Daredevil Red Adair scores again

TAFT, Calif. (UPI) — Texan oil-well firefighter Red Adair proved once again he is a man of his word.

Adair, 62, a 5-foot-6 daredevil who makes a living out of facing danger and winning, was called to extinguish the 3-day-old Elk Hills Naval Oil Reserve well fire which killed three men.

Adair told authorities it would take him four hours to extinguish the flames. His forecast was right on target Thursday. He used plastic explosives to snuff the flames.

And he wrapped up his job by putting a close valve on the well before flying back to Houston.

Adair, a legendary figure with some 1,000 victories over well fires to his credit in a 30-year career, didn't stop to talk with reporters — as is his custom. But the Navy said he termed the job "routine."

The blaze, which sent flames shooting hundreds of feet into the air, began Tuesday with an underground explosion in the 7,000-foot deep well. Three men who had been in a basket on the tower were killed instantly.

The Elk Hills Preserve — in a desert region 140 miles north of Los Angeles — is a 16,000-acre area rich in oil set aside by the government for military needs. Part of it was recently opened to commercial exploitation, but the well which blew up was one of the government's.

In explaining why Adair was called into action, Navy Cmdr. Roger Martin said, "He's the only individual we know who could put out a fire of this type in the time he did."

This was Adair's first big job since corraling the flames in the North Sea blowout last April.

Airwest threatens Gem flight halt

BOISE (UPI) — Hughes Airwest has threatened to suspend intrastate service unless the Public Utilities Commission delays an order to reduce the Boise-Lewiston fare by $5 and file an application to operate in Idaho.

The airline has petitioned the PUC for a rehearing of its order to reduce the fare and file the application and to delay implementation of the order pending action on the rehearing petition.

The PUC ordered the fare reduction and operation application after Jay Shelley, Lewiston, filed a complaint saying the airline charged the same one-way fare between Boise and Lewiston as it did between Boise and Spokane, 90 miles farther by air.

Airwest contends it does not operate wholly within the state and therefore is not subject to PUC regulation. But airline officials said the company will not ignore the PUC order.

Should the PUC not agree to delay the order, the airline said it will impose "an embargo on the transportation of purely local traffic, resulting wholly between points within the State of Idaho."

Kreps doubts balanced budget

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of Commerce Juanita Kreps kept talking about the need for a prosperous economy and, although she never actually said so, reporters were convinced that she does not believe President Carter can balance the budget by 1981.

The cat-and-mouse game was played Thursday at a luncheon sponsored by the Brookings Institution for reporters and news executives who met to discuss an experimental program to improve economic and business reporting.

One of the first questions concerned Carter's announced intention of balancing the federal budget by 1981, a goal which has become imcreasingly remote in view of the sluggish economy, but which the President has never publicly disavowed.

Mrs. Kreps said a balanced budget "should not be a goal but the result of high, sustained spending. The only hope of doing so is to have a highly - prosperous, growing economy for the next three years."

Airwest, which with its predecessors has provided air service to Idaho since 1946, operates 27 daily flights in Idaho linking Boise, Lewiston, Twin Falls, Pocatello and Idaho Falls. Last year, the company said, an average of 127 passengers a day used its services at these stations.

Prepay care, cut costs

NEW YORK (UPI) — The government's top health officer says prepaid medical plans emphasizing preventive care could reduce the nation's hospital bills by billions of dollars each year.

Joseph A. Califano Jr., secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, said Thursday corporations could help trim hospital bills by 30 to 60 percent by offering employees Health Maintenance Organizations — prepaid health plans for which members pay a fixed fee, then get treatment at what amounts to wholesale rates.

Califano plugged the plan at a luncheon honoring Dr. Sidney R. Garfield, 71, architect of the nation's first HMO. Garfield designed the Kaiser-Permanente Medical Care Program in California in the 1930s for employees of construction magnate Henry J. Kaiser.

That plan — which won the Fourth Annual Lyndon Baines Johnson Foundation Award for Garfield — now covers 3 million people in California, Hawaii, Colorado, Oregon and Ohio. Lady Byrd Johnson, widow of the late President, presented the $25,000 award to Garfield.

Califano said he has urged the nation's 500 largest corporations to offer HMO membership to employees and to take the lead in developing such health care systems because "they can reduce hospitalization by 30 to 60 percent."

Califano has scheduled a national conference on HMOs in Washington Feb. 7 and will invite 500 corporate leaders and health industry experts, labor leaders and government officials.

Califano said the government intends to "cut the red tape" and get HMOs moving.

"We want to explain the advantages of HMOs and discuss how we can work with them to make available HMOs for the employees of every large employer in the nation," Califano said.

"To each profit-squeezed, cost-conscious executive of a major company in this nation, I would put the following question:

"Why not provide the same high quality health care that your employees now are receiving for 10 percent, 20 percent, or even 40 percent less than you now are paying?"

Under HMO, he said, subscribers pay a set amount each year and get all medical services through HMO physicians, laboratories, X-ray departments and other health care facilities.

Doing pre-testing, X-ray and laboratory work on an outpatient basis sharply reduces the excess X-rays and often needless battery of laboratory tests performed in hospitals, thereby trimming costs, provides needed services at reasonable costs and reducing needless hospitalization and operations.

"Unlike physicians in the fee-for-services system — who only get paid if they furnish more care and who get paid more if they furnish more expensive care — the HMO doctor has an incentive not to engage in wasteful hospitalization, not to run repetitive or unnecessary tests, not to refer patients to unnecessary specialists.

If hospitalization was reduced just 10 percent in 1976, he said, overall health care bills would have dropped by $2 billion.

American prisoner transfer approved

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter today signed bills to permit the transfer of American prisoners in Mexican and Canadian jails to U.S. facilities and extend for four years federal assistance to refugees from Indochina.

In a Rose Garden ceremony, Carter signed bills which:

- Authorize the attorney general to change the status of Indochinese refugees — who have settled in the United States to permanent resident, making them eligible for citizenship more rapidly.
- The measure also extends for four years, until the 1981 fiscal year, assistance to the refugees. The outlay for fiscal 1978 is $118 million and the total cost for four years is an estimated $300 million.

Establish authority for implementing treaties with Mexico and Canada to allow the transfer of incarcerated foreign nationals to facilities in their native lands. An American serving a sentence in Mexico — and vice versa — could be shifted to a prison in the United States if he so desired, under terms of the bill.

Mexico is ready to implement the treaties immediately following the signing of the bill. However, Canada is not prepared to put the treaty into effect until later this year.

Under the legislation, the attorney general will oversee the prisoner transfers.

Storm pounds Oregon

By United Press International

Gale-force winds, high waves and rain pounded the Oregon coast today, flooding meadows, tossing logs onto highways and forcing motorists to abandon automobiles on beaches.

Authorities ordered people off beaches in some communities and blocked off roads to prevent drivers from getting into danger areas.

Michael Padberg, a motel operator at Depoe Bay, Ore., said the storm was "one of the worst in 15 to 20 years."

Towering waves washed into his bar 25 feet above the beach and lapped into the motel lobby 15 feet higher.

"My big screen TV set and all my liquor is floating around in the bar," he said.

Waves also gushed into a motel at Lincoln City, Ore., and guests in first floor rooms had to move to higher quarters.

Fog huddled over most of the nation east of the Rockies.

No earning limit for elderly?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House says elderly Americans should be allowed to earn any amount of wages without losing Social Security benefits.

If it stands, the decision could profoundly affect the income and working lives of many of the 22 million Americans who have reached the age of 65.

But the proposal still faces an uncertain future in Congress.

Retirees under age 72 now may earn only $3,000 in wages without penalty. Above that they lose $1 in benefits for each $2 in wages until all their benefit is gone.

The House voted 268 to 149 Thursday, as part of a bill to finance Social Security into the next century, to raise this "earnings limit" for retirees between the ages of 65 and 72 to $4,000 next year, $5,000 in 1980, $5,500 in 1981 and to eliminate it entirely in 1982.

The bill raises employer and employee Social Security payroll taxes, particularly for high income workers over the next decade, and sets benefits for the next 75 years, so each generation of retirees would get about the same relative standard of living as those who retired in 1976.

Removal of the earnings limit not only would allow retirees to work without penalty; it also would permit workers who reach 65 and are not covered by mandatory retirement to stay in their jobs and at the same time draw full Social Security.

Rep. William Ketchum, R-Calif., author of the proposal, said millions of retirees on inadequate pensions must work to maintain a reasonable standard of living and avoid selling their homes.

Opponents argued that the provision would give an undeserved windfall to "fat cats," since a 65-year-old doctor or lawyer could earn $100,000 and collect full Social Security.

Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., floor manager of the bill, said the provision would add to national unemployment and would change the very nature of Social Security from a "retirement program," under which people receive benefits after they largely stop working, to an "annuity program," under which they are paid just because they reach a certain age.

A version of the bill in the Senate Finance Committee only would raise the earnings limit to $6,000 in 1979. Ullman said he hopes "some limit" will be imposed when the bills get to a House-Senate conference.

Two related bills — raising from 65 to 70 the age at which most employers could require a person to retire — passed both houses in differing versions and are in conference.

Another related proposal — delaying the age of full retirement benefits from 65 to 68 by stages between the years 2000 and 2011 — was withdrawn at the last moment in the House, when its Republican sponsors saw it would get few votes.

Peaceful death gains approval

CONCORD, N.H. (UPI) — The New Hampshire House has voted to give dying patients a chance to die in peace, without being forced to use costly life-saving machines.

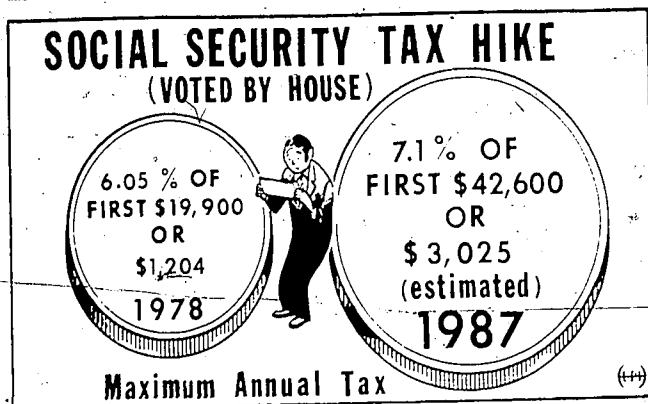

By a 197-92 vote Thursday, House members overrode Gov. Meldrim Thomson's veto of a bill giving legal status to "living wills," documents in which a person may provide in advance for the withholding or withdrawal of extraordinary means of life support in case of mortal injury or terminal illness.

"I have personal experience with old people who don't want to go to the hospital with a terminal illness. They are staying home so they can die peacefully. When the time comes they want to go," Rep. Gene Daniels, D-Franklin, said during an impassioned debate before the vote.

Opponents said the measure could lead to mercy killings.

Compromise hinted on energy measures

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate negotiators on energy legislation insist the worst gasguzzler cars should be banned, but also are exploring compromises that could get House conferees to go along.

It is the last big issue for a House-Senate conference committee in its consideration of energy conservation, the first of four complex energy bills the negotiators must hammer out from vastly different

House and Senate versions.

House-Senate negotiators continued their arduous sessions amid signals from the White House that compromise was possible on the overall energy package.

Carter refused on a nationally broadcast news conference to say whether he would veto a congressional energy bill that allowed natural gas price ceilings higher than the $1.75 per thousand cubic feet he requested. But he said he may have to "do some compromising" in order to get an acceptable measure through Congress.

One of the most controversial features of the energy package still lies in the Senate, where a battle is under way over a $40 billion, eight-year package of tax credits and incentives to encourage energy conservation and production.

Once the Senate's version of Carter's energy tax plan is passed, it will join other planks of the energy plan at the conference committee.

The Senate Thursday gave Senate Finance Committee Chairman Russell Long, D-La., the blank check he wants to write an energy tax bill with House negotiators.

It also agreed to impose a tax on industries which could use gas or oil but could use coal. It was the first tax increase approved by the Senate, which so far has gone along with Long's plan to provide financial incentives rather than taxes to win energy objectives.

A home insulation tax credit for individuals also is likely in the final bill. A $200 million tax credit for inter-city bus companies was killed.

The Senate conservation bill included an outright prohibition against any 1980 model car — the ones that came out in late 1979 — getting fewer than 16 miles per gallon of fuel.

Abortion fund stalemate continues

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate and House remain firm — neither willing to budge and Congress remains totally stalemated on when federal funds can be used for abortions.

Another test vote Thursday showed the Senate does not plan to buckle and accept the more restrictive language demanded by the House.

And the message from two key congressmen is that the House will not accept the "weaker abortion" language approved by the Senate.

As a result, Senate and House negotiators will have to meet again although numerous attempts have failed to produce an agreement.

The stalemate has blocked passage of a $8 billion appropriations bill for the Departments of Health, Education and Welfare and Labor.

Congress approved stop-gap legislation which allowed continued funding of the two departments at current levels so employees could be paid. But that runs out Tuesday and the prospects of paydays loom again.

The Senate rejected 59 to 33 a resolution which would have instructed Senate negotiators to cave in and accept House language on abortions.

The vote was taken at the request of Reps. Daniel Flood,

D-Pa., and Robert Michel, R-Ill., the chief House conferees, who said recent votes in the House "clearly indicate" the Senate version would not be accepted.

The Senate wants language to allow the government to pay for abortions for women under Medicaid if the woman's life would be endangered if the pregnancy continued, in the case of rape or incest or "if the mother or fetus would suffer serious health damage."

The House language also provides federal funding for abortions if the woman's life is endangered by continued pregnancy. In the case of "forced" rape or incest, the House would only allow for "medical procedures" for prompt treatment and then only if the assault is reported to police.

Sen. Richard Schweiker, R-Pa., who offered the resolution, said he did so "to reach agreement and break the impasse. The House language is the best we can get."

But Sen. Edward Brooke, R-Mass., said it was time for the House to help seek a reasonable and humane compromise with the Senate.

"The House has not given one inch," Brooke said. "The House language is not a compromise in any sense of the word."

BOTH HANDS ON THE WHEEL.

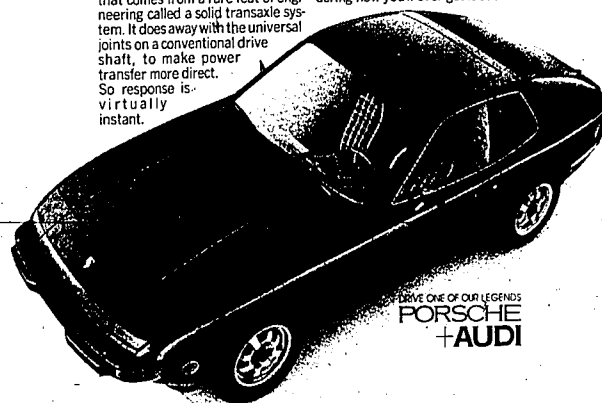

Now you can combine the ease of an automatic with the thrill of driving a Porsche.

