

$130,000 missing from Lincoln County

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

SHOSHONE — One hundred and thirty thousand dollars is missing from the Lincoln County treasurer's office, but Lincoln County officials would not comment today on when, or even if, charges could be filed.

The $130,000 figure was announced by Everett Ward, commission chairman after a three-week audit of treasurer's office records.

County commissioners have launched an investigation into the fund shortage, authorizing Sheriff Bill Anderson and prosecuting attorney Bill

Stuart to take whatever measures are necessary to establish what happened to the money.

Commissioner O.J. Harris when contacted today said Anderson or Stuart would have more detailed information on the matter. Stuart was in conference this morning and would not make himself available for a statement.

Anderson said no charges could be filed until the investigation is complete, and indicated that a news release would be forthcoming soon.

Auditors were conducting a routine check of the treasurer's office books last month when Treasurer

Myron Johnson, who had held the post 36 years, resigned unexpectedly.

The day after Johnson resigned, the audit was intensified and county officials announced an unspecified amount of money was missing from the treasurer's office.

Officials have said that embezzlement is a possibility that is being considered.

Officials said the audit covered the past three years, beginning with 1975 and extending to the date of Johnson's resignation, Oct. 17, 1977.

The completed auditor's report presented to commissioners Monday does not specify over what years the shortages occurred, according to Harris.

One concern of commissioners is the statute of limitations governing embezzlement should such charges be filed. The state statute of limitations is one year for misdemeanors, three years for felonies and no limit on first or second degree murder.

Commissioners have indicated that the audit may not extend any further back into the treasurer's records than 1975, both because of cost and the statute of limitations.

Everett Ward, commission chairman, said "We just can't say how much was taken in any given year because there's not enough information yet to say."

Harris said a shortage was found at the end of the 1976 fiscal year.

Appointment of a new county treasurer was delayed Monday when Ward became ill at the commission meeting and was hospitalized.

Harris said there were about 13 applicants for the post. Asked if the applicants were Lincoln County residents, Harris said he could not say about all of them but added: "We have a lot of qualified people here."

So did their teachers and the school's secretaries, nurse, deans, counselors, principal and custodians.

Principal Jerry Hofffield said the special reading periods were going to be held twice a week, on Tuesdays and Thursdays, as part of an effort to improve reading skills.

Students were not allowed to read textbooks, but were encouraged to read "appropriate" material of their own choice.

ANTI-SHAH DEMONSTRATORS CHARGE POLICE LINES AT WHITE HOUSE ... tear gas fumes fail to halt President Carter's welcome on lawn nearby

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Police battled and tear-gassed angry young Iranian demonstrators near the White House today as President Carter, red-eyed from the thick fumes, welcomed Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi for talks on weapons and oil.

Carter apologized to the Iranian leader for "the temporary air pollution" after mounted police clashed with an estimated 5,000 anti-shah demonstrators who battled older Shah supporters with sticks.

More than two dozen police and demonstrators were injured in the battle on the grassy Ellipse behind the White House, according to U.S. Park Police Maj. Danny Sorah. "There were broken hands and some serious head injuries," he said.

The president, the shah and their wives remained calm on the White House lawn. But they wiped away tears caused by the stinging gas before moving inside. Both of the leaders ignored the loud demonstration in their opening remarks although Carter later apologized.

The president called the shah "a longtime friend of our country." The shah, turning his back slightly to avoid the gas, responded by testifying in a soft voice to "the close personal friendship" between the two countries.

"Thank you very much for your words of welcome," said the shah, putting on his glasses to respond before the two leaders entered the executive mansion for talks. Sources said he planned to ask for more weapons, but the shah himself warned Monday he alone could not fulfill the president's request to hold down world oil prices.

The shah, who has already bought billions of dollars in U.S. weaponry, told Carter today both Iran and the United States "obviously have hopes for peace, happiness and prosperity."

Longtime White House observers could not recall — even during the Vietnam demonstrations — when a welcoming ceremony for a visiting head of state was marred by such demonstrations and police use of tear gas.

Later, during a ceremony in the Grand Hallway of the White House, Carter apologized to the shah "for the temporary air pollution" from the tear gas.

Big money, rough treatment for teenage prostitutes

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jane said her pimp brought her to New York from Minneapolis when she was 15 because it was his dream city.

When she decided to leave, he kicked her in the nose as a farewell gesture.

In her 16 months as a teenage prostitute in New York, Jane said she earned $100,000.

Her story, told Monday to a state Senate select committee on crime investigating teen-age prostitution, was not uncommon.

Another witness, Mary, 16, said her pimp picked her up at a bus stop in Minneapolis and drove her to New York. She worked as a prostitute, she said, "because I really liked him. It was a way to prove to him I loved him."

Anne, 14, came for much the same reason, and she suffered much the same abuse. She decided to leave, she said, after her pimp broke her jaw.

"I got dressed up like I was going to work, went out and never came back."

The young women provided a vivid glimpse into the New York-Minneapolis prostitution pipeline that years ago led police to dub Eighth Avenue "The Minnesota Strip."

Jane said she started as a hooker in Minneapolis, where she worked the streets for a month before her pimp brought her to New York because, as she put it, it "was his dream city, with plenty of money for prostitutes to make."

"When we got here, he put me on Eighth Avenue and 44th Street and said: 'Work here.'"

Charging $20 a trick, working six nights a week, Jane said, she made $100,000 between June 1976 and October of this year. All the money went to her pimp, who supplied her with clothes, food and a place to stay.

She also got two milk coats and was "slopped around from time to time."

Baby selling on rise

The doctor asked me what I planned to do about the baby. When I said I was considering adoption, he told me he knew several couples who were seeking to adopt an infant.

"We knew we were paying a lot of money. The lawyer was 'procuring' a baby — he was involved with an abortion group. In a roundabout way the lawyer mentioned that sometimes a girl is in her 23rd week but is told she is having another child to get adopted. We lied to the social worker about the fee — the lawyer told us to. We also lied about payment in court." Parents of a Black Market baby.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A still-unreleased government study says the shady world of selling babies gets great public exposure but little official attention, and black market adoptions may be increasing.

Desperate couples use desperate stratagems and pay exorbitant fees for children in what was called the seller's "market" created by a shortage of healthy white babies available for adoption.

"The problem of adoptions for profit has received intermittent attention for some 25 years, but there is little indication of progress toward its resolution and, in fact, some evidence of its increase," the study said.

The Child Welfare League of America study reported finding such practices as finalizing adoption of an American child in a foreign country, or the biological mother admitting herself to the hospital for delivery of the baby in the adoptive mother's name.

Some persons interviewed for the study voiced suspicions that organized baby selling rings are operating, but no evidence was offered.

A draft of the study, Adoptions Without Agencies: A Study of Independent Adoptions, was prepared for the Department of Health, Education and Welfare with subsidiaries totaling $229,000. The final report is expected by January. The draft was made available to UPI.

"In spite of the attention by the media to occasional investigations of the 'black market' area of independent adoptions, this type of crime, and other abuses of the adoption law, are apparently not given a high priority within the offices having the authority to prosecute violators," the study said.

The problem appears to be of little concern to state lawmakers or law enforcement officials, it added, saying: "Whatever the reason for this lack of concern, it cannot be for lack of evidence that adoptions for profit occur."

At Senate "baby selling" hearings in April 1975, the Child Welfare League estimated that among 16,500 non-agency adoptions arranged by middlemen in 1971, as many as 4,000 to 5,000 of them might be "black market" adoptions.

However, many independent adoptions arranged outside licensed social welfare agencies are neither illegal nor improper although some may present other risks for parties involved in the adoption, the study said.

Interviewing was conducted in the Los Angeles, Miami, New York City, Philadelphia and Des Moines, Iowa, areas.

"The potential risks in independent adoptions are heightened when the adoption is arranged, not by an ethical professional operating strictly within the law and motivated by ... the best interests of all parties, but by persons whose primary goal is monetary gain," the report said.

Interviews turned up "fairly typical" reports of fees for babies like $4,000, $8,000 and $15,000 to $20,000 mentioned in New Mexico, Illinois and New Jersey. Fees as high as $40,000 were noted.

Idahoan waits for ruling

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. James McClure said Monday Tom McGinnis, an Idaho Falls resident being held in a Bolivian prison, had a final hearing in the Bolivian lower courts Friday and awaits a final determination there before a Superior Court review.

McClure contacted an American citizen living in La

Paz, Bolivia, to learn of the completion of the final lower court hearings. He then communicated with the American ambassador in Bolivia to urge careful and continued attention to the McGinnis case and to seek prompt release of the Idahoan.

McGinnis has been in Bolivian prisons since the summer of 1976 when he was accused of narcotics possession. Prosecutors in the case have requested the charges be dropped.

Under the Bolivian judicial system, the judge must act on that recommendation after which the case must be reviewed by the Superior Court.

"I am very concerned that Tom receive prompt judicial action," McClure said. "After being involved in this case for well over a year, the greatest injustice is the absence of prompt disposition of the case and the continued delay in moving through the cumbersome Bolivian court system."

"It is plainly amazing to me that it has taken the Bolivian courts over a year and a half just to get to the point of accepting the prosecutor's recommendation of a solution. With this track record, as we come close to the end of this process, I remain very concerned with the next step which is the Superior Court review.

"Having been told that a number of sentences have been increased by the Superior Court upon its review, my concern is heightened," he continued. "It is my hope that, with the help of our embassy in Bolivia, Tom's case will be terminated within the next four to six weeks and Tom will be safely returned to the U.S."

Symms pushes wheat marketing plan

BOISE (UPI) — Congressman Steve Symms said Monday farmers may find themselves in an economic bind lasting several years if an aggressive wheat marketing program is not undertaken in foreign markets.

Symms, speaking before conferees at the 21st annual Wheat Grower's Association Convention in Boise, said "The government must help the farmer in an aggressive attempt to sell our surplus wheat in foreign markets. If this doesn't happen, the farmer will find himself in serious trouble for the next three or four years."

The Congressman said much of the blame for poor farm prices can be put on the present administration which he said has taken an unrealistic stand with regard to wheat surpluses.

"The government is acting like we'll be short of wheat and a food shortage will result if we don't hang on to our surpluses," Symms said. "That just isn't so."

"The farmer's income was higher when Earl Butz was agriculture secretary than at any other time during our history. We need to look aggressively in overseas markets to try to get rid of some of this surplus wheat."

Symms also urged the lowering of loan prices to a level not in conflict with market prices.

Bob Geddes, outgoing president of the Idaho State Wheat Growers Association, urged farmers to make their voice heard in the state Legislature during 1978 in an attempt to halt potential tax increases.

Geddes said higher taxes, combined with the drought and depressed crop prices, could leave wheat growers in a critical situation.

"The association and the wheat commission need to join hands, go over to the state capital and be heard so that further encroachment isn't made on our possibility of making a profit because of taxes," Geddes said.

Proposal spurned

BOISE (UPI) — City firemen rejected a 33-month contract Monday night, which called for a 6.5 percent pay hike the first 18 months and a 7 percent raise the remaining 18 months.

Bob Chase, a spokesman for the union's five-man negotiating team, said 40 men met to consider the pact and rejected it unanimously. He said they felt it covered too many months and too few dollars.

Rejection of the contract means further negotiations between the union and the city to attempt to reach an agreement to replace the one that expires Dec. 31. The firemen again will present their proposal, which calls for a 6.5 percent salary hike for the first nine months of the contract and a 7 percent boost the next 12 months.

'Family Week' chosen

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. John V. Evans Monday proclaimed Nov. 19-25 "Family Week" in Idaho and urged all citizens to recognize the importance of the family unit and to work to strengthen the ties within their own families.

Evans, in making the proclamation, said "We believe every child has the right to grow up in a secure, loving family—and that this experience lays the foundation for a happy, productive adult life."

The governor also proclaimed Saturday "Family Day." Susan Hill, state director of Eagle Forum, said the purpose of promoting a family day in Idaho is to create a public awareness of the family as a basic unit of society and the foundation of civilization.

Slow, slower, slowest awards made

WASHINGTON — A couple of months ago, the White House sponsored a tough competition. Richard A. Pettigrew, a presidential assistant, pulled members of the House and Senate, with a truly demanding series of questions. This was the first question: "Which federal programs do your constituents think are administered least efficiently?"

That is the kind of question that Davey Crockett, a former member of the House, once described as a sockdolager. You want to think before responding. The least efficient federal program? Such a title cannot be lightly conferred. It is an honor not easily won.

The Farmers Home Administration, he said, is "notoriously slow" in processing loan applications, and the delays result in serious hardships; the farmer who has to wait six or eight months for a disaster loan may miss the next planting season.

JAMES KILPATRICK

Proxmire had other nominations. The Civil Service Commission is so slow that a retiring federal employee may have to wait six months for his first retirement check; The Immigration and Naturalization Service is "probably the slowest of all agencies." It often takes more than a year for the INS to take final action in a particular case. The Internal Revenue Service, in Proxmire's view, is "probably the least responsive to the needs of the taxpayer." Moreover, if there were a "most maddening" classification, the IRS would "win" in a walkaway. One of his constituents spent 23 days trying to get IRS to answer its toll-free telephone line.

"The IRS," said Proxmire, "also refuses to make amends for its own errors. If a businessman's bank account is attached in error by the IRS, the agency will not advise his creditors that the agency was responsible for any bad checks which may have been written on that account. If the creditor will agree to write the IRS, the IRS will then acknowledge its error. Since most creditors do not have the time or interest to contact the IRS, the businessman's credit may well be destroyed through no fault of his own."

Proxmire hit the Veterans Administration, the Social Security folks and the Environmental Protection Agency for slowpoke service. AMTBAK, he remarked, "rarely bothers to answer at all."

Virginia's Congressman E. William Whithurst, in his response to the Pettigrew survey, singled out the Office of Workers' Compensation Programs within the Department of Labor. He seconded the nominations of Social Security and the Environmental Protection Agency, but he regarded the OWPIC in a class by itself. No other program "equals the unresponsiveness, the incompetence, and the general disarray of the OWPIC." The federal worker who seeks compensation for an industrial accident encounters "months and even years of delay in settling the claim." It is not at all uncommon, Whithurst charged, for the agency to "misplace case files for months at a time, and lose the files entirely."

In the catalog of complaints, delay appeared in rank first, rudeness second, and incompetence third, with sheer confusion running fourth. Federal requirements, notably in purchasing and procurement, were widely denounced as excessively complex. Federal forms and statistical reports are seen everywhere as needlessly burdensome.

Pettigrew's survey was not designed, of course, to award prizes, plaques or trophies. It was designed to assist the president in the reorganization program that Mr. Carter has been promising for months. To judge from the voluminous and disturbing complaints, the situation may be even worse than the president had believed.

