Anti-Panama measure fails

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI) — A committee of the Southern Governor's Conference today killed a resolution opposing any reduction in United States control of the Panama Canal.

The resolution by Louisiana Gov. Edwin Edwards failed on a 3-3 vote in the resolutions committee after a sixth member was added to the panel before debate began.

Edwards said he will attempt to get a vote on the resolution before the full membership of the conference Tuesday, but conceded there is little chance of success in such a move.

"It takes three-fourths majority to bring it to the full conference and then two-thirds to pass it," Edwards said. "That's like trying to organize a Baptist church in the Vatican."

Edwards, Gov. David Boren of Oklahoma and Gov. James B. Edwards of South Carolina voted for the resolution. Govs. Julian Carroll of Kentucky, David Pryor of Arkansas and Carlos Romero-Barcello of Puerto Rico voted against it.

Romero was appointed to the committee Sunday night and the Louisiana governor said the appointment may have been made to stack the committee against his resolution concerning the Panama Canal.

"It depends on who made the appointment," Edwards said. "If it was made by Gov. Carroll, then it was stacking. If it was made by Gov. Briscoe then it was not. But I don't want to make an issue of it."

Texas Gov. Dolph Briscoe is chairman of the conference and indicated Sunday he is opposed to ratification of the proposed canal treaty.

Carroll said failure of the United States to reach some agreement with Panama's leadership could encourage sabotage of the canal by radicals.

"I am concerned about its future use," he said. "I am not concerned about who owns it and I am not concerned about who has sovereign rights over it."

Edwards of South Carolina argued for the resolution and against any treaty diminishing U.S. control over the canal.

"America needs to maintain rights to the canal for psychological reasons," he said. "If we allow some little Marxist-leaning dictator to try to blackmail us into signing that treaty, I think that's where we should draw the line and we should send them a message loud and clear from the American people."

President Carter's energy program and illegal alien programs have forced opposition from some of the governors attending the three-day meeting.

US, Soviets stall N-test

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev sent an urgent personal message to President Carter Aug. 6 saying the Russians had information South Africa was planning to explode an atomic bomb.

Leaders, South Africa backed down and the two superpowers reached a notable level of cooperation in preventing the spread of nuclear power to another nation.

The account, published in the Washington Post and New York Times during the weekend, was confirmed today by a White House source.

The source, however, refused to comment on why Soviet intelligence caught the South African plans but U.S. intelligence apparently did not. The Times said the Soviets had refined its photographic reconnaissance from orbiting satellites with high-resolution German-made cameras.

(In Tokyo today, Japanese officials said U.S. arms negotiator Gerald Smith also confirmed reports the United States and the Soviet Union cooperated in dissuading South Africa from carrying out the nuclear test.)

Dawn's tint, lunar globe

SUPERSTITION holds that a full moon will bring out such unsavory characters as witches and vampires but that phase of the moon also appeals to photographers of an artistic bent. Such was the case this weekend when a Times-News photographer was on hand at dawn to capture the full moon hovering over the sunlight-lit cliffs above Lake Cleveland near Albion.

Church plays GOP extremists

By DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News writer

HAGERMAN — Sen. Frank Church said Sunday that the Idaho Republican Party is controlled by "extremist elements" unwilling to seek constructive solutions to problems facing Idaho or the nation.

"The Republican Party I knew, a party of moderation and reason personified by Senator Len Jordan and Gov. Robert E. Smylie, has deteriorated in this state to the point where extremist elements now control it," Church said. "Look at the two Congressmen. I think it should be clear they vote with an extreme right wing in Washington. Consequently neither one has enough clout to fight their way out of a paper bag."

Referring to hearings recently held in north central Idaho on proposed forest management practices for the 343,000-acre Gospel-Hump roadless area there, Church noted that some opponents of suggested wilderness classifications for the area displayed hangman's nooses to express their opposition. Those nooses were the symbol, Church said, of extremists who were searching "not for solutions but to keep the people divided."

"Good politics doesn't seek to perpetuate issues or work to keep people divided," Church said. "Good politics is the kind that gives us something we can live with. It is a search for solutions in a reasonable way."

Speaking at a Hagerman picnic for Democrats in the Magic Valley, Church also spoke of his recent trip to Cuba and discussions held there with Cuban Premier Fidel Castro.

Mentioning he flew to Cuba "after conferring with the President who strongly urged me to go," Church said he made the trip "with the hope of achieving constructive results in two areas."

The first area focused on "some 100 American citizens required to remain in Cuba because they are married to Cubans." While Cuban law allows Americans to leave, their Cuban wives and families are legally prohibited from leaving, Church said he hoped to convince Castro "to permit them to leave as a humanitarian gesture."

Church noted that after "two days of talk he did just that," adding "that is what can come from starting to talk to one another."

The second reason for his trip to Cuba, Church said, was "to talk about the possibility of achieving an international agreement 'to help stabilize world sugar prices' at a point above the cost of production."

Cuba, a major producer of sugar, must be a party to any final agreement to stabilize sugar prices, Church said. Currently, world sugar prices often fall below cost of production, disrupting sugar production in the United States and other sugar producing countries, Church noted.

No final agreement was reached with Castro, but Church said he was "confident that the positions of our respective delegations in London (where talks on the sugar problem have been taking place) has been narrowed."

Stating he had major disagreements with the Cuban government, Church said it was still necessary for the United States to re-examine its policy with Cuba.

"The old policy hasn't worked. The embargo hasn't worked. Castro hasn't been undermined. The rest of the world recognizes his government as a fait accompli. The policy has only isolated the United States and the moderating influence we can have on his government," Church said.

Boise attorney Mike Wetherell also addressed the 150 persons present. Wetherell, the only announced Democratic candidate for attorney general, criticized Attorney General Wayne Kidwell, R-Boise, for "politicizing" the office he holds. "I think the office of Attorney General is far too important to all of us to be constantly battleground on the basis of partisan politics," Wetherell said. "I think we should examine the possibility of removing the Attorney General's office from the partisan-battle and placing it on a non-partisan ballot," Wetherell said.

Plea entered

BOISE (UPI) — Former state legislator H. Dean Summers, Boise, pleaded "no contest" to three felony charges of income tax evasion today. He was given a one-year suspended jail sentence and a $5,000 fine on each count.

Judge William W. Schwarzer, federal district judge from San Francisco, in accepting the no-contest plea, said the amounts involved were not significant enough to show a willful effort to "enrich himself at the expense of the government."

Summers, a prominent insurance man and banker, was put on probation for three years, ordered to cooperate with the U.S. government in auditing all of his income tax returns, and instructed to pay the full amount due after a civil investigation.

Four counts involving violation of banking regulations were dismissed.

He'll go home by car

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Stan Sroka, 24, of Springfield, Massachusetts, says he will never paddle across the United States in a canoe again.

Sroka ended his five-thousand mile journey on 22 different river systems in Portland Saturday at the river patrol dock on the Columbia River.

"I'm done paddling," he said, deciding it was not worth continuing another five miles downstream and then entering the Willamette River into Portland proper.

Sroka said he was always able to hitchhike with his 19-foot canoe and more than 200 pounds of gear from the headwaters of one river system to another.

One time, faced with a long stay on a strip of the Missouri River that was too swift for one man to paddle, he said he jumped a freight train — canoe, baggage and all.

Sroka spent more than two years planning the trip, and said he felt like giving up "at least once every day."

"I've seen a United States and its cultural changes east to west, its magnificent scenery in a way few others have ever done," he said. "But I won't do it again."

Sroka said he plans to buy an old sedan, load his canoe on top and spend the rest of the summer and fall looking at the scenery on the route to Massachusetts — the overland route.

Basque march halted

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — Police firing rubber bullets and tear gas flares have halted thousands of Basque demonstrators who tried to march into the town of Pamplona.

The violence came after a peaceful rally outside the city of Pamplona Sunday during which more than 40,000 Basques listened to speeches and sang songs marking the end of a "Freedom March" for Basque autonomy.

But when the rally was over, several thousand marchers — mostly young — tried to test the strength of police who had banned them from entering the city in the northwestern Basque region.

Riot police and the paramilitary Civil Guard said they moved against the demonstrators after having been pelted with rocks and other missiles. There were no reports of serious injuries.

The seven-week, 1,125-mile march criss-crossed the restive region demanding home rule and freedom for Basque political prisoners. It was sponsored by 15 left-wing parties and labor organizations.

Led by Basque members of parliament and nine Basque separatists released from prison last June and exiled from Spain, the marchers carried red, white and green Basque flags and banners calling for autonomy and amnesty.

Police did not move against the nine former prisoners, even though the Interior Ministry has issued a warrant for their arrest because they had been allowed to go into exile after promising not to return to Spain for some time.

All nine have been convicted or accused of acts of terrorism, including murder.

The march began in four sections, with one column starting from each of the Basque provinces and converging on Pamplona. Only a few hundred of the marchers covered the whole route and most joined in over the weekend.

The rally ended a week of recurring street violence in many towns in the region as Basques got increasingly impatient with the slow pace of their campaign to win autonomy.

Today is Monday, Aug. 29, the 241st day of 1977 with 124 to follow.

The moon is moving from its full phase to the last quarter. The morning stars are Venus, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn.

The evening star is Mercury. These born on this date are under the sign of Virgo. American poet Oliver Wendell Holmes was born Aug. 29, 1899.

On this day in history: In 1852, Brigham Young proclaimed the "Celestial Law of Marriage," signifying his approval of polygamy (more than one spouse) among Mormons, a practice later officially outlawed by the Church of the Latter-Day Saints.

In 1960, the premier of Jordan and 11 others were killed when a time bomb exploded in his office.

In 1965, American astronauts Gordon Cooper and Charles Conrad landed safely to end the eight-day orbital flight of Gemini 5.

In 1973, President Nixon was ordered by Judge John Sirica to turn over secret Watergate tapes but he refused and appealed the order.

A thought for the day: Oliver Wendell Holmes said, "Put not your trust in money, but put your money in trust."

Somali trying to patch quarrel

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — Radio Mogadishu today reported that Somali President Siad Barre had flown to Moscow in an apparent attempt to patch up his simmering quarrel with the Soviets over the war on the horn of Africa.

"President Siad and a powerful delegation left Mogadishu last night for Moscow at the invitation of the Soviet government," the official radio said. Relations between the two countries have worsened since the outbreak of fighting between Ethiopian government troops and Somali-backed insurgents in Ethiopia's Ogaden desert.

The Soviets, major weapons suppliers of both Somalia and Ethiopia, accused Somalia of "armed intervention" in the Ogaden fighting. Somalia has denied charges its "regular" troops were fighting in the war, describing the fighting as a "liberation struggle" involving only the so-called Western Somali Liberation Front.

Mogadishu radio in turn called Moscow's stand on the Ogaden fighting "provocative" and "perplexing."

In a broad hint to the Soviets, Somalia said it now had many other friends to whom it could turn.

Somalia and Russia have signed a friendship pact, the Soviets have trained and equipped the Somali armed forces.

British air strike continues

LONDON (UPI) — Assistant air controllers struck for the fourth and final day today on Britain's Bank holiday, a day of traditionally heavy air traffic as Britons wind up their summer season.

Airport officials said they had no idea what to expect from the final day of the walkout because the strike caused less disruption than expected in its first three days.

"We'll just have to play things by ear," one airline executive said.

On Sunday, officials had expected they would have to cancel 40 per cent of all flights in and out of Heathrow, London's main airport. But things ran so smoothly the government-owned British Airways began adding flights.

In the end, seven long-distance flights — including one each to New York and Los Angeles — had to be canceled, but only 62 of 460 other scheduled British Airways flights were abandoned.

Fear makes us monsters

© Chicago Sun-Times

CHICAGO — I am looking for the monsters. Monsters make it easier.

I go to one of Chicago's last white bastions, the Southwest Side. A group of people are meeting in the Marquette Park neighborhood.

They are meeting to prevent 27 black kids from being bused into 19 white schools. That is not even 1 1/2 black kids per school, but a lot of these people don't even want one black kid. They don't want a half of a black kid.

