Sandwich price sparks Ketchum fight

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN
Times-News writer

KETCHUM — A fight over the price of a sandwich left a store owner with 40 stitches in his arm and led to the arrest of two other men during the holiday weekend.

Police reports indicate a verbal altercation Saturday night over the price of a sandwich at the Mini-Mart erupted into an assault with a snow shovel on the store proprietor, Jeffrey Glasston, 29, of Ketchum, by 28-year-old Phillip J. Mann and 21-year-old James L. Sneed, both of North Fork, a subdivision north of Ketchum.

A front glass door at the store was broken during the incident and Glasston received a three-inch laceration on his left arm, which took 40 stitches, during the fight over the sandwich price, according to police reports.

Mann and Sneed were arrested later that night and were still in Blaine County jail Monday, awaiting arraignment.

The Mini-Mart's holiday troubles, however, didn't end with the arrests.

Later Saturday night, after the store had been closed for the night, a burglar entered the market through the broken front door and took four cases of beer, 21 bottles of wine and lots of candy.

Police said an 18-year-old Ketchum youth, Steve Bowcut, was taken into custody and charged with this burglary.

The youth was released to his parents' custody.

The holiday activities began for Ketchum police late Friday when the Sample Shack clothing store was burglarized and about $250 in merchandise — primarily Bong water pipes — was taken.

The burglar apparently hid inside the store after closing time Friday and then broke a window from the inside to remove the merchandise and escape, police said. The case is still under investigation.

Two other burglaries also occurred at the Alpine Saloon, A.C. Houston Lumber Co. over the Christmas weekend

Two other burglaries also occurred at the Alpine Saloon and A.C. Houston Lumber Co. over the Christmas weekend.

A safe, cash register, pinball machine and pool tables, at the Alpine Saloon was broken into sometime late Christmas night after the bar's closing and about $450 taken.

Burglars at the A.C. Houston Lumber Co. broke in to the supply store through a side window sometime during the weekend and made off with an undetermined amount of cash and merchandise.

CIA tie to news backed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former CIA Director William Colby said today the CIA has used journalists on intelligence missions but has taken pains not to influence what is published in the American press.

Colby testified at the start of hearings by a House intelligence subcommittee that is looking into the relationship between reporters and intelligence gathering.

Colby urged Congress not to establish "any blanket prohibition against any relationship whatsoever between American journalists and intelligence services." He said the CIA should be left free to work with journalists.

"If you accept that intelligence work is important to the protection of our country, and both our laws and presidential executive orders say that it is, then you must also give CIA the essential tools with which to do its work."

Relationships in the past "have included CIA employees on intelligence missions abroad who served as real or pretended journalists," he said.

"My agents and I had a clear understanding that they did their intelligence work for me, but that the news reports they wrote were a matter between themselves and their editors, and not given prior clearance or direction by me," he said.

"The function of the CIA," Colby added, "is to work abroad, not to determine the content of American media."

While this has been "an understanding" within CIA in the past, Colby said, it now should be put into a specific regulation.

"I strongly recommend that we not establish any blanket prohibition against any relationship whatsoever between American journalists and intelligence services," he said. "I would particularly hope that we would not be so foolish as to forbid any relationship between American intelligence services and the journalists of foreign and even hostile powers."

Colby said today he generally approves CIA Director Stanfield Turner's Dec. 2 regulations on CIA relations with the media, even though they meant the agency would lose another valuable "cover" source.

He said the CIA already was forbidden to use members of the Peace Corps, Fulbright scholars, or members of the Agency for International Development and the United States Information Agency for cover purposes.

"I'm totally opposed to the prohibition of any more government agencies" for possible use by the CIA, he said.

Lack of cover, he said, was partially responsible for the murder of Richard Welch, a CIA station chief in Athens, two years ago.

Begin wish granted

© N.Y. Times Service

TEL AVIV — Several times in recent days, Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin said he wanted to see the Pyramids. Monday, as he returned from his talks with Egyptian President Anwar el-Sadat in Ismailia, Begin got his wish.

Begin, flying in a chartered commercial Israeli jet, got a bird's-eye view of the ancient Egyptian marvels at Giza. With the consent of the Egyptians, the Israeli aircraft circled low over the Pyramids.

Later, at a news conference at Ben Gurion Airport, Begin said, "The Pyramids in themselves are phenomenal. It is very difficult to understand how the rulers came to this idea that they must eternalize themselves. From time to time we shall visit them again."

Sinai pullback terms reported near

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — Israel and Egypt reached a virtual agreement at their Christmas summit on an Israeli withdrawal from the Sinai but did not announce it because they could not resolve the Palestinian issue, Egyptian officials said today.

The officials said President Anwar Sadat did not want to show agreement with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin on Sinai because it would appear as if Israel and Egypt made a bilateral settlement and ignored the Palestinians. But the two leaders agreed to keep on talking.

Sadat must have something to show to the Arabs, particularly Jordan and Syria, that he was able to win concessions from Israel regarding the occupied West Bank of Jordan and the Gaza Strip, the officials said. Egypt wants a Palestinian state in those areas.

In Damascus, Syria, said the Christmas summit with Begin was a "total failure" and called on Sadat to step down from power.

The government-controlled Damascus daily Tishrin said, "Begin did not make any concessions to Sadat that approached Sadat's visit to Israel."

The same newspaper called on the Egyptian president to step down in favor of a new regime because his policy "has reached a dead end now that he has failed to fulfill the simplest of his promises."

In Jerusalem, Begin briefed his cabinet and the U.S. ambassador on his talks with Sadat and prepared for a tough debate in parliament on the latest moves toward peace.

"The discussions in Ismailia were constructive," Ambassador Samuel Lewis said after his meeting with Begin at the premier's office.

He said the "ministerial committees" on the military and diplomatic aspects of a peace settlement would carry on the negotiations, "and this is helpful."

Begin and Defense Minister Ezer Weizman later reported to the cabinet on a special four-hour session. A spokesman said there was a thorough review but no decisions were taken.

In Cairo U.S. Ambassador Hermann F. Eilts met with Sadat, who returned from the Suez Canal city of Ismailia where the summit was held; for a briefing on the talks with the Israelis.

The head of the U.S. delegation to the recessed Cairo Peace Conference, Alfred Atherton, will go directly from Egypt to Warsaw to meet with President Carter about the Middle East peace moves. Poland will be Carter's first stop on his tour.

West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt arrived in Cairo to demonstrate his country's support for Sadat's peace moves.

Begin and Sadat ended two days of talks in Ismailia Monday with a joint news conference acknowledging that crucial differences remained between them, primarily on whether to establish a Palestinian state on lands now occupied by Israel.

Begin said on his return to Israel that "additional momentum" had been given to the establishment of Middle East peace.

Gloom wraps '78 outlook

PARIS (UPI) — The industrialized nations must take action quickly or face stagnant growth, soaring unemployment and upheaval on the money exchange markets, an authoritative report said today.

The Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, in its twice-yearly economic outlook, called on the United States to stimulate its economy and warned that U.S. economic recovery could risk running out of steam by the end of 1978.

It forecast gloomy prospects for the year ahead — a growth rate of only 3 to 3.5 percent among the 24 member nations of North America, Western Europe, Japan, Australia and New Zealand unless key nations speedily adjust their economies.

Japan, U.S. resume talks on trade

TOKYO (UPI) — Japan decided today to resume talks with the United States this week to settle bilateral trade difficulties, government sources said.

The local point of discussions will be how much Japan can yield to U.S.

demands for increasing imports of American dairy and farm products.

The current trade difficulties between the two nations stemmed from Japan's swollen trade surplus with the United States that is estimated to have reached $10 billion this year.

The Japanese government hopes to straighten out the trade dispute as soon as possible to avoid a rupture in overall U.S.-Japanese relations, the sources said. They said Japan plans to offer additional concessions to the United States on issues involving Japanese imports of high-grade beef, oranges and citrus juice.

Agriculture-Forestry Minister Ichiro Nakagawa told newsmen after the meeting that preliminary talks would be resumed in a few days through diplomatic channels.

Nakagawa said Japan hopes to settle the issue by the end of this year to pave the way for a visit to Japan by President Carter's special trade negotiator, Robert Strauss, early next month.

Strauss said earlier he would not come to Japan unless his trip would help settle the trade dispute.

The United States was not satisfied with a Japanese concession package taken to Washington this month by Nobuhiko Ushiba, former Japanese ambassador to the United States who was named minister in charge of external trade affairs in a cabinet reshuffle Nov. 28.

The package of measures called for the removal or lowering of import tariffs on certain industrial products and expansion of import quotas for farm goods. A representative of the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party who was sent to Washington recently reported that the United States demanded a 20 percent increase in import quotas for high-grade beef for use at hotels to 10,000 tons yearly and purchase $60 million worth of citrus products.

Japan offered to double the beef quota from 1,000 tons to 2,000 tons next year. It then added 1,000 more tons as a compromise.

APARTMENTS BURN AFTER CRASH
... chopper pilot, newsman killed

Craft plows into house

QUINCY, Mass. (UPI) — The traffic-scouting helicopter of a Boston radio station crashed into an apartment house early today killing the pilot and a reporter.

Four residents of the three-story apartment building were injured in the crash, which followed the crash.

Police said pilot Richard "Red" Banks, 50, and newsman Chip Whitmore, 25, of station WEEI were trapped in the downed aircraft. The two victims were substituting for the regular pilot and reporter.

"They were trapped inside the wreckage," Quincy police spokesman said.

The helicopter was on its usual morning flight to broadcast traffic conditions as the morning highway crush began when something went wrong.

The pilot radioed that he was going to try for an emergency landing. He apparently was beginning a turn when the helicopter hit the building. It was 7:32 a.m.

Part of the bubble cockpit sheared off and the aircraft plummeted to the ground. One rotor blade remained sticking out of an apartment window, officials said.

The radio station said Whitmore was substituting for vacationing regular traffic reporter Kevin O'Keefe.

Pair escapes from jail

AMERICUS, Ga. (UPI) — Buddy Cochran, sentenced to 12 years in prison for ramming a car into a crowd at a Ku Klux Klan rally in President Carter's hometown of Plains, escaped from the Sumner County jail today with a companion.

Sumner County Sheriff Randy Howard said Cochran and his companion, tentatively identified as Michael Proctor, sawed through the bars of their cell and fled shortly before 6 a.m.

Howard said Cochran's wife, Mary Sue, was arrested at a Trailways bus station in Americus, apparently in conjunction with the break.

Cochran was last seen on foot but the State Patrol said statewide alert had been issued for a 1976 or 1977 Chevrolet Chevelle with Mississippi license plates.

Alaska hit by tremors

PALMER, Alaska (UPI) — A moderate earthquake with a preliminary reading of 5.5 on the Richter scale was felt in central Alaska early this morning, the Alaska Tsunami Center reported.

The epicenter of the earthquake was about 150 miles southwest of Kodiak and it was not strong enough to generate a tsunami wave, the center reported.

The earthquake was felt in south central Alaska and in the cities of Kodiak and Anchorage but no damage was reported.

Harding enters race for Congress

BOISE (UPI) — Boise businessman Ralph Harding returned to the political scene today and announced he will run for Congress from Idaho's second district.

Harding, who first was elected to Congress in 1960 and was re-elected two years later, said he intends to win without accepting any campaign contributions from outside Idaho.

"Pollsters from Idaho and throughout the nation have told me you cannot finance a

"I have the education and the experience to do the job," he said. "I'm a trained congressman. I've been there, I know my way around, I know Congress, and I know Washington."

He also said he has a moderate political philosophy that Idahoans want and that he will work toward a balanced budget and an overhaul of the welfare system.

"I don't have all the answers. What I do have is the ability to work hard, to be effective, and to earn the respect and confidence of Idaho voters."

He said it is important that farmers, small businessmen, working people, educators, professionals, senior citizens and youth "should be represented with equal dedication."

Harding represented Oneida County in the Idaho Legislature in 1955-56. After his congressional terms, he served as special assistant to the secretary of the Air Force in 1955-56.

The Great Feast is now leftovers, the football games are over, the tinsel has been vacuumed off the house and America returned to work today from the long holiday weekend.

Buses, trains and planes unloaded their swarms of holiday passengers, and rush hour — only a phrase on Monday — was back to its usual crawl. Stores and government offices that stayed closed Monday were open again.

For hundreds of families, the holiday ended tragically, in traffic accidents, fires and plane crashes.

The National Safety Council had predicted 380 to 400 persons would die on the roads during the weekend, which began at 6 p.m. Friday and ended at 12:01 a.m. today.

The actual count fell short of that prediction. At 3:30 a.m. EST today, a count by United Press International showed at least 381 persons had died in traffic accidents. A breakdown of accidental deaths showed:

Chaplin buried in private ceremony

CORSIER, Switzerland (UPI) — Charlie Chaplin, the father of modern movie comedy, was buried today in a private ceremony attended by his wife and eight of his 10 children, under a misty sheet.

The private burial had been requested by Sir Charles, who died in his sleep Christmas Day at the age of 88 in his 20-room Manor du Ban overlooking Lake Geneva and not far from the tiny cemetery of this Swiss village.

There was a brief service at the family mansion and later Oona Chaplin, his wife of 34 years, his children, household staff and family physician Henri Perrier drove under a misty sheet to the cemetery.

The Rev. Richard Thomas, pastor of the Anglican church in the neighboring town of Vevey, read a short address and the coffin was lowered into a simple grave at 10:45 a.m.

(4:45 a.m. EST).

Police kept the curious, reporters and photographers away from the gravesite at the request of Lady Oona. Chaplin was knighted by Queen Elizabeth II in 1975.

Attending the services were Lady Oona and seven of their eight children — daughter Geraldine was filming a movie in Spain — and Sydney Chaplin, 51, the actor's son from the second of his four marriages.

Some 300 people were at the cemetery for the funeral, including some 50 newsmen and photographers.

The British Ambassador to Switzerland, Alan Keel-Rothlie, who represented Queen Elizabeth was the only person in the crowd allowed to join those at the graveside.

News of Chaplin's death, from old age, brought worldwide tributes and eulogies for the "Little Tramp," the baggyclothed character with a button mustache, windmill cane and waddle.

Peking's official New China News Agency agency praised Chaplin as a "famous film star" whose "progressive activities in the cultural field made him a victim of the McCarthy witch hunt period."

Vatican Radio said Chaplin had "attained unsurpassable heights as an artist, creator and director," and news of his death was plastered across the front pages of nearly every European newspaper.

The Hollywood that was uneasy with Chaplin in his lifetime because of his leftist politics and off-screen doings had nothing but praise for the man who revolutionized comic movies by getting humor out of irony and pathos rather than slapstick.

"He was the original perfectionist," said Bob Hope, who appeared in two movies with Chaplin's third wife, Paulette Goddard. "He was a great producer, writer, director and comedian. He was a great original."

Chaplin and Oona — the daughter of playwright Eugene O'Neill, whom he married when he was 54, she 18 — were in Europe in 1952 when the United States said they would not be welcomed back.

The family settled into the 20-room Manor du Ban overlooking Lake Geneva and Chaplin vowed never to return to America.

But he did return, in 1972, to accept a special Academy Award for "the incalculable effect he has had in making motion picture the art form of this century."

Flooded atoll evacuated

AGANA, Guam (UPI) — Four U.S. Air Force airplanes today evacuated 801 Americans and 46 natives from the lowlying Eniwetok atoll in the Marshall Islands and flew them to Guam to escape the onslaught of Typhoon Mary.

High seas accompanying the typhoon's winds of 65 miles per hour have flooded part of the atoll — only 5-to-8 feet above sea level — and caused minor damages to buildings, officials said.

Typhoon Mary was downgraded to a tropical storm late this afternoon.

The C-141 "Starlifters" from Yokota Air Force base in Japan landed on Guam 20 minutes apart with the 801 U.S. servicemen and civilians stationed on the Eniwetok atoll and the natives.

