

Fresh fumes dim effects of Smokeout

NEW YORK (UPI) — During the great American smokeout — that's what it was called — in November, three out of every 10 cigarette smokers stopped smoking or cut down, the American Cancer Society said Wednesday.

The cutdown and snuff-it-out effect on most smokers' behavior was transitory, however. The stoppages or slowdowns in the puffing front lasted only for the duration of the smokeout Nov. 17 for the majority.

The progress claim by the Cancer Society was based on a study of representative areas. The society said a drop in cigarette smoking was detected in big smokeout areas a month after the event mobilized by local ACS units.

The smokeout included rallies, the signing of pledges, telephone pledge-ins, races and other happenings. It was a big event in some areas and hardly detectable in others.

Celebrated during the event were: Invited Sammy Davis Jr., Stevie Green and Johnny Unitas.

Health, Education and Welfare Secretary

Joseph A. Califano Jr. and the United States Surgeon General Dr. Julius B. Richmond also joined in urging smokers to quit for a day in the hope that those who did would be inspired to quit permanently.

Following the smokeout, Cancer Society volunteers conducted telephone interviews and door-to-door surveys in 15 communities with 1,538 adults in Georgia, Massachusetts, New York, Nevada, Utah, Michigan and Washington State.

The follow-up research found about 13 percent of cigarette smokers said they quit on smokeout day and 18 percent said they cut down.

The signing of pledge cards aided the commitment not to smoke on Nov. 17. The Cancer Society said this finding will lead to the use of more pledge cards during the 1978 "Great American Smokeout" — inspired by smokeouts staged first in California and Minnesota.

U.S. must match Soviet strength, Congress told

Washington Star

WASHINGTON — Expressing a new philosophy, Secretary of Defense Harold Brown told Congress this country needs to match the pace the Soviet Union sets in military development.

The U.S. strategic nuclear forces not only must not be inferior to Soviet forces but also must not seem to be inferior, Brown said in explaining his plans for improving U.S. defenses. Conventional forces must be able to counter growing Soviet capabilities, he said.

Using the analogy of the hare and the tortoise, Brown said the United States pulled ahead in the late 1950s and early 1960s, and then substantially reduced our basic (military) effort while the Soviets continued to expand theirs at a steady pace. Now we must increase our investment in defense if we are to stay abreast.

But it remains to be seen, Brown said, whether we have the prudence and patience to run at whatever pace the Soviets may choose to set.

The defense plans for the 1979 fiscal year that he presented to Congress are "what this administration regards as the right regime for a long-distance runner," Brown said.

Brown appeared before the House Armed Services Committee with the Defense Department's 391-page annual report to Congress at the beginning of hearings on the administration's 1979 budget proposal. President Carter has asked for an authorization of $16 billion for next year and outlays of $13.5 billion in unclassified terms, the outlay is up 3.5 percent from this year.

Among specific points in Brown's report were: — A new intercontinental missile, the MX, may reach full-scale development in the next fiscal year if a decision is made on the best system of land-based missiles.

— More accurate and more powerful MK-12A warheads will be put on the existing Minuteman missiles.

— Longer-range Trident missiles will be placed in submarines.

— The possibility of a replacement for the cancelled B-1 bomber will be explored.

— More rapid reinforcement of U.S. forces in Europe will be provided, and those forces strengthened.

— Mobility and readiness to deal with crises in other areas of the world will be increased.

The report contained little that was not previously known about the administration's military plans.

Brooks, Hollifield plan to vote against Gooding prison site

By DAVID MORRISSEY Times-News writer

BOISE — Two Magic Valley Legislators announced Wednesday they intend to vote against placing a women's prison in Gooding.

Rep. John Brooks, R-Gooding, and Rep. Gordon Hollifield, R-Jerome, told the Times-News they were "too many unanswered questions" about the financing needed for conversion of the former tuberculosis hospital into a prison for women inmates.

"I've kept a very open mind on this," Hollifield said. "But the more I see of this, the more I believe we're going to pull a lot of money into that thing, money we can't afford to lose. It might be more economical, in the long run, to keep the women at Cottonwood (at the North Idaho Correctional Institute)," Hollifield said.

Hollifield said he first thought he would be able to support placing the prison in Gooding, "but now I'm afraid we're going to waste a lot of money if we do that."

Brooks had similar comments, agreeing with Hollifield's assessment the Department of Corrections "wants too much money" for the project.

"I also wonder how big a bureaucracy we may be building," Brooks said. "This year they only want this much. But next year they'll want to expand. Get new buildings, maybe build a house for the director. In the long run this could be very expensive, much more so than originally anticipated," Brooks said.

The Gooding Republican said that a majority of the Gooding residents "don't want the prison," and added that the Idaho Regional Treatment and Training Center, an alcoholism treatment program now using part of the Gooding complex, "is supported by a lot of people in Gooding. They think it's doing a good job," Brooks said.

Survey shows teenagers know little of government

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Only a narrow majority of America's 13-year-olds believe newspapers and magazines should be allowed to publish material critical of elected officials, according to a government survey.

The finding was just one of many by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare financed study that showed teenagers have less interest in and knowledge about American government than teen-agers surveyed during the Vietnam war and before Watergate.

R. Freeman Butts, chairman of an advisory panel of the National Task Force on Citizenship Education, said the situation "needs prompt and drastic attention by the public and educators alike."

The majority of American college and non-college students "believe the American system is democratic in name only and that special interests run the political majority of the nation with little true participation by the mass of American citizens," write Frank Brown, director of the study.

The study compared responses from 145,000 teens questioned in the 1967-70 and 1971-72 school year to responses of 1,000 teen-agers questioned in 1975-76.

Knowledge about the operation of American government "underwent a sizeable decline" during the period, the survey said.

Teen-agers were asked if a newspaper or magazine should be allowed to publish something critical of an elected government official and were given three choices: yes, no and undecided.

Fifty-four percent of the 13-year-olds said yes, a slight improvement over the 49 percent who endorsed freedom of the press in 1972.

Support by 17-year-olds declined from 75 percent in 1972 to 67 percent in the latest survey.

The study was done by the National Assessment of Educational Progress, which conducts annual surveys in 10 subject areas.

Other knowledge of the American system deteriorated, too.

Recognition of constitutional rights declined slightly among those 13 and 17.

And there was considerable uncertainty about how presidential candidates are chosen, even though the survey was conducted during a presidential election year.

Only 55 percent of the students in 1976 correctly identified the state assembly as part of the legislative branch of government, a decline of 14 percent from 1975.

Slightly fewer teens believed liberals should have powers that speak against democracy.

Answers for persons of other incomes and races increased, however, as did concern for the rights of those accused of crime.

But the study found teen-agers more likely to be open-minded about people of other races if the encounter was at a distance.

Asked if they would be willing to have a person of another race live in their neighborhood, vote in elections or attend their church, more said yes on elections and churches than neighborhoods.

Anna Ochoa, president of the National Council for the Social Studies, said the declining knowledge of teens on government was "disappointing but not surprising."

"Social studies is receiving very low priority in the (school) curriculum and the attention rate of those courses is very high," she said.

Brutality probe opens today

By KEN HODGE Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — An agent for the U.S. Border Patrol Immigration and Naturalization Service arrived in Twin Falls today from St. Paul, Minn., to investigate alleged mistreatment of a Border Patrol prisoner near Castleford Tuesday morning.

Immigration and Naturalization Service Regional Commissioner Gordon Ruth of Minneapolis, Minn., reportedly dispatched Jim Hardin from St. Paul to Twin Falls to investigate allegations made by two Castleford farmers who said they witnessed a Border Patrol officer kick and slap his prisoner Tuesday morning.

Both Wayne Easterday and John Thomson of Castleford, reportedly they saw two Border Patrol officers in pursuit of Joe Leon, a Mexican alien reportedly employed by Roy Haley, a neighboring farmer.

The two said they did not witness the capture, but take his prisoner to the patrol car driven by a second officer.

As they watched, both men reported they saw the arresting officer repeatedly kick Leon with the toe of his boot as he herded the prisoner toward the patrol car.

Both witnesses said they saw the officer grab the prisoner by his hair, turn him around and slap him in the face.

The alleged brutality aroused the anger of local farmers, several of whom are considering steps they can take regarding the matter.

Haley, who employed Leon, says he plans to write a letter to the regional commissioner of the Border Patrol expressing his concern over the treatment of the young worker.

Haley says Leon had a social security number when he hired him and that was all he had to go on when hiring the man.

"If we are going to make it illegal to hire them then we have to know what to ask them to know if they are legal," Haley says. "I couldn't get men to do the type of work I want to have done, but we're real ticked to do it."

Verne Jervis, public information officer for the INS in Washington, D.C., said today Hardin is a disinterested third party who will make a "preliminary investigation" of the incident today in Twin Falls.

The Border Patrol is reportedly holding Leon in custody at the jail in Twin Falls. Hardin is a disinterested third party who will make a "preliminary investigation" of the incident today in Twin Falls.

Twin Falls Border Patrol officials have been ordered to make no comment. The names of the arresting officers are being withheld.

Jervis says incidents of mistreatment of prisoners occur "from time to time," but are not common.

He says administrative action will be taken if the allegations are true. If the incident included criminal charges, it will be referred to federal authorities.

Charles Floyd, Border Patrol intelligence officer in Boise, Minn., says, "That kind of conduct is not condoned, if the allegations are true."

"These allegations are very rare," Floyd says. "I don't recall any of them ever being sustained in the 16 years I have worked at the Havre office."

Leon could not be reached for comment, according to Border Patrol authorities. Border Patrol policy does not provide for allowing reporters to interview the prisoner before an investigation.

Evans to decide course on 8 mill repeal soon

BOISE (UPI) — Warning that the average homeowner would get only $2 in tax relief if the eight mill county school levy is repealed, Gov. John V. Evans said Wednesday he expects to make a decision on the measure by "Friday or Saturday morning."

Evans called the Idaho Legislature's approval last week of the property tax relief measure "legislation I wish they hadn't passed."

"The average homeowner of a $30,000 home will get only $2 of tax relief," under the provisions of the bill, he said.

Evans chastised the legislature for passing the repeal without public hearings.

"One of the basic mistakes the legislature made in passing this bill was in not allowing people of Idaho to speak out," Evans told a luncheon meeting of Ada County Democrats.

He said there were "no hearings at all" on what he called "probably the largest tax relief measure" in the history of the state.

The governor's office has been "calling all around the state seeking opinions" in what he said was his "only way of having a hearing." In the five days he has to act on the bill.

"Evans has five days from Tuesday to sign the bill, veto it or let it become law without his signature. There is a better way" of providing tax relief,

Evans said, adding that the bill passed by both houses "gives 40 percent back to big business," and leaves "homeowners to carry the burden."

Evans said tax relief should not go to big business stockholders who are being paid bigger and bigger dividends at the expense of the taxpayers of Idaho.

"He pointed out a shift of taxes from utilities to the homeowner" that has come to an increase of "200 to 300 percent" between 1964 and 1975.

The governor said that although he wants to see taxing on the basis of 10 percent for homes and farms, 20 percent for businesses and 30 percent for utilities he is "willing to compromise" with legislators who have proposed a 15-20-30 formula.

In further remarks, the governor went to bat again for his proposed domestic rural power authority which he said is "essential to get our share of Bonneville Power Administration power."

The board would allow Idaho to "negotiate for a block of power" for the entire state as opposed to the 30 percent of the state which is now served by BPA.

"Of the total power we produce in seven dams in the system only 40 percent is used by Idahoans," Evans said.

He added that he feels that working with the new BPA administration Idaho will be able to get our share of 100 percent power.

Hansen hopeful about Bolivia agreement

BOISE (UPI) — Representative George Hansen reacted with cautious optimism Wednesday upon hearing the news that a prisoner exchange agreement with Bolivia is expected to be signed this week.

Hansen has been an active participant in attempts to free Americans incarcerated in Bolivian prisons, including Tom McGinnis of Idaho Falls.

When reached in a telephone interview with United Press International from New York, Hansen said, "This is something I have been working toward for a long time and it is finally coming to fruition. Bolivia is a prime example of where it should be done."

News of the expected agreement came out of the Bolivian Foreign Ministry. The agreement, similar to one recently concluded by the United States and Mexico, would allow the approximately 30 U.S. citizens in Bolivian prisons on drug charges to complete their sentences in the United States.

Bolivian citizens in prison in the U.S. also would be allowed to return in Bolivia to serve out their terms. U.S. diplomats in Bolivia have made no estimate of the number of Bolivians in American prisons.

Hansen said he is hopeful to those guilty enough that affect those persons who have completed the court process. "That's the way I understood it," he said. "It would mean, unless they change signs, Tom McGinnis or any of the others would be eligible to participate when their court process is completed."

McGinnis, who has been in Bolivian prisons for nearly two years, was found guilty by a lower court of drug involvement and was sentenced to two years in prison. He still faces review by the Bolivian Superior Court.

But the Hansen served 20 months and could be eligible for parole immediately.

"It's helpful to those guilty enough that they got long sentences," Hansen said. "But for persons convicted of minor offenses and serving little prison time, such an interchange would not be helpful."

McGinnis' mother, Vera, said by telephone from her home in Idaho Falls such an exchange would be "really great" for future prisoners, but not for her son.

"I certainly think it is something that is needed," she said. "But I feel badly that it's not going to something for our boy."

"I would say it would help other people and that it has come about through the work of other people, namely the parents of prisoners who were incarcerated up until Christmastime. It's a small step but it's really great."

Mixed reaction to Carter canal pact chat

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Backers of the Panama Canal treaties hailed President Carter's televised fireside chat as an aid in educating the American people on agreements negotiated behind closed doors for 14 years.

Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., said the president should have leveled with the American people instead.

None of the senators interviewed said the president's 25-minute speech had changed his mind. Senate debate begins next week on the agreements to cede control of the canal in 2000 and to provide U.S. defense rights.

Carter's "owkey" speech, delivered from a arm chair beside a crackling fire, blended appeals to patriotism, common sense and the threat of another jungle war if the agreements were not ratified.

"I have heard many fireside chats by many presidents but I have never listened to one so completely filled with distortions, lack of honesty and lack of candor as the one I listened to tonight," said Goldwater, an opponent of the canal agreements that have won endorsement from a wide spectrum of political leaders angling from Gerald Ford to Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass.

"I don't know why President Carter can't level with the American people and tell them the truth about the defense of the Panama Canal and how many taxpayers' dollars these treaties would cost them."

Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd called the speech "an important and necessary step toward easing the concerns of the American people."

"When the facts are placed on the table such as they were tonight there can't help but be a shifting of sentiment in favor of the treaties," the West Virginian said. "I commend the president for doing a good job in furthering the public's education of a very significant foreign policy issue of our lives.

A group of 15 senators were invited by the president to the White House Wednesday to watch the speech from the family library and to be available to reporters after the speech. Their reaction was almost uniformly in support of the president.

Senate Foreign Relations Committee Chairman John Sparkman, D-Ala., called the president's second fireside chat "his best speech."

"I think he did a lot of good toward" enlisting public support for ratification, Sparkman said.

Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., called it "a very good speech, it marshaled the arguments and set a proper note."

"I believe the chances are much better than ever the treaties will be approved by the Senate," Javits said.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., said he had called about the agreements, said he wants answers to some legal and financial questions before making a final decision.

But the speech, Nunn said, "was a plus."

"These treaties are an act of justice 'long overdue' by the president," Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt. More people in Vermont "are shifting in favor" of the treaties.

Sen. William Hathaway, D-Del., said he thought it was "a good presentation... a soft sell. I believe it will be reflected in the final outcome."

Sen. William Fulbright, D-Ark., said "our national interest is to secure continued use of the Panama Canal... and the best way to do that is to cede it back to Panama."

Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., said "I think the president did an excellent job. I just hope it receives approval."

Fresh storm sweeps East

By United Press International

A snowstorm spread today from the Ohio Valley to the middle Atlantic Seaboard, plugging highways and closing hundreds of schools, and nasty winter weather plagued most of the nation on Groundhog Day.

The National Weather Service ventured the assumption that "the groundhog probably did not see his shadow." But the whirling of two well-known groundhogs — Punxsutawney (Pa.) Phil and Sn Prairie (Wis.) Jimmy — reported their furry prognosticators did indeed see their shadows.

That, tradition has it, forebodes six more weeks of winter.

Up to 6 inches of snow fell in the Appalachians of southwest Virginia and higher snows spread across much of Virginia, North Carolina and Tennessee. A 1-inch snowfall whitened Colonial Williamsburg.

Hundreds of fender-bender accidents crippled traffic on Virginia highways. An estimated 20 vehicles were involved in one chain-reaction pileup at Richmond, and traffic came to a mid-morning halt on Interstate 66 near Richmond.

North Carolina state employees were given until 10 a.m. to report to their jobs in Raleigh. Hundreds of schools in Tennessee, North Carolina and Virginia called off classes.

The storm moved into the East from the Midwest, where at least 3 inches of new snow blanketed Chicago, slowing workers' efforts to clear side streets still bogged by snow from last week's blizzard. Tunneling unsealed expressways into slippery messes. The city is running short of salt.

South of the Midwestern and Eastern snow belt, rain and drizzle spread across the Gulf states to the Atlantic Coast. Heavy fog blanketed much of the South and Southeast.

Bitterly cold temperatures followed the storm system into northern and central Plains, mid-Mississippi Valley and western Great Lakes regions. Below-zero readings were reported as far south as Kansas, and it was 34 below at International Falls, Minn.

In the West, 4 inches of snow fell on Wenatchee, Wash., and 2 inches on Spokane. Up to a half inch of rain fell on portions of Northern California.

Along the Ohio River, an enormous ice gorge — 2½ miles long and up to 20 feet thick — jammed against the face of the Markland Dam at Warsaw, Ky., blocking critical barge traffic. Demolition experts failed to break the gorge Tuesday and planned to try again today.

"If the explosives don't work for us, we will probably have to rely on Mother Nature to clear the river for us," said Col. Thomas Nicks, district engineer for the Army Corps of Engineers.

Logansport, Ind., Mayor Gene Minahan Wednesday declared a state of emergency, saying the eight-week-old coal strike exhausted the city's coal supply. He said the city has a two-week supply of coal, but it is water-logged; it will not burn.

B-1 fight goes on

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The battle to kill the B-1 bomber program — already scrapped by President Carter — continues in Congress with the Senate at odds with the House.

The Senate already an attempt Wednesday to build two more B-1 bombers and keep the costly program alive for possible continuation in the 1980s.

But the $8-37 vote to cancel $462 million in leftover production money left the Senate and the House in disagreement.

The Senate action followed an appeal by Democratic leader Robert Byrd, of West Virginia, who asked for continuation of the Senate position to fund the plane's production.

"We have already spent $3.7 billion on the B-1," said Byrd. "That is $3.70 for every minute since Jesus Christ was born... That ain't chicken feed."

The disagreement between the Senate and House remains to be resolved by either a House-Senate conference committee or a vote by the full House.

House leaders were considering a vote as early as next week, but no immediate decision was made.

Poisoned oranges spread

By United Press International
 Holland and West Germany announced today they had found poisoned Spanish oranges in addition to the Israeli oranges spiked with mercury and eaten by at least five children.

West German authorities speculated that Arab terrorists had tampered with shipments coming from Spain, mistaking them for the Israeli products.

