

Seeking winter supply

STORING nuts for winter food supply is an important fall activity for this squirrel and others like him in Twin Falls. At this point, however, he seemed more intent on avoiding the camera lens. But he'd better step up his efforts because the first general freeze of the autumn is forecast for the Magic Valley and other Idaho areas. And after that the chill will increase until winter sets in.

Geneva door slams—almost

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan today again rejected any representation by the Palestine Liberation Organization at the Geneva peace talks — then opened the door to low-level PLO representation by saying credentials would not be checked that closely.

Dayan, scheduled to address the full U.N. General Assembly later today at the start of the third week of general debate, also reiterated to newsmen that Israeli flatly rejects the idea of any independent Palestine state.

If the Arabs insist on PLO representation at Geneva, he said, "there will be no Geneva." Then he left the door open a crack. Asked whether credentials of any Palestinians at peace talks would be closely scrutinized, for possible PLO connection, he replied "I don't think so."

"As long as they are living in the Gaza Strip or the West Bank and they say they represent the people of Gaza or the West Bank," Dayan said, "they would be acceptable to us."

What would be unacceptable, he said, would be any Palestinians coming from other countries, such as Syria or Jordan. "We want to sit down with the representatives of Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza," he said.

"But we shall not be sitting down with Palestinians living in Amman."

Israel has said it would accept Palestinian representation as part of a pan-Arab delegation at the opening of peace talks in Geneva — as long as they are not members of the PLO.

Asked whether Israel would attend Geneva talks with the PLO, Dayan said, "No, we shall not. We think that the PLO stands for their objective, to destroy Israel."

Syrian Foreign Minister Minister Abdel Halim Khaddam said earlier today, in an interview published in Beirut, that his country will boycott any Geneva conference in which the PLO is not represented.

Sunday, Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy said on a U.S. television program that without PLO "speakers" at the opening of the conference, "Geneva will not take place."

Dayan was adamant on the issue of Israel's rejection of a Palestinian state. "We don't think there is room for or need for a third state, a Palestinian state... and we do not accept it," he said.

Palestinians in the West Bank, he added, "should seek their national satisfaction in a Jordanian state." The answer, he said, rests in "living together and not by dividing the bank."

Dayan also said the cochairmen of the Geneva talks, the United States and the Soviet Union — despite their joint statement urging "the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people" be taken into consideration — could not insist on the addition of "new participants" at Geneva.

He said the only addition that Israel might agree to would be Lebanon, and then only if "all Arab countries agreed to it."

Rights unit, Irish women gain Nobels

OSLO, Norway (UPI) — The Nobel Peace Prizes for 1977 and 1978 were awarded today to Amnesty International for its worldwide fight to "defend the value of human life" and to a pair of Belfast women waging a peace movement seeking to end the violence in Northern Ireland.

The 1976 prize which had been skipped last year — was given by the Norwegian Nobel Committee to Betty Williams and Mairead Corrigan, leaders of the Northern Ireland Peace Movement.

The 1977 prize, worth $145,000, was given to the civil rights organization, Amnesty International, for its work "to defend the value of human life against humiliation, violence and torture."

Miss Corrigan, 33, and Mrs. Williams, 34, formed the "people's peace" movement in August, 1976, after a gun-and-grenade car crushed to death three young children, Miss Corrigan's nieces and nephews.

"I have had enough," she said then, "I will devote my life to bringing peace back to the streets of Belfast."

Today, Miss Corrigan broke down and wept when told she and Mrs. Williams had won the peace prize.

"It's just overwhelming," she said through sobs. "I can scarcely believe it."

"This is a tremendous encouragement for us in our work," she said. "I accept the award on behalf of those people of the world, particularly in Northern Ireland, who have worked and are working so desperately for peace."

Miss Corrigan and Mrs. Williams touched a deep chord in embattled Northern Ireland's people.

"No one outside knows what it is like to be a mother in Belfast, living in constant fear, when even to take your children shopping is to live with death," Mrs. Williams said.

The two women organized a grass-roots movement which began with "peace marches," some bitterly contested by extremist groups of both Roman Catholic and Protestant camps.

Mrs. Williams, who said she was "shattered by the news but very happy," said Monday "latest figures show that violence has dropped by 54 per cent in Northern Ireland."

Irish, Welsh, Norse among scoffers

By United Press International
Not everybody believes in Christopher Columbus.

As far as the Irish are concerned, it was their own St. Brendan the Navigator who discovered the New World sometime between 484 and 587 A.D.

A Welshman will tell you a certain Prince Medoc did the job around 800 A.D., and, of course, every Norwegian knows it really was Leif Erickson who sailed the ocean blue — about 500 years before "fourteen-hundred and ninety-two."

But the voices of such ethnic claimants will be drowned out today in a flood of parades, speeches and testimonials, all honoring the Italian sailor generally credited as the first to make the trans-Atlantic trip.

The storm dumped about 2 inches of rain on the city as the United Hispanic American Parade Committee celebrated Spain's sponsorship of Columbus' voyage 485 years ago. A second parade in the Borough of the Bronx splashed through the rain with more than 50 floats and bands under sponsorship of the Columbus Esca Alliance and the Morris Park Community Association.

The city's official Columbus Day parade — a five-hour affair covering 40 blocks along Fifth Avenue — is scheduled for today and, with a mayoral election pending next month, a flock of candidates will be among the thousands of marchers.

In Chicago, Vice President Walter Mondale will lead the annual Columbus Day parade, which will be dedicated to such Italian-Americans as Judge John Sirica and Rep. Peter Rodino, D-N.J.

Mondale also will help lay a wreath at a statue of Columbus, then attend a Mass and reception at a church in Chicago's "Little Italy."

Mondale was scheduled to serve as grand marshal for San Francisco's Columbus Day parade on Sunday, but unexpectedly withdrew at the last minute, leaving the event to about 50,000 people who lined the route to watch the floats, bands and lantern-wielders. Five unicyclists flanked Mayor George Moscone riding in 1931 Lincoln.

California's celebration continues today with the annual festival at North Beach in which Columbus' landing — off another coast, 3,000 miles away — is reenacted.

In New York, at least one iconoclast managed to make his point.

A Manhattan furniture store advertised a "Leif Erickson Day Sale."

The name of the store, appropriately enough, is "Norsk."

Admiral warns of Soviet threat

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Russians or the Cubans — or both — will become entrenched in Panama if the canal treaties are ratified, Adm. Thomas Moorer warned today.

"Do not be surprised," he said, "if this treaty is ratified in its present form, to see a Soviet and/or Cuban presence quickly established in the country of Panama."

Moorer, a retired former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, testified against the canal treaties as the Senate Foreign Relations Committee opened a week of hearings into the controversial plan to turn the canal over to Panamaby the year 2000.

But retired Gen. Maxwell Taylor, also a former JCS chairman, supported the treaties.

COSMONAUTS VLADIMIR KOVALEVOK, VALERY RYUMIN
... mission leader, engineer back to Earth today

Soyuz flight ends after linkup fails

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soyuz 25 space flight was aborted today and its two cosmonauts ordered to return to Earth barely 24 hours into their mission because of unspecified problems during an attempted linkup with an orbiting space station.

Soyuz 25 had been launched only a day before, lifting off before dawn Sunday bound for a mission many Western observers believed was intended as a space spectacular to mark the 20th anniversary of the launching of Sputnik 1 and the Nov. 7 celebrations of the 60th anniversary of the Russian Revolution.

Moscow Radio said that at 7:09 a.m. (10:09 a.m. MDT) today Soyuz 25 cosmonauts Vladimir Kovalevok and Valery Ryumin had begun automatic docking maneuvers to link up with the new Soyuz 6 space station, put into orbit on Sept. 29.

As the Soyuz reached to within 120 yards of the space station unspecified problems arose and the docking was canceled and the mission aborted.

"Because of some deviations from a planned docking regime the linkup operation was cancelled," Tass news agency said. "The crew began preparing for a return to earth."

The mission was crewed by a pair of space rookies. Lt. Col. Kovalevok, 35, the commander, is a Soviet Air Force transport pilot and a paratrooper who began cosmonaut training in 1967.

Ryumin, 38, the flight engineer, had previously worked on designing and testing new space equipment and only entered cosmonaut training in 1973.

Western observers believed that the Soyuz 25 mission was intended as a spectacular to mark the two anniversaries this month and next.

Strike idles Lockheed plants

BURBANK, Calif. (UPI) — More than 15,000 machinists went on strike today at three Lockheed Corp. plants which manufacture the L1011 TriStar jetliner, two types of Navy patrol planes and the Navy's Trident missile.

Machinists at another plant in Georgia which builds the giant C5A jet transport and the prop-driven Lockheed Hercules C130 cargo planes voted to stay off the job while negotiators continued the effort to reach a new agreement.

The strike began at 11:01 p.m. MDT at the Lockheed-California plants in Burbank and Palmdale and the Lockheed Missile and Space Company in Sunnyvale following the breakdown last week in negotiations between Lockheed and the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers.

Three hundred Lockheed employees at the Kennedy Space Center in Cape Canaveral, Fla., also joined the strike. The employees are involved in the Navy-supported Trident missile program.

A Lockheed spokesman said early today the three California plants were open and operating with management personnel and members of unions not involved in the negotiations.

He said Lockheed "is ready to negotiate and has indicated its willingness and in fact is eager to return to the bargaining table. We hope that will occur shortly."

It was the second strike by machinists to hit the aerospace industry in one week. The first was at the Boeing Aircraft Corp. plant in Seattle and virtually halted production of that firm's jetliners.

Machinists at Lockheed's mammoth plant in Marietta, Ga., voted Sunday to stay on the job with a promise from union leaders and company officials that new contract talks will resume.

"The company asked us to go back to the bargaining table and try to work out something," Local 70 President Reeves Bowen said.

The vote in Marietta was not disclosed but workers at the three California plants voted overwhelmingly Sunday to strike.

Unfavorable airbag info suppressed, paper claims

DETROIT (UPI) — The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration suppressed test results highly unfavorable to air bags and threatened reprisals against one of its scientists who tried to make them public, the Detroit News reported today.

The News, in a dispatch from its Washington bureau, quoted the scientist, Thomas H. Glenn, as saying he was "pressured by NHTSA to testify before Congress that the test results were inconclusive, but I resisted."

The News said congressional investigators found that NHTSA officials withdrew the test results Aug. 25 shortly after Glenn, who suffers from a heart condition, had placed them on the public docket — a means of making them available to interested parties.

The test results were returned to the docket a week later, but only after Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., and several other congressmen demanded they be released to the public, the newspaper said. Dingell is a vigorous foe of mandatory air bags.

The investigators also told The News that an NHTSA staff analysis evaluating the test results was "withheld from Congress until Sept. 26. By then, both the House and Senate had completed hearings on resolutions to overturn an order by Transportation Secretary Brock Adams requiring installation of air bags on some new cars in the 1985 model year."

The air bag rule will take effect Friday unless overturned by both the House and Senate.

The allegedly suppressed tests, conducted for NHTSA by Calspan, a private research firm in Buffalo, N.Y., compared the effectiveness of air bags versus safety belts in four crash collisions of cars traveling at 30 miles per hour.

None of the cadavers and dummies used as test subjects in the seat-belt-equipped cars suffered crash impacts over the injury limit set by passive restraint standards. Two of the cadavers and one of the dummies in the air bag cars would have been killed had they been living humans, the tests showed.

The News quoted congressional investigators as saying that Glenn, the NHTSA scientist, was subjected to "a systematic pattern of harassment" after he placed the test results in the public docket.

It said investigations by the House Commerce Committee and Congress General Accounting Office showed that Glenn was:

- Verbally threatened with disciplinary action by chief NHTSA legal counsel Frank A. Berndt, who told the investigators his agency still may take action against Glenn.
- Charged by NHTSA Chief Joan Claybrook with violating agency rules for entering data in the public docket and writing a draft report on the tests that was of "poor professional quality."
- Forced to withdraw a professional paper on the tests that was to have been delivered to a meeting of the Society of Automotive Engineers in Detroit.
- Accused of evading his "professional responsibilities" in a formal letter of reprimand from his superior, Kenneth Digges, chief of NHTSA's Structures Research Division.

Nevada paper sells

WINNEMUCCA, Nev. (UPI) — The sale of the bi-weekly Humboldt Sun newspaper here has been announced by majority owners Cal Sunderland and his wife.

The new owners are Mr. and Mrs. Mark McMahon of Los Alamos, N.M. who operate the Monitor Publishing Co., Inc. there.

The Sunderlands' son, Michael, will retain his minority interest and will continue as general manager and editor of the paper.

Rate hearing Tuesday

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Public Utilities Commission will hold a public hearing in Boise Tuesday on an application by Idaho Power Co. for a $20.4 million general rate increase.

Idaho Power seeks an overall increase of 17.55 percent — an average increase in residential rates of 10.65 percent and approximately 22 percent for other classes of service.

The firm also proposes to modify its residential rate structure from the present declining block rate, in which the cost per kilowatt hour declines as consumption increases.

The company seeks to impose a residential customer charge of $4 per month with no energy included, plus a flat rate of 1.77 cents.

NOGALES, Ariz. (UPI) — An estimated 700 persons in Southern Arizona have been left temporarily homeless following four days of rain which swelled the normally dry Santa Cruz River over its banks.

There were no reports of any injuries nor any immediate damage estimate in the worst flooding in Southern Arizona in five years.

Gov. Tom O'Connell has called a state of emergency for the affected areas and has put the national guard on alert.

Authorities said some 600 persons were evacuated from their homes in Nogales — the city hardest hit — as were another 100 persons in five other Southern Arizona towns.

The rain was continuing to fall overnight in the Green Valley area but there was only a 20 percent chance of rain for the Tucson area today.

Authorities said the creek river water was expected to reach Marana by this afternoon.

Schools in the Nogales and Sahuarita areas were closed today.

Rep. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz., planned to survey the flood damage by helicopter and then confer with federal officials to see what assistance they can offer.

The swollen river washed out the Avra Valley Road about a half mile from Interstate 10 and a portion of U.S. 89 near Nogales.

Nogales Mayor Arthur Doan said the flooding caused power outages and ruptured gas mains. In addition, the flooding knocked out city water pumps leaving residents without water overnight.

Church wants on-spot view of Panama

Monday, October 10, 1977 Times-News, Twin Falls, Idaho

IDAHO SEN. FRANK CHURCH LAUGHS ... then proposes panel visit Panama

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, suggested Sunday the entire Foreign Relations Committee visit Panama to clear up some concerns about the recently negotiated canal treaties.

