

Laetrile user trots along hall

TOPEKA, Kan. (UPI) — Harry Walker, who had been confined to a wheelchair because of his terminal lung cancer, walked unaided Tuesday to the surprise of his physician who had reluctantly consented to Walker's wish to try Laetrile treatment.

"This morning when I came into the hospital — at quarter to seven — he came down the hall, trotting," said Dr. Sidney Cohen. "He scared me to death."

Last week Walker, 43, was confined to a wheelchair when he met with reporters. He and Cohen said he could not walk. The giant tumor on the front of his right shoulder had not responded to radiation or chemical therapy.

Since then he has received five shots of the controversial cancer drug Laetrile, one each day since Friday. Cohen, who became involved in the Laetrile issue reluctantly at Walker's urging, said he still does not believe in Laetrile, but admitted his patient's improvement has been remarkable.

Even Walker said he doesn't know if the drug — an extract of apricot pits banned by the Food and Drug Administration — works.

"I believe something is helping me," said Walker. "I believe something is helping me tremendously. I don't know whether it's Laetrile, whether it's physical, psychological, or faith in the doctors or in the good Lord."

"...or Harry Walker," Cohen added. Cohen said he does not think the drug has medical value, but that it makes Walker feel better psychologically. However, he said with so many unknowns concerning cancer, it could be that the brain, and its condition, might have some effect on the spread of the disease.

"It almost certainly has something to do with it and just because we don't know the mechanics of it and what is causing it, doesn't mean there is no effect," he said.

Whatever is causing it, Walker of Rossville, Kan., feels better. Wearing street clothes and sitting at a desk, Walker shook slightly from nervousness. He said he had less pain, was using fewer pain killers, and was sleeping better. He said he did not expect to be fully cured by the controversial drug, but only hoped to keep his condition from becoming worse.

"You take one hurdle at a time, and it is a hurdle, not a brick wall," he said turning his now-unsused cigarette lighter over in his fingers. "Work on the hurdles one at a time and when you get to the end, there won't be a brick wall."

Cohen said the improvement in Walker's condition has caused him to change his prediction that Walker had only two weeks to live.

"I didn't think it was possible," the doctor said. "I don't want to try to get specific, but I think we can erase that two-week figure."

Nixon aide's mind target?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The former chief of CIA mind control projects testified today there may have been an attempt by "potentially hostile" people abroad to modify the behavior of President Nixon's party during a foreign visit in "approximately 1971."

Pleading medical reasons, Dr. Sidney Gottlieb was permitted to testify from an ambulance to Senate subcommittee with his voice amplified into the crowded hearing room.

"I accept full responsibility for my own role" in the CIA's mind control and behavior research, said the 53-year-old Gottlieb, a shadowy intelligence figure who retired from the CIA in 1973. He pointed out that the experiments began when the United States was involved "in a real covert war" with communism.

Gottlieb said the drug and mind control activities may still go on and then brought up the mysterious incident allegedly involving the president's physician and others in the Nixon party during a presidential visit abroad. Nixon visited both China and Russia in 1972, but Gottlieb did not say where the trouble might have occurred.

"Not too long ago," he said, "in connection with a presidential visit to a potentially hostile country, the president when he came back described some unusual feelings he and others had and asked if I would be able to give counsel."

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., chairman of the Senate Subcommittee on Health and Scientific Research, asked: "Are you suggesting that the presidential party was drugged?"

"I'm suggesting we want to review whether this happened," Gottlieb said.

"When did this happen?" Kennedy asked.

Gottlieb — who was promised immunity from criminal prosecution by the Kennedy committee — first replied that he could not answer. When Kennedy persisted, he said "approximately 1971."

Kennedy asked what sort of unusual behavior was involved in the incident.

"A description of unusual in terms of previous normal behavior," Gottlieb said.

"Just the presidential party?" Kennedy asked.

"It did not include the president. It specifically included the physician himself and associates," said Gottlieb.

Before Kennedy and other members of his panel disappeared into the adjoining room to question Gottlieb in private, camera men were permitted inside for a few moments to photograph the white-haired witness, dressed in a dark suit with a purple tie and sitting at a small table.

The door was then shut and Gottlieb read a statement which was broadcast outside the main committee room where the session had started earlier with testimony from CIA director Stansfield Turner.

"On at least two occasions, an associate and I took the position to the president of the United States of possible covert activities against him," said Gottlieb.

But Gottlieb said he objected to being made "what he called the apparent fall guy for the CIA's MKULTRA and other secret projects involving drugs, brainwashing and mind control experiments — often on unwitting American citizens."

"The context in which this investigation was started (in) about 1952," he said, "was that of the height of the cold war...with the CIA organizing its resources to liberate Eastern Europe by paramilitary means...there was the threat of Soviet aggression very real and tangible as exemplified by the Berlin Airlift."

"There was tangible evidence that both the Soviets and the Red Chinese might be using techniques of altering human behavior which were not understood by the United States and which would have implications of national survival in the context of national security concerns at that time."

Boise hopes to halt kid crime

By GEORGE WILEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Like the Twin Falls School district, the Boise School District hopes to initiate a program to reach potential juvenile delinquents in grade school and turn them from crime before they get started.

If the Boise district's proposal — now incomplete — is accepted it will become the second of three Idaho cities desiring help by Gov. John Evans to initiate grade school delinquency programs.

A third city, Lewiston, has turned down grade school anti-crime overtures from the state, partly out of resentment that it wasn't contacted before being singled out by Evans in his State of the State address last January, and partly because Lewiston administrators believe their present truancy program already does the job.

Like administrators in Twin Falls, Boise administrators admit fears that the singling out of potential delinquents in grade school could lead to stigmas and poor self-images for the students the programs are being designed to help.

"The identification thing of students does worry me just a little bit, so we're going to try to stay away from the identification," said Dr. Geri Plumb, Boise schools' director of federal programs.

She said a proposal now being drafted through her office will concentrate on "a lot of in-service training for teachers to get them to recognize behavioral problems that could lead to later juvenile delinquency activity."

Plumb said when the proposal is completed it will be presented to the school board and if approved will then go to the Idaho Law Enforcement Planning Commission (LEPC) for approval. The LEPC has awarded Twin Falls a $25,000 one-year grant to confront potential juveniles in grade schools, and Plumb said Boise will seek a similar grant.

She added that any help for individual students, however, would be made under existing programs.

The Boise program will emphasize positive self-imagery for all students, not just those identified as potential juveniles, Plumb said.

"You have to make children feel good about themselves before they can be very successful in education or in life in general," she said.

"The Twin Falls program, while it projects offering 'life adjustment skills' training for all students, also calls for identification of those grade schoolers in 'need of special help.'"

Plumb said, "I see some problems there," when asked about the singling out aspect of the Twin Falls program. She added that probably neither Twin Falls nor Boise would end up singling out potential juveniles in grade school.

The fear of such singling out was also voiced by Boise elementary education director Richard Kuntz.

"If people had identified me in the third grade all along to the fourth, fifth and sixth," Kuntz said, "I'd have been in trouble all my life. Thankfully, I was able to begin anew each year."

Mideast showdown near?

United Press International
Israeli troops and armored vehicles crossed into Lebanon for the second straight day today in support of Lebanese Christian forces battling to pry Palestinian guerrillas from the southern part of the country. Beirut reports from the battle zone said.

The new crossing came as reports reaching Beirut said Israeli forces had penetrated southern Lebanon as far as two miles to give fire support to Christian fighters making an all-out attack on a key bridge held by leftist Palestinians.

The reports said the Israelis seized three separate positions in fighting that threatened a Syrian-Israeli confrontation as Israel warned Syria against intervening, but at the same time stepped up its own military intervention in the south.

Reports from the southern war zone said the Israelis entered Lebanon with their armor Tuesday at the southeast village of Kfar Kela and set up artillery positions to strengthen the southern flank of the Christian rightists.

On Wednesday the Israelis reportedly assumed additional positions by branching north from Kfar Kela to the Houra area near the village of Deir Mimass and south from Kfar Kela to an old Lebanese army position at Na'ah el-Anouh, a hill just west of the Israeli settlement of Misgav Am. It could not be determined exactly how many Israeli troops and armored vehicles were deployed.

A Lebanese journalist reporting from the battle zone said the Israelis had declared the Kfar Kela area a "military zone" and barred Lebanese from entering it. Eyewitness reports from the area said Israeli jets flew reconnaissance over the battle zones, apparently directing artillery fire, as Israeli long-range guns poured barrages over the border with deadly accuracy onto Palestinian positions, particularly at the guerrilla stronghold of Khilam.

Syria's government-run daily Al-Bathi accused the United States of planning to take advantage of the fighting in Lebanon as a means of pressure on the Arabs "in order to obtain additional concessions to the advantage of Israel."

Military observers said escalation of the Israeli involvement and an exchange of warnings by Israel and Syria threatened to turn the sixth consecutive day of heightened fighting along the Israeli border into a showdown between Israel and Syria. Some Israeli artillery fell near Syrian positions but did not hit them.

In Tel Aviv, the state-run radio said Israel had warned Syria through the United States to keep its peacekeeping troops in Lebanon out of the southern border zone.

In Damascus, the government-run daily Al-Thawra warned Tuesday that any escalation of the fighting in the region would be Israel's fault. It said Israel's aim was to move into the south.

The situation was aggravated by Israeli reports that Palestinian guerrillas retaliated today against Israeli support of the Christian forces with a rocket barrage from across the border that demolished buildings and downed power lines in the northern Israeli town of Safed.

The flareup came as President Carter was engaged in Middle East peace talks in Washington with Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismael Fahmy. Carter met Monday with Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan and both sides expressed confidence there could be a Geneva peace conference by the end of the year.

In an unexpected development, Fahmy went to the State Department before the White House meeting for a private session with Secretary of State Cyrus Vance. The State Department press office said it had no advance notice of the unscheduled meeting, nor any explanation for it.

Plastic soft drink bottle use halted

WASHINGTON (UPI) — After 20 years of controversy, the Food and Drug Administration has halted use of a health-risk the use of a new plastic soft drink bottle which probably would have been selling by the billions in a few years.

The bottles, made of a plastic called acrylonitrile, had been test marketed by Coca-Cola under the "Cycle Safe" brand in Providence, R.I., and a few other areas. Ever since FDA gave its now rescinded approval to the bottles in February, 1975; they have been attacked both as a potential health risk and as a possible source of environmental litter.

On Tuesday the FDA issued a final order, effective about 90 days from now, revoking its approval. The matter could wind up in the courts, but the Monsanto Corp., which made the bottles for Coca-Cola, gave no immediate indication it would sue.

The development does not mean that soft drinks will never be sold in plastic bottles, but industry spokesmen have said the FDA decision has thrown the move toward plastic pop bottles for a loss.

Pepsi-Cola has begun test marketing bottles made of polyester, a different kind of plastic, but sales are not widespread.

The FDA decision, originally proposed last March, left Monsanto alone with a reported 15-million-unsold bottles and a reported loss of up to $20 million.

The Natural Resources Defense Council, which had waged the primary battle against acrylonitrile bottles, estimated last year that the containers could be selling at the rate of 10 billion a year by 1980 if not stopped, causing environmental contamination if buried or burned.

Monsanto had claimed they would be disposed of safely and had worked out a recycling program as part of its test marketing.

The FDA said the only other use of the bottles it knew of besides Coca-Cola was for fruit juice which had been bottled by Musselman Fruit Products in containers made by BorgWarner of Chicago.

Last March the FDA cited "adverse findings" in animal tests, including birth defects, weight loss, growth in ear ducts and lesions in the central nervous system as the reason it moved against the bottles.

Earlier this year the DuPont Co. told the government a "serious suspicion" had been raised that acrylonitrile may cause cancer in human beings.

San Diegans nix suitless swims

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Municipal voters voted Tuesday that the City Council take the no-swimsuit option away from nudists at Black's Beach, the nation's only beach where sunbathing in the buff is legal.

Proposition D, directing the council to outlaw nude swimming, passed 86,113 to 70,884. The voters' decision meant the apparent end of the city's three-year experiment with a nude beach.

Black's Beach, a 900-foot strip north of La Jolla, was designated "swimsuit optional" by the council in 1974, when lawyers advised councilmen that a total ban on nudity probably would fail in a court challenge.

As many as 43,000 people in one day have walked the mile and a half from the nearest beach-level parking or climbed down the 250-foot cliff overlooking Black's Beach to use it or look at its users.

Aside from another election drive, one last option remained available to nude beach users. The wording of Proposition D indicated the will of the voters but apparently imposed no absolute requirement that the council act.

Robert Jacobs, chairman of the Nude Beaches Committee, indicated as the ballots were tabulated that an effort may be made to persuade council members not to repeal the "swimsuit optional" ordinance.

Payment deficit deepens

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. balance of payments, an important barometer of the nation's international economic standing, set a record during the second quarter when it fell into deficit by $4.6 billion, the Commerce Department said today.

The red ink in the current account ledger during the April-June period compared with a $4.16 billion deficit in the first quarter, the previous high, the department said.

For all of last year, the current account deficit was only $1.43 billion. Administration officials have been forecasting that the deficit for all of 1977 could reach nearly $12 billion.

cludes trade surpluses or losses, and money earned or lost in such other ways as tourism and services.

The size of the second quarter deficit was not a surprise. Oil imports had increased rapidly in April and May before declining in June.

As a result, the merchandise trade deficit for the first seven months of the year had swollen to $14.91 billion.

Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal has urged other large industrial nations, such as West Germany and Japan, to swing into deficit along with the United States in order to help smaller, less developed countries fight back from the effects of the worldwide recession which "hit" this country in 1974-75.

SEC denies Lance suit plans

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Securities and Exchange Commission today categorically denied a report that it is preparing a civil fraud suit against Bancor, Director Bert Lance and the National Bank of Georgia in connection with a 1975 stock offering.

Sources told UPI the suit was "in the works," but SEC spokesman Andrew L. Rothman said "I can state categorically that no such suit is being prepared."

The said the SEC assigned two attorneys to the Lance case late in August. Among the documents being reviewed by the attorneys is a registration statement the National Bank of Georgia filed with the SEC in December, 1975.

The statement offered securities in a bank holding company whose principal asset would be NBG stock. Sources said that although the holding company never was formed and the stock never offered, the registration statement was withdrawn as required.

But Rothman said today the registration statement was withdrawn in January.

The other information about the holding company is "on the public record," Rothman said.

Sources at the Justice said the SEC civil case would be distinct from any action that might be taken by the blue ribbon panel assigned to review Lance's alleged improprieties.

The SEC has no authority to act for money fines or jail terms. However, the SEC has won court orders that require corporate officers to relinquish the company for abusive use of company assets such as airplanes and vacation homes. The registration statement failed to disclose more than $1 million in loans that Lance had outstanding at three Georgia banks. Besides the unreported loans, sources said Lance and the bank failed to disclose remuneration to Lance in the form of a corporate aircraft.

The aircraft was used by Lance for vacation and weekend holiday trips without reimbursement to the bank, the sources said.

The issue of executive "perks" has been a primary focus of SEC enforcement actions in recent months. The SEC Tuesday charged Victor Posner, chairman of the Sharon Steel Corp., and two former members with securities fraud in connection with the free personal use of corporate jets and helicopters owned or leased by the company.

The NBG registration statement disclosed Lance's loan of $2.6 million from the Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. of New York. But the statement did not inform the investing public of at least four other loans in which Lance was a prime guarantor.

Sources said the SEC investigation also covered other securities offerings by the NBG, but they were unable to learn the particulars of these matters.

The SEC has civil authority to prevent securities fraud in the form of incomplete or inaccurate registration statements. Any action that might result would be taken in the U.S. District Court in the form of an injunction to prevent recurrence of the alleged fraudulent activity.

Vietnam hoists flag over UN

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Communist Vietnam's red and gold banner today became the 14th flag to fly over the New York skyline in a ceremony symbolizing worldwide recognition of the end of a war that claimed more than 50,000 American lives.

Less than 21 hours earlier — and with American approval — Vietnam had become the 14th member of the United Nations.

A group of about 200 diplomats, including UN Secretary General Kurt Waldheim, applauded as an honor guard raised the red flag bearing a gold star in its center at 10:15 a.m. EDT in front of the U.N. building, just across the street from the U.S. Mission.