Because we've made our Porsche 924 with an automatic option. It's the first fully automatic transmission ever in a Porsche.

But whether you choose the 924 with automatic or 4-speed manual, you'll get the driving excitement that comes from a rare feat of engineering called a solid transaxle system. It does away with the universal joints on a conventional drive shaft, to make power transfer more direct. So response is virtually instant.

The arrangement also gives the Porsche 924 an almost perfect 50-50 weight distribution and a low center of gravity. This helps keep the 924's body lean to a bare minimum even on tight curves.

Its sleek glass hatchback opens with a touch to reveal 18 cubic feet of carrying space. So even a golf bag will fit without wedging or wondering how you'll ever get it out.

Another thing that fits neatly into the hatchback is our optional sun roof. Once unlocked, it easily lifts out to brighten up any drive.

You breeze down the highway getting 30 mpg, 18 in the city. (EPA estimates for standard transmission.) Of course, your actual mileage may vary depending on how and where you drive, the condition of your car, and the options you choose.

Naturally, things like CIS fuel injection, overhead cam engine, rack-and-pinion steering and orthopedically designed bucket seats are standard equipment.

And while the 924 is everything you'd expect from a Porsche, it's less than you'd expect to pay.

Washington has mind of its own

$280 million question makes sham of hearings

A $280 million question mark is all that remains after the most recent hearings on whether southern Idaho will get a coal-powered electrical generating plant.

At hearings before the Idaho Public Utilities Commission this week, Idaho Power Company couldn't say how much their proposed 500,000 kilowatt electrical generating plant will cost.

Company officials guess the plant could cost anywhere from $490 million to $560 million — depending on where it is built.

But, Idaho Power officials add, these estimates are accurate only in the range of plus or minus 20 percent.

OK, if Idaho Power is 20 per cent low on its lowest estimate, their coal-fired plant might only cost Idaho electrical consumers a bargain $390 million.

But, a 20 per cent overrun on costs at the high end of their estimate would push the cost of the plant at something like $670 million.

That's a $280 million difference.

Idaho Power claims it can't be more precise in its cost estimates because the Public Utilities Commission hasn't given the utility a permit to build a plant at a particular site starting at a particular time.

Somehow, the company's statement seems to lead in a circle.

The Idaho Public Utilities Commission can't give a permit for a huge project like a coal-fired plant until it has a firm idea of how much the electricity from such a plant will cost.

And, the PUC can't compute the cost of electricity from an Idaho coal-fired plant until it knows how much the plant will cost to build.

This week's hearings underscore once again the need for the Idaho legislature to pass a comprehensive plant-siting bill giving the PUC the ironclad ability to find out the real costs of new electrical generating facilities in Idaho.

What foolishness to talk about approving a permit to build a coal-fired plant which could vary in price by $280 million.

WASHINGTON — The most interesting thing when you leave the nation's capital and travel around the country is that everyone believes that Washington has a mind of its own. I know this because I am asked such questions as

ART BUCHWALD

"What does Washington think of Jimmy Carter?" or "How does Washington feel about Bert Lance?" or "When is Washington going to do something about my fuel bill?" Or, if you're talking to business executives, the question inevitably is "Why doesn't Washington leave us alone?"

It is fruitless to explain to people that Washington doesn't think at all, and if it has any feelings, it keeps them bottled up inside. A Washingtonian, whether he wants to or not, is expected to tell the people in the country what Washington is up to.

I find the best way to do this is to ask the taxi driver who is driving me to the airport to give me a briefing on Washington's thoughts. All taxi drivers in Washington, before they take their cabs out on the street, are handed a mimeographed sheet entitled, "What Washington is Thinking Today." Whenever they are asked a question they refer to the sheet and respond with the answer.

The other morning I was on my way to Boston and I said to my driver, "What does Washington think of Jimmy Carter today?"

He picked up his clipboard. "As of this morning he's in a lot of trouble with Congress on energy, the Panama Canal and tax reform. Washington feels that style is not enough. It wants results."

"Please don't go too fast. I want to write all this down," I told him. "What does Washington think about the three-martini lunch?"

"Washington is for the three-martini lunch, though it's willing to compromise on a two-martini lunch if the grass roots put too much pressure on Congress. But it would rather do without lunch if Carter cuts it down to one martini."

"How does Washington feel about Moscow?"

"Washington doesn't trust Moscow," he said, reading from his sheet. "But it believes that it is important to get along with Moscow even if it can't love it. Washington does feel warmer toward Moscow this week than it did last week."

but it is still holding its breath over SALT."

"How is Washington taking the South Korean scandal?" I asked.

"In its stride," the taxi driver replied. "Washington, of course, is very disappointed that Tongsun Park won't come back to testify, but it will have to live with other witnesses involved in the scandal. Washington doesn't believe it will have another Watergate on its hands, mainly because most of the people who will be indicted are no longer in Congress."

"Is Washington worried about the energy crisis?"

"Washington is worried about it but not panicking. Washington wants to forget the whole thing until after the 1978 elections."

We were almost at the airport. "What does

Washington think of our present tax laws?"

"It thinks they are a disgrace."

"One more question. What about sex in Washington?"

"Washington doesn't like sex any more than Los Angeles does. But it knows that as long as sex is available there is no way to stop Washington from having it. All one can hope for is that Washington will soon tire of it and get on with the business of running the country."

I gave the driver a large tip but it was worth it. After I finished speaking in Boston I received a standing ovation, and I heard one woman say to her husband as they were leaving the auditorium, "Isn't it great to hear what Washington is thinking straight from the horse's mouth?"

U.N. should create 'jail' for terrorists

© N.Y. Times Service
BUNN — The new type of anti-terrorist operation developed by Israel and the German Federal Republic at Entebbe and Mogadishu to rescue innocent hostages from skyjacked planes has manifold implications. It demonstrates that no haven or any country amoral enough to serve as a safe haven for terrorists' acts can be safe from retribution legitimized by either written or unwritten international codes of honor.

C.I. SULZBERGER

defeating or outwitting kidnappers, yes; but not means of ensuring the safety of travellers subject to surprise attack for either mercenary ransom or for exchange against legally imprisoned convicts.

My idea of a partial solution is simple. At least to state, The U.N. — and I am insufficiently expert as to whether this can be done through the Assembly alone or by the Security Council — should assume the burden of providing a prison for international criminals; should offer an agreed suite, should allot upkeep costs and afford a (preferably rotating) mixed police force to safeguard this world jail.

One frequent provocation to skyjacking is the desire of terrorist groups to take hostages for exchange against imprisoned prisoners members of their own or sympathetic organizations who have been convicted for legal offenses which they claim are purely "political-military."

Most countries abjure the death penalty for any crime. This means that the more desperadoes are caught and jailed for life, the more innocent potential hostages are threatened.

An individual nation is thus faced with the responsibility of either caving in (like Japan in Bangladesh) or gambling (as West Germany did with such brilliant success in Somalia) when individual terrorists or ransoms are involved and under full national control of the capital affected, such as Tokyo or Bonn — so long as it imprisons live terrorists.

What would have been the position of Helmut Schmidt had members of the Baader-Meinhof gang whose freedom was demanded by the unimpaired Mogadishu victims all been incarcerated in an internationally protected Saint Helena, under suzerainty exercised by the U.N. The U.N. could have said: "We cannot accede to demands of any member or group threatened or not. This is our statutory obligation and cannot be altered except by duly legal means."

The burden of decision must shift. In this increasingly complex, increasingly interdependent age no single capital should be asked to assume duties of a humanitarian nature that exceed even a superpower's national responsibilities.

There are many isolated spots — like napoleonic Saint Helena — available for such a jail. It is unlikely that, even if only the five permanent members of the Security Council are in charge of it, they would unanimously agree to release any member to blackmail.

The funding of such an undertaking should be proportionately shared by every U.N. member. The moral burden is equal, the need imperative. Had this system prevailed, Chancellor Schmidt could merely have replied to blackmailers: "I could not cede even if I wished. Ask U.N."

"All those in favor of us say 'Aye.'"

South African government prepares to fight sanctions

London Telegraph
JOHANNESBURG — The South African government is prepared not only to counter international sanctions but also to retaliate in the interests of national survival with measures which would have a severe impact on other African and some Western economies.

This emerged as the consensus among government and independent economists yesterday at the United Nations Security Council debate appeared to be moving toward a resolution which could impose some form of sanctions on South Africa.

The United Nations action was caused by South Africa's policy of racial separation and apartheid by its recent banning of black and white leaders opposed to that policy and by its closing of two major black newspapers.

Government officials and leaders of the private sector have expedited contingency planning to counter the threat of sanctions, be they selective on oil, arms or investment of a total trade boycott as applied to Rhodesia for the past 11 years.

One expert, Prof. Arnt Spandau of the business economics department at the University of the Witwatersrand, said that an economic boycott of South Africa would be bearable although living standards would drop drastically.

More significantly, Prof. Spandau calculates that a trade boycott of South Africa would increase Britain's unemployment by 70,000 and reduce British exports by many millions of dollars.

He estimated that a 20 per cent drop in foreign investment would cause the disposable income in South Africa to fall by perhaps 100 million dollars, and unemployment — predominantly among blacks — to increase by 37,000. A similar exercise on a 50 per cent drop in investment would lead to a drop of more than 200 million in disposable income and three 90,000 out of work.

An oil embargo against South Africa — another suggestion that has been put before the United Nations — would not have the impact that many nations seem to think, according to the Johannesburg Financial Mail.

Only about a quarter of the republic's energy needs rely on imported crude oil. South Africa pioneered the oil-from-coal process and the existing Sasol One plant provides five per cent of current fuel demand.

But Sasol Two, a much larger oil-from-coal plant, is due to be commissioned in 1981 and some experts estimate the two plants might be able to produce up to 40 per cent of South Africa's fuel requirements.

In the meantime, South Africa has been hoarding crude oil supplies in sealed and converted disused mineshafts since the early 1960s. On present consumption, the secret supplies could keep the country running for up to four years — much longer if private and non-essential consumption was scaled down.

South Africa is self-sufficient in all important agricultural products and is a major exporter of foodstuffs. Several black African states have relied on South African produce — clandestinely exported when their own crops have failed.

In mineral production, South Africa is closer than any other country — with the possible exception of Russia — to being self-sufficient. The republic has the largest known deposits of gold, platinum, chromium, manganese, vanadium and fluorspar and is richly endowed with coal, copper, diamonds, iron ore, lead, limestone, mica, nickel, phosphates, titanium and uranium.

Foreign business interest and investment and Western strategic requirements from South Africa's mineral resources lead many independent economic observers in Johannesburg to doubt if international sanctions could ever be effective.

There would be far too many loopholes and far too much national interest at stake for sanctions to work, a leading banker predicted yesterday.

Under economists point to the Rhodesian example where a much smaller, unrecognized and far less wealthy nation has successfully withstood full United Nations sanctions since 1966.

There are many other hidden pitfalls for the world which would flow from boycotts of South Africa, not least the fact that about 500,000 migrant workers from neighboring black states are employed in the republic.

A senior government source hinted recently that South Africa would have no alternative but to repatriate migrant workers to Lesotho, Swaziland, Botswana, Mozambique, Malawi and Angola — if sanctions were clamped on the country.

As the earnings and other benefits from the employment make substantial contributions to these countries' economies, it is argued in Pretoria that the West would be called on to make massive aid contributions by way of compensation.

The sanctions threat, even as it stands, is having an adverse effect on major political moves in southern Africa, notably the Western-backed plans to bring about black majority rule in South West Africa and Rhodesia.

Being Washington outsider tough

By HELEN THOMAS
UPI White House Reporter
WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter is learning that in Washington it's better to be an insider than an outsider.

Carter, in his campaign, said "insiders" in Washington had lost their pipeline to the people and were governing by remote control. He blamed the bureaucracy in Washington and the arrogance of those in power for many of the nation's problems.

But, since he has been in Washington, the President has found that you have to be an insider to know the levers of power. His frustrations are apparent. He realizes now that he was to retrench and to take one step at a time.

Some of the goals he set before taking office have had to be put on the shelf temporarily as his first year is coming to a close. Now, Carter apparently will be satisfied to achieve a strong energy program to start the country on the road to conservation.

Being an outsider, he has not had the clout with the independent-minded Senate and the influence on the leaders who can make or break his program. From any point of view, the Democratic-controlled Senate has snubbed his appeals and devastated his energy proposals.

Meantime, to salvage what he can, Carter has had to hold his fire against members in his own party who have contributed vastly to his problems.

Carter's top White House aides have begun a series of meetings, chaired by Vice President Walter Mondale, to find out what went wrong along the way and to get the administration back on the track.

At their first meeting, they decided that the President had basically tried to go after too much in this first year. Since then, the administration has tried to set more realistic goals and some initiatives are being left by the wayside. The proposal for a consumer agency, which is opposed by big business and will take an all-out administration battle, is being temporarily set aside.

Carter still intends to unveil a tax reform program before Congress adjourns, according to aides, even though it could not be acted upon until next year.

Some of Carter's current problems may be due to his own high hopes and campaign promises. As President, he finds it is not that easy to deliver, but his constituents all expect the most. As a consequence, the groups Carter appealed to — the blacks, the poor, and labor are somewhat disappointed.

When he traveled across the country last weekend, Carter found that he was being faulted for not espousing instant solutions. He had come to listen and found that was not enough.

With his promises being called in question by his own party, the President is also being branded inept by the Republicans, who are beginning to entrench over their own political prospects.

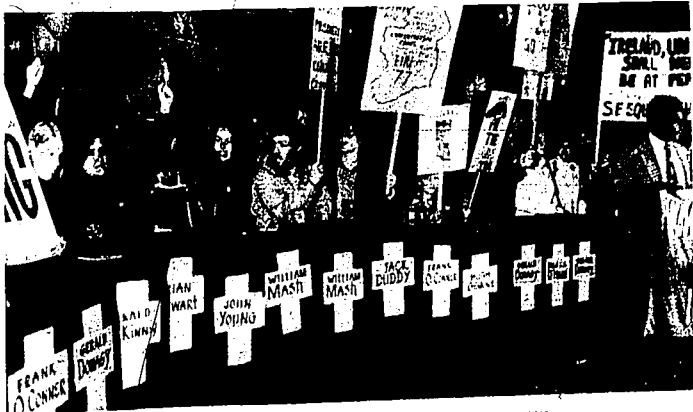

As an outsider who suddenly appeared on the Washington scene, Carter also lacks the unwavering dedicated loyalists in his own party who can help him over the rough spots until he does get his bearings.

