

Panama canal treaty backers win one in the Senate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In a show of force, backers of the Panama Canal treaties have demonstrated they own the votes to turn down any significant changes. But the count on the first amendment to come to a vote also showed these same backers are still struggling to win ratification.

The Senate killed 55 to 34 an amendment sponsored by Sen. James Allen, D-Ala., which could have kept U.S. troops guarding the waterway for a generation after it is turned over to Panama.

The margin of nearly 20 votes was easily enough to defeat the Allen amendment, which required only a majority for adoption.

But the 34 votes against the motion to quash the amendment is one more than would be needed to kill ratification, which requires a two-thirds majority — 67.

If all senators are voting, the Senate planned to continue voting on amendments as the canal debate headed into its 10th day today.

Although both sides expressed pleasure at the outcome of the vote on the Allen amendment, neither considered it an accurate barometer of ratification sentiment.

Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., a main opponent of the treaties, said the vote showed "there are 34 senators displeased with the treaties as they stand."

He noted that the total would have climbed to 35 with the addition of Sens. Harrison Schmidt, R-N.M., and Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., who did not vote.

But Assistant Senate Democratic Leader Alan Cranston said, "we did better than expected and our confidence is shown by the fact that we proceeded with the vote although several of our votes were absent."

Later in the day, the Senate also disposed of another amendment from the opposition — this one offered by Sens. J. William Fulbright, D-Ark., and J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., which would have permitted the U.S. president to keep American troops in Panama for an additional 20 years until 2020 by certifying the need, conceded he was worried about the outcome in a chat with reporters several hours before the vote.

Shortly before moving to kill the Allen proposal, Byrd said, "The amendment goes to the very heart of the treaties." He said adoption "thoroughly, unmistakably, undeniably, unquestionably unravels" the treaties as signed.

interests of Torrijos and Panama ahead of those of the United States.

Democratic leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia, concerned about absenteeism, said the Senate would have permitted the U.S. president to keep American troops in Panama for an additional 20 years until 2020 by certifying the need, conceded he was worried about the outcome in a chat with reporters several hours before the vote.

Shortly before moving to kill the Allen proposal, Byrd said, "The amendment goes to the very heart of the treaties." He said adoption "thoroughly, unmistakably, undeniably, unquestionably unravels" the treaties as signed.

Snowy predicament

MOTORIZED VEHICLES aren't the only mode of transportation which can be put out of commission by a snow storm. ## Chlorine spill turns nasty

By O'NEIL HENDRICK
United Press International

Work crews were alerted Monday in efforts to neutralize deadly chlorine gas leaking from a derailed railroad tanker in the Florida panhandle, but crews in West Tennessee finally righted an overturned tanker that was spilling noxious byproducts.

The problem at Youngstown, Fla., where eight persons have been killed by a greenish-yellow death cloud of chlorine gas, was a lack of the right equipment.

"It's the old 'for lack of a nail' story," said cleanup supervisor Don Pullis, whose crew waited while the equipment was rushed from Virden, Ill., hopefully for use today.

At Cades, Tenn., soggy ground and a snowfall hindered efforts to right a tanker containing sodium hydroxide, whose possibly dangerous fumes caused the evacuation of around 150 persons in the area.

But late Monday night, cranes and bulldozers moved the tank car, one of 25 that derailed from an Illinois Central Gulf freight Sunday, back onto the tracks where it was to be towed away today.

"There's not any danger from now on out," said Civil Defense operations officer Don Goad at midnight. "Everything is stable now."

He said it was safe for the evacuees to return home.

Cleanup crews also were working 80 miles east of Cades, at Waverly, Tenn., where 12 persons were killed and more than 50 others injured in the explosion of a derailed propane gas tanker from a Louisville & Nashville freight Friday.

Some 1,200 Waverly residents returned to their homes Sunday and helped in the cleanup work Monday.

Tennessee Gov. Ray Blanton met in Washington Monday with Transportation Secretary Brock Adams and called for the nationalization of the nation's "deceitful" railroads.

The sad fact is that in the state of Tennessee we are averaging four derailments a week," Blanton said.

Adams said he did not support nationalization, but rather is pushing a series of proposals for more federal railroad inspectors, increased federal subsidies to railroads and stricter standards for rail shipment of hazardous materials.

The president of one of the nation's largest railroad systems said the accidents will "throw a cloud over our industry for some time."

But Ernie F. Osborn, president of Seaboard Coast Line Industries, said in Jacksonville, Fla., "These accidents happen. We have rigid standards for the movement of hazardous materials. There is no way to prevent them completely. There will always be derailments."

Wierd yacht deaths probed

PAPEETE, Tahiti (UPI) — Police Tuesday investigated the mysterious, violent death at sea of an American couple whose son told police he wrapped his parents bodies in heavy chains and dropped them overboard.

Police wanted to question a daughter of the victims, herself seriously injured by an unexplained fall at sea, and a fifth person, a woman guest aboard the yacht at the time of the deaths.

The mystery began Sunday when the American yacht Spellbound was sighted by an aircraft maneuvering erratically off the South Pacific pearl island of Rangiroa, target of the islets making up the Tuamotu atoll about 180 miles northeast of Tahiti.