The Islanders included nine men, 10 women and 27 children. Many of the youngsters were carried off the planes by the American soldiers, who are mostly from Hawaii-based units.

All carried with them only the bare essentials, such as a change of clothing and toilet articles. They are expected to stay in Guam two to three days.

The evacuees are quartered in various military installations on this American island — most of them in barracks at Andersen Air Force Base, which was the staging area for Vietnamese refugees in 1975.

The group was headed by Army Lt. Col. Edward Dodd, of Las Cruces, N.M.

Remaining on Eniwetok were the island commander, Army Col. Edgar J. Mixan, 21 enlisted men and one native. They took shelter in the only concrete building on the atoll, officials said.

The American civilians on the atoll are under contract to the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission to assist the soldiers in cleaning the area of radioactive waste left over from atomic bomb tests there in the late 1940s.

The mission is to make the atoll safe so that the Islanders — evacuated nearly 30 years ago when the U.S. government began atomic tests — can return to the atoll.

Carter TV messages applauded

RADNOR, Pa. (UPI) — President Carter has learned how to reach the public through television with such memorable actions as his fireside chat and inaugural walk down Pennsylvania Avenue, says a former presidential news secretary.

"What has happened is that he has mastered the art of using television to send rather complicated messages and to send them in a form the audience understands," wrote George Reedy in the Dec. 31 issue of TV Guide magazine.

Reedy, who was President Lyndon B. Johnson's news secretary, said: "At the very least, he has demonstrated that one need not resort to words to put across rather sophisticated points.

"Whatever else may lie in his future," he continued, "President Carter has already established a new style of presidential leadership that will entitle him to a place in the history of communication."

Merely by wearing a sweater during his fireside chat on the energy problem, Reedy said Carter made points about energy conservation more effectively — than a hundred — carefully phrased speeches.

"To carry this theme even further," he said, "Mr. Carter does not do very well in his conventional uses of the media."

Reedy called Carter's 20 news conferences "not overly impressive" and said they "were not as memorable in the same sense as his walk up Pennsylvania Avenue hand-in-hand with Amy and Rosalynn during the inaugural parade; his attendance at a New England town meeting; his disc-jockey-type quiz show, or even his disembarkation from a succession of airplanes with a suitcase slung over his shoulder."

What's happening in Far East?

WASHINGTON — In the Midwest, we can see news happening before our eyes: In the Far East, we are not as up-to-date as in the days of sailingships.

On July 30, President Carter met with his foreign policy advisers just before Secretary of State Cyrus Vance's visit to Peking. The paper on the table was "PRM-24," the Presidential Review Memorandum laying out policy options for dealing with China.

more than China on his mind. He could not, in the same year, reverse his campaign position on the Panama Canal, meet the Soviets more than halfway on SALT, and top it all off with abandonment of the 17-million Chinese on Taiwan.

learn the experiences of advanced science, technology and business management from the United States." The Chinese foreign minister, speaking privately, made an astounding statement, at variance with the public line: "We need to let the United States government know that, even when China-U.S. relations are normalized, the U.S.-Taiwan Mutual Defense Treaty is invalidated, and U.S. forces are withdrawn from Taiwan, we will not, within the next decade, use force to liberate Taiwan."

Charlie Chaplin, a great comedian

Charlie Chaplin poked fun at all of us. He was a comedian with a flair for finding the foibles of modern man and giving them a poke with his fine-tuned humor.

Chaplin's public style of taking control of a performance and building it into something amazing, was often overshadowed by his outrageous private life.

Some critics of Charlie Chaplin confused his private life with his genius as a comedian, mixed up his political beliefs with his ability to make us laugh.

The best comedians almost always are suspected by some elements of society as being anti-American, anti-establishment because humor always leads some people to take it seriously, always leads some to worry about its unlikely ramifications.

I am lucky to be neither a Cosmo Girl nor a Total Woman, because if I were I would have to dress like that.

I am, fortunately, not as insecure as the woman in the Oil of Olay ad — "When did you first realize you looked most?" — or as secure as the women in the milk ads — "What Becomes a Legend Most?" Modesty.

I am grateful that I have not "flowered my expectations," "gone back to basics," started taking Geritol or read one single memoir by a Watergate prisoner. I have also not bought a self-help book, or had an encounter of the third kind.

Furthermore I have not been involved in a "creative divorce" or an "open marriage," and someone has driven a stake through the heart of the last "meaningful relationship." I have not been to a dinner party at which people discussed the Panama Canal. Alan Bakke's name has not appeared on my dance card. Not once.

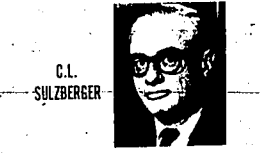

How women's status changed

American women are still campaigning for equality under the law in all respects, for the privilege of legal abortion and even for complete recognition for lesbians. The great majority of U.S. citizens, nevertheless, has been shown (in polls) quite ready to vote for a female president.

in the kitchen. Now a brand new reservoir of household jobs — the previously reservedly confined to workers like Aristotle, 25 centuries ago, foresaw that when each machine knew how to do its own work on command there would be no more need for workers. We can see that the era of which he spoke is beginning.

Elizabeth was herself not only a brilliant ruler but, perhaps because of her example, a host of 16th and 17th century women's libbers suddenly appeared. Many wore men's dress, including daggers, and cut their hair short, inspiring male counterparts to denounce them as a "mankind generation."

In the Soviet Union, women were granted such total freedom by the Bolshevik revolution that they do most of the dirtiest work including street sweeping. Today's network of terrorist movements also assigns an important role to women. Ten are on the list of Baader-Meinhof gang suspects sought by Bonn for murdering a West German industrialist.

FBI denies info request

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — The Church of Scientology Monday denied one of its requests for FBI information on itself had been rejected.

The Scientologists previously have obtained FBI files on the group's activities and had asked for FBI files "pertaining to illegal surveillance, plants, bugging and phone taps on the church's members."

The Scientologists said the reply from the FBI was that documents "pertaining to your request have been reviewed. These documents are being withheld in their entirety in order to protect material which are exempted from disclosure."

The FBI said the exempt materials are related solely to the internal operations of the FBI. It includes records of investigations, constitute an unwarranted invasion of privacy or reveal the identity of an FBI confidential source.

The Rev. Robert Totness of the Church of Scientology said apparently if the files were released, they "would be incriminating to the FBI."

Miners seek food stamps

By United Press International

Welfare offices in West Virginia and other mining states prepared today for an expected flood of food stamp applications from the families of the nation's striking coal miners.

In Washington, negotiators for the United Mine Workers union and the soft coal industry were to resume contract talks today as the nationwide strike by 188,000 miners in 22 states entered its fourth week.

West Virginia Welfare Commissioner Leon Ginsberg said the state's welfare offices would begin mass application procedures for miners and their families needing food stamps.

Food stamps are the only form of assistance available to striking UMW members. The miners became eligible after receiving their final paychecks.

Rubble yields 34th body

WESTBEGG, La. (UPI) — Workers digging through tons of steel and concrete found a 34th body in the ruins of a large Mississippi River grain elevator Monday.

The body of Allan Salazar, 34, of Marrero, La., was removed from the rubble four days after an explosion demolished portions of the Continental Grain Co. elevator, burying an office building under mounds of debris.

Salazar was a Continental employee who is believed to have been driving a bulldozer when the explosion occurred Thursday. The crushed wreckage of the bulldozer was found near the body.

One man remains missing and the search for his body continued.

Broadcast reform plan drawn

© Newhouse News Service

WASHINGTON — In an attempt to inject a public voice into the congressional overhaul of the laws governing broadcasting, telephones and satellites — a leading broadcast reform group has drafted its own proposals, including creation of permanent radio and TV station licenses.

The Office of Communication of the United Church of Christ would end the current three-year licensing period, substituting for it a license of indefinite duration which citizens could challenge at any time. In a legal memorandum accompanying its draft revision of the Communications Act of 1934, the church group said that the current license renewal process is "an almost meaningless gesture."

With 9,000 radio and TV stations to review at staggered periods over three years, the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) can't give little more than fleeting attention to each one. The church office said its proposal would "conserve limited government resources" and make those reviews which did occur more effective.

The group, which has been especially active in promoting equal employment efforts at the FCC and other regulatory agencies, also proposed:

— Requiring the FCC to act on any complaint or rule-making petition within six months.

- Banning telephone companies from giving private telephone records to government agents except under court supervision.
- Banning commercial stations to support public broadcasting.
- Allowing public broadcasters to editorialize, which is now forbidden.
- Freeing public broadcasters from the obligation to balance views absolutely on each program concerning controversial issues.
- Establishing FCC performance standards for cable television similar to those for over-the-air broadcasting.
- Cable TV wasn't even mentioned in the 1934 act.

Prohibiting the President from appointing to the FCC more than three commissioners directly from communications industry jobs.

- Forbidding former FCC members from re-appearing one before the commission for two years after leaving that body.

Such standards were necessary, the church group said, because the FCC has allowed itself to become "almost a spokesman for industry viewpoints." FCC members go through a "revolving door" whereby industry representatives are appointed to the commission and return to the industry after relatively short FCC service, the group added.

Its proposals are bound to generate industry opposition just as the attempts by the House Communications Subcommittee to start the rewrite process apparently have, too. The subcommittee has held weeks of hearings this year — however, last week's chairman, Rep. Lionel Van Deerlin, D-Calif., chastised broadcasters for their opposition to the revision attempt, warning that they were being shortsighted because they might benefit from a rewrite which incorporate new technologies such as video cassettes and improved ultra-high frequency tuning devices.

Viewed in this light, the Office of Communication proposals are getting new attention, the Rev. Everett Parker, its director, said.

Word out on disability

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government is preparing to tell millions of handicapped people "Your disability doesn't count" when it comes to schooling, jobs and health care.

The message will be distributed in English, Spanish and Braille pamphlets explaining that new laws and regulations offer to the handicapped civil rights guarantees similar to those previously extended to minorities and women.

Intended recipients among an estimated 28 million physically and mentally handicapped adults and 8 million handicapped children are deaf and blind persons, victims of cancer and heart disease, the mentally ill and retarded, alcoholics, drug addicts and people with a host of other disabilities.

"If you are otherwise qualified — for a job, college, school, college, hospital or other service — provider receives federal assistance. That means federal money, services or property."

It also tells parents of physically or mentally disabled children they "have the right to demand that your federally assisted local public school system provide a free education appropriate to your child's needs."

HEW early next year will distribute 1 million copies of the pamphlet.

Rights probe asked

CHICAGO (UPI) — Operation PUSH called for an investigation of human rights abuses against inmates and for training to give prisoners the skills needed to hold a job after their release.

Jackson, PUSH leader, issued the plea on the sixth anniversary of the civil rights group. Jackson said he sent President Carter a telegram requesting an investigation of the human rights afforded American prisoners.

"So far, Carter has made a big international splash trying to free Russian prisoners," Jackson said, "but right here young men by the thousands are languishing in jails, unable to afford a lawyer, unable to afford bail and unable to get a speedy trial."

Jackson said official figures indicate 400,000 persons are being held in U.S. jails and that 70 to 80 percent are black and brown. "A great percentage are young and poor. There is some indication of racism, and perhaps classism as well, in the judicial process," Jackson said.

He pointed out that several former politicians received furloughs from prison to spend Christmas with their families. "Why can they get out of prison for Christmas or because of illness and not anyone else? Because they have clout."

Jackson said it costs less than $20,000 for four years of schooling at the University of Illinois and $2,000 to keep someone in jail for the same length of time. He called for job training to lower the recidivism rate.

"We think the organized labor movement should provide training in critical areas like carpentry," he said. "The difference between throwing a brick and laying a brick is training."

Jackson said the economic system presently has no room for many of the youthful prisoners to whom he has spoken.

"We are going to try to get 100,000 prisoners to write us a letter, and we want to take those letters to President Carter," he said. "We want him to speak to the inequities in this system that would stack the cards against black, brown and poor people."

China's output up 14%

HONG KONG (UPI) — China's industrial output has increased by an estimated 14 percent this year and farms had "a fairly good harvest," the official New China News Agency says.

In a year-end economic report, the agency described 1977 as "a turning point in China's economic construction."

"From the former stagnancy and even reduction caused by the gang's sabotage, the national economy is steadily rising," the report said in an analysis of the country's four-year plan led by the widow of Mao Tse-tung.

It said production quotas for 32 of the country's 38 major industries were fulfilled by the end of November and most others would be met by the end of the year.

"The total industrial output value of the first 11 months was up by 13.7 percent, compared with the corresponding period of 1976. It is estimated that it will be over 12 percent by year's end," it said.

"A fairly good harvest was won in agriculture despite serious natural disasters earlier this year. Balance of financial revenues and expenditures was maintained."

The rapidly growing Chinese oil industry recorded an estimated 8 percent increase. China does not publish figures — only percentages — but analysts estimated 1976 production at about 84 million metric tons. That would mean 1977 production of almost 91 million tons.

Doctors disconnect respirator

SALEM, Mass. (UPI) — Mrs. Esther Plotrowicz, 55, died in a coma for nearly two years, was reported in stable condition today after doctors disconnected her life-sustaining equipment.

Mrs. Plotrowicz, 55, who weighs only 75 pounds and suffers from a degenerative disease of the nervous system, was connected to a respirator at Salem Hospital 10 days ago because she suffered cardiac arrest.

At the request of Walter Plotrowicz, her husband, Essex County Probate Court Henry Mayor Friday ruled that the system may be shut off at Plotrowicz' discretion. Family lawyer Philip Roy said the system was disconnected at 9 a.m. Monday, but said Mrs. Plotrowicz continued breathing. "She is still the same. Her condition is stable," a hospital spokeswoman said shortly after midnight, 15 hours later.

Mrs. Plotrowicz was stricken with Huntington's Chorea, a disease of the nervous system, seven years ago. She was hospitalized in 1973.

Roy said there is little chance of a remission once the disease sets in, a fact that doctors related in court Friday when Mayor rendered his decision.

The Massachusetts Supreme Court ruled Nov. 29 that a probate court — not a panel of doctors or other experts — should decide whether to disconnect life-support systems from incompetent or unresponsive patients.

Christmas present praised

FAIRFIELD, Conn. (UPI) — It was the night after Christmas and fire filled the house — but the uninstalled smoke detector nestled under the tree saved the family of four.

Eugene Bulakitis, his wife and two children fled to safety early Monday after the battery-equipped gift went off with a loud siren.

"Without the smoke detector they would have been killed," said Fairfield Fire Chief David Russell. "It was a great Christmas present. It's positive. It saved their lives." Russell said the Bulakitis' son, Billy, 22, a member of the volunteer fire department in the neighboring town of Weston, put the gift under the tree on Christmas morning and equipped it with batteries.

"It's a good thing he did that before he left," Russell said. "Half of the cellar was in flames by the time we got there. If the family had not been alerted we never would have had a chance to save them."

He said the fire appeared to be accidental.

Teens claim swinging record

TORRANCE, Calif. (UPI) — Two 17-year-olds have claimed the world record for marathon swinging — eight days.

Matt Gonzales and Pia Anderson said they spent 182 hours on swings at the Vista Elementary School playground, beginning Friday, Dec. 16 and continuing until 10 a.m. Saturday, Dec. 24.

Friends and relatives cheered them on, with some friends spending nights in a tent erected nearby. Matt celebrated his 17th birthday during the marathon, remaining on his swing while sharing cake with about 50 guests, said his father, Hector Gonzales. Witnesses were on hand to log that they got off the swings for only 5 minutes each hour, he said.

Plastic sheeting was used to cover the swings when it rained, but a wind storm that struck Southern California shortly after they began, with gusts over 50 mph, ripped the plastic to shreds.

They took turns sleeping, in sleeping bags, pressed to the swings, with the one who was awake towing the sleeper's swing on a rope to keep it moving.