The Democrats are individually marching to their own drums instead of listening to the White House trumpet.

For all that, most presidents would prefer that their accomplishments be judged in the pages of history, and so instantly.

But Carter appears to remain fairly philosophical about his own presidency. He believes that he has walked in where other Presidents feared to tread and that his own new initiatives, the belief in charge, instead of the status quo — in foreign policy particularly where the problems have been around for a long time — has been the cause of many of his political headaches.

So he continues to say, "I'm learning. I'm eager to learn," and as he does, he feels he will be able to rack up a record he can run on in four years.

IRISH-AMERICAN GROUP OUTSIDE BRITISH CONSULATE
... Prince Charles greeted by protesters in San Francisco

Protesters follow prince

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Britain's Prince Charles, followed by a knot of Irish-American protesters with beards and mock collars, is doing the tourist "bit" in the Golden Gate City — taking a ride on a cable car and strolling on Fisherman's Wharf.

Prince Charles, 28, winding up a nine-day tour of the United States is planning a tour of California's Napa Valley wine country, a trip to the opera and a sail on San Francisco Bay. He departs for Australia Sunday.

But his arrival by private jet from Los Angeles Thursday night was marred by the largest demonstrations the Prince of Wales has encountered during his American tour. An estimated 300 demonstrators followed him to three private receptions.

Protesters driving three black hearses with signs that said: "Prince Charles, Stop Killing Irish Children," circled the San Francisco Press Club during a reception there for the heir to the British throne and the working press.

The meeting with some 75 members of the news media was billed as a "social function," and the dapper young prince, dressed in a conservative gray suit, moved about shaking hands with reporters, attempting to converse while television crews and still cameramen jostled in close for pictures.

The Prince of Wales went "on the record" for about 10 minutes, fielding low key questions about his visit which he described as "very interesting and extremely hectic."

"I didn't think it would be as friendly and as hectic as it was," he said. "I've had my hand cut by all sorts of ladies with long nails."

A query about American women brought this lighthearted response: "I have a suspicion of American mothers who want me to meet their daughters."

Of the demonstrators, he said, "They're being very polite. We've seen only a few demonstrations on this tour. Anyway, I'm used to it, coming from Wales."

The prince went from the Press Club to evening receptions at the home of the British Consul general and at the posh Bohemian Club.

About 300 shouting demonstrators placed 13 coffins with the names of persons killed in Ireland on the sidewalk in front of the mansion of Consul-General Ian K. near.

Body may be missing union leader

WASHINGTON — The coroner of a rural Pennsylvania county said Thursday night he was asking the Federal Bureau of Investigation for the dental chart of James R. Hoffa, missing former president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, in hopes of identifying a skeleton found Monday in thick underbrush near Bethany, Pa.

Robert F. Jennings, coroner of Wayne County, said he spoke with Hoffa's son, James, Thursday night and compared the skeleton's height, hair, and expensive gold dental work with what James Hoffa could tell him about his father.

"There is a strong indication it could be Mr. Hoffa," Jennings said.

A spokesman for the FBI's field office in Detroit said the agency would send the dental charts and cooperate in every way but that it had not yet opened a formal inquiry into the discovery.

JIMMY HOFFA
... missing 2 years

were completed Thursday afternoon.

Jennings said the examination had shown that the skeleton was of a white male from 55 to 60 years of age, with a height from 5 feet 5 and 5 feet 7 inches. Hoffa was 62 when he disappeared in 1975. He was 5 feet, 5 and one-half inches tall. Hoffa, his son said, also had extensive gold dental work.

Jennings said he had not thought immediately that the skeleton might be that of Hoffa, but the dismemberment led him to believe it might be that of the victim of a gangland slaying.

He said he had called Hoffa's son after inquiries from members of the press about the possible identity of the skeleton.

The FBI has conducted a nationwide investigation into Hoffa's disappearance that has brought dozens of witnesses before a federal grand jury in Detroit and prompted thousands of tips about his whereabouts. FBI agents have verified the identities of a number of bodies initially thought to be that of Hoffa but each has turned out to be that of someone else.

Hoffa disappeared in the early afternoon of July 30, 1975, from the parking lot of a suburban Bloomfield Hills, Mich., restaurant where he reportedly had gone to meet Anthony Giacalone, a reputed organized crime figure in Detroit.

TV delayed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House has voted to televise its sessions on a permanent basis. But not now.

The House Thursday endorsed a resolution saying "a permanent broadcasting system is both feasible and desirable," but the Rules Committee should keep studying, and report back by Feb. 15, 1978.

A number of committees have studied the issue for the past four years.

Tax credit for elderly gains nod

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate approved an amendment Thursday sponsored by Sens. Frank Church and Pete Domenici to provide a refundable tax credit of $75 to elderly households with adjusted gross incomes not exceeding $7,500 a year.

The refund is designed to provide relief from rising energy costs for persons 65 or older, especially in view of the Carter Administration's proposed crude oil equalization tax, which would push utility rates higher.

A taxpayer's adjusted gross income includes all taxable income from all sources, less business deductions. For households with higher incomes, the credit would be phased out gradually as income reaches $12,500 a year. The credit would decrease by $15 for each 1,000 of adjusted gross income above $7,500.

Church, chairman of the Senate Committee on Aging, said "all Americans have been affected in one form or another by rising energy costs."

House conservatives hoping to thwart approval of the treaties, which are considered only by the Senate, have been pushing for a House vote on canal property in hopes of thwarting the treaties.

However, a Metcalfe aide said the Chicago congressman wants a House vote on canal properties only to protect the rights of the House to have a say in such a transfer.

Deficit 'only' $45 billion

© Washington Star

WASHINGTON — Final budget figures for the last fiscal year show a deficit of $45 billion, or $23 billion less than President Carter's first estimate in February — mainly because spending fell short of estimates, the administration reported Thursday.

However, most of the revisions had been cranked into previous interim estimates, so the final figures were close to what financial analysts had expected.

Issuing the final figures for fiscal 1977, the Office of Management and Budget said that the deficit for fiscal 1978, the current year that started Oct. 1, probably would be less than the official forecast of $61.5 billion.

"It is clear that there has been a general tendency to overestimate the amount of funds that can be spent," the joint statement said. It said OMB was reviewing fiscal 1978 estimates and would issue revisions soon.

Treasury and OMB reported these figures for fiscal 1977:

— Expenditures — $401.9 billion, down from Carter's February estimate of $416.6 billion and the July revision of $406.4 billion, but slightly above last month's estimate of $404 billion. Spending in the preceding 12 months totaled $399.2 billion.

— Revenues — $356.9 billion, compared with $348.5 billion in February, $358.3 billion in July and last month, and $308.6 billion in the preceding 12 months.

— Deficit — $45 billion, down from $68 billion in February, $48.1 billion in July and $57.7 billion in the preceding 12 months.

The Ford administration had predicted in January, 1976, that the fiscal 1977 deficit would be $43 billion, but raised the estimate to $57.2 billion last January, just before leaving office.

Some economists suspect that the reduction of the deficit is partly responsible for the sluggishness of the economy's expansion. They say revenues in excess of estimates have held back purchasing power, while the shortfall of spending has curtailed the government's contribution to the economic upturn.

Transfer vote asked

© Chicago Sun-Times

WASHINGTON — Rep. Ralph H. Metcalfe, D-Ill., chairman of the House Panama Canal Subcommittee, has introduced a resolution urging Senate ratification of the canal treaties, but calling for a separate House vote on transfer of property to Panama.

House conservatives hoping to thwart approval of the treaties, which are considered only by the Senate, have been pushing for a House vote on canal property in hopes of thwarting the treaties.

However, a Metcalfe aide said the Chicago congressman wants a House vote on canal properties only to protect the rights of the House to have a say in such a transfer.

Enthusiasm not dampened

BILLY GRAHAM

CINCINNATI (UPI) — His eyes dart across the assembled thousands, pausing to glance quickly at one section of the arena, then another.

His hands seem to dance continuously in the air as he fings a finger skyward to emphasize a point, then sweeps his arms across the crowd, almost embracing the faithful in his next thought.

And with a square-jawed face that looks like it should be on Mt. Rushmore, he preaches the gospel of old time religion.

It's the sixth day of a 10-day Billy Graham crusade, and the Rev. Dr. Graham is at his oratorical finest.

Yet the world-famous evangelist came to Cincinnati under a cloud.

Jury finds Ray guilty

WARTHURG, Tenn. (UPI) — James Earl Ray was found guilty Thursday night of breaking out of the Tennessee prison where he is serving 99 years for the murder of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.

Ray remained emotionless when the nine-man jury returned the verdict after deliberating two hours, 55 minutes. He received an additional one to two years added to his sentence, but the jury could have added as many as five years.

Ray, 49, testified he scaled the wall at Brushy Mountain State Prison June 10 with six other convicts because he thought that was the only way he would win a new trial for the 1968 King assassination in Memphis.

"Was he really seeking to escape from a penitentiary or trying to break into a courtroom?" defense attorney Mark Lane asked the jury.

"It was my intention after I was out of a couple of months to get in touch with the U.S. Attorney General, Griffin Bell, to arrange for a trial in the King case," Ray said.

After the verdict, defense attorneys said they intend to file a motion for a new trial and Circuit Judge Ray Asbury scheduled a hearing Nov. 28. Lane and local attorney George Buxton said they were elated because the jury took so long to arrive at its decision.

O'Hair disrupts bingo party

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Not even church-sponsored bingo games are exempt from atheist Madalyn Murray O'Hair's campaign for separation of church and state.

"I'm fed up with what's going on in the city of Austin," the atheist leader said Thursday. "Every week I'm going to find something wrong in this city."

She said she will continue to disrupt church-sponsored bingo games and prayers at functions such as city council meetings.

Mrs. O'Hair Wednesday broke up a church-sponsored bingo game at San Jose Catholic Church and tried unsuccessfully to make several citizen's arrests of participants.

"She came charging in like a Brahma bull," said Ray Martinez, 20, who attended the fund-raising bingo game.

"She came in grabbing bingo cards, pushing and shoving people, and a man who was with her started punching people," said Hattie Barnett, another participant.

Mrs. O'Hair said police have ignored her complaints about the illegal gambling activity.

"The Roman Catholic Church has enough punch that they have been able to defy this law with impunity," she said.

Changes seen in nation's mood

OMAHA, Neb. (UPI) — Pollster George Gallup Jr. says the nation's mood is "more upbeat than at any other time in the last 15 years."

"We're beginning to feel better about ourselves," Gallup said Thursday. "and we have good reason to."

Gallup, 46, said Americans are beginning to put problems created by Vietnam, Watergate, presidential assassinations and student and racial unrest behind them.

The pollster said religious awareness in the form of a "profound religious revival" and volunteerism are increasing, along with a growing understanding of world problems and the interdependency of nations.

Gallup, speaking to a district Nebraska State Education Association convention, said, "It is my belief the best years of this nation are yet to come."

Gallup cited advances in medicine, larger college enrollments, and declines in prejudice because of race, sex or religion.

But he said churches are failing to utilize increased religious awareness among the nation's young people who he said have a "tremendously high spiritual level."

Gallup, 46, said Americans are beginning to put problems created by Vietnam, Watergate, presidential assassinations and student and racial unrest behind them.

The pollster said religious awareness in the form of a "profound religious revival" and volunteerism are increasing, along with a growing understanding of world problems and the interdependency of nations.

Gallup, speaking to a district Nebraska State Education Association convention, said, "It is my belief the best years of this nation are yet to come."

Caldwell woman 'top teacher'

BOISE (UPI) — Josephine K. Marshall, a Caldwell High School chemistry teacher who finds young people "warm and receptive to most learning experiences," has been named Idaho Teacher of the Year.

Mrs. Marshall was notified of the honor by Dr. Roy Truby, state superintendent of public instruction. She will represent Idaho in the National Teacher of the Year Award Program with the national winner being announced next spring.

"Your dedication as a teacher, your ability to instill the love of learning in your students and your contributions to your community are characteristics of the professionalism which resulted in your selection,"

Truby wrote her. Mrs. Marshall's principal, Gene W. Moylan, credited her inspirational leadership to her own hard work and positive professional example.

"Students seem to catch these vibes of her enthusiasm for her work, humanness and empathy for them as she makes demands on them to excel," Moylan said.

Mrs. Marshall has taught the past seven years at Caldwell High and prior to that taught chemistry, science and mathematics at Parma and Wilder high schools. She began her teaching career in Newark, Ill., in 1947 (allowing the graduation from Monmouth College. She received a master's degree from the College of Idaho in 1975. In praising today's young people, she said she admires her students for the "openness with which they approach a problem, the insight which young people have today that I was not aware of and their warmth and sensitivity for one another and for me."

"It's a thrill for me to see students respond to a challenge," she said. "There is great personal satisfaction for me when I can see a new concept suddenly catching fire within a single student."

"The students are so appreciative of extra help I can give. I found the young people to be warm and receptive to most learning experiences and I am able to develop a special kind of personal teacher-student relationship which I find gives added meaning and purpose to my life."

Caldwell School Superintendent Darrel Deide called Mrs. Marshall "an asset to this school district" and said she would be an asset to any district in the United States.

"She is a very creative teacher and one with the ability to meet the needs of both the academically gifted students and those who are less talented," he said. "Her success with dealing with students is truly remarkable and mark her as a master teacher."

Death sentence given

MOCKSVILLE, N.C. (UPI) — Daniel R. Webster, who told a jury he was a "cold-blooded murderer" and would think no more about killing them than he did his wife, was sentenced to death Thursday and said "I got just what I deserved."

Webster, who had admitted to the brutal slaying of his wife and asked to be put to death, said, "I think I got a fair and just verdict in this court."

The slim 51-year-old man then apologized to his wife's parents, whom he had threatened "to kill and said, 'I am not afraid to die in the gas chamber for it (murder).'"

After Webster's guilty plea, the jury of nine men and three women had the choice of sentencing him to life imprisonment or death in the state's gas chamber.

"You're looking at a cold-blooded murderer and if I had it to do over again I would probably do the same thing and I don't think I would think any more about killing you than I did her," Webster, who has spent 22 years in prison, told the jurors.

The jury deliberated an hour and 20 minutes before they returned with their sentence of death.

He was the second man to be sentenced to death since capital punishment was restored in North Carolina. His execution was set for Dec. 9, but capital crimes carry an automatic appeal to the State Supreme Court, so it will be months before his fate is definite.

