Omnitest Corp.
 322 S. 3rd E.
 PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — The springer on Mars and the frost would be on the pumpkins. It would be, that is, if there were Martian pumpkins.

Viking 2, perched since last Sept. 3 on the northern Martian plain called Utopia, has just given scientists on Earth their first close look at frost on the surface of the red planet, even though it's spring there.

The black-and-white photo was taken Sept. 13, just as winter was ending and spring beginning, and it was radioed to earth earlier this week. Viking will now take color photos of the frost.

It looks for all the world like frost or snow," said Dr. Kenneth Jones of the Viking Lander team at Caltech's Jet Propulsion Laboratory, which monitors and operates far ranging space explorers for NASA.

"It's very, very thin and at the moment we're not sure if it's dry ice, water ice or clathrate." Dry ice is frozen carbon dioxide; clathrate is a mixture of dry ice and water ice.

He said there is uncertainty over the makeup of the frost because scientists have conflicting temperature readings from the Viking lander, one of two robot scientific stations located on the Martian surface, and its orbiter, which is circling the red planet.

The lander recorded a temperature of 171 degrees below zero, about 13 degrees too warm to freeze carbon dioxide on Mars. The orbiter, scanning the zone from space, registered an average temperature for the area of 186 below, which would form dry ice.

"We have no explanation why we have suddenly found frost on the ground so late in the Martian winter," said JPL spokesman Don Bane. Mars, he said, "appears to be doing all sorts of things we didn't expect."

Meanwhile, the Viking team still cannot tell if there is some primitive form of life on Mars. Although the Vikings have found no evidence of life, the question "is still a very open one," Bane said.

"It is not proper at this time to draw any conclusions about the presence or absence of life from Viking data."

Expensive vintage

LONDON (UPI) — Addy Assin, an American wine dealer, Thursday paid a record $14,450 for a bottle of wine.

A spokesman for Christie's auction house said although it was a world record for a single bottle, it was a deserved price because it is a Chateau Lafite made from grapes picked in 1806. There is only one other bottle of the 171-year-old vintage.

Assin said he was acting for a collector he declined to identify. The wine was not going to be drunk "I even though a similar bottle opened several years ago was drinkable."

But even if the wine had turned into vinegar, "it's the ownership that counts," he said.

FIRST OF 22 CASKETS LOADED ABOARD WAITING PLANE ... Air Force transport due to reach Hawaii Saturday

Americans' remains flown from Vietnam

HANOI, Vietnam (UPI) — A U.S. military honor guard today loaded the remains of 22 Americans who died in the Vietnam War aboard an Air Force C-141 jet transport for their trip home.

Following the simple ceremony and talks between the U.S. and Vietnamese officials in 90-degree heat, Frank A. Sieverts, the State Department's deputy coordinator for POWs and MIAs, said progress had been made in accounting for 2,500 Americans still missing in Indochina.

He said the Vietnamese, would definitely continue their search for the MIAs.

Sieverts, who headed the 10-member joint state-defense department team picking up the 22 MIAs' remains, said, "The questions of normalization of U.S.-Vietnam relations and U.S. aid to Vietnam did not come up. Our talks with the Vietnamese were limited to the MIA problems."

The 22 bodies, each in a small box with a folded U.S. flag placed on top, were carried into the C-141 and placed on a table in the rear of the craft.

Sieverts said in the Philippines before he flew to Hanoi that his team would accompany the remains Saturday to Honolulu after an overnight stay at Clark Air Force Base.

In a 10-minute ceremony, in which the Vietnamese did not participate, a five-member casket-bearing team carried the caskets, two by two, past the honor guard and into the aircraft.

After being in Hanoi for five hours and 42 minutes, the plane left for Clark Air Force Base in the Philippines where it will remain overnight and continue Saturday to Honolulu. Identification of the remains will be verified by the U.S. Military Central Identification Laboratory in Honolulu before the names will be released.

Of the 22 bodies, one, Tucker Gougelmann, was identified by Vietnamese authorities and his name released by the State Department. Sixteen others were identified by the Vietnamese but their names were not made available.

Gougelmann, reportedly an agent of the Central Intelligence Agency early in the Indochina War, returned to Saigon of his own accord and was captured in April, 1975. He died at the age of 57 in June, 1976, of what the Vietnamese said was "natural causes." State Department sources said.

Gougelmann's family lives in New York City.

Death bomb OK'd

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Carter administration can now be reasonably confident of winning congressional approval to develop the controversial neutron bomb, which kills people by radiation while minimizing physical damage.

The House Thursday defeated, 257-102, an amendment by Rep. Theodore Weiss, D-N.Y., which would have deleted funds for the weapon from the 1978 Energy Research and Development Administration authorization bill.

The House then passed the $2.6 billion bill by a vote of 290-78. The Senate has already passed its version of the legislation.

Gas deadlock grips Senate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker said today the chances are "no more than 50-50" for an end to the natural gas bill stalemate which has knotted the Senate in anger and frustration for two weeks.

Democratic Leader Robert Byrd, interrupting a meeting at which he was attempting to work out a compromise to end the filibuster, told reporters, "It is always darkest before the dawn."

When the Senate opened business for the day, the filibuster was back in swing.

Baker, Byrd and their staffs along with other senators sifted through a stack of 378 remaining amendments to see which are serious and which are intended only as filibuster ammunition.

"We will compare the stacks and decide which to act on first," Baker said.

At the opening of the session, Baker asked to dispense with the reading of the Journal, but filibuster James Abourezk, D-S.D., objected, starting the day's delays.

"The world ought to know we were ready to vote last night," Abourezk said. "We are ready to vote today."

He said a counter-filibuster by Sen. Russell Long, D-La., "is being conducted in behalf of the oil and gas industry ... in order to increase the gas and oil bills."

Over and over again during the fourth long day of debate Thursday, Byrd proposed ways the Senate might vote on the key issue. And each time there was an objection, either from Abourezk or Long.

"Why can't the senators who want to argue stay and work out an agreement now while the rest of us go home to bed?" asked Sen. William Scott, R-Va., at one point.

There has been little sleep for the members this week. The Senate met from noon Monday until after the dinner hour that night; from 10 a.m. Tuesday until after 10 p.m. Wednesday with only two brief recesses; and from 9 a.m. Thursday until 11:27 that night.

During the previous week, the energy policy was debated. But on Monday a "cloture" vote to limit additional talking was approved and most of the time since then has been spent chipping away at hundreds of amendments being called up by Abourezk and Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, in a determined effort to prevent a vote on deregulating gas prices.

There are two principal proposals pending. The first, by Sens. James Pearson, R-Kan., and Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., would immediately lift price ceilings on newly discovered onshore gas and in five years for offshore gas.

The second, by Byrd and Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., would increase gas prices, but retain federal controls.

Late Wednesday Abourezk and Metzenbaum agreed to vote Thursday on the Byrd-Jackson compromise. But on Thursday, the members who want prices deregulated look over to continue calling up amendments and thwarting a showdown.

Metzenbaum and Abourezk were willing to vote on the Pearson-Bentsen amendment — but only if the agreement gave them the right to try to amend it.

Report raps public for tube violence

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The public appetite for violence is almost as much to blame as the networks for the amount of violence on television, says a House subcommittee.

A deeply divided subcommittee on communications Thursday narrowly adopted a draft report saying the networks and the viewers must share the blame for televised violence.

The committee voted 8 to 7 to scrap a draft report assessing blame for violence on the networks alone.

"According to the economic laws of supply and demand, if there was less of a demand for violent programs, the supply would correspondingly diminish," said the substitute report offered by Reps. Marly Russo, D-Ill., and Louis Frey, R-Fla.

Their report was submitted to the committee two days before the vote. The original report blaming the networks for televised violence was prepared by the committee staff after months of work and hearings in Colorado, Hollywood and Washington.

While networks bear "primary responsibility" for televised violence, the committee finally agreed, producers, advertisers and the "viewing public" also are at fault.

The committee action comes amid continued demands by some parents and organizations to diminish violence beamed into millions of American homes each night.

Debate preceding the vote was vigorous, with some members challenging their colleagues' sanity and understanding of the English language.

Rep. Henry A. Waxman, D-Calif., whose district includes Hollywood, said networks "blame heavily" against the first report blaming them alone for televised violence.

The version adopted by the committee spreading the blame was "a whitewash of the networks," Waxman said. Writers in the film capital testified they often were told to put more violence into their scripts, he said.

Russo and Frey hotly denied Waxman's charges. The new version was "more balanced" than the original draft, they said.

"How anybody in their right minds can call that a whitewash of the industry can't read English," Frey complained.

The subcommittee also adopted an addition offered by Chairman Lionel Van Deerlin, D-Calif., which expressed hope improved communications technology would eventually result in a greater choice of programs for viewers.

"In an environment of programming abundance, we may find that violent content represents only a small fraction of the total material available, and its impact may diminish accordingly," the amendment said.

East Utah trembles

ROOSEVELT, Utah (UPI) — The largest earthquake in Utah since 1975 shook residents of the Roosevelt area awake early today, but moderate tremor apparently didn't cause any damage.

The tremor, at 4:19 a.m., measured about 5.0 on the Richter scale and was felt as far away as Grand Junction, Colo., 140 miles to the southeast. There were no reports of injury or structural damage, according to the Duchesne County Sheriff's Office.

The area where the quake was centered is about 80 miles east of Salt Lake City. It is not near any of the major faults located in Utah.

"It shook hard enough to wake people up," said Carolyn Chapman, sheriff's dispatcher. "We had reports of clocks and pictures falling. It was for real."

Arms accord still far distant

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter says only a "relatively small number" of differences now exist between the United States and Soviet Union in the strategic arms talks, but they may take "quite a long time to resolve."

At a news conference Thursday, Carter also said the United States will begin to "meet with and work with" the Palestine Liberation Organization once it acknowledges Israel's right to exist, but even then he could not guarantee the PLO a direct role in Middle East peace talks.

Today the President was meeting with a group of Republican senators to complete a series of sessions he has had with all the members of Congress.

The 1972 SALT accord, which put numerical limits on strategic weapons, expires Monday, but both sides have said they will continue to honor it while the current talks continue.

"They have been fairly flexible in their attitude and we have tried to match that cooperative stance," Carter said of the Russian negotiators.

"So we are making some progress," he said. "An immediate agreement is not in prospect. We've narrowed down the differences to a relatively small number which could take quite a long time to resolve."

There has been speculation that a new accord might be near, much of it fueled by a pair of meetings in the last two weeks between Carter and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko.

"I wouldn't be too optimistic about an early settlement," the President cautioned.

Carter also dealt with the thorny issue of PLO participation in Middle East peace talks, saying, "It is obvious to me that there can be no peace settlement without adequate Palestinian representation."

Israel has agreed to Palestinian participation in the talks, as long as members of the PLO are not included.

"We have no national position on exactly who should represent the Palestinians or exactly how the Arab delegation should be organized," Carter said.

Referring to a U.N. resolution which, in effect, recognizes Israel's right to exist as a state, he said, "If the PLO accepts U.N. 242 and the right of Israel to exist, then we would begin discussions with the leaders of the PLO."

"I have no intention of giving the PLO any assurances other than that we'll begin meeting with them if they accept U.N. 242," he said.

On other subjects, Carter: — Opened with a formal statement on the prospects of new energy shortages in a mill attempt to apply public pressure on the Senate. "The price of failing to enact a comprehensive energy program is just too high for our government," he said, "I sincerely hope the Senate will not let the American people be disappointed."

— Responded, "No, I doubt it," when asked whether it would have made any difference if he had known about the overdrains by Bert Lance before appointing him budget director.

Pipeline measure moves on

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Interior Committee under a compromise reached Thursday will speed up consideration of President Carter's coal slurry pipeline bill.

The agreement between pipeline supporters and opponents would allow the House Interior Committee to start working on the bill before the end of the year.

But the panel would not vote on approving the legislation until the next session of Congress, at the earliest in January.

The proposed pipeline would carry coal mixed with water from western states to eastern markets.

Railroads, which currently transport almost all coal over long distances, are lobbying hard against enactment. Some western states interests are concerned about the loss of already scarce water in the area.

A joint subcommittee earlier voted to delay consideration of the bill until January.

Accord sought

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House and Senate negotiators appear for the first time to be seriously seeking a compromise on the issue of federal funding for abortions for poor women.

Negotiators agree they were pushed into it by the knowledge that further delay could jeopardize paychecks for more than 230,000 federal employees.

Abortion is the one issue still in dispute in a $50 billion appropriation to run the departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare and several lesser agencies during the fiscal year which begins Saturday.

The negotiators won't make that deadline. They want up a two-hour, table-thumping, finger-pointing meeting Thursday, agreeing to meet again Monday.

Because of a lag built into the pay system, they have about a week to pass the bill in order to prevent the bulk of the employees from beginning to lose some of their pay Oct. 18.

Even so, various grants, contracts, travel and administrative expenses will be curtailed.

National Oilmen, OPEC smiling now

Chicago Daily News

CHICAGO — Oilmen have reached a rapprochement with the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, according to a managing director of the Royal Dutch-Shell Group.

Even though most OPEC nations have nationalized controlling interest in their petroleum reserves, said C.C. Poenck, "the situation today is much healthier than it was five years ago."

He said the oil companies are now "servants, instead of owners" in the oil-rich lands, but that "the heat is off anyway, because we're not arguing about ownership all the time."

That easier relationship — combined with a general glut of oil worldwide over the next three to five years — is likely to make the OPEC ministers less aggressive next time they consider raising oil prices, said Poenck, who is head of the British half of the Dutch-English company.

"With the new oil coming onstream from Alaska and the North Sea, there'll be a number of years when there's no new demand for OPEC oil," Poenck told reporters after addressing the Investment Analysts Society of Chicago. "This doesn't mean the collapse of OPEC — only that it might incline them to being more conservative in their demands."

Labor law foes dealt heavy blow

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Rules Committee has dealt a severe blow to opponents of an AFL-CIO bill revising federal labor law.

The committee Thursday said once the measure reaches the House floor, opponents cannot attach amendments drafted by big business to gut the measure.

Republican opponents of the labor measure, which has the backing of President Carter, hoped to rewrite it amendment by amendment.

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce accused the committee of placing a "log" on business. "These are grossly unfair tactics," a spokesman said. "They are aimed at getting House action before business groups can make their objections fully felt."

The bill is expected to come up on the House floor Tuesday. It would overhaul federal labor law by cracking down on anti-union employers and aiding union organizing.

Bug probe hits snag

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Senate subcommittee possibly because of administration pressure — today postponed its scheduled inquiry into allegations that U.S. agents spied on the Panamanians negotiating the Panama Canal accords.

The subcommittee on the separation of powers abruptly postponed until next week a scheduled closed meeting with CIA Director Stansfield Turner and Lt. Gen. Eugene Tigher — Defense Department intelligence chief.

The official reason given was that Sen. James Eastland, D-Miss., chairman of the parent Judiciary Committee, had a prior commitment.

Reliable sources said, however, the administration has been exercising pressure on the subcommittee, chaired by Sen. James Allen, D-Ala.

Ali should quit while a winner

World heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali knows how to take a punch.

Thursday night, the aging 35-year-old champion stood up to the bruising right-hand blows of Earnie Shavers, a burly challenger to the heavyweight crown.

But Shavers couldn't knock down the champ. Old age soon will. Ali may have been the best fighter in history.

But why doesn't he quit a winner? He's given everybody and his brother a shot at taking the heavyweight title away from him.

But the Ali on national television last night wasn't the young upstart who deked Sonny Liston a decade ago or knocked out George Foreman in one of the greatest boxing matches in history.

He was a tired boxer who has lost his big punch and who now relies on his brains and his championship title to win.

Ali should get out — like he said he would last year. By retiring now he will still be remembered as "The Greatest."

In another two or three fights, he may be remembered as the champion who was humiliated and beaten because he didn't know when to quit.

Building moratorium shouldn't be ended

A recommendation made public Wednesday suggesting the Gooding County Commissioners lift the building ban on the Snake River Canyon should be folded into a paper airplane and sent flying.

This isn't the time to lift the moratorium on further construction on the canyon rim.

The South Central Health District still hopes to get funding for a detailed study on what effects rapid construction on the rim will have on underground water supplies in the Hagerman area.

