U.S., Soviets trying for lid on arms sales

WASHINGTON — The Soviet Union, after prodding by the Carter administration, has agreed to begin formal talks here in mid-December on limiting Soviet and American conventional arms sales, officials said Thursday.

The week-long talks will be the first in a series of meetings that officials hope will eventually produce an agreement placing mutual restrictions on the ability of the two superpowers to supply weapons to nations in the Third World. The administration is said to place great importance on the talks, for without a Soviet-American understanding on arms transfer, officials believe it will be difficult for the United States and other Western nations to exercise restraint in arms transfers.

The purpose of the December meeting, officials said, is to provide Soviet negotiators with a detailed explanation of President Carter's new arms policy and to present them with a variety of ideas of how the two sides might go about reducing their sales of military hardware. The administration is interested in achieving accords limiting the transfer of advanced weapons as well as broader agreements covering overall arms shipments to different regions in the Third World.

The American delegation at the meeting will be led by Leslie A. Gelb, director of the State Department's Bureau of Politico-Military Affairs, and will include officials from the Pentagon and the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency. The Soviet negotiating team will be headed by Oleg N. Khlstov, formerly the chief Russian negotiator at the East-West talks in Vienna on mutual force reductions.

The establishment of a dialogue with Moscow over reducing military sales is seen as something of a victory for the administration because the Soviet Union is thought to view arms transfers as a key foreign policy instrument. Although the Soviet government agreed, in principle, to the creation of a joint working group on the problem during Secretary of State Cyrus Vance's visit to Moscow in March, many officials were skeptical of the administration's ability to actually get talks underway.

It is thought that a major reason that Moscow has agreed to the talks is that it does not want to be seen as dragging its feet on a major new arms control initiative. The fact that Khlstov, a relatively important negotiator, has been chosen to head the Soviet delegation, is also said to reflect the importance that Moscow attaches to the exercise.

At the same time, because Moscow's main clout in regions such as the Middle East and Africa stems from its willingness to supply arms, many officials still believe that the problems of getting Soviet negotiators to agree on a formula for mutual restraint are nearly unresolvable. Officials involved in the planning for the talks disagreed, but one acknowledged that the December meeting would be the start of a "long process."

Drivers leave 55 mph behind

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Highway speeders are increasing. So are highway deaths.

As memories fade of the long lines at service stations during the Arab oil embargo of 1973, Americans increasingly ignore the 55-mph speed limit which grew out of it, says a new Transportation Department report.

The report said higher speeds are eliminating the savings in lives and energy that accompanied the mandatory speed limit on the interstate highway system.

"Highway speeds — after dropping significantly in 1974 and remaining at 1974 levels in 1975 — are gradually increasing," said Transportation Secretary Brock Adams in a letter accompanying the report sent to President Carter.

"A significant portion of motorists violate the 55-mph speed limit," the report said. From 39 percent to 77 percent of vehicles in various states were exceeding the limit during the first six months of this year.

The average speed of freeflowing vehicles was 58 mph on rural interstate highways in 1976 compared with 57.6 in 1975, and 56 mph on urban interstates, compared with 54.7 for 1975, the report said.

Wyoming and Connecticut shared the worst record, each with 77 percent of vehicles exceeding the limit, it said. Missouri had 74 percent, Maine 71 percent and Texas 70 percent. Virginia had the lowest rate, with only 30 percent of its vehicles exceeding 55.

At the same time, the report said, highway deaths increased from 46,011 in 1975 to 46,820 in 1976, the first increase since the 55-mph limit was enacted.

Carter sent a telegram to 22 governors whose states had 60 percent or more traffic over the limit, expressing concern about the trend.

"If we are to retain and improve on the fuel and life savings benefits experienced over the past three years, a stronger effort must be made by all of us responsible for gaining increased compliance with the 55-mph speed limit," the president said.

"I urge you to redouble your efforts in communicating the importance of the 55-mph limit to the people of your state and to take all available steps to effect a greater degree of compliance."

Telegrams went to Connecticut, Maine, Texas, Missouri, Wyoming, Massachusetts, Vermont, Georgia, North Carolina, Tennessee, Illinois, Indiana, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Iowa, Kansas, North Dakota, South Dakota, Utah, Arizona, Nevada and Washington.

Governors must promise support for the limit in writing each Jan. 1 if they are to continue receiving federal highway aid.

The statistics used in the Transportation Department report were drawn from information submitted annually by the states.

Soil disease source?

HARRISBURG (UPI) — Dr. William Parkins, the chief epidemiologist of the Pennsylvania health department, says the soil may be the source of the organism responsible for Legionnaires' disease.

The disease first surfaced in July, 1976, during the state Amerasia Legion convention in Philadelphia, killing 29 persons and sending 151 others to the hospital. Since that time, another 118 cases have been reported in other states around the country, killing 34 victims.

Dr. Parkins said, "There are a number of possible sources of the organism that we have been questioning people about. One that frequently occurs is an association between the organism and soil."

"Many of these people have gardens, or the road in front of their homes was torn up. Frequently there were excavations in the proximity to the victim's home."

Scientists in their search for the cause of the illness, said they discovered that the disease is not a new one, and has killed an untold number of people over the years.

One of the mysterious outbreaks of the disease, before it gained national prominence last year, occurred at St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Washington, D.C., in 1968. Sixteen people died, and ground excavations were taking place near the hospital at the time.

In the past year, doctors have been able to diagnose the disease and treat it with some success with antibiotics.

Dr. Parkins said over the next two months questionnaires will go out to 64 people in 25 Pennsylvania counties who attended the July, 1976, convention and blood samples will be taken. Half of them will be from the 151 victims who were hospitalized.

One of this summer's victims is known to have been working in his root cellar, before becoming ill.

"If there was a leading theory, or a leading hypothesis, it would be that the organism probably originates from soil or something of this type," Dr. Parkins said.

He said no laboratory tests yet have been performed in Pennsylvania.

Gas firm wins round

BOISE (UPI) — In a 4-1 opinion, Idaho's Supreme Court set aside today the Public Utilities Commission's dismissal of a 1975 application by Intermountain Gas Company for a $3.6 million general rate increase.

At the same time, in a majority opinion written by Justice Stephen Blaine, the high court set aside the PUC's denial of Intermountain's petition for rehearing of the case. Justice Allan G. Shepard dissented without a written opinion.

PUC Commissioner Conley Ward Jr. said he was uncertain what now is the status of the Intermountain application. He said the court remanded the case but the PUC will have to study the opinion to determine whether it must rehear all or part of the case.

Intermountain filed the application in May of 1975. The PUC suspended the effective date of the proposed rate increase early in June and several weeks later dismissed the application, saying the company had included figures from another rate increase application then pending before the commission.

This other application was for the $800,000 "Zama gas" cost increase in Canadian supplies the company sought but the PUC later rejected.

Moscow weeps for Americans

MOSCOW (UPI) — The official Tass news agency has taken a close look at Thanksgiving in the United States — and decided to rain on the parade.

In an article that would have brought a malicious smile to the lips of an unreformed Ebenezer Scrooge, Tass said most Americans were too depressed about conditions to enjoy Thanksgiving.

Tass all but ignored the mammoth Thanksgiving parades and didn't even take into account one of the most important elements of the day's celebration — football on television.

Instead, the news agency said America was too depressed about unemployment and violations of constitutional rights to enjoy a day devoted to thanks for the blessings of life.

"Thanksgiving day, a holiday the traditions of which were laid down way back by the first settlers in the new world, was meaningless in the United States."

Tass said.

"Like in all the past years, incidentally, neither colorfully decorated shop windows, nor the picturesque processions were able to dispel the Americans' pessimistic mood."

To back up his claim, Tass reviewed recent Harris polls it said "are indicative of the American's bitter discontent with the quality of life in the country."

"According to Harris ... the main causes of the pessimism are the continuing growth of inflation, a high rate of unemployment and the rise in the cost of most diverse services."

"On the eve of Thanksgiving day, the number of unemployed were 10 million and grew still more. Twenty thousand workers of Chrysler automobile ... and a thousand railmen ... lost their jobs."

And it said "those who were behind bars were obviously not in the mood of giving thanks," listing the Wilmington 10, Charlotte Three and many other "political prisoners" among their numbers.

"Tass said they were "thrown into prison for their protest against racism and injustice, against oppression of national minorities, against reaction and police arbitrariness."

Finally, the Soviet news agency said even the element most vital to a Thanksgiving celebration was missing from most tables — the turkey.

"According to tradition, the Americans prepare a roasted turkey for the festive table," Tass said.

"This year, however, few families could afford that. According to government data, such a dinner became 60 per cent more costly as compared with that in 1976."

The Soviet Union does not have the equivalent of a Thanksgiving day.

Early arrival

JOPLIN, Mo. (UPI) — Christmas came a little early to Leafy Smith's house Thursday.

A semi-tractor trailer loaded with Christmas trees ran off Interstate 44 just east of Joplin and into the Smith yard, dumping about 1,000 Christmas trees in the yard.

The accident occurred when one of the truck's tires blew out.

The highway patrol said there were no injuries in the mishap. But it took several hours to reload the blue spruces, white pines and scotch pines in the truck.

Road death toll at 137

By United Press International

A United Press International count at 9 a.m. MST showed 137 persons had died in traffic accidents since the holiday weekend began at 6 p.m. local time Wednesday. The count includes at midnight Sunday.