"Integration will not work," Ann Franc, a white protest leader, thunders from the stage. "We have seen the destruction of this city block by block. But now, we are beginning to resist." She gets applause. She gets a standing ovation. It is a lot like a White Sox game.

The next morning about a hundred adults and kids go down to the Loop to March in Daley Plaza. Unfortunately, a bunch of Camp Fire Girls and boys are already in Daley Plaza. The picketers picket anyway. They march around the kids with signs that say, "I'm White and I Will Fight."

The youngest group of Camp Fire Girls is called the Blue Birds. Some Blue Birds are holding a picnic lunch on a blanket as the picketers march by. They look up at the signs, then they go back to their brown bags, trading peanut butter for tuna fish.

The protesters meet with the deputy mayor. A different protest group also wants to meet with him. He is exasperated. "Is the moon full?" he asks.

I am looking for the monsters. I'm not finding many. I am finding people who are wrong. I am finding people who are angry. I am finding people who are racists. But not because they are monsters.

It is because they are afraid. The people of the Southwest Side literally feel that their backs are to the wall. They live on the far boundary of Chicago. They find themselves living like they are under siege.

Their days are not filled with monstrous acts. They do not wake up in the morning and burn crosses on people's lawns. They wake up and go to work. At night they go home. They eat. They listen to the TV, they go to a movie. On weekends they cut the grass.

Less than half of the adults have high school degrees. Only 1 out of 10 has a college degree. And they are absolutely dedicated to the hope that their kids are going to get better than they got.

And they are afraid. They are afraid that having little black kids in their schools is going to rob their own kids of that.

In most discussions of integration, one thing is overlooked. It takes more than courageous black people to make integration work. It takes courageous white people, too.

I went to a high school that desegregated in less than five years. When five years after the first black kids came in the school was 98.6 percent black. It wasn't the black people who made that happen. It was the white people who fled. According to the statements made at the time, the blacks were as disappointed as the whites.

The people on the Southwest Side feel not only fear but isolation. "We have been called all types of names by the press," one said. "They call us bigots and racists. But they live on N. Lake Shore Dr. or in suburban Wilmette. They cannot understand us. So they name-call."

One of the glimmers of hope to come out of the protest meetings is that there is a considerable gulf between the people who attend and the few professional haters who speak at the microphones.

Few hands go up to volunteer for picket duty or to march in the streets. "You say you are behind us, but we don't see you," one of the protest leaders said Tuesday night. "It's the same people all the time. Why don't you support us?"

Maybe it's because many of the people know the truth. That the fight is over before it has begun. School integration is a fact, because the courts say it is a fact. The courts are willing to back that up by withholding federal funds or taking direct control of the schools.

At the meeting in Marquette Park, Betty Bonow got up and said she had visited Boston, where school integration was met with violence. "I bring you two words from Boston," she said. "One—Resist! Two—Never!"

They would laugh in Boston if they could hear that. "For all the protest, the fact of the matter is that Boston schools did integrate," Muriel Cohen, education editor of the Boston Globe, told me recently. "Soothe integrated. Black students have been going there for three years."

The story of violence in South Boston is the story of failure. What it got was jail sentences for those who were caught.

The story in Chicago is yet to be told. School starts Sept. 7. The fear that now exists in the city is not a permanent condition.

Some whites are against the school-integration plan and some blacks are, too. There aren't that many monsters on either side. Both sides are going to learn slowly and maybe painfully that integration is not only right but inescapable.

The only thing that you cannot fight is the future.

TWIN FALLS — If John Evans thinks he has a free ride back into the Governor's chair in 1978, he'd better look over his shoulder. Barrelling out of the East like a couple of highballing freighters are two of Idaho's most popular state senators — and they intend to flatten anything that gets in their path, including the man from Malad if necessary.

At this point both Dane Watkins, R-Idaho Falls, and Reed Budge, R-Soda Springs, are poised and ready to take the political plunge. Watkins has spent the past month conducting surveys, talking with Republicans around the state and running up a phone bill that rivals the national debt. I have learned Watkins has approached persons now working for Attorney General Wayne Kidwell, R-Boise, and Congressman George Hansen, R-Pocatello, seeking to entice them onto his gubernatorial staff. Barring any major complications, Watkins has told friends, he will soon formally announce his candidacy for Governor.

Meanwhile, back at his ranch in Soda Springs, veteran legislator Reed Budge is seriously considering tossing his 10-gallon stetson into the ring. Budge, whose popularity has enabled him to keep a vice-like grip on southeastern Idaho, will this week hold a secret, unpublicized meeting with supporters to discuss his probable entry into the gubernatorial contest.

Should this eastern Idaho duo enter the race, it would bring to four the number of Republicans vying for the right to challenge John Evans. Former Rep. Butch Otter, R-Caldwell, and Rep. Larry Jackson, R-Boise, have already filed papers, declaring their political intentions.

Admittedly, the Republican primary will be a bloodbath. Only one of the four will survive. And the victor may inherit a party so divided against itself that John Evans — having sailed through an uncontested primary — is re-elected by default.

But it is more likely that a contest between Evans and either Budge or Watkins would be a close, knock-down draught — with the outcome in doubt.

Watkins, a 23-year-old farm equipment dealer, has been mentioned as a possible candidate for state or federal office for some time. In 1976 he tested the water for a possible challenge to Congressman Hansen. Only at the last moment did he rule out making that race.

Watkins was appointed to his seat in the legislature in 1971. He was elected to the same position in 1972, and 1974 and 1976 — by substantial margins. In the legislature he has earned mixed reviews. Heavily criticized by Democrats as a "lightweight" and a reactionary, some legislators argue he introduces unreasonable, impractical legislation with no chance of passage merely to please his right wing constituency.

There's more than a little truth to those charges. No deep thinker, Watkins has had the legislative nickname of "cupcake" planned on him by detractors, and the name has stuck.

The other side of the coin is that Dane Watkins qualifies as one of the nicest guys you'll ever meet. Tall, blond and handsome, soft spoken and polite he reminds you ever so much of an eagle scout who has somehow wandered into the corner saloon, mistakenly thinking it is the site of the next patrol meeting.

If, during the legislature, you attend the Senate Agriculture Committee meetings — where Watkins reigns as chairman — the table will be piled high with cookies, milk, candy bars and orange juice. Watkins pays for the goodies from his own pocket, and only reluctantly accepts that you don't want a third Oreo and a second glass of milk. Reporters regularly complain, that something the ag committee means gaining five pounds.

If you pass him in the legislative halls, the Idaho Falls Republican will invariably stop you and ask how things are going. And unlike so many who raise such a question, Watkins is one of the few who really hopes your life is going well. The look of concern on his face is genuine.

Watkins is what most mothers wish their sons would grow up to be — polite, mindful of authority and fighting the good fight. He is in addition to this, or perhaps because of it, a superb campaigner. In 1976 he Democrat even dared to challenge his seat in the legislature, and he ran unopposed.

For all his shortcomings, Watkins would be a formidable candidate for Evans.

If Dane Watkins isn't enough to keep John Evans awake at night, then Reed Budge should do the trick. This shrewd and tough Soda Springs rancher has faced significant opposition in his political battles — but has more often than not come out on top.

Last year Gov. Cecil D. Aldrich personally campaigned against Budge in his home town. The result? Budge increased his percentage of victory over what it had been in the previous election.

The Budge name is no recent addition to Idaho politics. The conservative Soda Springs senator has been in office since 1967, and before that learned the political trade at family reunions and at the knee of several close relatives. These include former Budge, Idaho's Second District Congressman for 10 years, and Alfred Budge, an Idaho supreme court justice for a third of a century. Since the end of World War I, there have been a mere 9 years in Idaho history when there hasn't been a Budge in office somewhere.

In his legislative service, Budge has cornered the issue of water rights. Democrats argue with his conclusions, but few dare to challenge his facts. This knowledge could prove to be Budge's ace in the hole in 1978, as the state water plan proposals hit the public at the same time as the end of the 10-year moratorium on federal planning to divert the Snake River. Water may be the single most important issue in 1978, and Budge knows the facts at least as well if not better than anyone else in the race.

Much could happen between now and next years elections. It is possible Budge and Watkins might strike an agreement and only one of them run to prevent two eastern Idaho candidates from slicing up the same chunk of votes. But at this point Gov. John Evans would be wise to keep an eye on the eastern part of Idaho.

Lance report leaves public unsatisfied

By TOM WICKER
©1977 N.Y. Times

NEW YORK — Not surprisingly, President Carter and his lieutenants have failed to put an end to the Bert Lance controversy by their contention that a recent report of the comptroller of the currency proved Lance's good character and competence.

Not only were congressional committees press critics and much the public unsatisfied by that report; but a new, closely related investigation is going forward to determine whether the controller's Atlanta regional office was less than overhauled and thorough in a 1976 review of the operations of a bank Lance headed, Calhoun National.

Actually, Lance's wheeling banking involvement and prodigious spending have been on the public record, though largely unnoticed outside Georgia, since his 1974 campaign for governor of that state the last. Current investigations have shown, of course, that Calhoun National permitted Lance to make heavy overdrafts at no interest, until the controller forced the bank to charge it — to help pay for his campaign.

But the Georgia campaign financing law, in effect for the first time in 1974, required gubernatorial candidates to make other disclosures. Howell Raines, then a reporter for the Atlanta Constitution, now political editor of the St. Petersburg, Fla., Times, studied those 1974 disclosures in detail for an article in "Campaign Money — Reform and Reality in the States," a book published by the Free Press, in New York, 1976. Among other things, Raines found:

— Georgia banks, long heavily involved in financing Georgia political campaigns, had a special incentive in 1974. They were strongly supporting proposed legislation to allow the formation of statewide bank holding companies.

— First disclosure reports, filed June 29, 1974, showed large bank loans to candidates Lester Maddox, David Gambrell, Harry Jackson and Bert Lance. Lance reported loans totaling $350,000 from six North Georgia banks, although his campaign contributions from persons other than himself totalled only $226,554.

— From June 1972 until February 1974, Lance had spent $235,253 or his own money to run his campaign. Even so, and despite the $350,000 in bank loans, Lance's campaign revenues ultimately fell $200,910 short of his spending total, a deficit that Lance said in 1975 he had made up out of his own pocket.

— At the end of the campaign the $350,000 in loans was outstanding, and Lance was personally paying the debt service. Presumably he ultimately had to pay the principal, too, since the banks were prevented by law from forgiving the loans and it's unlikely that he could have raised that much after having lost the Democratic primary. The Georgia disclosure law did not require him to report how he disposed of the debt.

— The loans consisted of $40,000 from the Citizens Bank of Calhoun, whose board chairman, J. Mack Robinson, was a campaign adviser and owned stock in numerous small banks, giving him a strong interest in the banking company. Bank: $20,000 from the Rowell

Bank, of which Robinson was a stockholder; $10,000 from the Northwest Georgia Bank of Ringgold, of which Lance was a stockholder and Tom Mitchell, a campaign adviser, was a director; and $10,000 apiece from three banks in Mitchell's home town, Dalton, each of which had a Lance contributor on its board of directors.

Lance's involvement with banks was by no means the most questionable among the gubernatorial candidates. Raines asserted that dubious honor to the eventual winner (and present governor, George Busbee.

Nations deal with economic disputes

©1977 N.Y. Times

OTIS AIR FORCE BASE — Diplomacy, which appears in Stevenson's Book of Quotations between "Dining" and "Disappointment," is changing fast these days. Increasingly it deals, not with manners or abstractions, but with serious economic disputes between nations over, among other things, the future control of the resources of the oceans.

The recently proclaimed 200-mile safety-belt around most national land borders has created a tangle of new diplomatic and negotiating problems. For example, even between the United States and Canada, how do you decide where to draw the line between the U.S. and Canadian 200-mile off-shore areas of control?