Final thoughts on mayor Ostyn

Voters in last week's city elections around Magic Valley said it was time for a change.

A change, the voters must have reasoned, just for change's sake.

In Twin Falls, voters ousted Mayor Paul Ostyn, on the council for the last eight years.

While voters decided it was time to change the Twin Falls City Council a bit by electing three new persons to panel — Mary McClusky, James Smallwood and Gordon Cox — this does not mean the ideas of incumbents or methods of doing things should fall by the wayside.

During his years on the council, mayor Ostyn has consistently showed himself to be a man who takes a stand, takes it aloud and gives the arguments supporting his stand. He has never been afraid to express himself.

His ideas have not always been good, though most have seemed worthy of mention. And that, after all, is the point. The mayor has spoken out, when other council members haven't.

He's told it like it was, letting the public know what the problems are and how he thinks they can be solved. That is an attitude which has not always been apparent in city government but one that always has to be there.

Hopefully, the Twin Falls council will recognize this and strive for openness ... the Paul Ostyn type.

Ostyn will also be missed for other reasons: —his ability to efficiently run City Council lunches and night meetings;

—an ability to cut his fellows off in a polite way when they are just spinning their wheels;

—an ability to make the council reach a decision at the end of discussion.

Hopefully, Councilman Henry "Hank" Woodall, or whoever else becomes mayor, will recognize these attributes and keep up the good work.

Ostyn will be gone, but some of his ideas should not disappear. One he has mentioned over and over again is a new electrical energy source for Twin Falls.

That idea, Twin Falls supplying its own energy from canals and dams along Rock Creek, is a good one.

Whether it's feasible remains to be seen.

But the council should ask the city manager to look into such a plan, a plan which might save the city real money in years ahead.

For that idea, and ideas like it, Ostyn will be missed.

And for a job well-done, though not always done the way others might have liked it done, Ostyn deserves a sincere thank you.

Thank you.

U.S. Senate: still clubby

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate's old reputation as a hidebound men's club where superannuated codgers shuffle around contemplating, delaying and sometimes legislating is not that much out of date.

Despite the ascendance of a crop of potentially powerful senators in their late 30s and early 40s — Joseph Biden, Sam Nunn, Paul Sarbanes, to name a few — the Senate still is a preserve for the old and male. And as recent events show, it is still able to put on a good filibuster.

As for age, consider this remarkable fact: Of the 29 senators in history who have served 30 years or longer, six are now in the Senate. And they may stay for some time.

Earlier this month, Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., celebrated his 30th year in the chamber. The occasion marked the first time two senators from the same state have served so long together, and because of the pressure on modern day legislators, perhaps the last time the Senate will have so many who have served so long.

The six, in order of seniority are: James Eastland, D-Miss., 35 years and one month; John McClellan, D-Ark., 34 years and 10 months; Warren Magnuson, D-Wash., 32 years and 11 months; Milton Young, R-N.D., 32 years and eight months; John Sparkman, D-Ala., 31 years; and Stennis, 30 years.

Three of them — McClellan, Sparkman and Eastland — are up for re-election next year and none has ruled himself out. Stennis was re-elected last year and Young and Magnuson are up again in 1980.

McClellan, the oldest at 81, has the longest continuing service on Capitol Hill, starting in the House in 1935.

One member, Jennings Randolph of West Virginia, has been in Congress since Franklin Roosevelt's first term, starting in 1933. But his service in Congress was not continuous and at 75 years of age, the ranks only 16th in Senate seniority. Ironically, Congress' youngest member, 28-year-old Nick Rahall, also comes from West Virginia.

Magnuson, although the youngest member of the Senate's seniority in terms of age, has set a longevity record for chairing the same committee for any one issue in history: He has presided over the Commerce Committee for more than 22 years.

Eastland is next, having chaired the Judiciary Committee more than 20 years, followed by McClellan, with 18 years as head of the Government Operations Committee before he left that post for Appropriations in 1973.

Eastland could approach the all-time service record set by Carl Hayden of Arizona, who served 41 years and 10 months. But to do so he would have to serve out full term to reach the longevity record in mid-1984.

Senate Democratic Leader Robert Byrd, no youngster himself with almost 26 years on Capitol Hill, paid tribute to the senior six recently, noting:

"Our problems are becoming heavier; our burdens more onerous. I would venture to say that not many men in the history of this republic, though it may stand a thousand years, will ever again be able to equal the length of service" of the senior six.

Another note on Bakke

By DON OAKLEY

Allan Bakke, the central figure in one of the most important civil rights cases to reach the U.S. Supreme Court since the original school desegregation decision in 1954, may have been the victim of another kind of "discrimination" besides the kind he charges was based on his white skin.

He may not have had enough "pull."

It is now reported that the University of California—Medical School at Davis, which Bakke sued because it rejected him while accepting 15 minority applicants with lower test scores, had a special procedure under which the dean had the authority to admit five students a year on his own authority.

This authority was allegedly used on behalf of the children of wealthy and locally prominent families, including the son and daughter-in-law of the chancellor of the Davis campus, at about the same time Bakke was being turned down.

The disclosure has no legal bearing on the issue now before the Supreme Court. Anyway, according to a spokesman for "the university," the practice has been "relegated to history." But it does add another com-plaintion to the debate raging over this case.

If Bakke has a valid claim on the basis of reverse racial discrimination, what about those college and university applicants — of any race — who since time immemorial have been rejected or selected on the basis of a number of other non-merit factors?

The sons and daughters of alumni, for instance, are almost automatically given preference at many schools. Some schools strive for a geographical balance, reserving places for students from different parts of the country or world.

And not only at the University of California but elsewhere, wealth and personal connections with the faculty or administration have never hurt an applicant's admission chances.

Race, of course, is a wholly different factor: one that involves constitutional questions, not to mention serious social and political ramifications.

Yet in the final analysis — barring blatant, unjustified and inexcusable exclusion, which we don't think is practiced in the country today — college and university administrators must retain reasonable rights to determine the make-up of their student bodies.

TW special stifled, producer claims

Berry's World

N.Y. Times Service

NEW YORK — A new controversy has erupted in the public television industry over the rejection by the Public Broadcasting Service of an independently-produced documentary on the uses and hazards of plutonium, the lethal byproduct of nuclear energy. The one-hour film, "Plutonium: Element of Risk," had been commissioned by the system and received $124,000 from a special public television fund for documentaries and an additional $25,000 from KCET, Los Angeles.

The PBS program department found the completed work unsuitable for national distribution on the basis of "one-sidedness" and contended that it did not measure up to public television's journalistic standards. Among the objections raised was that the documentary is narrated by Jack Lemmon, who is an actor and not a journalist, and that there is no spokesman in the film for the American nuclear power industry.

But the producer of the documentary, Don Widener, and certain executives of KCET had suggested that there were other motives for the rejection. Widener asserted that PBS was yielding to pressure from proponents of nuclear power, and the station has intimated that PBS is wary of examining a potentially explosive public issue at a time when President Carter's new long-range funding bill for public broadcasting is before Congress.

These charges have been denied by top PBS officials. "We have no reluctance now or at any time to put on tough shows if they are responsibly done. In our view, this one was not," said Lawrence K. Grossman, president of PBS. "As for giving in to pressure, that's total malarky. In the first place, there has been none. But if there were, it wouldn't make the slightest difference."

Nevertheless, the issue of the rejection has exacerbated the frictions between local stations and the national service that have existed since the beginnings of public broadcasting. At many of the stations, there has been a history of distrust of the decisions made by the system in the East. National Educational Television, the predecessor to PBS, was felt to reflect the liberalism of New York City, where it was based. PBS, with headquarters in Washington, is believed by many of its affiliates to be susceptible to governmental and lobbyist influences.

Despite the PBS action, the plutonium documentary has been purchased by 11 public television stations, most of them located on the West Coast. Each has paid a pre-arranged amount, proportionate to the size of the community it serves. However, a purchase by 60 or 70 stations was required for the program to earn back its production costs.

KCET aired the program last week, and the others have asked to play it this week. The money paid for the documentary will be returned to the national revolving fund from which the original $124,000 grant was made.

That fund is presided over by one representative from PBS and one from the Corporation for Public Broadcasting. Earlier this year, documentaries from nine independent producers received backing from the fund. Widener's "Plutonium" was the first of that group to be completed. The representative of PBS who authorized the grant has since left the organization.

In the original proposal, the documentary was to look at the pros and cons of plutonium, but what we got at the end was pure advocacy," said Chloé Aaron, senior vice president of programs for PBS.

The documentary stresses the serious risks involved in plutonium proliferation. Mrs. Aaron said that when members of her staff screened the film, they noted that it "oversimplified" the issues and did not meet the journalistic guidelines of PBS which call for reasonable balance. She then screened it herself, she said, and concurred.

A spokesman for KCET, strongly supporting the program and insisting that it did meet the journalistic guidelines, remarked that the judgment at PBS "might have confused style with content. Noting that Lemmon had narrated several previous documentaries for Widener, he asserted that it was not necessary for the narrator to be a journalist if the producer and writer — Widener — was.

Among Widener's previous credits was a 1971 television documentary, "The Powers That Be," concerning the safety of nuclear power plants, that led to a celebrated libel suit. When the Pacific Gas and Electric Co. attacked the film and charged that statements by one of its engineers had been altered in the editing, Widener sued for defamation of character and damage to his career.

The case was finally settled in Widener's favor just weeks in the First District Court of Appeals in San Francisco, but the amount the producer would be awarded in damages was not made clear by the court.

In the midst of the controversy over "Plutonium," the director of another documentary on nuclear energy claimed that his program, "The Last Resort," had been rejected by PBS because it presented a point of view. That program, which was not commissioned by public television but was made by a non-profit educational film company in Massachusetts, concerns the demonstrations last April at the Seabrook nuclear plant in New Hampshire which culminated in the arrest of 1,400 people.

According to the director, Dan Keller, "The Last Resort" appealed to an executive of PBS but ultimately was turned down, as he understood it, because it was sympathetic to those who advocated resistance to nuclear power. The film, he said, "gave equal time to proponents of nuclear power."

Neither Mrs. Aaron of PBS, nor Andrew Yocum, director of scheduling and programming operations for the organization, could Keller's documentary. Mrs. Aaron observed that PBS had already carried one program on that subject: "Seabrook: Do We Need It?" on Aug. 17. "We could have rejected it, or because it wasn't good enough," she said.

To illustrate that PBS did not shrink from the issue of nuclear power, she pointed out also that the subject was debated last month on "The Advocates," and that "Nova" devoted an episode to it, entitled "Incident at Brown's Ferry."

Black tour group target of assault

CHARLES BATTLES
... attack victim

BOSTON (UPI) — Charles Battles walked from the hospital, his head bandaged, a blood-stained coat draped over his arm.

"We read about the busing problem in newspapers and we heard about it on the news, but we never imagined we would be victims," he said.

Battles, 26, a history teacher, and his wife and a group of 12 students from an all-black Pennsylvania Seventh Day Adventist high school were touring Boston's historic sites Monday when they were attacked on Bunker Hill by a small band of whites waving wooden sticks and golf clubs.

Battles and four of the students were injured, none seriously.

Mayor Kevin H. White rushed to Massachusetts General Hospital after the incident.

"I apologize for the city. What happened today is going to be a scar in their memory...and in ours. Everyone remembers the flag incident. It says the virus is still with the city," White told a news conference after he met with the students.

The mayor referred to a June 1976 attack on a black attorney, who was beaten by a group of anti-busing whites carrying an American flag, as he walked across City Hall Plaza. A photograph of the incident was transmitted worldwide and won a Pulitzer Prize.

a maroon-colored car circled in three times. The last time it stopped. They came from around the car and surrounded the bus," said Battles.

He said he believed three white males launched the attack. He said his students told him later the men in the car had shouted obscenities at them as they drove around the monument.

Battles said he believed he captured part of the incident on a movie camera he was using to record their visit.

The city's Charlestown section has been a center of racial conflict since the implementation three years ago of court-ordered school busing to achieve racial desegregation.

Senior John Jones, 19, said fellow students let the women get on the bus first.

"We all tried to get in the bus, but we all couldn't make it. The guys didn't get on. We were attacked with sticks and golf clubs and other wooden clubs," Jones said.

Vincent R. Tamburello, 23, of Boston and Kenneth R. Lauderslager, 26, of Salem, Mass., were arrested near the Charlestown District Court shortly after the attack. And Daniel L. Krystyn, 20, of Boston, was arrested Monday night. All were charged with five counts of assault with a deadly weapon.

Police Commissioner Joseph Jordan vowed the city would "fully prosecute" the alleged attackers.

Economy move
ADM, Staunfield Turner, Central Intelligence Agency director, Monday denied published reports that some 900 agents are being fired because the agency is using more efficient technical procedures. He said the cut-back is to reduce "overhead."

Protestor faces court
LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A woman who reportedly yelled "Free Soviet Jews" and threw a balloon of red dye at a Russian official attended the Soviet National Exhibition will be prosecuted for assaulting an official guest of the United States.

Muriel Moorehead, 27, who was arrested after the incident Saturday, faced arraignment on the charge today before a U.S. magistrate. She was free on $125 bond.

Soviet guide Fedor Nekhayev declined to press charges against the woman, but U.S. Attorney Richard A. Stiltz said a federal complaint would be issued.

Carter ponders post-Christmas tour

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter is preparing to reschedule his world journey after Christmas, and is seeking foreign government reactions to Dec. 27-Jan. 8 as possible new dates, diplomatic sources say.

Carter may discuss his postponed trip with the shah of Iran, who was to begin a two-day state visit to Washington today. The president had planned a brief stop in Teheran on the four-continent journey he previously had planned to begin next week. She told the group she was sorry the president had to cancel the trip that would have included a stop in Venezuela.

Court strikes New York death law

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — The state Court of Appeals today ruled unconstitutional New York's death penalty law mandating capital punishment for the slaying of a police or correction officer.

The challenge of the 1974 statute as unconstitutional was brought by lawyers for two men now on death row, Joseph Davis, 38, and Joseph James, 30.

