Farm strike caravan on road despite cold

By United Press International
Bitter cold settled across the midlands of America today as dissident farmers, demanding break-even prices for their crops, warmed up their tractors and headed for state capitols in support of a nationwide strike.

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland addressed a National Farmers Organization meeting in Omaha Thursday night and said he supported demands for 100 percent parity — market prices equal to the cost of production plus a reasonable profit. But the administration's chief agriculture official said he doubted the goal could be achieved.

In Idaho, few if any farmers will apparently rally in Boise Saturday. However, a group of North Idaho farmers along with others from Washington and eastern Oregon will travel to Pullman, Wash., to demonstrate.

U.S. Rep. Tom Foley, D-Wash., chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, is holding hearings in Pullman and the demonstrating farmers plan to converge on the hearings.

Monroe Hays of Twin Falls, district director of the Idaho Farm Bureau Federation, said the federation at its state convention which ended Thursday took no stand on the upcoming farm strike. He said he had not heard of any farmers from the Magic Valley area who planned to rally in Boise.

Joseph Klimes, Wendell area farmer, also said he knew of no area farmers intending to demonstrate in Boise.

Klimes said he doubted the effectiveness of the planned demonstration in state capitols Saturday but said he supported the farm strike set for next Wednesday.

"If farmers bought no new horsepower this year, we could still raise just as good a crop, but industry could not move," Klimes said. "We're not setting out to hurt any one person, but farmers are not beyond letting someone else feel the pinch we have felt."

He added he does not agree with farmers not planting a crop next year, however. Hays said the more than 21,000-member Idaho Farm Bureau Federation left participation in the strike up to the individual farmer, but he said the federation appreciates the publicity the strike is giving to the plight of the farmer.

"I certainly support the objectives of those who seek full parity income," Bergland said. "I think there's nothing wrong with that as a stated principle."

But Bergland said a guaranteed cost of production would result in "10 percent land inflation at least," forcing production costs and, eventually, food prices up.

Meanwhile, thousands of farmers from Washington to Louisiana and Delaware to Texas drove American flag-streaked tractors, combines, pickup trucks and other farm implements to their capitols for solidarity rallies scheduled for Saturday. The strike, during which producers will sell no products and buy no equipment or supplies, is set to begin Wednesday.

Jerry Green, a soybean farmer in Siskiyou Island, La., said the farmers are seeking only fair treatment.

"In lots of cases, it's costing us more to raise crops than we're getting out of them," he said. "There's a lot of farmers going out of business and in pretty bad shape, so we're doing just like the rest of the world, we're trying to do something about it."

In Dighton, Kan., the children of Ed Schmalzried lined up their toy farm equipment to emulate the convoys rolling across the prairie. On one of the miniature tractors was a hand-lettered sign: "We support the agriculture strike!"

Signs on the convoy vehicles ranged from "No barley, no beer!" to "Parity no charity!"

Herb Brown, Springfield, Colo., stressed the strike effort is not directed at the government.

"We do not feel we are being un-American by bringing our problems to light," Brown said. "We don't want people to feel that we are being disloyal to our country. The first Americans were farmers and we feel like farming in America is a heritage. But there just isn't any way we can continue without something being done."

Individual farm bureaus in various states adopted resolutions against official participation in the strike, but some urged farmers to act according to their consciences. Fred Heringer, president of the 79,000-member California Farm Bureau, the nation's largest, said his group was prevented by law from taking part in the boycott.

And he said he doubted the strike would accomplish its purpose.

"I sympathize with what these farmers are trying to do, but I don't think their strike is going to have very much of an impact," Heringer said. "The amount of food available to the consumer is too plentiful for this thing to be successful."

Soviets ease objections

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Soviet negotiators at SALT sessions in Geneva have made a "substantial concession" that would permit greater testing of all types of cruise missiles, defense officials said today.

Defense Secretary Harold Brown hinted at the development in a Brussels news conference this week.

The step goes part way toward removing some of the doubts military officials had about the arms control agreement now taking shape.

Officials in Washington said that last month the Soviets dropped the position that ground, ship- and submarine-launched cruise missiles being developed could only be tested from airplanes to a maximum range of 375 miles.

It also gives a boost to administration hopes of being able to have a SALT II treaty ready for consideration by the Senate early next year — although critics still are expected to oppose some of the basic agreements worked out so far as giving too big an edge to the Russians.

But Bergland said a guaranteed cost of production would result in "10 percent land inflation at least," forcing production costs and, eventually, food prices up.

Non-reader Johnny can't add either

MIAMI — New evidence that Johnny, that celebrated non-reader, also cannot add, subtract or divide has been provided by the low scores given in the mathematics portion of a statewide proficiency test administered to juniors in public schools in Florida this fall.

Forty-two percent of the 18,000 juniors in Dade County failed to pass the standardized test in October. Failed the math portion. Only 21 percent failed the other half of the exam, which was labeled "Communications," and was designed to measure reading, survival skills such as map reading and filling out applications.

The test, which all high school seniors must pass beginning next year to receive a diploma, is one of the first statewide efforts in a growing national trend demanding standards of proficiency and literacy before graduation.

Florida has apparently jumped ahead of other states with an "Educational Accountability Act" passed by the Legislature last year. The act set in motion the testing of only of High School Juniors, but also all third-, fifth- and eighth-graders in the state for measurement of progress.

California has a similar law, except that it permits individual school districts to set their own proficiency levels.

Vance seeks support for Sadat

By United Press International
Secretary of State Cyrus Vance flew to the Middle East today to seek support for Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's peace drive as Arab leaders intensified efforts to mend a rift that has plunged the Arab world into its "worst crisis since the creation of Israel."

Before he left Brussels for Cairo, Vance said the United States and the Soviet Union are in direct conflict on next week's Cairo conference. He said Moscow does not consider the talks bringing together Egypt, Israel, the United States and the U.N. Secretary General as useful, while Washington sees it as "a useful step forward."

At the same time, a senior Israeli government official said Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan, despite official denials, held a secret meeting last weekend with a high-ranking Egyptian official. The official did not identify the Egyptian but the newspaper Haaretz said it was Deputy Prime Minister Hassan Taha.

The site of the meeting was not disclosed. Haaretz said it took place Dec. 3.

Welfare agreement reached

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House and Senate negotiators today reached agreement on the first of many issues holding up legislation to bail out the financially ailing Social Security program.

The agreement — concerned not with Social Security itself but with welfare — was to provide $187 million to state and local governments to help them meet the burden of welfare costs. Another $187 million would be provided next year in other legislation.

White House deputy press secretary Rex Graman said today President Carter expects the Social Security financing bill will be completed this year. "We are making progress on this," Carter told a group of senior cabinet leaders at a briefing on the Panama Canal today.

He said, however, that the president "is concerned that the final legislation not place an undue burden at the expense of the working people and for the benefit of the more affluent."

Good day to write Yule cards

By United Press International
It was a great day to stay indoors and write Christmas cards today from the northern Plains to New England.

Survival gear was urged — officially and repeatedly — on people who ventured out.

Vicious winds, stacked snowdrifts 15 feet deep in Iowa, Illinois, Kansas, swept western Minnesota for a second day. The wind-chill factor plunged to 80 below zero on the northern Plains. Thirty-five inches of new snow alone Monday bogged Chardon in northeastern Ohio's snowbelt.

The snowstorm that began Thursday left thousands of travelers marooned in the Midwest, kept pummeling the eastern Great Lakes for a second day and drove eastward into New England.

"If you must drive, bring proper survival gear," the Minnesota Transportation warned.

"Common sense says don't go out," said Klroy Jagler, a National Weather Service meteorologist at Milwaukee.

No travel at all was advised. In much of Minnesota, Iowa, Wisconsin and eastern Ohio, Dakota. Largest sections of Illinois, Indiana, Michigan and Ohio were in almost as bad shape.

Dozens of highways and secondary roads in Iowa were clogged by snow. Snowmobile patrols searched rural roads around Davenport, Iowa, area for persons who might be trapped in their cars. Hundreds of motorists were stranded in the Peoria, Ill., area.

Schools closed in wholesale numbers across a vast belt of the state.

"It's bad, really bad," Betty Tyas, a sheriff's dispatcher, reported at Van Wert, Ohio.

"It's not as bad as last winter, but it's getting nice and close."

At Columbus, a man angered when he was hit by a snowball fired a pistol at the snowball throwers, wounding one man.

A resident of Michigan's Upper Peninsula said 12 inches of new snow atop old hill snow that would be "hip deep on a giraffe."

Up to 10 inches of snow had piled up by midmorning in western New York — the deepest accumulations in Tennessee and California counties. Buffalo so far had escaped the brunt of the storm.

Snow, freezing rain, sleet and high winds lashed New England. Highway officials and weather forecasters said conditions there would get much worse before they get better.

A massive power failure hit North Dakota Thursday night as high winds whipped the state and the wind chill reached 60 below. Up to 1,800 Fargo residents were without power for about 50 minutes.

One-quarter of Grand Forks and much of Minn. were without power for about the same length of time.

Today the mercury plunged to 38 below zero — the nation's low — at Glasgow, Mont. It was 37 below at Havre, Mont., 35 below at Miles City, Mont., 32 below at Williston, Mont., 30 below in eastern Wyoming and 22 below in northwestern Minnesota. Temperatures in North Dakota were expected to rise no higher than 10 below in the "heat" of the day.

Driver rescued

CLINGING to a rope and hanging from a grappling hook, truck driver Ray Dietrich is rescued from his jackknifed truck after being trapped 90 minutes near Madison, Ohio, Thursday. The rear wheels of the truck caught the rail of a bridge, stopping a plunge from an interstate highway into a river.

Child sex ring cracked

BOSTON (UPI) — A social worker, a child psychiatrist, two staff members of a private boys' school, the president of an investment counseling firm.

These five unlikely suspects arrested Thursday are among 17 people charged with operating a homosexual prostitution ring in the Boston area involving boys between 8 and 13 years old.

One investigator said the youngsters, who were paid up to $25 for each act, were members of "the largest child porn operation in the state's history."

The Suffolk County district attorney's office said 15 of the suspects had been arrested by Thursday night and that investigators were looking for seven other men who were charged Wednesday in the sealed indictment but were not directly involved in the ring.

Two of the suspects were arrested in Atlanta and New York City. Authorities said others were being sought in Connecticut, Vermont, Maryland, Michigan, and Florida.

All 24 suspects were charged with 86 counts, including rape and indecent assault on minors. Officials said the indictments climaxed a seven-month investigation. More indictments were expected.

District Attorney Garrett

Bryne said at least 15 of the boys testified before the grand jury. More than 60 boys may have been connected with the ring at some time during the four-year period under investigation, he said.

Among those arraigned were James Dallman, 35, a teacher at a Newton, Mass., private boys' school; Arthur Claridge, a former administrator at the same school; and Dr. Donald Allen, 50, a Boston child psychiatrist.

Also arraigned were Roger Spear, 44, president of a Wellesley investment counseling firm; and Mark Davis, 29, a Cambridge social worker.

Three other men indicted already are serving prison terms.

Investigators said the victims came from suburban communities north of Boston and were paid between $10 and $25 for their participation in the homosexual activities.

Some reportedly were wards of the state. None of Allen's patients was involved, officials said.

Authorities said the investigation began last spring with the arrest of Frank Damiano, a former Boston school bus driver, on 22 counts of rape. Damiano, now serving a life term at Walpole state prison for those convictions, also was indicted in connection with the ring.

Financial aides meet over dollar

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal met quietly with the finance ministers of Japan, West Germany, Britain, and France last weekend in Paris to discuss the decline of the dollar and other world monetary matters, the Washington Star reported today.

Federal Reserve Board Chairman Arthur Burns also attended the meeting, the Star reported.

Financial leaders of the so-called Group of Five, non-communist nations "met regularly to discuss finances. Foreign and U.S. officials have been concerned with the recent slide of the dollar in comparison to the German mark and Japanese yen."

"I don't think any big decisions were made" in Paris, the Star quoted a source.

The newspaper said Blumenthal, Burns and Treasury Secretary for Monetary Affairs Anthony Solomon left Washington last Friday for Paris. Blumenthal and Solomon returned Sunday and Burns on Monday, the report said.

Sources told the Star it "wasn't a panic meeting," but "there wasn't any night-clubbing in Paris."

Mexican inmates ferried back home

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — The chartered jetliner ferrying the first inmates in the United States-Mexico prisoner exchange program out of the country landed in San Diego shortly after daybreak today to take on a second group of Mexican nationals.

The flight originated in Houston, where 11 Mexican prisoners serving terms ranging from 3 to 100 years boarded.

The passengers from Texas were to be joined in San Diego by 25 of their countrymen for the final leg of their flight to Mexico City. Two other prisoners had been scheduled to leave on the flight, but officials said they were not processed in time.

The 38 prisoners will finish serving their terms on their native soil.

The plane was scheduled to leave San Diego for Mexico City at noon EST. Once there, it will load up 61 American prisoners for the flight back to San Diego. Takeoff was scheduled for 4 p.m. EST.

In Houston, the 11 Mexican nationals were wearing crisp, gold-colored, short-sleeved jumpsuits when they arrived at the airport in two white U.S. Marshal's vans shortly before 6 a.m.

The vans pulled up to the waiting DC-9 Texas International airlines, and within moments the prisoners boarded the red, white and blue aircraft. They were under the supervision of uniformed Harris County sheriff's deputies and federal prison officials.

Sadat risks overplaying hand

How about another bit of goodwill?

On a trip through Ketchum this week Darrell Manning, director of the Idaho Transportation Department, let it be known his department has scrapped plans to widen U.S. 93 to four lanes between Bellevue and Ketchum.

In 1974 and 1975 Ketchum residents overwhelmingly opposed construction of a four-lane highway between Bellevue and Ketchum. The locals worried a four-lane highway would damage the rural quality of life in the Wood River Valley.

Manning told the Ketchum Rotary his department decided to abandon the four-lane plan because Ketchum's residents didn't want it.

His was a wise, political decision. Perhaps the transportation department will soon bless Twin Falls with a wise, political decision and budget some money for widening Blue Lakes Boulevard North.

No money for the widening of Blue Lakes Boulevard North has been budgeted for the next two years.

Even when money is made available for the widening of the busy street, the highway department is acting a bit like Scrooge at Christmas.

Although the state highway department has agreed to pay one-third the cost of widening the road, one of Idaho's busiest, the city of Twin Falls and merchants along the route are being asked to pay for two-thirds of the cost — an arrangement which doesn't seem fair.

After all, Blue Lakes Boulevard North is a part of the state highway system as Highway 93. It seems appropriate the highway department at least go halves on the cost of widening Highway 93 if the city of Twin Falls and area merchants pay the other half.

Welcome breathing room on 160-acre limitation

A California judge Thursday opened up some breathing room in the debate over whether the federal government should enforce a 160-acre limitation on the size of farms receiving water from federal reclamation projects.

U.S. District Judge M.D. Crocker ruled yesterday the Department of Interior must file an environmental impact report before instituting new rules regulating the size of farms supplied with federal water.

Judge Crocker's restraining order means the 160-acre minimum question probably won't be forced on farmers in the western states for at least a year.

The delay gives the public and America's farmers a chance to look more closely at the Interior Department's plan. Amidst all the shouting about the unfairness of this proposal some farm leaders have missed the point of the Interior Department's proposals.

Secretary of Interior Andrus, unless the Washington climate has affected his brain, isn't an enemy of agriculture.

As Idaho's governor, he consistently spoke out for higher farm prices, the preservation of the family farm and the need to keep farm energy costs low.