A breakdown of accidental deaths: Traffic 137, Fires 12, Planes 8 Total 157

Georgia reported 13 traffic deaths, Illinois and Texas each reported 11 and Virginia reported 10, California, Indiana, Michigan, Missouri, Pennsylvania and Tennessee each reported seven.

Traffic safety officials gave thanks to miserable weather over much of the nation for keeping millions of Americans indoors Thursday and keeping the Thanksgiving holiday weekend traffic death toll under projections.

A Safety Council spokesman said the holiday estimate was lower than the average traffic toll for a four-day, non-holiday weekend in late autumn and said reduced travel and increased use of public transportation helped make the Thanksgiving weekend safer for motorists.

A winter storm which swept across the Pacific Northwest and upper Midwest Thursday also encouraged motorists to stay off the roads.

Four young men were killed in a two-car head-on collision on a Missouri state road between Cabadie and Villa Ridge, Mo., in one of the worst mishaps of the weekend.

Police said a car driven by Ray Doerr, 21, of Washington, Mo., crossed the center line and collided head-on with a car driven by Raymond Baker, 40, of New Haven, Mo. Baker's car was on the shoulder of the road when it was struck.

Doer and three passengers in his car — David Schott, 21, of Washington; John Stallman, 20, of New Haven; and Michael Stemp, 20, of Union, were killed. Baker was hospitalized with head and internal injuries.

Six people were killed Thursday when a twin-engine plane en route from Illinois to Beckley, W. Va., missed the runway at Raleigh County Airport in Beckley and crashed into a handball court hall.

Soviet children scream as KGB drags father away

MOSCOW (UPI) — While his children cried "Save us!" Soviet militiamen backed up by a squad of KGB secret police today beat a man who tried to enter the U.S. Embassy and then hauled him away in an unmarked car. Embassy sources who witnessed the incident said it occurred at about 3:10 p.m. (5:10 a.m. MDT) in front of the commercial office of the U.S. Embassy, which is a few doors down the street from the main chancery building. The sources said the man, his wife, two small children aged about 4 and 6 and a woman who was apparently an unt tried to enter the commercial section when they were attacked by three of the gray-uniformed militiamen outside the building. The aunt was forced into a ten-colored Volga sedan that had screeched up onto the sidewalk. The mother and one of the children were standing to the side as the militiamen tried to force the father and one of the children into a black sedan. "I couldn't believe it," said one embassy employee who talked about the incident in exchange for anonymity. "The man was holding his youngest daughter and trying to brace himself from being forced into the car. The policemen were pushing and hitting him." The embassy employee said she picked up one of the children, who was screaming and crying hysterically. "She was saying: 'Save us! Save my father! They will take him away and kill him! They beat him the last time!'" The scene quieted for a few minutes after two U.S. embassy officials arrived and tried to find out what was happening, according to the sources. But for some reason, it immediately heated up again.

Egypt undercutting PLO

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — Egypt has decided to invite Palestinian leaders living in Israel and Israeli-occupied lands to visit Cairo for talks on a Middle East peace, a move aimed at undercutting the Palestine Liberation Organization. The ruling political party, the Arab Socialist Party of Egypt, made the decision Thursday at a meeting called to discuss President Anwar

Sadat's break-through visit to Israel last weekend. Sadat's agreement with Israel that there would be "no more war" between their nations has drawn bitter attacks from the PLO, Syria and other hard-line Arabs. Andrew Young, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, rose to Egypt's defense Thursday in New York, praising Sadat's trip to Jerusalem as a demonstration of "rare vision."

Lance offers repayment

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Bert Lance has offered to repay two Georgia banks for certain uncollected loans and disallowed business expenses in order to avoid a federal regulatory action that could force him out of banking, sources familiar with the investigation said Thursday. The sources said representatives of Lance, the former director of the Office of Management and Budget, the First National Bank of Calhoun and the National Bank of Georgia opened preliminary discussions with officials of the Securities and Exchange Commission on Nov. 8 to try to hammer out an enforcement agreement that would protect the shareholders of the two banks and correct violations of exchange regulations. The federal regulators, the sources said, were contemplating an agreement that could suspend Lance from taking part in the banking business for an unspecified period of time. This action comes at a time when a three-member panel of top Department of Justice officials have recommended that a grand jury in Atlanta examine evidence in connection with Lance's banking activities prior to becoming federal auditor last January. The recommendation by the panel is seen as a substantial escalation of Lance's legal difficulties.

Shot spoils parade

By United Press International
The Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade in New York, usually a symbol of holiday glee, was marred by the accidental shooting of a city policeman by another officer assigned to crowd control at the festivities. Officer Roland Geddes, 31, was shot in the stomach and seriously wounded by a bullet fired from the gun of Officer Michael Ligouri as they sat in a bus transporting them to Macy's Department Store, site of the nationally televised parade. Geddes underwent surgery at Roosevelt Hospital where he was reported improving and in fair condition today. One high ranking police officer, who asked not to be identified, said Ligouri's gun went off, the holster when it went off. According to department regulations, an officer is not permitted to take his gun out of the holster without cause. The officers, described as friends, were part of a Thanksgiving Day Parade detail being transported to Macy's from the upper part of the parade route, a police spokesman said. Ligouri, 26, was questioned by department investigators. Despite the incident, the parade made it way down the streets of Manhattan, led by traditional floats and helium-filled balloons of the ageless Mickey Mouse, Bullwinkle Moose and Santa Claus. Making their first trip through Herald Square were Smaug, the gold-hoarding dragon from the J.R.R. Tolkien book, "The Hobbit," and Fliver the Rabbit from "Watership Down" by Richard Adam.

Sports fans jammed football stadiums, and traditionalists gathered with family and friends for turkey feasts. President and Mrs. Carter spent the day at Camp David, Md., along with daughter, Amy, 10, their son, Jeff, 25 and Jeff's wife, Annette. The First Family's menu featured turkey with cornbread dressing. Carter vowed to catch up on his reading. But in Chicago, unemployed workers of Zenith Corp., whose jobs are being eliminated because of the company's relocation in Taiwan and Mexico, held a protest at a Zenith display salon. "Today we will be giving 'no thanks' to Zenith for throwing us out on the street, 'no thanks' to Carter and Congress for cutting our unemployment benefits.

No turkey on platter at dinner

DENVER (UPI) — Paul Feroe and Dick Ross had a Thanksgiving Day feast for about 100 persons Thursday, and there was a turkey in his sight. The two Denver men, both of them vegetarians, were having their annual "save the turkey" feast. The menu consisted of nut roast with rice and vegetable casserole along with the traditional mince meat trimmings. Feroe, 26, founder of the Vegetarian Society in 1974, two years after he decided he no longer would eat meat. Ross gave up meat as a college student after his weight soared to 246 pounds. He now weighs 160 pounds. The men said a survey of the 125 members in their society shows most gave up meat because of concern about their health and a feeling that fruits, nuts, grains and vegetables would be the best diet. The second most common reason for the diet switch was an objection to the killing of animals.

British fire toll now 22

LONDON (UPI) — Two elderly Britons died in Thursday's pushing the death toll to 22 since Britain's 35,000 firefighters went on strike for higher pay 11 days ago.

Strikers raced from their picket line in Chorley, 200 miles northwest of London, to help soldiers fighting a fire in a private home Thursday. But they were unable to save its elderly female occupant because of the thick smoke, police said. And in Seaforth, near Liverpool, an elderly man was found dead after a fire in his home.

Defense Minister Fred Mulley, visiting troops drafted into an emergency firefighting role, said he foresaw no end to the strike and could not give the soldiers a date when they would return to normal army duty.

The troops, armed with obsolete fire trucks of World War II vintage, fought some of the biggest battles of the strike Thursday. The government said it would call up 165 members of the marine band to bolster the beleaguered soldiers. The reinforcements from three royal marine bands were scheduled to join troops in the west Midlands and the Strathclyde region, military spokesman said.

In Northern Ireland, an overnight firebomb blitz touched off seven blazes. Officials blamed the Irish Republican Army.

The government appeared determined to hold the line on its anti-inflation guideline of 10 percent pay hikes this year, despite a public opinion poll showing a majority of the public in favor of acceding to the firefighters' demands.

The firefighters want a 30 percent pay increase, taking them to about $13 a week for fully trained and experienced men.

During his visit to the firefighting troops, Mulley defended the government stand. "It is difficult to govern by opinion poll," he said. "The total national interest is absolutely essential to get the national rate of inflation down."

Rhodesia peace talks proposed

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI) — A decision by Prime Minister Ian Smith to accept the principle of one-man, one-vote, was welcomed today by two of three black leaders he invited to begin negotiations toward ending Rhodesia's five-year race war.

But the third party concerned, Joshua Nkomo's internally based, political group, dismissed Smith's decision as "political gimmickery." Smith announced Thursday his commitment to majority rule based on adult suffrage provided he is given guarantees of the rights of the white minority.

He invited three locally based leaders — The Rev. Ndabangali Sithole, Bishop Abel Muzorewa, and tribal chief Jeremiah Chirau, to join him in constitutional talks outside the framework of the Anglo-American initiative.

