Israel accepts Sadat's peace talk invitation

By United Press International

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, following up his precedent-shattering trip to Israel, Saturday invited all the parties in the Middle East conflict including the Palestinians to Cairo to talk peace. Israel promptly accepted but Syria and the Palestine Liberation Organization refused.

In a speech in the Egyptian parliament that drew rousing applause, Sadat extended the first invitation in Israel's 30-year history for an Israeli diplomat to come to an Arab state.

When the official invitation of the Egyptian foreign minister will reach Jerusalem, the cabinet will decide who to authorize to represent it at the Cairo talks," the Israeli government said in Jerusalem.

Jerusalem.

But Syrian Foreign Minister Abdel Halim Kaddam, whose country has been in the forefront of criticizing Sadat's visit to Jerusalem, cogged the proposal a "cover for the continuation of Egyptian-Israeli contacts," and added: "The proposal is rejected."

In Washington, CBS News quoted informed sources as saying the Sadat proposal was made only after a secret meeting in Sinai desert Friday between Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan and Egyptian Foreign Minister Butros Ghali.

The U.S. State Department said in Washington, "We will be consulting with those invited to determine their willingness to meet in Cairo to prepare for the Geneva Conference."

the Geneva Conference."

At the United Nations in New York, Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim conferred with Secretary of State Cyrus Vance by telephone and Soviet Ambassador Oleg Troyanovsky on Sadat's invitation.

Waldheim also consulted with the U.N. ambassadors from Jordan, the Soviet Union, and the Palestine Liberation Organization, which will be invited. Egyptian Foreign Ministry sources said the question of inviting Lebanon was being discussed.

Sadat said that if Syria, Jordan and the PLO did not attend the meeting, he would negotiate their demands with the Israelis and then ask for an Arab summit meeting to discuss the outcome.

Speed enforcement plan drawn

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter has approved a proposal to set new federal standards for enforcement of the increasingly ignored 55 m.p.h. speed limit, a White House spokesman said.

The proposal, which would require congressional approval, was made by Transportation Secretary Brock Adams in a little-noticed report on diminishing compliance with the energy-saving speed limit laws enacted in 1974.

The White House spokesman said Carter has okayed Adams' recommendation that he develop for Congress consideration "federal compliance standards" requiring states, in effect, to show proof they are actually enforcing the 55 m.p.h. limit.

Adams' plan would basically require states to monitor highway traffic — with the aid of increased federal funding and technical assistance — and certify in yearly reports that a required percentage of drivers had obeyed the speed limit.

The "ultimate goal," Adams said in his Oct. 14 report to Carter would be "85 percent compliance with the 55 m.p.h. speed limit by 1982."

The same report indicated not a single state could pass that test as of now.

It said monitoring procedures showed far more than 15 percent of all drivers were routinely breaking the 55 m.p.h. speed limit in all 50 states during the first six months of 1977, ranging from 77 percent in Wyoming to 30.5 percent in Virginia.

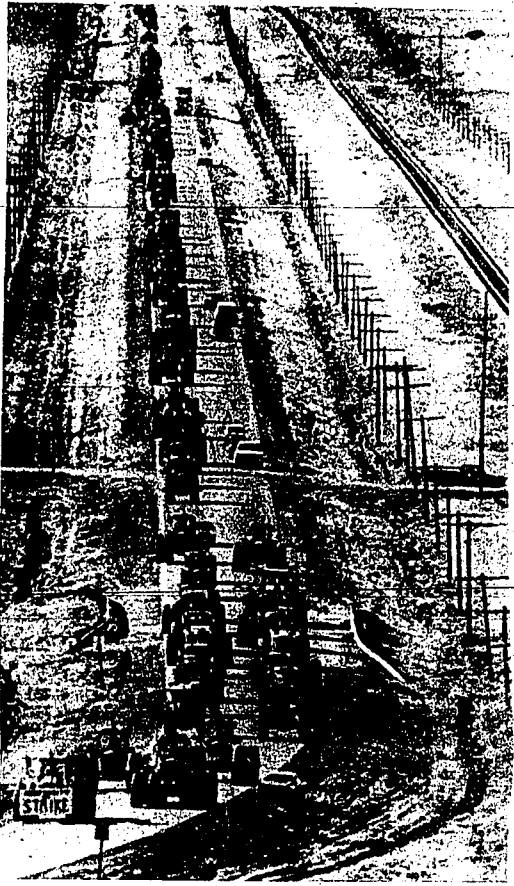

Although Adams' report did not say so, the new compliance guidelines would presumably involve monetary penalties for states that fail to measure up — just as the current, much looser, guidelines do.

A Transportation Department source said department planners are considering a proposal for reducing a state's federal highway fund allotment by up to 10 percent if it fails to meet the percentage-compliance standards.

The source said the change under consideration would also retain the current, complete fund cutoff provision for any state that actually enacts a legal speed limit of about 55 m.p.h.

At present, the federal government may cut off all highway funds to any state that fails to certify, once a year in writing, that it has a 55 m.p.h. speed limit law on the books and is trying to enforce it. But the requirement is fulfilled by delivery of the letter, no matter how bad the enforcement record is.

Rolling protest

SIX-MILE LONG procession of farm tractors rolls toward Plains, Kan., Friday in conjunction with a similar rally in Plains, Ga., as farmers protest low prices and work to generate support for a Dec. 14 strike if their demands for parity aren't met. Another show of support for the strike in Hays, Kan., today is expected to draw 7,000 farmers.

Holiday toll near 400

United Press International

A United Press International Count at 6:30 p.m. MST showed 330 persons had died in traffic accidents since the holiday weekend began at 6 p.m. Wednesday. The count ends at midnight today.

The breakdown of accidental deaths: Traffic 330 Fires 40 Planes 11 Total 381 California reported 40 traffic deaths, Georgia had 19, New York and Illinois each had 18, Michigan and Indiana reported 17, Alaska, Delaware, the District of Columbia, Montana, Nevada, North Dakota, Rhode Island, South Dakota and Vermont reported no deaths.

The National Safety Council estimated between 400 and 500 persons could be killed and 20,000 to 25,000 could suffer disabling injuries in traffic accidents during the holiday weekend.

The pre-holiday estimate of holiday traffic deaths was lower than the average toll for a four-day, non-holiday weekend in late autumn because of reduced auto travel and increased use of public transportation, a Council spokesman said.

The deadliest accident of the holiday period occurred in Virginia, where seven persons were killed in a two-vehicle collision near Newport News.

Police said a van carrying six members of a Clyde, N.C., family collided with a car carrying two persons. Five occupants of the van and both occupants of the car were killed. The sole survivor, a 5-year-old girl, was hospitalized in serious condition.

In another multiple-death accident, three Lewiston, Maine, residents were killed early Saturday in a one-car crash outside that city. Police said the victims' car slammed into a tree, flipped over several times and caught fire.

Matches in deserted cabin save stranded students

CHICO, Calif. (UPI) — Two college students said Saturday they froze and starved for five days in snow-covered mountains before they luckily found matches and set fire to a barn to signal a rescue helicopter.

They said they cried and embraced each other when they found the matches in a deserted cabin.

Robert Dreher and Dennis Glover, both 20, waded for more than two days through knee-deep snow and spent two nights with little shelter before finding the cabin. The only food inside was three-ten bags and about two ounces of wine.

Most important, there were the matches.

"We hugged each other and started crying," said Dreher from his bed in a Chico hospital where he was treated for frostbitten toes. "I pray a lot when I am in trouble. It was a test of my faith."

Dreher and Glover were rescued Friday by a California Highway Patrol helicopter at the northern end of the Sierra Nevada. Glover was examined and released from the hospital.

Glover, of Ventura, Calif., and Dreher, of Greenbrae, Calif., both students at Butte College, said their car ran out of gas last Sunday while they were driving back from a fraternity outing at a mountain cabin.

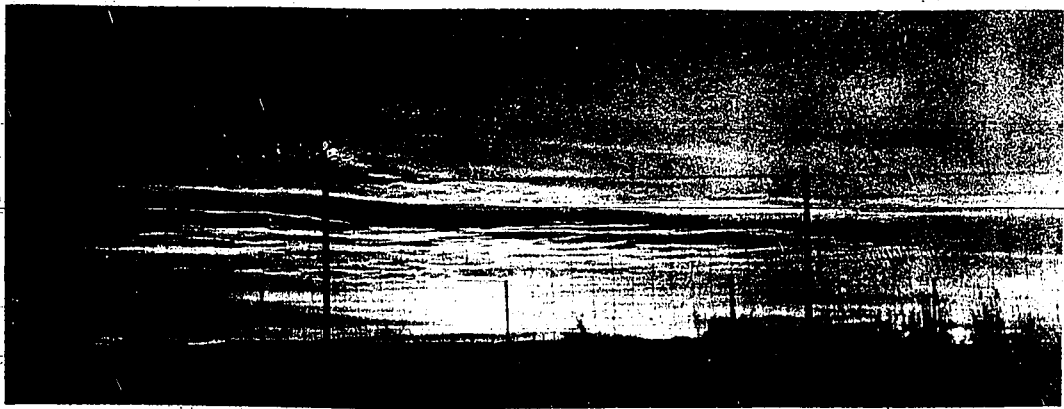

They started walking toward what they thought was civilization. They were wrong and they went deeper and deeper into more deserted country, enduring a storm that dumped two feet of snow on Sunday night and Monday.

"There were times that all I could think of was putting one foot in front of the other," Dreher said. The pair was not immediately reported missing and a search did not start until Tuesday when a sheriff's deputy found Glover's deserted car.

As the weather cleared on Friday, Glover and Dreher set fire to a barn near the cabin and a short time later the helicopter flew over a ridge and spotted them.

"It made me do a lot of thinking," said Glover. "I definitely believe someone was helping us, giving us the willingness to survive."

Sadat calls Cairo meeting

Sadat said the talks could begin as early as next Saturday and Foreign Ministry officials in Cairo said the talks would probably be at the foreign ministry level and the conference can begin next Saturday, Dec. 3.

The ministry officials said the invitations refer to Egypt's decision "to hold an informal conference in Cairo with the aim of making preparations for the Geneva conference."

The ministry officials said the invitations will be delivered Sunday, with the invitation to Israel routed via the United States or the United Nations. Egypt and Israel, who have fought four wars and still are technically at war, have no diplomatic relations.

Sadat specified that the invitation for preliminary talks for reconvening the Geneva conference was also extended to Moscow, "so that the Soviets will not say we are keeping them out," and to Syria, which "immediately takes its cue" from the Russians.

Sadat's 44-hour visit to Jerusalem was the first by an Arab leader to Israel since the Jewish state was born in 1948.

In his speech Saturday, Sadat did not specifically mention an invitation to the PLO and acting Foreign Minister Bishara Ghali said that, despite its hostility to Sadat's Israeli visit, the PLO will be getting an invitation.

But only hours after Ghali confirmed the PLO would be invited, a PLO official said, "Sadat's suggestion for a meeting in Cairo of all parties and peoples in the Middle East crisis cannot be accepted by the PLO."

The Egyptian president, lifting the veil a bit on the pressures he is under, said, "I will tell the Palestinians that we shall try to put up with them once more."

"We shall try to put up with their rashness and the fact that they fell into the Syrian-Soviet trap" of criticizing Sadat's trip, which he called a "sacred job."

Sadat coughed his invitation to the Soviet Union with the warning that "if it tries to create obstacles it will be making the biggest mistake of its life."

The Geneva Conference last met in December 1973, but has not been reconvened because of procedural problems. It was

One problem is who will represent the Palestinians, hundreds of thousands of whom lost their homes in the first Middle East war in 1948 from which Israel emerged as a state.

Fugitives surrender in Dublin

DUBLIN, Ireland (UPI) — Eight gunmen holding terrified supermarket shoppers captive for 13 hours Sunday after releasing their remaining six hostages unharmed.

Police said the men, believed to be members of the Irish Republican Army, were talked into surrendering by a Roman Catholic bishop.

The drama began shortly after noon Saturday when the gunmen, armed with shotguns, a submachine gun and a hatchet, tried to rob a supermarket in Fairview three miles from the city center.

A passerby saw the robbery taking place and called police, who arrived with army troops and surrounded the building.

The gunmen seized nine hostages but later released three of them, all women.

The end came dramatically after police and troops erected floodlights around the warehouse where the fugitives were held up in a small upstairs room after dragging and kicking their hostages along with them.

Among the hostages released when the gunmen surrendered was a young girl. The five others were men, police said.

Roman Catholic Bishop James Kavanagh, who negotiated with the gunmen, said the men feared they would be "ill-treated" by police if they surrendered.

Abducted Ohio woman rescued

TARPON SPRINGS, Fla. (UPI) — A man accused of kidnaping an Ohio woman and holding her hostage for 12 days had a book detailing the daily routines of up to 30 women, authorities said Saturday.

Linda Sharpe, 28, of Midway Heights was rescued from the alleged abductor Friday when she told a store clerk she had been kidnaped and asked the clerk to call police.

Miss Sharpe, described by Tarpon Springs Police Chief Blaine LeCours as "in very good shape considering what she's been through," headed back to Cleveland Saturday.

George M. Lewis, 27, was being held without bond at the Pinellas County Jail in Largo on charges of kidnaping, burglary, robbery, assault on a police officer and resisting arrest. He will be arraigned Monday.

Authorities refused to say if Miss Sharpe had been molested sexually. "He had a book with him," LeCours said.

He said it contained names of women, their addresses, car license numbers, where they worked and times they arrived and left.

Detective John Danapas, one of the arresting officers, said the note pad contained the names of 30 women in Cleveland and Tampa "that he said he was observing."

He said Miss Sharpe's name was on the list. Sharpe said she found Lewis in her apartment Nov. 13 and he waited around for her roommate in an attempt to abduct both of them. She said Lewis taped her eyes, gagged her and put her in a bag in the trunk of a car.

"She said she knew she was headed south because it was cold and snowing in Cleveland and she felt the climate change," Sgt. Mike Theodore said, adding Miss Sharpe said she had to put her head next to the bag's opening to breathe. Lewis drove to Holiday, a small town in adjacent Pasco County, and kept her in a mobile home, LeCours said.

Miss Sharpe was beaten repeatedly, "handcuffed to a bed post and handcuffed while tied up in a bathroom," Danapas said. Lewis allegedly took her to a movie once, but held a gun to her side throughout the film.

On Friday, Lewis drove Miss Sharpe to buy gas for the mobile home, and she whispered to a clerk that she was being held captive.

"I never really knew if there would be an opportunity, but I knew at some point I had to take that chance," she said. "I didn't know how long it would take the police to get there or even if she would understand what I said."

Chief Linda Lynch called police and said she stalled for time by asking Lewis to help her open a tin can while waiting for police to arrive.

Boise man killed

NOTUS, Idaho (UPI) — A head-on collision involving a van and a pickup near Notus Saturday morning left one man dead and seven injured, the Canyon County Sheriff's Department reported.

Howard D. Jensen, 41, Boise, was killed when the 1975 Chevrolet van he was driving collided with a 1967 Ford pickup one mile east of Notus on U.S. 20-28 at about 7:15 Saturday morning.

Five other occupants of the van were taken to Caldwell Memorial Hospital.

Two men in the pickup were also injured and taken to Caldwell Memorial Hospital.

A Canyon County Sheriff's spokesman said Jensen and the other seven men in the van were on a bird hunt at the time of the accident, but had no further details on the accident, pending further investigation.

As of Saturday afternoon no citations had been issued in connection with the collision.

Roman Catholic Bishop James Kavanagh, who negotiated with the gunmen, said the men feared they would be "ill-treated" by police if they surrendered.

OSHA silences FBI tommy gun

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The rat-a-tat-tat of the Tommy gun that thrills tourists at the end of their visits to the FBI will be silenced for three months next year by the rat-a-tat of an implacable foe — the Occupational Health and Safety Administration.

OSHA, Public Enemy No. 1 to many small-businessmen it regulates, will make Billy Carter clean up his gas station — working air quality standards for sets of places.

The FBI's machine gun shooting exhibition violates them because the smoke, fumes and lead particles emitted in the enclosed shooting gallery are hazardous to the agents' health.

As a result, the FBI will have to spend $185,000 to improve the ventilation in the $128 million dollar edifice on Pennsylvania Avenue. That means closing the shooting gallery from next Jan. 23 to April 24 and showing in its place a film of agents shooting at targets at the bureau's Quantico, Va., training center.

A spokesman said more than half a million tourists visit the bureau headquarters each year to see exhibits glorifying the FBI's crime-busting exploits, a tour capped by an agent displaying "rapid-fire" marksmanship by emptying both a .38 caliber and the Thompson submachine gun into a paper human silhouette.

Training funds OK'd

IDAHO FALLS, Idaho (UPI) — Gov. John Evans announced Friday that $652,520 has been released by the U.S. Department of Labor to fund a training program at the Idaho Nuclear Engineering Laboratory near Arco.

"This project will provide advanced skill training in three occupations for Idaho residents who have experienced long-term unemployment, and who qualify as low-income people," Evans said.

'Romance' sham to help ballerina escape

DALLAS (UPI) — A 12-year "romance" between a Russian ballerina and an American ballet dancer was nothing more than a sham designed to get the woman out of Russia, according to the U.S. dancer involved in the scheme.

Martin Fredmann, in an interview Saturday in the Dallas Morning News, said he joined the plot and married Kateriya Fedicheva in 1974 in return for a chance to study at the Kirov Ballet school. The story of the separated couple, who were married throughout the United and Europe after the famous Soviet ballerina defected to the West in February 1975.

According to the story, Miss Fedicheva and Fredmann had met while she was on tour in 1962, fallen in love, and though separated by thousands of miles, kept the attraction alive through letters.

Finally, Fredmann went to Russia to marry her in 1974, only to have the marriage declared illegal by the government three days later. He was forced to leave the country a short time afterward when his visa expired.

Police chief slain

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — Gunmen ambushed and killed the commander of the national police forces in the Basque province of Navarre Saturday night.

The victim, 50-year-old Joaquin Imaz, was gunned down as he was leaving an evening stroll in his home city of Pamplona, police officials said.

They described the slaying as a terrorist attack. No extremist group immediately took responsibility for the killing.

The national director of security, Mariano Nicolas, said the Navarre police commander was killed by several pistol shots and was dressed in street clothes.

The slaying came within hours after members of parliament from the Basque country had agreed to a draft of an autonomy statute for the region. The plan still lacked full government approval.

Palestinian state next on agenda

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The U.N. General Assembly, which censured Israel Friday for occupying Arab land, turns next to a debate on the rights of the Palestinians to form a state of their own.

The 149-nation Assembly ignored a plea by Israeli Ambassador Chaim Herzog Friday to end "hollow rhutoric" and sent 31 speakers to the rostrum before voting 1024 to condemn Israel for holding onto Arab lands seized in the 1967 Middle East war.

The resolution to censure Israel, which ended a four-day debate, also asked for the early convening of the Geneva peace conference with the full participation of the Palestine

The debate will begin Monday and will cover much of the same ground of last week's Middle East debate.

But it will also stress that the problem of the Palestinians is not a refugee question but one of the "inalienable rights of the Palestinian people" to a state.

Hundreds of thousands of Palestinians lost their homes in the 1948-49 Arab-Israeli war in States with a testy vote: The United States voted no on Friday's resolution to censure Israel while the Soviet Union voted yes.

But the two superpowers, who are co-chairmen of the Geneva conference, stated in an Oct. 1 joint communique that a comprehensive settlement in the Middle East should secure the "legitimate Israel says the PLO is a "band of genocidalists" seeking to destroy the Jewish state and has balked at having the Palestinian group at peace negotiations — one of the stumbling blocks to reconvening the Geneva conference, which met in December 1973 for two days.

STRIKING LONDON firemen were joined by citizens Saturday as they marched to No. 10 Downing Street to deliver a petition of public support for their demand for exemption from a 10 percent pay increase restriction. ©N.Y. Times Service UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — Three Chilean women who had traveled to the United Nations to publicize the arrests and alleged torture of their relatives by Chile's military government, were refused entry to their country earlier this week.

The women have now been offered political asylum by the United States.

fire on funeral

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Police Saturday opened fire and wounded two black youths who were attending the funeral of Bonaventura Sipho Malaza, the young black man who died in police custody on Nov. 18, witnesses said.

The witnesses said a crowd of 8,000 persons gathered at Kagiso black township near Krugersdorp, 20 miles west of Johannesburg, to bury the 18-year-old black youth.

Malaza's mother announced her son's death on Nov. 18 and said police told her the boy hanged himself. Malaza was the 21st person to die in police custody since March, 1976.

According to the witnesses police fired into the crowd after the funeral to disperse the group. Mourners fled in all directions but two persons were wounded by the police gunfire, the witnesses said. One person, identified as Sipho Mibetwa, was wounded in the left shoulder. Another unidentified youth was struck in the back, witness said. It was not known whether anyone was arrested.

Krugersdorp police authorities were not available for comment and Maj. Gen. David Kriel, Deputy Commissioner of Police in charge of riot control for South Africa, said he was unaware of the incident.

Brig. Johann Stabbert, divisional commissioner of police in charge of the West Rand, said "All I can tell you is that there has been an occurrence where the police had to take action. That is all I am prepared to say."

Malaza's death was announced as the latest in the death of black activist Steve Biko ended its first week of hearings. Biko was the 20th person to die in police custody.

National Women's Conference needed

From every state in the nation they came, 10,000 women sounding off on issues affecting half the U.S. population.

The first-ever National Women's Conference ended last week. Discussions over the usefulness of the Houston conference rage on.

Some women, notably anti-Equal Rights Amendment activist Phyllis Schlafly and antigay rights spokesman Anita Bryant, have called the National Women's Conference a sham.

Schlafly, Bryant and Idaho anti-ERA spokesman Susan Hill, claim the conference was dominated by feminists, lesbians, pro-abortion and pro-ERA women.

No matter how vehemently some women disagreed with the pro-abortion, pro-ERA resolutions passed at the National Women's Conference, the value of the four-day gathering in Texas should not be lost beneath a wave of rhetoric.

The National Women's Conference offered a forum for the women of America to argue, holler and debate the great issues facing them.

Not everyone agreed on the best ways to handle the abortion issue, the Equal Rights Amendment, gay rights. But lack of agreement isn't a negative factor in a democracy.

For Schlafly, Bryant, and Hill, or anyone else to call the National Women's Conference a 'farce' labels democracy a farce.

The Stop-ERA plank didn't receive a majority of the votes in Houston. But the Equal-Rights Amendment issue was discussed, debated, dissected.

What happened in Houston was similar to what happens at the national political conventions every four years. Delegates were elected and then debated momentous issues of the times.

In 1964, when Barry Goldwater's supporters successfully guided their candidate to the Republican Presidential nomination, was Schlafly calling the proceedings a farce?

Or, in 1976, when Ronald Reagan's supporters narrowly missed unseating Gerald Ford for the Republican presidential nomination, were Schlafly, Bryant or Hill crying foul?

If they were, they pose a threat to the very basis of a democratic society. Because, the national political conventions, like the first National Women's Conference, are exercises in a free, democratic system.

Those who say the women's conference was a 'farce' sound like the kids on the playground who weren't chosen for one of the teams playing the biggest sandlot softball game of the year.

Rather than try to sink the national women's conference, the Schlafly supporters should be promoting a second women's conference and try to elect a majority of delegates to that conference. Then, they could genuinely say their views were the views held by most American women.

The first Women's Conference politicized American women. Phyllis Schlafly and Anita Bryant are two fine examples of American women taking an active role in the nation's decision-making process.

The public efforts against the Equal Rights Amendment and gay rights are legitimate exercises in a democratic society.

Because the National Women's Conference didn't agree with their views is no reason for them to label the entire conference a fraud.

There are two sides to the ERA issue, the gay rights and abortion issues.

If there weren't two sides to these issues America's women wouldn't need a National Women's Conference.

But the conference functioned as a soapbox for supporters of Phyllis Schlafly and Anita Bryant, for pro-abortion and anti-abortion women, for pro-ERA and anti-ERA women.

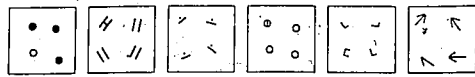

Plenty of hot air and angry words were exchanged in Houston. But would any of us want to have a democratic system work any other way?

Are You Mensa Material?

14-1877 (A)PE-NO. 11

Complete this quiz to see if you might qualify to hobnob with the super-smarts as a Mensa member. Keep track of the amount of time it takes you to answer the following questions:

2. Complete the following analogy with one word ending in the letter 'e'. Thermometer is to temperature as clock is to ...
3. Which figure does not belong?

- 4. Underline the two words in parentheses that have the same relation as the first two words. Sister is to chair as (cup, saucer, leg, plate, dish)
5. Underline the two words in parentheses that have the same relation as the first two words. Mother is to girl as (father, male, boy, son, daughter)

6. In the square below, a rule of arithmetic applies across and down the square so that two of the numbers in a line produce the third number. Write the missing number.

- 7. Complete this series
8. In the following equation, the number missing from the left side is equal to the number missing from the right side. Write the missing number.

9. Underline the two words that do not belong with the others: Syrup, milk, water, beer, wine, honey
10. Underline the two words that are nearly opposite in meaning: punish, annoy, spank, ignore, chastise, pacify

Scoring: Give yourself one point for each correct answer. You get an additional two points if you finished the test in less than five minutes; one point if you completed it in less than 10 minutes.

- 10-12 points: You are probably highly intelligent and an excellent candidate for membership in Mensa.
9 points: Chances are you rank among the top of the population in intelligence. You are certainly a candidate for Mensa.
5-6 points: A most honorable score, and one that indicates you should probably try the at-home Mensa test.
Less than 5: You are probably not Mensa material, but you're in good company with many successful businessmen, writers, artists and other well-known figures who don't have exceptional IQs either.

CIA refugees find job-hunting tough

WASHINGTON — The CIA has announced that it plans to slash 820 clandestine agents from its payroll. These are cloak and dagger men and women, and their training has probably not prepared them for a job in the private sector.

The contents and seal it again so nobody will be the wiser. 'Are you saying you'd like to work in the mail room?' 'Not exactly. But you asked me what I could do.'

ART BUCHWALD

'I can fix a guy's drink so he'll pass out in two minutes.' 'That's interesting, but that isn't usually the way we treat our buyers.'

'You must have been in an extraordinary business before you were laid off.' 'I can't talk about it. You see this pen? It looks like an ordinary pen, right? But the ink is mixed with truth serum. You spill a drop of this ink on a man's hand and he'll start babbling secrets that he wouldn't believe.'

Nixon's expenses examined

By MARTHA ANGLE and ROBERT WALTERS SAN FRANCISCO — Documents in government files here, never before seen by the press or public, provide fascinating new information about Richard Nixon's reclusive life since he resigned from the presidency more than three years ago.

The previously unpublicized materials show how Nixon has spent the $150,000 in federal funds allotted to him each year, under terms of the former Presidents Act, for staff and office expenses.

autographed pictures. 'When we left the White House, everything was confiscated,' complains Nixon's chief aide, former Marine Corps Lt. Col. John V. Brennan.

$14,700 for postage during the three post-White House years. In the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30, $103,000 of the $150,000 office expense account was used to pay for staff salaries and fringe benefits.