Vietnam's two-year struggle to have its flag fly alongside those of the other nations of the world encountered one last obstacle. As a shirt-sleeved U.N. guard began raising the flag it became tangled in the halyard. It had to be lowered before it could be raised again.

The raising of the green, blue and white flag of the U.N. is often new member, the former French colony of Djibouti, went off without a hitch a few minutes earlier.

The historic vote admitting Vietnam to membership in the United Nations came Tuesday in a General Assembly session that U.S. Ambassador Andrew Young said symbolized the end of America's bitterest conflict and the beginning of a "new future" in its relations with Vietnam.

Storm brews

MIAMI (UPI) — The National Hurricane Center said today a reconnaissance plane would investigate a weather disturbance which concentrated overnight at a point north of Barbados.

The National Weather Service office in San Juan, P.R., said satellite photographs showed the system had not developed a closed circulation and was not expected to strengthen rapidly.

Case ballooned past expectation

By JAMES RESTON

WASHINGTON — The Lance Case has raised more problems, and aroused more psychological demons, than Bert Lance or Presidential Carter ever imagined. All the major players in this affair — the President and his staff, Lance, the squabbling committee members, and the press — have been soiled if not damaged. They are all playing no-fault politics, blaming "the system" for their troubles. And the trouble with it is that all their relations with one another in the future are likely to be influenced by this regrettable controversy.

The future is now the main issue. We are coming in, Washington, into a time when fundamental questions of national and world-fundamentals are coming to the fore.

At home, on welfare reform, tax reform, educational reform, inflation, unemployment, abortion, busing — even the security of the American family from infancy to old age.

Around there are equally critical issues: On the defense of the Western Hemisphere, now dramatized by the Soviet invasion of the Panama Canal; Cuba; and illegal aliens from Mexico, on the military and ideological coherence of what's left of the free world in the Atlantic and in Japan; on the developing crisis in the Middle East; the rules of trade and money in the industrial world; and in the racial struggles of Africa and the rest of the developing world.

Not a single one of these problems can be resolved by the President or the Congress alone. Therefore, they have to work together. Nothing can be proved by logic in these tangles at home or abroad, so they have to be resolved somehow by common sense and trust. No problem in the hemisphere or the Atlantic, Japan or in Rhodesia or South Africa can be solved without a sense of cooperation in Washington and without some confidence in the other capitals of the world that Carter and the Congress can agree on where they are and where they are going.

The Lance Affair has been a diversion from all this. One of the enduring problems in a free and democratic society is how to keep the major problems that affect people's lives from being overwhelmed by secondary issues. This has troubled every writer and president in the United States since Thomas Paine and Thomas Jefferson, and it is still a puzzle in Washington today.

For example, if we measured the time and space on the national nightly news broadcasts and the newspaper front pages in the last month, we would probably find that more attention was paid to Bert Lance's banking practices, South Korea's political pay-offs, Son of Sam's murders, and Elvis Presley's death than to all these other elemental problems that can influence the human condition in the rest of this century.

The premier of France, Raymond Barre, has been in Washington these last few days, precisely because he has a developing political challenge from the Socialists and the Communists in next year's French elections, which may be fundamental in the future relations of the North Atlantic Alliance. He was almost obliterated by Bert Lance and ended up on the financial and society pages.

Likewise, our new energy chief, James Schlesinger, went to Atlanta at about the same time, and proclaimed that we would have another economic crisis in the United States like the Thirties, with factories closing and families out of work, and challenges to the security of our whole political and social system if we didn't begin now to conserve energy. His eloquent appeals were scarcely noticed.

So there is a bit of a dilemma here because there is confusion about the meaning of the Lance controversy. It is not surprising that the Government Operations Committee of the Senate loltered down into personal arguments over their responsibilities in dealing with Lance. They were concentrating on personalities and on the past, rather than with the future, and Jimmy Carter has been doing the same thing.

He has been denying in his White House the ideals he used to get there, and complaining about the press for pointing out the difference.

Lance has been making the point that it is unfair to judge a man's past business practices by the more strict banking and political rules of the present — which is not a bad point — but he has chosen to attack the motives and even the integrity of members of the committee who may have attacked his motives, but still must preside over Lance's Office of Management and Budget in the future.

Whatever the rights and wrongs, blunders or misjudgments of the past, this obviously creates awkward personal and political problems for the future. For one thing, Lance has clearly revived the widespread fear that there is one route for the rich and another for the poor in this country. This is the drop of poison in his testimony and in "the system" he sought to defend. He was an amiable and even genial witness. After all, the United States had a few overdrafts of its own, he observed, but he promised to correct the overdraft system in his banks, but didn't do so until he was forced by the controller of the currency. He is an appealing and in some ways a tragic character, but he missed the main point.

That is to say, for whatever the reason or accident, he has embarrassed the President, diverted Carter from his larger responsibilities, attacked and divided the committee that has to oversee his work, and infuriated members of the Senate whose votes are essential to much more important issues of national and foreign policy.

This is the future question that Carter or Lance, or the Senate, will have to deal with in the coming days.

Monetary twist in 'doomsaying'

The "doomsayers" have made the rounds during the past decade or so, going from the threat of total destruction from a superbomb to the masochistic process of succumbing to polluted water and air through runaway industrial progress.

Although neither of the previously mentioned prophecies of self-destruction have come true, the threat lingers. The longer we stave off nuclear destruction, or suffocation in our own garbage pit, the less ominous the warnings sound. Their efficacy remains untested, fortunately.

A third alternative for creation of utter chaos in the world, mentioned first in 1973 and in muted tones periodically since that time is fear of the accumulation by the oil exporting nations of most of the world's capital.

In plain language, the oil-rich nations will bring the game of monopoly home to America and the rest of the oil-poor nations in a painfully realistic manner: They're gonna corner all the bucks.

Perhaps the current interest in banking ethics created by the Bert Lance hearings in the Senate has created a new twist for congressional concern, or perhaps the pendulum has merely swung to a new position.

Nevertheless, there emerges a new face in the scapegoat crowd, or at least the accusing finger points to a new suspect.

As you might have guessed, it's that oft-forgotten multinational corporation that controls many of those other multinational giants. The holder of the world's massive debt burden — Super Bank.

The pointing finger comes from the Senate Foreign Relations Committee's subcommittee on foreign economic policy. Republican conservatives might conclude that panel chairman, Sen. Frank Church, is just zapping big business, — favorite whipping post of liberals — were it not for the fact that the panel's ranking minority member, Sen. Jacob Javits, as well as others on Capitol Hill have recently expressed strong concern about the stability of the international monetary system.

One of the reasons that figures on data concerning international debt and private bank lending are so disturbing is that sources of information about the issue are so tentative and undeveloped by government investigators.

According to the committee report — and hearings began today on the foreign policy implications of debt — the 1973 oil price rise which created a near-disaster for the world economy was instead a bonanza for banks.

According to figures published by Salomon Brothers, the New York investment banking firm, foreign earnings of the 13 largest U.S. commercial banks in 1973 were $477 million, or 34 per cent of the combined total earnings. By 1975, earnings from overseas operation had nearly doubled to $936 million, almost 50 per cent of the combined total earnings.

The report claims that 66 per cent of all non-OPEC developing nations' private bank debt is owed to U.S. banks.

In addition to the public external debt of developing countries that are not oil producers, the study indicates, is estimated to be in the range of $150 billion to $200 billion. Of this an estimated $75 billion is owed to private banks, and $50 billion of that to U.S. banks. Some nations are spending more than 40 per cent of their export earnings just to serve external debt, and the average figure for developing nations is an estimated 20 per cent. A study by American Express indicates that one out of every four dollars borrowed abroad by the developing nations in 1977 will go for debt servicing and that by 1980 one out of every two dollars will have to be used to repay old debts.

The report reaches some tentative conclusions that — using borrowed funds to pay off old debts will stifle development resulting in stagnation. As borrowing and interest rates escalate, the banks will become "captive of their clients, hostages to the money they have already extended."

One winds up with another version of the domino theory — the Super Banks fear that default of one nation might trigger a series of defaults.

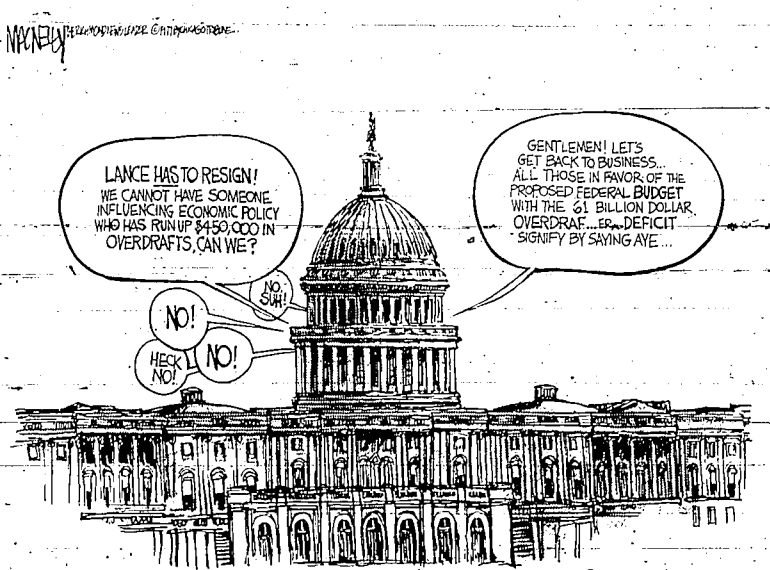

The creditors are beginning to demand austerity programs by the debtor nations, programs that when tried previously have resulted in riots and demonstrations by people of those nations.

The report can find no end to OPEC surpluses and steadily increasing oil prices.

Consistent with several other predictions of doom, no solutions appear over the horizon. Perhaps we should consider, however, trading in our old Elvis Presley albums for turpans and good used camels.

"Speaking of planning, Zig, let's not schedule any more tennis matches around here which I'm likely to lose!"

Bill may aid displaced homemaker

BOSTON — They were talking about Mrs. Adams in the Senate this week. They were talking about her and Mrs. Hill in the hearing room of the Subcommittee on Employment, Poverty and Migratory Labor.

Now Mrs. Hill and Mrs. Adams were never the sort of women to be talked about in public. Years ago they made their own decisions to have private careers. They had children and raised them; they made homes and acquired all the skills of that job. If all had gone according to plan, according to their expectations, we might never have heard about them at all. But, a few years ago, as Sen. Birch Bayh explained to the subcommittee, both of these middle-aged women lost their only "employer." Mrs. Hill's husband died, and at 53, she was without work-experience or income. She had a mortgage to pay and seven years to survive until she was eligible for Social Security.

Mrs. Adams for her part was divorced by her husband after 19 years of marriage. She was among the minority — some 14 percent — who are awarded any alimony at all. But like half of these women, she was never able to collect on a regular basis.

In short, these two middle-class, middle-aged women with grown children became part of that vast subgroup which Susan Cattaneo, a state legislator from Illinois, described as the "new poor." They were now in the category known in the Senate bill as "Displaced Homemakers."

Displaced, replaced or misplaced, there are somewhere between two million and seven million American women who were forced emigrants out of a lifestyle which was destroyed by death or divorce.

Women like Mrs. Adams and Mrs. Hill were perhaps the last generation to go into homemaking as a lifelong career. When they were married 20 and 30 years ago, they believed that they had wed security. Independence wasn't something they chose. It's something that happened to them and they called it insecurity. It came into their lives with empty nests and empty pocketbooks; it left them unweaved by social policies, and triply discriminated against in the work field by age and sex and inexperience.

It left them in need of some help. Of course, the expression, "Displaced Homemaker," brings forth a vision of armies of middle-aged women camped on the banks of the Potomac behind barbed wire waiting for the sup line to open. But it is also a term of transition, and the bill which is wending its way slowly through Congress is really a Rehabilitation Act.

It offers, not a soup kitchen, but supports for a difficult time. The funds would set up, what Louise Shields, the head of the Alliance of Displaced Homemakers, likes to think of as "experimental laboratories" — one for each state — where women could be aided through the transition, where they could find legal, emotional and job counseling.

They would be re-education stations, to outfit the homemakers' skills to fill the work force and find new jobs to fill both the public needs, and theirs.

Basically it would support middle-aged women through the time zone, from desertion to self-sufficiency and from the expectations of one decade to the realities of another.

In some crucial ways, the Displaced Homemakers bill is a stop-gap measure: stopping the gap between the generations. Joanne Maxey, a state senator from Nebraska, told the Senate hearing: "We are not going to have the problem 10 or 15 years from now, because today's young women are preparing themselves." She is largely right. The young homemaker now has had some tough "role models," and most of them plan their "second careers."

But when like Mrs. Adams and Mrs. Hill planned a lifetime of mothering and wife-caring for others, making a home. They slipped on their commitments and fell into the cracks of society. They were misplaced, replaced, displaced.

And, at the very least they deserve a chance to relocate, with a small buffer zone of caring in return.

Europe takes steps to federalization

By LUCY KOMISAR

Washington Star

LONDON — After 20 years of evolution the European Economic Community is hovering on the edge of a potentially profound step toward the federalization of Europe.

Establishment of a European parliament, even a largely advisory one, in spirit would transcend present systems.

The idea has been welcomed in most of the nine member countries of the European Assembly, whose national delegations comprise the Council of Ministers that makes Common Market policy.

But it has been causing storms in England and France, where resurgent nationalism combined with party politics threatens the goals of the Treaty of Rome.

The same political forces in England that sought to keep that country out of the Common Market have succeeded in holding up popular elections to the European parliament. The issue has split the ruling British Labor party.

France President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing in June won approval of the elections "in principle" by making the issue a vote of "government responsibility." This pleased his ally and mentor Jacques Chirac, who has asked for a postponement to make sure French sovereignty was not threatened.

Though the European parliament remains a political issue in France, it is England that is a stumbling block to the European elections.

In July, half the Labor members of the British parliament, including House of Commons leader Michael Foot and five other cabinet ministers, voted against their government's bill for the principle of direct elections. The measure won with the help of Conservative and Liberal votes, but it still needs a second approval. Opponents will exert their right to the Labor party conference next month.

Secretary for Energy Anthony Wedgwood

Benn, who leads the left-wing "Tribune" faction, voted "no" on the elections because he says the EEC is "not so much a threat to national identity as the byproduct of parliamentary democracy." He objects that it would make Britons voters laws that have never been passed by their own parliament.

Advocates argue that a popularly elected European parliament would democratize the EEC. Benn replied that it would also "lay the foundation for a federal United States of Europe." Even British supporters of the EEC are not pro-federalist.

Another fear is the possible impact on England's own political system.

Election to a European parliament sooner or later would be by proportional representation. It is feared this could be a step toward proportional representation in Britain's own national elections.

That could alter British politics by breaking up the conditions that constitute the Labor and Conservative parties and that stay together for the same reasons as do the coalitions of Democrats and Republicans in the United States — to win elections by majority vote.

Coalition governments based on proportional representation would likely be centrist and shut out the Labor left-wing critics. For example, John Prescott, a Labor MP who heads Britain's delegation to the European Assembly, is against participation in the EEC altogether.

"It's bloody lousy," he declares. "But we're stuck with Europe and they're stuck with us."

Prescott admits that British parliamentary elections, against direct elections in July 1978, "gesture politics" and says the Labor party will endorse the bill next month as part of an agreement with the liberals.

Still, opponents will use whatever delaying tactics they can.

Prescott predicts that if Greece and Spain join the EEC that may be an excuse to postpone the vote until they are assimilated. "We all play for time in this game," he says.

Tom McNally, the political adviser to Prime Minister James Callaghan, notes that Callaghan is "a little skeptical" about the EEC being either a capitalist tool or a way toward socialism.

"However, if there is going to be control of the multinationals, and we're a long way from it, the only way to do it effectively is through an organization such as the Community in Europe, with the Community talking to the United States," he says.

Taxpayers nicked by solons

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Taxpayers will be spending an additional $2 million a year to finance almost double the home district office space with which congressmen now will be provided.

The House Tuesday voted 215 to 193 to increase their district office space from the present 1,500 square feet to 2,500 square feet. Members said the increased space will enable them to better serve constituents.

Rep. Frank Thompson, D-N.J., said failure to increase the allowance "may result in substantial disruption of constituent services, a reduction in the accessibility of members to their constituents, overcrowding of staff. In district offices and other hardships impinging on each member's ability to carry out his representational duties."

