewise?

You're normal, if your back aches. Eighty per cent of the people suffer similarly.

CONVICTS

Q. "Who were Ted Cole and Ross Ross?"
A. The only two convicts who swam away from Alcatraz into the unknown. A lot of other prisoners tried. Some were killed, some were recaptured. But during an extremely dense fog on the afternoon of Dec. 16, 1937, Cole and Ross, both powerful swimmers, took to the water, and if somebody knows what happened to them, that somebody isn't saying. Police boats criss-crossed the mile and a half to the mainland and three patrols walked the beach. Nothing.

Q. "In which U. S. cities are there the largest number of businesses owned by minorities?"
A. In descending order: 1. Los Angeles, mostly Mexican. 2. New York, mostly black. 3. San Francisco, mostly Chinese and Japanese. 4. Chicago, mostly black by far.

Q. "What do the Mormons mean when they refer to somebody as a 'dabbler'?"
A. A believer who appears to be backsliding from the Word.

YELLOW PAGES

Interesting, some of the goofs that occur in the Yellow Pages. Believe I mentioned that one such directory once put the following filler line under the section headed Funeral Directors: "Miss your loved one? Call long distance." Call Callaway's dance band franchises turn up occasionally under Taxicabs. And building foundation companies appear from time to time under Consts and Brasers.

Women have better depth perception than do men. Of at least, that's what the Carrier Corp. executives evidently believed when they first assigned women to operate their 20-ton cranes. That superior eyesight, if such it be, is needed by those operators working 30 feet above the ground, they said.

DEAR ABBY: I am very much in love with a bachelor who lives alone in my building. I'm a divorcee also living alone. It all started with a "good morning" when we were both walking our dogs. (He has two).

DEAR ABBY: What is your opinion of a person who can't pass a mirror without taking a good long look at herself? Wouldn't you say that she was very conceited?

DEAR WONDERING: Not necessarily. She could be exactly the opposite. Very insecure.

DEAR ABBY: A widowed friend of mine is 50, very wealthy, very attractive and a lovely woman. She recently confided that she longs to marry but can't seem to attract a man.

I ache to tell her that the strikingly snow-white hair she takes enormous pride in WAS an asset when she was in her 60s and was prematurely grey, but now it makes her look like an old woman.

DEAR CONFIDANT: If she doesn't ask for your advice, don't offer any. There just may be some men who LIKE white hair on women.

Treatment raises risk of later cancer

WASHINGTON — Women receiving drugs for treatment of advanced ovarian cancer run an increased risk of developing a second cancer several years later from the therapy itself, according to a National Cancer Institute study published Thursday.

NCI researchers found that ovarian cancer victims who received chemotherapy were 21 times more likely to develop leukemia, a cancer of the bone marrow, than the general population.

And the longer the patients managed to survive their original cancer the more their risk of later contracting another increased — to more than 170 times two year after the start of the drug therapy.

Since advanced ovarian cancer is generally lethal without treatment—half of the patients die in less than 10 months — Dr. Harold R. Hutter and his colleagues concluded that at present "the potential benefits of the therapy clearly outweigh this risk."

But, in an article published in the New England Journal of Medicine, they warn that while the risk may be acceptable in diseases with a poor outcome, more attention should be paid to the possible repercussions of prescribing them for disorders with better long-term survival rates.

The drugs involved have been used recently in the early stages of some cancers as well as certain noncancerous illnesses such as kidney disease and rheumatoid arthritis.

"It's important to put chemotherapy in perspective," Reimer said in an interview. "The message of this study is that we're going to have to monitor the long-term effects and make sure that the potential benefit is greater than the potential risk."

In an editorial in the same issue of the journal, Dr. Bruce A. Chabner, chief of NCI's clinical pharmacology branch, echoes this concern:

"In treatment of patients with advanced cancer, the risk of development of a second neoplasm (cancer) is unlikely to become a major consideration unless a considerable number of patients achieve long-term disease-free survival, and this is the case with only a few cancers at present.

"In those few diseases, however, it will become increasingly important to assess this risk as part of any over-all comparison of therapeutic alternatives."

Chabner raises questions about the role of long-term or intensified drug therapy, combined use of drugs with radiation therapy, as well as drugs administered after surgery to help prevent later spread of cancer to other parts of the body.

In particular, he notes that in the past two years two major studies have reported reduction in the relapse rate of breast cancer patients who received drugs immediately after surgery. While the initial findings seemed promising, it is too early to assess the likelihood of the treatment causing another tumor several years later, he said.

The drug used to treat the breast cancer victims is the same one administered to many of the ovarian cancer patients who later developed leukemia.

Parathyroid malfunctions

Parathyroid glands are on each side of the thyroid gland around your trachea (wind pipe) in your throat. The hormone the glands produce causes calcium to be mobilized from the bones and does not increase the calcium content in the blood. The glands do not form calcium themselves. They work with vitamin D and your calcium intake to help regulate your blood calcium level.

Over active parathyroid glands produce too much hormone that can mobilize calcium from your bones. That results in a high blood calcium and may cause your bones to fracture easily. The excess calcium may also cause kidney stones, and may increase the acid digestive juices from the stomach causing digestive complaints. This combination has led doctors to say the hyperparathyroid state is a disease of bones, stones and brains.

