Overdraft aid to Lance hinted

WASHINGTON (UPI) — LaBelle Lance's bank overdrafts in excess of $100,000 in 1974 may have illegally financed the gubernatorial campaign of her husband, Bert Lance, a federal bank regulator testified today.

The testimony from Robert Serino to a Senate committee came as embattled budget director Lance sharply attacked calls for his resignation based on what he called "allegations, innuendos and hearsay."

(Related story P-A2)

Serino, enforcement chief at the comptroller of the currency office, said he had discussed Mrs. Lance's overdrafts with the Justice Department.

Serino told the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee his inquiry was based on newspaper interviews with Mrs. Lance in which she allegedly said the overdrafts in her personal account went to Lance's unsuccessful campaign for the Democratic nomination for Georgia governor in 1974.

Lance himself will be questioned by the committee Thursday and Friday.

Serino testified that it appeared "certain of LaBelle's overdrafts had gone to the campaign." He said he had discussed the matter with the Justice Department in recent days and that it was his feeling "certain investigation is needed in that area."

Mrs. Lance's overdrafts might have violated a federal law which prohibits national banks from contributing to political campaigns. In order to convict a person for such a violation, it would have to be proved that the overdrafts constituted a willful advance from the bank through Mrs. Lance to the campaign.

Lance said today calls for his resignation are based on "allegations, innuendos, and hearsay," and warned such calls before he can defend himself might harm government's ability to attract executives.

"How do we get people to be willing to serve?" Lance asked reporters outside his home on the eve of his appearance before a Senate committee to answer allegations of improper personal banking practices.

"Scrutiny, investigation — all that's fine," said President Carter's longtime personal friend, who has rejected resignation demands over charges involving big loans and overdrawn checking accounts while he headed two Georgia banks.

"But when you've gone through it, you ought to be able to present your side of the case in a sense of fairness — and be heard out before any decision is made."

The Senate Governmental Affairs Committee, meanwhile, resumed hearings today with testimony scheduled from seven present and former Justice Department and FBI officials.

In his brief televised exchange with reporters as he left for his office, Lance denied that he was taking direct aim at Senate Democratic Leader Robert Byrd and several other senators, who have said Lance's effectiveness to run the federal budget has already been destroyed.

"I'm not saying anything about anybody. I'm talking about the whole situation as it relates to the future of our system," said Lance.

Sen. Richard Schweiker, R-Pa., today added his name to the list of those calling for Lance's resignation. "If the Senate knew half as much in January as it knows now, he never would have been confirmed," said Schweiker in a statement.

"I sense the beginning of the same sort of confusion and preoccupation downtown (at the White House) as we saw during Watergate," he said.

Lance, talking to reporters outside his house, said: "One more time, let me tell you how I feel about that. Because I think this is what this is all about.

"If you can take allegations and innuendos and heresay and everything else ...and print them in the paper and show them on television and then say 'that's a fact' — and without having a chance to refute that and have my own day in court — and then be defaced with the charge that because of that my effectiveness has been damaged or crippled, then we're in bad shape in this country."

Fire fighter strike prospects uncertain

By BOB ZUCKERMAN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Fire fighters' association president Lloyd Almand said Tuesday he was not sure if fire fighters would strike if an agreement cannot be reached in stalled contract talks with the city.

Almand said fire fighters would meet Thursday night to discuss the more than a dozen issues including salaries still unresolved and decide what to do. The current contract runs out Sept. 30.

He said he was "hopeful" city officials would present a new contract offer based on what was proposed by a fact-finding panel earlier this week.

But city councilmen approved a city budget Monday night which would only allow fire fighters' salaries to be adjusted quarterly on the basis of the Consumer Price Index, and fire fighters have rejected that proposal.

Because the council has given him no instruction, City Manager Jean Milar said he was writing up no alternate contracts.

Should the council give him no instructions by Oct. 1, fire fighters would be paid "like any other city employe," meaning their current salaries would only be adjusted quarterly on the basis of the Consumer Price Index, Milar said.

Other contract clauses fire fighters have asked be maintained or added would not be in effect, he said.

A fact-finding panel headed by Perry Swisher, Lewiston, recommended the city continue adjusting fire fighters' salaries on the basis of the Consumer Price Index but said bases should be adjusted Oct. 1 to $1,125 for captains, $1,040 for drivers, $980 for fire fighters and $1,050 for alarm operators.

Though fire fighters had asked for more, Almand called the fact-finder's recommendation a "fair" one, and one which fire fighters "could definitely live with."

However, city officials said they could not agree to such high raises in the fire department because the raises would not be fair to other city employes, who are only receiving quarterly index adjustments.

Councilman Stephen R. Lincoln said it was possible the council would consider recommendations the fact-finding panel made on other issues, though he said he was unsure if they would agree to all fact-finding recommendations other than on salaries.

YWCA president testifies at closed Henson hearing

By BOB ZUCKERMAN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — YWCA president Terrill "Terry" L. Castaneda testified for more than four hours Tuesday at a closed preliminary hearing for Deborah A. Henson, charged with embezzling about $2,800 from local YWCA coffers.

While Castaneda, the only witness called Tuesday, and County Prosecutor Frank J. Dykas, would not discuss the testimony, defense attorney William Hollifield said Castaneda told the court YWCA financial records had been "kept poorly," before the charges were leveled against Henson.

Castaneda also described "her version of the events" the week before charges were leveled against Henson, Hollifield said. He said he could not be more specific about Castaneda's testimony.

Both the prosecutor and defense attorney said Castaneda's testimony had helped and not damaged their cases.

Dykas said he planned to call city police detective Gene Ritchie, Esther Simpson, YWCA board member; Phyllis Gerber, YWCA treasurer; and Sally Molyneux, former YWCA director, to testify today.

The hearing, to determine whether enough evidence is available for Henson to stand trial, is expected to continue through tomorrow.

Speaking publicly for the first time since the charges were leveled against her, Henson said this morning she had requested her attorney to ask that the preliminary hearing be closed so that the pressure of having all other YWCA board members watching would not occur.

Though Hollifield commented, Dykas said he could not discuss the testimony publicly because the state lawyers' code did not allow him to.

Magistrate Judge Paul Smith, who is hearing the case, said Tuesday night his order excluding the public from the hearing and the witnesses from talking to each other was not a "gag" order.

Henson resigned May 27 and reportedly left the state. The prosecutor filed embezzlement charges against her a few days later.

Henson said this morning she did not leave Twin Falls for Sacramento, Calif., to visit her parents until the day after the complaint was filed against her.

Hollifield said earlier Henson contacted police while in California. On July 5, she turned herself in to police. She was later released on bond.

Henson was originally charged with 12 felony counts of embezzlement. During the hearing Tuesday, two new felony counts were added and three were dropped, the prosecutor said.

Speech in House undercut Harding

By DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News writer

BOISE — Idaho's Second Congressional District had not sent a Democrat to Congress in a quarter of a century in 1960.

So when Democrat Ralph Harding of Blackfoot won the election that year, defeating incumbent Republican Congressman Hamer Budge, more than a few eyebrows were raised.

And when the district returned to Republicanism after a mere four years, many assumed it was just the Grand Old Party regaining turf rightfully its own.

The story isn't that simple, but the above explanation for Harding's defeat isn't all that far from the truth either. Running as a Democrat in southern Idaho has always been substantially a leap of faith, an action taken more on what instincts suggest than facts reveal. With the exception of a six year period at the peak of Franklin Roosevelt's New Deal — when Republicans were temporarily (and narrowly) voted into the minority — Ralph Harding claims the distinction of being the only Democrat to slug his way to victory in Idaho's Second District.

Harding's congressional career remained relatively tranquil for his first few years in office. Earning a reputation as a bright, middle of the road Democrat, Harding worked at representing the interests of his agricultural district. His elections were largely due, observers then said, to the hard campaigning and personal charm of this young man. Indeed, it was pointed out, Harding's first election made him the youngest representative in the 87th Congress.

But in late 1963, former Secretary of the Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson attended a public dinner with Robert Welch, head of the John Birth Society. At that dinner, Welch accused former President Dwight D. Eisenhower of consciously committing treasonous acts to further a worldwide Communist conspiracy.

Following those statements Benson, who had served as Eisenhower's secretary of agriculture, was asked by newsmen if he agreed with Welch's charges. Benson waffled, stating most of his agreement with Eisenhower had been on agricultural matters.

The statements infuriated Congressman Harding, who made a major speech on the floor of the House of Representatives attacking both Benson and the John Birch Society. Harding also accused Benson of using his high position with the Mormon Church to further the Birch Society, an organization he said was comprised of "extremists." The speech by Welch, Harding added, was an insult to a former president and a great American.

RALPH HARDING IN 60's
... now Boise businessman

That speech marked the beginning of the end for Ralph Harding. "I was accused of being left wing, an extreme liberal and a Communist sympathizer," Harding, now a Boise businessman, told the Times-News. "But the one that hurt me most personally was the charge that I wasn't a good Mormon, that I was an apostate because I criticized Ezra Taft Benson."

Harding said his opponent that year, Pocatello Republican George Hansen, "really took advantage of it and played it up. He said my criticism of the John Birch Society was fighting the fireman rather than the fire. That one thing alone led to my defeat."

Harding's defeat took place in the context of one of the nation's more bitter presidential elections. Amid Lyndon Johnson's charges that Barry Goldwater was a warmonger likely to lead the nation into nuclear oblivion, supporters of the Arizona senator charged Johnson with being every shade of pink if not a card carrying red.

With such charges issuing from both national political parties, verbal excesses from local candidates were to be expected. But in southern Idaho — one of only 12 congressional districts outside of the deep south to vote for Goldwater — wild, unfounded charges became the rule rather than the exception. A full time organizer for the Birch Society worked the district against Harding, and a steady string of strident speakers appeared to warn of Democrat Harding's dangerous liberalism.

Kansas City cleaning up after flood; toll at 19

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — The deadliest flood waters in the city's history receded today, leaving behind millions of dollars in damages in mangled automobiles, mud-smeared homes and businesses.

The death toll stood at 19 but police feared more bodies might be found trapped in several flooded underground parking lots. Twenty-one persons have been reported missing.

Preliminary damage estimates ranged from $4 million to $7 million solely for Kansas City, Mo., property. No one could detail the extent of private property damage in the city and suburban areas of both Missouri and Kansas.

"They just got through pumping a garage out where they found 14 cars, but there were no bodies in them," Sgt. Jim Harmon said today of police operations in the Country Plaza.

"They were really surprised," he said. "They were so afraid they'd find at least one body because the water just smashed into those garages like a tidal wave.

"It happened so fast and it was about the time people would have been getting out of the movies," Harmon said. "This was the big fear — that people panicked and jumped into their cars trying to save them."

Harmon said officials were pumping water out of a few more underground garages and hoped to reach the cars in them by Thursday.

The death toll has surpassed the 18 recorded in the city's worst previous disaster, the billion-dollar 1951 flood.

"As of this morning, there were still 21 persons reported missing," Harmon said. "But that number can be misleading. Sometimes people call us when they can't reach a relative right away and then they never call us back when they find them. And they may have had trouble reaching someone right at first because some of the phone lines were down for a little while."

City officials said a flash flood of such magnitude probably would happen in the area only once in 500 years, but mathematical probabilities were of little consolation to the victims of the flooding that began Monday night and spilled its destruction into Tuesday's daylight hours.

At the height of the storm, crests of water 20 feet high surged through residential areas.

"Some of the rivers and streams are still above flood stage today, but there is no serious flooding expected," said Joe Prelce of the National Weather Service. "There may be some today but it would be of a very minor nature. It's going to be a pleasant mild day with no rain in the picture."

Powell admits Percy tip

WASHINGTON (UPI) — White House press secretary Jody Powell acknowledged today he tipped a reporter about allegations of improprieties by Sen. Charles H. Percy, the ranking Republican on the committee that will hear testimony Thursday from embattled budget director Bert Lance.

Powell told reporters at the White House today he had telephoned Chicago Sun-Times Washington bureau chief Loye Miller this week with information from an unnamed source regarding Percy's alleged misuse of corporate aircraft — a charge similar to those lodged against Lance.

Percy denied the charges and asked for an apology.

The Sun-Times reported today that Powell told the newspaper the Illinois senator had used planes, security guards and other facilities of the First National Bank of Chicago during his 1972 reelection campaign.

Recalling the conversation today, Powell told reporters he telephoned Miller and said: "I have something to pass along, just between you and me, that I thought might be worth checking on."

Powell also told the newspaper Percy allegedly traveled regularly on an airplane owned by Bell and Howell — the firm Percy headed until 1966. Percy denied the charge and said the company did not own a plane.

Percy said as soon as Powell is "absolutely convinced that there was not a foundation of any kind to the allegations and charges that he made and just as soon as he apologizes to me, as far as I am concerned the incident is closed."

Governmental Affairs Committee chairman Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., called the telephone call "a stupid thing to do."

Committee member John Heinz, R-Pa., called it a "dirty trick," and Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., Lance's staunchest defender on the committee said the action "is to be deplored."

Powell explained that he told Miller, "I don't know how much stock to put in" the information.

Asked if he passed along such rumors, Powell replied "sometimes I do," adding that he thought this was the way it was done in Washington.

A reporter asked Powell if he thought it was his role as press secretary to pass along such rumors.

"It happens all the time," Powell replied. Asked a second time, Powell said "It's certainly not my primary role."

Probe doors shut

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Leon Jaworski and the House Ethics Committee met in a surprise closed session today to discuss developments "in recent days and recent hours" in the South Korean influence buying probe.

The decision to go behind closed doors came as a surprise because the committee had announced its chief investigator would be making his remarks at an open meeting. Jaworski refused to tell reporters what he would say to the panel.

"I believe that, although I had originally planned an opening statement, the developments are such in recent days and recent hours that it would be much better for me to speak to the members in executive session," Jaworski said.

Before the meeting, sources close to the investigation said the committee was considering sending Jaworski to Seoul to question Tongsun Park if South Korea gave firm assurances in advance that the millionaire rice trader would cooperate fully.

Detroit race lined up

DETROIT (UPI) — Mayor Coleman A. Young and Ernest C. Browne Jr., victors in the primary for mayor of a city whose electorate is evenly split along racial lines, today started writing a new chapter in political history.

Young, 59, the first black mayor in Detroit's history, and Browne, 51, a black city councilman, handily defeated two white candidates in Tuesday's nonpartisan primary to begin a one-on-one confrontation for Detroit's top elected post.

The Nov. 8 general election will mark the first time two blacks have run against each other for mayor of a major city in the United States.

Young, elected just four years ago, ran well ahead of the field of 11 candidates with better than 54 per cent of the vote. Browne was a distant second with just over 21 per cent, but his strong showing among whites who make up half the city's electorate could spell trouble for Young.

With all but 4 per cent of the vote counted, Young had 157,341 votes, Browne 61,191, businessman Thomas Dailey 33,186 and Wayne State University law professor John Mogk 22,037.

Dailey and Mogk were seen as victims of a widely held view among Young opponents that no white candidate could unseat the incumbent.

Fact-finder's recommendations, agreed upon by at least two of the three fact-finders, include:

— Battalion chiefs be included in the bargaining unit. City officials argued battalion chiefs are supervisory personnel and therefore should not be in the union. Fire fighters have argued they are not supervisory personnel.

— New contract language be drafted to assure the city's authority to contract for services such as those which might be imposed by the Federal Aviation Administration, but language that was not so broad as to allow city officials to contract outside for city fire fighting services.

— An incentive system proposed by the city in an attempt to get fire fighters to come back to the station from home to fight a fire should not be a part of the contract.

— The $300 paid to the fire department for recreation and kitchen equipment should continue. City officials proposed it not be in the contract. Fire fighters asked that it remain.

— Fire fighters be given no increases in longevity pay, salary increases based on the number of years a fire fighter has worked. Fire fighters proposed an increase.

— Periodic physical exams requested by fire fighters should be covered in the contract, but dental insurance coverage should not. City officials said the city could not afford paying for physicals and dental insurance, because, to be fair, they would have to provide the same benefits to the more than 150 other city employes.

Fire fighters argued physicals were needed because of the dangerous nature of fire fighting and because fire fighters have a higher rate of heart-related deaths than other workers.

Speech costly for Harding

In November, George V. Hansen won his first term as congressman with a 3.2 per cent margin.

Though some have come close, no Democrat since Harding has been able to crack the GOP's hold on the Second District.

Harding, 48, today runs an estate planning and insurance business in Boise with former Minnesota Twins slugger Harmon Killebrew. And although he keeps a close eye on politics, Harding has ruled out future election bids for himself.

"I don't have any plans to run for office. My business is going well, and I enjoy working with Killebrew. Harmon turned down the job of managing the Texas Rangers recently, so I couldn't really quit the business," Harding said.

Harding noted most of his congressional service was under President John F. Kennedy, and recalled the times he met with the young chief executive. "I met with him once after we had a flood in eastern Idaho, and during the course of the conversation he cracked a joke to ease the tension," Harding laughed. "And wouldn't you know it, that was the picture that got released; it looked like we were laughing at the disaster."

Word of the President's assassination reached Congressman Harding while he was in Rupert. And like the rest of the nation, he was stunned.

"The news came over a radio while I was holding a constituent meeting," Harding said. "And I just couldn't believe it until the sheriff came in and said he was dead. I was in shock, I guess. I got in my car and started driving and realized I was driving down the wrong side of the interstate. I finally just stopped, pulled over to the side of the road and cried."

"I genuinely loved and respected President Kennedy," Harding added. "I think he would easily have been elected to a second term. He could have gone on to become president of the United Nations perhaps, and contributed so much to the world. That's why his death was such a tragedy and a waste."

Harding also served under President Lyndon Johnson, who he appraised with mixed feelings. Calling Johnson "one of the great majority leaders in the history of the United States Senate," Harding said Johnson "knew how to get things done."

But Johnson also "insisted on getting his own way, and if he didn't he could be very vindictive," Harding said, citing one personal example. "There was a wheat bill he wanted out of committee and I was opposed to it. One day my phone rang and it was President Johnson. 'Ralph,' he said, 'sometimes you just have to call on your friends for help.' Well, the bill finally passed and only five of us Democrats voted against it. And he never forgave me for that. When I was defeated I was in line to receive a very good appointment, a sub-cabinet level appointment, but President Johnson personally opposed it and stopped it."

Harding noted several changes have occurred in politics since his congressional defeat, praising the "opening up and cleansing effect" of Watergate. "When I was serving, the executive committee meetings of the Congress were secret, the doors were locked and you would be sworn to secrecy by the secretary. If the committee chairman read in Drew Pearson the next day anything that happened in the meeting, he'd go through the roof."

"Today," Harding added, those same meetings would be wide open not just to the press but to any American citizen."

But the former Democratic congressman blasted "the amount of money it costs today to run a campaign" as having "a terrible effect on our system." Campaign costs "have gotten way out of line," Harding said. "The fund raising and public relations have become too much of a business. It costs a minimum of $100,000 to run in his district for congress, and that's sad. I know many excellent candidates like Kelly Pearce and Darrell Manning who would run for congress if they had the finances to mount a campaign. Because there isn't a way to do it we wind up with people like our incumbent congressman, who don't care where they get their money as long as they get it. He's a professional begger. He might just as well be out with a tin cup and a pair of dark glasses and a cane."

Harding said "some system of public financing of congressional candidates, combined with limits placed on campaign expenses," might encourage "new and better candidates to run."

Harding hasn't served in Congress since 1964, but has refused to remain quietly on the sidelines. Since his years in Washington, he has run in a senatorial campign (in 1966 against Len B. Jordan), served as an assistant secretary of the Air Force and held the reins as Idaho's Democratic National Committeeman. He has also been mentioned as a possible congressional candidate for his old House seat. Along the way he has kept in touch with political figures at the state and national level.

Among those with whom he keeps in contact are former constituents.

"At least 10 times a week it seems people call and ask for help," Harding said. "They call to ask assistance in getting a passport expedited, or a small business loan approved or how to apply for these kinds of things. I was their congressman once, and if I can still help I'm glad to do what I can."

Harding has also kept a close eye on elected officials, appraising their conduct in office.

"I'm very impressed with President Carter," Harding said. "What I see and hear about him is good. In many ways he reminds me of John Kennedy; he's extremely bright and has been able to attract good people."

Harding also has good words for Gov. John V. Evans. "I was in the state legislature in 1954, from Oneida County. And that term I was in the House, John ran for the Senate from Oneida. He taught me how to campaign, and I know him to be a very capable, well-educated guy. If the Republicans think he's going to be easy to defeat they're in for a big surprise."

Cops kill escaped bull

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Police Tuesday shot and killed a large bull which had rammed four vehicles and a police car before being cornered near a North Portland power substation.

The bull was one of a herd of 53 bulls which escaped from the Pacific Meat Co. plant in Portland on Sept. 1 by pushing open a stockade gate. All of the other animals but one — which was seen charging across the Portland University campus Tuesday morning but managed to escape — were shot earlier, most of them on the morning of the escape.

The bull shot Tuesday was first sighted meandering down a North Portland boulevard, occasionally ramming a passing or parked car. Police first attempted to lasso the animal but when that failed, shot him

Panama invites UN vote observers

©N.Y. Times Service

WASHINGTON — Panama invited the United Nations Tuesday to send observers to its Oct. 23 plebiscite on the Panama Canal treaties and welcomed a "first-hand" investigation of human rights in that country by an agency of the Organization of American States.

Brig. Gen. Omar Torrijos Herrera, Panama's chief of government, extended the invitations in telegrams to Kurt Waldheim, secretary general of the United Nations, and Andres Aguilar, chairman of the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights.

Torrijos, who had joined President Carter to sign the new treaties in a Washington ceremony last week, made clear he was acting to blunt arguments by opponents of the pacts that the United States Senate should refuse to ratify them because of Panama's violations of human rights and because the national plebiscite would be rigged.

"There have been a number of unfounded and irresponsible charges made against my government about alleged violations of human rights," the general wrote to Aguilar, a distinguished Venezuelan jurist and diplomat.

"Panama is not perfect, but we do respect the human rights of all those people who live within our geography, and the new canal treaties are a symbol, to the world or our desire to eliminate discrimination and injustice," Torrijos added.

"We welcome a statement," the Panamanian leader said, "and a visit by the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights to see first hand the reality of our human rights policies. You are welcome to travel anywhere in Panama, to speak to anyone, and report to the world. I will give you the keys to our jails, and if you find any political prisoners, you can release them.

"I believe the role of the commission should not only be to investigate violations of human rights, but also to disprove unfounded charges. It is only by this approach that the hemisphere will be free of injustice, because here you will not find oppressors or people being abused," Torrijos said.

Referring to the plebiscite, which is required by Panama's constitution for the ratification of treaties, Torrijos wrote to Secretary General Waldheim: "That will be a day of transcendental significance to Panama and to the entire world.

"We welcome you to come here or to designate your representatives to see the people of Panama freely decide whether or not to approve the new treaties. We hope that your representatives will report to you and to the international community about the freedom with which Panamanians exercised their right to determine their destiny."

Carter administration officials, facing what they concede is an uphill fight to obtain approval of the treaties by the necessary two-thirds of the Senate, could not conceal their satisfaction at the actions of Torrijos, for which they had been hoping.

Facing problems

NORWEGIAN Prime Minister Odvar Nordli ponders a question at a press conference in Oslo Tuesday after his Labor Party and a three-party non-Socialist coalition both claimed victory in general elections. Today, the Liberal Party threw its two seats behind the coalition in an effort to break the stalemate.

German-terrorist standoff persists

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — Eleven imprisoned terrorists whose release is demanded by the kidnapers of a leading West German industrialist want to go to either South Yemen or North Korea, a well-informed source said today.

The 11 specified the Socialist nations in a message relayed to the kidnapers late Tuesday by the Federal Criminal Police through Swiss lawyer Denis Payot, who has acted as an intermediary, the source said.

Officially, the government said only that it had relayed the prisoners' answers to questions asked them.

But the government said earlier it would be unable to get a crew to fly the 11 terrorists abroad unless overflight and landing rights could be arranged beforehand.

Other than asking the prisoners where they wished to go, the government made no move toward meeting the kidnaper's demands, ignoring a fourth deadline of midnight Tuesday.

Police tightened security around the homes of political leaders considered potential targets of yet another terrorist attack. This reflected official fear that the kidnapers of Hanns-Martin Schleyer might try to abduct another public figure and then kill their first victim to underline their demands.

Schleyer was abducted Sept. 5.

Coils of barbed wire and extra guards surrounded the homes of prominent West Germans and security precautions were increased at public buildings.

The government has negotiated with the kidnapers through the Swiss lawyer but has shown no sign it will defy public opinion and free the imprisoned terrorists in exchange for Schleyer.

Working by searchlight, police Tuesday night placed barbed wire barriers around the homes of prominent persons considered in danger. Sandbags were placed around the sentry houses of police guards outside the houses.

UN splits on economics

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Rich and poor nations appear headed for a battle at the United Nations today over a Third World resolution criticizing the industrial West for not doing enough to create a new world economic order.

The split emerged Tuesday during a resumed General Assembly debate on the state of the world's haves and havenots. All parties agreed there was more progress to make but disagreed over how much already had been made.