Sithole, who heads one faction of the African National Council, is on a promotion tour of the United States. But his vice-president, Elliott Gabaellah, said that faction welcomes Smith's commitment to adult suffrage "as a decisive move — which paves the way for black and white Rhodesians to sit down together and work out a blueprint for peace."

Gabaellah said Sithole would return next week to take part in negotiations with Smith, but he said he had no indication when the talks would start.

Chirau also said he was encouraged by Smith's statement and "I expect to hear there will now be an early meeting between myself, Mr. Smith and other nationalist leaders." There was no immediate reaction from Muzorewa. A spokesman for his United African National Council said the bishop will make a statement Saturday.

Black terrorists blamed for bomb

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Police Minister Jimmy Kruger says the bomb that rocked Johannesburg's most exclusive shopping center wounding 19 people was apparently planted by black terrorists, and linked his recent security crackdown.

Kruger said there were indications that Thursday's blast at the Carlton shopping mall was the work of black nationalists and said it justified recent security moves.

He apparently was referring to his crackdown on black dissenters Oct. 19, when he detained about 50 outspoken black leaders, shut down two black newspapers and outlawed 18 black organizations.

The mid-afternoon bombing shattered about $17,220 worth of shop windows at the shopping mall and blew a foot-wide hole in the concrete floor under the flower pot where the bombers hid the device.

The blast at the Carlton was the second in a year to hit the luxury complex in the 58-story skyscraper, Johannesburg's tallest. Last December a young black man tossed a stick of dynamite into a restaurant, causing little damage.

Ernie Malherbe, whose family owns a delicatessen in the mall, said the bombing was "the loudest blast I've heard in my life. There was a kind of a shock panic. The waitresses were crying and afraid to go out."

His father was phoning customers in the neighborhood, telling them, "The police have told us to close down, so have you any last orders?"

In another incident, the 5-year-old daughter of a pro-black newspaper editor suffered a skin rash from an acid-impregnated T-shirt bearing the picture of a black leader that was sent anonymously to her home.

In East London, Jane Woods, 14, daughter of banned newspaper editor Donald Woods said her younger sister, Mary, was recovering from the skin rash caused by the T-shirt, which bore the picture of a black leader.

The shirt had been dusted with an acid-based irritant used in gas pistols for self-defense.

Woods, a white, was a friend of Biko, who died while in police custody Sept. 12 from a severe blow to the head. Woods was among the first to demand an inquest into Biko's death, and Kruger. In his Oct. 19 crackdown, ordered the editor to stop speaking to reporters for attribution.

TOKYO (UPI) — Japanese demonstrators protesting a proposed nuclear power plant clashed with police today at the town of Onagawa, 220 miles north of Tokyo.

Authorities said about 1,000 demonstrators crowded around a building in which leaders of the Onagawa fishing industry were debating whether to oppose or support construction of the nuclear power station.

Three hundred riot police were sent to the site to control the demonstrators, who staged a sit-in in front of the building.

This is autumn of Carter discontent

By HELEN THOMAS
UPI White House Reporter

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Is this the autumn of President Carter's discontent?

He says not. In fact, Carter told Democratic Party stalwarts at a recent gathering that he welcomes "the recent controversy swirling around the White House."

If that is true, he is a glutton for punishment. For Carter, there are very few headlines these days that can make him happy.

His energy program is faltering despite dire warnings about shortages ahead for a very cold winter. He has described approval of the Panama Canal treaties as "indivisible."

He is having trouble with his welfare reform program, and he is about to unveil a tax reform package which most certainly will please everyone.

Part of Carter's problem appears to be that he has yet to command a loyal following — Republicans on Capitol Hill who feel strongly about his program, and are willing to go to the mat for him.

When Sens. James Abourezk, D-S.D., and Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, did just that with a filibuster to try to break the Senate tide for deregulation of natural gas, the administration pulled the rug out from under them.

— President Walter Mondale and Senate Democratic Leader Robert Byrd worked out the strategy to kill the filibuster and succeeded. Mondale maintains it was done without Carter's knowledge, but Abourezk seems to think otherwise. He accused Carter of lying.

If the President indeed did not know of the strategy of the floor managers, and gave no signals, he is in bad shape. For to say the least, Carter should monitor his own centerpiece legislation and try to keep it on track.

The past nine months have been a get-acquainted trip for Carter and Democratic leaders, and there's no indication they know each other yet.

Carter took office at a time when Congress was asserting the powers it lost in the Johnson and Nixon eras. They wanted no dictates from the president and no strong powers from the White House.

As consequence, Carter has used kid gloves in his dealings with Democratic leaders, and he has tried to stay on the side of the angels as they show him the ropes.

For all the unprecedented consultation he has carried on with members of Congress, they still complain. But it is true that Carter worked out a joint U.S.-Soviet declaration on the main issues involved in a Middle East peace settlement without consultation with the lawmakers most concerned with the problem.

Carter says part of the blame lies in the fact that he is trying to tackle age-old problems that have defied solution for years — the Arab-Israeli conflict for one. He also has moved into areas of controversy where previous presidents have stepped gingerly — human rights and the Panama Canal treaties.

Pundits, who prefer the status quo and seek far more predictability, have displayed their outrage. Some of Henry Kissinger's followers believe Carter's openness and his zigzags in foreign policy are detrimental to the nation's foreign policy.

According to critics, Carter is not playing ball by the old rules. Some are showing more relief now that the United States and the Soviet Union are getting along better and edging back toward détente.

For a time, they felt that Carter had forgotten the notion that the world is made up of two superpowers. When U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young went off to Africa to extend a sympathetic hand to the independent movements in the Third World, Carter was urged to restrain him and a miniprovement began in the House to impeach Young.

It appears that Carter is marching to his own drum and is on the opposite side of the fence from the Democratic-controlled Congress in foreign affairs and some areas of domestic affairs. So much so that he has told Republican legislators they are more helpful to him at times than his Democratic cohorts.

It's clear that he must be reading it more and enjoying it less. What comes through is that neither Congress nor the pundits have a clear fix on Carter's goals, his methods or his philosophy. A lack of a clear line bothers them.

Old McDonald had a farm, eey...i...eey...i...ohh.
And for his wheat he got two cents, eey...i...eey...i...ohh.

WASHINGTON — A group of us were jogging in Rock Creek Park the other morning when a flying saucer from outer space hovered over us and then made a perfect three-point landing. Out of it stepped a dozen little green people.

One of them, who wore four stars on his shoulders, seemed to be in charge.

"Take us to your leader," he said.

We all looked at each other perplexed.

"What did you say?" Sullivan asked.

"I said take us to your leader. Don't you understand English?"

"We don't really have a leader," my friend Guggenheim said. "But we have a President."

"Maybe," said Lindstrom, "we should take him to Sen. Robert Byrd. He has more clout than the President."

"I'm not sure," Redfern said. "Sen. Russell Long is the real power in this country. Nothing gets through without Long's approval."

"What about Tip O'Neill? He's really calling the shots on the Hill," I said.

"The four-star green person was getting impatient."

"We don't have all day. Will you make up your minds? We heard Henry Kissinger was your leader."

"That was a year ago. Everything is changed now. Kissinger is only a professor at Georgetown University."

"Look, we came a long way," the green person said, "and we're tired. Are you going to take us to your leader or aren't you?"

"We'd like to," said Guggenheim apologetically, "but at the moment nobody is really in charge."

"How do you get things done if no one is in charge?" the green leader asked.

"We don't get much done," I told him. "We just seem to go along with everyone doing his own thing. The President says he wants to do one thing, Congress says it wants to do another, and finally a compromise is made which doesn't satisfy anyone. Would you like to meet, Arthur Burns?"

"Is he your leader?"

"No, but he's in charge of our money supply and he's giving President Carter fits."

The green person thought we were putting him off.

"Every country has to have a leader," he said, menacing us with what looked like a laser pistol.

"Please," begged Redfern, "we're trying to be helpful. But no one has ever asked us to take him to our leader before. Carter promised to do it. It isn't easy to be a leader in the United States. If you had landed in the Soviet Union you would have been taken to the Kremlin right away."

The green person said something to the other green persons (but we didn't understand. They all started chattering at the same time.

"Then the green leader turned to us.

"Since you don't have one, they they want to know if you would like me to be your leader."

"I wouldn't mind," Guggenheim said.

"Suits me," Redfern agreed.

"It's up for grabs if you want it," Lindstrom told him. "But as a matter of courtesy you ought to clear it with Fritz Mondale in the White House."

"Who's he?"

"He's in charge of all Administrations appointments for outer space."

Monitoring needed on abortions

By MARTHA ANGLE AND ROBERT WALTERS

WASHINGTON (NSA) — HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. may be vehemently opposed to federal funding of abortions, but he's not a know-nothing. And that's more than can be said for some in Congress who share his philosophy.

Califano has personally intervened to insure that the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta will continue to monitor the public health impact of the cut-off of Medicaid financing for abortions.

Rep. Henry J. Hyde, R-Ill., leader of the anti-abortion forces on Capitol Hill, had protested the monitoring program after CDC last month reported the first documented death attributable to the cut-off, which took effect on Aug. 4.

A 27-year-old Texas woman, denied a government-paid legal abortion because of the funding ban imposed by Congress, died Oct. 3 in a McAllen, Tex., hospital after undergoing a botched abortion at a "pharmacy" just over the Mexican border.