A patrol boat from Rangiroa, guided by a light plane, found the Spellbound and ordered it into port.

Police said three persons were aboard the yacht — Gary Edwards, 27, of Kirkland, Wash., his sister Carrie, 20, and a third young woman identified as Susan Hoskman.

The Edwards' youths were both seriously injured. Both the yacht and survivors were transferred to Papeete.

Young Edwards told police his father, Loren Edwards, a 45-year-old carpenter, had been killed last Friday when he fell heavily in the cockpit of Spellbound and his head struck a sharp corner.

Still according to young Edwards, his mother Josie, a 43-year-old teacher, became despondent and the following morning she killed herself with a revolver.

The youth told police he then wrapped both his parents' bodies in 175 pounds of anchor chain and slid them overboard. Police said he could not pinpoint exactly where at sea he had buried his parents.

Edwards further told police he had broken his wrist through an unexplained mishap and that he could no longer navigate the Spellbound, explaining why it was drifting erratically when spotted.

Edwards' younger sister was suffering from a severe head wound and shock when the yacht arrived in port and she was flown to Papeete for treatment. Edwards told police she, too, had been hurt in a fall on board.

The only person uninjured when the yacht pulled into port was the fifth person, Miss Hoskman, police said.

In Botet, Wash., a sister of the dead man, Vivian Parks, said the Edwards family had built the yacht themselves and the family sailed from San Diego, Calif., last November in an attempt to sail around the world.

Mrs. Parks said a friend from Kirkland, Lori Huey, also sailed with the family and that she had never heard of anyone named Susan Hoskman.

Tongsun Park wants to clear the air

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Tongsun Park finally began telling House investigators about South Korean influence-buying in Congress today. He promised to "do my best to clear the air."

In the closed session, the indicted millionaire rice dealer and party-giver faced what special counsel Leon Jaworski called "no holds barred" questioning by the House ethics committee and its investigators, and the threat of perjury charges if he lied.

Park met with Jaworski and committee members in a small third-floor hearing room across the street from the Capitol, as U.S. marshals and congressional police set up extraordinary security precautions.

A crowd of reporters and photographers were waiting in the hallway when Park and his lawyer at 9:30 a.m. EST. Park stopped and issued a statement:

"I really feel that the whole thing is very unfortunate. This is a negative type of situation for the sake of both countries involved and for my own personal sake I hope that the whole thing will be terminated as soon as possible."

"I am grateful for the opportunity I'm going to have whereby I can tell my side of the story, and as I've said so many times, I've been putting aside all my personal rights and whatever privileges I have to accommodate the greater considerations — the interests of both countries

"So I'm going to get in there and let them ask my questions they want to and I'll do my best to clear the air so that the Congress of this country gets back to its normal life and we can all see the happy ending coming to us very soon."

Park, wearing a blue-gray suit, displayed no visible nervousness. However, he said, "I never thought I would be affected by jet lag," adding that he was "fatigued after his journey" from Korea.

"So if I fall asleep during the session, it isn't that I don't have any enthusiasm for the questions being asked, but I'm plainly tired," Park said.

Soviets boost gas prices

LENINGRAD, U.S.S.R. (UPI) — The Soviet Union will raise retail gasoline prices 100 percent beginning Wednesday, informed Soviet sources said today.

The sources also said that the price of auto parts would also be increased, but said they did not know by how much.

Western sources said the Soviets have admitted that there was a fuel shortage in the Soviet Union. By raising prices, private driving would be reduced.

Also, they said, the price — the cheapest in Europe because gasoline is not taxed — has not been increased for years.

But a check of several Leningrad service stations confirmed that the 100 percent price hike would go into effect Wednesday. "We received orders to double the price. That is all I know," said one female attendant.

There was no official announcement of the price increase, but the Foreign Ministry press department in Moscow announced that the chairman of the State Committee on Prices, N.T. Glushkov, would hold a news conference Wednesday.

It was assumed that

Glushkov would be dealing with the subject of the gasoline price increase.

Currently, 93 octane gasoline costs 62 cents a gallon, while 95 octane gasoline costs 65 cents a gallon.

As of Wednesday, the new Soviet retail price will be $1.20 a gallon for 93 octane gasoline and $1.30 for 95 octane.

During the past year, Leningrad has experienced several gasoline shortages, including three periods of one week when gasoline was only sold to foreign tourists and local residents.

Penney auditors sue firm

NEW YORK (UPI) — Two former auditors of J.C. Penney Co. are suing the company and 12 present and former officers for $10 million, charging they had been fired and harassed because they uncovered a massive kickback scheme.

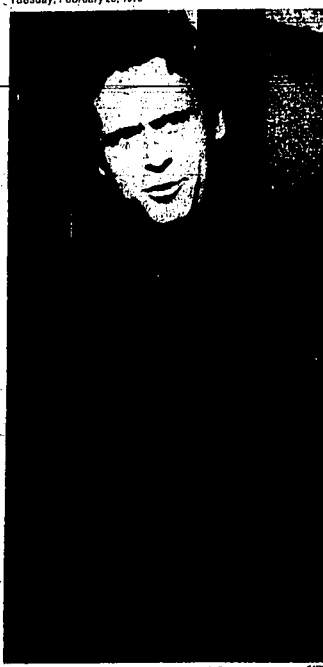

Defendants in the lawsuit filed Monday in U.S. District Court in Manhattan included Kenneth Axelson, a former New York City deputy mayor for finance who served as the chain's senior vice president.