Frisbee classes under way

LAWRENCE, Kan. (UPI) — The fine art of mastering the "whelm" and "watt" is what two graduate students at the University of Kansas would like to impart to members of their new club, which is devoted to throwing Frisbees.

Eric Frank and Wayne Gaul have started the club, which boasts 75 members, and direct the two-hour meetings they hold Wednesday and Saturday in vacant areas near Allen Field House.

Those meetings involve teaching of techniques or tricks, and the practicing of games or throwing of the plastic disc. Whelm and watt are terms describing two aspects of the Frisbee toss from the time it leaves the hand until it touches the ground or another person.

"You can have a lot of fun in no time at all," Gaul said. "It's enjoyable. And there are no boundary limits. You don't have to have a field or court."

Detectives arrest two suspects

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Two men have been arrested on suspicion they strangled two women in "copycat killings" inspired by the Hillside Strangler or deliberately disguised as his work-to-confuse investigators.

"Detectives all but ruled out any connection between the two deaths and the strangler, the elusive rape-slayer who has killed 11 women in less than three months, terrorizing the hillside residential area of northeastern Los Angeles."

"We don't believe there is any connection between the killings and the Hillside Strangler at this time, but we always have to leave the door open," said a Los Angeles police spokesman, Lt. Dan Cooke. "There's always a remote possibility."

Detectives arrested Thomas Davis, 24, and Stephen W. Drey, 40. They were held on suspicion of murder in the deaths of Paula Glen Ward, 18, and Carolyn "Tanya" Williams, 21. Davis was arrested late Sunday night when he returned to a car staked out by police on information obtained by television reporter Warren Wilson.

Wilson learned that a motel employee told friends of the dead women he saw a man carrying Miss Ward, wrapped in a blanket, to the auto. The employee noted the license number, which the friends passed on to the reporter.

Drey was arrested by officers who went to his apartment with a search warrant Monday.

Miss Ward, whose partially clothed body was found near the Rose Bowl in Pasadena Saturday, was originally listed as the strangler's 12th victim by Pasadena police.

The body of Miss Williams, a prostitute, was found several hours later in a parking lot 12 miles away in the Wilshire District.

Both had been strangled. But Miss Williams' death was considered unrelated to the strangler, or to the slaying of Miss Ward until it was learned the two women were last seen together Friday, when friends said they were going to meet a man at a motel. Pasadena detectives were still operating on the theory that Miss Ward may have been a victim of the strangler based on unrevealed details of the killing and its general similarity to 11 previous stranglings — and thus Miss Williams was also connected since the two women were apparently killed together.

Booby-traps dismantled

BREWER, Maine (UPI) — Forrest Peavey, a 38-year-old ecclésiast, killed in a Christmas night shoot-out with police, had filled his home with explosives and ammunition — much of it rigged to kill anyone who tried to storm the house, authorities say.

Bomb squad experts were called in Monday to dismantle the booby traps — which fired shotgun shells — in the unheated, two-story house.

Dozens of state and local police and firemen stood by in case of an accident.

"There's still more in there and they'll be going back in tomorrow (Tuesday) to get the rest," a Brewer police spokesman said Monday night when the search was stopped for the night. As a precaution, police evacuated at least 25 neighbors from their homes and ordered electronic communications held to a minimum to prevent the accidental remote-control activation of the explosives.

Sunday's shootout was sparked by a neighbor's call to police about 7 p.m. to report a man with a rifle outside his home.

Police said officer Albert Parlee and two other policemen were sent to Peavey's house and tried to talk him into surrendering a rifle and pistol.

Police said Peavey shot Parlee in the shoulder and an hour-long shootout followed. Peavey was killed by a bullet to the chest. Parlee was hospitalized in good condition.

Police said the door through which Peavey fired on police for an hour Sunday night appeared to be the only clear entry to the house. If officers had tried to rush him from another entrance, they may have tripped a fatal booby-trap, police said.

Nearly every window and door in the house was rigged with a steel contraption designed to fire shotgun shells at an intruder, police said.

Charges dropped

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Trespassing charges have been dropped against civil rights activist Dick Gregory, who spent Christmas night in jail following an arrest at the South African Embassy.

Gregory, his wife Lillian and three other people had been charged with violating a ban on demonstrating within 500 feet of an embassy. The Gregorlys and two of the others were jailed when they refused to post $50 bond.

Federal prosecutors decided Monday to drop charges against the five.

Last week, similar charges were dismissed against the Gregorlys for a Thanksgiving protest at the embassy.

Gregory said he was trying to call attention to apartheid policies in South Africa and the treatment of blacks held in detention centers.

Concession lack disappoints Sadat

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin said he left Egypt "a happy man." But a disappointed man stayed behind — Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

Sadat had demanded Israeli concessions in return for his dramatic visit to Jerusalem in November. He needed to show the Arab world and his own people that he had won something and had not "surrendered" as his Arab critics charged.

But from Sadat's point of view, the Christmas weekend summit talks in Ismailia did not produce the needed Israeli response.

"Mr. Begin may consider that from his viewpoint he made concessions, but, in my view he has not," Sadat said. Begin, on the other hand, told reporters he was returning to Israel a "happy man" because negotiations with Egypt had now entered the "serious stage."

The two leaders did make some progress on one of two tough issues that have bedeviled all efforts to bring peace to the Middle East in the past — the issue of Israeli withdrawal from occupied Arab territory.

But they remained far apart on the other key question — Palestinian demands for an independent homeland on the Israeli-occupied West Bank of Jordan and the Gaza Strip.

Judging by the answers they gave at their joint news conference, these differences still exist: — Sadat wants a Palestinian state on the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. Begin is offering self-rule, but he wants Israeli troops to remain in those territories.

— Egypt wants total Israeli withdrawal from all Arab territory captured during the 1967 Middle East war. Begin says the question of withdrawal is negotiable.

— Begin and Sadat did manage to agree that the basis for a settlement should be U.N. Security Council Resolution 242.

But they still differed over their interpretations of that 1967 resolution, with Begin maintaining that it does not commit Israel to withdrawal from all Arab territories.

The Israelis dispute Sadat's contention that they have made no significant concessions. They point out that before Sadat's Jerusalem visit Begin spoke of Judea and Samaria, the biblical name for the West Bank, as "liberated Israeli territory" which must remain an integral part of Israel.

Begin's views have since mellowed somewhat and he is now offering self-rule as his "concession," the Israelis say.

Some Cairo diplomats believe much of the avowed disagreement and reciprocal demands for concessions constitute a "public smoke screen designed to obscure what may actually be near-agreement on these crucial issues.

Sadat and Begin must both deal with criticism. Begin faces opposition at home from those who fear he is willing to give up too much; Sadat faces Arab opponents who charge that he is not demanding enough.

Both Begin and Sadat must show that they are doing their best to concede as little as possible by making the negotiating process look difficult, diplomats said.

Proponents of this optimistic interpretation draw their support from Sadat's protestations that, despite differences, an agreement is still possible.

PLO takes credit for Arab's death

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — The Palestine Liberation Organization says it has assassinated an Arab official who cooperated with the Israelis on the occupied West Bank and issued death warrants for other Israeli "agents."

"Out of concern for the security and interests of its masses, the Palestinian revolution has issued orders to liquidate a number of agents inside the occupied homeland," the official PLO news agency Wafa said Monday.

Wafa said one of the PLO's

"revolutionaries" assassinated Hamdi al-Qadi, a Palestinian Arab working in the education department in the town of Ramallah on the Israeli-occupied West Bank of Jordan.

Israeli authorities later confirmed al-Qadi, who West Bank sources said had made no secret of his pro-Israeli sympathies, was shot in the head Monday outside his home in Ramallah and died instantly.

Wafa reported the orders to kill al-Qadi and other Israeli collaborators were issued "after the revolution had given them several warnings to stop dealing with the enemy's intelligence service."

All lit up

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — The smog in Mexico City was so bad on Christmas Day that airplane pilots had to use their night instruments for takeoffs and landings, authorities at the International Airport said Monday.

Visibility was less than 500 yards, with a large number of Christmas Eve bonfires contributing to the pollution.

Police fire on rioting blacks

PORT ELIZABETH, South Africa (UPI) — Police said today they opened fire on rioting blacks late Monday and wounded three in order to restore order in a black ghetto on the edge of Port Elizabeth.

Police Commissioner Brig. Johan de Klerk said tear gas was used earlier in the day to disperse an angry crowd in the city's New Brighton district that had gathered for the funeral of a black man who died in jail last week.

Police said the continuing unrest in Port Elizabeth — two blacks were shot to death by police last week — was organized by "Isotols" (hugs) and was not politically motivated.

Brig. de Klerk said police wounded three blacks when they opened fire late Monday on a gang trying to set fire to a beerhall in the Kwazakale Township.

Several arrests were made, he said, and the township was quiet today.

The funeral in New Brighton was for Mzukisi Nobadula, a black man who was awaiting trial on perjury charges when he died.

VERNICE REAGON, CULTURAL HISTORIAN
... traces roots through songs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Trace the roots of the songs black people have sung, says cultural historian Vernice Reagon, and you can find a history no old documents will reveal.

Ms. Reagon has tried to find the story of everyday life of blacks in black songs and in interviewing oldtimers who sang them. She calls these songs "statements of the masses."

She is a folklorist for the Smithsonian Institution. She is also a songwriter and the organizer of "Sweet Honey in the Rock," a quartet which takes its name from a spiritual about a land so sweet that honey flows from rocks.

Sometimes, she says, she has had to search no further than her memory of the songs she sang in Mount Early Baptist church in Albany, Ga., where her father was pastor.

Ms. Reagon wrote her doctoral dissertation at Howard University on the history of the songs of the civil rights movement — especially "We Shall Overcome," anthem of the movement.

"If you were black and Baptist and your church was not too middle-class and ran anywhere from South Carolina to Texas, you grew up with this song," Ms. Reagon says. "I grew up with it."

It originated in the 19th Century, she believes, as "I'll Be All Right," a hymn affirming faith and patience. ("If in my heart, I do not yield, I'll be all right some day.")

She theorizes that it passed from blacks to whites — and back again from a white man, folksinger Pete Seeger, to a militant generation of blacks who had not learned it in church.

In 1961, Ms. Reagon was a student of voice at Albany State College, intending to become an opera singer.

She was jailed two weeks for taking part in anti-civil rights demonstrations in Albany. In overcrowded cells, she says, "We Shall Overcome" unified the prisoners and helped them conquer fear.

"I'd never seen music do that," she says. "She spent a year raising funds — and spirits — as a member of the Original Freedom Singers, then studied at Spelman University in Atlanta and Howard University in Washington, D.C., pioneering in the field of black folk history.

Working on her doctorate, she found tapes in the Library of Congress recording a song giving a black perspective on the sequence of events of World War II from Hitler's master plan to the dropping of the atomic bomb.

At Pearl Harbor, a black Navy messboy had manned a gun against Japanese planes until he was killed. General circulation newspapers reported this but did not identify him. The Pittsburgh Courier, a Negro newspaper, needed six weeks to find that his name was Dorle Miller.

The song tells his story:

"Nineteen hundred and forty-one
"Colored mess boy manned the gun;
"Although he had never been trained;

"Had the nerve and took dead aim —
"He was aiming the Japs to fight,
"Stood at the pole to make things right.

"Six long weeks we didn't bear from him.
"The colored press began to hum.
"Mother and father began to worry.

"It came out in the Pittsburgh Courier.
"Spreading the news all over the place.
"I love Dorle Miller cause he's my race."

Ms. Reagon says a search of copyright records reveal four versions of "We Shall Overcome."

In 1975, she interviewed some of the old tobacco workers who she believes were the first to sing the song in a social struggle.

While on strike against the American Tobacco Co. in Charleston, S.C. for six months in 1945-46, they sang the song — as "We will Overcome" — in the streets, in union halls and in churches.

The white workers did not sing, but in 1947 some of them participated in a union organization workshop at the Highlander Folk Center, at Mount Eagle, Tenn.

The musical director, Zilphia Horton, pleaded to hear their union songs and some of the workers remembered the blacks' song.

Highlander published it in a union songbook with the lyrics: "Oh down in my heart, I do believe we'll overcome some day."

FOLK singer Pete Seeger, visiting the school in 1947, learned it, changed the "will" to "shall," added verses ("the whole wide world around") and tried to teach it to audiences in the North.

By the mid-1950s, Ms. Reagon says, it was being sung "in progressive gatherings in New York and on the West Coast."

Seeger, she says, taught the song to Merle Hershey, who taught it in 1953 to Frank Hamilton, who carried it back to Highlander. By this time, Highlander had become a training school for civil rights workers.

Once, the school was raided by the state police. For 90 minutes students were forced to sit in the dark while troopers searched their luggage. A high school student kept the faith with a new verse, "We are not afraid, we are not afraid today."

Ms. Reagon says that same verse had also evolved during the Charleston strike when a union worker had been killed. The strikers were afraid, she said, so they sang, "We Are Not Afraid."

"That verse always came out when they were most afraid," she says.

"In black tradition, there are no other verses to 'We Shall Overcome.' The others, supposed to come out from the situation, the creation of the group singing it."

Ms. Reagon says one melody has gone through a number of lives, starting as "Say Brother, Will You Meet Us," a black spiritual from days of slavery.

The same tune became, "John Brown's Body Lies A-mouldering in the Grave," then "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," then "Solidarity Forever" and finally, "Move On Over Or We'll Move On Over You" a song of black nationalism with none of the faithful patience of "We Shall Overcome."

Fleetwood Mac tops rock 'n' roll list

Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I've been married for six years to a man who has some kind of hold on me and I can't shake it. I loved him once, but all my love for him is gone now. I've left him 11 times but he always begs me to come back and says if I don't he'll commit suicide, so I go back to him. My mother because my husband refuses to work steady. He has a bad drinking problem, too. I can't count the places we've been kicked out of because we couldn't pay the rent; we can't get credit anymore.

When he met me, I was really no good. I was a 16-year-old prostitute with a drug habit. He keeps reminding me that he took me out of the gutter so I owe him my life.

Can you help me?

TRAPPED

Wife feels trapped

DEAR TRAPPED: No. But you can help yourself. You need counseling, and so does your husband. There are mental health clinics in your area that offer excellent help, and it's free for those without funds. If your husband refuses to go, go without him. Don't let your past dictate your future. You need a better self-image, and the fact that you wrote to me indicates you're looking for answers, which is half the battle. Get going and good luck.

DEAR ABBY: Why is the bride expected to write all the thank-you notes for the wedding gifts?

Most of the gifts are for the home—to be shared by the couple. So assuming the husband isn't illiterate, why shouldn't he write half the notes?

JUST ASKING

DEAR JUST: Nowhere is it written that the bride should write all the thank-you notes for the wedding gifts. Acknowledging wedding gifts should be a joint venture (even though some grooms may tear the joint apart at the suggestion).

DEAR ABBY: I recently went to the hospital for some exploratory surgery as I was concerned about the possibility of cancer. Two neighbor women, whom I do not know very well, came to visit me there. They took turns asking prying questions as to the nature of my illness, whether more surgery would be necessary, etc. I tried to fend off these questions as best I could.

After they left, a member of a fraternal group to which I belong called on me. The same line of questioning was pursued. Only this person spent nearly an hour telling me about "similar cases" in which all the patients died—of cancer. I was depressed beyond words. Why do people visit the sick and leave them sicker?

DEPRESSED

DEAR DEPRESSED: Because common sense is so uncommon. My advice on bedside manners: Make your visit short, sweet and cheerful. Leave the coughs and the kids at home. Ask no questions. If you can't do that, stay away.

Getting married? No matter how little you have to spend or how unconventional your lifestyle, it can be lovely. Send for Abby's new booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Enclose $1 and a long stamped (24 cents) self-addressed envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

The past 12 months was a banner year for rock 'n' roll.