They said the tainted Spanish fruit was found in the Stuttgart area one day after Israeli oranges injected with mercury — the metal inside thermometers — turned up near Frankfurt.

In Maastricht, Holland; health officials also reported the discovery of a mercury-injected Spanish orange purchased in a supermarket at nearby Kerkrade

Wednesday
 The Dutch Health Ministry in The Hague confirmed that not only Israeli orange consignments but also Spanish shipments are now being checked.

The ministry sent a circular giving specifications on treatment of mercury poisoning to all Dutch hospitals.

"The appearance of poisoned Spanish oranges makes it appear highly probable that the Israeli oranges were tampered with in Europe and not in Israel," a spokesman for the West German Health Ministry in Bonn said.

The spokesman said it is likely the same people who poisoned the Israeli product also poisoned the Spanish fruit in the belief it came from Israel.

Shoppers found the poisoned Spanish oranges in the town of Heidenheim near Stuttgart, he said, but did not eat them.

The spokesman said no ban on the sale of oranges has been issued, but consumers have been warned to examine oranges carefully before eating them. Many shops stopped selling the fruit, however.

In Tel Aviv, government officials said the appearance of the tainted oranges was bound to harm Israel's export industry even though the sabotage was an "isolated case."

Zvi Kenan of the Citrus Marketing Board said his telephone rang nonstop with calls from European officials and he had to repeat that only 24 spiked oranges were found in Holland and West Germany out of the 200 million sent abroad every year.

Strike end near?

By United Press International
 An Ohio official of the United Mine Workers Wednesday became the second district president this week to claim he has received a telegram informing him that the end of the strike against the soft coal industry is near.

John Guzek, president of UMW District 6 in Ohio, said he received a telegram telling him to be ready to go to Washington at any moment — to be on 24-hour notice.

"Settlement of the strike is apparently near or they wouldn't send a telegram like that," he said.

Earlier this week, Val Scarton, president of UMW District 2 in Pennsylvania, said he had been contacted by union leaders who told him the strike would be settled by the end of this week.

Adding further optimism that the conflict which has staggered coal supplies, and caused massive electrical cutbacks throughout Appalachia since Dec. 6 is drawing to a close, an unidentified industry source disclosed Wednesday the strike "will be over within a week."

Benzene exposure cutback ordered

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Labor Department, over strong objections from the petroleum industry, today ordered a reduction of worker exposure to benzene — blamed for causing leukemia.

The order by the department's Occupational Safety and Health Administration is scheduled to take effect March 12, although industry officials already have indicated they will ask the courts to overrule it.

A temporary benzene order issued last May by the agency never went into effect because of legal action by the petroleum industry, which is a major employer of the estimated 600,000 workers affected by the order.

The order limits permissible worker exposure to benzene by 50 percent to one part per million over eight hours, with a ceiling of five parts per million during a 15-minute period.

Eye or repeated skin contact is prohibited entirely.

OSHA chief Eula Bingham described this as the "lowest feasible level," a criteria the agency uses for all believed carcinogens. Industry officials also have challenged this criteria.

Ms. Bingham said the order was based on a conclusion from available scientific evidence that "employee exposure to benzene presents a cancer danger — specifically, the hazard of developing leukemia."

Supporting her conclusion was a study conducted among workers at a Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company in Ohio.

The new rule does not apply to the sale and distribution of gasoline for fuel after it leaves bulk terminals. But it does affect most industries, including maritime and construction.

Benzene is a clear, highly flammable liquid used primarily in the production of organic chemicals that serve as intermediates in the manufacture of plastics, resins, disinfectants and pharmaceuticals.

"It also is used to make detergents, pesticides, solvents and paint removers. Motor fuels contain about 2 percent benzene.

Third bomb jars Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — A bomb exploded in downtown Beirut for the third time in as many days, raising political tensions in Lebanon to their highest point since the end of the Muslim-Christian civil war in 1976.

Police said the bomb was planted in a building that had already been destroyed by fighting during the war and caused no injuries.

The blast, however, sowed panic and sent screaming civilians running through the downtown area away from the blast scene.

Today's bombing followed explosions Tuesday and Wednesday in the downtown area and marked the eighth explosion in the Beirut region in the past 48 hours.

At least nine people died in Wednesday's violence — terrorist attacks and border fighting — and political recriminations added to the general unrest in the country.

Hunt pushed for hot can

NEWARK, Ohio (UPI) — Federal, state and local authorities in "hot" and seven other counties are scouring their interstates and state roads for a four-pound, five by two inch stainless steel cylinder of extremely radioactive material.

The cylinder, containing a mixture of americium and beryllium, was discovered missing from a truck operated by Shelwell Services of Detroit Wednesday night.

But, authorities said, it could have been stolen or lost as far back as Jan. 25.

That was the last time the cylinder, which is part of a long-life test cell for a reactor, was seen. Workers reported loading the container into a box on the truck near Roseville in Perry County.

Carter: the end of innocence

Member of Audit Bureau of Circulation and UPI Official City and County Newspaper pursuant to Section 60-108 Idaho Code...

By HEDRICK SMITH
© 1978 N.Y. TIMES SERVICE
WASHINGTON — Perhaps the most talltale words uttered by President Carter during his recent outpouring of messages to Congress and the public was the simple, almost unnoticed, phrase: "We were in Washington..."

In an instant, I confirmed the end of innocence and symbolized the new realism of the cautious outsider who once had promised to turn the bloated government inside out. It signified that he now reckoned his public standing would depend on trading some of his anti-Washington reputation for that of a leader who can operate effectively on the Washington scene.

For Jimmy Carter this is a critical gamble since the magic of his campaign was spun in the gossamer promise that he would break away from "politics as usual." He would balance the budget, reform the welfare system, cut defense spending, overhaul the income tax system, put a lid on rising hospital costs, reach out to rescue the cities, and produce electoral reforms and a "nationwide comprehensive health program."

such as Gerald R. Ford does, but he puts fiscal limits on those instincts...
To some it may seem astonishing that the federal budget will reach $300 billion in 1979, but allowing for inflation, it would have hit $192 billion even if Carter had left things untouched. Everywhere, there are signs of his retrenchment. With the $25 billion tax cut, out went the promise of a balanced budget in 1981. Defense spending went up, not down. Tax reform was watered down, and the urban program will come later, followed much later by the pro-forma gesture of submitting some form of national health program.

If there was a keynote in his State of the Union Address, it was in Carter's philosophizing about the limits of government, a campaign theme almost forgotten in the rush of his freshman-year activism. "Government cannot solve our problems," he cautioned. "Government cannot eliminate poverty, or provide a bountiful economy, or reduce inflation, or save our cities, or cure illiteracy, or provide energy."

Brooks should pocket right-to-work bill

Rep. John Brooks, a Gooding Republican, would do everyone a favor if he would keep his right-to-work bill in his pocket during this go-round of the Idaho Legislature.

So far, the 1978 Idaho Legislature has been pleasantly free of the type of emotional "non-issues" that have often ended up dominating valuable legislative working time in past sessions. In past years, there has been roughly one of these items each session. A couple of years ago, it was the Equal Rights Amendment; should the state rescind its ratification of the ERA; should the state adopt an ERA for its own constitution; and raging debates about whether it would force little boys and little girls to use the same bathrooms in public schools.

Last year, it was right-to-work — literally hours of debate spent with both sides bombarding anyone who would listen with facts and figures that supported their particular stand.

These are the type issues which do have their significance, and which deserve a fair hearing by the lawmakers if enough citizens express their concern. But they are hardly life-and-death issues, and their significance pales in comparison with issues like taxes, dealing with Idaho's water resources or making decisions regarding the state's energy future.

The trouble with the ERA and the right-to-work bill is that they literally dominated the legislative sessions in which they were dealt with. They took valuable time, concentration and effort from the much more vital issues that the legislature was also trying to consider.

Prior to the current legislative session everyone thought right-to-work would be a dominate issue. It hasn't worked out that way. There are no signs of lobbyists on one side of the issue or the other scurrying around Boise.

No one has seemed so pressed by the demands of the state citizenship in this election year to do much talking about the bill.

Except, that is, for Brooks. He is still apparently considering introduction of the issue before the session is over.

What's the rush? This legislature has already considered it, during its 1977 session — and rejected it. Next year, a new legislature will be seated, and perhaps reconsideration might be justified.

But this year, all the taxation measures being introduced need the full attention of the legislators. The state water plan needs to be carefully heard and studied. The perplexing environmental-economic issue of a coal-fired plant needs complete consideration.

Right-to-work had its hearing last year. Let's keep this year's session of the legislature from getting any more cluttered than it already is.

Webster right man for troubled FBI

The Carter administration's recommendation for the job of FBI director, William H. Webster, seems to be the type of man that troubled agency needs right now.

He has a reputation of concern for individual rights and a moderate approach to law-and-order issues. He seems to be a man with a strong moralistic code which has guided him during a distinguished judicial career. He is a 53-year-old Republican and is currently Federal appeals court judge in St. Louis.

Recent revelations of J. Edgar Hoover's heavy-handed control of the organization, allowing the ends of his enforcement programs to justify means which often disregarded individual rights, have tarnished the image of the FBI in the minds of many Americans.

The use of the FBI by presidents and other public officials for political purposes, as in the Watergate episode, has also hurt the agency.

The FBI performs a vital role in the protection of this country. It must be restored to its position of credibility and honor in the minds of the American public if it is to be most effective in its enforcement role.

Most of all, the FBI and all other enforcement agencies must have a reverence for the protection of human rights.

Naming a man FBI director who believes that solutions to tough problems are not found in the oppression of ideas, seems to be a step in the right direction.

VIEWPOINT

"They're all over, but you'll get used to it."

protection politics of Washington and Pennsylvania, a state that figured so prominently in his election. The Carter administration has looked as inept and as partisan as its predecessors, despite promises of new moral leadership. More happily for the president, he made peace with his party last week at a Democratic National Committee meeting. It led one committee member to remark: "The outsider has finally come home."

Not surprisingly, his Jeffersonian neo-conservatism sits poorly with the Roosevelt-Truman Democrats. There are rumblings of disillusionment within the liberal-labor-black constituency that formed the backbone of his election majority and from liberals who have been his most consistent supporters on Capitol Hill. No less a figure than House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. grouched that the Carter budget gave too much for defense and not enough for jobs. Mayors, black leaders and some pro-labor congressmen are unhappy that the president did not step up the public service jobs program or are worried that his urban package will be too skimpy.

On tax reform, O'Neill warned that in an election year the president will do well to get half of his modest proposals passed because no one in Congress wants to alienate voters by plugging tax loopholes too energetically. Republicans contended that the tax cuts are not big enough and tilt against the middle class. Another wary reaction came from the business community to the projected $60-billion budget deficit.

But overall, the president seems likely to gain politically by curbing his ambitions. Tax cuts are popular and so is his theme of holding the growth of the federal bureaucracy. More important, by setting narrow priorities, he may find a way to repair his battered image as a leader. For what he needs most now is one big victory, and by concentrating in the next few weeks on a few issues — final passage of an energy package, winning ratification of the Panama Canal treaties, pushing through his tax cut — he may just get that victory.

This is a far cry from the charisma of the campaign. But perhaps the president is correct in concluding that the public is less available for judgment mainly by his campaign promises than by his performance. He has bet that the state of the economy will be the primary concern of voters. But the less-is-better philosophy is abroad in the land, and voters seem to take it for granted that politicians won't deliver on many promises.

Inspiring thoughts provided for youth

CHICAGO — I have been asked to help inspire confidence, hope, persistence and subsequent success in young people. This request came from an organization called Motivation Research of Waco, Tex. It said I should answer a lengthy questionnaire. My answers will be used to inspire young people.

Why me? That was my first question, too. The director of Motivation Research wrote: "You were chosen because of your... strength character and your potential for inspiring others."

That shows how far it is from Chicago to Waco. However, I'm always glad to inspire youth. Until now, my limited my efforts to setting my dog after them when they hang out in front of the house. This inspires them to scream and run, which I enjoy seeing them do, because I keep them fit and healthy. Especially if they can outrun the dogs.

But if I can do even more by answering the questionnaire, I will, and I'm sharing some of the questions and answers with young readers in hopes that they, too, might be helped.

1. Past awards and notable achievements that are most meaningful to you. My most meaningful achievement occurred two years ago when I had the honor to be named a 1976 recipient sponsored by a Chicago alderman, which is every Chicago lad's dream. More recently, a racehorse was named after me. I am looking toward the day when the horse has had a great career and is put out to stud. It will be a memorable ending.

2. What are your hobbies? Like many other people, I collect beer cans. I collect them six at a time. When I have emptied them, I throw them out in the backyard, lie down on the couch, belch, and fall into a deep sleep. It is a very restful hobby.

3. What is your favorite music? It's a song called "I've Got a Girl Friend, Her Name is Mary" polka. It goes like this: "I've got a girlfriend, her name is Mary, every time I see her, (censored, censored, censored)." The last part is an aging generation's recollection. Jackie Wilson had become a piece of marginally marketable nostalgia. He did it to make a living.

4. What was it on the night of Sept. 29, 1975, while performing as part of an Oldies show at a New Jersey nightclub called the Latin Casino that he came out of it he was the paralyzed victim of severe brain damage.

He is not much better today. His official guardian is a court-appointed attorney, the second such guardian he has had; the first attorney, who had never heard of Jackie Wilson, asked to be relieved of the duty because it was

I've made up more than 2,000 versions. I hope to reach 4,000 before my voice gives out. Incidentally, for a media feast, I'm available for weddings, anniversary parties and other gala events.

4. Your favorite book? That's easy. My favorite book is Glassey Eddie, who works behind the counter of a cigar store on Milwaukee Ave., and gives the best point spreads on football games in the whole city. However, he won't take bets from children, so I don't see the relevance of this question.

5. Who were your childhood idols? My biggest idol was President Roosevelt. Because of his example, at the age of 7 I began using a cigarette holder when I smoked.

6. Which people do you admire most now? I admire Richard Burton, Billy Carter, Dean Martin and Frank Sinatra and love to be just like them when I grow up.

7. What are your likes? I like many things — eating twinkies, fishing for bullheads, walking the wrong way on escalators, boogie Bobby Douglas, and going to City Council meetings. I believe in living a full, rich life.

8. What are some of your dislikes? I dislike all TV weathermen, Howard Cosell's green hairpiece, leisure suits, Bob Dylan's adonies, Cher's dippy looking husband, all rock music critics, people who like little children answer the telephone, and anybody who hums or whistles the tune of a commercial. If capital punishment would be expanded to cover the above offenses, I would be in favor of it. But it won't because this country has gone soft.

9. What experiences have had an impact on your life? The single most significant event in my life was my birth, when an adobe-brained nurse put the wrong name (Lyn) on my little wrist and put my name tag on the wrist of another newborn baby. Thus we were accidentally switched. That other baby grew up to be Robert Redford. Do you realize what that means? It means I am really Robert Redford, and he is really me. But he won't admit it. I don't care, really, because he's short.

10. Please share any quotations, maxims or poems which have been meaningful to you. Well, there's one I like that goes: "There once was a girl from Nantucket..." But maybe you'd better phone me, and I'll read the rest of it to you.

11. What is your philosophy of life? The longer the better.

12. If you were asked by a young person (16 to 21) for advice on living successfully, what would you say? I would say that you will have a better chance of living successfully if you don't play your portable record player in my presence, because if you do, I will crack you on the head with it.

Teardrops' real now for Jackie Wilson

CHICAGO — Oh, he was something to see. He would come bounding onto a stage, and within seconds he would be the auditorium. He would sing his million-selling hits "Lonely Teardrops," "To Be Loved," "Higher and Higher," and "Stoney" the way he did on the stage, slide forward on his legs as if he had ball bearings where his knees should be, and the women would scream, the crowd would charge toward the front of the arena, and Jackie Wilson would know once again what it is to be a star.

million records during the 1950s and early 1960s; last June 9, on his 43rd birthday, he received six cards. His home is the Medford Leas Convalescent Center in Medford, N.J. — it is the ninth institution he has been confined to during the past two years. It is uncertain how much, if anything, he understands about what has happened to him. The Internal Revenue Service is suing him for $24,000 in back taxes. "Two women are fighting over his estate, each claiming to be his wife. His old records are seldom found in the streets.

Wilson came out of Detroit in the early '50s and became a national idol while still a teenager. He was one of the first blacks to cash in on the rock and roll craze; he combined the sounds of rhythm and blues music with theatrics of rock. He lived fast. There were Cadillac convertibles and easy women and cocaine whenever he wanted it, which was often. He toured the country in an endless series of one-night stands, and if his record company and personal manager were cheating him — as is now charged by some — it was no problem for Jackie Wilson at the time. Being a rock and roll star in the 1950s was quite enough for a poor boy who a few years earlier could only dream that his voice would bring him all this. Who could blame him if he believed that it would never go away?

It did, of course. He had a good string of hits, more than most singers ever had, but then came the Beatles and the other new groups, and suddenly it was the middle of a new decade; the 1960s, and Wilson was finding that he was not a star anymore. The audiences wouldn't come; the records wouldn't sell. He tried to make it on his own for a while; but he eventually realized that if he was going to make a living at all, it would have to be as part of an act. "Oldies From Goodies" (two package designed to profit from America's collective memories of him and a show of other middle-aged men who used to be kid stars. He was not so much a singer as a catalyst for an aging generation's recollections. Jackie Wilson had become a piece of marginally marketable nostalgia. He did it to make a living.

He was doing it on the night of Sept. 29, 1975, while performing as part of an Oldies show at a New Jersey nightclub called the Latin Casino that he came out of it he was the paralyzed victim of severe brain damage.

He is not much better today. His official guardian is a court-appointed attorney, the second such guardian he has had; the first attorney, who had never heard of Jackie Wilson, asked to be relieved of the duty because it was taking too much of his time. Wilson has one friend, Mrs. Joyce McEae, who has moved to New Jersey to be near him. Mrs. McEae visits him every day, she talks softly to him, reads to him, holds his hands; she is convinced that he understands some doctors disagree.

"I can't talk to him any more," Mrs. McEae said. "He is stagnating. He is kept in a room with the lights off and the curtains drawn. He is allowed to sleep the day away. His speech therapy has been cut off. I believe that, with the proper care, he would be able to walk again some day, to feed himself again some day, to be human again some day. But the people in charge of him disagree. If something isn't done, it looks as if he'll be allowed to remain in his current state until he dies one day."

Mrs. McEae was bitter at one time about the lack of response toward Wilson by the millions of fans who once bought his records and attended his concerts. But now she is resigned to the reason why. "Most people think Jackie Wilson is dead," she said. "His face is contorted, and he is locked in his grotesque position, but he lives. And every day, Mrs. McEae brings a tape recorder with her to the convalescent center, and plays Jackie Wilson a tape of his old records. She looks at him while the strains of "Lonely Teardrops" come out of the tape recorder's speaker. "He can still cry," she said.

Editorial on land-use meeting refuted

Editor, Times-News:

This letter is in response to an editorial written January 16, entitled "Shedding No Tears for Land Use Foes." This letter has a three-fold purpose: to set the record straight about the recent land use public hearing; to ask you something, and to make a request of the people who attended that meeting.

First, regarding the meeting: I am sure that you know the truth. By example I will say it this way: The meeting was held on the 16th of January at the meeting. She was for the plan — I was against certain parts of it. She spoke ten times better than I did. Yet, I got a much better round of applause than she did. The applause was not for her personality, nor for her personality. The applause was for the particular position she held regarding the plan.