The four-day session was called to wrap up last year's unfinished business so the assembly can be ready to face the host of fresh problems awaiting debate at its 1977 session, its 32nd, which opens Tuesday.

U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young pledged that the United States would do "all that it can" to create a new economic order, but Third World nations planned to press for adoption of a resolution underscoring their disappointment with the results of "North-South" conference in Paris.

The resolution was expected to recommend that, despite the "failure" of the Paris talks in June, the economic debate should continue with high priority at the United Nations.

A draft of the resolution, introduced by Pakistan, appeared headed for some tough bargaining in the General Assembly's Economic Committee, which will draft the final wording and send it back to the assembly for a vote Friday.

As introduced, the resolution said "no real progress was made" at the Paris talks.

Young said the United States was committed to the creation of a "new and equitable international economic order" and that it was "prepared to do all that it can to the construction of that order."

Young lamented the fact that the North-South dialogue failed to produce agreement on such crucial issues as debt sharing and energy cooperation. But he said he did not share the poor nations' assessment of the Paris talks as being a complete failure.

"The Conference did not accomplish everything for which we had hoped. But it marked an important step forward in creating an international economic system built on growth, equity and justice," he said.

The conference agreed to establish a common fund to stabilize commodity prices and to create a $1 billion special aid package for the poorest nations, the two most important results of the talks.

Talks set

LONDON (UPI) — Leaders of Britain's five-day-old bread strike agreed to meet a government arbitrator today but chances for a quick end to the nation's growing famine of loaves appeared slim.

Sam Maddox, general secretary of the Bakers' Union, said union leaders would meet today with Jim Mortimer, chairman of the government's Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service.

The 57,000-member Bakers' Union, whose walkout in a dispute with employers over holiday pay has knocked out 80 per cent of Britain's bread supplies, refused Tuesday to exempt independent bakeries from their picketing.

Egypt endorses US position on talks

CAIRO — Egyptian authorities view the United States call for Palestinian representation in Middle East peace talks as "a new opening" to the Palestine Liberation Organization.

"It's a new chance for the PLO to put their trust in the United States peace efforts and we hope they will take the risk," a senior Cairo official said Tuesday.

Egypt is the Arab country most strongly committed to the United States peace moves, and for weeks Egyptian leaders have been working to find a formula to bring the Palestinians into the peace process.

For a start, the Egyptians have urged the PLO to accept the United States bid for dialogue in exchange for acceptance of United Nations Resolution 242, which implies Israel's right to exist.

But even the most moderate PLO leaders have said that recognition of 242 without guarantees of their national rights would mean "suicide."

Egyptian government sources termed the State Department's declaration Monday on the need for Palestinian involvement in negotiations as "positive" and "timely."

He referred specifically to bilateral talks scheduled by President Carter and Secretary of States Cyrus R. Vance with the Arab and Israeli foreign ministers at the time of the United Nations General Assembly session. There will also be meetings of the Islamic and the nonaligned groups in New York at the same time.

Death probe planned

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — The government is preparing an inquiry into the death of Steve Biko, the founder of South Africa's black nationalist movement who died in jail during a hunger strike.

South Africans of all colors and top American officials expressed shock Tuesday upon learning that Biko, once touted by a white editor as South Africa's first black prime minister, had died of unknown causes following his eight-day hunger strike.

U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young in New York compared Biko's death with the assassinations of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. and President John F. Kennedy.

B&M uses only small, tasty pea beans.
B&M bakes them in a real brick oven.
B&M bakes them slowly for seven hours.
B&M bakes them in a rich, dark brown sugar sauce.
B&M bakes them with a hearty hunk of pork.
Making the taste a man comes home for isn't easy. That's why other beans take shortcuts. Like steaming their beans after only a quick bake in the can. Or adding starchy thickeners and coloring to look like B&M. But try their best, they just can't match B&M's authentic baked bean taste.
No wonder B&M is America's best selling baked bean.

Consider the ratio of safety-benefits

While air traffic at the Twin Falls airport escalates far above Federal Aviation Administration estimates, the newly-constructed control tower is in jeopardy of becoming just an empty shell.

Under increasingly stringent FAA air traffic use estimates the Twin Falls federally-funded traffic controllers may no longer meet the cost-benefit formula. If so, the controllers could be pulled out of service.

The closure may occur despite the fact that there were 66,049 takeoffs or landings (operations) during the previous 12-month period, a number that exceeds the FAA forecast for 1980 by 7,049 operations.

There are, of course, some fly-by-the-seat-of-their-pants pilots who would like to see the tower closed. It represents a nuisance for them to check with the tower before landing or taking off from such a podunk little country town as Twin Falls, Idaho.

Some FAA officials in Washington may feel the same way, but with the escalating use of this country airstrip, the safety of both private and commercial flights seems to demand just the opposite. Revised estimates of air traffic for 1980 may run as high as 86,000 operations, according to William Coons, local tower chief.

Whether Coons is padding the 1980 estimate to save the jobs of nine air traffic controllers at Twin Falls or not, the current statistics speak for themselves. The amount of traffic for the past 12 months is 112 per cent higher than the 1975 estimate made by the FAA for 1980.

Originally, the Aircraft Owners and Pilots Association (AOPA) asked the FAA to eliminate the Twin Falls tower because the group claims there isn't enough air traffic to justify the cost of salaries for the nine controllers — about $136,000 per year.

If the pilots can substantiate their claims that air traffic is too light to support the nine controllers economically, nobody would argue with that logic.

If the AOPA is using accurate figures.

The revised traffic patterns described by Mr. Coons tend to contradict the pilots association.

Safe and efficient operation of the Twin Falls airport hangs in the balance of the current haggling over the numbers game.

Some compromise solutions would also seem crucial to the issue, rather than demanding a cut and dried, black and white, whole hog operation of the tower or just leaving it to remind us of one more government boondoggle as it sits empty.

The Twin Falls air traffic control tower is a training facility. When the program runs at full strength there are four jouneymen, four trainees and one supervisor working there.

Coons suggests they could very easily cut down to six controllers and one chief. In fact, six and one is the authorized strength for the tower.

Logic would dictate that under rigid cost-cutting constraints, the contingent of controllers could be cut even further. Such personnel trimming should take place before closure of the tower. Training operations could be transferred to an airport with a more favorable "cost-benefit" ratio, to use the FAA terms.

The "safety-benefit" ratio of passengers and pilots who use the increasingly busy Twin Falls airport demands the air traffic control tower remain open.

Canal issue importance builds

By JAMES RESTON
©1977 N.Y. Times

WASHINGTON — The Panama Canal is gradually building into an issue of historic importance, and the thought in this corner is that when the decisive debate finally reaches the floor of the Senate in February or March, it should be carried to the American people on national television.

At least it is worth consideration. Many thoughtful people in the executive branch and the Congress will regard this not as a modest but a reckless proposal. Many of them thought the same when the television cameras were introduced into the committee hearings of the House and Senate during the travail of Watergate. They were sure, and I was with them, that televising the Nixon impeachment hearings in the House Committee room would encourage every blow-hard and show-off, and turn the democratic process into a theatrical circus. But it didn't work out that way.

The TV cameras, which often bring out the worst qualities of congressmen on back-home television, brought out their best when they were on national television discussing the historic question of the fate of a president.

They knew then that they were being watched and judged by a national audience, with history in the wings, and they rose to the occasion. They were not only conscientious, but in the process reminded the country that there were laws and rules in this democracy, and that responsible and intelligent members of the neglected House were determined to respect them.

In fact, this critical experiment of televised House hearings on the Nixon impeachment process was so orderly and dutiful that if Nixon had not finally had the good judgment to resign, the House would have impeached him and his trial in the Senate would probably have been televised.

The Panama Canal issue raises the question again. The opponents of the Canal treaties are calling for a national referendum or vote of the people to evade the constitutional treaty process in the Senate. There is something to this, but not much.

It is not a referendum or party or ideological issue. The opposition to Carter and the treaties in the Senate is being led by members of his own party. The most effective political supporters of Carter and the treaties are Republicans: former President Gerald Ford, former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the most prominent and articulate outside antagonists in the debate are both conservatives: former Gov. Ronald Reagan of California who is against the treaties, and the brilliant journalist Bill Buckley of New York, who is for them.

The way things are going now, the political supporters and opponents of the Panama treaties are not really debating the issue with one another but drumming up support and mounting propaganda campaigns. Carter is recruiting support the way he organized delegates for the Democratic presidential nomination. Reagan is appearing at the Washington National Press Club, and working over the conservative Republican circuit with his anti-treaty arguments, but the pro and anti leaders never meet. It is not a debate; it is a pair of competing advertising campaigns, like Ford and General Motors hawking their new 1978 models.

There is no constitutional reason, however, why at the end of this propaganda struggle there should not be an honest confrontation between the supporters and opponents of the Panama treaties on the Senate floor before the television cameras.

The Senate voted in the Fifties for a resolution by Sen. Pell of Rhode Island to give former presidents of the United States the privilege of speaking in the Senate on great national issues, or for that matter, whenever they liked. I have asked Ford about this, and he is very interested; but the possibility of an even wider national debate in the Senate does not stop there.

The Senate is master of its own rules. It can receive, not only Ford into its debate, but if it chooses to do so, Reagan, Henry Kissinger, or Richard Nixon, who under the Pell resolution also has the privilege of the floor. And it can decide that at least a part, or all, or none of its debate should be televised.

There is not much chance that it will do so, but the argument for opening up the legislative process to the people on a great decision of state is interesting if not compelling. As things stand now, the American people have no access to the critical debates but are getting on television absurd distortations of Washington life in such vivid caricatures as the latest ABC-Ehrlichman series "Washington Behind Closed Doors."

The Panama treaties are probably not really in trouble. The guess here is that there will be no more than 20 votes against them in the end. But the opponents want the American people, rather than the Senate to decide, and they have a point.

One way to bring them in on it is to let them hear the debate on television. It has its risks, but also its educational value about the future of the Americas and the hard choices of legislative decision. The Panama treaties will be in trouble only so long as the people don't look at the facts.

This issue needs to be put before the people so that they can measure the consequences of signing the treaties or rejecting them. It is a dicey business, but this is probably the time to let them hear the arguments on television.

Will sanity tests save Berkowitz?

By ELLEN GOODMAN

BOSTON — Now that David Berkowitz is in custody and the people out to make a killing in this case are using typewriters, the emphasis has shifted from a concern with police competence to one of mental competence.

"Son of Sam" was feared as a "mad killer" a few short weeks ago. Now there is a widespread fear that the man who is alleged to be Son of Sam will be let off precisely because he may be "crazy."

Indeed, there are many who look ahead to the next few months as another trial of the laws governing sanity. It looks like we'll be hearing a great deal more about the legal interpretations of insanity than the psychiatric ones, as this case is heard in the courts, not on the couches.

ELLEN GOODMAN

It is likely that Berkowitz will go through two tests of "sanity." The first, to decide his competency to stand trial, has already begun. In Queens last week, one report declared him "unfit." But another is due on Oct. 6, and it is expected by legal experts that Berkowitz will stand trial sooner or later. As Dr. Allan Stone, a psychiatrist and Harvard Law School professor, said convincingly: "There is no way, given the new constitutional law, that he won't come to trail. It's just a matter of when."

When that occurs, Berkowitz will face a second test. In court, his defense attorneys will almost certainly plead him innocent by virtue of insanity. Then the jury will have to decide whether or not he is "criminally responsible" for six homicides and eight attempted homicides.

But jurors today face a set of problems different than at any other time in legal history.

The case law on insanity pleas comes from 1843, when a man named McNaughton tried to kill the British Prime Minister, Robert Peel, and ended up killing his secretary. McNaughton was convinced that Peel was persecuting him, and the jury was convinced that McNaughton was insane. He was judged innocent and committed to a mental hospital where he lived the rest of his life.

"In the past, if someone was found not guilty by reason of insanity," Dr. Stone says, "society was protected because they were going to be confined forever. The legal decision that someone was mentally ill didn't cost the public anything in terms of safety."

This isn't necessarily true now. In the last several years, the law on civil commitment to mental institutions has changed, largely because of its abuses. Today, people aren't "put away" forever. If McNaughton were committed in 1977, his case would inevitably come up for review. At some point in the future, he might even possibly be released.

This reality puts a jury in a new kind of straitjacket. After all, an insanity plea is generally heard in cases — like the Jack Ruby or Sirhan Sirhan trial — when the big question isn't "who dunnit" but "why." Under these circumstances, it has always been tough to win a verdict of "innocent" on account of insanity.

In fact, there have been very few successful insanity pleas. Dr. Stone was asked by the American Bar Association to study them, and says: "I found so few I couldn't do the study. In New York State, there were less than half a dozen over a ten-year period. As a colleague said, the successful insanity plea in New York is somewhat less common than poisonous snakebites."

But with the additional fear now, shared by the public, that a "crazy man" could be let out to ride again, it will be even more difficult to arrive at an insanity verdict.

It seems far more likely that we will be convicting raving maniacs who believe that dogs are commanding their actions, than entertain the slightest chance that they will be let out.

The insanity plea has never been much more than a loophole in a legal system based on the notion of free will.

As Dr. Stone put it: "The legal system assumes that everyone has free will and chooses to do good or bad. If they do bad, it says, we will punish them. Then, occasionally we are confronted with someone who does something so bizarre that we say, they couldn't possibly have freely chosen to do that. Insanity becomes the exception that proves the rule. We can go on assuming that everyone else is possessed of free will, except, of course, some people — a group of the insane."

The question at any given time is how large a group of exceptions society will tolerate. We only make them one by one, weighing the evidence, the consequences, and feeling the social climate. Right now, the question is whether we will make room in that group for a David Berkowitz.

Crucial test of nation's economy begins

By THOMAS E. MULLANEY
©1977 N.Y. Times

NEW YORK — The annual crucial test for the nation's economy is now beginning — as it does at this time every year. The distortions of the summer, created by vacation, plant shutdowns and various other factors, are now largely behind. A new auto year has just begun, and the general retail business has entered its normally busiest season. The size of the harvest has become known more precisely, and prospects on the inflation front have become more clearly defined.

Yet, since the major unknown is always the response of the consumer in the market place for a vast array of goods and services, the economic forecasts that proliferate around Labor Day frequently show less-than-unanimous agreement about the probable near-term business trend.

The current year is no exception, and the uncertainty about the outlook is just as pronounced now as it was one year ago and two years ago. Once again, the big worry is whether the economy will regain the steam it generated before the normally slower third quarter, or whether it will need some new stimulus to recharge its batteries.

What, then, is the likely economic scenario for the United States for the rest of the calendar year and into the middle of 1978? Has the basic prospect changed much during the transitional third quarter? Will the September forebodings of 1975 and 1976 again prove false this time?

There are a number of similarities in underlying conditions this year to create confidence that the doldrums will quickly pass by for the third consecutive year. The four basic forces that most reliably indicate the direction of the economy — sales, personal income, employment and production — were all still rising in the latest reports. In general, the public's disposable income continues to advance, consumers are confident, and their spending intentions for new cars, housing and many other things remain strong.

Nevertheless, the 7 per cent "real" growth rate of this year's first six months seems certain to be reduced, but how much? The optimists think it will go down only to a 4½ or 5 per cent rate the rest of this year, and perhaps to 3½ or 4 per cent next year, while the pessimists see it falling to 3 per cent this year and as low as 1.6 per cent in 1978.

Even though spending by the consumer sector might ease off from its exuberant race of the first half of this year, it appears that a more expansive tone in government and business spending will take up a large part of the economic slack that might have developed.

The major negatives that surfaced during the summer were: the three consecutive monthly declines in the index of leading economic indicators; the steep drop in factory orders during July; the move toward tighter credit conditions by the Federal Reserve last month, and the resumption of the stock market's downward move.

The positive forces seem to outweigh greatly the negative ones, however. And the adverse developments were all rather moderate and, in most cases, may have been transitory. In any event, none of them was of a magnitude to cause serious concern at this point, nor are they infallible indicators of what lied ahead for the economy.

There is one other element in the current picture that might be considered a potentially negative one this year. It is the fact that the current economic recovery is now starting its 30th month. This expansion is, of course, much more mature than it was two years ago and even one year ago, and it is steadily approaching the point at which the five previous post-war recoveries ended.

The average length of the previous five expansions was 34 months, with the longest running to 39 months. Some analysts wonder whether that history suggests the current phase of the business cycle may have only four months more to run or, at most, nine months.

In that connection, however, economist Irwin Kellner of the Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co., notes that there is usually a link between the length of economic recoveries and the recessions that preceded them. "Recoveries tend to run about three times as long as the preceding recessions," he said. "If that holds true this time, the recovery still has considerable life in it since the contraction from late 1973 through the early part of 1975 covered about 16 months."

He and others who feel the expansion is not in danger of expiring at least for another 12 months or so have several other substantive reasons for their confidence, such as the ongoing strength of auto sales, housing, government outlays for defense and public-service jobs, and business capital expenditures, especially for new equipment. The government's latest survey on business plans for capital spending was quite encouraging. The gain this year is now expected to be 13.3 per cent, up a full percentage point from the gain projected in the April-May survey.

There is one aspect of business spending that is not particularly robust, and that is taken as a good omen for continuance of a smooth, balanced economic expansion, though less rapid than in the recent past. It is the relatively moderate buildup of business inventories.

GLOWING LAVA SPREADS OVER SLOPES OF ERUPTING KILAUEA
... 22 months of dormancy ends for world's most active volcano on Hawaii's 'big island'

Hawaiian volcano erupts

VOLCANO, Hawaii (UPI) — The world's most active volcano erupted along its east rift zone Tuesday night, lighting the sky with a red glow and alarming residents six miles away.

Civil defense, police and fire officials went on standby alert as scientists from the Hawaiian Volcano Observatory made an aerial inspection of the eruption from Kilauea Volcano northwest of Kalmu, near the island of Hawaii's famous black sand beaches.

No injuries were reported and it was unknown whether lava would reach islanders' property.

It was Kilauea's first eruption since Nov. 29, 1975, when a small outburst accompanied a major earthquake that struck the Puna region. That quake registered 7.2 on the Richter Scale and caused $3 million in damages.

Hawaii's most recent eruption had been at Mauna Loa, Kilauea's sister, in July 1975. Seven months after the Mauna Loa eruption, scientists predicted another outburst would occur by mid-1978, but they revised that prediction last July, moving back the timetable because of a halt in the volcano's inflation.

Richard Moore, a geologist at the observatory, said earth tremors preceding Tuesday's eruption first were noted about 9 p.m. Monday night and it seemed that magma was flowing into the rift zone, where volcanic activity has occurred over the past 200 years of Hawaii's recorded history.

"The eruption did in fact start tonight," Moore said Tuesday. "We had tremors all day long."

Homemade nuke bomb works

© Chicago Sun-Times

CHICAGO — The federal Energy Research and Development Administration has confirmed what nuclear-power critics have long contended — a nuclear weapon can be made out of plutonium from civilian nuclear reactors and can be successfully detonated.

Many scientists have maintained that any attempt by other nations or terrorist groups to explode such a weapon would fizzle because reactor-grade plutonium is not pure enough.

However, ERDA officials released newly declassified information "that a nuclear test was conducted using reactor-grade plutonium and that it successfully produced a nuclear yield."

The Atomic Energy Commission, ERDA's predecessor in nuclear research, staged the secret test "some time ago" at the Nevada Test Site, the officials in Washington said yesterday.

John Griffin, chief of classified documents for ERDA, declined to say whether AEC tested more than one weapon or whether ERDA is planning similar tests.

Still classified for security reasons, Griffin said, are details on the explosive force, or "kiloton yield," of the AEC test blast.

"The myth that you can't build a nuclear weapon out of reactor-grade plutonium has finally been laid to rest," David D. Comey, member of a congressional panel on nuclear proliferation and safeguards, said here Tuesday.

If the test blast had a one-kiloton yield — the equivalent of 1,000 tons of TNT — it would be "destructive enough to bring down the Sears Tower," Comey claimed. A three-kiloton blast, he said, would level Chicago's LaSalle St. financial district.

Theodore B. Taylor, the former AEC weapons designer who first raised the possibility of terrorists making a crude bomb out of stolen plutonium, said ERDA officials have been acknowledging lately that it would be possible to set off a weapon using reactor-grade plutonium.

"Now," Taylor noted, "they are saying something far more dramatic — the AEC tested such a weapon and it worked."

Comey said disclosure of this test bolsters President Carter's arguments for shelving the $2.2 billion "breeder" reactor project on the Clinch River near Oak Ridge, Tenn.

Comey characterized the breeder as "the 20th century version of the perpetual-motion machine." It is designed to produce — or breed — more plutonium than it consumes. The power industry regards the breeder as an inexhaustible source of energy.

Plutonium from either the breeder and-or conventional reactors, if reprocessed, can be used to fuel nuclear power plants or to make nuclear weapons, Comey emphasized.

Last April, Carter decided the domestic risks of plutonium falling into terrorist hands and the global peril of nuclear-weapons proliferation far outweigh any energy benefits. Congress, on the other hand, shows signs of thinking otherwise.

Battles on pay heat up

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Legislative battles are heating up in both House and Senate over proposals to raise workers' minimum wage.

The House is considering a measure raising the present $2.30 an hour minimum to $2.65 next year, with automatic increases each year through 1981 geared to average production wage levels.

Because of the Jewish holy days, no vote will be taken until later in the week.

A major issue in the House will be a proposal to allow employers to pay a lower wage — 85 per cent of the minimum — to youngsters under 19 for the first six months of employment.

Sen. Richard Schweiker, R-Pa., said he would offer a similar youth differential — 75 per cent of the minumum for those under 20 for the first six months — during consideration in the Senate Human Resources Committee today.

Schweiker and sponsors of the youth proposal in the House say the differential would encourage employers to hire youngsters and help reduce the nation's high youth unemployment rates — 18 per cent among teenagers, 40 per cent among black teenagers.

Others argue that individuals doing the same job should be paid equally and that a lower wage for teenagers will put older people out of work.

About 52 million persons are covered by the federal minimum wage, some 75 per cent of employed, non-supervisory workers.

Lobbying has been heavy.

The AFL-CIO strongly supports the higher minimum. It originally sought an initial minimum of $3. The proposed $2.65 is a compromise between that and $2.50 originally proposed by the Carter administration. Labor opposes a lower wage for youth.

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce is lobbying for the youth differential.

MARK RUDD
... surrenders

Radical's fugitive years end

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mark Rudd, who spent the last seven years in hiding, today surrendered to New York authorities to answer charges stemming from his rule as a leader of the militant Weather Underground in the turbulent 1960s.

Rudd, his hair cut short, said nothing to the mob of more than 70 reporters and cameramen who tried to question the radical student protest leader as he entered the Manhattan District Attorney's office with his lawyer, Gerald Lefcourt.

Rudd, who wore a brown jacket, an open collar shirt and glasses with brown plastic frames, surrendered at 9:25 a.m.

Treaty hit

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Teamsters President Frank Fitzsimmons declared his opposition to the Panama Canal treaties Tuesday and drew a rousing response from delegates to the annual meeting of the Western Conference of Teamsters.

Fitzsimmons' announcement, at a meeting barred to the press, was disclosed later in the day when videotaped segments of his speech were released to local television stations.

Agency energized

WASHINGTON — President Carter has signed the crucial piece of paper that will enable the new Department of Energy — in the words of its prospective leader — "to hoist its flag on Oct. 1."

At the same time Tuesday, he sent the Senate the names of about a dozen key officials in the new department plus three appointees to the five-member, semi-independent Federal Energy Regulatory Commission that will succeed the old Federal Power Commission on the same date.

Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger told reporters that most, if not all, department executives plus the remaining two FERC members will be nominated by the end of the month.

Carter appeared briefly at the start of the press conference, making a ceremonial statement invoking the co-operation of all citizens in coping with growing energy shortages.

Later Schlesinger said he hoped that natural gas shortages — which are regarded as the most imminent and which pinched industry in certain areas last year — might be avoided in 1977-78.

Voyagers overcome difficulty

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — The twin Voyager spacecraft have overcome early difficulties in their flights and apparently are off to a good start on their mission to the outer planets.

Scientists are the Jet Propulsion Laboratory said Voyager 1 — the second craft launched but scheduled to be the first to reach Jupiter — made an important course correction early Tuesday.

They also said an instrument which analyzes the polarity of light bouncing off distant planets did not function properly at the start of the mission but is now operating smoothly.

Although both instrument-packed spacecraft are hurtling toward the outer planets at more than 22,000 m.p.h., it will take them more than a year to travel the 500 million miles between Earth and Jupiter.

Launch OK

VANDENBERG AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (UPI) — A Wyoming missile combat crew today successfully launched an Air Force Minuteman III intercontinental ballistic missile.

The 12:10 a.m. PDT launch by the crews from the 90th Strategic Missile Wing at Francis E. Warren AFB was one of a series of tests to evaluate the Minuteman weapons system, an Air Force spokeswoman said.