He said the added cost totals $3.4 million, but about $1.4 million of that already is held by the clerk of the House for payments to members who currently exceed their space allowance.

Rep. Lawrence Coughlin, R-Pa., called the measure "another rape of the taxpayer."

Bus trip delights LA pupils

NORTH HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (UPI) — The Los Angeles City School District, second largest in the nation, opened for the fall term Tuesday under a court order to desegregate its schools, even if it means mandatory citywide busing.

The order issued even though the district's has a voluntary busing program which has been growing steadily over the eight years it has been in operation.

"When the program began in 1969 there were about 550 pupils," said Barbara Jacobs, coordinator of the Permits With Transportation (PWT) program. "This year there are about 20,000 children being voluntarily bused."

"It's fun, I like it," said Ramona Medina, 10, who travels 25 miles from East Los Angeles to attend mostly-white Salford Elementary School in North Hollywood.

"This school is nicer," she added, fingering the tip of her long pigtail.

But despite voluntary busing, the district, with more than 600,000 pupils, must come up with a desegregation program this year.

One proposal, involving voluntary methods like centralized schools and the PWT program, was discarded by a judge who has ordered the school board to report to him by Oct. 3 on alternative plans.

Concorde decision nearing

CHICAGO Sun-Times — WASHINGTON — An 11-member congressional delegation has urged President Carter not to extend landing rights at 10 additional cities to the controversial British-French Concorde supersonic airplane.

In an interview after the meeting with Carter, Rep. Abner Mikva, D-Ill., said:

"There is a heavy struggle for Carter's mind" on the Concorde issue.

He speculated that Carter, who told the delegation he would reveal his decision on the Concorde by Saturday, would stake out a compromise position allowing the noisy jet to land at additional cities where it is not strongly opposed. Dallas is one such city.

Carter wants postal choice

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Carter administration wants Congress to return to the president the power to appoint a postmaster general.

The post now is filled by the Postal Service Board of Governors, which is named by presidents for staggered terms. Presidents named postmasters general before Congress passed the Postal Reform Act of 1970 with the aim of insulating the mail service from politics.

W. Bowman Cutler of the Office of Management and Budget told a joint meeting of two House subcommittees

Tuesday the administration believes the president should name the official to a fixed term subject to Senate confirmation.

Cutler also proposed giving the head of the Postal Service increased "managerial autonomy" in deciding such policy matters as Saturday deliveries.

Some features of legislation before the subcommittees prompted opposition by Cutler, including provisions to do away with the bond of governors, giving Congress veto power over postal rate hikes and increasing Postal Service subsidies.

Gas line terms approved

OTTAWA (UPI) — Canada and the United States formally signed an agreement on construction of a northern gas pipeline Tuesday opening what U.S. energy chief James Schlesinger called a "new era" in bilateral relations.

The longest, most expensive gas pipeline in North America will carry 2.4 billion cubic feet of Alaskan natural gas daily along a 2,751-mile route from Alaska's North Slope through the Yukon Territory, British Columbia, Alberta and Saskatchewan to U.S. markets. Estimated cost was $10 billion.

Flanked by Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and U.S. Ambassador to Canada Thomas O. Enders, Schlesinger and Deputy Prime Minister Allan MacEachen hailed it as a "historic agreement."

"By joining together in this vast undertaking, we will further strengthen the bond that has always existed between our two nations,"

MacEachen said. "I think this is a splendid example of co-operation between the two countries."

Schlesinger said at the champagne ceremony. "I believe this agreement is the start of a new degree of cooperation between the two countries on energy matters and I think a new era extending to areas outside energy."

Noting the agreement was signed within a month after formal negotiations began, Schlesinger said, "We thank Canada for its graciousness and for permitting this project to go forward for our benefit as well as Canada's."

Both MacEachen and Schlesinger said the joint project would provide both nations with "more benefits than they could have achieved through separate, national projects."

Nation's gas stock adequate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Power Commission says there should be enough natural gas this winter if temperatures all season are within 30-year normals.

But if they should fall 10 per cent below normal, there might be shortages like last year's that could force some industrial plants to close, FPC chairman Charles B. Curtis told the Senate intergovernmental relations subcommittee Tuesday.

Testimony at the third and final day of hearings was due today from Federal Energy Administrator John O'Leary, who was to detail the administration's plan for dealing with any weather-related emergencies.

Curtis said the FPC staff estimates there is only one chance in 100 the coming winter will be 10 per cent colder than normal and "the likelihood of nationwide weather being worse for this entire winter than last is less than one-half of 1 per cent."

Last winter was from 10 to 40 per cent colder than normal, depending on the region. Curtis said the total gas supply will be about the same as last year.

Reactor triumphs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The pellucid craft of Congress failed on President Carter's plan to stop work on the Clinch River, Tenn., breeder reactor.

The result was a severe setback for Carter, who on April 7 asked other nations to join the United States in a worldwide "moratorium" on plutonium production.

House supporters of the effort to kill the plutonium producing facility knew they were in trouble, so a compromise amendment, similar to the one passed by the Senate, was offered.

After four hours of debate Tuesday, the House first voted on the Carter proposal to cut back the committee-passed authorization of $150 million to $33 million.

That lost by a 246-142 vote. Then the compromise, authored by Rep. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., came up. It would have cut back the figure to only $75 million, just enough to keep the project going for another year at its current level.

That was defeated by an even larger tally, 277 to 129.

The action came during House consideration of a $6.7 billion authorization bill for the Energy Research and Development Administration. Further action was scheduled for today.

The liquid-metal fast breeder reactor at Oak Ridge, Tenn., became a main domestic focus of Carter's plan to halt proliferation of plutonium, which can be used readily for weapons.

The Senate already has voted to fund $75 million for the one-year "status quo" position.

Waclau Uhlik's body found

WACLAU UHLIK

VISALIA, Calif. (UPI) — Waclau Uhlik, a Czech who escaped to the West in a homemade tank in 1953, has been found beaten to death in Sequoia National Park.

Tulare County coroner's deputies Tuesday identified a body found in a shallow grave Sept. 10 as that of Uhlik. No arrests have been made.

Uhlik, 56, gained worldwide attention July 25, 1953, when he loaded his wife and two children and four other adults into his homemade tank and crashed through machinengun fire to cross the Czech border into West Germany.

It took him three years to build the seven-ton vehicle which became known as the "Freedom Tank."

He eventually settled with his wife and four children on a Sierra Nevada foothill near Fresno, Calif., where he built a two-story home.

Patty 'upset' with attorney

SAN MATEO (UPI) — Patricia Hearst says she is "upset" with her attorney for telling a reporter that she has resumed her college education, according to the San Mateo Times.

The newspaper Tuesday said a woman identifying herself as Miss Hearst called to take issue with a story quoting attorney Albert Johnson that she had gone back to school. The Times said it confirmed that the caller was Miss Hearst.

"I am real upset with Mr. Johnson,"

Miss Hearst told the newspaper. "I don't know why he did this. This is not true."

Miss Hearst, free on bail pending appeal of her conviction for the 1974 robbery of a San Francisco bank 10 weeks after she was kidnapped by the Symbionese Liberation Army, said she is not enrolled in college and has no such plans.

"I am not studying college level books or studying in any way," she said. "I may have thought about it but I have other things to do."

ELEANOR ROOSEVELT

...son writes book

Son writes untold stories of Eleanor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Eleanor Roosevelt once asked that her wrists be opened when she died, "for fear of being buried alive," according to her son Elliott.

Roosevelt writes of her mother in a new book, "Mother: Eleanor Roosevelt's Untold Story." Excerpts from the book are appearing in the October issue of Ladies Home Journal.

Roosevelt said his mother, her body wracked by tuberculosis just before her death at 70 on Nov. 7, 1962, wanted to be allowed to die. When she was hospitalized in September of that year she had "so many injections that the nurses had to search for areas of unscarred skin," Roosevelt wrote.

"Believing it was nonsensical to go on any longer, she spat out the pills she was handed, or held them under her tongue."

After three weeks of hospitalization, Mrs. Roosevelt was sent home to her New York apartment.

Roosevelt describes sitting in his mother's room, holding her hand as she lay sleeping, only rarely stirring into consciousness. He wrote, "Once, at the thrust of yet another hypodermic, I watched her wake and mutter, 'Let me die.'"

A month later, while on a business trip in Miami Beach, Roosevelt said he got a call from his brother Franklin in New York, who told him: "I'm sorry old man, but Mummy's gone."

Roosevelt said his mother spelled out her funeral arrangements in a letter. She wrote: "...A simple oak coffin, covered not with flowers but with branches of evergreen from the Val-Kill woods; her wrists to be opened for fear of being buried alive; Charlie Curran and Les Entrup of the Hyde Park luncheonette to be her pallbearers."

Roosevelt said his mother's oak coffin rested in state at Val-Kill Cottage in Hyde Park, N.Y., "not under evergreen boughs, but covered with a magnificent floral blanket."

He did not say whether his mother's desire to have her wrists cut after she died was carried out.

Sex-change plans not completed

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Contending she's been left "half woman and half man" by Vanderbilt Hospital's refusal to complete a sex-change operation, Pat Lepley has filed suit seeking $500,000 damages.

The suit, which alleges Miss Lepley underwent a hysterectomy and a mastectomy as steps toward a complete sex change, claims hospital officials refused further treatment because they felt it would not be covered by Medicare or Medicaid.

But Dr. David G. Bowers, a Vanderbilt

plastic surgeon named in the suit, said the hospital decided Miss Lepley should not go through with the operation because of "psychological problems."

"My understanding," he said, "is that she didn't end up being a good candidate for completing the procedure."

The suit claims hospital officials first gave — then withdrew — approval for further surgery, and charges Miss Lepley "exists at this time as half woman and half man, all to her detriment, socially, physically and psychologically."

Telly Savalas may testify

MIAMI (UPI) — Telly Savalas, television's "Kojak," may be testifying for the defense in the murder trial of a teenager who plans to plead that "TV intoxication" was responsible for the robbery-killing of an elderly neighbor.

Circuit Court Judge Paul Baker issued an order Tuesday for Savalas to be on hand for the trial of 15-year-old Ronald Zamora next Monday. Baker said he will not rule until then whether Savalas' testimony would be needed.

Savalas says he deplores TV violence, and notes that Kojak relies more on reason than firearms to catch crooks.

Testimony links Robinson to slaying

HOUSTON (UPI) — Oil millionaire Ash Robinson, embittered over the death of his only daughter, planned and paid for the murder of his former son-in-law, according to testimony from a former prostitute.

Marcia McKittrick, 27, Tuesday linked Robinson to the slaying during testimony in a $7.6 million wrongful death suit filed against Robinson by the survivors of Dr. John Hill.

Hill, a wealthy plastic surgeon, was shot-to-death at the front door of his home Sept. 24, 1972. At the time of his slaying Hill was awaiting trial a second time for the death of his first wife, Joan Robinson Hill. Hill's first trial ended in a mistrial.

Miss McKittrick testified Robinson was still agonizing over his daughter's death and was bitter about Hill's chances of being acquitted.

"He said he didn't feel he'd ever get custody of his grandson," she said. Dr. Hill had gotten a mistrial. He felt he never would be convicted. He said that it would be taken care of."

Miss McKittrick's boyfriend, Bobby Wayne Vandiver, confessed his part in the murder to police, but was killed in Longview, Tex. Miss McKittrick was convicted of driving the getaway car and was sentenced to 10 years in prison.

Tribute to Basie

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (UPI) — Jazzman Count Basie joins Ray Charles and Ella Fitzgerald tonight as the third winner of the Award of Distinction presented by the National Association for Sickle Cell Disease.

Diahann Carroll and actor Donald Byrd will head the tribute to Basie, whose driving thing "jazz" and "dynamic arrangements have influenced jazz musicians for 42 years."

prison. Lila Paulus was convicted of arranging the contract and was sentenced to 25 years in prison.

Robinson never was charged. In a voice barely audible at times, Miss McKittrick, 27, testified about the way Hill's murder was planned.

She said Mrs. Paulus approached her about the killing in the spring of 1972.

"She asked me if I knew anyone who 'would' be interested in filling such a contract. I told her I didn't know anyone, but would ask around," Miss McKittrick said.

She said she had talked with Robinson two or three times and had seen him with Mrs. Paulus on seven or eight occasions while Hill's slaying was being planned.

Miss McKittrick, who had refused to testify in three previous appearances before the jury, said co-conspirator Lilla Paulus received a final payment of $7,000 for Hill's slaying on Sept. 23, 1972.

"Did she (Miss Paulus) say from who she received it (the money)?" attorney Ray Bass asked.

"From Mr. Robinson," Miss McKittrick answered.

Miss McKittrick had previously refused to testify even though she had been given a grant of immunity.

Fuss opens UN session

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The 1977 General Assembly session has begun with Cambodia wanting to vote without paying and with Israel miffed at its temporary president — and most of the diplomatic big guns had not even reached town.

Yugoslavia's Lazar Mojsov, the president of the 32nd General Assembly, told the opening session Tuesday the problems it faces in the next 13 weeks of deliberations are "considerable and complex."

Following a nearly two-hour delay caused by Cambodia's insistence on voting without paying back membership dues, the Assembly sidestepped the problem by voting by acclamation to admit Djibouti as the 148th and Vietnam as the 149th U.N. members.

U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young, welcoming the nation whose membership had been vetoed three times by the United States, said America now "looks to the future" in its relations with Vietnam.

"We are hopeful that constructive relations will be established within the United Nations, as Vietnam joins the common effort to achieve the goals and aspirations of the (U.N.) Charter."

The Vietnamese flag will already be flying outside the U.N. building today when the final round of welcoming speeches is over and the assembly turns to the procedural preparations for the serious business it will face.

That begins next week, when Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan, a host of foreign ministers from Arab countries arrive for talks, public and

'Gizmo' darkens Quebec

MONTREAL (UPI) — A "small white porcelain gizmo" blew out on a major power line in Quebec's far north Tuesday, plunging much of Canada's largest province into darkness for up to eight hours.

Hundreds of persons were trapped in elevators, air traffic was halted or diverted for several hours and police cars screamed through Montreal streets in response to burglar alarms tripped by the on again, off again power flow.

"But there was no evidence of the looting that plagued — and during that blackout July 13-14, Montreal's major stores immediately locked their doors as soon as the blackout struck at 1:25 p.m. MDT.

But both Montreal and the provincial capital of Quebec City reported almost doubled normal traffic accidents involving homeward-bound crowds, trapped in dark and chaotic streets.

Hydro-Quebec, the provincially-owned utility, said power was restored to 45 per cent of the province by 10:30 p.m., and service resumed gradually in the rest of the province today.

A utility spokesman said, "The whole thing was caused when a 'potential transformer' — a small white porcelain gizmo about three feet by 15 feet in size — blew out. It literally just blew itself out."

He said the device blasted off a major line a power substation 300 miles north of Quebec City. Pieces of the transformer punctured adjoining lines, collapsing three major power lines pumping electricity into the province from huge hydroelectric power plant in Churchill Falls, Labrador.

Parts of Montreal had restored-service within three hours, but other sectors, including affluent west end communities recently plagued by gangstyle vandalism, remained in darkness several hours longer as power from a single operating line flickered on and off into the night.

"There were certainly hundreds of people caught in elevators, mostly in office and apartment buildings," said a spokesman for the fire department which handled most elevator rescues. No injuries were reported.

The blackout struck Montreal as almost all available fire and police personnel were trying to control a fire at Lafontaine Hospital, Quebec's largest psychiatric center.

Major Montreal hospitals said emergency generators were "activated" immediately and reported no interference with patient care. Individual power units aboard subway trains also went into operation and no commuters were trapped underground.

Among the beneficiaries of the blackout were Montreal's many bars and hotels, which reported a roaring business.

Seoul letting Park decide return

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The South Korean government apparently is leaving it up to Tongguk Park to decide when and whether to return to the United States to face federal indictments and questions about buying influence on Capitol Hill.

South Korean Foreign Minister Park Jong-in emerged Tuesday from a 70-minute meeting with Secretary of State Cyrus

Vance and told reporters it would be better for U.S. South Korean relations to "put an end to this as soon as possible in a friendly way."