Senior auditors Preston Perdue and Patrick Grimes said they were fired last June after refusing to take part in a coverup of the alleged fraud.

They said they had gone to management with evidence of kickbacks in the $11 million renovation of the corporate headquarters in midtown Manhattan.

The complaint alleged that Andrew Tsanant, a company supervisor in charge of maintenance and alterations, received $1.4 million in kickbacks from the contractor, H.L. Lazar Inc.

Axelson had worked done on his apartment, the complaint alleged.

Trial jurors questioned

HACKENSACK, N.J. (UPI) — A Superior Court judge will question 19 potential jurors today on their moving-going habits in the trial of a doctor charged with killing five hospital patients with over-doses of the muscle relaxant curium.

A tentative panel was seated Monday after 19 other people were dismissed during lengthy questioning about their knowledge of the murder case against Dr. Mario E. Jascalevich.

Jascalevich, 50, of Englewood Cliffs, N.J., is charged with the murders of five patients at Riverside Hospital in Oradell, N.J. The five died more than 10 years ago from overdoses of curium, a muscle relaxant once used by South American Indians to poison enemies.

Francis Gary Powers, the U-2 pilot shot down over the Soviet Union, also was equipped with a needle dipped in the drug when he flew spy missions in the early 1960s.

The prosecution and defense said there are more than 200 potential witnesses in the case, including 60 doctors and several members of the victims' families.

Bundy trial set for May

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) — Theodore R. Bundy, wanted for questioning about rapistings in five states and the disappearance of a Lake City child, will be tried May 9 in Tallahassee on charges of auto theft and burglary.

Prosecutors said the trial may be expanded to include 34 new charges, filed Monday, of forging the name on a stolen credit card and using it to purchase nearly $300 in purchases.

Bundy could get up to 240 years in prison if convicted and given the maximum sentence on all 41 charges which include three car thefts, five for burglarizing cars, 17 for forging a credit card and 17 for using the card.

The dapper fugitive wore his own clothes to the courthouse Monday to plead innocent to the car theft and burglary charges.

He changed the usual jailhouse gray jumpsuit for blue jeans, a navy jacket and navy turtleneck sweater.

Bundy limped slightly, favoring the left leg which wore a heavy shackle from the bottom of the foot to his knee, locked on to keep him from running, according to one of several dozen policemen stationed around and in the courthouse.

Bundy, 31, escaped twice from a Colorado jail where he was awaiting trial on a charge of killing a Michigan juror on a skiing vacation at Aspen. Once, he slipped down enough to slip through a hole behind a ceiling light fixture.

Judge John Rudd set the trial date and set aside three days for it.

The forgery charges were not included in Monday's arraignment and the prosecutor's office said it has not decided if they will be tried at the same time as the burglary and car theft cases.

Bundy asked for the public defender's office to represent him, saying he did not have funds to hire a lawyer.

Mortgage interest rate zooms up

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In a reflection of worsening inflation, the interest rate on government-backed mortgages rose to 8.75 percent today for the first increase in eight months.

The mortgage rate rise, announced by the Department of Housing and Urban Development, was the latest in a series of indicators that appeared to show a weakening of economic conditions.

The Labor Department said workers' spendable earnings in January dropped 3 percent for the deepest dive in 14 years.

But in the biggest inflation news, the Labor Department said Monday that consumer prices doubled from the less than 5 percent annual rate that prevailed for the final six months of 1977 to an annual rate of nearly 10 percent in January.

"Stock market" prices declined in active trading after the inflation report became public. Prices rose in initial trading Monday.

"Obviously, this was a significant increase following six months of low increases," said White House press secretary Jody Powell. But he said "it is not seen as an indication of any change in the basic 6 percent and 6.5 percent rate of inflation."

But the Republican National Committee and the U.S. Chamber of Commerce immediately attacked the administration for following polities that have made inflation climb from an average monthly rate of 0.4 percent between July and December to 0.8 percent in January.

Chamber economist Richard Landry said federal legislation to raise minimum wages, payroll taxes and sugar import fees played a significant role in the "surprisingly large" rise in consumer prices.

"Federal policies are now a primary cause of inflation and employers and labor unions are put in a position of playing catch up ball to get even," Landry said.

GOP chairman William Brock said the "devastating" news on the inflation front is further proof the Carter administration's economic policies are a complete failure." He said inflation is worse under President Carter than under the final year of the Ford administration.

Liberal economist John Kenneth Galbraith said Carter's economic team should be given another year to prove itself. Unless there is a reduction in both inflation and unemployment, Galbraith said Carter must make wholesale changes.

The rise in mortgage interest rates, consumer inflation and weakness in worker earnings came in a month when retail sales took their deepest plunge in 14 years, and industrial production took its biggest drop in more than three years.

Bickering in banking committee

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Nearly eight hours of intense questioning touched off some bickering, but failed to provide the Senate Banking Committee with evidence to derail G. William Miller's nomination to be chairman of the Federal Reserve Board.