If you draw that line straight out from the land border, you cut right across probably the most fertile fishing ground in the world on Georges Bank, but a straight line also cuts across Nova Scotia in Canada and raises problems with the fishermen of Cape Cod and the islands of Martha's Vineyard and Nantucket in Massachusetts.

Do you look at the political boundaries between the two nations, or the off-shore geological configuration of the North American continent when you draw the line? How do you keep the Russian, Japanese, and German fishing fish factories from destroying the natural reproductive life of these vast underwater food resources — as rich as the agricultural plains of the prairie states and provinces of the United States and Canada? And how do you control the exploitation of the oil and mineral resources of these disputed areas?

To get a glimpse of this, and how the Carter administration is dealing with it, we came to the air base of Otis, and flew in a Coast Guard Albatross over the disputed fishing grounds between the United States and Canada with Lloyd N. Cutler, a Washington lawyer, who has been appointed by President Carter to negotiate an agreement with Canada by the end of the year.

We covered 500 miles on a gleaming summer morning at 500 feet over the sea, and dipped down to 200 feet while the crew checked foreign vessels in the disputed areas, and took photographs to establish what they were doing and whether they had a right to be there. But this, mainly, was an exercise in the new diplomacy.

The United States and Canada have sort of a gentlemen's agreement to allow the fishermen of both countries to carry on as before until the end of 1977, while making the Russians, the Japanese, and others respect the 200-mile zone of control in North America. Meanwhile, Washington and Ottawa are quietly negotiating a compromise on the future regulations between their two countries.

Ambassador Cutler, for Carter, will negotiate with Marcel Cadieux, a former Canadian ambassador to Washington, and now Canadian ambassador to the Common Market in Europe. And Cutler was out on the Atlantic, taking a look at the practical problems in preparation for these negotiations.

It is a new kind of practical diplomacy. Cutler looks like an old-fashioned secretary of state, but doing his homework on this noisy Grumman Albatross, was a far cry from the old striped pants diplomat. He had been ordered by the Coast Guard to don a bright-orange safety suit, with flotation gear, sound-proof earmuffs, and more communication wires than an astronaut's costume.

So the process of American diplomacy and negotiation is clearly changing. "Long ago," said Ambassador William Macomber in his excellent and amusing book, "The Angel's Game," it was asserted that the first diplomats were angels, whose task was to carry messages between heaven and earth.

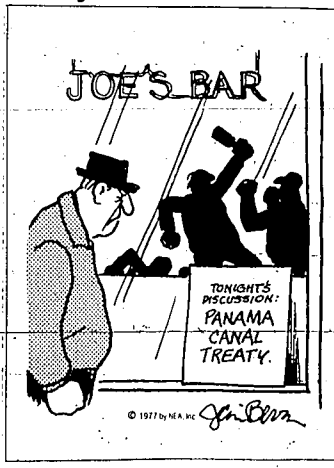

Later the task of diplomacy was left to a professional service and then, with the development of radio, the jet airplane, and satellite communications, to Presidents and flying secretaries of state. But now there is still another change.

As foreign policy has become more economic, more financial, more concerned with trade, and therefore, more complicated, the tendency has been to recruit experienced professionals like Cutler to concentrate on special problems.

Thus, Sol Linowitz was brought in to help negotiate the Panama Canal Treaty; former Secretary of Defense Clark Clifford to analyze the Cyprus problem; Gerard Smith to watch over the nuclear proliferation menace. These are merely symbols of a developing trend toward the decentralization of negotiation by experienced outsiders.

It is a promising innovation. Public attention is concentrated now on Cy Vance's dramatic diplomatic missions to China and the Middle East, but on the side, and on critical and practical problems between nations, a lot of good and hard work is being done by men and women who are seldom mentioned in the news.

US tightens telephone security

C.N.Y. Times Service
WASHINGTON — In the last two years, the federal government has increased the security of its sensitive telephone calls, because of concern about electronic eavesdropping by the Soviet Union in the United States.

According to communications experts in both the Carter and Ford administrations, the government has arranged with the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. to install, at great expense, switching devices and other equipment that will route most of its sensitive calls through underground cables, rather than microwave radio systems, in areas where Soviet listening devices could intercept calls.

The decision to spend more than $10 million to install the extra equipment was the government's first reaction to the discovery that the Soviet Union was engaged in widespread eavesdropping, apparently using equipment in its embassy in Washington and consulates in New York and San Francisco.

According to several officials, the Soviet Union has, for a number of years, been "plucking" long-distance telephone messages transmitted by microwave radio, and then using high-speed computers to extract information.

Because the Soviet Union is thought to be interested in developing economic intelligence, the experts believe that its surveillance system is targeted on microwave links leased by major corporations rather than on individual conversations.

According to many reports, the National Security Agency has long operated an extensive electronic surveillance system in the Soviet Union. But because of the "relative openness of American communications, the United States may be more vulnerable than the Soviet Union.

Despite the steps already taken, President Carter is expected to decide in the next few weeks on long-term measures to curb electronic surveillance by the Soviet Union, other governments, private corporations and possibly organized crime.

According to the communications experts, all of whom requested anonymity,

President Carter will be presented several options to deal with the political, diplomatic and technical problems raised by the relative lack of security in the telephone system. Among the possible options are the following:

— A well-publicized effort to encourage private corporations and business groups such as the New York Stock Exchange to purchase protective devices to better secure their telephone communications. This approach would include urging the Federal Communications Commission to require that telephone companies offer various types of secure telephone service and making public some of the technical security devices developed by the National Security Agency.

— A requirement that microwave radio systems, which are now used to transmit 68 per cent of all long-distance domestic telephone calls, be equipped with scrambling devices. Experts say that such a program would cost between $2 billion and $3 billion to set up nationwide.

— The establishment of an Executive Secure Voice Network, a telephone system linking such agencies as the Defense Department and the Energy Research and Development Administration with defense contractors working on advanced weapon systems. An experimental network of 100 such phones, each costing $35,000, has been operating for the last year.

Backs Lance

SEN. WILLIAM Proxmire, D-Wis., said in a television interview Sunday Bert Lance should not resign as budget director because it would look as if "he was drummed out because of a lack of confidence." Proxmire, who cast the lone dissenting vote at Lance's confirmation, appeared on CBS' "Face the Nation."

Services rate low

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Most Americans like their neighborhoods, but complain about the services they receive, according to a new government study.

A survey of 72.5 million households, both owner-occupied and rented, showed 82.5 per cent rated their neighborhoods excellent or good while just 2.4 per cent considered their neighborhoods poor.

Unsurprisingly, more than 92 per cent of households with incomes above $25,000 a year were pleased with where they live. But three out of four — 74 per cent — of those with incomes $5,000 or less also were happy with their neighborhoods.

The survey, conducted jointly by the Census Bureau and the Department of Housing and Urban Development, also found that almost half had complaints about at least one of six basic services: transportation, schools, shopping facilities, police and fire protection and hospitals and health clinics.

Scientists fighting computer on Voyager

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — An analysis of pictures taken more than 44 million miles from earth by Voyager II shows an almost fully extended camera boom and scientists today planned to issue a second — and hopefully more successful — computer command to fully extend the boom arm.

Officials at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory said they would "blow off" a two-pound dust cover at the same time the Voyager is making a pitch turn maneuver.

"They said the 'blow off' to the maneuver would snap the 74-foot boom arm the one degree it needed to be fully extended. The boom arm holds camera equipment.

"The pictures weren't blurred, showing us the boom is remaining stationary," said Frank Bristow of the JPL. "There is a chance it's locked and we just didn't get the signal."

The extension was first tried Friday, but an onboard computer with a mind of its own countermanded JPL's instructions. However, scientists said they now know why the order was rejected.

The rejection delayed for another two days the flight of the craft's sister ship, Voyager I, which has now been rescheduled for Sept. 5 to technicians at Cape Canaveral, Fla., can install five more coiled springs to prevent similar boom extension problems.

Bristow said the first command was rejected because as the main computer was "issuing" instructions, a secondary computer switched memory banks.

The main computer is programmed to stop any maneuver when it appears something is amiss, such as the switching. However, scientists did not know why the second computer "acted up."

"It closed the sequence down," Bristow said. "Because it saw the attitude control shifting back and forth from the main system to the backup."

Carter likes out of town queries

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter prefers the tone of questions asked by out-of-town editors and reporters to news conference quizzing from the White House press corps.

The President told a group of visiting editors Saturday they bring "a different perspective about nationwide interests from what we ordinarily get at a presidential news conference or even a daily briefing by (press secretary) Jody Powell to the White House Press Corps."

The visitors asked Carter a range of questions but did not quiz him about Budget Director Bert Lance's banking practices — an issue which dominated the President's news conference last week.

"I am sure all of you on occasion watch the press conferences that I have with the National White House Press Corps," Carter told the editors. "There is a different tone and a different kind of interest and a different kind of question."

"I personally favor strongly the attitude and the interests that are exhibited in these exchanges. Every one of these questions was substantive and of importance to your listeners and your viewers and your readers. Quite often in the national press conferences here, the major emphasis, almost exclusive interest, is on a transient question," he said.

San Quentin locks cells

SAN QUENTIN, Calif. (UPI) — Inmates at San Quentin prison were ordered to "lockdown" today after an outbreak of racially-spurred violence ended when a guard fatally shot a white inmate who was stabbing a black prisoner.

The new "lockdown" comes only 11 days after a previous "lockdown" was lifted. The first was the result of racial violence in July which left three convicts dead.

Officials said Peter Savas, 24, a white convict doing time for burglary, was fatally wounded by a guard Saturday morning as he and another white inmate, Ronald Hendricks, 25, attacked James Williams, 31, a black prisoner.

San Quentin administrative officer Michael Madding said guards saw Savas stabbing Williams with a prison-made knife. Madding said a guard fired a warning shot and Hendricks stopped fighting, but Savas continued to assault the black inmate "with a weapon in his hand."

The guard then shot Savas in the shoulder. The guard died later in the prison hospital.

Williams was hospitalized with multiple stab wounds to his chest and abdomen.

TV network profits up

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Profits of the three national commercial networks totaled $235.6 million in 1976, up almost 42 per cent from the year before, according to the Federal Communications Commission.

The FCC annual financial report also said the networks reported spending $218 million on news and public affairs programs, up from $160 million in 1975. Last year was an election year which could account for some of the increased expenditures in that area.

The three national networks reported revenues of $2.1 billion, up 26.5 per cent from 1975 while revenues of network owned and operated stations increased by 23 per cent to $487 million, FCC said.

Lances plan home sale

ATLANTA (UPI) — Budget Director Bert Lance and his wife have decided to sell their northwest Atlanta home for $2 million, the Atlanta Constitution reported today.

"This is just a sign that we plan to be in Washington for a long time," Mrs. Lance said Sunday.

The Lances bought the four-acre estate in 1975 for $500,000 after Lance moved here from Calhoun to become president of the National Bank of Georgia.

DEAR ABBY: You once printed a letter of advice to any woman who was in love with a married man. In it you stated what she should and should not expect from her married lover.

As I sit alone on my patio recalling the wonderful stolen hours I shared with my married lover, I ache with loneliness, and I think I could derive some comfort from that letter. It certainly rang a bell with me.

I know he loves me, but I can't compete with a wife and four children, a lovely home and a respectable name in the community. I know I'll never have him. I never meant for this to get so serious, but it's too late now. Maybe I deserve the pain. I know better. Please try to find that letter and run it again. He calls me...

STARSHINE

DEAR STARSHINE: Here's the letter. I hope it helps:

Married man can't give all

DEAR ABBY: May I give your readers the benefit of my very valuable experience? I address this to any woman who is in love with a married man:

Never expect to see him on Sunday or holidays. Never call him at home. Don't ever expect him to take you out in public, but be prepared to entertain him at your place. He may bring a bottle or the steaks occasionally, but in actual dollars and cents, you will spend more on him than he'll spend on you.

Never depend on him in times of personal crisis. Don't believe him when he tells you that his wife is a shrew, cold, homely, too fat (or too thin), and she hasn't slept with him in 10 years.