Four other women, two of whom were also Medicaid recipients, were admitted to the same hospital with septic complications following abortions at the same Mexican facility, the CDC reported.

As it happened, the CDC report broke just as House-Senate conferences were bitterly fighting over extending the ban on publicly-financed abortions for the poor.

Hyde apparently felt the news from McAllen was likely to help the House conferees, who are seeking to perpetuate the existing near-total ban on the use of federal funds for abortions. So he called up Califano to complain. The Health, Education and Welfare secretary, to his credit — reportedly told Hyde to take a long walk off a short bridge, though he no doubt phrased it more tactfully.

The monitoring program, Califano told CDC officials, will go forward — without political interference.

And that is as it should be.

It is one thing for President Carter, Joe Califano and a majority of the Congress to decide — for whatever philosophic and political reasons — to prohibit the use of federal funds for abortions.

It is quite another matter, however, to suggest that the government need bother to ascertain the consequences of such action.

The Center for Disease Control has been monitoring abortions in the U.S., both legal and illegal, since 1970. Over that period, there has been a steady increase in the number of abortions performed, from 191,000 in 1970 to 855,000 in 1975, the last year for which complete statistics are available.

But at the same time, the number of abortion-related deaths has dropped sharply, especially since the landmark Supreme Court decision of 1973 made legal abortions available nationwide. There were 128 deaths in 1970, and only 44 in 1975.

Both Congress and the executive branch — not to mention the rest of us — need to know whether the denial of Medicaid payment for abortions will affect the number of abortions performed and the deaths associated with them.

No matter what congress ultimately decides about the scope of the funding cut-off for the future, women who can afford to pay for abortions themselves will continue to receive them.

Maybe the poor will beg, borrow or steal enough money to obtain safe and legal abortions even without public funding. Maybe they'll have their unwanted babies, halving the welfare rolls. Or maybe they'll turn in desperation to backley butchers or Mexican "pharmacies" and wind up in the CDC mortality statistics.

Nobody knows what the impact will be. The fund cut-off is still too new to permit any conclusions to be drawn. But Califano is absolutely right in insisting that the monitoring program continue so that some of these questions may be answered.

Catholics working to rekindle faith

By KENNETH H. BRIGGS
N.Y. Times Service

NEW YORK — Two aspects of the semi-annual meeting of Roman Catholic bishops in Washington last week underscored a major new evangelical trend in the church: For Catholics in this country, it is an unusual development.

Underlying this trend is a recognition by church leaders that the factors that for decades kept the church in a self-perpetuating condition have been weakened or eroded.

At the start of the meeting, the hierarchy was urged to intensify efforts to rekindle the faith of lapsed Catholics. Archbishop Joseph L. Bernardin, in a speech as outgoing president of the bishops' conference, said that there were "many who have never experienced true conversion."

Before the conclusion of the four-day session, the bishops approved a new set of guidelines for Catholic education that goes hand in glove with the aims of evangelization.

Evangelizing and educating have often been considered separate activities. The function of reaching out for new converts was understood to be distinct from training them once they were in the church.

But the changing status of the church in modern culture has drastically altered each function and brought them much closer together.

Secular influences have made it more difficult for the church to attract new adherents, and retaining those who are church members has also become more difficult, attendance at mass has plummeted nearly 20 percentage points in the last 10 years, according to the Gallup Poll.

In the early stages of this decline, there was a sort of the guidelines refer frankly to the problems of apostasy in the church and the need to lead people to faith inside as well as outside the church through a combination of approaches.

As generally defined, evangelism is the first phase of awakening faith. Education of the convert to spiritual maturity comes later. But these lines have become increasingly blurred, particularly as education is seen as presenting opportunities for encouraging commitment.

The catechetical directory, as the guidelines are called, goes to considerable lengths to describe modern conditions, including those that hamper the growth of faith, and acknowledges that these and crises of people at various stages of their lives. It is an extension of the theme of listening carefully to the world beyond the church.

The document says that teaching is done at every major point in church life and that commitment to the faith involves a never-ending process. The attitude throughout the document is one of pastoral understanding rather than command or judgment.

The movement toward personal faith commitment in Catholicism reflects certain elements of the wider evangelical drive that is sometimes defined as "born again" religion.

The growing Catholic charismatic movement in particular has fostered the belief that many church people need to deepen their commitment by making "decisions" for Christ. Hints to this conviction has largely been found among non-Catholics. Catholicism has placed greater stress on salvation through grace obtained through the sacraments.

Last week, 10 leaders of the Catholic charismatic renewal, estimated to have a following of seven or eight hundred thousand, issued a blunt demand to the hierarchy for greater evangelical concern.

In a 3,500-word statement, the charismatic leaders deplored the "process of disintegration in church life" that they said was resulting in massive defections.

They called for the bishops to recognize the vitality of the ministry of those who lead charismatic groups at the fringes of the institutional church and to work for the evangelization of Catholics whose religion is allegedly "nominal or cultural." They warned the bishops that disaster was imminent if such changes were not made.

The bold statement by the charismatic leaders appeared to signal a growing sense of confidence in the movement. And its impact seemed to be enhanced by the respect among church officials for the success of the charismatic surge.

Other pressures within the church for greater evangelistic efforts arose from Marriage Encounter, which is an effort to bring married couples "closer together by spiritual" commitment, and the charismatic movement.

The bishops are paying close attention to those endeavors and have begun their own initiatives. Archbishop John R. Quinn of San Francisco, the newly elected president of the conference of bishops, said at the meeting that "conversion touches the very foundation of the church itself."

"There is a mood in the episcopal conference," said Archbishop Quinn, referring to evangelization, "in favor of developing an imaginative approach to be announcement of the Gospel."

The emerging concept is evident in the new teaching guidelines. "To consider evangelization only as a verbal proclamation of the Gospel robs it of much of its richness," the document says, "just as it does not do justice to catechesis to think of it as an instruction alone."

Castro, foes both spied upon

MIAMI (UPI) — Government documents show the FBI spied on both friends and foes of Fidel Castro during the early 1960s on orders of the late Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy, the Miami Herald reports.

The FBI placed informants within Miami's Cuban exile groups to identify members and obtain the dates of planned invasions against Cuba, the Herald said in the Thursday report.

After the Kennedy order, then FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover assigned more agents to the Miami FBI office in 1963 and they began checks on Cuban exiles for possible violation of the Neutrality Act, the Herald said.

FBI spying targets along with Alpha 66 were groups headed by Orlando Bosch and Dr. Manuel Artime. Bosch is jailed in Venezuela on charges stemming from the bombing that killed 73 persons aboard a Cubana Airlines plane at Barbados on Oct. 6, 1976.

The documents also showed that while the FBI began infiltrating Cuban exile groups, it continued spying and harassment of pro-Castro groups in the United States.

Washington Star — Air Force Lt. Gen. Howard M. Fish is leaving his post as head of the Pentagon's arms sale apparatus, but government spokesmen insist that his departure is not related to a recent row with the White House.

The position is traditionally held by a three-star general or flag officer and is a "purple suit job," a reference to the fact that its holder is not supposed to notice the color of his uniform or those of the people with whom he deals, but rather to deal neutrally with all services.

National Labels only aid warning

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Food and Drug Administration says it plans no action at present beyond requiring warning labels on the liquid protein products sweeping diet-conscious America.

Percy said Wednesday he had obtained new figures from the Center for Disease Control stating there were 26 possible deaths linked with liquid protein diets in 11 states and the Canadian province of Ontario.

John T. Walden, FDA assistant commissioner for public affairs, said in a telephone interview Thursday the mandatory warning for each liquid protein product has FDA's "top priority."

They said a top-level meeting on liquid protein was held Wednesday and officials made no plans beyond a mandatory warning label at this time.

"If the warning label is inadequate to meet the need, then FDA will consider stronger regulatory action including consideration of the possibility that the liquid protein and similar low-calorie protein diet products might be declared and regulated as prescription drugs," Walden said.

Next step UN AMBASSADOR Andrew Young of the United States told the General Assembly Thursday President Anwar Sadat's trip to Israel was a "rare vision" and called on all parties to keep momentum toward peace in the Middle East.

Not enough TUCSON (UPI) — The Tucson City Attorney's office has finished work on a proposed ordinance to regulate escort services but the Police Department's legal adviser said it was only piecemeal legislation to attack fronts for prostitution.

Late surge wins crown ATLANTA (UPI) — Thomas K. Sanders, Nashville, Tenn., and Lou Blum, Atlanta, leaping from ninth place on a big score in the final session, Thursday night won the Blue Ribbon Pair championship of the Fall North American bridge tournament.

Atlanta's Walden said the agency is now expected by Monday to issue a new regulation which would declare liquid protein an unsafe food additive and therefore order it off the shelves.

But he said if the council's intent was to go after all operations which may serve as fronts for prostitution, then the ordinance was incomplete.

"FDA officials are working on an emergency basis over Thanksgiving holiday in drafting this new rule," he said.

Mexican prisoner payments denied

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — The U.S. Embassy has denied allegations by a U.S. congressman that some Americans imprisoned in Mexico have had to pay $3,000 each to speed their way home under a prisoner exchange agreement.

The embassy statement said Lacey had not heard from Fortney but he "wishes to assure everyone... especially the families of the American prisoners involved, that the Mexican Attorney General and other officials have been most cooperative in facilitating the transfer of eligible American prisoners."