Just maybe he's doing it again in Washington, but has bungled the effort.

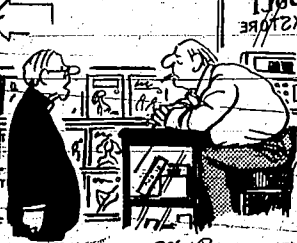

At the heart of the 160-acre limitation on farms receiving federal water is the belief that family farming is the mainstay of American agriculture. An Interior Secretary who recognizes this isn't all bad.

Yes, the 160-acre minimum as written into the 1902 Reclamation Act is unworkable. But maybe some minimum acreage standard, or perhaps some limit on the amount of subsidies paid to the biggest farm operations in the nation might help the small farmer compete against the corporate growers.

The California judge has given farmers a chance to examine the advisability of putting limitations on the size of corporate farming in this nation.

Idaho's smaller farmers might do well to consider the benefits of this kind of legislation if it is properly drafted.

WASHINGTON — President Sadat of Egypt is now the most visible and dramatic personality in world politics. Having started the diplomats and politicians with his sudden mission to Jerusalem, he is now on TV almost as much as Walter Cronkite, but the feeling here is that he is now in danger of overplaying his hand.

JAMES RESTON

One day he attacks the Soviets and his disarming and jealous Arab brothers, and then invites them to a reconciliation conference in Cairo. Predictably, they sent their regrets. The next day, he is back on television watching President Carter's support of the Cairo conference. And a day or so after that, he is denounced by the other leaders of the Arab world as a "traitor" for going to Jerusalem, and he breaks diplomatic relations with all of them. This is why Secretary of State Vance suddenly want to see the anti-Sadat leaders of the Arab states in the White House. He wants to support Sadat's move toward reconciliation with the Israelis. He also wants to persuade them that it is in their own interest to go along with Sadat's policy of reconciliation with Israel rather than opposing him. But while it will be denied here, Washington is also trying to persuade Sadat that he is going too far and too fast and too public, and needs to slow down.

Even the most enthusiastic cheerleaders for Sadat's open-door policy toward Israel are troubled by his high-visibility television diplomacy and are now gathering their safety nets.

The official view in Washington is that Sadat has played an heroic role and will probably get and deserve a Nobel Peace Prize for transforming the diplomacy of the Middle East. But he cannot do this alone or with the Israelis and the United States, and he cannot do it with Television Diplomacy.

If there is to be an enduring peace in the Middle East, officials in Washington believe, it has to be done with the agreement of all the Arab states and at least with the acquiescence of the Soviet Union.

Otherwise, even if Sadat and Prime Minister Begin agree to avoid war, and make a separate peace, the other Arab states will have no reason to compromise and will continue the conflict along the Golan Heights into the last quarter of the century.

This is why Vance is going to the capitals of the Arab countries that oppose Sadat. He is trying to persuade them that Sadat is right in trying to make peace with Israel, and that he is trying to help them and not their enemy.

Vance also is going to the anti-Sadat capitals, to understand the point of his mission, to remind them what they must choose between cooperation with the United States, or if that fails, cooperation with the Soviet Union.

He has another argument for the anti-Sadat Arab leaders: the more they oppose Sadat's efforts to reach a compromise with Begin, the less Begin will be willing to make territorial concessions under the United Nations Resolutions 242 and 338.

There is a fundamental conflict between the Israelis and the Arab states, which Sadat defined quite clearly in his speech to the Knesset in Jerusalem. What territory would the Israelis give up for peace? He insisted that they must give up "every inch." By this question has not been resolved and certainly not answered by the Israeli government before Vance went this week to the Middle East.

Ever since Sadat went to Jerusalem, the politics of the Middle East has been a television extravaganza. It has been all theater and philosophy, even ideology. But there has been very little discussion of Sadat's demands or Begin's cautious rejection.

This is what the Carter administration has been trying to get at. It has been pressing the Israelis to define what captured land from the 1967 war they would give up, and urging Sadat — in many private communications between President Carter and Sadat — to state how they would respect the political independence and territorial integrity of Israel.

But the more the Arab nations have quarreled among themselves, the less Cairo and Jerusalem have been able to reach out to the West. Begin has not sent Abba Eban or President Carter and Sadat to the Cairo conference, both of whom have stated publicly that the time had come for fundamental reappraisal of Israel's territorial problems.

Instead, he assigned to the Cairo conference two officials who have the reputation of making elegant but negative judgments. So there is, at least as thoughtful observers see it, in Washington, a growing problem in this Middle East controversy.

Consequently, Sadat continues to play television politics. The Arabs are quarreling among themselves. And in Washington, is trying to reconcile their differences. Vance is trying to do in his latest mission to the Middle East "to persuade the anti-Arabs to forget the past and think of the coming age. With the agreement of both Sadat and Begin he is going to the anti-Sadat capitals and trying to find a compromise that will bring them to Cairo on the way to a general settlement in Geneva.

"Here's the one for F.B.I. director again."

Charged for nothing

Price hiked for not listing

NEW YORK — Inflation took a turn for the worst the other day when the New York Telephone Co. received permission to raise the price it charges for not printing your name in the telephone directory. That the company charges anything at all for not listing a number is an act of astonishing gall, raising the price of not providing this service borders on economic burlesque.

For years thousands of printers have not printed the notes I scribble to myself on the backs of envelopes, yet none has ever charged for denying these doodles an existence in print. The confiant swarming with barbers who do not cut my hair, yet no barber has ever charged me for keeping his clippers sheathed.

RUSSELL BAKER

The telephone company's reasoning in this affair appears to go something like this: People who buy telephone service expose themselves as hostages to a minimalist and sometimes maniacal humanity. This is especially true in New York, where the number of people who wander the streets talking to themselves by daylight approximates the entire population of metropolitan Pittsburgh. At sunset these masses go home to their telephones to pass the night dialing strangers whose names are printed in the directory. They work on the assumption that anyone listed in the New York telephone directory is sitting home desperately yearning for strangers to ring up and breathe heavily across the electronic miracle of the Bell system's synapses. Trouble occurs with those brothers who the simple breathing and seek relief in verbal exercises. Who wants to be awakened from the lute show for a telephoned description of some

Men in literature lack social value

BOSTON — They had begun talking about literature and ended up talking about men. That in itself was unusual. The conversation began talking about Erskine, or artichokes, or the Middle East, and ended up talking about men. They were, after all, old friends.

This time they were discussing "The Women's Room." The novel by Marilyn French had appealed to them as a saga, a kind of War and Peace — without the peace — which ranged over the past 20 years of women's lives.

It followed one woman from post war suburbia to Cambridge consciousness-raising to the sort of independence that left like strength on Monday and loneliness on Tuesday.

So the women tried to think of some books for a parallel male reading list. A Men's Room, perhaps. Where were the men, writing about their own lives, the interior landscape, the changes in their experiences over the past 10 or 20 years?

Joe Heller? The men in his book, "Something Happened," had less "redeeming social value" than Marilyn French's. They were automatons in the science-fiction world of corporate life. Their batteries were charged by self-hate. They were nothing but dry martini.

Norman Mailer's men once had at least the garlicky aroma of sexual rage. Now, as art imitated life, there was nothing left of them, but pathetic cocktail party pugilism. A cosmic angle had wiped them out.

The menu went on. Saul Bellow's men had been chopped in middle age into mince-piles of anxiety. John Updike's confused computers were barely holding themselves together. They were as solid as creme caramel.

These authors were not writing about men's experience today. Philip Roth, the man who could write brilliantly about being a boy in the forties, had never come of this age. His "Professor of Desire" had received tenure without manhood. He was archaic and even his lust was as dry as a soda biscuit.

While the libraries were filled with books about the changes in women's lives — enough for a room of their own — there was little being written for a men's room. Oh, there was a touch of gall and then, a mere cup or two. There was "The Corrections" now novel about men and children. But there wasn't "Eric" Jong, or a "Martin" French, or a "Frank" du Plessis Gray.

One of the women said that it was part of The Expression Gap, something that would only be clear from all accounts, as a cliché and ended up emotional life so they often checked out it, and eagerly written about it. Men had just gotten a permission slip to that part of the deep interior of their lives.

The women thought about that. When they got together, they started out talking about the Middle East, then they started talking about men and they knew got together — even those who were bouillabaisse and moussaka and beef Wellington — they began talking about the Middle East, and ended talking about the Middle East. They still didn't differ. You could read all about it.

© The Boston Globe Washington Post Writers Group

ELLEN GOODMAN

They had all read it, flinching with recognition along the way, exhausted by the trip, the effort of turning all those pages of experience. They had evaded on truth.

Through an imperfect book, French had shown the emotional texture of women's lives to be indigestibly rich. Her women were like hollandaise sauce, lush, but always on the verge of boiling.

But the men in that "Room" had less flavor than Fry-Krisp. There was nothing much to them. They were flat and altogether unpalatable.

So they ended up talking about men, because as one said, "Aren't there any men in books with redeeming social value?"

The others chuckled. They were all women who were married or otherwise involved and their men were not Fry-Krisp. One was moussaka, another was beef Wellington, the third was, they all agreed, bouillabaisse.

They were in a short, complicated and nourishing men. While they were more likely to share the ingredients of their emotional recipes with women than with each other, they were definitely not Fry-Krisp. They weren't even steak and potatoes.

Despite odds, Bokassa organized African nation

NEW YORK — How does an African leader build a nation from a patchwork of tribal lands, separated by language, custom and animosities but bound together by a colonial power for the convenience of its administrators?

The task has been tried by army commanders, despots and wild politicians but nowhere with more panache than in the heart of Africa by the man who Sunday crowned himself Emperor Bokassa I.

The Central African Republic, now Empire, emerged separately and independently in 1960. The landlocked and poor, though potentially rich, territory fell to the French during the colonial conquests that gained them vast areas in that part of Africa in the 19th and early 20th centuries. Before independence, it was one of four units that constituted French Equatorial Africa and set out on their own after referendums in 1958.

Jean-Bedel Bokassa was a captain in the French colonial army when his native country achieved sovereignty. He was medals and citations for bravery while serving with the Free French of Charles de Gaulle and in the French colonial war in Indochina.

Back home, now a colonel, he organized the new nation's French-trained army and became its commander in 1963. The civilian government led by his cousin, David Dacko, turned toward the left and did away with party politics to retain power with an entrenched bureaucracy.

Colonel Bokassa attacked that government in a coup on New Year's Eve of 1966 and set out to become the "Father of the Nation." Now, he says, he will become "the world's first socialist emperor."

The challenge was formidable from the start, and he has been accused of ruthlessness and even cruelty. He was a former hand over a remote country of two to three million people, scattered over an area slightly larger than France, mostly illiterate, mostly living from subsistence agriculture and in general about as poor as any people on earth.

Before independence, it had general popularity among his people even as he eliminated rivals and affronted the French residents.

"You have 80 tribes in this country," a diplomat remarked a few years ago. "The idea of a nation means nothing to them. But the father of the nation — that means something. And that's Bokassa."

As a start, in 1966, this "father-the-chieftain" accused the ousted regime of corruption and profiteering, vowing to put an end to such practices.

Japan balks at surplus reversal

© N.Y. Times Service
TOKYO — Japan has no intention of making a public pledge to turn its massive trade surplus into a deficit, Nobuhiko Ushiba, Japan's new minister for external economic affairs, said in an interview here.

Ushiba, a former ambassador to the United States, will travel to Washington this weekend to deliver Japan's answers to a series of economic demands made by the United States in recent weeks.

Meanwhile, American officials here reiterated that such a default commitment, including a target date for its accomplishment, remained the single most important item of any economic package to halt rising difficulties between the two nations.

With both sides expressing displeasure and disappointment with the stands of the other, even before the sessions open, the prospects grew here that next week's meetings would produce no settlement of the economic troubles, which Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda has said form the "most serious situation in Japan's postwar history.

The United States, which expects a deficit of around $30 billion this year, has said it is the responsibility of the major industrialized nations to incur trade deficits now to help pull many other lands out of their lingering recession. Japan amassed a trade surplus of $13.36 billion for the first 10 months this year.

During a series of increasingly blunt bilateral consultations that fall, U.S. officials demanded "drastic" and "basic" economic restructuring in Japan to stimulate the domestic economy and ease purchase of imports, here, especially of manufactured goods, to right the trade balance. Not to do so would seriously threaten relations between Japan and her trading partners, American officials told Fukuda.

There were signs Ushiba himself was disappointed with the package. "The prime minister told me," Ushiba said during the interview Wednesday night in the Foreign Ministry, "to do my best even if the package is not as large as I hoped for."

He said the package emphasized three main aspects: stimulation of the domestic economy, improving the environment through a variety of tariff, government procurement and import financing measures for foreign firms to do business in Japan and an "extra emergency purchase plan" of overseas commodities like U.S. wheat.

Specific Japanese plans for stimulating the domestic economy will be forwarded to Washington during the meetings, Ushiba said. Fukuda, who promised during the London economic summit to stimulate the Japanese economy to grow at a 7 percent rate this year, now acknowledges the final figure will be more like 5.8 or 5.9 percent. The Americans have suggested a 2 percent target.

Together, the minister said, such steps would certainly reduce Japan's surplus somewhat, but how much he couldn't say.

A government report issued here Thursday predicted that without major measures the trade surplus would balloon to $20 billion next year.

Story plays down N-bomb effects

DARMSTADT, West Germany (UPI) — The U.S. Army is telling its soldiers there is nothing sinister about the neutron bomb that Washington has offered to station in a reluctant Europe.

An article getting wide circulation among American troops says the bomb, which kills people but leaves property largely intact, is simply an improvement on nuclear weapons that have been around for years.

"Some reports have portrayed the development of the neutron bomb as having given birth to an insidious new killer device," the article says.

But, it says, "the reduced blast-optimized missile warhead, intended for use on the LANCE missile system, is nothing sinister."

"It is simply an improved version of nuclear warheads that have been in the army's inventory for years."

The article in the October issue of DA Spotlight, a publication of the Army's Command Information Division of the Office of the Chief of Public Affairs, is being reprinted in many army unit newspapers in West Germany.

The United States used its NATO partners at a conference in Brussels this week if they wanted the neutron bomb, which generates more deadly radiation but less blast and heat than nuclear warheads now stored in Europe.

Rights ignored in many nations

LONDON (UPI) — Most nations of the world, including possibly the United States, keep violating human rights despite pacts guaranteeing fundamental liberties, Amnesty International says.

The agency, an independently financed human rights organization, issued the report on the eve of a ceremony in Oslo Saturday where it will receive the 1977 Nobel Peace Prize of $13 million.

"All major regimes, all political or ideological blocs are involved — in spite of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights," the report said.

"There have been substantial releases of political prisoners in certain countries but these are outweighed by the deteriorating situation in other parts of the world."

The report cited 116 countries in which it has investigated cases in the past year. It also lists a country-by-country summary of what it found.

The report included the United States. Last month Amnesty International said it was studying the cases of 18 prisoners in the United States to determine whether they

British firemen spurn pay offer

LONDON (UPI) — Britain's 35,000 striking firefighters reacted with less than enthusiasm to a new pay proposal the government offered in an effort to end their 3½-week walkout.

"There is no basis for a return to work," Dick Foggie, assistant general secretary of the Fire Brigades Union, said Thursday. "We need the money now."

The firefighters struck Nov. 14 in a demand for an immediate 20 percent pay increase to their current basic salary of $118 a week.

The government stood firm on its anti-inflation limit of a 10 percent raise and sent 18,000 soldiers, sailors, airmen and marines to help defuel firefighting trucks to battle thousands of blazes.