The committee, which is responsible for reviewing Miller's credentials, asked five witnesses Monday whether the nominee may have been a questionable $2.9 million payment made in 1973 to a company secretly headed by the chief of the Iranian air force.

The witnesses, past and present corporate executives and a private lawyer, were unanimous in their belief that Miller was unaware that Gen. Mohammed Khatami, who also was the shah's brother-in-law, ran the company.

Two victories

Gandhi on an upswing

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — Former Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, crushed in national elections only a year ago, has re-emerged as a major political force on the strength of two landslide victories by her breakaway political party.

Analysts said the poor showing of the regular Congress Party, which Mrs. Gandhi bolted last month to form the "Indira Congress," is certain to produce a realignment in Indian politics.

Mrs. Gandhi "has re-emerged as a formidable political figure" as a result of her party's election triumphs in the southern states of Karnataka and Andhra Pradesh, The Times of India newspaper said in an editorial.

It said the regular Congress "has been gravely weakened" by its poor showing.

The Indira Congress won two-thirds of the seats in Karnataka, 152 of 224, to 58 for the Janata Party and only two for the regular Congress, whose dismal showing prompted the resignation of party president K.B. Reddy.

In Andhra Pradesh, with results known for 288 of the 294 seats, Mrs. Gandhi's party won 172 to take control of the state. The Janata won 95 of the 288 at stake to 69 for the regular Congress and 62 for Mrs. Gandhi's group.

Mrs. Gandhi, who had been prime minister for 11 years, was defeated last March by voters angered at her harsh, 19-month emergency rule and has faced a series of investigations since then.

But political commentators said her unexpected victories thrust her back into the limelight and could prompt some politicians to abandon the regular Congress and join the Indira Congress.

Sufficient defections could transform Mrs. Gandhi's group into the main parliamentary opposition — with her as leader — a position now held by the regular Congress.

There was also some talk of Mrs. Gandhi's running again for Parliament, though she herself has not said she will.

Winter isn't over!

By United Press International
 A winter storm spread today from the Gulf of Mexico through the Mississippi valley, dashing hopes for an early end to the record-breaking winter of 1978.

Fleeting rain and snow reached from Louisiana and Texas into central Illinois, where within an hour of the start of the snowfall, an inch was recorded in Springfield.

Highways led by sleet, freezing rain and snow made travel treacherous throughout the middle of the Mississippi valley into the lower Ohio basin.

The National Weather Service posted travelers advisories for most of the Midwest, warned of heavy snows for Missouri and southern and central Illinois, and predicted up to 4 inches of new snow for a coal-starved Indiana still recovering from the worst blizzard in its history.

The NWS said the eastward moving storm would bring snow into the mid-Atlantic states by Wednesday morning.

Full airing for laetrile

BOISE (UPI) — Members of the Health, Education and Welfare Committee voted today to give legislation to permit the use of laetrile in Idaho as a treatment for cancer a full airing on the floor of the Senate.

By a vote of 74, the committee voted to send the House-approved measure to the floor of the Senate without recommendation. Despite arguments the bill was misleading to the public and testimony by members of the medical profession there was no evidence laetrile was effective.

A short time later, Committee Chairman John Barker, R-Buhl, informed the Senate there were no members of the committee who agreed to carry the bill to the floor unless he could find a sponsor he didn't feel he should send the bill out of committee.

The vote to send the bill out came after a motion to hold the proposal was defeated by a 38 vote.

SECRETARY OF STATE CYRUS VANCE, LEFT, TALKS TO THE GOVERNORS
... Gov. Pierre S. duPont IV of Delaware was one of the listeners

Carter improves his image

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Carter's relations with the nation's governors — once considered as bad as they are with Congress — have improved sharply following an hour and a half face-to-face meeting on the energy crisis.

Governors who had criticized Carter and his energy policy praised him after the session Monday in the Executive Office Building next door to the White House.

The governors had demanded such a meeting more than a year ago, but were put off by the administration because it wasn't ready.

All but two of the nation's 50 governors attended the meeting. They called it one of the best meetings they had ever had with the president — mostly because he seemed willing to compromise and to give states a share of the decision-making power in solving energy problems.

The three-day winter meeting of the governors association ends today with HEW Secretary Joseph Califano discussing welfare reform and HUD Secretary Patricia Roberts Harris and Carter's urban expert, Stuart Eizenstat, revealing parts of the administration's new urban policy.

Gov. William G. Milliken of Michigan, GOP head of the National Governors' Association, said the meeting with Carter was "outstanding."

"I've participated in a number of meetings with the president before and this had to be the most successful of all because it was candid, it was open, and most of all because it showed on the part of the president a remarkable understanding of the complexities of the problem," Milliken said.

"I'm looking forward to the dinner tomorrow night with you all more than your questions today," Carter told the governors at the start of the meeting, when reporters were allowed in briefly. The Carters are hosting a ball for the chief executives and their wives tonight.

He told them the solution to many energy problems often lies with the states as well as the federal government — reacting in advance to their complaint the administration is trying to impose settlement of such questions as environmental concerns and location of energy facilities.