Don't expect his wife to divorce him if she catches him. She knows that you aren't his first affair and won't be his last. Also, she's not about to give up her social status, financial security and retirement income because of you. However, her discovery will probably terminate his affair with you, so be prepared to get some new clothes, circulate and find another man whose wife is a shrew, cold, homely, too fat (or too thin), and hasn't slept with him for 10 years.

Sigh me...

HIS WIFE

DEAR ABBY: I'm a fellow who has let my hair grow down to my shoulders. Some people call me "mink." How can I let them know I am a man?

MANNY

DEAR MANNY: Grow a beard.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter goes around with a girl who brags about all the stuff she has shoplifted from stores. (She's taken jewelry, cosmetics, records and clothes.)

This girl is pretty and comes from a very nice family, and her parents can buy her anything she wants. She is a junior in high school, Abby.

Should I tell her mother? I'm afraid she will get caught, and hurt her parents or herself if this continues. No name or town, please.

MRS. X

DEAR MRS. X: Of course you should tell her mother. If she were your daughter, wouldn't YOU want to know?

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY, Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

your health

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb — I am a 30-year-old female, weigh 126 and am 5 feet 8. I'm basically healthy and active. I can't gain more than three to five pounds at a time or keep them for very long. My appetite is poor most of the time, especially if I become upset. And I cannot eat fresh, raw vegetables and fruit. My mouth starts to itch and I break out in a rash on my face or arms. I also smoke about a pack of cigarettes a day.

What can I do to increase my appetite and gain weight? What can I eat in place of fresh, raw fruit and vegetables that would be comparable in nutritional value? How can I decrease my smoking?

I am beginning to feel sluggish upon arising in the morning and am getting from seven to eight hours of sleep. I have already been to my family physician for vitamins.

Dear Reader —

Time may take care of your problem and you may wish you could have the old problem of not gaining weight back again. Your appetite might increase if you did quit smoking. Food might taste better too. Why don't you contact your nearest chapter of the American Heart Association or American Lung Association and see if they can tell you about local stop smoking clinics that you might join. A sincere desire to stop is often important in the success of such programs.

Fresh raw fruits and vegetables are seldom high calorie foods. If you want to gain weight these are not the foods you need to emphasize in your diet. Rather you want starches, fats and sweets, the high calorie foods — if you are sure you want to add fat to your torso. Muscles result from strength type exercises. Your emphasis on "fresh and raw" makes me wonder if you can tolerate canned or cooked fruits and vegetables. If so, they may be your next best substitute. If not, you need to get bulk some place and you can get that from whole cereals or bran. Your aversion to "some" products from milk and milk products, although it is not as good a source as fresh fruits and you might need vitamin supplements if you truly cannot use fruits and vegetables. They are one of the four basic food groups for a reason.

To give you a better idea of a balanced diet I am sending you The Health Letter number 46, Balanced Diet. Recommended Daily Dietary Allowances (RDA). Others who read this issue can send 50 cents with a long stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. The values for the different vitamins and minerals found should include are listed in it as well as which foods contain them.

If you are not as active as you think you are, a regular exercise program, preferably doing something you enjoy, may stimulate your appetite. The best example here is a good walk before bedtime. However, doesn't usually take a lot of physical energy, no matter how tiring it may become. Regular exercise may also give you more energy. But I doubt you will get much help unless you stop cigarettes and if you are a coffee drinker, stop or cut down on it as well.

(Because of the volume of mail Dr. Lamb cannot answer your letters personally but he will answer representative letters of general interest in his column.)

EXCHANGE STUDENT FROM SWEDEN JOINS JEROME HOST FAMILY

Swedish student starts junior class in Jerome

JEROME — In one of Sweden's "summer towns" on the southern coast, 16-year-old Catharina Akerman's school started with her this year.

Catharina has joined the junior class at Jerome High School where she started today. She is visiting the U.S. under the Youth for Understanding exchange student program and hopes to increase her fluency in English "for maybe teaching language later."

"I looked very interesting," she says about choosing to come to America although a scholarship to England was also offered. "England is nearer and I can go to England whenever I want."

Catharina has studied English for seven years, German for three years and French for one and has traveled in Europe and England.

"Americans are sometimes difficult to understand," she says, because of her instruction in the British version of English, which Swedish students begin studying at age ten.

Catharina is living south of Jerome with Arden and Lela Stutzman and their daughter Cindy, a senior at high school. The family hosted a student from South America in the past. Mrs. Stutzman says the purpose of the exchange program is to improve relations between countries.

So far, Catharina has seen the Snake River Canyon and some of the mountains. This winter she hopes to take up skiing — downhill, for in her part of Sweden there is only cross country.

Catharina is the youngest of two sons and two daughters of Torsten and Brita Akerman, in Angeln, Sweden, a town of 28,000, and a popular "summer town" for tourists.

Mr. Akerman sells grain seed to farmers in the area. "Sometimes my father is driving to farmers and drinking 35 cups of coffee," Catharina says. Her country drinks a lot of coffee, she says, but some homes are drinking less now because it's too expensive.

Until a year ago her family lived with six others on a large company farm.

Catharina, who sings and plays the guitar, worked in a music shop selling records, instruments and sheet music all summer.

She made about $3 an hour but says the taxes and the standard of living in Sweden is high.

"I think we lose tourists more and more because we have high prices," Catharina says. "Other countries have a lower standard of living and it's difficult for them to come to Sweden."

Last September the voters in Sweden elected a new parliament and the Socialist and Communist Parties, which had dominated the government for over 40 years, lost many of their seats. The biggest party now is the Center Catharina says.

"Before it was left and now it's moving to the right," Catharina says.

The country has become concerned about a future successor to the Swedish crown. A daughter was recently born to the King and his new bride, but Swedish law says only a male may rule.

The Center party wants to change the law to allow the daughter to be Regent but to do so takes six years.

"People are a little bit frightened," Catharina says. "Now the question is very hot."

Older couples get divorces

LOS ANGELES — An increasing number of couples who have been married for 20 or more years are getting divorced these days.

In 1975 (the latest year for which statistics are available, 72,920 such couples got divorced, an increase of 51,700 over 1965, according to the National Center of Health Statistics. The unprecedented increase has caused concern among marriage counselors.

"It used to be that if couples could get through the trying early years of marriage, we expect them to stay together until death," said Meyer Elkin, former director of the Los Angeles Conciliation Court and a veteran marriage counselor. "Now, however, they are casting aside their mates of 20 or more years, dividing households that took them a lifetime to acquire, and leaving their grown children bewildered by the separation."

Elkin cited these reasons for the trend:

— People are living longer and expect more from their mates today. A generation ago, middle-aged couples spent only a few years together after the children were gone and their careers were established. It was enough for the wife to have a husband who could pay the bills and for the husband to have a wife who could take care of the house. They didn't expect their mates to satisfy all their intellectual and emotional needs because they had an extended family and numerous friends. Today, however, the average 45-year-old can expect to live to 75, and he is less willing to remain in a marriage he finds less than ideal.

— No-fault divorce laws have made it easier to separate. Since 1972, most states have granted divorce on the basis of irreconcilable differences, making it unnecessary to reveal in court embarrassing examples of infidelity or cruelty.

— Less stigma is attached to modern divorce. Nationally about one in three marriages ends in divorce, so that someone who wishes to separate is not considered strange or different.

Although divorce is easier today, it is still traumatic. "It is the most frightening thing I've ever done," said Dr. D. David Jensen, founder of the California Family Study Center in Burbank, Calif., who was recently divorced after 21 years of marriage. "It has meant that I have had to start a whole new life, which isn't easy to do when you are in your 40's."

As do many middle-aged men, Jensen attributes his divorce to a "difference in values." Although he had considered divorce for some time, he did not pursue it until a close friend died and he was forced to consider his own mortality.

"I really care about my ex-wife, but we had changed so much over the years that we couldn't relate to each other anymore," he explained. "I had changed my career, we had moved from Tennessee to California, and we didn't like the same people or things anymore. I started thinking that before I died, I wanted to have a relationship in which I was totally involved and in which I would find deep satisfaction. I knew that I could never have that if my ex-wife and I stayed together, so we separated."

Nightgowns reign as dance dresses

BY ENID NEWMAN
© N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — No one ever said that fashion was, or should be, logical. So it's not at all surprising that the newest dance dresses are neither new nor dresses.

They are, in fact, nightgowns, and let it be said immediately that the idea of wearing nightgowns in public is also not new. The John Kloss designs for Cira are on the shopping lists of a good percentage of young European women who visit this country, and they are no sooner unpacked than they are in the best discotheques in London, Paris, Rome and Copenhagen. And Japanese robes have long been a colorful cover-up for chilly evenings.

What's happening now is that the bedtime thrift-shop look, pioneered by the adventurous, has become, if not standard, at least sufficiently commonplace to leave eyebrows in their original position.

The nighties seen swirling on dance floors most frequently these days are from thrift and secondhand shops, not because of price but because the workmanship and fabrics are rarely duplicated in new collections. Many of the gowns are in heavy silk or crepe de chine, sensuous to war and touch, but discreetly opaque. And the hand sewing on many is a revelation to young owners.

Ellen Greene, an actress who has a collection of old nightgowns, said she originally started wearing them for evening because they were all she could afford, "but I like how they feel and how they move."

Mastodon's bones found

SEQUIM, Wash. (UPI) — The remains of a mastodon which lived between 11,000 and 14,000 years ago has been found in a peat bog with a spearhead imbedded in its ribs.

Archaeologists say that although 10-foot-high, six-ton mastodons roamed the world for some 10 million to 15 million years, there are fewer than half-a-dozen mastodon skeletons as complete as the one found in Sequim, Wash., and none others that obviously were killed by hunters.

"There's never been a mastodon found before that showed direct evidence of hunting and we've always wondered about it," Richard Daugherty, an archaeologist from Washington State University said.

"This is particularly good evidence in that the projectile point of bone is stuck right in the ribs."

The mastodon was found by Emanuel Manis on Aug. 16 as he was backhoeing his bog while building a pond. Manis stopped the backhoe as soon as he came across the animal's tusks and his wife telephoned for help.

Carl Gustafson, a zoologist from Washington State University who was working at the Lake Ozette archaeological dig 50 miles away, hurried to the scene, as did Daugherty. Digging began Aug. 18.

"I'm still in shock," said Gustafson, who specializes in animals like the mastodon. "This is very exciting."

The scientists have completed work on dirt brought up by the backhoe and are going in next for the skull. They found some bones of other animals in the ditch including a bison.

"What apparently happened is that there was a lake here and the mastodon got stuck in the mud and was found by early hunters," said Daugherty.

The creature found on Manis' land lived as glaciers were retreating at the end of the most recent Ice age, the Pleistocene era.

It is hoped carbon dating or other techniques can establish the mastodon's age within a few hundred years.

Gustafson, who coincidentally is writing a paper on the subject, said mastodons disappeared either because of a changing climate or because hunters killed off so many of them they were unable to reproduce.

Pair wed in Glenns Ferry

GLENN'S FERRY — Paula Gay Woolen became the bride of Russell Edward Rice in a garden ceremony Aug. 12th at 7 p.m. at the home of the bridegroom's mother.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Woolen of Caldwell. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Albert Rice and the late Mr. Rice of Glenns Ferry.

Rev. Dale Vandergriff of Caldwell performed the double-ring ceremony before baskets of yellow and white daisies.

The bride, given by her father, chose a white floor-length gown of chiffon over satin, with long sleeves and a high neckline, both lace trimmed. She wore a barrette trimmed with white daisies in her hair. Her bridal corsage was of white daisies with baby breath and long ribbon streamers.

Mrs. Jerry Curry, Boulder, Colo., sister of the bride, was matron of honor; Mrs. Anne Bowman, Caldwell, sister of the bride, and Stacy Shrum, Glenns Ferry, and Stacy Curry, niece of the bride, were bridesmaids.

Jerl Curry, niece of the bride, was flower girl.