But asked if Park would return to Washington, the foreign minister, laughed and said, "Well, I have to see how he feels about it. It's up to him."

The meeting did not bring a solution any closer, the Korean official said.

"To prolong this situation would certainly not help our two countries in promoting friendly cooperation in the future," he said.

Park faces a 36-count federal indictment in connection with alleged efforts by the Korean CIA to "influence" U.S. policy toward South Korea. Park fled Washington to London last year and returned to Seoul last month.

Korea has said it will not

S. Africa minority powers vote set

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — South Africa will hold early elections as a vote of confidence on Prime Minister John Vorster's plan to give limited powers to white and Indian minorities — but not the black majority.

In a hastily-called news conference in Pretoria, Vorster announced Tuesday he had disbanded parliament and four provincial councils and scheduled a whites-only election on Nov. 30, 17 months ahead of schedule.

But Vorster said the new Tripartite Parliament will exclude representatives from South West Africa (Namibia) for the first time since 1950, pushing the South-African government.

The prime minister has proposed constitutional changes to create separate parliaments for South Africa's 4.2 million whites, 2.37 million multiraces and 17 million blacks — but not the 18 million blacks.

Spanish right rising

London Telegraph

MADRID — There are increasing signs of militancy on the part of Spain's extreme rightwing, the first such concentrated activity since the general election last June which signalled Spain's turn to parliamentary democracy.

The extreme Rightists,

secure for the nearly 40 years of Gen. Francisco Franco's dictatorship, were swamped in the election and have been quiet. But now they are once again emerging and one of their principal aims apparently is to obtain the support of the military.

Waclau Uhlik's body found

WACLAU UHLIK

VISALIA, Calif. (UPI) — Waclau Uhlik, a Czech who escaped to the West in a homemade tank in 1953, has been found beaten to death in Sequoia National Park.

Tulare County coroner's deputies Tuesday identified a body found in a shallow grave Sept. 10 as that of Uhlik. No arrests have been made.

Uhlik, 56, gained worldwide attention July 25, 1953, when he loaded his wife and two children and four other adults into his homemade tank and crashed through machinegun fire to cross the Czech border into West Germany.

It took him three years to build the seven-ton vehicle which became known as the "Freedom Tank."

He eventually settled with his wife and four children on a Sierra Nevada foothill near Fresno, Calif., where he built a two-story home.

Patty 'upset' with attorney

SAN MATEO (UPI) — Patricia Hearst says she is "upset" with her attorney for telling a reporter that she has resumed her college education, according to the San Mateo Times.

The newspaper Tuesday said a woman identifying herself as Miss Hearst called to take issue with a story quoting attorney Albert Johnson that she had gone back to school. The Times said it confirmed that the caller was Miss Hearst.

"I am real upset with Mr. Johnson,"

Miss Hearst told the newspaper. "I don't know why he did this. This is not true."

Miss Hearst, free on bail pending appeal of her conviction for the 1974 robbery of a San Francisco bank 10 weeks after she was kidnapped by the Symbionese Liberation Army, said she is not enrolled in college and has no such plans.

"I am not studying college level books or studying in any way," she said. "I may have thought about it but I have other things to do."

Sex-change plans not completed

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Contending she's been left "half woman and half man" by Vanderbilt Hospital's refusal to complete a sex-change operation, Pat Lepley has filed suit seeking $500,000 damages.

The suit, which alleges Miss Lepley underwent a hysterectomy and a mastectomy as steps toward a complete sex change, claims hospital officials refused further treatment because they felt it would not be covered by Medicare or Medicaid.

But Dr. David G. Bowers, a Vanderbilt

plastic surgeon named in the suit, said the hospital decided Miss Lepley should not go through with the operation because of "psychological problems."

"My understanding," he said, "is that she didn't end up being a good candidate for completing the procedure."

The suit claims hospital officials first gave — then withdrew — approval for further surgery, and charges Miss Lepley "exists at this time as half woman and half man, all to her detriment, socially, physically and psychologically."

Telly Savalas may testify

MIAMI (UPI) — Telly Savalas, television's "Kojak," may be testifying for the defense in the murder trial of a teenager who plans to plead that "TV intoxication" was responsible for the robbery-killing of an elderly neighbor.

Circuit Court Judge Paul Baker issued an order Tuesday for Savalas to be on hand for the trial of 15-year-old Ronald Zamora next Monday. Baker said he will not rule until then whether Savalas' testimony would be needed.

Savalas says he deplores TV violence, and notes that Kojak relies more on reason than firearms to catch crooks.

ELEANOR ROOSEVELT
... son writes book

Son writes untold stories of Eleanor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Eleanor Roosevelt once asked that her wrists be opened when she died "for fear of being buried alive," according to her son Elliott.

Roosevelt writes of his mother in a new book, "Eleanor Roosevelt's Untold Story." Excerpts from the book are appearing in the October issue of Ladies Home Journal.

Roosevelt said his mother, her body wracked by tuberculosis just before her death at 78 on Nov. 7, 1962, wanted to be allowed to die. When she was hospitalized in September of that year she had "so many injections that the nurses had to search for areas of unscarred skin," Roosevelt wrote.

"Believing it was non-sensical to go on any longer, she spat out the pills she was handed, or held them under her tongue."

After three weeks of hospitalization, Mrs. Roosevelt was sent home to her New York apartment.

Roosevelt describes sitting in his mother's room, holding her hand as she lay sleeping, only rarely stirring into consciousness. He wrote, "Once, at the thrust of yet another hypodermic, I watched her wake and mutter, 'Let me die.'"

A month later, while on a business trip in Miami Beach, Roosevelt said he got a call from his brother Franklin in New York, who told him: "I'm sorry old man, but Mummy's gone."

Roosevelt said his mother spelled out her funeral arrangements in a letter. She wrote: "... A simple oak coffin, covered not with flowers but with branches of evergreen from the Val-Kill woods; her wrists to be opened for fear of being buried alive; Charlie Curman and Les Entrup of the Hyde Park luncheonette to be her pallbearers."

Roosevelt said his mother's oak coffin rested in state at Val-Kill Cottage in Hyde Park, N.Y., "not under evergreen boughs, but covered with a magnificent floral blanket."

He did not say whether his mother's desire to have her wrists cut after she died was carried out.

Testimony links Robinson to slaying

HOUSTON (UPI) — Oil millionaire Ash Robinson, embittered over the death of his only daughter, planned and paid for the murder of his former son-in-law, according to testimony from a former prostitute.

Marcia McKittrick, 27, Tuesday linked Robinson to the slaying during testimony in a $7.6 million wrongful death suit filed against Robinson by the survivors of Dr. John Hill.

Hill, a wealthy plastic surgeon, was shot to death at the front door of his home Sept. 24, 1972. At the time of his slaying Hill was awaiting trial a second time for the death of his first wife, Joan Robinson Hill. Hill's first trial ended in a mistrial.

Miss McKittrick testified Robinson was still appearing over his daughter's death and was bitter about Hill's chances of being acquitted.

"He said he didn't feel he'd ever get custody of his grandson. He said Dr. Hill had gotten a mistrial. He felt he never would be convicted. He said that it would be taken care of," Miss McKittrick's boyfriend, Bobby Wayne Vandiver, confessed his part in the murder to police, but was killed in Longview, Tex. Miss McKittrick was convicted of driving the getaway car and was sentenced to 10 years in prison.

Seoul letting Park decide return

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The South Korean government apparently is leaving it up to Tongsun Park to decide whether to return to the United States to face federal indictments and questions about buying influence on Capitol Hill.

South Korean Foreign Minister Park Tong-jin emerged Tuesday from a 70-minute meeting with Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and told reporters it would be better for U.S. South Korean relations to "put an end to this as soon as possible in a friendly way."

But Seoul's Park would return to Washington, the foreign minister laughed and said, "Well, I have to see how he feels about it. It's up to him."

The meeting did not bring a solution any closer, the Korean official said.

"To prolong this situation would certainly not help our two countries in promoting friendly cooperation in the future," he said.

Park faces a 36-count federal indictment in connection with alleged efforts by the Korean CIA to influence U.S. policy toward South Korea. Park fled Washington to London last year and returned to Seoul last month.

Korea has said it will not force him to return to America, although congressional investigators are free to question him in South Korea.

The United States and Korea have no extradition treaty which could be used to compel Park's return, and he has said he will not return to Washington as long as "an emotional" charged atmosphere prevails here. He and Korea's government have denied any wrongdoing.

S. Africa minority powers vote set

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — South Africa will hold early elections as a vote of confidence on Prime Minister John Vorster's plan to give limited powers to multiracial and Indian minorities — but not the black majority.

In a hastily-called news conference in Pretoria, Vorster announced Tuesday he had disbanded parliament and four provincial councils and scheduled a whites-only election on Nov. 30, 17 months ahead of schedule.

But Vorster said the new 171-seat Parliament will exclude representatives from South West Africa (Namibia) for the first time since 1950, pushing the South-African ruled territory a step closer to a breakaway.

Vorster spoke from handwritten notes as he called the balloting a referendum on his power-sharing proposals and his strong rebuffs to other nations who oppose South Africa's white supremacist government.

The prime minister has proposed constitutional changes to create separate parliaments for South Africa's 4.2 million whites, 2.37 million multiracial and 727,000 Asians — but not the 18 million blacks.

Spanish right rising

London Telegraph MADRID — There are increasing signs of militancy on the part of Spain's extreme rightwing, the first such concentrated activity since the general election last June which signaled Spain's return to parliamentary democracy.

The extreme Rightists, secure for the nearly 40 years of Gen. Francisco Franco's dictatorship were swamped in the election and have been quiet. But now they are once again emerging and one of their principal aims apparently is to obtain the support of the military.

Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1977 by The Chicago Tribune. All Rights Reserved.

DEAR ABBY: My girlfriend Betty (fictitious name) was so beautiful a few years ago that when she walked down the streets heads would turn. She still has a beautiful face, but she must have gained about 50 pounds. Maybe 75. Betty has tried Weight Watchers, Tops and Overaters. Anonymous but she never stayed with any of them. She's also been to doctors who have put her on special diets, pills, shots, etc. Nothing worked.

Yesterday Betty told me she went to a fantastic doctor who specializes in weight reduction. He charged her $100 to weigh her, take her blood pressure and tell her he couldn't take her because she didn't weigh enough! He said he treats only extremely obese people, and she will have to gain at least 15 pounds before he can take her. Can you believe this?

So now Betty is eating up a storm so this doctor will take her. What do you make of this?

CYNICAL FRIEND

Make-up secrets

CASTOR oil and the dried bodies of the females of certain scale insects are used in make-up. By law this year, nine billion packages of cosmetic products on shelves of the nation's stores must disclose, on a label or tag, the main ingredients. Check it for yourself. Photo at right shows beautiful young lady making her pretty eyes even more dramatic.

Fat friend still gaining

DEAR FRIEND: I think Betty is a compulsive overeater who has found the perfect excuse to continue eating for a while. And I can't believe that a legitimate physician would tell an obese person to gain weight to qualify for a weight-reduction program.

DEAR ABBY: I recently moved near Arlington Cemetery. A friend of mine, who lives in another town, asked me to please visit her nephew's grave in Arlington Cemetery and say a prayer for him. I told her I would be glad to, but here's the problem: Her nephew died in action and his body was never recovered.

My friend tells me that her nephew's grave has a headstone with his name and the usual information on it. Abby, can a headstone be on a grave without a body interred? I think it would be sheer hypocrisy to say a prayer for someone who isn't there. If you think I'm wrong, I'll visit his grave and say a prayer.

A FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: If a serviceman's body has never been recovered, a memorial marker can be placed in a special, separate section of the cemetery. Visit the nephew's grave and say a prayer. You will be praying for his soul—not his body.

DEAR ABBY: Will you please straighten out the "John Smith Jr." and "John Smith II" confusion? My wife wants to name our son after me, and she insists that he will be "John Smith II." I say he will be "John Smith Jr."

I know I'm right, but I don't know under what circumstances a child becomes "the II."

Can you help me?

JOHN SMITH

DEAR JOHN: A man with the identical name as his father is called "Jr." as long as his father is alive. He may drop the "Jr." after his father's death, or if he prefers, he may retain it to avoid being confused with his late father. When a boy is named after his father who is a "Jr.," he is called "3rd." A boy who is named after his grandfather, uncle or cousin becomes "the 2nd."

There can only be one "Jr." in the family. And only one 2nd, 3rd, 4th, etc.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY, Box 6909, L.A., Calif. 90009. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope please.

your health

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb—

I am 75 and have walked all my life. I still walk every day only I am having trouble with my leg. I can only walk a few blocks and have to stop with the pain. I do not have high blood pressure and all my tests come out okay.

My doctor gave me Rhoical time span tablets, one a day, and I've taken them for more than a year. I just cannot tell the difference. What do you think of this drug?

I just feel awful when I do not get my walk. I would hate to give it up. It's the best part of my life physically.

Is there anything you could suggest to me? I would try anything. I do not take any other kind of medicines. I'm 160 lbs. heavy. 5 feet 6 and 117 pounds.

Dear Reader—

Helping you depends upon what you really have. Your doctor must think the pain is caused by poor circulation as Rhoical is used to increase circulation. Your description of developing a pain with walking that goes away with resting suggests that may be the case.

Other possible causes include arthritic changes which might involve the hip or knee. You might ask your doctor to arrange for a consultation with an orthopedic specialist and see if he can provide any help.

You might also get some help from simple aspirin. Why? Because it is a good pain reducer and it seems to have some anti-clotting action that might be helpful. Its "blood thinning" action might help your circulation if that is the problem. So whether you have pain from arthritis or poor circulation it could be tried.

Talk to your doctor about it first, as some people do not tolerate aspirin well but most do. A few people are advised to develop a bleeding tendency with it. It should be taken with meals or at least with a cup of milk. I am sending you the Health Letter number 8-8, Aspirin and Related Medicines, for you to study. It will give you information on how to take aspirin safely. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10101—return with no return address with the action of the Rhoical that you are already taking.

Dear Dr. Lamb—

I am a woman of 49 years. I took the pill for eight years and have been off it for a year now. I have not had a period since I came off the pill. Does this mean I have gone through the change and there isn't any possibility of my becoming pregnant at this age?

Dear Reader—

Women who naturally have completed the menopause and have not had a period for over a year are not likely to get pregnant—some authorities say two years. BUT in the case of the woman who has been on the pill as in your case, you should be very careful about deciding that you have gone through the menopause.

The pill may result in a temporary suppression of the normal ovulation process and you might still ovulate. I think under these circumstances you should definitely have your doctor examine you. He can advise you if you have or have not completed the menopause and are no longer likely to get pregnant before you throw caution to the wind.

By United Press International

Raise eyebrows at the next wine and cheese party. Let this slip past your lips:

—Lipstick has a castor oil connection.

—Coloring agents in eye cosmetics include an ingredient made from the dried bodies of the females of an insect.

Uncle Sam's Food and Drug Administration keeps lists of basic formulas and is the source of this unusual information.

By law this year, all nine billion packages of cosmetic products on shelves of the nation's stores must disclose, on a label or tag, main ingredients.

The FDA enforces the law. The agency's Division of Cosmetics Technology also makes unannounced inspection tours of factories and laboratories—the nation's cosmetics works.

In a report on "Cosmetics: The Substances Beneath the Form," published in the FDA Consumer, the castor oil connection in lipstick is described.

"Lipstick is composed essentially of an all-wax base stiff enough to form a stick, with red-staining dye and pigments in the oil, and perfume.

"Castor oil is the principal ingredient in lipsticks. Beeswax, carnauba, and candellila are the waxes used most often in lipstick."

"The perfumes are used mainly to mask any fatty odor that might be present in the basic ingredients, rather than to give a perfumed fragrance.

On eye make-up, the reference to coloring agents from the dried bodies of the females of a certain insect poses like this:

"The main coloring agents are ultramarines, iron and chromium oxide pigments, and carmine N.F. (derived from cochineal, which is made from the dried bodies of the females of certain scale insects).

Cochineal comes from the cochineal insect, a tiny bright red bug (dactylopius coccus). Related to and resembles the mealybug, it feeds on cactus. This bug has been a source of red dyes for eons.

The listing of ingredients on cosmetics is done for two reasons:

1. Consumers have a right to know what is in any product.
2. Listing will help promote truth in advertising.

There's also a health reason. If, for example, you get itchy or develop a rash after using a specific cosmetic you may just have become to allergic tone of the ingredients.