Glady's Beauchamps Webster, 58, was killed in the kitchen of her parents' home on July 26. Webster calmly described the gory details of her death — how he hit her in the head with an ax, choked her and cut her throat.

"I ain't never seen anybody like him," said Major Beauchamps, the 61-year-old father of the dead woman.

Beauchamps said Webster had become obsessed with the case of Gary Gilmore, who confessed to murder in Utah and got his wish to be executed earlier this year.

"He (Webster) read everything he could get his hands on about it (the Gilmore case) and was mean as the devil after that," said the father.

Halloween church party set

HOLLISTER — The Hollister Presbyterian Church will have a Halloween party on Sunday, Oct. 30 at the church. Donations will be taken and the proceeds will be used for the benefit of the church's Seminary at San Anselmo, California.

A Mystery Meal will be served from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., and the Spook House will be open to visitors all evening. Prizes will be awarded for costumes in a number of categories and all ages, including adults. (You do not have to wear a costume if you do not want to.)

Everyone is invited to attend, have a lot of fun and help a worthy student.

'Global Distress' study topic

EDEN — The lesson study during sabbath school at the Eden Seventh Day Adventist Church will be "Global Distress."

The lesson is based on Revelations 11:18 and deals with the conditions among nations just before the second coming of Jesus, Christ.

Sabbath school begins at 9:30 a.m. with worship hour at 11:00 a.m. Pastor Alfred Griffith will be the speaker this Saturday.

Members of the Eden Pathfinder Club will be calling on residents of Eden and Hazelton Sunday beginning at 2 p.m. The purpose of their visits is to solicit food items to be used in Thanksgiving food baskets for those in need.

The Pathfinder Club is a youth group sponsored by the church. For those in the area who may not be home and would like to help with the project can do so by calling 825-5483.

Semi-annual meeting to be held

TWIN FALLS — Sunday morning, the First Presbyterian Church will hold one of its semi-annual congregational meetings at 12:00 following the sanctuary worship. Their purpose will be to review the proposed $107,000 budget for 1978 and to elect eight elders and ten deacons for 1978.

Following the meeting there will be a sandwich and salad potluck luncheon in the dining room. At the 9:30 and 11:00 worship Rev. Van Nest will speak on the subject, "It's Not So Easy to Receive." There will be Church School for all ages at 9:30 and all are welcome.

Nazarene church to share music

TWIN FALLS — At First Church of the Nazarene, a musical experience will be shared Sunday 1 both the 11:00 a.m. and the 6:00 p.m. meetings. At the morning service the choir will present a musical special celebration entitled "This is Love," and the pastor will share from the message of "This is Love."

The fall festival of music will be presented by members of the local congregation Sunday evening at 6 p.m. This will include vocal groups, instrumentals, solo numbers and a special time of sharing.

It is suggested that members come to be involved; not to be entertained. Let the worship experience be a personal one, pastor Joe Chastain said.

Lutherans to hold 'fun house'

TWIN FALLS — The Immanuel Lutheran School will hold a public "fun house" program Halloween night from 6 to 9 p.m. Children of all ages are invited to participate. The program will feature a number of games and contests with each game costing 10 cents.

Those attending are asked to wear costumes. There will be pop and cookies for sale. Proceeds will be used to improve the school library. The events will be held at the school but all interested persons are urged to attend.

Pot luck dinner at King Hill

KING HILL — A pot luck dinner will be held next Sunday, at the King Hill United Presbyterian Church, at 12:30.

Election of officers for 1978 will be held following the dinner.

New entry to be dedicated

TWIN FALLS — The congregation of Ascension Parish will dedicate its new entry way at the 10 a.m. service Sunday. The new covered entry-way, recently completed, provides a cover for the entrance to the Bishop Rhea Auditorium and the Parish Gift Shop. It was built under the direction of a committee headed by Mrs. Mary Ostrander.

Following the Dedication, the congregation will commemorate All Saints season with a "procession of saints." In the procession all the children process — each wearing a costume and/or carrying a symbol of one of the historic saints of the Church. "Although All Saints' Day and Season begin on November 1st," said Father Allen, Ascension Parish's rector, "we are holding this special commemoration to help our children understand the real meaning of Halloween (All Hallowed Eve), which began as a holy time of remembrance of saints (heroes) who were martyred and degenerated to ghosts, demons and goblins."

There will be a special celebration of the Eucharist at All Saints' Day at 7:00 p.m.

Group contributes to carpet

FILER — Mrs. Bonnie Pica was in charge of the opening devotional service of Peace Lutheran Women's Missionary League at the church.

The group voted to contribute toward the new carpeting and coat hangers in the church fellowship hall. Mrs. Del Butterfield and Mrs. Joyce Harding were appointed by president, Marjorie Liernman, to be on the nominating committee for the November election of officers.

New counselor appointed

FILER — Rev. Andrew Loesel, pastor of the Clover Trinity Lutheran Church, has resigned as counselor of the District Lutheran Woman's Missionary League.

Rev. Ron Leder, Burley, has been appointed as the new counselor.

Filer Friendship Circle meets

FILER — The Friendship Circle of the United Methodist Church met at the church with Marie Greenwood and Ruth McDonough as hostesses.

Lillian Bennett presented the scripture lesson and Miss McDonough was in charge of the topic "Peace of Heart and Mind." Members discussed "In My Solitude."

Martha Circle met at the home of Mabel Capberly and Vi Bowen gave the lesson.

Magic Valley women elected

FILER — Several Magic Valley Women were elected to offices at the recent Utah-Idaho District Lutheran Woman's Missionary League convention in Laramie.

Mrs. Elmer Fischer, Filer, was elected district president; Mrs. Paul Schwartz, Eden, first vice president, and Mrs. Hugo Meyer, Filer, central zone chairman.

Christian Science topic given

TWIN FALLS — The title of the lesson-sermon Sunday at the Christian Science Church will be "Everlasting Punishment."

Sunday school begins at 9:45 a.m. and church services are at 11:00 a.m. Sunday and 8:00 p.m. Wednesday at the church, 160 8th Ave. East.

Teton task force gets award

IDAHO FALLS — Teton Interfaith Disaster Task Force received the coveted bronze plaque as 1977 National Church of the Year, awarded annually by "Guidpost" magazine during special ceremonies Thursday at Idaho Falls Civic Auditorium. Task Force involved 30 churches.

Renowned preacher Norman Vincent Peale, accompanied by his wife, Ruth Stafford Peale, who is co-editor of "Guidpost" magazine, made the presentation. Dr. Peale delivered a special address at the ceremonies which recognize the dedicated efforts of the people of Eastern Idaho.

In addition to the address by Dr. Peale, Mr. J. Allen Jensen told the story of Interfaith Task Force and served as Master of Ceremonies. Idaho's two Senators attended and special music was provided by Skyline's High School Choir.

Invocation was given by The Rev. Robert Noble, board chairman of Teton Interfaith Disaster Task Force, and Benediction was offered by The Rev. Michael Shaw of Rexburg who served as rallying point for upper valley clergy.

The award was accepted by Mr. Marvin Eld, Task Force Executive Director during its short life, with special recognition for volunteers and their million man hours of work, spearheaded by Joe Lyon.

Service began at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at Idaho Falls Civic Auditorium.

Dr. Peale is author of twenty-four books, one of which The Power Of Positive Thinking has run up sales of almost five million copies and has been translated into thirty-three languages. He is well known for his continued radio and TV appearances and printed messages of his are sent to six hundred thousand people around the world from the Foundation For Christian Living. Each year some thirty million copies of his inspirational booklets are distributed.

Dr. and Mrs. Peale's regular newspaper column, "There's An Answer," appears in 500 U.S. papers. They are co-publishers of "Guidpost" magazine with circulation of three and one-half million.

Candy sale benefits handicapped

TWIN FALLS — An organization of Roman Catholic laymen, the Knights of Columbus, will be hitting the streets throughout Idaho this weekend to sell Tootsie Roll candies for the benefit of mentally handicapped Idahoans.

The second annual Tootsie Roll Drive, jointly sponsored by the Idaho Council of the Knights of Columbus and the Idaho Association for the Mentally Retarded was officially launched Monday in Boise when Governor John Evans signed a proclamation designating Oct. 28 and 29 as "Help the Retarded Citizens Day" throughout the state. The proclamation signing was witnessed by Paul Strechein, Rupert, State Deputy of the Knights of Columbus and Basil A. Colony, Boise, president of the Idaho Association for the Mentally Retarded.

The Knights will be selling specially-wrapped Tootsie Rolls at shopping centers, churches and other likely spots in 27 communities throughout the state. All proceeds from the sale will remain in the county in which they are acquired to be given to the county organization for retarded citizens or a similar group.

Last year's sale in Idaho netted over $6,000, according to John Norrish, Moscow, chairman of this year's drive. He said that the Knights hope to net as much as $12,000 this year.

Norrish said that the Tootsie Roll campaign began in Illinois in 1959 and has since spread to Knights of Columbus Councils in 32 states. The Illinois drive in 1976 netted more than half a million dollars, he said.

Communities in Idaho where, the drive will be held are: Blackfoot, Boise, Bonners Ferry, Burley, Caldwell, Cottonwood, Coeur d'Alene, Emmett, Grangeville, Greencreek, Gooding, Genesee, Idaho Falls, Kellogg, Lewiston, Mountain Home, Pocatello, Priest River, Moscow, Nampa, Orofino, Rupert, Sandpoint, Saint Maries, Twin Falls and Wallace.

LARRY ANDERSON

ARLON JOHNSON

Pair to serve

TWIN FALLS — Larry D. Anderson will serve a two year mission for the LDS Church in Oslo, Norway.

He will leave for the Language Training Mission in Provo, Utah on November 10th. He is the son of CW3 (U.S.A.Ret.) & Mrs. Dwayne R. Anderson, Twin Falls. He attended Twin Falls and Burley High Schools and the University of Puget Sound.

A testimonial farewell will be held during Sacrament services on Sunday, Oct. 30th at 6:00 p.m. at the LDS Church on Harrison St. The public is invited.

BUHL — Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Johnson, son of Mr. & Mrs. Kenneth Johnson, all of Buhl, has been called to serve an LDS Mission in Hong-Kong.

He graduated from Castleford High School in 1976, and during the past year has been working in Franklin, Idaho.

He will enter the Language Training Mission in Provo, Utah on Nov. 3rd, and a farewell will be held during Sacrament services in the Buhl 2nd Ward at 6:00 p.m. on Sunday, Oct. 30th. The public is invited.

TWIN FALLS — Low flying helicopters, camera men setting up equipment on the courthouse lawn and office workers gathering to watch the activity are all part of the movie making now going on in Twin Falls.

The movie is being made by Randall Morgan, an independent professional film producer. It is entitled "Twin Falls County, 2002" and will show the growth and development of a typical rural Idaho area.

The idea for such a film was Morgan's. He is a native of Twin Falls and on returning here several years ago after a period of about four years absence was amazed with the amount of growth and development around him.

"It occurred to me this would make a good film. I felt there must be many problems, achievements and needs involved which would make for a good film," Morgan said.

With the press of other filming contracts, the project was put aside until Morgan talked the idea over with representatives of the Idaho Association For the Humanities about a year ago.

"They were very positive about the plan and began pushing me, and I started to prepare a filming schedule and plan for the story of the progress in this area," Morgan said.

There is more to making such a film than sitting down and writing a scenario. Morgan has researched the area's growth and as he says, has attempted to tell the story in a completely unbiased manner. He will be using the views and other input from local persons involved in the development.

Former U.S. Senator Len B. Jordan was selected to narrate the story.

"We needed a personality or celebrity, but wanted someone not presently in political office and someone who could command the respect and admiration of the general public. We decided Sen. Jordan was that individual," Morgan said.

During the second week of October, Sen. and Mrs. Jordan came to Twin Falls to begin working with Morgan on the film.

A helicopter rented from High Range Aviation, Gooding, took the senator and the camera crew to the Indian Springs road in the South Hills where opening scenes of Sen. Jordan's sequences were shot, overlooking the Twin Falls tract.

Crews spent several days working with Sen. Jordan and the helicopter along Snake River Canyon, and at the Twin Falls County Courthouse where the chopper landed and Jordan made a number of "run throughs" climbing from the chopper and walking up the courthouse steps.

Another filming was done inside the courthouse where Sen. Jordan sat at the county commissioner's desk and talked about the building and growth of the area.

In researching growth, planning and zoning, Morgan has contacted developers, realtors, members of the Twin Falls County Property Owners Association and those in charge of inspections and enforcement regarding construction. All of these will be giving views on what they see and would like to see in Twin Falls County some 25 years from now.

When completed in April, the film will be shown in a series of public meetings in each community in the county. Service clubs and civic groups may purchase it for programs and it will be available for other community uses.

There are three sequences in the film including guidelines for use of cultivated lands, the principal land use in the rural area, guidelines for development of scenic areas and a study of growth of commercial areas in which Blue Lakes Boulevard will be featured.

Many local residents will go before the cameras to help complete the story.

A realtor will discuss full development potential. A woman who lives on Blue Lakes Boulevard, will discuss her feelings about changes on her street in the past 20 years and a businessman whose business is located there will discuss his views.

Farmers, community leaders and others will be called on to discuss their views of Twin Falls growth.

Abby

DEAR ABBY: We've been married for 14 months and already I've got big problems. My wife swears she loves me as much as she ever did, but what am I supposed to think when she tells me she wants twin beds? We're moving from a furnished apartment to a bungalow and have started shopping for furniture. That's when she said she wanted twin beds. Before we were married we agreed on a double bed, and she always seemed perfectly satisfied with it. I have argued all I can. She insists we will both sleep better in twin beds. Maybe SHE will, but I won't.

HURT

Time for twin beds?

DEAR HURT: If she swears she still loves you, what do you want, an affidavit? Remember, you agreed on a double bed BEFORE you were married, so you can't blame her for not knowing your sleeping habits. Maybe you snore, kick in your sleep or hog the blankets. Quit arguing. Absence could make the heart grow fonder.

DEAR ABBY: When being introduced to a person, is it proper to say, "I've heard a lot about you?"

GENE

DEAR GENE: It all depends on what you've heard.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I were in our 30s and very much in love when we were married. Six years later, I am a nervous wreck. He says I am the woman he has been looking for all his life and he isn't going to lose me. He has to know where I am every minute, and he calls me six or seven times a day. If I go out during the day, he cross-examines me about where I went and who I saw. He is a local truck driver, so he is home every night and all day Sunday. He won't go to church (he is "afraid" of religion) and he won't let me go alone. When I became pregnant, he got very jealous for fear I'd love the baby more than him, so he prayed that the baby would die, and it did.