Daniel Siron was the best man, and Terry Gertsch and Larry Sims, both Glenns Ferry, and Robert Egusquiza, Nampa, were ushers. Rickie Duke, Glenns Ferry, nephew

Cheneys celebrate 50th anniversary

BUHL — Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Cheney, long-time residents of Buhl, will celebrate their golden wedding anniversary Sunday, Sept. 4, at Lincoln Courts, 1310 S. Main, Buhl from 2 to 5 p.m.

The couple married in Boise on Sept. 7, 1927, and have farmed near Buhl for the past 33 years. They are now retired.

They have been active in church work, the Moose Lodge and the Twin Falls County

Health tips save years

CHICAGO — The physical examination was completed and Dr. Ronald G. Blankenbaker invited the patient, Jane Smith into his office for a chat.

"Mrs. Smith, we have all the information obtainable from your medical history and tests and we find you are 60.3 years old," he began.

"But doctor, there is some mistake," replied the startled Mrs. Smith. "I've just turned 50."

"That is your chronological age. But your health-appraisal age is that of a woman 10 years older," the doctor explained.

"You are aging faster than the calendar shows because your habits and life-style have built up a number of risk factors that have given you the same chance of dying in the next 10 years as a woman of 60."

Jane Smith has dismayed. Like most people, she would rather be younger than older.

Blankenbaker, observing her anxiety, sought to be reassuring.

"You can turn the clock back," he said.

He handed her a computer readout of a list of personal recommendations.

"If you follow these preventive steps, you can bring your appraisal age down to 53," Blankenbaker continued. "In other words, you can add significantly to your life expectancy over the next decade by reducing your appraisal age."

By lowering her blood pressure (180/90) through diet and drugs, she could reduce the risk of dying from heart disease or stroke and cut 3.7 years.

If she stopped smoking her pack a day, she could cut another 1.5 years.

Substituting an exercise program for her sedentary living could take off six-tenths of a year.

Three-tenths of a year could be cut by her examining her breasts monthly and obtaining a professional examination yearly.

Another three-tenths could come off from lowering weight to an ideal level, she was told; two-tenths by an annual rectal examination and one-tenth by an annual Pap smear.

Dahmus, Martens marry in Iowa

BUHL — Mary Dahmus, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roman Dahmus, Waterloo, Iowa, became the bride of Rev. Matthew R. Martens, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Martens, Buhl, at 7 p.m., Aug. 12 in Zion Lutheran Church, Iowa City, Iowa.

Rev. Dan Dana and Rev. Carl Levelling officiated at the double-ring ceremony.

Yvonne DeWald of Cedar Falls, Iowa, was matron of honor and Rita Dahmus, Des Moines, and Linda Eden, Springfield, Ore., were bridesmaids.

Rev. Kim DeVries, Greenville, Miss., was best man and groomsmen were David Dahmus, Milwaukee, Wis., and Rev. Roger Franzen, Minneapolis, Minn.

A reception, following the ceremony, was held at the Carousel Inn, Coralville, Iowa.

The couple left on a wedding trip to Mackinac Island, Mich., after which they will be at home at Cedar County Estates, Tipton, Iowa.

Hiking draws those traveling in Hawaii

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI)—Most people think of swimming when they contemplate the "Hawaiian Islands," but there is a growing number of people who think of hiking.

For these people expert Robert Smith has prepared two new books that deal with hiking in the Sandwiches. They are "Hiking Hawaii: The Big Islands" and "Hiking Kauai: The Garden Isle," both published by Wilderness Press of Berkeley, Calif. ($4.95 each).

The books tell of a part of the islands that most people do not see but actually a part that is intriguing in being different from anything available on the mainland.

Smith's books describe plants, animals, views, facilities, campsites, history and geology and give checked-out mileages and trail conditions.

How Elvis died still secret

CHICAGO — Elvis Presley was buried more than a week ago, but the true cause of his sudden death at age 42 remained unknown until yesterday.

The mystery deepened when the doctor who performed the autopsy on Presley's body said he will probably keep secret the results of chemical tests on Presley's blood and body tissue.

Dr. Jerry Francisco, Tennessee state medical examiner, said he would leave up to Presley's family the decision whether to release the test results, which would be the only sure way to tell if drugs played a role in the singer's death.

Around the country, however, some of Francisco's professional colleagues — the several dozen other experienced forensic pathologists working in large medical investigation offices — said the silence raised serious questions about Presley's demise.

Francisco, in two separate telephone interviews with The Chicago Sun-Times, said that reports in the news media just after Presley's death attributing the cause to a heart attack were erroneous.

"This is not a heart attack in the usual sense," Francisco said. "He said original reports that Presley died of a cardiac arrhythmia — a weak, irregular beat of the heart — 'concerned just the mechanism of death, not the cause.'"

Arrhythmias immediately precedes the majority of all deaths. Mayor Richard J. Daley's heart went into the same kind of irregular beat as Presley's just after the dying mayor slumped to the floor in his doctor's office last December.

In fact, Francisco said, while Presley's heart was obviously diseased, the type and extent of the heart disorder alone would not explain his sudden death. Dr. Robert Stein, Cook County's medical examiner, and other leading pathologists questioned by The Chicago Sun-Times said the apparently nonlethal heart disease would lead them to suspect — pending laboratory test results — that alcohol or drugs were involved.

These were the autopsy results as Francisco described them:

Presley's liver was two or three times the normal weight. The singer weighed about 220 pounds. Presley's heart was about 25 per cent heavier than normal, weighing about 300 grams, had coronary artery disease — hardening of the arteries — in all three major arteries attached to the heart, but the extent of the damage was not enough to kill him, Francisco said.

Presley's kidneys were normal. His lungs showed slight formation of fluid but the edema, as it is technically called, was insignificant. Doctors reported Presley's blood pressure was 160 over 110, an extremely high reading for his age. Normal readings would be 110 to 120 over 60 to 80.

"This is an unusual death," Francisco had said just after the autopsy. He contended the exact cause might never be known. But, without waiting for laboratory tests — the most important single item in a case like Presley's — Francisco said he had already discovered drugs as a cause. "My belief is that drug use probably will not end up playing a role," he said then.

Mystery ship orbits

WASHINGTON — Space observers in this country and abroad are puzzled by a mysterious Soviet vehicle that has been in orbit for more than a month.

It appears to be as large as the Soviet manned space laboratories of the Salyut series. Its orbit and radio telemetry characteristics suggest that it too is related to a manned-space flight effort, but there appears to be no crew on board.

Some observers speculate that it is either a test flight for a future space station or the first unit of a large station that could be assembled in orbit. Soviet space authorities have named it Cosmos 929 but have revealed virtually nothing about it.

In recent years Soviet space experts have discussed the possibility of assembling a large space station in orbit.

There were reports from Europe this year indicating that the Soviets planned to launch a space laboratory this summer. It was widely assumed that this was to be another Salyut, but no such orbiting vehicle has been launched. Previously five Salyuts have been put in orbit, the first early in 1971. They were each about one-fifth the size of the United States Skylab that was put into orbit in 1973.

One American space observer speculated that the anniversary this fall of the October Revolution would be a logical time for the Soviet's next major step in space.

Wage hike means job loss

CHICAGO — If Congress passes the proposed 35-cent boost in the minimum wage to $2.65 an hour next year, more than 90,000 U.S. workers could lose their jobs, the president of the National Federation of Independent Business has warned.

Furthermore, said Wilson S. Johnson, the proposed boost would leave 15 per cent of the nation's 3.5 million small business operators earning less per hour than their employees. That's assuming those operators average 58 hours of work a week themselves and that one out of four call on family members for an additional 20 hours.

Johnson issued his warnings yesterday in a press conference called to report on a national employment survey just completed by his San Mateo, Calif.-based NFIB, 14,000 of whose 518,000 members are in Illinois.

He noted that the legislative proposals would also boost the minimum wage to $2.89 in 1979 and $3.15 by 1980, with automatic boosts after that.

Johnson said the higher minimum wage poses a particular threat to teenagers, who account for more

Soviet drivers dying like flies, newspaper says

MOSCOW (UPI) — A lot more Russians are whizzing down the roads at the wheels of their own private automobiles, and dying like flies in the process.

The Moscow daily Leninskoye Znamya complained Friday that during the first six months of this year there were 2,522 traffic accidents in Moscow which killed 302 persons and injured 2,088 others.

In a country where the private automobile was virtually nonexistent only 10 years ago, private autos were involved in over 700 of those accidents and accounted for over 800 of the casualties.

The Moscow region deputy chief of internal affairs N. Sumtsov aimed particularly sharp criticism at the very popular Soviet-made Zhiguli sedan, a version of the Fiat 124.

Sumtsov blamed 40 per cent of private auto accidents on Zhiguli drivers — charging that drivers of the snappy little sports sedan have accidents three times more often than owners of the heavier dumber and slower Moskvich and Volga sedans.

"The mass production and wide sales of cars of this type means that a great number of drivers who have had no previous driving experience find themselves sitting at the wheel of the Zhiguli," Sumtsov said.

The result, according to him, is carnage on the orderly streets of the capital.

"Naturally those who are not used to maneuvering and controlling an auto which reacts swiftly and effortlessly do not always manage to make the right moves at the right time," Sumtsov said.

He recommended extra caution on the part of drivers over 45 years old, noting that their reflexes have slowed and that at their age they should not be fascinated with speed and power anyway.

Sumtsov called for defensive driving and said it would take at least one year for drivers to become accustomed to the Zhiguli.

The Italian Fiat operation installed the Zhiguli plant in the Soviet Union which is now cranking out Zhiguli sedans at an annual rate of 680,000.

The number of privately owned autos per 1,000 population in the Soviet Union has risen from eight to 1970 to 16 in 1975, and is targeted to reach 30 per 1,000 people by 1980.

Felker buys Esquire

NEW YORK (UPI) — Esquire Magazine, which published some of America's top writers and made the "Patty Girl" the pinup heroine of World War II, has been purchased by a group headed by Clay Felker, former president of New York magazine, it was announced Friday.

The board of directors of Esquire, Inc., which has put out the slick magazine for 44 years, made the announcement.

Felker will become president of the magazine, which features fiction, non-fiction, lifestyle trends, non-fiction and fiction. It has had a history of publishing some of the most famous American novelists and short story writers early in their careers.

Felker was joined in the venture by graphic artist Milton Glazer and Associated Newspapers Group Ltd., of London.

Felker recently lost a bitter battle with Australian publisher Rupert Murdoch for control of New York magazine and its West Coast counterpart, New West. Murdoch also purchased the New York Post, New York's only major afternoon newspaper.

Glazer was associated with Felker at New York magazine and is credited for developing the magazine's graphics.

The board of directors noted in its statement that during the last two fiscal years, Esquire Inc. had lost 50 cents on each share of stock, and said, "The board felt, however, that the new ownership under the leadership of Clay Felker would significantly enhance the resurgence of the magazine."

The board recalled that the magazine's readership and circulation were dealt an adverse blow late in 1974 by an advertising research report by the H.R. Simmons Co. The board said the magazine has recovered significantly and added newsstand sales were up 10 per cent in the second calendar quarter of 1977 from a year ago.

Esquire was the pioneer men's magazine and had a unique reputation for its full-page drawings of the voluptuous "Patty Girl" and "Varga Girl" in the 1940s and 50s, but the competition of more daring magazines such as Playboy cut its circulation.

Although it was among the first mass circulation magazines to feature cheesecake photographs, it stopped short of topless nudity and maintained a solid literary reputation.

Air crash increase probed

WASHINGTON — Citing an "alarming increase" in airline crashes at airports during thunderstorms, the National Transportation Safety Board has called on the airlines to improve pilot training in order to reverse the trend.

In a letter to the presidents of the nation's 42 commercial air carriers, NTSB Chairman Webster B. Todd Jr. called for improvements in airline operating procedures as the way to reduce the accidents and sophisticated equipment can be developed to tell a pilot exactly how air is moving at a terminal area.