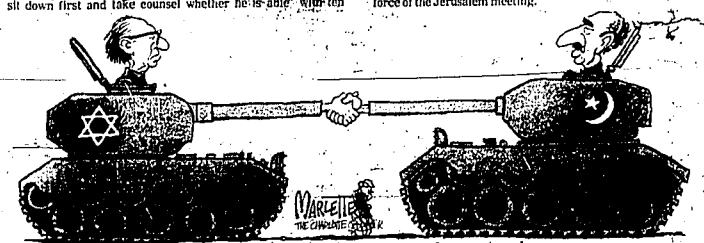

Israel, Egypt still miles apart

WASHINGTON — The startling political events of this Thanksgiving Week can hardly be understood without paying some attention to the moral and religious convictions of President Sadat of Egypt and Prime Minister Begin of Israel, a couple of true believers who, like Jimmy Carter, proclaimed their religious faith before they took office.

For which of you, desiring to build a tower, does not first sit down and count the cost, whether he has enough to complete it? Otherwise, when he has laid a foundation, and is not able to finish, all who see it begin to mock him, saying, 'This man began to build, and was not able to finish.'

thousand-to meet him who comes against him with twenty thousand? And if not, while the other is a great way off, he sends an embassy and asks terms of peace.

Obviously, Begin and Sadat have to descend from theology to geography at some point fairly soon, but after almost 30 years of trying unsuccessfully to resolve this Middle East problem by force of arms, it is not unreasonable to take a few weeks to think about the unifying force of the Jerusalem meeting.

Ann Kreilkamp, your columns appreciated

Editor, Times-News:

I am writing this letter hoping to express my gratitude to Anne Kreilkamp for her recent columns. It takes great courage and personal faith for someone to share such deep thoughts.

I, too, have traveled similar emotional, mental and physical roads as she has (and, I believe, as we humans have). As a typical human in this society, I am caught in a path of self-doubt. I do not make the effort to openly express my views of social situations that I see as destructive to humanity. The ingrained need to be socially accepted has kept me trapped in silence.

I, too, believe within each of us dwells a beautiful spiritual soul. If only each of us would conclusively search this out — wpa, what a truly loving and environmentally sound world we would create.

Thank you, Anne, for stirring my internal consciousness! I have lots to work on.

Second reader agrees

Editor, Times-News:

We live not only our own lives but, whether we know it or not, also the lives of others.

Laurens van der Post

I have been enjoying Ann Kreilkamp's articles and know that the experiences she relates are common symptoms of our time, and yet seldom are they openly expounded upon. The reason for this is obvious: When she speaks of — is sometimes threatening, sometimes painful and often changes and thought. Whether we agree to follow or even examine the challenge it will still be there, for we do not think and rethink our attitudes and listen, however difficult, to the inner-voice, then we have lost life itself.

Ms. Kreilkamp is taking us through her spiritual development with her and that is a gift of courage and love. She should be commended for it, not criticized.

Wendell teacher asks for public comment

Editor, Times-News:

On the evening of Nov. 14, I attended the Wendell school board meeting with a request for a trial proposal. I feel that the news release concerning the proposal was taken out of context and consequently did myself, members of our faculty, school administrators and the several board members that supported this proposal a grave injustice. The way the news release made it sound, the instructors wanted to be on the job before the students got there and leave right after school making it impossible for the parents to get extra help.

Nothing could be further from the intent of this proposal. It was designed to encourage teachers to make themselves available to students or parents anytime by appointment, including before school, noon breaks and after school.

Wendell has a serious logistical problem which makes it very difficult for a high percentage of our students to get help after school. Wendell being a rural community has a high percentage of its students riding buses. School gets out at 3 p.m. and the buses leave as soon after that as possible. If you consider the number of students that are involved with athletics at that time, you will see that only a very small part of the students are available when the teachers are available.

Some people contend that parents don't mind coming in to get their children. If they stayed after school for extra help. This may be true, unless, both parents work, they live a stable distance from school, or are concerned about 60-70 cent per gallon gasoline.

I contend that if a parent, teacher, or student feels extra help or a conference is needed, it would be much easier to set up a before school or preferably a noon appointment where both the student and teacher can bring a sack lunch and get the job done without forcing parents to make unnecessary trips.

This letter is in no way an attempt to detract from the fine job your board is doing, but rather an attempt to get out the true feelings of our students and patrons.

If you have feelings either way concerning this proposal please make your feelings known to you, Wendell school board members. Please do it now as the student you're helping may be your own.

Women's conference called destructive

Editor, Times-News:

The I.W.O. Convention in Houston epitomizes the drive in this country to destroy all that is decent and especially to destroy the family unit and morality. How long will decent Americans put up with this perversion in the name of women's rights?

Congressman George Hansen has filed suit in the U.S. District Court to stop the collection of federal funds by the National Commission on the Observance of International Women's Year (I.W.O.Y.). The Congressman charged that the Commission illegally spent federal appropriations on lobbying efforts for the Equal Rights Amendment. Specifically, "General Accounting Office reports the I.W.O.Y. Commission used appropriated funds for lobbying and had cooperated in the illegal diversion of executive agency funds and personnel" for the advancement of such issues as passage of the Equal Rights Amendment, federally subsidized child care, legalization of prostitution, lesbianism, and other radical goals.

Senate hearings in September revealed illegal activities of I.W.O.Y. according to Congressman Hansen. "These testifying reported incidences of rigged elections, open discrimination against I.W.O.Y. supporters, the promotion of lesbianism, and the misuse of federal funds."

The suit filed by Congressman Hansen would stop the Commission from making any more federal funds, and would bar the other agencies from making any more such illegal subsidies. Also the suit would have to account for all monies spent and receive reimbursement to the government for all illegally spent monies.

We should support Congressman Hansen for his Constitutional stand against the illegal activities of the I.W.O.Y.

Inflation-fighter Christmas gifts

SHOPPING NOTES — Santa's elves must be losing the fight against inflation like the rest of us.

Virtually everything the North Pole workshops sent down for this year's Christmas gifts is more expensive than last year's.

Down vests, albino, perfumes, even rabbits have gone up in price since the last shipment from the North.

Santa's marketing department forgot Christmas clothes don't have to come in cashmere and velvet. New power tools could use one less accessory if one zero could be erased from the price tag.

No, Virginia, it's not easy to put packages under the tree for less than $10 a whack.

But it's possible.

From the back pages of magazines, in catalogs from Oshkosh, Wisconsin, and by carefully searching through the seldom-walked aisles of stores, Christmas bargains of 1977 can be found.

Don't confuse a bargain with a lemon. Plenty of rock 'n' roll belt buckles from last year will be resolved this yuletide season. Avoid last year's unsold merchandise, even if it does cost less than $10.

The real trick when shopping for Christmas on a tight budget is not to insult the receiver of an admittedly modest token of Christmas spirit.

The under $10 gifts must have a touch of class, or humor, or both.

Here's a list of 10 Christmas gift suggestions which might pass for something clever rather than something cheap:

1. Package of cactus plant seeds, 15c
2. A curious little gift which, in time, could grow into a conversation piece. Available from R. H. Slumway, Seedman, Rockford, Illinois 61111
3. Pizza jig saw puzzle, $3.95
4. Don't eat it, complete it. This 16-inch puzzle with 310 pieces comes complete with onions, peppers, tomatoes, sausage and cheese. Available from Miles Kimball catalog, 41 West 8th Ave. Oshkosh, Wisconsin 54901
5. Pamphlet on How to Order Your Dinner in a Chinese Restaurant, $1.80
6. Step-by-step instructions on how to read an all-Chinese menu and go about ordering a meal. Available from Box 248, Station B, Ottawa, Canada K1P6C4
7. Foreign language T-shirt, $6.95
8. Would go well with Chinese dinner pamphlet. List of available languages and translations of the message on shirt available from Box 3301A, Madison, Wisconsin 53715
9. Enter my Youth Car bed plans, $4
10. Build your son a bed which looks like an

Indianapolis 500 race car. Build yourself one if you think the boss won't fire you. Plans for the plywood bed (STP decals not included) available from Hammond Barnes Dept. FH75, Box 581, New Castle, Indiana 47362

6. Paper dollhouse with paper furniture, $5.95
7. A charming bit of Art Deco design for a daughter. The dollhouse comes complete from Rainy Day Press, Box 471-A, Saukialto, California 94965

N.Y. 11530.

8. Biomaté, biorhythm calculator, $9.95
9. An inexpensive device usable for making every decision in daily life. Charting your biorhythms lets you know when to walk to work because you will find a $20 bill and when to not walk because you are going to be run over by a car. Available from Biomaté, Dept. N700, Chicago, Illinois 60610
10. Lightweight windmeter, $7.95
11. If you already walk to work without the Biomaté, the windmeter can tell you when to get in out of the wind. The little gadget measures winds up to 100 mph. After that, you blow away. Comes complete with pipe cleaners, for some reason, through Lands End, 2317 N. Elston Ave. Chicago, Illinois 60614
12. Wildlife Old Maid cards, $1.25
13. A novel idea for an old game, this packet of 41 cards features the Old Maid Duck which nobody, I mean nobody, wants to get stuck holding at the end of a game. Available from the National Wildlife Federation, 1412 16th Street N.W. Washington, D.C. 20036
14. There you have it, a list of 10 Christmas presents for under $10 which might bring a smile and a thank-you December 25th.
15. If not, isn't it better to give a $10 present nobody likes than a $100 one?

Mid-East political distance still enormous

By N.Y. Times Service

JERUSALEM — Prime Minister Menachem Begin declared emotionally last Sunday that "the distance between Cairo and Jerusalem is short," but until President Anwar el-Sadat arrived here, that distance was "almost infinite."

Although the two leaders have now met face to face, it is clear that the political distance separating them remains enormous.

In their speeches before the Israeli parliament, each repeated his side's basic positions with one crucial exception — Sadat said explicitly in front of the Israeli parliament that "we welcome you to live among us in permanent peace with justice."

The understanding of what constitutes justice and what can make peace permanent, however, seemed as contradictory as before. If there is to be any movement toward compromise, it would have to come in the private talks that began Saturday night, continued Sunday and will go on Monday.

East seemed something of a letdown. Yet that was a minor matter in the long history of the Arab-Israeli struggle compared with the fact that for the first time the two most important leaders in the area were actually talking to each other and presumably probing for points of flexibility.

Menachem Begin ISRAEL

Those talks in themselves, however, were a major and possibly decisive change in the tortuous Middle East conflict. They created a personal stake for both Sadat and Begin in advancing negotiations, even though neither one yet felt ready to give any public sign of a willingness for compromise.

Sadat was clear and firm in restating his dedication both to the principal Arab demands and to an overall settlement that would provide for the Palestinians as well as for the Arab states on Israel's borders. But he did not refer to the Palestine Liberation Organization by name.

Anwar Sadat EGYPT

It was a declaration of Arab solidarity, even a renunciation of the Egyptian leadership of the Arab cause, despite the vehement attacks that other Arabs have made against Sadat since he announced his plan to visit Israel.

His physical presence here, his acceptance of Israel's right to exist, and his dramatic appeal for peace constituted his offer.

Begin went as far, but no further. A significant element in his speech was the omission of an explicit refusal to deal with the PLO and to withdraw from the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River.

Carter still pledging open government

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Lyndon Johnson used to say that the people should be in on the takeoffs as well as the landings.

It was a democratic credo which he rarely, if ever followed, given his penchant for secrecy and wanting to pull off successes to surprise his detractors.

He was not unique. His predecessors and successors governed by fall accompli in an era when presidential power was growing and there were few restraints by Congress.

This time, it is the opponents of the SALT terms who are going public. To rally opposition to a new agreement with the Soviets, some who have access to the U.S. negotiating positions are leaking the information. As a result, the administration has been put on the defensive before it reaches an agreement and the Russians are chagrined to see the superpowers' nuclear bargaining in print.

Last week, Carter told a group of editors:

"That is one of the most difficult things I have had to face in Washington — how to deal with breaches of secrecy. It is obvious that the American people need to know what is going on, but I am not in a position as president to go to the American people and reveal our negotiating positions when I and President Brezhnev, our negotiators and the Soviet negotiators, have agreed to keep the negotiating points confidential until some agreement is reached.

"I think the revelation of the details of our negotiating position has been ill-advised in some instances," he added. "I don't know where the blame lies."

In the end, it will not be the fact that the American people are privy to the facts that would blow up a new nuclear limitation agreement; it rather would be the failure of both sides to decide on how much is necessary to keep the balance of terror.

In the name of consultation, LBJ used to invite 50 governors or 100 congressmen to the East Room to adopt a resolution rubber stamping his Vietnam War policies.

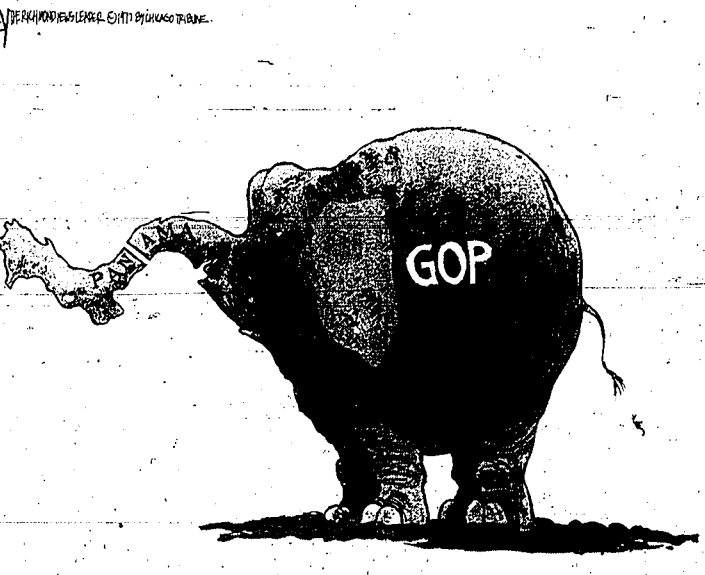

Every president comes to power pledging an "open administration." But the "Pentagon Papers" and much that has been written since concerning both the Johnson and Richard Nixon years reveal how much was kept from the public and how much distorted information the government conveyed.

When Jimmy Carter came to power, he promised to keep the lines of communication open and to bring the public in on the dialogue when major policies were being developed. In the case of the Panama Canal treaties, the level of public debate before a ratification vote in the Senate has been unusual.

While Carter undoubtedly would have preferred a quick vote after the treaty signings, he was assured by Senate leaders that it would mean a quick defeat. And so, the White House was embarked on an educational "selling" campaign and in the public dialogue, Carter was forced to go back to Panamanian leader Omar Torrijos for further commitments that the United States would be able to defend the canal after control was transferred to Panama.

The debate is continuing and probably will until a Senate vote early next year, but the administration appears to be gaining converts in the process, and the people are becoming more aware of the facts on which to base their own judgments.

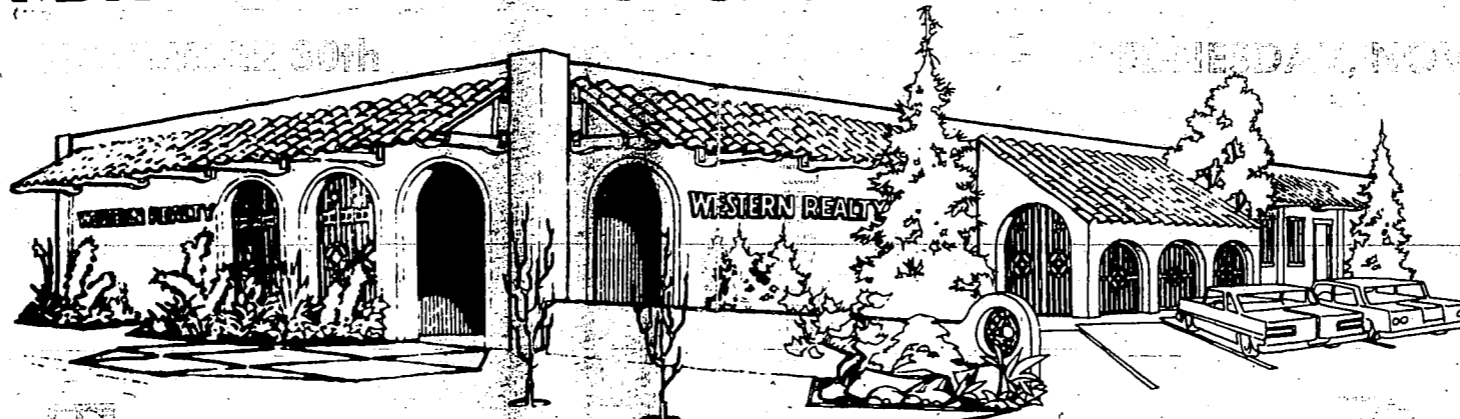

In the case of strategic arms limitation negotiations with the Soviets, Carter began by laying out his far-reaching proposals to the public; much to the annoyance of the Russians and the conservation of veteran diplomats. The reaction was so strong that Carter retreated into quieter talks with the Soviets.

Elvis fans huddle outside gate

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — About a hundred fans huddled in below freezing weather Saturday at the gates to Elvis Presley's estate, some vowing to wait all night, if necessary, in order to be on hand for the first public tour of the singer's gravesite today.

There were no lines during the afternoon. Instead the fans milled around, swapping Elvis stories, snapping photographs of Graceland Mansion and listening to radios. Many were out-of-town visitors who said they had arranged for motel rooms for the night.

A fan from Tulsa, Okla., said however, that she would keep an all-night vigil in order to be among the first group of 25 people permitted to walk up the winding driveway Sunday to the garden where Presley and his mother, Gladys, are buried.

"I might freeze to death," said Sandy Baker, "but I'll do whatever I have to get in to see him."

Another group, sitting snugly in a heated mobile home parked in a small area where cars are allowed outside the 13.8 acre estate, also made overnight plans.

"I'll do what I have to do to get in that line," said Mildred Crews of Princeton, La. "We came to see what we can of what's left of Elvis. If we could, we'd take him home with us."

Vernon Presley, the late singer's father, announced Friday that free public visits to the graves would be permitted each week from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Tuesday through Sunday. The grounds will be closed every Monday for maintenance of the gravesites. No one will be allowed inside the mansion itself, where Presley lived in seclusion and where he was found dead of a heart ailment Aug. 16.

The singer's father, alarmed at a reported plot to snatch his son's body for ransom, eventually had the bodies of Presley and his mother, who died in 1958, moved to the garden.

"It seemed to be the most beautiful place on the grounds," he said. "He (Elvis) always liked it."

Atop the graves are bronze plaques on pink granite bases. Vernon Presley wrote the inscription on his son's marker:

"He was a precious gift from God. We cherished and loved him dearly. ... It reads, 'He became a living legend in his own time ... God saw that he needed some rest and called him home to be with him.'"

ERA draws support of men's movement

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Passage of the Equal Rights Amendment would reduce such pressures on men as the demand to be a business success, a leader of the men's movement claims.

Sam July, a founder of the Men's Center in New York City and opening speaker Friday at the Fourth National Conference on Men and Masculinity, said the men's movement is trying to change the view that men have to be successful in the business world.

"I'm not knocking success," July said. "I'm knocking the demand for success — the feeling that anything less than success detracts from your masculinity. 'ERA would tangibly benefit men, not just be an idealistic move closer to democracy. Without restrictions because of sex, men who want to be nursery-school teachers or nurses or typists would be helped.'"

July, 50, a divorced father and grandfather, said the men's movement and women's movement are not opposites but complement one another.

"This is not a battle of the sexes, that men are better than women, or women better than men," he said. "Women say to men 'Get off our backs.' Men can't say that to women — they have to say it to the system."

July said people of all ages and classes see the appeal of the men's movement.

Actor's condition critical

CHICAGO (UPI) — Actor Cyril Ritchard, who frightened a generation of children with his portrayal of Captain Hook in "Peter Pan" was in critical condition Saturday in the coronary care unit of Northwestern Memorial Hospital.

Ritchard, 78, collapsed Friday during a matinee performance of the musical "Side by Side by Sondheim." He had been playing the role of narrator in the show.

Stage manager John Grigas said Ritchard had just made an exit through the audience at the in-the-round performance in the Drury Lane Theater in Water Tower Place when he collapsed in the aisle.

Grigas told the 900 persons attending the show that Ritchard had been stricken, then took Ritchard's role himself for the last 15 minutes of the performance.

Theater-goers honored the stricken Ritchard with a standing ovation at the close of the show.

Hospital officials described Ritchard's condition as "critical and highly unstable" Saturday.

Dogs solve drug disguises

SINGAPORE (UPI) — Dogs' noses are 100,000 times more sensitive than those of man in sniffing out narcotics even when the drugs are disguised by other odors, a U.S. delegate to the first Narcotic Detector Dog Conference said Saturday.

A report prepared for the conference, opening Monday, said such dogs have made 9,000 seizures of narcotics worth $100 million in the United States alone.

Laird D. Allshouse of the International Operations Division of the U.S. Customs Service told a news conference that Singapore was selected for the U.S.-sponsored conference because of the commitment and enthusiasm the island republic showed in its new narcotics detector dog program.

Singapore Customs Senior Director Liao Long Sing said 34 nations use dogs to detect narcotics shipments and the program is expanding steadily.

Among nations represented at the five-day conference will be the United States, Britain, Canada, West Germany, Hong Kong, Indonesia, Japan, Malaysia, New Zealand, the Philippines and Thailand.

Allshouse said 112 dogs, mostly Alsations, are working at drug detection in the United States. Each dog averaged at least one seizure every four working days in the past year.

He said the dogs' working life averages five to six years although one dog had been in service nine years.

He said dogs have an odor detection and identification ability 100,000 times greater than man.

Allshouse said they could be trained to detect contraband narcotics even when it is heavily disguised and protected by other smells such as chlorine or heavy wax.

Jury socks cosmetic firm

GREENEVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — An 84-year-old woman was awarded $1.5 million from the Revlon Co. Friday on her claim that one of the firm's products turned her face a "muddy color."

It took a federal court jury about four hours to decide on the award to Lelia Dean of Kingsport, Tenn.

The verdict stipulated $1 million in punitive damages and $500,000 in compensatory damages.

In her suit, Mrs. Dean said Revlon's product "Esoterica" caused her face to turn a "muddy color" and gave her mercury poisoning.

The woman said she had used the skin cream for 25 years. During a stay in a hospital for treatment of a skin ailment in 1973, she said God came to her in a vision and told her the face cream was responsible.

Guest of honor missing but celebration goes on

ARIEL, Wash. (UPI) — Buffalo stew sold for a dollar a bowl at a party for hijacker-parachutist D.B. Cooper in this small town Saturday but neither the honored guest nor any sign of his $200,000 showed up.

"We've sold quite a few bowls," said Mary Tricoia, daughter of Germaine and Vince Tricoia, hosts for the affair. "Lots of people are coming by. But we haven't seen Cooper."

Cooper parachuted from an airliner somewhere in the vicinity with 20,000 $10 bills on Thanksgiving Eve 1971.

And the town of Ariel, population 400, keeps throwing annual parties for the legendary hijacker who disappeared without a trace.

"We'll just keep giving him parties till he comes," said Tricoia at his Ariel Store and Tavern. "Who knows? Maybe he'll show up yet."

No trace has ever been found of the money.

The hijacker, who called himself "Dan Cooper" when he bought his ticket from Portland, Ore., to Seattle, threatened the crew of the Northwest Airlines 727 with a gun and showed a note demanding four parachutes and $200,000.

After the 36 other passengers had left the plane in Seattle and he received the money and parachutes, Cooper ordered the pilot to fly the plane to Reno, Nev.

He was not aboard when the plane landed at Reno and crew members told authorities that thought Cooper had parachuted somewhere in southwestern Washington.

On Thanksgiving 1976 there was excitement over a possible clue to his fate. But the FBI decided that a pair of trousers found in the area where Cooper disappeared could not have been his.

The FBI said Cooper probably died when he parachuted from the plane.

Experts agree that Cooper could not have escaped serious injury or instant death even assuming his parachute opened.

Costly hit

BIRMINGHAM, England (UPI) — A jealous husband who hit a workmate he wrongly suspected of being his wife's lover cost the British Leyland automotive company $3.6 million.

The company lost 800 cars — estimated value $3.6 million — when 3,000 workers walked out Friday to protest the dismissal of the hot-tempered husband, who was not identified.

FBI pulled dirtiest trick on Chicago Nazi official

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Chicago office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation engaged in "dirty tricks" against the city's branch of the National Socialist Party in order to neutralize its newly released FBI documents show.

Among its disruptive tactics, the Chicago office leaked information to national Nazi officials, and perhaps the press, that the father of Frank Collin, the Chicago Nazi chief, was a Jew. This previously secret fact led to Collin's expulsion from the party. And he later set up a rival group, the National Socialist Party of America.

The FBI also sent an anonymous letter to Collin's superiors at Nazi national headquarters in Arlington, Va., accusing him of disloyalty to the party's leaders.

Bureau agents, the new files show, also worked closely with the Chicago Police Department in harassing local Nazis. On at least one occasion, a tip from the bureau about Nazi activities led to the April 19, 1970, arrest of Collin and four of his followers, who were found in possession of weapons.

An FBI informant also produced information that the one-time Nazi headquarters was in violation of many city building codes. Tipped about this data, city officials paid the building several visits to check on allegations that it was a "firetrap."

These disclosures about bureau activities became public this week after the FBI released heavily censored pages from the COINTELPRO files, following a freedom of information request.

COINTELPRO was the code name for an FBI program that called for harassment, disruption and discrediting of dissident domestic political groups during the 1960s and early 1970s. In addition to the Nazis, the bureau also played dirty tricks on the Ku Klux Klan, the Black Panther Party, the Socialist Workers Party, the U.S. Communist Party and the Students for a Democratic Society, among others.

Such dirty tricks included sending anonymous letters, printing up phony, damaging pamphlets and flyers, infiltrating groups with undercover agents, and encouraging violence between such groups.

Probably the most devastating thing the bureau did to Collin was to inform the national Nazi leadership of his Jewish past.

The bureau considered Collin to be the financial and driving force behind Nazi activities in Illinois. And an Oct. 23, 1969, memo concluded that "knowledge that (Collin) is partially Jewish to his associates and Arlington should eliminate his activities."

That same October memo shows that the FBI also considered leaking Collin's Jewish past to the press. But the files are hazy on whether this actually was done.

On April 22, 1970, all major Chicago newspapers ran the story that Collin's father, Max Cohen, was a German Jew who had changed his name to Collin.

Agency duped 'plants'

NEW YORK (UPI) — Frank Snapp, former CIA strategy analyst and author of a book on intelligence activities there, said in a weekend interview four American reporters there were used by the CIA to plant information.

However, he stressed in the interview on the UPI Round Table, the four were "honorable men, in no way agents and not on the CIA payroll."

"They trusted us," he said. "We planted information with them and hoped it got into print. They were independent but at our mercy" because they were dependent on access to information.

Describing the reporters as "among the best in Vietnam, with high credibility," he said they would always attempt to check the information with their sources as well.

As an example of their integrity, he said, the CIA at one point tried to recruit one of the four, but he flatly refused.

Snapp's book "Decent Interval" describes the CIA's operations in South Vietnam during the final days. It was written in violation of the oath of secrecy he took on joining the organization.