Gunmen kill woman

PRINCESS PAHLAVI

ANTIBES, France (UPI) — Police are searching for assassins who missed the Shah of Iran's twin sister but shot to death a companion, possibly mistaking her for Princess Ashraf Pahlavi.

Police said the ambush early Tuesday in the Riviera was almost certainly a political assassination attempt on Princess Ashraf, but did not rule out the possibility it was aimed at two businessmen with her.

The princess, 57, her paid companion and longtime friend, Mrs. Fourough Khalenouri, 64, and two young Iranian businessmen were driving home after a night at the Palm Beach casino in Cannes when the firing started.

It was 3:50 a.m. and fully dark on the highway that winds along the French Riviera coast. Princess Ashraf, who usually sits in the back seat of her Rolls-Royce limousine, was riding in front while Mrs. Khalenouri sat in back.

Nun backs freedom fighters

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI) — An American nun being held in a Rhodesian jail says she supports the "freedom fighters" waging a five-year guerrilla war against the white government and would join them if she were black.

Sister Janice Ann McLaughlin, 35, of Pittsburgh, appeared in court Tuesday to hear arguments on whether she should be released on bail pending trial on charges of "spreading alarm and despondency." The judge said he would make a ruling Friday.

In war developments, the Military Command said troops in the past two days killed 24 guerrillas, 12 guerrilla recruits and five black civilians "actively assisting terrorists."

The prosecutors on the Sister Janice case, who urged the judge to deny bail, said the charges against her were based on five "fact papers" she compiled for the Roman Catholic Commission for Justice and Peace.

The reports described the alleged torture of black tribespeople by security forces seeking information about the presence of guerrillas.

Sister Janice, a Maryknoll sister of the St. Dominic order, said she would not deny compiling the reports, but would plead not guilty.

The prosecution introduced Sister Janice's diary, which was confiscated from her apartment hours after she was detained Aug. 31.

In the diary, Sister Janice wrote: "If I had a black skin I would join the boys (guerrillas)."

Senator, wife battle in court

McDONOUGH, Ga. (UPI) — The wife of Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., has charged in court documents that her estranged husband "is guilty of cruel treatment and habitual intoxication."

Mrs. Talmadge made the charges in a cross-petition for divorce filed last week in Henry County Superior Court and disclosed Tuesday.

Talmadge's Atlanta attorney, Alex McClennan Sr., called the charges "simply a threat to smear Sen. Talmadge and a threat to hurt him politically in an effort to get more money."

Prowess 'greatly exaggerated'

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Actor Tom Laughlin, karate-chopping star of the "Billy Jack" films, says his prowess in the martial arts has been greatly exaggerated.

Laughlin also told a jury Tuesday he never hit a photographer who is suing him in connection with an altercation at MGM studios in nearby Culver City in 1973, claiming instead that he was the actual assault victim.

CHICAGO POLICE ARREST DEMONSTRATORS DURING SCHOOL PROTEST — 500 students who walked out of school have been suspended

Busing program protested

CHICAGO (UPI) — About 500 Bogan High School students were suspended for walking out of school to protest the city's voluntary school busing program Tuesday and police reported 33 protesters were arrested.

Black and Latino children are being transported under a near state of siege from crowded inner city schools to largely white schools on the Southwest Side of the city.

The program was initiated with the opening of classes last week and violence has steadily escalated.

Thomas A. Maloney, a spokesman for the Chicago Board of Education, said Superintendent Joseph Hannon ordered the students who participated in Tuesday's walkout suspended for three school days.

White mothers have been picketing the schools involved and arrests have mounted daily. Tuesday's arrests marked the largest total since the protests began.

Police said the Bogan arrests began when crowds outside the school refused to leave the area. Many of the 33 arrested were high school students, police said. They were charged with disorderly conduct, refusing to disperse and resisting arrest.

About 400 to 500 students walked out during a lunch period and many of them marched through neighborhood streets, then began milling about a hot dog stand across the street from the school. The arrests began when about 50 students near the hot dog stand refused to break up, police said.

Mayor Michael A. Bilandic said he believed the busing program has been generally accepted in the city, although he conceded there were "one or two areas where there is some problem at this point." Bilandic speculated some of the disturbances might have been started by "out of towners."

Police Tuesday again formed a protective corridor to keep shouting white parents from black students entering an elementary school on the Southwest Side.

Test results studied

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — Blood tests on 110 construction workers at Riverside Methodist Hospital have produced only one possible case of Legionnaires' disease, apparently ruling out a construction site as the source of the illness in Columbus.

The Ohio Department of Health Tuesday reported the results of tests performed at the U.S. Center for Disease Control in Atlanta.

The tests had been made to determine if the outbreak of the penumonia-like ailment came from an excavation for a three-story wing now under construction at the hospital.

Jon Christensen, a health department spokesman, said the one worker whose blood showed positive signs of the disease had no physical symptoms and evidently was unaware he had ever contracted it.

Christensen said the findings apparently eliminated the theory that the excavation yielded bacteria causing the disease, now confirmed in six cases in the Columbus area.

Twenty-nine persons died and about 150 others became ill with the initially publicized outbreak of the mysterious disease in Philadelphia last year.

Historians study disaster impact

LOGAN, Utah (UPI) — A year after the Teton Dam flood a sign at the edge of Rexburg, Idaho reads "Wrecksburg."

This kind of disaster humor is only one kind of information Utah State University historians are interested in as they collect interviews of area residents to find out about the flood and its impact on society.

"Although the flood received wide media coverage, we believe that through time the story will gain added dimensions," said Charles Peterson, USU professor of history.

The researchers say they have found all kinds of social changes in the process of doing the interviews including family break-ups, new patterns of economics and morality which can be attributed to the flood.

Many of the interviews are conducted with children.

"We are probably getting some myth mixed with reality in these interviews, especially when the kids are talking about the onset of the flood," Ross Peterson, head of the USU history department, said.

Record cornucopia of cobs coming

© Chicago Daily News

CHICAGO — Neither rain, nor drought, nor fungus, nor root rot is staying the corn crop from record levels, and that's apparently going to plunge the government even deeper into the agriculture business next year.

The U.S. Agriculture Department reported Monday that America's farmers are expected to harvest a record 6.229 billion bushels of corn, and the cornucopia of cobs will mean steady or slightly lower prices for consumers.

But the bulging crop, say USDA sources, also enhances the possibility that the Agriculture Department will force farmers to trim their corn production by some 10 per cent when they plant their 1978 crop.

Such a program, called a set-aside, already has been imposed for the 1978 winter-wheat crop, and a White House memo late last month indicated a similar program would be in store for corn and other feed grains if a bumper harvest materializes this fall.

Monday's USDA crop report served only to strengthen the possibility of a corn set-aside, since the estimated corn crop rocketed 137 million bushels over last month's USDA estimate to stun most agribusiness forecasters. Last year, 6.216 billion bushels of corn were reaped.

The expected harvest of sorghum, another feed grain in ample supply, rose to 786.3 million bushels from the August USDA forecast of 724.8 million bushels and last year's crop of 723.7 million bushels. Thus, the possibilities of a sorghum set-aside seemed to grow, too, said sources at the Agriculture Department.

The fall's anticipated output of soybeans was raised to 1.644 billion bushels from the August forecast of 1.602 billion bushels and last year's actual 1.264 billion bushels. The increased soybean yield was widely expected among grain traders, though industry sources feared the outlook would drive January soybean futures to as low as $4.50 a bushel from the $5.163-a bushel, where they closed Monday.

Finally, the USDA predicted that wheat would edge up this fall to 1.528 billion bushels from the 1.526 bushels forecast last month.

The bountiful wheat harvest comes with a surplus of more than a billion bushels of the grain already on hand — an excess prompting the government to force farmers to idle 20 per cent of their lands as they sow their winter wheat this fall in order to be eligible for government price-assistance programs.

If the autumn harvest comes in anywhere close to the USDA predictions, say the government planners, those assistance programs appear destined to grow anew. With far more grain available than Americans can export or use themselves, say analysts in and out of the government, Uncle Sam has little choice but to step up the programs that bail out farmers when a grain bonanza knocks the steam out of crop prices.

Even though the farmer isn't paid for the crops he doesn't grow in a set-aside program, he is compensated for lower grain prices by low-interest government loans (on which he can forfeit the crop and keep the money) and through target-price payments. Target-price payments give farmers the difference between the market price they get for a crop and a "target" level set by the government.

So far, the Agriculture Department doesn't know how much it'll spend on such programs this fall.

In some years in the 1950s and '60s, though, the government spent as much as $8 million annually on crop loans and target-price payments, according to USDA figures furnished by the Board of Trade. Crop failures abroad — and a change in the political atmosphere at home — brought the bill below the billion-dollar level as recently as 1976.

But now the government appears to be faced with a crisis of prosperity again.

Idahoans Libya bound

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Idaho farm commodities will be promoted in Libya later this month by three Idaho farmers, Rep. Steve Symms said today.

Symms said Oscar Field, Grand View, president of the Idaho Farm Bureau; Chuck Stegner, Grangeville; and Wynn Henderson, Nezperce, will meet with Libyan officials to talk about possible sales of wheat and other Idaho commodities.

The three will leave for Libya on Sept. 21.

Symms said the trip is in part a result of the continuing dialogue established during his trip to Libya earlier this year and a return visit to Idaho by a Libyan delegation.

McClure endorses supports on sugar

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, joined 29 other U.S. Senators Tuesday in urging President Carter to implement immediately the new sugar program allowing for price supports.

As part of the new Farm Bill, the sugar program will allow price supports of 52 and one-half per cent to 65 per cent of parity. The supports could never fall below 13 and one-half cents per pound, under the provisions of the bill, McClure said.

The level of support would be adjusted at the discretion of the Secretary of Agriculture.

"Each day of inaction contributes to further deterioration of the already depressed financial situation of the sugar industry," McClure said.

The Idaho senator said the new program "will make it possible for the President to impose quota restrictions on the importation of foreign sugar, possibly the most effective way of raising the price sugar farmers are paid for their labors."

Spud crop drops

WASHINGTON — Smaller potato and sugarbeet crops have been forecast for this season by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

In the Sept. 1 production figures released Monday, the USDA predicted a crop of 22,242 hundredweight of potatoes compared with an Aug. 1 forecast of 22,440 cwt. Production in 1976 was 22,688 cwt.

Sugar beet production was estimated at 24,353 tons, compared with 1976 production of 29,366 tons. The Aug. 1 estimate placed production this year at 24,252 tons.

Sugarcane production was estimated at 27,619 tons, compared with an Aug. 1 estimate of 27,385 tons. Production for 1976 was 28,767 tons.

Scabies controlled

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho and California quickly brought under control a minor outbreak of cattle scabies, authorities from the two states said Monday.

California authorities diagnosed the contagious skin disease, caused by parasitic mites, after nine shipments were made from San Benito and Monterey counties in California to Elmore, Canyon and Adams counties in Idaho. The two California counties have been placed under federal quarantine.

Dr. A.P. Schneider, Boise, chief of the Bureau of Animal Health for Idaho's Department of Agriculture, said hold orders were placed on the exposed cattle and arrangements were made for supervised dipping of the approximately 6,000 cattle.

The scabies mite, which obtains its food from the tissues of the host animal, cause wounds or lesions in the skin. The skin disorder is transmissable to man.

Onion yield declines

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho-East Oregon onion production this year is expected to be lower than the 1976 record level, the Idaho Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said today.

Anticipated production at 3,891,000 hundredweight would be five per cent lower than last year but still would be the largest output of any year expect 1976, the service said.

Yield is forecast at 495 cwt. per acre, compared with 550 cwt. in 1976 and 450 cwt. in 1975. Acreage for harvest is estimated at 11,900 acres, up 600 acres from last year and 1,900 acres above the 1975 level.

Snake flow now filling 1889 rights

IDAHO FALLS — Water rights of June 10, 1889, are now being filled along the Snake River, Watermaster Arthur L. Larson said Monday.

Larson listed river flow and storage figures as of Sept. 9. Discharge or contents at various measuring stations include:

Jackson Lake 259,200 acre feet; Moran, 2,270 cubic feet per second; Grassy Lake 6,870 acre feet; Palisades Reservoir, 69,840 acre feet, usable; Henry's Lake, 60,200 acre feet; Henry's Fork near Rexburg, 1,260 cfs; Snake River at Heise, 4,500 cfs;, Ririe Lake, 8,500 acre feet.

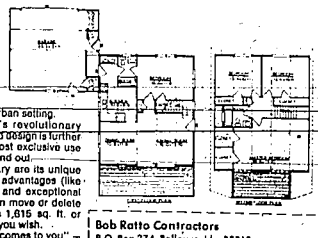
A revolutionary home design.



This economical two-story home turns its back to the street (or takes advantage of a viewsite) to create an uncommon sense of privacy even in a busy urban setting.

Inspired by America's revolutionary period, its gambrel-roofed design is further distinguished by the almost exclusive use of natural cedar, inside and out.

Even more revolutionary are its unique and enduring structural advantages (like steel-reinforced beams) and exceptional design flexibility. You can move or delete interior walls, add to its 1,615 sq. ft. or otherwise customize, as you wish.

And it's a house that "comes to you" — in the form of a precut structural package, ready for efficient assembly. For 4 adaptations of this plan, and 68 other designs, send $2 for our Planbook.

Sacco-Vanzetti info freed

FRAMINGHAM, Mass. (UPI) — Massachusetts State Police wiretapped and recorded 1927 conversations of the Sacco-Vanzetti legal defense committee and the late U.S. Supreme Court Justice Felix Frankfurter in the weeks before the two Italian immigrants were executed, police records show.

State Public Safety Commissioner John F. Kehoe said Monday the celebrated murder case is believed to be one of the first times in U.S. history that authorities used wiretapping.

At the time, Frankfurter was a Harvard Law School professor and a vocal opponent to the way the Sacco-Vanzetti trial was conducted. He later wrote a book on the subject.

Transcripts of the conversations were included in 1,080 pages of documents released by state police Monday. The wiretap information was locked in the personal safe of the public safety commissioner for 50 years, Kehoe told a news conference.

"I was surprised they (wiretaps) were used," he said.

The transcripts were stamped: "Confidential: to be either destroyed or placed in secret files."

They were ordered released along with other documents last month by Massachusetts Secretary of State Paul Guzzi at the request of a free-lance writer investigating the case.

Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, avowed anarchists, were executed on Aug. 23, 1927, for the murders of two men during a $15,000 payroll holdup in South Braintree, Mass. Their deaths in the electric chair came seven years after a trial that captured international headlines. They maintained innocence until their deaths.

Gov. Michael S. Dukakis issued a controversial proclamation in July saying they were denied a fair trial. The state Senate later censured the governor for his action.

The 262 pages of Frankfurter transcripts showed his phone was tapped for several weeks before and after the executions. Personal conversations with friends and relatives were recorded as well.

Kehoe said fear of bad publicity was the probable reason the wiretap evidence was locked up for so long. "I assume that's why they put it there," he said. He said the other documents were found in routine police filing stations throughout the state.

The wiretaps were placed on phones in the old Bellevue Hotel in Boston, where the Sacco-Vanzetti Citizen's National Committee and Defense Committee had headquarters in two third-floor rooms, and on a phone in Frankfurter's Duxbury, Mass., home.

The wiretaps were authorized on Aug. 1 and 8, 1927, by former state Attorney General Arthur Reading in letters to the then Public Safety Commissioner Alfred F. Foote. Reading cited a state law which gave his office permission to wiretap.

Boy dies following dog's bite

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — A 7-month-old boy died Monday afternoon 6½ hours after being bitten by a large dog which climbed into his playpen at the home of a babysitter.

State police said Robert Boyd, son of Mr. and Mrs. Terry Boyd, Milwaukie, died after surgery to repair cuts suffered when he was attacked by a half Chihound, half German shepherd dog in a Southeast Portland home.

Officers said the sitter, whom they did not identify, told police she was in the kitchen when the dog jumped into the playpen. She said she thought the baby was playing with the dog.

The dog was killed so its brain could be examined.

Germany raids Yankee GI CBers

Chicago Daily News

WORMS, West Germany — "Breaker! Breaker! Hey, Good Buddy, Comrade is listening. Knock down your ears, or else it's a permanent 10-7 for you!"

That message, monitored over a Citizens' Band (CB) radio near Frankfurt, West Germany, is the battle cry of scores of American servicemen in the raging war between illegal Yankee CBers and the West German government.

"Comrade" (GI slang for anyone "German") is the Deutsche Bundespost (DBP), the agency responsible for a major crackdown on illegal American CB radio owners who are being ordered to permanently, "10-7" (shut down) their rigs and "knock down" (dismantle) their "ears" (antennas).

"Hundreds of GIs already have been raided by German authorities," says the Army's man in charge of licensing CB radio use for American service personnel in Germany, Sgt. 1-c. Kedseth C. Horner.

"The Germans have been working wherever GIs are stationed, making raids, confiscating servicemen's CBs, levying fines as much as 3,000 marks ($1,350) and ordering GIs to get proper licensing."

In addition to the recent raids on military compounds, German officials have begun spot-checking autos with CB antennas and demanding a valid low-power and radiotelephone license issued by Germany, says Horner.

If the owner of the set can't produce the license, his equipment may be impounded.

The Deutsche Bundespost is responsible for the over-all licensing and control of CBs in the Federal Republic of Germany and has intensified efforts to round up illegal CBers. Members of the U.S. forces are simply getting caught in the noose, says Horner.

"It boils down to this. GIs are breaking every rule in the book," says Horner. "Their equipment is too powerful. They operate on unauthorized frequencies and fail to get proper licensing. They don't pay their monthly licensing fees. In some cases, they even use their CBs for military purposes."

If that weren't enough, says Horner, improper use of the sets has interfered with radio and TV and has hampered emergency communications.

Secretarial tales true

BOSTON (UPI) — Everybody's heard of the boss who orders his female office workers to get the coffee.

But what about the man who made women employes in his clothing store hand out promotional leaflets — in bumblebee costumes?

Or the young executive who ordered his secretary to mend the trousers he'd split in a compromising spot — while he was wearing them?

For members of 9 to 5, Boston's Organization for Women Office Workers, the anecdotes are no laughing matter.

"If we laugh tonight, it's because it sounds all too familiar," said secretary Janice Blood. "None of these things, I'm sure, could be found in any job description in the state."

The tales were entries in the Petty Office Procedure Contest — one of several conducted around the country at various times by local 9 to 5 chapters.

"In Cleveland, the winner of the Petty Office Procedures Contest was the boss who gave up smoking and ordered his secretary buy him carrots, peel them, keep them cold and make sure he took some home," Ms. Blood said.

"Here in Boston, where our bosses can be every bit as petty, are some startling entries from some of Boston's enlightened offices," Ms. Blood said.

One example, she said, was the insurance company memo that warned office workers absences no longer would be tolerated — for any reason.

"That was under the title of 'Office Discipline,'" she explained. "And I'll bet the original memo was written by Ebenezer Scrooge."

The torn trousers episode, or "X-rated" entry, came in on the ballot slightly ahead of the "Buzz-Off" entry bumblebee promotion.

Then there's the boss who required that his secretary vacuum the office — after he had trimmed his fingernails and scattered the clippings all over the rug. That one won the "Personal Hygiene" award.

One story about an employer that received no votes but did cause rumblings of disbelief was the Harvard professor and minister who told his secretary to type a letter to his daughter stating he would be happy to marry her off.

"A personal touch, don't you think?" Ms. Blood said.

New delays faced with nuclear waste

©N.Y. Times Service

WASHINGTON — The nation's much-delayed program to deal with nuclear wastes may face new delays because of "overly optimistic" estimates by a government agency and "lack of will" by private corporations to develop known technology, witnesses told a House subcommittee Monday.

Monte Canfield Jr., the head of the General Accounting Office's energy and minerals division, told the Government Operations subcommittee that recent experiences with proposed prototype waste disposal areas have led him to believe that demonstrating permanent waste disposal by 1985 may be impossible.

The Energy Research and Development Administration has announced that it will complete pilot disposal facilities by 1985, but Canfield said that there are already delays in meeting the project's designed goals, and that mounting political opposition and geological uncertainties are the most promising areas are likely to contribute to further delay.

Canfield pointed out that the most likely site for disposing of the government's huge amount of nuclear weapons waste — salt deposits in New Mexico — has been found to contain a valuable fertilizer resource, potash, and pockets of hydrogen sulfide gas, which could interfere with the disposal areas.

At a Michigan site being developed as a pilot disposal area for commercial nuclear waste, voters in three affected counties voted last November overwhelmingly against waste repositories in their counties.

According to the GAO report that Canfield left with the subcommittee, political opposition to a second commercial disposal site in Louisiana salt domes is beginning to mount.

Canfield suggested that the laws should be changed to permit the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to control the ERDA's waste disposal operations.

Another witness, Cleve Anderson, who formerly headed the government's largest nuclear weapons waste storage facility, at Hanford, Wash., said that the storage problem there may be "getting out of control" because of government failure to deal with permanent storage of liquid wastes, which have repeatedly leaked out of storage tanks.

Anderson, currently a consultant to California's Energy Commission, blamed the old Atomic Energy Commission for failing to implement a plan for permanent storage developed in 1958.

Anderson, who said he has invented several processes for waste separation and storage, blamed a large, engineering firm, the Bechtel Corp., for failing to move forward from an outdated process that handled the wastes in liquid rather than solid form.

He also charged that two corporations, the Atlantic Richfield Co. and General Electric, abandoned plans for waste processing facilities, although they would have worked with additional capital and proper management control. Instead, Anderson said, private industry is now looking to the taxpayer for subsidies to encourage the development of waste control technologies, which he said have long since been proven.

President Carter's recent decision to halt the separation of plutonium from nuclear power plant wastes has further confused the nation's plans to find permanent disposal methods and areas.

Chinese army tests guided missiles

London Telegraph

LONDON — The nuclear arm of the Chinese People's Liberation Army recently tested guided missiles with nuclear warheads, according to a recent report in the Liberation Army Daily which is not available to foreigners in Peking.

The tests have now been confirmed by Hsinhua, the official Chinese news agency, but no details have been disclosed on the type of missiles that were tested, the location of the test nor when they took place.

Foreign experts believe that the Chinese launched a multi-stage inter-continental ballistic missile — ICBM — from a secret pad in northeast China which was targeted onto a receiving area in south-western Tibet.

While this would not allow the missile to travel its full range of from 3,000 to 3,500 miles, it would provide sufficient distance for the multi-stage apparatus to be tested for the second time. The first ICBM test is understood to have taken place on the same range last year.

The main problem the Chinese have encountered in recent years in the manufacture of nuclear weapons has been their unexpected inability to produce solid fuel for their missiles. The liquid fuel in use takes some 36 hours to load, which renders the sites extremely vulnerable to the Russians.

Since China made its first nuclear test in 1964, it has acquired a stockpile of over 300 nuclear warheads which can be carried by the TU-16 bomber, which has a radius of 2,000 miles.

Wilderness areas set aside in West

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House has voted overwhelmingly to set aside nearly 1.2 million acres of land in nine western states as part of the National Wilderness Preservation system.

Included in the measure is a 29,500-acre section of Lone Peak, southeast of Salt Lake City, as Utah's first designated wilderness area. The vote Monday was 380-18. The measure now goes to the Senate.

If passed by the Senate and signed by President Carter, the measure will allow the Interior Department to maintain and enforce laws designed to preserve the primitive characteristics of the lands.

Lone Peak, southwest of Snowbird Ski Resort, is part of the Wasatch Front area watershed which provides culinary water for some 350,000 persons in Salt Lake and Utah counties.

Language in the bill allows the Forest Service to maintain sanitary facilities and basic road maintenance required to service the Lone Peak watershed. It also allows continued winter avalanche control work on the peak.

The House Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs said the areas were omitted from a 1972 Forest Service review, but are considered outstanding wilderness values which should be preserved under the 1964 Wilderness Act.

Other Intermountain areas included in the bill are the Pusch Ridge Wilderness and an addition to the Galuiro Wilderness in Arizona; the Manzano Mountain Wilderness, Sandia Mountain Wilderness and the Chama River Canyon Wilderness in New Mexico; the Savage Run Wilderness in Wyoming; the Hunter-Fryingpan Wilderness in Colorado; and the Welcome Creek Wilderness in Montana.

Little Rock school honored

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (UPI) — Central High School, a building that became known throughout the world during the 1957 school integration crisis, has been added to the National Register of Historic Places.

The Arkansas Historic Preservation Program, which recommended inclusion of the building, cited the architectural uniqueness of the structure as well as the historic aspects of the building.

Central High School "is the state's most historic landmark associated with the civil rights movement," the state group said.

The five-story, Gothic revival building, completed in 1927, also is "architecturally unique among Arkansas school structures," the group said.

Central High School was built on a two-acre site at a cost of $1.5 million. It has 125 classrooms and accommodates 3,000 students. At the time it was built, it was the largest structure in the state, except for the Capitol.

It was first known as Little Rock High School. The name was changed to Central High School in 1957, the year it received national exposure.

Natural gas plan in limbo

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A deadlocked Senate committee left President Carter's plan to control natural gas prices in limbo Tuesday, voting to send the administration bill to the Senate floor without any recommendation.