Church proposed the trip during a television interview in which he was asked whether it would be a good idea for the chief Panamanian negotiator to testify before the Senate about differing interpretations of some treaty provisions.

"I'd much prefer to see the whole Foreign Relations Committee, after we have completed our initial hearings and during the recess, to go to Panama," replied Church, who is acting chairman of the 16-member Senate panel.

That would give the lawmakers a "firsthand view" of canal zone defenses, he said. And they could try to get "some feel of the political climate in Panama and also the attitude of other countries in the Caribbean — Colombia, Venezuela, Costa Rica and possibly some of the island governments in the Caribbean itself."

Church commented during CBS-TV's "Face the Nation" program.

He repeated that treaty language allowing the United States to intervene militarily against threats to the canal and giving U.S. ships "priority passage" through the canal in time of war needs to be clarified, possibly through a diplomatic "understanding" or addition of a "minute" to the treaties.

He also said the administration must act strongly to shift public opinion about the treaties if it hopes to win Senate ratification.

Church said the administration should stress in its public education campaign that the Joint Chiefs of Staff have endorsed the treaties and that some of the most vocal opponents in Latin America are "leftist" groups.

"I think the treaties are in deep trouble now," he said. Church said he could not confirm a Los Angeles Times report that the administration has asked key senators to propose a statement clarifying the two disputed points in the treaties. The statement would be endorsed in the near future by President Carter and Panamanian leader Omar Torrijos under the reported administration plan, the report said.

Delay on credit?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Chairman Henry Reuss of the House Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs Committee wants the administration to hold up on a proposed tax credit for home insulation until it is sure enough safe insulation materials are available.

In a letter to Energy Secretary James E. Schlesinger, Reuss said a certification by the Energy Department on adequate supplies of safe materials should be required to avoid serious inflationary effects if such materials are in short supply.

The House has approved a credit and the Senate Finance Committee was expected to act on a companion measure this week. Reuss cited a June 14 report of the Council on Wage and Price Stability that said there was "no source of readily available increased supply of home insulation products to accommodate a large increase in demand."

Sea-level route parallel

WASHINGTON (UPI) — If the United States decides to build it, a sea-level canal probably would parallel the present lock-type waterway as close as five miles to the present canal across the Isthmus of Panama.

One reason the present canal requires compartmented locks to raise and lower ships across the mountains and lakes of Panama is that when it was built in 1914 scientists feared the Pacific, which has a slightly higher sea level, would pour into the Atlantic through a straight cut, equalizing the levels at the cost of flooding seacoast cities.

The canal was completed in 1914 and now is becoming obsolescent — too vulnerable to sabotage or overt attack, and both too narrow and too shallow for the big ships — particularly tankers — of today.

Under the new treaties — which would turn the canal over to Panama in Dec. 31, 1999, but which still require Senate approval — both countries have the option until the year 2000 to build a sea level canal in Panama, one that could accommodate the largest tankers and aircraft carriers now afloat or envisioned.

One advocate of a sea level canal is Sen. Mike Gravel, D-Alaska, who worries about how the increasing flow of Alaskan oil is going to get from the Pacific to the Gulf and East Coasts at economical costs.

Scientists no longer worry about the ocean level being affected, but do have some concerns about the environmental impact of warmer Pacific water flowing into the Atlantic. Considerable studies would have to be conducted before a decision was made.

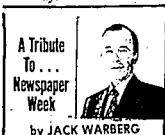

Gravel believes, however, that the transport of oil is of overriding importance. At a Senate Foreign Relations Committee hearing last week Gravel predicted that "by next spring, Alaska's North Slope will be producing oil at the rate of 1.2 million barrels per day" and at present, the only way to move the oil is through the Panama Canal.

But the big tankers that carry it cannot transit the canal. So they must transfer their oil to smaller tankers, which then pump it back into bigger tankers on the other side.

The sea-level canal idea has been kicking around for years. In 1964, President Lyndon Johnson appointed the Atlantic-Pacific Inter-oceanic Canal Study Commission which examined 30 possible routes from Mexico south to Nicaragua, Costa Rica, Panama and Colombia.

It finally recommended a route that would run almost parallel to the present Canal at distances of five to 12 miles.

Gravel said the Army Corps of Engineers estimates it would now cost about $2.9 billion to construct such a waterway.

Deposits tie denied

CALHOUN, Ga. (UPI) — Bert Lance says he knows "nothing in the world" about $1 million in federal savings deposits reportedly placed in the National Bank of Georgia while he served as budget director and NRG officials say such deposits would not have been unusual.

The Long Island, N.Y., newspaper Newsday reported that on March 31 the Atlanta bank — once headed by Lance — held $1.5 million in such deposits, while Georgia's 63 other national banks had a combined total of only $39,000. "I know nothing in the world about it," Lance said Sunday as he walked into the First United Methodist Church with his family. "I didn't have anything to do with the placement of any federal funds whatsoever. That was not within my purview."

But a Treasury Department spokesman said Sunday Newsday might have been "comparing apples and oranges."

Evictions proposed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The current issue of Washingtonian magazine proposes evicting Congress and the Supreme Court from the nation's capital because "no city should have more than a single branch of government inflicted on it."

It proposed moving the court to Los Angeles and Congress to Hannibal, Mo.

"One branch of government is enough: no city should have more than a single branch of government inflicted on it," the magazine said. "The burden should be shared around the country. Keep the presidency. Move the Supreme Court to Los Angeles — to work on their image. And slip Congress to Hannibal, Missouri."

Farmers suffer in abundance

JAMES L. KILPATRICK

Here in the Midwest, corn and wheat farmers are suffering from an old agrarian ailment: The best of times and the worst of times turn out to be all the same thing. Nebraska growers have tremendous crops this year — and they're losing their slivers.

It is an immemorial custom, to be sure, for farmers to complain of hard times. Farming would not be farming any other way. But the grumbling this autumn is louder than usual. Inflationary forces have pushed up the price of everything the farmer has to buy: the insupportable levels of supply and demand have pushed down the price of what he sells. Scores of marginal farmers are giving up. On a recent Sunday, the Omaha World-Herald carried six columns of classified ads under the heading of "farms for sale."

Farming is just about everything out here. All day long and well into the twilight, farm machines like discursars, crawl clumsily across the chocolate fields. The beasts devour the dead corn, spilling allage from their long ungainly necks; their yellow headlight eyes search the dark land. For men and machines, farming is a task that knows no end.

In most years the task is financially rewarding. This year the figures tell a different story. It costs a Nebraska farmer from $1.50 to $3, depending upon various factors, to produce a bushel of corn. The University of Nebraska says $2.10 is a fair average. But the average price received by the farmer is headed toward $1.23. With every bushel he produces, he goes a little deeper in the hole.

The sun and the rain were too good to the farmer this season. Nebraska's average corn yield in 1976 was 83 bushels an acre. This year it increased to an even 100. The farmer who got 8,300 bushels off his 100-acre spread in 1976 got 10,000 bushels in 1977, but he raised no cries of jubilation. The '77 crop was worth $18,500; the '77 crop may have a market value of $12,300. Meanwhile, the price of all those dinosaur machines keeps going up.

There is talk of a general strike, but few persons take the talk seriously. A couple of thousand disgruntled growers went to Pueblo, Colo., a few weeks ago to give Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland a hard time. Bergland had some warm sympathy for them, and some cold advice also: Forget the strike talk. He wants Midwestern growers to reduce their production in 1978, and store-tho-grain-they-can't sell now. This too will pass.

The country radio stations crackle with gloomy predictions. A state senator says one of every ten Nebraska farms will be sold a year hence. The papers carry ads for farm auctions in Hastings, Norfolk, Atkinson, Wayne and Grand Island. When these topics get exhausted, a hailstorm or a few tornadoes come along. Country living ain't no sweet-smellin' bed of new-moon hay.

Yet the wonderful thing about this region is that nothing really chills the Midwesterner's love of his land. This correspondent happened to wander through Nebraska just as the 50th annual Ak-Sar-Ben livestock exposition was under way. The papers were filled with photographs of the 4-H winners. A 15-year-old named Kevin Mobley and produced the grand champion Hereford. A pleasant feature story dealt with 11-year-old Shelly Olson of Millard, the fifth of the Don Olson children to enter prize-winning Herefords.

You are never going to discourage these young people. Many of them will go off to college, and some of them will yield to the allure of urban life, but the pattern of family farming changes little year by year. In the worst of times, the emigration rate is higher: More sons go off to the city to sell cars or real estate or insurance. Things improve, and they tend to drift back. Farming demands immense capital these days, and not only capital; farming has become a highly skilled profession in which the inefficient producers get played under. An Eastern visitor listens to the grumblings, sympathizes with the low prices, and understands the economic woes. But a visitor is more deeply impressed by the rich land, and by the insatiable machines, and by the faces of the 4-H youngsters. The prairie people have survived wars and plagues, and through further autumns as far ahead as the eye can see.

Washington turns back to basics

© N.Y. Times Service

WASHINGTON — A big change has come over Washington in the last couple of weeks, and as Henry Kissinger wisely cracked in Chicago the other day, "You have to give Bert Lance credit." After being preoccupied for months with personalities, bank balances, filibusters and other trivialities, the Capitol of the United States is finally taking again about the fundamental problems of national and world politics.

JAMES RESTON

This hasn't lowered the noise level, but it has changed the subject and raised the debate to more serious discussion of military strategy; Panama, the Middle East, and trade abroad; and to energy policy, law, welfare, education and Social Security reform at home.

President Carter has been in New York, looking at the tragic decline of the South Bronx and even the decline of the United Nations Organization on the East River. He reported some startling facts, and proposed some challenging remedies:

"World-wide military expenditures," he said, "are now in the neighborhood of $300 billion a year. Last year, the nations of the world spent 60 times as much — 60 times as much — equipping each soldier as we spent on educating each child."

"We know," he added, "that by the year 2000, nuclear power reactors could be producing enough plutonium to make tens of thousands of (atomic) bombs every year. Unless we establish a code of international behavior in which the resort to violence becomes increasingly irrelevant to the pursuit of national interests, we will crush the world's dreams for human development."

"Therefore," he concluded, "the United States is willing to go as far as possible, consistent with our security interests, in limiting and reducing our nuclear weapons. On a reciprocal basis, we are willing now to reduce them by 10 percent, or 20 percent, even 50 percent. Then we will work for further reductions to a world truly free of nuclear weapons."

Meanwhile, the U.S. energy secretary, James R. Schlesinger Jr., was in Paris telling the 19 member countries of the International Energy Agency that unless they work together on the energy crisis, they would face "a degree of political and social unrest (in the United States) of the kind we did not even see in the 1930's at the height of the Depression. On the solution of this problem," he concluded, "rests the future of our free societies."

President Carter is at a critical point in his young administration now, partly because he has made some tactical errors and partly because of too freely about his objectives without thinking of the consequences, particularly in the Middle East. But he speaks in his own way to the main points of confronting every problem, at home and abroad and compromising with everybody, if possible.

No President in recent memory has invited to his house more critics from the Congress, the press, or from abroad than Carter. He held more press conferences, or answered more questions. He saw the Majority Leader of the Senate, Robert Byrd of West Virginia, almost every other day on the Lince problem and the energy crisis. He listened to the Republican leaders on Lince, Panama, and relations with the Soviet Union and Israel, without much success, but he was kept in touch with them all.

In the process, Carter has taken on almost every powerful lobby in Washington — the pro-Israel lobby, the labor lobby, the anti-Soviet lobby, the oil and big business lobby. They are watching him very carefully, remembering that, when opposed in the past, he has been reticent on economic issues, and even, facing the Soviets on the Helsinki Agreements, toned down his propaganda on human rights.

Carter's reaction to all this is very interesting. The more he is attacked, the tougher he gets. He has tried to compromise with everybody, without much success, but having been rebuked by Prime Minister Begin of Israel, and, as he believes, insulted by the Democratic candidate for Mayor of New York, Edward Koch, he speaks all the more to the larger world issues of arms control, energy conservation, and accommodation with Soviets.

All this has created a storm in Washington and other world capitals, but Carter has insisted on facing up to what he regards as the central questions. He was less a few weeks ago in the Lince problem, but now he is risking his judgment on the control of arms, on accommodations with the Western Allies and the Soviets, and a new partnership with the other nations of this hemisphere on Panama.

Panama is a dicey gamble, but at least, Carter is now dealing with the major issues of the next generation.

House circumvention in treaty consideration

By MILES BENSON

© Newhouse News Service

WASHINGTON — In 1929, the United States gave by treaty a 10-foot strip of land along the Red River in Minnesota to a Chippewa Chief named Moose Dung.

The House of Representatives was not asked to approve the transfer of federal land to Moose Dung. Seventy-eight years later, the Moose Dung deal and another that gave away 43 gallons of whiskey are among the old Indian treaties the Carter administration is citing as precedents for the treaty transfer of the Panama Canal to the government of Panamanian strongman Omar Torrijos without House approval.

"That's how flimsy their position is," Rep. John Murphy (D-N.Y.) warned on Wednesday before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, which is holding public hearings on the treaties.

Murphy, chairman of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, told the senators he opposes the treaties "in their present form." He also presented an 18-page legal brief challenging the claim by Attorney General Griffin Bell that the Canal Zone and the canal itself may be transferred to Panama by treaty without House approval.

Wetherell proposal

Taking politics out of the AG's office?

TWIN FALLS — If Mike Wetherell has his way, he'll be the last Democratic attorney general ever elected in Idaho.

It's not that Wetherell plans a coup d'etat or a return to hereditary monarchy — though some Republicans mutter darkly that as a Democrat he's capable of this (and more) — it's just that possibility of removing the attorney general's office from the partisan ballot and placing it on the non-partisan ballot.

Wetherell is proposing something — some would say impossible — surgery on the state's governmental system. The attorney general is elected by voters of legal questions, each potentially a "political" bombshell capable of rocking the state. In this context, requiring an attorney general to conduct his duties without "politics" would be like ordering Marcus Welby to remove an appendix without cutting any skin.

What's more, Wetherell's suggestion itself smacks just a bit of election year speech-making. Idaho Democrats have never forgiven Republican Wayne Kidwell for capturing the AG's office in 1974, and tend to interpret his every action as motivated by a drive for reelection.