Since such equipment is several years off, he said, it is up to the airlines to make sure their pilots have all available information on storm activity and train them to be more wary of thunderstorm activity and more careful.

From 1972 through 1976, there were nine crashes of scheduled airliners in terminal areas during thunderstorms in which 251 people were killed, Todd said. By comparison, he continued, there were only two such accidents from 1964 through 1971 — neither of which resulted in fatalities.

Although Todd said that the reason for the increase is not clear, his proposals to the airlines indicated that he felt insufficient pilot training and a lack of care on the part of the pilots themselves could at least be partially blamed.

For instance, he told the airline presidents, "There is some evidence that pressure to adhere to schedules . . . motivates the overzealous pilot to fly into marginal conditions."

Todd added that "few" pilots were "self-motivated to fly into thunderstorms because of competitiveness, overconfidence, under-estimation of the situation (or the) desire to get home."

Since the final go-no-go decision is in the hands of the pilot, he called on the airlines to "exercise care in presenting its policies or procedures to avoid influencing the pilot's judgment in this regard."

Another problem, Todd said, is that while "most airline manuals have a clearly stated and written policy on enroute thunderstorm avoidance . . . With few exceptions, these manuals do not contain comparable policy statements for the terminal area."

And while the airlines acknowledge the pilot's final decision whether to take off or land, "this management position is not clearly set forth in many of the air carriers' flight manuals," he said.

City budget hearing set in Shoshone

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

SHOSHONE — Hearing on the Shoshone city budget for the new fiscal year beginning Oct. 1 is scheduled for 8 p.m. Sept. 6 at the city hall.

The general fund budget of $100,864 is 28 per cent above the 1976 budget. Ruth Chess, city clerk, said the 1976 budget of $72,604 represents the last 12-month budget which is comparable to the 1977-78 anticipated expenditures.

Currently all cities and counties in Idaho are operating under an interim nine-month budget from Jan. 1 to Oct. 1. Mrs. Chess referred to the nine-month budget as "merely a lot of work" since no tax levies were based upon it.

Most of the increase in the 1978 budget reflects inflation and the cost of "paying the bills," according to Councilman Wilson Churchman. It also includes two salary increases since the 1976 budget.

The largest item in the general fund budget is $30,542 for law enforcement, compared to $22,990 in 1976. Mrs. Chess said $19,407 is earmarked for parks. This includes rip rapping of the Little Wood River through town, at an estimated cost of $13,000. The 1976 budget for parks was $5,568.

Other items, compared to the 1976 budget, include legislative, $2,710; compared to $2,250; executive, $1,625 and $1,625; financial administration, $18,520 and $18,616; elections, $300. There were no municipal elections in 1976.

Legal, $1,675, and $1,630; planning and zoning, $300, compared to $250; general government, (heat, utilities), $1,225 and $2,050; fire control, $7,185 and $6,380; building inspection, $1,500 a new item; animal control, $875 and $350; sanitation, $14,800 and $13,995; airport remains at $50.

A major expenditure also planned is $69,577 under the water works fund, Mrs. Chess said. This will be used for new wells. Under the federal revenue sharing budget, $2,100 is earmarked for a garbage truck.

She said city council members are considering charging a $1.50 monthly fee for residential garbage pickup and $3 for apartments and businesses to raise additional revenue for the sanitation department.

Estimated revenues are $10,700 while expected expenditures are $14,890. Shoshone city never has charged for garbage pickup services.

The streets and street lighting fund of $55,640 includes a $9,000 item for the federally financed storm drain study. This fund amounted to $53,570 in 1976.

Other separately budgeted items include library, $7,106, compared to $6,336 and recreation, $3,150 and $1,630. These three items, plus the general fund are the only four funds tax supported, the city clerk said.

Separate accidents hurt three persons

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls man suffered a broken arm and two Twin Falls children received cuts and bruises in two traffic accidents Thursday.

Ruffino F. Ortiz, 34, Twin Falls, suffered a broken arm and cuts in a four-car crash about two miles west of Twin Falls on U.S. 30 about 5:30 p.m. Thursday, state police reported.

A car driven east by John L. Morris, 47, Twin Falls, and one driven north by Naveela G. Mireles, 27, Twin Falls, collided on U.S. 30, after Mireles reportedly failed to yield at a stop sign. Shortly after that, Ortiz, driving a car west, collided with a pickup driven east by Harold L. Kidd, 47, Twin Falls, at the same intersection.

Two Twin Falls children, Jean Moore, 9, and Bradley Moore, 6, suffered cuts and bruises in another wreck on the Shoshone Street "Singing" Bridge about 3:30 p.m. Thursday, city police reported.

Question...

Is there someone in attendance at the White Mortuary all of the time?

Answer...

Since we started serving the people in Magic Valley 53 years ago — there has never been a time when we have not had thoroughly qualified personnel on duty in our funeral home. Staffing our funeral home around the clock every day of the year with competent people is our sincerest pledge to the residents of Magic Valley and the surrounding territory.

Because of our continuous readiness to serve, it is not always possible for each of our personnel always to be available. Should you call for any of us and we are temporarily unavailable, you can be secure in the knowledge that our associates are equally capable and will always have the same personal interest in your welfare that we would have.

Assessor charges dismissed

BOISE (UPI) — There was insufficient evidence to sustain the last remaining criminal charge against Ada County Assessor J.L. "Mike" Clark according to special prosecutor Klaus Wiebe, and so the charge was dismissed Friday by Fourth District Magistrate Alan Schwartzman.

The charge accused Clark of willfully allowing certain property to be assessed at less than true value.

Clark had also been charged originally with assessing improvements to residential property at 27 per cent below market value.

Schwartzman dismissed that charge June 23, saying the assessor had made a "good faith" effort to remedy practices which began under Clark's predecessor Virgil King. Clark was King's chief deputy.

Year's lowest score gives Irwin Hall of Fame golf crown

PINEHURST, N.C. (UPI) — Hale Irwin shot a 68 Sunday to take a five-stroke victory over hot Leonard Thompson in the Hall of Fame Golf Classic as he turned in the lowest score of the year on the PGA tour.

The 29-under-par 264 was even more spectacular in that it came on the famed Pinehurst Country Club No. 2 course, which has been called one of the world's 10 best.

Irwin, who came to the sandy, pine-tree laden course with the sole aim of qualifying for next week's World Series of Golf, bogeyed the first hole Sunday to slip to 16 under par. But that was long forgotten as he went on to make four birdies and an eagle three on the 16th hole by chipping the ball into the cup from about 70 feet over a sand trap.

Thompson, who grew up about 35 miles away and was a member at Pinehurst for 10 years, put on a hot streak with a record 7-under-par 29 on the back side as he birdied seven holes and finished at 15-under-par 269 after shooting a 66 Sunday.

Irwin's $50,000 check pushed his earnings for the year to $156,455 and he has a chance to make another $100,000 next week by winning the Akron, Ohio, event.

Rookie Jeff Mitchell, who had an erratic 65 Saturday that included 10 birdies, played with Irwin Sunday and had a consistent 4-under-par 67 to finish alone in third place at 27.

Mitchell had won only $5,662 coming into this tournament and took home $17,750 for third place.

Lou Graham finished fourth in a tie with first round leader J.C. Sneed at 274. Graham bogeyed the final hole to finish with a 70 and Sneed, who led the first round with a 63, had a 68.

Irwin, winner of the Atlanta Classic earlier this year, had been told by PGA officials in May that he had qualified for the World Series of Golf. But six weeks later, the PGA notified him there had been a mistake and Graham Marsh would represent the PGA spring tour in the "I have to win this week," said the determined Irwin after his opening round 65.

Irwin's score was the lowest on the tour this year, eclipsing a 19-under-par 265 turned in by Hartford Open winner Bill Kratzert. It also bettered by 10 strokes the tournament record of 274 set by Ray Floyd in last year's World Open, predecessor to the Hall of Fame Classic.

Floyd finished at 4-under-par 280 after a closing 71.

Tom Watson, the leading money winner on the tour this year, had a 69 Sunday and finished at 8-under-par 276, one stroke behind Jerry Pate, Tom Weiskopf and Charles Coody.

Weiskopf and Mike Morley qualified for the World Series, Weiskopf because he's among the top five on the money list and Morley as the top point getter on the PGA summer tour.

Gary Player led a group at 22 that included George Burns with each of them going over the $100,000 mark in earnings for the year. Player had a 74 Sunday and Burns had a 72.

Irwin moved to 15 under par after the second round and the victory never was in doubt even though he finished Saturday's round with an embarrassing double-bogey six after hitting a fat chip shot on the 18th hole. He made only four bogeys including three Sunday.

Pats nip Steelers 13-10 in OT

FOXBORO, Mass. (UPI) — John Smith booted a 22-yard field goal 4:36 into overtime Sunday to give the New England Patriots a come-from-behind 13-10 victory over the Pittsburgh Steelers in a National Football League exhibition game played at Schaefer Stadium.

Following a Steeler punt, New England started its winning drive at midfield. Don Calhoun's nine-yard scamper put the ball on the 36 and a personal foul against Steeler defensive back Wentford Gaines after the next play moved the ball to the Pittsburgh 16.

The Patriots ran three straight plays into the line before Smith converted for the Patriots, who raised their preseason slate to 3-1. Pittsburgh's exhibition record dropped to 2-2.

The Pats tied the game with just 14 seconds remaining in regulation time when Steve Grogan connected on a six-yard touchdown pass to tight end Russ Francis and Smith kicked the extra point. The score came after a 12-play, 51-yard drive.

In the first period, the Steelers jumped out to a 10-0 lead on defensive end L.C. Greenwood's first touchdown of his nine-year professional career and Roy Gerela's field goal.

On a first down play at the New England 34, defensive tackle Joe Greene deflected a Steve Grogan pass attempt into the arms of Greenwood, who scampered 16 yards to paydirt at 9:17. Gerela added a 35-yard field goal with 34 seconds remaining in the quarter.

The Patriots finally dented Pittsburgh's vaunted defense with 1:15 left in the third quarter on Smith's 41-yard field goal.

Kick return sparks Eagles' win

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Rookie Wilbert Montgomery returned a kickoff 90 yards for a touchdown Sunday night to ignite a Philadelphia comeback that gave the Eagles a 28-24 pre-season victory over the previously unbeaten Denver Broncos.

Denver dominated the first period and had just taken a 10-0 lead when Montgomery, a sixth-round draft choice from Abilene Christian, took a kickoff on a bounce on his 10 and raced down the sideline.

Eagles' quarterback Ron Jaworski then directed two long second-quarter drives and passed for two 19-yard touchdowns to give Philadelphia a 21-10 halftime lead.

Late in the third quarter the Eagles used a recovery by Frank LeMaster of a fumble by punt returner Rick Upchurch to set up a scoring drive that culminated early in the fourth quarter with a two-yard scoring run by Art Green to widen their lead to 28-10.

Denver rebounded with two touchdowns — a 20-yard pass from quarterback Norris Wess to Lonnie Perrin and a six-yard keeper by Wess to narrow the margin to 28-24 in the fourth quarter.

The Broncos threatened to pull the game out with less than two minutes left when quarterback Ron Walton fumbled and Denver recovered on its 43. They quickly moved to the Eagles' 26 where three passes failed. With 22 seconds left, defensive end Carl Hall sacked Wess.

Montgomery's touchdown run was the first time since September, 1968 that the Eagles had returned a kickoff for a score during the pre-season or regular season.

Denver scored first on Jim Turner's 26-yard field goal and made it 10-0 late in the first quarter when Perrin plunged two yards for a touchdown.

the rest of the way to win the set.

Dibbs broke Stockton early and continually tormented the eighth-seeded Texan by catching up to his drop shots and returning them deep.

In a quarter-final match under the lights, 16th-seeded Jamie Fillo of Chile ousted fellow countryman Patricio Cornejo, 6-2, 6-1.

Fillo, who upset second-seeded Brian Gottfried Saturday, ran Cornejo all over the court throughout the match with a steady diet of topspin volleys. Fillo recorded four service breaks in the match and ended the affair with a blistering ace.