While established acts like Fleetwood Mac, the Eagles, and Steely Dan outdid themselves with superb albums that set new standards for sophisticated rock, dozens of hungry new bands began revitalizing the music at gut level under the Punk-New-Wave banner.

And with the close of the year, the time naturally comes around again when rock critics throughout the world are afforded the opportunity to demonstrate right out in public that their taste is no better than anyone else's.

So here are my choices for the Best of 1977:

Best Album

1. Fleetwood Mac — "Rumours" (Warner Bros.) — Despite its fabulous commercial success (it is now the biggest-selling album of all time), this is one of those rare collections that sounded great the first time and just keeps sounding better; a near-perfect balance of straight-ahead rock, flowing melodies, intelligent lyrics and good old-fashioned boy-girl sex appeal.

2. The Ramones — "Rocket to Russia" (Sire) — The undisputed kings of American Punk demonstrate just how good basic rock 'n' roll can still be, given a few harmonies borrowed from the Beach Boys.

3. Cheap Trick — "In Color" (Epic) — More uncluttered rock, the best so far from a band that is headed for superstardom; a great pop collection.

4. Eagles — "Hotel California" (Asylum) — It came out just a little too late to make last year's list; then, it would probably have made second place.

5. Atlanta Rhythm Section — "A Rock and Roll Alternative" (Polydor) — A low-key classic by the best band in the South.

6. Steely Dan — "Aja" (ABC) — This exclusive duo spends so much time, effort and talent making records every new album seems to set new standards of recording excellence; this one may be the best jazz-pop construction ever perched on a hard rock foundation — a strange combination, but it works.

7. Mink DeVille — "Mink DeVille" (Capitol) — The year's best debut album from a New Wave band with ears in the late 70s but heart in the early 60s.

8. Foreigner — "Foreigner" (Atlantic) — Another debut, this one from a band that manages to transcend its well-worn approach to commercial rock through sheer musicianship.

9. Graham Parker — "Slick To Me" (Mercury) — The third time does indeed prove the charm for Britain's answer to Bruce Springsteen.

10. The Sex Pistols — "Never Mind the Bollocks, Here's the Sex Pistols" (Warner Bros.) — The nastiest boys in British punk prove they can also play some very nasty rock 'n' roll.

11. Randy Newman — "Little Criminals" (Warner Bros.) — The finest satirical songwriter of our time proves he is also a fine musician, arranger and conductor; I even love his voice.

12. Bee Gees — "Here At Last... Live" (RSO) — Disco not only lives, it thrives; the year's best live collection.

Best Singles

- 1. "Night Moves" — Bob Seger.
- 2. "Tonight's The Night" — Rod Stewart.
- 3. "Do Ya" — Electric Light Orchestra.
- 4. "Lido Shuffle" — Boz Scaggs.
- 5. "New Kid in Town" — Eagles.
- 6. "Sheena Is A Punk Rocker" — Ramones.
- 7. "As" — Stevie Wonder.
- 8. "Blue Bayou" — Linda Ronstadt.
- 9. "Long Time" — Boston.
- 10. "Carry On Wayward Son" — Kansas.
- 11. "So Into You" — Atlanta Rhythm Section.

Best New Artists

- 1. Mink DeVille.
- 2. Tom Petty and the Heartbreakers.
- 3. Blondie.
- 4. Sex Pistols.
- 5. Sen Level.
- 6. The Boomtown Rats.
- 7. Jay Ferguson.
- 8. Elvis Costello.
- 9. Nite City.
- 10. Robert Gordon.
- 11. Piper.

(You likely haven't heard of some of these people, but wait a few months — you will.)

Second choice

No. 1 choice

THE PAST 12 months was a banner year for rock 'n' roll. Established acts, like Fleetwood Mac, outdid themselves with a superb album that set a new standard for sophisticated rock. The No. 1 choice would be Fleetwood Mac's "Rumours," (now the biggest selling album of all-time) a near perfect balance of straight-ahead rock, flowing melodies, intelligent lyrics and boy-girl sex appeal. Fleetwood Mac includes, from left, John McVie, Christine McVie, Stevie Nicks, Mick Fleetwood and Lindsey Buckingham your health

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb—
My right leg is always an inch or more larger than my left, ever since my last child was born three years ago. I've been to a specialist and he called it congenital lymphedema. Is there anything I can do through diet or operation? I would hate to see it get worse.

Dear Reader—
You are right to ask because the natural history of this disease is that it does get worse.

The problem involves a part of the circulation that is often neglected and most people are unaware even exists — the lymphatic circulation. The lymph is a clear liquid that flows in small vessels similar in some respects to veins. These small vessels connect all the various lymph nodes in the body.

The lymph nodes form lymph cells (one type of white cells) found in the blood. The lymph glands are everywhere. You usually don't notice them unless they enlarge as in the presence of an infection. The glands that enlarge in the neck with a severe sore throat are lymph glands. You have them under your arms and in your groin.

The lymphatic fluid is similar to the clear fluid of blood. It contains proteins and can even clot, although somewhat more slowly than blood does. The amount of lymph fluid formed is dependent upon the amount of fluid in your tissues.

The lymphatic vessels in your legs behave a lot like your veins do. When you walk or contract your leg muscles, the compression of the lymphatic vessels helps to empty them. If you stand still, they fill up with pooled lymphatic fluid. That tells you that standing still is not so good for you and that walking promotes emptying of the lymphatics. The lymphatic vessels also contain valves that normally prevent the fluid from flowing backward. The whole system is designed normally so that the lymph flows toward the heart. All those countless lymphatic vessels finally connect to empty into the heart.

The swelling you describe will tend to fibrosis of the tissues under the skin and permanent swelling if not controlled. You need to treat it a lot like you would treat varicose veins. Try to wear some elastic support hose that provide graded support. Go ahead and walk. Do not wear anything constricting around your thigh or a girdle. Don't constrict the flow of lymph upward from your heart. Stay slim.

When you are resting, put your feet up. At night, you might find that if you elevate the foot of your bed above your head level that this will help to drain your leg. By consciously applying every opportunity you have to promote emptying the lymphatic vessels, you may prevent them from getting worse.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 58, Varicose Veins, as you need to follow that program. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

The correct opening bid is one club. There is very little chance that this will be passed out while there is greater chance that one spade will be.
One spade is still a good second choice, while an opening two would be a bad call.

We awarded prizes for special hands. South might get one for the worst hand and one for the best. We bid and made a grand slam. Not just for 1977, but possibly for all time.
Not that South bid the grand slam himself. His partner cue bid diamonds at the five level. South did have a four-card spade suit and bid it. We must confess that South's voice did not peel out like an organ, but sounded rather like a low-toned squeak.
Still he did bid five spades and North promptly raised him to seven.
West opened the king of diamonds. South ruffed in dummy, noted that he had a pretty good play for his grand slam and cashed two top trumps. When both oppo-

HOUSTON — Thousands of illegal aliens are streaming across the Mexican border this week — southward north. Instead of sneaking into the United States, they are sneaking out. Instead of leaving Mexico, they are going back home. Many Americans view illegal migration as a constant one-way flow north. Not true. Each December, the flow reverses. Thousands of Mexicans living illegally in the United States pack up their carriages, load up on gifts and go home for the holidays. "It happens every December," said Jack L. Richardson, Deputy United States Border Patrol agent in Del Rio, a Texas border town. "If they're working up north, say in Chicago, they start getting cold and homesick this time of year. Just like you and me, they want to be with their families for Christmas. So they pack up and head south. We just wave bye-bye to them."

Aliens pour over border bound home for holidays do not think it is risky to go home to Mexico for family reunions, warm weather and sunshine. Heading south, they are not stopped by United States immigration officials, who they simply walk or drive across the border at regular checkpoints. Mexican officials, on the other side of the border, wave them by, sometimes after exacting a monetary "tip" for overlooking gifts and other merchandise purchased in the United States and theoretically subject to Mexican customs duties. In the past, United States Border Patrol agents set up southbound checkpoints on major highways heading toward the border.

Checking papers, they caught hundreds of illegal aliens heading home. But the practice was stopped as a waste of manpower since all the agents did was apprehend an deport alien who were, in effect, deporting themselves voluntarily. "We quit bothering them going south — we consider it a plus if some go home," said Dale E. Swancutt, the chief patrol agent for the El Paso sector. "Besides, all my agents have their hands full with people coming in the opposite direction."

Mid-month auto sales show slump

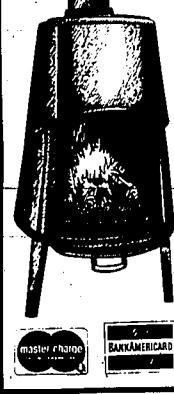

DETROIT — Down again. That sums up the results of new car sales in the second 10-day period of this month, as reported by the nation's Big Four automobile makers. The industry delivered 201,143 new cars to customers in the 10-day period ended Dec. 20, which is 10.1 percent below the 223,556 units delivered in the year ago period. There were eight selling days in each period. Friday's disclosures by the individual companies brought to four the number of weeks that new car sales have lagged considerably behind the year-ago level and, in contrast to the previous weeks of sluggish sales, the Ford Motor Co. was not spared by the continued downturn.

The results of the most recent sales period were attributed to several factors by industry analysts. Traditionally, car buying slumps during the Christmas season as consumers spend their funds on other items. This anticipated trend came amid a general sales slump for the industry, one that has been attributed to price resistance among many car buyers and a general cooling off in the new car sales boom. Also, a dealer incentive program for Ford dealers was not in effect during the second selling period this year. In the order of size, the General Motors Corp. reported

Warning by Hanoi

HANOI (UPI) — Vietnam said today President Carter's human rights campaign is aimed at dividing the Socialist countries and warning the United States to stop "throwing its weight around." In a commentary on Carter's forthcoming world tour, the Hanoi daily newspaper Nhan Dan also leveled praise on the Soviet Union. "Unless the United States stops throwing its weight about, its prestige will further decline in the world," the newspaper said in an article broadcast by the official Vietnam News Agency and monitored in Hong Kong. "The United States is still bent on recruiting allies for intervention in other countries' internal affairs."

Hanoi has put itself firmly into the Moscow orbit since the end of the Indochina war but has been open to Peking. The newspaper also repeated Vietnam's demands for economic assistance from the United States to "heal the wounds" of war. The country needs the help to recover from a depleted rice crop in 1977.

Almanac

Today is Tuesday, Dec. 27, the 361st day of 1977 with four to follow. The moon is between its full phase and last quarter. The morning stars are Mars and Saturn. The evening stars are Mercury, Venus and Jupiter. Those born on this date are under the sign of Capricorn. Louis Pasteur, noted French bacteriologist, and actress Marlene Dietrich were born on this date — he in 1822 and she in 1901. On this day in history: In 1919 Japanese war planes bombed Manila in the Philippines, despite the fact it had been declared an open city. In 1983, the U.S. Commerce Department authorized the sale of surplus wheat to Russia. In 1968, the Apollo 8 astronauts returned to earth after a trip around the moon in three days, paying the pay for later moon-landing missions. In 1975, a coal mine explosion northwest of Calcutta, India, trapped and killed 372 workers. A thought for the day: British physicist John Tyndall said, "It is as fatal as it is cowardly to blink facts because they are not to our taste."

Indian land suit trial may reach jury soon

NEW YORK (UPI) — The defense in the trial of the Wampanoag Indian land suit has called its final expert witness and lawyers for both sides are predicting that the case, which has been on trial in Federal District Court here since Oct. 17, will go to the jury in the first week of January.

The Indians, who rested their side of the case on Nov. 18, must prove in this preliminary trial that they are legally a tribe before they will be entitled to a second trial to determine how much of the Cape Cod town of Mashpee, if any, they are entitled to by law. They are seeking all the undeveloped land in the town, approximately 11,000 acres, worth at least $30 million.

As the case has progressed, the attorneys for the defense — the town and its now-Indian landowners — have concentrated on the question of the Indians' political structure, since the Indians' lawyers have argued before Judge Walter J. Skinner that he should accept the definition of a tribe given in a 1901 decision by the U.S. Supreme Court in the case of Montoya V. United States that defined a tribe as "a body of Indians of the same or similar race, united under one leadership or government, and inhabiting a particular, though sometimes ill-defined territory."

The defense has challenged hardest the "government or leadership" part of that definition. Among the 12 witnesses it was called so far, eight were Mashpee Indians included on the plaintiff's list of tribal members. And all of them testified that they did not consider as their political leaders the tribe's chief, its medicine man or the president of its tribal council.

But the defense, led by two Boston lawyers, James D. St. Clair and Allan van Gestel, has also argued that Skinner use a different definition of a tribe in his charge to the jury. Since the entire land claim suit is based on an alleged violation of the Federal Nonintercourse Act of 1790, which said in effect that no lands or any Indian tribe could be acquired without an act of Congress, the defense holds that the judge should apply the same definition of a tribe that was understood in 1790, requisite for tribal status.

Western hearings booked on grazing fee increase

BOISE (UPI) — Secretary of the Interior Cecil Andrus has announced that the Department of the Interior will hold public meetings in at least five western states to inform livestock operators and the interested public about details of newly proposed regulations to set 1978 fees for livestock grazing on public lands.

The proposed regulations, published jointly by the Department of the Interior and the Department of Agriculture on November 23, 1977, would set the 1978 grazing fee at $1.89 for the equivalent of one cow grazing for one month on land administered by the Bureau of Land Management or the Forest Service.

Present fees are $1.51 on BLM lands and $1.60 average on lands administered by the Forest Service. The scheduled meetings will be held at the following locations: January 9 in the Diamond 4 Room, Holiday Inn, Casper, Wyoming; January 10 in Room 708, Colorado State Bank Building, 1600 Broadway, Denver, Colorado.

Little hippo for sale

DENVER (UPI) — No one wants Pete the motherless hippo. The Denver Zoo doesn't have room for him, other zoos seem to have plenty of hippos and the circus lost interest. So Pete, at age 6 months, is up for sale.

The 400-pound calf has been strangled in a freak accident when Pete was two weeks old. The young hippo has been raised by keeper Glen Chambers, who feeds Pete four gallons of milk daily.

All of the meetings will be conducted by Bureau of Land Management personnel with representation from the Forest Service. The meetings will be opened with a discussion of the details and provisions of the proposed regulations. Opportunities will then be provided for public comment and questions from the audience.

Soviets plan space station

MOSCOW (UPI) — The launch of two cosmonauts into space two weeks ago is part of a Soviet plan to set up a permanent scientific station in space, the Tass news agency said today.

Cosmonauts Yuri Romanenko and Georgi Grechko were launched Dec. 10 aboard Soyuz 26 and later linked up with the Salyut 6 station.

Since then, the crew has inspected malfunctioning docking equipment aboard the space station from inside and with walks in space. "The aim of the work by the scientists and cosmonauts is not separate or unique experiments, but the establishment of a permanently functioning scientific watch in orbit," Tass said.

The news agency said Soviet space designers have been trying to create convenient and comfortable conditions aboard space stations. "Salyut 6 is making in this sense a noticeable technological contribution to cosmonauts," Tass said.

It said some of the key improvements have been a double-docking system that would allow two linkups with the stations at the same time. Tass said other improvements include an automatic orientation system that eliminates much of the tedious work of keeping the station on its course. Tass said the work previously took up a third cosmonaut's work time in space.

Idahoans surveyed on 'right to work'

By DAVID MORRISSEY Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Half of all Idahoans favor a "right to work" law. But less than one out of three know what right to work means. And three out of four Idahoans think certain working conditions which would result from passage of a right to work law are "unfair."

These are the results of a poll of 600 Idahoans surveyed on the right to work issue by the Boise-based Professional Resource Group. The poll, commissioned by the Idaho AFL-CIO, was to be released today, the Times-News has learned.