Home Secretary Merlyn Rees announced in Parliament were imprisoned for political reasons.

"In some Latin American countries, security forces and paramilitary groups have been used as instruments for a policy of political murder," the report said.

"Government-sanctioned torture is still practiced in a horrifying number of states, in spite of the newly adopted United Nations declaration against all forms of torture."

As far as Europe was concerned, "The Soviet Union and some countries of eastern Europe provided most instances of imprisonment for the non-violent exercise of the rights of conscience in 1976-77."

In Latin America, it said, "One of the most worrying features of repression in Argentina, Chile and Uruguay has been the act of terrorism against the population by security forces, who appear to hold both the constitution and the law in contempt."

The report said that "mass detention in Indonesia has remained without significant change. There are still more than 55,000 political prisoners held without trial, perhaps as many as 100,000 altogether, many of them held for more than 12 years."

Thursday a compromise formula that would give firefighters an immediate raise of just 10 percent but virtual exemption from future pay restraints.

Jeff Rooker, a Labor Party member of Parliament, said he considered the plan would give the firefighters average increases of $45 a week over the next two years.

But Rooker predicted other unions would line up behind the firefighters if the plan could be similar deals and smash all hopes of regaining inflation.

Terry Parry, general secretary of the Fire Brigades Union, said his executive council would consider the government offer, but said he was still waiting to hear directly from the employers.

At least 76 Britons have been killed in fires or related incidents since the strike began.

Plant blast kills 30

CARTAGENA, Colombia (UPI) — An explosion rocked a fertilizer plant outside this Caribbean coastal resort today and police said at least 30 people were killed and 22 injured.

Police and firefighters said the blast trapped scores of workers inside the plant of the Empresa Colombiana de Abonos Co. which manufactures anhydrous ammonia fertilizer, located 12 miles southwest of Cartagena.

Police said that those rescued were several in critical condition.

Ammonia fumes billowed over a large area reaching the neighboring town of Pasoballón and hampering rescue efforts.

FATHER SITS DEJECTEDLY IN ROCKER WHILE WIFE WEEPS AT WINDOW after they were evicted from their home which the court says belongs to their son.

Son has parents evicted

SEATTLE (UPI) — When Tom Rhodes and his wife were evicted, the only possessions they left behind in their $50,000 home were photographs of their son taped across the fireplace mantel.

It was their son, police Sgt. T.J. Rhodes Jr., who obtained the court order for their eviction.

"Now he is just Sgt. T.J. Rhodes," said Mrs. Jones, 58, who went sofly as a neighbor placed a comforting hand on her shoulder.

Rhodes Sr., 60, who had vowed he would have to be carried out of the house, gave way to the persuasive talk of Robert Lindquist, chief of the civil division of the King County police, and walked out peacefully.

At the bottom of the stairs, Rhodes paused to remove an American flag.

"That stands for justice," he said bitterly.

His son has steadfastly refused to respond to questions about the eviction. His only public comments are in the cold legal language of court records.

"He has not talked to me in four years," the father said. "He will talk to his mother but not to me."

The couple said they placed their home in their son's name to protect it from the financial trouble the elder Rhodes had years ago. Monthly payments and taxes were paid by the father to the son who forwarded them to the bank, the father said.

Later, when their son and his wife separated 18 months, there was concern about who legally would own the home, Rhodes said, but those difficulties apparently were resolved.

Then the younger Rhodes went to court to claim ownership of the house, saying he had rented it to his parents since 1968. In September, a judge ruled the son was the owner because all the legal papers for the house were in his name.

The parents went back to court to fight the eviction notice, but won nothing more than an extra 30 days to live in the house.

"I still think this is my house," Rhodes Sr. said as he left it.

First-graders call Santa old—at 31

PORTLAND, Maine (UPI) — Santa Claus lives in a church and has a part-time job selling pizza. He went to college in Massachusetts, met his wife in Virginia and found Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer in Tampa, Fla.

Those were a few of the answers provided when the Portland Evening Express asked a class of first-graders at the North School about the jolly old elf's personal life.

The newspaper said it asked the children to provide details for a "biography" about Santa Claus.

Stephanie Clemens, 7, thought-up the background about Claus' education and the fact that he met his wife in Virginia, where she worked in a paper factory.

Stephanie also came up with the tidbit about Rudolph's hometown and said Claus' belly, which reputedly jiggles like a bowlful of jelly when he laughs, was caused by "Italian sandwiches."

She said Claus vacations in Portland but wears green suits so he won't be recognized.

Amanda Weltzell, 6, said Mr. and Mrs. Claus have been married 10 years and lived in the country until Mrs. Claus recently decided to move to the North Pole and live in a church.

The couple has two children and a cat and Claus works part-time in Brunswick and also sells pizza and candy at the North Pole, she said. Pizza is Santa's favorite food.

Amanda reported. Santa's diet was on many youngsters' minds, but only Eddie Theriault, 6, knew that Claus eats a lot of spinach before making his annual Christmas Eve deliveries.

Douglas Clayton, 7, said Claus eats carrots to keep his health, but Mrs. Claus fixes him a nice bowl of stew after his deliveries are completed.

Chris Lee, 7, didn't know what Claus ate, but said he feeds his reindeer marshmallows to keep them fit and flying.

And what does Claus do when his chilly night of suit-giving is over? According to Alysa White, 7, he returns to his small, red house and takes a hot bath because "Santa is old... about 31."

Gorilla up for adoption

CHICAGO (UPI) — If you need the perfect Christmas gift for that someone who has everything, Brookfield Zoo may be able to help.

Zoo officials announced Thursday they are adding a male gorilla to a list of "adoptable" animals that already includes two polar bears. A dolphin has already been adopted.

The zoo, operated by the Chicago Zoological Society, said adoption fees—$15 for one Christmas present and $25 for two—help pay for the food the animals will eat in the coming year.

Bunker, a 5-year-old dolphin, has been completely adopted by one set of parents, but contributions are still being accepted for the gorilla, named Omega, and polar bears—Trisha, 12, and her daughter, Mary, 3.

Omega eats about $1,500 worth of sunflower seeds, apples, bananas, oranges, escarole, carrots, celery, bread, horse meat, monkey chow, milk and yogurt a year.

Three tots die in NY fire

NEW YORK (UPI) — Three children were killed late Thursday in a fire in their apartment ignited by a candle lit because the electricity had been cut off, officials said today.

Two firemen and two other children "buffered" smoke inhalation in the fire, which was first reported at 1:35 p.m. and declared under control at 12:13 a.m. today, fire officials said.

Jannine Guadalupe, 2, and her 8-month-old brother Timothy, were pronounced dead of smoke inhalation at the scene of the blaze in New York City's Bronx borough, officials said.

Their half-brother, 8-year-old Tony Laguerre, died in the emergency room of Jacob Hospital of burns and smoke inhalation, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Officials said John Tempel from the window of the second-floor apartment into viving children. 10-year-old Raul Jr., told him "the electricity had been turned off for two months. The boy said they had a candle on the record player. It fell over onto a pillow and ignited. One of the boys ran for water."

The three dead children were found in the same bedroom of the gutted apartment. Timothy's body was discovered in a crib. Jannine was found in bed and Tony was on a couch, police said.

Joy and 9-year-old John, were reported in satisfactory condition, the hospital spokeswoman said.

Officials said John Tempel from the window of the second-floor apartment into the arms of several persons who had emerged from a social club on the first floor.

Police sought the victims' mother Freda, who had left the children unattended. Her estranged husband, Raul Laguerre, went to the hospital after hearing of the blaze, the hospital official said.

A spokesman for Coh Ed said power in the apartment was "definitely not turned off" from Thursday, but he could not confirm when electrical power had been terminated.

Fire officials said two firemen rescued other persons from "the four-story brick building."

'Copter crash kills 17

LAFAYETTE, La. (UPI) — A helicopter crash in the Gulf of Mexico that killed 17 offshore oil workers may have been caused by a collision between the aircraft and a crane on an oil rig, officials say.

All but two of the 19 men aboard—the twin-engine helicopter—were killed in the accident Thursday. None of the bodies have been recovered.

Coast Guard search and rescue coordinators said their aircraft would resume the search early today.

Frank Lee, vice president of Petroleum Helicopters Inc., said investigators were checking reports the helicopter struck a crane on a wire leading to a crane as it attempted to land on the platform.

The aircraft, one of about 200 used by the helicopter company to shuttle 7,200 offshore workers to and from the rigs daily, spun away through the air, hit a small landing platform and crashed to the water 130 feet below.

Teams from both the firm and the National Transportation Safety Board went to the scene to study the cause of the accident.

One of the two survivors, Michael Feschler, 34, of Lafayette, said he heard a loud noise just before the accident. Feschler said he survived because he was unaware free of the helicopter.

"He said he blacked out at first, so he doesn't really know what happened," said his mother, Mary Feschler, who talked with him at Our Lady of Lourdes Hospital.

Tabernacle Choir organist retires

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Werner D. Alexander Schreiner, 67, farwell to the Mormon Tabernacle Choir at his Christmas party Wednesday night, he did something he'd never done in his 53 years as the group's organist. He sang. "The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints announced Schreiner's retirement earlier in the day. He became a Mormon Tabernacle organist in April 1924 and made his final appearance with the 375-member choir last Sunday.

"They've never heard me sing before," said Schreiner in an interview. "I'm going to sing 'A Pretty Girl is Like a Melody' for the girls in the Tabernacle."

His vocal debut came in a skit during the annual party.

"In the world of music Schreiner has done much, not only as the organist with the longest tenure with the Mormon Tabernacle since its dedication 100 years ago, but also as a composer, teacher and concert organist around the world."

He was born in Nurnberg, Germany, July 31, 1901. His parents were members of the Mormon Church.

He started playing the organ before he could read music or books, one of his other loves. "We had a piano at home. Many other people didn't," the musician said. "So we had LDS choir rehearsals at home."

"I refused to go to bed when my mother told me. Instead I would listen to the hymns. The next day I would play the hymns by memory."

He played his first church solo from memory at the age of five and he wanted to be church organist.

Asked if he was ready to be a church organist at such a young age, the 76-year-old man, with twinkling blue eyes said, "Not quite, but I thought I was."

Schreiner said he guessed they didn't want an "unbaptized heathen" as church organist. But when he was baptized at the age of eight he became the organist.

In 1912 the family came to Utah and Schreiner said he was crushed that he had lost his position as church organist. But the first Sunday he attended a church meeting in Salt Lake City, he was named organist.

Because of his accomplishments the young man was invited to become a student of John J. McClellan, then tabernacle organist.

After his graduation from Salt Lake City's West High School, Schreiner became a theater organist in the days of the silent movies.

He first played at Salt Lake City's American Theatre in 1918. Then he played at a theater in Butte, Mont., and at Grauman's Chinese Theater in Los Angeles.

He said he used the money he made as a theater organist for a 2½-year mission for the Mormon Church in southern California.

With the rest of the money he spent two years studying classical organ music in Europe. He studied under Louis Vierne at Notre Dame and Charles-Marie Widor at Saint Sulpice in Paris.

Schreiner said he was always inclined toward mathematics, electrical engineering and physics.

He said he really wanted to become an electrical engineer but Mormon Church officials liked his music too much to lose the young man.

"The Church," said give up those notions," Schreiner said. "I said, 'I could make more money as an engineer. But the Bishop said, 'I handle the money, I'll fix that.'"

"So I've been here since 1924 and I've enjoyed all of it."

Schreiner was organist-in-residence and lecturer at the UCLA from 1930 to 1939 playing at the Tabernacle during the summer months.

He earned a Ph.D. at the University of Utah in 1954 and has two honorary doctorates.

He also managed to fit 30 to 50 annual concerts around the world into his busy schedule.

And though he never became an electrical engineer, his training in physics helped with the installation of the new Tabernacle organ in 1948.

He said that he feels most at home at the Church organ but music is more important to him than the instrument.

"Some people only play notes," he said. "That's pretty dry."

As for retirement, Schreiner said he and his wife, Margaret Lyman Schreiner, may do some travelling.

Latins, church change

LONDON — The last few years in Latin America, which have seen the arrival of so many military governments, have also seen a remarkable change in the position of the Roman Catholic Church. Not so long ago the Church was regarded as a conservative force, a pillar of the established order. Now it has become in many cases the main opponent of the rightist military regimes, and an advocate of social change.

It has been a painful process in which a number of priests have been killed in Argentina and Brazil, for instance, and in which they have been under pressure in many countries. One of the most striking incidents was an occasion in Ecuador last year when there was a meeting of two archbishops and 15 bishops from several different countries in Riobamba.

As the meeting got under way, a group of armed men broke in, arrested the bishops and took them to a vehicle and took them to Quito, along with 22 priests, five nuns and several laymen. The next day, the foreigners among them were expelled from the country on the grounds that they had been interfering in Ecuador's internal affairs and engaging in political subversion.

Catholic beliefs told

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — San Francisco Archbishop John Raphael Quinn said recently the Roman Catholic Church opposes, and will continue to oppose abortions, living together, homosexuality and other elements of the so-called new morality.

Noting abortions now outnumber live births in some cities, Quinn, newly elected president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, admitted at a news conference there was only so much the church could do.

"We can only promote basic moral values and work to uphold the right to life, guaranteed by the Bill of Rights," he stated.

"Asked about the church's view of homosexuality in a city where a gay was recently elected a county supervisor," the archbishop said: "Homosexuals have the right to our friendship, respect and support, but the church cannot approve of their homosexual activities. They have a special kind of need for encouragement to lead wholesome lives."

Quinn said he favors a comprehensive family plan under consideration by his organization to encourage strong families to counsel newly married couples and "families that are hurting."

Series continues

TWIN FALLS — Joe Christensen, associate commissioner of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, is the guest speaker at the subject "The Tremendous Power of Gospel Ideals" on Saturday at 8 p.m. in the Harrison Stake Center at 600 Harrison St.

This is the second in a series of eight presentations by a variety of educators from throughout the western states.

Christensen says the objective of this discussion is to point out some of the distinctive teachings of the restoration, that once they are understood, will change the lives of people so again can never be the same again.

Registration fees of $1.75 can be handled at the door.

Knights of Columbus plans free breakfast

TWIN FALLS — The Knights of Columbus at St. Edwards Catholic Church is featuring a free breakfast at the parish hall this Sunday following the 8 a.m. and 10 a.m. masses.

The donations received will be used to buy food for Christmas baskets which will be distributed to poor and needy families. St. Edwards delivers 40 to 50 baskets of food each year.

Those not attending the breakfast may help the cause and donate at the church rectory or call Fern Stevers at 423-5024.

There will be a parish Christmas party at St. Edwards parish hall Dec. 18 from 2 to 4 p.m. Co-chairmen are Arlene Schmidt and Lorraine Breske.

Confession and church hours are as follows: confession hours, 5 to 6 p.m. Friday and 4 to 5 p.m. Saturday. Mass schedule Saturday, 7:30 p.m., and Sunday, 8 a.m., 10:00 a.m. and 7:30 p.m.

200 attend banquet

TWIN FALLS — Over 200 people attended a special banquet and program recently given by the Magic Valley Adventist School at the Moose Lodge.

In addition to the dinner, several humorous skits and readings were presented by the students under the direction of Robert Leake, pastor of the Twin Falls Seventh-Day Adventist church.

The school, which has offered eight grades in recent years, added a new teacher, Glenn W. Stevens, and a ninth grade this year bringing the enrollment to 49, says John Knudson, chairman of the board.