Sometimes this overactivity is caused by some other disease in the body. Some forms of kidney disease and diseases that interfere with the absorption of calcium from your digestive system are examples of underlying diseases that may cause an over active parathyroid gland.

Other causes are caused by a small tumor (rarely malignant) that causes over production of the hormone.

The ideal treatment depends upon the cause. If there is a small tumor of the parathyroid glands the treatment is surgical. If the over activity is secondary to another underlying disease the treatment is directed toward trying to correct that abnormality.

I'm not puzzled by your dietary advice. Cutting down your calcium intake will not help. If surgery is not needed or the underlying problem is not completely correctable then it is usually wise to direct treatment efforts toward replacing lost chemical salts which may even include replacing calcium and phosphorus. Most important of all it is advisable to drink plenty of fluids every day, spaced throughout the 24 hour period to ensure a continuous passage of dilute urine. This will help prevent kidney stones.

I think you would be wise to ask your doctor to refer you to an endocrinologist for a consultation. I see from your address that the city you live in has a university medical center. You could be referred to the endocrinology section there. Management of such cases is often complicated and they may be able to help you deal with your case.

Arts, crafts festival set

THE ninth annual international arts and crafts festival sponsored by the Sun Valley Center for the Arts and Humanities, will be held Aug. 5, 6 and 7 around the Sun Valley pond and Opera House on the Sun Valley Mall.

Some 100 northwest artists will exhibit their paintings, ceramics, jewelry, leather, sculpture, glass, wood fibers and stitchery. Juried awards and local merchant prizes will be given in various categories.

Dancers from the center's community program will perform outdoors on all three days. A marionette and hand puppet show will be presented on Aug. 7 at 11 a.m. and 3 p.m. in the Opera House with 50 cents admission.

The festival begins Aug. 5 from noon to 7 p.m. and continues Aug. 6 and 7 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. The picture shows a sculpture by Michael Rondella, Halfway, Ore.

Postmaster takes charge of census

OTTOWEN, Iowa (UPI) — Postmaster Edna Kamper keeps her finger on the pulse of this tiny northern town community.

So she rose in dismay and a bit of wrath when a recent Census Bureau report showed the town was shrinking in population.

As it is, Ottsen is one of Iowa's smallest towns. It was "degrading," she felt, to lose any more noses in a census estimate — especially when she knew better. Postmaster Kamper sat down one noon hour last week and took her own census. She used a simple method.

She wrote down all the names of the adult residents of the town. She wrote down the names of their children, too.

The results, she said, showed the town had actually gained rather than lost population since the official 1970 census.

Her figures showed the population up by 31 — from 83 to 114 — rather than down by 26 — from 93 to 67 as shown by the recent census estimate.

"I know we didn't lose any because we had people coming in all the time, and there would have been more if we'd have had houses for them to move into," she said.

"It felt like we were being degraded." She checked her statistics with lists compiled by Town Clerk Eldon Meyer and Councilman Tom Bennett. All had the same figure — 114.

"I know my little town," she said. "I know all the families, so I didn't have to go door-to-door. I did it all by memory by checking birth and death records in the county courthouse and migration records from income tax return addresses.

The figures are important because they are used, among other things, for distribution of federal revenue sharing funds. Ken Wright, a bureau official in Kansas City, conceded the agency could make mistakes.

Wright said each town has the right to challenge its figures. Ottsen officials said that is exactly what they plan to do.

King, Gunnell unite

MURTAUGH — Rebecca Gull King, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Miles King, Murtaugh, and Kyn Russell Gunnell were united in marriage at 7:30 p.m. July 22 in the LDS Church.

Gunnell is the son of Thomas R. Gunnell, Murtaugh.

Bishop Raymond R. Hepworth officiated. The ceremony began with a reading of the scriptures before baskets of white gladioli.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white satin empire-styled gown with a chiffon overlay. The dress featured a V-neck, long, puff sleeves and a chapel train. The gown was made by the bride's mother.

She carried a cascade of white roses, lilies and baby's breath.

Connie Harde, sister of the bride, was majordomo of honor. Bridesmaids were Marilyn King, sister-in-law of the bride, and Royce Gunnell, sister-in-law of the bridegroom.

Michelle Gunnell, niece of the bridegroom, was flower girl.

Best man was Kenyon Gunnell, brother of the bridegroom. Serving as ushers were Kip and Kyle Gunnell, brothers of the bridegroom. Carey Hurd, nephew of the bride, was ringbearer.

"Evergreen" was sung by Melanie Watts and Ruth Stevers during the ceremony. They also sang "Wedding Song" and were accompanied by Lona Watts.

Jana Peterson played the wedding music.

A reception honoring the couple was held in the cultural hall following the ceremony.

The bride's table was covered with a white lace tablecloth and centered with a three-tiered wedding cake with blue trimming and a miniature bride and bridegroom. A crystal punch bowl completed the setting.

Kleta Breeding cut and served the cake and Sandy King, aunt of the bride, poured punch.