The 600 names were selected at random from Idaho telephone directories to geographically represent Idaho's population distribution. The poll was taken between Nov. 30 and Dec. 12 of this year.

The poll indicates that while a majority of Idahoans support a right to work law, an even larger majority do not understand what they are supporting. Such a law would ban the "union shop" job contract in Idaho. Under a union shop contract an employee must join a union within a specified period after obtaining employment. Supporters of a right to work law claim the union shop contract violates a workers' freedom of choice. Opponents of the law claim elimination of the union shop allows a worker to obtain the benefits of union negotiation without paying any of the cost of those benefits.

When asked if they favor or oppose a right to work law, 54 percent of those surveyed said they favored the law, 26 percent said they were opposed, and 20 percent said they were undecided.

But when asked, "What does the phrase right to work mean to you?" only 32 percent of those polled correctly identified the issue as involving union-management relations, and only 17.7 percent were able to specify that it involved the type of collective bargaining agreements unions negotiate with management.

Sixty-eight percent of those surveyed confessed right to work with the Equal Rights Amendment, equal employment opportunities, mandatory retirement laws, more jobs, economic considerations, or didn't know what the phrase meant.

Those surveyed were also asked the following question: "Do you think it's fair for people to receive benefits from an organization such as a labor union without paying any of the costs of getting those benefits?" According to the AFL-CIO, this question was asked to determine if Idahoans thought a working condition which would result from passage of a right to work law was fair.

In answering the third question, 78 percent of those polled said such a situation would be "unfair," 9 percent said it would be "fair" and 13 percent "didn't know."

In a letter accompanying the poll — which was sent to each Idaho state legislator — Robert MacFarlane, president of the Idaho State AFL-CIO, said the poll demonstrates "that when the proposition is stripped of its Madison Avenue Code words and presented in terms of its practical effect, better than two-thirds of Idaho voters do not think it is fair."

The majority of voters surveyed who said they favored a right to work law — without necessarily understanding what that law meant — "leads readily to the conclusion that the general population is uninformed regarding the right to work issue," the Professional Resource Group said.

The 1977 Legislature nearly passed a right to work law. After bitter debate and two public hearings, the House and Senate passed differing versions of the same bill. A joint conference committee was unable to reach a compromise on whether mandatory fee assessments for agricultural commodity commissions should be affected by the bill, and made voluntary. The right to work bill died in this conference committee.

Right to work is expected to be an issue in the 1978 legislature. Gov. John Evans has said he will veto the bill if it reaches his desk.

JAIL COOK, ERIKA MUMM AND DAUGHTER, MONICA, HEAP UP PLATES FOR TWIN FALLS PRISONERS ... Mrs. Mumm prepares two meals a day. Deputy Bill Thornquest helps serve

Hooked on Erika's cooking

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — Erika Mumm likes to cook, and she can whip out dinner for 87 and consider it all in a day's work. She normally prepares two meals a day for about 35 individuals then goes home at 5 p.m. to fix dinner for her own family of seven.

Erika is employed as the jail cook for Twin Falls County. She comes to work each morning about 7 a.m. to prepare breakfast and make arrangements for the major portion of the dinner meal. Prisoners are served breakfast in the late morning and dinner about 4 p.m. Trustees who are on work detail at the courthouse also get a lunch.

Mrs. Mumm says her job usually consists of about six hours of work a day, but it covers seven days a week. If she wants a day off, she has to hire someone out of her own salary. Still she loves her job.

Born in Germany, a country of good cooks, Erika came to the United States at the age of 19.

"I didn't learn to cook until I got married and had to prepare meals. I just started cooking and found out I liked it," says the modest Twin Falls farm wife.

Before accepting the county cooking position, Mrs. Mumm cooked at the Immanuel Lutheran School in the hot lunch program for four years.

County commissioners say they have found the ideal person to fill a very difficult and frequently unwanted job.

"We never have any complaints from Erika and never any from her customers. In fact, we sometimes wonder if those county prisoners who keep returning to jail are hooked on Erika's cooking," said Ann Cover, commissioner.

Erika believes everyone should eat well. She heaps the metal jail plates high with mashed potatoes, a main dish, fruit, bread and other menu items of the day, then tops it all with a large piece of hot, just-out-of-the-oven German coffee cake.

Sometimes dessert is fruit with cookies or cake, but always homemade — and made from "scratch."

"I always put the cake and coffee cake in just before mealtime. It is not so good if it isn't warm, and it might as well be fresh and warm because with 30 or so plates to fill there aren't any leftovers anyway," she said while fixing a dinner one day last week.

Her sparkling white kitchen on the fourth floor of the county courthouse has stoves with five ovens and a number of top burners. It is not unusual to have them all going at one time when the jail is full.

Frequently when she leaves the jail area at night she will have only 30 or so names on the meal list, but when she returns in the morning there may be 20 more. Especially in the farm labor season when illegal aliens are housed briefly in the jail cell, the number of meals varies day by day.

Erika admits she doesn't enjoy the sight of increases but says the officers are nice about giving her a warning call if they can.

"The most I have ever had at one meal was 87. That does get to me a little as I wonder if I have planned for enough and if I have everything I'll need," she says.

Cooking for 35 people is considered a snap by the German-born jail chef.

In addition to cooking, she also does all of the shopping and ordering of food, prefers to do her own kitchen cleaning, and does the menu planning.

"I try to keep the menus written up well in advance. In fact, just the other day I finished planning them for a couple of months. That way if I get sick or go to the hospital, my substitute could come in and take over with no difficulty," she said.

A typical jail dinner consists of reiners and sauerkraut, mashed potatoes with butter (margarine), bread, fruit and a large portion of German coffee cake.

Except for her 14-year-old daughter, Monica, and 12-year-old son Mark, who come by after school to help fill the plates, Erika works without help.

A sheriff's deputy comes up at mealtime and carries the loaded plates into the cells. So Erika never meets her customers but now and then she gets a note of from an appreciative or critical prisoner.

"I get a lot of appreciation and a few complaints, but I think it's just the mood the individual happens to be in at the time," Mrs. Mumm says of her fans.

She offers another service for the inmates. Every now and then, she gets a note with a pair of trousers attached asking if she will put on a patch or sew up a tear. She always does.

"I keep my sewing machine here because I have more free time here than I do at home, so I always mend the tears," she says.

She has a collection of thank-you notes and special requests scribbled on various types of scratch paper.

"Some day when I'm old and retired, I can read these and look back on the 'good old days,'" she says.

Oakley water tainted

OAKLEY — Oakley residents are urged to boil all culinary and drinking water for at least 10 minutes because bacteria has been found during routine sampling of the city's domestic water supply.

Ian Von Lindern, regional environmental engineer for the Department of Health and Welfare, issued the advisory Monday.

"Although no specific incidents of illness or disease have been attributed to the contamination, the Health Department urges all users to boil their water," Von Lindern said.

Mayor Jay Gorrings said results of routine samplings conducted by the health department have shown "significant levels" of bacterial contamination.

Von Lindern said how often water is tested depends upon the size of the city. Oakley's water is tested twice a month. It is a "yes or no test," the engineer said.

"When the sampling indicates bacteria is present in the water, the city is immediately asked to submit a second sample for confirmation."

Von Lindern said health officials estimate the "cleanup" should be accomplished no earlier than Friday.

This is the first time Oakley's water has showed bacteria in recent years. Other towns with similar problems in past months include Albion, Hollister and Bellevue.

Skiing 'excellent'

TWIN FALLS — Excellent ski conditions at all area resorts and the holiday vacation are taking skiers to the slopes in record numbers.

Woody Anderson, owner of Pomerelle and Magic Mountain resorts, said Monday was an all time record for Pomerelle with both chair lifts kept busy throughout the day.

"It looks like a repeat of yesterday," Anderson said this morning when the lift tickets were doled out.

He said crowds on Christmas day were moderate to small, but Monday more than made up for it.

Dave Wheeler, Soldier Mountain park manager, also reported Monday was "the biggest day we have ever had."

All three resorts report plenty of snow, packed runs and excellent conditions.

Sun Valley is also operating at capacity with lodges, condominiums and all other accommodations, filled through the holiday season.

Buses are running daily to the resorts from Twin Falls, Jerome, Buhl, Filer, Kimberly, Hansen, Burley and Rupert.

J. VARD CHATBURN ... 'time's running out'

Hospital addition planned

TWIN FALLS — Physicians, nurses and patients at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital will have a lot more elbow room by 1980 when a 76,000 square foot addition to the ground floor of the facility is completed.

At a cost of nearly $5 million for construction and new equipment, the addition will include space for emergency room services, operating rooms, pharmaceutical services, X-ray and laboratory facilities.

Other medical fees, engineering fees, interest legal and financing costs and other payments are paid, the total cost of project will reach nearly $5 million. It was approved this year by the Idaho State Health Care Facilities Review Council of the Department of Health and Welfare, bureau of Health Planning and Research Development.

According to Dick Boyd, public relations officer at MVMH, the new construction will be at the rear of the hospital where the present emergency entrance and helipad now stand.

The addition was proposed to meet five-year-use projections made in a study by an accounting firm, according to Boyd. This year, about 123,000 people live in Magic Valley and the study reports population will grow to about 140,000 by 1982, causing more use demands on the present hospital facility.

Accident fatal for Jerome man

JEROME — Allen Lynn LaMarche, 21, former Gooding resident, died early Christmas morning in an auto accident south of Jerome.

Jerome County Sheriff's officers said LaMarche was found dead at the scene about six miles south of Jerome on State 79 near the Jerome Country Club golf course.

LaMarche died when the car he was driving overturned between midnight and 1 a.m. Christmas morning on the highway, which is also known as Lincoln Road.

The cause of the accident is still under investigation.

LaMarche had recently moved from Gooding, where he was born and raised, to Twin Falls, where he was employed as a cook at Sambo's Restaurant.

Rep. Chatburn says water plan first issue

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is part of a series of interviews with Magic Valley legislators. The 1978 Idaho Legislature convenes Jan. 9.

By RAY SULLIVAN Times-News writer

MAGIC VALLEY — The proposed state water plan and ownership of new leases on geothermal water resources will occupy much of the schedule of the House Conservation and Reclamation Committee, according to its chairman.

Rep. J. Vard Chatburn, Republican from the 28th district, said he expects his committee to begin work on the water plan immediately and "if we get through in 45 days I think we're lucky."

The 21-year-veteran of the Legislature assesses the controversial plan's chances of passing during the second session of the 44th

Legislature as "very poor. There's too much objection to some of the policies."

Chatburn, 69, said the three-part plan among the 37 policies in the broad-area plan will be those which received strong opposition at eight public hearings held last summer around the state. They include formation of a minimum stream flow, guarantee of a state water bank, a requirement that water rights must be "retained" or "maintained" at right and proposal saying the "public interest" has to be considered when dealing with water.

"I am against the inclusion of public interest as a priority right because I think the constitution of the State of Idaho determines priority, and we shouldn't add public interest to that," he said. "It has stood up over the years, our water law is based on it and I think we may cause ourselves problems if we add another to that."

The representative said that proposed policy is the only one he really opposes. He concluded it is imperative, a plan is passed this year because "time's running out on us. Recent statements in California and the desert southwest in general indicate interest has really been renewed in acquiring Snake River water. And the clout of those people in Congress is something that we just can't shrug off."

Similar legislation also is in the works to define ownership of new leases on geothermal water resources, either the state or private landowners, he said.

"My personal feeling about it is I favor the private (individual)," he stated. He said legislation presently is too general and raises doubts on ownership of the geothermal resource, with neither state nor the individual currently favored by legislators.

Also a ranking member of the state affairs committee, Chatburn sees his House and Senate peers focusing their attention on the water plan after the money issues. "And legislation, specifically a proposal in the legislature to divide the Department of Health and Welfare into two separate agencies."

"I don't think that will get any place, but it will take time," he figures.

The most significant Fish and Game issue will be one requiring a firearms safety course before a hunter is granted his first license, he noted, especially as Idaho is one of the few states without a pre-licensing education restriction.

Chatburn, whose district covers all of Cassia and part of Minidoka counties, said he will not be planning whether to run for his state seat again until after the session ends about March. "I never make any plans until after a session is over because I have a lot to do presently, and one should put all efforts into that job at the moment," he philosophizes.

Prior to taking state office, 21 years ago, Chatburn served as an Albion School board member and on the Albion Highway and Commission. As well, he still serves as advisor to the East Cassia Soil Conservation District, which he also served on before going to the capital. Cassia County Commissioners also appointed him to the county board which purchased land and directed construction of the county hospital.

Army police seek traveling soldier

HOUSTON (UPI) — Military police today sought a soldier who fled his unit in Germany, stayed away on a ship bound for the United States, was hospitalized for dehydration and then discharged himself before he could be arrested.

Pvt. Dennis Feather, 19, of Vidor, Texas, left Ben Taub Hospital Friday and was listed as having been "discharged."

An Army spokesman said military police had asked that he be held for arrest on charges he was absent without leave.

PFC Randy Boutain, 19, of Hankinson, N.D., who accompanied Feather from Company B, 1st Battalion, 31st Infantry, Craik, S.D., Germany, Dec. 5 and also was charged with being AWOL, remained hospitalized in poor condition today.

"It was not immediately clear why Feather was able to walk out of the hospital unchecked."

"The military police had asked the doctors there to put a file in a police vault but the doctor said they were in too bad a shape for that," an Army spokesman said. "We didn't have him under guard."

A hospital spokesman said Boutain was listed as "discharged" because "he did leave the hospital. It was a doctor's decision. It was done after careful thought."

The Army spokesman said plans still are to move Boutain to Brooke Army Medical Center at Ft. Sam Houston in San Antonio when he is physically able.

The two were found in a container aboard the Sea-Land Services Inc. ship "Economy" at 3 a.m. Thursday. Both were suffering from acute malnutrition and dehydration and were very weak after a 15-day voyage.

A Sea-Land official said they were lucky to be alive because the big trailer-like boxes that are used on container ships often are airtight.

Officials said the two youths sneaked aboard the "Economy" in Bremerhaven, Germany, expecting a six-day voyage. Instead, they were enroute for more than two weeks with inadequate food and water. Each lost 30 to 40 pounds.

Solar pact renewed

SPOKANE (UPI) — The Washington Water Power Co. has renewed for another year a $200 project involving solar energy research at two area universities.

WWP Vice President Donald Olson, said the program is being renewed because of the success of research during the past year at Washington State University and the University of Idaho.

Each school will receive another $25,000 from the Spokane-based utility.

During the past year, WSU students installed solar water heaters in three Pullman, Wash., homes to determine cost expenditure and operating efficiency. When the test is completed, students hope to determine whether the cost of solar water heaters is worth the investment in the Northwest.

At the University of Idaho, several graduate students developed an award-winning solar collector that generates both electricity and hot water for domestic use.

Seal hunt ban sought

Murderer escapes from Idaho pen

BOISE (UPI) — Ada County law enforcement agencies and officers of the Idaho Penitentiary began a hunt Monday morning for escaped murderer James Bertram Waller.

Prison officials said Waller apparently escaped between 7:25 a.m. Monday morning when he was last seen by prison guards and 7:55 a.m. when a hole in an outer fence at the prison was discovered.

A count of the prisoners revealed at 8:05 a.m. that Waller was missing. Waller was serving time on a charge of first degree murder.

Prison warden, Richard Anderson, said Waller apparently escaped by going over the inner fence and under the outer fence of the institution, but no other details were available Monday morning concerning the escape.

Anderson said he had "no idea" where Waller might be headed. The search was being focused on relatives and other known contacts of Waller's in the Ada County area. Law enforcement officers were also checking highways in the area.

Waller was described as a white male, 31 years old, six feet tall—172 pounds; brown hair, hazel eyes, medium complexion. He has three tattoos. A spider is tattooed on his right left arm, a ball and chain with his number 2017 was tattooed on his right ankle, and a monkey is tattooed on his right shoulder.