Rep. Fortney Starke, D-Calif., said Wednesday in Washington that he had received complaints some American convicts were being forced to pay to be moved up on the transfer list.

The first batch of American convicts are expected to be flown to the United States before Christmas — some to be set free but others to serve out the remainder of their sentences.

Fortney also said American inmates who had been outspoken in protesting jail conditions in Mexico were being kept off the transfer list, hinting they were being punished for their activities.

The embassy statement said female prisoners will fill the first flight out of Mexico "with the balance of available seats filled by male prisoners selected in alphabetical order; there is no such thing as being 'higher on the list.'"

The congressman, who was a leading advocate of the Mexico-U.S. prisoner exchange agreement signed into law earlier this year, said he it said as of November, there were a total of 225 American inmates listed by the Mexican government as eligible for transfer to the United States.

'Auntie Mame' fights for funds

MARION TANNER

NEW YORK (UPI) — Marian Tanner, now in her mid-70s and in a wheelchair, was the sparkplug of those nursing home residents at a Thanksgiving viewing of the movie "Auntie Mame," adapted from novel written by her nephew.

For almost 40 years, her Greenwich Village brownstone was a haven for homeless people until she could no longer afford the mortgage and her belongings were literally put on the sidewalk.

Now she is fighting to raise $17,000 by Dec. 15 for the Village Nursing Home. Just a few blocks from her old residence, can continue to be a home for some 180 elderly and sick residents.

The Caring Community, a group of religious organizations in the area trying to save the facility, still must raise another $75,000 by March 1 to keep the home from going bankrupt.

Dan Haggerty listed 'fair'

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Actor Dan Haggerty, star of the "Gripzly A" TV series, was reported in fair condition Thursday at a hospital where he underwent skin grafts for severe burns suffered when a flaming drink was accidentally spilled on him.

Dr. Richard Grossman, a burn specialist at Sherman Oaks Hospital, said Haggerty is "in fair condition, doing fine and is up and walking around — and will have his Thanksgiving dinner like everybody else."

However, the actor will require hospital treatment for about a month.

Haggerty was celebrating his 36th birthday at a restaurant in suburban Woodland Hills last Friday night when someone jostled his arm, causing burning alcohol from the drink to set fire to his beard.

A bartender leaped over the bar and covered Haggerty's head with his body to snuff out the flames. The actor suffered first, second and third degree burns on his face, neck, a hand and forearm.

His television show has been suspended while the actor is recuperating.

Comedian Dick Gregory jailed

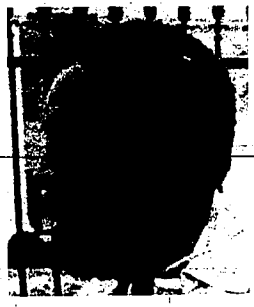

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Comedian Dick Gregory, his wife and a Massachusetts state senator, all of whom refused bond and were jailed overnight, were to be arraigned today on charges of demonstrating in front of the South African embassy.

District police said the three refused to sign a citation release or post $100 bond, which would have allowed them to go free.

Gregory, his wife, Lillian, and William Owens, a Democrat from Boston's Suffolk District, were arrested for demonstrating within 500 feet of a foreign embassy.

Obelvia Malone, a state senator from Owens, said Gregory led about 50 demonstrators in a protest in front of the White House, then re-grouped on Massachusetts Avenue near the embassy.

He said the protesters moved away once on police orders, but Gregory, his wife and Owens marched back carrying placards that said "Thou Shalt Not Kill" listing the names of 16 people who died in South African falls since 1976.

DICK GREGORY

Professor unearths King Philip's tomb

SALONICA, Greece (UPI) — King Philip II, the father of Alexander the Great, was stabbed to death during his daughter's wedding feast in 336 B.C., perhaps at the hands of a royal attendant bribed by his enemies.

For 2,344 years, the Macedonian monarch lay buried in a large underground tomb amid the golden opulence befitting ancient kings.

Soviet Prof. Manolis Andronikos says he has found Philip's tomb hidden beneath 26,160 cubic yards of dirt in the tiny farming village of Vergina, 30 miles southwest of Salonica.

Andronikos has spent decades digging for Macedonian tombs, but the Vergina find is the realization of every archeologist's dream — to unearth evidence of ancient historical figures.

"I held the golden casket containing his bones, and I knew — but was almost afraid to say — it was Philip, father of Alexander," he said Thursday while recounting the find at Salonica University.

Philip was not only the father of Alexander, who in his time ruled most of the known world, but also was a powerful Macedonian king whose army overthrew Athens to bring India.

Archeologists said Andronikos' find was "the most important" in Greece for decades.

Andronikos, beaming with pride, told reporters he has been excavating around Vergina for 40 years and first noticed the 40-foot high mound in the early 1930s.

A bulldozer first uncovered traces of a funeral pyre containing metal harness fittings for three or four horses, a sign the person buried underneath was of high rank.

Then Andronikos unearthed the marble doorway, topped with a superb fresco showing mounted hunters pursuing deer and a lion through a forest, and surrounded by a white facade highlighted in bright blue and red paint.

"We knew at once no common mortal was buried in such a tomb," he said.

Inside the 164-foot high chamber was a suit of royal armor — a gold-trimmed breastplate, helmet, shin guards and a shield of leather and wood decorated with ivory and glass.

Goldstein's ad thanks jurors

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Al Goldstein, publisher of Screw newspaper, had a special message for nine Kansans on Thanksgiving Day.

Goldstein took out a full page ad Thursday's Kansas City Times to thank the nine persons who voted for his acquittal on federal obscenity charges.

Exactly one week before Thanksgiving, Goldstein's second obscenity trial in Kansas ended in a hung jury. Nine of the 12 jurors had voted for acquittal.

Goldstein's ad had a picture of his family, an American flag and a big banner that said, "Congratulations!"

Under the flag was Goldstein's message.

"Last week at the Federal Courthouse in Kansas City, Kansas, nine brave men and women, serving as jurors in a censorship case, voted to acquit a newspaper and its publisher," the ad said. "In so doing, these nine — patriotic Kansans breathed new life into the U.S. constitution."

Goldstein and his former partner, James Buckley, were on trial on charges of violating 12 federal obscenity laws. The charges were related to mailing issues of Screw and a newspaper called Smit to Kansas three years ago.

The publications were sent to Kansas postmasters under assumed names. They were returned unopened to New York postal authorities, who had made the subscription request.

Goldstein and Buckley were convicted of the charges by a federal jury in Wichita last year. But that conviction was overturned because of prejudicial statements made by the prosecutor during closing arguments.

Federal officials have not decided yet whether to hold a third trial in Kansas for Goldstein and Buckley.

Slayings probed in Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Police fear a "Los Angeles Stranger" may be responsible for killing 11 girls and young women whose bodies have been dumped by roadsides over the past two months.

All but one of the 11 victims, ranging in age from 7 to 28 and many found nude, had been strangled, police said, and most were sexually molested before their bodies were discarded in isolated areas near busy freeways, city streets and canyon roads in various sections of Los Angeles County.

Seven of the bodies have been found within a six-mile radius of Glendale, Highland Park, La Crescenta, Griffith Park and Elstyan Park just north of Los Angeles.

The county coroner's office disclosed Thursday the latest victim, Jane Evelyn King, 28, of West Hollywood, whose nude body was found beside the Golden State Freeway on Wednesday, had been strangled. It was not disclosed if Miss King had been sexually molested.

According to a missing persons report filed by her mother, Miss King was known to accept hitchhiking rides. She was last seen Nov. 9 leaving a Church of Scientology Center, where she was a member. Earlier this week the Los Angeles Police Department put together a task force of 200 investigators from various agencies to solve the slayings.

"We're looking at them for similarities," said Lt. Ed Henderson. He said investigators refused to disclose the manner in which the victims were strangled because "it's the possible key to any suspect we might have."

Police in Glendale released a composite drawing of a man being sought in connection with one of the killings — that of Lisa Kastin, a 21-year-old waitress from Glendale, whose nude body was found in "a ravine" Nov. 6.

Hubby's ad gets results

BEVERLY HILLS, Mich. (UPI) — Every Nov. 24, so many strangers call to wish Dorothy Guttenberg a happy birthday she has to leave the phone off the hook if she wants time for a cup of coffee.

The calls are a gift from her husband, Larry, who each year places an advertisement in a Detroit newspaper telling people to call his wife and wish her a happy birthday.

Guttenberg has run the ad for the past eight years. This year, he shelved out $200 for the advertisement in the Detroit-Free Press. The calls began about 11:30 Wednesday night, and ran all through Thanksgiving Day.

"The calls never stop," Mrs. Guttenberg said. "He takes the phone off the hook just long enough for me to take a bath or have a cup of coffee then they start again."

She said the calls became tiresome after a while, but added she was proud of her husband.

"I'm not really mad," she said. "I'm a little crazy, but then who would do something like that for me?"

Mrs. Guttenberg said she gets a couple of hundred calls a year. One year she got a call from a Texas oil family.

Statue unearthed

ROME (UPI) — Archeologists have unearthed a long lost statue of the fighting goddess Minerva, 50 other lifesize statues and hundreds of smaller ones in one of the most exceptional finds of recent times; the dig leader says.