Many southern Idaho health officials worry additional septic systems on the fractured lava rock of the canyon rim could eventually contaminate the drinking water of Hagerman residents and others down-canyon.

Maybe the additional sewage systems won't have any effect on the drinking water.

The point is, nobody knows for sure. Until a study is completed to determine what damage, if any, would result from rapid development of the canyon, the development should be postponed.

And there is another point. The chairman of the committee recommending the end of the canyon rim building moratorium says the ban should be lifted because the health department controls the fate of the rim, anyway.

That's not quite accurate. Gooding County residents, if they want to, can protect the scenic canyon rim for future generations.

They don't necessarily have to see the most scenic section of their county subdivided.

The committee which has recommended a lifting of the building ban could just as easily suggested the ban be continued while the county commissioners discuss a permanent way to keep development 900 feet back from the canyon rim.

Under no circumstances should the fate of the canyon rim be decided by haphazard development.

By JIM ANDERSON WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Arabs and Israelis have agreed under American cajoling that there ought to be a Middle East peace conference this year. The catch is, they agree on little else.

The Arabs demand the Palestine Liberation Organization take part in any renewed Geneva conference. Israel says no, and its vehemence on that issue is suggested by the comment of a young Israeli diplomat in Washington.

"If we have to deal with the PLO, I think we would be better off going to war immediately," he told a reporter privately. "Because that's what the PLO means to us: The destruction of Israel."

As things jell, however, the Arabs have the impression the U.S. government is tilting toward their side in this dispute — provided the PLO abandons its vow to drive the Israelis out of Israel and agrees to honor U.S. resolutions acknowledging Israel's right to exist as a state.

The lines were drawn over the past week, with Washington visits by Israel's Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan and Egypt's Foreign Minister Ismael Fahmi. Both declared willingness in principle to go to Geneva this year, and both said enough to indicate that will be tough to achieve.

"I believe that all parties do want a Geneva conference, and they want to talk about peace ...," said Dayan at the end of his visit. "We can find a way to convene the Geneva conference."

But the Israeli way means no PLO and no preconditions on what concessions are to be expected at the bargaining table.

Fahmi arrived in town just after Dayan had left. "There is unanimity that a Geneva conference should meet this year," he said, and was seconded, in almost identical words by Vance. So far so good. But then Fahmi said: "We can't begin a Geneva conference without the PLO. The United States is ready to sit down with the PLO as soon as they recognize U.N. Security Council resolution 242."

That resolution, in effect, acknowledges Israel's right to exist in peace.

"Now we are discussing a formula," Fahmi said. "If we can reach a formula, the PLO is ready to move."

Fahmi also raised Israeli hackles by saying, "The Geneva conference must be thoroughly prepared. It must meet to continue the negotiations and finalize them."

In the diplomatic jargon of Middle East bargaining, the Israelis interpret the words "thoroughly prepared" as a kind of code phrase that means the Arabs — possibly with U.S. backing — want the Jerusalem government to agree in advance to crucial concessions.

Chief among the Arab desires is a complete return of all occupied territories and agreement that a Palestinian homeland may be established on part of them.

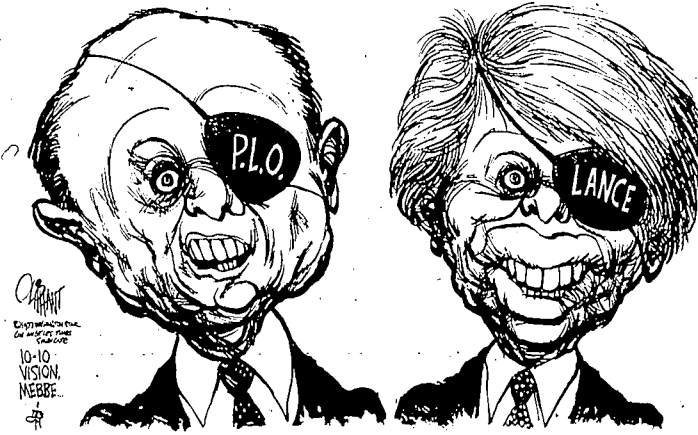

"We believe the negotiations take place at Geneva, not before," said one Israeli diplomat.

Vance is chiefly responsible for finding a way out of this stalemate.

The Arabs are trying to help him by getting the PLO to recognize Israel's right to exist and put Jerusalem under tremendous pressure to give in on the participation issue.

So far, the Israelis have been spared the agony of such a decision because the PLO executive council has been unable to resolve the internal disputes among its moderate and extremist factions.

Israeli officials are keeping their fingers crossed in hopes the PLO will remain divided and unable to compromise.

Close friends have made poor advisors

WASHINGTON — In choosing people to preside over the major questions of money, justice, and communications in his administration, President Carter called on three friends, Bert Lance at the Office of Management and Budget; Griffin Bell as attorney general; and Jody Powell as White House press secretary.

JAMES RESTON

Now he tells us that, Lance was his "friend" and "partner," "almost like a brother," and therefore "irreplaceable." Which may be a good thing.

For with some notable exceptions like Harry Hopkins who served in the Cabinet and lived in the White House with Franklin Roosevelt, the intimate "friends" of Presidents have not been their most successful Cabinet officers.

President Kennedy put his brother Robert in charge of the Justice Department, and while Bobby picked a brilliant staff, he was never quite able to remove the popular suspicion that his personal loyalty was to the President rather than to the law.

President Nixon put his friend and law partner John Mitchell in the same job, with results that are almost too painful to recall, and his best appointees were men he scarcely knew when he picked them: Henry Kissinger at the National Security Council and State Department, and George P. Shultz at Illinois as Treasury.

President Truman, who was supposed to be one of the inventors of cynicism, is still remembered around here for his distinguished appointments.

He records in his memoirs ("Mandate for Change"): "Even before we had won the election of 1952, I began to ponder deeply and earnestly the identity of the man I needed as assistant President. There were several military officers who, by reason of their abilities and broad experience, could have filled the job admirably."

He identified them, all personal friends: Generals Walter Bedell Smith, Lucius Clay, and Alfred M. Gruenther of the Army; Gen. Lauris Norstad of the Air Force; Capt. George Anderson of the Navy. "But," he concluded, "having been a lifetime soldier myself, I felt it would create in many quarters a suspicion of excessive military influence to ask one of these to undertake this duty."

It is, of course, a very mixed story. Clark Clifford was for long a private adviser to President Lyndon Johnson and a tireless apologist for the Vietnam war. But when he was appointed secretary of Defense he played a leading role in retreating from that lost cause, as perhaps he did as counsel in the lost cause of Bert Lance.

Harry Truman's close personal friend, Charlie Ross, was a superb White House Press secretary. Louis W. Koenig tells us in "The Chief Executive," that Franklin Roosevelt's shrewd and devoted comrade for a quarter century, Louis Howe, "brought the optimistic issues and was his only die whose candor stretched to the point where, confronted by a presidential note, he could snort: 'tell the President to go to hell.'"

But in general, the record seems to suggest that what Presidents need more than "friends" in key posts like the Budget are muscular objective minds that can master the intricate problems of their departments and can say "no" even when it hurts. This was the tragedy of Nixon: He misjudged both his "friends" and his "enemies."

Jimmy Carter is not to be compared to Nixon

— nobody is. Despite mutterings around here to the contrary, they are in many ways exact opposites. Nixon was painfully unsure of himself, and Carter is almost too sure. Nixon really needed his little clique of "friends" around him and didn't know when to let them go; Carter doesn't really need them and lets them go when necessary.

For the moment, and for understandable human reasons, he is sound as if he had been appointed by the laws of Lance, and that his administration has been weakened in the process. But the opposite may very well be true.

For he has been forced to recognize that his realistic "partner" on the home front is an increasingly powerful and even combative Congress on energy, taxes, welfare, inflation and unemployment, and in the foreign field, his need is for a high-minded Cabinet and staff that will analyze the consequences of his pronouncements, his priorities, and his travels before he chooses them.

These mounting problems at home and abroad are such a burden on a President that it's no wonder that he wants a few old friends around. But the weakness of friendship is that it is so sensitive to the President's burdens that it gets in the way of candor.

Carter applied Roosevelt's "competitive principle" of administration when he picked Fritz Mondale as his Vice President; not because they thought alike but because in many ways they didn't. This "partnership" has worked better than any President-Vice President relationship in recent memory.

Most Presidents have found that the "friendship principle" is quite comfortable, is not "irreplaceable" and that "competitive principle" while awkward and even exasperating, is more effective in the long run.

New Washington office: 'President's best friend'

By ART BUCHWALD WASHINGTON — The thing that struck me as President Carter announced Bert Lance's resignation last week was when he said that he was losing his best friend.

Everyone at the White House admits that Bert Lance had a special rapport with the President, and that he was the only person who could tell Mr. Carter when he was wrong or off the track. This role in the White House is not to be underestimated.

as to what he did before he came into the Administration, nor would he love to reveal how much money he had in the bank, or owed banks, whichever the case might be.

Neither the FBI nor the IRS would have to be "The President's Best Friend," because only a President would know that.

I think that the search for a new best friend for the President should begin immediately.

It is my opinion that, from what we know about President Carter, we should start looking for someone who comes from the South, preferably a small town in Georgia. He doesn't necessarily have to be a banker, but he should be a successful businessman. He must have an impeccable family relationship, be a nondrinker and a good storyteller. He should be gregarious, while at the same time firm when he believes Mr. Carter is wrong. He should also be able to play tennis and softball and know something about the peanut business.

It wouldn't be hard to find such a person to fill the job. I know thousands of people who would like to be the President's best friend. Many of them could be persuaded to come to Washington, at great sacrifice to themselves, for the opportunity to chew the fat with Mr. Carter whenever he needed someone to talk to.

While the White House could set up a "Best Friend Search Committee," the final decision will be left solely to the President after his staff presented him with a list of likely candidates.

To safeguard himself against another Lance affair, I believe that, besides appointing his "Best Friend," Mr. Carter should also have the authority to designate a "Deputy Best Friend." Then if anything happens to his best friend, the President would have another one to fall back on.

President Kennedy and Johnson had many best friends. Nixon had only one — Bebe Rebozo. At the moment President Carter has none. Unless this situation is rectified immediately, the country could come to a standstill.

While the search is on I am sending President Carter a copy of "How To Be Your Own Best Friend." It isn't the same as having Bert Lance, but hopefully it will fill the gap.

ART BUCHWALD

It is so important that I believe before we find a new head of the OMB, we must find President Carter a new best friend.

This country can afford to go along without somebody managing its budget, but it cannot allow the President of the United States to sit in the White House without a best friend for one more day than is absolutely necessary.

I would go one step further and say a new position in the White House should be created entitled, "The President's Best Friend." The person filling the position would have as his only function to be Mr. Carter's confidant and bosom buddy.

This would avoid any conflict of interest with another job in the Administration. More importantly, the person holding it would not have to undergo the scrutiny and heat that Mr. Lance was subjected to, because he also was head of the Office of Management and Budget.

Since "The President's Best Friend" would be on the White House staff, he would not need Senate confirmation. And, while he would be expected to maintain the high moral standards Mr. Carter has set for all his people, he would not have to dispose of his stock or reveal his personal finances to the public.

He would have to answer to no one on The Hill

Washington Window Carter vs. Congress

UPI WHITE HOUSE REPORTER WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter's energy program is being ripped apart on Capitol Hill, and he isn't doing too well on other key pieces of legislation.

But so far, he has not attacked backsliding members of Congress. The fact that both houses have Democratic majorities undoubtedly guides his approach.

No president in recent times has tried to be as accessible and amenable to Congress. Carter came into the White House determined to show his reputation as a very stubborn, uncompromising executive. Such a label was pinned on him when he was governor of Georgia and struggling with the Georgia legislature.

He has five to 10 meetings a week with members of Congress. The Democratic leadership meetings are held every week. Individual lawmakers, who seek appointments with him generally get them.

Carter has also invited all of the House Republicans in separate groups and Senate Republicans to breakfast meetings to talk about their problems. Once a week, he holds private dinners at the White House for a key senator or congressman and his wife.

In addition, Carter has lunch with an influential legislator about once a week in the Oval Office.

Still they treat him like a new boy in town. "I've got a lot to learn," he says often. And they appear to agree.

All of his predecessors going back to Harry Truman, with the exception of Dwight Eisenhower, served in the Senate or House, or both, and had a feel for the "club."

Clearly, there has been a power shift in Washington after years of a strong executive branch, flogged by the Vietnam War which centralized decision-making in the White House. In the dying days of the war, Congress took back some of its responsibilities in war and peace and other matters.

Now Carter is in office at a time when Congress is feeling its power again. The Democratic leaders are in the driver's seat and appear to be calling the shots. In many ways they have helped Carter to remind some bills to make them more acceptable to the House and Senate.

Carter has had the constant counsel of Speaker Tip O'Neill and Senate majority leader Robert Byrd along with that of Sen. Russell Long, D-La., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, whose power and influence appears to be growing.

It is they who decide how much action Carter will get in this session. The leaders also decided that tax reform and welfare reform could not be considered this year.

Basque autonomy talks near

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — Adolfo Suarez has announced a grant of autonomy for the Catalan region and the start of negotiations with Basque nationalists.

Thursday's announcement had long been anticipated and there was no immediate outpouring of jubilation in Barcelona and other cities of the Catalan region in northeast Spain.

The late Generalissimo Francisco Franco, punishing the Catalans and the Basques on the northwest for fighting against him in the 1936-39 Civil War, abolished their autonomy and banned all expressions of their ethnic identity.

Both the Catalans and the Basques have their own language, flag and regional anthems.

In Catalonia — traditionally a leader of Spain's culture, politics and industry — Franco's ethnic repression created deep misgivings. In the Basque region it often resulted in violence.

Thus pro-autonomy political parties won landslide victories in both regions in the June parliamentary elections, and more than 1 million persons took part earlier this month in a Barcelona street demonstration for autonomy.

Negotiations with Basque nationalists are due to begin this weekend, the government said. Autonomy would grant them rights roughly equal to those of a U.S. state.

Federic Rahola, a spokesman for Catalan nationalists, said the restoration of home rule was "an emotional and long awaited moment. It is the culmination of years of struggle."

Since Franco's death nearly two years ago, demands for a measure of self-administration have swept most regions of Spain. In a gesture to the conservative military, which views all autonomous movements with suspicion, the government also reserved the right to terminate home rule any time "the security of the state is threatened."

US, Britain win help

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The United States and Britain have won U.N. Security Council help for their peace initiative in Rhodesia and diplomats reported "some movement" in backstage Middle East negotiations.

The council voted 13-0 Thursday to endorse a U.S.-British statement asking the General Assembly to appoint a representative to take part in the negotiations over an Anglo-American plan for black majority rule in Rhodesia.

The Soviets and the Chinese abstained from voting on the plan, which both of them reject.

The Patriotic Front representing Rhodesia's combined black guerrilla forces demanded a decisive role during any transition to majority rule in a statement circulated to U.N. delegates Thursday.

Desert battle rages

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — Ethiopian troops and Somali-backed guerrillas are locked in a decisive battle for control of the Ogaden desert, with the rebels reported advancing on a key position of Ethiopia's last line of defense. The Somalis earlier this month captured the town of Jijjiga — the easternmost anchor of the Ethiopian defense line — and are now pushing through the mountains toward the ancient walled city of Harar, the middle anchor. Western diplomatic sources in Addis Ababa said Thursday.

World Angolan begging

LONDON Telegraph
LONDON — Angola's left-wing President Agostinho Neto has gone cap in hand to the Soviet Union in an effort to halt his regime's slide into economic and possibly military disaster.

His secret three-day mission to Moscow became known Thursday when it was announced he had talks with the Kremlin leadership on African problems and had flown home.

At the same time official Soviet news media released details of a speech by President Leonid Brezhnev accusing the West of using dirty methods to sow conflict in Africa.

The Brezhnev statement was made at a luncheon for President Neto. It was his first visit to Moscow for a year and follows widespread reports that the Angolan regime is facing grave economic and security problems.

Neto visited Cuba last month and pressed Fidel Castro to stiffen the Cuban military and civilian presence in Angola, believed to number between 15,000 and 19,000 men.

Cuba has since been reliably reported to have offered another 4,000 troops to deal with anti-Communist guerrillas in Units, which claim to control large areas of south and southeastern Angola, and constantly harass communications.