Reminders of last winter's cold

Mid-US temps below zero

By United Press International — Midwesterners and Plains residents who had forgotten last winter's cold were given a bitter reminder today with temperatures falling below zero in many areas.

On the West Coast, a tropical storm centered 1,000 miles into the Pacific Ocean sent rains that battered Southern California, bringing mudslides that closed highways and made travel hazardous.

Temperatures fell below zero early today from the Northern Plains to the Great Lakes — dropping as low as 22 below zero at Warroad, Minn.

— and reached no higher than the teens from the Central Rockies east to the mid-Atlantic states. Frost and "freezing" warnings were issued for northern Florida.

Snow added to winter woes near the Great Lakes and travelers advisories were issued for the lakeshores in Upper Michigan, lower Michigan and New York.

Saul Ste. Marie, Mich., received 6 inches of snow in sub-zero temperatures Monday night, leaving a total of 28 inches on the ground.

Buffalo, N.Y., on the shore of Lake Erie, got another 3 inches and Muskegon and Houghton Lake, Mich., each received an inch of snow Monday night.

Ice jams on the Mississippi River between Illinois and Iowa pushed the river level to flood stage upstream of Montpelier, Iowa. But the National Weather Service said river overflow was not serious.

On the West Coast, rains pounded at Southern California for a second day, stretching into Nevada and Arizona. Rain and snow were expected to continue through Wednesday in the southwest corner of the nation.

Heavy snow was expected in mountain areas of Nevada and travelers advisories were in effect for the entire state. Reno received more than 2 inches of snow Monday night.

A stretch of California 39 between Crystal Lake in the San Gabriel Mountains and California 2 was closed because of mud and rock slides. Mudslides also closed California 18, the "Rim of the World Highway," between Snow Valley and Big Bear Dam.

Flooding of some lanes was reported on the Ventura Freeway at Topanga Canyon Boulevard in Woodland Hills.

One death was attributed to the storm. Jonathan Weber, 22, Malibu, lost control of his car on rain-slicked Pacific Coast Highway in the Malibu area, crossed the center divider and struck two autos head-on.

Stolen container holds poison

MURPHY, Idaho (UPI) — The Owyhee County Sheriff's office warns that a container taken from a landfill north of Murphy contains poison.

Authorities said the five-gallon container of strychnine should be returned because it could pose a serious health threat.

The Idaho Toxicology Lab and the Poison Control Center at St. Alphonsus Hospital in Boise said that as little as 100 milligrams of the poison could be fatal.

The container was discovered missing Monday morning from the maintenance shed of the Wilson Sanitary Landfill.

The sheriff's office will not pursue the person who took the container for criminal prosecution, a deputy said. He said location of the container should be reported to the toxicology lab, poison center or any law enforcement agency.

Weather-aided Vikings knock Rams out of race again 14-7

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A lot of people may think the Minnesota Vikings should be standing in line waiting for their social security payments, but they're still plenty tough when it comes to the NFL playoffs.

Especially when there's adverse weather to deal with.

The aged and underdog Vikings proved Monday they were as much at home in the mud on a rainy Southern California winter day as they are in the ice and snow of the north country by eliminating the Los Angeles Rams 14-7 in an NFC semifinal playoff game.

The Vikings were 9½-point underdogs after having to win on the final day of the regular season even to get into the playoffs. But they simply were more adept at skidding over the Los Angeles Coliseum field, turned into a swamp by drenching rains.

"We got some Minnesota weather," said Viking Coach Bud Grant. "That was a very good omen. We're a bad weather team."

"Going into the game on a bad field, you know conditions get worse. That's why we wanted to throw early. I hope it snows in Dallas."

"You saw we were able to execute some things and move some people. We had physical dominance. We established it over the Rams even though they are bigger physically."

Chuck Foreman scored on a 5-yard run in the first quarter and Sammy Johnson tumbled on a 1-yard plunge in the fourth period for the Vikings' points.

So Coach Bud Grant's group of veterans, thought to be dead when star quarterback Fran Tarkenton broke his leg in November, remained alive in the Super Bowl derby. The Vikings earned the right to face the Dallas Cowboys in the NFC title game on New Year's Day in Texas for a berth in Super Bowl XII in New Orleans on Jan. 15.

Haden could generate little offense for the Rams, who appeared slow and tentative on the muddy turf.

On a first-and-five situation on the Minnesota five in the second quarter, Haden has a pass intended for Young intercepted by cornerback Nate Allen in the end zone. As it turned out, that was the closest the Rams got to the Vikings—and zoned.

Minnesota 4 and that killed any chance the five-time NFL West listless had of coming back.

Later in the second period, Los Angeles kicker Rafael Septien missed a 33-yard field goal attempt.

With 8:38 left and the Rams driving, Haden had a pass intercepted by free safety Paul Kraviec on the Minnesota 4 and that killed any chance the five-time NFL West listless had of coming back.

Minnesota, beaten by the Rams 35-3 in October when it had Tarkenton at quarterback, won with nine-year journeyman pro Bob Lee at the controls.

Lee completed all five passes he attempted the first time the Vikings had the ball and took them 70 yards in 11 plays for their first score. His five passes, including 25 and 12-yarders to Ahmad Rashad, accounted for 57 of the 70 yards.

Foreman ran around right end into the Ram end zone from five yards out for the first Viking score at 9:17 of the first period.

The second Minnesota touchdown march covered 40 yards on 10 plays, all on the ground, at 1:01 of the fourth quarter.

Foreman set up the score with an 11-yard run. He was shaken up on that play and Johnson came on as his relief. Lee gave the ball to Johnson twice on plunges and he went into the end zone on the third play of the final quarter. A 21-yard punt return by Manfred Moore had given the Vikings the ball on the Los Angeles 40.

The Rams moved 46 yards in eight plays for their score, which was set up by a 20-yard pass from Haden to tight end Terry Nelson with less than a minute to go.

Foreman, overshadowed in season by the record-breaking running of Walter Payton of the Chicago Bears, was a workhorse for the Vikings as he carried 21 times for 101 yards. Lawrence McCutcheon, the Ram career rushing recordholder, gained 102 yards on 16 carries.

Minnesota, losers of all four Super Bowls in which it has appeared, sent many of the crowd of 62,538 home early.

It was a particularly bitter defeat for Ram Coach Chuck Knox, who now has been knocked out of the playoffs before the Super Bowl five times, three of them by the Vikings.

The Vikings' defense could only sack Haden once, a 12-yard loss by tackle Alan Page, but Minnesota intercepted him three times.

Lee attempted only five passes after Minnesota's first scoring drive, including just three in the second half. All were incomplete, but he was sacked only once and did not throw an interception as the Vikings did not turn the ball over.

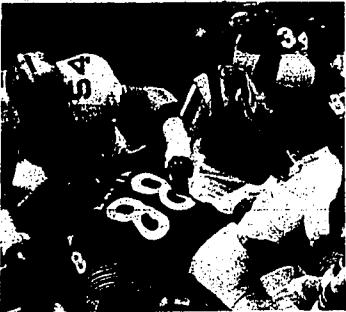

In contrast to Lee, Haden attempted 32 passes in trying to play catchup and completed 14 of them for 130 yards.

The Vikings' ground-control tactics worked almost to perfection in the second half as they controlled the ball for 20:33 to 9:27 for the Rams.

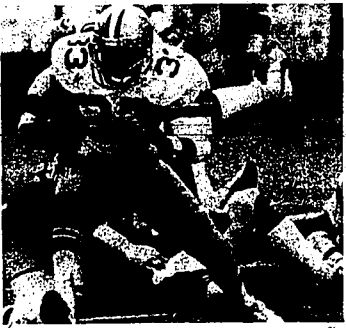

No matter how slick

MINNESOTA'S Ahmad Rashad goes high in the air despite a muddy field and gathers in the rain-soaked pigskin in the first-quarter drive that netted the Vikings their first touchdown en route to a 14-7 upset playoff victory over Los Angeles.

THE Bears' Walter Payton (above) could find little running room against the Dallas defense Monday, but Tony Dorsett (below) of the Cowboys had enough open field to run for two touchdowns as the Cowboys blasted the Bears 37-7.

Cowboys rip Bears

IRVING, Tex. (UPI) — The Dallas Cowboys chose a fairly timely occasion Monday to put it all together.

Playing one of their best overall games in this or any other season, the Cowboys crushed the Chicago Bears in the opening round of the NFC playoffs, 37-7, and brought a smile even to their normally subdued coach.

"It was a great game," said Cowboys' Coach Tom Landry. "We may not have reached our potential yet, but we played up to our potential today. For an overall effort from 43 players, this game was hard to beat."

The Chicago Bears obviously could not beat it. And by virtue of its one-sided triumph, the Cowboys became eligible for their eighth NFC title game in 12 years. Dallas will be at home next Sunday for the Super Bowl semifinals against the Minnesota Vikings, who upset the Los Angeles Rams to reach the title game.

Among other things Monday: Dallas came up with seven turnovers, five in the third period alone. Three of the turnovers were interceptions by Charlie Waters, equalling a post-season record.

Tom Landry and Robert Newhouse ran for 85 and 80 yards, respectively. Dorsett scored twice. The Cowboys' offense, despite turning the ball over on its first two possessions, proved unstoppable most of the afternoon.

The Cowboys shut down the NFL's leading rusher, Walter Payton, to only 60 yards in 19 carries. Chicago led the NFL with an average of 200 ground yards per game, but the Bears could manage only 81 Monday.

"After our offense fumbled twice," said Waters, "our defense stopped them boomboom. Chicago knew then it was going to be a long day."

Chicago Coach Jack Pardee said his club was prepared to play, but bemoaned the turnovers.

"You can't do that and win, especially against a team like the Cowboys," Pardee said. "The game meant a lot to them (the Cowboys). Had we not made any mistakes at all, we would have had a heck of a fight. Dallas' defense is something."

After Dallas turned the ball over itself on its first two possessions, Staubach hit Dorsett with a 20-yard pass and found Golden Tate with a 12-yarder to set up Doug Dennison's 2-yard scoring run.

It was a rout from there. Staubach hit Billy Joe DuPree with a 28-yard touchdown pass and Eflren Herrera kicked a 21-yard field goal to give the Cowboys a 17-0 halftime lead. Dallas put things away in the third period on touchdown runs of 32 and seven yards by Dorsett and Herrera's 31-yard field goal.

Herrera kicked a 27-yarder in the final period and after falling behind by 37 points, Chicago scored its only touchdown on a 34-yard pass from Bob Avellini to Steve Schubert.

Waters made two of his interceptions in the third quarter. Linebacker D.D. Lewis recovered a fumble and intercepted a pass and Bill Gregory finished out the quarter by recovering a fumble of his own.

Waters had also intercepted a pass by Avellini late in the first half and his total of three equaled a 33-year-old post-season record set by Joe Laws of Green Bay against the New York Giants.

The final Chicago turnover was by Payton, who could manage just 18 yards in the first half when the Cowboys keyed on him on almost every play.

Staubach, leader of the NFL's top offense, completed 8-of-13 passes for 134 yards before giving way to Danny White in the final quarter. The Cowboys' quarterback was particularly sharp early in the game.

In Dallas' opening touchdown drive, Staubach hit 10-of-22 passes for 44 yards and scrambled once for 10. In the second scoring drive, he hit back-to-back passes of 31 yards to Drew Pearson and 22 yards to DuPree, the latter being caught by the Cowboys' tight end while looking back into the sun and fighting off Bears' defensive backs Virgil Livers and Gary Fenick.

Waters' first interception came two yards deep in the end zone and thwarted the Bears' only scoring threat of the first half. Lewis then intercepted Avellini's first pass of the third quarter to set the tone for the rest of the game.

The NFC title game will start at 5:30 EST Jan. 1, the 12th anniversary of Dallas first player appearance. In that contest Dallas will be trying to win its fourth Super Bowl, the last coming two years ago when the Cowboys fell to the Pittsburgh Steelers.

At home in the rain

THE VIKINGS' Charles Goodrum's smile says it all late in the game as the Vikings wallowed in their favorite weather to outslug the Rams.

Little league football can be a rough game

By KATHLEEN MAXA

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va.—Even by NFL standards, the Courthouse Knights were a football powerhouse. What pro team, after all, can boast of a season not only undefeated but undefeated against?

In 1976, this team of Virginia Beach youngsters did just that, proving that four-hour practices, five nights a week, are what it takes to win even in midlevel league football. This past season the Knights easily finished 11-0 to win their third consecutive city championship and two more post-season games.

Last week, however, no one was cheering the Courthouse Knights. Stripped of their title amid front-page charges of age fixing and death threats against a Knight player whose mother said she refused a coach's request to change his birth certificate, 26 disappointed boys clung to their tarnished championship the only way they could — wearing their Knights jerseys to school in a show of solidarity.

While the Knights tried to answer their schoolmates' accusations of cheating, the list of youngsters whose birth certificates had been altered so they would be eligible to play grew, threatening to spread throughout the 53-team league. And as a recreation department investigation began unraveling the story of just how far adults will go to win children's football games (the feignous altering of a military dependent's card in one case caused residents of this sprawling beachside community to wonder how such a scandal could happen here).

On a typical fall Saturday, city teams vie on eight-lit football fields from early morning until well past midnight, while proud parents cheer their teams and talk of playoff contenders and future All-Americans.

"In a town this size, if you don't get organized sports, you have kids getting into gangs and causing trouble," said Jack Cox, 31, his belief in the value of sports undiminished by the scandal.

A Navy enlisted man who was transferred to the Oceana Naval Air Station last summer, Cox was away at sea when the Courthouse Knights controversy erupted. Now, relaxing in the black nautical-style easy chair of his Spanish-style living room with his wife Judy, in his side, he said he "dropped" coming to Virginia Beach.

The burglary of their garden apartment while the family slept only confirmed the worst fears of Cox, 31, and his wife, Judy, 30, both from a small Tennessee town.

"We moved into base housing for security reasons," he said, "but security here is a joke. The parents here let their kids go."

One of the Cox family's first steps after moving into the 600-unit Wadsworth Homes complex; was to sign up the three children with local teams. Seven-year-old John, whose first word as a baby, his father proudly recalls, was "ball," joined a flag football team. Daughter Jamie, 9, became a cheerleader. And 13-year-old Craig signed with Courthouse Knights, a team for boys 10-12, provided their 12th birthday does not fall before Dec. 31.

"We were told he could be 12 or over, as long as he made the weight-in," said Judy Cox, a softspoken woman.

The week before last, Craig, who normally weighs 75 pounds, began dieting and sweating down to the 70-pound limit.

In addition to four-hour workouts with the rest of the team, Craig worked another hour or more in the weight room and sauna.

"The last day, we sweated out two-and-a-half pounds," said Jack Cox. Craig made the weight, but not the Knights' first string. He did, however, that the three sons of the team's sponsor all made first string, one of them as quarterback.

Each year Virginia Beach sponsors a Super Bowl of youth football, the Mayor's Cup tournament. The Knights team was bidding for its third consecutive Mayor's Cup appearance. In that contest Dallas will be trying to win its fourth Super Bowl, the last coming two years ago when the Cowboys fell to the Pittsburgh Steelers.

"At 10 o'clock that night, one of the assistant coaches called me," Mrs. Cox recalled. "He told me he was aware of the protest. He said he realized I had been misinformed about age and that Mr. (Frank) Brunell (the Knights' head coach) wanted to come by and get Craig's birth certificate and put a piece of tape over the date and burn off a copy, so that Craig could play the next day."

"I told him no. I said, 'You know that's cheating.' He said, 'Yes. In that case Craig can't dress for the game.' I said, 'He'll still be there.'"