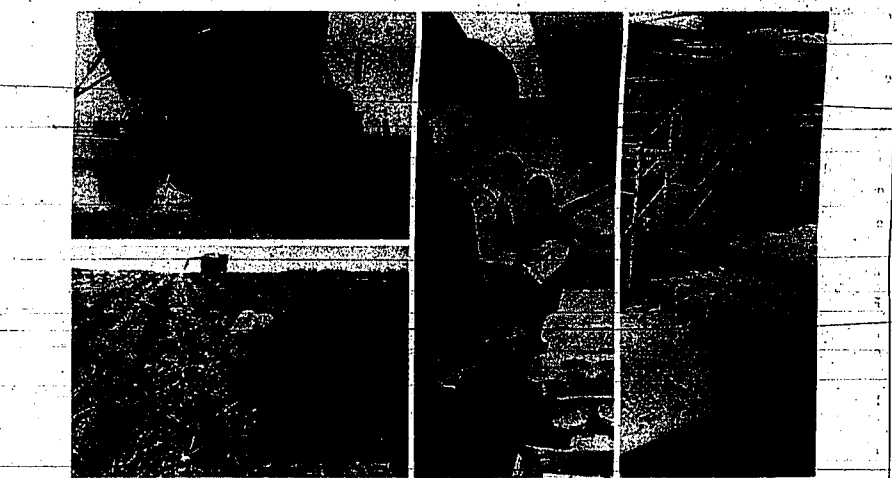

Davis was convicted in 1974 of the shooting of an off-duty Yonkers, N.Y., patrolman during a grocery holdup. James was sentenced to die for the shooting of a New York City prison guard during a 1970 attempted escape from Kings County Hospital.

The high court, in a 4-3 ruling on James' appeal, held that the law was unconstitutional because it did not provide leeway for considering individual circumstances nor set standards to guide judges in handing out the death sentence.

In the Davis appeal, the court struck down his first-degree murder conviction because of the question of whether or not slaying an off-duty policeman satisfied the requirements for a guilty verdict.

Goldstein awaits decision

AL GOLDSTEIN

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (UPI) — Al Goldstein, a New York publisher who profited on a $150 investment in a lucrative publication called Screw, has been waiting for this week for three years.

After two trials and $450,000 in legal fees and expenses, Goldstein will find out in the next day or two if he is guilty of violating 12 federal obscenity laws for mailing issues of Screw and a newspaper called Smut into Kansas in 1974.

"I've forgotten what it's like to lead a normal life," Goldstein said Monday during a recess after the closing arguments in his trial. "I just want this to end so I can get on a plane and go back to New York, I hate Kansas."

A jury of seven women and five men begins its deliberations today in the obscenity trial that started Oct. 25.

"Oral sex is what's on trial here," Goldstein said. "If the jury doesn't believe there is anything wrong with oral sex, they should acquit me."

Capote escorted off podium

TOWSON, Md. (UPI) — Author Truman Capote tripped on his way to the stage. When he finally got to the microphone before his audience of 1,200 students, he babbled nonsense and muttered obscenities.

Ten minutes later, he was escorted off the podium by embarrassed school officials.

Capote, who was to be paid $3,500 for his speech Sunday night at Towson State University, was drunk and totally out of control and it was a service to the author as well as to the students to cut the talk short, according to Robert Roll, the college news and publications director.

Capote, who will not be paid for his appearance, was quoted as saying in an interview before the speech that he was a hopeless alcoholic who also was addicted to tranquilizers and that the speech would be his last ever.

Anti-ERA group broadens base

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho Stop ERA, an organization which was involved in rescinding the Equal Rights Amendment in Idaho, has broadened its base beyond the amendment issue.

Susan Hill, chairman of Idaho Stop ERA, said the group is broadening its base "to combat and defeat the radical anti-family element."

She said the change, to Eagle Forum, will enable the organization to handle areas of specific legislation including ones affecting the family.

"Now that we have been successful in rescinding Idaho's ratification of the ERA, it is time to move on to other related goals," Hill said.

The first statewide conference of Eagle Forum will be Nov. 19 in Boise. It will be a pro-family leadership conference and will be attended by representatives of organizations and individuals who support the traditional family and traditional values.

Belgian millionaire rejected

AUCKLAND, New Zealand (UPI) — Being a millionaire apparently is not one of the desired skills in New Zealand, and so wealthy Belgian Victor Warquier was told "to seek citizenship elsewhere."

Warquier sailed from the island nation Monday after being rejected as an immigrant because he had insufficient qualifications.

Immigration officials said he had to leave because he was over 45 years of age, had no required skills and his marital affairs in Belgium were not in order.

After sentencing

Evel, judge trade compliments

SANTA MONICA (UPI) — Evel Knievel did four things the ordinary way. That includes being sentenced to jail, Knievel and the judge who sentenced him to six months for assault traded compliments.

The dramatic motorcycle daredevil — who insisted on pleading guilty to beating a writer with a baseball bat, breaking his wrist and arm — followed his sentencing Monday by praising the judge's fairness.

The judge condemned Knievel's attack on Sheldon Saltman, Knievel's former press agent and author of a book on Knievel the stunt man did not like, as a violation of "all the precepts of civilized society," but praised Knievel's honesty in refusing to plead innocent.

"It is very refreshing for the court to have a defendant charged with a serious crime walk in and openly admit his guilt," Superior Court Judge Edward Rafeecelle said.

"I have a great respect for a man who says 'I did it — do with me what you will.'"

That was precisely what Knievel did. He had earlier fired his lawyer because the attorney refused to go along with Knievel's insistence that he should plead guilty, on the grounds that he had done what he was accused of doing.

"Any American, he said, 'if they did something, should say they did it.'"

Knievel made clear he was not contrite and the presentence probation report called for a sentence of a year in prison because Knievel "exhibits no remorse for the crime and indicates that if the situation arose again he would respond in the same manner."

Instead, the judge, who could have sent Knievel to prison for up to four years, ordered him to report to the sheriff Monday to begin serving a six-month jail term recommending that he be sent to an honor farm or put in a work furlough program that would require him to be locked up only at night.

That determination is based on the sheriff's office.

The judge put Knievel on three years probation, which he said could be served in his home state, Montana.

"That judge is a good judge," Knievel said on leaving the courtroom. "He is a fair judge. That's all I have to say."

Jumped Saltman, 47, Sept. 21 and Knievel beat Saltman with a baseball bat, saying later he was trying to damage the hands that wrote the book.

"Long ago we abandoned the concepts of frontier justice here in California and the civilized world," the judge scolded Knievel.

EVEL KNEIVEL ... sentenced

Battle spreads to three states

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — The legal battle over Howard Hughes' millions flared in three states Monday — Nevada, Texas and California — as the U.S. Supreme Court was asked to step in and bring order.

In Nevada, jury selection was in its sixth day in the trial to determine the authenticity of the so-called "Mormon will" attributed to the late industrialist who died April 5, 1976 on a flight from Mexico to Houston.

In Texas, jury selection began in a trial to determine the legal residence of Hughes in an action that could lead to that state collecting millions of dollars in inheritance taxes.

California, which also is battling to prove Hughes is not a resident of its state, asked Supreme Court Justice Lewis Powell to stop the trial in Houston.

Last week before the start of the trial California asked the high court to take over the dispute and rule in which state — Hughes' legally

Harold Rhoden, co-executor of the three-page, hand-scrawled document, argued that the start of the trial in Texas interfered with the Nevada hearing and asked that Texas Attorney General John Hill be held in contempt of court.

District Court Judge Keith Haynes, who earlier admonished Hill not to do anything that would disrupt the trial, ordered Hill to appear before him this week to show cause why he should not be held in contempt.

"The will is here," Rhoden said. "All exemplars (hand-writing samples) and blow-ups are here. I can't be there — face default (in Texas) because of what the attorney general of Texas is doing."

Rhoden withdrew his motion of contempt against Hill when court reconvened Monday afternoon. He said he had learned Hill had argued in Texas against a motion to default Noah Dietrich, Rhoden's client and executor of the Mormon will.

Rhoden also said he learned Hill had opposed a motion that the trial proceed.

California, in an agreement worked out with prospective Hughes heirs, would get $30 million or more from the Hughes estate if a claim of Hughes' residence in Texas can be discredited. If the court rules that Hughes legally resided in Texas, California still would collect 2 percent of the estate.

Texas would stand to reap many millions more in tax dollars than California if it can prove its claim to Hughes' estate, which has been valued at as low as $167 million to as high as $2.5 billion.

Nevada has no death taxes but itself itself caught in the middle of the California-Texas dispute in its trial of the Mormon will which was filed for probate in Nevada.

Sadat calls Israel visit 'holy job'; invitation due

By United Press International
EGYPTIAN President Anwar Sadat said today his proposed trip to Israel is a "holy job" and he will make it as soon as possible after receiving an official Israeli invitation through the United States. He said he would not fear for his safety in Israel.

But he emphasized he will be speaking for Egypt only and not for other Arabs when he travels to Israel's Knesset parliament, the Knesset, and the aim of the visit will be to explain his views and not to negotiate any agreement.

Sadat spoke as Israeli Premier Menachem Begin took the first steps toward inviting Sadat, summoning the U.S. envoy to Israel to discuss the relaying of a formal invitation to the Egyptian leader. He said he would address the parliament today on the proposed Sadat visit.

The Egyptian president told a 14-member delegation from the U.S. House of Representatives he views the visit as part of preparations for a reconvened Arab-Israeli peace conference of Geneva.

"I consider the visit a holy job," Sadat said. "We must do the impossible to break the vicious circle in which Arabs and Israelis have been moving for 30 years. This is for the sake of our future generations. Hence the holiness of the mission. If I do not try to break this vicious circle, God will bring me to account, and so will future generations."

Asked whether he would fear for his personal safety in Israel, Sadat snapped "Never."

He said "Whenever the invitation arrives I shall be ready to go because we should not lose time on procedural arrangements (for the Geneva conference)."

Israeli Premier Begin said Monday he would send a formal, written invitation to Sadat through the American ambassadors in Israel and Egypt.

In Cairo, Sadat spoke in reply to a question by the delegation head, House majority leader James Wright, who said the proposed visit "may be a longwaited breakthrough" toward Middle East peace.

Explaining the aim of the visit, Sadat said: "For me the Arab-Israeli conflict consists of 70 percent psychological problems and 30 percent substance. Let us overcome the psychological problems and go to the substance. For that I am going to the Knesset and if need be I shall open a discussion with its 120 deputies to give them the real facts in the area here, not from their point of view, but from the other point of view so that they can decide for themselves."

"I consider my visit to the Knesset part of the preparations for Geneva," the President said, reiterating his insistence that the Palestine

Liberation Organization be represented there and that the negotiations should lead to establishment of a Palestinian state on the Jordan West Bank and the Gaza sector.

Biko inquest continues

PRETORIA, South Africa (UPI) — A South African police officer testified today that Steve Biko went "ab-solutely berserk" and hit the back of his head against a wall in a fight with South African police interrogators last month.

Maj. Harold Snyman said at the resumed inquest into the black leader's death that it took five men to pin him to the floor and shake him with leg irons and handcuffs.

An attorney for Biko's family said Snyman had "smear'd" the memory of the 30-year-old activist, who died in a Pretoria prison cell Sept. 12 of severe brain damage five days after the interrogation room skirmish.

Biko eventually was subdued. "That's when he must have hit the back of his head against the wall," he said in one point.

Magistrate Martinus Prins interjected: "Is that an inference. Did you hear or see the fall?"

"It's an inference," said Snyman.

Maj. Ketridge: "Major, you have just demonstrated clearly what I shall submit to his worship, that there is no value to be attached to your statement about the fall against the wall."

Snyman said Biko "was absolutely berserk" on the morning of Sept. 7 after being confronted with "facts" about the production of a revolutionary pamphlet and flung a chair at the major.

Ketridge said: "You have attempted by that speech to convince a man you could never convict in his lifetime. You have smeared him after his death to protect yourself against the criticism that is coming."

Earlier, Ketridge told Snyman: "I'm going to suggest that by 7:30 a.m. on Sept. 7, Biko suffered brain damage."

Snyman replied: "I don't think so because someone in such a situation would have had a headache and would have asked us for a pill or something."

The fall has become the pivotal issue in testimony so far. There has been no other evidence so far that might explain how Biko died of brain damage.

On Monday, Snyman testified that Biko was kept naked in a jail cell for 19 days and then bound with leg irons and handcuffs and chained to the bars of the interrogation room for 50 hours, then attacked his captors when the restraints were removed.

Picketing firemen help battle blaze

LONDON (UPI) — British troops today fought a series of small London fires alone a day after striking firefighters left their picket lines to help them battle a hospital blaze.

More than 100 patients, many of them elderly and bedridden, were evacuated Monday night from St. Andrew's hospital in east London when fire broke out in a basement storeroom. No one was injured.

A dozen strikers responded to a police request for help by rushing to the hospital in their private cars, taking special breathing equipment with them. After helping 30 soldiers put out the fire, they resumed their picketing outside their fire station.

An 86-year-old man died in a fire at his home in Scotland Monday to become the first fatality since Britain's 35,000 firefighters began their first official nationwide strike.

About 4,000 volunteer firemen and 9,000 servicemen given crash courses in basic firefighting techniques are responding to emergencies.

During the first 24 hours of the strike, the London Fire Brigade received 255 emergency calls, somewhat fewer than normal.

Criticism endorsed

CHICAGO Sun-Times
 — Soviet dissident Vladimir Bukovsky, who was confined to Russian prisons and mental hospitals for 11 years for his political activities, Monday urged Americans to continue criticizing human rights violations abroad.

Arriving here on the first stop of an 11-city speaking tour sponsored by the AFL-CIO, Bukovsky told a press conference that the United States "should demand the immediate release" of 11 Soviets recently jailed. He said they were arrested for passing to the West information about human rights violations in the U.S.S.R.

Diplomats reviewing East-West defense in the seventh week of their meeting in Belgrade should also make a detailed investigation of the "abuse of psychiatry for political purposes," Bukovsky said.

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 16, 1977

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Charm interests and entertainments will not work out as you wish right now. But you will be able to gain the good will of others and achieve much of a constructive and basic nature.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Look to clever friends who are serious for assistance today, since fun pals could only get you in trouble. Be organized and accomplish a great deal.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to June 20) Contact important persons you know and gain their good will, support. Get involved in civic matters that can be helpful to you.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Study a new plan you have in mind well and bring it to the attention of bigwigs who can help you with it. Don't be flippant with highups or you gain their ill will.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Be very practical in dealing with doblers and creditors and get right results. Pay more attention to the views of a loved one and you keep out of trouble.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Understand what is expected of you by a clever partner and you have more success. Keep promises or you could lose out where it counts most.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Consider the purchase of new appliances to get work done more efficiently. Avoid high-strung, nervous types who could disappoint you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) A good time to get into creative work but not a good time for frivolity. Show more affection for a loved one, and get a fine response.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Gather all the facts and figures you will need in order to better your financial affairs. Be loyal to the ones you love.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Go after information you need from right sources and use a direct method in dealing with others. Don't let your emotions run away with you. Show that you have self-control and are confident.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You have new ideas through which you can add appreciably to your present income. Don't argue with those close to you because you may be wrong.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Contact good friends who are able to help you in some way. Listen to their suggestions. Forget that frivolity you have in mind and allow you are a stable person.