He said that a major reason for the confusion, pain and surprise at the end of the war was the failure of the "men at the top" in Washington to trust the information sent to them by lower-level functionaries in Saigon.

Pulls out

UNITED Mine Workers president Arnold Miller declared a nationwide coal strike beginning Dec. 1, "appears to be inevitable" after breaking off contract negotiations with the soft coal industry Friday. No date was set to resume the recessed talks.

Treaties gain nod by Meany

WASHINGTON (UPI) — AFL-CIO President George Meany said Saturday that as reason people will support the Panama Canal treaties.

In a signed editorial in the labor group's monthly magazine, "The Federationist," Meany called the treaties "a solid piece of statesmanship."

He said the treaties will guarantee the rights of workers in the Canal Zone, including both Panamanians and U.S. citizens; insure the security of the canal; and improve relations between the two nations.

"As reason replaces emotion in this debate," Meany said, "we are confident the treaties proposed by President Carter will receive the support of the American people."

The AFL-CIO executive council voted unanimously Aug. 30 to urge the Senate to ratify the treaties.

Meany said the treaties represent personal and political gain from opposition to the treaties, seek to make this issue one of national pride, Meany said.

"We believe the American people would have much to be proud of in the fact that their country does not want to become a colonial power, clutching a territory only semi-sovereignly over a faded banner of past glory."

Actor dies

ENCINO, Calif. (UPI) — Richard Carlson, the veteran actor who was probably best known for his role in the long-running television series "Lad, Three Lives" during the 1950s, has died from the effects of a cerebral hemorrhage.

Carlson, 65, suffered the hemorrhage Nov. 15 and never regained consciousness. He died in a hospital Friday.

A family spokesman said the actor's body will be cremated and private funeral services will be held, probably Sunday.

Nader sends feds proof car defect records kept

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ralph Nader Saturday sent the federal government proof that auto makers keep detailed records of the defects in their cars and said federal safety experts should subpoena copies.

From auto companies since 1974, but has done so only once. He said NHTSA should use its powers "to compel the Ford Motor Co. to provide copies of its weekly, monthly and other warranty claim analyses."

already done so, and providing the government copies would involve little more than printing costs. "Since the other automotive manufacturers undoubtedly prepare similar analyses in the normal course of their business," he said, "I request that the Department of Transportation assemble every million — $8.4 million — of any warranty obligation."

Oregon inundated

HEAVY RAIN, runoff from melting snow on the Coast Range and high tides combined to send the Coquille River near Myrtle Point, Ore., out of its banks Friday. County emergency services kept watch over a dozen county roads such as this one closed by the flooding.

Arctic blast roars eastward

By United Press International
A wintry blast surged across the northlands Saturday, spreading road-clogging snows and sending temperatures plummeting to arctic depths.

More than 1½ feet of snow clogged portions of northern Indiana Friday night and Saturday. South Bend, Ind., reported 19 inches of snow. Indiana State police reported Fulton and Marshall counties snowbound, with every road in the two-county area closed early Saturday.

Several inches of snow piled up on Ohio roads and another six inches of snow was forecast in some areas. Snow also spread from parts of Pennsylvania, West Virginia and New York to New England. Brisk winds and light snows swept through parts of Minnesota, Iowa, Wisconsin, Michigan and the Dakotas. Bitter cold settled in over the midlands, turning melting snow to ice on highways and making Thanksgiving weekend travel hazardous. The temperature hit 20 below zero at International Falls, Minn., Saturday. The mercury fell to a 16-below at Minneapolis-St. Paul Saturday, a record low for the date, shattering the previous record of 7 below set in 1898. Temperatures of 17-below at St. Cloud, Minn., and 12 below at Rochester, Minn., also broke records set in 1896. Other records included a 13-below reading in Minneapolis, Iowa, and a 10-below one at Spencer, Iowa. The mercury dipped to 17 degrees at Evansville, Ind., on the banks of the Ohio River. The temperature was the coldest recorded in 120 years at southern Indiana in the 20th Century. Chicago's temperature dipped to 4 degrees Saturday. Two men died of heart attacks Friday while shoveling snow where up to five inches

WASHINGTON — An alleged $100-million over-run in the cost of the nation's space shuttle program is raising questions in Capitol Hill. Sen. ## Washington rivers near flood level

SNOQUALMIE, Wash. (UPI) — Rain-swollen rivers near or above flood levels threatened 25 homes and forced evacuation of four families in the Snoqualmie River basin and 5,000 sandbags were distributed to residents, authorities said Saturday.

Four families were evacuated from Snoqualmie late Friday night and about 25 more homes are in jeopardy, said police chief Bill Massey. The Snohomish County Department of Emergency Services kept close watch on the Snohomish River, which caused extensive damage to farm lands in 1975. The Lewis County sheriff's office reported roadblocks for flooded roads were being prepared and dikes were being watched to insure flood control. An intense storm swept over the state Friday, bringing nearly 2½ inches of rain to coastal areas. Most rivers in western Washington were very high and flood stages are expected to crest at 2½ feet, which is flood stage at that location. Major rivers in Snohomish County south of the Snohomish County were predicted to crest later Saturday. The Snohomish River was expected to crest at 2½ feet, a half foot above flood stage. The Snohomish River was expected to crest at 2½ feet, which is flood stage at that location.

Kentucky farmers stage protest parade

MADISONVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Several hundred western Kentucky farmers demanding guaranteed farm profits staged a 75-tractor parade through Madisonville Saturday to publicize their demands for a fair return for farm products.

Farmers in pickup trucks and other farm vehicles joined those on tractors parading for an hour through this western Kentucky coal-producing town in 20-degree temperatures. Mayor Curtis McCoy Jr. earlier Saturday earlier refused to let the representatatives of a farmers' group called American Agriculture join the annual Christmas parade sponsored by the Downtown Retail Merchants Association. But the group was issued a permit to hold its own parade through town along another route two hours before the scheduled Christmas parade. Martin McCracken, of Anton, Colo., had conducted a rally for western Kentucky farmers last Wednesday night to discuss the demonstration, similar to Florida's plant demonstration at Plant, Fla.

New plutonium exposure rules drawn

DENVER (UPI) — The Environmental Protection Agency said new regulations proposed to limit exposure to plutonium at the Rocky Flats nuclear weapons plant and other facilities are awaiting approval by President Carter.

Other primary targets of the EPA regulations are the Trinity Test Site, Alamogordo, N.M.; Nevada Test Site, southern Nevada, and Mound Laboratory, Miamisburg, Ohio. Douglas M. Costle, EPA administrator, said adoption of the regulations probably would require remedial action such as plowing contaminated land, covering contaminated areas with oils, plastics or asphalt, or actual removal of the upper layers of soil for burial. He estimated it would cost at least $500 per acre to reclaim contaminated land. He said the regulations were approved by the EPA to ensure health protection for people living near federal facilities that use radioactive plutonium. If the regulations are adopted, people exposed to the suggested EPA limit of plutonium would have one chance in a million of contracting cancer that year.

Horror or staged blast?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sometime in or about 1958, in a city east of the Ural Mountains, at the gateway to the vastness of the Eastern Soviet Union, a nuclear explosion occurred.

"It miraculously known for sure," said it, as some earlier reports stated, claim hundreds or thousands of radiation victims and contaminate foodstuffs for miles around? Or was it just a staged explosion filmed for civil defense purposes?

The answer is not clear and hasn't been for years. But newly released CIA documents provide western readers with more detail than ever before.

The agency has released to a U.S. citizens' group reports it compiled about the explosion at the city of Kyshtym — an explosion, reports said, "that left behind 'a vast nothing.'"

That kind of horror story squared with information circulating for years in Europe. But in the material released Friday, the CIA paints a far different picture.

A declassified Jan. 21 report, drawing on hundreds of accounts from intelligence agents to Soviet dissidents, broke from the idea of a hideous blast caused untold human suffering.

Instead, it said, the explosion was deliberate and took place in an empty, mock city to test the effects of an atomic war attack.

The CIA document said a Soviet film of the test in 1957 or 1958 showed a completely new village was built in a Ural Mountains valley.

The inhabitants of the village were goats and sheep and the post-explosion photography showed the effects of a nuclear blast upon animal life as well as building materials," the CIA report said. "Military equipment was placed around the village and the effects of the explosion upon armaments of war also were depicted in the film."

"The bomb was described as a 20-megaton device which was dropped from an airplane ... The blast, virtually was eliminated."

This report concluded that it was possible the "nuclear accident" so widely reported by Soviet emigres and others was merely "the event recorded by a Soviet camera crew...."

Rhodesia talks in works

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI) — Black nationalist leader Bishop Abel Muzorewa

Saturday accepted Prime Minister Ian Smith's invitation to negotiate a one man, one

know we can go ahead without them."

He also said he wants all black parties, including his rivals of the militant, guerrilla-backed, patriotic front, to take part. "but we are not going to wait for anybody who may not be interested."

Meanwhile, the Rhodesian military command said Saturday 38 blacks were killed in the past 48 hours, but had no comment on reports Rhodesian troops are carrying out their heaviest anti-guerrilla operations yet in neighboring Mozambique.

Muzorewa said "we take very seriously" Smith's desire for a settlement which will keep whites from fleeing Rhodesia.

The acceptance by Muzorewa, president of the United African National Council, meant all three black leaders Smith invited have agreed to a constitutional conference aimed at bringing majority rule to Rhodesia.

The other two are the Rev. Ndabani Silehlo and tribal chief Jeremiah Chirau.

"In a way, Mr. Smith has capitulated and succumbed to our demand for a transfer of power on the basis of universal adult suffrage," the United Methodist bishop told some 300 supporters meeting at a soccer stadium in a black township of Salisbury.

"We say fine, Mr. Smith. Let us talk."

Muzorewa expressed the belief Smith is sincere when he says he will agree to adult suffrage providing safeguards for minorities are incorporated in a settlement.

Muzorewa said Smith has told him he wants a settlement designed to retain the confidence of whites so that they don't flee. "We take that request very seriously," he said.

Muzorewa called on Britain to organize the proposed conference, but "if the British dither and delay, then we shall

REV. Ndabani Silehlo, president of the Zimbabwe African National Union, said in Los Angeles Friday black African leaders will test the sincerity of the white Rhodesian government in talks, but there will not be an immediate end to the guerrilla war in that nation. Silehlo will participate in the talks.

Pretoria may agree

DAILY TELEGRAPH London

PRETORIA — The South African government is expected to give up backing to Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith's new plans to forge ahead with plans for an internal settlement with black leaders inside his country.

No official comment on Smith's latest moves "was forthcoming from Pretoria but foreign ministry sources said South Africa had committed itself to encouraging a peaceful settlement in Rhodesia as soon as possible.

Smith has now offered to "steer" Rhodesia to black majority rule through one-man one-vote elections by means of an internal agreement between his white minority government and moderate black leaders to end the five-year civil war.

Devitt appointed Scout executive

TWIN FALLS — J. Michael Devitt, formerly of the Los Angeles, Calif. area, has joined the Snake River Area Boy Scout Council in Twin Falls as Scout executive for the Falls District.

He replaces Blaine Shaffer who has transferred to another area. Devitt will be working with cub and scout units in all of Twin Falls County and Jackpot, Nev. He has been involved professionally in scouting the past 12 years, having served in the executive capacity in Milwaukee, Wis., and in three different councils in the Los Angeles area.

In the Snake River Area Council, he will also be working with council Scout commissioners and the council's high adventure program and the LDS Church Blazer group leaders.

During summer months Devitt will be conducting white water trips on the Salmon River for Scouts and in winter months, plans to coach Boy Scout skiing programs.

He is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin in 1961 and has completed extension courses at the University of California, Los Angeles.

As a Boy Scout he earned a number of special awards including the Explorer, Silver Award and Order of the Arrow. "I think we have one of the most ideal year-around recreation facilities for boys and girls of this area at Camp Bradley I have seen. It is an ideal situation for cross-country skiing and other winter programs as well as the summer use," Devitt said.

He said he hopes to organize Explorer skiing posts in the Falls district to encourage both alpine and cross country skiing.

"The only thing we need to start these programs is some adult leadership and assistance from interested volunteers in the community," he said.

Bird population a problem in Tennessee

MILAN, Tenn. (UPI) — More than two million blackbirds, grackles and starlings are back at roosting grounds at the Milan Army Ammunition Plant, despite the extermination of more than 500,000 of the birds at the site last year.

Bob Fisher, West Tennessee district supervisor for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, said a count this week showed 2.3 million birds at the arsenal — an increase of more than 300,000 birds over last year. The migrating birds have caused problems for residents and farmers of Gibson County for several years and Fisher said the Fish and Wildlife Service is conducting a controlled study of the ever-increasing bird population in the area.

Larry Kimery, extension agent for Gibson County, said farmers already have begun complaining about the contamination of cattle and swine feeding troughs by the birds. Last year in response to the numerous complaints, the federal government approved a chemical spraying of the roosting area with Tertolol, a chemical that removes the protective coating from the birds' feather, causing them to freeze to death.

Fisher said this year, however, that methods other than chemical spraying will be used in attempts to control the bird population. He said one alternative is the use of Starlicide, a bird poison, non-toxic to swine and cattle, that can be placed in the feeding troughs.

Kimery said local farmers, who have seen alternatives fail before, have expressed doubts about this year's program.

"I'm going to try to cooperate with him (Fisher) as long as we can," Kimery said, "until the birds do so much damage that they will go along with a spraying."

$75,000 negligence suit filed in TF

TWIN FALLS — Cheryl Jordan, Twin Falls, is asking more than $75,000 in damages in a suit filed in 5th District court here on behalf of her child, Christopher Jordan.

The woman names George and Susan Driver as defendants in the suit, charging them with negligence in operating a day care center where Christopher was cared for when injured in a fall Oct. 19, 1977.

Mrs. Jordan also charges the couple failed to maintain a safe place for children to play and did not meet state standards as to safety and other factors in operating their day care center.

She asks $600 medical bills, $2,000 future medical costs, $23,000 general damages and $50,000 punitive damages, alleging her son suffered permanent injuries in a fall at the center located at 202 Blue Lakes Boulevard South.

Radioactivity study begins

IDAHO FALLS, Idaho (UPI) — A Colorado State University graduate student has undertaken the job of determining the effects of radioactivity on vegetation at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory near Idaho Falls.

O. Doyle Markham, a Department of Energy radio-ecologist at the Idaho facility, and Dr. Leslie Fraley Jr., of CSU's Department of Radiology and Radiation Biology.

Fraley said data obtained in the study is needed to accurately model the behavior of small radioactive particles and other non-radioactive contaminants released into the environment. He said the models are useful for predicting environmental effects on proposed facilities.

In the unlikely event of a large release of radioactivity to the environment, Fraley said, the ability to predict the amount and duration of radioactive contaminants on sagebrush and grass could be used to determine the possible hazard to people eating domestic stock and game animals which feed near the release.

The study is directed by Dr.

Miss Millard said a plant can be considered a collector of sink for airborne contaminants.

Gooding citizens resent Evans' prison remarks

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News Writer

GOODING — Several Gooding citizens have expressed resentment here over remarks made by Gov. John Evans earlier this week indicating there was "great support" for the women's prison being placed at the old Tuberculosis Hospital.

Several businessmen told the Times-News Friday that citizens are angry because Evans indicated the big turnout at the Nov. 10 public meeting in the Gooding High School was what they term "a put-up job."

During a television interview last Monday evening Gov. Evans said in part: "We were very concerned about the big turnout and the great opposition we received in the hearing there at Gooding. But afterwards we found that it had been promoted by a group that opposed the establishment of a women's prison... and we found there was great support for the prison being there."

The State Land Board approved by a 3 to 2 margin Nov. 17 the proposal of the State Board of Corrections to convert the state-owned facility at the edge of Gooding into a women's prison. The decision will mean the alcohol treatment center which has operated there the past 13 months will have to move, along with the senior citizens and some state offices.

The governor's remarks occurred during a news interview reporting that decision.

Bill Harman, Gooding businessman, said Friday he felt the governor "might have been questioning the honesty of those backing the alcohol center."

"Since the vote taken at the Nov. 10 public meeting the State Land Board held at the Gooding High School was overwhelmingly opposed to the prison I felt it was really a slap in the face," Harman said. "As if he was insinuating there was something dishonest about those backing the center and opposing the prison."

Harman said many people with whom he has spoken this week feel that the "governor had fully made up his mind on what he was going to do" before the public meeting which drew more than 300 persons.

Although various figures have been reported on the actual tally, all reports agree the straw vote taken at the Nov. 10 public meeting was roughly 3 to 1 against having the prison located in Gooding.

The Times-News reported the figure as 130 against the prison to 40 for, while Harman said he had arrived at tally of 130 to 25 by averaging individual counts from five persons at the meeting.

One of the five individuals originally was for the prison but has since changed his mind, Harman said, "because he thinks the people of Gooding have been poorly treated."

Another Gooding businessman, Leftoy Strout, said many persons this week have agreed that "we're getting this prison crammed down our throats whether we want it or not."

In addition to a letter Gooding Mayor Don Morrow submitted to the Land Board in which he said he felt he was representing the majority of Gooding residents in opposing the prison, Strout said petitions bearing some 400 signatures were presented to the board at the Nov. 10 meeting.

"With the petitions and the overwhelming show of opposition in the straw vote, Strout said he felt "Evans has completely overlooked the issue."

"If no one opposed the prison why was the high school auditorium filled with people standing in the hall?" he asked.

Strout also said he would like to know where the governor came up with the census he quoted at the hearing at the high school which he said showed only a few promoters had stirred up all the opposition.

"Evans said this census showed a majority of Gooding citizens favored the prison. Well, this definitely is not so," Strout declared. "I'd like to know how he came to this conclusion."

State Supl. Roy Truay and Auditor Joe Williams joined Gov. Evans in approving the prison move, while Atty. Gen. Wayne Kidwell and Secretary of State Pete Cenarrusa opposed it.

Dumas still critical

TWIN FALLS — Darrell Dumas, 16, Kimberly, remained in very critical condition Saturday at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital where he is being treated for injuries sustained in a traffic accident early Friday.

He was a passenger in the car driven by Nathan N. Jones, 18, Twin Falls who was killed when the vehicle crashed into a large truck and trailer on Addison Avenue East, two miles north of Kimberly.

Jones reportedly passed another vehicle which was stopped at a stop sign and drove onto Addison Avenue from the north.

$65,000 awarded

TWIN FALLS — A Castleford couple has been awarded $65,000 in damages by a Fifth Judicial District Court jury here in connection with the death of their eight-year-old son.

The jury awarded Ronald D. and Elizabeth Owen $65,000 in damages and funeral and ambulance expenses following several days of testimony here. Mr. and Mrs. Owen brought action against Roy and Susan Burcham after a vehicle driven by Susan Burcham and owned by her husband, struck and killed Randall C. Owen, 8.

The child was riding his bicycle along a road about one and one-half miles west of Castleford April 2, 1976 when the fatal accident occurred.

Two sentenced

TWIN FALLS — Two persons received sentences in Fifth District Court here Friday, both on felony check charges.

Judge Theron W. Ward revoked probation for Samuel Dee Barry, 21, Twin Falls, on evidence of parole violation. Barry was charged with three counts of insufficient fund checks and was placed on two year probation by the court when he appeared earlier. Judge Ward sentenced him to 60 days in the county jail.

Cathy Cook, 21, Twin Falls, was given a three-year state prison sentence on a felony check charge. She pleaded guilty to the charge. Judge Ward retained jurisdiction for 120 days after which she will again appear in court to determine if the sentence is to be enforced or the charge dropped.

November rainfall doubles

TWIN FALLS — As nearly half an inch of rain fell on Magic Valley Friday and Saturday, the month of November turned out to be twice as wet as normal and more rain is expected in the next three days.

During the 24 hours between Friday morning and Saturday morning, 4 1/2 inches of rain fell on already soggy valley fields and highways washing away the last traces of a nine-inch snowfall.

Total precipitation for the month now stands at one and three-fourths inches, nearly double the 33 inch normal figure supplied by the National Weather Service.

Last year as drought struck the valley, only .10 inch of precipitation fell during the month. "This has been a very fine beneficial moisture period," Maurice Faubion, national weather service, says. "It won't offset completely the effects of last year's drought, but it will help."

Jerome case now in Twin Falls court

TWIN FALLS — A suit brought by attorney S. A. Kolman, Jerome, against the city of Hazelton, has been transferred from Jerome to Twin Falls County at the request of the plaintiff who charges stories in a Jerome County newspaper have made it impossible to obtain an unbiased jury in Jerome County.

Kolman, represented by the law firm of Annett and Anderson, Burley, and the city of Hazelton, with James T. Jones as attorney, both stipulated to a change of venue motion which was approved by Judge James M. Cunningham. Kolman is seeking in additional $2,700 in attorney fees from the city of Hazelton. He charges he was employed by the city in 1973 to handle legal matters in connection with a municipal sewer project and was to have been paid 3 percent of the total project costs.

The project, he said, cost the city $359,000 and he was paid only $4,151.81 by the city and under terms of his contract was due a total of $6,809.35.

Kolman said news articles about the law suit and the subsequent city elections in Hazelton as pertaining to the suit would make it impossible to find a non-prejudiced jury in Jerome County to hear the case. No date has been set for the trial in Twin Falls County.

Plan could triple grazing costs

By KEN HODGE
Times-News writer

MAGIC VALLEY — Several of the Interior Cecil D. Andrus is proposing changes in federal grazing fee schedules which would bring rangeland fees up to fair market value by 1981, nearly tripling present costs of grazing on federal rangelands.

The increase in grazing fees proposed in the new schedule, and those in the previous schedule, could mean substantial losses for cattlemen in Idaho who own grazing permits for Bureau of Land Management lands.

"The old schedule also provided for getting to fair market value," Charles Hazzler, Shoshone district BLM manager says. "It is based on a sliding scale to reach fair market value by 1981."

Hazzler says if the new schedule is not adopted, the old schedule, which has the same goal, but a different path to reach it, will automatically be adopted.

The new scale, proposed by both Andrus and Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland, would mean a slight reduction in grazing fees for 1978 compared to those in the current schedule.

Next year, without the new regulations, cattlemen and sheepmen who use BLM rangelands to graze their herds and flocks would pay $2.09 per animal unit month (AUM).

Under the new proposal, however, that cost would be temporarily reduced to $1.89 per AUM, but the final target price is the same under both schedules.

By 1981, raised by increments of no more than 25 per cent, the federal officials aim to graze ranchers "fair market value" to graze their animals on federal lands.

Hazzler says the BLM studies grazing costs on private lands in order to determine fair market value. The idea is to reduce the advantage given to ranchers who have federal grazing permits.

He estimates fair market value to be more than $5 per AUM. With 25 percent increments, however, ranchers would only be paying $2.68 per AUM in 1981 under the proposed schedule.

Twin Falls rancher Laird Koh called the fee schedules originally devised by former Interior secretary Stewart Udall, "really the ultimate blow for those that are trying to get livestock off the public lands in a very subtle way."

Koh says the schedule's intent "to increase grazing fees, however high, is necessary to destroy all of the investments that permittees have made in acquiring their grazing privileges."

Ranchers sometimes pay $40 per AUM or more to acquire permits to allow them to graze stock on federal lands. Koh explains.

"In determination of fair market value, Andrus, as well as Udall, refused to include the capitalized value of the grazing permit," Koh charges.

"Not says a study made of grazing costs some ten years ago revealed grazing costs on BLM rangelands were actually higher than what was considered fair market value at the time because of the costs involved in purchasing grazing permits."

The money traded among ranchers, often take on high values, and ranchers pay inheritance taxes on them and can open use them for collateral for bank loans.

Noh says he knows of ranchers who have paid as high as $80 an AUM for grazing permits.

Service station owner recalls industry changes

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — White Gilbert "Gib" Craggs has been pumping gasoline into automobiles of bankers, lawyers, store clerks and tourists from his station at Shoshone Street and Third Avenue East, he has seen lots of changes in downtown Twin Falls.

For one thing, he began selling gasoline at Craggs Chevrolet April 7, 1933, for 32 cents per gallon.

"The margin of profit was about the same then as it is now, and I made more money then. Operating expenses were far lower, and you got to keep a little more of what you made," he said. This month Craggs turned the keys of the station over to his former employee, Dennis Coy and retired. But his retirement consists of managing a gasoline bulk plant in Bull on a full-time basis.

It seems like a vacation, however. Craggs opened his station at 7 a.m. and closed it at 6 p.m. "I says a week during the 21 years. Now he only works from a.m. to 5 p.m. and now always takes both Saturday and Sunday off."

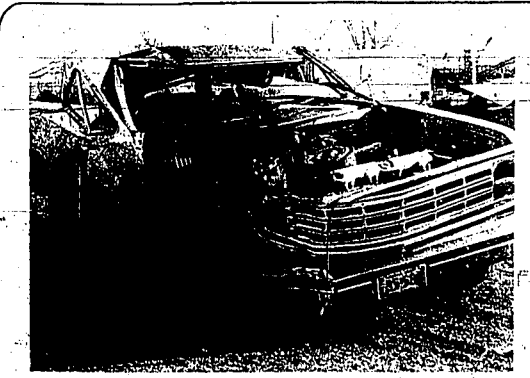

He has worked in service stations nearly all of his life, except for a few years during World War II when he spent in the U.S. Navy.

The lowest price gasoline he ever sold was about 11 cents a gallon when he worked in his father's station in the mid-west as a youth.

Like some other service station operators, Craggs said he has often wondered if there is a genuine fuel shortage.

"Many people tell us it's basically an effort by the oil companies to raise the price of gasoline. I'm not sure, but what they are right," he said.

PICKUP TRUCK HIT TWO TREES, FINISHED SECOND BEST ... the driver walked from accident with minor cuts

Driver suffers no injury

TWIN FALLS — When city police officer Pat Bernhingham arrived at an accident scene here Saturday and saw the pickup truck Tom Prazaiz had just gotten out of, his first question was, "Where's your passenger?"

Told by Prazaiz he had no passenger, the officer said, "You must have. The Lord had to be hiding with you or you wouldn't be walking around."

Prazaiz told police he had been working nights and fell asleep while driving west on Flier Avenue E. at Monte Vista.

His 1974 pickup left the street and crashed into two trees at the Charles Tamm home, 511 Monte Vista, demolishing the pickup.

Officer Bernhingham said Prazaiz escaped with a two inch cut on one knee. The accident occurred at 8:20 a.m. Saturday.

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho trucking industry has launched a program to police its own ranks to keep the speed of commercial trucks within the state's 55 mph per hour speed limit.

Bob Lamb, chairman of the Council of Safety Supervisors of the Idaho Motor Transport Association, said Friday the council is using four unmarked radar cars to monitor the highway speed of trucks in the state.

The council put four radar units on Idaho's interstate highways October 14 and plans another check in mid-December.

The council clocks the speed of trucks in the tests and then sends a report to the home company detailing the speed habits of the driver involved. Companies are then encouraged to take some action if their drivers are exceeding the posted limits. The council, of course, has no authority to issue citations "to drivers, although reports on the check are also forwarded to the Department of Law Enforcement.

The October check showed the average speed of 465 trucks on I-80 and I-15 was 60.04 mph, almost exactly five mph over the posted limit.