Brace for unrest

LONDON Telegraph
JOHANNESBURG — South Africans have been warned by Jimmy Kruger, minister of justice, to expect an upsurge in urban terrorism following the return to the republic of large numbers of externally trained guerrillas.

The minister was speaking in a local television interview after South African security police claimed they had broken one urban terrorist cell in Dobsonville, a suburb of Johannesburg's all-black Soweto township.

Kruger disclosed that six suspected terrorists had been arrested since the discovery of another cell in Mafeking in the northwestern Transvaal last weekend.

He said that a large number of terrorist recruits had left South Africa to be trained in Botswana and other neighboring states. In many cases the training had been completed and the terrorists now were infiltrating back into South Africa, he said.

Kruger also said that supplies of Russian arms for the terrorists were being continually unloaded at Macala in the northeast of neighboring Mozambique.

Security police are on a round-the-clock search for returning terrorists, but this does not mean that they will not attack people and plant a bomb here and there," Kruger said.

White say final

LONDON Telegraph
SALISBURY — Prime Minister Ian Smith has told the Rhodesian Parliament that the country's white minority will have the final say over the Anglo-American proposals for a peaceful settlement of the racial conflict in that country.

There had been general understanding that Smith would put his own proposals to a referendum of the country's existing 92,000 white voters.

But Smith is making time on his plan to form a broad-based government involving moderate black leaders inside Rhodesia to work out a constitution for majority rule.

He will return to it if the current Anglo-American initiative fails.

Now Smith has told Parliament that if white Rhodesians reject an agreement based on the Anglo-American proposals at a referendum it will negate a settlement as effectively as would the dissolution of black leaders.

Soviets arrest Jews

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet authorities have cracked down on a small group of Jewish activists who wanted to hold a memorial service at the scene of a World War II Nazi massacre of 100,000 Ukrainians, most of them Jews.

The service was supposed to be held Thursday at Babu Yar (Old Woman's Ravine) near Kiev, but Kiev city officials flatly prohibited any Jewish observance of the massacre and it was impossible to determine whether the service took place.

Bert Lance: It wasn't fun

NEW YORK (UPI) — Former Budget Director Bert Lance says he "wouldn't wish on anyone" his experience in Washington, but businessmen should not shy away from government service because of it.

"I don't regret at all being part of the process, part of the system, because I think it is that important," Lance said Thursday.

"It wasn't fun, it wasn't pleasurable. It wasn't something I would wish on anyone, but it was part of the process," he said. In his first formal appearance since his Sept. 21 resignation as President Carter's budget director, Lance also said: "I don't miss Washington. It's good to be back in Georgia."

Accompanied by his wife, J.Belle, Lance spoke at a black-tie dinner of investment bankers, fulfilling a long-standing commitment to the Investment Association of New York. Many businessmen considered Lance their chief advocate with Carter and the audience Thursday stood and loudly applauded the former budget director.

2 TV actors walk off set

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — What's happening on the set of the television series "What's Happening?" is a quarrel between producer Bud Yorkin and actors Ernest Thomas, who plays "Hal," and Fred Berry, "Heran."

Thomas and Berry walked off the set Tuesday, complaining Yorkin ignored continued complaints their dressing rooms are dirty, cockroach-infested and furnished with "unsleeced, stained smelly mattresses."

They said when they returned Thursday, they were told they could not resume work until they signed promissory notes for $25,000 each — Yorkin's estimate of what the walkout cost the production — which Yorkin could collect if they ever did it again.

They refused, saying in a joint statement that just because they grew up in poverty, "that's no reason the company should offer it to us now."

Conventional funeral 'out'

LONDON (UPI) — School-master Ken James left $40,000 in his will to his brother but only $42.50 for his funeral.

His testament said he wanted his ashes laid to rest in "any convenient dustbin."

James, 56, died of cancer earlier this year. His will, made public Thursday, said:

"I specifically forbid a conventional funeral. There must be no ceremony of any kind, religious or otherwise, no floral tributes or mourners or any fuss whatsoever.

"My ashes are not to be buried or sentimentally scattered but are to be inconspicuously deposited in any convenient dustbin for refuse collection in the usual way."

However, Bethnal Green borough officials ruled otherwise. They ordered James' ashes to be buried under a bed of hydrangeas at Manor Park crematorium.

Young genius shags footballs

EAST LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — Eleven-year-old Kam Hunter says he is content to serve as a ball boy for Michigan State's Spartans, but he might as easily take a football player through a tough match.

He is a 4-foot-7, 70-pound, self-described "sports nut." He is also a genius, the youngest member of Michigan State's freshman class.

Kam is the son of Richard Hunter, a pharmacist from Ionia, Mich., and his wife, Sally, a teacher at Rathler Elementary School in Ionia. His studies in this year include a normal workload in English, chemistry and advanced freshman mathematics — and, of course, shagging footballs for the Spartans.

"I have heard about MSU ever since I was old enough to learn about a college, and in Ionia just about everyone is a Spartan fan," he said. "I love sports. I'll play anything, football, basketball, tennis, swimming, golf. Just about anything."

Woman sues deprogrammers

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (UPI) — Debra Parsons, 22, says she was forced from her downtown sandwich shop job last March and forced to undergo eight weeks of religious "deprogramming." Now she wants $1 million from her parents and 15 others who she says violated her constitutional rights.

The Hampden County Civil Liberties Union said it filed the suit this week in U.S. District Court on behalf of Parsons.

"We view this deprogramming as forcible interference with the rights of young adults to religious expression," attorney Martin Margulies said Thursday.

"These people have made a choice of religious preference which is unacceptable to adults and their parents."

"A couple thousand years ago people like this were thrown to the lions," Margulies said. "Now they're subjected to several weeks of coercive confinement and told they will not be released until they repent."

Miss Parsons is a member of the Way Ministry, a national religious group headquartered in Ohio. Her suit charged she was forced from the sandwich shop by her parents, her brother and other people after her parents had her ruled incompetent in a hearing of which she knew nothing.

She asked $1 million in compensatory and punitive damages from her parents, Richard and Betty Parsons of Hellertown, Pa.; her brother Denis of Bethlehem, Pa., and 14 others.

Suspect arrested in youth slaying

KENNER, La. (UPI) — A man has been arrested in the slaying of a sixth grader who was found with his throat slashed "from one end to the other."

The name of the suspect was withheld and police said charges were not immediately filed after the arrest late Thursday.

Christopher G. Black II, who did not go to school Thursday because he had a cold, was found lying in a pool of blood at his home by his 7-year-old brother Jeffrey when he returned from school.

"His throat was slit from one end to the other," said detective Estelle Brondum. "He had multiple knife stab wounds from the neck area down to the lower abdomen and some on the back."

The boy's mother, Cheryl Black, 22, was at work at a bank at the time of the slaying, Miss Brondum said.

Crackdown 'surprise'

CHICAGO (UPI) — Police staged a series of raids Thursday and arrested 61 "gypsy fortune tellers" whose crystal balls had failed to foresee the crackdown.

"The approximately 40 raids on the South and Southwest sides were prompted by complaints from people 'who wind up getting ripped off in a con game,'" a police spokesman said.

The persons arrested were charged with a misdemeanor violation of a city ordinance prohibiting advertisement of promises to tell the future, "restore lost love or give advice." Conviction brings a fine of $25 to $100.

C-notes common around school

MARION CENTER, Pa. (UPI) — A teacher in the Marion Center Elementary School was shocked when she asked each student in her class with a $100 bill to raise his or her hand and everyone did.

After asking all students with a $100 bill to raise their hands, she asked students with more than one $100 bill to raise their hands and more than half of the class did.

School authorities in this Indiana County community disclosed Thursday that a 10-year-old boy at the school had slipped an envelope containing $10,000 in $100 bills from his mother's purse earlier this week. The boy's mother, a miner's wife, had received the money from the federal government in a black lung settlement.

School authorities then began to collect the money. As of today, all but $400 had been recovered.

On the school bus, the boy began handing out $100 bills to friends and buying pencils and model cars for $200 each.

The boy continued his acts of philanthropy at school and it was three hours before his teacher realized the money her students were playing with was real.

Rocket booster—not UFO

CHICAGO (UPI) — An unusual type of rocket booster probably caused the mysterious glowing light sighted in Russia recently, a spokesman for the Center for UFO Studies said.

The bright light was in the sky for about 20 minutes, witnesses in Petrozavodsk said. People in Helsinki, Finland, also reported seeing the light, which they described as a bright fireball.

James Oberg, a researcher for the UFO center, said Thursday the description fits one written by a Finnish engineer in a 1974 magazine article about a Russian rocket launch.

The special booster, used at least three times in recent years, produces a jellyfish pattern when the exhaust gasses are vented, Oberg said.

Records indicate the Soviet Cosmos 955 satellite was boosted into orbit from Plesetsk, which is about 200 miles from Petrozavodsk, at about the time of the sightings, he said.

The only question we have now," spokesman Allan Hendry said, "is why Tass (the Soviet news agency) released this story at all. The official Soviet position on UFOs is very negative."

TF nun named to Gem State post

TWIN FALLS — A Roman Catholic nun, Sister Elisa Maria Martinez of Twin Falls, has been named vicar for Mexican-Americans in the Catholic Diocese of Idaho.

Bishop Sylvester Treinen of Boise made the announcement recently.

Sister Elisa, a Poetelto native who is a member of the Benedictine community of St. Gertrude's Priory, Col-tonwood, succeeds Fr. Thomas Taylor who's a gen parish work in the diocese's mission in Call, Colombia. She continues in full-time work among Idaho's Mexican-Americans in conjunction with the Idaho Catholic Education office.

Bishop Treinen said that the appointment of Sister Elisa was made on the basis of her fitness for the job and her experience in working with Mexican-Americans.

"Sister Elisa is Mexican-American herself and has been doing this kind of work in the diocese the past two years," Bishop Treinen said. "I feel it is a recognition of her talent. It is also a response to the church's desire that women be given positions of responsibility and decision making in the church."

He said that both the diocesan personnel board and sister's superior, Mother Mary George Goecker, OSB, approved the appointment.

Although no one in the diocese's administration knows for certain how many Catholics of Mexican descent now permanently live in Idaho, estimates vary as high as 20,000, making this the largest ethnic group in the church in Idaho. Approximately 65,000 Catholics live in the state.

The role of vicar is primarily that of representing the bishop in all affairs pertaining to Mexican-Americans. The job description provided by the diocese goes on to explain that the vicar's role is to assist those working with Mexican-Americans, government and church officials, and Mexican-Americans themselves in their efforts to become a "vital part of the Idaho communities in which they live."

In addition to representing the bishop, the vicar speaks on behalf of Mexican-Americans to various organizations and commissions operating in the Idaho diocese.

The Vicar is expected to have a good knowledge of the Spanish language and is to travel throughout those parts of the diocese in which Mexican-Americans live. Sister Elisa has been doing this kind of traveling for several years. She has also been active in Mexican-American activities in the Northwest region and nationally. Before becoming involved in the ministry to Mexican-Americans in Idaho, Sister Elisa taught at her order's private school, Colegio San Carlos in Bogota, Colombia.

Sister Elisa has taken courses at the Mexican-American Cultural Center in San Antonio, Tex., and participated in diocesan, regional and national preparations for the recent National Hispanic Encounter.

Big Deal.

It was a big deal to the people at the nursing home. It showed them someone still cares.

In AAL Branches all over the country, Lutherans are involved in all kinds of projects. Some are big. Some aren't. But they all represent people working together to share God's gifts. And times you do that, it's a big deal.

By Abigail Van Buren
1977 by The Chicago Tribune. A N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: When I first dated my wife she was 16. On our third date, when she asked me to buy her a pack of cigarettes, I told her I thought girls who smoked looked like tramps, and that was the last time I'd take her out. Three months later she called and told me she'd quit smoking, so I started dating her again. We dated for three years during which time she never smoked in my presence, so with a solemn promise that she'd never smoke again, we were married.

She kept her promise for three years. Then I started to find evidence that she was smoking again. When I confronted her, she denied it.

For the last 10 years, she's been smoking openly and I detest it. What can I do? I've told her it was useless for her to spend a fortune on expensive clothes because when she lights a cigarette, she looks like a $20 hooker.

I have nothing against smokers. In fact, if I could find one who didn't smoke I could hire services because my wife's tobacco habit has certainly put a crimp in our love life.

DETESTS CIGARETTES

Marriage choking

DEAR DETESTS: What can you do? Love her or leave her. But don't nag her, or she'll increase her smoking as an excuse to calm her frazzled nerves.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 48 and my fiancé is 55. I've been divorced 15 years, and his wife died five years ago. We've been going together for two years and plan to marry soon. He always compliments me on the way I look. I do dress nicely and am always perfectly groomed. Now for my problem.

When I was in my teens, I was very ill and all my hair fell out. I have no eyelashes, eyebrows, and not a hair on my head. I am completely hairless.

I wear false eyelashes and a wig, and I paint my eyebrows on.

I'm a very honest person, and don't like to keep this from him, but I'm afraid of how he'll react. I've started to tell him several times, but couldn't get the words out.

My mother says I should wait until after we're married to tell him. My father says I should tell him now.

Do you think it would change his feelings for me? He says he loves me, and I know I love him. Please help me. WIGGED OUT

DEAR WIGGED: Tell him. If it changes his feelings for you, you're better off knowing it now. If he really loves you, it won't matter. (Many women marry bald MEN.)

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I had dinner with my parents, my brother and sister-in-law, and their 14-month-old baby.

For two and one-half hours, we talked either about or to the baby, who was allowed to toddle around the dinner table the entire time. We all had to watch our food and coffee every minute.

There was absolutely no chance to visit. All the conversation was centered around the baby. At first I was just annoyed, but then I became bored stiff and, finally, angry. Am I intolerant?

Abby, please say something about parents who monopolize the conversation with talk about their children and permit the child to be the center of attention for an entire evening.

BORED IN LONG BEACH

DEAR BORED: Your complaint is neither uncommon nor unjustified. Parents, please note.

your health

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb, I am ashamed to complain about what is routinely a painless, quick and easy process of drawing blood, but it isn't true in my case.

Twice a year for six years I have endured painful and always futile efforts of two supposedly trained technicians trying to get blood for thyroid and potassium tests. Finally, the doctor has to do it himself, using veins other than those inside my elbows. By that time I am a nervous wreck.

It never gets any better. Is there a solution for me?

Dear Reader, Veins that have been used frequently often scar or undergo so much thickening and inflammation that they are no longer useful. In the course of time the inflammation subsides and some of them open again, but some never do. When a vein undergoes these changes blood has to be drawn from some other location. In severe problems when drawing blood or inserting a needle to supply fluids or medicine is essential it may be necessary to do a "cut down," meaning cutting the skin and surgically exposing the vein to be used.

The pain of a needle puncture can be minimized or abolished by spraying the skin with one of the coolants that evaporate on the skin and deadens the sensation momentarily in that area. The veins can be made more prominent by using a blood pressure cuff around the upper arm rather than just a piece of rubber tubing. The pressure on the cuff can be adjusted high enough to impede flow through the veins, causing them to stand out but not high enough to block the arterial flow into the arm. Warm soaks over the skin also helps in some cases.

Despite all of these efforts if a vein is scarred or obstructed it is not likely that anyone will be successful using that vein.

Dear Dr. Lamb, Is there a home remedy you can take that will prevent the formation of kidney stones? I have heard that one teaspoon of honey with a tablespoon of vinegar daily would do this or a can of beer daily was recommended by a doctor. My husband has had surgery for kidney stones.

The best home remedy in the world for kidney stones is to drink enough water. Because sweating and other factors affect how much water you need the rule is to drink enough liquids to form two liters (about two quarts) and even better, three quarts of urine a day.

The increased urine flow should be maintained evenly over the 24-hour period. That means drinking water around the clock and a reasonable amount before going to bed. Specifically using vinegar or honey will not prevent a kidney stone. Depending upon the type of stone — what it is made of — the doctor may wish to give medicine to acidify the urine. Beer is worse than useless. It contains oxalate which is often a factor in the formation of some types of kidney stones.

Doyle appreciates 'joyful job'

CHERYL LADD AND DAVID DOYLE
... both star in "Charlie's Angels"

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — David Doyle, who stars with the three beauties of "Charlie's Angels," says, "If I lived the fantasies of male viewers I'd be dead in 11 weeks."