The Senate Energy Committee voted in effect not to work on the measure and let the full Senate decide.

On the Senate floor, members debated over a wide array of conservation measures included in the Carter energy plan.

The President's natural gas plan would extend federal controls, which are now on interstate sales of gas, to sales within the producing states, but under a new, higher federal price ceiling of $1.75 per thousand cubic feet. The current ceiling is around $1.45.

A key proposal to lift price controls, backed by Republicans and oil state Democrats, died Monday on a 9-9 tie.

Admitting it was hopelessly split, the energy committee approved, 15-2, a proposal by Sen. Clifford Hansen, R-Wyo., to report the bill to the Senate without amendment or endorsement. The Senate may take it up next week.

"We are deadlocked on major issues," said Committee Chairman Henry Jackson, D-Wash.

Earlier in the day, Jackson and other Senate Democratic leaders met with Carter to discuss prospects of passing what remains of the White House energy package. Jackson said the votes are "margin thin" but he pledged "to put up a big fight to keep the lid on the price of natural gas."

"I believe we can win it," Jackson said, "but it's going to be tough."

Jackson believes deregulation would be inflationary.

Before passing on the measure, some committee members wanted to amend the bill further, but Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., said, "We cannot have it both ways; we cannot both report the President's bill and amend it to death."

Sen. Wendell Ford, D-Ky., said he wanted further consideration of the bill by the committee, but admitted, "I guess I see the handwriting on the wall."

"This is a real defeat for Carter, because it means he cannot even get 10 votes from this committtee," a Republican staff member told a reporter.

Several committee members, who have complained that Carter's program contains little to stimulate production, suggested using the proceeds from Carter's proposed tax on crude oil to finance the corporation.

Wet basements, crime concern U.S. households

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Leaking basements and neighborhood crime are two complaints shared by many U.S. households, regardless of their income, according to a report released jointly by the Bureau of the Census and the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

In a 1975 survey taken by the bureau for HUD, approximately 20 per cent of low income households (those making less than $5,000) with basements reported signs of water leakage. The proportion for households with high incomes ($25,000 or more) was 25 per cent. Crime was reported as a neighborhood problem by about 19 per cent of both high and low income households.

The survey asked Americans if any of 12 specific conditions existed in the vicinity of their homes. Those reported most often — by at least 20 per cent in almost all income categories — were street or highway noise, heavy traffic, and inadequate street lighting.

Of six neighborhood services, public transportation was the one most often termed inadequate by those households surveyed, with 36 per cent dissatisfied. Generally, the higher the income, the higher the proportion of households that found fault with public transportation.

Four per cent of those who were dissatisfied with public transportation said they would like to move because of the situation. This compares to some 27 per cent of those rating local schools inadequate who said they wished to move. Compared to the higher and lower income groups, households making $5,000 to $25,000 most frequently reported a desire to move because of inadequate schools.

The majority of all households were satisfied with the neighborhoods in which they lived — with nearly 83 per cent overall rating their neighborhoods as good or excellent. Some 95 per cent of high income homeowners said their neighborhoods were good or excellent places to live, while only 68 per cent of low income renters felt this way about their neighborhoods.

Former FBI director traded information

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover maintained contact with top Nazi police officials until the week before Pearl Harbor, according to FBI documents made available Tuesday.

He exchanged requests for information and on one occasion provided a German police admirer with an autographed picture.

The documents detail the early years of FBI cooperation with the International Police Commission, now known as Interpol, which the United States joined in 1939 despite warnings it was German-dominated.

Not until Dec. 4, 1941 — three days before Pearl Harbor — did Hoover send out a memo saying "in the future no communications will be addressed to the International Police Commission, whose present location is Berlin, Germany."

The 1,785 pages of documents were obtained from the FBI by the National Commission on Law Enforcement and Social Justice, an arm of the Church of Scientology, through a Freedom of Information request. The church is trying to document the workings of Interpol.

Among the memos is a June 26,1939, letter to Hoover from W. Fleischer, described as counselor of the Criminal Bureau of the Reich, thanking Hoover for sending him the FBI's latest annual report, informing him the Reich's fingerprint division had 772,371 fingerprint records and concluding:

"May I ask a personal favor? I should be deeply grateful to you if you could send me a photograph of yourself with a little dedication," the letter said.

On July 18, 1939, just a month and a half before Germany invaded Poland, Hoover complied with the request.

A July 20, 1939, internal FBI memo on joining the Commission noted "we would not receive much practical benefit from membership" but warned "there is also the possibility that if we fail to join, the Secret Service or some other federal agency may seek to become a member, and the FBI might thereby suffer in international prestige."

The memo, which included the warning about German domination, also said if the FBI failed to join after expressing its willingness to become a member "it might be construed as an act of unfriendliness" and recommended the bureau join.

Regular correspondence between the FBI and the commission continued until an internal FBI memo on Nov. 22, 1941, noted the police organization's headquarters had moved from Vienna to Berlin.

It questioned whether the FBI should continue the contact "in view of the fact that by so doing the bureau might be said to tacitly recognize the fact that Germany has taken over" the Commission.

A meeting of the FBI executive conference was convened on Dec. 1, 1941, and recommended no further communication be addressed to the organization after which the Dec. 4 Hoover memo went out.

Cooler temperatures and windy conditions will accompany this front as well as scattered rainshowers.

Spraying of crops and harvesting conditions will generally be unfavorable through the remainder of the week as unsettled weather settles into the Magic Valley for the weekend.

The extended outlook for Friday through Sunday calls for well below normal temperatures and periods of scattered showers at times. Areas of light frost are also likely by Sunday morning. High temperatures will generally be in the 60s and overnight lows mainly in the 30s.

A long range outlook for mid-September through mid-October calls for below normal temperatures to continue and near to or above normal precipitation.

Bank credit cards closely watched

ATLANTA (UPI) — The Justice Department will watch bank-issued credit cards as closely as it watches the growing numbers of electronic funds transfer (EFT) systems, its antitrust chief, said Monday.

The reason, said Acting Assistant Attorney General John Shenefield, is that "numerous card holders" appear to be using bank cards as a convenient way to make economic transactions instead of obtaining credit.

"I think we all would agree that the competitive issues involved in the bank card field are clearly related to the competitive issues presented by EFT," Shenefield told a National Bank Card convention here.

To date, Shenefield said, "little attempt has been made to look at bank credit card systems in the context of EFT developments" because the credit cards do not technically represent funds transfers — only extensions of credit.

But Shenefield said the lines between the two industries are becoming "blurred" and the Justice Department may no longer ignore any anticompetitive developments in bank card systems while focusing exclusively on EFT systems.

This means the department will watch the trend of banks to set up credit card systems as joint ventures as well as setting up automated clearing houses and joint ventures, Shenefield said.

"Normally, the antitrust division looks with disfavor, or at least skepticism, at activities shared by competitors," Shenefield said. But he said they may be justified on occasions when competition can be maintained between participating banks.

One of the toughest problems the antitrust division faces is that created by the sharing of EFT terminals, often as a result of economic necessity, at the consumer retail level, Shenefield said.

Shenefield ended a lengthy review of competitive problems in the fast-growing bank card industry by predicting it will "become more competitive, not less."

Compared to the general credit card industry, Shefield said, the growth of bank cards has been "astounding." BankAmericard — now called Visa — and Master Charge have become "industry giants with global recognition and acceptance" he said.

"At the end of 1976 approximately 89 per cent of the nation's banks had chosen to affiliate with one or both of the two national bank card systems which had a combined cardholder total of 75 million," Shenefield said.

States boost tax on gasoline

© Newhouse News Service

WASHINGTON — Boosting taxes on gasoline, which Congress shows no sign of doing, remains a major method of raising revenue for state governments.

So far this year, eight states have increased their taxes on a gallon of gasoline — double last year's number. In another — Oregon — the voters can ratify or reject a two-cent rise in a November referendum.

A survey by the Highway Users Federation found these states had increased gas taxes so far in 1977: Delaware (2 cents per gallon), Hawaii (3.5 cents), Montana (0.25), Nebraska (1), New Hampshire (1), North Dakota (1), South Caroline (1) and Washington(2).

Only four states — Connecticut, Idaho, Kansas and Wyoming — raised gas taxes in 1976.

It was Oregon that in 1919 invented the gas tax as a way to raise funds for road repairs. Within a decade, every other state had followed suit.

Federal gas taxes were first imposed in 1932, and have remained at four cents a gallon since 1959 when the highway trust fund was created to build the interstate highway system.

The House of Representatives has rejected by wide margins efforts to raise the federal tax this year and two similar attempts in 1975.

The nation's highest gas taxes are in Delaware, Washington and Connecticut, which all add 11 cents to a gallon.

Texas has the lowest tax — 5 cents. It has not increased the tax in more than 10 years and neither have Alabama, Alaska, California, Nevada, Ohio, Oklahoma and Tennessee.

Tennessee's 7-cent tax has remained unchanged for 44 years.

Stocks at Midday

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices opened lower Wednesday in moderate trading of New York Stock Exchange issues.

The Dow Jones industrial average was off 0.61 point to 853.95 shortly after the opening. Declines led advances, 101 to 84, among the 226 issues crossing the tape.

Investors were disturbed that Chase Manhattan, the nation's third largest bank, raised its prime lending rate to 7¼ per cent from the prevailing 7 per cent level.

Chase's action was the result of recent Federal Reserve Board credit tightening designed to offset a $3 billion surge in the nation's money supply reported in last week's statement.

A surge in the money supply the last several months has forced the Fed to tighten credit and to raise its discount rate to 5 per cent. The rising interest rates are making yields of short-term money instruments more attractive than stocks.

Charles Schultze, chairman of tottCouncil of Economic Advisers, encouraged some investors Tuesday by saying the economy's near-term outlook was favorable, regardless of other negative forecasts.

WELCOME MASONS

Grand Lodge, A. F. & A. M. of Idaho

110th Annual Communication

What is a Mason?

If there's one thing on w[hich] Masons agree, it's probably ... no Mason can define for another just what is a Mason.

Most accept a basic concept that a Mason is a man of such high moral ethics and sterling character that he is already a Mason before he becomes one.

Most accept the concept that a Mason is not a Mason because he wears a large ring or emblem, and pays his dues.

Acceptable to all members of the fraternity is the tenet that each man must "build his own Masonic Temple" in his heart; that it is not the external but the internal qualifications of a man which make him a Mason.

The basic Masonic teaching is that each man must desire to learn for himself what he wishes to know about the moral teachings of Masonry, that each can only learn as much as he desires and no amount of coaching, talking or teaching can reach an unreceptive mind.

Becoming a Mason begins with this principle. No one invites anyone to become a member or to submit an application. The idea must originate with the man who wants to become a Mason. This is the reason that some Masons refer to the Idaho Grand Lodge as an organization composed of many members, none of whom were asked to join, and all of whom are volunteers.

Probably the most surprising part of Masonic teaching and learning to the average new member is the fact that everything is completely voluntary. Not only does no one ask an individual citizen to join, occasions are rare when he is asked to learn lectures, ritual, secret work or anything about Masonry. He learns as little or as much as he likes. "He gets out of it exactly what he puts in" is a common explanation.

A candidate learns his Entered Apprentice lecture because he wants to be a Fellowcraft and his Fellowcraft because he wants to obtain his Master's degree. Everything else is taught or learned because an individual member has a desire to know more about Masonry or to help another to know more.

"Masonry is not a religion nor a substitute for religion". Masonry is the striving for moral perfection and as a Mason nears this goal, he probably becomes a better member of whiever religious body he prefers.

Some are impressed by the teachings, some by the memory training available, some by social functions, some by the secret rituals, some by the written rituals and some by all.

What is a Mason?

Probably an ordinary fellow who hopes that through Masonic activity the world may be a little better because he was here.

MASONIC ORGANIZATIONS

A LAYMAN'S RUNDOWN ON LODGES

A Lodge of Master Masons or "blue lodge" is composed of members who have received Entered Apprentice, Fellow Craft and Master Mason degrees.

To qualify, applicant must initiate the request for a petition, be 18 or older, a man of good character, "sound of mind and body," a resident of jurisdiction of the lodge for a year or more, undergo an investigation, be well-recommended and receive unanimous approval of the members present.

Scottish Rite Bodies — A concordant body which is designed to increase and enhance the Masonic knowledge of its members. There are four divisions of the scottish Rite. Its degrees are a continuation and expansion of the three Blue Lodge degrees and enable the initiate to grasp with greater significance the real purpose and meaning of Masonry. The Scottish Rite is a rite of instruction. It interprets the symbols and allegories of Masonry in the light of history and philosophy, and uses the words of the supreme prophets of humanity — ceremonials of the great religions of the world, and significant episodes from history, to paint the moral and adorn the tale.

York Rite Bodies — In the attainment of other degrees, after his completion of the three Symbolic Degrees of the Blue Lodge, a Master Mason may elect to gain further knowledge of the Masonic philosophy and learn what the institution of Freemasonry seeks to teach by affiliating with the York Rite Bodies which include Royal Arch Masons, the Council and The Commandery of the Knights Templar.

The Cryptic Degrees of the Council of Royal and Select Masters take him backward in time and deal with incidents which occurred during the building of the first temple.

To the followers of Christ, there is a need and a desire to apply impressive lessons. This is accomplished in the ritual of the Orders of Commandery of the Knights Templar. In 1922 they instituted the first fraternal Educational Foundation with a fund which is administered in the form of loans to juniors and seniors in college. It is operated as a revolving fund and now contains more than $5,000,000.00. The Knights Templar Eye Foundation was begun in 1952.

Shrine — Knights Templar or 32nd degree Masons are eligible for membership. Teaches humility and devises "fun events" to raise funds for charitable purposes, chiefly crippled children's hospitals and burn clinics.

Daughters Of The Nile — Composed of women associated with Nobles of Ancient Arabic Order Of The Mystic Shrine. One of their principal activities is providing articles for the 22 Shriners Hospitals for crippled children and the burns institutes.

Order of Eastern Star — This order is dedicated to Charity, Truth, and Loving Kindness. It is international, and is composed of members of Freemasonry, their wives, daughters, mothers, widows and sisters.

Order of Amaranth — Composed of Master Masons, their wives, sisters, mothers, widows and daughters.

Order of DeMolay for Boys — Boys of good character between the ages of 13 and 21. Chapters are sponsored by Lodges of Master Masons or other bodies of Masonry.

Job's Daughters — Girls 12 to 20 who are daughters, grand daughters or nieces of Master Masons.

Order of Rainbow for Girls — Girls 12-18 with Masonic or Eastern Star sponsorship.

Proposals heard to upgrade water system

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

BUHL — City Council members in Buhl heard recommendations Tuesday night to upgrade the city water system including a new water storage reservoir and improvements to meet state Department of Health water standard requirements.

Gary A. Loe, engineer, and Clif Fitzsimmons, EIT (engineering in training) with the firm of Hamilton and Voeller, presented a report on an inventory of the Buhl system they began in June. Buhl city officials had employed the engineering firm early last year to make the study.

In July the Health Department issued an "unapproved" status for the Buhl system pending improvements. This has now been changed to a "conditional approval" status pending completion of the report and other positive action on the part of the city.

Engineers submitted two proposals. One would include building a new storage tank at a cost of $445,000. An alternative proposal would include covering the existing tank with a floating but sealed cover to keep out pollution from birds and wind. This would cost only about $49,000 but would not be a permanent correction.

If the new storage reservoir, a ground-level concrete tank, is constructed Buhl city would face a total cost of $730,000. With the cover on the existing storage tank and other improvements, the cost would be $282,000, the engineers estimated.

Another major phase of the improvement plan would be $120,000 estimated for additional and replacement water mains and lines to improve pressure throughout the city. A booster pump is recommended for the McCollum subdivision at a cost of $32,000.

Correction of a pump deficiency as required by the Department of Health, would cost $5,500 and additional check valves, $1,200. Improving the well house for Well No. 1 would require about $4,500. Relocation of a sewer line which the Department of Health reports is located too near the main water line from one of the wells would require about $1,200. Flushing all of the lines would cost another $18,900, the engineers reported.

Engineering costs, providing the more expensive plan is adopted would be about $98,000 with the lesser expensive plan running about half of this for engineering services.

Fitzsimmons told the council there is a need for better public education in Buhl. He said people in Buhl are using about three times the amount water they actually need. He suggested an increase in water rates which would encourage more water conservation on the part of water users.

He also said the city does not read meters in winter months but charges a minimum rate of $4.50 per month which encourages waste.

Lee told the city councilmen there are several avenues open to them for financing the needed improvements. He said the Housing and Urban Development agency will be mailing out applications for funding of such projects this month and urged Buhl to make application. Some assistance may also be available under FHA, he said, and noted local participation could be provided through revenue bonds to be repaid over a number of years through water service rates.

In July the public health department issued a "disapproval" status to the entire Buhl water system and stipulated no additional water hookups be permitted in the city until conditions could be upgraded.

Ian vonLindern, environmentalist with the Department of Health, said today the status of "conditional approval" was granted Buhl after a letter was submitted by the city, outlining plans for improving the system.

"We believe the city is now in the process of taking positive action to correct the problems and will need some time to do that," he said.

Meanwhile, one new subdivision has been approved by the Department of Health and other hookups will be approved as long as the city's upgrading effort remains positive, vonLindern said.

In some low pressure areas, he said, the department has recommended the city restrict additional service for new construction.

VonLindern said his department is scheduled to receive a copy of the Buhl water study and will review it and make recommendations to the council.

Bellevue residents asked to boil water

BELLEVUE — Bellevue's city water system may have become contaminated Tuesday for the second time since August, causing school children to be send home early in case of illness.

Schools closed again today and Bellevue residents have been advised to boil all domestic water until the city's water system is clear of mud from root blockage in a city water line and is replaced.

The problem, according to Bellevue Mayor L.T. Johnson, arose when a water line that feeds the city from underground springs became clogged with plant roots.

Johnson said workmen were replacing the clogged water line Tuesday when some mud passed through into the city's water system. The mayor said the new line should be hooked up today, and that the city's water was already clear again this morning.

Idaho Department of Health and Welfare officials are advising residents to boil drinking water for 10 minutes pending water sample test results due Thursday.

Meanwhile, the South Central Health District has arranged to bring in water from outside sources to supply Bellevue's elementary school and local restaurants.

Ian vonLindern, environmentalist with the Twin Falls DHW office, said he suspected "something happened" during work being done to prevent a reoccurrence of the previous contamination and caused city water to cloud up Tuesday.

Health and Welfare issued its previous advisory warning Aug. 12 after an irrigation reservoir flooded into springs six miles outside Bellevue from which the city gets its water. The department lifted the advisory Aug. 19, when water samples cleared up.

Tuesday's order to boil came after vonLindern received complaints from the elementary school water was cloudy and contained foreign matter.

The school released its students early, afraid they might become ill.

"Usually in a situation like this, some bacterial contamination occurs," vonLindern said.

Samples, taken by Dave Dingman, health district environmentalist, have been sent to Boise, where laboratory tests will determine by Thursday if bacteria has contaminated Bellevue's water once more.

If bacteria show up, DHW will advise citizens to keep boiling their drinking water until two clean samples in a row are received.

It takes 24 hours after samples are received to run a test, said vonLindern.

School district may end year in 'black'

By GEORGE WILEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls school district won't get the full contingency fund it budgeted this year, but the district may end the year in the black anyway.

Assistant superintendent Camden Meyer told the board at its regular meeting Tuesday night the district's assessed valuation would be certified this year at about $46.2 million, close to $1.2 million less than the $48 million tax base district officials anticipated in drawing up this year's budget.

Meyer told the board the decrease in assessed valuation would reduce the district's budgeted $100,000 contingency fund to about $42,000.

Despite this, he said this morning, the district could probably erase the estimated $100,000 cash deficit with which it began the fiscal year and end the year in the black.

Meyer said the $48 million estimated tax base had been purposely inflated in the budget to make sure the district got its full tax levy. He said the actual assessment of $46.2 million was still "a fairly good increase" over last year's tax base of about $41.9 million.

"The assessed valuation is about what I thought it would be. Very close," he said. "I think it's come out high enough that we'll still come out of the thing without any problems."

Meyer emphasized that the final balances in the budget wouldn't be known until year's end. He also stressed that the contingency fund, legal for the first time this year, would be carried over to next year if not needed to help erase the deficit.

School board chairman Howard Ronk expressed disappointment that the district wouldn't get the full contingency fund budgeted but noted even a reduced fund was an improvement over no fund at all.

"That's not too great, but it's better than a kick in the seat," Ronk said after Meyer's report.

In other action at its Tuesday meeting the school board:

—Authorized superintendent James Sawin to proceed with negotiations to turn the operation of two of the three district-owned school buses over to school bus contractor Richard Waite.

Sawin told the board the move could result in cost savings, better safety and lower insurance rates for the district.

—Discussed the sale of district water shares at the new junior high site, possibly to pay for future widening of Elizabeth Boulevard in front of the structure. The board also declined to deed the city a road right-of-way behind the new school. The city hadn't asked for the easement, but school board members suggested the deeding as a way of creating a straight-line thoroughfare along the south boundary of the school site.

—Commended the start-up of a needs assessment program which will see the public involved in computing the future requirements and goals for the district.

—Approved the sale of a right-of-way along Addison Avenue behind Lincoln Grade School. The district had previously withheld the right-of-way in hopes of getting a stoplight on Addison to provide a crossing for Lincoln children. The State Highway Department refused the stoplight and took the district to court to force sale of the easement for $15,600.

"We haven't just dropped it by giving them the right-of-way," she said

Board member Ruth Day emphasized Tuesday that by accepting the easement sale the board hadn't abandoned its quest for a stoplight.

"We haven't just dropped it by giving them the right-of-way," she said. "We're still pursuing it vigorously."

—Put off naming the new junior high school which will replace O'Leary Junior High. Day suggested that students themselves might name the new structure.

—Upheld a policy banning school activities on Sunday without special board approval. Board member Day argued for the retention of the Sunday ban but suggested the superintendent be given the discretion to allow time off from regular school as an alternative for weekend programming. The board approved Day's suggestion.

Kicking alcohol habit no easy chore

(Editor's Note: Following is the second of a two-part series outlining the problems and treatment of an individual at the Idaho Regional Treatment and Training Center, Gooding. Details have been changed to protect identities. Yesterday's article described behavior leading up to John's admission.)

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

GOODING — John's wife and his boss admitted him to the Gooding center when his drinking behavior became life-threatening. But even though Gladys and Mr. Kemp reviewed his self-destructive behavior of the past several months with him, John still refused to admit he had a problem with alcohol.

Nevertheless, he has now agreed to stay one week at the center "in order to collect his thoughts and get a little rest."

Following a thorough physical exam and necessary lab work, John has been under observation by the nursing staff until such time as his system has thrown off the more toxic effects of the accumulated alcohol.

Though still somewhat shaky, on the second day, he begins to take part in the treatment regimen, the overall aim of which is to help the resident get in touch with his or her feelings, attitudes, relationships and values, especially where they are self-defeating and, with this understanding, avoid further self-defeating behavior.

Of course, excessive use of alcohol is seen as self-defeating, and with the alcoholic, it is also seen as out of his control once he begins drinking. Consequently, the alcoholic must learn that he can NOT control his drinking, once begun, and, therefore, must observe total abstinence for the rest of his life.

A large order but one that many graduates of the center have successfully incorporated into their lives.

John, reluctantly, took his first step toward recovery with attendance at the regular morning lecture which this morning dealt with self pity, an appropriate enough beginning considering his recent behavior.

He was able to admit to himself, after some grumbling, that he carried around more than his share of self pity. Further, and more importantly, he could recognize how his self pity had worked against him in the past, contributing to a vicious circle of guilt, self pity and drinking to forget.

He also spent an hour with his counselor that afternoon which further helped clarify some of his questions about the self-defeating behavior pattern. He learned what the program would consist of in the following 28 days. It was clear immediately to him that there was little leisure time here. He was expected to attend lectures daily, as well as group therapy sessions.

In addition he was expected to meet regularly with his counselor on an individual basis to refine insights he had gained in group sessions. And somewhere in between he was to be tested by the psychologist and those test results interpreted to him.

Finally in his "spare time" he would read those books issued him by the center.

Well, that cinched it. He definitely was going home after the first week. No normal human could handle such a load, especially someone in his "delicate" condition, John thought.

However, he was surprised to find that as he began to be drawn irresistibly into the program, he had fewer and fewer thoughts of leaving and more and more desire to understand this disease of alcoholism and his unique response to it.

He also had become quite close to another resident who had entered the center shortly before him and their informal rap sessions with the other residents were proving quite enlightening.

And then, almost before he knew it, he was making arrangements to return home. His wife was coming the next day to pick him up. He was feeling an excitement with his new knowledge and insight, and he was anxious to be back to the "real world" to try his wings.

He felt better physically and mentally than he had in years and found himself looking forward to each day's challenge, rather than dreading the thought of opening his eyes and getting out of bed. This was an altogether exhilarating feeling that was almost overwhelming in its intensity.

But, all of these good feelings were now somewhat tempered by the sad feelings of parting from special friends he'd found here. He alternated between being on the verge of tears and at the brink of hysteria — emotions which would come under control when the intensity of this final day was past.