Just last week Boise Democrats noticed Kidwell had switched from Vitalis to the dry look and immediately issued a press release attributing the change to Kidwell's seeking the drought vote.

Forgotten in this plus Democratic breast beating is the not too distant memory of Attorney General Tony Park. A Democrat, Park lost his office to Kidwell for exactly the same charge now leveled at the Republicans — excessive political meddling in what most voters felt should be non-political events. Park's heavy-handed politics extended even into the state's effort to reduce drug abuse, crippling that program before it could achieve success.

Kidwell supporters need only smirk and whisper "Parks Nares" should they wish to lessen the crescendo of Democratic criticism now directed at the Attorney General.

Still, beneath the electioneering found in any campaign, Wetherell is making a significant proposal worthy of examination. Seven states have agreed with his contention that the AG's office is not the place for rough and tumble partisanship. In Alaska, Hawaii, New Hampshire, Wyoming, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania the attorney general is nominated for his post by the governor and confirmed by one or both houses of the state legislature. In Tennessee, the AG is appointed by the Justices of the supreme court.

In each state arguments are heard similar to those now advanced by Wetherell. By keeping the attorney general from the necessity of running a partisan campaign the chances are reduced, a candidate will enter the office beholden to a particular bloc of voters or special interests to whom he might have turned for campaign contributions. Such a procedure, it is argued, gives an attorney general increased freedom of movement, lessening the chance he will seek the office merely as a stepping stone to other offices. Most importantly, placing the position above the din of electioneering will focus the race on the actual qualifications of the candidates — in the long run producing better candidates.

The other side of the coin is that a large majority of states select their attorneys general the same way Idaho does — by direct-vote from a partisan ballot. And in those states the following arguments are raised in defense of the status quo:

— Removing the attorney general from party labels doesn't mean an end to partisanship. Candidates carry their own prejudices into the office, and claiming otherwise is naive.

— An attorney general formulates political — thus public — policy as much as any other state official. He should, therefore, be subject to the will of the voters affected by these policies.

Mike Wetherell is one of the better candidates Democrats have ever advanced for attorney general. Realistic, intelligent, and politically astute, on paper he has the qualifications for seeking the post. A third generation Idahoan and former Washington, D.C., confidant of Sen. Frank Church, he has as well the personal contacts with which to build a campaign organization. He may never succeed in cleaning the attorney general's post of politics; but it is likely he will focus attention on the position — producing a much needed examination of this important but often mis-understood office.

DAVID MORRISSEY

The young Boise attorney has opened his campaign for state attorney general with a startling suggestion likely to cause considerable comment in the next months.

To quote Wetherell, from a speech to Magic Valley Democrats earlier this summer, "the office of attorney general is far too important to put off to be constantly criticized on the basis of partisan politics. I think we should examine the

Congratulations

Editor, Times-News:

I want to congratulate the Morgan family on their courage in opening the Rogerson Restaurant and Golden R dining room.

Boarded-up windows would be such an eyesore for a place as beautiful as the Downtown Mall.

Dinner in the Golden R room is a truly good evening out. Good service, excellent food, lovely atmosphere — and inexpensive.

I have no axe to grind, other than public pride as an interested citizen and downtown supporter — hoping to see big empty buildings.

I don't even know the Morgans, but I feel it is in the best interests of all of us to do what we can to help them make a "go" of their undertaking.

Fund harassment

Editor, Times-News:

I am writing as the secretary for the Twin Falls Municipal Association which met in Twin Falls last Friday.

At the meeting, I was instructed to write to the newspaper and tell the community that we objected, as an association, to the harassment by some religious group which was selling flowers at the Twin Falls Fair and seeking a donation for their organization. That group, whoever they were, is not represented in our Twin Falls association and we object to that method of soliciting funds on the fair grounds.

Also we would call on the city of Filer and the fair board to try and find ways by which this activity can be controlled in the future, so that the fair can be an enjoyable experience and not one of harassment.

Save the canal

Editor, Times-News:

We have a definite interest in the movement under way to give the Panama Canal to a dictator, who acquired his position at the head of the Panamanian government at gun point and who if not a Communist, definitely counts his friends among Communists.

The Panama Canal was acquired in an equitable manner by payment to the French, Panama, and Columbia governments and payments to property owners on which the canal is built.

The United States in the past has honored its treaties with others. Unless we require others to honor their treaties with us we shall soon find ourselves in deep trouble.

Ellsworth Bunker and Sol Linowitz do not, indeed, represent the people of these United States, or the best interest of this country, in the proposed new treaty with General Omar Torrijos.

We do understand support no change in the original agreement with the Panama government.

Cable protest

Editor, Times-News:

In this modern day and age of neutron bombs, space shuttles and computer technology one would think that a simple schedule of television programming could be followed.

An excellent example of what many frustrated Magic Valley viewers encounter happened Saturday evening, Sept. 10, when the "Miss American Beauty Pageant" could be seen simultaneously on channels 2, 5, 6, 7 and 11.4 having nothing against "Beauty Contest," but why on five stations at the same time. Aren't we entitled to somewhat more of a selection?

I'm sure most of the blame falls on those responsible for operating and managing the local CABLE-VISION company, who for years have failed up more programs than one can count. It seems time for all of us to draft and circulate petitions to the Federal Communications Commission complaining about the apparent lack of care and concern that our local CABLEVISION company has for its subscribers. Hopefully this will help clean-up their act.

Fire observations

Editor, Times-News:

Regarding the conflict between the Firemen and the city manager of Twin Falls.

I am like the two philosophers who were engaged in deep discussion as to where the sun goes when it sets. They pondered the enigma, all through the night — then it dawned on them.

I am concerned that the city and the firemen agreed to "fire-finding" only to have the city reject the findings of the fact finders.

What would be the reaction of your newspaper if the firemen had rejected the panel?

Perhaps it is time for the employers of Twin Falls, and especially the city to be fair in their dealings with the employees.

Prices of all things are as high or higher here in Twin Falls as they are in Idaho, still, we must accept less wages and conditions.

Let the record show that I for one feel the time has come to become one of the cities in Idaho and not that low-wage, high cost city we now have.

Spanish police jail terrorists

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — Spanish police fighting increasing political violence have arrested more than a score of suspected leftist and rightist terrorists in separate raids in Madrid, Benidorm and Barcelona.

Police in Madrid and Benidorm Sunday arrested 16 suspected members of the leftwing guerrilla group GRAPO, government officials said, including Manuel Perez Martinez, the band's chief, and other members of the executive committee. Arms, explosives and cash were seized in the raids.

In Barcelona, police arrested nine suspected right-wing extremists implicated in the bombing two weeks ago of a satirical magazine, "El Papus." One person was killed and 15 wounded in that attack.

In northern Spain, the Basque separatist group ETA took responsibility for the submachine-gun-slashing Saturday of Augusto Unzueta-Barrenechea, president of the Vizcaya provincial council, and his two police bodyguards. ETA attempted to justify its action by saying the killing "cannot de-stabilize democracy because in the Spanish state no democracy exists. We have the same military dictatorship as always but now it wears a smile."

The funeral for the three victims was held Sunday evening in the packed Santa Maria Church in the Basque town of Guernica.

Outside the church, right-wing extremists shouted "The army to power." Premier Suarez resigned, the country is going to ruin, and gave the fascist-style, straight-arm salute.

On the political front, Premier Adolfo Suarez and 30 parliamentary leaders wound up the first round of a "summit meeting" aimed at finding a joint solution to Spain's economic problems. Another gathering Thursday will cover political questions.

A joint statement said the government and political leaders, including Communist Santiago Carrillo and Socialist Felipe Gonzalez, agreed on measures "that should permit the re-establishment in two years of fundamental balance in the Spanish economy."

After the meeting Carrillo said "Now comes the time for sacrifices, but prospects are that in a year or a year and a half the situation will improve," he said.

Greeks set off bomb

ATHENS (UPI) — A Greek extremist group exploded a bomb outside the U.S. NATO Club near Athens airport early today, but the only damage was broken glass, police said.

A police spokesman said an explosive device went off in the yard of the club which serves non-commissioned officers attached to the American facility at Athens airport.

"The explosion was powerful and shattered four window panes, but caused no other damage or injuries," a police spokesman said.

An American Embassy spokesman said there were about 100 people in the club for a rock concert.

World

Discontent sparks riots

BERLIN (UPI) — Western diplomats say bitterness among East German youth over the high cost and low quality of scarce consumer goods helped spark rioting in East Berlin.

The bitterness is reflected in a new joke that has East German President Erich Honecker telling his wife after a trip to West Germany that it was just like home — "You can get anything you want there for West German marks," he said.

Western diplomats say the joke reflects worker demands for more and better consumer goods of the type available only in special government-run shops catering to Western visitors and East Germans with hard currency. Diplomats believe such discontent probably helped spark rioting late Friday on Alexander Platz at the end of a celebration marking the 20th anniversary of the founding of the German Democratic Republic.

Up to a thousand youths clashed with several hundred police, who used water cannons and nightsticks to clear the huge square, where bands earlier had played for East Berliners who lined up to buy wurst and ice cream.

The brawl quickly took on political overtones and some demonstrators shouted, "Russians out!"

US, Palestinians assailed

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — The commander of Christian forces in southern Lebanon said today the United States "forced" a cease-fire on his side and accused the Palestinians of preparing a surprise attack.

Major Saad Hadad said the guerrillas have moved artillery pieces into the border region, including 130mm and 122mm howitzers and 100mm recoilless rifles, and increased their forces from 6,000 to 10,000 men since the American-mediated truce took effect last month.

Hadad criticized the U.S. role in engineering the agreement between the Palestinians and Israeli-backed Christians.

"The cease-fire was forced on us," he said.

Hadad made the comments to Israeli military correspondents who toured the battle area more than a week ago under escort by an Israeli officer.

"I have no doubt the terrorists are planning to open a surprise attack on us," Hadad said. "It is impossible to trust them. We are familiar with their ways."

Helsinki reports studied

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (UPI) — The 35 nations of the European Security Review Conference today began studying military questions and an expected call by the Soviet Union for a pledge against the first use of nuclear weapons.

The delegates reviewing the 1975 Helsinki agreement on European security and cooperation began a week of closed-door meetings on the Helsinki agreement's

"first basket," which deals with military and other "confidence-building measures," such as prior notification of troop movements.

In their opening statements last week, several Western countries accused the Soviet bloc of violating the document's human rights provisions. The Soviets warned against Western interference in the internal affairs of other countries.

Hostage's appeal answered

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — The West German government in a message today to the kidnapers of industrialist Hanns-Martin Schleyer answered the appeal he made last week in letters to newspapers, security sources said.

The message was sent to Geneva lawyer Denis Payot, who is acting as an intermediary, for relay to the kidnapers, the sources said. The contents were not disclosed. But the government relaxed its news blackout to allow security officials to disclose that the message answered the open letter sent by Schleyer Oct. 6 and published two days later.

The sources described the message as "significant."

Ferry workers on strike

VICTORIA, British Columbia (UPI) — Striking ferry workers meet today to hear their union follow orders to withdraw support for an illegal walkout that has cut nearly all passenger service along the coast since last Friday.

"We have set up a series of meetings for tomorrow morning in compliance with the Labor Relations Board," Peter Blighly, vice-president of the B.C. Ferry and Marine Workers Union, said Sunday.

"It requires us to tell the members that the strike is illegal and no longer has the authorization of the union," he said.

All employees walked off the 25 provincial government-owned B.C. Ferry Corporation vessels at midnight Thursday in a contract dispute after voting to ignore a three-month cooling-off period ordered earlier in the day by Labor Minister Allan Williams.

Exports decline

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — The National Federation of Coffee Growers says Colombian coffee exports fell by 1.7 million sacks over the past year due to declining consumer demand.

Although Colombian coffee exports fell between September 1976 and September 1977, the value rose by $59 million in the same period, the federation said in a report this weekend.

The increase was due to the sharp jump in prices that made a pound of coffee worth $3.38 in New York in May. The price has now fallen to $1.80 a pound in the unstable market of the past four months.

Selling coffee in the United States and Europe is very difficult now, industry sources said. In contrast to the strong demand only a few months ago.

The 1975 frost that hit Brazil, the major coffee supplier, caused a scarcity. Colombia, the world's second-largest coffee exporter, cashed in on the coffee boom gaining an extra $1.5 billion.

More rains in N. Italy

TURIN, Italy (UPI) — Weathermen predicted more heavy rains over northwestern Italy today where flooding has killed at least 15 persons, destroyed millions of dollars in property and driven hundreds from their homes.

Officials reporting the casualties Sunday said 13 of the victims died in the Piedmont region alone.

The worst-hit area was the hilly region between Turin and Genoa on the coast. Rail lines and highways throughout the stricken region were cut by collapsing bridges and mud-slides.

Torrential rainstorms also were reported as far south as Calabria at the southern tip of the Italian mainland and in southern Sicily.

Emergency plan "WEEP"

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, says the government has "seriously overestimated" its ability to increase natural gas supplies for the winter.

"Another cold winter is on its way and we are not ready for what it may bring," said Muskie in a speech for Senate floor today.

In warning against energy shortages, Muskie said experts predict a winter "significantly colder than normal, although not as cold as last winter." — the coldest in 60 years.

Muskie's criticism was based on a study by the Senate intergovernmental relations subcommittee, which he heads. He said it showed the administration would do "too little, too late" to meet a winter energy shortage.

The administration's winter energy emergency plan has the acronym WEEP. Muskie's charges mean it may leave Americans crying for gas.

Siamese twin 'critical'

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (UPI) — Ferra Hope, the only Siamese twin born with conjoined hearts to survive more than six hours after surgical separation, was in "extremely critical condition" Sunday night.

The 3-week-old child suffered severe pneumonia and developed kidney failure during the weekend.

A spokeswoman at the University of Arkansas Medical Center said the child was in "extremely critical condition" Sunday night.

Ferra Hope was separated from her twin, with whom she shared a torso and conjoined hearts Oct. 1. Her twin died during the operation. She is the first infant to survive such an operation for more than six hours.

"There's been no change in her condition, she's still hanging on," said Bev Wood, information officer at the medical center.

Ferra Hope was in critical condition for several days after the operation but steadily improved and was removed from the critical list Friday. Her condition worsened when she developed pneumonia and kidney failure.