Round guest tables were covered with lace with blue underlays. They were centered with long-stemmed white roses in bud vases.

In charge of the guest book was Lori Bennett. Marilyn Egbert assisted by Beth Fowler, Nancy Brockman and Lindsay Blygers cared for gifts. Lisa King and Wes Duke carried gifts.

Tables were cleared by Julie Nebeker, Ladean Baker, Lori Hepworth and Natalie Mathews. Assisting in the kitchen were Shannon Stanger, Jeanne Earl, Doris Peterson, Reba Egbert and Shirley Egbert.

Special guests were grandparents of the couple, Mr. and Mrs. Veri King, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Compton, Mrs. Mabel Egbert and Mrs. Anne McFarland.

The bride was honored at pre-nuptial showers given by Ruth Stevers and Nancy Brockman and by Connie Hurd and Royce Gunnell.

Following a wedding trip to Sun Valley, the couple will reside in Murtaugh where the bride is employed at Full Circle, Inc., Burley.

Mini book reviews

The Shepherd by Frederick Forsyth.

Christmas eve, 1957 — a young R.A.F. pilot is guiding his Vampire jet fighter high over the North Sea, his mind on home and the holiday leave ahead.

Gradually he notices that the hum in his headphones has ceased and the compass needle is drifting lazily around the clock, passing through east, west, south and north with total impartiality.

The plane's entire electrical system has blown. With no radio and rapidly dwindling fuel supply, with fog rolling in and bail-out into the freezing sea as sure a death as going down with the plane, it seems certain that this is the pilot's last Christmas Eve.

How he lives to tell the tale is a gem of a story, one whose power and beauty will enthrall across the seasons so long as there are readers and listeners left.

Notes from a Living Voice by Reginald L. Cook.

In this unusual contribution of Frost's scholarship, Cook writes of his memorable association with the poet.

presenting for the first time transcripts of 12 major talks given by Frost during the last decade of his life, and analyzing the many dimensions of his work.

Book Review

The work is jam-packed with Frost reality. Everything is here, granite sparkles, fern-curves, stanzas, wisdom, wit, personalities — and everything is under the lenient control of the poet's "living voice."

Until the Colors Fade by Tim Jeal.

The time is Victorian England and the author has skillfully captured those fascinating Victorians. These are the people who behave according to rules but who love and fight with their hearts.

The turmoil and frenzy of the Crimean War, create new options and new necessities for all these impassioned people who become aware at last that love and honor must bow to the changes of life.

This brilliant novel is an emotional portrait of three families who inhabit a society the reader will remember long after finishing the book.

The New Seasoning by Graham Kerr.

This book is much more than just a cookbook. Kerr shares his experience as a born-again spirit-filled Christian and tells how his faith has enriched his family life, deepened the satisfaction of his work and increased his awareness that cooking is always best when it is an act of love.

Delicious and economical dishes are designed to promote the greatest nutritional benefit. Calories have been reduced, saturated fats totally eliminated and sugar almost entirely replaced.

The New Seasoning will reawaken your own pleasure in preparing simple, good things to eat and in the joy of sharing them with others.

Discards throw South off

took his king and returned the suit.

South still had a two-way guess for the queen of clubs to make his contract, but fine discarding by East and West led to his losing two more tricks.

South drew trumps, cashed the high diamonds and ran the rest of his trumps. West's last four cards were the nine of hearts and three clubs; East's the seven of hearts and three clubs.

West guarded the queen of clubs on the last trump while East checked his heart. So South led a club to the king, finessed against East and lost the last two tricks to the queen of clubs and nine of hearts.

Some players use the second-best lead from a long suit that doesn't have as good as the jack at the head of it against all contracts.

If West had been playing this convention, his lead of three of hearts would have insured the slam for South who could have just played the six of hearts from dummy at trick one. It wouldn't matter which high heart West held. If it were the king East would take his jack. But South would have a sure finesse against the king later on and would get to discard one of his clubs.

They weren't playing this convention and South decided to try dummy's queen. East

Council promotes reading to children

By GEORGE WILEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — "Our goal is to promote reading at all levels, not only with students but also more with parents."

A light gleamed in Erva Verner's eyes.

"A child's pattern of personal reading follows that of their parents more than what is taught in the schools," the president of the Idaho Reading Council continued.

Television, she added, is the bane of good reading. If parents subscribe to newspapers, magazines, book clubs the child grows up in a reading environment and becomes a reader himself.

Experiments have shown that reading to children makes children more eager to read. It doesn't matter so much how the reading is taught, what matters is that reading is learned and practiced.

"We don't address ourselves as much to issues as to strengthening reading programs," Verner said, explaining that the Idaho

Reading Council (IRC) has taken no official stance on the high school competency tests, which will result in special seals for test passers who graduate after 1981.

Verner said competency test development is still too much

In the preliminary stages for the IRA to have become involved.

While Verner herself serves on the newly formed committee to draw up the reading section of the new state test, the IRC "hasn't yet attacked the competency problem," she said.

Verner was in Twin Falls Tuesday to chair an organizational meeting of the IRC executive committee.