Minerva and the other statues were hidden about 22 centuries ago in ruins from Rome when worship of the mythological goddess of war and wisdom declined.

Archeologists from Rome University's Institute of Ancient Topography were attracted to the site after learning that some illegal antique scavengers had been digging there at night.

"The latest diggers got there first," said leader Paolo Sammella Wednesday, and cleaned out the deep cave in which the statues had been hidden. Some of the statues are almost whole, and others are in large, easily restored fragments, he said.

The statues all are in terracotta, still decorated and colored. They depict gods, men and women bringing offerings, and an excellent head of the satyr Silenus, with brown beard and red face, who the ancients believed could be compelled to foretell the future.

Doctrine unheeded in birth control

© Newhouse News Service WASHINGTON — The once striking differences between the birth control methods used by Catholic and non-Catholic married couples in America has all but disappeared over the past 10 years, according to a study done for Planned Parenthood. The increase in Catholic couples of child-bearing age who use the birth control sterilization from 1955 to 1975, particularly among couples married less than 10 years, indicates that only a handful of Catholics strictly heed Church doctrine against the use of artificial means of contraception. "It appears certain that almost all Catholic women married after 1960-70 will have abandoned Church teachings on birth control by the time they have been married 10 years," the authors of the study, Dr. Charles Westoff of Princeton University and Elise F. Jones of the University of Pennsylvania, said in an article published in Family Planning Perspectives, the Journal of Planned Parenthood's Alan Guttmacher Institute. Overall, the study showed that in 1975 76.4 percent of all Catholic couples in which the wife is of child-bearing age (under 45) practice some form of birth control, compared with 79.9 of non-Catholic couples. A decade earlier, the figures — based on five-year national fertility surveys of a random sample of married Catholics and non-Catholics — were 58.5 percent for Catholics and 70 percent for non-Catholics. The survey also showed that only 5.9 percent of Catholic couples now rely on ovulation timing (the "rhythm method"), compared with 31.4 percent in 1965.

Report reveals boy babies preferred

NEW YORK (UPI) — American women may want equal rights with males but at childbearing time most prefer male babies.

Forty-nine percent of American wives said they prefer boy babies and only 32 per cent would rather have girl babies, according to the first nationwide study of wives' preference for gender of children, published in New York today.

Does this mean women, the child-bearing ones, are running up the white flag in the equal rights battle and betraying their sisters pushing women's liberation? If numbers help, the more girl babies the better — it would seem.

It will be up to social scientists to interpret the preference for male infants shown in the report published in Family Planning Perspectives, Journal of the Planned Parenthood Federation of America's Alan Guttmacher Institute.

Some questions they might consider: Do most wives of childbearing age think boys have a better chance? Are boys kinder to their mothers in old age? Do girls have less desirable lives or personality traits?

Only wives of Hispanic origin, in keeping with the Hispanic cultural heritage, showed more preference for girl babies.

The study by Lolangene C. Coombs of the University of Michigan's Population Studies Center is based on responses from 6,800 married women in the 1973 National Survey of Family Growth. The survey was sponsored by the National Center for Health Statistics.

Another area of variation was among Catholic wives married to Catholic men.

Thirty-eight per cent of the Catholics women had a "girl bias," up about six points from the girl bias among other wives.

Blacks were found "slightly more apt" than whites to exhibit son preference.

Mrs. Coombs said it was surprising that so relatively greater preference for girls was observed among working wives. In fact, they were "somewhat more likely" to prefer sons.

How do the preference of American wives compare to gender preference in other nations?

Korea and Taiwan, for two examples, prefer sons — 95 and 98 percent, respectively.

In Hungary, for another example, 90 percent opt for sons. In Colombia and the Philippines, both of Spanish cultural heritage, girl infants are preferred over sons.

Mrs. Coombs said "an outstanding observation" from the data studies was the lack of significant variation among American wives in sex preference of their babies either by education, by economic status, by region or by rural-urban residence.

Several Idaho hospitals offer multi-entree menus

BOISE (UPI) — The menu may offer filet-mignon, top sirloin, and lobster, and assorted appetizers, including wine, may be topped off with mince or grasshopper pie.

The weekend diner might expect to find such foods in a top notch restaurant—but to patients of several Idaho hospitals, multi-entree menus with rich desserts are part of an average day.

And the food service directors responsible for keeping their patients full and satisfied claim it is part of a trend.

same things. It really wasn't that good," Hughes said.

"But now we try to offer good, quality food. The restaurant trend seems to be the direction hospitals are taking in a lot of places. Years ago I started serving the types of food you would find in the finest restaurants and about 98 percent of our patients seem satisfied."

The concentration at Mercy has been on Mexican dishes. But it offers 11 hot and three cold entrees daily, and pediatric dishes include burritos and pizza.

Chinese omelette, ham scallop, broiled chicken, and turkey-mushroom casserole are big items.

"I think we're trying to get into a restaurant situation," Miss Roth said. The people seem to like what we have and we're satisfied with our offerings."

The St. Alphonsus menu took a year to plan and it is reviewed annually. Items not frequently requested are removed and others are added to the menu.

"I think most people are looking for restaurant-type foods and that's what we try to offer."

The situation is the same at Caldwell Memorial Hospital.

"We want a much more elegant, beautiful menu," said Galt Adams, a dietician.

"We're looking for big things in our menu."

Big things so far have included lamb chops, chicken supreme, and beef in wine sauce. Crab Louis looms in the future and the hospital has applied for a wine license.

"We offer quite a selection and change the entrees every day," Adams said. "We have been doing more with sauces on our regular diets and are using much more innovation."

But the cost to patients is about the same. "We're using essentially the same items, only dressing them up. It doesn't cost any more."

At Mercy Hospital, the same foods are offered every day. There are six diet

Comfort featured in new fashions

Chicago Daily News

Women who like their fashion free and easy are going to get it as never before this spring and summer.

Don't expect cut-and-dried rules. There aren't any. Clothes, and ways to put them together, are so relaxed they're "laid back" in American and European designer collections.

Comfort is a prime factor day and night.

Big, soft slapes continue in single and multiple layerings, but there's been a lot of trimming down and retining of unmanageable proportions. Fabrics are soft — miles of lightweight cottons, linens and silks. Get used to wrinkles if you don't want to go berserk trying to avoid them, even after you've slaved over an ironing board.

Function is more important than fantasy in most leading design camps in New York and Paris — but without the boring, upright attitude it once had.

Fantasy still exists, but it's seldom the rank costumery it was in past seasons. Perhaps the greatest fantasy that exists for women is that all of the designers — that women are going to run around in all the see-through fabrics and body-baring styles that were shown in collections on both sides of the Atlantic Ocean. Time will determine that one.

Chasing cheats costs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The federal government paid more than $1 million to informants who helped the Internal Revenue Service track down income tax cheaters during the past three years.

The federal treasury came out far ahead in the practice of exchanging money for information.

According to the IRS, the government collected $35,276,314 in the three year period from taxpayers who would have avoided payment if it were not for the informants. Of that total, $14.9 million was collected during fiscal 1977 alone.

The IRS said just because a person calls to say he thinks somebody is cheating on his taxes, it does not mean the informers will get cash. In fact, most are turned away emptyhanded.

Out of 14,667 informers who volunteered information during the past three years, only 1,414 — less than 10 percent — received any money.

An IRS spokesman said a total of $1,692,550 was paid to informers — an average of $744.80 each.

The spokesman said the largest single payment to an informer during fiscal 1977 was $50,000. The IRS recovered more than $500,000 utilizing the clandestine information from that one tip.

The decision to pay off in exchange for a tip is completely unilateral, the spokesman explained.

"It is based on the theory of how much help the informer was to us," he said. "The tip has got to lead us to untaxed income which we ordinarily would not have recovered. Someone cannot simply get drunk, get mad and call us. There must be some substance."

The spokesman said an informer has a variety of reasons for volunteering information about another taxpayer to the IRS.

Expansion seen in air service

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Air passenger service from Twin Falls to other major Idaho cities would be expanded by eight flights daily if plans of a new Coeur d'Alene airline materialize.

Gen State Airlines, based in Coeur d'Alene, Wednesday afternoon was granted a certificate of public convenience and necessity by the Idaho Public Utilities Commission (PUC) to provide air passenger and freight service between Idaho's larger cities.

The firm was authorized to fly routes between Coeur d'Alene, Moscow, Pullman, Wasi, Lewiston, Twin Falls, Boise, Pocatello and Idaho Falls.

Tom Sumas, president of the airlines, told the Times-News today his proposed schedule "has been attuned more to Twin Falls than any other city." He plans four daily flights east and four west from Twin Falls.

The new firm has been in a formative state about three years, Sumas said. Involved in setting up reservation system, maintenance program and tentative schedules, all prior to obtaining necessary financing.

The PUC authorization was a prerequisite for obtaining adequate financing, Sumas said. He hopes to initiate the flights by next summer.

Harry Merrick, Twin Falls airport manager, said today the PUC action would "greatly enhance our passenger loadings in Twin Falls between south and north Idaho."

In its order granting the certificate for Gen State, the PUC noted "There are indications that based on the report of the task force of service to small communities made to the Civil Aeronautics Board" local carriers such as Hughes Alirstev eventually may abandon service to small communities presently receiving service."