Dr. Steven Golladay, surgeon at the center, said the seven-pound infant had two legs, one normal arm and a "prayer" arm and is paralyzed on one side. Golladay said the child had a number of multiple organs. "The twins had shared the 'prayer' arm, a third arm with two hands attached to the wrist in a praying position."

Drummond attempts climb

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Edwin Drummond almost made it this time, and even though he got arrested, the police shook his hand and wished him well.

Drummond, 32, an experienced mountaineer and sleepwalker, has a penchant for scaling the outside of tall buildings. Over the weekend he launched his second assault on the 38-story Trans-samerica Pyramid building and made it all the way to the 21st floor before police and firemen forced him to quit.

A cohort, Robert Zipporov, was seized and yanked through a window on the 11th floor. In January, Drummond, accompanied by his wife and a friend, made it only as far as the seventh floor before police forced him inside.

He shone a searchlight from a helicopter while agents below searched the brush and flushed out the 19 illegal aliens one mile northeast of the San Ysidro border crossing.

"You're getting pretty good with that light," the helicopter pilot told his boss at the end of the 70-minute flight.

STUART, Fla. (UPI) — Lauren S. McManamon, a 24-year-old sky diver from Miami, was hospitalized in "good" condition Sunday after surviving a 1,500-foot fall when her parachute malfunctioned during a practice jump. Miss McManamon's fall during a practice jump was slowed at first when her parachute became entangled with that of another sky diver.

DEAR ABBY: We recently had my mother-in-law over for dinner. Afterwards she decided to show me how to give Virgil (my husband) a back rub because he'd been having some back problems.

I really wasn't in favor of it, but since Virgil didn't object, I didn't.

She ordered him to undress and lie face down on the bed with only a sheet over him. Then she massaged his neck and shoulders, and worked her way down his back. When she got to his lower back she removed the sheet and started kneading his bare backside! That's when I left.

Bare basics

She yelled, "You can stay. Nothing is showing," but I didn't return until I knew the massage was over. When she asked why I left, I told her I didn't think it was proper to watch while a 60-year-old woman gave her 40-year-old son a massage with no sheet on him. She insisted there was nothing wrong with it. Meanwhile Virgil didn't open his mouth, but after she left he said maybe he should have stopped her.

Now Virgil's mother is "terribly hurt" because I didn't stay for the demonstration. (She is not a professional masseuse or therapist—she's just a mother.) What's your opinion of this whole episode?

VIRGIL'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Virgil's mother probably meant well but she shouldn't have gotten down to the bare basics. Having told both her and your husband what you thought of the "demonstration," you should now forget it.

DEAR ABBY: My mother and I disagree on something we hope you can settle for us.

I am a beautiful and own my own shop. My mother insists on paying me when I do her hair—in fact, she even forces a tip on me.

I feel that she shouldn't pay me unless she is taking an appointment I could have filled. We would like your opinion.

PROFESSIONAL

DEAR PRO: I would not accept money from my mother for a personal service. "Force" it back on her—tip included.

DEAR ABBY: For years I have been wanting to tell you this. A friend of mine has a 14-year-old daughter who became pregnant. This mother was so upset she nearly went out of her mind, and she actually considered murdering her daughter and committing suicide.

Then she read the following advice in your column: "It's easy to love those who always do as we wish...the difficult part is to love those who do not. The child who is the least lovable needs your love the most."

Her mind cleared and she came to her senses. The daughter had the child, went back to school and received her high school diploma. The mother and daughter cared for the child, and eventually the daughter met and married a fine young man, and she kept her child.

Of course this was nearly 20 years ago, but I thought you would appreciate knowing how far-reaching your advice is.

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb — I have been unable to find the proper value for triglycerides anywhere. What is the normal amount?

Dear Reader — It depends upon the method and the state of the patient when studied. In general if the patient is in the fasting state — not having eaten for at least 12 hours — the level should be below 150 milligrams in 100 milliliters of blood.

Remember that triglycerides are simply fats. The amount of fat in the blood varies greatly with what you have eaten recently. Fat is slowly absorbed and slowly cleared from the blood stream compared to sugar. It is much more affected by a recent meal than your cholesterol level. One reason you are having trouble finding normal values is because of its variability.

The triglyceride level will also fall if you exercise vigorously. The amount of exercise in the preceding 48 hours may affect your triglyceride level.

The triglyceride level alone has not been found to be as useful as the cholesterol level in predicting the risk of heart attacks. When the size of the particles formed by the triglyceride-cholesterol combination is considered, the risk calculation for people over 50 can be improved. In that age group the amounts of particles of different sizes become more important than the cholesterol level alone. Those who want more information about triglycerides can send for The Health Letter number 1-2, Cholesterol, Triglycerides, Blood Fats, Atherosclerosis. Send $5.00 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Dear Dr. Lamb — As a young child I acquired a habit of putting my forefinger in my navel and digging as a way of going to sleep at night. When I was about 10 and in the hospital with pneumonia a young nurse told me if I didn't stop doing that I would get cancer. This has plagued me day and night. I might add that I didn't stop doing this. I am now a mature woman of 57 and the mother of 10 healthy children.

I am so worried because I have strange feelings and shooting sensations around my navel and the lower part of my body. My doctor says you can't get cancer of the navel. Could you give me your views of this? I'm so frightened of the disease but I don't understand cancer at all.

Dear Reader — Your letter is a good example of why people should never try to change a child's habits by frightening them of some dire consequence, other than a good paddling if warranted. That young nurse unwittingly planted the seed for you to use in responding to your anxiety reactions.

Cancer is simply cell growth that has gone berserk allowing uncontrolled abnormal growth. For example: liver cancer is a rapid disorganized growth of liver cells. Many factors can stimulate the wild growth.

Why don't you ask your doctor to have you see a psychiatrist for some professional counseling. If you can get at the root of your real anxiety then its manifestation, excessive fear of cancer, may be controlled.

Alice, at 80, may be queen

FAVETTEVILLE, N.C. (UPI) — At 80 years of age, Alice Pearce doesn't look like a college junior, much less a candidate for homecoming queen.

But according to tradition, the homecoming queen at Methodist College is supposed to represent school spirit. And Mrs. Pearce says she has plenty of that.

She holds down the jobs of great-grandmother, grandmother, mother and a part-time worker for the Fayetteville Symphony besides her work toward a degree in English. Her activities have given rise to a rumor that she has already burned out two heart pacemakers.

"I'm on my second pacemaker, but it's not because I burned the first one out," she said during a short break in her biology lab.

Her 18 opponents in the competition are all young enough to be her granddaughters, but the contest has no talent or beauty competition, and Mrs. Pearce figures that gives her an edge.

"I tell you if they did it on beauty, I wouldn't have a chance," she said Wednesday. "When they mentioned to me it was popularity, I thought I had a chance. I feel highly honored."

Mrs. Pearce said she decided to enter on the urging of the students.

"I think they are all my friends," the mother of 4, grandmother of 12 and great-grandmother of 3, said. "There are nearly 800 here and they all speak to me. I can't remember all their names, but I know them when I see them."

The new queen will be named during a soccer game Saturday, and Mrs. Pearce will be escorted by Methodist graduate David Langston, 25, a student at a seminary in Washington, D.C.

"I've known him four or five years," she said.

If she wins, Mrs. Pearce says she plans to take part in all the things expected of a homecoming queen, such as dances, bonfires, and pep rallies.

She said if she does win the voting, which took place Wednesday, it may have something to do with her son, Dr. Richard Pearce, president of the college.

"He's a big man on campus, you know," she tells folks with a grin.

Mom, baby go to work together

SUSAN LANGE, WITH 13-MONTH-OLD DAUGHTER, AT WORK ... boss says arrangement is OK with him

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — Visitors to California Assemblyman John Vasconcellos' office in the state Capitol are careful not to trip over the toys or gaze at the baby crawling over the lawbook.

The toy belongs to Susan Lange, Vasconcellos' administrative assistant, who refuses to leave her 13-month-old daughter, Sierra, with a babysitter. So, she brings her to work.

"Some people thought it was unfair to the baby and some said it was inappropriate because this is a place of business, but I'd rather have her with me than with a babysitter," she said.

Mrs. Lange, who has worked with Vasconcellos for 5½ years, said she asked her boss about the unusual arrangement and he decided to try it out.

"He really stuck his neck out on this one," she said. "He could have gotten a lot of hassle from his constituents."

Mrs. Lange said she works on extra two hours by arriving at work early and by passing lunch to compensate for the lost time she takes to care for Sierra.

"This way, the taxpayers can't say I'm taking their money for babysitting, because skipping lunch adds extra hours to my day," she said.

"Having Sierra here has been a wonderful experience for me," said secretary Dolores Saint. "It's been so long since I've seen a little one grow up, and it's nice to know that one of the fringe benefits of coming to work is getting hugs and kisses."

Mrs. Lange, whose husband is a student, feels parents should include their children more in day-to-day activities.

"Our society has really excluded children from normal life," she said. "They're supposed to be seen and not heard."

She said Sierra is so accustomed to the office it even lulls her to sleep. Sierra naps in a baby carrier on her mother's desk.

"The telephones could be ringing off the wall and she'll never wake up," she said.

Besides paying the way for a close mother-daughter relationship, Mrs. Lange thinks outsiders get some good from the arrangement.

"People come in and say it's refreshing to see a child in the middle of this hustle and bustle," she said. "In this building where decisions are made that affect men, women and children, seeing a child shakes you back to reality."

Metric plan views soug

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Hoosiers opposed to footling the bill, bugging an inch or yielding an ounce of their loyalty to the traditional English system of weights and measures may get a chance to vote "no" to the metric conversion.

State Sen. Lawrence Bost said he will introduce in the next legislative session a resolution asking for a statewide referendum on the subject.

Bost uses metric measurements in his work as a veterinarian. He wrote a resolution in the past calling for metric instruction in the Indiana school curriculum.

However, "I think we in the Indiana legislature need to know exactly the true sentiments of the public," he said in an interview.

The advisory referendum, if approved by the legislature, would be a simple "yes" or "no" vote added to the fall election ballots of 1978, he said.

The Metric Conversion Act of 1975 does not force the changeover, but is meant to ease the voluntary conversion already begun, Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., has explained.

Anti-sex abuse posters adorn buses

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Soon the following placard will adorn San Francisco's municipal buses:

"One out of every four females and males have had sexual experiences before they are 15 years old."

And the bus riders will be admonished, "Don't just clam up about it."

The sign will mark a new, all-out community campaign against sexual abuse of children — what Lois Dolan of the city's Sexual Trauma Center calls "society's best-kept secret."

Given San Francisco's population, Mrs. Dolan figures this city alone has 40,000 potential and actual victims — three times the number of child battering cases.

But last year only 150 cases of sexual abuse of the young were reported.

"Who does a child tell about such things?" she said. "How does a child tell a peer, or a family member, or a teacher — about something they don't have words for?"

"If adults can't even discuss the problems, how can they help a young person, or family, deal with an actual sexual situation?"

In recent months representatives of law enforcement, medical and social service agencies and church groups have joined in an effort to make the problem "talkable."

The campaign seeks to make the problem the number of counselors available day and night, and for the first time it will compile statistics from all agencies. Now there is no centralized reporting system.

The campaign seeks to make the problem the entire city's concern and Mrs. Dolan says it may become a model for the nation.

The statement that one out of four have had sexual experiences arises from several studies on the subject which seem to be confirmed by case workers who are asking new kinds of questions, Mrs. Dolan says.

"For generations, the doctors and the psychologists have just been walking around this problem," she says. "The professionals are blinded by their own sexual hangups."

"It is like 'the purloined letter' in front of us. It is so obvious and so pervasive that we can't see it."

Mrs. Dolan defines "a bad sexual experience" as one that traumatizes the victim, so that he or she relives the emotional pain many years afterward.

Usually it does not involve physical force, but rather an adult whose age and authority allows dominance over the victim.

Most of the offenders, Mrs. Dolan says, are relatives, not strangers hanging around the schoolyard. The offenders are seductive parents, uncles, aunts, cousins and grandfathers.

And the offenses do not necessarily involve penetration. They also include hand-genital and mouth-genital activities.

The child may consent because of an offer of candy or money, because of a need for affection or because the adult has assured them that it is "okay to do."

In cases of incest, Mrs. Dolan says a solution is not easy. A wife does not tell police because with a husband in jail, the family loses financial support, and she does not know where to seek help.

Counselors of the Sexual Trauma Center are available to listen—non-judgmentally about traumas as they happen, or as they may have happened in the past. They can refer a victim to an appropriate specialist.

Guidebook writers, thanks for nuttin'

By JOHN JUSTIN SMITH
Chicago Daily News

HELSINKI — Travel writers, especially amateurs, tend to fall into some deep ruts. They just love to speak of such as "a city of contrasts" in a "land of enchantment." Another favorite is to describe almost any metropolis as "a city of surprises."

This last cliché fits any city.

Take New York. If you can get out of that town without getting ripped off in a restaurant and insulted by a cabdriver, that's a surprise.

In Paris it's surprising if your dinner bill doesn't top $15. In Stockholm it's a stunning surprise if you pay less than $2 for a small drink.

In Bangkok a big surprise would be to go to a massage parlor and get a massage.

The big surprise in Rome would be to find that the "name brand" wristwatch the slicker on the street is trying to sell you really has some works inside the case.

In the city that calls itself "Surprising Amsterdam," the big surprise would come if you encountered a surprise, because the Dutch city with its old facades and precise canals is just what you would expect it to be.

But Helsinki? The city really was a surprise to the traveler.

Not at first. When Finnair's DC-10 from New York landed at the airport, a dozen miles north of the city, the pine woods and glimmering lakes were just what had been expected.

But a couple of days spent gawking at Helsinki turned up some things that were unexpected.

Among these:

— The Helsinki airport terminal with its acres of wooden floors so beautifully kept. Oh, we all know that Finland is noted for wood. But who would expect acres upon acres of such beauty?

— The Hotel Hesperia. We think of the Swiss, the Germans and the Austrians as being the top innkeepers. But mark down the Finns as being up with the best. The Hesperia is as clean and well run as any hotel ever seen.

— The hard drinking. Prices of liquor are way up there and even a bottle of beer costs $1.50 or so. But somehow a lot of Finns manage to find the money to do a goodly amount of drinking. "I have been drinking for four days," one wobbly man said.

"Sometimes it's necessary."

— The high prices for the superb Finnish glass-crafts and other specialties. A pair of Finnish scissors that cost $8.50 back in the United States are offered for $9 here. Window shopping, we concluded that the best buys were in silver jewelry, especially items from Lapland.