About 20 of the IRC's 30 board members gathered at CSI Tuesday afternoon to plan conferences for the coming year.

The IRC will hold its fall conference Oct. 3 and 4 at Nampa High School. Keynote speaker will be Wisconsin Supreme Court Justice Roland Day.

The IRC conference will be held in conjunction with a meeting of the School Library division of the Idaho Library Association.

The IRC is the state arm of The International Reading Association.

Mitchell to perform at Gooding rodeo

GOODING — Guy Mitchell, recording artist, will highlight the Gooding County Rodeo, which will be held in conjunction with the Gooding County Fair, Aug. 8 through 10.

The rodeo begins at 8 p.m. and admission is $3.50 for adults and $2.50 for children.

Mitchell, who travelled with the rodeo circuit for several years before devoting his efforts entirely to concert performances and recording, will appear with the Rodeos, a local five-piece band.

After performing throughout the world, Mitchell has settled in the Wendell-Hagerman area.

Judging of queen contestants will be held the final night of the rodeo. Anyone interested in entering this contest should contact Wava Simis at 931-9651.

The Siebrand Carnival will be part of the fair, offering a variety of rides and games.

Commercial exhibits, antique, art produce and flower displays are also included in the activities.

A parade on Aug. 8 will kick off the three-day fair. A children's parade, begins at 1 p.m., followed by an adult parade at 2 p.m. on the Main Street in Gooding.

Mitchell will also be in the parade.

Dairies face barrier

BOISE (UPI) — Economic considerations prevent three large dairies from complying with regulations that would allow them to compete for commercial raw milk sales.

Boise attorney Joseph Parkinson testified at a hearing for the State Board of Health and Welfare that regulations requiring that raw milk be bottled where it is produced are an "economic barrier" to dairies that have processing plants located away from their herds.

He said it would not be "practical or economical" to move the processing plant to the site of the dairy herds and it would not be possible to move the herds to the processing facilities.

Meadow Gold Dairies, Western General Dairies and Associated Dairies petitioned the board to ban the sale of raw milk and raw milk products from grocery stores and food establishments.

In the event that request was rejected, the dairies asked the board to amend current regulations to allow the bottling of raw milk at facilities off the farm where the milk is produced.

Parkinson said the requested ban was based on concerns about health hazards related to the consumption of raw milk and economic factors that prohibit the dairies from competing for raw milk sales.

"If the board does not find raw milk dangerous to public health, the 'monopoly' issue producers have on the raw milk market should be opened up to producers who bottle their milk at a different site, he argued.

During cross examination, it was brought out that the dairies could sell raw milk if they complied with the regulations.

Higher education funds now available to Veterans

BOISE — Veterans seeking loans to meet higher education expenses this fall will get a new deal from the Veterans Administration if they act quickly.

H. L. Kuyper, director—Boise VA Regional Office, said:

"The VA streamlined student loan procedures by preprocessing student loan applications from veterans."

"The key to making sure the student receives his loan promptly, however, is the veteran himself," Kuyper said.

VA will make loans up to $1,500 each academic year to qualified students.

In the past, loan applications were not processed until after the student started school.

Now, Kuyper said, the agency hopes to reduce the 30-day waiting period by accepting applications and determining loan eligibility before school starts.

"Under the new procedure," Kuyper explained, "VA will be ready to issue the loan soon after the school confirms the student is in class."

Two conditions must be present for a veteran enrolled on at least a half-time basis to qualify:

The veteran must demonstrate that his essential expenses during the school year will be greater than his income; he must have been turned down by two banks in the area, or the school must certify that area banks are not making guaranteed student loans.

Kuyper urged veterans who plan to apply for a loan to contact the campus financial aid officer at their school or the VA representative on campus.

TWIN FALLS — United Way of Twin Falls wishes to encourage agencies in the area to participate in its program.

Officials say United Way has one main purpose, to raise funds for financing local, state and national organizations that carry on health, welfare, recreational and educational services in the area.

Currently, United Way is working with such agencies as the Boy Scouts of America, United Cerebral Palsy of Idaho, Inc., and the YM-YWCA.

These agencies draw funds from United Way to improve their programs and offer more to the public. They receive a monthly check ranging from $42 to $2500 which they can use for expenses. Agencies wishing to participate in the United Way program must meet certain requirements and go before an allocations committee. Those interested should contact Del Hanks, executive director, at 733-4922 immediately.

Harbor House changes

TWIN FALLS — Harbor House of Magic Valley is now a group home, rather than a shelter home and will be operated under the same program as the well known Boys Town of Nebraska.

Richard Niedrich, who became chairman of the volunteer board of directors for Harbor House this week, said representatives of the Nebraska facility have met with board members and house parents to offer assistance.

He said the Harbor House houseparents, Ray and Charlene Miller are currently in Boys Town for 10 days of training in management and operation of the home in the family teaching method.

The couple will become teaching parents after completing special training, Niedrich said, but as such will be qualified for a higher salary than has been paid parents in the past.

Niedrich said as a group home Harbor House will now accept youngsters on a long-term basis rather than the temporary shelter basis as in the past. He said many of the residents in the home are Health and Welfare department clients and as such the state pays their monthly costs.