"When we went to the game the next day, the Knights were already leaving and had forfeited. So we went home. When we pulled up, there was a whole group of older boys in front of our house. They threatened to kill Craig. The babysitter told me that I had all these threatening phone calls from adult voices who had said, 'You're dead.' Then I saw parents driving by, dropping more boys off. They started running around the house, beating on the door, saying 'Come on out, Craig. We're going to kill you.' That's when I called security."

Gathered around the plastic-covered table in the kitchen of Knight's head coach Frank Brunell, parents of some of the ineligible players expressed their impassioned support of the suspended coach and headedly argued that the Knights are being made scapegoats because they are winners. As they see it, the so-called scandal in Virginia Beach youth football is much ado about a minor minor eligibility rules infractions. What difference in a boy's maturity do a few days here or there make, they ask? Is it fair that the 68-pound, 15-year-old, according to the rules, must play in a 140-pound weight class?

"I still don't understand why any parent would protest an ineligible player," said Brunell, reaching over the bowling ash tray for the carton of milk which he poured into his coffee cup.

And while he denied that he asked any parents to change their sons' birth certificates, he said he knowingly played over-aged boys who otherwise would have had to play with boys too large for them.

"My own son, who weighs 69 pounds, was made to play in 115-pound footballs," Brunell said. "He's been in the hospital; we've had to take him to the doctor twice, all because of football injuries. He has had broken bones on the football field. But he still stuck it out."

Keith Brunell stuck it out because better a broken bone or two than a broken heart, and not playing football, his father said, would surely break his heart.

Namath won't talk about future

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Los Angeles Rams' Joe Namath refused to say Monday if he intended to try to play a 14th season in the NFL after the Rams' 14-7 semifinal NFC playoff loss to the Minnesota Vikings.

Namath, 34, started the first four games for the Rams in his season but lost his job to Pat Haden after a 24-23 defeat at Chicago Oct. 10. He did not play a single down after that.

"Well, at this stage I'm not concerned with that," Namath told a reporter when asked about his future. "Anything I have to do individually will be decided some other time. This is certainly not the time to talk about individual careers."

Namath looked particularly unhappy standing in the rain on the sidelines while Haden was having trouble getting the Ram offense on track against the Vikings. He steadfastly refused to criticize head coach Chuck Knox or Ram owner Carroll Rosenbloom for the benching, saying that Haden "deserves to play ahead of him because the younger man is getting better results. In his 10 starts, Haden directed the team to an 8-2 record and their fifth straight NFC West title."

On the occasions when Knox did use a second quarterback for Haden, he went with rookie Vince Ferragamo of Nebraska and explained that he didn't want to use Namath as a mopman.

In four games, Namath completed 59 of 107 passes for 606 yards and three touchdowns. He was intercepted five times.

Namath came to the Rams last May 12 as a free agent after playing 12 seasons with the New York Jets, where he was the hero of the Jets' 16-7 victory over the Baltimore Colts in the 1969 Super Bowl.

Suspension ends for Gopher star

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Mychal Thompson, the 6-foot-10 star of the University of Minnesota basketball team, has paid his debt to the NCAA — sitting on the sideline through a seven-game suspension.

The big senior center from the Bahamas rejoined the Gophers this week in time to play in the Pillsbury Classic Friday and Saturday and help the Gophers make a fight for the Big Ten championship after the first off-year.

"This has been the toughest month of my basketball career, having to sit and watch and not be able to play," Thompson said. "I counted off those seven games one by one."

Coach Jim Dutcher was just as eager to get Thompson back from a suspension for violating NCAA rules. Thompson was guilty of selling some complimentary tickets for more than the listed price early in his Minnesota career.

Last season, with Thompson, the Gophers had a record of 243, the most victories Minnesota ever piled up in a single season. Without him so far this season, the Gophers have floundered to a 2-4 record and have scored 37.8 fewer points per game than a year ago.

With Thompson back, Dutcher hopes the Gophers can make a good run for the Big Ten title — "our only real goal." The Minnesota basketball team can't play in a post-season tournament because it remains on probation this season for NCAA rule violations when Bill Musselman was coach.

Thompson said if he'd known he'd get so long a suspension he might have taken some flack from his officers earlier in the fall. But now he's enthused about rejoining the Gophers.

"I'm going to put on a good show," he said. "The public may think I'll bring a championship but we all have to help each other. I still expect us to be a contender for the Big Ten title."

"The inside game hasn't been working. I'll have to score more from the inside. Kevin McHale can work on the smaller forward and I'll take the big one and working together we can free Osbone Lockhart to make his 18000ers, too."

In his first two years as a sophomore and junior, Thompson was Minnesota's leading scorer and leading rebounder and the Gophers won 40 games.

"The unknown thing is that he also kind of keys our defense on the inside," Dutcher said. "It's a tremendous help on defense."

Dutcher said his only worry is that Thompson may try too hard.

"Everybody has made so much of his coming back and in trying to impress I hope he doesn't try to do too much himself."

Banished Razorbacks plan suit

LITTLE ROCK (UPI) — An attorney representing three University of Arkansas football players suspended from playing in the Orange Bowl by Razorback Coach Lou Holtz said Monday he plans to file suit in federal court.

"I have been authorized to litigate the matter," John W. Walker of Little Rock said.

He said the suit would seek long-term as well as short-term relief.

"It will be a class-action suit attempting to enjoin the university from imposing a dual standard in the treatment of black athletes," Walker said. "We will be seeking that the university provide as much assistance to black athletes as they do to white so they can simply graduate from school."

"I think we can prove that only a small percentage of black athletes graduate. The university provides much more assistance to white athletes. We're also concerned about the assistance the university gives white athletes after they get out of school."

"The black athletes are sort of cast out into the street after they graduate. There are some long-term things involved in this thing. We will seek to remedy some situations that have existed in the last nine or 10 years."

Starting running backs Ben Cawins and Michael Forrest and flanker Donny Bobo were suspended last Wednesday for the Jan. 2 game by Holtz for an incident reportedly involving a woman in the athletic dormitory. A threatened boycott of the game by other players was called off after those suspended urged them to play in the game.

ISU rolls on

NORMAL, Ill. (UPI) — Center Joe Galvin scored 21 points and 15 rebounds to lead undefeated Illinois State to its tenth victory Saturday over Kent State, 79-71.

Kent State, 1-6, was led by Burrell McChese with 28 points.

Illinois State had its four other starters in double scoring figures with Billy Lewis scoring 16 points.

Illinois State led throughout the game and was ahead 40-30 at the half. The game puts ISU's season record at 10-0.

Celts short again

THIS SEASON has been a completely unique experience for the Boston Celtics. They lost badly to the Detroit Pistons last night 122-100 to drop farther below the .500 mark. Above, the Pistons John Shumate beats the Celtics' Dave Bing to the bucket for a score.

Pistons crush Celtics

DETROIT (UPI) — Eric Money scored 23 points Monday night and the Detroit Pistons continued their winning ways under general manager and interim coach Bob Kauffman rolling to their fifth straight win with a 122-100 victory over the Boston Celtics.

Detroit pulled away from Boston after trailing in the early going and led, 28-21, after the first quarter behind Chris Ford's 10 points.

In the second quarter, Leon Douglas' 12 points helped Detroit push its lead to as many as 17. The Pistons went into the locker room at halftime with a 60-44 edge, and made the margin 32 points after three periods, 100-68.

Douglas added 18 points for Detroit. Former Elton Dave Bing's 19 points made him high man for the Celtics, who fell to 10-22 with their sixth straight loss and 11th straight road defeat. The win raised the Pistons' season record to 14-17.

Bullies edge Hawks

ATLANTA (UPI) — Reserve guard Larry Wright scored 10 points in the fourth quarter Monday night to lead the Washington Bullets over the Atlanta Hawks, 115-106.

Former Hawks guard Tom Henderson victimized his ex-mates with 29 points, high for his team, as the Bullets beat Atlanta for the second straight night.

Washington scored eight straight points late in the first quarter and took a 26-20 lead at the end of the period. The Hawks cut the margin to 57-53 at the half.

Washington outscored Atlanta 14-3 midway in the third quarter — eight of those points from Henderson — to take an 88-76 lead at the end of three.

Late in the fourth period Atlanta rallied with a 12-2 scoring spurt that cut the margin to 109-102, but could come no closer.

Denver subdues Suns

DENVER (UPI) — David Thompson and Dan Issel each hit 24 points and teammate Bobby Jones chipped in with 15 to lead the Denver Nuggets to a 127-109 win over the Phoenix Suns Monday night and snap a five-game losing streak.

The Nuggets, who lead the National Basketball Association's Midwest Division with a 19-13 mark, squandered early leads of up to 13 points in the first half. The game was tied at 92-91 with 10 minutes remaining in the final quarter when the Suns hit a cold streak and were outscored, 16-6, in the next six and one-half minutes.

Thompson scored 16 of his points in the first half, while Issel scored 13 in the first two quarters. Reserve guard Jim Price came off the bench to score a season-high 14 points for the Nuggets.

The Suns, who slipped to a 19-12 mark, were led by forward Walter Davis with 23 points. Guard Ron Lee had 17 points, as did high-scoring guard Paul Westphal, who scored a career record 48 points in the Suns' first meeting with Denver earlier this year.

Phoenix, badly out-rebounded in the first half of play, played under 6-foot-9 forward Alvan Adams, their leading rebounder and No. 3 scorer, who was ill with the flu. Issel led Denver with 16 rebounds.

Rookie rallies Houston

HOUSTON (UPI) — Calvin Murphy and Moses Malone each scored 22 points Monday night to lead the Houston Rockets to a 113-99 victory over the Kansas City Kings.

Rookie Alonzo Bradley, playing his first NBA game, fumble-fortie Rockets, added 15 points on five in from the floor and five of six from the free throw line. The Rockets obtained the rights to the former Texas Southern University All-American on Friday and signed him to a contract Sunday.

His Birdsong was high scorer for the Kings with 22 points and Rich Washington added 21 before fouling out late in the first quarter.

The Rockets broke a 16-16 tie with 10:3 burst to close the first quarter. Murphy had 11 points in the opening period and the Rockets took advantage of seven Kings turnovers.

Houston ran off a 9-4 surge early in the second quarter to lead by 16 at 37-21. Murphy had nine points during the quarter and Birdsong came off the KC bench to score another nine. Malone scored 10 points in the third quarter.

State does TV repairs

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Officials at the Louisiana Superdome said the state has signed a $94,000 contract to help luxury box suite owners who are plagued with mechanical problems in their closed circuit television sets.

Dome manager Deniz Skinner said the contract is to install tracks underneath the sets so they can be more easily maneuvered for repairs.

Presently, repairmen can't reach the television sets without installing scaffolding under them and dome patrons in the 64 box suites were complaining the sets were out of focus and the pictures often rolled out of control.

The sets provide the same instant replays flashed on huge television screens for the rest of the dome audience. However the giant screens can't be seen by box suite viewers.

Skinner said tracks for each of the sets will cost about $1,500 a set and more than half should be installed by the Super Bowl Jan. 15.

Attorney General William Galt has included the out-of-focus television sets in his list of engineering and design complaints scheduled for arbitration with the architect team which built the $163.5 million stadium.

Fred Akers kin killed

ARMOREL, Ark. (UPI) — The brother and nephew of Texas Longhorn coach Fred Akers were killed along with another man Monday in a fiery accident near the tri-state border of Arkansas, Tennessee and Missouri.

Akers' nephew, Lonnie Akers Jr., 22, the driver of the car, and Akers' brother, Carl Akers, 36, both of Blytheville, Tex., died in the wreck. A third person in the car was burned beyond recognition and his identification was still pending.

Arkansas State Police confirmed, however, police Akers was not involved in the crash.

State Police said the car left Arkansas Highway 18 in Mississippi County, hit a dirt embankment and caught fire. County sheriff's deputies and fire, department personnel received a CB report of a car on fire at 12:50 a.m. However, a deputy said the bodies of the three occupants were badly burned by the time authorities arrived.

In his first year as the coach of the No. 1 ranked Longhorns, Akers led the team to a South-western Conference championship and a national ranking the squad to meet the Fighting Irish of Notre Dame in the Cotton Bowl on the day after New Year's.

Marquette gets easy win

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Marquette outscored Eastern Kentucky 17-2 in a four-minute period of the first half Monday night and went on to an easy 90-73 win over the badly out-matched Colonels in the first round of the 31st Milwaukee Classic.

In the other first round game, Matt Brown's 14 second-half points led a furious Cadet second half comeback as Army nearly wiped out a 10-point Texas lead.

The Longhorns faltered to win 74-73. Marquette faces Texas tonight as it seeks its 10th successive Classic title. Army plays Eastern Kentucky in the consolation game.

Marquette was only four points ahead of Eastern Kentucky midway through the first half but the 17-2 blitz, including six points by reserve Gary Rosenberger, gave the Warriors a 19-point lead.

The margin was extended to 27 in the second half as the Warriors came back from their first loss of the year last week at Kentucky.

Marquette is now 6-1 while Eastern Kentucky is 4-5.

Butch Lee led Marquette with 25 points and Jerome Whitehead added 21. Kenny Elliott had 22 for the Colonels.

Texas and Army were even at 24-24 until Texas ran off eight straight points for a 32-24 lead. The lead was 37-31 at the half.

Army scored eight straight — six by Scott Egan — early in the second half. Texas came back to build up a 10-point lead, but Gary Winton scored on a layup and then Brown scored on two jumps and two free throws, cutting the Texas lead 16-6-6.

The Cadets came within one point three times, including a basket at the final horn. Winton led all scorers with 24 and Brown finished with 20. John Moore led Texas with 18 points.

Bobcat export tags required

BOISE — Trappers desiring to sell bobcat and lynx pelts for export will be required to have them tagged according to a new federal regulation.

The Endangered Species Scientific Authority has declared that any Idaho bobcat or lynx pelt destined for the export market must have a tag on it beginning Jan. 1, 1978.

The Department of Fish and Game will be cooperating with the federal agency by tagging the bobcat and lynx pelts. Idaho has been given 1,475 bobcat tags and 25 lynx tags for the trapping season which runs during the month of January.

Trappers and hunters who want to sell their pelts should take them to a conservation officer or regional or subregional office for free tagging. The only stipulation placed on the trapper or hunter is that a report be made as to each animal's sex, date and location of the kills and methods of take.

Pelts will be tagged from Jan. 1 through Feb. 28, giving owners 21 days after the close of the season to get them tagged.

Although the tagging is not required for pelt sales in the United States, the department big game supervisor, Jerry Thiesen said, "Most trapped bobcat and lynx pelts will be tagged due to their value in the export market."

"This program is expected to give the department its first good record of bobcat and lynx harvests in the state," Thiesen said.

Cauthen opens with 4 winners

ARCADIA, Calif. (UPI) — Steve Cauthen, the 17-year-old jockey sensation who has ridden the most winners in North America this year for record earnings of $6 million, marked his debut on a muddy opening day of racing at Santa Anita Monday with four winners.

Cauthen, switching from New York to California, won the first race of Santa Anita's 73-day meeting by booting home Nument's Boy for a $9.00 win and went on to win three more.

He failed, however, to capture the featured $4,000 Palos Verdes Handicap, which was won by Impressive Luck with Sandy Hawley aboard.

Cauthen scored his three other victories aboard Impressive Lad ($15.80) in the third, A Twinkling ($12.80) in the sixth and Dr. Krohn ($11.60) in the seventh.

Impressive Luck, a California-bred 4-year-old, used front-running tactics to win the six-furlong race, covering the distance on a sloppy track in 1:10.25.

Maters, favorite of the crowd of about 29,500, was 6½ lengths back in second place under Lufft Flacey Jr. and Current Concept, ridden by Don Pierce, was third.

Impressive Luck paid $7.80, $3.60 and $2.60 while Maters returned $3.20 and $2.40 and Current Concept brought $3.20.

New year — new license

BOISE — It might be the instate duck hunting or fishing season, but with the new year, don't forget to have your new license.