The school, located on West Falls Avenue, has been in operation since 1960 and is owned and operated by the Seventh-Day Adventist Church. As well as serving the members of the church, the school is open to anyone interested in a Christ-centered education.

Study listed at Eden

EDEN — The lesson study during the sabbath school hour at the Eden Seventh-Day Adventist Church will be "Spreading Spiritualism."

This lesson is based on Revelations 19:13, 14 and deals with the idea of the dead being in communication with the living.

Sabbath school begins at 9:30 a.m. and the worship hour is at 11.

The "Story Hour," a one-hour program of character building stories, games and songs for youths ages 7 to 14, continues at 6 p.m. each Wednesday in the Hession Housing Recreation Room.

For further details, phone 829-5550.

SERVICE hours amounting to over 340 days were reported by Southern Idaho Conference Seventh-day Adventist Community Service workers at the recent Fall Federation meetings at Ellier. The six-month report also revealed 3,260 persons helped, 27,080 articles of clothing given away and value of food and cash given as $2,859.39. New officers, as pictured, were chosen for the next two years. They are front to back, Gladys Mulholland of Rupert, president; Leta Daniels of Gooding, secretary; treasurer, and Alvina Hughes of Ellier, assistant secretary-treasurer. Not pictured is Vivian Todd of Jerome, the new vice president.

Baptists plan crusade

BUHL — Magic Valley Baptist Church, Clear Lakes Road in Buhl, is holding an evangelistic crusade, beginning Monday, through Sunday Dec. 16.

The services will be each evening at 7:30 Monday through Friday, and at 11 a.m. and 8 p.m. on Sunday the 16th.

The evangelist for these meetings is Al Wells. Church officials say his messages are Bible centered and he preaches with fervor and with enthusiastic, old-fashioned, Heaven sent power. Carl Boonstra, missions director for the Baptist Bible Fellowship International, calls him an "outstanding—fundamental—Baptist preacher."

In each service also will be the Singing Shook Family. They have presented their programs several times in this area. They are loved for their old-fashioned western-style gospel music and family harmony. They have written and composed several hymns and have several recorded albums.

A nursery will be staffed for each service. Everyone is welcome.

They mean security and love to me.
 They keep me safe.
 They share life with me.

 They teach me about God.

What My Family Means to Me
 To me, my family means love, kindness, and friendship. They do so much for me. I am not only a child, so I get a lot more attention than most kids do. I can't even stay angry when I'm around my parents. I could never hope to be in a nicer or better family. Mother sometimes asks me to fold the clothes when I'm in a bad mood, but she makes me feel good by complimenting me. And my dad is good for a brisk walk on a cold day. I love my family.

By Abigail Van Buren
1977 by The Chicago Tribune (Chicago Syndicate)

DEAR ABBY: In answer to CURRENTLY IN LIMBO, who was sure her well-known husband was on drugs but didn't know what to do about it, you were absolutely right! He must admit that he needs help before anything can be done for him.

But what about the wife? She's going out of her mind worrying about him. A few years I was in a similar situation—only it was my son who was on drugs. I felt so guilty and helpless, I didn't know where to turn. Then I discovered FAMILIES ANONYMOUS.

After attending one meeting I had my first good night's sleep in years! From other members who had experienced the agonies I had been through, I learned how to handle my son. When he saw the change in my attitude, his attitude began to change and so did he. It was just like a miracle!

He is now clean and happily married, and best of all, we are a loving family.

Abby, please check us out and tell your readers about this wonderful group.

GRATEFUL

Drugs cause big worry

DEAR GRATEFUL: I have checked you out, and know that you are a legitimate self-help group. There are no dues or fees, no sign-out, no formal sign-up, no last names and visitors are welcome.

FAMILIES ANONYMOUS meets in nearly every major city of the United States (and Canada) to teach parents how to communicate with rebellious, delinquent or difficult-to-handle children of any age.

For the location of a meeting in your area, write: Families Anonymous, Inc., P.O. Box No. 344, Torrance, Calif. 90501, and please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for their response as they are a non-profit organization run by volunteers.

DEAR ABBY: Five months ago I gave my father a gift certificate to a massage parlor for his 65th birthday. Since many months had passed—and he had not used it—I wondered why.

Then a letter appeared in your column from HURT WIFE, asking why a church-going, happily married man would visit a massage parlor. You offered a number of reasons: "Curiosity, just an itch for variety, fear of missing something, temporary insanity, etc."

I gave my father a gift certificate to a massage parlor for a perfectly legitimate reason—to treat him to a relaxing massage. The fact that he has not yet taken advantage of it, I attribute to prejudices such as yours. I think you owe all legitimate masseurs and masseuses an apology.

HURT SON

DEAR SON: And to them I apologize. But my judgment about massage parlors is based on the fact that literally thousands of dubious massage parlors have sprung up in recent years. And the massages (unlike beauty) offered there are more than skin deep.

DEAR ABBY: You can do every elementary and junior high school teacher a huge favor by suggesting that from a teacher's point of view, the best Christmas or Hanukkah gift a parent can buy their child is a set of pencils with the student's name printed on them.

Teachers spend a lot of time settling arguments regarding ownership of pencils.

SEVENTH GRADE TEACHER

DEAR TEACHER: Thanks for a dandy suggestion. Write on, teacher!

Your Health

Mother proves right about eggs

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb: Could you please try to solve a problem I have with my mother? Every morning we get into an argument over eggs. You see, I am 15 years old and lift weights three days a week.

I am told protein is important in muscle building, and one way to get it is by eating three eggs for breakfast, along with toast, milk and fruit every day.

My mother thinks the cholesterol in eggs is harmful, and I should eat only three eggs a week. I think that since cholesterol is fat, if you exercise enough, you would just burn it up. Who is right?

Dear Reader, Funny thing about mothers, they are often right.

The American Heart Association recommends that adult men should have no more than three egg yolks a week, including those used in cooking—as in pies and other foods.

Why? To limit the cholesterol intake in the diet.

A large egg contains only 6.5 grams of protein, so your three eggs for breakfast provides 19.5 grams of protein. They are also high fat foods, and contain more fat calories than protein. Those three eggs will give you 560 milligrams of cholesterol, over twice the daily maximum intake recommended by the Inter-Society Commission for Heart Resources Committee of nationally recognized scientists. And you need that 300 milligram cholesterol allowance for foods that are higher in protein, such as lean meat. You'll get more protein and less fat from lean meat with all the fat trimmed away.

You may be surprised to find out that cholesterol is not really a fat, and is not metabolized as a fat. All that exercise may not lower your cholesterol if you consume a lot and particularly if you are putting on weight, some of which may be fat. Those high fat, cholesterol-laden, high calorie diets that some body building programs put people on the makings of fatty-cholesterol deposits in arteries that cause heart and vascular disease.

Those diseases are not just diseases of old people, either. Over 70 percent of young men examined from Korean War deaths, of an average age of 22, already had significant fatty-cholesterol deposits in the arteries of their heart. The

Jones, Pearson exchange vows

TWIN FALLS — Carol Lynn Pearson, Salem, S.D., and Ronald Jones, Twin Falls, were united in marriage by Rev. Bernard Heruth at the Salem Evangelical Lutheran Church at 3:30 p.m. on Nov. 28 in Salem.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Norman Pearson of Salem and Mr. and Mrs. Leslie R. Jones of Twin Falls.

The bride selected an empire silhouette gown of ivory jersey knit designed with a Queen Anne neckline. Her long tapered sleeves fell to snug closings. The gown was trimmed with re-embroidered alencon over English netting on the bodice and sleeves.

The wedding chapel train fell from a matching band of lace. The bride's fingertip-length veil of ivory illusion with matching lace was secured by a headband. She carried a bouquet of red roses and baby's breath.

Laurie Peterson was maid of honor. Other bridal attendants were Rachel Brabant, Leanne Oyen and Wills Smith.

Douglas Jones was best man and the groomsmen—were Terry Jaspers, Orrin Pearson and Morris Wegehaupt.

Kelly and Keith Pearson were ushers. Candles were lit by Darin and Lance Pearson. Kate Placitello was the organist and the vocal soloist was Kevin Gudahl. Bonny Nelson was personal attendant and Peggy Stroup was at the guest book. Mr. and Mrs. Vaden Jackson and Mr. and Mrs. Eldon Pearson were hosts and hostesses at the reception following. The couple will make their home at Rt. 1, Twin Falls.

time to develop eating habits that promote health throughout your lifetime.

Cholesterol passes through the bile from your liver into the intestine. It is reabsorbed there into the blood stream and goes round and round. You have to either stop its production, or limit its absorption from the intestine to help lower cholesterol, and it isn't always so easy.

How much protein and what should you eat for a body building program? I am sending you The Health Letter number 5-4, Weight Training for Energy and Weight Control, to give you more information. Others, who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10018.

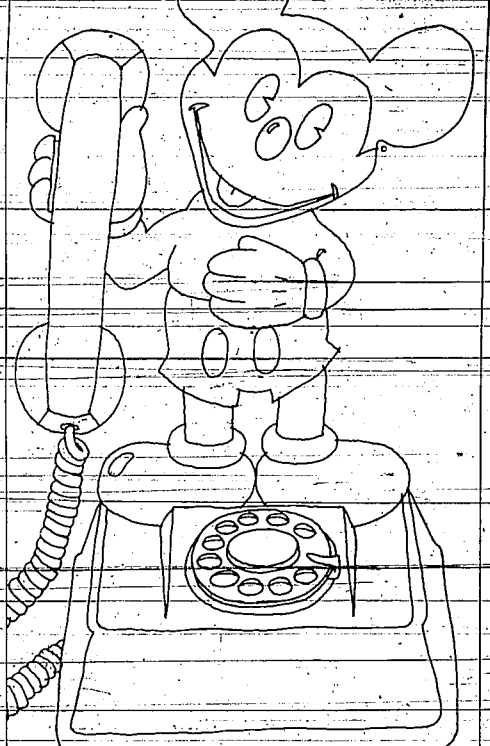

If you consume 100 grams of good protein a day and eat enough calories from other foods to support your body's needs, you should have enough protein to build at least one pound of new muscle a week with your exercise program, and that rate is most unlikely. Extra protein is simply used as calories for energy or stored as fat. (Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

PET potato is held by Mrs. Charles Finan Salina, Kan. dug from her family garden, from the right angle the tuber resembles closely a little lamb.

Analysts divided over stock figures

CHICAGO (UPI) — A difference of opinion exists among livestock analysts over whether recent strength in feeder cattle signals the rebuilding of cattle herds, according to Commodity News Service.

Cattle herds have been in the liquidating phase of the cattle cycle for the past three years; some believe herd build-up may be as much as six months away while others said current strength is a result of cheap grain prices.

Some analysts point to decreasing cow slaughter figures as a sign of herd build up.

The percentage of cows slaughtered of the total slaughter during October 1977 was 24.9 percent compared with 23.9 percent in October 1976. There were 22.8 percent slaughters in September 1977, compared with 25.3 percent slaughtered in September 1976, also a decrease.

Livestock analysts said the cow share of the slaughter should probably go down to between 18 and 20 percent of the total slaughter before herd build-up can be confirmed.

On the other hand, calf slaughter figures for 1977 are up about 3 percent at 5.5 million head, up from 5.2 million in 1976. Department of Agriculture figures indicate 1977's calf crop to be down about 3 percent or 1 million head.

In addition, total federal inspected slaughter for 1977 is expected to be 27.5 million cattle, higher than the 26.5 million in 1976.

According to some militant farmer sources, Foley has promised on at least one occasion to introduce legislation calling for full parity for farmers.

But, they say, in subsequent statements, Foley has backed down from his promise, partially owing to the fact he feels the bill is unrealistic and unacceptable to Congress.

The pre-meeting rallies, if nothing else, is designed by those attending to unify farmers and get a firm commitment from Foley to introduce such a bill.

"We won't settle for anything less," said one rally leader earlier in the week.

Range conditions will also play a part in the number of animals placed or kept on feed.

One analyst speculated that placements during the month of November may have declined from the October levels because next February and April marketings prices are expected to be unattractive, evidenced by low prices for February and April futures.

However, analysts said the April futures contract has a tendency to rally before expiration time. It is now the lowest-priced future, thus offering the least attractive hedge for feeder operators.

Parity issue showdown looms

SPOKANE (UPI) — This stage has been set for a showdown between House Agriculture Committee Chairman Tom Foley, D-Wash., and several hundred angry farmers demanding 100 percent of parity for their crops.

The stakes could be high for both: promise of a full parity bill for the farmers and the first step towards re-election for Foley next year.

There's something in this for both, as far as the farmers are concerned. If only the congressman will begin paying attention to the farmers needs in this regard.

Foley's main problem is that he really doesn't believe such legislation has even a slight chance of passage and he has attempted without success to interject what he feels is some logic and compromise into the demands.

Nothing Foley has said about worldwide prices and supplies of wheat, the mood of Congress and the nation over such a proposal, which would surely raise food costs, has quelled the growing anger of farmers for more money.

All they know and care to know is that wheat prices have slumped to 1984 levels, around $2.80 per bushel, while carryovers, costs and tempers have skyrocketed.

Foley is taking an agriculture subcommittee into the eye of the hurricane this week-end.

The group is meeting in a 12,000 seat Performing Arts Coliseum at Washington State University in the heart of the wheat-rich Palouse country.

In preparation for the head-to-head meeting, farmers have been attending rallies and have been coached on how to testify and what to say.

More than 100 persons have signed up to testify.

The main lesson has been an unbending demand: "100 percent of parity and nothing less."

One of the chief agitators is Frank LeRoux, a farmer from Walla Walla who was general sales manager for the U.S. Department of Agriculture from 1961-66 during the Nixon Administration.

It wouldn't surprise some Democrats if LeRoux wound up challenging Foley on the farm issue next year.

But right now, LeRoux has the farmers ear and the Agriculture chairman does not.

During a series of rallies, LeRoux has strongly endorsed the nationwide farmers strike Dec. 14 and added "this is a showdown and you ought to smoke out every son of a B that's selling you down the river."

"Parity is not realistic. During the depression, farmers got 80 percent of parity. Under Truman farmers received 107 percent and under Eisenhower, 94 percent. Now we're getting 40 percent."

He adds the farmers' plight is part of "a deal made a long time ago to make the U.S. an industry-exporting nation while letting other nations of the world be the agricultural exporters." He did not name the perpetrators.

Foley has said 100 percent of parity "is a laudable goal, but unrealistic. He added that if such a deal were struck, it would mean nearly 100 percent government control as well."

Shipment limits set

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Interstate shipment of milk contaminated with aflatoxin, a cancer-causing agent, is being halted by the Food and Drug Administration.

The agency said contamination exists primarily in the Southeast.

Milk containing more than half a part of aflatoxin per billion parts of milk will be affected by the order, the FDA said. "Milk containing high levels of aflatoxin poses a special risk for infants and children who consume large quantities," it said.

The agency said aflatoxin, a form of mold, is found in milk when dairy cows consume feed contaminated with it.

Seizure reports called 'hogwash'

MOSCOW, Idaho (UPI) — New reports that a delegation of Moscow, Idaho, residents was held in protective custody while visiting Libya late last week are unrealistic, a spokesman for the local People to People organization said Wednesday.

"It's all a bunch of hogwash," said Jim Aral, a University of Idaho agricultural economist and local president of the People to People group.

"Let's be realistic about this. Why would you want to invite someone to your country and then hold them guard? It doesn't make any sense."