Whenever ANYONE spoke against the plan, the applause was loud and three times heavier for that person, than for those who spoke for the plan. It was completely obvious that the majority in the room were against the plan in its present state.

Yet your editor would have the general public believe that this county suddenly supported the Comprehensive Plan. It is not true, and the County Commissioners know it. But for those who have the people of this county believe that the Property Owners "stacked" the meetings hold last year regarding the comprehensive plan. Yet, the truth is we were not even present.

After all the meetings were held: The protest at these meetings was spontaneous and came in at random from all corners of the county. It was only after the meetings that we centralized our efforts into the Property Owners Association. Your editor has a warm's eye view of Comprehensive Land Use Planning and the Property Owners position regarding this subject.

Last summer he called me and conducted a 20 minute interview about our position on Land Use Planning. We talked about many things. Yet, when I read the resultant editorial I was quite surprised. I spoke as simply as I could to him — yet he so misunderstood and misconstrued everything I said, that I thought perhaps my conversation with him was in fact — a dream. It was quite revealing to me about his method of journalism. I gained some valuable insight into his intentions — it was quite amazing.

(2) And now — my question to you. In the interest of fairness reporting in the interest of balanced journalism — why don't you give me a bi-weekly guest editorial column in your paper? Give me just two paragraphs to his side. I will only need two to his six because I will simply drop the truth. In every subject in the world, there are merits to both sides. There is something positive and good in everything — yet your editor rarely, if ever, sees the positive aspect of both sides of an issue. I have rarely seen his sense of fair play evidence anywhere. So, why don't you let your editor and I have a little "one-on-one" with the pen? And I don't mean him writing an editorial from his perch and me writing an answer from his droppings on the ground. I mean us both having the same point of beginning — from the Almighty Editorial. There won't be a subject that he can write about, that I can't also write about and present an entirely different viewpoint based on facts. I would like to see the merits of any subject pointed out — on both sides — and then let the public draw their own conclusions. Think about it, Mr. Howard — it could be kind of interesting.

(3) Now my third purpose for writing this letter: It is simply to ask those who attended that meeting to write a letter to this paper telling what you observed. Even if you have never written a letter before — now is the time. Just write in one simple observation: Could you tell by the applause — by the feelings and response in the room — how many were for and how many were against the plan in its present form? Were the majority in the room, for or against, the plan? Was it half and half? My own prejudices against certain parts of the plan would have deceived my hearing ability — so what did you think?

Finally for the 100th time — the Property Owners Association is for — and hopes for — good, responsible planning for our county. We have been telling the county commissioners about an alternative plan all year, the details with which we presented our agricultural land and in farmers, but it protects the basic right to own and control private property; it protects the private property owner from junk yards and gas stations moving next door to him — we think it is the answer. We also invite constructive criticism regarding our plan. So, if the League of Women's Voters, the Twin Falls Soil Conservation District, the Cattlemen's Association and the Farm Bureau would like to tell us what they think — we will send them a copy. Also, I have a question for them: Why don't you simply suspend your present support for the County Comprehensive Plan just until you read ours? In the sense of open, fair mindedness — why don't you read ours before you support their plan? You know as well as we do that your organizations are fairly split over the County Comprehensive Plan in its present state — why don't you give us a chance before you go any further? Read it and tell us where you think we are wrong and right. At least see two sides of this issue — see two plans — before you support one plan. Isn't that fair?

Protect children, adults against Rabies

Editor, Times-News:

This year Governor Evans is urging the Legislature to pass a law requiring that all school age children be inoculated against serious childhood diseases. It would also be appropriate at this time to enact a law to protect children and adults against another very serious disease, that of Rabies.

The Center for Disease Control estimates that one in 200 persons will be bitten by a dog this year, and the American Veterinary Medical Association states that each year more than 30,000 American dogs undergo anti-rabies treatment as a result of exposure to potentially rabid animals. Although there have been no reported cases of rabies in domestic animals in Idaho for several years, our local Veterinary Medical Association states that each year more than 30,000 Americans must undergo anti-rabies treatment as a result of exposure to potentially rabid animals. Although there have been no reported cases of rabies in domestic animals in Idaho for several years, our local Veterinary Association informs us that the neighboring states of Utah and Montana had several cases of rabies in domestic animals during the past year and the problem seems to be spreading in those areas. The reservoir of rabies virus in bats, skunks and foxes cannot be discounted as illustrated by the numerous cases of rabid bats in Idaho and the incidence of rabies in skunks in the states of Montana and Wyoming.

Considering the growth in Idaho's population, the mobility of people and their pets and the natural migration of wildlife across state borders, it is only a matter of time before Idaho faces the possibility of a rabies problem in domestic animals.

The largest number of dog bite cases seem to involve children. If the dog has not been vaccinated against rabies, parents must face the traumatic decision to either begin the lengthy and painful anti-rabies treatment or to wait in hoping the dog does not prove rabid. This dilemma need not be faced if every dog were required to be inoculated against rabies.

Rabies in domestic animals can be controlled by inoculation. Unfortunately many pet owners do not voluntarily immunize their pets against rabies because there is no state law requiring them to do so. For this reason many states have found it necessary to enact mandatory rabies vaccination legislation. The Idaho Capital City Kennel Club strongly supports enactment of a state law requiring that all dogs over the age of six months be inoculated against rabies with re-vaccination every two years thereafter, or as prescribed by a licensed veterinarian. Additional support for such legislation has been received from the Child-Idaho Bureau of Child Health, the Idaho Humane Society, and several Veterinary Associations.

We urge all concerned citizens to contact their legislators in support of mandatory rabies vaccination law.

Wanted, info on hit run

Editor, Times-News:

As a concerned and heart sick citizen will the nice people who heard my wife's screams and pressed her up the street after she was so brutally run down by persons unknown early Sunday morning please come forward and let me know the location of this accident?

My wife is a Korean immigrant, unable to give the location of this inhuman incident and speaks very little English. For some unknown reason, the police department has no record of the location of where they picked my wife up before delivering her to the emergency ward of the Mayo Valley Hospital.

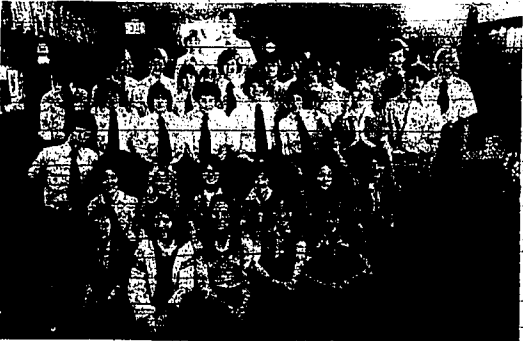

The people who ran into my wife, stopped, looked back, and then stepped on the gas leaving her screaming in the street. As nearly as I have been to learn from my wife, it was a pickup truck with two young children in the seat. Due to darkness and much pain, my wife is unable to give the police the color or license number of the vehicle. Once again, will the nice people who heard — my wife's screams please come forward and help the police department locate these would-be killers?

I'm home evenings.

OGDEN, Utah (UPI) — The justice Department won another round Wednesday in its efforts to stop used car odometer cheaters when Federal Judge Aldon Anderson denied a motion for a new trial for an Ogden man.

Steven Tippetts, convicted last December on 10 counts of selling used cars which he knew had had their odometer readings turned back, asked the judge to dismiss the verdict and order a new trial because one of the 12 jurors was sleeping during part of his original trial.

But Anderson agreed with Assistant U.S. Attorney James McConkie that the man had fallen asleep at a time that could have been detrimental to the prosecution, not to the defense. The judge also dismissed Tippetts' motion that six of the 10 counts be dropped due to lack of evidence.

The judge set Feb. 14 for sentencing for the owner of Boulevard Auto Sales in Ogden. Tippetts faces a maximum sentence of 10 years in a federal prison and a maximum fine of $500,000.

But, in an earlier stipular case, Anderson sentenced another Ogden used car dealer to a two-year jail sentence and ordered him to pay a $2,000 fine. The judge then suspended all by 60 days of the sentence. In that case the dealer had pleaded guilty to four counts of violating federal odometer statutes.

McConkie said the case proved that documentary evidence can be used to "nail chisling used car dealers. We just have to prove that he knew what the original mileage was when he sold the car."

The conviction was the first ever in the nation under the 1976 federal law.

Three other used car dealers, two from Ogden and one from Boise, have been charged with buying cars at California auto auctions, bringing them across state lines where the odometers were turned back anywhere from 20,000 to 60,000 miles, and then selling the vehicles to other dealers.

Laurie may never know about baby

AMARILLO, Texas (UPI) — Laurie Goforth, 18, may never realize she is the mother of a baby girl.

Mrs. Goforth, who has been in a coma since mid-December, gave birth to the child Jan. 8. It was a normal birth and her 21-year-old husband now cares for the baby, Susan Michelle.

But his wife may never know of the birth.

Mrs. Goforth suffered a cardiac arrest at the couple's Berger, Texas, home Dec. 17. She was transferred to an Amarillo hospital and has not regained consciousness.

"We do know Laurie is hearing voices and noises," said Mrs. Al Butcher, her mother. "When you drop something or cough, she'll jump. She hadn't been doing that before."

"She'll follow with her eyes voices from one side of the bed to another," she said.

Mrs. Butcher said her daughter has been taken off a respirator, but still receives oxygen occasionally. Her medical bills are estimated at $50 per day.

Her husband's attorney said Wednesday a Texas insurance company has denied its major medical coverage applies to Mrs. Goforth.

George Snell said he was notified by American National Insurance Co. of Galveston the company was denying Goforth's application, filed five days before his wife lapsed into a coma.

Snell, who is representing Goforth, said the couple made an application for major medical coverage Dec. 12 and received a conditional receipt from the company for payment of the first month's premium.

But Snell said he was informed by Jim Mintoar, senior vice-president of the company, the firm decided Jan. 26 not to issue the health policy. The company said it wrote a letter to Goforth informing him of the decision.

"But Ricky did not know for sure they had refused to issue the policy until I told him," said Snell.

Snell said he is looking into the reasons the policy was denied and is considering legal action. Goforth has taken a job in an aerosol plant in Amarillo to be closer to his wife.

The Goforths met at a Berger roller skating rink and dated about five years before their marriage in 1977. She suffered the heart attack that sent her into a coma shortly before Christmas.

"We was at home. We just got through eating a chicken pot pie. We were filling out Christmas cards and had just bought a new color TV that day," said Goforth.

"All she said was, 'Oh no,' and she collapsed in my lap. It scared me," he said.

Groundhog Phil waits out cold snap in warm cage

PUNXSUTAWNEY, Pa. (UPI) — It's true. Punxsutawney Phil cheats.

While everyone waited for the world's most famous groundhog to poke his nose from a burrow on Gobbler's Knob and make his annual prediction about the weather, Phil was waiting out the latest cold snap in a clean, warm, well-lit cage.

Today is groundhog day — the day Phil looks for his shadow. Legend has it that if Phil sees his shadow, we'll be hit with six more weeks of the cold, miserable winter of '78.

If he doesn't see his shadow, spring is just around the corner.

But Phil gave Punxsutawney residents a bit of trouble months ago that the winter would be long and hard, or so say his tongue-in-cheek followers. No more unheated burrow for Phil.

It's true that Phil installed both heating and lighting this year, Charles Erhard Jr., president of the Punxsutawney Groundhog Club and manager of radio station WPME said Wednesday.

But then, Phil doesn't actually live in a burrow. It's really a glass cage in Punxsutawney's civic center.

According to legend, Punxsutawney Phil first emerged from his burrow on Gobbler's Knob to make a weather prediction on Feb. 2, 1887.

And they say only twice in the 191 years prior to today did he fail to see his shadow. That's a lot of nasty winters.

Groundhog Day is believed to have originated centuries ago in Europe, where a similar Candlemas Day was observed.

Other towns, such as Quarryville, Pa., and Janesville, Wis., have been trying to give Punxsutawney Phil some competition, each community claiming it has "the" weather prognosticating groundhog.

Erhard says they're not even good imitations.

Ambassadors return home

WINDSOR LOCKS, Conn. (UPI) — The 10 Connecticut "goodwill" ambassadors on the Friendship Flight to Israel returned home late Wednesday as their 425 Israeli counterparts left for Tel Aviv, saying "shalom!"

President Carter's son, Chip, and daughter-in-law, Carol, were among the weary but enthusiastic Americans on the El Al 747 that landed at Bradley International Airport.

The Israelis left for home at 9:15 p.m.

"The impressions I got were that the people were friendly and they all want peace," said Chip Carter. The Israeli word for peace is shalom.

"They're talking about peace and I'm hopeful that that will happen soon. I think they're all expecting it. All their hopes are very high about it," he said.

Gov. Ellis T. Grasso greeted the returning Americans, but Friendship Force officials decided to forego formal welcoming ceremonies because the travelers were tired after their 12-hour trip.

"Meeting the people was the most interesting thing. Staying in a home, really getting to know a family in another country, is a unique experience. That was probably the most enjoyable thing, along with traveling to the holy places," Carter said.

Lorry and Martin Clayman of West Hartford said the Americans they returned with were "all raving about their hosts which says something about the Israeli people and how they opened their hearts to the American people."

While the Claymans were in Tel Aviv, Mrs. Clayman's parents — Fay and Saul Weichel, along with the Claymans' teenagers, Suzy and Lisa — played host to an Israeli couple.

More than anything else, the Israelis, Rina and Luva Kapusta, wanted to see an American mushroom farm.

Ballet star has baby boy

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Russian ballerina Galina Vishnegorskaya defected to the West in 1976, was delivered of a 6-pound, 4-ounce baby boy Wednesday night at the University of California Medical Center.

The hospital said Miss Makarova and the infant were doing fine.

Movie picketed

LOGAN, Utah (UPI) — The Logan Citizens for True Freedom didn't show up Wednesday night to picket the opening night for the R-rated film "Looking for Mr. Goodbar," but the residents of the Cache County community did.

The first performance was sold out immediately, and four policemen were sent to the Redwood Theater to keep order in the block-long line of people hoping to purchase a ticket for the first night.

The anti-smut citizens group had hoped the city would ban the film under local pornography laws. But County Attorney But Harris said the movie has already withstood legal challenge in Utah County, and the State Attorney General's office advised him further court efforts would be fruitless.

Linda Kirschman, co-director of the citizens group, said there would be no organized picketing at the theater.

Minimum sentence proposals win House committee OK

By RICHARD CHARNOCK
BOISE (UPI) The House Judiciary Committee approved two constitutional proposals Wednesday to allow the Legislature to set mandatory minimum sentences for crimes but called for technical changes.

These measures would give the Legislature power to set sentences which judges have to impose and which the Commission on Pardons and Paroles could not commute or grant a parole.

Parole Commissioner Sam Kaufman of Boise and former legislator, Eugene Erickson, urged the committee not to strip its agency of its powers of commutation. He said not all cases are alike and neither are all judges in sentencing persons for committing the same felonies.

But his was a lone voice in a parade of witnesses that urged the committee to move forward with the legislation which, Chairman T.W. Silvers, R-Twin Falls, said, 3,151 people in 172 communities have asked for in petitions.

When the committee started to send the two measures to the floor, Rep. Robert Hosack, D-Moscow, said he could not support them — with just the word "minimum" in them and asked that the word "mandatory" be inserted. After a brief discussion, the committee agreed.

Even though the resolutions will move immediately forward after the amendments are made and engrossed into them the decision to amend them has slowed them down in the legislative process by at least a week. Before the committee actually releases the measures for floor action it wants to look at the amendments and it cannot do that before Friday.

In addition to moving forward with the two resolutions the committee called for introduction of a bill to set up a crime compensation fund for crime victims so that the criminals cannot profit from their crimes.

Doris Kaufman of the Rape Crisis

Alliance led off witnesses on the sentencing resolutions, saying ultimately the Legislature must have more authority in the sentencing area.

Michael McFarland, senior field representative for the National Rifle Association, said his gun-owning, law-abiding members across the nation want an effective criminal justice system.

Urging adoption of the resolutions, he said, "the certainty of punishment is more effective than the severity of punishment."

He said 99.6 per cent of the firearms in this country are not misused yet there are some 20,000 state and federal laws restricting their use. George Detweiler, a Twin Falls attorney and gun-owner who helped do research for the resolutions during the interim between legislative sessions, said he wants to see the Legislature in a position to crack down on violent crimes in which all types of deadly weapons are used.

"Idaho is unique among the states in the nation where the Legislature is without the power to enact mandatory sentences," Detweiler said. "A system where there is no minimum sentence produces inequities in sentencing."

Another witness, Steve Herrett of Twin Falls, said law enforcement needs "the deterrent of a minimum sentence."

"We spend all kinds of money to rehabilitate criminals," Herrett said. "The parole board works overtime and we haven't got 15 cents for the victim, nothing."

Merlin Purcell, a sporting goods dealer, said the people "are pretty well fed up with sentencing and turning loose our criminals on short sentences."

Archie Walker, an employee of the regional treatment and training center at Gooding told the committee he wants to see minimum sentences for drunken driving. He said first offenders should be remanded for treatment.

Ralph Walker, a former law enforcement officer and firearms instructor and coach, said rehabilitation "does not work for hardened criminals — perpetrators of violent crimes." He said a mandatory sentence removes "that particular offender from society, too."

Ada County Prosecutor David Leroy endorsed the concept but suggested the Legislature not remove the pardoning power of the governor but leave "one small safety valve at the top of the system" to counteract honest mistakes, overzealous prosecutors and take care of real rehabilitation.

Kaufman argued that a minimum sentence is not a deterrent and that the proposals will to his commission's hands. He told of two men who received widely differing sentences for the same crime because they had different judges.

"One judge will give a man a harsh sentence and one will give him a light sentence," he said. "We try to equalize it out there. We have variables."

He acknowledged that the commission is not right in every case but said the Idaho commission's record is better than the national average and that only 8 percent of the parolees return for committing other felonies.

"Every time we're wrong you read about it in the paper," Kaufman said. "That 92 percent of the time we're right you don't read about it because it is not newsworthy."

If the Legislature wants to tie the commission's hands, he said, it should increase the minimum time a criminal must serve before he is eligible for parole.

In rebuttal testimony, McFarland said the NRA does not want to lock everybody up but he said the state should have the ability to crack down on the serious crimes and the Legislature first must have authority to do this.

Inmates may help remodel hospital

By DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News Writer

BOISE — If the Idaho Legislature approves converting the former Gooding Tuberculosis Hospital into a women's prison, some of the renovation of that three-building structure may be done by inmates now in the Idaho State Penitentiary in Boise.

Wednesday the House State Affairs Committee introduced a bill which would allow the State Board of Corrections to use "inmate labor on properties under its jurisdiction and control," without having to require bids from other construction firms for such projects.

The purpose of the bill, said Idaho Department of Corrections Director Don R. Erickson, is to clarify legal ambiguities which now exist when inmate labor is used. Existing law requires bids to be accepted on all prison construction projects. Erickson said, even though prison labor can do the jobs for less money. This means, he added, that construction firms must go through the time and expense of preparing and submitting a bid, "knowing all the time they'll be underbid," Erickson said.

Erickson said he had received no objections from construction firms concerning use of inmate labor. Most projects built by inmates "are very limited in nature, and only a tiny part of the total state's construction budget."