The listing on the label will help you and the doctor to pinpoint the noxious ingredient.

The listing helps, too, in case a toddler or pint-sized youngster munches, sips or slurps any cosmetics around the house.

The doctor at the hospital emergency room will be able to treat with greater accuracy if he knows exactly what was in the cleansing cream ingested by the curious crawler or creeper.

The disclosure tags or labels on cleansing creams will list a range of ingredients—Among them: mineral oil, beeswax, borax and water.

The beeswax-borax mixture, an emulsifier, keeps the oil and water together.

If glyceryl stearate and woodwax alcohol, cholesterol and mineral oil are words on the ingredient disclosure tag or label of your current cleansing cream, it means your cream won't leave skin dry or tight.

Color additives used in cosmetics must be okayed by the FDA for purity and Bromo acid and related dyes are responsible for most of the color quality of practically every lipstick.

The dyes have their own characteristics: This is why two lipsticks can look alike in the tube but put very different tones on the lips.

The cosmetic makers test most stringently for the safety of eye make-up, by the way. The area around the eyes is very sensitive. Serious damage can come very quickly from an irritant.

Creams, eye make-up and lipstick are among the top-selling cosmetic products. Others are antiperspirants, deodorants and lotions.

The Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act puts antiperspirants in the drug category. They alter a bodily function—excretion of fluid and toxins through the skin, a job nature intended skin to do.

Ingredients used in antiperspirants often include aluminum chloride or aluminum sulfate or aluminum chlorohydrate. Deodorant powders consist mostly of talc and perfumes.

You may also see listed on a deodorant ingredient label for "big" such things as kaolin, zinc oxide, zinc stearate.

These agents fight bacteria. Most body odor comes from bacterial action on the perspiration.

Own credit history important to women

NEW YORK (UPI)—A model who earns over $20,000 a year and has always paid her own bills is divorced and finds she can't use her department store charge accounts.

A widow who has never worked outside the home has trouble obtaining credit to buy a new car.

The Equal Credit Opportunity Act passed in June changed all that and Ms. Sandra Powers, consumer affairs adviser for Master Charge, spends her time trying to make women aware of the implications of the new credit standards and how to use them to their advantage.

"Under the new act creditors are, if requested, required to carry identical credit ratings for husband and wife," Ms. Powers suggests wives be sure this separate credit history is established.

"I don't want to sound like a crankpot, but statistically, either through divorce or widowhood, there's a good chance she'll need it."

Ms. Powers said a working wife can carry credit under her maiden name or married name and it is even possible for a non-working wife to establish a separate line of credit—by showing that she signs some or all of the family checks.

"In many families, the wife pays the bills, but in the past she had no credit history of her own," Ms. Powers said in an interview.

Since women are relatively new to the business world, she said, they -- and some lenders -- have yet to realize their economic clout. "About 38 million women are now employed outside the home -- a significant consumer blue if it is used properly."

"And women want to know," she said. "I recently appeared on a radio call-in talk show in Houston, Texas. The switchboard was lit up for four hours with calls from women wanting to talk about credit."

Ms. Powers said women tend to be unassertive about credit matters.

"Don't be afraid to go to a credit officer at your bank and ask anything. If you don't get a good response, find another officer, or even another bank," she advised.

Generally, she said, banks use three criteria in their credit judgments: income, stability and credit history. These differ from bank to bank.

"For instance," she said, "one bank may have a flat rule of one year on the job, while another may give credit if you've been on the job for six months, but have a good credit history. If you're turned down at one bank because of a particular bank policy -- and they must tell you why -- don't hesitate to try another."

What if one has no credit line and wants to open one?

"Open a charge account at a department store. It's generally easier than obtaining a bank loan or a major credit card," said Ms. Powers.

Channel X not part of TV's bargain

AURORA, Colo. (UPI)—Linda Giles is becoming a nervous wreck. Her father, nearly had a heart attack. And her 8-year-old son can't watch television by himself any more.

The reason? Each time her family flips on the television set and dials Channel 13, the screen is filled with couples cavorting in the nude.

Mrs. Giles said the films show people having sexual relations, women in high-heeled shoes walking on men, naked ladies being whipped and homosexual anal and group sex.

No one is certain why Mrs. Giles' set is picking up the X-rated films, but some officials think they may be coming from a nearby motel that specializes in pornographic features.

Two local police officers came to her apartment and searched the premises, spent 20 minutes watching television, agreed she shouldn't be receiving those kind of shows and left.

The Federal Communications Commission investigated, but had to order the proper equipment to track down the source of the signals. Until it arrives, officials have suggested Mrs. Giles watch a different channel.

"It's making me a nervous wreck," said Mrs. Giles. "I just want them off the set. I have an 8-year-old boy. I'm pretty disgusted," she added. "I showed it to my father, and I thought he was going to have a heart attack."

Mrs. Giles lives in a 36-unit apartment house but she is the only one in the building whose set picks up the shows.

Her son discovered the erotic films accidentally last month when he was flipping stations on the TV set. Mrs. Giles said she's told him since then he isn't to watch television by himself.

SUN VALLEY — Kathleen Duignan, Stanford, Calif., and Christopher Peck were married Sept. 10 at Trail Creek Cabin in Sun Valley. The bride, escorted by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter

MR. AND MRS. CHRISTOPHER PECK

Rev. Warren Dirks, pastor of the Methodist Church in Broomfield, Colo., and a friend of the Peck family, conducted the ceremony. His wife, Charlotte, played the piano.

An outdoor reception was held at Trail Creek and continued in Sun Valley following the wedding.

About 200 guests attended the ceremony. After the wedding, the bride and groom will be on a trip to Mexico and will reside in Twin Falls.

The bride and groom are 1972 graduates of Stanford University.

Retirement fund reported unsound

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Firemen's Retirement Fund is financially unsound, and legislation is necessary to put it on a sound footing, the chairman of a special legislative committee told the State Legislative Council Tuesday.

Sen. Dick Smith, R-Rexburg, said the accrued unfunded liability of the fund was $37 million. He said this was the amount necessary to make it "totally funded."

"At the rate revenue is coming in, the fund is barely staying even," Smith said, adding that the fund is not paying anything on the unfunded liability.

He said if the fund continues on its present course, in "8-10 years" the fund will be unable to pay retirees.

Smith said the problem is the fund does not have "effective, sound, skilled management" and hasn't "used a good investment manager."

"The money is not being well invested," he said.

One of the recommendations of the special legislative retirement committee is the fund be placed under the Endowment Investment Board, he said. Presently it is being managed on a parttime basis by the Insurance Fund and that a bookkeeper is handling the investments.

Smith said the committee had considered the possibility of placing the firemen's retirement under the Public Employees Retirement System. He said this idea was rejected, however, because it would be unfair to place such a financial burden on a system which is in excellent shape.

In addition, to placing the firemen's system under the endowment fund, the committee also recommended that there be a moratorium of increasing benefits, increased contributions to the fund and limiting the cost-of-living and disability benefits.

He said he didn't know if these recommendations would "take care of the unfunded liability," but that they would "sharply improve" the fund.

Smith said the firemen were "not happy with what we did. But — he added — they were 'shocked' by the committee finding 'because they thought they were in good shape.'"

The committee chairman told the council that the public employees system is in "excellent financial condition" with a fund of $200 million. He also reported that the judges system is in "pretty good shape," although it could be improved with some legislative changes.

Doctor discusses spanking theory

COEUR D'ALENE — Spanking children reinforces the idea that hitting others is all right as long as one is bigger and stronger, a Kansas psychologist told the annual meeting of the Mental Health Association of Idaho here Saturday.

Dr. John E. Valusek believes violence in America could be reduced significantly if everyone accepted a two fold idea: People are not for hitting and children are also people. He has quit his private practice to promote travel and speak widely on the theory that the way to fight violence is to stop corporal punishment and the idea that it's all right to hit children.

"It's not acceptable to hit anyone else in our society. There are laws against assault and fighting. Children are the only one unprotected," he said. Valusek acknowledged that many people honestly believe in the Biblical admonition of "spare the rod and spoil the child" but said the idea that children can't understand by other methods is simply not true.

He spends much time counseling with school personnel on the theory that getting one teacher or elementary principal to have more understanding may influence countless children toward a better emotional life. "You notice corporal punishment is only used in grade schools, never in high schools where the student may be bigger and stronger than the principal," Valusek said.

Dr. Robert Glover, Boise director of community rehabilitation services, Idaho Department of Welfare, reported on problems in his agency and a panel discussed problems involved in obtaining insurance coverage for mental health services.

The Mental Health Association in Idaho will focus on trying to obtain insurance coverage this year, according to Jim Adams, Moscow, vice president. Meetings are planned with insurance industry representatives prior to mapping legislative strategy. Nineteen states now mandate such coverage.

Other state officers elected include Lorraine Smith, Twin Falls vice president; Sharon Hubler-Galloway, secretary; Jim Maha, Boise, treasurer; and Opal Billinger, Twin Falls, regional vice president.

Residents asked city information

TWIN FALLS — Polk canvassers began Monday to gather up-to-date information about the Twin Falls and Buhl area for a new city directory.

The directory is a publication of the history of people, changing community progress through the years.

To gather the information, interviewers will visit residential and business areas, and residents are asked to provide the information requested to assure accurate listings for the Twin Falls and Buhl area. All enumerators for Polk will carry identification cards.

The extent of the research will be from five to eight weeks and is supervised by Geri Joslin, superintendent of Polk.

The office is located at 750 Commercial Ave. Local phones are in operation from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. for those who may not be home at the time the Polk representative visits.

For more information call 734-7210.

Mayor post open in Filer election

By MARJORIE LIERMAN Times-News writer

FILER — Filer voters will elect a new mayor and three councilmen at the regular municipal election Nov. 8 in the city hall, with polls to open at noon.

Voters who are not sure whether they are registered for this election, are urged to check with Frances Wells, city clerk, because voting in the last general election does not automatically make them eligible for voting in city elections.

John Glandon, former councilman who was appointed to replace Mayor Paul Shover, who resigned before completing his term of office, has announced he will not seek the mayor's post for the coming four year term.

Nominating petitions may be picked up at the city office and should be submitted to the clerk after Sept. 29 and through Oct. 11.

The four year terms of councilmen Jack Pierce and Gilbert Crawford expire this year, and both men have said they will not seek reelection. The term of Richard Schweltzer, appointed to take Glandon's place on the council, is ended and a council member must be elected at this time for the remaining two years of the position.

Councilman Charles Crawford is the only holdover member and has two more years remaining on his four year term.

PTA installs officers

The presidency was filled by Mr. and Mrs. John Doerr; and the vice-presidency by Mr. and Mrs. Jim Lee; the new secretary is Mrs. Robert McKinstry. Treasurer for the coming year is Mrs. Doug Neville.

New membership chairmen are Mr. and Mrs. Jim Olson and legislative chairman is Mrs. Robert Nelson. Publicity director is Mrs. Robert Woodbury. Hospitality chairman is Mrs. Rita Snack and welfare chairman is Mrs. Sharon Evans.

Members at the meeting were entertained by the school band and orchestra. Parents attended their children's classes and met the teachers.

Man dies from bee stings

PALM DESERT, Calif (UPI) — A commercial sign builder died Monday two hours after he was stung by a swarm of bees.

Jack Mulhall, 51, of Indio, Calif., was the third person in Riverside County this summer to die from bee stings. Officials said Mulhall was stung dozens of times on the arms and shoulders by bees flying inside a sign Mulhall was removing. He died of heart failure two hours later at a local hospital.

NATIONAL WEATHER SERVICE FORECAST to 7 AM EST 9-22-77

30% chance of rain Thursday

Twin Falls, Northside, Burley, Rupert Area: Increasing cloudiness tonight leading to a 30 percent chance of rain Thursday. Overnight lows tonight near 35 to 40 degrees and high temperatures Thursday near 60 degrees.

Friday's outlook is sunny and cool. Spraying and dusting conditions will generally be poor through Thursday due to increasing chance of shower activity.

Halley, Camas Prairie, lower Wood River Valley: Partly cloudy with chance of shower activity tonight, continuing through Thursday. Snow level, low rain to near 6,000 feet. Overnight lows near 30 and high temperatures near 55.

Friday's outlook, sunny and cool.

Synopsis: As the skies cleared and the winds diminished during the night, temperatures dropped into the mid-30s across the valley. However, at the weather service office the temperature dropped to a cool 33 degrees, with spotty areas of light frost reported.

The coldest spot, however, was at Fairfield in the Camas Prairie where 23 degrees was recorded.

Today should be mostly sunny but more clouds are expected to move into the valley tonight, which should keep frost away. However, more rain is expected Thursday, which should continue to delay bean harvest.

This unsettled weather is being caused by weak upper disturbances, moving around a low pressure area centered in British Columbia. As this low drifts slowly eastward the weather in the Magic Valley will improve, however, only very slowly.

Citizen groups offer 5 coal plant alternatives

BOISE (UPI) — Three citizen groups offered the Public Utilities Commission five recommendations today as alternatives to Idaho Power Company's proposed coal-fired generating plant.

Responding by letter to the commission's invitation for information on alternatives, the recommendations were submitted by spokesmen for Idaho-Citizens Coalition, Citizens for Quality Living and Idaho Consumer Affairs.

They include:

- Requiring all new pump irrigation lookups for new desert land pay the full cost of the new generating capacity to serve them.
- Slowing growth in the winter peak load by imposing a capacity charge for all new gas and electric lookups, to be paid by the builder.
- Directing the power company to put up the money for a study of sites where low-head turbines can provide electricity.
- Asking Gov. John V. Evans and members of the Idaho congressional delegation to support legislation making a larger share of Bonneville Power Administration electricity available to Idaho.
- Passage of state legislation encouraging the use of solar and geothermal heating.

"We are in the midst of a period of rapid change in patterns of energy use," they said. "Federal policies" will provide added incentives for energy conservation.

"A commitment to large, high-cost coal plants is not the best policy for Idaho. Nor is it what the people want."

"By simplifying (sic) changing policies on desert land development and reforming rate structures we can buy many years, enough time to develop and implement energy policies based on sources that Idaho people want," they said.

Kidwell blasts BLM director

BOISE (UPI) — Attorney General Wayne L. Kidwell accused the state director of the Bureau of Land Management today of misinforming Idaho citizens on what the law allows in lieu land selections.

The state is trying to select 27,000 acres of federal land still owed it in compensation for public school lands taken by the federal government.

State BLM Director William Mathews recently issued a press statement saying his agency had prepared a list of land he considered appropriate for selection and said indemnity laws allow transfer on a basis of "equal value." He said his purpose was to show "good faith" in light of the controversy surrounding state lieu selections.

Kidwell wrote Mathews that he was "stunned" by the announcement, saying Mathews' conclusions "are in the face of legal interpretation by the courts."

He said the U. S. District Court for Utah on June 8, 1976 reiterated a United States Supreme Court opinion in 1921 that held "equal acreage" not "equal value" was the law to be applied. Although that case is on appeal, he said, "it is currently the law."

Rains slow Gem harvest

BOISE (UPI) — Rains have "slowed" the harvest of small grain in Idaho, although the State-Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said Monday it is in the windup stage and is more advanced than last year.

The service said the small grain harvest was running from 10-15 percent above a year ago in the state and harvest was virtually complete in North Idaho.

It also noted that harvest of other crops, generally, were ahead of a year ago.

Corn controls receive study

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government's already announced plan to induce farmers to cut production of surplus wheat next year probably will be supplemented by a smaller cutback program for corn and other livestock feed grains, Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland says.

Bergland, in a lunch meeting with reporters Monday, said he's continuing to deliberate on corn controls until the harvest is "well underway."

"But unless something disastrous happens to the crop by the first of October... it's reasonably safe to assume we will have a 10 percent set aside for corn," he said.

Agriculture Secretary said. Under such a program, farmers who wanted to qualify for government price supports and other benefits would be required to file acreage equal to 10 percent of their intended 1978 corn plantings.

Wheat growers have already been told they will have to idle, or set aside, acreage equal to 20 percent of their plantings.

Agriculture Department experts say the dual program would probably slow but not completely halt the current rapid expansion of grain surpluses which has forced farm prices down to below production cost levels for many growers.