Aral was responding to a story in the Moscow newspaper, the Daily Idahoan, quoting a Moscow woman who received a phone call from her husband with the delegation, which had gone to Libya to promote trade and an exchange of information.

The story said the group's itinerary had been disrupted and the decision of its members' restricted because of political turmoil. The story said members were apparently held in protective custody and their telephone calls were monitored and delayed.

Aral said the delegation was in Tripoli at the same time leaders of Syria, Iraq, Algeria and South Yemen were meeting to discuss Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's peace overture toward Israel and it was obvious this upset travel plans.

Aral said the delegation probably decided to move on to Benghazi ahead of schedule because the only good hotel in Tripoli was occupied by the Arab leaders. He said Benghazi was the more important part of the trip, anyway.

Regarding the time it took to make phone calls, Aral said it usually takes four days or longer to make a call between Libya and the United States because of the limited number of lines between the two countries.

Aral said the entire matter would likely be explained when members of the delegation return home next week.

Exemption endorsed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Son Frank Church urged Congress to endorse exemption of processed potatoes from import tariffs on a number of commodities.

Church wrote Robert Strauss, U.S. special representative for trade negotiations, that there had been a surplus of potatoes for a number of years and to add to that surplus by inviting imports would only compound the problem.

"An injury to the market for processed potatoes translates directly into injury to growers," Church said. "In Idaho, for example, almost 70 percent of the crop goes to processing. Without a contract from a processor, the grower will inevitably have great difficulty in obtaining a loan from his bank to help pay for the next season's seed and operation."

The Senator said the potato industry is particularly important to the Pacific Northwest, where almost 50 percent of the potato production takes place. He said it is crucial to the economic well-being of Idaho, which is the largest potato producer in the nation.

Chicken price could soar

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The cost of producing a pound of chicken will leap 24 percent if farmers' urging a national farm strike will their demands for full parity prices, a poultry industry group said today.

The farm strike movement, led by a loosely-organized grass-roots farmer movement called American Agriculture, says it will urge farmers to stop planting and selling eggs and livestock and to stop buying supplies beginning Dec. 14 unless the government takes action to ensure full parity prices.

Parity is a price which would give farmers a theoretically "fair" return based on economic relationships more than half a century-old — in comparison with the cost of things they buy. In mid-November, prices for all raw crops and livestock commodities averaged 66 percent of parity.

The National Poultry Council estimates that if prices for corn, soybeans and other farm commodities which go into poultry feed are pushed to full parity, the cost of producing broiler chickens will jump from 36.5 cents a pound to 49 cents — a 34 percent increase.

Costs for turkeys will go up 38 percent and egg production costs will rise 32 percent of the poultry industry group said.

George Watts, president of the trade association, said any legislation guaranteeing farmers 100 percent of parity probably would apply only to crops which get government support.

"Since poultry products are not supported, Watts said, farmers producing chickens, eggs and turkey probably wouldn't be able to raise their prices enough to recover the increased costs."

But eventually, Watts said, the extra production costs would inevitably have to be passed on to consumers.

In a related development, Rep. Thomas Foley, D-Wash., chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, introduced a resolution putting Congress on record in favor of parity prices for farmers.

Economic stimulus needed to produce more jobs

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — AFL-CIO President George Meany declared Thursday that President Carter's commitment to full employment will be meaningless unless he devises an economic stimulus package to create 75,000 jobs a week for the next four years.

Meany, 83, in his keynote address to the AFL-CIO's 12th biennial convention, said Carter's full employment program should include billions of dollars more for public works, lower interest rates to stimulate housing construction and protectionist trade legislation.

He strongly opposed any tax cuts for business, but failed to endorse Carter's promise of substantial individual tax cuts.

Meany, who is expected to be re-elected this week as labor's top spokesman, offered cautious praise of Carter. He said it was "heartening to see some positive leadership from the president."

He portrayed Carter's recent endorsement of a compromise full employment program as a domestic commitment to human rights, but insisted "a commitment a promise — is not enough." The compromise bill includes no specific job programs.

"Full-employment promises must be backed up with comprehensive effective programs that will meet that goal," Meany said. "Anything less is unacceptable."

Meany said the goal of a 4 percent unemployment rate would be achieved only if Carter decides to create four million jobs per year for the next four years. "That means 75,000 jobs a week — every week — for the next 208 weeks," he said.

Carter's new economic stimulus package reportedly will include $20 billion in tax cuts, including some for business. Meany contended "real job creating programs are what the economy needs — tax cuts for business will not do the job."

Similarly, a presidential commitment of full employment would be shallow if the administration failed to take strong action to protect American industry from cutthroat — and often illegal — foreign competition," Meany said.

He called for a new American trade policy that would regulate imports, stop other countries from illegally "dumping" cheap goods in the United States, discourage American firms from going abroad and retaliate against countries that limit U.S. imports.

"Foreign trade is the guerrilla warfare of economics and right now the U.S. economy is being ambushed," Meany said. "One by one our manufacturing industries are being picked off and now the target is the steel industry."

Meany also took a swipe at liberals in Congress, claiming they are now embracing the Republican platform. He also said labor will fight harder for the House-passed labor bill than any bill since the Wagner Act.

Judge qualified to pass sentence

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — State appeals court Judge Donald Froeh Thursday denied a motion to disqualify Maricopa County Superior Court Judge Howard Thompson from sentencing the convicted killers of reporter Deborah.

Attorneys for Max Dunlap and James Robison, who were convicted of first-degree murder in Bolles' death, asked Froeh Wednesday to remove Thompson from the sentencing process — or, if he is biased against the defendants.

In a brief written decision, Froeh said, "The defendants have failed to show that fair and impartial proceedings cannot be had before Judge Thompson in this case, as no interest or prejudice of the judge has been proven."

Defense lawyers argued Wednesday that Thompson would be biased toward imposing the death penalty because of "highly inflammatory and prejudicial language" — "improperly containing in a presentence report." Dunlap and Robison had been scheduled to be sentenced Tuesday, after a jury convicted the pair Nov. 6 of murder and conspiracy in the death of Bolles, a reporter for The Arizona Republic.

Dunlap's lawyer, Larry Debus, and Robison's attorney, David Derickson, said an Arizona Supreme Court ruling requires the judge in a capital case to "restrict only the evidence directly relating to aggravating and mitigating circumstances."

But the presentence report, the lawyers argued, contains material which could not live up to standard rules of evidence. Debus said the report made references to polygraph tests and statements by Phoenix police detective Jon Sellers that Sellers knew of information not brought out in the trial.

time provides only enough energy to run a 100-watt bulb for several hours.

"Still, when you concentrate that into a one-billionth-of-a-second pulse, and focus it onto a pinhead, it's a lot," said Coyle.

Coyle said tests on actual fuel pellets are set to begin early next year and "we expect some dramatic results."

Even if tests continue to be successful, laser fusion's use in commercial power-generating plants are at least 20 years in the future, said Coyle.

Scientists try out most powerful laser

LIVERMORE, Calif. (UPI) — Scientists have test-fired the world's most powerful laser.

A $16 million laser machine — named "Shiva" for the multi-armed Hindu deity — successfully concentrated 11 trillion watts of power for one billionth of a second into a target the size of a pinhead, officials at the Lawrence Livermore Laboratory said Wednesday.

Deputy director of the lab's fusion program, Phil Coyle, said the instantaneous power output of the laser was about 20 times the electrical generating capacity of the United States.

However, the short firing time provides only enough energy to run a 100-watt bulb for several hours.

"Still, when you concentrate that into a one-billionth-of-a-second pulse, and focus it onto a pinhead, it's a lot," said Coyle.

Coyle said tests on actual fuel pellets are set to begin early next year and "we expect some dramatic results."

Even if tests continue to be successful, laser fusion's use in commercial power-generating plants are at least 20 years in the future, said Coyle.

Soviet novelist followed by police

MOSCOW (UPI) — Underground novelist Vladimir Volynich, known in the West for his satirical novel "Soviet Underground," Thursday said secret police has been following him so closely they are "almost stepping on my heels."

Volynich said in a written statement to Western correspondents the around-the-clock surveillance began with the opening of the first Moscow International Book Fair two months ago.

"This is one of the results of the expansion of cultural contacts between East and West," he said.

Volynich, expelled from the official Union of Writers in 1974 for supporting exiled novelist Alexander Solzhenitsyn, has since published several novels in the United States and elsewhere in the West.

His work, circulated underground within the Soviet Union, is the pomposity of Soviet officialdom by pitting a little man against the system.

Although Volynich is not overtly political, he has had previous brushes with officials who object to the satires and the fact that they are published abroad.

Record amount given for 'living' death

Daily Telegraph, London LONDON — Moments after awarding record damages of $35,500 to a 41-year-old woman psychiatrist "convinced to a living death," the judge asked "does it look too much?"

He made his remark to counsel representing the parties involved.

He decided the sum was not too much to look after her future, in these present days of inflation.

The award was to Dr. Lim Poh Choo, who suffered "massive and permanent" brain damage because of oxygen starvation during a minor operation at a hospital in London.

Dr. Choo, now living in Penang, West Malaysia, where she receives constant medical attention, sued through her mother.

When she went into the hospital for the operation she was 38, and a senior registrar in psychiatry at Friern Hospital, New Southgate, London.

The mother, Mrs. Lim-Gin Ho, who came to this country for the court hearing, said "No money can ever compensate me for the loss of my daughter."

Democratic chairman resigns

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Kenneth Curtis said Thursday he is resigning as Democratic national chairman because it's a lousy job.

Curtis denied reports he had been forced out of office by the White House staff. But, at a news conference, he could barely hide his dislike of Mark Siegel, President Carter's chief political aide.

"Did you ever try to meet the payroll every two weeks of a bankrupt organization?" he asked. "And try to keep 50 state chairmen happy?" he was asked.

"That's one way you could put it," responded Curtis, who said he will return to law practice in Maine.

Curtis showed no traces of bitterness and was in a relaxed and joking mood as he met with reporters 24 hours after the White House announced his intention to step down. He had strong praise for Carter, and the working relationship he had with the president during the past year.

"Curtis said he was in no hurry to get out of Washington and would probably stay on in the post through the meeting of the Democratic National Committee next April.

"I've decided I'd like to do something else with my life," Curtis said, adding that his immediate plans called for rejoining his law firm in Maine.

KENNETH CURTIS says job is lousy

Twice he praised Carter's top aide Hamilton Jordan and Tim Kraft, the White House appointments chief. When asked why he left out his dealings with Siegel, Curtis showed his only trace of rancor during the news conference and replied: "I didn't know he had a role." In the White House dealings with the national committee.

Siegel was executive director of the committee before going to the White House and has been the source of criticism of Curtis that has shown up in many news articles in recent months.

When asked about reports he had been criticized as being "too nice a guy," Curtis responded: "I take that as a compliment. If that's considered a criticism of someone, in politics, that's a mistake. The votes came from a lot of nice people."

White House press secretary Jerry Powell said Wednesday Carter was not dissatisfied with Curtis.

Reagan repays debt

WASHINGTON (UPI) — More than a year after it went out of business, Ronald Reagan's presidential campaign has repaid the U.S. Treasury $611,000 in leftover federal campaign funds, the Federal Election Commission said Thursday.

FEC spokesman David Fiske said a Reagan aide hand-delivered a check to the commission, which was routinely turned over to the treasury.

UPI reported last week that Reagan had owed the money to the government, but the FEC had not completed its audit of the campaign and hadn't asked for the money back.

In addition, Gerald Ford still owes about $83,000; Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., about $21,000 and Gov. George Wallace about $2,000 by UPI's computation.

The money represents the percentage of surplus campaign funds from last year's presidential primaries that came from public funds. While the audit on President Carter's campaign also has not been completed, he ended up in the red and will not owe any money.

Fiske said Reagan's check for $611,141.89 was made out by Citizens for the Republic, a California based political action committee to which Reagan gave the approximately $1.6 million left over after his unsuccessful bid for the presidency.

Since Reagan received 36 percent of all his campaign money from the federal government, the law required that 36 percent of his surplus be returned.

Fiske said the FEC informed Reagan on Aug. 22 that a preliminary audit showed the campaign owed $611,141.89.

Idaho infant has polio

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Idaho health officials say lab tests indicate a 14-month-old Idaho Falls child who recently was admitted to a Salt Lake City hospital has a polio virus instead of encephalitis.

Officials said if the case is proved to be polio, it will be the second instance of the disease in Idaho in the past two years. Last year, an 11-year-old Boise girl was found to have one of eight cases reported nationwide.

Bob Medlin, immunization program director for the Department of Health and Welfare, said the agency is assembling clinical information on the case and are checking those who have come in contact with the child.

He said the department is looking for a source of the virus and will try to determine if it has spread to others.

Medlin said Idaho's immunization level against polio has dropped in recent years, leaving more people susceptible to the disease.

The immunization level among 2-year-olds is about 75 percent, he said, adding that means those children have had at least three doses, which is the prescribed number for that age.

Among school-age children, the level drops to about 60 percent.

"That means about 40 percent of the population is walking around susceptible to polio. It's pretty frightening," Medlin said.

Immunization level of 90 percent generally is recognized as necessary to prevent major outbreaks of the disease.

Sex product deadly?

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — The makers of an over-the-counter product called Rush claim it can give users the ultimate sexual experience of their lives. Officials say, however, it could be the last experience period.

The California Department of Health is seeking a court order to halt state distribution of Rush, advertised as the source of sexual "purity, power and potency" and a means of prolonging orgasm.

"One snort during sex will give you the greatest trip you ever had," was the way the product was represented in stores selling adult books and sexual paraphernalia, according to the suit.

Pollution solution may take decades

By KEN HODGE

Time-News writer

BOISE — Idaho probably will have to work for 20 years to end pollution of the state's streams and rivers by agriculture, a speaker at an Environmental Protection Agency seminar in Boise said Thursday.

Although the federal Water Pollution Control Act of 1972 orders all states to have fishable, swimmable waters by 1983, Dr. Gaylord Skogerboe says it won't happen.

Dr. Skogerboe, a chemical engineer at Colorado State University, told Idaho farmers at the EPA-sponsored seminar, "This all takes time. We should be thinking more in terms of 20 years in an irrigated valley to achieve clean waters."

Dr. Skogerboe addressed 166 farmers, irrigators and federal and state water quality experts Thursday as part of the Regional Irrigation Water Quality Control Conference, sponsored by the Environmental Protection Agency.

The conference, one of 166 seminars offered in the past year by EPA, is part of the agency's Technology Transfer program designed to bring farmers and irrigators together to discuss the nation's waters as ordered by the clean water bill of 1972.

"I have to agree. We're talking here about attitude and behavioral changes and they take time. It may be 20 years," Marvin Shearer, irrigation specialist from Oregon State University, told the group. "These changes in attitude and behavior can't be legislated."

Experts at the conference discussed "all varieties of techniques for on-farm irrigation water management to reduce pollution of the nation's streams from irrigation return flow and to clean up the nation's waters."

Twin Falls area soil scientist, Dr. David L. Carter, who attended the two-day meet from the Snake River Conservation Research Center in Kimberly outlined "Best Management Practices (BMP)" to the state's irrigators.

Carter advised irrigators on ways they can reduce erosion, reduce or eliminate run-off into streams and rivers and remove sediment from farm runoff before it reaches flowing water.

Trickle irrigation and sprinkler irrigation are two effective ways of reducing runoff, which pollutes local streams, Carter explained.

A traveling sprinkler system, however, uses as much as 13 times the energy as does traditional gravity flow irrigation, Carter said.