Lamb said companies receiving reports have taken action to warn their employees to slow down and observe the legal limits. He added, "Most companies are enforcing the 55 mph limit, but we find it hard to control the trucks when they get away from the terminal."

The council also notifies independent truckers of their speeding violations, but Lamb said there is more of a tendency for them to ignore the reports.

"The goal of most independent truckers is to get to and from their destination as fast as possible," he said.

"This creates a bad image for the trucking industry but you can't really condemn him for trying to make a living."

The worst case discovered in the October check was an Oklahoma trucker clocked going 75-80 mph on I-80. But other truckers observing the state limits were praised by the council in reports to their employers.

Lamb added that most drivers have supported the idea of the program.

LOOKING BACK ON 25 YEARS IN SHOSHONE STREET STATION ... Gilbert Craggs has seen some changes in Twin Falls.

Craggs recalls changes

"They were heading north," Craggs says of the two firefighters. "I didn't ask but I suppose they were going to Sun Valley."

In the 25 years he operated the station, Craggs said he never missed a day's work because of illness except for the time he broke his foot.

"I was on crutches for two and a half months and I missed some work, but otherwise I've never been ill," he said.

In all the time he operated the station, he had only four different full-time employees.

"I guess I'm not too hard to work for. They each stayed for several years," he said.

When he left, Craggs sold the station inventory to Copp and donated the equipment.

"I told him if he would stay on, I'd help him take over when I decided to retire," Craggs said.

Although Craggs misses his Shoshone Street friends and customers, he is enjoying the new business and making new friends in the Buhl area.

Spelling emphasis helps in Caldwell

CALDWELL, Idaho (UPI) — Special emphasis on spelling by Caldwell Teachers in recent years has resulted in "vast improvement" in the spelling abilities of Caldwell students, according to school officials.

Tom Moore, assistant superintendent and curriculum director, told the board the school district identified spelling as a problem a little over two years ago and established a special committee to devise a program to address that problem. A year ago, Moore said, parents, teachers and students also identified spelling improvements as a "critical" need in the district.

Louise Harbison, language arts coordinator for the elementary grades said the district committee decided that texts in use at the time "were not filling the needs in this district" and set about developing their own program.

The program devised involved a list of words for each grade, rules of spelling in each grade, all taught in a "spiraling" approach—that is, previously taught concepts were retaught at each grade level along with new concepts.

Moore and a group of teachers wrote the new spelling curriculum for students in kindergarten through grade 12. The guide includes approximately 300 to 500 words, students are supposed to learn each year. Moore said the words include 90 percent of a regular working vocabulary.

Harbison said the key to the success of the program was an emphasis on "good study habits, a systematic approach to spelling and a desire to spell correctly" being instilled "in all phases of the curriculum."

County seeks to speed bill-paying process

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls county commissioners would like to "start paying county bills on a more timely basis."

Friday the commissioners met with all county department heads to determine if there is a more speedy method of processing claims against the county without bypassing legal procedure.

All department heads were asked to process their bills and claims one week earlier and get them to the county auditor and commissioners for approval.

"We haven't had too many complaints from our creditors, but sometimes by the time we get the bills from the department heads and they are checked by the auditor and then sent down the channels for routine approval, we don't pay them until nearly the end of the month," Merl E. Leonard, commission chairman, said.

He said last month, for example, department heads began submitting their bills shortly after the first of the month. Some are very small and may be only one indigent and long order from a certain pharmacy, Leonard said. This makes the entries numerous and clerks in the auditor's office must verify each claim and enter it in the books. When the billings reached the county commissioners for approval, it was about the middle of the month. They were then approved and sent back to the auditor's office for payment.

"By the time we got our checks out," Leonard said, "it was Nov. 21." "We think if other businesses and individuals have to pay their bills by around the 10th of the month, the county should not hold up payments until so near the end of the month."

Leonard said he thinks with the one week early start on billing procedure from department heads, the county will be able to maintain a better record, probably making payments about 10 days earlier than in the past.

Idaho Power hit by inflation cost

BOISE (UPI) — The president of Idaho Power Company said Saturday the company's rate increases are not keeping up with the rate of inflation.

James E. Bruce said the lag between Idaho Power rates and inflation was revealed in a recently completed study by the company's rate department.

Since 1959, Bruce said, inflation has increased at an average rate of 6.6 percent, but Idaho Power Company's rates have only increased 3.9 percent per year, while commercial rates have increased an average of 4.7 percent and industrial rates an average of 5.8 percent annually.

Between 1972 and 1976, the costs of materials for transmission, substation and distribution facilities required to serve Idaho Power's growing number of customers allowed "substantial" increases, Bruce said. "For example, the price of 70-foot wood poles for transmission lines increased by 110 percent, rising from $212 each to $446."

"This makes it clear that the rate increases granted Idaho Power have not been adequate to help the company achieve a necessary sound balance between costs and the price of the electric service we provide," Bruce said.

Highway incumbents seek election

BULH — Both incumbents are seeking re-election unopposed in the Dec. 5 Buhl Highway District election.

Barton Sonner, commissioner from sub-district 1, and Jack Kinson, sub-district 2, have both filed for re-election. Deadline for candidate filing was Wednesday at 5 p.m.

Similar proposals referred to state election manager Mrs. Stan Thompson said no other candidates have returned petitions.

In the Filer Highway district, two vacancies will also be filled Dec. 5. The incumbents, Harvey Maxson and William Olson, have announced they will not seek re-election. Only two petitions have been filed including Robert Crawford, who seeks the sub-district 1, commission post, and Steve Hennopp, who is running in sub-district 2.

Filer area voters will also go to the polls from 1 to 7 p.m. and may vote at the Filer Highway District office in Filer.

The election will be held on Dec. 5 from 1 to 7 p.m. at each of the highway district elections in the state. Polling places for Buhl Highway district voters will be the Buhl City Hall, Lucerne Grange Hall, Clover School and the Red Barrel, in Castelford.

Water protection push on

BOISE (UPI) — A statewide initiative petition drive began Monday to put the Hydroprotection and Water Conservation Act on the 1978 Idaho election ballot. Initiative co-chairman Joe Allen of American Falls and Matt Mulvaney of Boise said the first goal of the drive is to collect 10,000 of the required 25,000 signatures by mid-January.

According to Allen, an American Falls farmer and former Republican state senator, "This initiative is designed to give the voters the chance to have their say on the future of our state's rivers and streams, fish, wildlife and other public values."

The proposed Hydroprotection and Water Conservation Act would reserve as "public trust" a portion of any unappropriated water in all Idaho streams and rivers. Similar proposals, referred to as "multiphase stream flow" laws, have been proposed in the Idaho Legislature in recent years, but have been rejected each year after opposition from southern Idaho irrigators.

The initiative also would authorize the Idaho Water Resource Board to designate additional stream management flows from unappropriated water.

Nader lobbyists contend Congress anti-consumer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ralph Nader's legislative lobbyists said Friday the current Congress has turned out to be anti-consumer and President Carter's own election campaign talk last year about big government is partly to blame.
"Predictions that the 95th Congress would easily pass proconsumer legislation have proven as prescient as speculation that Kohoutek would be a comet to remember," said Mark Green, head of Public Citizen's Congress Watch.
He made the assessment in releasing the group's annual rating of members of Congress on consumer issues.

anti-government had sweeping much of the country. From Wallace to Reagan to Ford to even Carter — here legislatively hung by his own petard — the phrase 'big government' today ranks right up there with 'who lost China' and 'Watergate' as the galvanizing political utterance of its era.
"Government is now so tainted and disrespected, as polls reflect, that many members of Congress seem to believe that the less they do the better," Green said.
In addition, he said, many Democrats are holding seats that could easily be taken by Republicans next year; the GOP is "better organized, forced to pull itself together now that it is out of the White House; and business interests are doing a better grass roots lobbying job.

Congress Watch gave its top rankings to Sens. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.; Dick Clark, D-Iowa, Gary Hart, D-Colo., and Paul Sarbanes, D-Md.; and Reps. Andrew Maguire, D-N.J., and Elizabeth Holtzman, D-N.Y.
All were tied for first place with ratings of 90 percent among the senators and 98 percent among the House members.
At the bottom of the list, labeled the "Least pro-consumer senators," were Sens. John Tower, R-Texas, Carl Curtis, R-Nebr., Clifford Hansen, R-Wyo., and Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., all tied at 5 percent.
The lowest rating in the House went to Rep. Joe Waggoner, D-La., 3 percent.

Rev. Moon deplores 'persecution'

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The Rev. Sun Myung Moon, head of the "Moonie" movement, made a rare speaking appearance Friday and criticized governments that "persecute people simply because they express different beliefs."
Speaking amid heavy security at the Fairmont Hotel, Moon, founder of the controversial Unification Church, addressed about 500 scientists at the sixth International Conference on the Unity of the Sciences, a gathering sponsored by his organization.
Despite heated court battles in San Francisco over the seizing and "deprogramming" of some young Moonies by their parents — acts which the church calls "kidnapping" — there were no disruptions during Moon's speech.
The Korean evangelist told the audience, which included 10 Nobel Prize winners and delegates from 50 nations, that "all too frequently governments will persecute people simply because they express different beliefs than the state 'persecute'."
Speaking in halting English, Moon, 57, who says the United States has a mission to save the world from communism, said the theme of this year's conference was "The Search For Absolute Values in a Changing World."
"Unfortunately, anarchists and terrorists recently tried to break down democracy through terrible acts of violence," he said.
Moon did not discuss the deprogramming battles, in which the church won a major legal fight in San Francisco this year when a state appellate court released five of his young adult followers from custody of their parents.

The nationwide group of parents had contended the church was "brainwashing" their offspring and exploiting them to collect money, and had won a lower court custody battle.
Moon, who has about 30,000 followers with an average age estimated at under 25, told the opening session of the three-day meeting that science without a standard of values could be destructive — "the possibility of nuclear war attests to this."

Ted' Agres, public information officer for the conference, said the gathering cost the church about half a million dollars. Chairman of the conference is Sir John Eccles, an Australian who won the Nobel Prize in physiology in 1963.
Dropouts from past conferences include President Carter's national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, and former University of California president Clark Kerr.

But Eugene Wigner, a Princeton physicist and Nobel laureate, said, "I feel that if I have attended conferences in Communist countries, I may attend a conference that is sponsored by a very well-meaning person even if I do not agree with him in everything."

The Green Thumb Old newspapers fine mulch

By GEORGE ABRAHAM
OLD NEWSPAPERS

Recently we urged people to use old newspapers for a mulch and for fireplace "logs," rather than hugging them to the dump. Now a group of people who advise against using newspaper logs and for mulch purposes. Their reason: They claim newspapers release lead into the air and into the soil.

Everyone should be concerned about lead in the air, but to put the blame on used newspapers is silly. Almost 100 percent of the lead in the air comes from lead in gasoline, according to Dr. Morris Wessell of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. Traffic policemen, toll collectors, garagemen and parking attendants. Don't blame it on newspapers used as fireplace logs or as a mulch in the garden.

Lead in the air is a special danger for children living or going to school near freeways. congested highways or turnpikes. Perhaps the most serious about newspaper logs comes from a proposed ban on asbestos products such as artificial fireplace logs and artificial asbes.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission has started legal proceedings to ban these household items containing asbestos because it can cause cancer.

There is no asbestos in newspapers. Newspapers make up about 60 to 70 percent of the refuse collected in this country. As a mulch they conserve moisture and control heat, also create humus which is readily (and harmlessly) incorporated into the soil.

There are different ways to use newspapers as a mulch in the garden of flower bed. Such a mulch does undiminish good in the garden and at the same time eases the load in garbage removal and conversion.

THE CANNIBALISTIC COACH

News Item: High school football coaches bite the heads off of live frogs to inspire his players. How's that for modern education? It's bad enough to cut up frogs in a classroom but when a sadistic football coach bites off the heads of live frogs we can understand why some students graduate from high schools with a head full of nothing.

"Our frogs are in trouble and may face extinction. Educators in high institutions are bringing us about the shortage of frogs. Dr. Dianne B. Seale of Pennsylvania State University fears that the United States may be in the midst of a "frog crisis."

"She cites a study done in 1971 which estimates that the U.S. frog population may have been cut by half in the last decade.

"Prof. George W. Nace, zoologist at the University of Michigan, warns that the frog population in North America is a fraction of what it was a few years ago.

"The sad part of this football orgy is that these students may not know the beneficial effects of frogs. They are among man's spiest and best pesticides, eating up to 10,000 insects in three months' time. And at least 18 percent of this number may be the devastating cutworm which takes a heavy toll on our gardens.

"Toads and frogs are also good for the asking. They consume grubs, crickets, rose chafers, rose beetles, squash bugs, caterpillars, ants, tent caterpillars, army worms, chinch bugs, gypsy moth caterpillars, sow bugs, potato beetles, moths, flies, slugs and even moles.

"The football coach, the players and their parents who think the footballing act is great should hang their heads in shame, mainly because they've never learned how valuable frogs are to mankind.

With the heat on indoors, watch the temperature for african violets. They like warmth. In fact, rooted cuttings and small plants like 75 to 80 degrees for rapid, even growth. However, after the plants reach a good size you can drop the temperature to 60 or 70 degrees.

"Temperature affects blossom type and color variations. For example, the so-called white Geneva edging will disappear altogether if the room temperature is too high. High room temperature will also cause the size of blooms to be smaller.

"Too high a temperature with too little light will cause poor quality violets. Too much light will result in hard, brittle growth, yellowed foliage, overall foliar sunburn and often the appearance of the plant is stunted.

"Your plants can tell you about light. Study them. A long, light green foliage indicates light starvation, with a lack of bloom. If your plants have short leaves, bleached out and short blossom stems, the plants are getting too much light. Blossoms will scorch first.

"If you're concerned about fluorescent lights during the winter months, remember what Dr. Marc Cathey of the United States Department of Agriculture says. "All lamps are grow lamps." There have been many claims made, for various kinds of fluorescent lights, but generally speaking most of them work about the same.

"Variegated violets are a big attraction but they don't always remain variegated. What causes them to change to a plain green leaf?

"Too much nitrogen is one reason. Also, variegates prefer great amounts of light and a cooler temperature (65 degrees). When feeding, use a plant food low in nitrogen.

QUESTION BOX
QUESTION OF THE WEEK: R. F. of Twin Falls: "Our lawn is bumpy and full of small depressions. Could we iron out the bumps by rolling the lawn with a heavy roller?"

Not very well. The best method for leveling a lawn is to till in the low spots with some new soil, rather than pushing down the high spots with a roller which might compact the soil and worsen the root zone.

Scatter the soil over the area and then rake it evenly with the existing grass. Sow some fertilizer and grass seed on, using a good grade of grass seed. Watch out for bunchgrasses like tall fescue and most field species, as they are likely to become more clumpy as the crowds build up above the surrounding soil.

Incidentally, many have asked us if punching holes into the lawn is helpful. Ordinarily, mechanical aeration accomplishes little for a home lawn, other than to break through thatch (if your lawn has thatch).

Its chief value is for heavily trodden areas, such as golf hoof-and-mouth and tuberculosis tests, and Monday will be shipped to Washington to be presented to the president's 10-year-old daughter.

The deer are diplomatic gifts from the government of Finland, but after Amy has seen them, they will make model of plane to use. It has settled now on a Super Cub but needs some good weather for flying.

"We'd still like to test it again before closing down for the wintertime." Director Kelly Pearce said. "I think we're looking at the chance of getting it going this fall, but if not this fall, we'll definitely go in the spring."

BOISE (UPI) — Bad flying weather may force the state Department of Law Enforcement to delay the start of the annual traffic surveillance until spring.

The department had hoped to begin the air-to-ground speed control program Oct. 1, but had to delay the start until it could find the right greens. Devices that merely punch spikes a short distance into the ground are useless, and that's the type generally available to homeowners.

E. J. of Halley: "Please tell me what causes African violets to get a gray mold fungus on the leaves?"

When african violets get a gray mold on the leaves blame this on botrytis, a gray mold fungus which produces soft brown spots or blotches on stems or leaves. Often it will attack a plant right at the soil line.

The best way to avoid this problem is sanitation and good air drainage. Remove any dead or fallen blossoms. A small electric fan will remove the moisture from the leaves and prevent the gray mold. Avoid clumping plants close together.

You need good air circulation around each plant to prevent botrytis. By the way, you can speed the rooting of leaves by making a tiny slit with a sharp razor blade in the base of the stem. It seems to hasten rooting and also sends up more plantlets.

Also you get more plants per leaf by cutting the bottom end of the stem on a slant. You can do this on both sides of the leaf stem so it's a V-shape. Sometimes a leaf falls to send up plantlets. If that happens merely recut the stem end and try re-rooting.

Prepare against storms

WASHINGTON (UPI) — You can live without electricity, central heating, deliveries and many services in an emergency — but only if you use good judgment and are prepared in advance.

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration says many of the hazards of winter storms may be avoided.

The leading causes of death in such storms are weather-related automobile accidents, heart attacks from shoveling snow, storm-induced home fire, carbon monoxide poisoning, accidents from falls and collapse-of snow-laden buildings, the agency said.

To make life easier during a severe winter storm, it advised in a recent statement, "You should be ready to live without utilities and services."

"Assume there may be no electricity, no central heating, no deliveries or any way to get groceries, no way to get out of your house for a day or two — and plan accordingly," it suggests.

It says you should make sure your car, radio and flashlight batteries are fresh. Winterize the car. Check extra food, including some that requires no cooking.

Be alert for fire hazards from prolonged use of stoves, fireplaces, and space heaters. It also reminds: "Gloves are warmer than fingered gloves; several layers of loose-fitting clothing provide better protection against cold than do tight-fitting garments; and outerwear should be tightly woven, water-repellent and hooded."

Stay in your car if possible, if it gets stuck in a winter storm. Rescuers are more apt to find you there.

Also, it said: "If you're stuck deep, don't try to push tons of metal out of a drift or risk a heart attack by frantic shoveling."

While in a stuck car, open a window slightly and run the motor on a heater sparingly, because "carbon monoxide is a stealthy killer." Move about a bit by clapping and exercising your arms. Put the dome light on at night so road crews can spot you easier.

Never let everyone in the car sleep at once.

And don't walk through a blizzard unless you are absolutely sure a shelter is near and you can make it. "Getting lost can mean almost certain death," it said.

Finland sends Amy reindeer

CLIFTON, N.J. (UPI) — Amy Carter's Christmas presents included a reindeer from Finland — will spend the weekend at the Animal Import Center waiting for their quarantine period to end.

The reindeer, one male and one female, have passed hoof-and-mouth and tuberculosis tests, and Monday will be shipped to Washington to be presented to the president's 10-year-old daughter.

The deer are diplomatic gifts from the government of Finland, but after Amy has seen them, they will make model of plane to use. It has settled now on a Super Cub but needs some good weather for flying.

"We'd still like to test it again before closing down for the wintertime." Director Kelly Pearce said. "I think we're looking at the chance of getting it going this fall, but if not this fall, we'll definitely go in the spring."

The department had hoped to begin the air-to-ground speed control program Oct. 1, but had to delay the start until it could find the right their homes at the Washington Zoo.

An import center employee said Thursday the two animals aren't likely to get lost in their new homes. One or two pats on the head, and they usually wander away. But they do stand by the door when they're hungry.

He said they haven't made a sound since they were flown to the Import Center Nov. 28.

The beige animals, with sprinklings of white hair, have spent most of their time munching alfalfa and pellet mixture twice a day.

The 4-foot-high reindeer are accustomed to digging through the snow to tear up short grass or roots. Their hoofs are larger than those of ordinary deer, to help them tear rugged terrain, and their hair is long to keep them warm.

Halting Soviets' missile may mean no neutron bomb

© N.Y. Times Service
 WASHINGTON — The Carter administration is examining the possibility of stopping deployment of the controversial neutron bomb in return for a pledge by the Soviet Union to limit a new, mobile missile that is aimed against Western Europe.

This is one of several options senior officials acknowledge the administration has begun to consider in an effort to resolve the current European-American deadlock over whether to produce and deploy the proposed tactical nuclear weapon.

building in the administration for the White House to take a decision on the neutron bomb, and President Carter's top foreign policy aides met last week to examine ways of ending the stalemate.

According to officials, several alternatives were discussed, including a plan by the Pentagon to simply go ahead with the weapon and a State Department proposal to include it in negotiations under way in Vienna for the mutual reduction of Eastern and Western forces in Central Europe.

Although it was agreed that including the neutron bomb in the force reductions talks would complicate the negotiations, this course was not firmly ruled out. However, other arms-control options were thought to have greater potential, including the idea of linking a decision on the neutron bomb to Soviet restraint in deploying its new, intermediate-range ballistic missile, known as the SS-20.

The neutron bomb, which achieves its destructive effect by releasing a brief, but intense burst of radiation, has emerged as one of the more troubling issues in Western alliance relations for years because neither the United States nor its key allies in Europe appear ready to support its deployment until one side makes the first move.

In the view of several officials, this situation could lead to deep strains that could spill over into several areas of cooperation in the alliance. As a result, pressure is

Carter extends youth job plan

© Chicago Daily News
 WASHINGTON — President Carter is going to try to achieve "full employment" by extending the public service and youth job programs that were supposed to be phased out next year — now that he has embraced the Humphrey-Hawkins bill.

Though "no final decisions" have been made, says a high administration source, "we're now having to look at again" all of the jobs programs "that we had planned to phase out in 1978."

The jobs programs (a combination of public service, public works and youth jobs and training) were an essential part of the economic stimulus package that President Carter proposed last spring.

They were supposed to be a temporary stimulant to help the economy recover from the worst recession in 40 years. In all, about 1 million jobs that are training slots (at a cost of $10.5 billion) were "created, most of which were to be phased down after Sept. 30, 1978."

With the President's budget officers now busy preparing the financial document he'll send to Congress next January, it's clear that a couple of things have happened since last spring: (1) The President has been impressed by arguments from the congressional black caucus and others that continuation of the jobs programs is necessary to lower the high rate of unemployment among minorities, especially black inner-city youth.

(2) The President remains committed to using macroeconomic fiscal and monetary policy to control inflation and feels a direct, programmatic approach is the only way he can hope to whittle away the 7 per cent unemployment figure.

The outlines of the Carter strategy emerged in the negotiations over the Humphrey-Hawkins bill. Before the President would endorse the "full employment" legislation, he insisted that a strong anti-inflation clause be written and that a requirement that he propose new programs to reduce joblessness be removed.

Humphrey-Hawkins, therefore, establishes a "full employment" goal of 4 per cent by 1983, but does not require the President to do anything to achieve it. Indeed, knowledgeable administration sources insist, Carter has no intention of jeopardizing his 1981 balanced budget goal by proposing ambitious new employment programs.

Fiddlers contest rules changing

WEISER, Idaho (UPI) — New rules and prizes are being established for the National Old-Time Fiddlers Contest in Weiser.

The contest committee has decided to make three-time winners of its junior, ladies and senior divisions compete in following years in the grand national division. It believes this will increase competition in the grand national as well as other divisions.

Prizes for the ladies, senior and junior divisions will be increased to $200 for the winner, $120 for second place, $100 for third, $75 for fourth and $50 for fifth place. Prizes for the junior division (under 13) will be $50 for first place, $30 for second and $20 for third.

Committee Chairman Bill Scott said the grand national grand prize next year will be $1,000, up from $650 this year. Second place will go to $700 from $200.

In addition, the festival will begin on Monday instead of the traditional Tuesday in the third week of June.

Carrier at anchor

Daily Telegraph, London
 BRUSSELS — A report that Russian ships having teething troubles with its first operational aircraft carrier, the Kieiev, has been confirmed by NATO officials.

The report says the Kieiev is at present anchored off Murmansk after putting in only two weeks at open sea in its first year of operations.

A spokesman said NATO had been aware for some time that the Russians were having problems with the Kieiev. It's not unusual. They only decided to build aircraft carriers fairly recently and it would be natural to have early difficulties in a system of this kind, he said.

According to the report, the Yak-38 vertical take off fighters on the Kieiev were removed from the vessel after apparently being unable to operate in combat conditions from the deck. It was speculated that the downward thrust of heat from their jets may have damaged the takeoff facilities.

A second Soviet aircraft carrier, the Minsk, has already been built but not yet commissioned. The Russians are believed to have plans to construct four more such vessels. The NATO spokesman said it was unlikely that the troubles with the Kieiev would alter these plans.

TEXAS' Earl Campbell hurdles Texas A&M players on his way to a nine-yard touchdown during Texas 57-28 victory. Campbell scored four touchdowns and gained 211 yards rushing to win the NCAA rushing title and further cement his chances for the Heisman Trophy.

Campbell scores four TD's as Texas routs A&M 57-28

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (UPI) — Earl Campbell put on an incredible four-touchdown, 221-yard performance Saturday that helped No. 1 Texas overwhelm Texas A&M, 57-28, and sent the Longhorns into the Cotton Bowl against Notre Dame.

The victory enabled Texas to complete its regular season unbeaten for the 10th time and brought the Longhorns the undisputed Southwest Conference championship.

Campbell finished the regular season with 1,743 yards and wrapped up the national rushing championship, the first SWC player to do so. His four scores increased his season total to 19, giving him the NCAA scoring lead with one week remaining.

It was his scoring bursts of six and 23 yards in the third and fourth quarters that finally subdued the 11th-ranked Aggies, who had battled back from a 26-point deficit.

It was also a 60-yard touchdown catch by Campbell from Randy McEachern with five minutes left in the opening period that overcame an early Texas A&M 7-point lead. That quieted a record Aggie throng of 57,443 that had sensed an upset in a hate-filled game nearly marred by an ugly incident before the contest involving members of the A&M military corps and a Texas split group.

Campbell's first touchdown opened a stampede of 33 straight Texas points, helped along by two A&M fumbles and a pass interception.

Campbell followed his scoring catch with a 4-yard touchdown run. Johnny "Ham" Jones scored on a 4-yard run and McEachern teamed with Alfred Jackson on touchdown throws of nine and 12 yards — both spectacular and rare catches.

A&M had scored first on a 7-yard run by Curtis Dickey and George Woodard punted over from the 13-yard line late in the first half to make the deficit 33-14 after two periods.

Then, after Campbell had accounted for all 80 yards of a drive to open the third quarter, including the 6-yard touchdown run, the Aggies came back with touchdowns of eight yards by quarterback David Walker and one yard by Woodard. That made it 40-28 and the game was still in doubt with one quarter remaining.

But Campbell went to work on an 80-yard march, ending it with his fourth touchdown of the day — the 25-yarder. McEachern then threw a 37-yard touchdown pass to Olympic sprinter Johnny "Lam" Jones, equalling a school record of four touchdowns in one game, and place kicker Steve McMichael ended the runaway with a 48-yard field goal.

Texas' 57 points were the most ever scored by a team in this series, which dates back to 1891.

Campbell, the leading ball carrier in SWC history, managed 88 yards in the first half and then assured himself of the NCAA rushing title — and perhaps the Heisman Trophy — with the show he put on in the opening minutes of the third quarter.

With the ball at his own 20, Campbell was held to no gain on first down. He then gained 10 yards, added five and broke around left end for 58 yards to the A&M 6-yard line. From there he scored on one play.