Garth Andrew, PUC information officer, said the commission found that the schedule of flights proposed by Gen State appears to better serve the public convenience and necessity both because they are more numerous and because they are flown at times of the day which will be more convenient to the passengers.

Andrew said Hughes Alirstev has publicly announced its intention of operating all jet fleets and "did not exhibit any interest in re-equipping for small city services" according to testimony obtained by the PUC.

The Twin Falls airport manager, however, said he didn't think Twin Falls "will ever lose Hughes Alirstev because the boardings here gain every month."

The firm now has six daily flights at the local airport and starting the first of the year there will be seven, plus extra ski flights, Merrick said.

The Twin Falls airport manager said having additional flights from the Coeur d'Alene firm would "necessarily injure airlines now operating here."

According to the PUC Gen State proposes using Swearingen Metro II planes, 19-passenger pressurized prop jets.

Proposed one-way fares, without tax from Twin Falls are listed at $32.41 to Pocatello; $33.12 to Boise; $32.41 to Boise; $36.48 to Lewiston; $62.04, Coeur d'Alene, and $38.33 to Moscow.

TF man dead, youth injured

KIMBERLY — A Twin Falls man was killed and a Kimberly youth critically injured in a car-truck accident two miles north of here early this morning.

Dead is Nathan N. Jones, 18, Twin Falls, driver of the car. His passenger, Darrell Dumas, 16, was listed in critical condition this morning at Maple Valley Memorial Hospital. Full extent of his injuries had not been determined, hospital officials said.

Sheriff's officers reported the accident occurred about 3 a.m. at the intersection of Addison Avenue East and a county road. Deputy Bill Thornquist said the Jones vehicle was traveling south on the county road and reportedly sped past another vehicle, which was stopped at the stop sign, and pulled onto Addison Avenue into the path of a westbound truck-trailer rig.

He said the front wheel of the Jones car caught the truck just behind the cab and the impact threw the smaller vehicle around and back into the borrowpit on the north side of the road, demolishing the vehicle.

SEEING HOW many teenagers can fit into a wheelbarrow is obviously quite a challenge. The answer to that question is sixteen. Why would anyone want to know that in the first place? Accident fatal TONOPAH, Nev. — A Twin Falls woman and her unborn child have been listed as traffic fatalities in Nevada as a result of a 3 p.m. Wednesday accident about 70 miles east of here on U.S. Highway 6.

Nevada Highway Patrol Trooper Robert Clark said Donna Gregory, 34, was killed when the van she was driving overturned several times. She was five and one-half months pregnant and authorities in Nevada have ruled the child as a fatality also.

Clark said this is the first time he knows of such a ruling in the state of Nevada.

He said the accident is still under investigation but Mrs. Gregory allowed the vehicle to drift to the side of the roadway for some unknown reason. The van went into gravel at the side of the highway and rolled over several times.

The woman's husband, Weston Gregory, 35, suffered a fractured collar bone and other injuries and is being treated in Nye County General Hospital, Tonopah. A daughter, Cynthia Gregory, 13, was seriously injured. She has been flown by air ambulance to Washon Medical Center, Reno, where she is listed in serious but stable condition.

Others in the vehicle included Weston Gregory Jr., 11, Veronica Gregory, 9, and Heidi Gregory, 6, all treated for minor injuries at the Tonopah hospital and released.

Trooper Clark said the family was west bound, apparently enroute to Mammoth, Calif., where they were to spend Thanksgiving with Mr. Gregory's brother.

Suspect arrested

TWIN FALLS — Michael Timothy Donovan, 21, San Diego, Calif., was arrested Thursday by Filer city police on charges of grand larceny and auto theft.

Sheriff's officers in Twin Falls said a warrant had been issued for Donovan by the Buhl Police Department charging grand larceny. He was reportedly seen driving through Twin Falls and sheriff's officers were notified.

Filer police were asked to watch for the suspect vehicle and Donovan was stopped as he drove into Filer on U.S. Highway 20. He was driving a car reportedly stolen from Ogden, Utah, when arrested.

Trout stream flow decreases

By KEN HODGE
Times-News writer

HAGERMAN — A Hagerman man who regularly measures stream flow in Billingsley Creek says his records and other records dating back to 1950 indicate stream flow in the spring-fed creek has dropped about 40 per cent during those years.

Ralph W. Stevens, who lives on the banks of Billingsley Creek in the Hagerman Valley, says stream flow in the well-known trout stream measured about 200 to 215 cubic feet per second (cfs) during the 50s, but has dropped to a low of only 117 cfs this year.

He says the decreased flow he has measured this year is not due to drought conditions, but a gradual lessening of stream size due to a depletion of the Snake Plain Aquifer over the years.

"It's certainly true the flow is down drastically," Stevens says. "It's been getting steadily worse over the last five years. The lowest flow since 1956 was 153 cfs where it normally would have been 200 to 215 cfs. This year, when it was supposed to be at its height, it was down to 117 cfs."

Stevens said records to which he has access indicate the stream flow was at a high some 25 years ago and had been on the decline as more pressure has been put on the aquifer by pumping from wells on the plain above.

He uses "regular measuring devices" to test rate of flow in the creek as it flows past his home. And he always makes his tests at the same time of year to "be very consistent."

"It costs about $100 every time I measure. We've gone into it very thoroughly," Stevens explains. "My protocol calls for me doing it at the same day, and same location each time. It's just like any other scientific analysis. You have to do it the same each and each the water the same each time."

Ralph Norwiltch, associate district chief of the U.S. Geologic Survey (USGS), says his workers also sample spring flow in the Thousand Springs area.

"Even over the long term, we don't see a great fluctuation in the spring flow," Norwiltch argues. "It is a pretty consistent thing. It just hasn't changed more than ten percent over the years."

Norwiltch says the USGS figures do not include specific data on Billingsley Creek, since their continuous monitoring is done at Blue Lakes and at Box Canyon. USGS figures, however, include overall stream flow on the Snake River which indicates a total flow figures for all of the Thousand Springs.

"We are interested in the total discharge of the springs," Norwiltch says. "A report from the 1920s shows the springs were much lower than they are now."

Norwiltch explains recharging of the aquifer occurs as farms on the plain are irrigated with surface water diverted from the Snake River. He says that is one reason why the Snake Plain Aquifer could possibly have a greater volume of water in it now than it did some 60 years ago.

Norwiltch does agree, however, a local reduction in stream flow at Billingsley Creek is possible.

"We have no way of confirming or denying it," Norwiltch says of the Stevens' charges. "The stream flow could have changed because of some local condition."

Stevens says the reduction in flow on Billingsley Creek is due to a depletion of the Snake Plain Aquifer, an untold volume of water from which thousands of farms between Idaho Falls and Bliss get domestic and, in some cases, irrigation water.

Stevens attributes the depletion to a great increase in pumping from the aquifer to irrigate large farms and an increase in pumping for sprinkler irrigation.

He says recent capping of injection wells for surface run-off has helped slow recharging of the aquifer with irrigation water.

Norwiltch, on the other hand, says the aquifer has not suffered depletion, and-in fact has gained water volume because of all the water diverted from the Snake River to irrigate farms on the northside.

He says any decrease in flow which may have occurred at Billingsley Creek, if it did in fact, occur, is due to some local condition.

Book review

'Headlines Idaho Remembers'

By DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — There are times when the front page of a newspaper says it all. An inseparable part of the immediacy of the moment, a newspaper headline can capture a mood that later historians — buffered from the passions of the day-by months or years — can later only guess at.

More than one person has saved the front page of his newspaper from the day Neil Armstrong walked on the moon, or perhaps when John Kennedy was assassinated. Years later, on seeing that front page, the same feelings rush back flooding the reader with the sensations he felt upon first viewing the headlines.

Idaho has had its share of memorable headlines, and an attempt has now been made to collect and preserve famous front pages from Gen State newspapers. This week, "Headlines Idaho Remembers," will go on display in bank lobbies across the state.

The book is a collection of Idaho newspaper stories, pictures, ads and headlines from the state's fascinating history. State and territorial events — as well as Idaho interpretations of national and international affairs — are presented through reproductions of front pages from daily and weekly papers of the state.

The book will go on sale Dec. 1, and is being sold for $10 (plus tax for postage and handling) by the Boise-based Friends of the Bishops' House. The non-profit organization is selling the book to raise money for historical preservation of Idaho landmark buildings. The Bishop's House is an 1890s mansion that now belongs to the Idaho Historical Society. The book was assembled by volunteers.

Idaho history has until recently been a writer's wasteland. With the exception of several incomplete turn-of-the-century state history editions, not until recent years has Idaho history been solidly examined. While "Headlines Idaho Remembers" is flawed — most, noticeably by its total exclusion of material from any of Idaho's muckracking weeklies of the 1950s and 1960s, such as the now defunct Intermountain Observer — it is still a significant step toward preserving an important slice of Idaho life. It is a book no Idaho buff should pass up. It's also enjoyable, and nostalgic reading.

Persons wishing to purchase copies should write to Headlines Idaho Remembers, Idaho Historical Society, 610 North Julia Davis Drive, Boise 83702.

Valley skiing opens today

MAGIC VALLEY — Skiing opened today at both Sun Valley and Pomerelle although rains threatened conditions at Pomerelle.
Sun Valley opened on about 30 inches of packed man-made and natural snow on Lower Warm Springs run. A light covering of new snow fell Thursday night and skies were overcast today.