Allowing inmates to take part in these construction activities, Erickson said, not only saves the department of corrections money, but it provides rehabilitation for training for inmates.

Erickson said the bill was "largely aimed at the Boise facilities," but said a "minor part" of renovation of the Gooding buildings would probably be done by inmate labor.

Erickson added the legislature has yet to approve converting the Gooding facility into a women's prison. If that approval is granted, inmates from Boise would work largely on converting the West wing into facilities which could be used by the alcoholic treatment center now using part of the buildings.

Sunday drinks stall

BOISE (UPI) — Chairman John Reardon, R-Boise, cast a tying negative vote today to block introduction of a bill permitting sale of liquor by the drink after 2 p.m. on Sundays.

Rep. Carl Braun, D-Orlando, put the proposal before the committee at the request of the Idaho Restaurant and Beverage Association. At present, the only Sunday liquor sales permitted in Idaho are at bona fide conventions after 2 p.m.

David Hand, a spokesman for the restaurant and beverage association, said the proposal would have an economic impact of some $3-4 million on local communities through additional payrolls. He said it also would increase net profits to the State Liquor Dispensary by about $500,000.

Gem presidential primary may be near end

BOISE — Idaho's Presidential Preference Primary, which came into existence in 1976, may be destined to be the nation's shortest lived state primary.

Wednesday the House State Affairs Committee, by a vote of 14-1, sent House Bill 424 to the floor with a "do pass" recommendation. That bill, if it becomes law, would eliminate the May Presidential Primary.

Rep. Walt Little, R-New Plymouth, sponsor of the measure, said the primary hurt the state in several areas: "There's very little support for it," Little told committee members, "and the cost to the counties is very large." Little said the 1976 Presidential Primary cost the state a total of $275,000.

Little also blamed the primary for "destroying precinct and county organizations. Precinct committeemen don't have a great deal to do anymore and have lost interest in political parties."

Little said. Elimination of the primary would strengthen the parties, Little said.

If Little's bill becomes law, parties would be free to select delegates to national conventions in any legal manner. Prior to the presidential primary system, Idaho's political parties selected delegates at state conventions.

Tax ease proposals blocked

BOISE (UPI) — A Republican attempt to return to tax relief measures for the elderly and for hardship cases was blocked by Senate Democrats Wednesday and the issues will be considered Tuesday.

Sen. Edwin McFadden, R-Boise, sponsor of the measures, asked that they be returned to the Local Government and Taxation Committee until some financial questions could be answered, but Senate Minority Leader Cy Chase, D-Salt Lake City, objected.

Chase accused the GOP of trying to hide the bills so they couldn't be acted upon. He agreed to having the bills on the calendar and Senate Majority Leader James Risch, R-Boise, asked they be held until Tuesday — one day after the deadline — for Gov. John V. Evans to act on the Republican sponsored repealer of the 8-mill school mill tax levy.

The relief bill would double the benefits under the circuit breaker for elderly taxpayers, allow county commissioners to exempt property taxes in hardship cases and provide a claim could be filed under both the hardship provision and the circuit breaker.

Meantime, the Local Government and Taxation Committee sent to the floor amendments to a bill which would require property to be taxed on original rather than potential use.

Director Polanski flees to avoid court sentence

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (UPI) — Film director Roman Polanski has apparently fled the United States rather than face a possible prison term for his admitted "unlawful" sexual relations with a 13-year-old girl, a county court was told Wednesday.

Polanski, 44, failed to appear for final sentencing by Superior Court Judge Laurence J. Rittenband. Rittenband promptly issued a bench warrant for his arrest.

Douglas Dalton, Polanski's attorney, told the court he did not know where Polanski was but added: "I don't believe he is in the United States."

Dalton said he received a telephone call from Polanski Wednesday morning informing him that he would not be in court. The attorney told Rittenband he would make "every effort" to persuade the director to change his mind.

Rittenband said he had the legal authority to pronounce sentence in Polanski's absence but he continued the case for 10 days.

Polanski, the former husband of murdered actress Sharon Tate, could have received a sentence ranging from 50 years in prison to outright life imprisonment.

He had pleaded guilty to the charge of unlawful sexual relations with the unidentified girl. Last week he completed 42 days of court-ordered psychiatric observation at the California State Prison at Chino. He had been released on his own recognizance, without bond.

Polanski, born in France of Polish parents, grew up in Warsaw, Poland, during the Nazi occupation in World War II. He spent many of the years after WWII in France, then in 1959 in Paris, London and Rome.

But he returned to the United States to direct movies including "Chinatown," which was shown for the first time on national television Tuesday night. His sex acts with the girl occurred last spring at the Beverly Hills home of actor Jack Nicholson who starred in "Chinatown."

Polanski last month was released from a contract to direct a new movie, "The Fencer," for producer Irwin Laurentis because of the "uncertainty of Mr. Polanski's availability."

Dalton declined to discuss with reporters Polanski's apparent decision to "test" the jurisdiction of the court rather than face sentencing. He said it was a matter of attorney-client relationship. Dalton told the court he thought there was a "reasonable chance" he would persuade the court to return voluntarily.

The United States has extradition arrangements with most countries for the return of convicted criminals.

Boy dies of burns after family spat

MONROE, N.C. (UPI) — A 10-year-old boy who said he'd been having trouble with his father died Wednesday about two hours after he doused himself with kerosene, ignited it and ran screaming to a neighbor's house, police reported.

Union County Sheriff Frank L. Fowler said the boy, Peter John Voss, "made a statement to the deputies that he poured kerosene on himself and struck a match to light his clothing. He said he did it because of problems with his father," the sheriff said.

Fowler said Voss lived with his mother near Waxhaw, about 15 miles south of Monroe, near the South Carolina border.

The sheriff's department was called about 8:30 a.m. by a neighbor who said the youth ran across the street and "fell in their yard," Fowler said.

"When we got there the child was lying in the yard in a squig squig position," he said. "The neighbors had wrapped him in blankets. The neighbors saw the smoke and said they thought the yard was on fire until they heard him screaming."

"He talked to us. When I first leaned over him he was begging us to do something," Whitaker said. "He said 'Please mister, get this off. Get this off the blankets.'"

Lt. James Boshnyak, who investigated the case, said the boy was covered in smoldering blankets when he arrived.

"He was screaming, 'Take it off. Take it off.'"

Official appointed

NEW YORK (UPI) — ABC Wednesday named Anthony D. Thompson to succeed Fred Silverman as president of its television network entertainment division — but left in the air what, if any, Silverman's duties will be until his contract expires.

Thompson, 39, who had been vice president of ABC Television since May, 1976, and a top aide to network president Frederick Pierce, assumes his new duties immediately.

Silverman will become president of NBC when his ABC contract expires June 8, but until then he remains with ABC. That network so far has shown no inclination to release him earlier than necessary to a rival.

ABC, in announcing Thompson's promotion to president, ABC Entertainment said he had served in several major creative programming posts since joining ABC Entertainment in 1973, including vice president, prime time programs in New York; vice president, prime time television creative operations, and vice president, special programs.

The ABC lineup for fall, 1978, already is largely set because the No. 1 network is expected to make fewest schedule changes. Industry expectations are that Pierce will play an increased role in ABC programming now that Silverman is leaving.

American, Vietnamese arraigned on charges of spying

RONALD LOUIS HUMPHREY, TRUONG DINH HUNG RETURN TO JAIL held in lieu of bond on charges of spying for Hanoi

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (UPI) — A U.S. foreign service officer and a Vietnamese antiwar crusader pleaded innocent Wednesday to charges they spied for Hanoi, but failed to convince a judge the charges are frivolous and perhaps part of a "witch hunt."

The State Department, meantime, announced it would protest to Vietnam's U.N. mission "the involvement of (Hanoi's) officials in espionage," and might even try to get a Vietnamese U.N. envoy expelled.

Vietnam government spokesmen denied any spying existed. At arraignment proceedings in suburban Alexandria across the Potomac from Washington, U.S. District Judge Albert Bryan Jr. rejected defense pleas for deep bond reductions for the accused spies — Ronald Lewis Humphrey, 42, a U.S. Information Agency officer, and Truong Dinh Hung, 32, the son of a former South Vietnamese presidential candidate imprisoned for his antiwar views.

"The weight of the government's evidence is strong as presented to me yesterday," Bryan said. Setting April 3 as their date for joint trial, he ordered Humphrey returned to jail under $150,000 bond and Truong remained under $250,000 bond. Defense attorneys Andrew Giancocco and Marvin Miller argued that the charges had been blown out of proportion. Miller characterized them as trumped up "ballyhoo" designed to make the FBI look good.

Outside court, he told reporters, "It may be ... that there's a witch hunt against Vietnamese in this country by certain elements in the government that don't want this country to normalize relations with the Vietnamese."

He said he would prove at trial that no crime jeopardizing national security had been committed. Humphrey, who lives with a Vietnamese woman and has two adopted Vietnam war orphans among his four children, and Truong, a resident alien and economics student, were indicted Tuesday on seven counts of espionage and conspiracy for allegedly passing U.S. national security secrets to the communist government of Vietnam.

The indictment alleged Humphrey stole confidential U.S. diplomatic cables from the USIA's operations center and gave them to Truong at shopping centers and airports, for movement to Hanoi via Vietnam's U.N. mission and its Paris embassy.

Maximum sentence upon conviction would be life imprisonment. Truong, a Stanford University graduate who has lived in the United States since 1964, is the son of Truong Dinh Duu, a prominent lawyer who opposed the war and ran as a peace candidate in Saigon's 1967 presidential elections.

He finished a close second to Nguyen Van Thieu, who later imprisoned him for five years — in the notorious Con Son Island "Tiger Cage" and elsewhere — in a crackdown against antiwar dissidents. The elder Truong is still in Vietnam.

Teamsters chief sued

WASHINGTON — (UPI) — The Labor Department sued Teamsters President Frank Fitzsimmons and 18 associates Wednesday, demanding full repayment of money lost when he made bad loans involving hundreds of millions of dollars from a union pension fund.

Sources estimated the loss at a half-billion dollars. The suit, filed in U.S. District Court in Chicago, represented the toughest federal crackdown on the Teamsters since the imprisonment of former boss Jimmy Hoffa. It also marked the biggest suit filed under the 1974 pension law.

Fitzsimmons, who succeeded Hoffa in 1972 as president of the nation's largest union, was named along with 16 other former trustees of the union's $1.65 billion Central States Southeast and Southwest Area Pension Fund, former asset manager Alvin Baron, previously indicted for alleged kickbacks, and the current fund administrator, Daniel J. Shannon. Labor Secretary Friday Marshall said the suit, outlining "a series of questionable loan transactions" prohibited since 1975 by the pension law, does not preclude criminal prosecution. He said evidence of previous bad loans was referred to the justice Department.

Fitzsimmons' union presidency was not directly jeopardized by the suit. "We're stuck with him," a Teamster shouted at Marshall after the announcement. Many of the trustees named in the suit also hold high union offices.

The suit culminated a two-year investigation into the Central States fund, which was accused of investing "hundreds of millions of dollars" in real estate deals and other risky enterprises — some of them linked to organized crime.

The Labor Department refused to estimate how much money was involved, but sources said the current fund manager at Equitable Life Assurance Society estimate a loss of at least $500 million.

Marshall vowed to press for "100 percent" repayment from the men's own pockets. He said, "You can't get blood out of a turnip, but we'll try to get as much as we can."

The suit lists 15 multi-million dollar transactions since January 1975, where the trustees failed to ensure repayment of loans from the fund designed to provide benefits for 480,000 working and retired truck drivers.

They included a $25-million loan to Argent Corp. for improvements to the Stardust and Fremont hotels in Las Vegas, Nev. The Labor Department last year went to court to halt an additional loan to these hotels.

Strike spreads

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — But the workers in Nicaragua's only oil refinery joined a nationwide strike Wednesday aimed at ousting President Anastasio Somoza, raising fears of a gasoline shortage within days.

One thousand of the 2,000 employees at the Exxon Corp.'s Esso refinery did not show up for work and armed National Guardsmen were called in to patrol the refinery and guard the other 1,000 workers.

Even if the refinery continues partial operations, Nicaragua may be hit by a cutoff of crude oil from its major supplier, Venezuela, where oil workers pursued a boycott of shipments to the Central American nation.

Somoza said Nicaragua has enough fuel for at least a month. The strike was begun to days ago to demand Somoza's resignation and protest alleged irregularities in the investigation of the Jan. 10 slaying of newspaper publisher and Somoza opponent Pedro Chamorro.

Most of Nicaragua's gas stations were already shut down as part of the strike, "as were 80 percent of the businesses in Managua."

All independent radio news programs went off the air to protest government censorship of news about the strike, and radio journalists were reporting the news through loudspeakers set up in churches around the capital.

The sounds of both blasts and gunfire were heard around the capital Tuesday night as demonstrators fought the streets, but the Red Cross reported it had not treated any casualties.

Mobs stoned cars and built barricades in the streets of Managua, a city 95 miles north of the capital, where two people were killed in disturbances Monday, and in Leon, 56 miles to the north, and Masaya, 13 miles east.

The Elders

DEAR ABBY: I work in a fairly large office with about 40 other employees. It has always been the custom that when someone becomes engaged, married, has a child or is transferred out, a dinner and a gift is given by "the office group."

This has become a problem because every month one of these "occasions" presents itself and I am asked to pitch in for a gift, bring a covered dish, contribute toward a special cake from the bakery, etc. Needless to say, this has become very expensive.

It's not only the expense, which I can ill afford, but I also object to the principle. Many of these honorees are only office acquaintances, and if it weren't for the subtle pressure put upon us by the little group that organizes these things to comply with past customs, I wouldn't voluntarily contribute at all.

Against collections

Since all my co-workers read your column, if they were to see this in print, maybe they would stop the practice. Also, I'm sure your reply would help many people in similar situations. Please sign this...

DISTRESSED IN DALLAS

DEAR DISTRESSED: As long as you continue to go along with the system, there will be no change. What you need is (a) the courage to be honest and say, "Sorry, I can't afford to be included," and (b) the willingness to encourage the-minded co-workers to organize a united front in opposition to such collections.

DEAR ABBY: Last Sunday the crowd I run around with tried to go to a show, but I had to go with my family and my aunt and then my grandparents. I was bored to death!

Why do parents force their children to go visit relatives? Why boring. They keep telling you that your "youth" is the best part of your life, then they make you miserable dragging you to places you don't want to go. Can't they realize that when a girl is 14 she isn't happy going to visit relatives all the time?

BORED

DEAR BORED: Children, even 14-year-olds, should not be forced to attend ALL the aunts', uncles' and cousins' get-togethers. But neither should they be excused from all such visits because they are "bored." If you must go, go with a smile on your face. And make up your mind that you're going to have a good time. And who knows? You may even have one.

DEAR ABBY: I do not want to be a meddling mother-in-law, but how can I impress upon my new daughter-in-law that it is important for her to acknowledge her wedding gifts within a reasonable length of time? (Is three months "reasonable"?)

Abby, who is a darling girl, and I don't want to hurt her, but I have hinted so many times that I hate to mention it again. Many of my friends have asked me if she ever received their gifts. Please tell me how to get her to write her thank-you notes. We are quite well known in this town and it is getting embarrassing.

NOT MEDDLING

DEAR NOT: You'd be doing your daughter-in-law a kindness to tell her in plain language that people have been asking YOU if she has received their gifts. (Three months is the absolute limit.)

Tell her if she needs any "help" in writing her thank-you notes, you are available. Short of writing them for her, there is nothing more you can do.

your health

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb: I am 72 years old. I have a problem that is getting worse as I grow older. I have had nose bleeds all my life. My doctor only cauterizes the vessels in my nose with an electric needle. In a day or two I have nose bleeds again.

I have high blood pressure at times, but I don't believe this is causing my nose bleeds. A little child surely would not have high blood pressure.

I also have sinus problems. I need to know what I can do for myself. I have heard that vitamin K is sometimes given to nose bleed patients. My doctor has not suggested this to me.

I am very discouraged. Doctor bills are too high and on a fixed income (social security), I cannot be running to a doctor all the time.

Dear Reader: The ultimate cause of a nose bleed is a broken blood vessel and cauterizing it with an electric needle is not sufficient.

In other cases if there are a lot of blood vessels, it is necessary to surgically tie the source of them shut.

Why don't you go see a specialist in ear, nose and throat disorders if you can? He may be able to do some local correction that helps.

Meanwhile, use a small cotton swab and coat the inside of your nose with baby oil in the morning when you get up and again at night before you go to bed. Keeping the area soft and preventing dryness often prevents crusts, irritation and bleeding.

Even though your high blood pressure is of more recent origin than your nose bleeds, it is essential to get them under control. High blood pressure so it may be an aggravating factor.

Vitamin K only helps if there is a decreased ability of the blood to clot. This is probably not your case and that is why your doctor has not given it to you.

It might not be if you are taking aspirin, or medicines for your sinus problems that have caused these nose bleeds. Decrease the blood's ability to clot may make it easy for you to bleed.

Send your The Health Letter number 84, Aspirin and Related Medicines, so you can review the list of medicines that may contain aspirin and be causing you problems. Others who have this issue can send 50 cents worth of long stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to be in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1081, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10108.

Dear Dr. Lamb: I'm a 14-year-old boy. About three months ago a hard lump appeared in both nipples on my chest. The one on the left side is much larger than the one on the right side. They cause so pain but make my nipples protrude out larger than normal. They continued to grow for a while but seemed to stop. What could they be?

Dear Reader: Many boys have these "knots" during the maturation phase and they are related to the increased hormone production by your body. They usually go away in time. They are not cancer. If they persist for a couple of years, and they bother you, perhaps you could see a doctor about them.

Of course, if you get overweight and had other signs of puberty to develop you should have a medical examination. The knots alone, though, are not an indication of anything abnormal.

LILLIE A. MATTHEWS retired when she was past 75 years of age

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

BURLEY — People still call her Mrs. Hoggan because she worked for that family's leather and canvas shop here for 28½ years.

But Lillie A. Matthews, a spritely Burley resident some 80 years young, wants it known she never was Mrs. Hoggan, even though she worked for two generations of the family as a bookkeeper and "everything else in between."

"Just yesterday someone called me Mrs. Hoggan," she said during a recent interview. "The person said, 'I thought you owned that place.'"

She said the reason people associate her so closely with the now defunct leather shop is because "I swept the sidewalk, cleaned the machine and everything else in between."

Work is something Mrs. Matthews firmly believes in.

"I don't think it's right for people in their 50's to retire if they are physically able," she said. "People should work."

She recently referred to a recent article in Heartline (a syndicated column carried in the Times-News each Thursday) about a man, 57, worrying about retiring because of disability.

Following her own advice, Mrs. Matthews worked at Hoggan's until she was "past 75."

Since "retiring" six years ago she has continued raising a big garden and flowers each year and for three winters helped out at a neighborhood grocery store. Until last year she moved her own lawn.

Last week she completed her door-to-door solicitation for the March of Dimes, one of the many drives she has—and still does—work on.

Mrs. Matthews came to Burley in 1926 with her two small sons six months after being widowed.

Faced with the support of her boys 8 and nearly 5, she immediately went to work.

Her sister lived with her for a time, and could look after the boys after school—but Mrs. Matthews proudly says she never had a babysitter.

"We grew up together," she says. Her strict rules for her sons after school proved successful for both men have gone far in their careers.