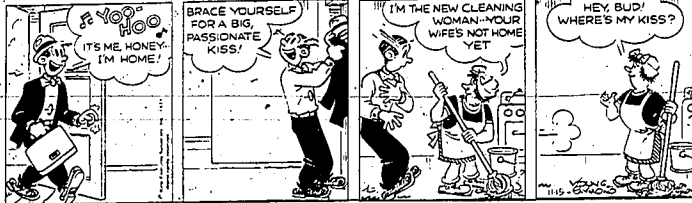

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Rely on your experiences in the past in order to set up a better arrangement for the future. A new contact offers a scheme that's not for you.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be quite unusual and will get ahead in life because the thinking is radically different from that of others. The field of science is especially fine here.

what's what

Odd, is it not, that there's no mention of stepchildren in Dr. Benjamin Spock's books about child care? One out of every three marriages in this country is a remarriage. And in a third of these remarriages, both the husbands and the wives have children from previous marriages. Claim is about 25 million husbands-and-wives-are-stepfathers and stepmothers. Within the next three years, it's said, one out of every four boys and girls nationwide will be a stepchild. Somehow we've sufficient "how to" might do pretty well with a "How to" book in this matter.

All roads lead to Rome. Or such has been the claim any way for a couple of thousand years. As for road signs, however, Rome didn't have any, not even until 174-year ago.

The average woman 75 years from now, it's believed, will be three inches taller than the average woman of today.

METRIC FOOTBALL
Q. "When we convert to metric measures, will the football fields be changed?"
A. That's likely, eventually. One metric football game has already been played in this country in 1977. It was at Northfield, Minn. Between cross-town rivals St. Olaf College and Carleton College. The field was 100 meters long and 50 meters wide, 9.36 yards longer and 4.68 yards wider than normal. All the stats were metric. St. Olaf beat Carleton 43-0 in that one, the country's first metric football game, called the Liter Bowl.

Q. "What's a 'snowball sentence'?"
A. A sentence that starts with a one-letter word, then adds adjectives. Example: "I do not know where family doctors acquire red dightly perplexing handwriting; nevertheless, extraordinary pharmaceutical intellectuality, counterbalancing indecipherability, transcendentalities intercommunications, incomprehensibilities."

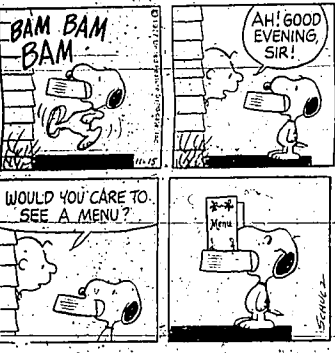

OLD SONGS
It's widely known, there once was a popular song entitled "Who Threw the Overalls in Mistress Murphy's Chowder?" Less well remembered, though, are these other ditties: "When Bananas Skins are Falling, I'll Come Sliding Back To You" and "They're Moving Father's Grave To Build a Sewer."

A horseman of considerable experience claims a gray horse tends to be more cautious than a horse of a different color. It's almost invariably the gray, he avers, which warns the rider when a stranger approaches. Interesting, if true.

Having a birthday today? So are at least nine million other people.

Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1977 by The Chicago Tribune. All Rights Reserved.

DEAR ABBY: You told a 16-year-old girl who wanted to invite a certain boy to a sorority dance to ask someone who had already asked her out. Why? That's the first step in giving control of the relationship over to the man. He calls her if she feels like it, while she's sitting home waiting to be called.

If a girl thinks a man has an interest in her, what's wrong with calling him?

I'm single, 29, and have been dating since I was 16. If I meet a man who appeals to me and I think it's mutual, I'll call him and invite him over. He might think I'm pushy, and he may even reject me, but that's the chance I take. And it beats sitting home alone waiting to be called.

Changing times?

Also, I never give my phone number to a man who won't give me his. If he refuses, or gives me his office number, I know he's probably married or living with someone.

Times have changed, Abby. Women no longer must wait to be chosen. They can do some choosing on their own. This doesn't mean chasing after someone who has no interest in them. My motto is: "It never hurts to ask."

BONNIE IN ALLENTOWN

DEAR BONNIE: Your attitude makes sense, and will probably find more winners among women than men. Men have been risking rejection for years. If a woman takes the initiative and is rejected, it's not the end of the world. Let's rejoice 1978 the year of the open season on all delights—regardless of sex.

DEAR ABBY: A niece of mine was married recently. I wasn't able to attend the wedding and didn't know what to get her for a wedding gift, so I sent her a check for $100. It's not easy for me to shop as I am somewhat handicapped.

I just received a thank-you note from the bride which both annoyed and shocked me. She wrote, "Your generous gift has already been put to good use in buying gifts for the girls in my wedding party."

I was under the impression that a cash wedding gift should be used to buy something for the newlyweds.

Am I wrong to feel perturbed? It was my intention to give her a "gift," not to help with the wedding expenses.

DISAPPOINTED

DEAR DIS: Your niece probably put the money where it would do the most good. Overlook it. At least she was honest.

CONFIDENTIAL TO F.J.R.: Instead of yearning for some kind of immortality, remember the words of Benjamin Franklin:

If you would not be forgotten, do not die and rot, but write things worth reading.

If you feel left out and lonely, or wish you know how to get people to love you, my new book "How To Be Deeper Than Never Too Young or Too Old," is for you. Send $1 along with a long, self-addressed, stamped (24 cents) envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

your health

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb—

I would like your advice. I am 5 feet 5 and weigh 125 pounds. I sound fine, but I gained eight pounds in four months which all went on my thighs and buttocks.

The weight gain occurred because I stopped smoking 10 months ago. I had smoked 33 years, and am quite proud of myself as I stopped completely in one day and haven't had the desire since but I want to eat constantly.

18 months ago, I started walking a mile a day and put myself on a diet, not a crash diet, but a sensible one of 1200 calories. In a month's time, I put on a couple more pounds. A few days ago, I found out why. I thought that if a half grapefruit was good for me, grapefruit juice (unsweetened) would be even better, so I had a grapefruit juice. I thought I would drink a big glass of grapefruit or grapefruit juice.

I never dreamed on me to look up the calories in the orange and grapefruit juices. I'm afraid I don't get this weight off now, I will continue putting more and more on, so I need your help.

Dear Reader—

As you already know, an eight-ounce glass of orange juice or grapefruit juice is about 90 calories. Assuming you drink six glasses a day, and you may have drunk more, that would be 540 calories a day. In a month, that would be about 16,200 calories—or, the number of calories found in four and a half pounds of body fat. So, if you only gained two pounds a month, you may have been doing well.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 47, Weight Lacking Diet, that you can use as a guide to your weight control program. Walk every day as that is a big help, and the more you can increase your walking, the better you will do. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 3561, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Many people do have an urge to eat more when they stop smoking. My best tip is to drink a glass of water whenever you feel the urge, or go for a walk. The biggest reason why people gain weight after stopping smoking is from substituting eating for smoking. And then the body thrives and uses food better because it is healthier after you quit poisoning your cells with nicotine.

Dear Dr. Lamb—

I had a liver biopsy, and the doctor said I have a fatty liver. He didn't give me any medication or tell me what to do to help the condition.

I have often read that a fatty liver precedes cirrhosis of the liver. Is there anything I can do about it? I am not a drinking woman. I'm 72, and weigh 145. I have had my gall bladder removed 20 years ago, and had jaundice 40 years ago.

Dear Reader—

Your doctor didn't recommend anything because he probably thought you were doing fine. Fatty deposits in the liver may occur from previous liver damage or from excessive alcohol consumption, or even from eating too much fat, and no carbohydrates, or in severe diabetes. There are many causes for it.

Yes, it can precede cirrhosis of the liver. But that is not always the case, either. You are wise not to use alcohol. The only other recommendation I would make would be to be sure that you get plenty of lean red meat in your diet, and your daily quota of B vitamins. Otherwise, I would not be overly concerned about it.

Possible TV series

Pilot movie filmed in Sun Valley

By IRENE LINK

KETCHUM — "It happened in Sun Valley not so very long ago..." and it is still happening in Sun Valley.

The movie makers have been at it again. This time it was with what will likely turn into a series for television.

Since 1937, the year that the Sun Valley resort opened, there have been at least 18 feature-length movies filmed in the Sun Valley-Ketchum area. Some of those movies have been classics such as "Sun Valley Serenade" (1939), "Mrs. Mike" (1947), "How to Marry a Millionaire" (1953), "Seven Brides for Seven Brothers" (1954), and the renowned "Bus Stop" (1956) with Marilyn Monroe.

Other movies made in the area are "I Met Him in Paris" (1957), "Stanley and Elvington" (1938), "Mortal Storm" (1941), "The Woman's Face" (1945), "Duchess of Idaho" (1947), "That Wonderful Urge" (1948), "North Country" and "Wild North" (1952), "Back to God's Country" (1953), "The Tall Men" (1955), "Storm Fear" (1953), "North Frederick" (1957), "Ski Party" (1958), and "Miracle of Todd."

In addition, one television episode of "I Love Lucy," appropriately titled "Lucy Goes to Sun Valley," was filmed there in 1958. Numerous other short movies on skiing including three United States government ski training movies have been shot in the area.

Of course, with the movie-making has come a steady stream of many of Hollywood's most famous stars — Claudette Colbert, Spencer Tracy, John Henne, Joan Crawford, Van Johnson, Tyrone Power, Gene Tierney, Stewart Granger, Marilyn Monroe, Lauren Bacall, Betty Grable, Howard Keel, Clark Gable, Jane Russell, Lucille Ball... The list is endless.

Last January, a pilot movie for a possible television series was made in the Sun Valley-Ketchum locality. Called "Stedman," it is about a young ex-Olympic ski-racer who returns home to Ketchum and becomes the town's sheriff. Each episode will deal with a variety of fascinating and thrilling adventures in this mountain setting and how Sheriff Stedman handles them. During October, two more episodes were filmed.

The brainchild of Barry Weitz, a bright, young executive producer for Columbia Pictures Television, "Stedman" will offer the television viewer a change of pace from the typical crime and violence-or-situation comedy that most series consist of today.

According to Weitz, "We would like to give the viewing audience the excitement of an action show, the intensity and warmth of real people, and the beauty of the Sun Valley setting. Stedman is not the typical sheriff. He is young, a little bit inexperienced and very human. This human element is very attractive and adds a factor that will captivate a lot of viewers who are tired of the run-of-the-mill TV series."

"Some of our scripts will be based on actual events that have taken place in the Sun Valley area. And this area is full of exciting script possibilities."

The show's star, Dale Robinette, appears to be an actor with a fine future ahead of him and "Stedman" will probably help him get there a little faster. He interprets his role with sensibility and compassion, and yet there is no doubt that he is the sheriff and in charge. Robinette believes that the second and third scripts are even better than the first and the ideas for future scripts are impressive.

Robinette was chosen from a field of more than 200 who were interested in the role. Weitz, the executive producer, says, "Dale has all the necessary qualities we were looking for — talent, good looks, masculinity and the ability to inject sensitivity into the role of a sheriff, a character in whom we do not often expect that quality."

Why was the Sun Valley area chosen for the filming of this series?

Weitz explains, "This valley has all of the necessary ingredients for the show. Of course, it has the year-round beauty of the natural scenery. It has all of the facilities we need to house our cast and crew. It is the perfect setting for the story about a resort town sheriff and most importantly, it offers a friendly and munitly which provides a great array of talented people who enjoy being a part of what we're doing."

"In fact, if 'Stedman' becomes a series, and we believe it will, we will be back early in 1978 to film between 11 and 20 shows for the fall 1978 television season. And we plan to use as many local people as possible as actors, extras, and assistants in every way we can. This is good for the community and good for us."

Wertz estimates conservatively that the "Stedman" company has put a minimum of half a million dollars so far into the economy of Sun Valley and Kelchum. This has been realized through salaries to locals who have been actors, extra assistants in the production, and property rentals, purchases, as well as the expense of housing a large crew and the cast. The filming of the most recent episodes in October has been timely for many who are unemployed between the summer and winter seasons.

How have the people in the community reacted to having a bit of Hollywood in their backyard?

Reaction has been positive. Bob Rosso, owner of The Elephant's Perch, a maintenance shop on Ketchum Highway, says "I can't say enough good about the 'Stedman' company. They rented and bought equipment from us for the mountain climbing episode. We had an opportunity to work with them and found them to be good people. They put a lot of money into the economy at a time when we really needed it. They made an effort to involve the community in every way, and that is beneficial for all of us. And I think they are making movies that will leave a fine impression of this area on everyone who sees them."

Lorraine Curtis, owner-developer of the Helen Meadows residential project, feels certain about what the "Stedman" group has accomplished in the valley. Apart from the fact that she plays the role of dispatcher in the sheriff's office in "Stedman," she is able to look beyond that and realize the immense benefit to the community. She explains, "They worked their way into the area and became a part of it while they were here. We are lucky to have such a considerable group who contributed to the betterment of the area instead of taking advantage. I have not heard one negative thing about the company from anyone. And one thing I really appreciate is that they are making movies that make Sun Valley look good and scripts that have happy endings."

In total agreement, Duffy Wilmer, owner of the Pioneer Saloon in Kelchum, says, "The 'Stedman' company is a first-class organization. Everyone from Producer Bob Stambler, Director Paul Stanley, the leading stars on down was genuinely nice and considerate of our town and people. They not only made their films here, but they came in to eat and socialize. They did business in the community and were a part of us. They weren't just people you might have expected from Hollywood. I don't know of one person who didn't enjoy having them here."

If this is a consensus, as it appears to be, then with a little bit of luck, the "Stedman" company will be back soon.

We don't remember the poet's name, but someone wrote "The man who is worthwhile is the man who can smile, when all his finesses go wrong."

That is if he makes his contract with them all going down. West cashed two high clubs and shifted to the six of diamonds. South rose with dummy's ace and thought things over. He decided that East surely held both missing kings. How could he keep one of them from taking a trick against him? His first thought was to run off all his trumps and come down to ace-queen of spades and queen of diamonds in dummy. East would be down to a singleton king and a guarded king and all South would have to do would be to guess which was the singleton.

South found a better play. He ruffed dummy's last club, played a few rounds of trumps, led his last diamond to dummy's 10 and left East on lead with no way to do anything but give up.

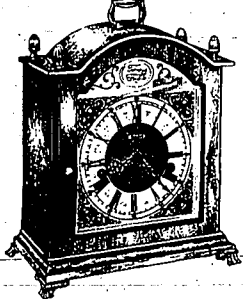

Of course, West could have beaten the hand if he had led his diamond at trick two, but West was not looking at all the cards.