And then it was. Gladys arrived, they put his things into the car and following some tearful farewells they drove off toward home. John talked all the while of his new-found freedom from dependency on alcohol and his plans for the future in a way Gladys hadn't heard since they were newlyweds.

His spirit was contagious. Soon she was swept up in his excitement and by the time they reached Blue Lakes Boulevard and made their turn for home they might have been mistaken for a pair of inebriates getting an early start on their bar hopping for the day.

Whether or not John can maintain this conviction to turn his life around depends on several factors, according to Clay Robertson, center director. Among them are his continued willingness to rely on those support systems in the community which he learned about at the Center.

His excitement will pass as life returns to its normal routine. He can't count on that euphoria to sustain him. What he can count on is a new understanding of himself and how that self reacts to the drug, alcohol.

With that knowledge, and by dedication to a new life, he can make it.

Idaho jobs open in durable goods, government fields

BOISE (UPI) — Jobless Idahoans should look for work in the fields of manufacturing appliances or state government.

That's where the action will be in the Idaho job market, according to a recent study, but the state is focusing its training programs on clerical and farm management jobs which are declining in numbers.

A study by the Idaho Division of Budget, Policy Planning and Coordination, reports that the two sectors of the job market that will need the most employes in the next eight years are in manufacturing durable goods and state government.

Clerical workers are expected to comprise only 14-16 per cent of the total employment in 1985 and the study said employment for farmers and farm managers also is declining.

Projected levels of employment show, "there are far more farm managers than there is an annual need for," Howard Schrag, who conducted the study, said Tuesday.

The worker in greatest demand in coming years will be the data processing machine repairer, he said. Studies show jobs in that field will increase by 16.7 per cent annually.

That compares to a projected total employment growth rate of 2.17 to 2.57 per cent annually through 1985.

Schrag said the study that he and Jim Adams, of the Bureau of Managment Analysis and Information Systems, put together showed that the manufacture of durable goods, such as refrigerators, television sets and appliances will require more of the labor force than agriculture, mining or construction in 1985.

"The next highest industrial area of growth is in state government," Schrag said, followed by "total manufacturing" such as food processing. Mining came in fourth on the growth scale.

The service industry should show a great deal of growth but the state's training programs have turned out a "surplus of automobile mechanics, typists, radio and television repairers and food service" personnel, he said.

The main sources of training are under the Comprehensive Employment Training Act; WIN, for welfare recipients; vocational rehabilitation and vocational education programs in the state, Schrag pointed out.

Areas that "offer the most attractive possibilities" for state training that will lead to employment are in technical, health and service areas, the study suggested.

Schrag expected training and employment demands through 1985 to be heaviest for computer specialists, computer system analysts, veterinarians and dental hygienists.

That bears out the study observation that expansion of state training programs would be most beneficial in health, technical and managerial occupations.

The need for managers and adminstrators will increase about four per cent annually, the data showed.

Schrag said training programs available to women still are geared toward traditional female occupations of clerical, health services and food service workers.

Fruitland plans bond vote

FRUITLAND, Idaho (UPI) — The Fruitland School Board called Monday night for a $1.98 million bond election Oct. 11 in an effort to remedy gradual overcrowding of Fruitland schools by construction of a new high school.

If the bond issue passes the board plans to build a new high school adjacent to Fruitland Junior High School's football field. The school and support facilities would cover 24,661 square feet, considerably more than the existing high school.

Gradual population increases in Fruitland have put greater and greater strain on district school facilities. A majority of the junior high school's nine teachers teach approximately 33 students per class.

The amount needed to successfully finance the construction is estimated at 11.2 mills. The figure is based on an assessed district valuation of $9.3 million.

BPA survey readied

SPOKANE (UPI) — Bonneville Power Administrator Don Hodel said Tuesday an environmental impact statement prepared by his agency is the most comprehensive examination of future power needs ever undertaken.

Hodel said the 3,200-page document is costing BPA an estimated $3.5 million to prepare.

The massive impact statement, which outlines BPA's role in the future of Northwest energy production, is the result of a federal court ruling that such a document is needed in connection with the agency's power agreement with the proposed Alumax Aluminum plant in Oregon.

Church hits OPEC 'strangle-hold'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, said Tuesday that world financial markets will be threatened until a way is found to "break OPEC's strangle-hold on the price of oil in the world market."

Industrialized and developing nations are facing mounting deficits to pay for imported oil, Church told the Presidential Commission on Personnel Interchange.

Oil-producing countries are expected to gain $250-300 billion in surplus assets by 1980, he said.

In industrialized nations the cost of oil has hindered economic recovery and it has forced developing nations to borrow more money to meet oil import costs, tying up funds that could be used for development.

Church said, "The President's energy conservation program can naturally play an important part. But reducing consumption will not break the cartel. So long as OPEC controls supply it can simply cut back production to match demand, while upping the price at the same time."

"I can see only one way out of the present financial and political dilemma and that is to break the OPEC cartel's hold on the price of oil," Church said.

"The advent of oil from the Alaskan north slope and from the North Sea has created a temporary surplus situation and has given the oil-consumer nations an alternative, nonOPEC source of oil," he said.

"This excess supply situation is probably temporary and won't last for more than a few years which is all the more reason why the United States government should seize this moment to weaken the cartel's control over oil supplies and, hence, over its price."

Cactus Pete's tournament opens Thursday

JACKPOT — Three times defending champion Tom Storey of Las Vegas will be among 126 players to participate in the Cactus Pete's golf tournament starting Thursday at the Jackpot Golf Course.

But Storey will be aiming for the top spot in the professional sweepstakes this time around, not the championship of the Cactus Pete's open.

The tournament, for this year only, has been changed to a pro-am type format. The change was requested by the sponsoring Cactus Pete's and Horseshu Club casinos early in the year due to winter kill on the greens.

However, host Professional Billy Downs said, "They (the greens) have come on really fast. I think they're in good condition for what it could have been. Most of them shouldn't give anyone any trouble with putting the ball."

The format change should be fun in that no one could reliably predict the best ball winners until the final shot is made Sunday evening. That is because the amateurs and professionals will be shifted about through teams. The individual will keep the score of the team, which will no longer be an entity after two days.

The professionals will be battling for about $6,000, the bulk of that in the professional sweepstakes. There also will be amateur sweepstakes, net and gross, in two handicap divisions, depending on actual count.

Downs admitted to disappointment in the professional showing.

"We will only have 28 professionals here, and it is surprising how many from around this area didn't enter," he said. "Of course, there have been a lot of tournaments in the last couple-three weeks, like the section and other things. And some of them were a little afraid they would be playing on temporary greens, I guess.

"I'm sure we could have picked up 10 or 15 more pros from California but they're having a big tournament down there that doesn't end until Wednesday and there's the matter of the day needed for travel. Some of them say they are going to fly in."

The amateur field is liberally spiced with players from Washington and Montana. "I'd guess those two states combined would have more than any of the others," he said. "We would have liked to have more amateurs from around here, but the field filled pretty fast and with the low number of professionals we had to cut back the amateur field correspondingly."

Storey would have to rate as the man to beat for individual honors. A couple-three who could give him trouble from the intermountain area are Bob Betley of Ogden, Joey Bonsignore of Utah, Lenny Stroup of Nampa and Jerry Breaux of Boise.

The sponsoring casinos are offering the field nightly entertainment. Thursday will be the major social event with a Mexican food dinner at Cactus Pete's. Friday and Saturday will feature cocktail hours and Sunday will be the annual presentation of awards affair at the Horseshu Club.

Downs said the field will be divided into two squads and be sent off from shotgun starts at 8 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. each day.

In addition, the sponsoring casinos have arranged for golf days at three Twin Falls courses for wives of the players in the field. The women will play Canyon Springs Thursday, Blue Lakes Country Club on Friday and Twin Falls muny on Saturday.

Lopez wins title, Palomino retains his in ring card

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Danny "Little Red" Lopez, stung by a second-round knockdown, got off the canvas and stopped Mexico's Jose Torres in seven rounds Tuesday night for the World Boxing Council featherweight title in the first round of a WBC championship twinbill.

In the second half, Carlos Palomino, 147, scored an unimpressive victory over 33-year-old Italian Everaldo Azevedo, 145½, to keep his WBC Welterweight Championship.

The frustrated Palomino, making his third title defense, scored all the way to catch the elusive Azevedo who was fighting his 116th pro bout. But the closest thing to a knockdown came when the Italian slipped to one knee in the 14th round.

Referee Dick Young scored the fight 145-140 for Palomino under California's "10 point must" scoring system while judges John Thomas and Dick Delgado, David the Champion, had it 147-140, 147-139, respectively.

Azevedo held his opponent as the crowd booed and whistled throughout the inaction. Young warned the Italian twice of his holding tactics.

Palomino improved his record to 24-1-3 and Azevedo lost for the 12th time. He has 84 wins and 19 draws.

Azevedo began tiring in the 11th but was still able to use his 14 years in the ring as a pro to stay away from Palomino.

Making his first title defense, the 25-year-old Lopez looked sluggish in the opening two rounds and Torres surprised the champion by sending him to the floor with a right to the jaw with 25 seconds left in the second round of the scheduled 15-rounder.

But Lopez, whose nose was cut in the opening round, got up at the mandatory eight-count and weathered Torres' onslaught in the remainder of the second.

Fifteen seconds into the third round, Lopez sent Torres sprawling with two rights to the jaw. The 126-pound champion from Alhambra, Calif., had Torres down twice in the first minute of the fourth with a left-right combination and a left hook.

Torres, 22, fought back bravely in the fifth and when he staggered Lopez several times with his left.

However, Lopez took control of the fight again in the sixth, bombarding Torres with a series of right-hand leads. He continued to batter his foe in the seventh with left hooks and rights and Torres returned to his corner with his face a mass of blood.

At that point, Torres cornered referee Larry Roza-Ilia but their fighter was unable to compete.

Lopez, who won his title from David Kotey in Ghana last Nov. 6, scored his 33rd career knockout and improved his record to 35-3, while Torres of Aranda, Mexico, saw his record to drop to 28-6-1. Lopez weighed 125, Torres 126.

Michael Spinks, 168, Philadelphia, the second Olympic champion from Montreal on the card, needed only 51 seconds of the first round to dispose of Ray Elson, 174, New York in a scheduled eight-rounder.

Spinks, now 6-0 as a pro, had Elson down twice, the second time from a sizzling overhand right. Elson couldn't get up.

Elson suffered only his second defeat against 15 wins and a draw.

In the opening bout, unbeaten Alberto Sandoval of Pomona, Calif., stopped Mexico's Rafael Rubio at 2:44 of the third round.

Sandoval, 114, improved his record as a professional to 22-0 with his 15th knockout by flooring Rubio, 113½, three times in the third round before referee John Thomas stepped in and ruled it a technical knockout.

The 21-year-old Sandoval used left hooks to floor his Mexican opponent the first two times and sent him sprawling on his face the third time with the right hand. It was Rubio's sixth defeat against 17 wins and two draws.

Howard Davis, 135½, a 1976 Olympic champion from Long Island, New York, ran his record to 5-0 as a pro by making a punching bag out of one-time lightweight contender Tury Pineda, 137, Mexicale, Mexico, before scoring a fourth-round knowkout.

The clever Davis knocked Pineda out for the count with a left-right combination at 2:39 of the fourth in a scheduled eight-rounder. Although it was the only knockdown of the fight, Davis humbled Pineda at will with lefts and rights throughout the mismatch.

Pineda, who twice lost bids for the world lightweight title, suffered his fourth straight defeat and afterwards told the crowd on the ring microphone that he was retiring. It was Pineda's 10th defeat against 29 victories.

Barnes wants Nicklaus rematch

LYTHAM ST. ANNES, England (UPI) — United States Ryder Cup team captain Dow Finsterwald Tuesday said he would not doctor the pairings to insure a rematch between Jack Nicklaus and Brian Barnes in the Cup starting Thursday, but did not rule out the possibility of such a match should the draw turn up that way.

The United States defeated Britain and Ireland 21-11 in the last Ryder Cup encounter at Laurel Valley, Penn., two years ago, but Scotsman Barnes twice defeated Nicklaus in the singles. The two are on the teams again this year and Barnes is all in favor of a rematch.

"Give me Nicklaus on Saturday. I would love to hammer the hell out of him again," he said.

Finsterwald, the non-playing team captain, and British-Irish captain Brian Huggett talked over the possibility of arranging a Nicklaus-Barnes confrontation but decided against it.

"It would be up to each captain to submit his list and the pairings will fall as they may," said Finsterwald. "It has always been done that way and to arrange it would be wrong. If it does happen that Nicklaus and Barnes meet, it will be the luck of the draw."

Both team captains agreed the change in format this year will boost British and Irish chances of defeating the U.S. which has won 17 matches, drawn once and been beaten just three times — the last time 27 years ago.

This year, however, instead of 32 matches, the competition will be played over 20 matches with five foursomes on the opening day, five fourballs Friday and 10 singles Saturday.

Bookmakers quote the Americans as 1-10 on favorites, but Huggett dismissed the line as 'ridiculous'. "They have the same number of eyes, two arms, two legs and we will be playing the same size ball over the same course," said Huggett.

Huggett added the fact that the Americans were odds-on favorites and playing against a team which included five unknowns would not place his team under extra stress.

"They are conditioned to playing under pressure," he said. "Experience is the only teacher. It's a very rare breed of cat that can come out of the bag, go right into a major championship and do relatively well."

The teams include, from the United States, Jack Nicklaus, who will be playing in his fifth Ryder Cup match, Ray Floyd, Lou Graham, Hubert Green, Dave Hill, Don January, Jerry McGee, Hale Irwin, Ed Sneed, Dave Stockton, Lanny Watkins and Tom Watson, and from Britain and Ireland Brian Barnes, Ken Brown, Howard Clark, Eamonn Darcy, Peter Dawson, Nick Faldo, Bernard Gallagher, Neil Colles, Tommy Horton, Tony Jacklin, Mark James and Peter Oosterhuis.

Filer retains volleyball title

FILER — The Filer Wildcats defeated the Twin Falls Bruins Tuesday night to successfully defend their Filer invitational volleyball championship.

Filer defeated the Bruins 15-8, 8-15, 15-4 in the final game.

Earlier in the evening, Jerome ousted Kimberly 14-16, 16-14, 15-7 and in the championship semi-final Filer dropped Twin Falls 16-14, 15-11.

Twin Falls then rebounded to eliminate Jerome 7-15, 15-11, 15-7 before running into the Filer juggernaut again.

Soccer clinic slated

TWIN FALLS — A soccer clinic will be conducted this Saturday for Twin Falls students in grades fourth through sixth.

Terry Miller, city recreation supervisor, said Amin Zolfaghari, a professional soccer player from Iran, will conduct the clinic. He has played soccer throughout the world and was a member of the team that won the Asian championship three straight years.

The clinic is slated for Robert Stuart Junior High. The times will be 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. for fourth graders; 1 to 2:30 p.m. for fifth grade and 2:30-4 p.m. for sixth grade.

Miller said if sufficient interest is generated, elementary school soccer leagues will be organized.

Racquetball exhibition set

TWIN FALLS — A series of racquet ball doubles exhibitions will be presented Friday and Saturday at the Ballbuster courts on Falls Avenue.

Professionals Bill Grader, Morgan Seyes, Keith Luhnow and Buddy Meeker will whip the ball around the court Friday evening and Saturday afternoon.

The exhibitions will run from 7 to 9:30 p.m. Friday and 2 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. The public is invited.

Golfers set mixed scramble

TWIN FALLS — A mixed "fun scramble" will be held for members of the Twin Falls Men's and Women's Golf Association Sunday at the municipal course.

A scramble format will be used and each hole played in a different bit of gimmickry — like using a drive from tee through holing out on No. 2.

The field will have a barbecue at the clubhouse following completion of play.

Those planning to participate should sign up at the pro shop by 4 p.m. Saturday to facilitate pairings.

Pack horse clinic presented

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho Aggie Rodeo Club will sponsor a pack horse clinic Friday at 7 p.m.

The clinic will be held at the CSI Expo Center and will cover how to load the pack horse with horses available to practice on. Films and a discussion with two top area packers will also take place.

The clinic will be of special interest to ranchers, hunters and trail riders, although everyone is welcome. Cost will be $5.

Idaho gun rule works both sides of issue

There is a law on the fish and game regulations of the state of Idaho.

It simply states that no one may carry an uncased firearm while out in the field without an Idaho hunting license.

The interpretation of that law, with a knowing smile, as pertains to sidearms, is that it probably is legal to walk about the fields of Idaho with a pistol in your holster. It is when you pull it out of the holster — while still in the field — that you are breaking the law.

Okay, that's all understandable — a little gray as to the last part — but understandable.

The only thing that we wonder is this: Is that law constitutional? Or serviceable? Of course, its aim is to generate money for the fish and game coffers.

Now you have to survey that question from the viewpoint of the sportsmen, all of whom steadfastly believe (as we do) that the U.S. Bill of Rights guarantees all citizens of the United States the "right to own and bear arms."

In fact, the supporters of gun ownership use that as their basic argument against the anti-gun faction.

So it becomes a point, as it always does in matters of strong emotion, that the gun supporters directly contradict the constitutional right "to bear arms" when they require a person to have a hunting license before he can take a gun out of its case. It can't be made to work both ways.

It seems here it would be well for the state of Idaho to immediately delete that statute from its books because it is exactly such a law that could well result in a case that could reach the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court will immediately interpret for us exactly what was meant 200 years ago when the Bill of Rights was drawn up. They'd love the chance!

Gun supporters very possibly might like such an interpretation.

Now we don't want everyone to immediately think that they should be allowed to go afield with a gun and without a license and start shooting everything and anything they desire.

We are supremely confident that the Supreme Court will support any state which states it has the right to tax (through license fee) anyone harvesting any of the public-owned wildlife resources.

In the first place the Idaho rule by its very existence reads illegal motive into the very act of walking around with a .22 over your shoulder. (Remember, now, we're talking about 50 miles from town and up in the boondocks.)

In that respect, the Idaho regulation closely mirrors the anti-gun faction's proposition that no one would carry a gun around with an expressed purpose — and that purpose is to kill or now, too restrictive and leaves no opening for interpretation. Except, of course, for the human trait of putting the worst construction on everything.

We have heard people who have spent a lifetime in the outdoors guffaw at the idea that anyone would have to carry a gun as he rambled around the Idaho countryside for protection.

In 99.9 cases, surely. But we also can recite to you a story told us by a man who is employed by the Idaho Fish and Game Department. He never carried a gun. He never thought about protection.

One time he took off on a reconnoitering trip, walking over the countryside for a tentative couple-three days to take a grass roots inventory of wildlife in the area.

About a mile from his vehicle, he spotted a coyote. He thought nothing of it. A short time later he saw the coyote again, only closer. The animal skulked away. But soon was back, again closer. Usually a timid animal where man is concerned, the coyote and its behavior grabbed the man's attention.

The coyote kept coming closer and finally the man retreated. After a short time he was reduced to throwing rocks at the creature to keep it at bay and had a dickens of a time throwing rocks and getting his vehicle door unlocked before he could leap into safety. The coyote was at his heels as the door slammed.

Rabies perhaps was the logical explanation for that encounter. Something one would see again in a millenium. But once was enough for this man who has and continued to spend many days and nights in the Idaho outdoors. With one exception. Thereafter he always carried some protection on his hip.

"I couldn't help but think to myself 'what if I had run into that coyote a day and a half from my vehicle rather than just over a mile from it,'" the man explains.

On this matter we again assume that right thinking people understand that you don't need a weapon to protect yourself when you're picking wildlife flowers in the borrow pit 50 feet from your car.

No one thinks it silly to take out insurance for a round-trip airline trip to New York. Yet they don't see the gun, which probably should never be loaded, as insurance for some when they are out in the woods or desert for an extended period.

Still this all takes us afield from our original premise that the law requiring a license simply to carry a gun in the field, contradicts, it seems here, one of the nation's basically guaranteed rights.

Seaver tries for 200th win

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Tom Seaver will try to become only the fifth active major league pitcher to win 200 games when he starts for the Cincinnati Reds against the Dodgers in Los Angeles Thursday night.

And, Seaver says he eventually wants at least 300.

Catfish Hunter, Jim Kaat, Gaylord Perry and Ferguson Jenkins are the only active pitchers to have reached the 200 mark.

"When you're just starting out, you never really know how successful your career is going to be, so the round numbers seem to take on significance," said Seaver. "I can remember going for my 50th, then my 100th.

"It will be nice to get my 200th, whenever it comes. Then I can start thinking about 300 victories. That will become my new goal.

"Back in spring training this year, I remember saying to myself that I wanted to make sure I won at least 18 games so I could make it to 200 this season."

Seaver, 32, averaged 18 victories a season during his 10-year career with the New York Mets before being traded to the Reds this season.

Seaver, who has 199 career and 17 season victories going into his Thursday night start against the Dodgers, still has a shot at a fifth 20-victory season. He is programmed for three more starts after the Dodgers game.

'Bama had four of NFL's starting quarterbacks

ATLANTA (UPI) — The University of Alabama will have four alumni starting at quarterback when the National Football League opens its season Sunday.

Joe Namath (1962-64) will be starting for the Los Angeles Rams against the Atlanta Falcons, who handed their starting assignment to Scott Hunter (1968-70) when Steve Bartkowski reinjured his knee; Ken Stabler (1965-67) leads the champion Oakland Raiders; and Richard Todd (1973-75) has the New York Jets' post now that Namath has moved west.

Steve Sloan (1963-65), who used to fill in for Namath when Namath was in Bear Bryant's doghouse and then led the Crimson Tide to a 9-1-1 season on his own, tried his hand at pro football for a while (Atlanta, 1966-67), but then switched to coaching and now is the head man at 8th-ranked Texas Tech.

The present Alabama quarterback, junior Jeff Rutledge, was named Southeast Offense Player of the Week by UPI for his 7-8-215 performance last Saturday when the 3rd-ranked Crimson Tide beat Ole Miss, 34-13.

When Alabama plays Nebraska in Lincoln, Neb., in a regionally televised game Saturday afternoon, it will be the first time those two have met during a regular season although they have paired off three times in major bowls.

Alabama quickness overcame Nebraska beef in the 1966 Orange Bowl (39-28) and 1967 Sugar Bowl (34-7), but the Cornhuskers got their revenge in teh 1972 Orange Bowl (38-6).

Mississippi State comes off probation this week, and from the way the Bulldogs have started out, wins over North Texas State and Washington), they look like a sure-fire bet for a post-season bowl they were denied last year despite a 9-2 record. The Bulldogs losses last season were at Florida and Alabama and they play both of those foes at Jackson, Miss., this time around.

The record crowd of more than 84,000 that packed Neyland Stadium in Knoxville, Tenn., last Saturday to welcome Johnny Majors home paid $9 a head for the privilege — even the students.

Tennessee business manager Gus Manning explained that since the fall session hadn't begun yet, those students who wanted to attend the game had to pay full price with the understanding that they could get a partial refund if they turned in their ticket stubs after they registered for classes.

Georgia and Oregon may have set a record last Saturday when they turned the football over four times in six plays midway through the third period — three fumbles and an interception in a span of just about one minute.

The comedy of errors began right after underdog Oregon had jumped into a 13-12 lead with a 76-yard touchdown pass. Georgia lost a fumble on the first play after the ensuing kickoff, Oregon fumbled it back two plays later, Georgia lost another fumble two plays after that, and, on Oregon's next play, A pass interception set up Georgia's winning touchdown in its 29-16 victory...

Vince Dooley, now in his 14th season as head coach at Georgia, will be seeking his 100th victory Saturday when Georgia hosts Clemson. Dooley currently ranks 10th in won-lost precentage among all active college coaches with his 99-43-5, .690 record. Penn State's Joe Paterno heads the list at .813 while Alabama's Bryant, who was 64 last Sunday, leads in total victories with 263.

Phil Niekro, the 38-year-old knuckleball pitcher who leads the National League in strikeouts (237), has had a whale of a season considering the circumstances.

Niekro, pitching for the Atlanta Braves who have the worst won-lost record in the National League, has won 15 of his last 25 decisions after getting off to an 0-7 start. His latest effort was a six-hit, 3-1 win over the San Francisco Giants.

"The way we've been going we really want to give our young pitchers all the work we can," said Braves manager Dave Bristol. "But, Phil Niekro is going to get his turn every four days. He's earned it."

49ers cut Johnson, Sullivan

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The San Francisco 49ers cut former UCLA running back Kermit Johnson and former All-America Auburn quarterback Pat Sullivan as the club trimmed its roster the 43-player limit.

The team also released tight end Jim Obradovich, it was announced late Tuesday.

Johnson, a star of the defunct World Football League, had gained 124 yards on 36 carries in a backup role for the 49ers over the past two seasons.

Sullivan played for Atlanta for four years after graduating from Auburn, but did not play in 1976. His NFL totals show 93 completions in 220 attempts for 1,155 yards and five touchdowns, with 16 interceptions. His favorite collegiate target, Terry Beasley, was cut last week by San Francisco.