Poland's Wojtek Fibak drew a bye into the semifinals when top-seeded Jimmy Connors had to withdraw from the tournament Saturday due to a back injury. Connors checked out of his Newton hotel room Sunday but did not say where he was headed.

Dibbs will face Fillo in one of Monday's semifinal matches while Orantes will square off against Fillo in the other.

Orantes, Dibbs advance

BROOKLINE, Mass. (UPI) — Third-seeded Manuel Orantes, the top surviving seeded player, breezed through his quarterfinal match at the U.S. Professional Tennis Tournament Sunday, downing Colombia's Ivan Molina, 6-4, 6-2.

In the other quarter-final match, fourth-seeded Eddie Dibbs of Miami Beach, Fla., scored a straight-set victory over Texan Dick Stockton by the same score, 6-4, 6-2.

Orantes, making a strong recovery after undergoing arm surgery in July, has won eight straight sets in the tournament since losing the first set in an opening-round victory over Englander John Lloyd.

Admittedly sluggish in the 90-degree heat, Orantes struggled in the first set, but he broke Molina twice in the first three games of the second set and won the next four games.

Dibbs and Stockton played head-to-head in the first set of their match, but Dibbs finally served a service break in the fifth game and held serve the rest of the way to win the set.

Cosmos win soccer title

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Giorgio Chinaglia scored on a header with 12:41 left in the game Sunday to give the Cosmos a 2-1 victory over Seattle for the North American Soccer League championship in Soccer Bowl '77.

Chinaglia's goal decided the dramatic and tense contest before a record NASL championship game crowd of 35,548. The game was the last in the league for Pele of The Cosmos unless the legendary player changes his mind about his announced retirement.

Despite the heroics of Chinaglia, who set a league playoff record with nine goals in six games, teammate Steve Hunt was named the game's outstanding player.

Hunt scored an unassisted goal before the game 20 minutes old when he caught Seattle goalie Tony Chursky careless in front of his own goal mouth and stole the ball and drilled it from about five feet for the game's first score.

Hunt also served a perfect pass for Chinaglia's header that won the game.

Lauda takes Dutch Prix

ZANDVOORT, The Netherlands (UPI) — Niki Lauda, driving another perfectly-judged race in his Ferrari, held off the closing challenge of Frenchman Jacques Laffite in his Ligier Sunday to win the Dutch Formula 1 Grand Prix by 1.9 seconds.

The Austrian, notching his third win of the season, boosted his lead in the world championship race to 21 points and, with only four races remaining, appeared to have locked up his second world title. He has 61 points to the 42 of South African Jody Scheckter, who brought his Wolf into third place when the leading cars dropped out steadily.

"You can never say the world championship is yours until you have the trophy in your hands," said Lauda, who set a lap record of 1:19.50 for the 2.6-mile track as he battled to hold his lead against Laffite.

"There are four races left and now I must make sure I drive steadily and then the title will be mine."

The race, watched by a crowd of 70,000 standing on the sand dunes beside the North Sea, was packed with incidents.

James Hunt brought his McLaren through from the second row of the grid to lead pole-sitter Mario Andretti's JPS Lotus into the first curve. The Briton held the lead for four laps, but then Andretti tried to overtake him on the outside of the light curve and collided with the McLaren, which broke its suspension.

Andretti managed to continue but for the fourth consecutive race blew his engine, eight laps later.

Hunt stalked down the pit lane barefooted to confront the 37-year-old American as the Nazareth, Pa. driver walked back from his ill-fated Lotus. The pair argued for about two minutes and Hunt was clearly upset because the crash had robbed him of any slender hope he still had of retaining his title.

"He tried to pass me on the outside where it was impossible," said Hunt. "Speak to Andretti. He's making all the noise and people who make the noise usually are in the wrong."

The collision left Laffite — driving his spare, short wheelbase car after his prime Ligier developed an oil leak in the final unofficial practice in the lead, but Lauda used the Ferrari's higher top speed to overtake the Frenchman in the pit straightaway.

Fidrych out for year

DETROIT (UPI) — The sophomore season of Mark "The Bird" Fidrych ended abruptly Sunday when Detroit Tigers officials decided to let him leave the team so he could rest his ailing right shoulder.

Fidrych, the 1976 Rookie of the Year and the ace of the young Tiger starting staff, has not pitched since he developed tendonitis July 12. He was placed on the disabled list July 20 and his repeated attempts to resume throwing have been aborted because of the lingering pain.

"Mark has shown some improvement lately," said Tigers' General Manager Jim Campbell. "But we feel today's decision will remove all temptation to use his services prematurely and will safeguard his future."

Campbell said the team hopes the flamboyant, 22-year-old crowd favorite will be able to test the arm in the Florida Instructional League in late October. He said three orthopedic surgeons have examined Fidrych and concurred in the diagnosis of tendonitis and the recommendation for rest.

The decision, made after a meeting involving Campbell, Manager Ralph Houk, team physician Dr. Clarence Livingston and Fidrych, was the final blow in a rocky season for the Bird.

He injured his left knee in spring training and underwent surgery a week before the start of the regular season. The knee healed, however, and Fidrych made his first start May 27. After two straight losses he won six straight games, then lost two more. His ERA for the year was 2.69.

Fidrych last year was 19-4, posting a league-leading 2.34 ERA.

We don't know how to relax anymore

By ARTHUR J. SNIDER
© 1977 Chicago Daily News

Racketball is the fastest-growing American sport. The reason: You can play it in 45 minutes or less.

Golf is losing popularity. It takes too long — most of an afternoon.

An expert on behavior sees these as symptoms of the attitude toward leisure today. People have been told there is a leisure explosion and they want to cram as much activity into their free periods as possible. They pick those that are done quickly, then hurry on to something else.

"People seem to be doing everything they can to take up any slack, to take on one more sport, one more hobby, one more trip, one more more athletic contest," said Dr. Geoffrey C. Godbey of Penn State University.

Gone is the day when leisure was a relaxed state, getting into a hammock in the back yard for a couple of hours. In our current value system, we can't afford to appear to be lazy. To loaf, to goof off, to do nothing is increasingly suspect. We must be hyperactive. We can't just "pass time," he said.

In European countries, there are walkways, malls and parks equipped with benches to slouch — sit and look at attractive gardens. Their assumption is not that a person must be actively occupied every second, which seems to be the case with us.

Many zones are being replaced by drive-through animal farms. More and more people visit our national parks and never get out of their car. Leisure must be conveniently packaged.

"Leisure in the sense of tranquility, serenity and peace almost escapes us completely," said the expert. "We can't sit in a comfortable area among trees without having to apologize for it. We can't stop and smell the roses."

With all of its shortcomings, television once served an important purpose in bringing the family together around a set for an evening of comfortable relaxation. This is especially useful now with mother working and the family seldom seeing one another for more than a few fleeting minutes.

But now, with two and three television sets in a home, family members often watch TV in the same room, but not together.

Our work ethic dictates that we fulfill in our children that work comes first and leisure should be scheduled around it. Leisure is what's left over," said Godbey.

"We give students career and vocational guidance, but not avocational guidance. We need to teach children to find fulfillment in the leisure as well as in their professional life. It is as important for students in a course in geography to know about the tourist characteristics of a country as to know its principal agricultural products."

There is less leisure explanation that people have been led to believe, said Godbey. While the average work week had been going down since the Industrial Revolution, it has largely leveled off since 1940.

Where unions have negotiated a shorter work week, as in the case of electricians in New York City where the work week is 25 hours, most of them work overtime or take a second job.

Another factor is the huge increase in jobs in which people provide services rather than goods. It's hard to cut the time commitments of a salesman. In addition, more people are doing more reading — and homework to increase their chances of promotion on the job, he observed.

Reds blast Phillies 9-0

CINCINNATI (UPI) — George Foster slammed four home runs, including a grand slam, to lead the Cincinnati Reds to a 9-0 romp over the Philadelphia Phillies behind the seven-hit pitching of rookie Paul Moskau.

The victory was the fifth in a row for the Reds and gave them their 12th win in their last 15 games. Moskau, pitching his first career complete game, struck out six and walked none to even his record at 4-4.

"The Reds got to lose," Randy Lench for four runs in the first inning, two scoring on the first of Concepcion's two doubles and then added three more in the second on Foster's third homer off reliever Warren Brusstar. Foster's homer boosted his RBI total to 123, tying him in the majors.

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The Phillies were hit hard by the Reds' offense in the first inning, losing four runs and three hits. The Reds' offense was led by George Foster, who hit three home runs, including a grand slam, to lead the Reds to a 9-0 romp over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Dodgers rip Cards 11-0

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Steve Garvey drove in five runs with three doubles and two homers, including a grand slam in Los Angeles' seven-run seventh inning Sunday, and Don Sutton hurled a six-hit shutout to lead the Dodgers to an 11-0 rout over the St. Louis Cardinals.

In his final home 47th career shutout to tie Gaylord Perry for the most among active major-league pitchers, Sutton, 32, struck out five, walked none and kept Lou Brock off base in his three at-bats. Brock remained one stolen base short of equalling Ty Cobb's modern major-league record of 93. He was deprived of his last at-bat when he was ejected from the game in the eighth inning for arguing on a pitch.

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — The Cardinals were hit hard by the Dodgers' offense in the first inning, losing four runs and three hits. The Dodgers' offense was led by Steve Garvey, who hit three home runs, including a grand slam, to lead the Dodgers to an 11-0 romp over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Pirates cut Phils lead

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — The Pittsburgh Pirates, with Jim Rooker spacing seven hits and Fernando Gomez slamming a three-run homer in the third, Sunday trimmed the San Diego Padres 10-1 and moved to within 3½ games of first-place Philadelphia in the NL East.

It was the fourth straight win for the Pirates who have picked up four full games in the past four days.

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — The Pirates were hit hard by the Padres' offense in the first inning, losing four runs and three hits. The Padres' offense was led by Fernando Gomez, who hit three home runs, including a grand slam, to lead the Padres to a 10-1 romp over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Yanks nip Rangers 1-0

NEW YORK (UPI) — Graig Nettles tripled with one out in the sixth inning and Reggie Jackson singled him home for the game's only run Sunday when the New York Yankees defeated the Texas Rangers 1-0 behind the two-hit pitching of Ron Guidry.

Guidry's performance raised his record to 11-6 and was his fifth complete game of the year. He struck out eight while leading a walk and at one point retired 16 straight Rangers between hits.

Dock Ellis, now 7-11, allowed the Yankees only five hits but issued four walks and was rescued four times by double plays. Nettles' triple in the sixth appeared at first to be a homer but bounced off the glove of centerfielder Juan Beniquez, who leaped high against the wall. After Ellis retired Thurman Munson on a foul pop, Jackson lofted a 34-pitch into shallow center for a single.

Ruth down, Aaron to go

TOKYO (UPI) — Japan's home run king Sadaharu Oh clouted his 75th career homer Sunday, one short of Hank Aaron's record of 755 homers, as the Yomiuri Giants blanked the Yakult Swallows 4-0 in the Central League pro baseball game before a capacity crowd of 65,000 at Jingu Stadium.

For the 32-year-old Oh, the Giants' first baseman, it was his 38th homer of the season. He has been playing for the Giants since 1959.

Spectators refused to leave until Oh's last trip to the plate, in the top of the ninth inning. Oh, however, grounded out and failed to tie Aaron's record.

US men swimmers romp, East German girls breeze

EAST BERLIN (UPI) — Three world marks tumbled Sunday when the United States, led by a stunning record performance from their 400 meter freestyle relay quartet, defeated East Germany 176 points to 168 after a two-day meet between the world's strongest swimming nations.

In a historic swim, East Germany's Christiane Knacke broke the one-minute barrier in the women's 100 meter butterfly for the first time ever, clocking 59.78 seconds to surpass the old record held by fellow countrywoman Kornelia Ender, who posted a 1:00.13 at the Montreal Olympics.