More important, their mother says, "They are so good to me."

An indication of their sense of responsibility occurred when they were teenagers. Mrs. Matthews said the Mormon bishop earlier had offered to help her expand what was then her two-room house.

She talked it over with her sons and they said, "Wait until we're old enough and we'll do it for you ourselves."

When they were 19 and 17 the boys added a kitchen, bathroom, bedroom and clothes closet, doing all the work themselves.

Before she went to work for Hoggan's Mrs. Matthews worked in the first store in Burley to handle GE refrigerators. The store, operated by the late Ben Sprague, was called the Good Housekeeping Store and was located where Miller Drug now is.

She also worked at Penney's for several years, handling the toy department four winters and spent four years at the Burley Laundry.

But her eight hours of daily employment was only part of her life. Long active in the Mormon church, Mrs. Matthews has served as Relief Society president for her ward, taught Sunday School for 31 years and has served four years as a stake missionary.

One of her many community extra curricular activities occurred when the church leaders decided members should process their excess garden produce.

A canning kitchen was launched—in Mrs. Matthews' small kitchen.

"I never had put anything in a can before in my life," she recalled. She had done much home processing in glass jars, but was appalled at the heat required to process the cans.

After one year the canning kitchen was established elsewhere, but the cooperative experience was one Mrs. Matthews will never forget. She said 181 cans were processed the first day. The next year she helped set up a similar canning kitchen in Oakley and again, 181 cans were processed the first day.

A native of Hatch, Utah, near St. George, Mrs. Matthews early was exposed to adversity. Her father died when she was still a girl, after homesteading on the Uinta Indian reservation near Ft. Duchesne, Utah.

Because of her mother's failing health the family moved to Idaho Falls where she attended the Gen. State Business College. Later she took night classes at the old Burley High School to improve her bookkeeping skills.

On Nov. 2, 1916, she married Ralph Howard Matthews in his home town of Anaconda, Mont. He was killed in an accident 10 years later in Gilmore, Idaho.

One of the many interests Mrs. Matthews has pursued throughout her years is collecting and preserving flowers, or—some botanical specimen from her many travels. She has filled six boxes with flora from Alaska to Argentina.

The idea began when she wanted to preserve a flower from her mother's grave. Throughout the years her sons have thoughtfully remembered their mother's hobby, filling her books with additions from their own travels.

Her younger son, Howard, former principal at the Heyburn school, is in the US Office of Education in Washington, D.C., and instituted the idea for the Manpower Development Act, his mother said. He formerly was commissioner of education for the state of Alaska and has traveled worldwide, including to Saudi Arabia, in his work.

Her oldest son, Don, Matthews, was dean of Stevens Heninger Business College in Salt Lake City for 18 years. He is now chairman of the general education department of Utah Technical College there.

His mother brushes aside compliments about how well her sons have done, with the statement that "they wanted to do these things and I had good help from the men of the church."

She said fortunately both boys were "the kind who would accept guidance from church leaders" while "some youths won't."

Asked about her good health and wide interests which defy her category of senior citizen, Mrs. Matthews said, "If you follow the Word of Wisdom (of the Mormon church) you have a right to expect good health."

"I don't let people worry me and I have a wonderful family," she smiled.

Believes in-work

LILLIAN Matthews is shown at Hoggan's Leather and Canvas Shop, Burley, where she was employed for 28½ years. This picture was taken in 1947. Others shown are, from left, D.C. Hoggan, shop manager; Ted Kruttsom, saddlemaker; Ken Gault, canvas worker, and J.D. Haggan, owner. Mrs. Matthews worked for two generations of Hoggans, retiring six years ago.

HEARTLINE: I recently married a lady from England and she will be joining me here in America soon. I am going to retire and begin drawing Social Security benefits next year. Will my wife, even though she will not be a citizen, be able to draw with benefits on my work record? She is 64 and I'm 68. B.C.

A: Yes, her citizenship is not a factor in entitlement to wife's benefits.

HEARTLINE: I am a 63-year-old widow and I draw my Social Security benefits. I have been very lonely the last couple of years. I would like to start a correspondence with someone near my own age. Do you know any pen pals? S.K.C.

A: Heartline has developed a pen pal club exclusively for people over age 50. Heartline's American 60 Club has been in existence for over three years and has thousands of members throughout the country. This is not a dating or matchmaking club. For complete information and an enrollment card, write "Heartline's American 60 Club," 114 E. Dayton St., West Alexandria, Ohio 45381. Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope with your return.

HEARTLINE: I recently went to a meeting where they were trying to get people to invest $1000 for a distributorship for this company. It seemed very good because I would make money off everyone I brought in and in turn I would make money on the people that they brought in. Do you know anything about this type of investment? K.C.

A: This sounds very similar to what is known as a "pyramid scheme." The "pyramid" scheme is essentially a business variation of the familiar "chain letter." It works this way: Promoter ("P") offers A and B the chance to "invest" by purchasing "distributorships" at $1000 each. The "distributorships" give A and B the "exclusive" right to sell distributorships to others for $1000 each and to sell certain products to the public. However, each $1000 that A and B receive from their sales of distributorships must be divided with P, say 50-50. Thus, theoretically, A and B can realize $500 on each distributorship they sell and can completely recover their initial investment by selling only two distributorships. P, however, has received not only A's and B's $1000 each, but also $500 for each distributorship that A and B sell. Initially, it appears that this can go on forever, with no one being hurt and everyone making money. But, figures show that the number of investors needed to keep the pyramid scheme working quickly exceeds the population of the United States.

Investors generally set two objectives in evaluating an investment: (1) As high a return as possible, and (2) as low a risk as possible. Interest dividends, and/or long term appreciation, and (2) Safety—Pyramid schemes normally attract unsuspecting investors by the promise of an unusually high rate of return.

Experience has demonstrated, however, that as a general rule, the higher the return on an investment, the riskier it is likely to be. In other words, the higher return is usually paid to justify the higher risk. While inflation may make it more difficult to evaluate what a normal rate of return is today, the prudent investor with company life return promised or proposed will generally be realized on other types of investments.

It is impossible to describe thoroughly the various forms pyramid schemes might take, but these operations do have certain hallmarks. You should be particularly cautious when an investment opportunity emphasizes:

- Very high yield.
- Quick return.
- "Once in a lifetime" opportunity.
- The chance to "get in on the ground floor."

Valentines mailed from Loveland

LOVELAND, Ohio (UPI) — The nation's "Valentine Lady," snow-bound by last week's blizzard, says she is now getting the annual crush of Valentines she mails for people with the appropriate Loveland postmark.

"I didn't make it out the past week, except to feed the birds," Mrs. Doris Pfister, 65-year-old widow and grandmother, reported Wednesday.

"We didn't have mail delivery for three days, but the mail is now coming through and I'm already getting Valentines to do."

Mrs. Pfister became the "Valentine Lady" six years ago when she started handling the Loveland Chamber of Commerce's valentine project all by herself.

Sometimes working up to 18 hours a day as the Feb. 14 "Valentine's Day" draws near, Mrs. Pfister receives thousands of Valentines from around the country to re-mail.

She not only postmarks each valentine envelope "Loveland," but attaches a picture of Cupid and the message, "There is nothing in the world so sweet as love."

Mrs. Pfister, who personally puts these tiny southwestern Ohio valentines on the map each Valentine's day, was honored this past summer as Loveland's first "Woman of the Year."

"It was just breathtaking," she said. "There was a big parade and I rode in a beautiful, old 1930 car and they gave me a lovely trophy and a proclamation from the city. I'm still in kind of a daze."

In addition to the thousands of Valentines she re-mails for other people, Mrs. Pfister, naturally, is on a lot of valentine lists herself.

"I get so many and a lot of thank-you notes too," she said. "Last week during the blizzard I got them out and read through them again."

"I enjoy doing this more every year. It's something from the heart and it seems we just don't have enough things done from the heart anymore."

Instructions for the Valentine Lady's cards:

(1) Address all services in usual manner, but do not put a stamp on the envelopes.

(2) Put all envelopes in a larger envelope, enclose money (not stamps) for proper postage, plus two cents for each card for the Chamber of Commerce fund.

(3) Mail to "Valentine Lady," P.O. Box 111, Loveland, Ohio, 45140.

ANTIQUE FESTIVAL THEATRE PLAYERS Patti Bird, Jonathan Gochberg and Gregg Weed

Antique Festival Theatre to present 'The Little Hut'

GOODING — The Antique Festival Theatre repertory company from Southern Idaho will present "The Little Hut" at 8:15 p.m. Friday at the Fine Arts Center at the College of Southern Idaho.

The play is an English adaption of a modern French farce and has played the boulevard theatres of Paris, London and New York. The story concerns three hapless Brits stranded on a deserted island in the Pacific and how they work out suitable domestic arrangements.

The original Broadway version to be produced by the AFT's bouncy and bubbling director, Ann Bowler, program director.

She said it's acclaimed as one of the funniest of English plays.

The AFT repertory company is Idaho's most established professional touring theatre and performs throughout the west, Bowler said.

It books colleges, public schools and community theatres, playing comedies, dramas and this year offers a special mime company in addition to its regular fare.

The companies are recruited throughout the west and are composed of young actors of experience and specialized talents, the program director said.

Members of the spring AFT company include Patti Bird, Jonathan Gochberg, Phillip Nielsen and Gregg Weed.

Bird is the center major of the theatrical family and has appeared as Annie in "Annie Get Your Gun" and as Kim in "Bye Bye Birdie." She plays Susan, a flighty upper crust English woman in Roussin's "The Little Hut." She also will handle the technical duties of the AFT's spring tour.

Gochberg is on a leave of absence from studying music at the University of Utah, Salt Lake City. He has worked with the Pioneer Memorial Theatre company and with summer stock at the Laugon Opera House. He has played the roles of Sir Andrew in "Twelfth Night" and Camille Chandbise, the measurable romantic in "A Flea in Her Ear." He also participated in the television production of "Beyond and Back." Gochberg will head the AFT production of "The Little Hut" in his role as Phillip.

Nielsen, the youngest member of the AFT this season, recently began his college education in drama at CSI in Twin Falls. He has played roles in "See How They Run" and "Night of January 13th" and has helped to create and acted in an improvisational piece, "Child One-Fourth," which was performed in Twin Falls. He will play the role of the stranger in the Roussin production.

Weed comes from Eugene, Ore., where he had the double life of comic book store owner and jazz musician in a band. He holds a B.A. degree in psychology and a M.A. in curriculum and instruction. He is also interested in photography and has had photos published in Oregon papers and other publications. He is company director and musician and acting the role of Henry in "The Little Hut."

Custom doesn't impress landlord

BOLZANO, Italy (UPI) — Old Roman customs never did count for much with landlords.

It seems that Princess Marina Lante della Rovere was having this party on New Year's Eve 1976 at the ritzy Cortina villa she rented from Count Gaetano Marzotto Jr.

In the spirit of the moment, she began tossing the count's priceless antique porcelain dinner set out the window.

Soon the Alpine snow outside the villa was littered with the count's broken dinner set as the princess' 40 guests joined in the fun.

"We were just celebrating; throwing things out the window is an old Roman custom," the princess said.

The count was not impressed and he sued the princess. The two Italian nobles went to court Saturday and Count Gaetano demanded $3,600 rent for the 40 days the princess had the villa plus $1,800 in damages.

The princess offered to pay the rent plus $360 in damages but not a cent more.

The judge shook the nobles out of his courtroom and said he would announce his verdict in April.

Benefits denied

AMARILLO, Texas (UPI) — A man whose comatose wife gave birth to a healthy baby today in an insurance company has refused a major medical insurance application filed five days before she lapsed into the coma.

Rick Goforth, 21, of Borger, Texas, said he received a letter Tuesday from the American Insurance Co. of Galveston, Texas, denying the benefits for his wife. "A letter from the company said the benefits were denied because of her prior medical history involving a 'conduction defect,' an unusually fast heart beat."

"But she was never sick a day in her life and this happened," said Goforth.

Laurie Goforth, 18, suffered a cardiac arrest Dec. 17 and went into a coma. She was transferred to an Amarillo hospital and on Jan. 8 gave birth to a baby girl, who was named Susan Michelle.

Goforth has taken the baby home. But his wife may never know of the birth.

"We do hear Laurie is hearing voices and noises," said Mrs. Al Butcher, her mother. "When you drop something or cough, she'll jump. She hadn't been doing that before."

"She'll follow with her eyes voices from one side of the bed to another," she said.

Mrs. Butcher said her daughter has been taken off a respirator, but still receives oxygen occasionally. Her medical bills are estimated at $200 per day.

In this hand, Ely should really have passed at three notrump. Jo would have brought that contract home easily by careful play.

However, Ely went to four spades. Hal opened the queen of diamonds. Ely rose with the ace of diamonds, played ace and one spade only to go down when Hal took his king and led a second diamond. There was no way to shut out Hal's nine of spades and Ely still had to lose another trick.

Ely could have made the hand by ducking one diamond, but there was and has been no criticism of his actual play.

Play set Friday at Opera House

SUN VALLEY — A mingling of facts and fictions about Peter Rabbit and the woman who created him will be the subject of a two-act play Friday at the Sun Valley Opera House.

San Francisco's Free Association Theatre will bring to life the fanciful world of Beatrix Potter, the author of Peter Rabbit, in a one-person play adapted from the writings and personal journals of Potter.

"Beatrix Potter Or The Sharing of Peter Rabbit" will be performed by its author, Katherine James, who is a member of the Free Association Theatre.

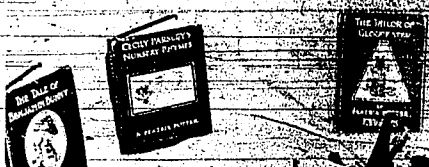

In a 90-minute production geared for families, James tries to bring alive the world of Beatrix

Potter, a world full of fantastical stories, which have captured the hearts of young and old, and personal thoughts about the world in 19th Century England.

The audience is invited to share not only the world of the genius who created them — a young graphic artist and scientist struggling with the Victorian world's view of womanhood.

A play for all ages, "Beatrix Potter Or the Sharing of Peter Rabbit" is presented by the Sun Valley Center for the Arts and Humanities and tickets will be $4 general admission (for adults) and $5 general admission at the door.

Tickets are available at the Potato Gallery on the Sun Valley Mall.

Mental health group elects

TWIN FALLS — Rev. Harold Livingston, Jerome, was elected president of the Mental Health Association at the group's annual meeting Monday night.

He succeeds Lorayne Smith in the post. Charles Perry was named vice president, with Pat Thompson elected secretary and Lotus Schumaker re-elected treasurer.

City Robertson, speaker for the evening, discussed the interrelationship between alcoholism and severe mental illness. Alcoholics are susceptible to depression, he said, and "quite a few try to treat their depression with alcohol."

"In our culture it's more acceptable to be addicted than to be crazy," Robertson said, "so many do not want to be associated with something like the mental health center."

There is considerable difference in treatment of the two problems, the speaker said.

Mental patients have to be dealt with in an indirect manner, with the professional worker "going along" with them, Robertson said, while dealing with alcoholics has to be more direct.

"If you let the alcoholic go on as he wants to he'd stay drunk," Robertson said. He said at the Gooding alcohol center, which he heads, the emphasis is on making the alcoholic accept responsibility for his own life.

"If you had a rotten childhood that's tough," Robertson said, "but it doesn't change the fact you have to now account for your own actions."

Good samaritan misses flight

LEWISTON—Idaho (UPH) — A passenger on a Hughes Airwest flight from Spokane Boise repaired a flat tire on a DC-9 at Lewiston Tuesday so the 61 passengers aboard wouldn't have to wait for a mechanic to arrive on another flight.

The passenger, Fred Christlieb, Spokane, performed the task after a slow leak developed in the tire and Hughes Airwest learned that no mechanic was available at Lewiston.

The company ordered a mechanic flown to Spokane to fix the tire when Christlieb offered to do the job.

A check of his credentials showed he was qualified so the company permitted it.

Christlieb loosened his tie, put on a pair of fatigues and repaired the tire in two hours.

As luck would have it, the good Samaritan missed his connection in Boise.

MR. AND MRS. JOE SAGERS

Sherri Stoddard Sagers say vows

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH - The marriage of Joe Sagers and Sherri Stoddard was solemnized Jan. 20 in the Salt Lake LDS Temple.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Reah Stoddard, St. Anthony. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. H.M. Sagers, Heyburn.

The bride wore a white chiffon gown with a lace overlay. It featured a high neck and empire waistline cascading into a lace-edged train. She carried a nosegay of baby roses and dried flowers.

Lisa Chadwick of Hollister was matron of honor. Steve Sagers, Bonifant, Utah, was best man.

A wedding dinner was hosted by the bridegroom's parents in the Lion House Jan. 19 in Salt Lake City.

The evening of the wedding a reception was held in St. Anthony. An open house honoring the couple will be held at the bridegroom's parents residence in Heyburn Feb. 4.

Gifts were arranged by sisters of the bride, and bridegroom and were carried by a niece and nephews of the bridegroom.

The couple has attended Ticks College, Rexburg, and Brigham Young University. The bridegroom graduated from BYU in December and recently served a two-year mission in South Carolina.

After a wedding trip to southern Utah, Arizona and California, the couple will reside in Burley where the bridegroom is engaged in cattle buying.

Amputation legal battle continues

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Mary C. Northern, 72, believes "life wouldn't be worth living" without her feet, even though they are infected with gangrene and doctors say they must be amputated to save her life, a relative said Wednesday.

William Northern, 81, first cousin of the elderly spinster, said Miss Northern began leading a reclusive life in the early 60s following the death of her parents and apparently wants to continue her independence.

Miss Northern, found living in her dilapidated eight-room home with her six cats, has steadfastly maintained that she will regain the use of her frostbitten feet, which she burned while trying to thaw them over an open fire.

Miss Northern remains hospitalized while a legal battle swirls over whether welfare authorities have a right to order the amputation of her feet in a bid to save her life.

State attorneys said Wednesday they will cooperate with Miss Northern's attorney, Carol McCoy, in seeking a speedy hearing before the State Court of Appeals on whether doctors should be enjoined from performing the operation.

"I expect her to file the motion for the hearing" and we will respond to it," said deputy State Attorney General William Hubbard. "The state is interested in cooperating in getting the matter expedited."

State Human Services Commissioner Horace Bass can order the amputation if two doctors certify that Miss Northern's life is in "imminent" danger.

Doctors said Saturday Miss Northern had a 50-50 chance of living if her feet are amputated and a 90 per cent chance of dying if they are not.

William Northern said Miss Northern loved her ramshackle home "better than she loved her own life because she's lived there since she was 10 years old. Her father died in 1959 and her mother in 1969. She was very close to both of them and just didn't want to leave that place after they died," he said.

"I'm convinced there's no one who could persuade her now to have that operation. She doesn't want to have it just like she didn't want to leave that house."

"I'm not cold-blooded but I wouldn't — even if I could — take responsibility for her to have it," said the 41-year-old cousin.

Film club plans series of movies

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley Film Club, a Twin Falls based non-profit group which tries to present movies not usually available on television or at commercial theaters, is offering a series of four movies to be shown in March, April and May.

The club will then order in the four movies which get the most votes between now and the end of the series pass sales drive Feb. 20.

"This way we can show those who purchase a series pass (cost $10) can vote for the films they want to see," said Pat Osburn, publicity director for the film club.