Carter also outlined methods of reducing or eliminating erosion of top soil by surface irrigation water flows. If the slope of a field is more than two percent, it may be necessary to level the field, change the direction of irrigation flow, or employ contour irrigation practices, he explained.

Other methods of erosion control, Carter outlined, include controlling furrow stream size, using the cutback method of irrigating by slowing the flow of water in furrows, and using mulch systems which apply water to fields at different intervals along the run.

Finally Carter outlined ways of removing sediment from irrigation water returning to streams and rivers.

A vegetative buffer strip at the end of a field can temporarily slow runoff waters and collect silt, before it is dumped into neighboring drainage ditches and later into the river.

Carter also recommended many settling ponds and sediment collection ponds for settling sediment out of irrigation return flow waters.

Irrigation district voting Tuesday

By LORAYNE O. SMITH

MAGIC VALLEY — Considerable interest is being shown in the irrigation district annual elections scheduled for Tuesday throughout Magic Valley.

Officials said they believe drought conditions and the fact that 1977 was a scarce water year are partially responsible for the large number of candidates seeking some of the director positions in some of the water districts.

There is competition for the director posts in all of the three water organizations in the Magic Valley area, as well as opposition for one post to be filled in the American Falls Reservoir District No. 2 which covers parts of Jerome, Lincoln and Gooding counties.

Elections also are scheduled by the Milner Low Lift Irrigation District, American Falls Reservoir District No. 1 which has headquarters in Twin Falls; Carey and King Hill.

Voting in all districts will be held from 1 to 7 p.m. Tuesday at the individual precinct or division polling places.

office in Rupert, and Precinct 5—Hayburn city office.

In the A and B Irrigation District, also at Rupert, three men are seeking the two posts up for election.

Ken Shuleidt is unopposed in Precinct 1, but Orlo Maughan is challenging J. R. Merrigan, in Merrigan's bid for re-election.

Henderson named director of health, welfare region

TWIN FALLS — Kent D. Henderson, 33, who has served as social services manager for the Department of Health and Welfare in Twin Falls the past two years, will take over the directorship of Region V here Monday.

Henderson was named regional director to succeed Dennis McDermott who resigned four months ago. He will head the Health and Welfare Department program in the eight-county region covering Magic Valley.

Milton G. Klein, state director, announced the appointment today. Henderson, a native of Magic Valley, was selected for the position following interviews with several finalists candidates from other areas of Idaho and several other states.

In announcing the appointment, Klein said, "Kent brings to the position a solid combination of administrative experience and service delivery so necessary to effective program management."

The new regional director joined the agency as the Department of Public Assistance in 1967, serving as a caseworker for welfare mothers and their families. He became a child protective caseworker in 1968 and in 1970 was promoted to supervise a casework staff.

In 1971, Henderson left the department to attend Syracuse University in New York where he received his master's social work degree with emphasis on community organization, administration and group therapy.

Henderson returned to the Department of Health and Welfare in Idaho in 1973 to serve as children's services consultant. The following year he was promoted to regional youth services supervisor in Magic Valley, being responsible for all child protection and youth rehabilitation programs. In 1975 he became social services manager.

Henderson said, "I am looking forward to working with a group of devoted people who share my interest in delivering effective and appropriate services throughout Magic Valley."

He and his wife, Beverly, and their two children make their home in Twin Falls. He is the son of Kenneth and Helen Henderson, Filer, and attended school in Filer and Burley.

Elections also are scheduled by the Milner Low Lift Irrigation District, American Falls Reservoir District No. 1 which has headquarters in Twin Falls; Carey and King Hill.

Voting in all districts will be held from 1 to 7 p.m. Tuesday at the individual precinct or division polling places.

Seven men are running for two director positions in the Mindoka Irrigation District in the Rupert area.

Dave Kraus, incumbent in Precinct 4, is opposed by DeVon Hunsaker and Pat O'Donnell Jr. in Precinct 5, the incumbent, Delmar Beaver, faces opposition from Max Drage, Clyde Greenwell, a former director, and Frank Hunt.

Polling places in the Mindoka Irrigation District are Precinct 1—Juan Irigoyen residence east of Zeequig; Precinct 2—Acquila school; Precinct 3—Paul highway district office; Precinct 4—Mindoka Irrigation District office in Rupert, and Precinct 5—Hayburn city office.

In the A and B Irrigation District, also at Rupert, three men are seeking the two posts up for election.

Ken Shuleidt is unopposed in Precinct 1, but Orlo Maughan is challenging J. R. Merrigan, in Merrigan's bid for re-election.

Polling places for the A and B district include Precinct 1, Harold Holton residence, 600 E. 900 N., Rupert; Precinct 2, East watermaster's office, 700 N. ## County will return $20,000 to schools in error repayment

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES

TWIN FALLS — Showing a bit of Christmas goodwill, the Twin Falls county commissioners have agreed to give the Twin Falls School district $20,000.

The money will partially rectify an error made by county clerk Gary Whitwell in September when a decimal point on a county tax levy was misplaced and taxpayers were undercharged by $40,000 on a tax to cover school liability insurance.

Commissioner Ann Cover said the school district, already working on a tight budget, was counting on the additional $40,000 from the county taxpayers. Cover said the commissioners felt all along it was only right to reimburse the school district for the money if possible.

"It was not the fault of the district, it was our mistake, and we offered to help them with $20,000 now and wait until June to see how they are coming. They agreed to this and we think it is a workable agreement," Cover said.

The district may get another $20,000 check in June or a smaller amount depending on what the needs are by that time. Because of increased assessed valuation and higher tax ratios the district will be getting more money than originally planned, but not enough to make up for the $40,000.

Camden Meyer, assistant school superintendent, said the money was originally to come from a one mill levy which is earmarked for liability insurance coverage.

It was budgeted into the school's current budget but when county auditors were setting levies to raise the required amount of money, the decimal point was inadvertently placed about three digits to the left.

Mrs. Cover said the $20,000 is being allocated from revenue sharing money which is as yet unspent.

Parking problems

TWIN FALLS — Just because you've had a few parking tickets lately, don't jump to the paranoid conclusion that the Twin Falls Police Department has launched a massive campaign to crack down on traffic meter violators.

But if you fall to pay those tickets, don't be surprised to be paid a notice by a police officer.

Police Chief Frank Barnett said the police force still assigns the same number of men to the parking meter brigade as 20 years ago, but the number of tickets issued has not risen significantly recently.

Barnett said about 800 tickets were issued in November. Barnett called that figure about average.

The officers who issue parking tickets are catching up to those who fall to pay their tickets a little more rapidly, Barnett said, because additional desk personnel who aid the officers with some of their duties, have been added within the past year.

The new personnel help the officers with the letter writing and telephoning phase of collecting the fines, but if that phase fails, the officers will pay the offender a visit to persuade him to pay the fine.

If that fails to impress the offender, the next step can be very arresting.

Tarwater performing

GOODING — Tarwater, Idaho's most famous hard country music band, will be fiddling and picking up a storm with music for listening and dancing at the Sage Saloon tonight and Saturday night.

Around 500 fans of Idaho home-grown country music reportedly revolved in and out of the Sage Saloon last weekend, generally leaving a bit more light-footed and light hearted than they had come after night of the Waylon Jennings, Texas swing, electrified bluegrass and hard country music spun out by the band.

Contrary to some reports that have been circulating, tickets have not been sold out in advance. In fact, there are no advance sales of tickets for the shows, which start at 9 p.m. Tickets are sold only at the door.

Hiawatha will be shopping mall

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN

HAILEY — It took only about two minutes to auction off the Hiawatha Hotel during a sheriff's sale Thursday and begin a new chapter in the 100-year-old hotel's history.

If all goes as Ketchum developer Jerry Kirkman plans, the historic Hiawatha Hotel will open its doors to the public in about a year, this time as a small shopping mall.

Kirkman bought the hotel Thursday for about $188,500 and then announced plans to convert the old building to a small downtown shopping mall supporting about 15 businesses.

The Hiawatha Hotel, built in the early 1880s when Hailey was still a pioneer town, went on the auction block Thursday as the result of a foreclosure proceeding brought against the owners of the hotel when they defaulted on a sale of stock agreement.

On Sept. 29, 5th District Judge Douglas Kramer issued a foreclosure judgment for about $184,000 in favor of Merritt D. Hill, a Michigan businessman who had owned the Hiawatha for eight years before selling it in early 1976.

Last May, Hill filed suit against the corporation to which he had sold the hotel. He claimed they defaulted on the sale agreement and asked the court to foreclose on the property. A crowd of about 25 people gathered outside the Blaine County courthouse steps at 10 a.m. to watch the sheriff's foreclosure sale.

Kirkman raised his hand once, made the minimum bid, and so turned a new page in the Hiawatha's 94-year history.

Once said to be the finest hotel from Denver to the shores of the Pacific, the Hiawatha now looks to be out of the hotel business for good.

Kirkman now officially owns the building, although he said Thursday he will wait six months before beginning any major renovations. By law, a six-month "redemptory period" follows a sheriff's sale.

During this time, the owners who were foreclosed on, have the right to buy back the property if they can raise the money.

Sales officials said it seems unlikely the former hotel owners could raise the necessary funds to repossess the old hotel.

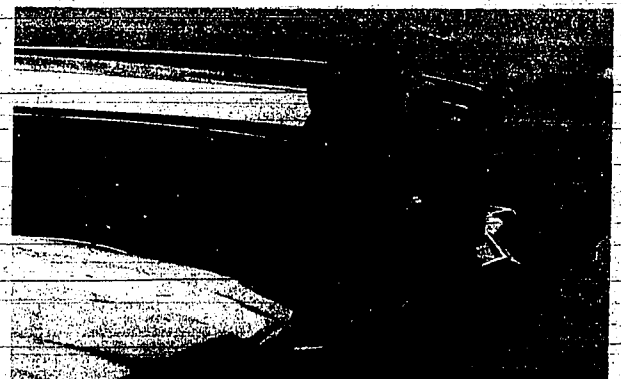

After the six-month redemptory period has passed, Kirkman said he plans major renovations—costing as much as $700,000—for the old building.

He said he plans to maintain the hotel's old west atmosphere and architecture but the inside of the building will be reconstructed into a large mall area.

He tentatively plans to rent space in the mall to a grocery store, a drug store, a bowling alley, a pizza parlor, a bar, and other small businesses.

For the 28-year-old Kirkman, who grew up in Twin Falls and has lived in the Wood River Valley for the past nine years, the purchase of the Hiawatha represents a new chapter in his own history as a developer.

He said he has always been interested in old buildings and when touring through the hotel after it closed last April, he decided "it was a sin for what was happening to it."

Cracks discovered in county building

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS—County officials have discovered a number of cracks in the walls of the 10-year-old portion of the Twin Falls County Judicial Building.

Merl E. Leonard, chairman of the county commissioners, said the matter was brought to his attention Thursday when it was discovered one of the jury room doors would not lock and an inspection revealed the door casing had separated slightly at the upper corner adjacent to the outside north wall of the building.

Further inspection showed cracks along the corner seam of the adjoining jury room and judge's chambers.

"It is not serious enough at this time to concern us about soundness of the building, but it is something we will want to watch. I suppose we will have an architect or building specialist take a look at it," Leonard said.

He said at this point it is not known if the fault is caused by weather, settling of the building or more by an earthquake. There had been no indication of cracks or difficulty in closing doors until Thursday, he said.

The building was erected 10 years ago by the county as an emergency measure with the county commissioners serving as the building agency, hiring workers to handle the labor and installation of utilities.

At the time of construction, a number of building contractors protested the failure to call for bids but commissioners argued an emergency existed because the state had named an additional judicial district judge here and assigned the county to provide a courtroom. By using the emergency procedure, the county was able to complete the one-story building with limited available funds.

Last year an addition was completed at the west end of the original building.

Accident's victim in stable condition

TWIN FALLS—Kathryn Pearson, 47, Hansen, was reported in stable condition and doing well this morning after suffering injuries in a car-truck accident near Kimberly Thursday.

Mrs. Pearson is being treated at the Twin Falls Clinic Hospital for multiple injuries after her sedan was crushed beneath a large semi-truck about 7 a.m. two miles west of Kimberly.

State Police Officer Steve Cazier, said Mrs. Pearson was traveling west on the Sugar Factory Road about 6:45 a.m. when a 1977 truck-trailer unit driven by Leonard E. Morgan, 34, Geny, Ark., and traveling south on the county road, 3300 east, was turning onto the Sugar Factory Road.

The Pearson vehicle crashed into the large vehicle about mid-way in the trailer portion and was crushed between the rear dual wheels of the vehicle.

Officers said as the driver was out of the truck surveying the damage another vehicle, driven by William Lee Hocking, Kimberly, crashed into the Pearson vehicle, forcing it further under the truck trailer.

The original impact with the truck had knocked the battery out of the Pearson vehicle and there were no lights, officers said. Hacking and Morgan escaped injury, but Mrs. Pearson suffered multiple injuries and fractures, officers said. She was pinned in the wreckage of her vehicle for approximately 40 minutes and had to be freed by extraction equipment. Kimberly city officers and county sheriff's officers assisted the state with the investigation.

Another accident victim, Francis H. "Jack" Ryan, 64, Twin Falls, remains in critical condition today at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital. He was injured Wednesday afternoon when the Twin Falls Canal Co. truck he was driving collided with a switch engine at the Cedar Crossing east of Buhl.

Mrs. Fern Johnson, 62, Twin Falls, who escaped serious injury when the car in which she was riding was crushed by a cement truck on U.S. 30 west of here Wednesday has been released from Magic Valley Memorial Hospital.

Snake River reservoirs still low in spite of rains

BOISE (UPI)—Idaho Power Co. said Thursday drought-reduced reservoirs at the Snake River system still are "critically low" despite recent rains.

The company urged customers to continue their voluntary conservation of electricity by at least 10 percent.

Company President James E. Bruce, commending the firm's customers for their conservation efforts, also said customers and land growers in Idaho Power's service area are more than offsetting the voluntary outbacks.

He was commenting on an announcement by the Northwest Power Pool and Bonneville Power Administration that voluntary curtailment no longer is necessary because of improved stream flows in the Columbia River Basin, resulting from rain and snow in the past several weeks.

"Rains on the Snake and its tributaries have increased somewhat, but we are in an entirely different situation here in southern Idaho than elsewhere in the Pacific Northwest," Bruce said.

On Wednesday, he noted, storage in reservoirs from Jackson Lake to Burley, including those on the Boise and Payette rivers, still was more than 2.2 billion acre-feet below last year despite the recent moisture.

"As a result of the relatively low stream flows, our hydro generation is about 50,000 kilowatts less than it was at this time a year ago," Bruce said.

Bruce also noted "Idaho Power customers undoubtedly are practicing conservation but the fact remains that customer and land growth are more than offsetting their efforts."

Drug no cancer hazard, report says

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The latest report from the National Cancer Institute's search for cancer-causing chemicals said Thursday a drug taken by a half million diabetics does not cause cancer in animals. "That should be reassuring. I think, to diabetics," said Dr.

Richard Griestmer, head of the cancer institute's program to test some 350 substances. The good news for the drug tolbutamide followed by three days a report on an unrelated drug, dapson, used to treat leprosy and a relatively rare form of malaria. Dapson caused two types of cancer in male rats and this is considered a cancer risk for humans. Tolbutamide, taken orally, was fed to rats and mice for 78 weeks and found not carcinogenic for either species. It had not been suspected of cancer-causing potential, but was tested because of its wide use since the 1950s in attempts to control diabetes. However, a 10-year study completed in 1970 implicated tolbutamide in increased risk of death from cardiovascular problems, and the Food and Drug Administration has been trying to discourage its use. At least 1.5 million adult

Americans use oral drugs to reduce glucose levels in their blood and the FDA estimates about a half million take tolbutamide. It and three other drugs from the same chemical family are the only such agents now marketed in the United States.