Niedrich said the county has paid in the past for part of the operation cost and has placed county youngsters in the home as needed.

"We hope the county will continue to participate in the program and to assist with financing," the chairman of the board said.

A meeting of the board will be held Saturday at 11 a.m. in the College of Southern Idaho student conference room of the administration building.

At that time, Niedrich said a film on the teaching parents method of directing the home will be shown. He said the meeting is open to anyone with a special interest in youth programs and to foster parents. Niedrich said Harbor House has a constant need for part-time houseparents willing to substitute for the regular parents on days off and vacation or for special emergencies.

Anyone interested in this type of part-time assistance is invited to the Saturday meeting, he said.

Explosion destroys diesel tank

TWIN FALLS — An explosion in a diesel tank at Monroe, Id., sent flames leaping more than 65 feet in the air Thursday.

The fire, which apparently began with a short in a gas pump about 3:40 p.m. Thursday, spread to another pump and then to a 1,000-gallon diesel tank which exploded. No one was injured.

Carroll Dowd, assistant manager, said Monroe superintendent Mike Mayne spotted the blaze and rushed to the scene before the explosion with a fire extinguisher to put it out. Wayne White, a cement truck driver, also helped but to no avail.

About 15 firefighters from Kimberly and Filer departments battled the blaze for an hour. Gary Haskins, another Monroe employe, helped firefighters by pouring sand on the blaze with a front-end loader.

Though two 1,000-gallon tanks and one 15,000-gallon tank were singed in the fire, none exploded. Dowd estimated the damage at $1,500.

Drought delays Rupert sewer system

By SHANE O'NEILL
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Construction on the Rupert sewer lagoon system has been delayed six weeks by the drought.

Mayor Wendell Johnson said Thursday Galey Construction Co., Idaho Falls, began work at the site of the three lagoon cells five weeks late because ground was too dry to work and water had not been turned into the Minidoka Irrigation District Canals until late because of the water shortage.

The mayor added the lateral from which the site is wet down had been without water twice this season. Work is now six weeks behind schedule, he said.

"The mayor said the lagoons still could be completed this year "with good luck and a good October."

However, he added the impending breach of American Falls Dam could present a new problem, depending on how much water is available this fall after the breach.

Bureau of Reclamation officials said today plans are to breach the old dam sometime between Sept. 1 and Sept. 15 in order to complete the replacement dam at American Falls and remove the old structure.

The Rupert mayor said the city must have a supplemental source of water for the lagoons, which currently are being delayed because the contractor discovered about 60,000 more yards of rock than had been estimated by the engineers for the site of the third cell in the lagoon.

The engineers, Hamilton and Voeller, plan to have new plans on the third cell's construction ready for the Department of Health and Welfare and the Environmental Protection Agency by Monday.

The plans must be approved in Boise before construction can continue on the cell itself.

In the meantime, Mayor Johnson said, Galey is trying to work a double shift on other parts of the lagoon project in order to pick up the six weeks loss of time.

The mayor said the Rupert sewage treatment plant does not put out enough effluent now to maintain a level in the three cells and the supplemental source of water is absolutely necessary.

The treatment plant, which discharges into the Snake River under an extended permit from EPA, now handles about 500,000 gallons of sewage a day.

"That small amount is the result of a sealing project on sewer lines in the city to prevent seepage from the underground water table into the line."

Mayor Johnson said the city previously has had as much as three million gallons per day during the summer.

Commenting on concerns over possible seepage into the Snake Plain Aquifer as a result of the newly-discovered additional rock, the mayor said, "The city council has said it will do everything it can to protect the aquifer."

He said Midstate Distributing Co., which is furnishing the sealant for the cells is under bond to guarantee the effectiveness of the seal and is leaving more than half the full payment with the city as a warranty for a year.

Specifications on the sealant, under standards of DHW and EPA, are that there will be no more than one tenth of an inch of seepage per day.

The mayor admitted there would be some seepage in the first two or three years but insisted it should not be more than the governmental standards. He said most of the water lost from the lagoon will be through evaporation, which now is running about 3 of an inch a day and has been 4 of an inch some days this summer.

He cited a Bureau of Reclamation report that evaporation at Minidoka Dam is 36 inches per year.

The solution now being presented to EPA and DHW for approval is to dig off the newly discovered rock while digging the third cell six inches deeper.

Mayor Johnson and Dwinelle Alfred said the lagoons will still be capable of handling 150 days of municipal waste and above their maintenance level as much as 15 to 20 years into the projected growth of the city.

Woman protests principal hiring

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN
Times-News writer

HAILEY — Wood-River High School counselor Barbara Dargatz, an unsuccessful applicant for both the high school and junior high principalships, will ask for an investigation of the hiring policies of the Blaine County School Board.

Dargatz said Thursday she intends to contact the Office of Civil Rights, the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission and the Idaho Human Rights Commission.

She will ask these state agencies to look into the school board's hiring practices on the grounds that her civil rights have been violated and she has been sexually discriminated against.

The school board recently reappointed Halley Junior High School Principal Phil Homer to be the new principal of the Wood River High School.