— The cleanliness. If there's any grime anywhere in town we didn't see it. The parks all look manicured and the streets, except around the waterfront market where somebody had strewn green pea pods, are without litter.

The list of surprises could go on and on... the open people, the very civilized housing area called Tapiola, the excellent cuisine, the East-meets-West architecture, the abundance of modern furniture and furnishings, some good and some ungainly...

Surprises? Sure, surprises. But none hardly touch the surprise encountered by a young woman from Texas who took a sauna bath and a swim in a hotel pool here the other day. The only other person in the pool was a man, a fairly large one, and when he got out of the water, the Texas woman found he was nude, jaybird naked. (Not unusual in Finland.)

Rudd leaving network

Chicago Daily News

Hughes Rudd, anchorman for CBS Morning News, will leave next month and be replaced by Richard Threlkeld, CBS' Rome correspondent.

Rudd, who has been with CBS Morning News for five years, will remain with the broadcast as an essayist. He also will anchor documentary series. "We wanted to keep his presence" on the broadcast, said William Small, CBS News senior vice president.

Rudd's departure from anchor is the second major change in personnel on the early morning newscast. Leslie Stahl is the new Washington anchor, replacing Bruce Morton. Threlkeld is considered a top news reporter.

The CBS broadcast trails NBC's Today and ABC's Good Morning America. The Morning News is considered the best newscast on the air.

"Is Arthur Fiedler all there is on PBS?" an associate asked in frustration.

The answer is no, but the overwhelming percentage of PBS programming is, like Fiedler's Boston Pops, safe and uninspired, although well-executed.

This blandness is infuriating. PBS programming should be daring, innovative and an attempt to advance the art of television. It generally is not.

One exception is the work of Frederick Wiseman, a cinematographer whose work can be considered art.

Schlafly may run for Senate

Chicago Daily News

CHICAGO — Phyllis Schlafly, the nation's leading, most energetic and unquestionably most vocal opponent of the Women's movement in general and the Equal Rights Amendment in particular, says that if she runs against Sen. Charles A. Percy in next year's Illinois Republican primary "it will add pep and vitality to the campaign." For which we must vie an unqualified amen.

"And although Mrs. Schlafly says she still hasn't made up her mind — 'I'm earnestly considering' — you come away from a conversation with her convinced that she's going to make the race. For which, if true, we would suggest that Percy take on an extra supply of Alka-Seltzer for the campaign.

"The (Percy) certainly is very well known," said Mrs. Schlafly, discussing a possible challenge to her senior senator. "But I've got very good name recognition in this state, too. I think it could be a very good race." If she ran, she says she could be able to marshal "a tremendous number of volunteers" in and out of the party and in addition she says she would expect to get the support of several key Downstate Republican leaders. In her years of battling ERA — she is the national chairman of "Stop ERA" — Mrs. Schlafly has built up a sizable following of women (and men). "I'm sure many of them would work for me if I were to run," she said.

She also feels that her years of service to the GOP have given her wide recognition within the party, a decided boost in a primary.

"I was president of the Illinois Federation of Republican Women from 1960 to 1961 and I also was first vice president of the National Federation of Republican women from 1964 to 1967," she was elected a delegate to the Republican Convention three times and an alternate once — and they were hot races each time," said Mrs. Schlafly, who has a master's degree in political science from Harvard and is now a third-year law student.

She last ran for a non-party office in 1970 against George Shipley for Congress in the Illinois 22d District. She got 47 per cent of the vote. "It was a dreadful year for Republicans," she said.

Mrs. Schlafly, 52, an archconservative, could generate a following among those Illinois Republicans who, over the years, have never been overjoyed with Percy's brand of liberal Republicanism. And Mrs. Schlafly's strong anti-ERA stand (she calls the proposed constitutional amendment "a fraud") is certain to appeal to some voters in a state that is very nearly divided on that stormy issue.

Mrs. Schlafly says that if she decides to challenge Percy "it would be on the issues and it just so happens that the two hottest issues are ones that I feel intensely about." One of those issues is that of the Panama Canal treaties and the other the establishment of a federal Commission on the International Women's Year.

Percy has not taken a stand on the first and as for the second, Mrs. Schlafly blames the senator for voting to establish the commission in the first place (and appropriating $5 million to pay for it) and then for serving as a commission member.

She said two recent professional polls have shown that about 60 to 80 per cent of the American people agree with her that the canal treaties should be rejected.

"It's a tremendous give-away of American property," said

Mrs. Schlafly, who speaks with a smile in her voice. "It involves a cash flow of $2.2 billion over the next 22 years to (Gen. Omar) Torrijos, a pro-Communist dictator. Giving him the canal is bad enough, but paying him to take it is quite a shock."

She also is convinced that under the terms of the treaty we will not be able to defend the canal because we: (1) can't increase the number of troops there; (2) will be required to give up half of our military bases; (3) will give up the canal zone itself and (4) will depend on a military board composed of half Panamanians and half Americans.

"All this means is the Panama Canal is indefensible for the next 22 years and after that we're out completely anyway," she said.

As for the commission on the International Women's Year, Mrs. Schlafly thinks it is "nothing more than a pressure group to push the women's liberation goals — for which the taxpayers will pay." She's also wild because of a batch of resolutions passed by the commission's Illinois group last June.

She singles out these calling for the ratification of ERA; government funded abortions, mandated abortions in all hospitals, federally supported child care centers, legislation to permit lesbians to teach in schools and to adopt children, and what she calls reverse discrimination "in which we would put women in some jobs instead of men."

The possibility of a Schlafly challenge in next spring's primary brought a guarded reaction from Percy. At a testimonial dinner the other night, he was asked if he was worried by that possibility.

"I don't think so," said Percy. "There is always a diversion in the campaign."

Mrs. Schlafly would, indeed, be a diversion — a lively one.

Panama question opens to public

©Newhouse News Service
WASHINGTON — The Senate Foreign Relations Committee this coming week will throw open its doors to "public" witnesses who have opinions on the proposed Panama Canal treaties — then the panel plans to shelve the historic issue until January.

"Since the hearings began Sept. 26, the committee has listened to administration advocates who say giving away the canal to Panama now is as important as constructing it was — and from congressional critics who would kill the treaties with amendments, reservations or a simple Senate refusal to ratify.

For the next five days witnesses representing every hue in the political spectrum will parade their own views, moderate and extreme, on the subject of the canal treaties.

Grandstand witnesses scheduled for Monday were Admiral Thomas Moorer, Admiral Elmo Zumwalt, and Gen. Maxwell Taylor. Moorer and Taylor are both former chairmen of the Joint Chiefs of staff and they take opposite positions on the treaty — Moorer opposed, Taylor in favor. Zumwalt, former Navy chief of staff, is a treaty supporter.

After the hearing, the committee will question a group of Canal Zone residents.

On Tuesday, a panel of Latin American experts will offer academic and historical insights into the pacts. Prof. Jorge Dominguez of the Center for International Affairs at Harvard; Dr. Abraham Lowenthal of the Wilson Center here, and Prof. Donald Dozer of the University of California at Santa Barbara.

Following the professors will come representatives of the right-wing Liberty Lobby, the Puerto Rico Democratic Party, the Canal Zone Non-Profit Public Information Corporation, and the Young Republicans.

Wednesday's hearings will be devoted to testimony from the National Council of Churches, the U.S. Catholic Conference, the Synagogue Council of America, the Church of the Brethren, Young Americans for Freedom, and the Panamanian Committee for Human Rights.

Turkey in uproar over Filbert flack

©Newhouse News Service
WASHINGTON — It's just a LITTLE law — designed to protect the little U.S. filbert industry.

But it has State Department officials fuming, and in Turkey it is being interpreted as a serious threat to Turkish-American trade and political relations.

In fact, the U.S. Embassy in Ankara cabled Washington recently urging that steps be taken "to minimize economic and political damage (the law) will certainly cause."

The concern is over a provision tucked away in the massive omnibus farm bill recently signed by President Carter. It requires that imported filberts — or hazelnuts, as they're known to some Americans — meet the same grading standards as U.S.-produced filberts, 99 per cent of which are grown in the state of Oregon, where filbert farming is a $7-million-a-year industry.

Enactment of the provision was a victory for the Oregon congressional delegation, which has tried for years to push the requirement into law. But it was a blow to Turkey, which produces about 60 per cent of the world's filberts and sells millions of dollars worth of the nuts in the United States each year.

The State Department has opposed the restriction all along. When both houses of Congress approved it near the end of 1974, President Ford killed it with a pocket veto.

The Oregonians overcame the threat of another veto this year by attaching the provision to the "veto-proof" farm legislation.

"It's a fine example of an inappropriate arbitrary restraint on trade. It never would have made it if it had been tried on its own," snapped Joel Spiro, State Department chief of special trade activities and commercial treaties, in an interview.

Spiro said the restriction runs counter to U.S. efforts to promote free international trade.

"We just don't think it was needed out there (in Oregon) and we're very concerned about it," Spiro said.

Sen. Bob Packwood (R-Ore.), a chief sponsor of the legislation, called the State Department charges "a lot of bunk."

"This is not a trade embargo and the State Department makes me dumb when it says it is," Packwood said when

Commemorative stamp ignores Polish movie sound pioneer

©Chicago Sun-Times
CHICAGO — The new stamp commemorating the 50th anniversary of talking movies has drawn criticism from a Polish-American cultural leader because it ignores the man who demonstrated the first motion picture sound track.

The stamp, which pictures Al Jolson, star of "The Jazz Singer," generally considered the first sound movie, ignores the memory of Joseph Tykocinski-Tykociner, who experimented with sound in 1922, Robert Radecky, a spokesman for the Illinois Division of the Polish-American Congress, said yesterday.

Radecky said the U.S. Postal Service not only missed the 55th anniversary of Tykociner's demonstration on June 9, 1922, but also the 100th anniversary of his birth on Wednesday. The new stamp was issued in Hollywood Thursday.

Tykociner, a Polish immigrant and a professor at the University of Illinois, demonstrated his technique, which allowed him to synchronize sound with film through a flickering gas flame that brightened as the sounds became louder, at a professional society meeting on the Urbana campus.

SEC a 'monster'

NEW YORK (UPI) — Peter Del Col is going to get his chance on Oct. 20 to tell the full Securities and Exchange Commission that his fledgling Securities Clearing Corp. is a Frankenstein's monster that can strangle all competition in the business.

Del Col's Bradford National Corp., which is in the securities clearance, settlement and depositary services business, is suing the SEC in the U.S. Court of Appeals in the District of Columbia to knock out or drastically modify the NSCC, which was set up last January.

Del Col has testified before SEC staff officials against the NSCC and also has won the sympathy of a House subcommittee led by Rep. John E. Moss, D-Calif.

securities markets was doing the exact opposite. He told Congressman Moss's subcommittee the effect of NSCC on the securities market would be almost as disastrous as a three-way merger of General Motors, Ford and Chrysler could be to the automobile world.

On another occasion he said the operation of NSCC would be much like permitting competition in the manufacture of automobiles but establishing a huge monopoly in the manufacture and production of tires, without which automobiles would be supported in this contention by some of the "regional exchanges, in particular by G. Robert Ackerman, president of the Pacific Exchange.

Del Col will tell the full SEC that a unified national competitive securities market simply cannot exist. If it is forced to depend on an underlying clearing system that has such monopolistic powers that it can fix clearing fees for 85 per cent of the national market and 99 per cent of the New York market.

He charged the NSCC can engage in predatory pricing, and force everybody else out of the securities clearing and settlement business.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices ended a lower Monday in moderate trading of New York stock exchange issues.

The Dow Jones Industrial average was off 0.25 point to 164.46 shortly after the opening. The closely watched average lost 6.76 points overall the week.

Declines led advances, 157 to 149, among the 494 issues crossing the tape in the early trading.

The stock market has been in a lull lately between the continuing news of rising interest rates and indications the economy was improving.

Most of the nation's banks raised their prime rate a quarter point last week to 7 1/2 percent, a 23-month high.

Analysts think the prime rate could go even higher soon.

One reason for the expectations of higher interest rates was an indication Friday the Federal Reserve Board tightened credit again, despite declines in the nation's output, supply the last two trading weeks. Analysts said the move over a longer term horizon at a much sharper rate than the Fed has targeted. The market drew some support from government reports the September jobs fell 66.9 percent from 7.1 percent. Other recent reports showed leading economic indicators and durable goods orders pointing

Farms threatened

• PRESNO, Calif. (UPI) — Strict enforcement of the 1902 reclamation Act could mean the end of the big family-owned corporate farms in California's fertile San Joaquin Valley, producers of a goodly portion of the nation's food.

Large, privately owned farms are being divided by a land reform program of the National Land Act, the people who would operate only small family farms have been fighting for just that.

The new law calls for federal court ruling concerning the Bureau of Reclamation. To begin strict enforcement of the Reclamation Act, including a 160-acre limitation.

Under the new law, a landowner must have a homestead to 160 acres the amount of land one farmer and each member of his family may own if he receives irrigation water from a federal water project.

At the time the law was another federal court ruling reinforcing its contention the corporate farms must be broken up.

The recovery goes on but the Bureau of Reclamation is now working on court-ordered rules to guard the sale of excess land, that land over 160 acres per family member.

The National farm organizations and individuals who hold vast amounts of farmland contend the reclamation act is a relic of another era. They say agricultural concepts have changed dramatically since Congress passed it.

Ralph Brody, manager of the 600,000-acre Westlands Water Project, a 160,000-acre of the valley, says it is economically impossible to earn a living on a small farm in these modern times.

His sentiments are those of the big farmers in the Westlands.

VANDALIZED AND OVERGROWN WITH WEEDS
... deserted service station on Minidoka Avenue

Another side to Twin Falls

BURNED OUT AND FALLING TO RUINS
... unused rail spur in foreground

Twin Falls is a clean, attractive town for the most part. Most yards and parks are neat and well kept. Its streets are generally clean.

The area surrounding Twin Falls is scenically attractive and the spectacular canyon view draws thousands of tourists each year. And there's the downtown mall. Though perhaps it falls a few degrees short of the original concept, it's still the envy of many cities in the Northwest.

Twin Falls could be described as beautiful. There is another side to any city, and small and rural though Twin Falls may be in character, it has an ugly side. Nobody would deny it, though residents may try to ignore the realities of it.