A&M, with one game left in its regular campaign, has a 7-3 record and is ticketed to a trip New Year's Eve to the Bluebonnet Bowl against Southern California.

Before the game a group of 24 A&M seniors from the A&M corps marched in front of a group of Longhorns students preparing to stretch a large Texas flag across the field.

Towns were exchanged and more members of the A&M corps ran from the stands before Texas Department of Public Safety officers and A&M school officials separated the groups and encouraged the corps members to clear the field.

But the frantic comeback might not have been necessary had it not been for Penn State's defense.

Milton's tackle was just the final of several big Penn State defensive plays.

Penn St. nips Pitt 15-13

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Two of the nation's most powerful college football teams waged one of their typical wars on a snow-covered battlefield at Pitt Stadium Saturday and, in the end, all that separated them from a well-deserved tie was a couple of messy inches.

Penn State, the nation's eighth-ranked team, managed to score a 15-13 victory over its arch rival and ninth-ranked Pittsburgh, but it took a hard-fought battle by Nittany Lions' defensive tackle Matt Milton on Pitt's star running back Elliott Walker to prevent the Panthers from pulling out a 15-15 tie in the final seconds.

Milton's game-saving tackle came after Pittsburgh had staged a dramatic four-play, 52-yard TD drive, capped by Matt Cavanaugh's 17-yard scoring pass to Gordon Jones, to pull within 15-13 of Penn State with 12 seconds left to play. Cavanaugh then threw a 30-yard pass to Elliott Lackie for a two-point conversion attempt, but he was stopped inches short of the snow-covered goal line by Milton.

"I thought we made a good call on the two-point conversion," said Pitt's disappointed first-year coach Jackie Sherrill. "We called an option and Matt saw the linebackers playing soft, so he gave it off inside. It was close, but the officials said we didn't make it — so we didn't make it."

Officials lift Casper to comeback win over CSI

CASPER — The Casper Thunderbirds, who have lost only twice at home in the last ten years, proved the pole in a College of Southern Idaho Saturday with a 63-61 decision in the 7th Annual T-Bird Tournament.

The Thunderbirds came from 10 points down in the final seven minutes and won it with 43 seconds left on a field goal by Randy Johnson.

Perhaps the most unbelievable part of the rally stemmed from the fact that Casper went into a full-court trap press with 7:53 remaining and wound up shooting 24 free throws in the second half to zero for CSI.

A three second call which nullified a basket by Orlando Bryant in the closing seconds could have won it for CSI.

The clinching point came with two seconds left when Mitchell Marietta hit a free throw to establish the final count, but Marietta was sent in off the bench to replace Eric Talmadge who was already at the foul line.

The Casper coaches assured the officials Marietta had been the victim of the foul.

Despite all this, the Golden Eagles played extremely well, making their best effort and showing their best consistency of the season.

Coach Mike Mitchell, who spent the day in bed with flu, assured his boys afterward, "I'm really proud of you. On the road being good simply isn't good enough. You have to be tremendous, I feel that you held your position, played hard, and played better than you have this week. Monday we'll be back on the practice floor getting better."

Coach Mitchell pointed out to the team that a rash of turnovers early in the second half had been equally fatal to their winning effort.

The Eagles turned the ball over four straight times and five out of six possessions during a five-minute lull in which neither team could score.

"This is not unbelievable," he assured the team of the loss. "You have to break the game open when you had the chance so nothing could bring them back. The turnovers hurt our chances to blow it open then."

Throughout the first half never more than four points separated the teams, although CSI led most of the last-15 minutes.

Curtis Rayford's jumper at the buzzer gave CSI a 35-33 half-time lead.

In the second half, the game was tied three times and CSI's chance to ice it started with the score at 43-42.

Jerry Williams, Orlando Bryant and Kenny Justice hit field goals while Casper was picking up one free throw.

Bucks by Cayruth and Williams established the count at 55-45 and TD signaled the start of the unbelievable comeback.

Shil Casper, which missed five free throws in the span, didn't catch up until Talmadge got inside for a crumple that made it 60-59 with 2:35 to go.

Richard Prospero gave CSI its last lead with a jumper out of the corner and Bryant then had his lay-up killed on the three second call.

Nearly a minute later Randy Johnson gave Casper the lead at 62-61 and Marietta then nailed it down with a free throw.

The loss may prove particularly costly to CSI as guard Curtis Rayford sustained a foot injury. The Chicago freshman said he felt it was a fracture of a foot bone that he broke his senior year in high school.

Friday night Williams staged the third largest but easily most important individual scoring spree in CSI history, pumping in 41 points as CSI ousted Colby, Kan., 79-75.

Williams shattered two tournament records with 19 field goals and his 41 points broke the old one-game record by five.

He scored 25 of his points in the second half and six of those in the last two minutes after CSI had watched a 15-point advantage wither to a two-point deficit.

The Eagles staged easily their finest effort late in the first half when they outscored Colby 19-2. That gave them their best margin at 40-25, but it was just the opposite early in the second half as Colby came out running and forced penetrating and dominated the Eagles for the first six minutes.

CSI could trace its difficulties during that span to an inability to move fluidly into its offensive patterns.

At the end of six minutes the second half, Colby had whittled the CSI lead to 49-47, but the Kansas crew couldn't get closer than two over the next 12 minutes, as Williams hit 14 points and CSI had leads up to six points.

But with 6:14 remaining, Nayron Munk, a transfer from University of Arizona, hit two field goals that tied it to 63-63.

After two more ties, Munk hit another shot to give Colby its first lead at 67-69.

Colby then appeared to make a mistake by staying with its full-court press. Three straight times the Eagles broke it, twice for short jumpers by Williams and then a pair of free throws by Curtis Rayford.

With a minute left, Colby pulled back to within two, but Williams settled it with another close-in jumper. With 19 seconds left, Bob Starmer added a lay-up to establish the final count.

Through the first 12 minutes of the game the score was tied eight times and the lead changed hands three times. With 8:16 remaining in the first half, Colby held a 23-21 advantage.

CSI then reeled off the next 13 points, although it took five minutes and 11 seconds.

Army held a 17-11 halftime lead with the assist of two Navy turnovers, the interception by Clemens and another interception by Hilliard which gave the Cadets on the Navy 43 late in the first quarter.

The passing of Hill and the running of Greg King and Jim Merriken moved the ball to the Navy two but the drive stalled and Clemens kicked a 21-yard field goal early in the second quarter to give Army a 10-0 lead.

Navy took the kickoff and drove to the Cadet 18 and then wide receiver John Kurovski made a diving catch of a Leszczynski pass in the corner of the end zone and Bob Tata booted the extra point to narrow the margin to 10-7.

But Army then drove 80 yards in 13 plays with King going over from the one with 1:09 left in the half.

Army holds off Middies 17-14

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Defensive back Ed Clemens intercepted a pass to set up one touchdown and recovered a fumble to halt a crucial Navy drive Saturday during Army's 17-14 victory over the Middies, the Cadets' first victory in five years in the service academy rivalry.

The Army defense also starred in the waning seconds when Navy marched from its own 26 to the Cadet 9 with 1:37 left to play. But a fourth-down halfback pass by Navy's Joe Gattuso was incomplete in the end zone and Army took over and ran out the clock.

Clemens, who left the game with nine minutes remaining with a dislocated shoulder, set up Army's first touchdown in the opening quarter when he intercepted a Bob Leszczynski pass on the Navy 31. He fumbled as he was hit and the ball popped into the arms of John Hilliard, who ran it to the Middle 15.

Four plays later, quarterback Leamon Hall plunged one yard for the score and Mike Castell's extra point made it 10-7.

1977 free agent circus tops 1976 extravaganza

By MURRAY CHASS
NEW YORK — The owners — some proclaimed it loudly, others whispered it, almost conspiratorially in the past few months — have learned their lesson. They would not spend the kind of money on free agents that they spent last year. The owners, of course, were right. Clubs are not spending the kind of money they spent a year ago; they're spending more.

As if they were jewels from the sarcophagus of King Tut, free agents are being auctioned off at vastly higher prices than the relatively piddling sums they went for a year ago.

Although 14 of last year's 24 free agents extracted deals of $1 million or more, only three of those players exceeded the $2 million mark — Reggie Jackson, Joe Rudi and Don Gullett — and Gullett only because of a $100,000 payment by the Yankees to his agent, Jerry Kapstein.

This year six players have had their free agency rewarded with packages surpassing $2 million.

A year ago the owners spent about $25 million on 24 players. This year they already have committed themselves to nearly $20 million on just nine of the 89 available free agents.

Even Walter O'Malley, confirmed opponent of free agents of any kind, and M. Donald Grant, opponent of lavish spending on free agents, have signed the spending act. O'Malley's Los Angeles Dodgers signed Terry Forster to a five-year contract for about $900,000 while Grant's Mets signed Tom Hausman for three years at $240,000.

"Last year," said Tom Reich, a Pittsburgh lawyer who represents many players, "the owners were talking about agents peddling flesh, but now I don't want to hear about it. It's on the owners' nose."

Reich doesn't represent any of this year's class of free agents, but he does negotiate for such players as Joe Morgan and George Foster of Cincinnati, both of whom have multi-year contracts.

Richard David Moss, a New York lawyer, represented Histe and he shared Gamble's negotiations with Howard Mandell, who is Gamble's lawyer in Montgomery, Ala.

Early in the game, Mandell saw a chart of last year's free agents and how much money they received after having years not nearly as good as Gamble had this year. That's when he decided Gamble should get more money than anyone expected. Moss has a considerable amount of baseball expertise as the man who is undefeated in baseball's court battles as the Players Association counsel for 10 years.

Barring any last minute rallies by other agents, Moss just might have to receive the free agent's agent-of-the-year award for his efforts this month. Jerry Kapstein clearly was the No. 1 agent last year, because he represented 10 of the 14 players who secured those million dollar deals.

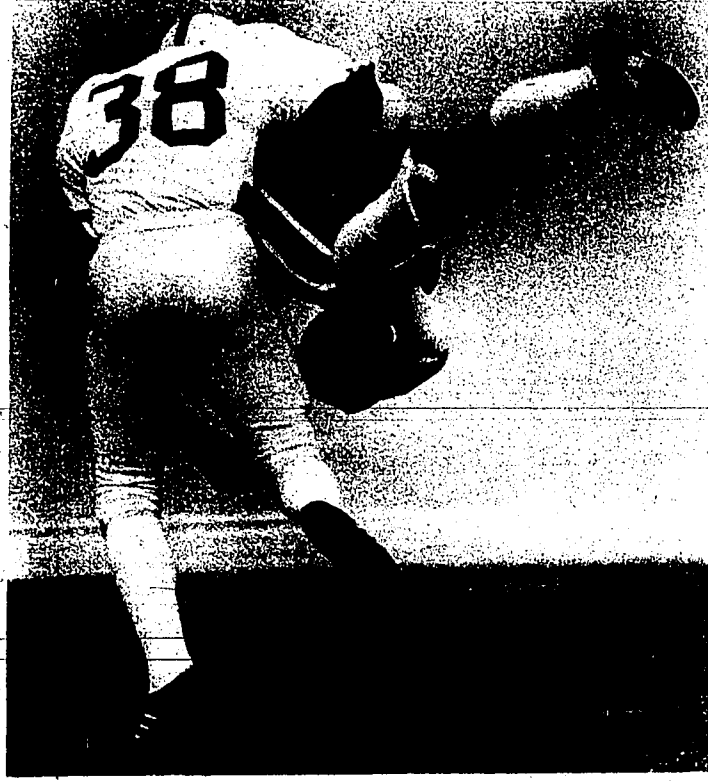

But any agent who can negotiate the deals obtained by Histe and especially Gamble, who only once in his seven-year career has batted enough times to qualify for the batting title, has to be ranked No. 1. And, unlike some agents, Moss doesn't even charge his clients 5 percent or more.

Besides their billing practices, agents differ in their publicity on their deals. Histe's players should receive the millions clubs beg him to take.

Kapstein, for example, virtually always makes deals when the players get significantly large bonuses (Rudi and Gullett $1 million each, for example) and large salaries but no deferred payments past the life of the contract.

Other agents, on the other hand, stress the importance of deferred payments. Histe, for example, will receive $20,000 a year for 15 years on his six-year contract with Milwaukee's express. Gary Matthews, who signed with Atlanta last year, will receive large payments from the Braves after his six-year contract ends because it calls for deferred compensation of $30,000 a year for each of the six years at 5 percent interest compounded quarterly.

And then there is Stan Backus' five-year agreement with the California Angels. Details of the contract have yet to surface, but there have been conflicting claims as to the total amount of the deal.

Sooners Hipp-hugger defense throttles Cornhuskers 38-7

NORMAN, Okla. (UPI) — Under the circumstances, it was almost obligatory for the Oklahoma Sooners fans — of which there are none more fanatic — to let their feelings be known.

So they did.

"We're No. 1!" they yelled.

And as a result of an embarrassingly one-sided 38-7 Oklahoma pounding of the Nebraska Cornhuskers Friday, the debate concerning No. 1 may once again be open.

At least Sooners' Coach Barry Switzer feels that way.

"We are 10 times better than we were when we played Texas," he said. "Today we just played, super, super, super. And that's it."

Texas gave Oklahoma its only loss of the season in October, 13-6. But since then the Sooners have gained momentum.

And that momentum culminated Friday in a regular-season ending crushing of Nebraska, a triumph that gave Oklahoma its 25th Big Eight championship and will send the Sooners to Miami as the league's representative in the Orange Bowl.

The outcome was a result of an almost flawless performance from the Sooners' wishbone offense — led by the 143 yards of quarterback Thomas Lott — and a defense which limited Nebraska's highly touted J.M. Hipp to 33 yards on 15 tries.

"That was our 'Hipp-hugger' defense," said Switzer.

"The wishbone is not dead," said running back Elvis Peacock, who gained 123 yards and won the chance to play his last collegiate game in his hometown of Miami.

"At the beginning of the season we were bogging it down with our mistakes," said Peacock. "But, since we started executing and eliminating our mistakes, it's no surprise to us that we're moving the ball."

Oklahoma moved the ball to the tune of 417 yards on the ground and put the game away in the first half with drives of 65, 80 and 80 yards.

Lott executed perfectly in those drives, which resulted in touchdown runs of 2, 1 and 11 yards.

The last of those touchdowns came with 29 seconds left in the half to give Oklahoma a 21-7 lead.

The Sooners' defense took over in the third quarter and then, after the substitutes came in, Oklahoma scored twice in the final period on a 19-yard run by David Overstreet and a 34-yard pass from Dean Hlevins to Victor Hicks.

Lwe von Schamann added a 45-yard field goal, giving him a school record of 14 this season.

Von Schamann also set an Oklahoma career extra point record, running his total to 62 with one season left to play.

"I think we have a good football team," said Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne, meaning his team has slumped to 8-3, and must settle for a meeting with North Carolina in the Liberty Bowl Dec. 19.

"Oklahoma has a fine football team," said Osborne. "We were just outplayed. A few years ago they might have had a few stronger defensive people up front, like the Semhons, but offensively they're playing as well as I've ever seen."

Lott, a junior who led Oklahoma to its sixth consecutive triumph over Nebraska, agreed with his coach concerning the Sooners' improvement.

"I think we are a more open team," Lott said. "We make teams respect our pass and our inside game and our outside game. Against Texas we didn't do that."

Sooners' linebacker Daryl Hunt summed up Oklahoma's plan to shut down Hipp, who had gained 1,268 yards before Friday.

"We just went out and did our main defense, which is based on pursuit," Hunt said. "Nebraska has to get most of its yards out of the sweep. Our fast people just cut it down."

Alabama rolls over Auburn 48-21

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI) — Quarterback Jeff Rutledge passed for two touchdowns and halfback Tony Nathan scored on two short runs Saturday to lead third-ranked Alabama to a 48-21 rout of state rival Auburn.

Rutledge, who picked up 295 yards passing and rushing, threw 30 yards to split end Bruce Bolton for one touchdown and 42 yards to Ozzie Newsome for another.

The junior quarterback completed nine of 13 passes for 193 yards and picked up another 102 yards on the ground.

Alabama, bound for the Sugar Bowl as the Southeastern Conference champion with a 10-1 record, also had touchdowns runs of 1 and 2 yards by halfback Nathan, a 1-yard run by fullback Johnny Davis and a 15-yard run by substitute quarterback

Steadman Shealy.

The Tigers, who had a hard time sustaining long drives, had touchdowns on an 85-yard run by running back Joe Cribbs and a 74-yard pass from quarterback Charlie Trotman to flanker Byron Franklin.

Auburn also scored on a 3-yard run in the fourth quarter by William Andrews.

Cribbs gave Auburn a shortlived 7-0 lead with his first quarter touchdown, but Alabama roared back in the second and third quarters for 28 straight points.

Rutledge's pass to Bolton early in the second quarter capped a 70-yard drive and began Alabama's scoring. Davis scored from the 12 with 2:16 left in the half to give the Tide a 14-7 halftime lead.

In the third quarter, Alabama got two touchdowns in a little more than two minutes. The first was Nathan's 1-yard run, capping a 58-yard Alabama drive, and the second was set up when Auburn's 34-yard pass from Alabama's Murray Legg recovered.

Four plays later, Nathan was back in the end zone and Alabama led 28-7.

The loss ended Auburn's season at 5-6, with a 42 SEC mark.

Alabama will meet Ohio State in the Sugar Bowl in New Orleans Jan. 2.

Davis finished the day with 104 yards on 20 carries, and Newsome caught four passes for 119 yards.

BYU unloads on UTEP 68-19

EL PASO, Tex. (UPI) — Brigham Young quarterback Marc Wilson passed for two touchdowns and rushed for a third and the Cougars' defense accounted for three touchdowns Saturday, leading BYU to a 68-19 mauling of Texas-El Paso.

Wilson led the nation's top passing team with 13 completions in 27 attempts, hitting Todd Christensen and Kelly Harris with 25-yard scoring drives. Wilson scored his touchdown on a 5-yard run.

The victory was the 18th-ranked Cougars ninth against two losses and leaves them tied for the West Texas A&M Conference lead with a 6-1. UTEP finished the season 1-10 and 0-7 in WAC play.

Despite the lopsided margin, the Miners outgained BYU, 522 total yards to 446, but suffered from five interceptions and four lost fumbles.

UTEP took a surprising 13-7 lead with 5:12 remaining in the first quarter after Oscar Ramirez threw touchdowns of 50 and five yards to Bubba Garcia. But the Cougars followed with 61 consecutive points before UTEP scored

Cougars edge Puget 14-10

SPOKANE, Wash. (UPI) — Guard Ken Jones hit a 20-foot field goal and two free throws in the final two minutes to give Washington State a 67-65 come-from-behind win Saturday night over a scrappy University of Puget Sound in the basketball opener for both clubs.

Jones finished the night with 14 points, with all but two of them coming in the second half. Center James Donaldson was high-point man for the Cougars with 16, while Clarence Clark added 13. USPS' Rick Walker led all scorers with 20 points.

PENN State's Ron Hostetler appears to be attempting to pluck a flying Steve Gaustad of Pittsburgh out of the ASU four. Gaustad had already gained 40 yards after receiving a Matt Cavanaugh pass before Hostetler flagged him down. Penn State, however, won the game 15-13 by stopping a late Pitt drive inside the one-yard line.

Flying tackle

ASU muscles into Fiesta Bowl

TEMPE, Ariz. (UPI) — Safety John Harris ran back a punt 35 yards for a touchdown and took charge of the strong Arizona State defense Friday night to lead the Sun Devils to a 23-7 victory over Arizona and a chance to meet Penn State in the Fiesta Bowl.

Harris intercepted two passes, and recovered two fumbles in the contest that assured ASU a share of the Western Athletic Conference title with a 6-1 record. Overall, the Devils finished regular season play with a 9-2 mark.

The Devils struck on the third offensive play as Chris DeFrance took a swing pass from Dennis Sprowl and raced 46 yards untouched.

Late in the opening period Harris took a punt on his own 45, broke one tackle, sidestepped other pursuers and roared into the end zone.

ASU threatened to run away with the contest with another tally in the second period when Mike Harris spurred through the right side of the line and went 31 yards.

However, the Wildcats, 4-7 for the season and 3-4 in the WAC play, bounced back with a 57-yard aerial from Marc

Houston blasts Rice

HOUSTON (UPI) — Sophomore quarterback Delrick Brown passed for three touchdowns and ran for another Saturday, carrying the Houston Cougars to a 51-21 whipping of cross-town rival Rice.

Houston running back Alois Haskell scored on runs of one and seven yards on route to rushing for 142 yards for the day, giving him more than 1,000 yards for the season.

Cougars split end Don Bass caught two of Brown's touchdown passes and Daryl Thomas had a 47-yard scoring reception from Brown. Houston also scored on Randy Loy's 10-yard run and a 21-yard field goal by Kenny Lunsford to Reed May that moved the ball to the ASU four. It took the Wildcats four more plays to get into the end zone with Harry Holt diving over for the final six inches.

The second half was a series of missed opportunities for both teams before Lunsford was trapped in the end zone for a safety with less than three minutes to play.

Arizona got the ball early in the third period on a fumble from the ASU 10 but was halted when Lee Pistor missed on a 22-yard field goal attempt. Moments later Pistor misfired on a 32-yard attempt and ASU's Steve Hicks returned the favor on a 36-yard attempt.

The Devils reached the Arizona 10-yard line before being stopped by a personal-foul penalty and another Devil drive ended on the Wildcats' three on a fumble recovery by Ken Straw.

Bears on the scoreboard again with a 40-yard field goal from the TCU 23 to put Baylor ahead 10-0 at the end of the first quarter. Freshman Steve Mormon booted a 50-yard field goal with less than two minutes left in the half to put the Horned Frogs on the scoreboard for the first time.

Baylor fullback Greg Hawthorne slid through the TCU line with 24 seconds left to put the Bears ahead 17-3 at the end of the first half. Blair helped set up that score with a 30-yard run.

Baylor's defense stopped the passing combination of Steve Bayuk to split end Mike Renfro, who went into the game with the SWC career reception record of 159, and yards on receptions of 2,713.

North-South game off

DETROIT (UPI) — The North-South Shrine All-Star football game, which netted $20,000 last year, will not be played this year. But its sponsors hope to revive the game in 1978.

Fred Morrison Jr., managing director of the 1976 game, said Friday the game was scrapped this year primarily because of scheduling difficulties with Pontiac Silverdome officials.

"We also have the national Shrine convention here (Detroit) next July, and it has taken the efforts of many of our management personnel to prepare for that," Morrison said.

"Last year's game at the Silverdome had a paid attendance of 41,625 and netted $20,000 to benefit Shriner's hospitals for crippled children and burn centers, he said.

"The cost factors, including insurance, are enormous and even though we netted $20,000 in the final audit, we want to locate a TV package for next year and make sure that we do it right," Morrison said.

The 1976 game brought together 60 of the nation's top college seniors, 34 of whom were drafted by National Football League teams. It was the first all-star game played both indoors and in Michigan and the first Shrine contest in the North.

Morrison said he would like to schedule the 1978 game for a Saturday in December. But that would depend on the home schedule of the Detroit Lions, who play at the Silverdome.

Among the players who graduated to the NFL from last year's North-South game were three members of the Detroit Lions — linebacker Tony Dawkins of Georgia Tech, defensive back Reggie Pinkney of East Carolina and guard Gary Anderson of Stanford.

Vols feast on Vandy

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Quarterback Donald Tommy Stritler ran for three touchdowns and passed for another Saturday to lift Tennessee out of the Southeastern Conference cellar with a 4-2 victory over Vanderbilt.

The victory gave Coach Johnny Majors a 4-7 record in his first season at Tennessee. Vanderbilt finished 2-9 for the second year in a row.

Stritler scored on a 3-yard run early in the second period, followed from the one with 5:38 left in the first half, then hit split end Jeff Moore with a 51-yard touchdown pass with 28 seconds left in the first half to put the Vols ahead 28-0 at intermission.

Fullback Nate Sumpter got the first touchdown of the game on a 6-yard run in the first period, capping a 71-yard Tennessee drive on its first possession of the game.

Stritler got his final touchdown with a 3-yard run 29 seconds into the fourth quarter before leaving the game.

Tailback Frank Fox wrapped up the Vols scoring with a 15-yard run late in the fourth quarter.

NAU ousted

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. (UPI) — Split end Donald Tommy Stritler scored two touchdowns and quarterback Bobby Ray Green passed for two more as Jacksonville State shutout Northern Arizona University, 35-0 Saturday in an NCAA Division II first round game.

The win advanced Jacksonville State, now 10-2, to the second round of the Grantland Rice Bowl next Saturday at Anniston, Ala.

Tailback Pat Clements got the Gamecocks' first lead, scoring on a one-yard plunge in the first quarter.

Sore Stabler will see action if needed

OAKLAND (UPI) — Ken Stabler's knee is tender and it hurts a little, but the betting is the star quarterback will be in the starting lineup Monday night when the Oakland Raiders host the Buffalo Bills.

A lot could depend on who wins Sunday's game between the Denver Broncos and the Baltimore Colts. At least, that is what Raider coach John Madden suggested Saturday when he said "We're still a couple of days away and we don't have to make a decision right now. We'll just wait and see what happens."

Stabler, who has 13 touchdowns passes this year, strained his knee in the first quarter of last Sunday's game against the San Diego Chargers, a game the Raiders eventually lost, 12-7.

That loss put the Raiders at 8-2 in the AFC West, which Denver leads with a 9-1 mark. In the Colts, the Broncos will be meeting another 9-1 division (AFC East) leader. It would seem that if the Broncos win Sunday, Stabler will be shoved into the breach. If they lose, Madden might rest Stabler another week and go with backup Mike Rae. Aside from the Broncos, the Raiders have to keep an eye on Miami, which, at 8-3, is in the running for the AFC's wild card berth to the playoffs.

After watching Stabler work out on both Friday and Saturday, Madden said "He looks pretty good to me. My guess is he can play if we need him."

"There is some pain in the knee and it doesn't feel quite right," said Stabler. "I may be a little restricted in what I can do but I have a couple of days to go, so why make a decision now?"

The Raiders are 15 point favorites over the Bills, who have won only two games this season and are playing it out now without star running back O.J. Simpson.

Even with Simpson, the Bills haven't won a game on the West Coast since they beat the Raiders in 1966. But the two clubs are dead even over the years — 10-10. Oakland won six in a row to close the gap until the Bills upset the Raiders in a 1974 Monday Night game, 21-20, as quarterback Joe Ferguson threw two touchdowns in the final two minutes.

While Buffalo's overall offense has been a disappointment this season, Ferguson is having a good year with 144 completions for 1,780 yards and eight touchdowns. Stabler, by contrast, has 136 completions for 1,673 yards, but has thrown for five more touchdowns.

Roland Hooks has taken over for Simpson, out for the year with leg surgery, and has performed better than expected with 254 yards on 54 carries in three games. O.J. had only 557 yards for the seven games he played in while Jim Braxton, primarily a blocker for Simpson, has 250 yards in 10 games.

The Raider pair of Mark Van Eeghan and Clarence Davis, meanwhile, has rushed for more than 1,400 yards — Van Eeghan for 683 and Davis for 566. Therein lies the big difference between the Bills and Raiders this season: plus Stabler's ability to throw scoring passes.