Obradovich played in 1975 for the New York Giants and joined the 49ers in 1976. His two-year totals showed eight catches for 76 yards and a touchdown.

U.S. wins opening America cup race

NEWPORT, R.I. (UPI) — Swashbuckling Ted Turner allowed Australia a 12-second lead at the start Tuesday and then used superior seamanship to boost Americas Cup defender Courageous into a one minute, 48 second victory over the Aussie challenger in the opening race of the world series of international yachting.

Precision sail trimming by the Courageous in the light rain provided the key to the United States win in the start of the best-of-seven series and skewered the Australian hope of a challenger winning an opening race for the first time since Endeavour of England beat Rainbow in 1934.

The 12-meter craft, sailing at 8 miles an hour, covered the 24.3-mile course in about 3-½ hours after a 12:10 p.m. edt start. The speed was extremely slow when you consider that an A.J. Foyt can go 500 miles at Indianapolis in that span of time.

Turner, the brash owner of the Atlanta Braves, sailed a conservative race after gaining a one minute, 18-second lead at the end of the first leg, a 4.5 mile windward dash on the Olympic course laid out about 10 miles off shore on Rhode Island Sound.

Surprisingly, skipper Noel Robins of Australia out-maneuvered Turner at the start and held a 12-second lead as the 30-ton craft headed into the first of three windward legs. Turner, sailing in 12.5-knot winds, began a series of brilliant tacks that pushed Courageous to a 20-boat length lead as the defender began the first of two 3.2-mile reaches. The 400-yard distance separating the two craft was so great that aerial photographers had difficulty getting Courageous and Australia in the same frame.

From that point on, Turner played it conservatively, something he has complained about in his Atlanta baseball team. He picked up eight seconds on the second leg and seven more on the third, giving Courageous a minute and 23 second lead at the halfway mark.

Robins made his finest contribution to the Australian effort at the start of the second half as the Aussies chopped 11 seconds off Turner's lead to trail by 1:12 after the fourth leg as moderating breezes floated over the area and Australia took advantage with its light wind sails to close gorund.

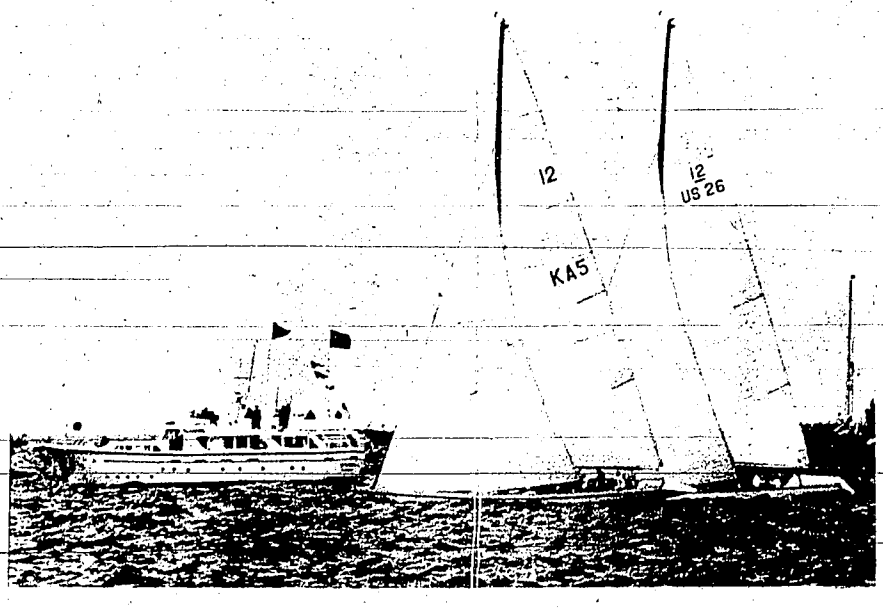
He matched Turner tack for tack and this attack furnished the Aussies with a brief moment of hope as he seemed to finally get the hang of proper usage of his sails.

But that burst was Robins' last gasp as Courageous picked up six seconds on the only downwind leg and then sailed into increased winds of 17 knots to gain 30 more seconds on the final 4.5-mile leg.

Courageous immediately hoisted a pennant indicating it would not ask for a lay day Wednesday. The Aussies were not as quick to respond.

The Americans displayed fine coordination in mounting their attack and did it with superior equipment. The Courageous' 80-foot high main mast was more rigid than the slightly flexible sail pole of Australia and this permitted the defender's crew to trim sail at a faster clip in the 23rd challenge for the "auld cup."

On the reaches, Turner's crew unfurled a flatter red, white and blue spinnaker and the colorful sail propelled Courageous a bit faster than the fat yellow, green and white sail used by the Aussies. Turner also used a lighter jib on the windward legs and it proved far superior to anything Robins could roll up on the mast.



Behind at start

CHALLENGER Australia gets a 12-second jump on American defender Courageous as the America's Cup races opened Tuesday. The U.S. yacht rallied to win by 1:48.

Idaho State invades Reno on Saturday

POCATELLO — Idaho State's rugged defense will get one of its sternest tests from high-scoring Nevada-Reno Saturday.

The contest will be held in Reno's Mackay Stadium at 1:30 p.m.

KSEI radio and the Bengal network will broadcast the game with the pre-game show starting at 2:10 p.m. Larry Eckenrode will call the play-by-play and Jim Beck will add color.

The Bengal defense held heavily favored Northern Arizona to a pair of field goals the first 55 minutes, but QB Herb Daniel triggered an NAU TD barrage of three scored within 2:17 and NAU won 28-7. Nevada-Reno trampled tiny Westminster of Salt Lake City 54-8 behind QB Jeff Tisdell, second-team Little All-American in 1976.

Most fans left the Minidome saying that NAU's three-touchdown margin was not indicative of how the game went, and ISU Coach Bud Hake agreed. "At no time can you be happy with a loss, but I've told our players I was more concerned with their playing up to their potential than winning. A two-and-a-half minute letdown killed a great effort."

ISU had led 7-6 before Daniel marched his Lumberjacks 80 yards, capping it with a 34-yard TD strike that appeared to burn strong safety Larry Chambers. However, Hake said, "Chambers expected free safety help on that pass and he tried to correct someone else's mistake."

He was pleased that in ISU's first game, with a new staff and new players, ISU had only three penalties for 12 yards.

ISU had no injuries, and Hake plans only one change in the starting offensive and defensive lineups. Steve Holzer, last year's starter at quarterback, will call the signals in place of Mick Spoon. Holzer played briefly at the end and completed three of six aerials against NAU's present defense.

The Reno Wolfpack had things their own way in trouncing Westminster. Tisdell played less than a half, but scored the airwaves with three TD passes. In 1976 he ranked third nationally in total offense and fourth in passing.

His favorite target is wide receiver Jeff Wright, who grabbed five Saturday, and took in 55 for 871 yards last year as a frosh. Tight end Jim Musser caught two passes Saturday, both for TD's. Fullback Frank Hawkins led the rushers with 105 yards, but he'll be hard-pressed to keep ahead of Manny Rodrigues, Nevada Las Vegas' fine fullback of two years ago, who's been out with a knee injury lately.

UNR's defense is led by a pair of familiar faces, one of which has been around for a long time, and the other of which is a newcomer to Reno. Defensive tackle Doug Betters (250) was at Montana last year, and cornerback Alex Willis has sparked the Wolfpack secondary for years.

Miller leads NCAA in rushing division

MISSION, Kan. (UPI) — Terry Miller of Oklahoma State, one of the leading candidates for the 1977 Heisman Trophy, established a lead in the NCAA Division I rushing department with 189 yards in his opening game last Saturday.

Miller carried 25 times for the 189 yards and a 7.6 average to take a 5-yard lead in rushing over Mike Williams of New Mexico. Miller leads all active collegians in career rushing and needs only 969 more yards in his last 10 games to reach the 4,000-yard plateau.

The only other collegiate runners to gain 4,000 yards in a career were Tony Dorsett of Pittsburgh, Archie Griffin of Ohio State and Ed Marinaro of Cornell.

Gifford Nielson of Brigham Young took the initial NCAA passing lead with 27 completions in 45 attempts for 318 yards and two touchdowns against Kansas State. If Nielson can average 256.6 yards passing over the final 10 games of his career, he can break the alltime major college record of 7,549 yards set by John Reaves of Florida.

Other leaders were—Paul Profflit of Drake in pass receiving with 10; Doug Williams of Grambling in total offense with 362 yards; Ray Crisp of Marshall in all-purpose rushing with 229 yards and in punt returns with a 45.5 yard average;

Pitt still believes it can win bowl bid

For just three days after the Panther offense tried to show the world that the loss of one man, in this case injured quarterback Matt Cavanaugh, can break a team, Sherrill and Johnson told reporters they expected to take the 1977 team to a post-season bowl game.

Sherrill also was downright cheerful about the flak he's been taking since the Panther offense blew a 9-0 lead and lost the season opener to Notre Dame, 19-9, by fumbling away the ball eight times after Cavanaugh broke his arm in the first quarter.

The surprising show of optimism in the face of Pitt's dismal collapse began Tuesday while Johnson was giving a routine rundown of the Panthers' strong defense against the Fighting Irish during a guest appearance at Sherrill's weekly media luncheon.

Johnson made reference to the fact that the team would have to play 11 more games before the final verdict could be made on the defense's strength.

When asked if the phrase meant Johnson was assuming the Panthers would be attending a bowl game, he quickly answered yes.

Since that type of open confidence is usually considered by football coaches to be premature, unlucky, in bad taste and a good psychological weapon for opponents to use against them, everyone in the room looked quickly at Sherrill to see if Johnson's remark had caused him to choke on his turkey divan.

Sherrill, however, just remarked caustically that the Panthers had better get into a bowl game because Johnson already had spent his bonus money. Later, Sherrill confirmed that he and his staff did expect a bowl bid.

Tmt did not mean, Sherrill said, that Pitt fans did not have any reason to be worried by the outcome of Saturday's game. "People are upset," he said. "They SHOULD be upset."

But, he added, "The reactions of the people, the fans in Pittsburgh are ones I enjoy having. Five years ago, you wouldn't have seen that if Pitt lost. They didn't care. But now they do, and you can't have a top-level program unless you have people in that position."

Yankees trim Boston 4-2 to increase league lead

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ron Guidry of the New York Yankees turned the "heavy lumber" of the Boston Red Sox into mere kindling Tuesday night in the opener of a three-game series that could decide the American League East title.

Aided by Mickey Rivers, who contributed a two-run homer and ninth-inning game-saving catch, Guidry shackled baseball's most powerful team on just five hits and pitched the Yankees to a 4-2 victory which increased their AL East lead over Boston to 2½ games.

Using primarily a blazing fastball, the 27-year old southpaw humbled the Red Sox as if they were Little Leaguers in posting his sixth straight triumph and 14th victory in 20 decisions.

"I said before the game that if he had his stuff he would take the bats right out of their hands," said Yankees manager Billy Martin. "He has a lot of guts which is the mark of a great pitcher. But I wouldn't say this was his best game. He's pitched better games for us this year but perhaps none more important."

"I just wanted to be sure I didn't psyche myself out," said Guidry. "I figured if I could hold them to three or four runs, we would win. I tried to approach this game like every other one. I didn't want to let it get away from me. When we got the last out in the ninth, I must have jumped three or four feet off the ground, that's the first time I've ever shown any emotion on the field."

Astros 13, Reds 4

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Cesar Cedeno homered and collected four hits for the second straight game and Bob Watson added a three-run blast Tuesday night to help the Houston Astros score a 13-4 victory over Cincinnati and move to within 2½ games of overhauling the World Champion Reds for second place in the National League West.

The victory was the 16th in the last 19 games for the Astros who went over the .500 mark (53-52) for the first time since April 20.

Brewers 6, Seattle 5

SEATTLE — (UPI) — Don Money hit a solo homer in the top of the 10th inning Tuesday night to give the Milwaukee Brewers a come-from-behind 6-5 victory over the Seattle Mariners.

Robin Yount's opposite-field, three-run homer — only his third this season — had tied the game 5-5 with two out in the top of the ninth.

Money's 24th homer, also to the opposite field, landed atop the right field fence and bounced back onto the playing area to drop Seattle starter Glenn Abbott's record to 11-11.

Cal 12, Texas 7

ARLINGTON, Tex. (UPI) — Dave Kingman drove in four runs with two homers — one of them coming in an eight-run California seventh inning — Tuesday night to propel the Angels past the Texas Rangers 12-7.

The Rangers' loss took some of the glitter off Gaylord Perry's advancement past Cy Young into fourth place on the all-time strikeout list. The 38-year-old Texas right-hander struck out nine before he was shelled in the seventh to raise his career total to 2,824.

Chicago 6, Twins 1

CHICAGO (UPI) — Jim Essian and Oscar Gamble each homered and Francisco Barrios went the distance for his 13th victory Tuesday night to provide the Chicago White Sox with a 6-1 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

The defeat was the sixth straight for the Twins, their longest losing streak this season.

Cards 3, Cubs 1

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Garry Templeton singled home a pair of fifth-inning runs Tuesday night to stake Bob Forsch to his 17th victory and give the St. Louis Cardinals a 3-1 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Forsch, 17-6, gave up four hits over five innings before leaving at the start of the sixth because of a strained leg muscle. Pete Falcone retired the final 12 batters in succession to record his first major league save.

Mike Phillips singled with one out to start the Cardinals' three-run fifth, he advanced on Forsch's sacrifice bunt and Chicago starter and loser Ray Burris walked Lou Brock.

Expos 8, Mets 5

MONTREAL — (UPI) — Rookie Stan Papi tripled home two runs to highlight a five-run, eighth-inning rally Tuesday night which carried the Montreal Expos and Steve Rogers to an 8-5 victory over the New York Mets.

Montreal entered the bottom of the eighth trailing 4-3, but tied the score on consecutive singles by Warren Cromartie, Chris Speier and pinch-hitter Jerry White.

LA 18, Padres 4

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Dusty Baker drove in five runs with a double and a homer during a 10-run second-inning rally Tuesday night which started the Los Angeles Dodgers off to an 18-4 rout of the San Diego Padres.

The Los Angeles win, combined with a Houston victory over Cincinnati, reduced the Dodgers magic number for clinching the National League West to four.

The Dodgers sent 13 men to bat in the second with Baker driving in the first two runs on his double and the final three with his 27th homer. The major and National League records for RBI in one inning is six. Steve Garvey also had two hits in the inning and drove in a pair of runs.

Bucs 2, Phils 0

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Phil Garner drove in two runs while Jim Rooker and Rich Gossage combined to pitch a five-hitter Tuesday night in leading Pittsburgh to a 2-0 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

The loss kept the Phillies' magic number for clinching the National League East title at 10.

Garner's RBI groundout following a triple by Frank Taveras gave Pittsburgh a 1-0 lead in the first. Garner then drove in an insurance run off loser Jim Kaat, 6-9, with a sixth inning triple which scored Rooker, who had singled.

Rooker, 12-9, struck out six and walked only one in his 7 2-3 innings. He also kept the Phillies from mounting a serious threat until the fifth.

Pats cuts veterans

FOXBORO, Mass. (UPI) — In a surprise move, the New England Patriots Tuesday waived veteran wide receivers Randy Vataha and Marlin Briscoe to bring their team down to the 43-player limit for Sunday's regular season opener against the Kansas City Chiefs.

Vataha, 28, is a seven-year veteran who tied a club record with 51 receptions in 1971. The standout Stanford graduate was named to the American Football Conference all-rookie team that year. He led the club in receiving in 1975.

Many scouts thought Vataha wouldn't make it as a pro because of his size — 5-foot-10 and 170 pounds. But he became one of the most popular Patriots in the early 1970s after several long touchdown catches from former Stanford teammate Jim Plunkett.

After 46 receptions for 720 total yards in 1975, Vataha caught only 11 passes for 192 yards last season.

A Patriots spokesman said Vataha has been claimed by an unidentified NFL team. He has 24 hours to decide whether he wants to go to the claiming team or become a free agent.

Briscoe is a 10-year veteran from Nebraska who celebrated his 32nd birthday last Saturday. He has not yet been claimed by another team. Patriots head coach Chuck Fairbanks said.

Briscoe played for six AFL and NFL teams before the Pats acquired him last fall. In 1970 he was an All-Pro with the Buffalo Bills, catching a league-high 57 passes for 1,036 yards.

SCRAMBLING — Mickey Rivers climbs the wall in a vain attempt to catch Carl Yastrzemski's long drive at Yankee Stadium Tuesday night. Hit went for a triple but Yankees won 4-2.

Oakland obtains defensive tackle

OAKLAND (UPI) — The Oakland Raiders, getting ready to defend their world title, have obtained veteran defensive tackle Mike McCoy from Green Bay.

They got the 270-pound McCoy in return for defensive lineman Herb McMath and two draft picks.

They also confirmed they had traded sub offensive lineman Dan Medlin to Tampa Monday for a draft pick, giving the Bucs five former Raiders on their squad.

It was also believed the Raiders placed their top draft pick defensive back Mike Davis of Colorado, on injured waivers. Davis broke a finger several weeks ago.

McCoy admitted he was stunned by the trade, but was not complaining.

"I look at this as a great opportunity," he said. "The Packers have a youth movement and I'm 29 years old. I think they have been on a youth movement for too many years. There's no stability."

Raiders coach John Madden said McCoy "is a big, strong guy, the kind we like."

But it was hard to see where McCoy will perform for Oakland. Otis Sistrunk, John Matuszak and Dave Rowe are the starters in Oakland's three-man defensive line, with Pat Toomay and Bob Brown backing up. Charles Phillyaw, an additional starter when the Raiders move into a four-man front, is sidelined with knee problems but is expected to return to action soon.

Oakland did not disclose who else they cut to get down to the 43-man limit.

The Raiders host San Diego Sunday in their season's opener.

Cowboys to start five rookies

DALLAS (UPI) — Dallas Cowboys coach Tom Landry Tuesday announced a lineup for Sunday's season opener against Minnesota that includes five players who will be starting their first NFL contest and a sixth who will be opening the season at a new position.

Three of the new starters will be on defense, including defensive tackle Randy White, linebacker Tom Henderson and cornerback Aaron Kyle. Middle linebacker Bob Breunig, who played at an outside linebacking spot last year, will start the season in the middle.

On offense, guard Tom Rafferty and tackle Pat Donovan will begin the NFL season in a starting role. But the starting lineup will not include Heisman Trophy winner Tony Dorsett, who earlier this week voiced an opinion that he needed more game work.

"We will spot Dorsett," said Landry. "Even though he may not like that we are going to do it. He still has a lot to learn. Preston Pearson (who will start ahead of Dorsett) has been doing a very good job."

Landry said the mere presence of Dorsett on the bench makes this year's offensive unit more of a threat than the one which opened last year with five straight victories.

"Anytime you have Dorsett involved in your offense you have to be more optimistic," said Landry.

Landry also said he expected his defensive unit to perform well despite the changes. "I think we will be a little stronger defensively this year," he said. 'I don't know if we will play any better because our team pulled so well together down the stretch last season.

"The major question is at middle linebacker where we lose so much experience with the retirement of Lee Roy Jordan. This is not to take anything away from Bob Breunig. It just takes time for a person to learn."

Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1977 by The Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 34-year-old woman earning a top salary as an executive, but when it comes to managing my personal life, I'm a dummy.

For the last two years, I've had this 28-year-old fellow living with me. I'm hooked on him. He can't hold a job because he hates to get up in the morning, so I've been supporting him. My friends tell me to kick him out, but I can't bring myself to because he's wonderful company and I really enjoy living with him.

He admits to seeing other girls while I'm at work and insists that there's nothing wrong with it as long as we're not married.

Abby, he wants to marry me, and says that once we're married he'll shape up, get a job and work steady, but I'm leery.

Half of me says, "Marry him" and the other half says, "Don't." What do you say?

TORN APART

Moocher proposed

DEAR TORN: Listen to the half with the brains in it and don't marry him.

DEAR ABBY: My parents were divorced when I was 3, and from that time on, I lived with my mother. Mom married Jake when I was 8, and he has been great to me. I never saw my real father (Lloyd) much until I graduated from high school because he also married again and was busy with the children by his second wife.

Now I'm 21, and in the last couple of years I've gotten very close to Lloyd. Maybe it's because he's my blood relative, but I have a special feeling for him.

I'm getting married soon and deep down in my heart I want Lloyd to give me away, but when I told my mom, she hit the ceiling. She said Jake would be crushed, and besides HE was paying for my wedding and he should give me away.

Someone suggested I have both Lloyd and Jake give me away, but I'm afraid it might look like I couldn't make up my mind. Can you advise me?

NOVEMBER BRIDE

DEAR BRIDE: It's not uncommon for a bride's natural father and stepfather to share the honor. I think it would "look" beautiful. But how it would "look" is not as important as how it would "feel." And under the circumstances, I think everyone (especially you) will feel better if no feelings are hurt.

DEAR ABBY: A letter in your column touched me deeply. It was from a woman who was strongly attracted to a man, but resisted the temptation to have an affair with him because although she was single, he was not.

I had a similar experience. I met the man I thought was perfect for me. It was mutual, but we were both married. I couldn't run because I worked closely with him.

I often dreamed of a romantic encounter with him, but I knew it was impossible. Over the years I struggled with my feelings, but I managed to keep them under control.

We have developed a warm and friendly relationship that means so much more to me than a sneaky affair that could have destroyed my marriage and his.

In a society where sex is cheap, and people grab whatever they want no matter whom they hurt, I've found something special, and it will stay that way—because God has given me strength in times of weakness.

NOT SORRY

CONFIDENTIAL TO "NO NAME IN ALEXANDRIA": True, you may not "need" the money. But a man who borrows money needs to pay his honest debts. Yes, by all means, let him know his note is overdue.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope please.

your health

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb,

After the birth of my first child my hair fell out. It did 't last long.

Three months after my second child it fell out in bunches. This lasted almost a year and a half. When I had my third child it grew faster and thicker. However, right after he was born the same thing happened again. What can be done? I just cannot figure out why when I am pregnant it grows so fast and afterward this happens.

Dear Reader,

Many women share your concern. Your hair has a growth cycle from two to six years for each hair. At any one time some of the hair follicles will be resting not producing a shaft of hair. These follicles are not dead, only sleeping. Normally this represents about 20 per cent of your hair follicles.

During pregnancy a larger percentage of the hair follicles are active. This causes more of them to reach the resting phase of the cycles at the same time after pregnancy and the hair gets thin. So, the thicker your hair is during the second and third trimester of your pregnancy the thinner it is apt to be for a while after your pregnancy.

Because the hair has a variable life cycle from two to six years the length of time it takes to get back to a normal ratio of 20 per cent resting and 80 per cent active explains why you have had differences between your first pregnancy and your subsequent pregnancies.

Never fear. This is not a sign of impending baldness and there is no medicine you should take for it. It is self-correcting.

Dear Dr. Lamb,

Last year I got what the doctor told me was eczema. I'm in my early 50s. I had patches of red on my elbows and knees. The doctor gave me a shot and some pills and salve. Now I have it again. Should I go back to the doctor or just get my pills refilled? Will I always get it now? Do nerves have anything to do with it because sometimes it does itch.

Dear Reader,

Eczema is a frustration for the patient and the doctor. The first problem is to be certain of the diagnosis. The second is to treat it even if you have the right diagnosis.

No one knows what really causes eczema. It doesn't seem to be an infection and it isn't even a good allergic response.

Nervous or emotional factors do seem to be important but a susceptible person may be born with the tendency to break out in eczema.

Yes, you should go back to your doctor to see about your medicines. Anyone who has eczema or thinks he or she has eczema needs careful professional care with follow up examinations. Because treatment is very difficult and sometimes impossible the doctor may need a lot of time and patience in trying to help his patients.

Business boost

GEOFFREY HENSHAW, 37, Jacksonville, Fla., says the rising cost of fuel oil has boosted his business as more people use fireplaces to heat their homes. Henshaw, dressed in his traditional chimney sweep attire, holds the brush used in his trade.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — As fuel prices continue to soar and more Florida homeowners turn to fireplaces to ward off the winter chill, chimney sweeps are making a comeback.

"A lot of people are burning small packs of coal or wood now to cut down on their fuel bills," said Geoffrey Henshaw, 37, a native of Manchester, England, and a chimney sweep for the past 15 years.

"And now they're building new houses with chimneys, giving people an option to heat their homes with oil or use the fireplace," he said.

"Of course, there are not as many homes with chimneys in Florida as there are up north. But even here more and more people are building chimneys in their homes or using previously unused chimneys."

Henshaw, who works for a Jacksonville Beach home cleaning firm, learned the chimney sweep's trade from his great uncle in England.

The charge for cleaning a chimney can run up to $50 — "depending on the size and type of chimney," Henshaw said. It can take from one to three hours.

Instead of boosting a small boy with a brush up the chimney from below — the practice in the old days — Henshaw uses a heavy brush equipped with attachable extension rods.

"When a chimney gets plugged, it begins being inefficient, and that is a waste of fuel," he said. "Also, the soot can catch fire, drop down and spill across the fireplace, creating a fire hazard."