A glimpse in the right direction reveals abandoned service stations overgrown with weeds. Windows are broken out, doors ajar, gaping at passersby like grotesque trolls. Empty shells of buildings, deserted and forgotten, stand mute.

Streets without curbs or gutters, or sidewalks, stretch forlornly. Debris dumped haphazardly over the landscape interrupts a peaceful gaze.

Still, Twin Falls is a clean town. With the help of individuals concerned about their property and their neighbor's property looks, it can be an even more attractive community.

Airwest fares may go down across Idaho

By DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News writer

BOISE — A ruling by the Idaho Public Utilities Commission raises the possibility that rates for Hughes Airwest flights from cities within Idaho to Twin Falls may be re-appraised, and possibly lowered.

The PUC Friday ordered the San Francisco based airline to reduce by $5 its fare between Boise and Lewiston, noting the same price was charged for the trip between Boise and Spokane. Spokane is 90 miles northwest of Lewiston.

This morning PUC Public Relations Officer Garth Andrews said it "is possible" the commission "could sit down and examine all interstate flights."

Andrews said the PUC, by its ruling, "has taken jurisdiction over all flights within Idaho, such as say, flights between Pocatello and Twin Falls. "Andrews said the ruling "hints" such a re-examination may occur.

The PUC ruling came after a complaint was filed with that body by Lewiston Morning Tribune reporter Jay Shelleby, on March 11. The order was signed late Thursday by PUC president Robert Lenaghen and commission member Conley Ward Jr.

Ralph H. Wickberg, the third PUC member, dissented.

Airwest intends to challenge the PUC ruling, arguing the PUC over-stepped its jurisdiction in clipping the wings of an intra-state airline.

"We don't know what effect it will have, if any," Airwest Vice President for public relations Lee Pitt, in San Francisco said. "But it gets down to a real fundamental question of whether our fares and routes are operated by the state (of Idaho) or by the federal civil aeronautics board."

Pitt said he had not yet seen the complete text of the PUC ruling, but added Airwest "is contemplating an appeal" of the decision.

The airline can appeal directly to the Idaho Supreme Court or file a complaint in U.S. District Court. An injunction may be issued if such an appeal is made.

Should Airwest ignore the PUC order, then the Commission could enforce its ruling after 30 days. Staff members have said enforcement could include stopping Air West flights within Idaho.

One dead, many hurt after weekend wrecks

MAGIC VALLEY — A 22-year-old Twin Falls man died, a Las Vegas woman suffered a broken arm and two Twin Falls boys were knocked off a bicycle in traffic accidents during the weekend.

Lavear Hurton Thorneck Jr., 22, Twin Falls, died when the car he was riding in flipped several times on Interstate 80 about 20 miles east of Jerome late Sunday night, Jerome County Sheriff Eliza Hall reported.

Lynn Stosich, 16, Twin Falls, apparently fell asleep at the wheel while headed west on I-80, losing control of her 1977 Mazda and sending it flipping down the highway, the sheriff said.

Thorneck was thrown from the car and hit by another car headed west.

Hall said officials would decide Tuesday whether charges would be filed. Other details were not available.

In another accident about four miles north of Jackpot, Nev., on U.S. 93, about 8:30 a.m., Sunday, Eba Marie McKnight, 23, Las Vegas, suffered a broken arm, when the pickup she was riding in rolled once after the driver apparently fell asleep at the wheel, state police reported.

John Richard Clark, 19, Las Vegas, the driver, was cited for inattentive driving.

Police said Clark was headed to Las Vegas from Boise.

Other passengers and their injuries were Daniel Ballerton, 22, Las Vegas, a cut near his eye; Darwin McKnight, 26, Las Vegas, hurt back; Stephanie Ann McKnight, 4, Las Vegas, face cuts, and Michael Holt, 21, Las Vegas, a possibly broken ankle.

All were treated and released at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital.

In another accident on Oak Street in Twin Falls, two boys suffered cuts and bruises when the bike they were riding on collided with a car, city police reported.

Shawn Hicks, 7, and Chad Dixon, 8, were treated and released at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital.

A car driven by Nina Fisher, 49, Twin Falls, collided with a bicycle the boys were riding about 4:40 p.m. Saturday.

No citations were issued.

Suits total $700,000

TWIN FALLS — More than $700,000 worth of lawsuits have been filed against two men, one who allegedly caused an accident by driving while suspended and another who owned a car involved.

In two complaints filed in Twin Falls Fifth District Court, Keith R. Rice is charged with driving negligence which caused a two car collision at the intersection of Blake Street and Addison Avenue Sept. 13.

A second complaint has been filed by Sarah Hernandez, who was a passenger in the Maybury car. She seeks $100,000 general damages, $100,000 punitive damages and $1,012 special damages from Rice, and $100,000 general damages, $100,000 punitive damages and $1,012 special damages from Bailey.

The complaint also lists Cecil Galley, Twin Falls, owner of the car Rice was driving, as a defendant.

The complaint seeks $100,000 punitive damages, damages, $50,000 general damages, and attorney fees from Rice, and $100,000 general damages, $50,000 general damages and $1,000 special damages from Galley.

Well decision due

HOLLISTER — City council members of Hollister expect to reach a decision next month on whether or not to award a contract for construction of a new city well to the one firm which has submitted a bid.

Elsting Well Drilling, Twin Falls, submitted the lone bid of $27,020, at an opening late last month. The amount is well above the engineer's estimate of what the new well would cost. Representatives of J-U-B Engineering Co., Twin Falls, said it will be up to the city council to decide if the bid should be rejected and another call for bids issued.

Mrs. Audrey Carter, councilwoman, said the council will probably meet next Tuesday night if all of the members are available at that time.

In June the community approved a $90,000 revenue bond issue to cover costs of a new water system for the community. In addition to drilling a new well to replace the present one located three miles from the community, the system would include construction of a storage tank and installation of a new distribution system.

Hollister, a city of about 50 residents until recently, has been growing rapidly in the past few years, nearly doubling in population. As a result the one well and a distribution system which includes three miles of pipe from the source to the users is not able to meet demands.

Times-News libel trial postponed

TWIN FALLS — The Idaho Supreme Court has agreed for the moment to postpone the trial between the Times-News and the Sierra Life Insurance Company.

The Sierra vs. Times-News trial was scheduled to begin tomorrow in 5th District Court in Twin Falls.

If the trial had begun, the newspaper would have been unable to mount any defense of a series of articles run about the Sierra Life in the last two years because of a ruling by district judge Thorton Ward.

The Idaho Supreme Court Friday vacated the Tuesday trial date in order to decide if the court will hear an appeal filed by the Times-News in the case.

The Times-News has asked the court to review the decision of Judge Ward to strike the defenses of the newspaper over a sources issue.

In September, Judge Ward struck the Times-News defense in the $36 million libel case because an editor and reporter for the paper refused to reveal the names of confidential sources not quoted in any news story.

Reporter Bill Lazarus and former managing editor Richard High refused to give Sierra the names of some confidential sources because they said the sources were not critical to the Sierra stories since none of the sources were quoted in the stories of late 1975 and 1976.

Judge Ward disagreed.

In an attempt to get the sources, he told the paper he would strike the newspaper's defenses unless the names were revealed.

A week ago, to enforce his insistence on getting the newspaper to reveal the sources, Ward said the Sierra vs. Times-News trial would go ahead even though the Times-News wouldn't be represented in court.

Times-News attorney Lloyd Webb argued last week that even though the newspaper had been ruled in default, Sierra should at least have to show the news stories were false and somehow responsible for a drop in Sierra's business.

The judge overruled Webb's requests.

Judge Ward further ruled the Tuesday trial would proceed to determine damages, if any, caused by the Times-News' Sierra Life.

Judge Ward ruled that the trial would go straight to the damages issue because through default, Sierra's pleadings stood "uncontested and unanswered."

The Times-News had argued the sources were irrelevant because the listers were never quoted in the stories and instead on the record sources were found to back all information cited.

Sierra Life attorneys pleaded that these confidential sources were "discoverable" and that they might lead to proof of their claims.

In order to avoid the sources confrontation the Times-News in September applied for a motion for summary judgment in an attempt to have the case dismissed. The motion was heard resulting in a ruling stating that Sierra was a "public figure" and no malice had been established at that time.

The Times-News had its defenses struck, but its motion for summary judgment would still be continued if these sources were disclosed. The editor and reporter again refused and the Times-News was ruled in default.

As a result of the Supreme Court decision, the trial will be stayed until a decision is reached by the Idaho Supreme Court on whether it will hear the appeal.

If they decide to hear the appeal it could take more than a year for a ruling to come down.

If they reject the appeal a new court case will be set in 5th District and Sierra's date for damages will be heard.

The suit originated in March of 1976 after a series of Times-News reports on insurance department proceedings in various states and several stories probing the condition of Sierra Life assets.

Sierra claimed these stories to be false and malicious and sued the Times-News, its Publisher William Howard, former managing editor High and reporter Lazarus.

TWIN FALLS — At the request of Gov. John Evans the State Board of Education Friday ranked about 70 spending priorities for 1979, exclusive of public school financing and maintenance of ongoing programs in other areas.

The projects, estimated to cost about $4.5 million, were topped by a request for about $60,000 to complete facilities at Boise State University and Lewis-Clark College, Lewiston.

South Idaho board member Cheryl Hymas, Jerome, said today that request, if met, would complete internal work at buildings on the two campuses which are now nearly ready for occupancy. The completion would ease crowding and facilitate teaching in some classes, she said.

The second priority set by the board would funnel about $386,000 into ongoing liaison programs with out-of-state medical and dental schools.

The funding would include maintenance of five student slots at the University of Utah Medical School, and 20 student slots would be maintained in a University of Washington joint dental program. Five slots for Idaho dental students would also be maintained at Creighton University, Omaha.

The third priority, Hymas said, would be to spend $198,000 to upgrade intercollegiate athletics, most of it for bringing women's programs into compliance with federal Title IX requirements for equality. About $53,000 would be spent to upgrade men's athletics, Hymas said.

The board's decision on athletic funding included rescission of an earlier directive to collect about $101,000 in additional student fees for upgrading of athletics. Hymas said. The rescission came in the wake of student objections to the fee increases. The $101,000 was then included in the $198,000 request the board set as its third priority.

The fourth and fifth priorities involved $42,000 to expand radiologic programs at Boise State University and Idaho State University, and $129,000 to upgrade computer usage by public schools and for development of a vocational information system, Hymas said.

A sixth priority would give the State Department of Education about $34,000 to begin initiation of a competency testing program for high school graduation. That controversial program would place a special state seal on the high school diplomas of those students who had passed tests showing minimum skills in basic areas.

The tests would also be used as a guide for bringing lagging students up to minimum performance standards.

They would be given first in the ninth grade and then repeated if necessary throughout a student's high school career until competency was shown.

The listing of priorities by the state board was made at Evans' request after a surprise drop-in visit on the board meeting last week in Moscow.

The governor told the board he wouldn't be bound by the priorities but would use them for guidance in making decisions for his budget proposals.

Hymas also emphasized that the priorities wouldn't necessarily be honored by either the governor or the legislator.

Negotiators near worldwide sugar policy

NAMPA (UPI)—Negotiators from 72 nations at the International Sugar Conference are "near agreement on a worldwide sugar policy."

Local sugar beet growers and processors are hopeful the agreement, if passed and ratified by the U.S. Senate, will solve many of their problems. The world price for sugar is about 8 cents a pound and is below production costs.

Delegates at the international conference have said the proposed agreement will maintain the world price at between 11 and 21 cents a pound.

Having a floor and ceiling will protect producers from wild price fluctuations by using export controls and reserve stocks, the delegates hope.

Ray Larsen, district manager at Amalgamated Sugar Co., Nampa, said if the world floor price is 11 cents, the New York price for raw sugar will be about 13.5 cents a pound which, in the Treasure Valley, would be about $24 a ton or $500 an acre.

"Essentially, this action is to smooth out the boom and bust cycles we have experienced in the sugar industry," according to Randy Foster, an aide to Sen. Frank Church in Washington, D.C. "In the long run it will help the sugar grower and the consumer."

"If the international act is ratified by the Senate, and signed into law, that will be our sugar policy in the United States. If passed, the agreement would be effective Jan. 1."

The U.S. has not been involved in international sugar negotiations in the past, Larsen said. From 1939 to 1974 the Domestic Sugar Act controlled U.S. prices through quotas and import tariffs, but the sugar act was not renewed in 1974 and the domestic industry was thrown into the world market. Labor and equipment costs in the U.S. are higher than in the other sugar producing nations. The domestic industry could not compete and serious economic problems have developed such as closure of processing plants and reduced acreage.

"It will probably work," Larsen said. "They've tried to do this for many years. It has always failed, but then we had our sugar act and stayed out."

This is the first time the U.S.

has participated in worldwide sugar negotiations. "I like it and I think it will work," said P.T. Rathbone, president of the Nysa-Nampa Sugar Beet Growers. "It would take the politics out of it. The price is fair, especially in the mid-range. But I wouldn't want to live my life in the 13.5 range. About 10 cents would be okay."

"The domestic industry is in trouble," he added. "I never believed things would get this bad and stay this bad but this (agreement) will be our salvation."

The growers would respond and plant more beets, he said. Especially at a time like this with no bright spot.

"Then more money would be scattered around and more people would be employed who would spend more money," he said.

"It all adds up." If the agreement is signed, the ceiling would be placed on prices and Rathbone said this will also help the market. "It was fun while it lasted, getting 40 cents a pound in the early 1970s but it hurt our market. In 1974 consumption in the U.S. was 110 pounds per person, then it dropped to 7 pounds a person when prices were high. Now it is up to 93 pounds, but that still isn't good enough. We have to get consumption up all over the world," he said.

One of the problems is the growing economies in the developing nations. "Some people in other nations only consume 25 pounds a year," he said. "As their (countries') affluence grows, they turn to a sweeter diet and improve their domestic sugar industry."

Partial eclipse of sun slated Wednesday

BOISE (UPI)—Most Idahoans will be able to see a partial eclipse of the sun October 12, but two Idahoans are planning a trip to Columbia to study the effects of the total eclipse that will be visible there.

John Allen, astronomer and physics professor at Boise State University, said, "In this area (Idaho), we'll see a partial eclipse—about 20 percent of the sun will be covered."

Allen said Moscow will be the best spot in Idaho for viewing the eclipse, which is caused by the alignment of the moon, the sun and the earth. The eclipse will be at a maximum at about 2:10 p.m. October 12, he said.