After that, when I threatened to leave him, he hit me. I am a prisoner in my own house, Abby. He says if I ever leave him, he will kill me. Is there anything I can do? I can't sign my name.

A PRISONER

DEAR PRISONER: Your husband sounds like a very sick man. For your own safety, report his past actions and threats on your life to the local police. And for your sanity, ask the help of your doctor.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

PTA to host film showing

TWIN FALLS — The O'Leary Junior High PTA will be hosting a ski film called "The High Cost of a Free Ride" at the College of Southern Idaho Auditorium at 8 p.m. Tuesday.

The film is a 90-minute color movie about nature's free rides, among them skiing is the most prevalent. It will include hang gliding, skateboarding, etc.

The film is personally narrated by Dick Barrymore, a Sun Valley resident, who travels around the world and produces one film a year.

The O'Leary PTA is hosting the film to raise funds for a sound system for the school's activity dances. They currently have no system for sound and have to pay for orchestras.

Tickets are available from any junior high student from O'Leary or at Donnelly Sports and Olson's Ski Shop.

Donations sought

KING HILL — The King Hill Grange Hall will be open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. today for donations to Mr. and Mrs. Verle Meadows, who lost their home to fire recently.

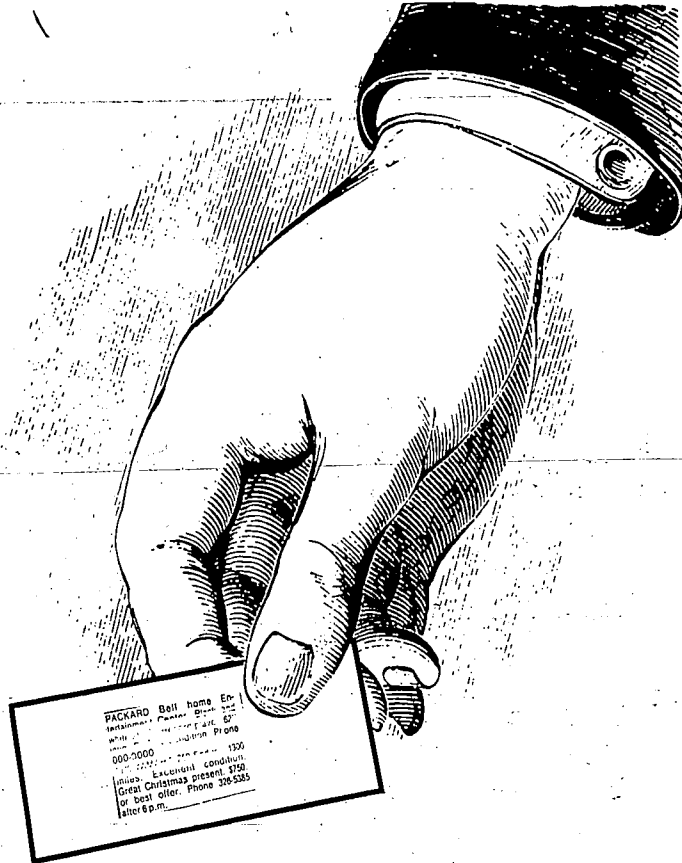

Residents of the King Hill and Glens Ferry area may bring anything in the way of bathroom or "pantry" supplies or canned goods.

Members of the King Hill church will bring donations to the church on Sunday and they will be moved to the grange hall for pickup.

Ag aide resigns in protest

BOISE, Idaho (UPI) — Robert H. Meyer told the National Water Resource Association today he has resigned as assistant secretary of Agriculture in protest over the 1902 Reclamation Act.

Meyer, who resigned Tuesday, claims the law is "wrong, outdated, and should be changed now, and western Congressmen should get moving, exempt the Imperial Valley, and change the law or do away with it completely."

He said action should be taken before the "people who are the very backbone of this country are broken by an American land expropriation scheme."

He said if Interior Secretary Cecil D. Andrus, who told the conference Wednesday that he felt sorry for the Imperial Valley, doesn't have his department submit legislation within 60 days to repeal or change the law he "is a disgrace to the West and will never qualify for a chapter in Profiles of Courage."

Fee delay sought

POCATELLO, Idaho (UPI) — Expressing opposition to a proposed increase in grazing fees on federal public lands, Gov. John V. Evans said today he will ask Idaho's congressional delegation to support a moratorium against the hikes.

Evans said the moratorium is necessary because "agricultural economic conditions must improve before public land grazing users can afford the type of increase proposed by the secretaries of Agriculture and Interior."

He said western ranchers are "floundering" under the effects of a recent drought and until it is apparent that the drought has come to an end, the fees should not be increased.

Cloudiness may lead to rain tonight

Twin Falls, North Side, Burley-Prairie area: Increasing cloudiness leading to a 20 per cent chance of rain tonight and 30 per cent chance on Saturday. Windy at times and slightly cooler Saturday. Overnight lows tonight near 40 degrees with highs near 55 to 60 degrees Saturday. Sunday's outlook is mostly dry.

A Pacific frontal system moving across the Pacific northwest is expected to move into Idaho tonight. Light rain is expected to reach the Magic Valley tonight and Saturday; however, like preceding fronts, the system continues to weaken rapidly as it moves eastward.

The air behind this front is much cooler and high temperatures Saturday will generally be in the 50s, which will also allow the snow level to lower between 5,000 to 6,000 feet in the mountains.

The extended outlook for Sunday through Tuesday calls for unsettled periods of rain.

High temperatures will be rising to 55 to 65 and overnight lows dropping back into the '30s.

Nation's wheat stocks set record

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Wheat stocks in the United States as of Oct. 1 reached a record 2,297 billion bushels, the Agriculture Department reported Wednesday, up 10 per cent from a year ago.

The department said the figure implies wheat feeding during June-September was around 150 million bushels, the heaviest for that period since the 1972-73 period.

It said the increase was expected, but since the strong price advantage for feeding wheat was somewhat shorter lived than expected, the feed estimate for 1977-78 was lowered moderately to 220 million bushels. That would still be the largest since 1971-72.

The department's World Food and Agricultural Outlook and Situation Board said carryover of old crop feed grains into 1977-78 totaled 30 million metric tons, about as expected. That compared to 17 million metric tons a year ago and is the largest since 1973-74.

Projected U.S. rice exports for 1977-78 were increased by 3.3 million hundredweight. The board said that came due to unusually heavy commercial sales, particularly to the European Community nations, Saudi Arabia, the Ivory Coast and Nigeria.

Seminar focuses on youth depression

By KEN HODGE
Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — It's perfectly normal to be depressed once in awhile, and when depression strikes, talking about it helps. Talking about it is exactly what a group of 100 local people did Thursday at the College of Southern Idaho during the first of three seminars on depression sponsored by the Mental Health Association of Twin Falls.
Four panelists, local experts on mental health headed by Dr. Richard Worst, Twin Falls psychiatrist, outlined what is known about depression in general and focused on mental depression among children and adolescents.
"Adaptability is the key to a healthy personality," panelist Dr. Ron Bennett, psychologist at the Child Development Center in Twin Falls, told the audience.
He explained many people become depressed over circumstances in their lives which present obstacles they cannot surmount.
A person who is very competitive and also wants to have friends to satisfy his social needs often drives away friends by constantly competing with them or beating them at competitive activities. He may become depressed when his needs are not filled.

Certain amounts of depression are normal in everyday life, according to Ann McNevin, master social worker from the Department of Health and Welfare, second panelist to address the large group.
"It happens to everybody," McNevin said. "Most depression is fairly fleeting and transitory — you may say 'I was in a bad mood yesterday.'"
Depression is just one end of the continuum of feelings everybody experiences, merely a "part of living," according to McNevin.
"Normal depression, like a painful sprain, takes you out of the action for awhile," she added. "One good side of depression is that other people come to your aid."

She said talking out problems with a friend can help ease a depressed state.
Many cases of adolescent depression start when parents put too many "unrealistic goals on adolescents' heads," McNevin continued. "Adolescents are sort of betwixt and between. They're not children and not yet grown."
She recommended treating children humanistically, urging them toward goals such as becoming a "mentally healthy adult."
Many other things such as a drop in grades, an injury, illness or disfigurement, and the pressures can cause depression among adolescents, she added.

Teaching an adolescent to accept himself is a good start toward combating depression, McNevin said. She urged parents to accept their children without judging them.
Dr. Worst agreed it is very difficult to be non-judgmental with children, especially as parents.
The third panelist to speak, Dr. Paul Miles, Twin Falls pediatrician, explained it is rare to see a "full-blown" case of depression in children as it usually occurs among adults and older adolescents.
He said depression among infants may be related to feeding problems, diarrhea, vomiting or other physical problems. It is difficult to decide whether depression causes physical disorders or vice versa.

When a child comes to a doctor's office for treatment of an ailment, "most physicians look for the organic cause first," Miles explained.
"The association between mental and physical health is a close one," Miles said. He said frequently adolescents will complain about pains they are really suffering from depression.
Mental depression is a serious problem among teenagers and suicide is the fourth leading cause of death among adolescents, Miles said.

NEW CHARACTERS WILL HIT TWIN FALLS STREETS FOR TREATS ... like the robot C-3PO from the movie "Star Wars"

'Star Wars' masks top spook scene

By KEN HODGE
Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — Frankenstein, Dracula and the Werewolf are old hat this year. This Halloween hundreds of strange newcomers to the spook scene will be roaming the streets of Twin Falls.
The new rage sweeping the city and the nation is costumes and masks modeled after characters in the movie "Star Wars."
"I'll bet you one out of 10 kids will be a Darth Vader this year," K Mart toy manager Bruce Wilson says about the fad. "The first masks we sold out of were the 'Star Wars' ones — Darth Vader, Luke Skywalker, C-3PO (the talking robot)."
As other costumes and masks are selling at a normal or better rate this year, variety stores in Twin Falls handling "Star Wars" paraphernalia report unanimously characters from the hit movie are the hottest items on their shelves.
"It looks like the 'Star Wars' characters are moving real well, better than anything else," Payless Drug's Mike Leonard says. "The super heroes are doing really well. Next are Disney

Plant foes pummel utility

By CHRIS BOGAN
Times-News writer
HAILEY — Armed with facts, figures and a variety of arguments, opponents of a coal-fired power plant here Thursday urged local residents to lobby against the company's power plant proposals.
In a meeting organized by the Citizens For Alternatives to Coal Power at the Hailey armory Thursday evening, a panel of four Idahoans, all violently opposed to coal-fired power plants, attacked Idaho Power Company's proposal to build a plant in southern Idaho. The four panelists, who ranged from a Wendell businessman to a former state senator, told local residents that Idaho Power Company's arguments for a coal-fire power plant in either Bliss, American Falls or Sld's Crossing near Shoshone, were based on deceptive energy need projections and narrow-minded planning policies.
"There are things you can do instead of a power plant," Cliff Bradley, a research analyst for the Idaho Citizens Coalition in Boise, said as he attacked the claim a coal-fired plant with the best solution to Idaho's future energy needs.
"The problem is not, technological," Bradley asserted. "It's political ... it's turning the institutions around them and making them work for us... we've got to use a little imaginative policy-making."
Bradley stated that Idaho Power Company's arguments to support a coal-fire plant all hinge on the assumption that electricity is the only source of energy in Idaho. He suggested that if alternative sources of energy, such as solar, wind, or geo-thermal power were used for things such as home heating, the drain on electricity would be quickly offset and all the power company's energy crunch projections would appear frivolous.

Recent power company estimates set the cost of a coal fired plant between $495 and $560 million. Bradley suggested a fraction of this money could be used to put solar reflectors in homes for heating, thus freeing electricity now used for home heating to meet future energy needs.
"The issue is not so simple or narrow as Idaho Power says," Carl Nellis, Jerome, claimed. He argued the social and environmental impact of a coal-fired plant would reach far beyond the plant site and that electricity was not the only power source available.
"It's time we look toward renewable energy sources and not just coal," Nellis urged.
Don O'Sullivan, Wendell, attacked claims that a coal-fired plant would benefit his community by spurring growth.
"I can't see where this uncontrolled growth is a boon to us or anybody else," O'Sullivan said, as he argued rapid growth would strain every social service in the small towns near a plant, would raise taxes, and would hurt local merchants who could not compete with the high wages paid at a power plant.

Former state senator John Peavey, now a rancher in Muldoon, presented a wall full of charts and graphs showing "why the price of electricity will go up with a coal-fired plant."
Each speaker finally urged residents to speak to their representatives and tell them to fight against the proposed plants.
All agreed with the way Bradley first put it. "These aren't technological decisions. These are political decisions. We're deciding what the land of Idaho will look like 20 years from now."
Bradley further asserted that many of Idaho Power Company's policies were self-interested and carried out at the expense of the general public.
He attacked their power rate structure, saying 46 percent of the power produced by the company in 1976 was sold to large energy users at below the cost of generating the electricity. He claimed the average citizen then made up the difference through higher rates.
Idaho Power Company offers a declining rate scale to large energy users and Bradley cited the Boise Cascade Building in Boise as a gross example of how this rate structure is unfair and encourages waste.
Bradley said the building leaves its lights on 24 hours a day and does not have localized room light switches because designers discovered it was cheaper to leave the lights on, and so received reduced electricity rates, than to install light switches.

Wilkins' fate now in hands of judge

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer
GOODING — The issue of Gooding County Commissioner Jim Wilkins' eligibility to serve in office is now in the hands of Judge Sherman Bealwood.
The attorneys in the case have until late December to file briefs and no decision is expected until that time.
Bealwood presided at a day-long civil hearing in which a special Gooding County prosecutor is seeking Wilkins' removal from office and a $5,000 fine for usurpation of office. Special prosecutor Gordon Nielson, Boise, brought the case after a citizens' group complained Wilkins was not a resident of the commission district to which he was elected last fall.
Nielson called nine witnesses Thursday. Their testimony attempted to establish that Wilkins lives in a home east of the old Tuberculosis Hospital and that he never had "nor ever intended" to make an old theatre building at 546 South Main St. in Gooding his residence.
The entire trial was held over the objection of Wilkins' attorney, Peter J. Boyd, who asked to have all evidence restricted to "facts existing since June 20, 1977," the date when Nielson filed the civil suit charging Wilkins with usurpation of office.
Nielson protested this limitation, saying he should be allowed to prove the residency issue at the time of Wilkins' election as commissioner in District No. 1 last November.
Wilkins' home is located in Commissioner District No. 2, but the former theater building he owns in located within District No. 1.
Thursday's trial was delayed for nearly two hours while attorneys conferred with the judge over Boyd's motion to limit evidence. Boyd also objected to many pieces of evidence, including photographs of Wilkins' home and building on Main street, but the judge allowed them to be admitted as evidence.
Margaret Clements, Gooding County clerk, testified that after she learned Wilkins' home was located in South Gooding election Precinct No. 3, she wrote to the candidate.