Ask the Jacobys

We have had several questions on party bridge scoring. There are no definite rules, but the simplest way is to score as in rubber bridge except that the first game on a rubber gets a 300-point bonus and the second game a 500-point bonus while if a player has a part score at the end he gets a final 50-point bonus. Secret FBI nuke probe 'fruitless'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The FBI last year launched a secret but fruitless investigation of employees at a Pennsylvania nuclear plant who were suspected of smuggling out highly enriched uranium in their crutches, say newly declassified documents.

No smuggled uranium was found, according to the documents, but stricter security measures brought union and other protests of "pat down" searches of workers at other U.S. nuclear power plants.

One worker objected because he was "ticklish." The new material on the much-investigated Apollo, Pa., nuclear fuel plant has been released by the Natural Resources Defense Council, Inc., a non-profit environmental group.

It obtained declassified documents from the Nuclear Regulatory Commission and the former Research and Development Administration which supplemented material released last week to some of the media under Freedom of Information Act requests. Previously released documents showed that since the early 1960s up to 200 pounds of enriched uranium handled by the Apollo plant's previous management — enough to manufacture from 15 to 20 bombs — could not be accounted for and was suspected of having been diverted to Israel to make nuclear weapons.

A secret report by a joint

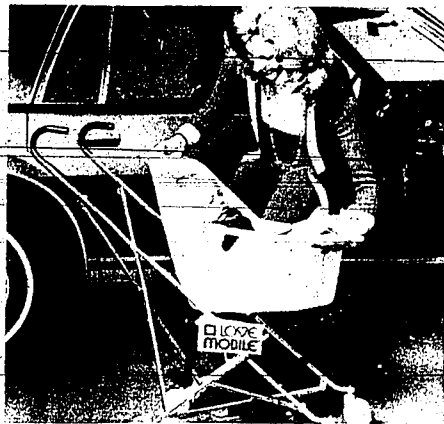

NRC-ERDA Task Force investigating nuclear material accounting and control at the Babcock and Wilcox nuclear fuel plants at Apollo, Pa., reveals that the FBI in 1976 launched a clandestine investigation following a report that employees were smuggling highly enriched uranium from the plant by hiding it in their crutches, the Council said.

"A janitor at the plant," it said, "told a fellow employee in a barroom conversation that workers were smuggling uranium out of the plant by hiding it between their legs to avoid detection."

The commission notified the FBI, which began an undercover investigation at the Apollo plant Aug. 16, 1976. Some 20 present and former employees were interviewed but the allegation "was not substantiated," according to the documents.

In August of this year, the report said, the Wisconsin Public Service Co. and Baltimore Gas and Electric petitioned the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to amend its security regulations to eliminate the requirement for "pat down" physical searches of individuals working in protected areas at nuclear power plants.

The petition said: "Some plant personnel and their unions have made known their feelings that a physical search is highly distasteful, personally offensive, and in violation of individual rights."

Boys Town ships out yule appeal

BOYS TOWN, Neb. (UPI) — Boys Town is shipping out 2.5 million Christmas appeal letters in hopes it can avoid dipping into its endowment fund.

William Ramsey, deputy director for development, said the letters stress "our new services — the research center and the Institute."

endowment is about $185 million, down about $24 million from its peak before the new projects were started.

Interest on the endowment fund generates about $10 million a year, but the home needs about $19 million annually to run all its operations, he said.

Boys Town did not make a Christmas appeal in 1972, after disclosure of its finances. The appeals resumed in 1973 but have not brought in the money they did before, Ramsey said.

Blaine best site for transit system

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN
Times-News Writer

KETCHUM — Blaine County is the best site in Idaho to establish a successful bus or rail mass transit system, according to a report to be released today conducted by the Idaho Department of Aeronautics and Public Transportation (DAPT).

With its resort towns of Ketchum and Sun Valley attracting heavy tourist traffic, the Wood River Valley may even be the best area in the entire Northwest, and perhaps in the entire country, to pilot a successful mass transit system, DAPT officials say.

However, visions of a token-free, mass transit system connecting Bellevue with Sun Valley hinge on the Idaho Legislature passing a law allowing local option sales tax. Currently, Idaho communities cannot levy a local sales tax.

City officials in Ketchum and Sun Valley estimate a local sales or "bed tax" placed on tourists staying in hotels in the area could net the community $500,000 annually.

State estimates show further that a wide-scale, mass transit system, linking Bellevue, Halley, Ketchum and Sun Valley, could run successfully for 114 days a year on a $250,000 budget. The 114-day span includes the tourist season in Blaine County but officials say a transit system could run all year long simply by adjusting service in slack seasons.

Joe Loomis, the DAPT project development manager in Boise, has been working on the Blaine County transportation study since it was begun in November, 1975.

"If a transit system was developed in a manner which was suited to the environmental, aesthetic, social and economic needs of the area," Loomis told the Times-News Monday, "and if there was some method of providing recurrent funding source, this would be the best location for a large-scale transit system in Idaho."

"There was a place for it," Loomis added, "this is the place, without a question."

Loomis said his department's study is near completion and a recommendation will be released officially in two weeks.

The project summary will recommend the complete feasibility of a county transit system, free to passengers, if the system could be funded through a local-option or bed tax, according to the DAPT project development manager.

"The rapid growth in the area has made the Wood River Valley the ideal site for a mass transit system, Loomis said, noting the area's economic growth has directly paralleled its own transit ridership development.

In 1973, the Idaho Department of Highways predicted a mass transit system would fall in Blaine County, based on bus transit figures for that year.

But since 1973, Loomis says transit ridership on the area's three privately-owned bus lines has increased 714 percent.

In 1973, 55,000 passengers rode on an urban transit line between Ketchum and Sun Valley. However, by 1976, 406,000 people were riding an inter-urban line between Halley and Sun Valley.

The State Department of Highways forecast only a slim two percent of the area's total traffic could ever be diverted to a mass transit system. But three years later, because of rapid growth, the DAPT predicted 20 percent of the traffic would ride a transit system, which Loomis states is quite substantial.

The DAPT official used the Boise transit system as a comparison to show how well suited the Wood River Valley is to pilot a successful mass transit system.

Boise, with a population of 198,000 operates an 18-bus transit system, Loomis said. In 1976 Boise's transit system carried 225,000 passengers throughout the entire year. The split ridership from all traffic in the city was about one percent.

In comparison the Ketchum/Sun Valley community, with a peak season population usually about 8,900 people, carried more than twice the number of riders Boise's transit system did and in half the time.

Given its transit ridership patterns,

Boise would have to grow to 520,000 people before its transit system would carry as many passengers as the Ketchum/Sun Valley system did in just the tourist season, Loomis stated.

The one obstacle to a Blaine County mass transit system lies in financing such a project. By law, the local government is required to fund the system, but none of the county's cities, together or apart, could afford a system with the current tax laws.

However, if a local option sales tax was passed by the Idaho legislature, Loomis estimated Ketchum and Sun Valley alone could finance the system.

Currently, Idaho is one of three states not to have passed a local option law among 22 states west of the Mississippi River.

Permits available

TWIN FALLS — Free use firewood permits for the Twin Falls Ranger District of the Sawtooth National Forest will be available up to Nov. 30, and permits for the Sawtooth National Recreation Area and the Ketchum Ranger District will be available until weather closes roads in the area.

The Fairfield and Burley Ranger Districts will also issue permits until Nov. 30. Permits must be obtained from the district office where the wood will be cut.

The forest service reports that firewood is becoming more difficult to find everywhere except the Twin Falls District, where additional cutting areas within the deadline burn area have been opened.

Solar energy here

TWIN FALLS — Solar energy is not coming, it's here.

That's the opinion of the Solar Magic Company of Twin Falls, which this week was named the state distributor for Solar Incorporated, of Mead, Neb. The Twin Falls company now offers a solar air system, described by Harold Chandler of the company as a heating system that can store heat "up to 10 days." The system consists of solar collectors, heat storage trays and a "completely automatic air control unit," he said.

Ten buildings under construction in southern Idaho are using this system, Chandler said. Several other buildings soon to be started or on the drawing boards also will use the system.

The Solar Magic Company will hold a solar energy seminar Thursday, Nov. 17, at 7:30 p.m. in the Blue Lakes Inn. The public is invited to attend and ask any questions they might have about solar energy, Chandler said.

'Speak up' tonight

TWIN FALLS — "Speak up" session for the public schools will be held at 8 p.m. tonight and Wednesday. The sessions are designed to give the public a chance to input into planning for the public schools.

The public is urged to attend. Tonight's session will be at Vera C. O'Leary Jr. High and Sawtooth Elementary School. Wednesday's meetings will be at Robert Stuart Jr. High and Morningside Elementary School.

Meet set Thursday

BOISE — The State Board of Education will meet Thursday with the Idaho Legislature's Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee to discuss non-budget matters.

The meeting will be part of a two-day session, during which legislative audits on several small state agencies will be presented.

The purpose of the meeting is "to allow members of both groups to ask questions about any issue they're interested in," Lindy High, Public Relations Officer for the State Board of Education, said.

High said the meeting is restricted to non-budget matters, "because the budget is generally discussed pretty thoroughly during the legislative session."

Hospital board OK's room rate increase

By KEN HODGE
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — Hit hard in the pocketbook by President Carter's minimum wage rate increase, members of the Magic Valley Memorial Hospital Board reluctantly decided the best way to keep pace with wage hikes facing the hospital is to boost hospital room rates.

"It's the thing we hate to do — raise room rates," board chairman Joe Savage said when finance administrator John Hayden proposed the rate increase. "But there's no other alternative."

Hayden told the 15-member board Carter's legislation will cost MVMH about $150,000 during the remaining nine months of the current fiscal year.

The only way to make up the budget deficit created by the nationwide 25-cent minimum wage hike is to increase the room fees paid by patients at the hospital, Hayden explained.

He proposed an average 5.5 percent room rate increase effective Dec. 1, to balance the budget.

Hayden's proposal included no increase for war room rates, but suggested widening the differential between the cost of a ward room and a semi-private room and the differential between intensive care private and semi-private rooms. The proposal also suggested a boost in intensive care room rates.

According to Hayden's proposal, which the board passed by a unanimous vote, ward room rates will remain at their current $80 per day.

Semi-private room rates will receive a 4.7 percent increase from $85 per day to $89 per day.

Private rooms received the highest increase, jumping from $90 per day to $99 per day, a 10 percent boost.

Finally, intensive care rooms will increase 7.5 percent from $120 a day to $129 daily.

Hayden also outlined the wage increases which made the room rate increases necessary.

The hospital has always paid slightly more than the minimum wage to its employees because they must maintain their own uniforms, Hayden said.

In order to stay ahead of new wages effective Jan. 1, MVMH will be forced to give 20-cent per hour raises to its employees who earn less than $3 per hour. And in order to maintain wage differences for jobs with more responsibility, the hospital must boost wages in the $3-to-$4 range by 15 cents, those in the $4 to $5 range 10 cents and those in the $5 to $6 range five cents. Wages over $6 will remain the same.

In other action, the board:

— voted to accept the bid of SAGA Food Service, the current contractor at the hospital, to provide meals for hospital patients for the next two years. The cost included in the bid is now $7.91 per patient per day, a 31-cent increase over last year's figure of $7.60 per day. The contract includes rate negotiations after the first year.

— voted to accept a bid made by Gem State Welders Supply for the hospital's bottled oxygen supply. The new contract provides for oxygen at the hospital at a cost of 59 cents per 100 cubic feet plus tank rental. The new bid cut the hospital's oxygen costs in half over previous years.

— discussed an operating deficit for the month of October. Hospital administrator James Rosenbaum explained an unusual reduction in number of patients occupying hospital beds has resulted in a loss of cash flow at the facility during October. If the situation does not correct itself in the near future, cuts in personnel and purchases of supplies may be necessary, he said.

— earmarked $10,000 for modernizing the hospital's radio system to meet new FCC requirements. The hospital has a $3,000 grant to help defray that expense.

City council backs truck route plan

By JEFF SHER
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — By giving support to a new truck route, the City Council Monday moved a step closer to designating a temporary route through the city for double and triple trailer trucks.

In a related action which will eventually affect the flow of traffic through the city, the council also told representatives of the Magic Valley division of the state highway department it would be willing to trade jurisdiction of Shoshone Street for jurisdiction over Blue Lakes Boulevard.

Under a plan presented by City Engineer Gary Young at the council working luncheon, extra-long vehicles would be restricted to a defile route.

Vehicles entering the city from the north would follow Blue Lakes to either 7th Street East or Kimberly Road. Trucks headed for truck terminals south of Kimberly Road would follow Kimberly Road and trucks headed for terminals off Blinlock Avenue would follow Seventh Street East and Seventh Street South.

Though expressing support for the plans, council members delayed passage of an ordinance, which would facilitate enforcement of the route by specifying fines for violations, until it hears the recommendations of the Traffic and Safety Commission, which meets next week.

Representatives of the trucking industry proposed the route in a recent meeting with city officials because it is the route farthest from the city center which still affords access to the terminals, Young said.

The route would remain in effect until the city and state complete improvements of the Traffic and Safety Commission, which meets next week.

Representatives of the trucking industry proposed the route in a recent meeting with city officials because it is the route farthest from the city center which still makes the route navigable by extra-long vehicles.

Specifically, before trucks can negotiate a right-hand turn at the intersection of Blue Lakes North and Pole Line, the state must widen the intersection.

In addition, both the city construction on Washington Street North and the state renovation of the West Five Points intersection must be completed.

Until those improvements are made, trucks would use the Blue Lakes to Seventh Street route for entering the city from the north, and they would exit to the west via Fourth Avenue West and Blake Street to Addison Avenue West.

Once the improvements are completed, trucks will be able to enter and leave the city to or from the north via Pole Line and Washington, and they will be able to exit to the west via Washington and Addison. The plan for the West Five Points intersection will provide for direct access to the intersection from the south via Washington.

Blaine gets snow

KETCHUM — Wood River Valley residents awoke this morning to an inch of snow, enough to tease anxious skiers and help them keep their hopes up that this winter will produce more snow than last year's drought-stricken winter.

Forest Service weather records show this November is off to a better start than the same month last year when there was no recorded precipitation.

Yet, this morning's inch of snow, yielding 66 inch of moisture doesn't measure up to November, 1975, when there was 1.57 inches of precipitation.

Sun Valley resort officials reported about 3 inches of fresh snow on Baldy Mountain. It settled on a 3-inch base of snow which fell in late October.

Galena Lodge reported 8 inches of snow on the ground this morning at the foot of Galena Summit 35 miles north of Ketchum.

Sun Valley officials also reported they made snow for three days last week but had to stop during the weekend when the temperature rose.

Wally Huffman, director of operations of the resort, said the artificial snowmakers produced a 4-to-10-inch base over a 3-to-4-acre area on the mid-Warm Springs run on Baldy.