Homer was originally appointed principal of the high school in a special school board meeting May 24.

Homer's speedy appointment caused much controversy, and the school board rescinded its action to avoid possible violations of federal hiring procedures.

Dargatz, who then also wished to apply for the high school principalship, reportedly threatened to take legal action because an improper procedure was followed in considering only Homer for the position.

Blaine County School Superintendent Norman Riggs defended the board's recent action.

"The board's position is that the best person for the position was hired," he commented.

Riggs said Dargatz's credentials were simply not as good as the credentials of other candidates for the two positions.

Dargatz said she recently received a letter from the superintendent's office which informed her she was no longer being considered for the junior high post. The letter was addressed to Mrs. Robert Dargatz.

She said she found this form of address offensive because her name was properly Barbara Dargatz and addressing her as Mrs. Robert Dargatz seemed indicative of discriminatory attitudes on the part of the school board and superintendent.

Riggs rejected this, saying it may have been a secretary's error in the form of address, but it was in no way a form of discrimination.

Dargatz stressed her complaint, "has nothing to do with Phil Homer becoming principal of Wood River High School. It has to do with the propriety of the hiring practice."

Hopes to sell home go up in flames

By LARRY SWISHER
Times-News writer

JEROME — Verla Flores had just read over the advertisement putting her family's home up for sale Thursday when she got a telephone call — the home was on fire.

By the time firemen from the Jerome Rural Volunteer Fire Department got the blaze under control about 3:30 p.m., Dick and Verla Flores' house, once filled with antique furniture, had been completely gutted.

No one was in the two-story building when the fire broke out, and no one was injured. Jerome County Deputy Sheriff Larry Webb estimated the loss at $100,000.

"It's totaled sure as hell," Mr. Flores said after arriving from Bliss where he was hired recently as superintendent of schools and where the family was about to move.

Deputy Webb said his office received a call that the house was burning about 1:50 p.m. At 1:56 two deputies and nine volunteer firemen arrived at the scene.

"We figured the whole thing was going to burn to the ground," one fireman said. The entire back side of the house was engulfed in flames and fire was starting to shoot out the two front doors, he said.

The men contained the fire but only after it had gutted the inside and back half of the structure. A separate garage from which neighbors had removed most of its contents was undamaged.

In the house the family lost numerous antiques including a one-of-a-kind roll-top desk and a pre-1800's piano.

"Everything was antique except a few odds and ends," Mrs. Flores said. The couple had been collecting for about 10 years.

"There isn't a one that's left," Mr. Flores said. "Neighbors said they will watch the house for us to keep looters away, but there's nothing to steal. I bet we will find nothing can be salvaged."

The Flores family will stay with relatives nearby while awaiting an insurance company appraisal of the loss which may be assessed today.

"It's a strange feeling having nothing but the clothes you're wearing," Mr. Flores said. "I'd like to change clothes to get inside (the house) and look around, but we're going to have to buy everything from a razor to a house."

The fire was caused by a skillet of grease left unattended on the kitchen range with the burner on, Webb said. The Flores' two children, a boy 13 and a girl 14 alone in the house, were going to cook lunch but decided to go into town for some groceries first, leaving the forgotten skillet.

The fire spread up from the kitchen which was in the back corner of the house, then engulfed the whole back side of the wood-paneled structure. A fireman said the blaze had to be battled one room at a time.

"I'm calm," Mr. Flores said, "but I'm wondering what to do next. The full shock hasn't hit us yet."

He praised the fire department, the deputy sheriffs and his neighbors for their efforts and help and said he had no regrets about living in the country.

Firemen traveled about seven miles in as many minutes to reach the fire.

Mrs. Flores works for the Times-News. Minutes before she received the call informing her the house was on fire, she was proofreading the classified ad for the home, which stands on four acres in the Big Little Ranch subdivision southeast of Jerome and was appraised at $55,000 not including the antique furnishings now up in smoke or badly burned.

"It was a beautiful house but all we can do now is build it," Mr. Flores said.

Sugar quotas endorsed

WASHINGTON — Idaho's U.S. Sen. Jim McClure, and nine other senators, are calling on President Carter to reverse his income support program for sugar producers and establish import quotas.

The ten senators have introduced a resolution which would disapprove President Carter's actions.

"President Carter's income supports do not help sugar producers 'one penny's worth,'" McClure said. "The domestic sugar industry is in serious trouble, and all our growers are asking for is a limit on cheap foreign sugar entering this country. An import quota is the correct answer, not a highly questionable income support."

McClure said that the International Trade Commission, after considerable study, suggested import quotas as the proper method of protecting our sugar growers. "Every other major sugar producing nation in the world protects its own growers by imposing their own import quotas, yet the President of the United States, for some unknown reason, refuses to limit foreign imports," McClure said.

The Idaho Republican said questions have been raised as to the legality of President Carter's income support. McClure produced a letter from the Comptroller General of the United States questioning the payment of federal money to processors, who in turn would pass some of the funds on to the producers.

Labor act changes hit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The American Farm Bureau announced its opposition Wednesday to President Carter's proposals to amend the National Labor Relations Act.