She said Wilkins indicated to her he was planning to move into the former theater building on South Main which would put him in the right commissioner district.
On Sept. 20, 1976, Wilkins re-registered, she said, listing his address as 546 S. Main.
Boyd contends there was confusion over the boundaries of the three commissioner districts in the county. Under cross examination, Clements said the South Gooding precinct was at one time part of Commissioner District No. 1.
However, present commissioner districts were established in January, 1976, and have not been changed since, Clements told the Times-News after the trial ended.
The two attorneys' disagree over the interpretation of when the commissioner district boundaries changed. On Feb. 15, 1977, Gooding County changed the physical boundaries of some of the county's election precincts in response to legislative mandate requested by the census bureau.
Boyd contends that these precinct boundary changes did "in practical fact" alter existing commissioner districts.
Clements has said according to law the commissioners will act on the commissioner district boundaries next January. According to law they are reviewed each January of a general election year.
Ben Yursa, Boise, chief deputy in the Idaho Secretary of State office, testified he had conferred with Wilkins at the county clerk's request. He said he told Wilkins if he changed his residence he could qualify in the general election.
Isabelle Cahoon, deputy Gooding city clerk, and Kathleen Day, of Idaho Power Co., testified that records from their respective offices indicated that no power or water had been used at 546 Main during the past few years.
Boyd said "this does not mean no water was used there. It only means there is no record of it going through the city meter."

today 2 bids submitted

TWIN FALLS — Two bids have been received by the Twin Falls and Bliss Highway Districts for removal of the old Bliss Bridge and are being reviewed by the districts' directors.
Northwest Crane and Rigging Co., Twin Falls, bid $20,000 for removal of the structure and clearing of the footings. Circle A Construction Co., also Twin Falls, bid $24,980. Both firms will remove the structure and clear the concrete sub-structure of the old bridge for the amount bid and will be allowed salvage of the steel and other material.
Highway district officials had offered the bridge for sale but no purchase bids were received.
Bids for the removal require approval of several agencies including the Department of Water Resources.
A new prestressed concrete bridge built by the Twin Falls and Bliss Highway Districts and Twin Falls and Gooding Counties has replaced the old one-lane steel structure over the Snake River at the Bliss crossing.

Funding backed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Legislation to increase by $28 million the ceiling on funds available for purchase of land and scenic easements in the Sawtooth National Recreation Area passed the Senate Thursday.
Sen. Frank Church and James McClure, co-sponsors of the measure, said the legislation creating the Sawtooth National Recreation Area had authorized a ceiling of $19,802,000 and their bill raised it to $47,802,000.
Church and McClure said inflation has been the biggest problem faced by the Forest Service in its plans to develop the region.
"By increasing the overall ceiling for the Sawtooth-NRA, the bill is designed to give the Forest Service ample funds for protection of the valley, primarily through the acquisition of scenic easements, but also to purchase land if that is essential," the senators said.
The bill now goes to the House for consideration.

Halloween tips

TWIN FALLS — When the sun goes down and the jack-o'-lanterns come out on Halloween night Monday, parents can safeguard their budding monsters and witches with a few simple precautionary measures.
Police chief Frank Barnett advises parents to:
— stay with their small children.
— avoid dressing children completely in dark clothing.
— stay clear of masks which make it difficult for children to see where they are walking.
After all, there's nothing more embarrassing to a witch than tripping over her broomstick.

Water cut asked

WENDELL — Wendell city officials are asking residents who get their water from the city water system to conserve water and eliminate all sprinkling of yards from now until Nov. 7.
Until then workers will be repairing the system's water tank and water pressure will be lower than normal.
City officials say, however, that enough pressure can be maintained to adequately service all users if residents will try not to use any more water than is necessary.
Specifically, city officials are asking residents not to water their lawns until the repair work is completed. Work is scheduled to be done by Nov. 7.

Evans studies reducing AF dam outflow

POCATELLO, Idaho (UPI) — Gov. John V. Evans said today he is looking into the feasibility of reducing the outflow at American Falls Dam to provide sufficient water for irrigation next season.

Evans met Wednesday night with State Sen. John Barker,

R. Buhl, and American Falls reservoir waterusers to discuss their concern about the 300 second feet release of water from the dam to maintain fisheries below the structure.

They told the governor as much water as possible should be held back for the next irrigation season in case the current drought continues into the next year.

Evans said he has asked Department of Water Resources Director C. Stephen Allred and Fish and Game Director Joseph Greenley to study the feasibility of additional cuts in the outflow and the resulting effect on the high quality fishery below the reservoir.

"A cooperative attitude prevailed at the meeting last night in Boise, and the waterusers understand the state wants to protect their water rights as well as the fish habitat and if we can do both by holding back more water, we will do so," he said.

Evans said Greenley originally had written the Bureau of Reclamation saying the 300 second feet minimum outflow was necessary to avoid substantive fish losses based upon information available at the time and requested their cooperation in maintaining that flow.

GOP candidate charges Evans lack of leadership

BOISE (UPI) — C.L. "Butch" Otter, Republican candidate for governor, charged Thursday that Gov. John Evans' lack of leadership has started the ball rolling toward the federal takeover of private water rights in Idaho.

"The entire scenario surrounding the 300 second feet of water being released at American Falls Reservoir is ample proof that Evans doesn't understand the serious consequences or he has adopted a neutral position which appears to condone the federal action," Otter said.

The consequences, Otter said, could be economic disaster for the water users in the Magic Valley area. "It's been reported that as many as 800 to 1,000 farms could be without necessary water supplies for 1978 should this federally ordered water release continue much longer."

Otter said had the question been put to him for resolve he would have gone to the water users "who actually own the water" and enlisted their aid in overcoming the present emergency.

"These people are sensitive to the hazards of low water flows on fish and other wildlife habitat. It's obvious that Evans is insensitive to these people's constitutional and human rights," Otter said.

Appaloosa club sets 'playday'

JEROME — The Magic Valley Appaloosa Horse Club will hold a benefit playday and tack auction Sunday at 1 p.m. at the Jerome County Fairgrounds.

The proceeds from the event will be donated to help defray medical costs incurred by Carol Pugh, Richfield, seriously injured in an automobile accident in California.

Pugh and her husband, Hoyt, own Moon Creek Appaloosas, Richfield. She has been active in the Magic Valley Appaloosa Horse Club.

The club will donate the proceeds of its playday for her medical expenses to show its appreciation for her past contributions to the club.

The playday includes tandem barrel racing, a balloon race, a water race, a beer race, a coke race, a boat race and a Halloween costume class.

After the tack auction, which will feature items for sale donated by local horsemen, contestants can compete in barrel racing, pole bending, an egg race, a dollar bill race, musical chairs, a scurry race and hazard jumping.

Winners in each class will receive prizes and ribbons. For entry information call Louise McBride, 324-2207. To donate bridles, bits, saddles, chaps or other tack items to the auction, call Jerry James, 324-2106.

Contract award set for bridge

TWIN FALLS — Directors of the Twin Falls Highway District were scheduled to award a contract this afternoon for construction of a Low Line Canal bridge on the Airport road.

Officials said work will then begin immediately and the airport road will be closed at the construction area during the project. Traffic will be rerouted over South Blue Lakes.

District engineer Keith Anderson said detour signs will be located at the corner where the city water storage tank is located, but residents would have a better road if they used Blue Lakes South all the way from town.

Bids included the apparent low from Ralph Thornton Construction Co., Burley, $57,894.57; and the next low, Arrington Brothers Construction, Twin Falls, $63,730. Others were from Idaho Construction, and Peter Kiewit and Sons, both with offices in Twin Falls.

The bridge will be a prestressed concrete super structure over the Twin Falls Canal Co.'s Low Line Canal. It will be 32 feet wide and 96 feet long and is being built with local funds.

Blaine school board violates rights

By CHRIS BOGAN
Times-News writer

HAILEY — To the surprise of many school officials, 5th District Judge George Granata told the Blaine County School Board in a legal decision issued Oct. 20 that it had to rehire a teacher the board had dismissed in 1976.

Granata said the school board had violated district teacher Ken Worthington's constitutional right of due process of law when it released him from his contract after 12 years as an employee in the district.

The school board is now evaluating the decision to determine if it will appeal the judgment to the Idaho Supreme Court, according to attorney Stratton Laggis. He is currently the board's legal counsel, although he did not represent the board in this matter.

If the board does not appeal Granata's decision, it would probably reinstate Worthington, who now works for Gordon Paving in Hailey. Worthington says he would like to resume his job with the district even after his year and a half absence.

The district employee, who was librarian at Wood River High School when the board released him, is also qualified to teach social studies and could be rehired as a teacher or librarian, depending on where he is most needed, Laggis said.

Concern that this case could set a precedent in the future, making it near impossible for a school board to dismiss an employee on grounds of incompetence, as in the Worthington case, is unfounded, according to the board's attorney.

Laggis pointed out that Granata's decision addresses only the matter of due process rights and does not really speak to the merit of the board's charges that Worthington had not been adequately doing his job.

The board's attorney also said that a case cannot be used as a precedent until the Supreme Court has ruled on it.

Laggis said he believes incompetence is still theoretically valid grounds on which to release a teacher who is not doing his or her job.

What the Worthington decision will do, according to Laggis, is force the school board to be far more careful in the future in making sure it complies strictly with all legal procedures when dismissing an employee.

"You have to follow the rules and prove your case," Laggis said.

Granata ruled the board did not follow procedural rules on three points, all which violated Worthington's right to due process of law.

First, the judge said a school board letter notifying Worthington of his nonrenewal was improper because it suggested the board's decision concerning the man's discharge had already been made.

Hospital post abolished

BLACKFOOT, Idaho (UPI) — The Department of Health and Welfare is abolishing the job of assistant administrator at State Hospital South Nov. 10 under a reorganization plan.

Dr. Richard Bolton said the agency recently notified him by letter that his job was being eliminated "because of material changes in duties and reorganization."

Bolton, who has held the post for four years, said no other position was offered him. He said he has filed a grievance with the department and said "any further statement would not be prudent at this time."

The agency began reorganization after discovery of prescription drug, disappearance and other problems at the hospital. A report on an investigation into the drug disappearances and administrative problems as well as reorganization plans is to be made at an afternoon news conference in Boise today.

Area ISU students will show puppets

RUPERT — Cathy Stefan, Rupert, and Trudy Sweet, Fairfield, will participate in the Idaho State University (ISU) puppeteer performance.

The performance will be shown at 7 p.m. Friday and at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. Saturday. All shows will be held in the College of Education Building auditorium.

"Four Musicians of Bremen," a Grimm's fairy tale, and "Peter and the Wolf" with music by Prokofiev will be presented.

A charge of 25 cents per person for all shows will be donated to the Spurs, an ISU service organization.

Martin passes Skyline past Twin 40-6

IDAHO FALLS — Kerry Martin threw for four touchdowns and Skyline's defense lived up to its pre-game notices Thursday night when the Grizzlies defeated the Twin Falls Bruins 40-6.

Skyline scored twice in the first 6:22 of the game and pretty much controlled everything.

Twin Falls was unable to sustain a march into Grizzly territory but scored its fourth touchdown of the season in the fourth period on a 63-yard punt from Robb Newell to Jeff Hafer. Skyline moved to a touchdown on its first possession, sticking close to the ground before Martin kept to score from two yards away. Huntzman booted the point after.

The ensuing kickoff died on the three-yard line where Twin Falls just managed to get position. The Bruins couldn't go and punted out to their own 43. Three plays later Martin hooked up with Hadley on a 35-yard bomb.

Twin Falls turned back another Skyline bid late in the period but early in the second quarter Bob Miller picked off the first of three interceptions to start the scoring again. Skyline moved for three first downs to the Twin Falls seven and Martin hit Tim Althart from there for the third touchdown.

Just 2:20 later, after forcing another Twin Falls punt, Skyline was back on the scoreboard, this time on a 51-yard scamper by senior speedster Carl Hansen.

Twin Falls gambled on fourth and three at its own 39 in the third quarter but failed. Quickly the Grizzlies moved to the five before Martin turned to Hadley for the scoring pass.

The Bruins then got on the scoreboard when Newell hit Hafer with a slant-in pattern. Hafer made the catch in full stride and swept about 50 yards to score.

But with 5:26 left, Skyline nullified that when Rick Gihring hit Bruce Burton with a 24-yarder pass to complete scoring.

Quarterhorse case tightens

STANTON, Calif. (UPI) — Police disclosed Thursday they were following several leads that could provide a break next week in the theft of Town Policy, a world record setting 2-year-old quarterhorse, who was stolen from his stable last week.

"We have leads in the case that we are investigating and we're using every resource available to us," said investigator Larry Temple. "We might have something to report next week, but right now it's an iffy situation."

Town Policy, owned by Ivan Aslman, an Idaho Falls, Idaho, potato farmer, was found missing from his stable Oct. 20 when Mike Chambliss, foreman of the Blane Schvaneveldt Racing Stable, came to the ranch to feed the horses.

The gelding set a world record for a 2-year-old quarterhorse when he captured the Fresno Futurity in 19:67 seconds for 400 yards. A winner of more than $300,000, he was beaten just once in 10 starts this year.

Kings belt Cavaliers

RICHFIELD, Ohio (UPI) — Rookie guard Otis Birdsong tossed in 18 points — 17 of them in the second half — and Scott Wedman added 17 Thursday night to spark the Kansas City Kings to a 119-104 win over the Cleveland Cavaliers.

It was only the second win in six games for the Kings, who played 13 of their first 16 games on the road.

After spilling the Cavs a 2-0 lead, the Kings missed their first field goal attempt but hit their next 10 shots and raced to a 37-23 first period lead.

The Cavs, who tied it at 23 midway through the first period, got within three points of the Kings at various points of the game but couldn't get the key basket.

Rockets drub Bucks

HOUSTON (UPI) — Rudy Tomjanovich, Moses Malone and Calvin Murphy combined for 89 points Thursday night to lead the Houston Rockets to a 133-110 NBA win over the Milwaukee Bucks.

Tomjanovich had a game-high 32 points, Malone added 31 and canned 22 rebounds and Murphy had 26 points as Houston broke the game open in the second quarter. With the score 25-25 after the first quarter, the Rockets scored 41 points in the second period to take a 66-41 halftime lead.

Brian Winters scored 22 of his 29 points for the Bucks in the second half to keep Milwaukee within reasonable distance. Winters had 16 points in the third quarter while Tomjanovich had 12 for the Rockets in the period.