The governors presented Carter with their problems in the energy area, including questions about the accuracy of computer-generated estimates of oil and gas production if the administration energy legislation is passed and charges of federal foot dragging on the problem of helping western areas that are overwhelmed by coal production demands.

"The president has indicated a great amount of flexibility — far more refreshing than his appearance with us last summer. Probably because of his difficulties in getting his bill through Congress."

Troops clash with students at Nicaraguan university

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — Nicaraguan troops stormed a university Monday night, killing three students, and battled against masked Indians' beating drums and wielding machetes.

About 100 National Guardsmen attacked Managua's Autonomous University after students threw stones over the school's wall at the troops and chanted curses against President Anastasio Somoza.

When the guardsmen opened fire with rifles and machine guns, the students responded with fire arms of their own and homemade bombs. Observers said several small tanks surrounded the University during the disturbances.

Radio Corporacion identified the dead students as Fidel Prado, Martin Zeledon Zeledon and Jorge Arauz Hernandez. Also reported wounded were 40 students and three professors.

Nicaragua has been gripped with guerrilla skirmishes, rioting, strikes and bombings since the Jan. 10 assassination of a prominent newspaper publisher. Somoza's announcement Sunday that he would retire in 1981 as head of the military failed to stem the disorders.

In Masaya, 20 miles east of the capital, rebellious Indian workers and peasants wearing masks and beating drums battled troops.

The Indians, their water, food and electricity cut off, were reported to be fighting with sticks, stones, machetes, small arms supplied by Sandinista Liberation Front guerrillas and home-made bombs.

Assassination charged

CANCUN, Mexico (UPI) — Mrs. Pedro Joaquin Chamorro is charging the Nicaraguan government was responsible for the assassination of her husband, who was publisher of the newspaper La Prensa.

The assassination sparked a two-week general strike and has resulted in widespread rioting, bombings and guerrilla skirmishes.

Patrol begun by KKK

COLUMBUS, Ga. (UPI) — Members of the Ku Klux Klan began Monday night patrolling the area terrorized by the "steeking strangler" — but area residents say they don't want the Klan's help.

Earlier in the day, about 480 residents of the Wynnton Road area — where the strangler has killed six elderly women since September — presented Columbus Mayor Jack Mickle with a petition, asking him to block the KKK's plan.

But Mickle had no immediate response. Witnesses said the KKK went ahead with its patrols, which consisted of two cars, each carrying two unarmed Klansmen dressed in street clothes.

"The citizens' petition stated the residents 'do not want the Klan or any unauthorized private vigilante group patrolling our neighborhood and interfering with existing publicly authorized law enforcement authorities.'"

The residents, the petition, said, want to avoid further "polarization" in Columbus and want to encourage a cooperative relationship between black and white residents.

Office of consumer advocacy promoted

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A top government consumer official believes the administration may be able to do by bureaucratic shuffle what Congress has failed to do by law — create a federal office of consumer advocacy.

The possibility was raised by Lee Richardson, acting director of the Office of Consumer Affairs, a HEW agency which among other things, backs up Esther Peterson, President Carter's consumer adviser.

Asked in an interview whether he thought he could turn his office into a "de facto" office of consumer representation, Richardson noted there is one important difference: his office has no power to take anyone to court as the legislation would have allowed.

"But we can do virtually everything else," he said. "We handle complaints. We are sort of the clearinghouse as the bill would suggest for this kind of an office."

"As far as being able to voice our views and participate in proceedings in formal ways, we can do that. I think there's some ground we haven't tried," he added.

Gas price rise may have been too hot for court

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court, like a lot of people in Washington these days, probably found the issue of natural gas prices too hot to handle.

The high court turned down requests Monday that it look into the lawfulness of the largest natural gas price hike in history.

The nationwide rate increase, costing consumers an estimated $1.5 billion per year, was approved in 1976 by the Federal Power Commission and has been in effect most of the time since.

The court, without comment, issued a brief order allowing the rates to stand.

Ellen Berman, director of the Consumer Federation of America's Energy Policy Task Force, a party to the suit, said her group hopes the new Federal Energy Regulatory Commission will take another look at the gas rates despite the court's action.

The FERC has taken over the functions of the FCC — House and Senate conferees, meanwhile, continue meeting informally in efforts to break a long deadlock over natural gas pricing legislation that might change the picture significantly by setting a higher ceiling or deregulating gas after a few years.

"I would assume that a large part of the reason" the court did not review the gas rates "may well have been political," said Ms. Berman. "It may have been that it's a can of worms they just didn't want to get into. It's a highly charged political issue nobody wants to tangle with."

All issue were the FCC's orders in 1976 to almost triple the allowable price of new natural gas — from wells started on or after Jan. 1, 1975 — sold on the interstate market. The new ceiling was set at $1.42 per thousand cubic feet with provisions for a one-cent increase every three months, so the price is now $1.48.

Consumer groups charged the rates were based on unverified information from the industry and were too high. Producers complained they were too low, pointing to increasing costs of finding and producing new gas fields.