If Doyle chuckles and laughs a great deal, it's because he fully appreciates holding down television's most joyful job.

His costars are Jaclyn Smith, Kate Jackson and Cheryl Ladd — all young, gorgeous and noble.

In the show's premiere season his cup almost ran over. Last year Farrah Fawcett, America's darling, was part of the cast.

Doyle maintains his good humor no matter how often he's asked his reaction to being surrounded by television's most attractive trio. He replies that he goes home to another wonderful pair, wife Anne and daughter Leah, 16.

But when he gets down to acting — and he earned a law degree — Doyle says acting is work whether it's with three pretty girls or three dirty old men.

"The fact that I'm involved professionally every day with three charming and beautiful women doesn't make that much difference in my personal attitude toward work," he said.

"They are fellow performers, just as a group of men would be. It makes the scenery prettier, of course, and the jokes cleaner."

Doyle is a committed Roman Catholic and deliciously happy in his marriage. Still, he's a youthful 47 and not altogether inattentive to the constant exposure to full bosoms and well-turned legs.

Of his day-to-day proximity to his costars Doyle says, "It's a catalyst to the conceit that we are all born with. Figure that out."

"Ninety-five per cent of the time our contact is restricted to working conditions, so I rarely think of the girls on a personal level."

"No," he said. "I appreciate their femininity all right. I'm as aware of their charms as any healthy male would be. I wake up every morning delighted by the prospect of going to work."

He doesn't consider himself a father figure on the show, much less a paternal figure to the girls when the cameras stop turning. He thinks of his Bosley role as more avuncular than anything else.

Only one cloud shadows Doyle's blue-sky approach to his job. In a recent magazine story he was asked whether "Charlie's Angels" would survive Farrah's highly publicized departure from the detective's series.

Doyle opined that the second season would be as good or better than ever.

"It's come back to me that Farrah was hurt by my remark," Doyle said, displaying a rare frown.

"I wouldn't hurt that wonderful girl's feelings for the world. I'm terribly fond of her. What I meant to say was that we had four months more to work on scripts and the producers were better prepared this season."

"After all, I'd never say the opposite — that the show probably would be as good but not better. I wouldn't say that about any project I was connected with."

"And I know damned well Farrah would like to see the show keep improving and get higher ratings. She is a sweet, unselfish girl."

"Last year the girls were honored on 'The People's Choice Awards.' As they made their way to the stage, Farrah insisted I join them. I wouldn't have been a part of it all without Farrah's thoughtfulness. Of course I miss her."

Doyle was the first to make Cheryl feel at home when she joined the cast. Cheryl, like Jaclyn and Kate, is high in praise of him as an actor and clam.

"I'm friendlier with the girls than any group of performers I've ever worked with on stage or television," he said. "I was deeply touched not long ago when I missed a day at work because of the flu."

"It was the first time I'd not been able to report because of illness. Each of them, individually, checked in on the phone to see how I was getting along. You can't beat that kind of friendship anywhere."

Friendship aside, there is the ever-present peril that Doyle could be lost in the shuffle of the show. The scripts are written to display as much of the ladies as possible.

"You have to be a good actor to hold your own with three beautiful girls," he said. "But there is genuine rapport, affection and respect among us."

"Equal input is given all three actresses in each episode. I don't know of a show that has three equal leads."

"So it gets harder and harder to add a fourth element of equality — me. I'd like to see Bosley do more on the series. I requested that he not be made to look like a dumbbell. I see him as a Robert Benchley type, in tune with the younger generation but not necessarily in agreement."

"Maybe someday Bosley will have his own show. It's something to think about."

Tiny Tim turning to country music

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Tiny Tim fancies himself a musical athlete, knocking out hits in a quavering voice unique to country singing.

The flabby singer who thrilled "Tiptoe Through the Tulips" and married "Miss Vicky" before millions in 1968 on a late night talk show is working now on an album of country songs.

"I'm Gonna Be a Country Queen" is one tune Tiny Tim and his backers hope will shove him back before the public eye. "I Ain't No Cowboy, I Just Found This Hat" is another.

As the last title suggests, Tiny Tim has not abandoned his long, frizzy hair and flowing cape for the garb country music fans prefer.

"No," he said. "I'm the same man I always was. I'm nothing but a songwriter. I don't know why people think this is such an about-face. I've always practiced country songs in front of my mirror."

"Tiny Tim is annoyed that reporters do not realize the range of his art."

"None of these things are new to me," he said petulantly. "My show often includes 'Have You Seen My Little Sue' and if that's not country, I don't know what is."

Tiny Tim says he has been a country music fan since 1947, but that longstanding loyalty is not what prompted the new album.

"I just love to record — whether rock 'n' roll or country. I'd like to record some Japanese songs. I'm very fond of that music. I'm like a baseball player who will use a screwball, changeup or fastball, whatever it takes. I go for a catchy melody that will be a hit. I don't sing throwaways."

Nevertheless, Tiny Tim worried that "people would take it the wrong way" when he sang of a struggling ingenue who preens before her mirror in a wig and declares "I look just like Miss Dolly Parton."

"I did wonder," Tiny Tim recalls. But producers, managers and agents quited his fears.

No matter what new songs he sings, the man whose mother named him Herbert says fans will always clamor for "Tiptoe Through the Tulips."

"I can do a million songs but all they want is Tiptoe, they yell for it at every concert," he says. "I don't mind. I never get tired of the hand that feeds you."

Broadway is making haste—slowly

NEW YORK (UPI) — Broadway is cranking up slowly for the 1977-78 season, but there are more than 60 shows "planning" to come in and a lot of big names to conjure with.

There are a baker's dozen of black shows scheduled, a handful of revivals, a new Neil Simon, and at least 16 musicals, ranging from yet another Carol Channing "Hello, Dolly!" to musical versions of "Look Homeward, Angel," "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" and one about Sardi's restaurant.

Stars to see include Max von Sydow and Bibi Andersson, Liza Minnelli, Colleen Dewhurst, Anne Bancroft, Jason Robards, Mary Martin and Anthony Quayle. Eartha Kitt, Richard Burton and Robert Preston, Peter O'Toole, Sammy Davis, and Jack Lemmon. Rex Harrison will be seen off-Broadway.

The early season was clouded by the premature death of Zero Mostel. It was widely felt that he had even better things in him than "Rhinoceros" and "Fiddler on the Roof."

Zero had been scheduled to open Nov. 15 in "The Merchant," a version of the Shynlock story by English playwright Arnold Wesker, based on pre-Shakespearean sources. His death halted the play during a tryout in Philadelphia.

As a tribute to Mostel, and to his faith in the play, the producers of "The Merchant" decided to bring it in anyway, starring his stand-by Joseph Leon, who has played since his 1952 debut here in "Bell, Book and Candle."

The autumn season kicked off with Richard Kiley still singing "Impossible Dream" in his original role in "Man of La Mancha" for 12 weeks. It was followed by three weeks of a Russian pot-pourri of music, dancing and circus acts called "Estrada," an eight-week revival of "Tartuffe" at the Circle in the Square, with John Wood and Tammy Grimes, and four weeks of Victor Borge.

The new shows began Sept. 27 with Estelle Parsons in her solo tour-de-force "Miss Margarida's Way," Roberto Alvaredo's symbolic play in which she takes the part of a repressed, authoritarian ninth-grade teacher. Miss Parsons got a lot of praise in an off-Broadway production at the Public Theatre.

Then on Oct. 6 came Hume Cronyn and Jessica Tandy in the two-character "Gin Game," directed by Mike Nichols, and the season is off and running.

In no particular order, the season as of now will include:

Max von Sydow and Bibi Andersson in "The Night of the Tribades," a new play about August Strindberg.

"Drauda," with Frank Langella (plus an off-Broadway "Passion of Drauda" which will have a midnight opening to add atmosphere).

Liza Minnelli's "The Act," which doubtless will sell out even though early reports from the road said it was in poor shape.

Colleen Dewhurst in "An Almost Perfect Person," a comedy about a woman politician in Manhattan, with Zoe Caldwell making her directorial debut.

Elly Wallach and Anne Jackson in Alan Ayckbourn's "Absent Friends," a comedy about the marital problems of three couples.

Two more Ayckbourn evenings: "Bedroom Farce" and "Confusions," a series of five plays.

Anne Bancroft as Golda Meir in "Golda," based on the former Israeli prime minister's autobiography.

Neil Simon's semi-autobiographical "Chapter Two."

Review

Jason Robards, still playing O'Neill, in "A Touch of the Poet," directed by O'Neill buff Jose Quintero.

"Do You Turn Somersaults?" — a two-character Russian comedy by Aleksei Arbusov, with Mary Martin and Anthony Quayle as a former circus performer and a doctor in a Big Health research.

Arthur Miller's "The Archbishop's Ceiling," which originally was planned for last season but ran into trouble on try-out.

Eartha Kitt in "Timbuktu," a reworking of "Kismet."

Robert Vaughn in Dore Scharly's one-man "F.P.R."

Richard Burton and Robert Preston alternating as Othello and Iago in "Othello."

Peter O'Toole playing Coward's "Present Laughter" and Chekhov's "Uncle Vanya," in repertory.

Sammy Davis in an updated version of the Newley-Bricusse "Stop the World, I Want to Get Off."

A new Stephen Sondheim musical, "Sweeney Todd," based on the English melodrama "Sweeney Todd, the Demon Barber of Fleet Street."

James Earl Jones in a one-man play, "Paul Robeson." (The sets of the show were destroyed in a mysterious truck fire in Dallas just before the Sept. 15 world premiere in Louisville, Ky., and had to be rebuilt.)

Rex Harrison will be seen as Gen. Burgoyne in Shaw's "The Devil's Disciple" at the Brooklyn Academy of Music.

Also: revivals of Shaw's "Salut Joan" and "Man and Superman"; "Black Comedy" and

LIZA MINNELLI
... "The Act"

CAROL CHANNING
... "Hello Dolly"

West led a second diamond. South still had a chance for his contract. Maybe that queen of spades would be an entry to dummy. He led a low spade and played dummy's queen.

East produced the king and South was held to seven tricks. Three hearts, three diamonds and one spade.

Synops:
Substantial rains fell over portions of the state during the past 24 hours as a major storm system moved across Idaho. Up in the Idaho panhandle, Grangeville received more than an inch of rain. Just north of Boise, McCall recorded 1.4 of an inch, and over in the southeast corner of the state, Preston received .64 of an inch.

Feds' Hunt hunt ends up as hill of beans

Chicago Daily News (CHICAGO) — After all that feuding and fireworks, the government's Hunt hunt apparently hasn't amounted to much more than a hill of beans. Soybeans, that is.
It started with a feverish press conference on April 28. Built to a crescendo of courtroom pyrotechnics in May and June, and finally cooled Wednesday in what most observers conceded was a draw.
U.S. District Court Judge Frank J. McGarr ruled that seven wealthy heirs of the late H.L. Hunt did, indeed, violate government rules by collectively controlling far more than the 3 million bushels of soybean futures that they're entitled to hold under the speculative limit set by the Commodity Futures Trading Commission.
But the judge, finding himself "unable... to fashion appropriate relief," declined to impose any of the sanctions sought by the CFTC, including a government request that the Hunts give up any profits.
It would have been a moot point, anyway, if the judge had ordered the Hunts to divest some of the 20 million bushels of beans they were alleged to hold in violation of the law. That's because the family has to decide before their futures contracts expired months ago to either take delivery on the beans or sell off the contracts.
McGarr did, however, suggest that the Hunts liquidate under court supervision any bean positions exceeding the limit that the family might hold today. Neither the Hunts' nor the CFTC were saying if any such holdings exist or if further legal skirmishes were forthcoming.

"It looks like everybody got something good on this one," said one source close to the five-month fracas. "It looks like a compromise to me."
The lawyers in both camps were upbeat, vastly relieved that the long wait was over and glad to have some shreds of victory they could call their own. On the other hand, neither side could claim a total conquest in this high-powered, high-stakes struggle.
Far from being another routine legal battle, the case was a test of the pulse and power of the 2-year-old CFTF, a young agency anxious to notch some points in the capital and clamp some rules on one of the freest enterprises of them all, the commodity futures industry.
In the opposite corner stood Nelson Bunker Hunt and W. Herbert Hunt, commanding a mega-fortune left them by their late father, the oil baron. Slick, self-effacing and ever so conservative, the Hunt brothers came well schooled in the commodities game (thanks to previous flings in sugar and silver) and set to face down the Big Government they felt was cramping their style.

Way back in April, CFTC chairman William I. Bagley himself set forth the case against the Hunts (who were charged along with five of their children).
Bagley breathlessly told reporters in a cross-country

phone hookup that the Hunts, trading in unison, amassed the rights to roughly a third of the 65 million bushels of soybeans available to fill the May futures contracts coming due shortly at the Chicago Board of Trade.

Raw fish out, Big Macs in as Japan alters diet

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — For Japanese consumers, raw fish is out and McDonald's is in, a Japanese diplomat said Thursday.
Counsel General Kiyoshi Sumiya told the World Trade Council of Iowa a major shift, has taken place in the standard Japanese diet that is spurring rapid development of carry-out restaurants.
He said his people are eating more and more fried chicken, hamburgers and other "delicacies" that can be found at fast food outlets.

"The volume of our trade in commodities has increased because Japanese consumers have steadily shifted toward a Western style diet," he said.
"Our people also are developing a taste for your fast food, with McDonald's, Colonel Sanders, Pizza Hut and others doing a thriving business."

The dietary changes, Sumiya said, are evidence of the dramatic increase in Japan's beef and pork imports from the United States. For 1976, he said beef imports rose 214 per cent and U.S. sales of pork increased three-fold.
He credited Iowa — "the nation's top pork-producing state — with being a major beneficiary of the change."
He added, "It took the United States to bring Pizza Hut and Big Mac to Japan."
"The area that holds a nearly unlimited potential for U.S. exploitation, he said, is fast food, adding most Japanese are ready and willing to make the switch from their traditional foods to all American fast foods.
"We are a willing and growing market for your goods and services," Sumiya said.
"In food service, our people enjoy hamburgers under the golden arches at McDonald's. I am told it's finger-lickin' good in Japan with Colonel Sanders and soon there will be more Denny's restaurants in Japan than there are in California."

Nevada school set

RENO — The final school for pesticide applicators in Nevada before the EPA ruling governing application of restricted use pesticides becomes effective, is Oct. 5 in Fallon.
Dr. Harry Smith, Cooperative Extension Pesticide Specialist, College of Agriculture, University of Nevada, pointed out that the EPA regulation will be effective as of Oct. 21 of this year.
"It is expected that the enforcement of the regulation will be strict," Dr. Smith said.

"and for this reason it is important that anyone who might use restricted use pesticides or supervise their use be properly certified and licensed."
Dr. Smith urged those who have not yet attended any of the schools, but who plan to use the restricted materials, to take advantage of the Fallon school. He said further information may be obtained from Larry Blalock at the Nevada State Department of Agriculture, phone 784-6401 or Dr. Smith, Cooperative Extension Service, University of Nevada, phone 784-6911.

Moisture hurts fruit farms

WALLA WALLA, Wash. (UPI) — The moisture which is aiding the seeding of winter wheat this week throughout eastern Washington is not helping fruit and vegetable farmers.
Rain is particularly hard on the golden delicious apple. It soaks up water and bruises very easily when picked, so they'll have to dry before they can be harvested.

And of course if it continues to rain, the apple continues to ripen and the chances are it can become soft.
Onion farmers also must wait for their crop to dry before being stored and they can't sit on the wet ground long without damage, either.
Moisture won't hurt carrots, so that's no problem, but the rain is affecting the last 10 per cent of the alfalfa seed harvest near Walla Walla.

The rain could also adversely affect the quality of the seed.
Potato and hay harvests are also at the mercy of the elements. Dry weather is preferred for both.
The weather hasn't affected the sugar beet harvest.

Rain in Maine aids gain in potato futures mart

CHICAGO — Potato futures advanced Wednesday.

The May delivery of Western russets ended a penny higher at 7.50 per hundredweight but Maine spuds closed with 10 to 35 cent gains.

Commodity News Service said rainy weather in Maine, which prevented harvesting, was the basis for the rally. On the eve of the Sept. 30 first frost date, only 50 to 60 per cent of the crop is harvested and about five days of dry weather is needed to complete the harvest.