Jerome ponders fate of school

By LARRY SWISHER
Times-News Writer

JEROME — The Jerome School Board of Trustees gave notice Monday night they will decide the fate of the abandoned Lincoln Elementary School Dec. 12, at their next regular meeting.

If no feasible suggestions for using the building are brought forward, the board would "do what we have to do" with the 67-year-old structure, board chairman Alvin Chojnacky said.

Schools Superintendent Percy Christensen was directed to proceed with a grant application for Comprehensive Emergency Training Act funds for tearing down the three-story brick structure, which has been empty since summer, 1976.

Christensen said funding through the CETA program was the only way the district could afford to demolish the building, since to hire a private firm would cost an estimated $30,000.

Chojnacky said the problem of what to do with the building has already been mentioned to the public and there has been no response.

In postponing the decision a month, school board members indicated any plan to save the structure would have to include compensation for lost playground space and any group which took over the building should not be financially dependent on the school district for heat. The building has no heating system of its own.

The school district architect has said it would cost more to restore the building than to construct a new one, Christensen said.

He said there are several main structural problems, including a sinking foundation which has caused walls to pull away from second-story floors, an open duct heating system by which fire could instantly spread to every room and the absence of fire-retardant material in the roof.

In a letter to the board, Jerome Building Inspector Mark Servatius listed 12 defects which would need to be corrected before the building could be occupied. The building would need an automatic sprinkler system throughout, stairways would have to be enclosed and approved fire doors would have to be installed on each floor, new fixtures would have to be installed in all bathrooms and the present heating system would have to be altered or replaced, Servatius said.

Christensen said application for CETA funds will take two to three months, and the program is scheduled to begin January, 1978.

"A lot of people, I'm told, think it should be saved," he said, adding the board was reluctant to tear down the Lincoln School. "I wouldn't mind seeing it saved, but I can't see any way financially."

Nation warms a bit

By United Press International
Taking a breather from an early onslaught of winter last week, most of the nation warmed-up a bit under rather friendly skies today.

Exceptions were the Pacific Northwest, where a passing cold front was causing showers and snow in the higher elevations, and Montana, where Chinook winds generated by the front were kicking up gusts as high as 70 mph.

Another cold front was moving through the Plains and southern Rockies, producing only cloudiness, no rain or snow.

In the eastern Dakotas and western Minnesota where snow cover lingered from last week's blizzard, dense fog formed during the early morning hours.

A high pressure center off the South-Atlantic Coast dominated the weather for the eastern third of the nation, producing mostly cloudy skies and cool temperatures. Clear skies prevailed over New England and the Southeast.

Nighttime lows dropped into the teens in northern New England and freezing temperatures stretched into the northern reaches of Georgia and Alabama, but daytime highs crept slowly upward following the passage of the first cold wave of the season last week.

Highs ranged from the 20s along the Canadian border to the 70s in southern parts of Texas and Florida.

Plutonium 'facts' discussed

LEWISTON, Idaho (UPI) — Congressman Steve Symms said Monday facts appear to be interfering with Carter Administration policy on the use of plutonium for nuclear breeder reactors.

Symms said scientists at the Oak Ridge National Laboratory in Oak Ridge, Tenn., have reported it is "technically feasible" for "bandit nations" to make plutonium from uranium and produce a crude atomic bomb within six months without having access to fast breeder reactors.

The Oak Ridge report contradicts a point in President Carter's opposition to development of plutonium breeder reactors.

Opponents of plutonium breeder reactors have maintained that the plutonium could easily be diverted to use in nuclear weapons by nations that otherwise would not have the technology to quickly develop their own plutonium sources. The report indicates plutonium was being undetermined by Oak Ridge National Laboratory.

According to the article, Oak Ridge scientists said a "quick and simple" reprocessing plant for plutonium could be made from a converted winery, dairy, or oil refinery.

An article in the Washington Post quoted a source in the Carter Department of Energy as saying it "sounded as if White House policy on

Hagerman seniors to dine Wednesday

HAGERMAN — The first Senior Citizens noon meal ever held in Hagerman will be served Wednesday at the American Legion Hall.

The noon meals are being sponsored as a community service by the Hagerman American Legion post and auxiliary, according to Audrey Herrington, auxiliary official. She said two dinners are planned in both November and December with plans to expand to four meals in January.

Two Legion members have been hired as cooks, Herrington said. The service is being contracted through the Gooding Senior Citizens Organization, with some reimbursement to be provided through the Office of Aging federal funds dispersed through the state and regional Offices on Aging.

The Gooding Senior Citizens bus will be available for any Hagerman area citizens wanting transportation to the initial meal Wednesday.

Persons wanting transportation should call Herrington at 837-6636 or 837-6233, or Betty Bush at 837-4719.

Derail damage high

BURLEY — An accident Monday that derailed a four-engine train west of Burley last week caused about $50,000 damage to Union-Pacific Railroad Co. property, officials estimated Monday.

The train struck a Circle A Construction Co. truck on a crossing at the Hobson Beet Dump near Milner about 10:40 a.m. Thursday.

Crime reduction meet at CSI Wednesday

TWIN FALLS — A full-day seminar will be held Wednesday on crime reduction and prevention in the fine arts auditorium at the College of Southern Idaho.

The sessions begin at 9 a.m. and will last until 1:30 p.m. with a no-host lunch at noon. Speakers for the seminar, sponsored by the Idaho Federation of Women's Clubs and the College of Southern Idaho, will include Lynn Thomas, deputy attorney general of Idaho,

Cards rally to upset Cowboys

IRVING, Tex. (UPI) — Jim Hart, plagued by poor throws and dropped passes for three quarters, connected with Mel Gray and Jackie Smith for touchdowns in the final period Monday night to rally the St. Louis Cardinals to a 24-17 win over Dallas and hand the Cowboys their first loss of the season.

With the comeback victory, St. Louis moved to within two games of Dallas in the NFC East and strengthened its hold on a potential wild card playoff spot.

Dallas owned a 14-3 halftime lead and had the ball deep in St. Louis territory early in the third quarter only to tumble to defeat. From that point it was almost as if St. Louis' as the Cardinals picked up their fifth straight victory and improved their record to 6-5.

Wayne Morris scored on a one-yard run to end a 95-yard drive in the third quarter and cut the Dallas lead to four. Then, after Efren Herrera's 21-yard field goal boosted the Cowboys up by seven, Hart went to work.

He hooked up with Gray on an 8-yard touchdown pass with 7:34 to play that tied the game and, after the Cardinals' pinned the Cowboys at their own seven, Hart quickly drove his club to the three.

From there he found another scoring pass to Smith, who was wide open in the end zone.

In the first half Dallas capitalized on a turnover and the tough inside running of Tony Dorsett to move in front.

Jim Bakken had given St. Louis an early 3-0 lead in a 26-yard field goal, but Dallas moved in front early in the second quarter on a one-yard run by Dorsett after St. Louis' Terry Metcalf fumbled the ball at his own 21.

Dallas put together its only lengthy touchdown drive of the game midway through the second quarter, ending in a two-yard touchdown throw from Roger Staubach to tight end Billy Joe DuPree.

Neither quarterback had a good night, but things were particularly frustrating for Hart in the early going as his sideline passes continually sailed high and Metcalf dropped two that were right on the mark.

But Hart made up for that in the final quarter by throwing a touchdown pass to Gray, giving the combinational eight straight games in which they have connected for a touchdown pass against the Cowboys.

For the Cowboys, the critical moment came early in the second half in a game marked by several small fights and one large one that led to the ejection of Dallas defensive back Benny Barnes and St. Louis defensive back Lee Nelson.

On the third play of the second half, Dallas' Randy Hughes intercepted a throw by Hart and ran it back 11 yards to the St. Louis 17. A touchdown at that point would have given Dallas an 18-point lead.

But two plays after the interception, tight end DuPree fumbled at the Cardinals' 10 to keep St. Louis in the game.

After St. Louis went in front on Smith's touchdown, the Cardinals stopped a drive with an interception by backup cornerback Carl Allen. It was Allen who was called upon to replace Nelson when he was ejected from the game.

Hart finished the game with only 10 completions in 24 attempts for 141 yards.

Texas keeps top ranking

NEW YORK (UPI) — The University of Texas, in the home stretch of a national championship drive, retained its No. 1 college football ranking this week with 35 first place votes and 392 points.

The Longhorns demolished Texas Christian University, 44-14, last Saturday as Heisman Trophy candidate Earl Campbell ran for 153 yards and scored two touchdowns. Texas was kept by Baylor this Saturday and Texas A & M on Nov. 26 to complete a perfect season and stage a turnaround of a 5-5-1 record in 1976.

Oklahoma, slipping Colorado, 52-14, nudged ahead of Alabama into second place among the collegiate elite with 314 points. The Crimson Tide collected 313 and dropped to the third slot after a 36-0 shutout of Miami (Fla.). Oklahoma and Alabama each had one first place vote.

Ohio State remained in fourth place, losing some support this week as the Buckeyes drew 283 points, 16 less than last week.

Another switch between the fifth and sixth place teams resulted when Michigan climbed to No. 5 with 209 points and Notre Dame slipped to No. 6 on 204 points. Seventh through 10th places remained the same, occupied by Arkansas (159), Penn State (121), Pittsburgh (89) and Nebraska (66). Pittsburgh secured the only other first place vote among the top 10.

Arizona landed two notches to No. 11 with 13 points. Texas A&M drew one rung to No. 12 on 10 points. Florida State made one of the big gains by vaulting from 16th to No. 13 on eight points. North Texas State was 14th, Clemson 15th and a three-way tie for No. 16 was produced among UIC, North Carolina and Texas Tech. Iowa State was voted into 18th place with 40 points.

CSI pops cyclists

TWIN FALLS — College of Southern Idaho took the ball inside and controlled the boards on both Monday night as the Golden Eagles whipped Cycle City of Burley 80-53 in the annual Shrine benefit game.

In an earlier battle, the CSI girls team ripped Mountain Home 41-39.

CSI led from the opening minutes on against Cycle City although the visitors did pull into a 24-24 tie with 3:19 left in the half on two straight buckets by Pat Hoke.

But CSI posted up 6-5 guard Jerry Williams most of the time and he quickly replied with two field goals. After an Ernie Hovey field goal, Curtis Rayford hit twice for CSI and Williams pushed it to 36-26 just before halftime.

The lead stayed at eight to 10 points over the first five minutes before Cycle City's Pat Hoke fouled out, taking his 6-7 rebounding duty with him. From then on the shorter visitors were badly beaten on the boards.

Senator Bradley?

TRENTON, N.J. (UPI) — Bill Bradley, the former New York Knickerbocker star, took the first step Monday toward a possible campaign for the Democratic nomination for the U.S. Senate.

Bradley filed papers in Washington and at the State House in Trenton authorizing a campaign committee to begin work.

"This is just the initial phase. I'm going to see what's my support," Bradley said after a closed-door meeting with Richard Coffee, state Democratic Party chairman.

Bradley was an All-American basketball player at Princeton and a Rhodes scholar before joining the Knicks. He and about a half dozen other Democrats have their eyes on the seat now held by Republican Clifford P. Case, who is 73 years old. Case is up for reelection next year.

Bradley was active in Gov. Brendan T. Byrne's successful reelection race.

Nastase wins opener

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Defending champion Ili Nastase had to struggle but the Romanian managed a hard-fought 6-5, 6-4 win over Vitas Gerulaitis in the first round of the World Championship Tennis Challenge Cup tournament Monday night.

Nastase, winner of the previous two cup matches, received $10,000 for the victory, while Gerulaitis received nothing in the $20,000 event at Caesars Palace.

Gerulaitis had trouble with his serve throughout the match and in the first set had five double faults, two of those in the crucial 12-point tie-breaker, which Nastase won easily, 7-1.

Hoopie enters training for bowl confrontation

By MAJOR AMOS B. HOOPLE (Peetress proditor)

Egad! They're always said that time flies during enjoyable moments.

Therefore, I am happy to say that my 10-week ordeal is over, and the Times-News football prognosticating contest is at an official end for many, many of you — and me.

But we know out on a note of perfection as the mentor of the Bliss Brains, Jerry Couch, did, as I successfully predicted last week, negotiated the slate without a miss.

It seems many years ago when the Times-News was still in the old building and there was little or no gray in my hair — that we last had a champion of this caliber.

There were many who missed but one, Idaho State and Southern California were the major banes of so many of you. However, others successfully picked those two games and were tripped up in other areas — Minico and Texas A&M probably rank as the other major spoilers.

For his effort in particular, Coach Couch wins the $10 first prize and heads another list of 10 into the bowl contest next month.

Second place goes to Dr. Robert Ridgeway of Twin Falls who was tripped up by the Bruins, the team of choice to center a few years ago. Dr. Ridgeway picks up $5.

Third place resulted in a tie between Rachel Alvord of Twin Falls and Mike Ballenger of Twin Falls. They each receive $2.50.

Making the honorable mention list are Lis Harris, Boise; Roger Greenup, Twin Falls; Willie Derie, Paul; Ruth Kempton, Albion; Larry Duyley, Twin Falls, and Mark McBeth, Rupert.

It seems that in selecting last week's schedule my index finger slipped up a line on the composite schedule, and I came up with four games that weren't being played. However, to my total chagrin, I must admit that I still missed two of those games although they'd already been played. Harumph! Consequently, those four were simply eliminated and the championship was based on a 16-game ballot.

Now on to the matter of the bowl contest, at which time the prize list is doubled. Only those who have won money or made the honorable mention list qualify for this Magic Valley grid prognosticating championship.

The selections will be run in the Times-News along with the list of those qualified probably the first week of December — or at whatever point we can put together a 15-or-so game slate.

The slate will include the East-West, North-South and Blue-Gray all-star games and you will be required to make your selections before the rosters are announced in some instances. That marks the only time that luck plays any role in our gridcasting contest. The rest of it remains pure common and clairvoyance, say, to help.

So until early December, let me bid you adieu. For so many of you, I shall return to lock horns in the predilect arena next fall.

Live ball?

THIS IS not a fumble, despite the fact that it appears the St. Louis Cardinals Terry Metcalf lost control of the ball long before he touched the ground. Officials ruled the ball dead on this first quarter play Monday night. Throughout the first half, Dallas dominated the game, but St. Louis hung tough and rallied in the final period for a 24-17 upset win over the Cowboys.

Series money sets mark

NEW YORK (UPI) — For winning the World Series, 30 members of the New York Yankees will receive a record full share of $27,758.04, it was announced Monday by Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

In dividing a player's pool of $1,000,188.11 accumulated for the first three games of each league championship series and the first four games of the World Series, the Yankees bettered the previous record of $26,366.68 for a full share last year when they were swept by the Cincinnati Reds.