Among the batch of films from which series pass buyers can choose are: 'Foreign Correspondent' an Alfred Hitchcock spy thriller from 1940; 'On the Beach', a 1959 drama starring Gregory Peck and Ava Gardner; a Humphrey Bogart mystery 'Sirocco', made in 1931; 'Palmy Day', an early Busby Berkeley musical starring Eddie Cantor; the 'Charlie Chaplin silent classic, The Gold Rush; and 'Suddenly, Last Summer', a drama featuring Katherine Hepburn and Elizabeth Taylor.

Loan standards must be equalized

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Utah's largest savings and loan association consented Wednesday to a court decree requiring it to use the same financial standards in making home loans to women as it uses for men, the Justice Department reported.

The decree was issued in U.S. District Court in Salt Lake City in settlement of a 1976 sex-discrimination suit the department filed against the Prudential Federal Savings and Loan Association of Salt Lake City in 1976.

The decree requires Prudential to consider alimony and child support payments of divorced women and to consider the joint incomes of married couples in determining income qualifications of home loan applicants.

It also requires the association to notify real estate brokers that it has a policy against sex discrimination in lending and to advertise itself as an equal opportunity lender.

Prudential also is required to notify 12 persons that they may apply for loans that were previously refused them. If they qualify for loans, Prudential must waive its regular service charge.

The suit charged Prudential with violating 1974 amendments to the 1968 Fair Housing Act by setting higher financial standards for women applicants for housing loans than for men.

The charged Prudential with discriminating all or part of a wife's income in determining whether married couples qualified for loans and refusing to consider alimony or child support of a divorced woman applicant.

U.S. wants early date on arms pact

GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI) — The United States told the Geneva disarmament conference Wednesday it hopes for agreement "at an early date" on a new strategic arms limitation pact with the Soviet Union and a treaty banning all nuclear tests.

But difficult problems involving verification still block agreement on outlawing the production and use of chemical weapons and destroying existing stockpiles, U.S. negotiator Adrian S. Fisher told the 30-nation conference at the start of its 1978 session.

The meeting also marked the beginning of the disarmament conference's 17th year. It was the 76th meeting since the talks began in March 1962.

The Soviet Union, co-chairman of the conference with the United States, also said it hopes for a speedy agreement on a comprehensive nuclear test ban.

Soviet delegate Viktor I. Likhachev, who failed to mention the SALT negotiations in his opening statement, agreed with Fisher that difficulties still hinder a chemical weapons treaty.

Fisher in his statement did not refer to recent NATO intelligence reports that Moscow may be developing lethal strains of bacteriological viruses in violation of the 1975 treaty prohibiting the "development, production" and "use" of biological arms.

The NATO sources claimed that U.S. satellites had detected installations near Moscow which may be developing more lethal strains of plague, anthrax and yellow fever viruses.

Fisher said a treaty banning all nuclear tests, under discussion on and off for more than two decades, "may at last be in sight."

"We hope to present to the conference at an early date the results of the trilateral discussions now going on," Fisher said.

Fisher also expressed some optimism on the SALT negotiations, saying an agreement is "taking shape."

He said Washington hopes for this agreement "at an early date" so that negotiations can begin promptly after more substantial nuclear weapons limitations.

Eagle scout

MIKE Nuninley, 15, received his Eagle Scout Award at a court of honor held at the Elizabeth Blvd. LDS Church.

No job offered Sam Dash

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Attorney General Griffin Bell met Wednesday with former Watergate counsel Samuel Dash, but Dash told reporters he was not offered the job vacated by Philadelphia U.S. attorney David Marston.

"The position has not been offered to me," Dash told reporters gathered outside Bell's office following the 45-minute meeting. "Until that situation arises, I don't want to comment."

Dash is considered the leading candidate of five men recommended to Bell by a panel of Philadelphia lawyers to replace Marston, a Republican prosecutor who was forced to resign Jan. 20.

Critics have charged the Marston move was part of a Democratic cover-up to quiet Marston's investigation of Reps. Daniel Flood and Joshua Ellberg, both Philadelphia Democrats.

Dash, former chief counsel to the Senate Watergate committee and currently a Georgetown University law professor, said today it would be inappropriate for him to comment on the charges.

"Only the attorney general should comment on this," he said.

Dash was one of two candidates with whom Bell was scheduled to meet today. Bell also scheduled an afternoon session with J. Clayton Undercoffer, the former acting U.S. attorney who was replaced by Marston.

President Carter has said a replacement for Marston would be nominated this week.

Dash was hired in 1976 by the state of Pennsylvania to study the performance of Philadelphia's office of special prosecutor, closed because the state's Democratic-dominated legislature refused to fund it.

His report concluded that Philadelphia had "succumbed to corruption" partially because the special prosecutor's office lacked the support of Gov. Milton Shapp.

For repeal

BOISE (UPI) — Proposed legislation repealing the state's comprehensive land-use planning bill is expected Tuesday of one of the Republican gubernatorial candidates.

C.L. "Butch" Otter, Caldwell, in applauding the repeal said he fought the land use planning bill that later became law when he was a state legislator in 1975.

Since that time the public has become aware "that this enactment is designed to destroy the most fundamental of rights, the personal control of private property."

The current repealing legislation is sponsored by Rep. Lyman G. Winchester, R-Kuna.

Rain, winds expected in Valley

Twin Falls, North Side, Burley-Rupert Area: Cloudy and windy at times, with recurring periods of rain through Friday. Overnight lows to 35; 35-45 and high temperatures Friday 45 to 62. Saturday's outlook is for rain.

Halley, Camas prairie, Lower Wood River Valley: Occasional light snow at times tonight and Friday. Overnight lows in the 20s and high temperatures Friday near 30 degrees. Saturday's outlook is for a chance of snow.

Synops: Some heavy snow fell during the night across the Idaho panhandle, but only scattered light rain and snow was reported over the southern part of the state. This moisture was caused by a Pacific frontal system which moved into Idaho during the night.

The flow aloft has changed to a westerly direction which will allow these Pacific storms to enter the state at a 2 to 36-hour interval. Only partial clearing is expected between these storms.

The three to five day forecast for Saturday through Monday calls for the above normal temperatures to continue with recurring periods of rain in the Valley and snow in the mountains, above 5,000 feet. High temperatures in the 40s and overnight lows near 30 degrees.

Continental pays 20 percent dividend

BOISE (UPI) — Holders of common stock in Continental Life and Accident Co. will receive a cash dividend of 20 cents per share including a regular dividend of 17 and one-half cents and an extra dividend of two and one-half cents.

The dividend will be paid March 14 to shareholders of record Feb. 10, the board announced.

Board chairman W.H. Langroise said preliminary results for 1977 indicate substantial increases over the previous year.

"We look for assets to have increased about 20 percent over 1976," he reported.

"Premium income should be up more than 10 percent and the company's net gain from operations should be some 25 percent higher than a year ago," Langroise said.

In other action, the board accepted the resignation of Alfred B. Hagan, Moscow, who served on the board for 20 years.

Bridge bids considered

American Motors Corporation considering merge

SOUTHFIELD, Mich. (UPI) — American Motors President Gerald C. Meyers revealed Wednesday that the struggling small car company was negotiating with other firms about the possibility of a merger or some other form of affiliation.

"Talks have been going on for a long time," Meyers told a news conference after AMC's annual stockholders meeting. "I assume they will go on for the time being."

Meyers refused to discuss which companies are involved and under what conditions AMC would merge or combine operations with another firm.

Meyers raised the possibility of a merger in his first appearance before stockholders as AMC's chief executive.

"Yes, we'll consider affiliation with another company. If it means we can better attain our objectives," Meyers said. "Yes, we'll consider it if the result means a better company for you (stockholders). And yes, we'll make the move if our employees and all the people who depend on us will benefit.

"The door is open when the right opportunity comes along. It hasn't yet. Nothing has matured to a point that warrants further discussion now. But we'll keep you advised."

But, Meyers carefully stressed the improved profit picture for the No. 4 domestic automaker. He said AMC made a $1.9 million profit in the most recent quarter and a $3 million profit for fiscal 1977.

"This meant that we engineered a $50 million turnaround from the year before," Meyers said. "In my book, that's progress."

While citing strong showings by AMC's Jeep and AM General segments, Meyers said the top priority for his new management team formed in the past two months is a turnaround in passenger car sales.

He promised stockholders a new line of smaller, more fuel-efficient cars, models designed to increase consumer interest, concentrated advertising and sales promotion, and a strengthened dealer system.

He said the recently announced switch away from Volkswagen four-cylinder engines now being used in AMC cars to better, less costly General Motors engines for the 1980s was an example of how his management group was acting quickly to revive the firm's finances and marketing.

During the meeting AMC also announced a new financing arrangement that indicated increased confidence in the company by major lenders.

Fish farm opposition revealed in petitions

By DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News writer

BOISE — Magic Valley legislators were presented with petitions Wednesday containing signatures of 510 Idahoans opposing the establishment of floating fish farms in the Snake River, and supporting provisions in the state water plan that would allow the "public interest" to be considered when water permits are issued.

The signatures were gathered within a week, said Edward Shokal, a rancher from the Hagerman Valley. Shokal, and representatives from five organizations met with seven Magic Valley representatives and senators to discuss problems of water quality. The organizations represented Wednesday included: The Citizens of Magic Valley, The Thousand Springs Water Sports Club, Inc.; The Citizens for the Protection of Idaho Water and Recreational Resources; the Idaho Conservation League, and the Idaho Wildlife Federation.

The organization representatives, who also met with members of the House Resources and Conservation Committee, criticized plans for proposed floating fish farms in the Snake River.

"Presently 13 floating fish farms are proposed by Mr. Ken Ellis, owner, to be floated in the public waters of the Snake River," Donald K. Zuck, president of the Idaho Wildlife Federation, said.

Noting the proposed hatcheries "will vary in size from 800 feet long and 14 feet wide to 150 feet long by 75 feet wide," Zuck said the hatcheries could destroy water quality, eliminate recreational possibilities, possibly spread fish diseases, obstruct commerce and transportation and lower land values.

Zuck said existing law places strict limits on floating fish farms. The people he represents, Zuck said "oppose any changes to this law," which would make it easier for permits for fish farms to be granted, and "which might put public interest and values in jeopardy."

Zuck added "there is talk of going the recall route for the legislator who introduces legislation to change this law."

The Magic Valley residents also urged area legislators to support policy number one of the state water plan. That proposed policy would add a fifth criteria to those which must now be considered by the Department of Water Resources when granting a permit for a water right application. The fifth criteria would allow the department to consider the "public interest" when granting such a permit, in order existing law, a permit must be granted if the applicant can demonstrate there is a water supply available; his use of the water will not interfere with existing water rights; he has financial resources to complete the work involved, and he has not made the application for delay or speculative purposes.

"Legislation is needed to make this a part of Idaho law," Shokal said, in support of adding a fifth criteria to existing law. "It is this public interest policy that is so important to the people who have and need recreational activities as provided by Idaho recreational resources."

Also present in Boise to meet with legislators were Arthur DuPont, of Hagerman; the coordinator of the petition drive; Mark Ingram of Boise, executive director of the Idaho Conservation League; Lloyd Reed of Buhl, representing the Thousand Springs Water Sports Club; Ruth Shokal of Hagerman; Edward C. Shokal of Hagerman; Raleigh W. Stevens of Hagerman; and Gary Stone of Kimberly.

Pleads innocent

By LORAYNE O. SMITH

GOODING — Gooding Mayor Don Morrow has pleaded innocent to charges of disturbing the peace stemming from an incident in a Gooding bar, and Gooding's acting police chief has been fired.

Morrow appeared Monday before Magistrate Fred Shaw, who informed him of his right to tentatively set a jury trial to hear the case, the complaint, signed by city policeman Darryl C. Hancock, claims the mayor acted in a disorderly way in the bar of the Lincoln Inn at 12:30 a.m. Jan. 21.

Councilman Chet Floyd said Wednesday Paul Brown, who had been coordinating the police shifts since the resignation last week of Police Chief Dwayne Walker, has been terminated.

Floyd emphasized that the filing of charges against the mayor had no connection with the dismissal of Brown, but said he had not other comment on the reason for Brown's dismissal. Floyd said, "I was elected by the public. I'm doing what is best for the city." He added "we'll have a good police department, but we can't do it in 30 days."

Floyd said through agreement of the city council and mayor he is in charge of the police department.

... and new baby girl

Twin Falls woman didn't beat stork to hospital

By BOB ZUCKERMAN
Twin Falls Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Though he raced through a stop sign and two red lights, Larry Guisolasola, a 45-year-old Twin Falls welder, just couldn't beat the stork.

Before Guisolasola could get his wife, Karen, 26, to Magic Valley Memorial Hospital early Tuesday morning, she gave birth to a 4-pound, 4-ounce girl in the front seat of his 1966 Dodge sedan.

As Larry tells the story, it all began at least six months ago when he and his wife first realized she was pregnant. "But obviously that wasn't the case," Larry says. "She just won't go."

But early Tuesday morning Karen said she was ready to see one.

"I thought I had at least an hour to an hour and half yet," she says. "But obviously that wasn't the case."

Larry helped her out to the car, then took his 2-year-old daughter, Alicia Marie, across the street to the neighbors who earlier had agreed to babysit.

"He raced back to his car and off they went, northwest on Fifth Avenue North, through the stop sign at Addison Avenue, then west on Addison Avenue through two red lights — at Second Avenue North and East Five Points toward the hospital.

Running the red lights didn't seem to help Larry though.

"When we hit the first red light, I knew we weren't going to make it," Karen says.

"I remember she said it was here, and I pulled over to the side of the road," Larry says. "The only thing I could remember was getting it to cry, and so I picked it up (from the seat) and shook it a little and put it in her arms. It started crying then. You could hear it for blocks."

Larry returned to the driver's seat then and headed for the hospital emergency ward.

"When we got there, he went into Emergency for a few moments, but by then it was all over," Karen says.

"It dawned on me then that I hadn't cut the cord," Larry says. "I told the doctor, 'They're still hooked together.' He just laughed. He said, 'You better have a cigarette. We'll take care of them now.'"

At last report, mother and baby, who will be named Carmella once the Guisolasolas decide which way they want to spell her name, were welding courses. The baby measures 21 inches long.

However, Larry says he's ready to get out of the baby business.

"He says he doesn't mind the driving of even the new name he's acquired (at the College of Southern Idaho where he's taking advanced welding courses), his friends now call him 'Doc.' "But I think that's it," he says. "This was cutting it too close. Might not be that lucky next time."

Phone customers to get cost break

By LARRY SWISHER
Times-News writer

BOISE — Idaho telephone company customers will receive a break on most direct dial calls made to points within the state, under a Public Utilities Commission decision released today.

Although today's PUC order grants an overall rate increase to telephone companies on in-state long distance calls, the PUC widened the price gap between direct dial and operator-assisted calls.

Also, the PUC order allows companies to offer the same night and weekend discounts for in-state long distance calls as they now do for out-of-state calls, according to PUC information director Gus Andrews.

Another innovation to be introduced to customers of Mountain Bell and other phone companies is lower minimum rates establishing the one-minute and two-minute, in addition to the traditional three-minute, long distance telephone call.

Speaking of other types of long distance calls, Andrews said no rate increase was granted for METROPAC calls, as the telephone companies had requested.

Under previous rates, a direct dial night call from Twin Falls to Boise, a distance of 114 miles, would cost a minimum of 50 cents for the first three minutes.

Under the new rate schedule, that minimum charge will be dropped.

Instead, the first minute will cost 17 cents, the first two minutes, 28 cents, and the first three minutes, 38 cents.

Andrews said the PUC "widened the price gap" between direct dial and operator-assisted calls, to "more accurately reflect the cost of providing toll service."

A three-minute operator-assisted call from Twin Falls to Boise will increase from the present 70 cents to 1.73 under daytime rates, while the night rate, at the same call, would increase from 55 cents to $1.73.

The PUC order also directs the telephone companies to jointly prepare a statewide off-hours economy package by May 15.

Andrews said an example of such a plan would be to offer up to two hours of toll calls in-state for an economy flat fee.

Calling hours under the experimental plan would likely be all day Saturday, Sunday until 5 p.m. and each night from 11 p.m. to 9 a.m. (continued on page 20)

Hernandez back in jail

TWIN FALLS — Richard Hernandez, 27, Kimberly, was back in the county jail Wednesday with his work release temporarily cancelled.

Hernandez, serving a sentence for involuntary manslaughter in connection with a double traffic fatality last August, was granted a release from jail by Magistrate Daniel Meehl in order to maintain his employment. He had been serving his jail time on weekends only but was not permitted to drive an automobile.

County officers arrested him late Tuesday and charged him with driving while suspended, returning him to jail.

Gunshot wound fatal

KIMBERLY — Harry W. Schultz, 61, Kimberly, died at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital about 2:20 p.m. Wednesday of a gunshot wound in the head.

Kimberly Police Chief James Campbell said the wound was self-inflicted and the shooting occurred at the Schultz home, 610 Monroe St. W., about 1:50 p.m. He said Schultz had been in ill health for some time. Campbell said the death was ruled a suicide by County Coroner Cloyce Edwards.

Juvenile arrested

HELENA — A 15-year-old Jerome boy was taken into custody Wednesday by Jerome police in connection with four burglaries of two Jerome businesses over the last three months.

Police said the juvenile has been released to his parents pending court action.

The youth was apprehended "after investigation and from evidence left behind at the scene of the latest burglary, which took place Friday at the Jerome Western Auto Store. Nothing was taken from the store during the break-in, Police said.

The juvenile allegedly committed three prior burglaries at Paul's Market in the months of November, December and January.

The total amount taken from Paul's Market amounted to about $200. Police said only a small amount was taken each time making it difficult to determine which items were missing from the store.

The county prosecutor is preparing a court petition to have the youth placed under the Youth Rehabilitation Act.

Listed satisfactory

BURLEY — Twenty-one-year-old Isidoro Flores of the Paul Labor camp was reported in satisfactory condition at Cassia Memorial Hospital after suffering facial cuts which Burley Police say occurred during a knife fight early Thursday morning.

Jose Martinez, 47, of Hupert, was being held on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon in Cassia County jail on $25,000 bond, police said. Martinez was to be arraigned sometime today in Cassia County Magistrate Court on the charge.

According to police, a man identified as Flores entered the Yacht Club dining room at 2 a.m. Thursday and yelled at Martinez, knocked him off a chair and stabbed Martinez in the leg.

The two men went outside to a nearby alley and continued fighting, the police say, and Flores was injured at that time. Martinez was not hospitalized for his leg wound; an officer said.

Jerome golf course expansion unveiled

By LARRY SWISHER
Times-News writer

JEROME — A Magic Valley group has unveiled a plan to develop a combination golf course and residential area on approximately 160 acres owned by the Jerome Country Club.

The plan, as outlined this week in a letter to the country club's 225 members, would expand the present nine-hole golf course to eighteen with residential areas in and around the added nine holes.

Construction of the new links, if members approve the plan, could be completed by next fall allowing possible real estate development to begin soon after, according to the letter.

Joseph Davidson, a Jerome realtor, said he and two other Jerome Country Club members are encouraging other members to join in the development group, tentatively called Mesa Verde, and hope to get approval from the country club at a members' meeting in early March.

A similar proposal made by a Twin Falls group received the endorsement of the club's members several years ago but that development never materialized.