Shannon Besoyan, publicity director for the resort, said temperatures were below freezing—assuring the resort snow instead of rain if the clouds break open.
At Pomerelle snow was falling this morning on top of the mountain but it was raining at the lodge. Depths at the lodge were down to about 12 inches and skiing was being described as poor on the lower slopes.

Mrs. Woody Anderson said the area is open today but customers are being allowed to purchase a single ride ticket and apply it to a day pass if they decide to continue skiing. Day passes were selling for $6 and half-day for $5 Friday at Pomerelle.
Mrs. Anderson said the temperature was staying at about 34 degrees and snow which fell at intervals all day Thursday turned to rain at the lower elevation about 3 a.m. today.

She said plans for a two-day instructor clinic Saturday and Sunday will not be canceled regardless of continued warm weather as there is plenty of snow on the upper slopes. All interested Magic Mountain and Pomerelle ski instructors are asked to be at Pomerelle at 9:30 a.m. Saturday and Sunday for opening clinic sessions.

Rainfall washes snowpack from some Idaho highways

BOISE (UPI) — Rain washed some of the snowpack from Idaho roads during the night but many still were hazardous for travel today and State Highway 21 remained closed between Lowman and Stanley.

County Coroner — Cloyce Edwards said Jones was dead at the scene. He said he believed both Jones and Dumas had been thrown from their vehicle into a field on the north side of the highway and were carried back to the highway by persons who arrived at the scene following the accident.

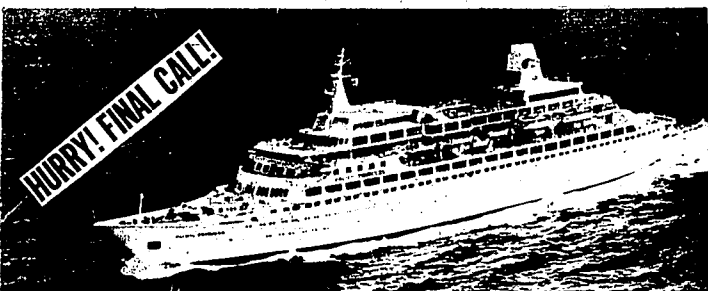

Edwards said Jones suffered multiple injuries and apparently died of head injuries.
Deputy Thornequest said he planned to contact the woman whose vehicle was stopped at the stop sign for additional information today. Jones and Dumas had been stuck in mud near Shoshone Falls and were apparently pulled out by the woman who witnessed the accident. Both vehicles were en route back to Kimberly when the accident occurred.

Damage to the truck was limited to the front wheel and gasoline tank behind the cab.

Driver of the truck, owned by Werner Enterprises, Omaha, Neb., was Richard

Jabbar won't shoot

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI) — The Los Angeles Lakers reported Wednesday that their 7-foot-2 superstar center, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, sidelined since breaking his hand in the NBA opener, will not be allowed to play this weekend.

Abdul-Jabbar, who broke his hand when he punched Bucks' rookie center Keith Benson at Milwaukee Oct. 18, was examined Wednesday afternoon by a member of Dr. Robert Kerlan's orthopedic staff.

His return is a week-by-week proposition, the examination showed.

"The hand is much less tender than it was a week ago, and we want Kareem to begin catching passes and working out lightly in game situations," a spokesman for Kerlan's office said. "However, we don't want to expose him to live action."

"We will continue to examine the hand on a regular basis and, at a time when he is able to catch hand passes without pain and when the X-rays show that enough new bone has formed to protect the fracture, is when he will be able to return to the lineup."

Without Abdul-Jabbar, the Lakers have a 7-9 record going into a Wednesday night game at Seattle against the SuperSonics.

Los Angeles coach Jerry West hoped to have the five-time NBA MVP back for home games against the New Jersey Nets Friday night and the league champion Portland Trail Blazers Sunday night.

Gooding girls win

GOODING — The Senators girls basketball team thumped Wood River Tuesday night 41-21.

Nine Gooding girls scored in the contest and every girl played in the game.

Joni James tallied 11 points to lead all scorers, followed by Christy Srrlaga with 8, Rosalie Adams with 5, Connie Stevens, Christina Osborn and Debbi Bauman with 3 each, Joyce Giese with 2 and Lisa Childs with 1 point.

The Wood River girls got 4 points each from Mitter, S. 1. Inopre and Prodromides in a losing effort.

Wood River took the JV contest 17-16.

SKATEBOARDING, declared by Consumer Products Safety Commission to be the nation's most dangerous sport (outranking football), is big business, with annual sales of skateboards and related equipment expected to exceed $1 billion this year. Kimberly rebuilds

KIMBERLY — The look is practically all new on the Kimberly basketball court this season, ranging from new head Coach Rich Thompson to eight juniors and a non-letterman senior.

The Bulldogs similarly ran out of height when Norm Bennett and his classmates left Kimberly high last spring and only juniors Steve Askew and Mike Perkins break the six-foot barrier. They do it with just an inch to spare.

Consequently, the Bulldogs must be put in the old cliché of a "rebuilding year."

Only 5-9 guard Brent Lazure and 5-4 forward Tom Sievers, both seniors, have previous varsity experience. Clark Crawford is the senior squadman trying for his first monogram. He's a six-foot forward prospect.

It is for certain, then, that Kimberly will start two juniors at least. Among these are Dennis West, 5-9 guard; Mark

Cavaliers hit

RICHFIELD, Ohio (UPI) — Campy Russell tossed in 13 of his 25 points and Walt Frazier got eight of his 18 points in a 27-point third period Thursday night to spark the Cleveland Cavaliers to a 97-82 victory over the Phoenix Suns.

After the Cavs took a 14-12 lead with 5:08 left in the first period, the score was tied eight times before Jim Brewer's stuff shot put the Cavs ahead for good—66-65—with 4:03 left in the third period. Cleveland then outscored the Suns 17-4 in the next six minutes and breezed to their 11th win in 16 games.

Austin Carr came off the bench to add 12 points for Cleveland and Brewer pulled down 14 rebounds. Paul Westphal topped Phoenix with 22 points.

Jazzmen take Denver easy

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Pete Maravich stole the ball with four seconds left and drove three-quarters the length of the court for a game-winning layup Thursday night as the New Orleans Jazz recorded their fourth straight triumph with a 131-129 victory over the Denver Nuggets.

Maravich, who scored a game-high 31 points, knocked the ball away from Denver's Brian Taylor. Maravich then chased the ball, gained control at midcourt and drove to the right side of the lane for his layup with one second remaining on the clock. The buzzer sounded as the play ended.

Denver held a 129-127 lead with 16 seconds to go after a free throw by Mack Calvin. New Orleans' Truck Robinson hit a 20-foot jumper to tie it and set the stage for Maravich.

CLEVELAND'S WALT FRAZIER ... snatches ball away

Sanders takes reins

BOSTON (UPI) — He looked more like a Harvard professor than an NBA coach.

Tom "Satch" Sanders, who rejoined the Boston Celtics this season as Tom Heinsohn's assistant after four years as head coach at Harvard, found himself running the team for the first time Wednesday night when his boss got thrown out of the game.

And the contrast was remarkable.

Unlike the bellowing, arm-waving Heinsohn, the soft-spoken Sanders hardly raised his voice as he guided the Celtics from a close 81-77 lead to an easy 109-100 victory over the Houston Rockets.

"The first thing that went through my mind was, why did Tommy do this to me? Don't leave me out here like this," said Sanders. "But this isn't a young ball club. They know

A regular customer in a restaurant almost invariably tends to go back to the same table, if possible. It's a territory thing. The same quirk that makes a robin drive other robins from its hoarded tree. It prompts a dog to bark, maybe hiss when a stranger walks into the yard. Among people, it's also the reason that boundary disputes are the cause of the most litigation.

If your ancestors were English, Scotch or Irish, chances are better than average that you won't get overweight. Or at least not obese. Hold on, exceptions crop up, certainly. But studies show the Americans of these national origins are less likely than others to put on extra pounds.

Who's drinking all the wine? The number of wineries in this country has jumped by 41 per cent since 1970.

COCOA

Q: Coffee, tea and cocoa all got to Europe from places elsewhere. But which got there first?

A: Cocoa. By way of Christopher Columbus on one of his return voyages. Or at least the cacao beans did. There was no coffee there earlier. Not any tea.

Q: "What was the first household synthetic detergent and when did it show up on the market?"

A: Dett. Just 43 years ago.

On the Pacific island of New Caledonia are 17 cricket teams made up entirely of women players. Men can get into the act, too, but only as game officials.

Were you aware it requires about 45,000 drawings to put together a 6-minute, 30-second animated cartoon?

CAT'S EYES

History records that certain ancient Turks claimed they could tell the time of day by looking into a cat's eyes. Might be something to it. Believe I recall having read somewhere that the pupils in a cat's eyes contract and expand predictably in relation to the whereabouts of the sun. Will research this further. Stand by.

Reports of child abuse jump considerably during the winter months, but fail to report.

Fifteen per cent of the people in this country provide all the food, goods and services for the entire population. Or so say the statisticians. Interesting, if true. And if true, it's quite a measure of U.S. technology, is it not? But what are those other 17 out of 20 people doing, meantime, pray? This can get pretty deep. Time for a nap.