Total grain production under a combined wheat-feed grain setaside program might be held to 240 million metric tons, down 3.5 percent from this year's harvest but still about 6 million tons above probable market needs.

Bergland warned that many corn farmers may think they can make more money by ignoring the voluntary cutback program, even though this would lose them eligibility for price supports on all grains and soybeans.

"If only a few farmers participate in the control program and a big crop results — with most of it ineligible for next year's $2 a bushel corn support — Bergland said the result could be "disastrous economic consequences" coinciding with next fall's election season.

"I don't know what the political fallout would be," he said, adding that he plans a strong "information campaign" to warn farmers of the economic risks of ignoring a corn setaside if one is proclaimed.

Bergland also told reporters in a far-ranging session that: — He will probably set next year's soybean support at $4.50 a bushel, although no decision has been made yet and the "parameters" under discussion are in the $4.50 to $5 range compared with this year's $3.50 support. He thinks soybean market prices of $10 or even $7 a bushel are bad for farmers because they spur increased competitive production.

— He is reviewing the possible need for a change in milk supports which were raised from $8.26 a hundredweight to $9 last April 1. At the moment, odds favor no change for the six months beginning Oct. 1, he indicated.

— He plans to meet here with members of a visiting Chinese trade delegation next week but has no idea if the talks will lead to increased American farm sales to China.

He plans to create a new unit in the Agriculture Research Service to coordinate expanded human nutrition research.

— He believes consumers will face higher food prices if the Food and Drug Administration bans use of antibiotic drugs in livestock feed.

— And he has ordered a study to find out if the Interior Department's recent order limiting the size of Western farms eligible for federal irrigation water would mean a chaotic change in farming patterns. Bergland said he needs to determine whether the restrictions would lead to a cut in planting of cotton and grain in favor of fruits and vegetables which might be forced into a surplus.

Loan deadline near

TWIN FALLS — Farmers in Twin Falls County who plan to apply for federal emergency loans to recover from drought losses should file applications by Sept. 30.

This deadline is in accordance with eligibility for the loan, set by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Filing can be done at the Twin Falls County Office or the Farmer's Home Administration, 1061 Blue Lakes Blvd. N.

Eligibility for the Drought Impact Emergency Loan Program, appropriated funds passed by Congress this year, is based on drought impact designations made by the federal Interagency Drought Emergency Coordinating Committee.

Loans not exceeding $250,000 to offset production loss from disasters since July 1 are made at an interest rate of 3 percent.

For more information on loan application call 733-3815.

Gem wheat crop down

BOISE (UPI) — All wheat production in Idaho this year is expected to total 40.4 million bushels or 26 percent less than last year, the Idaho Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said today.

Wheat production is expected to be 32.4 million bushels as of Sept. 1, down 17 percent from 1976 production of 39.2 million bushels. Spring wheat production at 18 million bushels is 20 percent less than last year.

Burley is expected to total 40.3 million bushels compared with 43.2 million in 1976 while sugar beets are forecast at 2.1 million tons — down 27 percent from 1976 production of 2.9 million.

Dry bean production is indicated at 2.2 million pounds or down 17 percent from last year's production of 2.7 million pounds. All hay is expected to total 3.9 million tons, eight percent less than last year.

Production of peppermint oil in Idaho for 1977 is forecast at 423,000 pounds. That is 54 percent more than last year's harvest and, if realized, would be the largest crop on record.

About 2,300 acres are in peppermint production, 2,900 more than last year.

The peppermint crop is expected to be 319,000 pounds, which is up 83 percent from last year's harvest and would also be a record.

The outlook for Idaho's hop harvest is not so optimistic. It is forecast at 4,785,000 pounds, down seven percent from a year ago. Both acreage and yields per acre are expected to be down from a year ago.

Dairy, mint output rises

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho dairy production and mint production are up over last year, but hop production, dry bean production and the pea crop are all down, according to the Idaho Crop and Livestock Reporting Service.

Dairy herds in Idaho produced a total of 140 million pounds of milk in August. This was an increase of one million pounds from last year and was an increase of two million pounds over July. Milk per cow figures for August stood at 995 pounds, up 15 pounds over last year, according to the report. The number of cows in August was 141,000 head, up 1,000 over a year ago.

Production of peppermint oil in Idaho for 1977 is forecast at 423,000 pounds. That is 54 percent more than last year's harvest and, if realized, would be the largest crop on record.

Gooding forms new planning, zoning group

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

GOODING — Gooding County Commissioners expect to announce names of the newly-appointed county Planning and Zoning Commission soon, Commissioner Rick Brailford said Wednesday.

Commissioners dissolved the old planning group last week, citing the fact the group "had never been officially constituted either by resolution or ordinance" as reason for the action.

Under a combined ordinance-resolution adopted by commissioners last week, the new planning group will have only five members. The former commission originally had 12 members, but had become smaller in the past year.

However, members of the former planning commission today took issue with the alleged illegality of their formation.

"How could our decision to deny the Harold Smith subdivision in Hagerman have held up in court if we were illegally constituted," said Thelma Ferguson, chairman of the now defunct group.

Ben-Glauner, who was county commissioner at the time the planning group was formed in 1966 said "We went according to recommendations of Del Taylor, who was with the FPA at that time."

"There never was any question of the legality of the group," Glauner said. He said the commissioners followed state recommendations as to appointment and number of members on the old planning group.

Members of the planning commission received letters in the mail last week informing them their group had been dissolved and thanking them for their service.

"Why couldn't they have met with us to discuss the problems they believed existed?" Ferguson said.

Another longtime member of the planning group, Bob Bolte, Gooding said "I don't follow their reasoning. I haven't figured out why we're illegal."

The present prosecuting attorney or deputy attorney never has attended any meetings of the planning group and county officials "do not diligently perform their duties I will speak out."

"It is hard for me to believe the county commissioners would allow our county to be raped by developers," Ferguson said, adding that if the new planning group and county officials "do not diligently perform their duties I will speak out."

During the past 11 years an estimated 200 persons have volunteered time and effort to complete the county's comprehensive land use plan, adopted Jan. 25, 1975, she said.

A county subdivision ordinance also has been adopted, with the proposed zoning ordinance ready for informal hearings.

The former planning commission has had up to 12 members, but last fall several members resigned and the county commissioners failed to appoint replacements, Ferguson said.

Brailford said today new persons have already been asked to serve on the positions, but the county commissioners have not yet received confirmation, so the names cannot be announced.

"Our biggest concern," Brailford said, "was that if the (planning commission) hadn't been legally constituted and any decision they made could be challenged."

Mike Frost, Boise, southwest Idaho regional director for the state Bureau of Budget, Policy Planning and Coordination, said this is not the first time county commissioners have dissolved planning groups. Ada County officials last fall appointed all new members after asking for resignations from the old members.

Frost said the Gooding planning commission had "done a good job." Under the state Land Use Planning Act each county commission is mandated to set up a planning group; but there are no specific provisions as to how this should be done, he said.

"They could appoint themselves to serve as the planning group if they wanted to," Frost said.

The state bureau of budget, policy planning and coordination, Frost says, only acts in an advisory and resource capacity to counties "at the request of local people."

Bed pushing competition

The Downtown Anniversary Committee has come up with a new game which takes five people and a bed.

And they will be doing it along with a host of others right on the Downtown Mall next week.

The committee is organizing a bed pushing contest down Main Avenue scheduled to begin at 5:30 p.m. Sept. 30.

Two races, one for those 16 or younger and one for those 17 and older, will be held. Four pushers, two men and two women, will be expected to push a bed on wheels with another person on top down Main Avenue.

Participants will have a chance at more than $1,000 in prizes.

The races, two beginning at 5:30 p.m. Sept. 30, and run-offs beginning at 8:30 a.m., Oct. 1, are being held to celebrate the seventh season, since the Downtown Mall was created.

Prizes will also be given to the bed with the best theme.

Farm laborer killed

BURLEY — A Texas farm laborer was killed early Tuesday morning when he was hit by a truck on I-80 southeast of here.

Tony John Torres, 19, El Paso, Tex., was killed instantly, according to Idaho State Police Corporal Robert Conner.

The victim was staying at the Burley labor camp. Conner said reports indicate he was attempting to hitchhike back to his wife in Texas.

Conner said several motorists reported seeing the pedestrian standing in the middle of the highway trying to flag down vehicles.

The accident occurred about 1:30 a.m., five miles north of Sublett.

Driver of the truck was Francis Benezky, 44, who works for Hutz-Bernadine Truckers, Dallas, Penn. He was hauling a load of candy and was northbound on the freeway.

Benezky told Conner that the victim was in the middle of the road and he was unable to see the man in time to avoid him.

Conner said the youth was running across the road in front of the truck at the time of impact. He said the body was carried about 30 feet after impact before it fell off the truck to the side of the road.

Pilots slightly hurt

BURLEY — A U.S. Army helicopter crashed about 22 miles southwest of Burley Tuesday evening. The two pilots were treated for minor injuries at Cassia Memorial Hospital and released.

Military officials were still withholding the pilots' names this morning.

The helicopter crashed shortly after 5 p.m. Tuesday in a rural area about 12 miles northwest of Ogden.

The helicopter broke into three to four large pieces upon impact, but both pilots walked away from the crash.

Mark Schroeder, a farmer in that area, heard the crash and started over to the site. He picked up the two pilots and drove them to the hospital in Burley.

The helicopter was based at Salt Lake International Airport. County Deputy Sheriff Tom Taylor said the helicopter had returned to Twin Falls and was headed back to Salt Lake City.

Military authorities took charge of the scene upon their arrival in the middle of the night and still hold the site cordoned off this morning.

Water cut asked

FILED — The main pump motor at Filer's main city water plant burned out today about 6 a.m., and residents are being asked to use water only for domestic needs.

Mayor John Glendon said the burned-out motor was taken to Twin Falls for disassembly to find out what happened.

He said the city may have to replace the 50-horsepower motor, which got "very hot."

City water department workers reported about 40 pounds of pressure about 8 a.m. today. Glendon said if residents use water only for their own needs and not for yards, water supply and pressure should be sufficient.

How long Filer citizens must keep conserving won't be known until later today, when the city learns the extent of damage to the burned-out pump motor, which operated at well No. 3.

Glendon said residents should stop all water use when they hear the city fire whistle blow to give firemen all the pressure possible.

Magistrate judge favors open hearings

By BOB ZUCKERMAN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Magistrate Judge Paul T. Smith said Tuesday he might have ordered the preliminary hearing for Deborah A. Henson, charged with embezzling funds from YWCA coffers, open to the public if the county prosecutor had requested it.

"The public has a right to know what's going on," the judge said. "They have a right to see what the prosecutor is doing for them... it's accountability."

Henson's defense attorney William R.

Hollifield requested the preliminary hearing in the case be closed last week. At the time, the prosecutor, Frank J. Dykas, said he had no objections.

Later, Dykas said he had raised no objections because he thought a defendant had a right to a closed preliminary hearing by law and he didn't think the judge would rule in favor of the objection.

"I lean in disfavor of the statute," which says a judge must close a preliminary hearing at the defendant's request, said Smith who has only closed three preliminary hearings while a magistrate here.

"There is a question in my mind as to whether 9-911 (Idaho Code) is constitutional," given recent legislative action requiring open meetings and recent Supreme Court decisions on press freedom, Smith said.

But Dykas said last week he felt the law was constitutional and said he thought it was a good law.

A person is presumed innocent until proven guilty, and a preliminary hearing gives a person a chance to clear his name before the elements of the case besides the charges become public, Dykas said.

While closing the three-day preliminary hearing last week, Smith noted his ruling was not a "zap" order. That comment led the two attorneys in the case to tell the press what they thought was happening at the hearing after each day of testimony.

After the hearing, the judge ordered Henson bound over to district court for trial.

Smith said he did not open the hearing even though the prosecutor did not ask him to because he does not feel it is the job of a judge to take an "advocacy" role in court.

He said he hoped the state legislature would consider changing the law.

Despite objections, zone change OK'd

By LARRY SWISHER
Times-News writer

JEROME — Over the objections of the county planning board and local residents, Jerome County Commissioners Monday approved construction of an Idaho Highway Department maintenance shed near Interstate-80.

The Jerome County Planning and Zoning Board Aug. 20 voted four to three against rezoning the land from agricultural to light industrial to allow the highway department facility, now located in Jerome.

The rezone was sought by Volvo, Inc./Jerome, which is purchasing five acres located within three-quarters of a mile of the West Jerome interchange. The highway department plans to exchange its present maintenance yard adjacent to Volvo for the land and build a shed to house equipment and a yard for sand and gravel.

Monday morning after hearing from local residents opposed to commercial development in the farming area west of I-80, the county commissioners unanimously granted the zone change. However, they granted it with the condition only the highway department could build there.

Ray Cobble, county commission chairman, said he believed noise from the highway facility would be minimal and that further commercial development in the area was not a threat.

He said the commission did go against the wishes of some members of the planning board and local residents. But he said earlier planning board vote was basically a "locked vote."

Cobble added the highway's facility would be attractive, well lighted and fenced and would not really be called "industrial," like a manufacturing plant.

Residents have protested the maintenance shed would mean further commercial development in the agricultural area, and would create noise and possibly salt-contaminated runoff.

County Commissioner Henry Schulte, Eden, in voting for the rezone, said, "The thing that changed my mind was that there was already some land across the road that had been rezoned commercial." He said it was not fair to allow that rezone and deny Volvo's petition.

Schulte said he was still committed to preserving farmland and keeping urban development around Jerome from "leap-frogging" into agricultural areas. He said he didn't anticipate the area surrounding the rezoned parcel becoming commercial "in the near future."

All the planning board meeting Aug. 30, a three-to-three tie vote over the issue was broken when vice-chairman Clark Ricketts voted to deny the rezone. Chairman Roy Prescott, who favored the motion, had stepped down in order to participate in the vote.

Ricketts said the question was whether any commercial development should be allowed in the area which is over a mile from the city.

The eighth member attending the meeting abstained from voting.

The county commissioners and planning board members who voted for the rezone pointed out the Jerome area would benefit because highway snow removal and sanding equipment would be close at hand.

Minidoka plans vote

By SHANE O'NEILL
Times-News writer

RUPERT — The Minidoka County school district will go to the people for an authorization bond to build a new Paul elementary school.

The school board Monday night decided to completely rebuild on the site of the school partially destroyed by fire in June. Damages to the school were estimated at more than $5 percent.

Monday night's decision was made despite the fact that there has been no settlement with the company carrying the insurance on the district's schools. There has been no settlement regarding the building. The district has received $107,330 as settlement for contents of the building.

Jim Smallwood, architect with Thompson-Kolbo and Associates of Twin Falls, estimated construction costs of a new school at $1,519,825 ($57.50 per square foot for 26,530 square feet).

Smallwood also offered estimates for refurbishing some areas of the partially burned school and rebuilding the rest at a cost of $1,348,750, or tearing down the standing sections and rebuilding from the foundation at a cost of $1,488,750.

He said the difference between refurbishing the existing structure and building an entirely new school was only $171,075.

The figures do not include architectural and various other fees costs.

The school board approved a bond election with a mill levy for bond redemption and the eventual settlement from the insurance company to go toward that bond redemption fund.

The new structure presented by Smallwood would be childproof with a brick facing. It would include 20 classrooms, a music room, a library, multi-purpose room and administrative areas.

Superintendent of Schools Wayne Fagg suggested the school board include in the bonding proposition some improvements at all schools in the district.

Blaine peaks white

SUN VALLEY — The mountain peaks along Trail Creek and north in the Pioneer and Boulder Ranges were dusted with snow Monday and Tuesday, and for a short time, Baldy Mountain's top was white.

With considerable rains in the Wood River Valley this week skiers and winter enthusiasts looked north at nearby mountain tops where their hopes for a healthy winter season were encouraged.

Between Monday and Tuesday, about two inches of snow reportedly fell on Baldy Mountain, Sun Valley Resort's primary ski mountain, and farther north, between four and six inches of snow glazed the mountain peaks with a frosty white topping.

The precious white stuff atop Baldy quickly melted Tuesday, Sun Valley Resort officials said, however.

But, according to Forest Service reports, the tops of Galena Summit and other mountain peaks along Trail Creek and the Sawtooth Valley are still white today.