The NCI also is testing the related drugs acetohexamide, chlorpropamide, and tolazamide. Reports are not yet available but Griestmer said "they are all coming out as not being carcinogenic in animals." Dr. Ronald Kahn, of the National Institute of Arthritis, Metabolism and Digestive Diseases, said physicians have differing opinions on the long-term effectiveness of tolbutamide and its chemical cousins, although they do lower blood glucose. The cancer institute has listed or is testing more than 350 chemicals, and Griestmer said about one report a week is expected through next spring. He said about 90 percent of reports now coming out are positive, about 40 percent negative and the rest inconclusive. But he said most of the chemicals tested first were selected because of some suspicion "they might be hazardous." "So that 50 percent probably does not represent the world of chemicals," he said. "I think it (the number of cancer causes) will be much lower than that."

State can't help owner of isolated land

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho highway officials told a Caldwell man today they would like to help him gain access to a piece of property isolated by construction of the freeway, but there was nothing they could do.

Pete Echevarria sought the help of the Idaho Transportation Board so he can get to an 11-acre isolated piece of ground he owns near Caldwell. Echevarria said he had paid taxes on the land and watered it 10 years.

"I'm not asking for something that's not right," he told board members. The board and highway officials suggested his best would be to start a condemnation proceeding in court to gain a road into the area.

For a time, Echevarria used the Pioneer Irrigation District road, but a court ruling blocked his use of the road. He said if the action had been in any other court but in Canyon County, he would have won the fight.

North thought about bidding seven; he did have 16 high-card points and five hearts, but decided to stop at six because his suit was 10-spot high. As for South's bidding, the game was duplicate and he decided to try to score that extra 10 points for playing in notrump. Both decisions were correct although South did make all the tricks. On the other hand if he had been in seven he would have gone down, assuming he gave the hand the correct play. Why did South make seven at his six notrump contract? Because he could afford to lose one heart trick. Therefore, he made the standard safety play of plunking down the ace. When West dropped the king it was a simple matter to go to dummy and finesse against East's jack. Playing at seven the best chance to bring in the whole suit is to finesse the queen. This wins against a doubleton or triplet king in the East hand. It loses to the actual holding of jack and two small in East and singleton king in West.

Devils drop Valley 59-35, Kimberly tops Hansen 39-32 in Snake River tournament

VALLEY SENIOR Todd Schwarz prepares to loose a follow-shot during holiday tournament action at Kimberly. Valley fell to Murtaugh 59-37.

KIMBERLY — Murtaugh's Red Devils and the Kimberly Bulldogs moved into the finals of the 11th annual Snake River holiday basketball tournament Thursday night.

Murtaugh drilled Valley 59-35 while Kimberly outlasted Hansen 39-32 in a slam-bang affair in Thursday night's openers.

"That leaves Hansen and Valley to play for consolation games at 7 p. m. Friday at the Kimberly gymnasium while the host Bulldogs face the task of trying to keep Murtaugh from running off with the title.

Murtaugh came out in a zone defense which completely stopped Valley. The Vikings couldn't get inside it although they had good movement away from the ball and more importantly couldn't hit anything.

Midway through the third quarter Murtaugh had everyone pretty well convinced by mounting a 47-13 margin.

The Red Devils, behind Bates and Buckley, dominated the boards and early in the second quarter went to work on a rout. It didn't help that Valley managed just two field goals in the period as Murtaugh piled up a 27-10 halftime lead.

In the third quarter Murtaugh continued to pull away as Valley continued to fade. But after the count reached 47-13, Valley got four straight long shots by Tracy English and that eased the scoring pressure.

Still Valley was never able to come closer than 10 points.

In the second game, Kimberly and Hansen took turns scoring. Kimberly would run off to a fairly good lead, then stop scoring and Hansen would pull back into contention.

The game was liberally sprinkled with bodies on the floor as both young teams went after each other with a lot of enthusiasm but not a lot of finesse.

Kimberly hit the first seven points of the game as Mark McKinley ran in four points, but before the period ended, Hansen had once bounced back to within three.

In the second period Kimberly stretched ahead 19-7 and still, had 10 points to spare at intermission. The Bulldogs managed just one field goal in the first seven minutes of the third period but Hansen could muster just six points, all on long shots by Virgil Adams.

A McKinley free throw and John Coats' follow shot broke the Kimberly scoreless spell and early in the fourth period McKinley made it 32-21 for the Bulldogs.

Over the next five minutes McKinley managed one free throw, but Hansen couldn't take advantage again and could pull within five points only twice before the game ended.

Williams tops CSI with 23.8 average

TWIN FALLS — Balanced scoring is one thing the College of Southern Idaho Golden Eagles haven't had in posting a 7-2 record thus far in the young basketball season.

Fresh guard Jerry Williams of Chicago has pumped through 214 points for a sparkling 23.8 average but next best on the team is fresh Craig Cayruth with 81 points and a 9.0 mark.

This rests on CSI Coach Mike Mitchell's mind Friday as he prepares his Eagles for a double invasion by two Washington junior colleges. CSI will host Columbia Basin of Pasco at 8 p. m. Friday and against Spokane Community College at the same time Saturday.

The Saturday battle will be the second part of a twin bill, the CSI girls hosting College of Idaho at 6:30 p. m.

"I think a couple of things have really worked against us this season," Coach Mitchell said Thursday afternoon. "The biggest thing is the loss of our two guards 'Curtis' Rayford with a foot injury and David Ferguson to pneumonia. I felt we were showing good progress with each game we played through the Casper tournament and before that. Then with Ferguson and Rayford out, things just fell apart on us."

"The other thing we really need to do is get some scoring punch from our big guys in side. We have to get Cayruth up to 12 or 13 points a game and some points from Orlando Brown."

"We've missed a lot of good, close-in shots so far and we can't afford that," he continued.

Mitchell said he now pretty well feels the direction he wants to go from a personal standpoint.

"I really feel that to beat the strong clubs we have to have (6-8 Kenny) Justice in the starting lineup," he said.

"With Kenny Cayruth and Orlando in the middle of our 1-3-1 zone, we cover a lot of passing lanes. Over has to come for us, or because without him or Justice, we're just too small. I consider Williams (6-5) small because he doesn't have that span."

"That means that Ferguson will become our swing man. He's a smart player and can play both the point or the wing offensively or defensively. Bob Starnier will be our inside relet man," Mitchell continued.

"By the coach also knows that time now is running against him more than somewhat. He has these two games this week plus two in Spokane next weekend. Then the team will take off for the Christmas holidays and won't play again until Jan. 13."

"What we really need now is for the players to understand just when they can go away from offense and not expect me to get mad about it," he said. "We could have started with a free-throwing offense but we would have lost all control. I put an iron hand on them offensively to begin with, because I feel that you have to have the structure first and improve on it (as the occasion permits). You can't free lance and then come back to structure."

"I thought we showed a little of that against Western Wyoming (Monday) but we were still a little too structured," he added.

"In addition to Williams' top scoring average, the CSI statistics show that the Chicago freshman is hitting .585 from the field and .77 from the foul-line. Rayford is the best free-throw shooter, hitting 18 or 21 for an .856 mark.

Starnier ranks second in field goal shooting at .571 and Ferguson's .777 free throw percentage equals Williams.

Cayruth is the top rebounder with 72, four more than Williams while Bryant had 53. Ferguson is tops in assists with 14, three more than Rayford and Cayruth holds the lead in blocked shots with seven. Williams is top in steals with nine while Cayruth and Starnier have six each.

Montana coach likes chances for title in BYU tournament

PROVO, Utah (UPI) — Montana coach Jim Brandenburg likes his chances in the Cougar Basketball Classic tonight and Saturday night, based on the way his team has been playing on the road.

Montana takes on host Brigham Young University in tonight's second game, while giant-killer William and Mary plays Cal State-Fullerton in the opening contest.

"We've played three games in the past five days, and we're still 3-1," Brandenburg said. "This tournament should be a good test for our kids. We're still developing as a team, and two more quick games should help us."

Brandenburg says junior guard Mike Richardson has been carrying the load thus far, and he's been getting us through the early games. But we'll need more balance to win a lot of games this year.

"So the Classic should give us a chance to bring our other players along. We won't be able to play just five starters both nights. We'll have to use our reserves."

Richardson has been called the top individual player in the Big Sky Conference by most of the league's coaches. And in four games this year the 6-foot-5 guard has lived up to the billing, averaging 33.5 points per game and leading the Grizzlies in rebounding, assists, blocked shots and steals.

But William and Mary is the favorite in the four-lam tournament after the Indians' stunning 78-75 upset of second-ranked North-Carolina Wednesday night—pushing their record to 5-1.

Tonight's two winners meet Saturday night for the championship trophy, following the consolation game in BYU's 22,000-seat Marriott Center.

BYU coach Frank Arnold says he's glad his Cougars don't have to play William and Mary the first night. "We'll have enough trouble trying to stop Richardson. We just don't have anyone who can go one-on-one against him."

Arnold hopes to counter Richardson with his freshman guard-forward Danny Alinga. The 6-foot-5 Alinga is averaging 22.1 points per game and seven rebounds per game for the 1-3 Cougars.

William and Mary is led by forwards John Lowenbaupt and Skip Farnell. The two frontmen combined for 21 points in the Indians' upset win over the Tarheels, and both are averaging more than seven rebounds per game.

Pilots top Richfield

RICHFIELD — Glenns Ferry's girls used their height to good advantage as they broke away from a halftime lead and went on to defeat the Richfield Tigers 31-17 Thursday night.

There was little to choose from between the two teams over the first two and one-half quarters, but from the middle third period on Glenns Ferry began moving away.

Richfield, down only four going into the final period, managed only one point thereafter as Glenns Ferry hauled easily away.

Richfield, which took the preliminary 17-10, will entertain Shoshone Thursday night.

GOODING — The Burley girls caught an early second-quarter scoring spark from Vegwert and went on to defeat the Gooding Senators 41-35 Thursday night.

Gooding had fashioned a 9-4 first quarter lead but early in the second period Vegwert hit six quick points and Burley used that as a springboard to stun the Senators with a 19-point quarter.

Gooding added to its woes by hitting just four points in the third period and never was able to overcome the final eight minutes.

Burley's Jayvees made it a sweep by taking the first game 28-21.

Gooding will entertain Filer at 6:15 p. m. Monday.

Shoshone edges W.R.

SHOSHONE — The Shoshone Indians turned to the foul line in the fourth quarter to outlast the Wood River Wolverines 22-25 in a girls' basketball game Thursday.

Shoshone appeared to have things well in hand when it jumped into an 8-2 lead after one quarter. Although Wood River did warm up some after that, it was not quite able to overcome the lead.

Shoshone, which was 12 for 20 from the line, hit six of 11 in the fourth period to pull away from a shaky two-point third quarter margin.

Shoshone claimed the preliminary 24-19.
The Indians will travel to Wendell Monday night.

Kuhn lifts suspension of Turner

HONOLULU (UPI) — Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn lifted the suspension of Atlanta Braves' owner Ted Turner at the winter baseball meetings Thursday and said his action is effective immediately.

Turner was suspended, for tampering by Kuhn last Dec. 30 in the case of free agent outfielder Gary Matthews. Originally, Turner was fined $10,000 by the Commissioner when he threw a party in Atlanta for Matthews after Matthews had become a free agent with the San Francisco Giants. When Turner goaded San Francisco owner Bob Lurie following the fine imposed by Kuhn, telling Lurie "I'm going to sign Matthews anyway," the Atlanta owner was set down for a year even though the Braves eventually signed Matthews to a three-year contract for $2.3 million.

Turner's suspension was interrupted when Kuhn lifted it voluntarily during a trial in which Turner—unsuccessfully—tried to have the suspension set aside.

Rebuilding Dolphins find 'future' here

By United Press International
When the 1977 football season began, the Miami Dolphins did not give much thought to postseason play. They seemed content to sacrifice the season, experimenting and rebuilding for the future.

But with only two weeks remaining in the regular season, the 9-3 Dolphins find that the future is now. Going into Sunday's game at New England, they are tied for first place in the AFC East with the Baltimore Colts, lead the Patriots (8-4) by one game and can capture the Eastern title with victories in their final two games. They face the Buffalo Bills at Miami in their last game of the season.

If the Dolphins and Colts can capture the Eastern title with victories in their final two games, Miami will beat out Baltimore because it sports a better intradivision record (7-1 to Baltimore's 6-2). The Colts would still have a shot at a wild-card berth.

However, if New England—which looked to be out of the playoff picture a few weeks ago—should defeat the Dolphins and go on to beat the Colts at Baltimore in their season finale, the Patriots would take the division. New England also becomes conference champion if the three teams finish in a 10-4 tie because they have the best record in head-to-head competition with Miami and Baltimore.

New England quarterback Steve Grogan said he hasn't felt too much pressure thinking about Sunday's game. "I'm trying to remain poised. We've got to make some big plays ourselves and not let them get the big plays like they've been getting."

"I've always had a lot of respect for the Patriots' defense and the way they've played," Miami coach Don Shula said. "We've always had a lot of trouble with it."

"To stop Miami, you've got to stop the run," Patriots defensive coordinator Hank Bfulough said. "That's what makes them go. They have great outside speed."

"All of them can catch the ball, Griese can throw it. They've got a good line in front of them. They're explosive. But it's the running game that makes them go. That's what we'll have to stop," he said.

"Three teams have already clinched playoff spots—Denver, Dallas and Los Angeles. In addition to Miami, 10 other teams are still in the running for the five remaining playoff spots.

The Super Bowl Champion Oakland Raiders, 9-3, can qualify as the AFC wild card entry by winning its last two games or finishing in a 10-4 tie with Baltimore, Miami or New England. The Raiders have the best intradivision record among those teams.

Pittsburgh, 8-4, can clinch the AFC Central title by beating Cincinnati, 7-5, Saturday.

Minnesota, 8-4, has to win one of its last two games to clinch the NFC Central. If they should end up in a 9-5 tie with Chicago, now 8-4, the Vikings would take the division because they defeated the Bears by six points and lost to them by only three.

The NFC wild card spot most likely will go to either St. Louis, Washington or Chicago, all with 7-5 records, although Atlanta, 6-6, retains a slim chance.

Washington, which beat the Cardinals 21-17 earlier this year, is at St. Louis Saturday. The Bears close the season against Green Bay at Chicago and the New York Giants at East Rutherford, N.J. The Cards close at Tampa Bay, while Washington ends its season at home against Los Angeles.

Howe, 1,000th goal in hand, looks toward management job

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI)—Gordie Howe, the first man to score 1,000 career hockey goals, said Thursday he expects to retire in the front office of the New England Whalers.

"I think this will be the last year," Howe said following a workout at the Birmingham-Jefferson Coliseum. "I'll be a grandfather before long, and not too many grandfathers play hockey."

Howe, 49, ended a 10-game scoring slump and showed the elusive 1,000th goal past Birmingham goalie John Garrett Wednesday night in New England's 6-3 WHA win over the Bulls.

"John's a great guy," Howe said with a chuckle. "This morning they painted 1,000 on his sweater and he took it well. He's one of the finest goals in the league."

Howe scored on a power play with only 1:36 elapsed in the first period. He got assists from Whaler wingers John McKenzie and Mike Antonovich.