In other actions Monday, the court:

- Granted a hearing to 18 independent pharmacists in Texas who say they are wrongly forced to either sign agreements in cooperation with Group Health or go out of business. They want to invoke federal antitrust law against Blue Shield of Texas.
- Decided 7-2 that federal aid under the Supplemental Security Income program for the aged, blind and disabled may be cut off when a person moves to Puerto Rico from one of the 50 states.
- Promised to rule on Washington state's "checkerboard" law enforcement system on Indian reservations.

Plan makes citizens supplicant

By JAMES KILPATRICK
WASHINGTON — A few weeks ago, CBS News and the New York Times undertook an ideological poll...

JAMES KILPATRICK

Mr. Carter called a special press conference to unveil his new plan to provide expanded federal assistance in the field of higher education...

promoting his alternative approach in this same area. Senator Roth is pushing a plan of tuition tax credits...

These opposing propositions offer a perfect test of political philosophy. Given these choices only, a liberal will go with Mr. Carter every time...

Consider the Carter proposal. The president asks for an additional $1.5 billion to assist middle-income families in meeting the costs of college education...

Ironically, there are certain similarities. Roth's plan also would cost about $1.5 billion. He, too, has a figure of "up to $250" in mind...

Under the Carter plan, the people are seen as supplicants, begging a handout from a generous father government. The supplicants would have to "prove their need"...

Roth's approach is 180 degrees around the circle. Here the relationship is wholly different. Here the people are saying, through an amendment to the tax code...

Just as every taxpayer who has a home mortgage can deduct the interest he pays, regardless of his net income, so every taxpayer with a tuition-paying dependent could take the Roth tax credit. The element of welfare is eliminated. The government does not award a "grant"...

Early on, the Carter administration had objected to Roth's bill almost solely on the grounds of cost. This was the chief criticism in December, after Roth had succeeded in tacking his plan to the Social Security bill...

Yet the fiscal effect is not quite identical either, for the Carter-California BEOGs would cost millions of dollars to administer. The Roth plan would involve no administrative costs whatever...

The emerging crisis in Idaho education

Spending more money on schools won't automatically lead to better education for Idaho young people.

But spending too little money on education increases the chance our state's young people won't get a decent education.

There is a growing volume of evidence Idaho doesn't spend enough money on education.

U.S. Department of Education statistics now show that Idaho ranks last among the 50 states in per pupil expenditures for education.

Teacher salaries in Idaho stand 39th out of 50.

From one perspective Idaho might seem to be getting a bargain in the classroom since students from Idaho schools rank average or above in a number of reading and mathematical skills.

But in Twin Falls, the strain of running a school district with a barebones budget is beginning to show. The Twin Falls School district ranks last among Idaho's counties in per pupil expenditures.

In the classroom this often means too many students for a teacher to handle, particularly in the elementary grades.

Some elementary teachers must ask students to double and triple up on textbooks. Other teachers find themselves running short of workbooks and other materials needed to instruct students in spelling, math, reading and history.

At the junior high level, textbooks often aren't replaced as often as educators think they should be. Frayed and tattered books in history classes sometimes have pages missing and often are out-of-date.

Always looking for ways to trim back the budget, the Twin Falls school district is forced to pay minimum wage to many teachers/aides, secretaries and other non-academic help which, according to Twin Falls Education Association President Al Ware, tends to lower the overall quality of the work force in the Twin Falls schools.

Teacher salaries are low in Idaho, and in Twin Falls. Almost any teacher in the district can recite the story of a good teacher leaving the district for another job where the pay is higher and the classrooms are better equipped.

Twin Falls now has a number of small, private schools. These schools, however, in part, because some parents believe their children may be better educated in a classroom where a teacher has only 12 students compared to a room in the public schools with 30 students.

Many Idahoans each year call for tax relief from the state legislature. Again this year the statehouse came within a whisker of cutting by 8 mills the property tax used to support public education. How many of these same parents, however, also complain about the quality of public education?

By national standards, Idaho now has fallen to the bottom of the barrel in terms of dollars spent per student.

Yet the legislature still talks of ways to cut back taxes even more in the state, and legislators from around Magic Valley applaud these proposals.

Maybe it's time to start asking the legislators how good an education Idaho's children deserve and who should be paying for the bill for it.

Nixon gang turns against each other

© 1978, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

WASHINGTON — I think for me the saddest thing about Watergate is that members of the old Nixon gang have turned against each other. Who would have ever dreamed that on the David Frost show former President Nixon would have implicated John Ehrlichman and Bob Haldeman, whom he considered his "sons," in the cover-up of a third-rate burglary?

Who would have dreamed that John Ehrlichman would write a fiction novel based on President Nixon showing him in such an unfavorable light? How could anyone have predicted that Bob Haldeman, one of the great White House stone-wallers, would let down his hair about the whitewash on Nixon, Charles Colson and Henry Kissinger?

Whatever they did in the past I always said to my wife, "At least you have to admire them for their loyalty to each other."

I always dreamed the Nixon crowd would meet together on the Tenth Anniversary of Watergate and have a nostalgic reunion, reliving those wonderful days when they were all fighting in the White House bunker. They would kick each other about putting on weight and tell outrageous lies about their Watergate War experience. There would be a scene out of "White Christmas," with John Dean copping up everybody and saying, "Let's go out to St. Clemente and show the old man that, while the rest of the country may have forgotten him, those of us who fought with him still really care."