East Germany's Ulrike Tauber improved her own world record for the second time in a fortnight when she notched a 2:15.85 in the women's 200 meter individual medley.

At the European Championships in Jönköping in Sweden earlier this month she posted a 2:15.85, beating the 2:16.96 record she set in July.

The Americans then set the most stunning record of the three. The 400 meter freestyle relay team of Jack Babashoff, Joe Belmont, Rick DeMont and Jim Montgomery was clocked in 3:21.11, knocking more than three seconds off the old world standard of 3:24.87 set by an American team in 1976.

Babashoff led off the team with a 50.31 leg. Belmont posted 50.45 and DeMont swam 50.40 before Jim Montgomery scorching the pool for a last leg of 49.95.

In the men's 100 meter backstroke, Bob Jackson came home to win by almost a second in 57.79 seconds, beating East Germany's Lutz Wenzel, who posted a 58.74.

In the men's 1,500 meters, Brian Goodell came home in 15:27.98, well short of his own world record of 15:02.40. But he could console himself with having improved his own 400 meter freestyle record Saturday, posting 3:51.56. He set his earlier record of 3:51.93 at the Montreal Olympics.

The women's 400 meter medley relay team of Linda Jezek, Tracy Caulkins, Wendy Boglioli and Stephanie Wilkins lost by almost nine seconds to the East German squad, which posted a 4:16.70. The Americans only managed 4:19.51.

In the diving events, East Germany triumphed by 25 points to 19, taking the women's springboard (Christa Kocher) and the men's high diving (Falk Hoffmann).

The American men Sunday won six out of the seven swimming events, equalling their performance on the first day of the meet Saturday. The women, who could only take two out of the seven events from the East German squad, fared even worse Sunday, finishing the day without a win.

ST. PAUL, Minn. (UPI) — Bonnie Lauer, a 26-year-old Michigan State graduate, knocked in six birdies Sunday en route to a 67 and a two-stroke triumph over Laura Baugh in the $55,000 Patty Berg Golf Classic.

Lauer's 6-under-par final round gave her a 54-hole total of 212, 7-under-par, enabling her to win a duel between two golfers who had never won a tournament before. Baugh bogeyed two holes on the back nine to finish with 72, 1-under-par, and a 54-hole total of 214.

Lauer, the 1976 rookie of the year, had opened with a 70 but slipped to a 2-over-par 75 in Saturday's round.

Germany top rowing

AMSTERDAM (UPI) — The East German rowing machine won medals in all eight men's finals of the World Rowing Championships Sunday and underlined its supremacy by winning the prestigious eight final by more than a length.

Scoping up all six gold medals in the women's finals Saturday, East Germany amassed an impressive collection of 11 gold medals, two silvers and one bronze in the nine-day championships on the 2,000-meter Bosbaan Canal course outside Amsterdam.

Only the double sculls, the coxless pairs and the coxed pairs events eluded the winning ways of the East German Men Sunday as they ground their way relentlessly to gold.

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Rico Carly drove in five runs with a pair of homers and his second triple since 1972 and Ron Fritts smacked a three-run Homer Sunday to spark the Cleveland Indians to a 10-6 victory over the Seattle Mariners.

DETROIT (UPI) — Jason Thompson hit his 35th home run and Fred Patrick committed two key errors Sunday to help the Detroit Tigers score a mistake-filled 12-9 victory over the Angels.

Bobby Bonds hit two home runs, each with a man on, to take the AL lead with 33 for the year but his muf of Thompson's double while fielding it off the wall in the sixth brought in the run which snapped a 9-9 tie.

ATLANTA (UPI) — Rowland Office drove in three runs with a homer and a double and Eddie Solomon won his fourth game Sunday leading the Atlanta Braves to a 6-4 triumph over the New York Mets.

The Braves touched Nino Espinosa, 6-11, for one run in the first when Jerry Royster singled, went to second on a groundout by Jeff Burroughs and scored on Willie Montanez' single.

TORONTO (UPI) — Earl Williams stroked a run-scoring double in the sixth inning and Mitchell Page slugged his 14th homer of the season in the eighth Sunday when the Oakland A's downed the Toronto Blue Jays 6-2 behind the six-hit pitching of Vida Blue.

OAKLAND (UPI) — The A's were hit hard by the Blue Jays' offense in the first inning, losing four runs and three hits. The Blue Jays' offense was led by Earl Williams, who hit three home runs, including a grand slam, to lead the Blue Jays to a 6-2 romp over the Oakland A's.

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Rico Carly drove in five runs with a pair of homers and his second triple since 1972 and Ron Fritts smacked a three-run Homer Sunday to spark the Cleveland Indians to a 10-6 victory over the Seattle Mariners.

DETROIT (UPI) — Jason Thompson hit his 35th home run and Fred Patrick committed two key errors Sunday to help the Detroit Tigers score a mistake-filled 12-9 victory over the Angels.

Bobby Bonds hit two home runs, each with a man on, to take the AL lead with 33 for the year but his muf of Thompson's double while fielding it off the wall in the sixth brought in the run which snapped a 9-9 tie.

ATLANTA (UPI) — Rowland Office drove in three runs with a homer and a double and Eddie Solomon won his fourth game Sunday leading the Atlanta Braves to a 6-4 triumph over the New York Mets.

The Braves touched Nino Espinosa, 6-11, for one run in the first when Jerry Royster singled, went to second on a groundout by Jeff Burroughs and scored on Willie Montanez' single.

TORONTO (UPI) — Earl Williams stroked a run-scoring double in the sixth inning and Mitchell Page slugged his 14th homer of the season in the eighth Sunday when the Oakland A's downed the Toronto Blue Jays 6-2 behind the six-hit pitching of Vida Blue.

OAKLAND (UPI) — The A's were hit hard by the Blue Jays' offense in the first inning, losing four runs and three hits. The Blue Jays' offense was led by Earl Williams, who hit three home runs, including a grand slam, to lead the Blue Jays to a 6-2 romp over the Oakland A's.

TORONTO (UPI) — The Blue Jays were hit hard by the A's offense in the first inning, losing four runs and three hits. The A's offense was led by Vida Blue, who pitched a six-hit shutout, to lead the A's to a 6-2 romp over the Blue Jays.

Yarborough wins at 79 m.p.h.

BRISTOL, Tenn. (UPI) — Chevrolet driver Cale Yarborough pushed his car past Darrell Waltrip on lap 335 Sunday and won the Volunteer 400 NASCAR race with an average speed of just 79.72 mph.

Caution flags kept the speed low for the last 34 laps as a rain shower fell on the Bristol International Speedway, where Yarborough has won the last four events.

NEWPORT, R.I. (UPI) — Enterprise broke a toggle holding her headstay Sunday still going on to repair the broken anchor bolt on Enterprise's headstay, a part of the rigging which supports the mast. Finally, the New York Yacht Club Selection Committee scrubbed the contest.

At one point, the committee radioed to see if Independence wanted to come out and duel Courageous. But her skipper, Ted Hood, declined since work was in progress on Independence during her day off.

Surface coal mining assures Wyoming development

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (UPI) — Carter Mining's first surface mine begins operations this month near the small northeast Wyoming community of Gillette.

"Carter is only the first to begin operations. There are 19 firms with federal coal leases in the area which has some of the richest coal reserves in the country, and Carter is opening only one of three coal pits it plans to dig on its 16,000 leased acres."

The area is so rich in coal, workers digging a solid waste landfill site recently hit coal. "It's just like the stories of striking oil when all you need is water," said Mike Enzi, mayor of Gillette.

There have been fears of the effect both of a sudden increase in population and of what the mining will do to the land in the energy-rich Powder River Basin.

How do Gillette's residents feel about it? The answer, Enzi says, no longer matters.

Development will occur no matter how they feel.

"The community is in the position of no longer hassling about whether to have development, but how to handle it — and that's a big step forward," he said.

The first mine north of Gillette, named the Rawhide, will employ about 250 miners, said Jerry Goodrich, regulatory affairs manager for Carter.

The second mine, the Caballo Mine 17 miles south of Gillette, is expected to open in 1979. The third mine east of Gillette still is in the preliminary planning stages. They will be area pit mines. A pit is dug and the coal taken, then the pit moves forward along the coal seam. The mined land behind, said Goodrich, is to be backfilled and reclaimed to its original use — primarily grazing.

Although Goodrich would not release the actual construction costs for building offices, silos, railroad loops, and conveyor systems needed to process the coal, he said construction of a large surface mine in Wyoming averages about $40 million to $50 million.

The 12 million tons of coal expected annually from the Rawhide mine by 1982 will be shipped to Indiana, Michigan, Nebraska and Wisconsin.

"We'd sure sell it in Wyoming if we had a customer," Goodrich said.

Each pit will disturb about 60-80 acres of land annually. Morton May, a professor at the University of Wyoming, has been hired to help with plans for reclamation of the mined land. He said the land disturbed one year will be reclaimed in about two years.

The amount of land out of agricultural use at any one time, May said, will total about 500 acres. He said the figure includes the land used for such facilities as offices. And he said the plan is to return the land to its highest historical use by making it suitable for game as well as livestock.

"I think we can totally reclaim the land — not just reestablish vegetation but reestablish it for grazing — in five years," Goodrich said. "There's no question we can reclaim the land to as good or better condition and anyone who says otherwise doesn't want to be bothered with facts."

One group which says otherwise is the Powder River Basin Resource Council, an environmental group of 550 area residents.

"We'd like to see reclamation demonstrated before committing thousands of acres," said the group's spokesman, Randall Cox.

Cox said Carter hit an underground cistern of storage water when starting its Rawhide Mine. Goodrich said the mine for awhile and losing the water for future use.

"The problem is they coal companies) interfere with natural groundwater resources," he said. "They can dry up water wells and stream channels for agricultural and municipal use."

He argued for hydrological studies of mine sites, including the characteristics of adjacent land, before digging.

Robert Sundin, administrator of the State Department of Environmental Quality, said Carter has met all state requirements regarding submission of a proper land reclamation plan and has made "a noticeable attempt" to keep the state agency informed of its progress.

Citizens for Orderly Energy Development, a group of landowners in the Powder River Basin who supported planned development, also believes reclamation will not be a substantial stumbling block.

"I'm damn mad that people back East who do not know our community are trying to tell us how to plan our future," said the group's spokesman, Vincent Johnston. "It's the people who don't live here who jump all over the energy companies."

"We're enjoying the impact — it should be called prosperity, not impact."

Johnston said his group is not concerned about the impact of population increases, expected due to energy development — Gillette's population, now at 11,200, is expected to reach 35,000 by 1985.

"This part of the country has been wanting jobs for its young people for decades," Johnston said. "Mining development gives us the chance, so our kids can leave and get educated and come back here to live."

Mayor Enzi said Carter is only a part of the impact problem, but it has implied a commitment to the community by building its national mining headquarters in Gillette. "They do know they're causing problems and want to help out," he said. "They are volunteering a lot of technical expertise to help our landfill plan meet Environmental Protection Administration requirements."

Gov. Ed Herschler and State Treasurer Ed Witzberger both believe Carter has made an effort to be a good corporate citizen of Wyoming.

"Carter has shown an interest in helping Gillette cope with the effects of impact," Herschler said, while Witzberger claims the company has a positive attitude about the role it should play in helping the city finance capital improvements.

Enzi said Carter has suggested guaranteeing loans for the city and possibly making small grants.

Housing is a major concern and Carter has developed one subdivision in cooperation with some other coal companies. "We help the Chamber of Commerce prepare housing surveys to forecast needs, economic outlooks to determine how much money the city needs for municipal facilities."

"We don't feel that it's a function to rebuild the community, but it is our function to help, following the lead of the people who administer town," said Goodrich.

Gillette needs a new sewer treatment plant — about $1 million — and a new source of water — at least $17 million, said Enzi, who moved to the community in 1969 and says he is one of the planners.

Residents are helping their passage of a one percent optional sales tax to increase revenue and the city hopes to receive state impact assistance funds.

"We know we have to take care of 35,000 people by then and we're going to do it," said.