Davidson estimated building the added nine holes, which would not interfere with play on the present courses during construction, would cost between $400,000 and $600,000.

Following completion of the added links, one-acre lots for single family homes and/or condominiums would be developed and sold totaling approximately 85-125 building lots.

Davidson said, adding there would be "tight controls" on the homes and condominiums.

"There has been a popular desire among many of the members of the country club to expand the course to 18 holes," as well as in developing the real estate that would remain, Davidson said. "Some of these people would like to build homes and move here."

The expansion would accommodate double the present membership and mean a broader base of financial support, but also desired goals of many members, Davidson, a past club director, said. (continued on page 20)

Jerome schedules sewer election

By LARRY SWISHER

TWIN FALLS—An election to establish a local improvement district south of Jerome and choose a board of directors will be held Feb. 27.

The proposed Jerome South Sewer District vote will be taken at the Klaus Auction Center on Lincoln Road south of Jerome from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Robert Williams, attorney for the proposed district, said voters will not be assuming any financial burden by creating the district.

Williams said approval would simply allow different approaches to providing sewer service in the district to be studied.

The lack of sewer service in the area has stalled commercial development expected to be the main user. If the district is formed along Lincoln Road.

Besides the question of whether to form the district, five persons will be on the ballot running for five director seats.

They are Dr. Wesley Rose, Melvyn Bongochera, Gerald

Starrow, James Giodowski, and Bert Arndt, all landowners in the proposed district.

All are area residents—Lut Arndt, a partner in Crystal Developments, which plans to build a motel at the Interstate 80-Jerome interchange and has already given financial help to the district. Arndt is from Ponderosa, Ore.

Williams said some 85 persons are eligible to vote on the proposal which requires a simple majority to pass.

To be eligible a person must own, and pay general property taxes on land within the proposed district boundaries.

There will be an up-to-date list of those eligible to vote at the polls, Williams said.

He said both husbands and wives in the district will be able to vote as well as all members of partnerships but corporations will be able to cast only one vote.

The district, whose main users are expected to be commercial and light industrial, would encompass an area south of Jerome one-quarter mile on either side of Lincoln Road between the city limits and the Interstate.

Landowners; issuing revenue bonds requiring a simple majority approval, or operating from usage fees.

The main expense will come from building a lift station to pump waste water uphill from the district to the Jerome city sewer system and treating costs.

The proposed Jerome South Sewer District has already received some financial support from Crystal Developments and Mountain Bell Telephone Co. and sewer pipe has already been laid along most of South Lincoln.

Last summer, Crystal paid about $10,000 for a pipe along Lincoln Road and Mountain Bell agreed to share trenching costs with the district if formed by mid-1978.

Mountain Bell dug the trench to install new underground phone lines, and the proposed sewer district saved long delays and an estimated $50,000 by the arrangement.

Democrats dinner Saturday

TWIN FALLS—Idaho Democrats will gather Saturday in Boise for their annual Jefferson-Jackson Day Banquet featuring Sen. Frank Church and Gov. John Evans.

The dinner will be held at 6 p.m. at the Roadway Inn in Boise and will honor the late Sen. Art Murphy, Democratic legislative leader for over 30 years. Mrs. Slotten said some proceeds from the banquet will be returned to the local party in the form of a rebate on each ticket sold.

Tickets are $10 a plate, or $35 for reserved seats, but senior citizens and students receive substantial discounts.

Proceeds go to the Idaho Democratic Party Central Committee, which sponsors the event each year, and to county central committees.

A separate event, the governor's prayer breakfast will be held at 7 a.m. Saturday at the Roadway Inn.

Interest has been added to the annual gathering by the recent resignation of state Democratic chairman John Greenfield.

The party central committee will meet Saturday afternoon to pick a new chairman to lead this year's election effort. It will also pick a new party secretary.

Slotten said it promises to be an exciting weekend and urged local Democrats to join their tickets now and make plans to attend.

Harding hearings set locally Saturday

REP—George Hanson, R-Idaho, will preside at a special hearing on public range land problems in Twin Falls Saturday.

The day-long session, divided into two parts, will get under way in the Roundup Room at the Roperson Hotel at 9 a.m. Following a breakfast, the hearings will get under way at 10 a.m. and will conclude at 2:30 p.m.

Cattlemen, 4 sheepmen, including individuals from Elmore, Blaine and Gooding counties, will be heard during the morning session.

Desert entry and Carey Act problems will be discussed during the afternoon meeting. Those wishing to testify Saturday morning should contact Jim Kast, 336-2477, King Hill; Allen Bauescher at 764-2413, Fairfield; or Tom Chivers at 879-2355, Challis.

Those wishing to testify in the afternoon must undergo a call Hanson's Twin Falls office at 734-6466.

Representatives from the offices of Sen. Jim McClure, Sen. Frank Church and Rep. Steve Symms are expected to participate.

Telephone rates revised

The new rate adjustments are the result of a formal complaint filed by General Telephone Co. of the Northwest. That company had claimed its share of the interstate toll revenues was insufficient and that Mountain Bell had rejected requests to file a rate increase with the PUC.

Mountain Bell administrators the toll separations for all the telephone companies doing business in Idaho.

Revenues from long distance calls are pooled and then distributed to each company.

As a result of General's complaint, Mountain Bell filed a request for a rate increase and public hearings were conducted in August and October of 1977 and January, 1978.

Andrews said in granting an overall toll call increase, the PUC recognized this would have varying results on each telephone company depending on its investment in Idaho toll equipment. However, the commission determined it would be more reasonable to monitor the income of individual companies in the toll pool and make necessary adjustments in other areas rather than abandon the uniform rate plan for Idaho customers.

PUC commissioner Conley Ward voted against granting the increase, saying "the utilities failed to carry their burden of proof that the proposed increase was reasonable."

Ward said he objected to conducting future proceedings to make adjustments in local exchange rates to insure against excess earnings. He said these proceedings mean the burden of proof has shifted from the companies to the PUC.

Development planned for Jerome course

He also said the Mesa Verda group has checked the proposed plan with the health department and other local government officials.

The new plan would be set back 900 feet from the Snake River Canyon Rim as required by the health department, Davidson said.

A water supply is available for both the proposed residential area and the golf course. Residences would have a central water supply system but individual septic tanks to be approved by the health department.

The Jerome Country Club is located on Lincoln Road south of Jerome near the Snake River Canyon Rim and was founded in 1922.

The present grounds and facilities occupy about 55 acres of about 244 owned by the country club.

The Mesa Verda plan calls for the development group to build the new plan under contract with the country club.

In exchange the country club would deed the land remaining in the Mesa Verda for real estate development.

Lasorda bouncing in banquet circuit

CHERRY HILL, N.J. (UPI) — Tommy Lasorda has eaten enough rubber chicken lately to supply snow tires for all the cars in the state.

Lasorda's off-season has been a series of one-night road trips on the banquet circuit. The Los Angeles Dodgers' manager has zipped across time zones so often he's been in a constant state of jet lag.

But Lasorda does not suffer tongue lag. In fact, if there's anything UPI's National League manager of the year looks more than Dodger Blue, it's talking.

"Honest to goodness, it's the first time it happened," the Los Angeles Dodgers manager recalled recently at yet another stop on the dinner circuit. "I was in New York Tuesday and I left word for a 10 o'clock wakeup call to go to mass."

"I couldn't remember why I wanted to be called at 10," he said. "Did I have to catch a plane or what? The first time in my life I didn't know where I was."

He was a featured speaker at the Philadelphia Sports Writers Association Dinner, which was a homecoming of sorts for Lasorda, who grew up in nearby Norristown, Pa.

But it wasn't much of a visit; Lasorda was due to speak the next morning at Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif.

Before the dinner, he was signing autographs for anyone who asked and greeting writers like they were old friends.

"You know, it's a tremendous honor to be named UPI's manager of the year. But I would have not been a reality without the efforts of everybody in the Dodger organization," said Lasorda, who spent 23 seasons as a player, scout, minor league manager and coach with the Dodgers before becoming manager in 1977.

"After I got the UPI award, I sat down and I wrote 25 personal letters to each one of the players, and to the four coaches and the general manager. I wanted to share the award with all of them."

"For a man in his first year as a manager in an organization I am so deeply proud of, to win with a team I deeply love, you don't know what it means to me," he said.

And Lasorda, says things will be even better in 1978.

"I'm going into this season optimistically. We're actually going to be a little better in '78 than '77. They'll be hungry again, hungrier than they were in '77."

"We're going along with the same things we did last year but we'll have (Terry) Foster in the bullpen and we'll have catcher Jerry Grote for an entire season and that's got to help us."

"Even though the Reds didn't get (pitcher) Vida Blue, they'll be better," he said.

"As I have told my players many times, 'Uneasy lies the man who wears the crown.'"

Starting all over

NEW COACH of the Los Angeles Rams, George Allen, right, reaches out to shake hands with owner Carroll Rosenbloom at a news conference announcing the hiring of the recent-fired Washington, D.C., mentor.

Mistrial declared in Bubba's suit

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI) — A new trial will be scheduled on a $2.5 million damage suit by former all-Pro defensive end Bubba Smith against the NFL and two game officials, but it won't be an instant replay.

Smith's first trial on his damage suit ended up with no result Wednesday when a six-member federal court jury said it could not reach agreement and the case was declared a mistrial.

The second hearing in the case is not expected to occur before spring.

The 6-foot-8, 270-pound Smith had little comment as he left the courtroom, saying the mistrial ruling was "like going into sudden death overtime."

The 32-year-old Smith contended in his suit that his football career was shortened by a knee injury he suffered in a 1972 pre-season game at Tampa Stadium.

An all-pro player in 1970 and 1971 with the Baltimore Colts, Smith underwent surgery after the pre-season game and missed the entire 1972 season. He was traded to the Oakland Raiders in 1973 and was traded by the Raiders to the Houston Oilers in 1974.

Smith was cut by the Oilers two games into the 1976 season. Smith suffered the injury when he collided with an aluminum downs-marker after jumping a player on a play along the sideline.

He contended Robert Lastra, who was manning the marker, was negligent in failing to get the pole out of the way as the play developed along the sideline as is required by NFL regulations.

Allen promises new offense, to keep draft picks for LA

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A new George Allen is the new coach of the Los Angeles Rams today with a promise of an exciting new offense and a commitment to coach and teach only and stay out of most front office activities.

Allen, smiling and affable, returned to the club that fired him twice, under an earlier regime, and said he thought the Rams would have a good chance to get to the Super Bowl, a goal dear to the heart of owner Carroll Rosenbloom.

Rosenbloom emphasized Allen was hired to coach and not to be general manager which he was, with the Washington Redskins. During his seven years with the Redskins, Allen gained a reputation as a wheeler and dealer who bought experienced players by giving up draft choices for years to come.

The contract with Allen has not yet been drawn but agreement was reached on all points for a multi-year pact, Rosenbloom said. He would not mention money.

There will be no giveaway of draft choices with the Rams, both Rosenbloom and Allen said at a Wednesday news conference.

Allen was given the right to select his own assistants and would like to bring some former aides from Washington to the Rams. He will take part with other members of the Ram organization in selecting players in the forthcoming college draft.

But owner Rosenbloom, 74, an 11-time Super Bowl champion, and the general manager Don Klosterman, will carry on the front office work and run the club off the field.

Allen, natty in a beige suit with eggshell shirt and brown tie with a light stripe, looked like a man who had the world by the tail with a downhill pull.

Rosenbloom and Klosterman joked about the coach's reputation as a trader.

"When we wanted a draft choice, we went to Washington," said Klosterman. "Now that's going to be difficult."

Rosenbloom said, "He will take an active part in drafting players. It will be a refreshing experience for him to pick players in the draft."

When Allen was asked the direct question if he would trade away draft choices, he replied:

"No. When I went to Washington, I had a big rebuilding program. The Redskins hadn't had a winning season in 14 years. We were asked to win big at once."

"We won't have to use that policy here. I really relish the opportunity just to coach and teach. During my seven years as general manager in Washington, I really didn't have enough time to coach football. I'm interested in coaching and teaching. I don't think there will be any problem there."

"Does he feel he has to get to the Super Bowl in his first year?"

"I don't think we have to get there. That's a goal."

"If we don't have any key injuries, I think we have a good chance."

He said the Rams have the second best personnel behind Dallas in the National Football Conference.

He obviously admires the Cowboy offense with spread halfback passes and other varieties. "We are going to run a multiple offense," he said, "multiple set formations that we know put pressure on the defense and are difficult to stop."

At another point, he said, "We're going to have an interesting, exciting offense. The fans are going to enjoy it and the players are going to like it."

Yet he was quick to add, "First of all, you win on defense. Dallas won the Super Bowl in Dallas."

The Rams won the NFC West the past five years under Chuck Knox who quit to go to Buffalo.

Celts sign Ernie D

BOSTON (UPI) — The Boston Celtics signed former Los Angeles Lakers guard Ernie DiGregorio to a 10-day contract Wednesday and named Bill Saunders to replace Fred Saunders in New Orleans for a second-round draft choice.

The trading of Saunders, a four-year veteran, allowed the Celtics to add DiGregorio to the roster without having to place injured guard Jo Jo White on the disabled list. The Celtics must trim one player Feb. 19 when Kermit Washington, reinstated Wednesday by NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien, joins the squad.

Piston, Nuggets trade

DENVER (UPI) — Veteran guard Ralph Simpson and two future draft choices have been acquired from the Detroit Pistons Wednesday in exchange for guard Jim Price and the Nuggets' first round draft choice in 1979, a team spokesman said.

Adlerly joins staff

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Temple University football head coach Wayne Hardin has named Herb Adlerly, a former All-Pro defensive back in the National Football League who played in four Super Bowls, as an assistant.

Hardin, who announced other staff changes, said Wednesday that Adlerly, a native of Philadelphia, will be a defensive back field coach.

NFL declares 126 men as free agents

NEW YORK (UPI) — John Dutton of Baltimore, Wally Chambers of Chicago, Terry Metcalf of St. Louis, Ed White of Minnesota, Jack Tatum of Oakland, Dan Pastorini of Houston and John Mendenhall of the New York Giants were the prominent names on the list of 126 players announced as free agents Wednesday by the National Football League.

According to the bargaining agreement signed last year, the players become free to negotiate with any NFL club on Feb. 1. Every club with the exception of Tampa Bay has a player on the list.

Dutton, the Colts' star defensive end, reported late to camp last season after a contract dispute and still managed to earn All-Conference honors. Chambers never recovered from a knee injury after being named the outstanding defensive linebacker in the league the previous season and wound up on the Bears' bench.

Metcalf, the Cardinals' star running back, wants out of St. Louis and White, one of the top guards in the league, reported late to the Vikings last year in a contract dispute.

Tatum is the Raiders' star defensive back, Pastorini is the Oilers' quarterback and a former No. 1 draft pick, and Mendenhall is a standout defensive tackle for the Giants.

Two of the players on the list, Joe Namath of Los Angeles and John Shimmers of Cincinnati, have announced their retirement.

The clubs hit hardest are Houston, Washington and St. Louis. The Oilers and Cardinals have 13 players each listed as free agents and the Redskins have 11.

Washington joins Celtics after being reinstated by NBA

NEW YORK (UPI) — Kermit Washington, suspended 60 days without pay and fined a record $10,000 on Dec. 12 for punching Houston forward Rudy Tomjanovich, was reinstated by NBA Commissioner Lawrence O'Brien Wednesday and will return to action with his new club, the Boston Celtics, on Feb. 10.

O'Brien's decision did not come as a surprise to Houston club officials, even though it was felt by many that the commissioner should have extended the suspension for the rest of the season since Tomjanovich will not be able to play again this season.

The 26-year-old Washington was with the Los Angeles Lakers on Dec. 9 when he struck Tomjanovich in the face during a game and broke the jaw and nose of the Rockets' forward. Tomjanovich subsequently suffered eye damage and was forced to undergo plastic surgery on his face. He has a damage suit against Washington that is still pending.

"I have no strong reaction one way or another," said Rockets' president and general manager Ray Patterson upon learning of Washington's reinstatement. "Whether Mr. O'Brien's action was right or wrong, too strong or too lenient, I don't know. I don't care either because it doesn't have any bearing on our situation."

"Our main thrust is to seek compensation from the commissioner for the loss of Rudy. We will continue with our plans to present our case to the commissioner. I expect to take him to court this weekend at the trial state meetings. We will continue with our plans to go to court if we do not get compensation from the commissioner."

Washington, currently in his fifth NBA campaign, was traded to Boston along with guard Don Chaney for guard Charlie Scott on Dec. 12 and applied for reinstatement in an official letter to the commissioner on Jan. 23.

Sorkin indicts player agents

NEW YORK (UPI) — Richard Sorkin, a former sports agent sentenced to three years in prison for grand larceny, testified today that professional sports agents frequently doublebill their clients and often sign up student athletes in violation of standing rules.

Sorkin was the first witness at a two-day hearing held by the state Senate Select Committee on Crime to explore the practices of sports agents.

The committee chairman, state Sen. Ralph Marino, said in an opening statement that "inexperienced or unscrupulous persons who call themselves agents" have moved into the field of professional sports management.

Marino said the committee will investigate a number of questionable practices, including the recruitment of young athletes, false promises of "million-dollar contracts and commercial promotions," and the lure of "glitter cars and women to the unsuspecting athlete."

Sorkin, who was sentenced in November to three years in prison on various charges resulting from his activities as a sports agent, testified that sports agents often double-bill their clients. He cited one instance in which a hockey executive told him an agent retained to sign a player was paid both by the team and the player.

In addition, Sorkin said, agents often send expensive money to promising college athletes in violation of NCAA rules.

Real Spalding-burger

A spokesman for the Celtics said the team hoped to get permission to allow Washington to work out with the team immediately, but will not be able to join the Celtics for a practice until his suspension ends Feb. 10.

Washington had an 11.5 scoring average in 25 games with the Lakers, but he is regarded as one of the strongest rebounders in the league and is expected to supply the hole on the boards the team has been lacking since Paul Silas was traded prior to last season.

In agreeing to reinstate Washington, O'Brien said he rejected the "eye-for-an-eye" theory, because he felt the hefty fine and 60-day suspension was adequate punishment.

"Whatever appeal this eye-for-an-eye justice may have held for ancient civilizations, I cannot comfortably embrace it as the controlling rule for decision in this case because, I, as the person with the duty of decision, must shoulder the responsibility of determining both the adequacy of the punishment and its effectiveness as a deterrent," said O'Brien.

"As to the adequacy of the punishment, I determine the fine and 60-day suspension to be sufficient. I do not presume to pronounce it as the only appropriate punishment, since such questions must necessarily yield a wide range of responsible decisions. On both a personal and professional basis, I am deeply concerned about the seriousness of the injuries to Mr. Tomjanovich, but no punishment that I administer can reduce those injuries or speed his return to the NBA."

Furthermore, he said, to allow myself deliberation to be guided solely by Mr. Tomjanovich's desire for revenge would necessarily be led to a questionable dealing with Mr. Washington's application."

The sentence Sorkin faces stems from an original count grand larceny indictment issued by the Nassau County.

Hawaii's weather pleases pros

HONOLULU (UPI) — The PGA tour, beset by foul weather at most of the stops this year, comes to the sunshine and warmth of the 50th state this week for the first stop on the western swing, the $250,000 Hawaiian Open.