In a statement to the House subcommittee on labor-management relations considering amendments to the NLR Act, the AFB said provisions of H.R. 8410 "fill the act too far in the direction of labor."

The AFB said the balance of power between management and labor has tipped too far on the side of labor, citing as an example that it is illegal for a group of corporations to get together and close down an entire industry. Yet it is perfectly legal for a labor union to close down that same industry, the statement said.

If you think Curtis & Co. is a one horse outfit, take another look.

Curtis & Co. has mushroomed into one of the largest grain and cattle operations in the Northwest, virtually overnight. We are expanding all the time. The past few months we have developed our own transportation operation, moved heavily into the cattle markets, began trading in beans and currently are developing our dairy industry business.

New York not fit to host Olympics

By JOHN MOODY. NEW YORK (UPI) — Holding the 1984 Summer Olympics in New York City would be a sports disaster costing millions of dollars more than officials estimate, an historian of the international event warned Thursday.

Thursday's Orlando Sentinel Star that Lucchesi had decided to file a personal injury suit against him.

Randle originally had been charged with aggravated battery, a felony, for the March 28 beating. But the charge was reduced to simple battery, a misdemeanor, in an earlier plea-bargain session.

Circuit Judge Maurice Paul gave Randle the fine and a lecture.

Randle earlier had been fined $10,000 by the Rangers and suspended without pay for 30 days. He was traded a short time after the incident to the Mets where he reportedly got a long-term contract and a big raise.

Neuhelsel said 'Rangers' General Manager Dan O'Brien told him Lucchesi's medical expenses had been paid and that payment of the bills "coincided with Mr. Randle being fined $10,000."

Diehl's 65 leads Philadelphia golf

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Terry Diehl, who lost a dramatic five-hole playoff at last year's Philadelphia Golf Classic because of a bad pitch shot, canned a 50-foot birdie putt from a bunker Thursday and went on to shoot a six-under-par 65 for the easy first round lead in this year's tournament.

lead. The longest of those was a 25-foot putt on his 15th.

Diehl, "brutally disappointed" in his game until he got some advice earlier this year from former U.S. Open champion Ken Venturi, started his surge by blasting for the 50-foot birdie from the right hand bunker on the eighth hole.

Tricar took advantage of his opponent's lackluster play to earn a third-round match Friday against Andrew Pattison of Rhodesia.

Solomon had some early trouble with Letcher, but went on to triumph despite Letcher's strong play at the net in the first set.

Brown had been told to report to the Bengals' training camp at 255 pounds, but he conceded to reporters via telephone from his West Memphis, Ark., home this week that he wasn't down to 285.

Munch thought about playing volleyball in the local locale. But the athletes wouldn't hear of it and they won't hear of it in New York.

He had something in mind that few people understand. He didn't have in mind the Super Bowl or some mass spectator sport. It's an experiment in international living where men and women who can't speak each other's language can communicate through the international language of sports.

"I think that's a beautiful idea, but I don't go to last in the 21st century if New York City gets the Olympic Games in 1984. The Olympics weren't meant for the Big Apple."

Bobick stops LeDoux in brawl

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — Scott LeDoux's dream of becoming Minnesota's No. 1 heavyweight contender ended Thursday night at Bloomington's Met Center as Minnesota's top Duane Bobick, stopped him in the eighth round.

After seven furious rounds in which both fighters absorbed tremendous punishment, Bobick caught LeDoux with a left-right combination as he bounced off the ropes. LeDoux's old nemesis took an eight-count and rose groggily. Then Bobick rained a series of jolting punches on his opponent until he fell again. LeDoux was up once more at the count of eight but he was totally helpless and referee Wally Holm signaled an end when LeDoux fell in the round. For Bobick the victory was a personal vindication after his first round knockout at the hands of heavyweight Ken Norton earlier this summer in New York. The Bobick-Minnesota fight, who now trains in Philadelphia, was swarmed by a family and well-wishers following the fight.

IVAN DeJena of the Cubs wins the race to the first base bag against Cincinnati's Mike Lamm in the 13th inning of their game Thursday. And you can tell by the look on his face he knows it. The Cubs went on to beat the Reds 16-15 in 13th inning.

Major league HR records tied as Cubs nip Reds 16-15 in 13th

CHICAGO (UPI) — Dave Rosello singled with two out in the 13th inning Thursday to score, winning pitcher Rick Reuschel from third base and give the Chicago Cubs a 16-15 victory over the Cincinnati Reds in a slugfest in which two major league home run records were tied.

The loss dropped the Reds 12 1/2 games behind the Dodgers in the National League West. Chicago hit six homers and Cincinnati five and the total of 11 equalled the major league record for an extra inning game set Aug. 12, 1966, in 13 innings when Pittsburgh hit six and Cincinnati five. The American League record is nine. The teams also tied a major league record when they combined for five home runs in the first inning.

Reuschel, who pitched only 23 of an inning to get his 15th win against three losses, singled to center with two out in the 13th and went to third on Steve Ontivero's single before Rosello delivered the game-winning hit, the 24th for the Cubs.