Prices traded in a 15 cent range basis May, moving around 6.33 or 6.34 cwt. until the close when early trade sellers turned buyers and the month shot to a high of 6.45, the settling price. Short covering was also a factor. Volume on Maine spuds was 3,293 cars.

Grain futures gained but cattle and hogs edged lower in other trading.

Exporter support boosted wheat through the session, with unconfirmed reports of Canadian sales to the Soviet Union and hints that a lower Soviet crop estimate was forthcoming. At the close, some gains were tempered by hedge selling. Chicago cash basis was nominally unchanged at 10 cents over December for hard wheat at 25 under for soft red winter.

Under influence of spreading rain and light cash movement, corn closed 3/4 to 3 cents higher. Heavier precipitation than normal was forecast for the next 30 days over the corn belt. Chicago cash basis was nominally unchanged at 22 cents under December for hoppers and 29 under for boxcars.

Moisture delays for harvest also provided a boost for soybeans with help from evidence of farm holding and impressions of depleted overseas supplies. Beans ended 15 1/2 cents to 17 1/2 higher, meal was 4.70 to 3.80 up and oil gained 60 to 48 points.

Early buyers turned late sellers in live cattle, prices closing mixed but mostly slightly higher. Closing prices ranged from up 30 in January to down 5 cents in August. Volume was heavy at 10,239 contracts. The soybean advance also aided the upturn. Closing quotes were off as much as 35 cents from best levels.

October live hogs closed unchanged while other months finished 10 to 17 points down, the day's lows were down about 17 to 37 points, December leading. Late short covering aided October. Volume was placed at 4,127 contracts.

Pork bellies broke a support area producing 137 to 90 point losses before local shorts covering appeared and left closing prices down 100 to 65 points. Volume was placed at 5,572 contracts.

New York Sugar 11 closed 27 to 24 points higher due largely to news the "group of 20" agreed to revised International National Sugar Organization export quotas. Light scale profit taking trimmed prices slightly from the day's highs. Volume was 8,185 lots.

Chicago Board of Trade silver rallied late in the session on renewed gold strength and weakness in the dollar, with local short covering and some stop loss buying helping put prices in the plus column. Closing gains were 200 to 370 points. December closed up 220 at 4.607, barely off the highs.

International Monetary Market gold closed higher after spending most of the day below the previous close. Strong local buying helped take final prices to a volume of 70 points higher on a close of 4.966.

FLOCKING before their southward migration, hundreds of blackbirds fly into a field near Centerville, Minn., to feast on corn. Several species of blackbirds often band together to migrate. Their pickings were probably good, as a record corn harvest is being gathered in the corn belt.

Evans dedicates Caldwell clinic

CALDWELL (UPI) — Gov. John Evans Thursday dedicated the new $1.3 million Veterinary Medical Clinic in Caldwell to the future of agriculture in Idaho.

The clinic, at the northeast corner of the University of Idaho Caldwell Agricultural Research and Extension Center, was dedicated in name to Arthur Calne, secretary-manager of the Idaho Livestock Production Credit Association for 30 years.

The facility is part of the Washington State University-Northwest College of Veterinary Medicine. "Idaho alone could not afford to establish a curriculum to train veterinarians, yet the need for new and highly trained veterinarians continues to grow," Evans said.

"This facility has enabled us to meet that need at one tenth of the expense in establishing our own state program."

The clinic is one of the state's contributions to the regional veterinary college which includes the University of Idaho, Washington State University, and Oregon State University.

The facility is the culmination of four years of planning. It is on a 20-acre site and will provide an out-patient service on a referral basis, animal disease research, and on-the-job training and teaching of food animal medicine.

The clinic opened for business this week and dedication participants included Caldwell Mayor Robert Pasley and Dr. Richard Gibb, president of the University of Idaho.

Dairy herd TB tests set

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Agriculture Department said today 31 dairy herds in nine states will be tested for possible exposure to an outbreak of bovine tuberculosis in southwest Missouri.

Involved are 70 herds in Missouri, 12 in Arkansas, 2 each in Kansas and Oklahoma and 1 each in Mississippi, Louisiana, Ohio, New York and North Carolina.

The department's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service said the herds to be tested all purchased Holstein-Friesian dairy cattle from the School of the Ozarks, Point Lookout, Mo. The school herd had been TB-accredited, but it was recently found to be badly infected with the disease.

When the 207 head of cattle in the school herd were tested, 37 animals gave positive reactions and 23 of those had gross lesions of tuberculosis.

This is a sign of severe infection and means the disease probably had been in the herd for some time.

All 31 of the herds that must be tested include animals purchased from the school since 1974. APHIS and state veterinarians are continuing to trace sale records dating back to 1971.3

Officials said they discovered the infection in a slaughtered cow that came from a herd near Falcon, Mo. That animal had been purchased from the school in early 1977.

All animals in the herd near Falcon were destroyed, with the owner receiving state and federal indemnity.

Gem honey production climbs 16%

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho honey production from commercial apiaries with 200 or more colonies is expected to total 4.7 million pounds, a 16 per cent increase over last year.

The Idaho Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said the hike is a result of a higher yield per colony as the number of colonies declined.

The yield per colony was set at 49 pounds, up nine pounds from 1976. The 96,000 colonies is 5,000 less than a year earlier.

The situation in the 20 major honey producing states is not expected to be as bright as production will total some 101 million pounds.

NYSSA, Ore. (UPI) — Amalgamated Sugar Co. will begin operations at its Nyssa factory the second week in October, according to factory manager Gilbert Wells.

Wells said the fall processing of sugar beets this year will run about 70 days, which is shorter than the normal run of 120. He said he expects to be completed with the run before Christmas.

About 14,000 acres of sugar beets will be harvested this year.

Trash boxes removed

GOODING — Gooding County residents have lost their countywide trash collection service because of misuse of the system by a minority, according to Commission Chairman John LeMoine.

Consistent abuse of the 14 collection boxes located throughout the county has forced the commission to eliminate all but two of the sites, he said.

These two locations, at Gooding and Bliss, have been fenced and persons will have to pay for their use, LeMoine said.

"We will check revenues against costs," LeMoine said, "and see if we can afford it. You can't afford everything and we may not be able to afford this."

He said Gooding was probably the only county in southern Idaho providing free trash collection.

At one time 14 large dumpsters were placed throughout the county for residents to place trash and small items they wanted to dispose of.

But public abuse of the dumpsters has proved a continuing headache for county officials. People continued to put large rocks, bed springs and other objects too large and heavy for the boxes in them, causing other trash to then spill over the surrounding area.

Recently commissioners arranged with Gooding City officials to assume management of the dump site at the north edge of town. It has been fenced and an attendant hired to control collections.

LeMoine said Bliss residents are taking voluntary subscriptions to pay for operation of the collection site there.

The county sanitary landfill is located east of Tuttle and is some 12 miles from Gooding.

County observes 'Goose Day'

LEWISTOWN, Pa. (UPI) — If anyone cooked your goose in Mifflin County Thursday, you can sit back without worry the rest of the year.

It was Goose Day, the day on which residents of this central Pennsylvania county assure themselves of good luck by eating a goose.

Thousands of area residents fulfill their obligation by taking advantage of "goosepie specials" offered by most restaurants this week. Few cook the fowl in their home.

Goose Day derives from the Michaelmas Day, an ancient British holiday.

Legend has it the tradition was brought to the area in 1786, by a young deserter from the British Navy lured by farmer Andrew Pontias to help him work his land.

Pontias met the sailor.

Archibald Hunter, in Harrisburg, and hired him that day, despite a puzzling insistence by the Britisher that each Sept. 29 be set aside for the settling of the year's accounts.

UP&L rate boost slashed

Stocks at Midday

NEW YORK (UPI) - Prices opened higher Friday in active trading of New York Stock Exchange issues.

The Dow Jones industrial average was ahead 0.96 point on 244.16, shortly after the opening. Advances led gains to 191, 18, among the 30 stocks crossing the tape.

Investors were encouraged by the Federal Reserve Board's report late Thursday that the nation's money supply fell $1.1 billion, forcing a $2 billion raise the week before.

The move took pressure off the Fed to tighten credit. It generally results in lower interest rates. However, gains were interrupted earlier this week that the Fed had eased its reins slightly.

Investors were relieved that the pending rate hike at 7 1/2 percent when its formal, based on the September paper rates, would be 7 3/4 percent.

Today's rally was spotted by a better-than-expected 0.8 per cent rise in the Commerce Department's August economic indicators report also showed a 0.9 percent fall in index of 112 per cent decline.

Treasury Secretary W. Mitchell Blumenthal said the report was "encouraging."

Blumenthal predicted the economy, measured by the gross national product, would rise next year.

UP&L rate boost slashed

BOISE (UPI) - The Idaho Public Utilities Commission, saying Utah Power & Light Co.'s stockholders must share the reduced economic adversities with its customers.

The commission, in ordering the reduced rate increase, directed the company to overhaul its household rate structure to make rates charged to residential customers more fair and equitable.

The commission objected to the present residential rate structure under which residential customers are subject to three different rates depending on whether they use electric heating, electric water heating, or neither.

The commission, in determining how the increase would be divided among the various types of customers, noted special treatment must go to irrigation customers due to economic conditions.

Free press case in court

SAYREVILLE, N.J. (UPI) — A judge is trying to decide if a newspaper photographer taking pictures at the scene of an accident is protected under the free press provisions of the Constitution.

Harvey Lashinsky, a photographer for the Newark Star-Ledger, was arrested on disorderly conduct charges last March 25 when he refused to leave the scene of a traffic accident on the Garden State Parkway.

Despite a police officer's order, Lashinsky continued taking pictures of a car overturned on the grassy embankment. One woman was killed and another was injured in the accident.

Lashinsky was on a feature assignment when he witnessed the accident on the toll road and decided to take pictures for his newspaper.

Lashinsky's attorney filed a series of motions and asked Municipal Court Judge Herbert Herman to dismiss the charges because, among other things, he said his client was protected under the First Amendment.

The judge denied the request, however, saying that he could not make a ruling on the motion until he heard testimony in the case.

At a hearing on the case Wednesday Trooper Jim Herkloz said he arrested Lashinsky after repeatedly ordering him to leave the area, which he described as "extremely hazardous" because of spilled oil and gasoline.

Herkloz said he thought only first aid personnel and witnesses to the accident should remain at the scene.

Under cross examination by defense attorney Donald Robinson, the trooper admitted that Lashinsky did nothing to impede the investigation.

Showing a series of pictures taken at the scene, Robinson pointed out that there were several persons as close to the wreckage as Lashinsky was and asked sharply, "You did not place a single one of them under arrest, did you?"

The trooper replied, "No."

"Did Mr. Lashinsky, at any time, appear to you doing anything other than taking pictures of the wreckage," Robinson asked.

"No," Herkloz said.

Referring to the trooper's statement that he did not ask witnesses and first aid personnel to leave because they have public functions to perform and aid in the investigation, Robinson asked Herkloz if a news photographer also serves the public.

"Do you know what a journalistic duty is?"

"No."

"Do you know news photographers are also useful for an investigation?"

"No."

"At any time did Mr. Lashinsky touch you?"

"No."

"At any time did he make any threatening gestures?"

"No, he just once threw up his hand in the air," the trooper replied.

The defense attorney pointed out that there was a photographer from the New Jersey Highway Authority also taking pictures at the scene after Lashinsky was arrested.

Wyoming town may secede over tax

KEMMERER, Wyo. (UPI) — This community, Gov. Ed Herschler's hometown, is examining the possibility of seceding from Lincoln County and forming a new government unit in the southwest corner of Wyoming.

The Kemmerer Town Council resolved to look into secession by a unanimous vote Tuesday.

Councilman James Court said the move was being considered because a 1 per cent sales tax has been defeated consistently — despite support from Kemmerer.

Coast Guard looks for rescued sailor

HONOLULU (UPI) — A 34-year-old Monterey, Calif., man who was rescued after drifting 13 days in the Pacific is in for a rude Aloha when the U.S. Coast Guard catches up with him.

Terry Nugent, who was picked up Wednesday by the merchant tanker Chevron Rome 1,000 miles northeast of Oahu, had been helplessly adrift in a nine-foot sailboat for about two weeks after losing his sails.

A Coast Guard spokesman said that Nugent had been told in July of last year that his nine-foot Boston whaler was "manifestly unsafe" for an ocean voyage, and that he was warned not to make such a trip.

"The coast guard is now in the process of assessing the possibility of bringing civil and/or criminal action against Terry Nugent for violation of applicable federal laws for violating an unsafe voyage regulation," said the spokesman, Jim Gilman.

Gilman noted that Nugent's rescue involved hundreds of personnel, six different aircraft and cost taxpayers about $104,000.

"The overriding concern here is that this incident was entirely avoidable," he said.

Nugent's boat, "The Eye of Infinity", capsized outside Monterey harbor in August, Gilman said, and the Coast Guard then came to his aid by towing him to shore. Gilman said Nugent left two weeks after the capsizing on the ill-fated sail to Hawaii without informing the Coast Guard.

Gilman says Nugent was "extremely lucky" he was found.

Fire fighters will work without contract

By BOB ZUCKERMAN
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — Though their contract runs out at midnight tonight, Twin Falls fire fighters will continue working, according to Lloyd Almand, fire fighters' association president.

But a fire fighters' lawyer has promised a legal battle with the city and has threatened to take city officials to court for "bad-faith" bargaining.

The announcements came just moments after the last negotiating session between fire fighters and city officials ended Thursday. During the 12-hour session, Almand said fire fighters had unanimously voted to reject the city's last contract offer.

At the final meeting before the contract expires, fire fighters asked the city to reconsider its position on wages and other issues including the right of fire fighting battalion chiefs to be a part of the union's bargaining unit and grievance procedures.

But city officials, citing a tight budget, said no again on wages and other issues brought up by fire fighters, who requested the meeting.

Almand restated fire fighters' arguments for higher wages:

—At last year's negotiations, city officials had verbally agreed to bring fire fighters up to a "state average" for salaries in two years. However, this year city officials were not adjusting salaries up to other salaries in the state.

—Two members of the three-man fact-finding panel supported higher wages than what city officials were offering to fire fighters.

—Salary adjustments made quarterly and based on the Consumer Price Index cannot be considered a "raise" because those adjustments only insure a fire fighter's wage keeps up with inflation.

City Councilman Stephen R. Lincoln and City Manager Jean Milrar restated the city's argument for not increasing fire fighters' wages by the amount suggested by fire fighters:

—While admitting a state average was a "goal" mentioned in last year's negotiations, that goal was never made part of last year's contract.

—Fire fighters were already expected to get a nine per cent increase in salary based on adjustments using the Consumer Price Index during the next contract year, Saturday to Oct. 1, 1972. This increase should be considered a raise, one that is not guaranteed because it was in last year's contract.

One fire fighter walked out of the meeting during the stormy discussion on wages when negotiators turned to discussing fire fighters' attitudes.

"I submit, gentlemen, that if you would come to the city with new ideas in the fire department using your ingenuity, your bargaining position would be enhanced," Milrar said.

He complained fire fighters did not seem to do the "extra things" that might be important when discussing raises.

"Was all that trading on EMT's a joke?" Larry Crippen, one fire fighters' negotiator, said referring to hours fire fighters spent on their days off learning special emergency medical techniques.

Misty-eyed Crippen walked out of the meeting.

But other fire fighters stayed to continue the verbal battle with city officials, all apparently jostling for position in whatever legal confrontation comes.

Almand called the city's position on wages, its denial of allowing battalion chiefs in the union's bargaining unit, its alterations in grievance procedures and constant manning clauses in the proposed contract were examples of bad-faith bargaining, not allowed by Idaho law.

"Good-faith bargaining does not mean yielding, but rather an evaluation of what is requested," Milrar responded.

"Just because we disagree doesn't mean we bargained in bad faith," Lincoln said.

But fire fighters remained unconvinced.

After the meeting, fire fighters' lawyer Andrew G. Wilson II said he would file a lawsuit against the city next week, as soon as he determined which legal action would be best.

He said alternatives included suing the city for breach of contract, filing for a writ of mandamus saying the City Council did not bargain in good faith, or filing an injunction to stop the city from spending money as approved under next fiscal year's budget. The new fiscal year also begins Saturday.

If suing for breach of contract, he would argue the city had failed to live up to its verbal agreement of trying to bring fire fighters' salaries up to a state average, Wilson said.