Two local researchers, however, have planned a research trip to Columbia, where the eclipse will be a total one.

Duane Warn, a physics teacher at Caldwell High School, and Russell Campbell, of the ISU physics department, received a grant this summer through BSU to develop some computer-based equipment to detect shadow bands during a solar eclipse.

They left Saturday for a week's stay in Azaquul, Columbia, to "observe" the eclipse and study the light and dark shadow bands that run across the ground before and after the totality of the eclipse.

"We don't know in what atmospheric layer it is happening, but it occurs a minute before and after the eclipse," Warn said. "And since (total) eclipses happen only twice a year, there has been only half an hour viewing time (for the shadows) since 1900."

Warn said he and Campbell have been working on the project since 1970 and spent several months building four computers for their research.

The two smaller machines called microprocessors, are small enough to fit in briefcases and will be taken to Columbia.

"This is the first time microprocessors have been used," Warn said. "We are trying to automate our observations; the computers will detect, record and analyze the data."

"This is phase one of a research project to get a handle on turbulence problems caused by rapid cooling when the sun is shut off," he added.

For those who want to view the eclipse closer to home, Allen said some precautions need to be taken, because serious eye damage can result from looking directly at an eclipse of the sun.

Warn said October 12 will be the last opportunity to see an eclipse this year.

IPUC praised by conservation league

BOISE (UPI)—The Idaho Public Utilities Commission (PUC) used to be "dominated by big business interests," but is now listening to the "consumer's voice," according to a statement released by the Idaho Conservation League (ICL).

The praise from the ICL, a citizens group concerned with environmental issues and energy conservation, came in response to a recent PUC decision to slash a rate increase requested by the Utah

Power and Light Company (UP&L).

The PUC rejected UP&L's request for a 29.27 percent rate increase and granted instead an 8.15 percent increase instead. The ICL, a citizens group concerned with environmental issues and the conservation of energy, said the rate increase granted was a legitimate action given the inflationary costs facing the company.

"But the real issue in the case was whether or not UP&L's Idaho customers would be forced to underwrite a massive $1.6 billion expansion program which would have doubled the size of the utility in the next five years," ICL spokesman Lionel Oberlin said.

Oberlin praised the PUC for rejecting that part of the proposal and ordering the Utah Power and Light Company to implement workable energy conservation policies.

The PUC order called upon UP&L to substantially revise its rate structure to eliminate lower rates for residential customers who use more energy and institute a "peakload" pricing system to discourage energy use during peak periods.

The ICL also lauded the PUC for suggesting that energy hook-ups to serve new irrigation projects be required to pay a "facilities charge" to cover the actual cost of providing the new generation capacity in the form of new plants to meet the new demand created by new irrigation.

The ICL statement said earlier this year the ICL completed a study that showed that new irrigation pumping in Idaho is being subsidized by other ratepayers by over $100 per acre per year.

"The PUC was once dominated by big business interests—the utilities and the industrialists," ICL spokesman Gary Richardson said.

GEORGE BRETT IS SAFE WITH A 1ST-INNING TRIPLE...
...but pushes off on Yankees Graig Nettles

Yankees win AL pennant with 3-run rally in 9th

KANSAS CITY (UPI) — The New York Yankees recovered from a first inning laydown when George Brett hit Graig Nettles in the face and delivered a knockout punch in the ninth inning with three runs to defeat the Kansas City Royals 3-1 and win their second straight American League pennant.

It marked the second year in a row the Yankees rallied in the ninth to defeat the Royals in the decisive fifth game for the pennant. Chris Chambliss homered in the ninth inning last year to win it for the Yankees. The pennant was the 31st won by the Yankees in their illustrious history and they will meet the National League champion Los Angeles Dodgers in the best-of-seven World Series beginning Tuesday night at Yankee Stadium.

The Royals, seeking their first AL pennant, seemingly had the game wrapped up when they took a 3-2 lead into the ninth and brought in their best pitcher, Dennis Leonard, to pitch the final inning. But Paul Blair, who started in the place of Reggie Jackson in a controversial managerial maneuver by Billy Martin, led off the ninth with a single and Leonard then walked pinchhitter Roy White on a 3-2 pitch.

Yankees manager Whitey Herzog then made a move that will be second-guessed through the long winter months to come when he replaced Leonard with left-hander Larry Gura. Gura had been roughed up by the Yankees in their 7-2 triumph Saturday which had tied the series, and Mickey Rivers promptly greeted him with a sharp single to center which tied the score.

Mark Littell, who gave up Chambliss' home run a year ago, then replaced Gura and Willie Randolph put the Yankees ahead with a long sacrifice fly to center. After Thurman Munson grounded out, the Yankees scored a key insurance run when Brett picked up Lou Piniella's grounder and threw it over the head of first baseman Pete LaCock as Dent scored.

The Yankees then gave the ball to ace reliever Sparky Lyle, who shut the door on the Royals in the ninth inning to pick up his second win in the series. For a while it appeared as if the first inning brawl would be the catalyst the Royals needed to win.

Nerves were frayed on each team in this deciding game and they showed early. With one out in the first, Hal McRae beat out an infield hit and Brett hit a 10-g-fly to right center which Mickey Rivers misjudged and allowed to get over his head for a triple.

McRae scored easily on the hit but when Brett slid into third base he got tangled up with Nettles, who kicked him under the arm. Brett rose to his feet immediately and swung at Nettles' head, causing both benches to clear. When order was finally restored, Brett returned in third and scored a moment later on Cowens' infield out.

The Yankees got a run back in the third when Rivers singled, stole second and, after a walk to Willie Randolph, scored on a single by Thurman Munson.

The Yankees, loaded down with pitching problems, were forced to start their ace Ron Guidry with only two days rest and he did not get past the third inning as the Royals pushed across another run on a leadoff double by Mel Allen and a sacrifice by Cowens.

Cowens' hit finished Guidry and brought on Mike Torrez. The Kansas native was rough on the Royals as he held them scoreless for 5 1/3 innings after having had only one day's rest since his last start.

But Torrez' performance was wasted as the Yankees could do very little against Splitfirtz. Splitfirtz survived leadoff doubles by Lou Piniella in the second and Cliff Johnson in the fourth and pitched out of another jam in the fifth before finally running out of gas in the beginning of the eighth.

Willie Randolph opened the Yankees eighth with a single and Splitfirtz was yanked in favor of Doug Bird. Bird struck out Thurman Munson but Lou Piniella singled and Martin then sent Jackson up to the plate to hit for Cliff Johnson.

Jackson, who had managed only one hit in 14 previous atbats in the playoffs, had been surprised and hurt by his benching but he came through as befits his $3-million price tag by delivering a run-scoring single.

The Royals' second baseman Frank White made the kind of play which ordinarily wins a pennant when he made a diving stop of Chris Chambliss' hard smash and flipped it to second to force Jackson for the final out of the inning. But in the end, the Royals bullpen couldn't hold the Yankees, who throughout their history have managed to show great poise under pressure.

By winning, the Yankees achieved what everyone expected last winter when owner George Steinbrenner shelled out nearly $6-million to sign Jackson and pitcher Don Gullett.

But it wasn't easy. And in the most important game of the season, Jackson was on the bench at the start and Gullett was nursing an injured shoulder.

The Yankees spent much of the regular season bickering among themselves and it wasn't until August that the club began playing up to its potential. Despite its fine array of talent, the team did not clinch the AL East title until the next to last day of the season.

Through the long campaign, Martin was nearly fired three times and it isn't certain that even the AL championship can save his job.

Martin's status may depend on how the team does in the World Series. The Yankees and Dodgers will be meeting for the ninth time in World Series competition, with the Yankees holding a 6-2 edge. However, the last time they met—and the only time since the Dodgers' have been in Los Angeles—was in 1963 and the Dodgers' won four straight games.

The loss was extremely frustrating for the Royals, who finished the regular season with more victories (102) than any team in the majors.

Kansas City, though, is basically a young team and should be in title contention for the next several years.

Rookie goof aids Bengal win

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Tony Davis dived two yards for a touchdown, ending a 75-yard third quarter drive, and Chris Blair kicked a 32-yard field goal in the closing seconds Sunday to lift the Cincinnati Bengals to a 17-7 victory over the Green Bay Packers.

A roughing the passer penalty on Green Bay rookie Ezra Johnson kept the scoring drive alive. Johnson, a first round draft choice, knocked down quarterback Ken Anderson after Anderson's third down pass fell incomplete.

The penalty gave the Bengals a first down at the Packers' 20, and after Lenell Elliott ran 18 yards to the two, Davis went in for the winning score.

The victory evened Cincinnati's record at 2-2. Green Bay dropped to 1-3.

Vikes take NFC Central lead

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (UPI) — Fran Tarkenton passed for two touchdowns in the first quarter and the Minnesota Vikings made a 45-28 victory over the Detroit Lions Sunday to take sole possession of the lead in the NFC Central Division.

Tarkenton passed 12 yards to Sammy White for one touchdown and a Tarkenton-to-Ahmad Rashad pass and lateral to White covered 59 yards and another score in the first half of the opening period.

That was the last Viking scoring of the day in sunny 59-degree weather before a crowd of 45,860 at Metropolitan Stadium. Detroit got its only touchdown on an 8-yard pass from Greg Landry to Luther Blue in the third quarter.

The Minnesota victory broke a tie with Detroit for the division lead, boosting the Vikings to a 3-1 record and dropping the Lions to 2-2.

Colts tip Miami in wild game

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Bert Jones passed for four touchdowns Sunday to rally the Baltimore Colts to a 45-28 victory over the Miami Dolphins and sole possession of first place in the AFC Eastern Division.

In the second half, Jones fired passes for two touchdowns and set up a third with a 27-yard pass to the 1-yard line as the Colts, down 28-24 at the half, held the Dolphins scoreless.

Both teams exploded for a touchdown apiece in the first 41 seconds of the game and the Dolphins grabbed the lead in the first half, at one point extending it to 28-10 behind the running of Benny Malone, who had 134 yards in the half.

Cowboys rally to edge Cards

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — A pair of pass interference calls against St. Louis cornerback Lee Nelson set up two Dallas touchdowns in the fourth quarter Sunday and gave the unbeaten Cowboys a 30-24 victory over the Cardinals.

Dallas took the lead for the first time in the game when Roger Staubach hit Golden Richards with a 17-yard scoring toss with seven minutes left to play. Nelson was called for pass interference while covering Drew Pearson, resulting in a 41-yard pickup to the St. Louis 12.

Dallas pulled to within a point at 24-23 on a 1-yard dive by Tony Dorsett with 13 minutes left. The score was set up by a pass interference call on Nelson, who pushed Pearson in the end zone for a 42-yard gain for Dallas.

Dallas defenders Cliff Harris and Charlie

Waters intercepted passes to blunt Cardinal scoring threats late in the game.

Defensive tackle Charlie Davis had scooped up a Staubach fumble and rambled 35 yards for a touchdown to give St. Louis a 24-16 lead late in the third period. Defensive end John Zook belted Staubach from behind on a pass play, jarring the ball loose.

Efren Herrera kicked a 43-yard field goal 10 minutes into the second half to cut the Cardinal lead to 17-16.

Staubach was 18-for-29 for 153 yards while Jim Hart was 9-for-33 for 186 yards for St. Louis. Dorsett led all rushers with 140 yards in 14 carries, most of it picked up on a 77-yard touchdown run.

Raiders grind down Browns

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Mark Van Eeghen ran for more than 100 yards and two touchdowns and Errol Mann kicked four field goals Sunday as the Oakland Raiders outlasted the Cleveland Browns 26-10.

The World Champion Raiders won their 17th straight game, raising their record this year to 4-0, with an error-free attack taking advantage of every mistake by Cleveland, which fell to 2-2. Interceptions by Otis Sistrunk and Charles Phillips set up two field goals and one of Van Eeghen's touchdowns came after Pete Banaszak recovered Ken Ellis' fumble of the second half kickoff on the Cleveland six.

Denver shuts off Chiefs

DENVER (UPI) — An awesome Denver defense trapped Kansas City quarterbacks Wince and forced four interceptions to set up three field goals by Jim Turner and give the Broncos a 23-7 victory over the winless Kansas City Chiefs.

The victory was Denver's fourth without a loss this season and fifth straight, the first such winning streak in the club's 18-year history.

Denver took a 16-0 halftime lead on a 7-yard bootleg by quarterback Craig Morton and two 33-yard field goals and a 25-yarder by Turner. The Broncos added another touchdown on Otis Armstrong's 1-yard run.

The Chiefs' lone score came on Ed Podolak's 2-yard carry midway through the final period.

Jets surprise Bills 24-19

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (UPI) — Clark Gaines ran 14 yards for a touchdown two plays following a Buffalo fumble Sunday to give the New York Jets a 24-19 victory over Buffalo, the Bills' fourth straight loss this season.

Jets quarterback Richard Todd ran for one touchdown and passed for another as he completed 10 passes for 194 yards — a career high. Buffalo's O.J. Simpson ran 23 times for 122 yards — his first 100-yard gain for the season and 40th of his career — in the Bills' losing effort.

With the score tied at 17-17 late in the game, Bills' quarterback Joe Ferguson fumbled on his own 17 and Richard Neal recovered for New York. Two plays later Gaines ran in off left tackle at 12:54 to put New York ahead 24-17 and give them a 2-2 season record.

Skins deal Tampa 18th loser

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI) — Mike Thomas scored on a 6-yard run and Mark Moseley kicked a 43-yard field goal Sunday, both in the first period, as Washington handed the Tampa Bay Buccaneers their 18th straight loss, 10-0.

The Redskins, now 3-1, pressured Tampa Bay all afternoon but were unable to crack through for any more points against a bending Bucs defense. Moseley missed two other field goal attempts, one from 52 yards and another from 40.

Tampa Bay, which was unable to mount any offense in its fourth loss of the season, managed to get into Washington territory only twice. A third period drive stalled and Allan Leavitt was wide on a 36-yard field goal attempt.

Chargers stop Archie, Saints

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Mike Fuller returned a punt 88 yards for a touchdown Sunday and the San Diego defense muzzled New Orleans quarterback Archie Manning, leading the Chargers to a 14-0 win over the Saints.

Fuller, who also picked off a Manning pass to stop one of the Saints' few scoring threats, caught Tom Blanton's punt on the San Diego 12 early in the first quarter, danced past several defenders and breezed untouched up the right sideline.