And quickly, freckle-faced Tom Watson, 1977's top money winner and already victorious in two tournaments this year, has been tabbed as the choice to take home the $50,000 first prize money.

Watson, who picked up checks totaling $130,653 in 1977, already has pocketed $91,890 in unofficial 1978 earnings with wins at the Tucson Open and the Crosby and 11th and 17th pace finishes at the San Diego and Phoenix opens.

Besides momentum, the Stanford graduate has the par 71, 7,234-yard, Waialae Country Club course groomed to his liking.

"The greens are about the best you'll find anywhere on the tour," he said after a practice round at midweek. "The course, in general, appears to be in excellent condition."

For the record, Watson finished fifth last year and won a five-year hiatus has played the Hawaiian open at $3 strokes under par.

Young Jay Haas, who claimed his first PGA title at San Diego Sunday, also will be on hand as will defending champion Bruce Lietzke.

Miller Barber, winner of last month's rain-delayed Phoenix Open, was scheduled to be in the field, but withdrew because of back injury.

sustained when he slipped and fell on an icy pavement at his Dallas home.

Lietzke, who skipped San Diego to hone his game here, finished with a flurry to take the 1977 Hawaiian Open title away from Don January and Japan's Takashi Murakami by three strokes.

Nordic skiing

By Leif Odmark

LEIF ODMARK IS FOUNDER AND DIRECTOR OF SUN VALLEY NORDIC SKI SCHOOL AND TOURING CENTER, FORMER U.S. OLYMPIC NORDIC COACH AND ON THE FACULTY OF THE SUN VALLEY HEALTH INSTITUTE.

Q: I'd like to take up X-country skiing. I think I would like the sport. What is the best approach to buying equipment?

A: The best approach to buying equipment is to rent. I think it is the only approach for two important reasons. (1) You may not be sure at the beginning whether you actually like X-country enough to invest in your own equipment and (2) until you ski a time or two you may not know whether you want wax or non-wax skis and it is important to know before spending your money.

Q: I read somewhere that you need a thermometer to judge the snow temperature for waxing your skis. How do you use it?

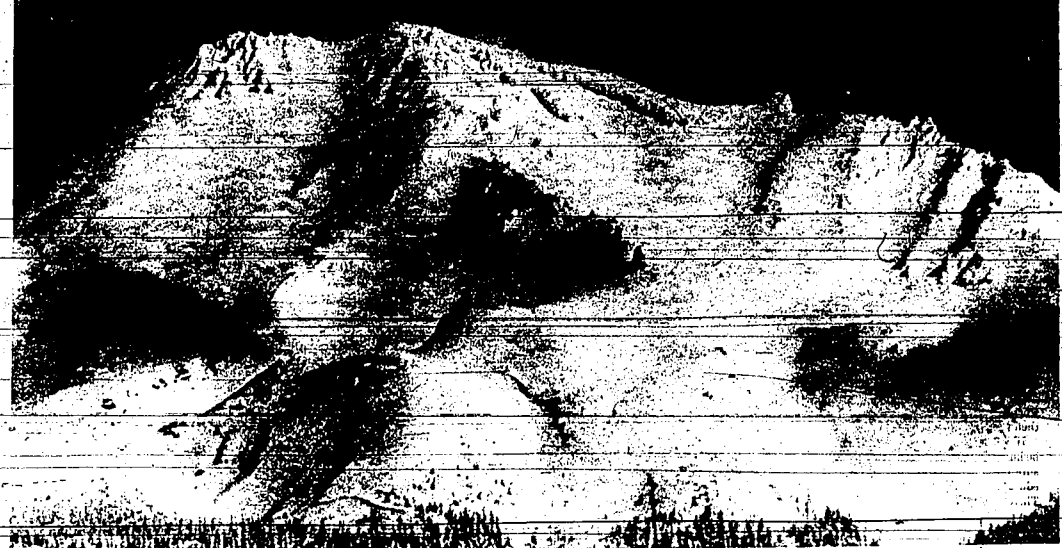

A: Some people carry thermometers along with them, but I don't feel they are very reliable for checking snow conditions because they are not actually in the snow. Of course, you stick one in the snow and take a reading but you are really just getting the surface temperatures which do not necessarily reflect the true snow conditions. I feel the best way to judge snow temperature and conditions is to squeeze a handful of snow in a gloved hand. The glove, of course, is a protection against the possibility of getting a misreading based on body heat. When you open your hand, you will have one of three types of snow: new or fine-grained snow with small sharp crystals that have developed after it has been on the ground a matter of days, or crusty corn snow that develops from melting and refreezing. You will soon learn to get a surprisingly accurate feel of the snow using this method.

Q: I have been skiing around the backyard, through the neighborhood and across the golf course for a while now. Do you think I am ready to go on my first cross-country tour?

A: Yes, I think you are if you follow my rule of the 5 P's: PRIOR PLANNING PREVENTS POOR PERFORMANCE. Think about the trip and you will be sure and plan well ahead of the tour. The first thing is to determine where you are going to go. Are you going to be gone for lunch? You are out to have a good time and enjoy nature, so do not race or hurry. For the first tour it is wise to choose a spot that is never more than a half mile from a major road, occupied home or lodge. Once you are more confident and experienced and know the terrain better, you will want to take longer trips. Have a good tour.

Q: My husband is almost 70 and I am 64. He's been reading your column and wants me to go X-country skiing. I tell him he's too old, but he won't believe me. How can I persuade him?

A: Pictures tell a 1,000 words. Here is a picture of Jackrabbit Johansen celebrating his 100th birthday by racing with his daughter at the Sun Valley Ski Club reunion three years ago. He is now 103 years old and attributes his longevity to X-country skiing.

It's all fluff

Mt. Shasta in Northern California was plagued by the lack of the white stuff last year but with the heavy snows this year resort owners and skiers should be happy that that is far from the case. Too much snow has almost shut the resort down for the season. Fifteen feet of snow on a 23-foot base is creating quite the problem for the owners.

Too little, too much hurts Shasta

Mount Shasta Ski resort, plagued last year by no snow and this year by too much, must be moved down the mountain or it will shut down, owner Carl McConnell says.

McConnell is looking to the U.S. Forest Service for the permission he needs to keep from going under financially as well as literally, although he is certain the plan will be opposed by environmentalists.

"Of course they environmentalists are going to give us a hard time," McConnell said. "They fought Disney."

McConnell already has permission from Kimberly Clark to build a new resort farther down the 11,622-foot mountain.

"My wife says I'm a damn fool to do this," said McConnell who lost $200,000 last year when the drought prevented any skiing at Mt. Shasta. "My wife has said for years that if I died today the place would close tomorrow."

The resort had only the mountain was closed all of last season and looked like a cow pasture until just before Thanksgiving. Then it started to snow and kept snowing. Storm after storm, until 15 feet of new snow on top of a 25 foot base plugged up the access road.

Two weeks ago, the Green Butte Chairlift was lost in an avalanche, and McConnell began shutting back down. Green Butte climbs for one mile, from 8,000 to 9,400 feet up the mountainside and was the main attraction for skiers who came to Mt. Shasta.

McConnell said he will not try to replace it because the loss totaled $500,000 to $700,000.

On Sunday, power failed at the lodge and McConnell closed up while crews worked around the clock to restore it.

"I'm obligated to the people who have purchased season tickets and so on and we're going to have the skiing," he said.

Resort Manager Suzanne Derby predicted the resort would be back in operation this coming weekend. She said that on a good weekend the lodge draws between 1,100 and 1,300 people.

"During the last 11 days of December, we drew 9,200 people. We're the only people who bring industry in here during the winter. All of the nearby business communities feel it when we are shut down," he said.

McConnell said that unless the U.S. Forest Service grants permission by May or June to construct the new lifts, he will shut down the operation.

McConnell took over the lodge in 1971 and he says it hasn't made him much money. In fact, although the resort is the heart of any ski spread in extreme Northern California and attracts vacationers from Southern Oregon and Northern California, it has had so many difficulties that it has made money only once in 10 years.

"When we have good weather there isn't any finer place to ski," he said. "The way we deal with these whiteouts and tremendous winds because the lodge is at 9,000 feet."

While McConnell said he thinks he can get financing for the $4 million to $5 million he needs to build the new operation, but he needs permission from the federal government to build six or seven lifts connecting Kimberly Clark land to the present high altitude operation.

That way, even if the roads were plugged up by snow, skiers could still get to the high altitude slopes.

Snowshoeing, the way to travel

By NELSON BRYANT

Over three decades ago, I came to regard snowshoeing as a poor man's endeavor.

This attitude was born on a February evening in Hanover, N.H., when, covered with sawdust from a wage-earning stint at building or repairing furniture for professors wives in the Dartmouth College Student Workshop, I walked across the campus past dozens of my better-heeled classmates gambling in the snow with their winter carnival debts and talking of the splendid skiing to be had on the morrow.

Spiking equipment, lifts and lodges I couldn't afford, but a pair of second-hand snowshoes cost me only $10 and I was launched on a series of delightful walks in snow-deep woods.

Today, neither poor nor rich, I cling to this peaceful but invigorating endeavor.

There really isn't much difference in cost between fitting out for snowshoeing or cross-country skiing, but it takes much less time to learn the basics of the former. A beginner at snowshoeing can get quite well after an hour or so of practice.

Snowshoes come in various sizes and shapes. At the extremes, the stubby bearpaw is designed for relatively level terrain, snowshoes have the added advantage of leaving your hands free, and this is particularly true if you are hunting. (For truly steep climbs, you will need ski poles.) I have spent many pleasant hours hunting for snowshoe rabbits (using hares) with a friend who persists in cross-country skiing for this endeavor. Because he has a ski pole in each hand, he has to carry his shotgun across his back on a sling. He has missed many shots because of this, and occasionally I've watched him come sailing downhill through a thick pine plantation at high speed only to wind up in a jumbled heap when the protruding muzzle or stock of his gun catches on some branch.

The only time I envy him his skis is when we are moving across a wide meadow, or over hunting cover, or when there is an unobstructed decent before us.

And on a winter campaign trip or an ice-fishing excursion to a remote pond, one of two snowshoers can pull a heavily-laden toboggan behind them, something skiers can't do.

There are many styles of snowshoe bindings, but, except for competitive racing, the best thing I have found is the adaptor for a conventional binding developed by some Vermont friends.

The average binding has a toe strap of white leather into which the boot is inserted, a strap that goes around the heel and another that goes over the instep and under the arch. My friends cut away all but the toe strap and substituted one of those heavy, black rubber bands with a hook on each end that one can buy in most hardware stores for the other two straps.

The hook is removed from one end of the rubber band and that end is made fast with nylon line to the crossbrace of the snowshoe on which the foot rests. You simply step into the shoe and stretch the band across your heel, making tight ends of the hook fast to the crossbrace on the opposite side of your foot.

This rig is quick and easy to use — no fiddling around with buckles — and, because of the elasticity of the rubber, it never works loose.

You must purchase bands of the proper length, of course, and a little experimenting and measuring will provide this information. A band 15 inches long is right for most foot sizes.

Various synthetics are now being used for the webbing of snowshoes. They have the advantage of not soaking up moisture and becoming soaky or packed with snow, but the two pairs of old trail shoes I own have leather webbing and, being somewhat old-fashioned, I see no need to replace them. I put a coat of polyurethane or varnish on them, both webbing and frames, every three years or so.

Insulated boots are a necessity for snowshoeing and among the warmest and the most comfortable may be the rubber-bottomed, leather-topped boots with removable felt liners made by Sorel. People vary enormously in this respect. I find, for example, that my feet remain warm down to about 10 degrees above zero in a good pair of insulated all-leather boots.

A good pair of snowshoes costs from about $45 to $60, and you can, if you wish, save about one-quarter of the price by buying a kit to assemble

Winter hunts, fishing in progress

MAGIC VALLEY — Normally, the winter months are the time local sportsmen are inside, cleaning their guns, repairing their deers and trying the perfect fly in preparation of the upcoming season.

But all that preparation is fine if need be but in that's all that the sportsman has to do in the winter, consider the fact that several seasons are now going on.

"Cottontail hunting is, fantastic this year," reported Ed Fish and Game, Regional Conservation Educator for Stu Murrell explained. "Their populations go in cycles and this year is an up cycle and there are lots of them."

There is an eight per day bag limit and they may be hunted with small caliber rifles or shotguns.

Murrell said the rabbits are found, depending on the area being hunted, on the rocks late in the afternoon stunting themselves or early in the morning as they come out of their dens for the day.

Some game management units also have a mountain lion hunting season now going on and the lions may be hunted but the females with spotted kittens are off limits as are the spotted kittens.

Other animals now available for hunting include badgers, porcupine, fox and racoon. There are restrictions on some foxes in some areas, so check the wildlife restrictions before venturing into the field.

Some birds can also be hunted during the winter months and those include English sparrows, starling and wild pigeon.

If the hunting is to be harsh, white fishing is going strong on the Wood River between Hatley and Ketchikan.

Some ice fishing is available but because of the warmer temperatures, the ice is still thin and fishermen should consult with Ranger stations or Fish and Game officials for what is open and where the ice is safe.

Idaho Wildlife Society honors Stu Murrell

JEHOIME — The Idaho Chapter of the Wildlife Society has honored Department of Fish and Game Officer Stu Murrell as the Conservation Educator of the year.

The society, which includes professionals working in the fish and wildlife conservation fields, honored Murrell for his contribution in conservation education for the people and the wildlife of Idaho.

The award was given to Murrell during the annual meeting of the Society at the University of Idaho last week.

Murrell is active in scouting and has taught conservation camp each summer for the scouts in the Snake River Canyon for the past several years.

He also has held teacher workshops for the past six years to provide teachers with the information needed to teach conservation education to their students.

He has worked for the Department of Fish and Game for the past 10 years and for 11 years before that, was a conservation officer for the National Fish and Wildlife Service and in that position traveled over much of the United States.

He is a graduate of Utah State University and received a masters degree from Humboldt State University. Both degrees were in wildlife management.

Imagine you, too, have seen a certain tricky pattern in the names of some bars, taverns, nightclubs, bistros like "The Office" from which the customer can call home to report he's staying late there. And "The Filling Station" where he can say he's to stop off. And "The Library" to which he can say he's going. How many such names are there, anyhow? "The Boe's Place," "The Emergency Room," and one particularly popular spot formerly called "I-Rescue-Satisfaction," but known affectionally as "The IRS." Any others?

Maybe you were aware that the fellow who sings the theme in the TV series "Barrett" is none other than Sammy Davis, Jr. But did you know he years ago was billed as Slient Sam, the Dancing-Midget?

Six times as many soccer balls were sold in this country last year as were sold in 1973.

Soviets buy 300,000 tons additional American grain

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Agriculture Department Tuesday announced that the Soviet Union has bought another 300,000 metric tons of American grain.

The deals, which were reported to the agency by private exporters, included the sales of 150,000 tons of wheat and 150,000 tons of corn.

Officials said the corn deal was a newly reported transaction. The wheat involved had earlier been reported as a sale to an "unknown destination," but exporters have now notified the Agriculture Department that the grain will go to the Soviet Union.

The deals, the second announced this month, brought total Soviet orders for American grain in the 1977-78 season, which began last Oct. 1 to a total of seven million metric tons. This includes about 4.6 million tons, or 18 million bushels, of corn and 2.4 million tons, or 88 million bushels, of wheat.

The sales are being made in the second season of a five-year Soviet-American grain trade agreement under which Soviet officials are committed to buying a minimum of six million tons of American grain annually and can go above eight million tons if they first consult with the U.S. government.

Administration officials earlier had voluntarily notified the Soviets they would approve sales of up to 15 million tons to help make up for a poor 1977 Soviet harvest.

Some nongovernment experts believe that the Soviets actually have already arranged purchases of close to 15 million tons, partly under the guise of "unknown destination" shipments which are only gradually being reported as Soviet sales. Bergland, however, said recently that sales may fall short of 15 million tons unless the pace of the trade picks up soon.

Boycott dropped

UNITED Farm Workers leader Cesar Chavez has ended a nationwide boycott of Gallo wines, table grapes and lettuce not harvested by members of his union. But he said the boycott could be reinstated.

Utah water storage far under '76 mark

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — The Soil Conservation Service says water stored in Utah reservoirs Jan. 1, excluding Flaming Gorge and Glen Canyon, was down more than 1 million acre feet from the Jan. 1, 1976, record.

But the reporting service said the good mountain snow pack and streamflow forecast should have many of the 27 reservoirs in good shape again by summer.

The service's "1978 Water Supply Outlook" said the reservoirs were storing only 2 million acre feet of water at the start of the year, down from 2.7 million acre feet as of Jan. 1, 1977, and down 1.2 million acre feet from the 1976 all-time record of 3.2 million acre feet of water for Jan. 1.

"The total water impounded as of the first of this year was only about 60 percent of the usable capacity," the agency said. "And great variations exist in the outlook report between areas of the state."

But it said streamflow forecasts for northern Utah, based on the winter snowpack, are 90 to 110 percent of the 15-year average. Streamflow forecasts for eastern Utah were also optimistic, at 87 to 113 percent of normal. While in southern Utah the runoff forecast is relatively poor, at 50 to 60 percent of the 15-year average.

Show of support

Domestic program for sugar pushed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Frank Church told Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland Tuesday he will insist on a commitment from the administration to maintenance of a viable domestic sugar program before he will recommend Senate ratification of the International Sugar Agreement.

Church is chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee on Foreign Economic Policy which must pass on all international commodity agreements before they are ratified by the Senate.

Church also said Tuesday he will chair a hearing of the Foreign Relations Committee in Burley Feb. 13 to take testimony on the nation's sugar policy.

Last year, Church introduced Senate legislation, which was incorporated in the 1977 Farm Bill, to require mandatory price supports for domestic sugar growers who have been hit hard by rising costs and falling prices. That led the president to raise tariffs on imported sugar to protect American growers from foreign sugar.

"The 1977 legislation has a life of only two years," he said. "I just want the administration to give us a commitment to the maintenance of a strong domestic program for sugar in case the international agreement does not do the job."

Church and Bergland also discussed prospects for a new international wheat agreement upon which negotiations have just begun.

"The United States cannot continue to be the wheat shock absorber for the world. We cannot afford to maintain an international reserve by ourselves. Other countries must share in the storage of surplus wheat in a common effort to stabilize world wheat prices," church said.

Idaho crops decrease
BOISE (UPI) — Total Idaho crop production during 1977 showed the sharpest one-year decrease since 1959, the Idaho Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said Wednesday.

WE PUT THINGS WITHIN EASY REACH!

Reaching people is the goal of all forms of advertising... some are successful and some are not. But all forms of advertising available, only one has the distinction of being able to consistently reach those people who are ripe for responding to the advertiser's message. This, of course, is the Classified Advertising section of your newspaper. Why? Because your Classified section is aimed at a pre-sold audience... people read the Classified Ads because they are already in the market to buy! It is not necessary to convince them that they should buy a home or an automobile or rent an apartment, or look for a job or engage the services of an electrician... they are already convinced of their need... or what they want is someone who can ANSWER that need.

It is also the only people-to-people medium that is available to every member of the community! Individuals turn to the Classified Ads every day to buy or sell items ranging from pots to power mowers and bicycles to motor boats. And the Classified section is the only place they can reach so many people at such a low cost.

So if you're a businessman or an individual who wants to reach out and pick people who are ripe for your message, put that message in the Classified Advertising section of this newspaper.