The Los Angeles Dodgers, beaten in six games by the Yankees this fall, will console themselves with a record loser's share of $20,899.05 per man. Los Angeles voted 31 full shares.

The Yankees had set the previous record for a loser's share of $19,525.48 last year. Twenty members of the team, including Manager Billy Marlin, trainer Gene Monahan and three coaches, earned full shares the last two years, giving them a bonus of $47,693.52 for their two American League pennants and one World Series.

Charles May, although released on waivers to the California Sept. 16, nevertheless was voted a full share, and the Yankees also showed their generosity by giving $1,000 each to two clubhouse boys.

The Kansas City Royals, winning the American League West title for the second consecutive year, voted 33 full shares worth $3,797.73 each and the Philadelphia Phillies, who won the National League East, voted 34 full shares of $9,661.37.

All 12 of the 26 major league clubs shared in the record players' pool of $27,776,300.31.

Title IX study ordered

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Civil Rights Commission decided Monday to conduct a 10-month survey to determine whether schools and colleges give women equal opportunity in federally supported athletic programs.

The five commissioners ordered investigative teams to visit a large cross-section of institutions, observe athletic activity, examine equipment and interview principals, teachers and coaches as part of the $362,000 study.

Sex discrimination has been prohibited in federally financed athletic programs since 1972 but a staff report to the commissioners said females do not yet have the same opportunity as males in many institutions that receive federal funds.

However, a spokesman said the commission has not reached any conclusions and wants to have proven facts before it files reports with policy recommendations to Congress and President Carter. The commission has no enforcement power.

"What we're doing is looking to see what's out there," a spokesman said. "There will be no recommendation until we find out what's happening."

The survey will cover interscholastic and intercollegiate competitive athletics, intramural sports and physical education classes, the spokesman said.

"A review of the history of women in athletics reveals that sex discrimination in sports has been an ingrained, accepted tradition in educational institutions as well as in professional sports," the staff report said.

"In the not so distant past, sports were viewed as a masculine activity — a way to make a man out of a boy," the report said.

It added that "female participation in athletics has burgeoned over the past few years."

FANS want grass in 'mod sod' feud

WASHINGTON (UPI) — F.A.N.S., the consumer sports organization supported by Ralph Nader, sent a letter to San Francisco Mayor George Moscone Monday asking him to support the replacement of artificial turf with natural grass in Candlestick Park.

Peter Greenstein, the organization's executive director, said in the letter that the fans of San Francisco should have a major voice in resolving the "mod sod" dispute and proposed that the mayor conduct a straw poll.

It was pointed out in the letter that artificial turf has resulted in more — and more serious — injuries in football and baseball, and that in baseball at least it has affected the nature of the game by causing balls to bounce higher.

The Park and Recreation Department in San Francisco asked the city supervisors for $990,000 to replace the artificial turf at Candlestick and last month representatives of the 49ers met with the department to discuss the issue. On Nov. 7, Edward DeBartolo, president of the 49ers, wrote a letter outlining the points of this discussion.

His main point was that the 49ers have clear preference for the new playing surface to be natural grass.

The NFL team agreed to play on the old astroturf through 1978 and the park department will "clean it up" as best it can for that season. Meanwhile, the 49ers will finance a study to determine whether a grass surface is feasible economically and physically.

As a result, the park department has put off the reurfacing for a year. A park department spokesman said the baseball Giants have indicated they will go along with whatever is done.

Professional refs may be next step

By DAVE ANDERSON © 1977 N.Y. Times Service

NEW YORK — Monday morning is never quiet for Art McNally, the National Football League's supervisor of officials. Monday morning is when Art McNally's phone keeps ringing. Coaches and general managers are calling to evaluate the judgment, wisdom and the discretion of the striped-shirted referees grazing at yesterday's games. Art McNally is a good listener. He has an ear that is tougher than any middle linebacker. He also has an Irish cop's face that seldom smiles while on duty, in keeping with his experience as an NFL official for nearly two decades. Most of the complaints remain within the walls of Pete Rozelle's castle on Park Avenue but lately some voices have gone public. Tex Schramm, the Dallas Cowboys' president and the chairman of the NFL's Competition Committee, spoke of how there should be more of a "turnover" in officials.

Chuck Knox, the Los Angeles Rams coach, talked of having a touchdown "stolen" from him. Mean Joe Greene, the Pittsburgh Steelers' defensive tackle, threatened to "punch out" an official and was fined by the commissioner for impersonating a hockey player.

But beneath the discontent, some changes appear about to occur in the stripes of NFL zebras.

"One full-time official in each crew is a definite possibility," Tex Schramm says.

All of the 90 officials currently employed by the NFL work only on a part-time basis. The day before his game, the official reports after working full time at his regular job during the week — lawyer, teacher, salesman, whatever.

Experienced officials now earn up to $15,000 a season, with bonuses for those assigned to postseason games.

"The full-time officials would be well paid, money is not the problem," Schramm says. "And they could be utilized during the off-season in research, instruction, reviewing films and at seminars on rules and techniques. But equally important is the review of our own procedures for the hiring, firing, supervising and grading of officials."

Tex Schramm believes that 80 percent of the officials are "taking the rap" for the mistakes of the other 20 percent.

"Humans being human," he says, "some officials have a greater capacity than others for making proper decisions. When an official does not show a natural aptitude, get rid of him."

But the turnover in NFL officials is minimal. Perhaps five or six do not return each year, so by their own choice.

"Our officials are obviously trying to do the best job they can and they're really honest," Tex Schramm says. "But an honest mistake is still a mistake. The percentage of proper calls by our officials is high but there are still certain types of penalties where you wonder about somebody's judgment. They throw a flag when there's no violation."

There are arguments within the NFL against full-time officials — that it would be difficult to obtain the same quality people for presumably lower salaries than they're earning in their current jobs; that they would create an elitist group within the officials; that the part-time officials would look to the full-time officials in each crew to make the tough calls.

"I'd like to see all our officials full time," Chuck Knox says. "The way it is now, part-time officials are making decisions that are affecting the future of full-time officials."

Chuck Knox was dismayed two weeks ago when the New Orleans Saints scored a touchdown in a 27-26 victory over the Rams as the officials failed to detect two illegal receivers downed.

"This," said Chuck Knox, "should have been seen and called."

But according to the NFL office, the Rams were not the Saints' two illegal receivers until they viewed the game films themselves. But that's no excuse for the officials not detecting them. What happened to the Rams is an argument for a seventh official to be added to the current six-man crew for each game. The seventh official is needed, some say, to help govern the flood of pass receivers in today's sophisticated passing attacks. Others thought an increase in the number of officials would create an increase in the number of penalties.

"But in our experiment with a seventh official in eight preseason games," Pete Rozelle says, "there was no increase in the average number of penalties in relation to the other preseason games."

Unfortunately, there is no sentiment within the NFL to employ instant-replay TV cameras as a monitor for the officials' interpretations such as timing or pass interference that could not possibly be clarified by instant-replay cameras.

Steel shot looms in waterfowl future

By CHUCK ANDERSON
Idaho Department of Fish and Game

If some federal wildlife agencies have their way, Idaho sportsmen could be required to use steel shot for waterfowl hunting as early as next fall in the Deer Flat National Wildlife Refuge south of Nampa.

Eleven counties are designated to be closed to the use of lead shot for duck and goose hunting in the next few years by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. These counties stretch from Washington up along the Snake River to Twin Falls, and also Bonneville and Bannock counties.

The Department of Fish and Game is carrying on its fight to allow hunters the right to use the shotgun and ammunition of their choice and avert a capricious battle with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service over the Lake Lowell area. According to Fish and Game Director Joe

Greenley, "Today, after two years of fruitless effort to reach a solution, we find ourselves negotiating with the federal agency for designing steel shot areas."

"We do take exception to the inclusion of the Deer Flat National Wildlife Refuge in the steel shot proposal. Many other national wildlife refuges within the Pacific Flyway have not been included although the birds have twice as high a rate of lead ingestion."

The impending ban originated with a 1959 study in which the investigators estimated four to four percent of all waterfowl over the country died each year from lead poisoning as a result of eating lead shot. In 1972, the National Wildlife Federation took this study to the then Secretary of the Interior and petitioned for a total ban of lead shot in hunting waterfowl on federal lands.

In 1976, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service issued an environmental impact statement calling for a lead shot ban in the 1976 waterfowl season on the Atlantic Flyway, 1977 for the Mississippi Flyway and 1978 for the Central and Pacific Flyways.

"Unfortunately, criteria now being used by them (U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service) is not the same for each state or each area, and may even vary from area to area within a state. This is not a good approach and has resulted in hard feelings between sportsmen of the Pacific Flyway, state wildlife agencies and the federal government," Greenley said.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service desires to institute steel shot regulations in the 1978-1979 waterfowl hunting season in the Lake Lowell area and a phase steel shot in other major waterfowl harvest areas over a two- or three-year period.

Four criteria have been discussed to determine which areas will get the ax. They are:

- The number of waterfowl found with ingested lead.
- The amount of lead shot found in the soil around the hunting area — 10,000 pellets per acre.
- The number of waterfowl harvested — 20 per square mile or 20,000 per county.
- The known mortality.

"Unfortunately, there is little agreement between wildlife agencies in the Pacific Flyway and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service on what criteria is important and what is to be used to determine problem areas," said Rick Norell, game-bird supervisor of the Department of Fish and Game.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service proposal is primarily based upon a gizzard lead occurrence of six percent from a sample of 101 birds collected by Wildlife personnel and analyzed by the California Department of Fish and Game.

"Our data from 920 waterfowl gizzards collected from birds associated with Deer Flat Refuge show a 2.3 percent ingestion rate," said Greenley. "We have found no area in Idaho which exceeded 4.3 percent lead shot ingestion, and statewide the rate is 2.6 percent."

The soft, mucky bottom at Lake Lowell coupled with a water depth varying from four to 12 feet over the shooting area has not lent itself to a high ingestion rate potential by feeding waterfowl, according to the Department of Fish and Game. The lead shot can be expected to settle well into the mud out of reach of the feeding waterfowl.

Mallards enter Panhandle

BOISE (UPI) — Mallards are beginning their southward migration with large numbers being reported in the Kootenai National Wildlife Refuge in Idaho's Panhandle, the Department of Fish and Game reports.

A few swans are accompanying the mallards from their southern Alberta nesting areas, according to Game Bird Supervisor Dick Norell of the department. "As soon as the cold winter weather conditions set in, the birds will begin moving in greater numbers and will make for some good hunting," he said.

The Columbia River Basin wintering area, which stretches from American Falls to Hells Canyon, will be home of nearly one million birds by the end of December, Deer Flat National Wildlife Refuge will be the winter feeding home of 500,000, and the Frank R. Widdie Management Area will host nearly 125,000 this winter, Norell estimated.

"The fall flight forecast is down about 33 percent for mallards due to the spring drought, but faced returning birds earlier this year in Alberta, but many of them flew on into the Northwest Territories where ample water and nesting grounds were found," Norell said.

Moose poacher gets jail

By STU MURRELL
Regional Conservation Educator

Boyd Chugoski of Minidoka received a 30-day jail sentence, with 20 days suspended, for the illegal shooting of a moose in Unit 56 south of Burley, according to Bud Stuecker, the arresting conservation officer, he was also fined $300, had his hunting and fishing privileges revoked for three years and will be on probation for two years. If at any time during these two years he is cited for a fish and game violation he will be required to serve the suspended 20 days in jail. Chugoski shot the young bull while hunting deer and his brother, Bryce, helped him drag it into the aspens with their horses to butcher it. Bryce has also pleaded guilty and will be sentenced on November 21. After butchering the moose the two brothers took the bones out into the upper hams and attempted to conceal the remains of the animal.

Extensive investigation by four conservation officers involving eight man-days slowly put the story together. Other sportsmen in the field were interviewed and the kill site located and thoroughly searched for clues.

The bull was one of three known moose in Region 4 and observers had seen it accompanied by another bull all summer in the Mud Springs area of the Hecker Canyon. The two bulls had been quite an attraction for those people observing them and feelings ran high about the poached animal.

US Ski Assn. turns to consumer problems

By ALEX KATZ
© 1977 Chicago Sun-Times

Recreational skiers in this country might not know it, but there's a consumers' advocate working in their behalf. It's called the U.S. Ski Assn.

The U.S. Ski Assn. was established in 1961 (it was called the National Ski Assn.) and for most of its history was most exclusively involved in competitive ski programs.

During the last 10 years, USSA and its regional divisions have become increasingly concerned with the problems and needs of non-competitive recreational skiers within and without the association.

Evidence of a turnaround in the interests of USSA was the decision a few years ago to separate responsibility of the U.S. ski team from the main organization.

The U.S. ski team operates under a separate body from headquarters in Park City, Utah. The team and its directors maintain a working relationship with USSA's national office in Denver.

Now the USSA is directing its attention to long-range planning for sensible growth and promotion of the sport.

Robert B. Thomson, of Carlisle, Mass., president of USSA, is spearheading a major new program involving the public affairs of all skiers.

Only last week, I. Mark O'Reilly, director of public relations for USSA, appeared before the House subcommittee on National Parks and Insular Affairs in favor of development of skiing facilities in the much-discussed Mineral King Valley of California.

Thomson hopes for immediate benefits in the USSA's consumer-advocate role.

"We are directing attention to two things that shape the future of skiing in this country. We are working with the National Ski Areas Assn. to hold down the cost of liability insurance. Increases in insurance rates almost certainly drive up the cost of lift tickets.

"We are also concerned with our rights to ski. Ski areas take a long time to develop. We feel the U.S. Forest Service is too restrictive on the development of skiing facilities. There's overcrowding at many ski centers and we want to see the pressure relieved."

The redesign of the association, with more emphasis on consumer representation, will be presented to the national membership convention in June in Big Sky, Mont.

In February, the long-range planning committee of USSA expects to consider recommendations for matters such as centralized authority of the association, better communications and improved national membership benefits package, and a national publication. Most of the nine regional divisions of the USSA have their own publications. A national USSA publication has been published sporadically.

In its planning, the association aims at bringing all nine divisions under one roof in a "national service center." Regional service centers would be located where membership participation requires a local office and staff support.

Board members agreed that USSA had to move to become the spokesman for all skiers and there has been strong support for the idea of nationalization at the expense of divisional autonomy.

Turning attention to matters that directly concern recreational skiers, O'Reilly said the USSA seeks for its members and others: reasonable short liftlines, affordable lift tickets—stages which are not overcrowded to the point of being unsafe and adequate base facilities and accommodations. Also for nordic skiers, USSA seeks adequate winter access to suitable terrain, parking and sanitary facilities along trails, trail marking and maintenance and a system of lifts for safety and overnight accommodations.