District Ranger Tom Farr, at the Ketchum Ranger Station, said today the area has received 21 inches of precipitation since last Thursday, while the 20-year long-term average for September is only 88 inches precipitation.

State police nab speeders

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho State Police are cracking down on speeders on the state's three interstate highway system.

They have initiated quietly a concentrated operation which the Lewiston Morning Tribune reported Tuesday has resulted in some 1,400 speeding citations in a 16-hour period.

Idaho law enforcement chief Kelly Pearce — alarmed at a 23 per cent increase in highway deaths this year and a general non-compliance of the 55 miles per hour speed limit — threw 40 to 50 troopers into concentrated areas of interstate highway two days the past week.

—The Tribune said last Friday State Police issued 719 citations, and on Monday they caught another 686 motorists.

Each time the operation was conducted within an eight-hour shift.

The operation was put into effect after a non-publicized three-hour test project near Twin Falls last month caught more than 100 speeders.

Pearce said the campaign, nicknamed "Skunk Force" by State Police, will begin in earnest next month.

"No matter how many officers or ears we have patrolling the highways, there's no way we can enforce the 55-mph limit unless people voluntarily comply with it," Pearce said. "Skunk Force is just a little encouragement."

He said each month officers secretly will choose three days at random to operate Skunk Force. He said the department can't do it more often because in order to carry out the program State Police must cut back on non-interstate patrolling during the saturation period.

Deposition reveals police 'affairs'

BOISE (UPI) — A deposition in a $10-million damage suit brought by six women fired from Boise-Police Department has disclosed lesbian and heterosexual affairs among police officers.

More than 500 pages in length, the document is a transcript of an interrogation by the women's attorneys of Police Sgt. Frank Richardson. Richardson denied the investigation that led to firing of the women.

The six fired employees are contesting their dismissal earlier this year. Their suit, scheduled for trial beginning Dec. 12, claims that Richardson, Police Chief John Church and city officials violated their rights.

In another deposition, Chu said he heard reports of lesbianism in the department as long ago as five years. He said minor inquiries revealed little but the reports finally led to Richardson's investigation last February.

One incident apparently prompting the investigation was an alleged homosexual advance by one of the fired women on another female police employee with whom she was living.

The other woman ran into the street after the sexual overtures — just as a Boise policeman drove up to the house for a visit, Richardson said. Both the policeman and the female employee had told him they slept together. He said he reported that to a police captain but nothing was done.

US Park Service buys property near parks

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Park Service is stepping up its purchases of property in the older National Parks to prevent private developments, it was learned Tuesday.

Park Service director William Whalen has implemented a new policy which calls for condemnation of privately held lands once owners indicate they want to add living accommodations, or expand commercial operations.

Previously, the service permitted a wider latitude of construction. For example, it would not prevent the owner of a lot from building a private vacation home but might block construction of a high-rise or subdivision of a ranch.

Now, Park Service officials will seek to condemn undeveloped property where owners plan relatively small dwellings or addition of buildings which could be used for more living space.

The service would allow, however, the construction of small utility buildings such as tool sheds or garages.

"Likewise, the application for a building or sewer permit or the filing of a subdivision plan must be viewed as evidence of an incompatible use," said Whalen in a memo to his staff.

Building ordered vacated

NAMPA, Idaho (UPI) — Fire Marshal John Johnson has ordered occupants to vacate the Waddell Building in downtown Nampa by Oct. 14 unless the owner submits a schedule to correct building deficiencies.

Johnson said inspection of the structure has produced a long list of fire and safety violations, ranging from inadequate fire exits and fire hazards to electrical inadequacies and unprotected stove and furnace vents.

He said if the owner of the building, Tereco real estate in Boise, wants to fix it up "then that's fine and dandy." But he said he had no choice in issuing the ultimatum "with all those people in there."

The building contains apartments, a lounge and a barbershop.

A spokesman for Tereco said the firm was aware of some of the building's problems when it bought the structure in mid-August from the College of Idaho.

A sticky question gets and answers WHAT CAUSES HONEY CANS TO BULGE? DON'T THROW OUT BULGING CANS OF HONEY until you read this. It may change your mind.

In conferring with top honey producers, fermentation is given as the cause of the gas that makes the honey can bulge. It's caused by too high a moisture content (added water or the honey is harvested too "green" before fully ripened by the bees).

Water should not be added to honey unless the honey is "green" and then only according to Federal standards which state the moisture content in honey should be 18.2 percent or lower. If nothing is added to pure honey, it should store indefinitely without fermenting. When honey does ferment it starts to sour and although it may have an off flavor it is safe to eat. If this happens to you, try home pasteurizing which is simply heating the fermented honey to 130 degrees to kill any organisms and drive off the gases. Then store in a suitable container (aluminum metal or glass jars or fine) or use the honey in baking.

We hope this information will help you save your investment in stored honey. Call us if you have additional questions. We will be your favorite store.

Fishing hints: by Swen

No-license report

Two months ago I proposed that free licenses be eliminated in Idaho. Since that time I have received letters, phone calls and some personal visits not only against but for this proposal. The results as of now are against my proposal about 2 to 1. Mr. Jules Hoyer of Jerome made a personal visit to me to point out that the elderly (whom receive free licenses), cannot afford to pay for licenses and that this is one of the privileges getting old. Some support was heard from. Next all of those who support the fee for everyone were under the retirement age. They felt as if do that a license is the least costly of all items when fishing. I also heard some reports of several persons going to lakes and setting up conning kitchens. One report was that a couple had over 100 points of fish in their trailer at night. To recap: Those AGAINST THE LICENSE FOR EVERYONE proposal were in the majority.

*****
Some great fishing on the Snake River in the area of the Madid river. I gave this stretch a try on a Monday and found that many fish in the 2 to 3 lb. range were there to be caught. Using of lures, both and flies produced about the same results. Both was the best producer for the larger fish. This area is fast water and to fish it good requires that the fisherman get out and walk. I found that the flats just before and just after a set of rapids was good for fly fishing. The pattern was a wool fly. Red ants and Renegades produced well. Some larger flies did better for the larger fish. Using Mepps spinners was also good. My problem with the lures is that I lose one and then sit down and cry. The use of cut bait produced the best results. I set the cut bait drift into a circular hole and then move it around and around until I feel the first rudge and then wait until the second or third before trying to set the hook. The fish are wild, the water is fast and if a larger trout should go down stream, you have a problem. I have found that after I sock it to me, I then open my ball and let the fish have it run. It usually goes down stream full ball and when I release the ball will usually turn and go upstream where you can handle him better. Because I use no net, I find that if you can gently rub the trout's belly he will stop the jumping and fighting and you can gently lift him out of the water for a release or keeper. The walk will do you good.

Kingman feels like man without country

BOSTON (UPI) — Dave Kingman has never read The Man Without a Country, but he doesn't have to. He gets the general idea from the title. The central figure in Edward Everett Hale's classic novel is Philip Nolan, a U.S. naval officer, who, in a moment of bursting point anger, says he never wants to hear the name of his country again. His wish is granted, and for 55 years he is transferred from vessel to vessel without being allowed to land or hear anything about his country from other people, books or newspapers. Kingman, playing with his fourth child this season, is still a free agent, drifting aimlessly like Philip Nolan, so to speak. He started the year with the Mets, was traded to the Padres in mid-June, then dealt to the Angels a few weeks ago and now is with the Yankees. When Tuesday night's Yankees-Red Sox game was washed out by rain, I asked Kingman whether he feels like a man without a country and he said, "Very much so. "It's been very unsettling," he offered. "That all comes with playing 'out' your option. It's tough to do the job that way. "Tough as it is, Kingman has been doing it so speculatively for the Yankees, since they claimed him on waivers a week ago, he may be earning a berth with them for next year. Then again, he may not be, depending upon whether the Yankees have any more luck signing him than the Mets, Padres and Angels did. Kingman hasn't played a single inning in the field for the Yankees yet. As a designated hitter and pinch-hitter, he has come to bat 10 times, producing three homers and a grand slam. Two of his homers came against the Tigers and the other one against the Red Sox. He also has struck out five times, which means he hasn't changed his style of hitting much since the last time you saw him. Some Fenway Park fans, seldom inhibited by their opinions, gave Kingman a pretty good going-over before Monday night's game.

"They, Kingman, they didn't want you with the Mets, the Padres or the Angels, and they're not gonna want you here either," one box seat patron bellowed at the big right-handed slugger as he waited to take his turn in the cage for batting practice. "You're still a free agent, Kingman, and you'll always be one," the fan kept it up. Kingman heard him but pretended he didn't. "I don't pay any attention to that," he said later. "I ignore everybody in the stands." Instead of talking about the Red Sox' 6-3 victory the night before on Tuesday, everyone buzzed about how easy Kingman had made it look with his pinch-home run off the light tower beyond the left field wall. "He'd hit 60 homers in one season if he were playing for us," said one localite having breakfast in a downtown coffee shop. "He might do a little damage in this ballpark," commented Ciri Yasizrenski, wryly. Counting all four clubs he has been with this summer, Kingman has 25 home runs. He declines to speculate how many homers he'd hit playing regularly in Fenway Park with its short left field wall. "I never make any predictions," he said. "You can't say for sure whom he'll be with next season. "I do not know," he said. "I'm taking the same attitude with the Yankees as I did with San Diego, the Angels and the Mets." Kingman started the season asking for more than $2 million over five years from the Mets. They offered him $300,000 a year for anywhere from two years to six years and he turned it down. Before leaving the Padres, they offered him $300,000 a year and naturally, he rejected that. So now he is playing for $75,000 a year. If he stops and figures it out, he'll see where he has lost $123,000 this season by not accepting the Mets' free offer, which is the best one he has received. One thing, though, Kingman has been getting a lot of moving expenses. A lot of traveling time, too. Just like Philip Nolan.

Bavasi resigns as Padre boss with team in turmoil

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — E.J. "Buzzy" Bavasi, his team in turmoil after a year of ill-timed injuries and free agent frustrations, announced his retirement Tuesday night as president of the San Diego Padres. Bavasi, who after 17 years as a successful vice-president-general manager led the Brooklyn-Los Angeles Dodgers when they won eight pennants, was lured away in 1968 to take control of the expansion Padres. Under Bavasi's stewardship, the Padres never reached higher than fourth place in the National League West. But this year, with a major infusion of money from the club's owner, hamburger czar Ray Kroc, the Padres invested heavily in the free-agent market, signing former Oakland A's stars Rolfe Fingers and Gene Tenace. As a result, pre-season expectations ran high, but those hopes were quickly dashed when the club's pitching staff was decimated by the loss of ace left-handers Randy Jones and Brent Strom due to injuries. "I leave with nothing but the highest regard for everyone connected with the organization and especially Ray Kroc," said Bavasi. "I'm really sorry that the club did not progress as I hoped it would throughout the year. However, under the leadership of Mr. Kroc I'm sure the club will succeed. Mrs. Bavasi and I are grateful to Ray for having kept the franchise in San Diego and we both wish everyone involved nothing but success." With the club mired in fifth place in the NL West, 26½ games behind Los Angeles, inner pressures have placed both Bavasi and manager Alvin Dark in difficult positions. Bavasi's retirement appears to be the first step in a major reorganization by Kroc. Last week, reports that Dark would soon be fired were not discounted by anyone in the Padres' front office, while Tenace, among other players on the club, demanded to be traded. Ballard Smith, legal counsel for ballclub and Kroc's son-in-law, said Bavasi's resignation caught the owner by surprise. "Buzzy's action was totally unexpected and Mr. Kroc is too upset tonight to talk about it," said Smith. "He will probably make a decision within the next few days concerning the front office structure." Only within the last few days, Kroc said he planned no changes whatsoever in front office personnel or changes in regard to the status of Dark, who is in his first year of three-year contract. However, there were reports that the presence of Dark may have been a catalyst in the Bavasi resignation. Bavasi had opposed Dark's hiring earlier this year. Bavasi admitted earlier this year that the free-spending foray into the free agent market had been a mistake and that he would recommend to Kroc that the Padres not do it again. However, Kroc and Bavasi reportedly were not on the best of terms of late although Kroc announced that Bavasi would remain with the Padres for the time being as a consultant. Bavasi, whose son Peter is the President of the expansion Toronto Blue Jays in the American League, is a native New Yorker who was an organization man for the Brooklyn Dodgers under Walter O'Malley and Branch Rickey. In 1951 he became vice president of the Dodgers after running their Montreal farm club in the International League. It was Bavasi who convinced the Dodger brass to hire the then little-known Walter Alton as their manager in 1954 in place of Charlie Dressen. Alton, who had managed at Montreal for Bavasi, went on to win seven pennants and the only four World Champions in the club's history.

Amateurs try to land pro team

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — They lack high-powered financing and admit they're just a group of amateurs trying to tackle a huge hurdle, but members of the Kentucky Colonels Booster Club are working like pros to return professional basketball to Louisville. The first step, the leaders of the 1,500-strong Booster Clubnote, is to make sure there's a massive outpouring of community support for the "NBA-6-Pak" of exhibition games and one regular season contest at Louisville's Freedom Hall. The first game in the package will be Oct. 2, when the Cleveland Cavaliers meet the Detroit Pistons. The boosters figure that if they can prove Louisville fans will support a National Basketball Association franchise by attending the exhibition series in droves, the pro circuit will give the town an expansion team. Otherwise, they hope the NBA will permit an existing franchise to shift its operations to Kentucky's largest city, which has been without big league pro sports since the old Kentucky Colonels of the defunct American Basketball Association folded last year. The package of NBA games was put together by J. Bruce Miller, a Louisville lawyer who has represented such NBA stars as Dan Issel. But the monumental job of selling the NBA to Louisvillians rests in the hands of the boosters — a strictly volunteer outfit with funds of scant. "People are calling us every day to say 'what can I do?'" Booster Club president Len Hays said Tuesday in an interview. "People are donating their services, statisticians and annumers and the scoreboard operator are all working the games for nothing and we have the phones manned seven days a week." The boosters aren't particular about how they can lure the NBA to Louisville. "This group will support (Mike) Storen and the Atlanta Hawks or John Y. Brown (Buffalo Braves) owner and former owner of the Colonels or whoever will bring back NBA ball," says Maxine Lutz, who served on the Board of Directors for the old Colonels ABA franchise. "Of course, every time people hear on the radio about the Braves not getting support in Buffalo, it fires on our efforts and gets people to call us with support," she added. Lutz says the boosters are relying on volunteers who work odd hours in the club's donated nine-room office that would have been occupied by the Colonels if the team hadn't folded. "We have two old ladies on disability who come in to work whenever they can," she said. "We've never been charged a day's rent for these offices and there's always somebody who's willing to keep the phones going." So far, the boosters say they've sold $73,000 worth of tickets for the "6-Pak" arrangement. The real test, however, will come when single-game tickets go on sale this weekend. "We have two old ladies on disability who come in to work whenever they can," she said. "We've never been charged a day's rent for these offices and there's always somebody who's willing to keep the phones going."

Dorsett draws spotlight just by sitting

DALLAS (UPI) — Until such time as Tony Dorsett decides he would rather spend his time doing something other than carrying footballs for a living, he is going to be a subject matter.

Dorsett carried the ball only four times in Dallas' opening victory against Minnesota last week for 11 yards. And he fumbled once near the Vikings goal line.

The man who started at tailback, Preston Pearson, had an excellent game, caught a touchdown pass and was awarded a game ball.

But when coach Tom Landry met the press Tuesday, Dorsett was still a popular topic.

"Tony will play more and more as the season goes on," said Landry of his top draft pick. "There is no telling when he might have a good day."

"The main problem is that he missed so much repetition in training camp (with a bruised knee). He didn't run plays for two weeks. He doesn't have a feel for the plays yet and has not yet learned the blocking patterns of the line."

"But I have no reservations about Tony Dorsett. When he makes his move he is really going to make it. I anticipate he will probably play more this week (against the New York Giants) than he did last week."

"I meant to use him more than I did last week, but the situation of the game dictated that we go more with experience."

And Landry said that he was not concerned that Preston Pearson's ego would be bruised by the attention paid to Dorsett.

"The only thing I know is that Preston has had his greatest summer, and he is playing as well as I've ever seen him play," Landry said.

"Preston has a lot of pride and he is going to play as well as he can to fight for that job."

As for the Cowboys' overtime victory against the Vikings, Landry came away delighted with his youthful defense, which had four players starting at new positions.