I could see, them gathering on the lawn overlooking the blue Pacific and everyone would break into "Hail to the Chief" as Nixon came out. Then they would all sit around the pool drinking California wine and listening to the tapes, once again thinking back on those wonderful days when it was "us" against "them."

But apparently the reunion will never come off. And once again the Nixon Administration people have to be media to blame.

If the newspapers, magazines, TV and book publishers hadn't dumped all that money on them, this great group of honorable men never have rallied on each other.

The tragedy of post-Watergate is that in order to pay their lawyers, all those involved in the break-in and the coverup had to go their own way to make their stories worth the megabucks their agents had gotten for them.

It is sad for all of us who sat on the sidelines to see these men who went through so much together now at each other's throats.

Those of us who thought that Watergate was behind us now realize that the wounds are too deep and the book advances too high for any of the people involved to stick together.

My wife has taken it harder than I have. When the Haldeman excerpts from his book were printed, she said tearfully, "How could he have done it to Nixon?"

I said, "How could Nixon have done it to him?" Then she said, "How could Colson have done it to Haldeman?"

At last, "How could Dean have done it to all of them?"

Perhaps it's futile for people who weren't there to speculate why these fine, outstanding men would turn against each other at this stage of the game. My own theory is that it never would have happened if Checkers had been alive.

Hamilton Jordan: showing the strains of big change

By ELLEN GOODMAN

BOSTON — Never mind that the White House issued a 33-page denial. Never mind that his buddies and his bartender tried to portray the guy as an innocent victim of sexual harassment. Let them save The Hamilton Jordan Papers for the Archives.

This story reeks of truth.

Last fall, the report came out that Carter's top advisor had leered at what he labeled "the pyramids" of the Egyptian ambassador's wife and now it's reported that he's gone a notch lower — splitting booze down a woman's blouse in a bar. At a time when politicians have taken to having their private crises in public, it looks like Ham Jordan had his in Sarsfield's bar.

Ham Jordan is too smart to be that insensitive. He may not have had the time to find out what's gone wrong, but he's had the time to act it out.

It doesn't take a Ph. D. and it doesn't take a shrink to see that he's been on a kamikaze course the last several months. His behavior never was what you'd call sedate. He fell into the "Good Old Boy, Booze and Brandy" routine too often. But he couldn't conceivably have thought (if he were thinking) that these public incidents would go unnoted. The Sarsfield's Affair had to do what they call a cry for help.

Ham Jordan looks right now like an exile from Passages. If this is his thirties' crisis, I suppose he's entitled to it. The problem is that his "friends" are conspiring in the denial of his self-destructive behavior — "Oh, my gawd, what did I do last night? I guess I had a few too many, 'eh, eh' — and it doesn't do him any good.

The man keeps steering into accidents, and the White House keeps clearing his "driving record." If it goes on much longer, he'll end up in a ditch or the Tidal Basin.

Even if he manages to avoid that, another fear he expressed 13 months ago could turn out to be a self-fulfilling prophecy: "Maybe after two years in the White House I'll be the most arrogant son of a bitch you ever saw."

don't plan to be part of the Washington scene." Gradually, I suppose, he realized that, willy-nilly, he had become a part of the Establishment. There was only one way to be outside it. By being outrageous.

In the same year, Jordan's marriage broke up. Even if it wasn't a model of togetherness, that kind of disruption registers high on the Richter scale. Anybody with an ounce of experience knows that.

Once I had a friend who wanted to pass a law prohibiting anyone two months out of a marriage from being a plane or doing brain surgery.

We can only digest change in chunks, and we can only deal with disruption in one area of our lives at a time. The advice-givers say that if you've lost a spouse, hand over the same job. They say that if you're changing towns, take your marriage with you.

Ham Jordan went through it all at the same time — new town, new job, new personal life — in a pressure cooker. Is there anyone who could do that and still be sure of "who I am, what I am and what I want?"

Berry's World

"I presume your giving me this particular Johnny Paycheck recording means you wish to resign."

I'm not trying to be hard on that man. This has been a tough year for Jordan. Maybe he's been through too much and dealt with too little.

About 13 months ago, when he was standing in the lobby of the L'Enfant Plaza hotel in Washington, wearing his navy windbreaker, his plaid flannel shirt, his corduroy trousers, and chewing gum, he told the Washington Post's Sally Quinn: "I'm self-confident about who I am, what I am and what I want."

But then he was 32 years old, an outsider from Georgia and a married man. Now he's 33, an insider from Washington, and a separated man. And that's an overdose of change.

Like a lot of the Carter people, Jordan came to the capital determined to hang on to his down-home sense of identity. He was afraid of corruption — and not the sleazy-kind that gets you slipped in a bar. He was really scared of finding himself in a three-piece suit, seated on a fragile Queen Anne chair in front of six pieces of silverware and two kinds of wine glasses at a Georgetown dinner party.

Legislators abuse right to no-cost mail service

By MARTHA ANGLE and ROBERT WALTERS

WASHINGTON — (UPI) — Rep. Bill De Haven has raised on a farm and represents a predominantly rural congressional district known as Missouri's "Bootheel," so it's not surprising that he takes a keen interest in agricultural policy.