Indy promoter dies

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Tony Hulman, the man who brought the Indianapolis Motor Speedway from near ruins after World War II to the most famous auto racing strip in America, died Thursday night.

Officials said Hulman was dead on arrival at St. Vincent's Hospital.

Hulman, 76, bought the famed Speedway in the fall of 1945 for $250,000 and made the late Wilbur Shaw the president and general manager. During the more than a quarter century that he owned the course, he made it into a multi-million-dollar proposition.

Sherry joins Expos

MONTREAL (UPI) — Norm Sherry, fired earlier this season as manager of the California Angels, Thursday was named to the coaching staff of the Montreal Expos.

Sherry becomes the fifth member of manager Dick Williams' staff, joining pitching coach Jim Brewer, first-base coach Billy Gardner, hitting coach Mickey Vernon and third-base coach Ozzie Virgil.

"Sherry will run the bullpen and he will spend a lot of time with Gary Carter," Williams said from St. Petersburg, Fla., where he is attending the Expos instructional camp. "We needed a catching coach in the worst way and Norm is our man."

O.J. misses workout

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (UPI) — The Buffalo Bills, minus premier running back O.J. Simpson, worked out Thursday in preparation for Sunday's NFL game in Seattle.

Simpson missed the workout in order to have his left knee examined. A team spokesman said Simpson had strained the knee and was listed as "probable" for the game against the Seahawks.

The Bills also signed wide receiver Reggie Craig, a two-year veteran who was released last week by the Cleveland Browns. The Bills cut wide receiver Mel Baker in order to make room on the roster for Craig.

Allen leaves Steelers

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Pittsburgh Steelers defensive back Jimmy Allen says he is retiring and returning to his real estate business in Los Angeles.

Allen, 25, demanded last week to be traded if the Steelers didn't start him. The trading deadline ended Tuesday.

The Steelers Wednesday gave a tryout to Ron Bush, a rookie defensive back cut this season by San Diego and Chicago. Allen, in his option year, said Bush was there to take his place, but the Steelers said it was merely a coincidence.

DENVER COACH RED MILLER ... seems relaxed during practice

Denver fans begin super bowl crush

DENVER (UPI) — Denver Broncos fans, with little but mediocrity to cheer for the last 17 years, are pulling out their orange sweaters, stocking up on cans of Orange Crush and already are looking forward to the Super Bowl.

After all these years of frustration, Denver fans are beginning to see the goal in sight. The Broncos have a 6-0 season — something that could only have been a dream a few years ago — and fans are convinced that Sunday's game against the defending champion Oakland Raiders will be the final ticket they need.

An estimated 10,000 wild, cheering, hugging and frantic fans jammed Stapleton International Airport two weeks ago when the Broncos and their so-called "Orange Crush Defense" returned home after a 37-1 victory over Oakland.

Tickets for the coming Raider game are selling for as high as $150 each by scalpers, who don't seem worried about the $300 fine they face. There isn't a seat available in the 75,000-seat Mile High Stadium — which is no surprise since the last time a Broncos game was not a sell-out was in 1969.

Sales of a popular soft drink called Orange Crush have skyrocketed by more than 25 percent in Colorado since the "stolid" Broncos defense was tagged with that name.

"We've already had some phone calls and letters from people asking for tickets to the Super Bowl," said a Broncos secretary. "What can I tell them? The game isn't until January. It's a little premature, but they want to know where they get tickets."

David Chiszar, an associate professor of psychology at Colorado University in Boulder, said the intense fan reaction comes as no surprise. Broncos fans — particularly the vocal ones who sit in the stadium south stands — always have had a reputation for loudness, but this year's intensity has skyrocketed.

"What we have here is loyal Broncos fans, who for years have been pursuing this goal of a winning season, realizing that maybe they can achieve something that they thought about only in their wildest imagination — a Super Bowl bid," Chiszar said.

"What you are getting is a phenomena in psychology that is called a goal gradient effect. It refers to the fact that when an individual or a group is getting closer to its goal — when it's actually in sight and they can taste it — they get more intense and their striving increases, often out of proportion to the goal."

Adding to that phenomena, he said, is a "social facilitation effect." He said that stems from many people pushing for the same goal.

"They've got each other jazzing them on," Chiszar said. "It's a little early, but the team has produced what I believe to be a hell of a season so far, and the fans' enthusiasm is being lit up."

Bronco spokesman Bob Peck said he wasn't sure Denver fans were any more enthusiastic than supporters of NFL teams elsewhere, but said they were more loyal.

"We like to say they're the best fans in the league," he said. "But we definitely could say they're more loyal. They have never had the experience of a playoff season. In fact, it was 1973 before we ever had a winning season. So they've got to be more loyal than anybody else."

Hot putter carries McLendon into lead

PENSACOLA, Fla. (UPI) — Veteran Mac McLendon used only 24 putts Thursday to card a 5-under par 66 and take a one-stroke lead in the first round of the $125,000 Pensacola Open golf tournament, last official stop on the 1977 PGA tour.

McLendon went out in par 35 but recorded five birdies on the back nine of the tree-lined, 6,549-yard Pensacola Country Club course and took a one-shot lead over tour rookie Jim Chaney and Pat Fitzsimons.

Behind the top three the field was tightly bunched with 81 other pros — more than half of the 144-man field — at par 71 or better.

Jerry Pate, winner of last week's Southern Open at Columbus, Ga., led a group of 11 golfers who finished the initial round at 3-under 68.

Former Masters champions Jay Brewer, Charles Coody and Ray Floyd headed a group of 22 pros who toured the course in 69 strokes.

McLendon, who won the 1975 Southern Open, said it was his best putting round as a professional. "The greens here are conducive to good putting. This is the best I've ever putted."

McLendon offset two bogeys with birdie putts of 3 and 15 feet on the front nine. On the back nine, he made birdie putts of 15, 4, 10 and 20 feet, the last coming on the 18th hole.

Chaney, whose 67 was his best round since turning pro last spring, has cashed only one check as a professional. He grew up in Panama City, Fla., about 100 miles from Pensacola and had played every course in the area except the Pensacola Country Club.

"I did get a chance to walk the course Wednesday and that helped," Chaney said. "I like this kind of course; tight with small greens. I hit the ball reasonably straight off the tee and this course demands that."

Defending champion Mark Hayes was in a large group at par 71. Johnny Miller, who shared second at the Southern Open, had a 70 and said he had trouble "adjusting to the greens."

Arnold Palmer, a sentimental favorite and two-time winner of the Pensacola Open, came in with a two-over-par 73 and was in danger of missing the 36-hole cut.

Rivers to stay with Yanks if they renegotiate his contract

MIAMI (UPI) — Center fielder Mickey Rivers of the New York Yankees has changed his mind about being traded but has hired former Miami Dolphins' linebacker Nick Buoniconti as his agent in hopes of renegotiating his contract with the world champions.

Buoniconti, an attorney, said Thursday he agreed to represent Rivers after meeting with the South Florida native. Rivers, one of several Yankees who had expressed a desire to be traded, still has two years to go on his contract but told Buoniconti he was very unhappy with his salary.

"He said he was very disappointed. He felt that he represented himself last year and didn't do a good job," Buoniconti said. "He said ballplayers on the team who are not worth as much as he is are making more money."

"Some reserve players can make as much if not more than Mickey and he's the moving force of that club."

Buoniconti said Rivers, who helped lead the Yankees to their World Series title, admitted he was "naïve" when he negotiated his own contract a year ago.

"He said they asked him to come in and offered him a contract. He didn't know if it was a good contract or not," Buoniconti said. "He didn't have any idea what these other ballplayers were making."

"I'm going to talk to Mr. (Gabe) Paul and Mr. (George) Steinbrenner to try to bring the contract up to where it should be. If I can get the opportunity to sit down and talk with them, I think they will reconsider."

Buoniconti, however, may need all his experience as a linebacker in tackling Steinbrenner. The Yankees' principal owner is dead set against renegotiating contracts and refused to enter into similar talks with third baseman Graig Nettles earlier this year.

Despite his insistence in having his contract renegotiated, Rivers no longer wants to be traded, according to Buoniconti.

"Mickey loves being in New York and he loves being with the Yankees," Buoniconti said of the Yankees' speedy leadoff man.

Rivers, who resides here in the off-season, hit .328 this year with 11 home runs and 69 RBIs. He also played a vital role in the Yankees' playoff victory over Kansas City but hit a disappointing .222 in the World Series against Los Angeles.

Aaron says he'd manage—only if asked by Atlanta's owner

ATLANTA (UPI) — Hank Aaron said Thursday he would accept the job as Atlanta Braves field manager if owner Ted Turner asked him — but only "because of the love and respect I have for him."

However, Aaron, baseball's all-time home run king, said no one in the Braves' management had discussed the position with him.

The Braves fired Dave Bristol Tuesday after two consecutive last-place finishes.

Turner, who is under suspension from Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, refused comment on whether he wanted Aaron to manage the team.

"I haven't discussed the managerial position with anyone who makes the decision," Aaron said. "The only thing I can say at this time is as fond as I am of Ted Turner, if he wants me to do the job, I'll do the best I can. I'd do it because of the love and respect I have for him."

Aaron, who has spent the past year in a Braves front office job since his retirement in 1976, was reached in Washington by telephone. He is president of a group honoring Vietnam veterans.

Aaron is the club's vice president in charge of player development.

"I don't know whether I would enjoy managing because I haven't done it before," he said. "But it would certainly be a challenge. I haven't asked for the job, nor am I actively seeking it. But if Ted Turner wants me, I'll do my best."

One who has asked for the job is knuckballer pitcher Phil Niekro, who applied for it shortly after Bristol was dismissed. The Atlanta Journal reported Thursday if Aaron wants the job, it is his. But if he doesn't, the newspaper said, former Yankee great Yogi Berra was next in line.

Berra, 52, was named manager of the year in 1973 for leading the New York Mets to the National League title, only to lose to the Oakland A's in the World Series. He was fired late in the 1975 season.

"I'm always willing to listen," Berra said about the possibility of managing the Braves. "But I haven't heard anything yet. I might want to manage again."

Which brings up the subject of money. Under a one-year contract with the Yankees, Yogi undoubtedly would insist on a three-year term with the Braves. When the Mets let him go two years ago, he was making $60,000 with them. Taking into account plus the fact he got two straight World Series shares with the Yankees these last two seasons, he probably would want at least $75,000 a year to manage the Braves.

Make no mistake, Berra is very happy as a coach with the Yankees even if his salary is only somewhere around $35,000. It isn't going to kill him if he stays with them. But having managed twice before and been fired twice, he's human. He'd like another chance.

To put it another way, managing is in Yogi's blood. He's hooked and he knows it.

Mets with the Yankees in 1964 and his second with the Mets in 1973. He's not the motivator Tommy Lasorda is, but then, who is? He is, however, from the old school, which means he isn't afraid of hard work and at 52, his outlook is still young enough so that he has no trouble relating to kids. The Braves wouldn't have any worry about his loyalty or dedication, either. Berra always gives you 100 cents on the dollar.

Berra may be interested in Atlanta job

NEW YORK (UPI) — Yogi Berra has sat down and thought it over.

He's not announcing his decision to the world at large because he's tight-lipped about things like that, but this is what it is:

He'll take the Atlanta managership, providing the price is right and Hank Aaron isn't whistling Dixie when he says he's perfectly happy with the job he has now and doesn't want any part of managing the Braves.

Bill Lucas, the Braves' Director of Player Personnel, took the first step toward bringing Berra to Atlanta Thursday by asking the world champion Yankees for permission to talk with Yogi.

Lucas spoke with Yankee President Gabe Paul, and as long as he was asking permission to negotiate with Berra, he felt there was no harm asking about Bobby Cox, another of the Yankees' coaches, as well.

"We gave our permission for him to talk with both of them," says Paul. "Only as manager, though, not as a coach."

George Steinbrenner, the Yankees' principal owner, wouldn't like to see Berra leave.

"I like Yogi," he says. "I'd hate to lose him, but if that's what he wants, then that's what I want for him."

Aaron enters the picture this way: His name first came up as a possible manager of the Braves when he was zeroing in on Babe Ruth's all-time home run record three years ago. At the time, he generated something of a stir by saying "nobody ever so much as came and talked to me about it."

Aaron now is a vice president with the Braves and travels in a vice president's limousine. On Thursday, for example, he was Jimmy Carter's guest at the White House. His official title with the Braves is Director of Player Development and in that capacity he gets to work with their young players, something he thoroughly enjoys.

Bill Lucas is Aaron's former brother-in-law, and when the two men talked some time ago about whether Aaron ever would be interested in managing the Braves, the all-time home run king said the job didn't appeal to him at all.

Now Aaron says he would be willing to consider managing the Braves should the directors ask him to take the job left vacant by Dave Bristol's dismissal.

"If they want me to do it, I'll do it," he says. To that, Lucas says:

'Soap opera' overtones attend 'Skins-Eagle tilt

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Some may dismiss Sunday's Philadelphia-Washington NFC East matchup as irrelevant, but regardless of significance, the answers to some soap opera-type questions should emerge:

— Will Washington quarterback Billy Kilmer, armed with the usually fatal "vote of confidence," hold his starting job? If not, will he come off the bench and inspire the Redskins' oldsters to victory?

— Will Joe Theismann, 10 years younger than Kilmer and infinitely more mobile, finally get his chance to start?

— Will Ron Jaworski, who broke his right thumb and suffered a concussion last Sunday in Philadelphia's 16-10 loss to Dallas, be able to go the distance?

— And will his backup, Roman Gabriel, finally get an opportunity to make good his promise to stuff a football down the throat of one-time mentor George Allen, now the Redskins' coach?

Allen started the week with a lengthy discourse about how he wasn't blaming Kilmer for the Redskins' lack of offensive output. But nearly as soon as the words were out of his mouth, reports started that Theismann would be the quarterback, and by Wednesday Allen was giving them backhanded confirmation.

"If I make a change at quarterback it will be because other people have not been doing their job on offense," he said. "And this isn't just the offensive line. I'd like to change four or five players on offense, but we don't have that many (players) to change."

"So if I make a change at quarterback, it's because others haven't been doing their job. But quarterback, being a position of great importance, sometimes you have to do that."

Under Kilmer's direction, the Redskins, 3-3, have averaged just under two touchdowns a game and have only one in their last 11 quarters. Rock bottom came last Sunday, when the Redskins managed just two field goals in an embarrassing 17-6 loss to the New York Giants.

But it didn't seem to be Kilmer's fault. The 38-year-old quarterback hit Mike Thomas in the helmet with an apparent touchdown pass and a long TD loss to rookie Clarence Harmon was nullified by a penalty.