And that holds true both for coal and wood-burning chimneys — "wood fire soot is just as dangerous when it builds up," he said.

Besides the distinctive tools of his trade, the bearded Henshaw usually is dressed in one of the symbols of his job — a top hat.

"It adds a bit of color to the job," he said.

Tips given for consumers

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI) — Two research scientists at the University of California Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory say consumers bargain shopping for major household appliances should stop looking at price tags and start asking about energy efficiency.

David Goldstein and Robert Clear said their studies indicate there can be as much as a $50 difference in the annual operating cost of energy wasting and energy saving refrigerators, and with an average 20-year life span that adds up to $1,000.

Goldstein recommends shoppers ignore refrigerator sales claims about energy miser switches and insulation.

"You can't tell an efficient appliance by appearance," l ays. "You must look at numbers because it's the bottom line that counts. Most refrigerators should have a tag which shows the amount of kilowatt hours they use per month, which is what wise buyers should be aware of. If the appliance does not h ve a tag, ask the salesperson."

Current electricity costs in northern California are 4.8 cents per kilowatt and a difference of ten kilowatt hours per month to operate a refrigerator a ' up to $115 or the life of a refrigerator.

In kilowatt hours per month makes the same different to your monthly bill as $13 of purchase cost, except the bill is paid to the electric company instead of he appliance store," Goldstein said. "Prudent shoppers can save money even if they buy an expensive refrigerator, providing it's an economical energy user."

In a study of three refrigerators, the two scientists found the most expensive model had an annual operating cost $25 lower than the cheapest model.

The researchers also studied stoves and air conditioners and found gas operated stoves 35 to 50 per cent cheaper to operate than electric stoves.

They also said automatic electric igniters, instead of standard pilot lights, could save about $8 per year, depending on the cost of gas; a savings of $120 over the average 15 year life of a gas stove.

When buying an air conditioner, the scientists suggested consumers find out the EER, or energy efficient ratio, of the model they are interested in.

"The higher the EER number, the more efficient the air conditioner," said Goldstein. "An EER number of 10 to 12 is good, where 4 or 7 is bad. Try to get the EER number of an airconditioner from the salesperson before you buy."

Women push convention cities boycott

© Newhouse News Service

SAN JOSE, Calif. — The National Women's Political Caucus, declaring final passage of the Equal Rights Amendment (ERA) its "first priority," has launched an economic boycott of such popular convention cities as Miami, Atlanta, Chicago, New Orleans, St. Louis and Las Vegas.

The reason: They are located in some of the 15 states that have yet to ratify the ERA. Thirty-five states have done so, but the amendment will not become law unless three more states ratify it before the March, 1979 deadline.

In voting to withhold tourist and convention dollars, the caucus made official and emphatic a practice it had been following informally. It asked its allies to make the same move and it voted to boycott specific products — as yet undetermined — from non-ratifying states. A woman from Oregon suggested Georgia peanuts might be a good place to start.

"I hear Louisiana is already feeling the pinch" because other pro-ERA organizations are boycotting Louisiana peanuts, said C. Delores Tucker, Pennsylvania secretary of state.

"Maybe we can increase the pressure by calling upon (Commissioner) Peter Rozelle and the National Football League to move the Super Bowl elsewhere," Mrs. Tucker added. (This season's Super Bowl is scheduled for New Orleans.)

The 1,500 delegates to the NWPC convention here also condemned the Justice Department decision to support Allan Bakke's court appeal, which challenges minority admission programs at colleges and professional schools.

To lead it in its renewed fight for ERA, the 6-year-old caucus elected Millie Jeffrey of Detroit, 65, a veteran labor organizer and former member of the Democratic National Committee. By a 2-to-1 margain, she defeated Sally Lunt, who teaches health policy and social welfare history at Boston University's school of social work and is a "feminist therapist" in private practice in Cambridge, Mass. The convention heard little dissent on issues, only occasionally on means to its desired ends. The focus was on such skills as campaign polling, debating, ERA opponents, and caucus organizing. "We're not just here to listen to speeches," said Jane McMichael, NWPC executive director. "We are learning skills to take away with us."

But the women responded enthusiastically to some stemwinding rhetoric from feminist speakers. Time and again activists like Mrs. Tucker, Gloria Steinem, Jill Ruckelshaus, Rep. Barbara Mikulski (D-Mo.) former caucus head Frances "Sissy" Farenthold and ERAmerica leader Liz Carpenter won standing ovations as they tried to stir the troops for the ERA fight.

"You must commit the next 18 months of your life" to getting ready for the upcoming national women's meeting in Houston and for the March, 1979, ERA deadline, Mrs. Ruckelshaus, a Republican who formerly chaired the International Women's Year Commission, said.

"You will have to go dead-on, gut-busting, flat out for 18 months.

Such commitment, she said, would exhaust the women, might cost them some love and support from their families, and might not even yield success. "But you will say that once in your life you paid everything you had for justice," she concluded.

Valley man writes script

KEN MARTINEZ

FILER — Ken Martinez is a piano player, who somewhat to his own surprise, is now a movie script writer.

Formerly of California, Martinez, 26, has been playing piano since the age of four and has recently been associated with bands in California. He came to Buhl to work for Green Giant because he felt he wasn't making enough money in the music business.

Martinez said he submitted a script to Kaz-Co, a small theatrical company owned and operated by Jim Newlan, San Carlos, Calif. several months ago when applying for a job with Newlan.

"I had forgotten all about it when one day Newlan contacted me and said he wanted to use the script for a movie," Martinez said.

Martinez and Newlan were slightly acquainted while attending college although Newlan was a senior and Martinez a sophomore. Martinez said Newlan came here looking for him and on seeing the area decided it would be a good location for filming the outside scenes of the movie. It will be headquartered in Filer as a central location, Martinez said.

"I'm mainly interested in starting a band here," Martinez said. "Naturally I'm excited about the use of my script in a movie, but I'm disappointed too. There are a lot of changes in the original story."

When he wrote the script, Martinez says, it carried a special message that people from the United States can introduce the American way of life to people in other countries, but they are not always the best for those in other areas. Change doesn't necessarily make it better, he said.

In rewriting the script for filming, he says, this message has been lost.

"The Thorn," as the film is called, is the story of a rock band, playing a concert in modern times. Suddenly an electrical storm shorts out the electrical equipment, and the band members are taken back in time to the medieval era of Europe.

One of the band members who arrived late with no time for putting on his make-up becomes the hero of the story and the other band members fall into character as the "bad guys," Martinez says.

An adventure in the days of knights and fair maidens follows with the hero rescuing the fair maidens, including the one with whom he has fallen in love, from a cave where they were taken by the "bad guys."

When the short circuited electrical equipment is repaired and the band is "zapped back to modern times," Martinez says the story ends. In his original script, the fair young maiden appeared in the audience to smile at the band member who had no make-up.

In the revised version, Martinez says the film simply ends back on the concert stage.

There will be a cast of 169 persons, Martinez says, and he understands most will be hired locally for walk on or group scenes with no lines or very few lines.

There will be some nude scenes, in the cave, which Martinez says he also does not like, but said these will be only a minor part of the movie.

Under terms of his agreement with Newlan, Martinez has some say in how the casting is decided and in suggested changes in the filming.

Shooting is expected to start in October or November, with the mountains and canyon of this area providing the outdoor settings.

Martinez says Newlan has also asked him to write music for the film, which he hopes to do.

"Music is really my field and I am more interested in this part of the production than casting and other details," he said.

Couple says vows in Catholic rites

BUHL — April D. Herzinger and Wade L. Bluemer were united in marriage on Aug. 13th at the Immaculate Conception Catholic Church of Buhl.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon L. Herzinger, Buhl, and the bridegroom is the son of Shirley Heitz, Bell Rapids, and Warren Bluemer of Mountain Home.

The church altar was decorated with flower arrangements of multi-colored mums, carnations, daisies and baby's breath, together with a pair of seven candelabra accented with greenery and multi-colored ribbons.

In a Nupital Mass ceremony with Father Malachy McNeil as celebrant, Mrs. Barbara Clausen of Twin Falls began the procession as bridesmaid. Mrs. Leslie Stutzman of Jerome served as sign language interpreter for the mass and music.

The bride's sister, Melody Anne Mai, was matron of honor, followed by Wendy Bluemer sister of the bridegroom as flower girl and Robbie and Brian Kennison, ring bearers, nephews of the bride. Rings were carried on white pillows with yellow, pink and lavender ribbons to coordinate the color scheme.

The bride, given away by her father, wore a white satin gown with chiffon overlay, decorated with grape clusters. The dress featured a fitted bodice with self-train and a V-neckline edged in scalloped lace. The waist-length veil and headpiece also were in matching scalloped lace.

She carried a cascade of yellow roses and frenched carnations, white daisies, baby's breath and minature fern, accented with yellow, blue and lace streamers.

Serving as best man was Randy Bluemer, brother of the bridegroom. Also in attendance was groomsman Mark Herzinger, brother of the bride, and Randy R. Mai and Gary L. Kennison as ushers.

Georgia Blastock of Filer sang during the ceremony as the mothers of the bride and bridegroom looked on.

The reception was held at the bride's home and tables were decorated with yellow, pink and lavender. The cake consisted of heart-shaped tiers trimmed in pink, with small side cakes in the shape of wedding bells.

Cheryl Annette Herzinger presided over the guest book while Marlene Matsuka and Leslie Ikye were in charge of gifts. Punch was served by Norma Lou Herzinger and the cake was cut by Arlene Kyles and Mary Pehrson. Coffee was served by Patricia Anne Dory. All are aunts of the bride.

Special guests at the wedding included Mr. and Mrs. Guy A. Gulley, grandparents of the bride from Ely, Nev., the bridegroom's grandfather, Clarence Bluemer from Payette, and grandmother, Elva Bluemer of Jerome.

Valerie Kennison, Cheryl Herzinger and Melody Anne Mai hosted a kitchen shower at the bride's parent's home, and an office shower was held for the bride at Kellwood where she was employed.

It may be safer to stay anonymous

LONDON (UPI) — There is a shy real estate agent in San Diego, Calif., who, according to Prof. James Ellias, is the most lusted-after man in the United States.

Who is the desirable fellow? Ellias, of California State University's Institute of Sexual Research in Los Angeles, is not saying.

"Wisely he has decided it may be safer to remain anonymous," Ellias told an international conference on "Love and Attraction" at Swansea University Friday.

Hundreds of sociologists, psychologists and sexual counselors have been meeting all week in what is billed as the first major International seminar in the chemistry of male and female love.

All Ellias would say about the bashful San Diego man was that he is in his 20s and that a majority of 500 women questioned rated him the tops on the basis of a nude full frontal photograph.

They were "ordinary" women aged from 18 to 59 and ranged from housewives to students. Seventy-five per cent of them rejected similar photographs of professional musclemen as unnatural freaks with problems, he said.

The real estate man turned on "most women of all ages," he said. They not only approved of him sexually, but commented that he looked "gentle, kind and normal and the type of guy they would go for."

The photographs the women were shown in the experiment varied from "normal" build males to body building enthusiasts, Elias said.

In general, the women in the study showed a preference for sunbronzed male nudes and said they found them exciting and sexually stimulating, Elias said.

Elias, 38, was aided in the study by his wife Veronica, also a sociologist, and a team of women researchers.

He said the team found that a majority of women felt "it is time we took the initiative in Sex."

On this basis, Elias said he believed there was going to be a "big sex breakout" by women who will do the chasing in encounters with men, rather than wait to be pursued.

By Oswald & James Jacoby

Oswald Jacoby was playing rubber bridge in Indianapolis back in 1934. Before the game started there had been a discussion of four-notrump conventions. Jacoby said that he had tried the Culbertson one and found it most unsatisfactory.

Indianapolis hosts told him that a young Hoosier insurance man named Easley Blackwood had invented a convention that they all played. Jacoby felt that he really didn't need any conventions to bid slams. He was told how simple the Blackwood convention was. Four notrump asked for aces. Responder replied to show how many he had and that was that. He was also told that Easley Blackwood was going to be a kibitzer that night.

Jacoby sat North and almost fell out of his chair when his partner produced a vulnerable two-club overcall.

He also had no idea what to bid and finally tried six clubs. West led a heart, East cashed two aces and that was that. Bidding in diagram shows how well Blackwood would have worked.

It also convinced young Jacoby that he was going to play Blackwood from then on. Before anyone could say anything, he turned to Easley and said, "You've sure made a sale."

ECONOMICAL, EASY AND NUTRITIOUS SUPPER

tuna adds new touch to pizza

New idea for pizza lovers

Don't panic when the kids yell, "Hey Mom, may I invite a couple of friends to stay for supper?"

With the aid of a few basics — from the cupboard and your refrigerator shelf, you can please the whole gang and satisfy their ravenous appetites, too.

Here's a pizza with a new touch — Tasty Tuna Pizza, from The R. T. French Test Kitchens in Rochester, N.Y. With biscuit mix, canned tuna, mayonnaise, cheese, and eggs on hand, you're all set to create this nutritional meal in minutes for lunch or supper. Extra zest to accent the tuna is provided by prepared yellow mustard.

To keep the children occupied while the pizza bakes, entertain them with a tray of whimsical vegetables characters. What a great time they'll have dismantling the vegetables and dipping them into the enticing Dandy Dip of cream cheese flavored with seasoning mix for sloppy joes. Vegetables were never so much fun!

For maximum nutritional value and taste appeal, add fruit juice or milk, plus oatmeal cookies with raisins.

TASTY TUNA PIZZA

4 cups biscuit baking mix
1 cup cold water
2 cans (7-oz. each) tuna, drained
1 tablespoon French's Instant Minced Onion
2 tablespoons French's Prepared Yellow Mustard
¾ cup mayonnaise
2 hard cooked eggs, sliced
2 cups grated American cheese
Chopped tomatoes, green pepper, and olives, if desired.

Mix together biscuit mix and water until dough holds together; knead dough 10 times. Divide dough in half and roll out two circles or pat to fit two medium-size pizza pans. Combine tuna, mustard and mayonnaise; spread over pizza dough.

Arrange egg slices and cheese on pizzas and sprinkle with chopped tomatoes, green pepper and/or olives, if desired. Bake in 425 degree oven 15 to 20 minutes. Makes two medium-size pizzas.

DANDY DIP FOR VEGETABLES

1 package (8-oz.) cream cheese, softened
1 envelope ½-oz.) French's Seasoning Mix for Sloppy Joes

Cut up raw vegetables such as radishes, carrots, cucumber, zucchini, celery.

Combine cream cheese, contents of seasoning mix envelope, and milk; blend well and chill. Serve with cut up raw vegetables or create whimsical characters from vegetables pieces held together with food picks. Makes about 1½ cups dip.

Spark up fall menu

Germans intent on dining well seek not only good food and drink but Gemutlichkeit, an atmosphere of warmth and fellowship. And since the fall harvest is in there's even more reason to celebrate, "Oktoberfest" gets underway. Overshadowing all festivities throughout Germany, about 10 million visitors drop in on Munich in late September during this 16-day spree of food and drink.

Few of us can be "Oktoberfest" participants, but we all can celebrate the harvest in the American tradition with the annual October "Porkfest." Inspired by the robust German festival, this celebration marks the time of year when pork becomes more abundantly available at the meat counter. And what a wide variety of cuts there are to choose from — loin roasts, ribs, ham and smoked shoulder rolls among them. All these make great table fare but probably most prominent on both German and American menus are pork chops, because of their versatility and speedy preparation.

It's a special feast indeed when pork chops teamed with apples, one of the favorite fall harvest fruits, are brought to the table. If you think you've tried all possible pork and apple combinations here's a new and delicious one — Fall Festival Pork Chops. In this recipe, tart apples are grated and included in a celery-onion stuffing that's pocketed in the chops.

Specially seasoned with pumpkin pie spice, the stuffing contributes to fall flavor, and in combination with the juicy pork provide a stimulating eating experience.

FALL FESTIVAL PORK CHOPS

6 pork rib chops, cut 1¼ to 1½ inches thick
½ cup chopped onion
¼ cup chopped celery
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1½ cups coarsely grated tart apples
1 cup fine semi-soft bread crumbs
½ teaspoon pumpkin pie spice
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons chopped pecans or peanuts, if desired
Salt and pepper

Make pocket in each chop by cutting into the chop with a small, sharp knife on rib side parallel to the surface of the chop. Be careful not to cut through the opposite side. Lightly brown onion and celery in butter or margarine. Add apple and bread crumbs; sprinkle with pumpkin pie spice and ½ teaspoon salt. Add pecans or peanuts, if desired.

Heat 2 to 3 minutes, stirring occasionally. Fill pocket in each chop with approximately ¼ cup stuffing, distributing evenly. Place chops on rack in broiler pan so surface of meat is 5 to 7 inches from heat and broil 10 minutes; turn and broil 10 minutes. Continue broiling until done, 6 to 12 minutes, turning occasionally. Season with salt and pepper. Six servings.

SEAFOOD NEWBURG

¼ cup butter or margarine
½ pound mushrooms, trimmed and sliced
1 cup chopped scallions
1/3 cup flour
1 cup dry white wine
1 cup (½ pint) light cream
½ teaspoon curry powder
1/3 cup grated parmesan cheese
1 pound shrimp, cooked, shelled and deveined
1 pound flounder, fillets, cut into one-inch strips
½ pound scallops
Salt and pepper
½ cup cornflake crumbs
2 tablespoons melted butter or margarine

In a saucepan, melt butter and saute mushrooms until wilted. Add scallions and saute for a few minutes. Stir in flour. Gradually stir in white wine and cream. Add curry powder and cheese. Stir over low heat until sauce bubbles and thickens.

Add shrimp, flounder and scallops. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Pour mixture into a 2½-quart Corning Ware glass-ceramic casserole. Mix crumbs and melted butter. Sprinkle mixture evenly over casserole. Bake in a preheated moderate oven 350 degrees for 40 to 60 minutes or until top is golden brown. Serves six to eight. Take it to the table in same casserole dish — as a special treat for eyes and appetites.

Masons plan state meeting

By LARRY SWISHER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — When Idaho was a new territory in the 1860's and gold and silver lured men from all over the country to seek their fortunes, among them were Masons who banded together for mutual protection.

Thus began Idaho's Masonic Lodges, which will hold their 110th Annual Communication Thursday, Friday and Saturday in Twin Falls.

Eugene Pippitt, Twin Falls, who completes his year as Grand Master Saturday with the installation of new Grand Lodge of Idaho officers, says members of lodges elsewhere who came to the mining camps were a natural brotherhood.

"They banded together," he says, "They knew if they were Masons they could rely on each other."

And in mining camps those days, among all the various "elements" who swarmed after the precious metals, you never knew who you could trust.

By 1867, five lodges numbering 185 members had been established and formed the Grand Lodge of Idaho, A.F. & A.M.

One hundred and ten years later, Idaho has 84 constituent lodges with over 14,000 members.

About 200 Masons and their wives will represent those lodges at this year's annual communication. They will conduct annual business and elect new officers, hear committee reports and speeches, and gather for tours and social events.

Organizations — springing from the worldwide, long-lived Masonic lodges are the Order of the Eastern Star, DeMolay, Job's Daughters, Scottish Rite, York Rite, Shrine and the Order of the Rainbow, among others.

It's the largest fraternal organization in the world, appearing in recorded history in the 1300's A.D. The Masonic tradition dates back to ancient times, although there is no literal proof of its existence before the Middle Ages.

At that time, Masons formed guilds for protection against robbers while traveling from town to town.

Pippitt laid the cornerstone at the New Wood River High School in Hailey last fall, and California's Grand Master may lay 80 to 100 cornerstones in a year.

The Grand Master performs this ceremony upon invitation. Pippitt says more public buildings used to be dedicated by a Grand Master in the past. Now in Idaho only one to three such cornerstone layings take place each year.

Pippitt says few of the 49 Grand Lodges in the U.S. are gaining members, and attendance "isn't so much as you'd like," because there are many other activities, to occupy members' time.

However, he says, "It's not anything you're concerned about. It always comes and goes in cycles."

Although the Masonic organization is not a religion, and men of any faith may ask to join, Pippitt says Masonic teachings are taken primarily from the Bible.

And like churches, membership increases in times of crisis, such as a war, when people seem to need such teachings, Pippitt believes.

"You take a good man and try to make him better," he says in explaining the purpose of the Masons. "It's a way of life, and we are concerned with problems all over the world."

Part of the Masons' code prohibits using the organization for business or personal gain. Another part of the code prohibits the group from advertising itself.

Grand Master is an honorary position; although Pippitt receives travel expenses for visiting every lodge in Idaho and attending the Grand Masters' national meeting in Washington.

While he could not possibly accept, Pippitt was invited to visit every grand lodge in the U.S.

Pippitt says working for charities, such as the Shriners' Crippled Childrens Hospital, is a large part of being a Mason.

"It's all based on helping someone else, as well as having a common ground for meeting and enjoying each other's company."

U.S. coffee consumption declines

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (UPI) — American coffee drinkers may use less of their favorite brew per person this year than at any time in the last half century, according to a Colorado State University consumer specialist.

Letta Jasper, an associate professor of consumer marketing, says higher prices for coffee and a trend by younger people to favor soft drinks have played a role in the coffee decline.

"Coffee consumption drops have been evident recently," she said. "In fact, the per capita consumption for coffee for 1977 is expected to be the lowest since 1925."

Ms. Jasper said coffee consumption during the first three months of 1977 dropped by three pounds per person, more than a half-pound drop from the same period last year.

Since reaching a peak of $3.40 per pound in mid-April, green coffee bean prices have been moving steadily downward, she said. That could start a trend of increased coffee buying.

"The price of coffee beans was just under $2 per pound at the end of July," she said.

"Market lags may delay the peak in retail prices for several more weeks, but wholesale coffee prices are declining and some grocery stores and other retail outlets have already begun to show cuts in coffee prices."

Ms. Jasper said if the current crop projections in Brazil are not hampered by unforeseen weather conditions, green coffee prices may decline even further.

The high price has not been the only reason for a drop-off in coffee consumption, she said, noting a steady decline in recent years.

"Per capita consumption has been trending downward for a number of years, and the reasons have not all been high prices," she said. "In 1962, per-person consumption was almost 16 pounds while 1976 consumption was 12.8 pounds."

She said young Americans have shown a preference for soft drinks over coffee, one of the factors leading to lower coffee drinking practices.

Eating out way of future

CHICAGO (UPI) — Recent reports and surveys indicate that eating out will be the way of the future, says the National Live Stock and Meat Board. One projection indicates food service industry sales will be $118 billion for 1981. Sales for 1976 were about $74 billion for U.S. commercial and non-commercial food service operations. The five-year outlook study forecasts an average annual growth rate of ten percent, including a six percent inflation factor.

Based on the continuation of current trends in consumer demographics, economics and life style, the proportion of total meals bought away from home is expected to increase to 35 to 38 percent by 1981. Population trends, more leisure time and an increase in the number of eating establishments compatible with casual life styles are other factors that will contribute to food service growth, the board said.

Solar power future rests with space age cells

Second of five articles
By PETER J. BERNSTEIN
© Newhouse News Service

WASHINGTON — It has become a matter of deep conviction among environmentalists that the future of solar power rests with the photovoltaic cell.

Photovoltaic cells — known as solar cells — are a space age marvel, at once the most sophisticated solar technology and the simplest, most environmentally benign source of electricity yet conceived. They have no moving parts and are consequently quiet, extremely reliable and easy to operate. They are not limited by scarce materials since solar cells can be made from silicon, one of the earth's most abundant elements.

Solar cells already exist and have for years powered most space satellites. They consume no fuel, produce no pollution and have long lifetimes.

Despite growing evidence that such devices could become a competitive source of on-site power for the home and factory within a decade, federal energy planners regard photovoltaics with skepticism. The reason is their high cost.

Solar cells are the most expensive source of solar power now available. Prices must drop 20-40-fold before photovoltaic cells could come into general use as a source of electricity, are further reductions and needed before central generating stations would be feasible.

Nevertheless, the cost picture is by no means bleak. Solar cells currently are handcrafted to meet stringent aerospace requirements and are assembled much like a Swiss watch. There has been no concentrated effort to apply mass production techniques to reduce the cost. Solar enthusiasts believe a stepped-up research and development effort coupled with large-scale government use of photovoltaic cells could put the cells on a competitive basis with other forms of generating electricity in less than a decade.

Congress is expected shortly to provide special funds for solar cell development. After its return from recess next week, the Senate is scheduled to take action on solar programs contained in the national energy bill, including a $98-million purchase of photovoltaic cells for federal buildings. A similar provision, likewise designed to reduce the cost of solar cells through mass production, is pending in the House.

A recent study done by the Defense Department found that up to $500 million could be saved in the next five years if the government immediately started a program of using photovoltaic cells to replace 20 per cent of the gasoline-driven electric power generating units currently used at military outposts.

The study, made public by environmentalist Barry Commoner, further found that if the government pumped the cost of the program — about $400 million — into the relatively small solar cell industry it would be sufficient to make photovoltaics competitive by 1983 with the more conventional means of generating electricity, such as coal and nuclear power.