Milrar said fire fighters who continued to work Saturday would be paid as if the city would have paid them under the new contract.

Fire fighters would be subject to all the same benefits of other city employees, Milrar said.

However, without a contract, fire fighters would lose some of the benefits agreed to in this year's contract, Milrar said. According to Milrar, these include:

—Instead of receiving double time for overtime, fire fighters would only receive time-and-a-half.

—When called back to work when there is no fire, fire fighters would only be paid regular time. Milrar said if no fire fighters volunteered for these extra shifts, city officials would hire outside help at less pay.

—Fire fighter promotions and reductions would be based on "management prerogative," not on seniority and examination as guaranteed in current contract.

—City officials would provide no funds for kitchen service at the fire station.

TWIN FALLS FIRE FIGHTERS WILL STILL PUT ON THEIR JACKETS AND FIGHT FIRES... but their contracts with the city expire tonight at midnight

Hearing rescheduled

TWIN FALLS — A hearing in a case against E. Beverly and Associates, a Twin Falls firm which helps consumers obtain loans for a fee, has been reset for 10 a.m. Oct. 21 in Fifth District Judge Theron W. Ward's court.

In the lawsuit, originally scheduled for hearing today, the state attorney general charges the firm misrepresents itself to the public and is only interested in collecting the fees.

Beverly officials have accused the state's attorneys of "bad-mouthing" the loan institution and being "too lazy" to go after real culprits in loan fraud.

Road may be closed

TWIN FALLS — The Rock Creek Road in the South Hills may be closed for the first few days of deer season because the road renovation project there has taken longer than expected.

Beginning sometime next week, Bengal Construction, Co., Pocatello, will begin applying the prime coat to the road surface, necessitating closure of the road until the surface dries.

The road will definitely be closed the weekend of Oct. 8 and 9. How long it will remain closed depends entirely on the weather, district ranger Lew Munson said Friday. The road could dry in two days and be open for the opening day of deer season. The Forest Service and the contractor have agreed to open the road from opening day through the following Sunday (if conditions permit) or it could take much longer, requiring that the road closure stay in effect from Oct. 8 through the following weekend.

While the road is closed, hunters and woodcutters can reach the South Hills via the Oakley-Rogerson Road, the Shoshone Basin route, or the Roy Creek or Indian Springs Roads.

Bengal Construction is currently two months behind schedule, Munson explained, due to unforeseen construction problems. For instance, during construction, workers unearthed two springs and buried a D-8 bulldozer in the resulting mud. It took two weeks for the mud to dry out enough to free the tractor.

Prime coating cannot be applied in cold weather, so the contractor cannot delay any longer. If more delays occur, the possibility exists that winter-time traffic on the road would cause such extensive damage to the ungraded surface that significant additional costs would be incurred next spring to complete the road. As it is, the final asphalt will not be applied until next spring.

The road cannot be closed through the winter because significant use is expected in the area (perhaps as much as 150,000 visitor days, Munson said) due to an anticipated good snow year.

Drought aid increase in works

By KEN HODGE
Times-News Writer

BOISE — An increase in the Small Business Administration budget now in Congress could mean more drought assistance for both Idaho agribusiness and small businesses.

The Senate Appropriations Committee has agreed to increase the SBA budget $1.4 billion, according to Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho.

A spokesman in McClure's Washington office said today the bill raising the SBA budget probably will pass the Senate sometime this fall.

The money will be available to agribusiness and other small businesses if they can prove "economic injury" related to drought conditions.

"That money will hopefully be appropriated," Verne Leighton, acting director for the Boise district office of the SBA, said. "It is really intended for the disaster victims."

HANSEN — Top endurance horse racers from throughout the West are gathering today for the fifth annual Diamondfield Jack cross country race Saturday.

An estimated 50 riders will participate in the Diamondfield Jack, 54-mile, cross country race.

Dayton Osborn, currently leading the American Endurance Ride Conference with a build-up of points, will be in from Bothell, Wash.

Viel Norlion, San Jose, Calif., who won the Great American Transcontinental ride in the Bicentennial year with a pair of mules, will be here with an Arabian.

Jerry Partin, second in endurance riding in the Northwest at the moment, is coming down from Walla Walla, Wash. Diane Ulrick Spokane, Wash., last year's winner of the Diamondfield Jack, biggest of the endurance contests in the Northwest, is expected to defend her title.

The race commemorates Diamondfield Jackson Lee Davis, an Idaho-Nevada cattle range detective who, made national history as the result of a grazing rights battle.

Riders will meet between 4 and 7 p.m. today at Crockett meadows, south of Hansen, where they will camp overnight.

The horses will make a shotgun start at 8 a.m. Saturday for the 54-mile ride which concludes in front of Cactus Pete's.

The Diamondfield Jack event is the biggest endurance horse race in the Northwest, ac-ording to Carl Hayden, Jackpot.

From the Crockett ranch meadows riders ascend the summit of Deadline Ridge in the South Hills. This ridge was the boundary between sheep and cattle interests in the "days of the old West."

From the ridge they ride south into Shoshone Basin for the first check stop. There is another rest stop at Mile Creek. The riders will cross US Highway 93 at the Idaho-Nevada border where traffic will be stopped, Hayden said.

They will finish the ride by climbing a long, low hill on the west side of Jackpot and descending a sharp bluff to the open area in front of the casino.

Two saddles and other relics of Jackson Lee Davis, known to history as Diamondfield Jack, are on display in the casino stowcase, loaned by the Twin Falls Bank and Trust.

Winner of the Hansen-Jackpot race will receive $500 in other merchandise and cash prizes to be presented at a cocktail party at 7 p.m. Saturday in the Horseshoe Lounge. Bob Harney, Twin Falls, race chairman, will be master of ceremonies.

Davis, the man for whom the race is named, spent six years in jail, accused of killing two sheepherders who had crossed Deadline ridge with their bands. He was convicted and on two occasions was scheduled to be hanged, but each time was reprieved.

After four years in jail, his own foreman confessed that he and another cowboy had killed the sheepherders. Hayden said, but "due to cattle range wars and Idaho politics Jack languished another two years in jail."

Theater complex starts at Jerome

JEROME — Northside movie-goers soon will be able to see the latest films without driving to Twin Falls. Construction of four movie theaters in Jerome got under way Wednesday with groundbreaking ceremonies.

Roy Roper, part-owner of Interstate Amusements, Inc., which is building the theaters, said, "With the theaters now, I think you'll find it will stop traffic (to Twin Falls) and other businesses in Jerome will flourish because of it."

Roper said Twin Falls merchants have asked him not to build the theaters in Jerome because they feel Twin Falls business will be hurt. But he said surveys showed a theater was needed and he wanted people in Jerome "to be taken care of in the manner they should."

Jerome-area residents have sent Roper over 3,000 signatures asking for the theaters and local businessmen and elected officials, including Jerome Mayor Charles Hancock, have urged the construction.

Roper plans four theater auditoriums with seating capacity of 300 each. They represent an investment of a half-million dollars and should open in February. The theaters will take up about two acres of the approximately seven acres which Interstate Amusements, and plans are being made to include other businesses at the site.

Roper said he has already had requests from a dinner club, drug store, hardware store and a hairdresser to locate next to the theater. These requests will be "held in abeyance" until the theaters are operating.

The theaters will be constructed on the corner of the West Boulevard and West Main outside the city limits. Special new equipment will allow the same film to be shown simultaneously in two of the auditoriums for the most popular films. First run films will play "a little ahead or a little behind" those in Twin Falls, depending on booking schedules, Roper said.

Celebration time ahead

By KEN HODGE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — It's the seventh anniversary of the Twin Falls downtown mall and the place will be hopping this weekend as downtown merchants celebrate with music, dancing, theatrics and, yes, even a bed pushing contest.

"It ought to be crazy, fun and unusual," Milo Price, owner of the Music Center, says. "We encourage everyone to come out and be a part of the fun."

Tonight at 5:30 p.m. local enthusiasts will get a chance to pit their bed pushing talents against one another, according to Price.

"He says there will be seven preliminary races in the 16 and under class and eight preliminary races in the 16 and over class.

Competitors will be awarded prizes for winning the finals scheduled for 9:30 a.m. Saturday.

Saturday at noon local pianist Jan Olsen and guitarist Ted Mangini will play for shopping audiences in the mall.

Art Frantz, local singer and actor, will sing with the two musicians.

That is just the beginning. At 1 p.m. Twin Falls theater group Company 1 will bring outdoor theater to the mall by performing scenes from its forthcoming production of "The Fantasticks."

Optimists examine solar energy cost

BOISE (UPI) — Solar energy on a large scale, considered by some experts to be a decade away in Idaho, is nonetheless being examined with optimism.

So enthusiastic are some proponents that the possibility of tax breaks for business, the elderly and the poor loom as some of several recommendations being eyed for introduction in the forthcoming legislative session.

Representatives from 13 western states met in Boise Thursday for a work and review session to examine the feasibility of development and implementation of solar devices in the region.

"We feel there is a tremendous amount of potential in the region and Idaho has been demonstrating as much interest as any state," Kirk Hill, director of the Idaho Office of Energy, said. "But low fuel costs in the state will probably back things up."

"We have a situation here where we're pressed to justify solar heating systems due to cheap prices of fuel," he said. "But costs will escalate and when they do we'll have to move rapidly to find an economic option."

Suggestions offered by the energy representatives to help accommodate the transition to solar energy include east-west streets and mandates on house color and zoning.

Final recommendations will be made by the states by the end of February, after investigations of feasibility. The solar planning office west will then submit to the federal government recommendations for regulations, development and possible funding of future solar energy projects.

States involved in the project are Idaho, Alaska, Hawaii, Washington, California, Nevada, Arizona, Montana, Wyoming, Utah, Colorado, New Mexico and Oregon.

One storm system left the plains states only to be followed by more thunderstorms and hail early today.

The new storms proved into a cold front that was moving into the central and northern Plains, dropping baseball sized hail in southwest Nebraska and northwest Kansas. The hail shattered car windows in Fallsdale, Neb., the National Weather Service reported.

A storm system that brought four inches of rain to Arkansas and three inches to Kansas in a 24-hour period left the Plains early Thursday, moving into the Mississippi Valley.

Researchers see progress in leukemia treatments

NEW YORK (UPI) — Cancer researchers Thursday reported major progress in treating the most common form of childhood leukemia during the past 15 years with therapy reaching the point where doctors cautiously talk of cures in some cases.

"The former attitude of pessimism and fatalism has been replaced by a note of hope and optimism," said Dr. Donald Pinkel of the Medical College of Wisconsin at a national conference on leukemias and lymphomas.

He said acute lymphocytic leukemia, the type of cancer of the blood-forming tissues that accounts for most leukemia in children, was almost uniformly fatal 20 or 30 years ago. It strikes about 1,500 American youngsters annually.

Now, more than half of children with the disease who are treated with modern techniques using powerful drugs and radiation are alive and well and free of all evidence of leukemia for periods up to 10 years.

Dr. Joseph Simone, of

Stanford University, said some of his patients at St. Jude Children's Research Hospital in Memphis, which he recently left to go to Stanford, have gone through high school and college and several have married and produced normal offspring.

"It is no longer controversial to state that a significant proportion of children with acute lymphocytic leukemia can attain long-term, leukemia-free survival and, possibly, cure," Simone said.

Specialists emphasized, however, that much has yet to be learned about leukemia and why it is that some patients fail to respond significantly to the latest forms of treatment. The drugs and radiation used to treat leukemic children also produce adverse side effects and occasionally permanent harm.

Pinkel said it was important that children with leukemia receive treatment in major cancer centers which are aware of recent developments and which can deal with drug reactions.

Dr. Vincent DeVita, director of cancer treatment at the National Cancer Institute in Washington, said one of the most significant results of the advances in treating childhood leukemia is that they demonstrate "that we in fact can cure cancer with drugs."

He said leukemia is serving as the "stalking horse" for treating other, more common forms of cancer with combinations of anticancer agents.

DeVita said he uses the term "cure" in cases where patients are free of apparent disease after long periods of time even though there is no guarantee that it might not return some day.

Dr. David Galton, of the University of London, said it would be "splitting hairs" to say that these patients are not cured.

"Most of us are beginning to use the word and believe it is so," he said.

The three-day conference is sponsored by the American Cancer Society and the National Cancer Institute.

Cholera confirmed

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Iran Thursday admitted a "cholera type" disease has reached epidemic proportions in the Tehran area, afflicting nearly 1,500 persons and killing 47.

A Health Ministry statement released to the press and broadcast by Radio Iran said the disease, called El Tor, also had hit other parts of the country. It said 1,492 cases had been confirmed in the capital and a nearby town.

The announcement said the disease was "completely under control and there is no cause for alarm."

The announcement was the first official confirmation that a two-month-old Middle East cholera outbreak had reached Iran, although unofficial medical reports earlier said several hundred cases had been found in the country. The government denied the earlier reports.

More than 5,000 cholera cases have been reported in the Middle East since August. Syria alone has confirmed more than 3,000 cases, including at least 72 deaths.

Middle East health officials fear the outbreak could grow to enormous proportions unless it is curbed before the annual Muslim pilgrimage to the holy city of Mecca in Saudi Arabia reaches its peak next month.

"The Ministry of Health informs countrymen that El Tor, the cholera type disease, has been seen in endemic and epidemic form in the country over the past 10 years," the Iranian statement said.

Water standard lowering opposed

IDAHO FALLS, Idaho (UPI) — The Idaho Environmental Council said today it opposed the weakening of any water quality standards for Indian Creek at Nampa.

It asked the Idaho Board of Health and Welfare to deny a request to lower the water quality standards for the creek.

The City of Nampa and major industries of the community want the standards lowered to save money on the waste water treatment facility. They claim the creek is not a stream, but a man-made waterway and doesn't fall under stream water quality classifications.

The council said the campaign by "polluters" of the stream "to weaken these standards for their own economic ends is an insult to the many Idahoans who care about our high quality environment."

"Some supporters of this outrageous proposal have even argued that the cost of needed pollution control would far exceed the monetary value placed on the fish in Indian Creek, which the weakening of standards would eliminate," the council said.

"This is somewhat like claiming that the money taken into a coal mine is worth only the small amount it costs, and is of no value as an indicator of environmental hazard in the mine."

Fishing regulations public hearing set

By STU MURRELL

Regional Conservation Educator
JEROME — There will be a public hearing to discuss proposed fishing regulations for 1978 on Monday, October 3, at 7:30 p.m. in the Jerome Regional Office, 868 East Main St., Jerome.

One of the major changes being proposed to the Fish and Game Commission is a simplification in both the format and differences in regulations. For example, the catch and release regulations on Big Wood River, both below Magic Dam and near the Hulén Meadows Bridge, plus the fly fishing section of Little Wood River will be eliminated.

The special regulations on Silver Creek will also be discussed. Another regulation would be the elimination of the ice fishing seasons on Little Wood, Fish Creek and Magic Reservoir because of their low water conditions caused by the drought. The drought also affected Carey Lake, and it is being proposed the lake will be closed to all fishing until the fish population returns.

The Fish and Game Commission has asked for public opinion on allowing electric motors on current "no motor" waters.

Ali beats Shavers despite being 'out on my feet' in final round

NEW YORK (UPI) — Muhammad Ali nearly knocked out Earnie Shavers and was almost kayoed himself in a furious 15th round Thursday night when he came closer to losing his world heavyweight championship than the unanimous decision he received would indicate.

"I was out on my feet," Ali said, when he came out to answer questions more than a half hour after the fight. "I was almost knocked out. That man hit me hard. He was in great shape and he almost beat me."

Ali said he turned to his God, Allah, when he felt Shavers' power rock him in the late rounds.

"Allah came to me, Allah made me wup him," said Ali, who prayed each morning in the small mosque at his training camp. "I prayed to God and he saved me."

Ali admitted his skills have sharply deteriorated since he won the championship for the first time 13 years ago and added that he would have had trouble with the slower Shavers in years past.

"A younger Ali wouldn't have gotten hit," Ali said. "He hurt me. He hurt me four or five times."

The crowd of 14,613 booed the decision of the officials, who gave Ali a better break than he seemed to deserve. Eva Shain, the first woman to score a championship fight, and official Tony Castellano both had Ali winning nine rounds to Shavers' six, while referee Johnny LoBianco had Ali 9-5-1. UPI scored it 6-1 for Ali.