If Allen starts Theismann, one of the reasons will undoubtedly be mobility. The Eagles' 3-4 defense recorded a season-high six sacks last week in the loss to Dallas; Kilmer was sacked six times by the Giants. "We need a quarterback who can escape and not be a sitting target," was the way one club official put it.

On the Philadelphia side, it became apparent late in the week that Jaworski would be able to play with his thumb injury, leaving Gabriel on the sidelines.

"All along, Ron's been more convinced he could play than I was," Eagles' coach Dick Vermeil said Wednesday. "But now I'm starting to think he was right."

The other injured Eagles, offensive tackle Ed George and defensive tackle Art Thoms, are probable with knee injuries.

For the Redskins, Harmon is expected to again start at fullback, replacing injured John Riggins, and Danny Buggs is expected to play in Charley Taylor's wide receiver spot. Taylor pulled a hamstring in the Giant game.

On defense, "Mike Curtis is expected to again fill in for linebacker and signal caller Chris Hanburger, troubled with strained knee ligaments."

Wisconsin carries Big Ten's 'little 8' hopes to Michigan

CHICAGO (UPI) — Wisconsin battles a jinx as well as Ohio State Saturday in an effort to bring the Big Ten's Little Eight within challenging range of the conference title and the automatic Rose Bowl berth.

The Badgers, with a two game losing streak after winning their first five games, must play at Ohio State, where Wisconsin has not won since 1918. Ohio State has a 4-4 record in the Big Ten and has been victors over Wisconsin in the last 17 games.

It will be the highlight matchup of the Big Ten schedule this week. A win for the Badgers would give at least six other teams a chance to get into championship contention.

Wisconsin itself would have the best chance since, along with Northwestern, it plays nine league games against eight for every other team.

Other games on the schedule were Iowa at Michigan, in second place with a 3-1 league record, Illinois at Michigan State, Purdue at Northwestern in the regional television contest, and Minnesota at Indiana.

Michigan, knocked from No. 1 to No. 6 in the national ratings by Minnesota's 16-0 upset last week, was favored over Iowa and by winning could remain Ohio State's major challenger, even moving into a tie for the lead should Wisconsin win.

Regardless, it was expected the conference crown and bowl chance would be settled when the Buckeyes and Wolverines meet in the season finale Nov. 19.

Ohio State faces Illinois and Indiana in the intervening games while Michigan plays Northwestern and Purdue. The league front runners should be favored for all four of the contests.

Northwestern's Johnny Pont indicated he would not change the Wildcats' defense in facing the league's leader in passing and total offense, Purdue's Mark Herrmann.

"Herrmann throws every kind of pass," Pont said, "rollouts, delay, the pick, the drop back, play action. They've added the shotgun and we'll see some of it. That gives him a split second more to throw and it takes that much longer to get to him."

"But I don't think we'll try to change our defensive strategy. We've got to try the blitz and everything we can to get to him and put pressure on him. But he delivers the ball possibly quicker than any passer I've seen, and he can unload without a windup to complete the passes up to 20 yards."

Purdue has lost its last nine appearances on television.

BOARDING HOUSE REACH is employed by Jim Brewer (52) of Cleveland as he and Sam Lacey of Kansas City scramble for a loose ball along the sideline Thursday night. Kansas City won 119-104.

'Bama has chance at No. 1 spot—if other teams help

By JENNY KELLNER
UPI Sports Writer

Through the first part of the season, while Southern Cal, Michigan, Nebraska and Texas were playing musical chairs with the top three spots in the football ratings, Alabama was quietly working its way towards its No. 2 spot, winning five straight for its 6-1 record.

Like the others, Bear Bryant's Crimson Tide could have been No. 1 for at least a week had it not been for the 31-24 upset loss to Nebraska in its second game of the season.

But now Alabama has a shot at being the top team.

Top-ranked Texas takes on 13th-ranked Texas Tech Saturday, which means the Longhorns are the only team in the top ten with a really tough opponent. The Red Raiders have not done as well as might be expected this season, but nevertheless have built a 5-1 record and are eager for the chance to dump Texas from its No. 1 perch.

Alabama, on the other hand, that night faces Southern Mississippi, which has had a disappointing season (3-4) at best. A loss by Texas and another victory for the Crimson Tide could shuffle the ratings once more.

Alabama held a commanding 48-10-3 edge over Mississippi State in the overall series, which dates back to 1896. The Crimson Tide is 6-0 vs. Mississippi State in Jackson, where the game is being played as part of a doubleheader following the Ole Miss-Louisiana State game.

Although the Bulldogs were one of the preseason favorites to take the Southeast Conference, the team has been hampered by injuries. Led by Bruce Threadgill, a three-year veteran and one of the top quarterbacks in the conference, Mississippi State also has two excellent halfbacks in James Jones and Len Copeland.

"Mississippi State has a lot of outstanding athletes and before the season I would have picked them to be right in the thick of the race," said Bryant. "I don't know why they haven't been winning, but I know that every time we play them, they roll up their sleeves and come at us with fire in their eyes. I expect it to be that way in Jackson."

The Tide as usual will be sparked by quarterback Jeff Rutledge and split end Ozlie Newsome, who now has 1,728 yards in pass receiving, 119 yards short of David Bailey's Alabama record of 1,857. Rutledge has 37 completions in 65 attempts for a .569 percentage and 692 yards.

Oakland picked over Denver —through league necessity

NEW YORK (UPI) — The American Conference Western Division race could very well be decided on Sunday if the Oakland Raiders don't snap back.

The Denver Broncos took over first place in the AFC West two weeks ago by trouncing the Raiders and held it last week with a convincing 24-13 victory over Cincinnati. The Raiders, meanwhile, struggled to get past the New York Jets and needed a missed extra point and two blown field goals to win 28-27.

The Raiders and Broncos meet in Denver Sunday and an Oakland loss could just about end the race for first place. Denver would hold a two-game lead at the season's halfway mark and would have to go 4-3 the rest of the way while Oakland went unbeaten if the Raiders hope to retain the division title.

Denver has the home field advantage and a defense which has allowed the fewest points in the AFC (46) this season. Oakland has tons of playoff experience and has experienced the pressure that goes with big games.

Here's the way things shape up this week:

Oakland 17, Denver 14 — Raiders promise they'll be ready this time. A loss could just about take them out of the AFC West race. Bronco offense will have to produce to keep it close.

Pittsburgh 26, Baltimore 17 — Steeler defense starting to clamp down on opposition and force key turnovers. Colts showed they can be had in on-sided loss to New England.

Atlanta 16, Minnesota 14 — Falcons; playing best defense in NFL, intent on dueling Rams for NFC West title. Vikings took beating Monday night and short week, long roadtrips will tell.

Miami 27, San Diego 20 — Dolphins have been scoring but young defense is prone to give up lots of points. Chargers coming off a dismal effort against Kansas City.

Philadelphia 16, Washington 7 — Eagles have been in almost every game so far and played unbeaten Dallas last week. Redskins' loss to Giants may have been death gasp for '77.

Los Angeles 37, New Orleans 10 — Pat Haden has Ram offense moving and defense finally is starting to assert itself after a dismal first month. Saints' defense was nonexistent in 49-31 rout by St. Louis.

Dallas 42, Detroit 10 — Cowboys get going again after lackluster win over Philadelphia. Lions were pitiful in loss to winless San Francisco.

New England 31, New York Jets 27 — Patriots learned from earlier loss to Jets seriously. New Yorkers now feel they can play with anyone after one-point loss to Oakland.

Cleveland 24, Kansas City 14 — Browns are not going to let Pittsburgh get away in AFC Central race. Chiefs won't be getting gift scores like San Diego gave them last week.

St. Louis 21, New York Giants 10 (Monday night) — Cards snapping back to life after early season doldrums. Giants' offense not up to matching St. Louis firepower.

Cincinnati 17, Houston 12 — Battle for survival in AFC Central. Key for Bengals is Ken Anderson's health.

Chicago 28, Green Bay 10 — Bears rebound after awful performance last week. Packers had to struggle to beat winless Tampa Bay.

Seattle 24, Buffalo 17 — Two of league's doormats go at it. Home field a big plus for the Seahawks. Bills' offense showing some life but they still give up too many points.

San Francisco 23, Tampa Bay 6 — 49er offense finally came to life last week with Plunkett calling his own plays for the first time. Bucs starting to look like a second straight winless season isn't out of the question.

No hunting signs number unchanged

MAGIC VALLEY — "No hunting," "no trespassing" and "hunting by permission only" signs are just about as common as they were last year for the opening of pheasant season, a Fish and Game Department survey shows.

The survey was conducted this week by Fish and Game Information Officer Stu Murrell and covered 50 miles of road on each side of the Snake River canyon.

On the south side, Murrell discovered 57 no hunting and no trespassing signs and three hunting by permission signs between the Twin Falls airport and the area south of Burley, a total of 60 signs.

Murrell said 90 per cent of those signs were in the first seven miles of his route. Murrell saw no signs from Artesian City to Burley.

On the north side, from Acquia across the Minidoka and Hunt projects to Eden, Murrell counted 35 "no" signs and 48 permission only signs, a total of 83.

In last year's survey, Murrell counted 57 signs on the south side and 71 on the north.

Murrell feels his ten-year survey indicates that the number of signs put out by landowners is directly proportional to the pheasant population.

If there are a great number of birds, and more hunters are expected, more signs will invariably appear, Murrell said.

For instance, in 1971, an excellent pheasant year, according to Murrell, he counted 109 signs on the south side and 143 on the north.

Idaho seeks third straight victory against Weber Saturday afternoon

MOSCOW — The University of Idaho football team will be seeking its third straight victory of the season this Saturday, Oct. 29, when it travels to Ogden, Utah, to take on Weber State College in a 1:30 p.m. (MDT) game.

The Vandals are coming off a 17-0 upset win over NCAA Division II defending champs, Montana State University. The defeat was the first home loss for Montana State since the 1975 season and left them with a 5-2 season record.

Idaho is now 2-4 on the year and 2-2 in Big Sky Conference action.

Weber State is coming off a 31-28 victory over Bemidji last Saturday to give it a 3-4 season mark. In conference play, the Wildcats are 1-3.

Vandal head coach Ed Troxel believes his team will face another stiff challenge this week from the Weber State Wildcats.

"They are a very improved and intense ballclub," Troxel said. "Coach Pete Rehlmann has really done an excellent job of putting those kids together. He's got them believing in themselves.

"I'm certain it's going to be a very tough ballgame. They have a fine passing offense. To stop that, we need some interceptions and a good pass rush."

"We must try to keep our defense off the field by controlling the ball," Troxel said.

Morris Bledsoe (6-4, 195, junior) is the quarterback for WSC. He has passed for seven touchdowns this season while compiling 1,330 yards on 86 completions out of 170 attempts.

His favorite receiver has been Tom Coleman (5-11, 169, senior) who has 477 yards on 21 catches for two touchdowns.

The workhorse in the Wildcat backfield has been Mark Billmore (5-11, 195, junior). Billmore has 471 yards on 82 carries and has scored three touchdowns.

Eric Hill (6-1, 195, sophomore) ranks second in rushing with 344 yards on 96 carries.

The Wildcats are averaging 22.6 points per game while allowing their opponents an average of 25.9 points.

For Idaho, Robert Taylor (5-9, 195, senior) and Tim Lappano (5-9, 185, junior) rank one-two in rushing for the Vandals this season.

Taylor has gained 434 yards on 74 carries and scored three touchdowns, while Lappano has 349 yards on 62 carries for one TD in five games.

Taylor gained 80 yards against Montana State to move his career rushing total to 1,226 yards for eighth place on the Idaho rushing list.

Lappano, who gained 89 yards last week, ranks 40th on the list with 1,171 yards.

Quarterback Craig Juntunen (6-2, 195, senior) is the team's leading passer with 520 yards on 56 completions. His favorite receiver is Kirk Allen (5-11, 179, junior) who has 293 yards on 22 receptions.

Ralph Lowe (6-3, 198, senior) continues as Idaho's leading scorer with 29 points. Lowe has been perfect on extra point attempts this season by hitting on 14 straight conversions.

In the field goal department, he is kicking 500 with a five for 10 record. Against Montana State he averaged 43.2 yards per punt to raise his season average from 38.83 to 39.92.

One of the major reasons Idaho has come alive the past two games is because of the outstanding performances by members of the defense.

Against Montana State, the Vandal defense deflected a total of 15 passes — one more than they deflected in the previous five games.

ASU finds it hard to make Kush smile

By PETE HERRERA

United Press International

Arizona State's Frank Kush has apparently decided Tom Landry has the right approach to football. The less a coach smiles on the sidelines, the more his team wins on the field.

Kush's Sun Devils are 5-1, have crept back into the national rankings and are looking more and more each week like the ASU teams that have won six of the last eight Western Athletic Conference titles.

Yet, Kush remains a hard man to please. He found a bit of adversity even in last week's 66-3 romp over Texas El Paso.

"I don't like to score that many points in a game," said Kush. "I wish we could have saved half of them for this week."

This week, the Devils meet Utah at Salt Lake City, and if ASU's offense stays in tune, Kush won't need any extra points. ASU now leads the conference in rushing with an average of 227 yards per game, is second to Brigham Young in scoring with a 36-point-per-game average and second to the Cougars in total offense with 413 yards per game.

In contrast, the rebuilding Utes are seventh in defense, giving up better than 410 yards per game, and seventh in defense against the rush. On paper, it looks like a mismatch.

But the over-cautious Kush isn't taking anything for granted.

"It's going to be a battle from here on in," says Kush of the conference race. "Utah beat Wyoming by 10 and that's good enough for me."

In other league games this week, front-running BYU, 3-0, hosts Arizona, 1-1, and Colorado State, 3-1, travels to Wyoming, 2-2. New Mexico meets rival New Mexico State in a non-league game while Texas-El Paso takes the week off.

Wyoming used an eight-man drop to try to stop Brigham Young's awesome passing attack last week, and while the unusual alignment confused BYU sophomore quarterback Marc Wilson considerably, the Cougars still managed a 10-7 triumph.

BYU Coach LaVell Edwards this week has given Wilson a crash course on zone defenses but now says the young quarterback, who threw a record six interceptions last week, will be ready for Arizona.

"It was the first time he's ever seen anything like that," Edwards said.

Colorado State has beaten Wyoming the last three years and can't afford to lose this one. Colorado State is in the midst of its best season since 1948, when the Rams were 8-2 and got a bid to something called the Raisin Bowl.

New Mexico is trying to salvage some respectability against second-ranked ASU in the second half of the season. And although New Mexico State leads the Missouri Valley Conference with a 3-1 record, New Mexico has won seven of the last eight games.