Nuggets win rough game

DENVER (UPI) — David Thompson fired in a season-high 42 points to power the Denver Nuggets to a 136-123 victory over the Indiana Pacers Saturday night in a game marked by the ejection of both coaches and the fouling out of five players.

Before a crowd of 17,297,

Denver broke in a 41-23 lead, scoring their most points in a quarter this year. But the Pacers stormed back to trail 69-66 at the half. In that second period, both coaches were tossed from the game.

Center Dan Issel finished with 27 points for the Nuggets while guard Brian Taylor had 18. Indiana center Len Elmore, who had not been expected to play because of the death of his brother of Italy earlier in the day, finished with 19 points. Adrian Dantley and Dan Roundfield also scored 19 each for the Pacers.

Sixers win 8th straight

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The Philadelphia 76ers won their eighth game in a row Saturday night with a 112-107 victory over the Buffalo Braves.

The Atlantic Division leaders have now won 12 of 13 games under new coach Billy

King and held off the Braves, who trailed by 16 at one point.

The 76ers led 103-97 with 3:31 to go. Ted McCain's two free throws tied it 105-105 with 1:33 remaining, but the Braves could come no closer.

while Swen Nater had 14 points and 14 rebounds. Adrian Dantley, playing in his first game for Buffalo since being acquired from Detroit earlier in the week, scored 9 points and had 5 rebounds in 19 minutes.

McAdoo paces Knicks victory

NEW YORK (UPI) — Bob McAdoo's 23 points led six Knicks who scored in double figures and paced New York to a 112-106 victory over the Golden State Warriors Saturday night.

New York rallied several times after its 31-21 first-period lead faded, with the Warriors outscoring the Knicks 32-21 in the second period to take a 53-52 halftime lead.

The Knicks regained control at the end of three quarters, 81-74, as McAdoo scored seven points and Jim Clemons added six. The Warriors attempted a comeback in the fourth period but New York was able to preserve its victory.

It was the Warriors' fourth straight loss and their eighth defeat on the road. Phil Smith topped the Warriors with 21 points and Rick Barry added 20.

Lobos early charge topples Utah 41-24

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — New Mexico blitzed Utah with 28 first quarter points and the Lobos' big play defense made them stand up for a 41-24 Western Athletic Conference victory over the Utah State Aggies Saturday night.

"I took New Mexico just 52 seconds to get on the scoreboard on a 24-yard run by fullback Tim Johnson following a Utah fumble at its own 24 on the second play of the game."

The Lobos, hoping to save Coach Bill Monda's job with a season ending victory over the 33 Utes, put together three more impressive scores and appeared headed for a runaway victory.

Scoring the first four times they handled the ball, the Lobos also tucked on a 30-yard touchdown run by quarterback Noel Mazzone, a 54-yard punt return for a touchdown by Max Hutsgehl, and a one-yard run by freshman Jimmy Sayers in the opening period.

Putting on its best offensive performance of the year, New Mexico also got a seven-yard touchdown pass from backup quarterback C.J. Jones to tight end Chris Combs and a one-yard scoring plunge by Don Barnes in the second half.

But Utah, which has been hampered by injuries much of the season, battled back with 17 straight points to cut the Lobos margin to 28-17 midway through the third quarter.

Quarterback Randy Gomez rattled New Mexico's secondary for 399 yards passing, establishing a new Utah single game record. It surpassed the previous mark of 352 yards, set by Don Van Gilder in 1971 and tied by Steve Marshall in 1972.

Gomez connected with split end Jack Steptoe on a 56-yard bomb and defensive lineman Guy Morrell recovered a fumbled punt in the Lobo end zone to get the Utes within 28-14 at halftime.

The Utes' Tom McNamara, also connected on a 24-yard field goal and Gomez hit Dan Stewart with a 10-yard scoring pass in the fourth quarter.

New Mexico's defense stopped several Utah scoring drives with the backbreaker coming in the third period after the Utes had cut the margin to 28-14.

Lamborns within one.

Robinson finished with 19 points and Henderson had 18 for the Trojans. Ron Baxter led Texas with a game-high 21 points.

The Trojans, trailing 41-34 at the half, outscored Texas 22-12 in the first 11 minutes of the second half to tie the score 56-56.

After freshman Purvis Miller made two free throws to put the Trojans ahead 59-56, US' never fell behind again.

Trojans edge Texas

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Paul Henderson sank two free throws with five seconds left to give Southern Cal a 63-64 comeback victory over Texas Saturday night.

Freshman Cliff Robinson put the Trojans in front 63-62 by hitting the first of a one-and-one free throw situation with 54 seconds remaining. Henderson then made his two foul shots to make it 65-62.

With one second remaining, Texas' John Moore scored a court-length layup to put the

Bullets nip Rockets

LANDOVER, Md. (UPI) — Phil Chenier's 13 fourth-quarter points, including two critical baskets in the final 47 seconds, rallied the Washington Bullets to a 93-91 victory over the Houston Rockets Saturday.

Chenier put Washington ahead 88-87 on a corner jump shot with 47 seconds left.

After Tom Henderson increased the Bullets lead to 91-87 and Rudy Tomjanovich brought Houston back to within two, the 6-foot-4 Chenier banged in a desperation jump shot with only three seconds remaining to seal the victory.

Chenier finished the game with 29 points, his high for the season. The Bullets were led by Elvin Hayes' 27 points, while Tomjanovich hit for 26 and Moses Malone contributed 19 for the Rockets.

Trailing 76-75 at the half, Houston tried to tie the game around behind the play of Tomjanovich and Malone.

Tomjanovich hit a pair of free throws to give the Rockets their first lead of the game, 85-84, and led Houston by scoring 10 points in the quarter.

Malone added 10 points and of his game-high 20 rebounds in the third quarter as Houston took a 69-65 lead into the final stanza.

UCLA's Top ground gainer James Owens sits stunned on the sidelines after UCLA had lost a cliff-hanging 23-27 decision to cross-town rival USC which knocked the Bruins out of the Rose Bowl. USC won the game on a 38-yard field goal with only two seconds remaining on the clock.

Look of a loser

Last-second kick drops Bruins — Washington heads for Rose Bowl

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Frank Jordan kicked a 38-yard field goal with two seconds left Friday night to give the University of Southern California a dramatic 23-27 victory over UCLA that knocked the Bruins out of the Rose Bowl and sent Washington to Pasadena for the first time in 14 years.

USC was seemingly beaten by 7:26 on a 1-yard touchdown pass from UCLA sophomore quarterback Rick Bashore to tight end Don Pederson with 2:51 to go.

But the Trojans marched from their own 27-yard line to the UCLA 21 where Jordan, a 5-foot-9, 180-pound junior from San Francisco, was summoned on the field with time running out on a fourth-and-eight situation.

Jordan, who booted a 25-yard field goal in the second quarter, calmly booted the game-winning three-pointer through the uprights for a win that sent the Trojans to the Bluebonnet Bowl against the Texas A&M game. The Houston game is on New Year's Eve.

Washington finished as the Pacific 8 champion with a 6-1 record while UCLA, USC and Stanford would up tied for second with 5-2 marks.

Although UCLA would not have been able to win the conference championship outright, it would have gone to the Rose Bowl on the basis of their 20-12 win over the Huskies at Los Angeles Oct. 29.

USC's drive that led to its winning field goal had one controversial play. On a third-and-10 situation from the 50, Trojan quarterback Rob Hertel threw a pass intended for Kevin Williams that was incomplete. But a pass interference penalty was called on safety Johnny Lynn that gave the Trojans a first down on the Bruins 40.

USC led 26-10 midway in the third quarter following Jordan's second field goal of the game, a 36-yarder.

"The crowd of 86,168 and a national television audience saw the Bruins stage a stirring comeback.

UCLA marched 80 yards in 16 plays for a touchdown capped by Frank Corral's extra point kick but the Bruins in front 27-26.

Bashore, who missed UCLA's previous game against Oregon State two weeks ago because of a broken rib and collapsed lung, started UCLA's comeback by hitting Olympic hurdler James Owens with a 32-yard touchdown pass at 9:57 of the third quarter that cut the score to 26-17.

That seemed to fire the Bruins up and they marched down the field on their next possession. They couldn't get a touchdown on that drive but Corral kicked a 20-yard field goal to cut the USC lead to 26-20.

Heavy favorite Michigan lies in wait for Huskies

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — The Pacific 8 has won seven of the last eight Rose Bowl meetings with Big Ten opponents but Michigan figures to be a heavy favorite of the odds makers against Washington in the Wolverines go on the field at Pasadena, Calif., Jan. 2.

The Huskies clinched their first trip to the Rose Bowl in 14 years Friday night when University of Southern California nipped UCLA 29-27 on Frank Jordan's 38-yard field goal with two seconds left.

Michigan, which wrapped up its fourth trip to Pasadena under Coach Bo Schembechler last weekend with a 14-6 victory at Ohio State, finished the regular season with a glossy 10-1 record compared to Washington's mediocre 7-4 mark.

Ironically, Michigan's only loss came against Minnesota, which also beat Washington. Minnesota was the Rose Bowl foes' only common opponent.

In the 1977 Rose Bowl game, Michigan was knocked off by USC 14-6. Since 1969, the Big Ten's only victory at Pasadena came in 1974 when Ohio State walloped USC 42-21.

In that eight-year span, it's been just Michigan and Ohio State representing the Big Ten while USC, UCLA and Stanford have represented the Pacific-8.

Washington's appearance at Pasadena will be refreshing since the Huskies' last Rose Bowl appearance came in 1961 during Jim Owens' glory days at Seattle. But, on paper at least, Michigan appears to have the weapons in its favor.

Michigan, which scored 333 points this season and gave up only 97, was ranked fourth in the nation last week while Washington was rated 16th. The Huskies scored 317 points and surrendered 174.

"We've had success in the past but this team is something special," Schembechler said. "We've had so many injuries, more than any time in my 25 years of coaching, but they lung in there and won. I'm really happy for them. We're just glad to be back in the Rose Bowl again."

Michigan's offense is led by junior quarterback Rick Leach, a talented left-hander from Flint, Mich., who ranks first in the Wolverine record book in career passing yardage (2,752), touchdowns (29) and total offense (4,312).

He is the only quarterback in Michigan history to rank among the top 10 rushing leaders with 1,550 yards in three seasons. Leach has passed and run for a total of 51 touchdowns, breaking Tommy Harmon's record of 50.

Fullback Russell Davis, a 220-pound junior, led the Wolverines in rushing this season with 1,013 yards—a 4.9 average. He also caught 12 passes for 149 yards.

Schembechler, a former Woody Hayes assistant, has extra motivation going for him in this Rose Bowl, too. He is 0-3 at Pasadena. Before the 1970 Rose Bowl game, Schembechler suffered a heart attack and missed the game.

In nine seasons at Ann Arbor, he has compiled a regular season record of 86-3.

To get to Pasadena, Michigan had to win its last three Pacific-8 games after bowing to UCLA 20-12 Oct. 29. The Huskies drubbed California 50-31, upset USC 28-10 and stopped Washington State 56-14.

Their other two losses this season came to Mississippi State and Syracuse, hardy national powers. After their first four games, they were 1-3.

Washington is coached by Don James, who replaced Owens in 1975 after serving as head coach at Kent State for four seasons. He had a 6-5 record in 1975 and a 5-6 mark in 1976. Before the season started, the Huskies were picked to finish third behind USC and UCLA in the Pac-8 football race.

"The Huskies' main offensive weapons are their quarterback Warren Moon, from Los Angeles' Hamilton High School, and 6-4, 197-pound tailback Joe Steele, a sophomore from Seattle's Blanchet High School.

Steele rushed for 865 yards this season, the fifth best single season effort in Husky history. He had 13 touchdowns and accounted for 1,263 yards in all-purpose running.

Moon finished the regular season with 113 pass completions in 199 attempts for 1,584 yards and 11 touchdowns. His 1,650 yards in total offense was No. 3 on the Washington single season list. Only Sonny Sixkiller produced more.

Ali-Norton set?

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Muhammad Ali may be defending his heavyweight title against Kenny Norton in the Louisiana Superdome, officials said Saturday.

All's promoter, Don King, said he has already signed an agreement with Norton and Ali was only waiting for officials to agree to his $12 million fee.

A New Orleans newspaper, The Times-Picayune, reported Saturday it would take at least $14 million to bring the fight to the Superdome.

Denzil Skinner, president of the Hyatt Management Corporation that oversees Superdome operations, said he has begun preliminary negotiations to bring the fight to New Orleans.

King said he has met with Skinner, Judge Eddie Sapir and attorney James Wayne to discuss the fight and if financing is completed the fight could be scheduled in late May, June or September.

"I think it can be done," he said. "The ball is in Mr. Skinner's, Mr. Wayne's and the Judge's court."

Sapir, whose Super City Boxing Club would work with King in bringing Ali and Norton to the Superdome, said it may take from 45 to 60 days before a deal can be worked out.

CSU outkicks Utah State 13-10 in near-hurricane

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (UPI) — Tom Drake kicked field goals of 31 and 44 yards Saturday to lead Colorado State to a 13-10 football win over Utah State.

CSU's only touchdown in the game, which had winds clocked at 80-100 mph at kickoff, came on an 8-yard run by freshman running back Larry Jones in the second period.

Utah State scored on a 23-yard pass from quarterback Dennis Hipple to Jimmy Bryant in the second period and a 27-yard field goal by Scott Dye in the third quarter.

The Rams, who were shut out of a Fiesta Bowl spot Friday when Arizona State beat Arizona, marched 80 yards in the opening quarter.

But Drake kicked his 31-yarder when CSU's offense "was unable to move the ball into the end zone."

Jones, who set a Hughes Stadium and CSU record for the most rushing attempts in a single game with 41, climaxed a Rams drive in the second period with his 8-yard score. Jones finished the game with 177 yards on the ground.

Later in the same quarter, Hipple, who connected on 19 of 33 passes for 296 yards, hit Bryant with a 23-yarder to end a 46-yard drive in four plays. Dye kicked the extra point.

With 1:17 left in the first half, Drake booted his 44-yarder to climax an 87-yard CSU drive in 15 plays. Utah State finished scoring for both teams in the third quarter when Dye kicked a field goal from 27 yards out.

The win moved CSU to 9-2-1, its best record since 1948 when the Rams finished 9-1 on the season. Utah State dropped to 4-7 with the loss.

Jobless Frank Robinson seeks Milwaukee post

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Frank Robinson, under consideration to manage the Milwaukee Brewers, was fired this week as a coach of the California Angels. It was reported Friday.

The Milwaukee Sentinel said that Robinson, the first black manager in the majors with Cleveland, was fired Monday. It had already been reported that Robinson called Harry Dalton, the former Angels' general manager who is now the general manager of the Brewers.

"But Lou Chapman, baseball writer for the Sentinel, said Robinson had been fired."

"Frank called me and said, 'I'm out of work. I'm looking for something. Keep me in mind,'" Dalton told the Sentinel.

Dalton said Robinson did not specifically ask for the managing job but that he had been considered a candidate for the job. Alex Grammas was dismissed as the Brewers manager last week.

"He'd have to be considered as a candidate, but no more than fellows like Dave Bristol next month."

Frank Lucchesi and John McNamara, Dalton said. McNamara is the Los Angeles' third base coach. Lucchesi is the former Texas Rangers' manager and Bristol used to manage the Atlanta Braves.

Dalton said he is no hurry to name a new manager.

"Unless something else, a completely shocking comes along, I'm not going to start thinking about a manager until after the convention," he said, referring to the winter baseball meeting in Houston next month.

Plane jam seen for Super Bowl

KENNER, La. (UPI) — Bracing for a deluge of football fans coming to New Orleans for the Super Bowl Jan. 15, city officials are hunting for additional parking places for private and chartered airplanes.

Nicholas J. Baroni, a Kenner councilman and assistant vice president of General Aviation Corp., said he will introduce a resolution Monday seeking authority for the city to use the Naval Air Station at Belle Chasse for airplane parking during the pro football championship.

Baroni said his company already has booked 40 percent more planes for game week than were booked for the 1975 Super Bowl in New Orleans.

He said parking spaces at the New Orleans International Airport in Kenner and the smaller Lakefront Airport in New Orleans will be filled to capacity the day before the game.

Without additional plane parking, Baroni said the chartered planes will have unload Super Bowl-bound passengers in New Orleans and fly to Houston or Atlanta to wait out the game.

Such an alternative will waste fuel and cause the state and private businessmen to lose thousands of dollars in gasoline taxes and ground services, he said.

Moser-Proell takes first downhill

ALTENMARKT, Austria (UPI) — Austrian skiing queen Annemarie Moser-Proell Saturday won the first major ski race of the season, defeating her arch rival Marie Theres Nadig of Switzerland in a women's downhill event counting for the World Series.

Moser-Proell edged out Nadig by more than a second, winning the race on the 2,350 meter track in 1:40:27, ahead of Nadig in 1:41:29 and Bernadette Zurbriggen of Switzerland, who was clocked in 1:42:03.

The Austrian downhill champion, who won the World Cup five times consecutively from 1970 to 1975, clearly dominated her rivals and left no doubt that she will be out for the world downhill crown at stake at the Alpine World Ski Championships in Garmisch-Partenkirchen, West Germany, later this season.

The Austrians placed five racers in the top 11. The U.S. team took placings seven to nine. Cindy Nelson, was seventh in 1:42:59, Susan Patterson eighth in 1:43:01 and Jany Kurlander ninth in 1:43:06.

The men's World Series downhill race, originally scheduled for Sunday at Schladming, Austria, had to be called off there because of inadequate snow conditions and will be held Sunday at Crans Montana, Switzerland.

LSU rips Wyoming 66-7

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI) — Record-breaking tailback Charles Alexander rushed for 231 yards and three touchdowns in leading San Bowl-bound Louisiana State in a rout over Wyoming to close out the regular season Saturday.

Alexander set two school records and a Southeastern Conference record of 43 carries in a game as he scored on runs of 31 and two yards.

The scores gave Alexander a season total of 104 points on 17 touchdowns, both school records. His 43rd carry — a 24-yard run early in the fourth quarter — broke an SEC record for rushes in a game set by Johnny Musso of Alabama in 1970.

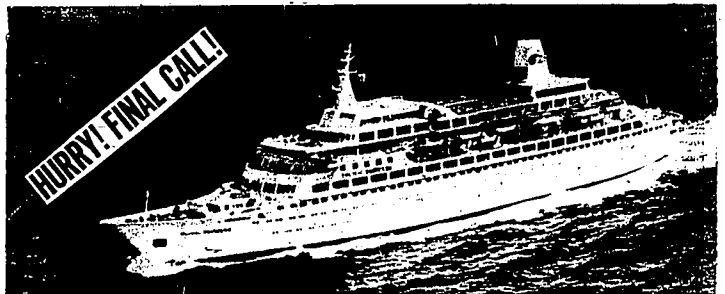

Alexander finished the season with 1,686 yards to rank second nationally in rushing. Wyoming's only score came with about six minutes in the first quarter on a smart, 80-yard drive in five plays capped by a 39-yard run up the middle by left halfback Myron Hardman.

LSU took advantage of Wyoming mistakes to build a 17-0 lead in the first nine minutes, beginning with a Cowley fumble on the opening kickoff.

LSU linbacker Phil Triche grabbed the Tony Caldwell fumble on the Wyoming 22 and Mike Conway booted a 32-yard field goal to start the scoring.

O Wyoming's first play from scrimmage, LSU cornerback Willie Teal, who had two interceptions for the night, picked off a Marc Cousins pass and returned it 23 yards to the Cowboys 19 to set up the "Tigers' first touchdown.

Cavs whip Pistons

DETROIT (UPI) — Walt Frazier and Campy Russell paced an early spun Saturday night as the Cleveland Cavaliers pulled away from the Detroit Pistons for a 105-87 victory — their 10th victory in their last 12 games.

Frazier, who finished with 18 points, and Russell, who had 13, helped Cleveland build a 57-44 halftime lead. The Pistons got no closer than nine points in the second half as the Cavs, who have now won three straight, broke away in the fourth period.

The defeat was the sixth straight for the Pistons, who now have dropped nine of their last 12.

Kings edge Celtics

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Otis Birdsong scored two baskets in the final 4 seconds Saturday night to lift Kansas City to a 110-108 victory over the Boston Celtics and snap the Kings' four-game losing streak.

Birdsong, who finished with 29 points, hit a nine-foot jumper with 44 seconds left to tie the game 108-108 and then connected on another short-range jumper with nine seconds remaining. Scott Wedman preserved the victory with a defensive rebound of Jo Jo White's shot with four seconds to go.

Wedman shared game-scoring honors with Birdsong at 29 points while John Havlicek paced the Celtics with 21.

Spurs breeze past Bucks

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (UPI) — Louie Dampier scored 12 first-quarter points Saturday night to help lead the San Antonio Spurs to a 129-107 victory over the Milwaukee Bucks.

Dampier, an 11-year veteran, was inserted in the starting lineup because of injuries to the Spurs' top two guards. He finished with 16 points, hitting 8-of-10 shots — all in the first half — in leading San Antonio to its seventh win in its last nine games.

George Gervin topped San Antonio with 16 points and Larry Kenon added 24 and 12 rebounds.

Seven Spurs scored in double figures, including Dennis Layton, who joined the club this week, with 10 points and 10 assists. For Milwaukee, Brian Winters had 18 points and Marques Johnson a game-high 18 rebounds.

Cafe Prince wins richest steeplechase

CAMDEN, S.C. (UPI) — Cafe Prince grabbed the lead from Bel Iman coming over the last of 17 jumps Saturday to win the $100,000 Colonial Cup International, the richest steeplechase in the nation and the third richest in the world.

Cafe Prince, owned by Augustin Stables, finished the grueling 24-mile race in 5:32 to best a field of 12 horses by about four lengths. Cafe Prince was ridden by Jerry Fishback, who claimed the national steeplechase champion's title earlier in the day with a first-race victory aboard Underhanded.

Bel Iman, owned by Peggy Steinman and ridden by Doug Fout, finished second while Leaping Frog, owned by Chadds Ford Stables and ridden by Bruce Christison, was third.

Cafe Prince earned $60,000 for the victory and became the repeat winner of the prestigious hurdle event, capturing the title before in 1976.

Dosid, owned by Mrs. Donald M. Caver and ridden by Charles Fenwick Jr. led more than half of the race, which was run under clear skies and temperatures in the 40s. A stiff wind chilled a crowd of about 8,000 persons who watched the race at the Springdale course.

Dosid faded as the horses came down the back stretch the second time and Bel Iman forged to the front, rounding the final turn. Fishback and Cafe Prince burst out of the pack to challenge Bel Iman going to the final jump.

Bel Iman had a slight lead taking the jump but Cafe Prince quickly caught up and won the race going away by about four lengths.

Burn area seeded

LOS ANGELES County fire camp crew members Dave Gorey, left, and Tim Powell cast ryegrass seed on an area of the Santa Monica Mountains blackened by fire Nov. 14-15. About 1,500 acres in two burns were seeded. The grass seed germinates in four or five days.

Normal patterns return

By United Press International
 Meteorologist Jerome Namias, who accurately predicted the Pacific Northwest's drought, believes normal weather is returning. "I am optimistic that this marks the end of the three-year drought in Northern California and the seasonal drought in Oregon and Washington," Namias said of the rain and snow storms that pelted the region this week. Namias, a former longrange forecaster for the National Weather Service, currently is a research scientist for the Scripps Institute at La Jolla, Calif. He was the only meteorologist to issue a written forecast accurately predicting the Northwest drought, the worst in 104 years. Namias' official forecast will not be issued until next month, but he said Thursday "preliminary data indicates the Northwest can expect normal rain in the highlands and snow in the mountains, in some cases above normal." A high pressure system along the West Coast last year caused the drought in the western states and record snow and cold weather along the East Coast. "Restoration of that blocking high pressure ridge is not in the cards this year," Namias said. "The series of storms that has swept across Northern California, Oregon and Washington in the past few days is a manifestation of that return to normal-weather patterns."

National Weather Service, said his official 90-day outlook for the nation would be issued Monday afternoon. However, he said the weather this year has been changeable, which is the normal pattern.

Cenex plans meeting in Spokane

SPOKANE, Wash. (UPI) — CENEX, the agricultural supply cooperative serving 13 states, will hold its 47th annual stockholders' meeting here Feb. 7-8, officials announced Friday. It will mark the first time the annual meeting will be held outside St. Paul, Minn., where CENEX is based.

Jerry Tvedt, CENEX president, said more than 3,000 delegates and visitors are expected to attend the meeting at Spokane's Riverpark Center, including many persons from Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Utah attending an annual meeting for the first time.

In conjunction with the meeting, a dedication ceremonies are scheduled Feb. 10 for a new CENEX distribution center at Pasco, Wash. The center will have a storage capacity of 130,000 square feet and supply local cooperatives in five states. CENEX supplies more than 1,400 locally owned cooperatives with farm and home products and also provides management and technical services.

Victory applauded

PARK RIDGE, Ill. — American Farm Bureau president Allan Grant has claimed an important first round victory for farmers fighting federal moves to restrict their acreage holdings to 160 acres.

Grant cited developments of Nov. 14, in a U.S. District Court in Fresno, Calif. that effectively held up application of 160 acre regulations imposed by Interior Secretary Andrus until a determination can be made whether environmental impact studies will be ordered for affected areas. The Andrus regulations issued Aug. 25 would limit individual farm ownership to 160 acres where federal water is used; apply new standards to selling off lands in excess of that, with buyers determined by public lottery; and require owner residency to within 50 miles of the farm. The regulations were to have taken effect around Jan. 1, 1978 after the Nov. 28 conclusion of current public hearings. But, in legal action filed by the American Farm Bureau Federation and the California Farm Bureau Federation, Andrus has agreed to extend the hearing period to Dec. 31, and to defer final rules until March 1, 1978.

Japan adopts new sugar import rule

TOKYO (UPI) — The House of Councilors Friday passed legislation to regulate sugar imports in an effort to help rehabilitate Japan's ailing hidden sugar industry. The legislation, passed in an extraordinary parliamentary session, will go into effect in January and will run until the end of September 1980. It calls for a fixed annual import volume reflecting domestic demand. The Sugar Price Stabilization Corporation, a government agency, will delay shipment on orders exceeding the quota up to a year and charge interests and warehousing fees to importers. The importers' selling price to the corporation will be determined by the government's half-monthly survey of prices in London. Japan's sugar imports were liberalized in 1963 but under the Sugar Price Stabilization Law, importers first must sell imported sugar to the corporation and later buy it back. The Agriculture-Forestry Ministry, which is in charge of farm product imports, earlier planned to purchase sugar through the corporation for distribution to refiners. They set the plan aside, fearing charges of a possible violation of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade amid mounting foreign criticism over Japan's enormous trade surplus, according to industry sources. Annual allotments for each importer will be determined by the Japan Sugar Refiners Association, which is expected to meet to discuss the adjustment. The ministry hopes the provisional bill will result in scrapping about 20 percent of surplus plants and equipment and the reorganization of the trade-subsidized industry, according to ministry sources. The Japanese sugar industry now has about 40 percent more capacity than necessary.