Ali, who lost the 13th and 14th rounds to the inspired fourth-ranked slugger, staggered Shavers in the final round with punishing lefts and rights to the head. Shavers stayed on his feet on sheer will-power to the end and Ali's cornermen jumped with joy and relief at the decision.

Ali, who has now been pressed to go 15 rounds in six of his last nine fights, had much more of a struggle than he bargained for to earn his $3 million purse and far more than the officials' cards would indicate.

Ali suffered a slight redness on his nose in the second round, but Shavers received the only cut of the fight in the 10th, when blood trickled from his nose, and the wound was reopened in the 12th by a quick combination. Ali then battered the challengers' shaven skull without significantly hurting him in the last 30 seconds of the 12th.

The 10th round was the best of the fight, as Shavers clipped Ali with a hard right to the head early in the round and Ali blinked and covered up after another right by Shavers. All came back to rock Shavers with a hard left to the temple and then followed with a combination to the face that drew blood from Shavers' nose.

The crowd booed the relatively light action in the middle rounds and, between rounds, Ali booted back. Both fighters had predicted seventh-round knockouts, but neither came close.

Shavers ripped a hard right to Ali's cheek at the start of the seventh but the champion was not hurt. Ali threatened his right-handed "bolo" punch while keeping his left harmlessly in Shavers' face. Shavers landed a left to Ali's temple and then came across the ring and connected with a roundhouse right to Ali's chin, one of many wild punches Shavers threw.

All went down from a push by Shavers and wobbled on the canvas in the 14th round and the referee ruled it was a slip while the timekeeper stopped his count at two. Ali moved away, but Shavers hurt him with a solid right to the head and the champion could barely cover up at the bell when Shavers hit him twice more in the head.

There were no knockdowns in the fight, but that took nothing away from the most exciting Ali bout since his "Thrilla in Manila" with Joe Frazier.

This fight was nowhere near the battle of that third bout with Frazier, but it was the only time since then that Ali seemed in serious trouble.

Shavers caught Ali with an overhead right to the cheek 45 seconds into the 13th round, but Ali pushed him away and danced around the ring. Shavers caught up to him in a neutral corner and connected with another right.

Ali looked worried late in the 13th when Shavers hit him with a rare combination and followed with a looping right that rocked Ali in his corner.

Shavers' greatest problem was his inability to put together successful combinations, relying instead on the awesome power that kayoed 52 previous victims.

Shavers miffed over decision

NEW YORK (UPI) — Earnie Shavers, visibly upset at the decision against him in favor of Muhammad Ali Thursday night, criticized the New York boxing judges and charged them with favoring the champion.

"It's hard to win a decision against Ali, especially in New York," said Shavers. "I knew I had to knock him out. Looking back at it, if I had to change anything, I would put more pressure on him sooner."

Shavers said he was never really hurt by Ali, although he seemed stunned by a flurry of blows as the bridge of his nose. "He shook me a couple of times, but it was nothing serious. I was trying to pace myself."

"I never hit him really hard," said Shavers, whose eyes were swollen and who sported a slight cut on the bridge of his nose. "He shook me a couple of times, but it was nothing serious. I was trying to pace myself."

"I really believe he didn't win the fight. He stood around posing and talking. That's no way to win a decision, but I guess when you're Muhammad Ali and you're fighting in New York you get away with things like that."

As he stomped off an elevator and headed for the showers, Shavers shook his head and grumbled. "I really wanted him badly. But Ali wins, that's New York for you."

Tarkanian scorches NCAA investigators

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Controversial basketball coach Jerry Tarkanian, involved in a legal battle which could stake the foundation of NCAA investigative procedures, said Thursday that association investigators mistook power and could zero in on any coach they singled out for abuse.

"You reach a point where what's happening to you becomes much bigger than one person," said Tarkanian. "If the NCAA investigators can do what they did against me, there's nothing to stop them from doing it again to someone else."

"Those types of actions don't belong in any organization in our country and someone has to make a stand somewhere."

The NCAA placed the University of Nevada, Las Vegas basketball team on probation last month and demanded that the school discipline Tarkanian or else face possible expulsion from the NCAA, suspension of all UNLV sports, or face a longer basketball season probationary period. Dr. Donald Bessler, president of UNLV, notified Tarkanian he would be severed from all athletic programs effective Sept. 9 because the NCAA left the university no alternative.

Tarkanian, who coached UNLV to the NCAA's final round of four last season, was temporarily at the helm Thursday by court order. A final court decision is expected Friday.

"Tarkanian was granted a temporary restraining order against UNLV Sept. 8, the day he filed a complaint in state court seeking a declaratory judgment and a permanent injunction against the university. Tarkanian charged his constitutional rights were violated and that the NCAA investigators presented only unsworn reports and no documentation to support its position. Tarkanian's attorneys presented sworn statements in court by persons who recalled being told by NCAA investigators they were "out to get Tarkanian" because he exploited black athletes.

Tarkanian also said he would be damaged by the NCAA demands because his out-of-state income from such ventures as a television show and newspaper column, based upon him being head basketball coach, would fall through along with coaching clinics. It is unknown how much Tarkanian receives from outside income and fringe benefits because of his head coaching job but some observers estimate it is near $50,000 a year. UNLV pays him a salary of $30,000 a year.

District Judge James Brennan heard a full day of testimony and arguments Monday and will rule Friday on whether Tarkanian stays or gets severed from athletics. The UNLV incident also prompted Rep. James Santini, D-Nev., to seek a congressional investigation by the House Oversight and Investigations subcommittee into NCAA investigative procedures.

"I don't believe that representatives of member institutions who work full time on their jobs at the universities and volunteer hours to do NCAA work are aware of the misuse of power," Tarkanian said Thursday.

The NCAA accused Tarkanian of several abuses including charges he arranged with an instructor at UNLV for a student athlete to receive a passing grade without having to attend classes or do any work.

Attorney Charles Thompson, lawyer for the unnamed instructor, told UPI he appeared before the NCAA Council in Knoxville, Tenn., last month with affidavits and lie detector test results showing the charge was false but said he was ignored. "I proved beyond a doubt that it did not happen. The NCAA should be dismantled, their investigative techniques are dishonest or incompetent, take your choice," said Thompson, a former assistant District Attorney.

Tarkanian, the first white coach to start five black players, is known as "J.T.," "Tank" or "The Man" by his players and fans. His players are quick to speak out in his defense.

Brett Vroman, the 6-foot-11 UCLA center who transferred to UNLV after the two year NCAA probation was announced, said other coaches told him to avoid UNLV but said "I don't care what the NCAA thinks of Tarkanian. He was completely honest with me. I like the intensity of ball they play here."

"I can talk to him openly and freely about anything, and, I believe he has never told me a lie," said 6-foot-7 Reggie Theus of Inglewood, Calif. "He works us so hard it naturally brings out the best in us."

Races over, start thinking awards

Chicago Daily News
The Phillies have clinched the National League East the world is safe for democracy and until the start of the playoffs, we may can channel our barroom discussions toward individual honors.

In the next few weeks, selected members of the Baseball Writers Assn. of America will slyly steal their prejudices, compile their insights and separate baseball's 1977 marionettes from the rest of the herd — in the form of most valuable players, Cy Young Award winners, managers of the year, etc.

The electors, for the first time, are from among writers who travel with the teams all season long, which is just. But that doesn't stop those who're chained in Ivory Towers from pontificating on what should be Here Goes:

— National League — The fight for honors here is a classic example of the annual unsolved dilemma: Should the winner "automatically" be from a championship team or the guy who, individually, has done the best job?

One-of-favorite, of course, is Greg Luzanski. The Bull has 37 homers and 127 RBI for the champion Phillies. The other is George Foster of Cincinnati, whose chief drawback is that he was not born in Florida this year. (By some rationale, his 32 homers and 122 runs scored and 147 RBI are considered mundane because the Reds only will finish second.)

Black when I was entrusted with an official vote on matters of this ilk. Took the "purist" posture that the MVP was an individual award, not a team honor. And, as an individual, Foster — the fifth National League in history to hit 50 homers — is without peer.

American League — A Little League could cast the vote in this one. Red Carew will finish first in the balloting. Nobody will finish second. Carew, with his .300-plus average, improves with age, like fine wine.

Cy Young Award (pitchers)
National League — The Dodgers' Tommy John, a 20-game winner for the first time, is the prototype for every mother's favorite son. His Cy Young victory would be a popular one. But in 1977, he was flanked by pitching talent of almost equal skill. Neither he nor his team was under any real pressure.

Not so for 23-game winner Steve Carlton of the Phillies, the main man all year for a team that didn't get its act together until August.

Unlike John, Carlton is not the boy next door. Some of his exploits are enshrined in the After Hours Hall of Fame. As a human being, he is not a person you would wish your son to emulate. But, then, neither was Mickey Mantle. The vote here is for Carlton.

American League — At the start of the season, Jim Palmer had no particular use for (a) the city of Baltimore, (b) the size of the contract the Orioles were offering him, and (c) manager Earl Weaver. Now, he only dislikes Weaver. Palmer, a 19-game winner, almost single-handedly kept the Orioles alive with half-a-dozen September victories. For a long time, it looked as if the award would be the unceremonious property of the Angels' Frank Banana. Except at the end of the year, he was pitching like Frank Banana.

Manager of the Year
— National League — I'd give the edge to Danny Uzzark of the Phillies over Tom Lasorda of the Dodgers. Uzzark is a malaprop artist of the first rank. (As in: "I'm a fassel.") I sometimes say one thing when I really mean another. And the media always have treated him as something of a bumpkin, as a man who thought he was dealing with only a 47-card deck. Lasorda, on the other hand, is a genius. And we know this because he tells us so.

Obviously, Danny must have done a better job if he could choreograph a title with only half a bag of marbles.

American League — Without bias, the winner has to be the unappreciable, low-key Bob Lemon, whose White Sox may win 35 games more than they did a year ago. Baltimore's Earl Weaver was a leading candidate most of the year until he pulled his team off the field in Toronto, costing the Orioles a forfeit loss.

Earl is a brilliant manager. But there is a fine line between brilliance and stupidity. And Earl crossed it.

Cleveland becomes torrid topic in central division

Most pre-season discussions about the AFC Central this year centered around the Cincinnati Bengals and the Pittsburgh Steelers. Some experts liked the Bengals' explosive offense with Ken Anderson passing to Isaac Curtis. Others favored the Steelers' defense, led by Jack Lambert and Joe Greene.

Nobody paid much attention to the Cleveland Browns. Now no one is ignoring them.

Cleveland has been the surprise team of the NFL so far this season with victories over Cincinnati and New England, both considered playoff contenders, in its first two games.

The Browns turned things around a long time ago but playing in the tough AFC Central made it difficult for them to attract attention. After a 3-11 record in 1975, the Browns finished a surprising 9-5 last year, missing the playoffs by one game.

An 18-16 upset of the Steelers last season started Cleveland on a string of eight victories in its last 10 games to play in the playoff picture until the last weekend. That game was also the Steelers' last regular-season loss until their 10-game streak was broken Sunday by a 16-7 defeat to Oakland.

Following their Monday night game, the Browns have one fewer day to prepare for the Steelers, a situation which doesn't please Gregg, especially after two difficult upset victories.

"Playing Pittsburgh anytime is not pleasant," said Gregg, who faces an even tougher challenge next week against Oakland.

Cleveland's upset of New England saw four ties and four lead changes and was decided at 10:15 of overtime by Don Cockroft's third field goal, a 53-yarder. The unusual part was Gregg elected to try for the winning field goal on second down at the Patriots' 18-yard line over the objections of quarterback Brian Sipe.

Gregg told Sipe, "I believe we'll just take our three points and go home. I'm tired."

Five turnovers and five QB sacks undid the Steelers against Oakland. Pittsburgh QB Terry Bradshaw, who hit tight end Bennie Cunningham with a 3-yard pass for Pittsburgh's only score, suffered a bruised thigh and two sprained toes but is expected to play against Cleveland.

In other games Sunday, Buffalo is at Baltimore, Cincinnati at San Diego, Denver at Seattle, Houston at Miami, New England at the New York Jets, Green Bay at Minnesota, New Orleans at Detroit, St. Louis at Washington, San Francisco at Los Angeles and Tampa Bay at Dallas.

Oakland is at Kansas City Monday night. St. Louis and Washington, keys in recent years to the NFC winner or wild card team, each rebounded last week from opening-game losses to score victories. Jim Bakken "kicked three field goals in St. Louis' triumph over Chicago after four misses in an opening shutout loss to Denver. Miami and Houston is the only game between NFL unbeaten teams. Houston's aggressive defense will be tested by Miami's multiple offense, featuring wide receiver Nat Moore, who scored all three Dolphins touchdowns in a 19-15 victory over San Francisco. The only other season the Dolphins won their first two games was 1972 when they were Super Bowl champs with 17-0 record.

SCALE MODEL OF DETROIT'S TIGER STADIUM ... shows improvements of proposed renovation

Committee urges players to rejoin team

WASHINGTON (UPI) — John Hannah and Leon Gray, two standout offensive linemen who left the New England Patriots in a contract dispute, said Thursday they would decide soon whether to return to the club, as the NFL's Player-Club Relations Committee suggested.

"I still have the option of retirement and I'll have to consider that," said Hannah, a 6-foot-2, 265-pound fifth-year guard from Albertville, Ala., where his family runs a farming business. "I think the fans can understand my position," he added. "It's the difference between playing the NFL and personal, private enterprise."

"My gut feeling is that I want to play football," said Gray, a 6-foot-3, 255-pound tackle, also in his fifth year. "But I just want to weigh my feelings and look at the whole thing objectively."

If Hannah and Gray don't return to the team by 5 p.m. next Tuesday, the Patriots, under orders from the committee, will be forced to place them on the retired list, making them ineligible to play in 1977.

The committee — consisting of owners Dan Rooney of Pittsburgh and Wellington Mara of the New York Giants plus Washington's player Len Haas — heard about eight hours of testimony Wednesday evening and deliberated about three hours Thursday. It decided to urge the players to return and play for the Patriots by next Tuesday, but also ordered the club to start "good faith" contract negotiations at the end of the season.

Pats' Vice President Chuck Sullivan said the negotiations would take the form of contract extensions (Hannah is obligated to the club through 1980, Gray through 1979), rather than renegotiation. The fact that the Pats refused to renegotiate the existing contracts prompted Hannah and Gray to leave the team Sept. 11 and the club to file a grievance with the committee.

The Los Angeles-based agent Howard Slusher, representing both of the players, called the decision "great wisdom" and said he and the players intend to abide by it.

The committee, however, decided that the concerted walkout, apparently engineered by Slusher, was one of the main problems.

"We feel that the problems in this case have been brought about in large measure because of the decision of the agent to violate the Collective Bargaining Agreement by taking a coordinated bargaining stance in the case of these two players."

The committee also denied the Pats' claim that the players should return their signing and reporting bonuses, but ordered club officials not to assess fines they would be entitled to impose because of the players' absence.

In addition, Slusher called the committee statement "complete violation of the moral fiber and moral character" of Hannah and Gray, who have taken some media criticism and fan abuse since their walkout.

"The committee, having had an opportunity to meet extensively with Leon Gray and John Hannah, could not help but find that both are outstanding young men who believe that a wrong was committed," the statement said.

Detroit stadium renovation begins

DETROIT (UPI) — The initial stage of a three-year, $15 million renovation project of Tiger Stadium will begin Oct. 31 when approximately 6,500 molded plastic seats will be anchored to the concrete in the lower deck boxes, replacing loose folding chairs.

Prices on all tickets at Tiger Stadium except those for bleacher seats will be going up $1 next year, with half the increase going to the city to help pay for the modernization and the other half to the baseball company for increased costs.

"We are going from plan to reality," said Mayor Coleman A. Young of Detroit, which now owns Tiger Stadium and rents it back to the Tigers. "This is an important era for the city."

A $5 million federal work relief grant for the city "requires that work begin within 90 days," said Sjrek Willem Zijlstra, Rossett Associates architect in charge of the project.

New seats will be installed while planning is made for the other phases of the renovation.

Douglass leads Classic

NAPA, Calif. (UPI) — Veteran Dale Douglass snapped out of a five-year slump with the best round he could remember in a long, long time — a six-under-par 66 — on Silverado's South Course Thursday for the first-round lead in the $200,000 Classic.