Rickey Young added a touchdown on a 5-yard run through the left side of the line with slightly more than a minute left in the game. Young's score capped a 60-yard, eight-play drive which included a 22-yard run by Bob Matthews and a 12-yard pass from James Harris to Bob Klein.

Eagles rip Giants in rain

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (UPI) — Ron Jaworski threw a pair of touchdown passes Sunday and Herb Lusk ran for two more scores, including a 70-yard TD dash through a steady rain, to guide the Philadelphia Eagles to a 28-10 victory over the New York Giants.

Jaworski fired a 55-yard TD pass to tight end Keith Ressler in the first quarter and early in the second period, he connected on his sixth scoring pass of the year, a 28-yard screen pass to wide receiver Charles Smith. A 1-yard plunge by Lusk, who gained 117 yards, later in the period gave the Eagles, now 2-1, a 21-0 lead.

Falcons blank 49ers 7-0

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Alfred Jenkins grabbed a 39-yard deflected pass from Scott Hunter late in the third quarter Sunday for the game's only score and gave the Atlanta Falcons a 7-0 victory over the San Francisco 49ers and first place in the NFC West.

Hunter's pass was short of the mark and free safety Ralph McGill got a hand on it if time to deflect the ball into the air. Jenkins, circling behind him, grabbed the ball a step inside the end zone for the touchdown.

The victory was the third against one loss for Atlanta while the 49ers suffered their fourth straight loss.

BYU's Nielsen out for year

PROVO, Utah (UPI) — Brigham Young quarterback Gifford Nielsen, the nation's leading collegiate passer through the first four weeks of the 1977 season, will miss the Cougars' final seven games due to a knee injury.

Dr. Robert Metcalf, who operated on Nielsen's injured left knee Saturday night, said Sunday, "He will not play again this fall, but the prognosis for a full recovery is good."

Nielsen injured the knee late in 12th-ranked BYU's 24-19 loss at Oregon State. But he continued to play and eventually was forced out of the game after he re-injured the knee.

Metcalf said Nielsen suffered "a complete tear" to one ligament. But the orthopedic surgeon called the operation "a good repair, and he now has a good to excellent chance for a complete recovery."

But the 6-foot-5 senior quarterback's leg will be in a cast for six weeks.

Nielsen, in 23 career games for BYU, had completed 46 passes for 5,390 yards and 55 touchdowns. Last year he led the nation in touchdown passes with 29 and was second to Rice's Tommy Kramer in passing yardage with 3,194.

In just four games this year he had passed BYU to a 3-1 record, throwing for 1,167 yards and 16 touchdowns. He was also named to the UPI Backfield of the Week twice this fall.

"This is a tough loss," said BYU Coach LaVell Edwards. "We felt he was an excellent candidate for the Heisman Trophy. But, fortunately, we do have some depth at quarterback."

Edwards said he will start sophomore Marc Wilson.

Day of the big play

NEW YORK (UPI) — Sunday was the day of the big play in the National Football League.

There were 17 scoring plays of 50 yards or longer, the longest being a 90-yard kickoff return for a touchdown by Miami's Fred Solomon in a loss to Baltimore.

Joe Pisarcik of the New York Giants had the longest scoring pass, an 80-yarder to Jimmy Robinson, Dallas rookie Tony Dorsett had a 77-yard touchdown run from scrimmage and Mike Fuller of San Diego had an 88-yard punt return for a score.

There were four 50 yards or longer TD plays in the Miami-Baltimore game, won by the Colts 45-28.

Their pitching is solid, the Yankees' just this side of "who have we got left out there." Their hitting is at least as impressive as the Yankees' based on this year's stats.

On paper the Dodgers look a solid favorite.

But World Series are rarely decided on paper. When the two best teams in baseball meet each year, at that level it's who's got the most winners, not who's got the most stats.

The past doesn't mean a thing anymore.

Have the Yankees finally realized they've got a few winners on their club — guys who can get the job done when they have to? Have their great players shaken off a year's worth of heavy pressure and their slights on the real reason they play the game — to prove they are the best?

We'll know this week.

JACKSON AND MARTIN BEFORE LAST NIGHT'S GAME

Jackson is called into the game in a role which fits his super-star status, and delivers.

Martin puts Jackson back in the game for his red-hot replacement Cliff Johnson because Martin has more confidence in Jackson than Johnson when the chips are really team. In Martin's words, "That guy is really a champion. Not once on the bench did he stop rooting and encouraging his teammates. He sure showed me he's got class."

Jackson looks good. He contributes what he can even in the dugout. Perhaps he was trying to

Baca tops world drag finals

Monday, October 10, 1977 Times-News, Twin Falls, Idaho 17

ONTARIO, Calif. (UPI) — Veteran Dennis Baca, winner of the coveted U.S. Nationals earlier this year, defeated Graham Light in the final round Sunday to score an upset victory in the top fuel eliminator competition of the National Hot Rod Association's $200,000 World Finals at Ontario Motor Speedway.

Baca then met Shirley Muldowney, the recently crowned 1977 world champion, and defeated her with the best race of the day on the track's quarter-mile course — 5.815 seconds and 234.56 miles an hour.

The victory in his final race was never in doubt as Light's car stalled on the starting line. Baca won it in a time of 5.977 seconds, or 234.98 n.p.h.

Light, from Edmonton, Canada, scored a major upset earlier in the day by handing Don Garlits of Seffner, Fla., his first loss ever at the track.

Gordon Bonin, also from Edmonton, upset Don Prudhomme of Los Angeles in the funny car finals. Bonin got the jump on Prudhomme, and the event's only three-time champion, and won the title in a time of 6.311 seconds.

Bob Gilden of Whiteland, Ind., won the pro stock crown by defeating veteran Don Nicholson of Atlanta in a time of 8.550 seconds. Nicholson, the oldest driver in the field at 50, still scored enough points to gain the 1977 world title for pro stockers.

Dave Settles of Dallas won the pro comp championship when he scored a victory in 6.730 seconds over Dale Armstrong of Torrance, Calif., who had already won the 1977 pro comp world title.

The day's racing also decided 1977 NHRA world titles in four non-professional, or sportsman, categories. Dennis Ferrera of Cammack, N.C., captured the competition title. Buddy Ingersoll of Ziegler, Ill., won the modified championship. Dave Boettman of Muskegon, Mich., scored the super stock title, and Stan Mizell of Green Cove Springs, Fla., took the stock crown.

Marsh whips Floyd for match play title

VIRGINIA WATER, England (UPI) — Graham Marsh achieved a four-year anniversary Saturday when he beat Ray Floyd 5 and 3 to win his first World Matchplay golf title.

In 1973, the Australian lost the final on the 40th green in sudden death to South African Gary Player and vowed that he would one day take the crown that eluded him.

He did it by shooing eight birdies and an eagle over the final 20-hole match to wind up a four-day display of consistent golf over the tree-lined, 6,900-yard, par-73 Burma Road course at Westwist.

"I'm delighted. After that, I would like to go back to New York and get the rookie of the year award," added Marsh, who, at 33, has just completed his first full season on the American tour, and stands 19th on the money-winning list.

Floyd labored in the heavy conditions to rediscover the form that earlier helped him dump Spain's 20-year-old, Seve Ballesteros, but couldn't match Marsh's relentless play.

"He was very persistent. When he needed a putt, he made it. I wasn't playing well at all and I couldn't muster up a putt. I kept trying to get the ball closer and I continued to hit it worse," said Floyd, who earned $31,000 for his second place.

After nosing 3-up in the first round of the 36-hole contest, Marsh raced to five ahead when Floyd drove into the trees and the fourth before the Australian drilled home a 25-foot, birdie-3 putt at the seventh.

Floyd got those two holes back when he birdied the ninth and Marsh bogeyed the 10th, but it was to be the Australian's day, and with a combination of hot putting and gritty recovery shots, Marsh took birdies at the 14th and 15th to close out the former U.S. Masters champion from North Carolina.

Connors rips Gottfried

KANAPALI, Hawaii (UPI) — Jimmy Connors breezed by Brian Gottfried, 6-2, 6-0, Sunday to win the $20,000 first prize in the Island Holidays Tennis Classic.

It was the first match between the two stars this year and the second time Connors has won the Island Holiday title. Connors captured the tourney in 1975.

Gottfried won $10,000 as the runner-up.

Connors, who led since the first day—fired a final-round score of two-under-par, 70 Sunday to win the $30,000 LPGA Classic golf tournament by five strokes, her first victory of the 1977 tour.

Connors planned to make a pit stop. Yarborough moved ahead of him and pulled into the pit the next morning, taking the lead. Parsons coasted around the 1.5-mile track and was about six seconds behind Yarborough after his pit stop with just over 50 miles to go.

Parsons quickly made up ground as he gained about three-tenths of a second on Yarborough each lap and moved back in front on lap 297. Parsons finished 192 seconds ahead of Yarborough.

Modest Evert breezes

ATLANTA (UPI) — Top seeded Chris Evert registered an easy singles victory over sixth-seeded Dianne Fromholtz of Australia, 6-3, 6-2, Sunday to win the $75,000 Wyler's Women's Classic.

"I didn't think Diane had anything to complain about in the way she played," said Evert. "She hit the ball very well. All the girls know how they have to play to beat me but it's hard for them to be able to do it."

Alcott wins last stop

CROSBY, Tex. (UPI) — Amy Alcott, who led since the first day—fired a final-round score of two-under-par, 70 Sunday to win the $30,000 LPGA Classic golf tournament by five strokes, her first victory of the 1977 tour.

Parsons narrow winner

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — Benny Parsons lost a substantial lead when he ran out of gas with 50 miles to go but edged past Cale Yarborough a few laps later to win the National 500 stock car race Sunday.

Parsons put his Chevrolet in front of the pack in lap 151 of the 334-lap event at the Charlotte Motor Speedway and moved to a 24-second lead over Yarborough. He was within 12 seconds of lapping Yarborough's Chevrolet when he ran out of gas going into the first turn on lap 297 — the lap in which he planned to make a pit stop. Yarborough moved ahead of him and pulled into the pit the next morning, taking the lead. Parsons coasted around the 1.5-mile track and was about six seconds behind Yarborough after his pit stop with just over 50 miles to go.

Andretti runs dry, loses

MOSPORT, Ontario (UPI) — Jody Scheckter of South Africa grabbed the lead from Mario Andretti, who dropped out with two laps left, and raced home to win the Canadian Grand Prix Sunday.

Scheckter's Wolf was more than two miles behind Andretti when the American pulled his Lotus into the pits. Only James Hunt of Britain had challenged Andretti until Andretti dropped out.

Patrick Depailler of France was second in his Tyrro and Jochen Mass of Germany driving McLaren was third.

Hunt's McLaren was eliminated on the 61st lap of the 80-lap race when he was knocked off the track by his teammate Mass.

The race had belonged to Andretti from the start until the engine of his Lotus blew with two laps remaining and Victory in sight. Only Hunt had challenged the American, winner of four Grand Prix events this year — more than any other driver.

Hunt in his McLaren and Andretti were far ahead of the pack until the engine failure. Andretti was two miles ahead of Scheckter when the American's engine died in a cloud of smoke.

Neither Hunt, who would have won except for the collision with Mass, nor Andretti were available for comment after the race.

Judge tells woman to reveal vote or be jailed

... cast disputed vote in mayoral election

C.N.Y. Times News Service
ANN ARBOR, Mich. — By next week, 21-year-old Susan F. VanHattum, a junior at the University of Michigan here, could be viewing the world from the inside of a jail cell.

Earlier this week, Judge James J. Kelley of the state Circuit Court cited Miss VanHattum, a mathematics major from Grand Rapids, Mich., for contempt of court after she repeatedly but politely refused an order by the judge to tell how she voted in the city's mayoral election last April 5. The election is being contested by Louis D. Belcher, a Republican, who lost to Mayor Albert A. Wheeler, a Democrat, by a margin of one vote.

At a hearing here on Tuesday, the judge warned Miss VanHattum that she could be imprisoned "until you decide to unlock the prison gates with your answer."

Despite the warning, Miss VanHattum persisted in refusing to disclose how she voted, stating that she had been raised to believe that a vote was secret. She was cited and ordered sent to the county jail. She was held at the court, however, and after about an hour and a half, including a few moments in handcuffs, she was ordered released until next Tuesday, when testimony in the case is scheduled to resume. At that time, Judge Kelley said he expects her to have made up her mind whether to cooperate.

His decision to release her was apparently the result of some second thoughts over possible community reaction to such a move, and to the fact that another woman, Diane Latinski, also refused to divulge the name of the person for whom she voted. The judge warned her that she could be held in contempt if she continued to refuse to tell how she voted, and ordered her to return to the court with a decision next Tuesday.

"I assumed, everybody would do that," Miss

VanHattum said in an interview Thursday when asked about her confrontation with the judge over the secrecy of her vote. "The whole point of having the voting in the booths and all is, so nobody would know—I think anybody would have done what I did," she said.

This question of one's right to privacy versus the government's right to know emerged in this case through a peculiar set of circumstances in which the two women and 18 of their neighbors became involved through no fault of their own.

The group apparently voted illegally in the election because they lived in townships within the city limits. The city clerk's office issued them voter registration cards at the addresses in the various communities based on readings of city maps that appeared to include them in the city. None of the voters have been charged with vote fraud.

The question of nonresidents' voting in the election was raised in Belcher's litigation; thus, Miss VanHattum and the others were ordered to testify. It was originally agreed by counsel for both mayoral candidates, sources close to the court action said, that the group would not be asked to disclose how they voted, but only whether they had voted and whether they had subsequently been advised that they had voted illegally.

However, Robert L. Henry Jr., counsel—for Belcher, surprised the court Tuesday morning by citing two previous Michigan Supreme Court rulings, one in 1929 and the other in 1931, that held that persons who voted illegally could be forced to tell the name of the person for whom they had voted.

Miss VanHattum was the first person called to testify.

"The history of the secret ballot is essential to democracy, yet there are two Michigan cases that purport to carve an exception," said Jonathan I. Rose, the 34-year-old director of the campus Legal Aid service from which Miss VanHattum sought help after, as she put it in her interview, "a couple of rounds" with the judge. Because she felt her court appearance would be a routine one, she did not solicit legal help until she was put on the stand in the court session.

Rose said he would ask the judge to reverse himself on the contempt citation.