Worm war weapon produces guffaws

OTTAWA (UPI) — To loud guffaws and snickers from desk-thumping MPs, Environment Minister Lougheed said Thursday a new sex attractant was the war weapon in the war against the spruce budworm in eastern forests. Marchand was asked in the House of Commons what federal action was being taken to eradicate the "prolific little monsters" that have destroyed an estimated 130 million acres of eastern timber. "This is one of the most serious problems we have in the forest industry in this country," Marchand said. He added the government support spraying on "a very limited and very strictly controlled basis." He said also "we are now concentrating a lot of our time and money on research in cooperation with the United States on a sex attractant which attracts..." At this point Marchand was drowned out by loud guffaws and desk thumping by Members of Parliament. "What is it, Lougheed, what one? — End sex in Eastern Canada," said another. An unruffled Marchand went on: "Let us say it is a synthetic action which affects the males so that they cannot find the females. Thus, the females would lay infertile eggs." After restoring order, Speaker James Jerome had the last word: "With that kind of sneak preview, I am sure the House can hardly wait for the minister's press release."

What part of your body do you lather first when you take a bath? Never mind, too personal. The rhetorical query was merely preliminary to report that three out of four bathers lather their stomachs first. That's not the proper way to do it, however. If right-handed, the left forearm should be lathered first. Then, no, wait. Am compiling an A-to-Z list of where to lather up, in order, when in the bathtub. Coming soon here. Don't miss it.

BLACKOUT

Q. "When and where was the first wartime blackout?"
A. "In this country" at St. Michaels, Md., probably, in 1813. When the British sailed into the bay there, the townsfolk doused their house lamps and hung lanterns in the trees down the road. The British fired at the lanterns.

Q. "How many warts in the Statue of Liberty's torch?"
A. That's 14,000 from 14 lamps.

Q. "Quick, Louie, what was the name of Babe Ruth's favorite baseball bat?"
A. "Black Betty."

WORD GAME

Seven nouns in this language of ours form their plurals by changing the vowel sounds. Man becomes men, for instance. Tooth and teeth. Foot and feet. Mouse and mice. Louse and lice. Woman turns into women; wherein the vowel sounds change in both syllables. Let's see, that's six. Which word have I forgotten?

Among those oddball laws of yore, please list the little gem enacted by the General Court of Massachusetts in 1639. It prohibited the drinking of toasts. Wiser heads repeated it in 1645, though, admitting it was unenforceable.

After the French Revolution, it was determined in the new legislature there that the conservative deputies would sit to the right of the speaker while the more radically liberal deputies would sit to the left. That's the origin of our political terms "right wing" and "left wing."

Question arises as to why cats hate to get wet. Don't know, don't know. A built-in phobia, no doubt. Their ancestors came from the desert.

Battery D not aware of cognac

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (UPI) — Legend has it Army Capt. Harry S. Truman bought an expensive bottle of cognac more than 50 years ago and passed it away for the last survivor of his famous Battery D.

But there's one small problem with that story.

None of the 25 surviving members of Battery D ever has seen the Three Star Hennessy cognac or knows where it is located.

Of the Battery's original 219 members, five attended the group's annual reunion two weeks ago at the Muehlebach Hotel. But none had a clue to the whereabouts of the liquor.

The popularly accepted story is the bottle was bought for about $15 by Truman or another Battery D veteran in 1922 or 1923. It was to be held, presumably by Truman, for consumption by the veteran who outlived all his comrades.

Another version alleges the bottle was given to Truman for safekeeping after the man from Independence had climbed the political ranks to the presidency and returned to his home in 1953.

Regardless of which — if either — version is true, the Battery D veterans who remembered the story of the bottle expected Truman to have it. But when the former president died in 1972, none of his comrades remembered being told its location.

... legend persists

"I hear that the great white father — that's Captain Harry — stashed the bottle somewhere but nobody knows where," said John T. "Jack" Naulty of Prairie Village.

Naulty said he has heard of the bottle numerous times, but added "I couldn't say for sure that the bottle actually existed."

The secretary of Battery D, Edward P. Neisburger, 82, also couldn't recall seeing the bottle, but believes it exists. He suggested it could be at the Truman Library, but library director Benedict K. Zohrist says he's never heard of it.

Naulty said he has heard of an inventory taken early this year of all museum items and Truman's personal office revealed no cognac.

"I can vouch for it personally," the employee said. "There's no Hennessy bottle in there."

One of the remaining possibilities is the bottle lies in the Truman family home in Independence. Both Battery D survivors and museum officials, however, have been reluctant to disturb the privacy of Bess Truman in an attempt to solve the mystery.

Arizona opens probe

PHOENIX (UPI) — Arizona's first year-round grand jury begins its work Monday, checking evidence in alleged white-collar crimes.

The initial state-wide grand jury met in 1976 but was allowed to be impeached for 120 days at a time. Under a law passed by the legislature this year, jury panels can sit for at least six months.

Authorities said it is planned to have the first jury work for six months and then call a new jury so work will continue 12 months a year.

Almanac

United Press International — Today is Sunday, Nov. 27, the 331st day of 1977 with 34 to follow.

The moon is between its full phase and last quarter.

The morning stars are Mars, Venus, Jupiter and Saturn.

The evening star is Mercury.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Sagittarius.

American historian Charles Beard was born Nov. 27, 1874.

On this day in history:

In 1901, the War Department authorized creation of the Army War College to instruct commissioned officers.

In 1945, President Harry Truman named Gen. George Marshall special representative to China.

In 1956, President Dwight D. Eisenhower decried the Suez Canal had weakened American-British-French accord in the Western Alliance.

In 1962, all 97 persons aboard a jetliner bound for the United States were killed when it crashed in Peru.

A thought for the day: British author Rudyard Kipling said, "The silliest women can manage a clever man, but it needs a very clever woman to manage a fool."

China launches power conservation effort

HONG KONG (UPI) — China's top leaders, facing a serious power shortage that may impede the nation's economic development, have ordered a nationwide electricity conservation campaign.

The (Communist) party central committee, headed by our wise leader Chairman Hua (Kuo-feing) is very much concerned with our country's power industry development," said an editorial in the party newspaper, People's Daily.

"It has instructed that we must place the power industry in the forefront of our national economy."

The editorial, broadcast Wednesday by Peking Radio, followed a series of other articles and public statements in Peking and other parts of the country about the power shortages.

In the November issue of Red Flag Magazine, the party's theoretical journal, Mrs. Chien Cheng-ying, minister for water conservancy and power, wrote at length about the power problem.

"The consumption of electric power is increasing rapidly. In recent years, the capital construction plan for electric power has not been fulfilled. The number of generating units installed has fallen (short of) the target. Some generating equipment has fallen into disrepair... Electric power construction has failed to meet the needs of developing the national economy. Power shortages have occurred in both industrial and agricultural production."

"The electric power industry has become a weak link in our country's national economy," she wrote.

China's power output last year was estimated at 130 billion kilowatt hours. This year's production probably will increase by at least 10 percent but still fall far short of the rising demand caused by stepped up economic activity.

China's power output is divided about equally between hydro-electric and thermal, but resources in both forms of energy are impressive.

"Coal and petroleum (resources) are among the highest in the world and China's hydroelectric resources exceed 500 million kilowatts, the highest in the world," Mrs. Chien wrote.

Snowstorms bring good skiing to Colorado

ASPEN, Colo. (UPI) — Skip Gikerson, director of customer service at the Aspen Ski Corp., said this year marked one of the best Thanksgivings he has ever had, and he wasn't talking about the turkey on his table.

Snowstorms in Colorado's high country provided enough base for thousands of skiers to spend the holiday on the slopes. All but a few of the state's ski areas were open Thursday, and some reported the best early snow conditions in years.

"Last year at this time, I guess I was outside playing tennis," Gikerson said. "This year is probably the finest Thanksgiving we've ever seen."

Most Aspen ski areas reported good to very good conditions on parts of the mountain that were open for skiing. The base at Aspen ranged from 17 to 37 inches with almost 75 percent of the mountains available for skiing.

Representatives from Loveland, Keystone and Winter Park all said they were "very pleased" with snow conditions and the turnout on Thanksgiving, the traditional opening day for the state's ski resorts.

Abby

By Abigail Van Buren
1977 by The Chicago Tribune N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 25, have been divorced for five years and have two children, ages 6 and 4. I wasn't married when my second child was born. That's when I had my tubes tied. (I figured two children were enough for me, married or single.)

Then I met Ray and it was love at first sight for both of us. Ray is perfect for me in every way. He's 33, divorced and has never had any children, but he's crazy about kids. He's just like a father to my children and they adore him. Abby, I've never known such a kind and understanding man.

Ray and I have set our wedding date, and the closer it gets the more chicken I get because I never told him that I had my tubes tied. He keeps talking about the "kids" we will have one day, and I just can't tell him I can't have any more. I am so afraid that if he knows the truth it might change the way he feels about me, and I love him so I don't want to lose him.

Would it be terribly dishonest if I were to keep this from him?

CHICKEN

Honesty best bet

DEAR CHICKEN: Yes. If it will make a difference in his feelings for you, you're better off knowing now. Tell him. If he's as kind and understanding as you say he is, he'll marry you anyway.

DEAR ABBY: While talking to my husband one evening, I asked him if he had ever had an affair before we were married. He laughed and said he was taking the Fifth Amendment on that one.

We talked some more and he finally said, "If I were to tell you I had, then you'd want to know with whom and when, and then things would never be the same between us."

He is very proud of the fact that he never lies. I then said that I knew that he had had an affair with a certain person and I just wanted to admit it. He made no comment and the conversation ended. (I don't really know, but I have strong suspicions.)

Now I am wondering why he "took the Fifth." Isn't that an admission of guilt? If he was not guilty, all he had to do was say so.

Would you say he is acting like a guilty man or one who is innocent?

SUSPICIOUS

DEAR SUSPICIOUS: I would not presume to judge him guilty or innocent. However, he appears to be very intelligent. And if you're wise, you'll not bring it up again.

DEAR ABBY: I am just about ready to lose my mind. I have talked to our family doctor, the doctor gave me some pills for my nerves, all my relatives and some of the neighbors, and everyone tells me there is nothing I can do. You are my last hope.

I have a beautiful daughter. She is 54 and has never been married. She had her chance but she was particular. She worked steady for 35 years, saved her money and never ran around.

Well, she finally met a man she thinks is worth marrying. He is 57 (he says) and has never been married (he claims). He travels for some kind of electronic company, and all I know about him is that he drives a nice car and has my daughter in a trance. Here is the blow. My daughter says she doesn't want a wedding, so if she doesn't come home one night, I shouldn't worry—she'll have gone to Las Vegas to get married. How can I talk some sense into that child's head?

HEARTBROKEN MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: I'll have to vote with the minister, your family doctor, the relatives and the neighbors. Your "child" is a big girl now and well able to make her own decisions. Don't take it personally. She's entitled to have the kind of wedding she wants.

If you feel left out and lonely, or wish you knew how to get people to like you, my new booklet, "How To Be Popular: You're Never Too Young or Too Old," is for you. Send $1 along with a long, self-addressed, stamped (24 cent) envelope to Abby, 132 Laaky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

your health

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb—
In one of your columns, you mentioned women in their 50s taking birth control pills to prevent changes that occur with the menopause.

I am 45, and I was advised by my doctor to discontinue taking the pill because of the high risk of stroke, heart attacks, etc., in women over 40. I am in good health, and have never had health problems of any kind.

My doctor recommended "Band-Aid" surgery to tie my tubes. I have three children, and definitely do not want any more. I am strongly considering this operation and would appreciate your comments on the subject.

Also, do you feel a woman should continue on the pill after age 40?

Dear Reader—
In the first place, the risk to women older than 40 of having a heart attack or stroke because of the pill is not a very high risk. Women don't have all that many heart attacks or strokes until well AFTER the menopause, when fewer women are taking hormones. The statistical analysis of the available data suggested that it might cause one death in a thousand women. The data is very poor data anyway, and doesn't permit very many valid conclusions other than further studies need to be done.

Second, more recent analysis of the bad data show that cigarette smoking alone increases a woman's risk six times what it would have been on the pill alone. That means the one in a thousand figure is far too high for women over 40 who do not smoke.

By controlling high blood pressure, avoiding obesity and not smoking, a woman over 40 can minimize her risk when taking the pill to the point that it has very little significance.

Do I recommend the pill for women over 40? It depends on the woman. If she smokes and won't quit, then perhaps she should not take the pill. If she doesn't smoke, has normal or low normal blood pressure and low normal cholesterol levels, the risk is small enough that I would not object to her using the pill.

Then, a woman has other choices, including "Band-Aid" surgery to tie the tubes, or to use an intrauterine device (IUD). The latter is a pretty good choice for women over 40 who will soon be in the menopause age and shortly thereafter will no longer have any danger of getting pregnant.

Community Flea Market slated

TWIN FALLS — Christmas shoppers looking for something different will have their annual opportunity Saturday at the flea market at the First United Presbyterian Church.

This is the 10th year the Sigma Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority sponsors the popular market where craftsmen of all types offer their creations for sale.

This year the offerings have expanded so that in addition to booths throughout the gymnasium there also will be displays in the firestone room at the church, located behind the Twin Falls County courthouse.

All proceeds the sorority makes on the project are given to charity. In past years the flea market, in addition to providing many unique and handmade gifts, has provided financial assistance to the Child and Adult Development Center and the Easter Seal program.

Doors will be open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday. Refreshments also will be served.

"Peddlers" who will be selling their hand-crafted items will include Mrs. Marie Fisher, Filer, doll clothes and furniture; Mrs. Uba Allen, Twin Falls, crocheted afghans; Janet Critchett, Murtaugh, ceramics; Mary Emmans, Twin Falls, purses.

National women's conference

Resolution backing unanimous

By LORAYNE O. SMITH

Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — The only vote at the National Women's Conference last week in Houston close enough to need counting was on whether to adjourn at 11:30 p.m. Saturday.

Back home this week the two delegates from Twin Falls, Marge Slotten and Betty Hoppe, said, contrary to media reports, there was definite majority support for all but one of the 26 resolutions dealing with many aspects of social and legal problems facing American women.

"It was apparent from the start that the majority of delegates favored the resolutions," Slotten said. This should not be surprising since most of the proposals were compiled from those adopted at the individual state conferences held earlier, she said.

The standing votes were so obvious that no tabulation of count was necessary. Both women commented how the media representatives at the conference concentrated on the dissidents — the women they could see standing to vote against the proposals.

"They talked to them and no one else," Slotten said. "So no wonder the national coverage gave the impression the anti-feminists exerted great influence."

Both local women said they felt the conference, which has been sharply criticized because of the federal money involved, was an overall success.

There were some major logistic problems to be expected with such a huge gathering. There were 2,000 delegates plus thousands of spectators.

Slotten said she was impressed with the diversity of women who, she felt, truly represented the women of America.

She explained that data about the 10 delegates elected at every state Women's Conference earlier this year was fed into a computer, then compared with the socio-economic picture in each state. At large delegates were then appointed in numbers approximating each state's congressional seats to fill in the proper representation.

Thus if a state has 30 per cent rural women, through this process 30 per cent of its delegation should have been farm women — Age-income-ethnic background and creed all were considered to get proper representation.

"This completely debunks the charge that all delegates were hand picked," Hoppe said. She was elected a delegate on the floor at the Boise conference in May with no prior knowledge of the delegate selection procedure.

Many of the women attending had never been to that kind of gathering before, Slotten said, so the overall political expertise — such as knowledge of parliamentary procedure was not too great.

The one proposal on the National Plan of Action (resolutions) prepared by the American commissioners of the International Women's Year which was defeated called for a cabinet-level women's department.

Slotten, who had wanted to make an alternate proposal for a human rights post instead of separate women's department, said she understood the feeling among delegates was that a women's department could simply become a dumping ground for a hodge-podge of problems, easily eliminated by a future president not as concerned about the women's rights.

A former local and state president of the League of Women Voters who has attended a national League convention, Slotten attempted to offer her alternate proposal, but said the closest she ever got in for one of the eight microphones on the convention floor was third back from the No. 6 mike.

Since the proposals which ranged from battered wives, child abuse and credit to the more highly publicized gay rights, abortion and Equal Rights Amendment (ERA) were in alphabetical order, the women's department proposal was debated in the closing hours of the four-day convalesce Monday morning.

An amendment to substitute a women's congress, as a follow-up to the Houston meeting for the proposed cabinet level department, was introduced but defeated.

Slotten said before she could get to a mike to propose her alternative suggestion a vote on the question was called for and the proposal defeated. It was one of the few resolutions which did not originate in the state meetings.

In addition to the fear of tokenism the women's department lacked support because of some suspicion that it was designed to provide a job for one of the commissioners, according to wire reports.

Both Twin Falls women had high praise for the way in which the plenary sessions were conducted and the integrity of the delegates.

Idaho's 14-member delegation voted as each woman saw fit, they said. The Gem state group was not polled and the Twin Falls women said they did not know how each of the delegates voted.

They did say they knew the Idahoans were split on the abortion proposal which was euphemistically labeled "reproductive freedom" and had one of the longest discussions.

However, the Twin Falls women said the discussion on the resolution about minority women was longer, because of the many substitute motions proposed to strengthen the final resolution.

The gay rights issue, termed "sexual preference," was not one of the biggest issues and the ERA discussion took one hour.

The 25 proposals adopted at Houston will not be sent to Congress, where the delegates hope, they will be implemented into law.

Both Slotten and Hoppe said they would be glad to tell anyone interested how they voted on specific issues, but emphasized it was important for people to understand what the resolutions actually said.

The "reproductive freedom" proposal, for instance, was more complex than merely being for or against abortion as a moral issue.

Other items urge provision at all levels of government for confidential family planning services for teen-agers, education in responsible sexually and reform of laws which discriminate against illegitimate children and their parents.

Wife changes place in car many times

By ERMA BOMBECK
I was standing on the curb the other day when my husband yelled from behind the wheel of the car, "Get in!" I yelled back, "Where do you want me to sit?"

He retorted, "Your usual place."
I had to stand there and smile. That was a ridiculous thing to say to a woman who has changed seats in a car every time the gears shift.

"When we dated, I sat so close to the driver, he looked like he was driving alone. The longer we dated, the more I gravitated toward the passenger side.
After we were married, I was all the way over to the door... with the exception of when my mother-in-law rode with us and I was relegated to the back seat.

After the first two children were born, I sat with my body draped over the back seat so I could reach and seat. When a third child came along, I sacrificed my front window seat and sat between the other two in the back to (a) accommodate everyone with a window seat and (b) to keep them from killing one another.

After car pools became a way of life, I slid over to the driver's spot behind the steering wheel, a position I held until my knees locked.

I remained there until the children began to drive. Then I moved back to the passenger side where I sat constricted in fear with my right foot on an imaginary brake and both hands on the door handle.
When the children left and we began to see grown-ups once again, I was relegated to the back seat with the other woman where it was assumed we would have more to talk about than the man I married.

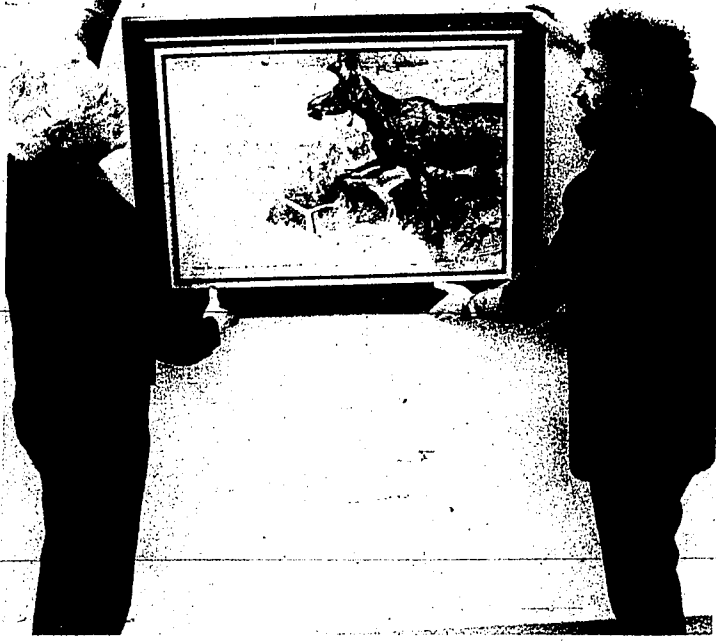

Some women tell me it isn't over yet. There's the period when you get grandchildren and they ride up front and you sit in the back with the portapotty and the playpen, and when your daughter gets older, you end up in the back seat with her again.

"Are you going to stand there all day or are you going to get into the car?" yelled my husband impatiently.

I crawled over the dog (who insists on sitting by the window where he can hang his tongue out of the no-draft) and squeezed in close to my husband. "We've gone complete circle," I whispered.

He hadn't the foggiest notion what I was talking about.

Environmental groups want timber to stay

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Two environmental groups have asked the state to deny a request to harvest timber in the Case Mountain sequoia grove "rather than let it be clear-cut for fenceposts, grape stakes and stimpies."

In a telegram Thursday to state Forester Lew Moran, the Sierra Club and Federation of Western Outdoor Clubs said they learned "by chance" that Moran will decide the Case Mountain harvest plan today. The grove is adjacent to Sequoia National Forest.

Mary Ann Eriksen, a spokeswoman for both groups, said the grove on privately owned land contains 98 "mature" sequoia trees that are "really not considered high-grade timber trees."

The clubs told Moran that approval of the logging operation would be contrary to the state's policy and duty "to preserve and acquire giant sequoia groves" and "will foreclose future inclusion within Sequoia National Park, where it naturally belongs."

Frenchman pushes roquefort cheeses

NEW YORK (UPI) — As president of the Roquefort Cheese Association of France Jean Francois Mittaine travels the world to promote his product. But he is not really looking for bigger sales.

The cheese producers around the town of Roquefort would be hard-pressed to handle a higher volume of orders.

"If Americans started buying a lot more roquefort, some other part of the world would have to suffer," Mittaine said in an interview. "To export more to America, we'd have to export less to somewhere else."

The Roquefort producers make about 17,000 tons of cheese a year; that's about 1 million pounds. Eighty per cent of it is consumed in France and the rest is shipped to 70 or 80 different countries.

The United States gets about 6 percent of the total. The city of Paris each year eats as much Roquefort as all of America.

Production increases by about 2 percent each year, but much higher increases would simply not be possible while standards are being maintained, according to Mittaine.

So why the promotion?

"When you want to drink scotch in a bar, you don't just ask for whisky because you might get bourbon," Mittaine said. "Similarly, when you ask for Roquefort dressing you should not accept any other veined cheese."

Mittaine, whose driving energy and enthusiasm are leavened by considerable galle humor, just wants you to be sure you're getting the real thing.

"There are two other well-known veined cheeses: Britain's Stilton and Danish Blue, both of them made from cow's milk. American blue cheeses are marketed under a variety of labels.

This finessing loses and if East shoots back a club an alert South should still scrape up the overtrick. He simply cashes all the red cards and watches discards.

If West checks two clubs and a heart, South can throw him in with the jack of clubs and make him lead from the king of spades.

If West unguards his king of spades, South should refuse the spade finesse. It is too dangerous. He will then pluck the king and make the overtrick that way.

Women support resolutions

It supports the Supreme Court decision guaranteeing reproductive freedom to women, urges sex education programs in schools, removal of barriers to family planning services and urges school systems to assist teen-age parents by setting up programs to encourage them to remain in school.

Likewise the "sexual preference" plank seeks laws to eliminate discrimination to homosexuals in areas "including, but not limited to employment, housing, public accommodation, credit..." asks reform of penal codes that restrict private sexual behavior between consenting adults, and laws that use sexual orientation as a factor in child custody.

The fact that many women could support some, but not all of the items was the subject of considerable concern, Slotten said. The Idaho delegation wanted to get the items on several of the controversial issues divided for separate vote.

Alice Dieter, Boise, the only Idaho delegate ever to get to a microphone, asked if each item could be voted on separately and was told the question would have to be raised on each individual resolution.

The idea failed to obtain delegate approval so, as in all political conventions, it boiled down to delegates having to decide individually whether they approved more of the resolution contents than they disapproved.

The biggest spontaneous demonstration followed passage of the ERA resolution, as well as the ones dealing with minority women's rights and "sexual preference."

License revoked

NEW YORK (UPI) — Process server Anthony Tabbita may have thought he deserved a medal for logging the delivery of 70 sets of court papers in one day. But all it got him was revocation of his license.

In what they dubbed the case of "the peripatetic process server," officials said a check of Tabbita's logs and New York City street maps showed there was no way he could have made the deliveries claimed for last Feb. 17.

For instance, Tabbita, 34, whose territory included the upper part of the Manhattan, said he made one stop at 12:59 p.m. and another more than two miles away a minute later.

Television in review

Argument in critical circles

By United Press International
NEW YORK (UPI) — If 100 million people watched "Laverne & Shirley," would that make it as good a comedy half hour as the old "Mary Tyler Moore Show?"

The question is not meant seriously, but it comes to mind because of a rather shrill speech made recently by Fred Silverman, president of ABC Entertainment. Silverman, for the head of the top-rated network, has gossamer thin skin and evidently does not read poor reviews of his programs and then laugh all the way to the bank.

"I wish a few critics would stop putting down millions of people with whom they obviously disagree night after night, season after season. What makes these critics right and 100 million Americans wrong?" Silverman asked in a recent speech, also obviously not expecting an answer.

Silverman singled out "Laverne & Shirley" in particular in his attack on "a few critics."

The first thought has to be that to dislike "Laverne & Shirley" or any other show is not synonymous with putting down those who enjoy it. That difference of opinion is what makes horseshoes, not to mention competing networks. Success in the ratings also is not a guarantee of excellence.

More pertinent, it is not the purpose of anyone reviewing television to decipher and articulate the taste of the television audience. That's what network programmers were created for.

On the contrary, it is the viewing public that decipheres the reviewer's remarks in terms of its own taste.

Most of those who write about television are reviewers, rather than critics. Their first aim is to describe the programs they are writing about, and part of that description would be the extent to which the show moves the individual to tears, laughter or whatever the intent may be.

Reviewers sum up scenes, quote jokes, delineate story lines, whatever will help the would-be viewer who must choose what to watch.

Their purpose first of all is to be informative, and part of that information is a critical evaluation. Everyone has seen shows that they hated themselves for enjoying — shows that were so bad they were good entertainment. That quality should be apparent in the review.

For instance, there is a school of comedy today that equates noise with wit — the louder the line, the funnier the joke. And there are viewers who hate noise, for whom the only good quip is a quiet quip. The reader of a television review should be able to spot which kind of comedy the writer is describing. The choice lies with the viewer.

The reviewer (or the critic) generally does not rate a show in comparison to its opposition on rival networks, nor with more than passing consideration for its time slot, since both those qualities are negotiable and subject to change at the whim of a network executive.

Sorry, Mr. Silverman, your criticism of reviewers won't wash. No soap. "Soap?" Could certain dirty remarks about "Soap" be what got under the skin of the ABC executive?

Kelley: Historian with a badge

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In early England, sheriffs had an effective way to pursue a lawbreaker: they raised a "hue and cry" and all able-bodied men were required to join in the chase. It was a crime not to.

"The source of this historical footnote to the age old war against crime is FBI Director Clarence Kelley.