Douglass, 31, who has exempt status on the PGA tour because of a place in the top 50 moneywinners of all time, had eight birdies and two bogeys on a card of 30-36 for a one-stroke lead over Larry Ziegler and Mac McLendon.

Ziegler and McLendon also played the South Course in the opening round for their 67s. Pat Fitzsimons, Gliby Gilbert and Jeff Mitchell had 68s on the same course, considered the easier, over to two at Silverado, while Eric Jones had a 69 on the North Course and two shots off the lead.

More than a dozen players had 69s. Among them were Jerry Heard, Roger Mallibe, George Archer, Billy Casper, Art Wall and the defending champion J.C. Snead.

Tom Watson, winner of five tournaments this year who needs only $48,000 more to break Johnny Miller's single-season, money-winning record, complained of being tired and shot an even-par 72 on the South. Miller, who has a $300,000 home near the 10th green of the South Course, shot a 77 on the North layout. Miller has won this tournament — when it was the Kaiser International — twice.

Douglass said he could not remember the last time he had a round to match the 66 he shot in the opening round. "It's been a long, long time since I played this well," Douglass said. "It probably has been at least three or four years."

Douglass had five birdies on the front side, the longest a 12-footer on the par-four, 300-yard 5th. He stumbled a bit coming back, taking bogeys on the 11th and 12th, but recovered with birdies on 13, 17 and 18, making a 20-footer on the 17th, to complete the 66.

Even though he has played poorly since finishing 25th on the money list in 1971, Douglass said he never thought about quitting the tour, even though some of his closest friends were out looking for jobs for him.

"I know I have to play better than I have in recent years to stay out here," he said, "although I never have reached the point where I have quit trying. I'm working as hard on my game now as I did in the years I was winning."

Mayor blasts Pistons

DETROIT (UPI) — The Detroit Pistons "made a serious mistake" by moving out of Detroit and into the Pontiac Silverdome, Mayor Coleman A. Young said Thursday. The Pistons play their final season at the city's Cobo Arena this season, then wind up 21 years in Detroit with their move to the stadium where the Detroit Lions play football.

"We made them some serious offers," Young said, "but obviously they weren't good enough. They made a serious mistake by leaving."

"I've talked to many people about the move — people I've seen at their games — and they don't like it at all," he said.

Creighton cagers suspended

OMAHA, Neb. (UPI) — Creighton University said Thursday night four of its varsity basketball players have been disciplined by the NCAA for illegal participation in a basketball tournament this summer.

Athletic Director-Coach Tom Apke said senior Keyin Kuehl and junior John C. Johnson, both of Omaha, would be ineligible for four games while senior Jerry Newell of Chicago would miss three games and junior David Wesley, Omaha, would be ineligible for one game.

The four were among seven collegiate basketball players involved in the ineligible status investigation by the NCAA for participating in a July Creighton Preparatory School basketball tournament in Omaha.

The other players disciplined by the NCAA were Clayton Butler of the University of Colorado, Nate Phillips of Michigan State and Hughes Wilcox, formerly of Southwest Missouri, who was planning to enroll at the University of Kansas.

Jerome, WR tie; TF wins in run test

JEROME — Wood River and Jerome tied for the boys' title while Twin Falls girls took a first place Thursday in the annual J-Club cross country invitational.

Wood River and Jerome tied with 47 points each in the varsity division with Minico well back in third place at 83. Jerome's Mike Thompson avenged a loss to Filer's Brian Oelsness last week by taking the individual prize.

Brenda Falah again was first in pacing Twin Falls girls to their victory. Jerome's Becky Laist took second ahead of Twin Falls sophomore Cindy Crow.

Omaha dominated the boys' Jayvee division while Twin Falls took the first four individual places to win the girls' Jayvee portion going away.

WSU requires no added incentive for USC

By JENNY KELLNER
UPI Sports Writer

Washington State quarterback Jack Thompson doesn't need any more incentives for tonight's clash against Southern Cal, thank you.

To begin with, the Trojans own the nation's longest winning streak at 14, and the Cougars would like to continue in their giant-killing role by defeating No. 1-ranked USC.

And then there is the other streak on the line, the one Washington State would also like to break, their own, having lost to USC straight times. The Cougars last edged the Trojans in 1957, 13-12.

For Thompson, though, there is a personal goal as well.

The 6-foot-3 junior from American Samoa rides the Trojans for 210 yards through the air in last year's game, hitting 25-of-50 in a brilliant performance and pulling the Cougars into a 14-14 tie in the fourth quarter. But it was all in a losing effort as the Trojans rebounded on the legs of Ricky Bell, who ran for a Pac-8 record 317 yards and won the game 23-14.

"Everyone is really hustling, including me," said Thompson. "The whole team has been waiting for this game for a long time."

An All-Coast pick in 1976 when he threw for 2,762 yards and 20 TDs, Thompson has already passed for 831 this season and leads the conference in total offense with a 271.7 yards-per-game average. Thompson and company have already upset Nebraska (19-10) and Michigan State (23-12) on the road this year, but lost to Kansas last week, 14-12, to lower their record to 2-1.

Southern Cal leads the conference with a 1-0 record, having dumped Oregon State, and moved from second place to the top of the UPI coaches' poll with a 3-0 overall record this week after clobbering Texas Christian, 51-0, last Saturday.

"Washington State has moved the ball consistently in the first three games this year," said Robinson, noting the Cougars' 63.2 average total offense per game. "And Thompson certainly ranks with all the great quarterbacks the Pac-8 has had, like Jim Plunkett, Steve Bartkowski and Guy Benjamin."

But USC has its own offensive weapons, ranking fourth in the nation in total offense with a 504.7 average. Sophomore tailback Charles White has rushed for 424 yards on 87 carries in three games while QB Rob Hertel has completed 28-of-50 passes for 429 yards and four scores. Like Thompson, Hertel has been intercepted just four times.

The Trojans are two-touchdown favorites.

Among the other top 10 teams playing Saturday, No. 2 Oklahoma faces Kansas, No. 3 Michigan takes on No. 5 Texas A&M, No. 4 Penn State tackles Kentucky, No. 6 Colorado faces Army, No. 7 Ohio State seeks to recoup against Southern Methodist, No. 8 Texas meets Rice, No. 9 Florida tangles with LSU and

No. 10 Nebraska plays Indiana.

Michigan dropped from its No. 1 spot after stumbling through victories over Duke, 219, and Navy, 14-7 the past two weeks. The drop, however, doesn't seem to annoy coach Bo Schembechler at all — at least, not as much as it had occurred at the end of the season.

"I do find it difficult to get them motivated for Duke and Navy," he said. "But I will not have that problem Saturday. We will play hard, I know that."

Texas A&M, 3-0 like the Wolverines, is led by QB David Walker, who has thrown more times (39-27), completed more passes (18-16) and gained more yardage (261-188) than his Michigan counterpart, Rick Leach.

Rushing, however, appears to be even as Aggie halfback Curtis Eason has gained 323 yards and junior fullback Harlan Huckelby and Russell Davis have similar statistics, rushing for a total 679 yards.

Yanks' number still remains at one

By United Press International

The New York Yankees' magic number remained at one as the Cleveland Indians and Wayne Garland choked off the American League East leaders' progress with a 4-1 victory Thursday night.

Boston and Baltimore both won Thursday and trail the Yankees by three games with three games remaining. Boston defeated Toronto 7-3, and Baltimore beat Detroit 6-3.

Garland, a 20-game winner last season for Baltimore, walked three and struck out one in piling his 21st complete game of the season for a 13-19 record. Alfredo Griffin scored runs in the third and fifth innings on a fielder's choice by Larry Oliver and a single by Al Blank. A homer by Rick Manning and an error by Yankee shortstop Bucky Dent accounted for the other two runs.

New York spoiled Garland's shutout bid in the eighth when Roy White drew a one-out walk and scored on Reggie Jackson's two-out double to the right center-field fence. In other games in the American League it was Seattle 2, Texas 1 and Kansas City 6, California 2.

In the National League Montreal defeated Philadelphia 7-2. Pittsburgh downed the New York Mets 5-2 and Houston defeated Los Angeles 4-2.

The Red Sox won their sixth game in seven starts, keeping their faint pennant hopes alive, and Jim Rice, without an RBI in his last 14 games, drove in four runs with a three-run homer and a sacrifice fly. Bob Stanley threw 4 1/3 innings of hitless relief.

Ken Singleton hit a career-high 24th homer and rookie Eddie Murray drove in

TF sophs top Nampa for first victory

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls sophomores controlled the first half and posted their first victory of the season Thursday night by dropping Nampa 26-14.

Twin Falls ran up a 20-0 lead in the first half, getting its first score on the first play of the second period on a quarterback sneak by Kerry Brown. That was set up when Andy Watkins picked off a Nampa pass and returned it 23 yards to the one.

Midway through the period, Twin Falls recovered a fumble near midfield and a long pass

LA-Red series has lost its flavor

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Having already lost the National League West championship to the Los Angeles Dodgers, the Cincinnati Reds open their final three-game series of the season Friday night with statistics on their mind.

Tom Seaver needs nine strikeouts to reach 200 for the 10th season in a row.

George Foster needs four home runs to tie Hack Wilson's National League record of 56.

Pete Rose wants more hits in his countdown toward his 3,000th career hit.

Seaver will make his final start of the year against the Atlanta Braves Friday night and he figures to be extremely strikeout-minded.

by Brown carried to the one. It took four plays, however, before Brown hit Jim Merkley with a scoring flip. Brown also provided the third touchdown night and led the Astros to the victory over the Dodgers.

Nampa scored when an errant option pitch was covered by a lineman in the Bruin end zone but two plays later Twin Falls nullified that on a 20-yard pass from Brown to Jim Merkley.

A fumble at the one gave Nampa its last score late in the game.

Tom Terrific already is the only major league pitcher ever to strike out 200 batters nine seasons in a row, but he needs nine Friday night to keep that string alive.

Retired St. Louis Cardinals' pitcher Bob Gibson did it nine seasons, but not consecutively.

Granted, it may be difficult for Seaver to get his nine strikeouts, but at least his task is easier than Foster, who needs four home runs in the last three games to tie Wilson's record.

Foster, the leading candidate for National League most valuable player, clouted No. 52 Wednesday night against San Diego.

Foster just timely missed winning the Triple Crown.

More than one humorous bachelor has kept a female-type store-window dummy in his apartment to keep him company. But now such a plastic model can actually react to what the lonely fellow has to say. In the U.S. Patent Office is the official description of an electronic mannequin whose eyes light up everytime she hears her master's voice.

Phthisic is an old-fashioned word for any disease that wastes human tissue, even and including skin rash. And "kizzy" is a phonetic rendering of that word. When you say, "Don't get into a kizzy," we're alluding back to the admonition, "Don't break out in a rash." Or so contends an expert on the vernacular.

It's traditional among Canadian Eskimos to name their sled dogs in honor of departed relatives.

THICK-SHELLED EGGS
Q. "Why is it a frightened hen lays eggs with particularly thick shells?"
A. Nervous tension delays the laying process, thus permits the egg to remain longer where shell secretions build up. That's the report from an authority on tense hens.

Q. "How long does it take to apply the average tattoo?"
A. About 20 minutes. The needle goes only one sixty-fourth of an inch into the skin, moving up and down 50 times a second.

Q. "What four kinds of trees are mentioned in the old song 'Sweet Adeline'?"
A. "Fir, Yew, Eye (buckeye), Pine." Such be the humorist's reply.

SMALL TOWNS
A revival of the high school students surveyed five years ago told pollsters they intended to make their homes in small towns. Not in the cities, not in the suburbs, not out on farms. Evidently, they meant what they said. Those scholars who study the mass movements of people say the small towns are filling up to overflowing in a rapid manner. Rental property is where it's at.

Experimental program

Inmates get 'bang' out of work

MONROE, Iowa (UPI) — Four workers at the vehicle shop banged, hammered and welded bent fenders and a dented trunk in a small brick garage. Nothing appeared out of the ordinary.

But the workers were prison inmates — participants in an experimental program designed to help them prepare for life outside prison walls.

"I've always been interested in this type of work," said the lone woman in the shop. She said she only did cleaning while at the Iowa Women's Reformatory on a factory conviction.

"This is ten times better," she said. "I'm being productive while doing time. I love it so much; nothing can compare."

Jointly sponsored by the Iowa departments of transportation and social services, the program has 18 inmates employed at the vehicle shop and a renovated maintenance garage in Grinnell, where keypunch, microfilming, printing and signmaking are taught.

Inmates are selected for the program after being recommended by prison officials and screened. No one convicted of violent crimes is accepted.

Participants later are reassigned to regular state office locations, then assisted in finding private industry employment.

Program Director Dennis Tice said by Nov. 1, 36 inmates will be employed at hourly wages from $2.74 to $4.74. In contrast, institutional pay is $1.25 a day. Officials hope the higher pay will allow the inmates to support their families, pay taxes and learn financial responsibility.

"This gives them a chance to grow a little bit on a gradual basis to deal with one problem at a time," Tice said. "I don't feel the program is a godsend. It's just an opportunity for them. It's not a cure-all."

Two persons recently escaped from the Grinnell site. Officials termed the incident an expected "risk."

State legislators will decide next year on expanding the program, which is an outgrowth of concern about Iowa's crowded penal system.

"It gives people behind bars a chance to make something out of life than bars," said one inmate. "I love it. It's out of sight."

Prescription price advertising slack

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The nation's drug stores will not be doing much advertising of prescription prices, even though the Supreme Court has overturned laws preventing such ads, a government study says.

There have been only "sporadic" increases in price advertising, although there has been a "clear cut increase" in image advertising — the type which promotes a store as "discount" or "low price" without giving actual figures — according to the Federal Trade Commission staff.

"Advertising has picked up, not to the degree we might have hoped for," the staff reported to a commission meeting Wednesday. It is expected to have a recommendation soon on whether there is anything the agency can do about it.

In 1975, before the Supreme Court ruled in a case involving the Virginia Board of Pharmacy, the FTC proposed a rule which would have abolished state laws or regulations against advertising the price of prescription drugs.

At the time, the FTC said the prices consumers pay for prescription drugs can vary as much as 200 per cent in the same city. It said Americans could save up to $310 million a year on the $6.7 billion they spend for prescription drugs if price advertising were more widespread and comparison shopping a real option.

The Supreme Court ruled price advertising is entitled to First Amendment protection because of its value to the consumer, and thus a state cannot arbitrarily ban it.

The high court's ruling caused the FTC to suspend its rule making. Since then a study has been going on to determine the impact of the court decision and the FTC staff said Wednesday that study is now complete and a recommendation is forthcoming.

The staff also said it will have recommendations next year on another area of major consumer concern — the degree to which pharmacists fill prescriptions with cheaper generic or common name drugs rather than the more expensive brand names which the prescription might specify.

The staff said 22 jurisdictions now have laws allowing such substitutions, including Ohio, Illinois, New Jersey and New York, which just passed them in the past six weeks.

The laws vary greatly, however, and a study is under way to determine if pharmacists actually do substitute cheaper drugs and whether the savings are then actually passed on to the consumer.

The staff also said it would have recommendations later, with a trade regulation rule on possibility.

Merit Sparks Low Tar Boom!

'Enriched Flavor' tobacco seen as major factor in unprecedented smoker move to low tar.

Since its introduction, MERIT has become one of the most popular new cigarettes in twenty years.

A popularity largely responsible for a significant growth in low tar smoking.

The reason: 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco. Tobacco that delivers extra flavor without the usual corresponding increase in tar.

The kind of flavor smokers can switch to—and stick with.

Here are the taste-test results which show why smokers are switching to MERIT. If you smoke, you'll be interested.

Kings: 8 mg. tar, 0.9 mg. nicotine av. per cigarette by FTC Report Dec '76
100's: 12 mg. tar, 0.9 mg. nicotine av. per cigarette by FTC Method

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

Tests Prove Taste

MERIT and MERIT 100's were both tested against a number of higher tar cigarettes. The results proved conclusively that 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco does boost taste without the usual increase in tar.

Overall, smokers reported they liked the taste of both MERIT and MERIT 100's as much as the taste of the higher tar cigarettes tested.

Cigarettes having up to 60% more tar! Only one cigarette has 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco.

And you can taste it.