Depending on who does the figuring, solar cells now cost between 20 and 40 times as much as conventional sources of electricity. However, as a source of power just during daylight periods of peak demand, photovoltaics cost only four to five times as much as conventional power plants plus distribution systems. Consequently, solar cells now are being used to provide power at remote locations, such as forest lookout towers, lighted offshore buoys, irrigation systems, unattended radio repeater stations, and even some small villages in Arizona and Alaska.

Moreover, the costs of conventional power plants have shot up in recent years while the costs of photovoltaic cells have rapidly declined, from $200,000 per peak kilowatt in full sunlight in 1959 to about $13,000 per peak kilowatt today. Most experts believe that prices will continue to fall rapidly.

"It looks as if we'll be able to bring the cost of photovoltaic cells down to $2,000 to $3,000 per kilowatt in the next two years or so," said Morton Prince of the Energy Research and Development Administration (ERDA).

Prince, who played a key role as a physicist in developing the first solar cells at Bell Laboratories in 1954, heads ERDA's program to improve the efficiency of solar cells cut from huge crystals of silicon, the dominant commercial technology.

He said researchers are using plastic lenses to concentrate the sunlight falling on solar cells and thereby reduce the costs of photovoltaic arrays. Another approach to cutting costs has been to use less efficient but much cheaper thin-film materials, such as combinations of cadmium sulphide and copper sulfide. "Thin-film cells are the most exciting prospect in solar energy today," said Piet Bos, director of solar energy programs at the Electric Power Research Institute, research arm of the utility industry. "The only problem is they're not anywhere near the required efficiency or cost," he said.

Bos explained that fundamental physical constraints limit the theoretical efficiency of solar cells to under 25 per cent; that is the amount of solar power converted directly into electricity.

Numerous practical problems force the real efficiency lower — for silicon photovoltaics, the efficiency ceiling is about 20 per cent. To obtain maximum efficiency, relatively pure materials with regular crystal structures are required. Such near-perfection is difficult and expensive to obtain.

For instance, silicon material is melted when it is purified, cooled and shipped to the crystal growing facility where it must be melted again to grow a crystal, again cooled, and then heated at least once more during cell fabrication, and then cooled for the third time. No attempt is made to recover any of the heat wasted when the cells are cooled, hence the low efficiency.

Most researchers believe that high efficiency will prove to be the overriding requirement for phovoltaic cells to be used with concentrating lenses. This accounts for growing interest in gallium arsenide cells, despite the fact that ehy are now as much as 10 times as expensive as silicon, which is a prime element of common sand.

The ERDA goal is to get the cost of solar cells down to $1,000 per kilowatt by 1980 — a reduction that is expected to make feasible a broad range of specialized applications, ranging from lighted highway signs to on-site generating systems for electrochemical plants.

Donald Beattie, ERDA's assistant administrator for solar programs, expects that the first substantial on-site photovoltaic systems will be about 100 kilowatts. "If we meet our cost goals — $500 per peak kilowatt by 1986 — I would think that by the late 1980s or early 1990s there will be a number of economic applications for solar cells," he said.

The idea of solar cells is particularly alluring because the cells use diffuse radiation, in contrast with solar power towers, and thereby could function in most parts of the country.

Arrays of solar cells are expected to prove economical in shopping centers, schools and other buildings with large roof areas. And industries that have large needs for off-peak power may find that the energy from solar cells, even if available only in the daytime, would prove economically attractive.

From a net energy perspective, photovoltaics have added appeal. Studies of the energy needed to manufacture such cells shows that the energy debt can be paid in less than two years of operation. With more efficient operations, the energy payback could be reduced to a matter of weeks. If the energy some cells produce is fed back to produce more cells, photovoltaics can become true energy "breeders" — making more and more energy available each year without consuming any non-renewable resources.

What's the catch? None, solar researchers say, though minor engineering problems all too often have a disconcerting habit of growing to giant size. The biggest problem just now may be the need for time as well as money to work the bugs out of solar cells.

'Filthy Five' label for firms

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Because of their opposition to enforcement of clean water laws, the trade organizations of the steel, oil, chemical, paper and electronic utility industries have won the label "Filthy Five" from environmentalists.

"We have labelled these trade associations the 'Filthy Five' because of their avowed efforts to gut the federal water pollution control program," said Peter Harnik, coordinator of Environmental Action, the group chiefly known for originating "Dirty Dozen" political campaigns against congressional anti-environmentalists.

The trade associations named were the American Iron and Steel Institute, the American Petroleum Institute, the American Paper Institute, the Manufacturing Chemists Association and the Edison Electric Institute.

Perfect landing for shuttle flight

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (UPI) — The shuttle orbiter Enterprise with two astronauts at the controls blasted away from its jumbo jet mother ship today and glided in for a perfect landing on a dry lake bed runway.

It was the second free flight of the Enterprise, the 75-ton spaceship that will be in the forefront of America's space program for the rest of this century.

Bolted to the back of its mother ship, the Enterprise took off from this desert test site at 9 a.m. MDT and climbed to an altitude of about 28,800 feet for the critical separation maneuver.

The separation was delayed for about three minutes when mission control in Houston lost radar contact but the delay caused no apparent problems.

Explosive bolts blew the spaceship up and away from the Boeing 747. The Enterprise veered right and began making a U-turn for its five-minute powerless flight back to earth.

The gliding spaceship reached a speed of more than 330 miles per hour and performed several maneuvers to test its aerodynamics and its flying ability before air brakes were used to slow it down to a landing speed of about 250 mph.

Astronauts Joe Engle and Richard Truly alternately used both a control stick and a computer to test the ship's flight characteristics at various speeds.

The Enterprise made a perfect landing at 9:54 a.m. MDT.

The spaceship is to begin making round-trips to outer space and back with men and equipment during the 1980s. Its engines function in space but cannot work in the earth's atmosphere.

Like the first free flight, the second was a near perfect demonstration of the Enterprise's aeronautics. The second free flight originally was scheduled for Aug. 30 but was postponed after a tropical storm drenched the desert runways.

A third free flight was tentatively scheduled for Sept. 30 and other tests were to be made through October.

The Shuttle Orbiter was to be blown free of the 747 mothership at about 25,500 feet over the Mojave Desert, bank to the right, and then begin its descent.

The tandem aircraft were to reach a speed of 310 mph in a shallow dive before explosive bolts separate the two aircraft.

The Shuttle, with Engle in command and Truly at the controls as pilot, was to test the ship's aeronautics at both high and low speeds. High speed tests were to be made in a series of maneuvers at 333 miles per hour as it approaches the dry lake bed for a landing.

Deadline week away

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. James McClure reminded Idaho students desiring to attend one of the military academies that September is the deadline for applying.

McClure said Tuesday letters indicating an interest in applying must be received by Sept. 20 to insure that there is adequate time for completion of the application process before nominations are made in December.

Students beginning their senior year in high school are eligible to apply for entrance to the academies with the classes entering in June, he said.

Question arises as to which spectator sport appeals the most to youthful students. It's football, unquestionably. Baseball comes in second. And basketball is third. This is true for both boys and girls, according to the surveytakers. Thereunder, though, the boys and girls don't agree. Boys like hockey. Girls prefer tennis. Boys name soccer. Girls choose gymnastics. And down the line, boys mention auto racing, which girls don't even rate among the top 10. And girls note wrestling, which boys don't list among the top 10.

During his first five years of practice on television, that fictional doctor known as "Marcus Welby, M. D." received more than 250,000 letters from viewers, most of whom asked for medical advice.

Author Lewis Carroll, who wrote "Alice in Wonderland," stammered severely when he talked to grownups, but not when he talked to children.

THE BOUNTY

Q. "You know that ship, the H. M. S. Bounty, that figured in the story 'Mutiny on the Bounty'? How much did it cost?"

A. The original? About the equivalent of $9,750. But the reproduction of it used in the Clark Gable-Charles Laughton movie cost $750,000.

Q. "What's the smallest thing known to science?"

A. The neutrino. It's neither mass nor energy, but it mixes in some weak way with the protons and electrons, etc., in the nuclear menagerie. Those science boys say the neutrino is "the nearest thing to nothing we know of."

'WHO AM I?'

Inquires a savvy Montanan named Frank Adams: "Can your Roots researcher help me? Last year I asked her to become my wife, and she gave me a decidedly negative reply. So to get even, I married her mother. Then my father married the girl. When I married the girl's mother, the girl became my daughter, And when my father married my daughter, he became my son. When my father married my daughter, she became my mother. If my father is my son and my daughter is my mother, who am I?"

It's a matter of record, too, that a World War II Army supply sergeant was officially outfitted with no footwear except bedroom slippers because the military couldn't come up with the size 15 EEEEE shoes that he needed.

If you want your refrigerated lettuce to stay fresh longer, advise the experts, wrap it in a paper towel to absorb the moisture. Simple, but most effective.

Statisticians probe Blaine juvenile plan

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN
Times-News writer

HAILEY — Like accountants carefully examining a company's records, the Law Enforcement Planning Commission (LEPC) early this past spring poured through all the juvenile records for the past two years in Blaine County police stations and the courthouse.

LEPC researchers have been invited to make a comprehensive statistical analysis of the Blaine County juvenile justice system. Combing through every juvenile file on record for 1975 and 1976, LEPC statisticians logged juvenile contact with the justice system in those two years and charted the subsequent progress of these kids who have gotten into trouble.

This "systems rate study," which, aimed to determine what happens to youngsters in the Blaine County juvenile justice system, was completed in the early summer and recently released to the public.

Touted as the first comprehensive study of a juvenile justice system in Idaho, local officials hoped the county's unique juvenile program would show with flying colors and provide evidence for the effectiveness of a juvenile system which — rather than sending kids in trouble straight to the courts or reform schools — has tried to develop alternative programs for young offenders.

Ironically, the fact that this study is the first of its kind in Idaho has proven unfortunate because no standard of comparison exists to check the effectiveness of this juvenile system's innovative techniques.

LEPC researcher Steve Clark said, "The main purpose of the study was simply to provide a descriptive flow of the juveniles picked up by law enforcement officials in Blaine County and then to see what happens to them and how many tend to repeat."

Over the two-year period from 1975 through 1976, LEPC analysts identified 522 cases where juveniles came into contact with the justice system. The greater number of contacts occurred in 1975 with 310 incidents, while the number dropped to 212 contacts in 1976.

The contacts ranged from simple warnings by police to probationary behavior agreements to actual petitions into court. Of the 522 contacts, 293, or 56 per cent, were warned and then released by authorities. One hundred thirteen juveniles were placed on behavior contracts and 44 were petitioned into court.

Blaine County youth services officer Mack Reynolds, who requested the study, admits the results were not as glowing as he had hoped.

"As far as I'm concerned," Reynolds said, "it seems to indicate we are weaker than what we'd like to be and anticipated, and yet in terms of comparing our data with state statistics, we are doing pretty well."

Reynolds claims the value of the report, which took some three months to prepare, lies in the "sheer description" of the system it has provided police.

"From this point on, it gives us a baseline to track our successes and failure," Reynolds says.

One indication of a system's success or failure might be measured in the rate of recidivism, or the number of kids repeatedly getting into trouble.

During 1975 and 1976, 91 "repeat juveniles" found their way onto county records and accounted for 276, or almost 60 per cent, of the total contacts for this period. These 91 juveniles had 185 subsequent contacts after their original brush with police.

Local law enforcement officials acknowledge this high rate of recidivism is disappointing.

The Blaine County juvenile diversion program is unique in Idaho. In selected cases, juveniles have the opportunity to make a behavior agreement with the youth services officer instead of going to court. Signed by the youth, the parents, and Reynolds, the juvenile agrees to abide by standard stipulations and sometimes additional stipulations which tailor the contract to individual situations.

A second unusual feature of the juvenile program is a warning notice. When police pick up a juveniles for breaking the law, they may decide to warn and release the youth instead of taking other action.

If the juvenile is warned and released, a warning notice is filed in police records and copies are also sent to Reynolds and the parents. Reynolds should be advised of virtually all activities of youth in the county.

Yet, despite attempts to make early identification of pre-delinquent contacts, a large number of youths are repeatedly involved with the authorities.

During the two-year period, 293 juveniles initially contacted were warned and released. Forty-seven, or 16 per cent, had a subsequent contact, consisting of a petition, behavior agreement or warning and release within three months.

A total of 113 youths was placed on a behavior agreement during 1975-1976 and 24, or 21 per cent, were either petitioned, placed on another agreement, or warned and released within three months.

Of 44 juveniles petitioned during the period, 11 youths, or 25 per cent, had a subsequent petition, behavior agreement or warning and release within three months.

The LEPC study has had practical value, according to Reynolds. He feels the report has tipped off the police departments to at least one area where they have become lax.

In 1975, police actively documented so-called "status crimes," or offenses committed by juveniles that would not be offenses if committed by an adult. But in 1976 these contacts dropped and the number of serious crimes jumped.

In 1975 pure status contacts totaled 186 or 60 per cent of the 310 contacts, and in 1976 they numbered 85, or 40 per cent, of the total 212 contacts. But over the two-year period, burglaries jumped from 5 in 1975 to 18 in 1976 and vandalism rose from 1 incident in 1975 to 15 incidents in 1976.

Anti-smut crusade conducted by mayor

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Mayor Ralph J. Perk, running a one-issue "War on Pornography" campaign for re-election this fall, has added embarrassment to his arsenal of anti-smut weapons.

The city's Law Department is engaged in a title search to find out who owns buildings housing "26 known pornography outlets in the city."

The mayor said the owners will be asked to cancel the leases of the pornography dealers. If they refuse, he will make public a list of owners.

"Most of the owners probably live in prosperous suburbs," Perk said. "Probably no one in their community or among their relatives knows that they are living off of smut."

Earlier, Perk placed a ban on adult magazines at airport newsstands and banned a scheduled performance of the nude musical "Oh Calcutta!."

His most ambitious project, however, was a pornography poll circulated to each household by city garbage men. The results of the poll, described by some jurists as useless in court because of prejudicial questions, are to be used as a barometer of community standards on obscenity when smut dealers are brought into court.

BPA sets public input meets

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Bonneville Power Administration has planned 28 community briefings, workshops and response meetings throughout the Pacific Northwest to obtain comments on a draft environmental impact statement on the role of BPA in the regional power supply system, it was announced Monday.

Don Hodel, BPA administrator, said the meetings would cost the agency $350,000 in addition to the $2.6 million spent to prepare the 3,100-page, single-spaced impact statement.

"We want to involve as many people as we can in this process. Down the road, if the statement is challenged, we would hope a reasonable federal judge will consider it to be an adequate statement," Hodel said.

He said a "major overhaul" of the Northwest power system is likely to result and the impact statement would be the foundation document in making the changes.

"We have no sacred cows and there are several areas of this statement that are likely to generate heavy discussion, if not legal challenges," he said.

Hodel said the impact statement analyzes several possible future roles for BPA in attempting to meet the region's energy problems.

Among those possible future roles, he said, is a continuation of the status quo in which BPA markets power from the region's federal dams and thermal plants; BPA could act as an agent for public utilities to acquire power from new thermal projects, integrating it with hydropower already sold by BPA; legislative changes to allow BPA to purchase and market limited amounts of power to specific industrial customers and investor-owned utilities; BPA could be given full purchase authority with power to be acquired from any source in the region; BPA could be given authority to build or purchase new generation, or it could become the lead agency for carrying out a national energy program in the Northwest, giving BPA a role in planning priorities and making allocations, as well as decision, on land use and siting of new plants.

"Or, BPA's role could be reduced or eliminated and its facilities sold to other entities," Hodel said.

State revenue, spending up

WASHINGTON, D.C. — General state government revenue in 1976 increased 13 per cent over the prior fiscal year to $152.1 billion, and state general expenditure increased 11.1 per cent to $153.7 billion in fiscal 1976, according to a report issued by the Bureau of the Census.

These increases do not reflect total revenue and expenditure because unemployment compensation fund amounts have been revised in 1976 to include special federally financed programs administered through these funds which distort comparison with the prior year. The revisions include extended payments for the unemployed who exhausted regular benefits and ex-federal employes eligible for unemployment payments.

Taxes provided $89.3 billion or 58.7 per cent of the total of state general revenue. State tax revenue was up 11.4 per cent in 1976 from the 1975 total. Included in the tax revenue were general sales and gross receipts taxes which provided $27.3 billion, followed by the sales tax on motor fuel, $8.7 billion.

Tobacco sales tax collections were $3.5 billion, sales taxes on alcoholic beverages totaled $2.1 billion, and motor vehicle license taxes, $4 billion. The yield from individual income taxes, imposed by 44 states, totaled $21.4 billion, up 14 per cent from 1975. Corporation net income taxes amounted to $7.3 billion in 1976, or 9.5 per cent higher than the previous year.

The 50 states continued to spend more for education than for any other function. In 1976, they spent $59.6 billion or 10.4 per cent more on education than in 1975. Expenditure for public welfare totaled $29.6 billion, an increase of $4.1 billion and spending on highways rose 3.5 per cent to $18.1 billion. Spending for hospitals rose 10.2 per cent to total $7.8 billion in 1976.

Valley School District finances in the black

HAZELTON — Members of the Valley School District board of trustees Monday night learned the district's finances are in the black, agreed to apply for more library book funds and set the dates for high school homecoming and teachers' institute holidays.

The annual audit of finances for the last fiscal year, 1976-77, showed the district spent $30,000 less than it received.

"We got more money from the state than we guessed," Supt. Arlyn Bodily said.

Board members approved an application for an out-and-out grant from the federal government under Title IV-B. The district will apply for $1,073 to buy library books.

Valley High School's homecoming this year was set for Oct. 7 by the board, and school will be let out Oct. 3-4 so that teachers can attend teachers' institute. At the homecoming bout, Valley's Vikings will take on the Filer Wildcats. The student body is planning a week of special activities.

The district will not require teachers to attend the institute, but Bodily said, "We assume that they will."

On another matter, the board decided to retain the same policies for high school students as last year. New policy handbooks have been distributed.

Lance's eye on federal spot early

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Six months before Jimmy Carter was elected president, Bert Lance anticipated getting a top government job and talked to a federal regulator about a banking problem that could prove troublesome to him, testimony showed Tuesday.

The statement by a bank examiner contradicted the testimony of Donald Tarleton, an Atlanta-based federal bank official who took Lance's Georgia bank off a "troubled" list last November just hours after learning Lance was in line for an administration job.

Lance, who is scheduled to defend himself in testimony before the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee Thursday and Friday, met with President Carter Tuesday in a session which may have determined his future.

Carter left the White House after the session, but declined comment on it.

"I can assure you there was no conversation about resignation," White House Press Secretary Jody Powell told reporters after the meeting.

Lance is under heavy pressure to resign as budget director because of large bank overdrafts he incurred and other questionable banking practices he used prior to joining the administration in January.

During Wednesday's meeting of the Governmental Affairs Committee, the panel released new information obtained by the Internal Revenue Service.

The IRS report quoted federal bank examiners Charles Stuart and Thomas Brown, who said they were in Tarleton's Atlanta office May 13, 1976, when Tarleton concluded a meeting with Lance.

Stuart said Tarleton "specifically stated that Lance told him that if Mr. Carter was elected President of the United States, Lance would be nominated for a high position in the Carter administration."

Stuart quoted Tarleton saying "Lance spoke with him (Tarleton) about what could be done with (a federal order harmful to Lance's Calhoun First National Bank of Georgia) in the event an FBI background investigation materialized."

Brown quoted Tarleton saying Lance "would probably receive a high government position" if Carter were elected.

Tarleton, who spent three hours testifying before the committee received the Brown and Stuart statements, said he did not remember the events described by his two fellow bank examiners.

"I don't recall any discussion as to what is pertained here," he said. "I have no recollection of that."

Sen. Charles Percy of Illinois, ranking Republican on the committee, told reporters he believed the new evidence was "the first indication we have had that there might have been a discussion" between Lance and Tarleton about lifting an order against the Calhoun bank as early as May, 1976.

Percy noted that Lance recalled discussing the Calhoun issue at a November meeting he had with Tarleton, but Tarleton said he did not recall that discussion either.

And Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., noted that Tarleton's secretary said there was "a rush" to get out a letter clearing the Calhoun bank after that November meeting. But Tarleton said he had not pressured anyone.

Tarleton was the last witness scheduled to testify before the committee prior to Lance's appearance Thursday. He is expected to open with a 90-minute statement in his own defense.

Tarleton conceded he may have erred in taking Lance's bank out of the troubled category just hours after meeting with him, but pleaded lack of political expertise in such matters.

The Calhoun bank — which Lance directed — was put under a cease and desist agreement in December, 1975, by the Comptroller of the Currency," the regulator of national banks.

Social Security boost loses out

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House and Senate negotiators Tuesday approved a $458.25 billion federal budget for the next fiscal year, making no provision for any increase in Social Security payroll taxes.

The House, in a version of the budget it passed last week, included the possibility of such a payroll tax increase during 1978 to help put the Social Security system on a sound financial footing.

The Senate version included no increase, and this view won out in the negotiation.

The report from the negotiating conference said a payroll tax increase is not justified now, "given the present state of the economy." Senators feared an increase in the Social Security tax, paid by employers and employes jointly, would increase inflation and lead to a business slowdown.

The conference report, however, urged both houses to come up with methods of stabilizing the Social Security program.

President Carter has proposed Social Security tax increases, but not until 1979. The new budget, which both houses now are expected to give quick final approval, applies to fiscal year 1978, which begins Oct. 1.

It carries a $61.25 billion deficit, $9 billion more than this year.

The $458.25 billion is lower than both the House figure of $459.6 billion and the Senate's $459.9 billion. Officials said the last-minute cut involved no policy changes but a number of changes in estimating.

The spending figure of $458.25 billion compares to $409.2 billion this year.

New budget authority, not all of which would actually be spent during 1978, would be $500.1 billion. Revenues would be $397 billion.

The conference members were divided on how optimistic the economic projection should be. The budget is based on this projection and it affects estimates of both future revenues and expenses for welfare and unemployment.

The House had projected 5 per cent real increase in gross national product during 1978; the Senate 4.5 per cent. They settled on 4.8 per cent.

Old engine design may be key to auto fuel economy

© N.Y. Times Service

NEW YORK — A 35-year-old engine design, tested for many years in cars and Army Jeeps, is receiving new attention from both the federal government and its industrial developers as a promising means of both economizing on fuel and controlling air pollution.

The engine's backers say that if most American cars used such engines, the nation's oil demand would be lower by 20 per cent — or more than 2.5 million barrels a day — than the level of demand if the nation persists in its plan to require most vehicles to run on lead-free gasoline.

The so-called direct-injection, stratified charge engine designed by Texaco, Inc., in Beacon, N.Y., and built in recent years by White Engines Inc. of Canton, Ohio, can run on many types of fuel, including conventional gasoline, diesel, kerosene, methanol and mixtures of these.

A complete conversion of the nation's fleet of more than 120 million vehicles to any new engine could not be accomplished before the late 1980s at the earliest. This is because of long car lifetimes and the years it would take to establish new engine factories producing, typically, 500,000 units a year.

Despite this, the Texaco design is being tested in Post Office trucks in Washington, D.C., and Salt Lake City, in a comparison with conventional diesels and gasoline engines. It is also being studied by the Energy Research and Development Administration because of a more immediate environmental problem.

The more stringent nitrogen-oxide emission regulations for 1981-model cars, recently passed by Congress, would require a so-called three-way catalytic converter to remove nitrogen oxides as well as hydrocarbons and carbon monoxide from tailpipe gases.

The fuel-saving Texaco-designed motor, called the L-163-S in the Army version built by White Engines, is expected to meet the nitrogen oxide standards without a catalyst, thus avoiding the complex three-way device.

With Army work now shelved for the present, the company is building versions of the motor that could power air compressors, fork-lift trucks, or electrical welders, said John Mayo, White's vice-president for sales, in a telephone interview.

Texaco's projections of large savings in crude-oil demand from use of its direct-injection stratified charge engine were based on studies by William T. Tierney of its Beacon research center and others, reported in 1975 and 1976.

These studies compared what the crude oil demands of the 1972 U.S. vehicle fleet would have been if it had been using various fuels exclusively.

Among the fuels were a gas turbine fuel and a 96-octane leaded fuel, assigned a relative efficiency of 1.0, a 91-octane lead-free fuel with an assumed efficiency of 0.93, and two fuels with efficiencies of 1.3, diesel and a mixture of hydrocarbons with boiling points over a wide range between 100 and 650 degrees fahrenheit.

The last fuel is the one best adapted to Texaco's engine design.

The computerized Texaco study required refineries to put out a fixed proportion of standard, non-automotive products, such as home heating oil and chemicals, and assumed that the 1972 vehicle fleet traveled a total of 4.33 billion miles daily.

In these calculations, the Texaco engine, using the multi-boiling-point fuel, had the best overall fuel economy of what Texaco calls the Vehicle-Fuel-Refinery system: 405 miles to a barrel of crude.

The gas turbine engine, a diesel and a gasoline engine using 96-octane leaded fuel all had mileage records of about 350 miles to a barrel, while 91-octane lead-free fuel recorded only 325 miles to a barrel.