"We were moving and hitting and our young people played well," Landry said. "They tried to take advantage of Randy White (starting at defensive tackle) and he held up well. And this was a good game for Aaron Kyle (at corner back) because he played great and will gain encouragement from that."

"And Thomas Henderson (who, at linebacker, had the responsibility of running back Chuck Foreman for much of the day) made some mistakes. But he came back to make some excellent plays well."

But Landry seemed most pleased with Bob Breung, who started his first game at middle linebacker in place of the retired Lee Roy Jordan.

"Bob is playing as well as he can play right now with the amount of experience he has," Landry said. "And he can only get better. We are really pleased with Bob."

Carew undergoes examination

KANSAS CITY (UPI) — Rod Carew of the Minnesota Twins, baseball's leading hitter this season with 365 average, flew home to Minnesota Tuesday to be examined by the Twins' team physician for an inspection of his lymph glands.

Carew woke up Tuesday morning with a red streak down his right arm and had it examined, during the afternoon by a Kansas City physician. The physician recommended that he not play in the game against the Kansas City Royals that night.

Carew, who also was not going to play in Wednesday night game against Kansas City because it is a Jewish holiday, decided to fly home for further examination by team physician Dr. L.A. Michelson.

Club officials said Carew is expected to return to the lineup Friday night against Milwaukee.

Coach builds Bucks in mold of Celtics

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — John Killilea "doesn't see anything wrong" with trying to pattern the Milwaukee Bucks after the Boston Celtics. And there isn't another coaching assistant around who could do a better job of it.

Killilea was an assistant in Boston for five years before coming to Milwaukee last year to rejoin Don Nelson, who played 14 years in the pros, is an example of the kind of player they want.

"Don wasn't blessed with a great deal of quickness or speed," Killilea said. "But when you watch the Celtics (in Boston) he was able to keep up by really studying it. He was able to learn to make up for his lack of speed by being smart."

He said the Bucks three first round draft choices — Indiana center Kent Benson, UCLA forward Marques Johnson and Tennessee's Ernie Grunfeld — all seem to have that quality.

"What he (Nelson) is talking about is seeing the total game and all three do it very well," he said. "It's basically to see other people and know what to do with the ball."

"It's also the ability to give (the ball) up and give someone else a better percentage shot. That's what the Celtics have done for years."

"Naturally, you start out with a great deal of optimism. In the next four weeks we'll be making adjustments down to what the personnel can do. When they will jell — that's anybody's guess."

Czechs whip Stingers

PRAGUE (UPI) — World champion Czechoslovakia routed the Cincinnati Stingers of the World Hockey Association, 12-3, in their return match of the "Rude Pravo" Ice hockey cup Tuesday night before 12,000 spectators.

The match almost ended prematurely in the third period when the Stingers left the ice following a series of penalties and brawls. However, they decided to return after some 15 minutes.

A pair of goals by Riche Leduc helped Cincinnati to a 2-1 lead in the opening period, but the Czechs wrapped it up with nine consecutive goals.

Texas' new veer offense dominates NCAA statistics

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Texas, on the heels of impressive triumphs over Boston College and Virginia, appears to be on its way back to the powerhouse days of the early wishbone as it is once again dominating the NCAA Division I statistics.

The Longhorns, now using a veer offense, have registered 112 points in two games and lead the nation in scoring, rank third in rushing behind Southwest Conference foe Texas A&M, sixth in total offense, first in scoring defense, second in total defense and third in rushing defense.

Texas has not allowed a point in its first two games and also ranks eighth in pass defense — with just five completions in 24 attempts for 89 yards.

Grabbling is the total offense leader with a 513-yard per game average; Texas A&M is the rushing leader with a 333-yard per game average; and Brigham Young is the passing leader with a 425-yard per game average.

Louisiana Tech ranks first in both total defense and rushing defense, leading the opposition to an average of 70 yards per game with a minus-88 yard average on the ground; and Southern leads the nation in pass defense with a 12.5 yard average in two games.

Louisiana Tech also leads Division I in kickoff returns with a 92-yard average on one return.

Sorkin admits using clients' money

MINEOLA, N.Y. (UPI) — Player agent Richard Sorkin pleaded guilty Tuesday to seven counts of grand larceny involving the theft of $300,000 from five New York Islanders and two New York Nets players.

Sorkin's guilty plea in Nassau County Court came after the District Attorney's office agreed to drop 25 other charges connected to the alleged theft of an additional $429,500 from 24 other professional athletes.

Speaking in a loud, clear voice, Sorkin said: "I was running a sports agency and handling the player's income. I sold their bills and other expenses and also invested funds for them."

"But I suffered great losses in the stock market, and I could no longer pay the bills," Sorkin admitted.

There were reports that Sorkin lost a considerable share of the money to gamblers, but he made no mention of it, and Judge Henderson Morrison did not inquire about it.

Sorkin, a former sports reporter for the Long Island newspaper, Newsday, was arrested last June after many of the players filed complaints with the District Attorney's office.

The charges to which Sorkin pleaded guilty included larceny of $125,000 from Bob Nystrom, $56,000 from Jude Drouin, $55,000 from Gary Howatt, $25,000 from Bob Bourne and $6,000 from Larry Henning, all of the New York Islanders hockey team.

He also admitted the theft of $12,000 from Kim Hughes and $31,000 from Al Skinner, both former members of the New York Nets, who since have transferred their operations to New Jersey.

Sorkin will be sentenced on Nov. 1 and could receive a maximum prison term of seven years on each of the seven counts of grand larceny.

Nassau District Attorney Denis Dillon said Sorkin was allowed to plead guilty to the lesser charges in order to avoid "a prolonged and costly trial."

ISU hosts E. Montana in battle of winless teams

POCATELLO — Idaho State will try to regroup—from its second straight loss this Saturday when the Bengals host like-wise winless Eastern Montana at 8 p.m. in the ISU Midlodge.

ISU dropped a 35-0 decision to powerful Nevada Reno to go 0-2, while EMC was idle after opening with a loss to Mesa College of Grand Junction, Colo.

Although the Bengals are playing a member of the NAJA Frontier Conference after opening with 11½ against Big Sky opposition and one of the best Division II independents, over-confidence will not be a problem in the ISU camp this week.

"When you score seven points in two weeks and give up 63 you don't take anybody lightly," commented ISU Head Coach Bud Hake. "They had a week off to prepare for us so they will be even tougher."

The Yellowjackets have tradition on their side in their bid to upset ISU. Two years ago when Joe Salem was in stituting his rebuilding program at Northern Arizona, EMC climbed on a bus for the 1000-mile Billings-Mont., to Flagstaff, Ariz., then upset young NAU 36-34. The situation will be similar Saturday, with EMC the underdogs against a rebuilding Big Sky opponent.

"We will be mentally ready for them and give it a good effort," Hake said. "They run the wishbone and it will give our outside people problems, especially since our cornerbacks are so small."

EMC has some fine skill-position—players, especially veteran option QB Brett Pruitt, who rushed for 351 yards a year ago and was the leading passer despite Coach Dana Woodring's preference for running the ball. Pruitt hurried only 38 passes all last season as starting QB.

"I tight end Bill Davis, a 25-11 soph., is Pruitt's favorite target, catching seven for a 22.1 average a year ago."

EMC's 5-2 defense proved tough against the run a year ago with co-captain and defensive end Steve Almam (215 lbs.) making 10 tackles to lead the team.

Hake has made several changes in the starting lineup for EMC, especially in the offensive line. Dan Schroeder will be at center again after grading out with ISU's best offensive-line film score. 245-lb Rick Sasser's knee is not troubling him any more, prompting his starting role at split-side tackle. Warren Whitaker, whom Hake praised highly for his play against Reno, moves to the light-side. 251-lb Tom Townsend moves from tackle to tight guard.

Thus split guard Ron Lueker is the only offensive line starter who opened the season to remain a starter in his same position. One reason for the changing is ISU's weak pass protection. Steve Illizer, who started at QB against Reno, was sacked so hard he had to leave the game in the first half, and Mick Spoon and Dirk Koetter were likewise harassed.

Injuries prompted some other changes. Rick Riedel, who had been leading the league in punt and kickoff returning, suffered a knee injury in his first fallback start and will miss the rest of the season. Thus Eddie McGill moves back in at tailback. Split end Curt Didier had a bad ankle sprain, and Highland HS soph Greg Smith takes over there.

Bob Matsey had an eight-tackle game and could take over the strong safety spot from Larry Chambers.

ISU played solid defense against the high-scoring Wolfpack for the first quarter and a half, fine UNR QB Jeff Tisdell, second-team All-American on one year service, without a completion during that time. Finally Tisdell hit one, and it was a dandy. It went 78 yards to tight end Steve Senini for the game's first score. After that it was all Reno.

"Our kicking game was the only bright spot I saw," Hake said. "We got some good defensive line efforts but they did not come at the same time as we had against NAU. They were only spasmodic."

In retrospect, Hake had the following observations on the Reno game: "We met a real fine club, and we did not play particularly well. We did take good care of their outside game, shutting off the wide run and stopping their wide receivers. Jeff Wright caught 14 against ISU last year (0.9 per year.) Tisdell was right on the dot passing. On two TD passes we had perfect coverage but he zinged the ball like a bullet."

But Hake has hope for the future.

Dugout celebration

Dodgers top Giants to clinch title

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Ed Hallecki, with a 7-2 lifetime against the Dodgers, was touched for seven hits in eight innings and suffered his 12th loss, compared to 14 victories.

The Giants had one early threat against John in the first-inning—Derral Thomas beat out a tap near the mound for a single and raced to third on a passed ball as Darrell Evans was drawing a walk. Two outs later, John walked Clark to fill the bases. The threat ended, however, when Randy Elliott hit a long fly to right-center.

The Dodgers broke the NL West pennant race open in April when they won 17 of their first 20 games and built a 7½ game lead over the Reds.

Pirates 4, Mets 2
NEW YORK (UPI) — Club RBI leader Bill Robinson singled in the tie-breaking run during a two-run eighth inning Tuesday night that helped John Candelaria gain his 18th victory—and the Pittsburgh Pirates a 4-2 triumph over the New York Mets.

Candelaria raised his record to 18-5, the best winning percentage in baseball, and lowered his ERA to a major-league leading 2.48. With Philadelphia's 4-2 win over Chicago, the Pirates' magic number for elimination in the NL East was cut to four. Nino Espinosa, 2-13, took the loss.

Tigers 5, Indians 4
DETROIT (UPI) — Pinch hitter John Wockenfuss' one-out RBI single following Jason Thompson's 29th homer keyed a two-run rally in the bottom of the 10th inning Tuesday night which provided the Detroit Tigers with a 5-4 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

Brewers 5, Seattle 1
MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Jim Slaton hurled an eight-hitter and Sal Bando smashed a two-run single to highlight a four-run fifth inning Tuesday night which carried the Milwaukee-Brewers to a 5-1 victory over the Seattle Mariners before the smallest County Stadium crowd of the year—3,064.

Seaver's shutout was his sixth this season and 41th lifetime. The veteran right-hander now has 20 career victories against 131 losses.

Orioles 5, Jays 2
BALTIMORE (UPI) — Rookies Eddie Murray and Rick Bauer smashed homers behind Jim Palmer's seventh-hitter and 18th victory Tuesday night to help the Baltimore Orioles edge into second place, three games out of first place in the American League East, with a 5-2 triumph over the Toronto Blue Jays.

Palmer, 18-11, saw Murray snap a 1-1 tie with his 23rd homer in the fourth inning, Dauer's third homer against Toronto, and fourth this year, came in the fifth.

Royals 4, Twins 2
KANSAS CITY (UPI) — Hal Metcalf belted a two-run homer and George Brett added two solo shots Tuesday night to help Kansas City a 4-2 victory over the Minnesota Twins, the Royals' 10th win in their last 20 games.

Joe Zeb drew a two-out walk in the fifth against Geoff Zahn, 12-13, before Metcalf unleashed his 19th homer of the left-field bullpen, to give the Royals the victory.

Upset over Rams bolsters Falcons' team confidence

ATLANTA (UPI) — Leeman Bennett was willing to admit the fact that he had had doubts about how well the Atlanta Falcons would perform after losing quarterback Steve Bartkowski.

After all, he had witnessed, as a Rams assistant coach, the ineptness of the Bartkowski-less Falcons last December when Los Angeles terrorized Atlanta by a 59-0 score. And, after becoming head coach of the Falcons last winter, he had really counted on having Bartkowski as his quarterback this season.

Six days before the regular NFL season began, the Falcons learned that Bartkowski needed another knee operation and would be lost for at least six weeks.

"You might compare football to playing bridge," said Bennett. "You have to play with the cards you are dealt. The important thing is to play them the best you can."

Bennett's trump card after losing Bartkowski was 29-year-old Scott Hunter, a former University of Alabama star who had had some success as a pro quarterback at Green Bay and who, after coming out of early retirement, had quarterbacked the Falcons last season after Bartkowski had his knee operated on the first time.

"I guess the thing I was most concerned about was the psychological impact of losing Steve again," said Bennett. "I was concerned about the effect it might have on our entire season if we got off to a bad start."

Bennett could talk that way now because the Falcons opened their season last Sunday with a 17-6 victory over those same Rams who had embarrassed them nine months before.

Never mind that the Rams didn't seem themselves, that they simply didn't play like the Rams Bennett had helped coach and admired. The important thing was that the Atlanta Falcons, playing without Steve Bartkowski and figured to be a two-touchdown underdog, had won, and won convincingly.

"I can't explain a 70-point swing in the score, that's one of those things that no one can find a simple answer for," said Bennett. "I do know that things had gotten so bad here by just December that the Falcons were on a real downer when they played Los Angeles. They were a much better team than that 59-0 defeat indicated."

Bennett has no intention of putting the rap on the Rams. The Falcons still have to play in Los Angeles and Bennett doesn't want to rile the Rams any more than necessary. But some of the Falcons players commented privately that it seemed to them that the Rams appeared splintered before last Sunday's game.

"Attitude is an important factor in a football game, there's no question about that," said Bennett. "That's one of the reasons it was so important for us to do well in our opener. If we had played poorly, if we had been beaten pretty bad, we might have spent the rest of the season trying to recoup."

Wallace Francis, who caught five of Hunter's passes last Sunday, said the win "gave us a real shot" in the arm. It gave us a confidence that we sorely needed, a confidence not only in Scott Hunter, but in the team as a whole."

Hunter has no illusions. He knows he's just a journeyman quarterback and that he'll probably be back in a reserve role as soon as Bartkowski can play again. But, as long as the Falcons need him, Hunter plans to give his best.

"My role is all that more important because of the way I wound up as the starting quarterback," said Hunter. "My job is to help the Falcons improve, to help them avoid the sort of inconsistency that hurt us so much last season." "It is so very important that a team that is trying to build avoid peaks and valleys," said Bennett. "I guess that is what concerns me the most, whether this team can turn in the same sort of performance week after week."

"They won't have to wait very long to find out. They play in Washington Sunday and Bennett said the fact that the Redskins lost their opener last week is going to make it that much tougher.

"George Allen," said Bennett, "doesn't lose two in a row very often."

Montana State ranked No. 1 in UPI's division II poll

MISSION, Kan. (UPI) — Montana State and Wittenberg were rated No. 1 Tuesday in the national Collegiate Athletic Association's first weekly Division II and Division III football rankings.

Montana State (2-0) appears as powerful this season as it was in 1976 when the Bobcats won the National Collegiate Division II title with a 12-1 record. Coach Sony Holland's squad has defeated North Dakota State (24-17) and North Dakota (21-7).

South Carolina State (2-0) earned its second-place ranking by routing Delaware State 21-0 and North Carolina A&T State 52-0.

New Hampshire (2-0) is third, and 1976 Division II runner-up Akron (2-0-1) ranks fourth.

Wittenberg (7-0) tops the Division III poll following a 17-14 win over Division II Eastern Kentucky. Baldwin-Wallace (1-0) beat Lehigh, another Division II team, 28-16, and was voted into second place. Third-rated Rams Bennett had helped coach and admired. The important thing was that the Atlanta Falcons, playing without Steve Bartkowski and figured to be a two-touchdown underdog, had won, and won convincingly.

UPI's only loss came against Division I member Miami (0-1), 26-23.