The Department of Fish and Game would like to remind hunters and fishermen to get their licenses and appropriate stamps for the new year.

The resident fishing and hunting license fees will remain unchanged for 1978.

Britons kayak round Horn

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI) — Four Britons sailing in 7-foot kayaks have successfully navigated around Cape Horn, the southernmost tip of South America, the Chilean navy said Monday.

The four men were identified as Frank Goodman, Barry Smith, Michael Matthew and Jim Haygreenes. The four men sailed from the Chilean city of Porto Williams, on Navarino Island, in a westerly direction through the Beagle Channel, south through the Murray Channel and around the Wollaston Islands where the Cape is located.

They then sailed north through the Picton Passage to reach the Beagle Channel again and west to Porto Williams, the Navy said.

The four men departed Porto Williams on Dec. 11 and returned safely on Dec. 22.

Red Miller honored

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Denver Broncos Coach Red Miller has been named "The Sporting News National Football League Coach of the Year, it was announced Monday.

Miller, an assistant coach in professional football for 17 years, guided the Broncos to a 12-2 season, their best-ever record, and to the AFC Western Division title in his first year as a head coach. On Saturday Denver earned a berth in the AFC title game with a 24-21 victory over the Pittsburgh Steelers in a first-round playoff game.

Miller was an assistant with the New England Patriots, Buffalo Bills, Denver Broncos, St. Louis Cardinals and Baltimore Colts from 1960 through 1976. His only other head coaching job was for Astoria (Ill.) High School in 1950 and 1951.

Duck season nears end

BOISE — The waterfowl season will be coming to an end soon with duck hunting closing Jan. 8, both in the Panhandle and southern Idaho, according to the Department of Fish and Game.

Duck hunting closes New Year's Day in north-central and parts of eastern Idaho. Goose hunting, which closed Dec. 19 in virtually all of the lower half of Idaho, will remain open until Jan. 1 for the northern half of the state.

Phasant hunting, along with sage and sharp-tailed grouse hunting, is closed, but in most of the state it is still open season on huns, chukars and quail. Many areas will be open for their taking until Dec. 31, and parts of north-central Idaho will remain open until Jan. 15. The 1977 Idaho Upland Game Regulations contain more specific information.

Kentucky dominates ratings

NEW YORK (UPI) — Kentucky's competition for the No. 1 spot in college basketball continues to decrease.

The undefeated Wildcats took all but two of the 38 votes cast in the weekly United Press International Board of Coaches ratings, released today and opened a 119-point lead on their nearest rival, North Carolina.

Kentucky's rise in popularity among the coaches resulted from Marquette, last week's runnerup, suffering its first loss of the season — 61-60 to Louisville, The Warriors, who held the No. 2 spot last week, dropped three places to No. 5 as a result of the defeat while Louisville's victory enabled the Cardinals to advance four places to No. 6. North Carolina moved up one place to No. 2 after running its record to 7-1 with a rout of Tulane in its only game of the week. Notre Dame and Arkansas also moved up one place each from last week. The Irish routed St. Joseph's (Ind.) and climbed one notch to No. 3 and Arkansas, which received one first place vote, remained unbeaten in eight games with a pair of victories to move up one place to No. 4.

Despite winning both of its games, UCLA dropped one place in the rankings to No. 7 and Indiana State, tie last week, fell one notch to No. 8 despite receiving one first place vote.

Holy Cross, running its record to 6-0 with a victory over Harvard, moved up two places to No. 9 while Syracuse fell two spots to No. 10 after an tie week. Indiana made the biggest climb among the second 10 by moving up five places into a tie for 11th with Cincinnati. The Hoosiers won their own Indiana Classic to boost their record to 6-1 while Cincinnati scored a victory in its only game to improve to 6-1. Providence, which barely squeaked past unheralded Bakersfield State, remained in the No. 13 position with a 6-0 record and Maryland moved up four places to No. 14 after increasing its record to 6-1. Rounding out the top 20 in order were Florida State, Utah State, Virginia, Kansas and San Francisco and Nebraska in a tie for 19th. Boise South Fork study planned

BOISE — In a cooperative effort with the Bureau of Reclamation, the Department of Fish and Game will be continuing a two-year native fish study on the South Fork of the Boise River.

The study was undertaken to give the department and the bureau the information necessary to make recommendations concerning the possible addition of a third electrical generating unit at Anderson Ranch Dam and a potential re-regulating dam one and one-half miles below it. The third generator and re-regulating dam would be built by the bureau.

If peak electric demands required the use of three generators, extremes in water flows would possible prove detrimental to downstream fisheries. Quick rising waters would also be dangerous to fishermen wading in the river.

The department has been conducting creel census and fish population surveys for several years with the help of the bureau, and the final segment of the fishery investigations to begin Jan. 1 was recently approved by the Fish and Game Commission. The final one-year study will be entirely funded by the bureau but all work will be conducted by department biologists and aides.

"It is to the department's advantage to have adequate data to dictate the effects that this generating unit and alternate operating schemes will have on this important fishery," said Stacy Debarths, fisheries bureau chief, at the December Commission meeting.

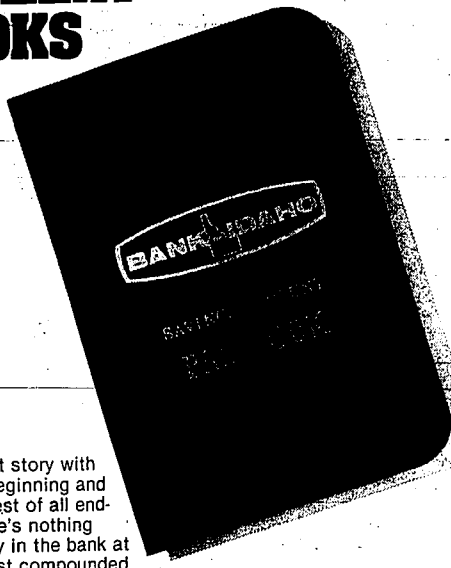

The studies conducted by the department will eventually provide enough information to enable the department to make recommendations as to the design of the re-regulating dam, if it is constructed, and a base stream flow of a certain amount of cubic feet of water per second.

S. Pole oil rich?

MCMURDO, Antarctica (UPI) — Superficial drilling off the Antarctic coast has convinced many geologists that a vast, untapped wealth of oil and gas may lie at the bottom of the world.

An energy-fingery world already is eyeing the potential South Pole bonanza, which may be five times as rich as the one under Alaska's North Slope.

Commercial exploitation of the Antarctic continent is prohibited by an international gentlemen's agreement lacking any punishment for violators. Over the years that agreement and the great expense of working in so remote an area have preserved Antarctica as a frozen laboratory for the world's scientists.

Australian geologist Howard Brady says the lining of the first Antarctic oil rush "is just a question of costs."

A test drilled through the ice 20 miles off the Wright Valley in the Ross Sea hit methane gas, but drilling was abandoned when the ice began breaking up.

The true size and location of Antarctica's petroleum reserves remain unknown because of the 1959 treaty prohibiting exploitation of Antarctica. Estimates, however, have been made.

Optimistic figures made by the U.S. Geological Survey, placed the size of the Antarctic reserves at 45 trillion barrels of oil and 115 trillion cubic feet of gas. By contrast, the Prudhoe Bay reserves of Alaska's North Slope are thought to hold 9 billion barrels of oil and 26 trillion cubic feet of gas.

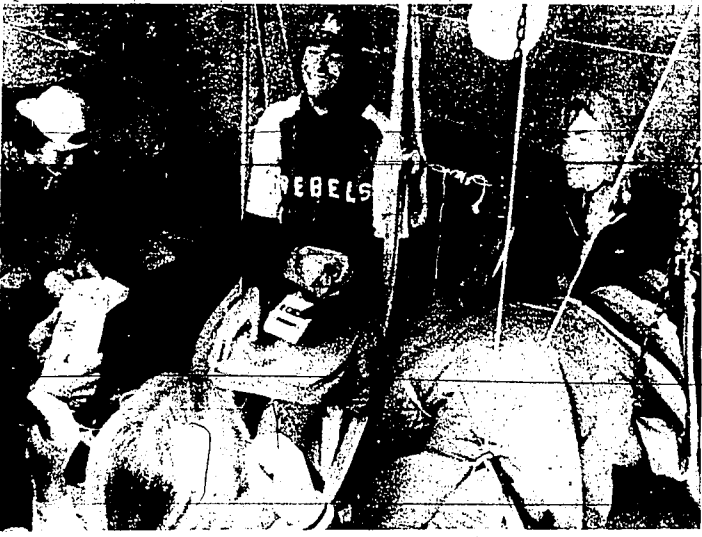

Near all the nations that signed the 1959 treaty are having second thoughts about maintaining the commercial virginity of the Antarctic. U.S. authorities at the McMurdo station say they are tempted to alter, or even violate, the Antarctic treaty has never been more enticing.

Under present rules the Antarctic continent — the size of America and Europe combined — is open range. No leases would be required. No royalty payments would have to be made.

Some, however, want to be the first to violate the treaty.

"When everyone agreed to maintain a hands off policy of — no territorial claims and no exploitation of the Antarctic — it was because nobody believed the continent had anything worth taking," said a New Zealand diplomat.

So Antarctica was set aside as a sort of playpen for geologists. They could check the speed of glaciers, measure ice thicknesses and study marine organisms and lichens.

1 in 4 men faces male menopause

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (UPI) — Male menopause is a real phenomenon and businessmen must learn to deal with it, an organizational behavior researcher says in the current issue of Business Horizons.

At least one man in four faces the severe crisis, wrote Michael E. McGill of Southern Methodist University's School of Business, citing personnel files with accounts of dramatic changes in the behavior of managers.

Researchers are split over the exact cause of the mid-life crisis, which affects men between the ages of 40 and 60, but McGill said the debate focuses on seven theories, which are described in the Indiana University School of Business publication.

McGill said some men develop an "achievement-aspiration gap," assessing their achievements in light of unrealistically high goals. Others suddenly develop a need to fulfill childhood dreams forsaken in order to meet the demands of family, society or career.

The "empty nest" theory has it that the husband-father reaches a crisis when he sees his wife and children become less dependent on him and less subject to his influence as they become more active outside the home.

McGill said proponents of another theory called the "limits to life" feel the death of a friend or parent, a major illness or even an insurance physical can cause a man to see his own mortality more sharply and try to take advantage of "the little time left."

"Physiological changes" which are a part of aging become threats, according to one theory, while another says reductions in work activity and family roles create a "rolestatus" crisis.

McGill said the seventh theory asserts that middle-aged men begin to see the stability they worked for as nothing more than stagnation and change their behavior to regain a sense of adventure.

He said it is likely mid-life crisis comes from different sources for different men. He said businessmen should first recognize when employees are going through the stage, then make the workers realize their problem is not unique and provide counseling.

Power plant cooler plans investigated

OAK RIDGE, Tenn. (UPI) — One of the major problems of this energy-hungry age is to find ways to generate more and more electricity without doing irreparable damage to the environment.

At the Oak Ridge National Laboratory a device has just been developed which researchers hope will help find answers to at least a small portion of the problem — damage done to living organisms that are pumped through the cooling systems of electric generating plants.

Chief researcher for the project is Sam Suffern. The project is one of the concerns of Dave Reiche, assistant director of the lab's environmental sciences division, and Chuck Coutant, manager of the cooling systems program.

Coutant said the current assumption of engineers dealing with power plant cooling systems is that there is 100 percent mortality among tiny fish, eggs and zooplankton sucked through the systems. "We know that some plants kill everything," Suffern said. "We also know that some are not so deadly. We want to find out why."

Within the past several weeks, a power plant cooling system simulator has been completed. This is a closed system in which all the factors involved in "entrainment" can be studied.

Entrainment means simply that water is pumped from a lake or stream into a power plant cooling system, carrying with it fish eggs, fish larvae, and plankton in its various forms.

This living material, which cannot be screened out of the water at the intake, travels through the pipes, the pump, the condenser tubes, and in some cases through cooling towers then back to the water source. During the entrainment process, the living organisms are subjected to a wide variety of forces: tremendous turbulence, physical pressures and vacuum conditions and temperature shock.

Suffern said the first three years of research with the cooling circuit facsimile will deal with fresh water organisms. "We will try to define the factors in the cooling system model that cause mortality," he said.

To make this possible, the system is designed so that the volume of water pumped through it can be varied, the temperature of the water can be controlled, and the living organisms can be inserted both behind and ahead of the pump.

The new research is a continuation of a program begun in 1972 in which the main concern was with the effects of shear forces on small fish. These forces grow out of water turbulence, counter currents generated at points where sudden and dramatic changes in pipe sizes occur, and from the frictional forces inside pipes causing the water to travel at different speeds through the pipe.

The researchers found, Suffern says, that shear forces do not account for the high fish mortality found in power plant cooling systems.

Coutant said that the current research may lead to new designs for some elements of plant cooling systems, such as the water pump, where cavitation effects (violent vacuum conditions followed immediately by high pressure impacts) may be a major factor in fish mortality.

The study will involve not only the immediate effects of passage through a plant cooling system but also delayed effects, Suffern said.

Athletic injuries may be monitored

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — The football player writhing in agony on the field and the boxer sprawled senseless on the canvas may soon contribute to saving lives.

The Highway Safety Research Institute at the University of Michigan has proposed equipping athletes with small sensors. Readings from the devices might reveal a link between a specific kind of impact and the resulting injury, particularly head injuries.

John W. Melvin, an institute researcher, said the information could then be used to improve impact protection in all forms of transportation as well as in buildings.

Melvin said athletes, particularly in contact sports, provide a convenient resource for studying injuries.

"It's fairly common for someone to go out and get injured," he said. "That's simply an accepted occupational hazard associated with the sport."

"Because of this, some researchers have suggested putting measuring instruments on athletes, on the chance that they will be injured. The instruments would then measure acceleration levels involved."

He said the Department of Transportation has already developed a small transmitter that can be placed in a boxer's mouth to record the conditions that lead to a concussion.

"Since scientists don't understand very well how the brain functions," he said, "we don't understand how such damage as a concussion occurs. To learn more, we'll have to see what's going on during impact."

Melvin said much of the current knowledge about injuries has been acquired using dummies or — in situations involving minor impact — human volunteers. He said researchers now need more extensive resources for improving protective devices.

Aircraft control pushed by agency

WASHINGTON — Centralized control over the 744 airplanes owned or leased by the federal civilian agencies is needed to end wasteful and unnecessary operations, according to a General Accounting Office study.

Now, each of the 19 agencies which operates its own air fleet "has its own policies and procedures for all aspects of aircraft operations and there are extensive variations," the GAO reported. "These differences contribute to inefficient and uneconomical aircraft programs making governmentwide policy guidance for aircraft programs necessary."

Civilian government agencies own 650 aircraft, worth at least $340 million and ranging from single-engine light planes costing as little as $3,000 to large jet airliners costing "many millions of dollars."

The agencies also operate 85 borrowed and leased aircraft as well as renting "several thousand more," the report stated.

Authors of the report from the GAO, which is the investigative arm of Congress, reported they were unable to determine the cost of operating all these planes because of the lack of any centralized authority and varying cost accounting methods used by the agencies.

They concluded it was obvious the cost is in the millions of dollars a year.

"Using aircraft to perform various specialized missions and carry out routine activities has become popular with many civilian agencies," the report said. But the agency raised questions about whether the number of planes now on the government books is necessary and whether substantial savings in the costs of operating the fleet could not be achieved.

"Agencies have made only the most elementary efforts to coordinate aircraft program activities and no efforts have been begun to establish governmentwide policies and procedures," according to the report.

"Some must take the lead if economies and efficiencies are to be made in the civilian agency aircraft programs," the GAO said.

"Logically, it appears that the Office of Management and Budget, with its policy-making authority and governmentwide interest, is in the best position to lead federal civilian agencies in making needed improvements and establishing a solid aircraft program."