Kelley is not plugging for citizen posses, nor does he want people to take the law into their own hands. He cites historical references in speeches to show there is nothing new about his call for community-wide "crime resistance," or his insistence that the public must help the police if crime is to be stemmed.

These historical references also reveal that Kelley, a policeman all his adult life who will retire Jan. 1 after directing the FBI for 4½ years, is a history buff as well, with emphasis on law enforcement.

Kelley recently gave members of the Nebraska Sheriff's Association a lesson about the title they hold, saying that the office of sheriff is "steeped in tradition and history dating back to ninth-century England."

"As you probably know," Kelley said, "England back then was divided into counties, called shires, whose chief law officer was the shire-reeve, or sheriff!"

In those days, the sheriffs executed royal writs and were originally responsible not only for police and jails, but tax collection as well, Kelley said.

In several speeches Kelley has stressed advances made in police training since the nation's first police school began in Berkeley, Calif., in 1908. He quotes a report former Chief C. B. Horrall wrote in 1947 about Los Angeles police:

"In 1903... the requirements of a policeman were very simple. In addition to certain physical requirements, it was necessary that he be able to read and write, do simple arithmetic and have a fair knowledge of the city."

Kelley's comment: "The same was true of most departments of that day. But, as barbers over the centuries have evolved into surgeons, so ill-trained rookies have evolved, and are still evolving, into well-trained professionals."

Kelley repeatedly preaches his gospel of "citizen involvement" in law enforcement, saying it is "absolutely crucial" to success in reducing crime. Kelley-the-historian takes over to prove it is nothing new.

"As you are probably aware, the 'hue and cry' concept of early England was firmly rooted in a peacekeeping system of mutual responsibility," Kelley told the Greater Dallas Crime Commission in a 1975 speech.

"In effect," Kelley said, "every citizen was a policeman, responsible for the good conduct of other members of the community."

Kelley made clear he does not favor self-appointed vigilantes. But he also emphasized that cooperation with the police has — historically — been a duty rather than an option.

"The official call to action — termed the 'hue and cry' — was a stern summons for all free men to assist in the pursuit of justice," Kelley said. "Hearing this alarm, one was duty-bound to help run down the fleeing lawbreaker. Failure to do so was in itself a grave offense."

"Certainly one of the oldest proven methods of meeting our commitments is that of achieving a flow of information from citizens who either have knowledge of or have been witnesses to crimes," Kelley said in a speech last year.

Slipper satin holiday rage

NEW YORK, N.Y. — Slipper satin in confetti colors will be all the rage this New Year's Eve!

Those satiny party clothes that you see in the stores can be stitched up easily on your sewing machine, says the December issue of Seventeen Magazine. And you can make accessories to match!

Jump into the new year in a shiny lavender jumpsuit, elasticized at the waist and above the bust. Stitch on straps of satin ribbon in four colors that tie at the shoulders. Or sew up a simple satin dress in electric blue, topped with a pink off-the-shoulder ruffle. Tie it at the waist with a matching long pink ribbon.

When you want to really mix confetti colors, make a long three-tiered skirt — one tier blue, one pink and one lavender — with a long ribbon belt, all in satin, of course! Wear it with a peasanty satin blouse with a shirt yoke and full sleeves with elasticized cuffs.

When you've finished your sewing, don't put the satin ribbon away. Put it to use sprucing up accessories!

CHICKEN CREPES FLORENTINE ARE FOLDED so none of the filling escapes when baked

Crepe hors d'oeuvres make the holidays bright

Add a little razzle-dazzle to your holiday entertaining. Start with the always elegant chicken crepe and make it sparkle in a variety of festive hors d'oeuvres.

You will find it especially easy if you keep a batch or two of prepared crepes in the freezer ready to use as you need them. Another time saving tip is to use small cans of meat spread to make rich crepe fillings almost instantly. It's a shortcut, good cooks can take without sacrificing flavor for convenience.

Start off a party with something really unique — Chicken Crepes Florentine. Into each crepe fold a combination of fresh cooked spinach, canned chicken spread, and sliced almonds. A little grated Parmesan and dried tarragon add a special touch to the filling.

Baking the filled crepes for less than ten minutes will give them a crisp texture. Then cut each in half for a bite size appetizer that can be eaten easily with a wooden pick. They are impressive enough for the most formal holiday gathering.

Deviled Ham Stack-Ups are equally elegant and require no cooking once the crepes have been made. Simply spread crepes with a mixture of cream cheese and deviled ham which you have added chopped celery and cashews for crunch. Stack the "frosted" crepes and chill well before slicing into individual servings.

If your party is more on the casual side, let guests team up crepes and fillings at the last minute with this unusual idea. Cut plain crepes into pie shaped wedges and crisp in the oven. They make feathery, melt in your mouth diners for 3 or 4. Blend of meat beef spread, chili sauce and sweet pepper relish.

CHICKEN CREPES FLORENTINE
1 package (10-ounces) fresh spinach, chopped
1/2 cup soft bread crumbs
1 tablespoon salt
2 cans (4 1/2 ounces each) chicken spread
1/4 cup sliced almonds
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
1/2 teaspoon dried leaf tarragon

30 crepes
In a large fry pan, stir together spinach, garlic and salted oil. Cook over medium heat, stirring occasionally, for about 5 minutes. Set aside.
Preheat oven to 400°F. In a medium bowl, mix together chicken spread, almonds, cheese and tarragon.

Place 1 teaspoon of cooked spinach in the center of each crepe. Top with 1/2 tablespoon chicken spread mixture. Fold two sides of crepe over chicken mixture—Bring remaining two sides together to completely cover filling.
Place on ungreased baking sheet, folded side down. Bake for about 8 minutes. Slice in half diagonally and serve with wooden picks.

Makes 30 hors d'oeuvres.
DEVILED HAM STACK-UPS
1 can (4 1/2 ounces) deviled ham
4 tablespoons cream cheese, softened and divided
2 tablespoons chopped celery
3 tablespoons chopped cashews, divided
1 teaspoon freeze-dried chives
6 crepes

In a small bowl, mix together deviled ham, 3 tablespoons cream cheese, celery, 2 tablespoons cashews and chives. Spread 5 crepes each with 2 tablespoons of this mixture. Spread remaining cream cheese on last crepe. Stack crepes on top of each other. Sprinkle top crepe with 1 tablespoon chopped cashews. Refrigerate for about two hours. Slice the stack into 32 wedges. Use wooden picks for serving.

Makes 32 hors d'oeuvres.
BEEFY DIE WITH CREPE CHIPS

8 crepes
1 can (4 1/2 ounces) roast beef spread
2 tablespoons chili sauce
2 tablespoons sweet pepper relish, drained
2 tablespoons chopped onion
Preheat oven to 375°F. Slice each crepe into 8 pie shaped wedges. Place on ungreased baking sheet and bake about 7 minutes or until crisp. Makes 64 crepe chips.

In a small bowl, mix together roast beef spread, chili sauce, sweet pepper relish, and chopped onion. Refrigerate one hour. Serve with crepe chips.
Makes 1 cup dip.

Ground bone added?

Hot dog may be in for change

© Chicago Daily News
The much maligned hot dog soon may have a new ingredient to add to its array of chemicals, fat, water and animal organs.

If the Department of Agriculture carries out its plan to allow tissue from ground bone to make up as much as 3 per cent of the product, the red hot could be in for a radical change.

"Mechanically deboned meat will have an effect on the taste, texture and flavor of hot dogs," said Harry Backer, a vice president of Oscar Mayer & Co. "Our reputation is quality and we will not sell any products with ground bone tissue."

But other companies are planning to sell processed foods such as hot dogs, bologna and other sausage products that contain ground bone. Carl Gylfe, vice president of Hygrade Food Products Corp., said small regional meat companies are especially interested in introducing new products.

"Testing is going on," said Ken Johnson, executive director of food sciences at the National Livestock and Meat Board. "Samples of products containing deboned meat are very taste acceptable. The problem is establishing parameters. There is a limit to the amount that can be used."

The blend of meat and bone is made by grinding bones with attached meat scraps and then forcing the mixture through a sieve to screen out chips larger than a grain of pepper.

Carol Tucker Foreman, USDA's chief of food and consumer services, said she is "confident that this product, when used within stated limitations and labeled accurately, meets the requirements of the Wholesome Meat Act."

The department believes the bone chips won't be noticeable and says the proposed regulations will benefit consumers by:

—Helping to stabilize the price of products that use the new ingredient.

—Adding about 700 million pounds of meat to the U.S. food supply, equal to more than 3 pounds per person.

—Providing a good source of calcium.

But consumer advocates like Ralph Nader say deboning is nothing more than "turning garbage into money."

The controversy has been kicking around since 1974, when the government temporarily allowed food manufacturers to reclaim meat close to the bone. In April, 1976, standards for the products using deboned meat were proposed as part of a broader plan to redefine "meat."

A coalition of consumer groups, however, challenged the interim standards in U.S. District Court. The court forced the Agriculture Department to scrap the proposals on grounds that potential health hazards of mechanically deboned meat hadn't been adequately assessed.

(USDA then prohibited the official mark of inspection on deboned meat, a move that halted production.)

Ironically, the same Mrs. Foreman (who is the government's designated mouthpiece for explaining the proposal) was at the forefront of the legal battle filed in 1976. As former director of the Consumer Federation of America, she once blasted USDA for railroading the interim standards through without adequate testing.

But Mrs. Foreman now contends she never really opposed use of deboned meat as long as it was properly tested and labeled on food packages.

Public briefings on the proposal were held last year in four cities, including Chicago. Consumers have until Dec. 5 to issue their final comments on the proposal. Agriculture Department officials will then review the written comments before making the ultimate decision.

As it presently stands, the proposal would:

—Amend meat inspection regulations to add "tissue from ground bone" (TFGB) as a "meat food product" that could be used as an ingredient in certain products under specified limitations.

—Mandate the phrase TFGB on the label in type size at least half the size of the product name. This form of labeling wasn't required in last year's proposal. In addition, TFGB also must be included in the list of ingredients to protect persons who must restrict calcium intakes.

The making of Little America

LITTLE AMERICA, III. (UPI) — Harbors and railroad shops gave birth to thousands of U.S. communities. Little America owes it all to trucks and Ralph Savill.

Little America hugs the crossroads where Highway 78 and 24 meet, on a green hill overlooking the Spoon River valley below Peoria.

"It's just a wide place in the road and if you honk, you'll hear your sound through," said Mrs. Zula Smith, barbecued rib chef — $2.39 a platter — and owner of the Little America Cafe.

"A monument, really, to old Ralph," said Dennis Baker, seated at the counter and arranging a final eaten-clean bone by the row of rib remnants on his plate.

"It was back in '35 and they run a paved road through, our first. Well, Ralph Savill built this place. Really something. Drinks. Food. Even a dance hall."

"Then bang. The county went dry. No more drinks. No more dance hall. No more Ralph.

"He sold out and started again. Went down the road and began a place he named Little Egypt."

Baker sipped his 20-cent cup of coffee.

"If you look close, down off the right side of the road, you can see still the cement foundations, all that's left of Ralph's Little Egypt. But we're here. Bless you, Ralph," he said and down went the coffee.

"Before Ralph came this place was nothing but farmland and ducks and geese," he said.

"Now look at us," Mrs. Smith said. "There's a Little America out in Colorado or somewhere and they say they're the biggest truck stop in America. Well, this Little America may be the smallest truck stop but, by Heaven, we got the best food."

A sign on the white wall listed steak, Little America's most expensive dish, at $5.25. A pepper steak sandwich costs $1, an egg 65 cents, homemade bread for 85 cents a loaf. Mrs. Smith, bowing toward Dixie drivers, offers a chicken fried steak but, bowing to the Yanks, it has a brown gravy instead of the Southerner's cream gravy.

Little America's eatery also duplicates mid-American restaurants with its salad bar. But come to Little America and read these signs:

One, harking back to pre-Ralph Savill times, says "We will open at 4 a.m. during deer season."

Another, showing Mrs. Zula Smith's attendance at Spoon River College: "Please do not comb hair in cafe."

"At Spoon River College we learn to keep down food poison. We learn about bacteria. Darn right, no hair combing. Combing all that had bacteria onto table tops and plates," she said.

A waitress laughed.

"You got your tickle box turned over?" Mrs. Smith shouted.

"Zula!" replied the waitress.

"We're not sour puss," Mrs. Smith said. "We're the new Little America!"

The old Little America lives back the road and up a gravel driveway. Mrs. Hurd Wilcoxon is 86, born, raised and thriving on the hill.

"Grandfather came from Germany in 1848. He put in his time in the Civil War and came here as a pioneer. Lived in a log cabin. My parents bought the old Pritchard place, where the school used to be, and I remember as a girl running down to the barn when it caught fire and saving a calf."

"Now I have 11 grandchildren and six great-grandchildren and the Lord," she said. "Mr. Wilcoxon passed on."

"I remember Little America before the paved road. We lived in the big house. Sleigh rides and oyster suppers. Grandfather used to use a wagon for that once-a-year trip into Peoria so he and Grandmother could attend the Roman Catholic church."

"I'm Protestant," she said.

She sat in her kitchen. Potatoes and carrots simmered on the stove. On the wall hung signs — "Nobody knows the troubles we've seen, but we keep trying to tell them" and "God is Love" and "Jesus never fails" — and also two calendars and two clocks.

"I'm 86. But I'm not afraid of time," she said.

"Time is interesting. The changes it brings are interesting. Time is life and life. In Little America is probably no so different than anywhere else."

"You can always drive to Peoria."

New coloring book not Polish joke

DETROIT (UPI) — If someone asks if you've heard about the Polish coloring book, don't wait for the punch line. It's not a joke.

The book is the creation of a Michigan woman of Polish descent who tired of ethnic jokes and "Kiss me, I'm Polish" buttons.

Catherine Macaro said the book is aimed at filling a void in suitable materials to introduce children to Polish culture.

The idea came to her one day as she watched her own 4-year-old daughter, Mary Jo, playing with crayons and a coloring book.

Why not a coloring book of Polish customs and traditions, she thought.

"This was the approach with dignity I was looking for," Mrs. Macaro explained in a recent telephone interview from her home in the southeastern Michigan community of Temperance.

She said the television series "Roots" also inspired her.

"I figured if he (Alex Haley) could do that, if he could fake such a giant step, I could take a baby step," she said.

Two months ago, the book — with a red-and-white cover resembling the Polish flag — rolled off the presses.

It contains 61 pages of illustrations for kids to color, three more pages of footnotes and a brief bibliography for study and research.

The book, priced at $1.50, is moving briskly at the Center for Polish Studies and Culture at St. Mary's College in the Detroit suburb of Orchard Lake.

A spokesman at the center said many schools have ordered the book for their students. Other Polish centers in the area and one in Milwaukee also have placed orders.

In addition, Mrs. Macaro said that one woman saw the book and decided she wanted to do something in a similar vein about Denmark and Finland.

"The response has been far beyond my expectations," Mrs. Macaro said. "We're still in our first printing but probably will go into the second one sometime next month."

On the subject of culture, she said, "You have to start with the young. It can't be done too well later in life."

Her goal in the project was to create something lexically rich and visually appealing and "yet interesting to appeal both to kids who would color and to adults who would have to explain the customs and traditions to the child."

Most important, though, was the impact on children.

"The visual approach, especially to children, on any subject is always the most attractive," Mrs. Macaro said.

She was an art major at the University of Toledo and had taught the subjects in schools systems in Indiana and Ohio before moving to Michigan.

She spent about two months on the illustrations.

Her brother, Carl, helped with the project, supplying her with research on Poland's geography, history, traditions, customs and costumes.

The coloring book, she said, resembles a "mini-encyclopedia of the glory that is Poland."

"The combination of illustrations and system of footnotes is a step in the right direction for cultural pursuit," Mrs. Macaro added.

Currently, Mrs. Macaro is coordinating a Polish culture course in cooperation with the Bedford schools community education program.

Weather terms explained

WASHINGTON (UPI) — To help you cope better with winter storms, the National Weather Service presents this glossary of terms that may appear in forecasts:

"Snow flurries" — Intermittent snow of short duration, which may reduce visibility to an eighth of a mile or less.

"Snow squall" — Brief, intense snow comparable to a summer rain shower; with gusty winds.

"Snow" in a forecast without qualifying words such as "occasional" or "intermittent" — Probably will fall for several hours without letup.

"Heavy snow" — Four inches or more in a 12-hour period, or 6 or more inches in 24 hours, with regional variations. Where 4-inch snowfalls are common, "heavy snow" generally means 6 or more inches in 12 hours.

"Blowing snow" — Snow lifted from the surface so that it restricts visibility.

"Drifting snow" — Strong winds will pile the snow to traffic-impeding depths.

"Blizzard" — Winds of at least 35 mph with considerable falling or blowing snow.

"Severe blizzard" — Winds of at least 45 mph plus densely falling or blowing snow and temperatures of 10 degrees or lower.

Anthropologist Margaret Mead, in St. Louis, to receive an award from the Religious Association of the U.S. and Canada, said U.S. taxpayers got more than their money's worth from the $5 million National Women's Conference in Houston. "This country is viciously stingy when it does anything good," said Mead; "but find any small piece of a bomber — probably the steering wheel — and you'll see what $5 million is worth. When you're spending billions for death, why not $5 million for life?"

Daniela Gioseffi, poet, playwright and one of America's leading exponents of the belly dance, has written a funny novel entitled "The Great American Belly Dance," published this month by Doubleday. The two-time winner of grant awards from the New York State Council of the Arts traces the antics of her heroine from the moment she decides to give up thoughts of a dramatic suicide to launch a nationwide feminist belly-dancing crusade. The book proves with wit that womanhood in America has at last come of age — and laughter.

Lady Amalia Fleming, Greek-born widow of Sir Alexander Fleming, the discoverer of penicillin, who was jailed for 16 months in 1971 by Greece's military regime and then expelled from the country following her release from prison, has won a seat in the newly-elected parliament. She is a member of the Panhellenic Socialist Movement and was designated by her party to be a deputy.

Patricia Hearst, convicted bank robber and former member of the Symbionese Liberation Army, is in love with a cop. The object of the newspaper heiress' affection is 30-year-old Bernard Shaw, a decorated San Francisco policeman who moonlights as her bodyguard, the New York Daily News reported.

A life-size terracotta statue of Minerva, the Roman goddess of wisdom, has been unearthed after 2,200 years in one of the most important archeological finds in recent history, Italian archeologists announced.

Melina Mercouri won a seat to the Greek Parliament by 10,000 votes over her nearest opponent. Mercouri was thrilled that 75 percent of the votes were cast by the women of Piraeus. "Women in Greece are second-class citizens," she said; "but in Piraeus they are third-class citizens; it means even more."

Wearing seat belts like brushing teeth

BALTIMORE (UPI) — More than likely the motorist who doesn't wear seatbelts doesn't go to church, doesn't visit the dentist or doctor regularly, didn't go to college and feels powerless to change an unsatisfactory position in life.

And, also more than likely, the same motorist can't be convinced to wear seatbelts, even though that failure could lead to death.

That negative assessment of motorists who don't wear seatbelts came after a survey of 1,200 persons conducted by two professors at the Johns Hopkins School of Hygiene and Public Health.

The purpose of the study — published in the American Journal of Public Health's November issue — was to determine what kind of person fails to use seatbelts and how their use could be increased.

"One of the ways people take care of themselves is by wearing seat belts," said Knud J. Helsing, who conducted the survey along with Dr. George W. Comstock. "It's like brushing your teeth."

"We found that people who don't wear seat belts are less likely to visit their dentist and doctor regularly compared with people who always wear them or even wear them only sometimes," Helsing said.

"The picture of a person least likely to use seat belts thus emerges as someone who has no schooling past high school, who feels that his or her station in life is unsatisfactory, and who feels powerless to change at least some aspects of it," the study said.

"There is little question that socio-economic factors, especially education, show the greatest association with seat belt usage," it said.

Another observation was that those who don't use seat belts are less likely to go to church.

"The fact that non-users tend to be infrequent church attenders suggests that they could also be lacking in social support from outside groups," the study said. "Such persons present serious challenges to health educators."

The study notes: "In 1974, nearly 80 percent of motor vehicle fatalities involved the occupants of a moving vehicle. Most of these deaths could have been prevented by the use of . . . seat belts."

But despite the effectiveness of seatbelts, Helsing said they are worn by only about one-fourth of the motorists all the time and another fourth sometimes. About half of the motorists usually don't bother to buckle up.

The study points out most legislative approaches to seat belt use have been unsuccessful, including requiring buzzers and lights as reminders that the belts have not been fastened.

"What we tried to do is find out who doesn't use seat belts — what type of person, so we can see what can be done to change his or her mind," Helsing said.

Not much, the study concluded.

"This leaves mandatory passive restraint systems such as air bags, seat belts that automatically deploy when the door is shut, or other approaches, requiring no conscious action by occupants of the vehicle, as virtually the only feasible alternative for reducing death from automobile accidents to any substantial degree," the study said.

Treasury officials promote $2 bills

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Treasury Department Wednesday renewed its effort to convince skeptical Americans the $2 bill is a practical currency and should replace the singles in their wallets.

The department said it persuaded two supermarket chains to circulate the $2 bill in a six-state area for a trial period of six months.

"The Treasury is asking only that $2 notes be routinely used by the businesses in normal day-to-day transactions," said Rette Anderson, undersecretary of the treasury.

All 155 Safeway stores in Northern Virginia, Washington, D.C., Maryland, Delaware and Southern Pennsylvania will begin handing out $2 bills as change to customers.

—Grand Union's 24 stores in the Glens Falls-Sarasota County area of New York also will participate in the experiment.

Mrs. Anderson said retailers in Portland, Ore., tried the same approach, at Treasury's urging, and the circulation rate of $2 bills in that area has increased by more than 2,000 percent in two months and circulation of the $1 bill has declined 15 percent.

The government decided to reissue the $2 bill on April 13, 1976, the 23rd anniversary of the birth of Thomas Jefferson, whose picture is on the front of the bill.

Treasury officials said widespread use of the $2 bill could save the government between $5 million and $6 million in printing costs by displacing half of all the $1 bills.

Since then, officials acknowledge, the success of the duce has been spotty, at best.

About 220 million of the $27 million bills are in circulation, although officials estimate about 25 percent have been stashed away by speculators, presumably in the belief that if they hang on to them they eventually will become more valuable. Almost all of the remaining $2 bills are gathering dust in Federal Reserve Bank vaults around the country.

"I guess the $2 bill is sort of in limbo," a Fed spokesman said. "Nobody will actually declare it a failure or a success. They may be desirable but they're not necessary that's how many people feel. They're getting along well without it."

VARIETY OF ITEMS ARE INVENTORIED FOR ANNUAL EPISCOPAL BAZAAR
... Freda Ward and Charlotte Green receive items for the country store

Episcopal bazaar planned

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Christmas shopping complete with lunch and a home-baked food sale will be offered Dec. 2 and 3 as the Episcopal Women of Twin Falls holds its third annual country store and bazaar.

The event is typical of many such events which feature hand-crafted items ranging from holiday decorations to handmade quilts. Like Granny's Barn now open in Buhl and the sorority-sponsored Flea Circus, the Country Store offers original items that will not be found in commercial gift shops. Many members of the Episcopal Women's organization will be entering their own special handwork, but there will be craftsmen and artists from as far away as Seattle, Wash.; Boise, Idaho Falls and Blackfoot displaying their wares for sale.

There is a 50-cent admission charge which entitles the shopper to spend as much time as he or she likes inspecting the various tables of goods. Food items include homemade bread, cakes, pies, cookies and even some special treats such as Swedish coffee cakes and Danish pastry. Lunch is available at a reasonable price from the church kitchen. Parking is at the rear of the church, accessible from Ash Street.

Freda Ward, publicity chairman for the coming event, said many new participants as well as the popular favorites of earlier seasons will be offering items for sale. New this year is a Basque table at which a number of area Basque women will be offering hand-painted and hand-made items of their native design. Included is a miniature doll bed complete with tiny hand-made pillows, patch work quilt and printed sheets. Hand-made and hand-painted wooden stools, needlepoint stools and fireplace bellows are also among the offerings. A set of hand-carved identical to the wooden ones which can be purchased in Spain and Portugal can also be purchased at the women's table. These, however, are ceramic but painted to resemble the wooden ones.

Margaret McAtee hasn't decided on the price yet, but she will be selling numerous hand-made felt Christmas tree decorations. Made to resemble toys or animals, the little felt figures include camels, lions, horses, dogs, bears and even elephants.

There will be the usual decorator pillows, placemats, hand-painted and embroidered tote bags and purses and even sets of cloth or wooden collector dolls.

Joan Bean, Twin Falls, makes collector dolls using nylon stockings and hand stitching the nylon together in such a way as to form faces. She also makes wooden peg dolls and said she will have "as many as I can get finished" to offer in the Dec. 2 and 3 event.

The bazaar will be held in the auditorium of the church with tables open from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. on Friday Dec. 2 and from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday.

The public is urged to attend. Proceeds earned by the organization will be used to expand the church's maintenance fund. Last year funds were sufficient to complete reroofing the church.

Curtain time set for 'Romeo and Juliet'

TWIN FALLS — Feuding families, surging street fight, duels to the death — does this scenario sound like an old, familiar western plot?

Perhaps, but this tale was also a favorite of audiences as far back as the 16th century. At that time a playwright by the name of William Shakespeare wrote a stormy drama about two wealthy families, whose hatred of each other is suddenly challenged by the passionate love of their children.

Entitled "Romeo and Juliet," the play was an immediate success and won much acclaim. Now this immortal love story can be seen as the second production of the College of Southern Idaho Drama Department this season. Directed by Tony Mannen, CSI instructor of speech and drama, "Romeo and Juliet" will be presented Dec. 1, 2 and 3 at 8:15 p.m. in the Fine Arts Auditorium at the college.

Staged in the Elizabethan fashion, the production employs a multi-level set, sumptuous costumes, instrumental and choral music performed on stage, and continuous action. The performances promise to be both visually and emotionally stimulating. The director is particularly excited about the dueling sequences which the actors have worked hard to perfect.

Heading the cast is Earl Starry as Romeo, Kelly

Sturgill as Juliet, both from Twin Falls.

Other players include Randy Wentworth as Mercutio, Pam Nielsen as the Nurse and Ken Jenkins as Friar Laurence, all Twin Falls; Stan Stoye, Yerrington, Nev., as Benvolio; Dan Mink, Jerome; as Tybalt; Robyn Clea, Twin Falls, as Lady Capulet, and Matt Hardin, Filer, as Lord Capulet.

The music will be played by Estelle Stansell, Jerome; Ron Starry, Twin Falls, and Bridget Hardin, Filer.

Mannen, who is both play and technical director, is assisted by Mary Ann Anderson, Eden. The music is directed by Matt Hardin, Filer, and the fencing sequences have been choreographed by James Van Lee "but, Jerome.

Helke Kinzel, CSI instructor of speech and drama, is in charge of business management and publicity. Tickets for "Romeo and Juliet" are available at the CSI bookstore or by phoning for reservations: 733-9354, Ext. 249 or 258.

Admission is free for all CSI students, faculty and staff, as well as for senior citizens with Golden Eagle cards. Admission for the general public is $3 and $1 for students, and children.

Rehearse scenes