Howe's teammates poured onto the ice for congratulatory hugs, and a crowd of more than 10,000 gave him a standing ovation.

The Whalers, at the top of the WHA with a mark of 17-6-3, remained in Birmingham for a second game Friday night against the Bulls, who are in the league's cellar with a record of 8-14-2.

Howe said age is eroding his playing ability, and "just experience helps me bluff through some games. Besides, 1,000 won't last long the way Hull is coming along."

Winnipeg's Bobby Hull has more than 970 goals.

Howe said he plans to recruit for the Whalers. "I've got some credibility with these youngsters when I tell them something."

As for coaching, Howe replied, "No. I enjoy the game too much. I've been on the ice too long. Coaches watch the game and never relax unless you have a big lead."

NBA all-star voting close

NEW YORK (UPI)—New York's Bob McAdoo and Boston's Dave Cowens engaged in a tight battle for the starting center berth on the Eastern Conference NBA All-Star team.

The first results of NBA fan balloting show McAdoo leading all Eastern Conference pivots with 29,231 votes, but Cowens trails the Knicks' smooth-shooting center by only 214 votes.

The East's overwhelming leader is Philadelphia 76ers' forward Julius Erving with 64,573 votes. Erving's teammate at forward, George McGinnis, is holding down the other starting position with 22,069 votes.

A third member of the 76ers, guard Doug Collins, is in second place among East backcourtmen with 41,488 votes, so Philadelphia could possibly place three players on the starting team. The league's top scorer, Pete Maravich of the New Orleans Jazz, leads all Eastern guards with 47,158 votes.

Comprehensive policy guidelines set for Idaho

BOISE (UPI)—The State Fish and Game Commission Thursday adopted what department Director Joe Greenley called "the most comprehensive" guide the state has ever had for management of Idaho's Fish and Wildlife resources.

The plan, which defines goals, objectives and policies of the department, was adopted by commissioners after several hours of revision. It is expected to go to print sometime in January.

"It provides guidelines for the Fish and Game Department to develop more definitive management policies on a statewide basis," said Greenley. "The policy that was adopted has been up for review and amended several times and we didn't expect substantial changes this time."

But Greenley left the door open for future changes in the plan. "We'll be continually updating. We'll work with it and make changes when and where they are needed. A good policy has to be flexible. I wouldn't doubt that it may need some changes the day it is printed."

Greenley said the department has never had a plan put together as a total resource policy. It has formerly relied on individual policies.

He said the new plan establishes goals and objectives for the department and "we'll define programs to meet them."

The commission also approved the $1.6 million purchase of Burdett Prince property south of Lewiston on the Snake River. The property includes six miles of river frontage.

In other action, the commission adopted expanded steelhead regulations for spring 1978.

The regulations provide for a longer season on the Snake River area of the Lower Granite Reservoir and the Snake River upstream to just below Hells Canyon Dam. The season will run from Jan. 1 to April 16.

Similar seasons were approved for the Clearwater arm of the reservoir and the north Fork Clearwater River.

Opening dates for 1978 big game hunting seasons also were approved.

The dates and season lengths are similar to those observed during 1977 and affect deer and elk controlled hunts, black bear, mountain lion, moose, antelope, bighorn sheep, and mountain goat.

Sox score on swap, strike out on sale

HONOLULU (UPI) — After hitting a home run earlier in the day in their acquisition of second baseman Jerry Remy from California, the Boston Sox struck out Thursday when the group headed by Haywood Sullivan and Buddy Leroux was turned down by the American League owners in its effort to purchase the club.

As a result of the rejection, the team remains under control of the Yankee estate with Joseph Lacour, Joe Curran and Mrs. Jean Yavvok as executors. Sullivan will remain as general manager, with Lacour as his assistant.

"I'm very disappointed at the outcome," said Sullivan. "Frankly I don't understand it other than the reason stated, which is very ambiguous as far as I'm concerned."

The rejection was a bitter blow to Sullivan and his group, which had expressed optimism of approval after having switched to the American Finance Corporation of Cincinnati for financial backing.

However, basic reason for the rejection was that the American League officials didn't like the economic structure of the new group.

"We'll be back," said Leroux. "Things had brightened considerably for Sullivan's group a few days ago, when a probate judge in Boston had thrown out an injunction brought by a rival group interested in purchasing the Red Sox. The group, known as ATO, had sought the injunction on the grounds that its offer was better than Sullivan's group and they should have priority in buying the team."

Les MacPhail, American League President, was asked what the vote was against the Sullivan/Leroux group, but declined to reveal it.

"The vote was a secret ballot," he said.

MacPhail said the discussion centered almost entirely "on the long term economic viability of the general partners" meaning Sullivan and Leroux.

Ironically, Sullivan participated earlier in the day in the acquisition of Remy from the Angels for right-handed pitcher Don Asse and cash considerations.

The Angels used that cash to help sign free agent Rick Miller then later completed their third deal of the season by obtaining left-handed hitter Ron Fairly from the Toronto Blue Jays for two minor leaguers.

Earlier in the day, the Chicago Cubs and St. Louis Cardinals agreed to a five-player swap with Chicago sending All-Star outfielder Jerry Morales, catcher Steve Swisher and a player to be named later to St. Louis for catcher Dave Rader and outfielder-infielder Hedy Cruz.

The Angels, under new General Manager Buzze Bavasi, have been the busiest team at the meetings. Earlier in the week they acquired pitcher Chris Knapp and catcher Brian Downing from the Chicago White Sox.

The Angels went to the meetings seeking to bolster their pitching staff and to obtain a first-string catcher and a left-handed hitter. The acquisition of Fairly completes their goals.

Fairly, 35, served primarily as a designated hitter with Toronto last season and hit .279 with 19 home runs and 64 RBI. The red-haired Fairly is a veteran of 18 major-league seasons.

Fairly, also used as a first baseman with the Blue Jays, became expendable earlier in the day when Toronto acquired first baseman Tommy Horton from the Philadelphia Phillies in a straight-cash transaction. Horton is regarded as one of the finest defensive players in the game and batted .309 for the Phillies in 1976.

The Angels' bid for the addition of Asse, a 23-year-old right-hander who posted a 6-2 record down the stretch after being called up from Pawtucket, gives them one of the American League's strongest pitching staffs. Asse should join Knapp, Nolan Ryan and Frank Tanana as the Angels' front four.

"We feel we've added to our staff," said Angels' Manager Dave Garcia. "Asse will have to be considered a starter. I saw him twice last year and he is a 'Tanner' in a one-run ballgame."

Garcia also indicated that Miller would start in center field, flanked by the newly acquired free agent Lynn Bostock and minor-league Player of the Year Ken Landreaux. Garcia indicated Joe Rudi would move from left field to first base.

In acquiring Remy, the Red Sox, thus, have ended their search for a quality second baseman.

"We were very reluctant to give up one of our young pitchers and we thought about it quite a while," said Haywood Sullivan, the head of a group which is seeking to gain ownership of the Red Sox. "But we had to do it to acquire Remy."

Unitas' retirement fund increased by $250,000

TOWSON, Md. (UPI) — The owner of the Los Angeles Rams, has agreed to pay former Baltimore Colts' quarterback John Unitas $250,000 in retirement benefits over a period of 10 years.

The payments, part of $215,000 apparently due Unitas from the retirement agreement signed during his 17-year Colt career, were revealed Thursday in a Baltimore County Circuit Court agreement, which provides a glimpse into the financial records of the Colts when the club was owned by Carroll Rosenbloom, now owner of the Rams.

Meanwhile, the Los Angeles Rams Football Co. has filed suit for $300,000 against Peat, Marwick, Mitchell and Co., the accounting firm that prepared the financial accounts of the Colts before the two teams were swapped on June 17, 1972 by Rosenbloom and Robert Irsay, then the Rams owner.

At the time of the trade, Rosenbloom and Irsay, now the Colts owner, agreed to assume the liabilities and assets of their new clubs, but Rosenbloom claims the obligation to pay Unitas $250,000 in deferred compensation was assumed erroneously.

Court papers also showed:

- When Irsay swapped the Rams for the Colts with Rosenbloom, he agreed to pay Rosenbloom $1.9 million.
- Unitas signed contracts for $125,000 a year for his last two seasons in 1971 and 1972.
- Unitas accumulated retirement benefits designed to earn him $615,000 for his first 10 years of retirement, but lost $187,000 of that in a court fight with Irsay.
- Financial audits of the Colts showed they had pre-tax profits of $890,000 in 1969, $1.3 million in 1970 and $1.35 million in 1971. The Rams had earnings of $2.19 million in 1970 and $2.67 million in 1971.

Celtics reshuffle bottom echelon

BOSTON (UPI) — The Boston Celtics Thursday reshuffled the bottom of their roster in a move which probably won't solve the problems that have kept the team near the bottom of the Atlantic Division this season.

The Celtics, who host the defending NBA champion Portland Trail Blazers Friday night, re-signed guard Kevin Stacom and placed forward Steve Kuberski on waivers.

Stacom, a 6-foot-5 former Providence College star, saw limited action with the Celtics earlier this season before being placed on waivers Nov. 9 to get the team down to the NBA 11-player limit. Stacom was the Celtics second round draft choice in 1974.

Like Stacom, the 6-foot-8 Kuberski — drafted by Boston on the fourth round in 1969 — played very little this season. He broke his hand in training camp in a fight with forward Norm Cook.

Kuberski, who played his college ball at Bradley, went to New Orleans in the 1974 expansion draft.

He was traded to Milwaukee and then Buffalo the same year before returning to Boston as a free agent in 1975. He played a key role in helping the Celtics to a championship that year.

The Trail Blazers — led by Bill Walton and Maurice Lucas — lead the NBA's Pacific Division with an 18-4 record, five games ahead of Phoenix. They are coming off a 122-0 loss at Philadelphia Wednesday night.

The Celtics, coming off a 80-8 offensive performance in beating Kansas City 115-109 Wednesday night, are 8-15 for the season. They are nine games behind division-leading Philadelphia.

Stallworth says health's key reason for outstanding year

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Pittsburgh Steelers' wide receiver John Stallworth is proud to say he's having the best season of his four-year career. He has 42 receptions for 423 yards and seven touchdowns in 12 games. But he's afraid people are going to misunderstand the reason behind it.

"It's not because I didn't have the talent to do what these seasons before but because I always got injured," Stallworth said. "This year's the longest I've stayed healthy."

"This only season besides this one in which he was not hampered by injuries was 1974, and that year, Stallworth said, he was slowed down by the fact he was a rookie.

"There were veterans in front of me," Stallworth said. "Lynn (Swann) and I were in the same position." Still he had a productive year, 16 catches for 263 yards and a touchdown in 13 regular season games with five more receptions for 40 yards during the playoffs.

Stallworth was leading the team in receptions until the sixth game of the 1973 season, then he strained a muscle in his lower thigh.

He missed three games and found that when he returned to action, the injury still "cut down on my ability to do the things I usually do well. I couldn't drive the guys off me." Stallworth finished 1973 with 20 regular-season catches for 423 yards and four touchdowns and four playoff catches for 38 yards and one TD.

Stallworth again was leading the team in receptions when he pulled a muscle in the third game of the 1976 season.

"It sidelined me for four games," Stallworth said. "Then I played in two and pulled it again. I came back with two games left in the season. But when you're coming back that late, you really can't accomplish much. It's a foolish thing to really think that you can."

He ended 1976 with a disappointing total of nine receptions for 111 yards and two touchdowns. He had two catches in the playoffs for 28 yards.

As a group, the Steeler receivers have been healthier longer this year than during any recent season — a fact Stallworth credits both to good luck and the hiring of Tom Moore as receiver coach.

"I think there has to be some luck involved in us not getting hurt," he said. "But I think it's more that we're becoming older and we know what it takes to get our job done."

Missing mare found

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Fanfruelche, a broodmare believed to be in foal to Secretariat and missing since July 25, was recovered unharmed Thursday afternoon by FBI agents and Blue police working on a tip.

The horse, stolen from Seth Hancock's Claiborne Farm near Paris, was reported in good shape but apparently had not been properly groomed and had been fed a diet of simple grass, according to authorities.

A trailer and veterinarian were sent to the Tompkinsville farm where the horse was located to check Fanfruelche and return her to the Claiborne Farm.

William M. McCandless, a 31-year-old resident of Nashville, Tenn., surrendered to police on Sept. 1 in connection with the horse's disappearance. Authorities said they were uncertain if others may have been involved in the horse's disappearance.

Robert Pence, assistant special agent in charge of the FBI in Louisville, said FBI agents and state police discovered the horse while working on the basis of a confidential tip prompted in part by the payment of a $25,000 reward for the horse's safe return.

The horse was found on a farm of KY 63 about 3 1/2 miles north of Tompkinsville. Pence declined to reveal the name of the owner of the farm because the owner apparently was unaware of the horse's true identity.

Pence said the horse was positively identified by a tattoo and distinctive markings.

The owner cared for the horse since July when Fanfruelche was found wandering along a roadside near Tom-pkinsville, according to Pence, who said the owner took the horse to his property but never reported the incident to police.

The horse was unharmed but was on only grass instead of its regular diet of feed, according to Pence. Agents at the scene also reported the horse had hoof and leg rope burns and had not been properly groomed.

'Sam' trial move denied by court

NEW YORK (UPI) — A New York court says the Son of Sam murder case received heavy media coverage throughout the country, and denied a defense motion to hold suspect David Berkowitz' murder trial outside New York City.

The Appellate Division of the state supreme court acted Wednesday on a change of venue motion by Berkowitz' attorneys, who said intensive local press coverage made it impossible for the 24-year-old suspect to get a fair trial in Brooklyn, where the last of "Son of Sam's" victims was slain July 31.

"The widespread publicity generated by this case has not been restricted to Kings County," the court said. "Indeed, there are few areas of the country where the media has not carried numerous detailed accounts of the matter."

Berkowitz' attorneys had asked that the trial be transferred to Sullivan County in upstate New York, although Sullivan County officials said they did not want the trial.

The court ruled, "Under the circumstances, we believe that transferring this case to Sullivan County or any other county in this state will not succeed to any significant degree in mitigating the effects of such publicity."

Brooklyn District Attorney Eugene Gold argued in court papers filed Monday that the "Son of Sam" case received almost as much coverage upstate as it did in the city.

Berkowitz is charged in Brooklyn with murder and attempted murder in connection with the death of Stacey Moskowitz and the wounding of her date in the last of a series of attacks attributed to the 44-caliber killer.

News accounts of the killings appeared in papers as far away as Moscow, London and Tokyo, Gold noted in his arguments.

The court agreed and noted Brooklyn's 2 1/2 million population, saying "We cannot agree with defendant that there is reasonable cause to believe that a fair and impartial trial cannot be had in Kings County.

"Such prejudice and/or predisposition exists, if any, may be ascertained by defendant's attorneys upon questioning of prospective jurors and dealt with accordingly," the appellate rulings said.

Attorney raps lawyer competence

BOULDER, Colo. (UPI) — Noted courtroom attorney F. Lee Bailey told an audience of university students most trial lawyers are incompetent because of the poor quality of the nation's law schools.

"What we do is not very good, but what do you expect from a complete lack of training?" Bailey said during a Tuesday appearance on the Colorado University campus.

Bailey told about 1,100 students it takes at least five years to become a competent trial attorney.

"How would you like it if you got on a plane and it took off and on the loudspeaker you heard, 'We have a new chap today and he is training in the left seat?'"

Bailey said the entire system of American justice is poor and said he prefers the English system, where a law school graduate takes additional training to become a barrister, or courtroom attorney.