Lay off bobcats

As the winter trapping season approaches, the Department of Fish and Game is reminding both trappers and hunters that the season is closed on bobcats.

The 1978 season will be the first scheduled season on bobcats, and that season is a short one — from January 1 to January 31, the department said.

"After legislation passed the last session of the Idaho Legislature, the bobcat was reclassified from an un-protected species to a fur-bearer. This allowed the department to manage and regulate the take of bobcats. The department said the reclassification makes it illegal to take bobcats anywhere in the state before January 1 or after January 31.

Illegal ball may be key to top punter's success

NEW YORK (UPI) — Oakland's premier punter is considered the key guy in the NFL, but Houston Coach Bum Phillips thinks he may be getting some illegal help. Phillips noticed that the Raiders were using some special ball on their kicks and he had it filled by one of his players.

"There's probably nothing to it," said Phillips after the 34-29 loss, "but we're going to send the ball to Rice University and have it tested."

Return man Billy Johnson got the ball and gave it to equipment manager Greg Doremus.

"First a ball boy came up and asked for it," Doremus said. "When I told him 'no' he left. But in a few seconds an Oakland equipment man came up and asked for the ball." Phillips said it appeared play was held up before Guy's punt so the ball could be brought in. Phillips said the suspected ball was disclosed.

The Oilers brought two footballs back from Oakland, the suspected one and one which Zeke Moore intercepted and returned for a touchdown.

"Nobody came by and asked for Zeke's ball," Doremus said.

Buffalo's Carson Long, who kicked for Ontario Chapman University of Phillips last season, also points out how the ball makes a difference.

"They'll see when they get up here, it's different," said Long about the current crop of college stars who have been booming 50-60 yard field goals regularly. "You can't get a battered ball. In one case, I don't know which school it was but I think a Southwest Conference school," the most valuable player in the battered ball.

"I've practiced with them back home. If I took a brand new ball and kicked it, kicked it and kicked it, it gets worn and nice and polished."

Mark Moseley kicked a team-record 54-yard field to lift Washington past Philadelphia and the accusations began immediately about an illegal shoe.

"My shoe is legal," Moseley insists. "I have a 7-year-old shoe, and I have to put extra socks in there. Chuck Bednarik (former Eagle player) came over to see my shoe before the game and said there were no weights in it."

Knicks deal McMillen

ATLANTA (UPI) — The Atlanta Hawks Monday traded their second-round pick in next year's draft to the New York Knicks for forward Tom McMillen.

McMillen, all-time high scorer at the University of Maryland, played at Buffalo last season and was traded to New York in December. In 76 games as a Brave he shot 48 percent from the field and 76 percent from the free-throw line for an 8.5 points-per-game average.

A Hawks spokesman said guard Tony Robertson was waived to make room for McMillen on the 11-man roster.

Under the terms of the deal New York will pay part of McMillen's salary. The spokesman wouldn't say how much McMillen will be paid, but did say the combination of Hawks and Knicks salaries will make him Atlanta's highest-paid player even though he won't be the top man on the Hawks payroll.

"To acquire him for a second-round draft pick is incredible," said Hawks coach Hubie Brown.

McMillen was Buffalo's first-round draft choice 1974, but opted to continue his education as a Rhodes Scholar. He played pro basketball in Italy during that year abroad.

White Sox gamble again on disabled free agent

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Chicago White Sox, who last year gambled and won in the free-agent sweepstakes on Eric Soderholm, have plucked yet another "disabled veteran" — Ron Blomberg — from baseball's re-entry marketplace for $600,000 spread over four years.

Blomberg, who was also courted by the New York Mets, agreed to a four-year, no-out-trade contract with the White Sox for a total price tag of $600,000. Official announcement of the signing is expected to be made Thursday.

"We've had some very nice discussions with Blomberg and his agent, Sheldon Stone," said White Sox President Bill Veck, "but nothing is finalized as yet, nothing is signed."

However, Blomberg, the brittle outfielder-designated hitter who has played only one game in the last two years for the New York Yankees — the club which signed him in 1967 for a $50,000 bonus, confirmed in New York that the signing is a mere formality now.

"I'm going to Chicago Thursday to sign the papers," Blomberg said. "I wanted to continue playing in New York, but I just couldn't accept the contract the Mets offered me. The money was close to what I will get with the White Sox, but they wouldn't guarantee me anything after the first year."

Now 29, Blomberg was sidelined all of 1976 with a shoulder injury and again in 1977 with a knee injury — both of which required surgery. His lifetime batting average is .292, but his only really impressive season was in 1973 when he batted .329 with 12 homers and 57 RBI in 100 games. In eight major league seasons, he has played a total of only 400 games.

Obviously, the White Sox are hoping that Blomberg will prove as big a bargain as did Soderholm, who after missing the entire 1976 season, signed with Chicago in the free agent draft for a modest salary last year and responded by hitting .276 with 24 homers and 66 RBI while being acclaimed the American League's comeback player of the year.

Soderholm, who suffered a knee injury, used a body conditioning machine called "the nautilus" to work his way back into playing shape and the White Sox want Blomberg to use the same method.

Browns lose QB Sipe

BEREA, Ohio (UPI) — The doctors decided strategy for the Cleveland Browns Monday, announcing that quarterback Brian Sipe has a fractured collarbone and will be out of action four-to-five weeks in an estimated.

Sipe was injured Cleveland's 35-31 loss at Pittsburgh Sunday, a loss that dropped the Browns into a tie with the Steelers for first place in the AFC Central Division at 5-4.

His replacement was Dave Mays, who almost pulled out a victory, and Mays will start for Cleveland against the Giants in New Jersey next Sunday.

"It hasn't really sunk in yet," Sipe said after learning the nature of his injury. "I'm numb, I'll try to help the team but I don't know how I'll react yet."

"I've never missed a start in my life," Mays called the "Mad Bomber" by his teammates because of his preference for long passes, led the Browns to four second half touchdowns.

Three came through the air — two to Mays and one to his teammates came up short he had the respect of his players. Asked if he thought the Browns have been too conservative, wide receiver Paul Warfield said:

"You said that, I didn't. Look, it's obvious Dave was impressive. You do have to keep a defense off balance so they can't read you."

Sipe, playing most of the year with an injured throwing arm, had been criticized for slinking with short, safe passes.

"Dave deserves a lot of credit," said coach Forrest Gregg. "He put the points on the board. Every time Dave Mays has been in situation to lead the team, he's done it."

Mays, 28, a practicing dentist, was acquired as a free agent in 1976. He had played in the now defunct World Football League.

Pont quits Northwestern

EVANSTON, Ill. (UPI) — Johnny Pont resigned Monday as Northwestern football coach, but will remain with the school as athletic director.

Pont's football team has failed to win this year in 10 games and has an 11 game losing streak with only one victory in the last 27 games. The Wildcats close the season at home Saturday against Illinois.

Pont, speaking as athletic director, said, "This was Coach Pont's decision. He has had 22 years experience as head coach at four of the nation's top schools. He's well qualified to decide for himself when a coaching change is needed or helpful."

Pont, a Miami of Ohio graduate, coached for seven seasons at Miami, two years at Yale and eight years at Indiana before he came to Northwestern, replacing Alex Agase, at the beginning of the 1973 season.

Overall, his coaching record is 97 wins, 121 defeats, and five ties. In Big Ten competition he has won 38, lost 69 and tied one. His 1967 Indiana team was the Big Ten representative in the Rose Bowl.

Pont said he was "not pushed" by anyone and made it clear he would not reconsider his decision.

"He knows all the problems and all of the potentials of coaching. If he wants out from under, I respect and accept his decision," Pont said.

Pont refused to expand on his comment, and said he would "speak for both of us" (athletic director and coach) at Tuesday's usual Big Ten football writers meeting.

"I am announcing the decision Monday because I want our entire close knit team of coaches and players to know that there have been no dramatic decisions" just waiting for the end of the schedule," he said.

"Coaching has been my professional life and love for half of my life. Walking away from coaching as a direct activity and responsibility is more than a little difficult."

Pack adds Dowling

GREEN BAY, Wis. (UPI) — The Green Bay Packers, with starting quarterback Lynn Dickey's right leg in a cast for the rest of the season, have signed free agent Brian Dowling in an effort to send in an experienced replacement.

NCAA eases Gopher penalty

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — University of Minnesota basketball player David Winney will be required to sit out three games this season and Mike Thompson, seven, a subcommittee on eligibility appeals of the National Collegiate Athletic Association ruled Monday night.

The two were declared ineligible by the NCAA because of rules infractions which allegedly occurred when both were freshmen.

Thompson, 6-10 senior center, who holds Minnesota and Big Ten scoring records, was accused of selling his complimentary season tickets valued at $78 for $180. Winney, 6-10 senior forward, was accused of spending two holidays at the home of a basketball booster.

The university contended the two players' violations were minor and at first refused to declare them ineligible.

The NCAA then placed the entire men's intercollegiate athletic program at the university under indefinite suspension. The suspension was lifted last week on all teams at the school except basketball after the university reversed itself and declared Thompson and Winney ineligible.

Punishment for the basketball team will end Oct. 28, 1978, according to the NCAA ruling.

Mare in foal brings $575,000

LEXINGTON, Ky. (UPI) — The second highest price ever to be paid for a mare at any sale at Keeneland was paid Monday as the 34th annual November Breeding Stock Sale began in Lexington.

The second highest price at Monday's first sales session was the $22,000 paid for the broodmare, White Lie, in foal to Damascus. She was bought by Tom Gentry, Lexington from the Hedgelawn Farm consignment.

A total of 142 head sold at the sale's first session for $5.45 million and an average of $38,445 per head. Three stallion shares were sold for $16,500 at the afternoon session.

"SELLING YOUR BUSINESS IS OUR BUSINESS"

Multiple taxes growers' target

(BOISE UPI) — Bob Geddes, outgoing president of the Idaho State Wheat Growers Association, said Monday the group should make its voice heard in the state legislature this year in order to protect itself from crippling taxation.

Geddes, who spoke at the 21st annual Wheat Growers Association Convention in Boise, said the prospects of increased taxation, combined with the effects of the drought and depressed crop prices, could leave wheat growers in a critical state.

"A summer fallow farmer pays two years of property taxes on one crop of wheat he raises, on summer fallow," Geddes said. "In addition, we pay income tax, sales tax, and all the other taxes paid by the other residents of Idaho. And we may have only seen the beginning of tax increases on our tax load."

Geddes said, "In addition, we pay income tax, sales tax, and all the other taxes paid by the other residents of Idaho. And we may have only seen the beginning of tax increases on our tax load."

"I would dare say that even in the forthcoming session of the legislature we will see legislative proposals to add to our tax load. As individuals, the association and the wheat commission need to join hands, go over to the state capital and be heard so that further encroachment isn't made on our ability of making a profit because of taxes."

Geddes said legislators should be made aware that wheat farmers cannot afford higher property taxes on a state and local level.

"For some time there has been the idea that lobbying was a dirty activity and should be outside the realm of commission activities," he said. "I see this as a fallacy and suggest that the commission should be involved in political influence for the protection and rights of wheat farmers."

Geddes also recommended a wheat tax refund clause be enacted and consideration of a variable wheat tax of up to one cent per bushel. "This would take care of the needs of the industry and would even consider the ability of a grower in a given year to be taxed to the maximum."

Geddes made the recommendations in light of what he said has developed in the state since the release of the wheat commission administrator. "I believe those two adjustments would disarm these objections we are facing," he said.

Other speakers scheduled throughout the three-day conference include Sen. James McClure on the "Waterway User Tax", Glen Payne, National Association of Wheat Growers "Organizational and Finance Committee", and Richard D. Gibb, president of the University of Idaho.

Haley films documentary

MEBANE, N.C. (UPI) — Alex Haley, Pulitzer Prize-winning author of "Roots," returned to Alamance County Sunday to learn more about his roots and to film a documentary on his family for national television.

Haley scented at ease as he moved around the grounds of the Cross Roads Presbyterian Church during the Murray family reunion of several hundred people.

There were black Murrays, descendants of slaves—and white Murrays, descendants of slaveowners.

Among those comparing kin and genealogical charts was former Gov. Robert Scott, a history buff who told Haley he had learned after reading "Roots" that his great grandmother, Maggie Murray, was in the same clan as the Alamance County folks mode famous by the book.

The reunion and the 12-year project of writing "Roots" are the subject of a documentary film which will be shown by ABC-TV on Jan. 23.

Haley and Scott met for the first time Saturday night in Burlington when the former governor attended a fund-raising dinner for the Alamance Historical Museum.

At the reunion Sunday, Haley told Scott he had no idea that two former North Carolina governors — Scott and his father, the late Gov. Kerr Scott — were included in the Murray family.

'Phantom' prowls film studio's lot

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Universal Studios, which remade the classic horror film "The Phantom of the Opera" in 1962, now is bothered by a phantom of its own, the sheriff's office says.

A caped figure calling himself "The Black Cape" has been prowling the big studio lot for more than three weeks, occasionally assaulting passersby.

Deputies said the studio guards have received two phone calls from the man, claiming responsibility and identifying himself with the words, "This is the black cape."

He made his first appearance Oct. 19, when he stopped a studio van and ran off, reappearing later that night to stop another van and throw a rock at it, deputies said.

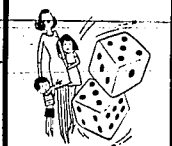

Studio workers have seen him several times since, deputies said, and Thursday he allegedly assaulted a Universal employee, Tom Barlow, who he hit with a large piece of wood before fleeing.

"The Black Cape" was described as a man in his late 20s, about 5'8", with dark brown hair and a deep voice.

Deputies said the sheriff's office has joined studio guards in hunting for the "cape."

"Retirement is years away, but I'm saving for it now, in an IRA at First Federal..."

This was my father's farm. Now, my wife and I earn our living here. It's the life we want for ourselves, and our children. But, when you're farming, the only retirement program you have is one you build for yourself — the same as independent businessmen — that's why I started an IRA, individual Retirement Account.

IRA is a Federal program that lets you set aside up to 15% of your income, up to $1500 a year, in a qualified IRA plan exempt from federal income taxes until you retire. Not only is the money you put in it each year tax deferred, but the interest it earns is also exempt from federal income tax until you retire... so you can end up with double the amount you'd save in a regular account!

Why First Federal? Because it's not only an approved plan, but because there's absolutely no charge made for setting up or taking care of your IRA account there!

For tax relief now and retirement later, I'm saving... in an IRA at First Federal.

Here's How Your IRA Retirement Fund Can Grow Here...

Contribution	Present Age	Fund At Age 65*
$1500/Year	35	$185,650
$1500/Year	40	$119,540
$1500/Year	50	$ 44,220