The Reds grabbed a 15-14 lead in the 12th when George Foster doubled and scored on Rosello's error, but George Mitterwald hit his second home run of the game in the same inning to tie the score again.

Red Sox bomb Brewers 12-0

Yanks blast Orioles 14-2

NEW YORK (UPI) — Thurman Munson, Chris Chambliss and Roy White smacked nine hits and drove in eight runs among them to pace a 14-2 New York attack Thursday and Mike Torrez fired five innings of no-hit ball before settling for a four-hit, 2-Yankee rout of the first-place Baltimore Orioles.

The victory, before a crowd of 40,918, was the second for the Yankees in their three-game series with Baltimore and moved them to within two games of the Orioles. The 14 runs were the most the Yankees have scored in any game this year.

Munson, who belted his 14th homer of the year in the third, had to leave the game in the sixth with a sprained right knee after his third hit, a double, Chambliss went 3-3 with two walks, including a two-run bases-loaded double in the seventh.

White finished the Yankees' explosive attack with his eighth homer in the eighth, including a walk by Cliff Johnson, and ended with three hits in five at-bats.

Record mako shark harpooned

MONTAUK, L.I. (UPI) — A Southampton, L.I., couple, in their first attempt at "sharking," caught a mako shark Thursday weighing 1,250 pounds — possibly the largest of that species ever caught in the world. Kim and Dave Lester harpooned the record-sized shark from their 37-foot boat the "Theresa" of Block Island.

The record mako, caught in 1970 by rod and reel off Mayor Island, a volcanic island off the coast of New Zealand, weighed 1,061 pounds. Dereberg said Lester, a 19-year-old lobster fisherman, and his wife, Kim, 24, harpooned the fish at 2:30 p.m. in 180 feet of water off Block Island, about 30 miles southeast of Montauk. They finally "boated" the female, which had a girth of 7 feet 8 inches, at 4:15 p.m. "It was the first time the couple ever went sharking," Dereberg said. He added, however, that their record catch would not be recognized by the International Game Fish Association because it was not landed with rod and reel.

Texas blanks Blue Jays 3-0

TORONTO (UPI) — Toby Harrah, down in Bert Campaneris with a sacrifice fly in the first inning and Gaylord Perry made it stand up despite issuing 11 hits Thursday night when the Texas Rangers won their sixth straight game, a 3-0 decision over the Toronto Blue Jays.

Mike Hargrove reached on an error by shortstop Hector Torres and was forced by Campaneris, who advanced to second on Bump Wills' single and then stole third. After Willie Horton received an intentional pass, Harrah lifted a fly ball to medium center, easily scoring Campaneris.

Twins fall 5-2 to Mariners

SEATTLE (UPI) — Leo Stanton drilled a two-run triple and scored on a single by Bill Stein in a three-run first inning that powered the Seattle Mariners to a 5-2 victory over the Minnesota Twins Thursday.

Dave Collins started the outburst with a one-out triple to right-center. Carlos Lopez walked, and Stanton drove a liner into the right-center gap for two runs and Stein followed with his single giving the Mariners a 3-1 lead.

Urru, making only his second major league start, struck out six and did not walk a batter in evening his record at 3-3.

Reds face ex-teammate

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Rolf Pfeiffer Raulo Eastwick, traded away by the Cincinnati Reds earlier this season, will make his first major league start Friday night for the St. Louis Cardinals against the Reds.

Eastwick will start the opening game of a 5:30 p.m. twin-night doubleheader and will be opposed by Raulo rookie Pa Moskauer.

GRAND OPENING CELEBRATION!!!

THE GUYS THAT MAKE IT

PLAYBOY MAGAZINE STATES:

"Remember the life's story about the little engine that could? Here's the automotive equivalent — the four-wheel-drive Subaru station wagon. Pick a slope, flip into four-wheel drive and up you go!"

The Review of Burbank, Calif., reports "SUBARU — During February, sales of the seven-model line of front wheel drive Subaru automobiles increased 65.8 per cent over the same month for the previous year. In making this announcement, Subaru of America president Harvey Itoh also pointed out that during the last year Subaru sales have risen from twelfth to fifth place among import cars."

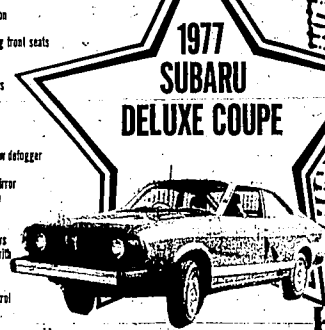

Road Test Magazine gave Subaru "The Cleanest Engine Award"

From Van Nuys, Calif., the Valley News and Valley Green Sheet reported: "SUBARU SALES SMASH RECORDS!"

The Sacramento Bee says: "SUBARU HAS RECORD SALES FOR MARCH!"

The Miami News announced: "Subarus Sales continue to escalate wildly because it's a practical, simple, rugged, high-mileage car that's fun to drive. Many no-cost options. Virtually trouble-free. Best buy is DL coupe."

Four Wheeler Magazine reports: "A passenger wagon plus four wheel drive capability all for $5,000. Impossible! Don't bet on it!"