But in a determined effort to promote his views on a relatively obscure farm issue, the five-term Democrat recently frittered away 133,000 sheets of paper, 19,000 envelopes and $1,560 worth of postage — all paid for by the taxpayers.

The stationery and postage were consumed by a bill on the subject of farm insurance — recent — and outrageous — examples in the seemingly endless saga of congressional abuse of the franking privilege.

The congressional frank is a printed reproduction of the signature of a member of the House or Senate. When placed in the upper right hand corner of an envelope, it substitutes for the postage stamps the rest of us are required to use.

As a result, members of Congress enjoy virtually unlimited postal privileges — but they're not really free because the Postal Service counts and weighs congressional mail, then submits a bill for its services. Congress pays the bill with public funds.

Among Burleson's favorite legislative causes is a campaign to convince the Commodity Futures Trading Commission (CFTC) to delay "forward contracting," a financial transaction in which a farmer agrees to sell a crop or other buyer a specified amount of his crops at a certain time in the future for a set price.

The CFTC has resisted these suggestions for several years, but late last year Burleson and Rep. Henry L. Bullmon, R-Ill., persuaded the commission to lease a long-distance telephone line that would enable farmers everywhere in the country to register their opinions on the issue.

In a crude effort to influence the outcome of that survey, Burleson authorized a "mass printing of four pages of confidential testimony containing his views. The two-page CFTC press release announcing the telephone poll and a "Dear Farmer Friend" letter.

The entire package went by first class mail, under Burleson's frank, to 19,000 constituents. But when the results were tabulated, the callers were overwhelmingly opposed to federal regulation of forward contracting, by a margin of more than 6 to 1.

Even more embarrassing for the congressman was the fact that only 41 of the calls came from the entire state of Missouri. In the unlikely event that all the calls were by Burleson's mailing, it cost the public $111.22 per response, in postage costs alone.

Burleson is hardly alone in his abuse of the frank, and he differs from his colleagues on Capitol Hill only in his use of the "free" mailing privilege to promote a pet project rather than a reelection campaign.

The Postal Service handles about 10-million pieces of congressional franked mail in a typical month, but in the months immediately prior to elections for House and Senate seats that figure soars into the 20-30 million range.

More than four years ago, Common Cause filed a civil suit seeking to have a federal court here declare the franking privilege invalid on the grounds that it unfairly helps to perpetuate incumbency in Congress.

But that case never came to trial because the legislators have dragged their feet at every step of the proceedings.

In the interim, there have been dozens of "reforms" such as a Senate Ethics Committee ruling that a senator's name or the pronoun "I" can appear no more than five times on a page of material mailed out under the frank.

Meanwhile, the bill for franked mail — only a small portion of it truly legitimate, "official business" — is almost $65 million a year. It's time to require the legislators to buy their own stamps if they insist upon cluttering up the mails with self-serving propaganda.

Seventh Day Adventist explains

Editor, Times-News:
Our members are often asked why we in the Seventh Day Adventist Church worship on Saturday morning instead of Sunday.

The answer is that we believe the seventh-day Sabbath, as given in the Ten Commandments, applies to Christians as well as Jews. Nowhere in the New Testament is there any record of early Christian's worshipping other than on the Sabbath. As Bible-believing protestants, we take the scriptures for our sole guide. We think God is just as serious about the fourth commandment, to keep His Sabbath, as He is about the sixth, where He says, "Thou shalt not kill."
But our faith involves so much more than this. First and foremost, we believe in Jesus Christ, who died for our sins. We believe He was the Son of God, that He pre-existed before His incarnation as a human being, and that He is even now sitting beside God the Father, watching over His children on earth.
And the second part of our church name, Adventist, tells of our firm belief that Jesus will return to the earth soon to put an end to human history. The "second advent" is the focal point of the Bible — even the last verse of the last book, the Revelation or Apocalypse, speaks of it.
Adventists are not so different from concerned Christians everywhere. We share the same fears and hopes as we see the evils of this earth. And we just thought you would like to know.

Save land from developers

Editor, Times-News:
I want to talk about growth and the developer mentality. I am not ashamed to be opposed to more growth in the Magic Valley because there has been too much growth here already. Creeping suburbia makes me sick.
I was not born here in Idaho. I am here because other places I have lived were ruined by development. In northern Virginia, where I grew up, the sky is always a light grey. People who have lived here all their lives don't know how lucky they are, and that is the problem.
A rural lifestyle is precious. On the eastern seaboard only the rich can afford the serenity and beauty most Idahoans take for granted. Many of us who live in the country have a view from our front doors that most Americans see only on vacation, after travelling thousands of miles.
Who, then, are the men who enjoy changing our lifestyle? Whether we call them developers, contractors, or investors, they profit from the destruction of beauty. They build our factories and skyscrapers. They pave our prairies. They dehumanize us more each day. Yet we allow them to dominate our lives.
My theory is that these men have never abandoned themselves to the mystical ebb and flow of nature. They are afraid.
There are many paths to the feeling of oneness with nature. There are shortcuts like psychedelic drugs. There are long climbs like Zen Buddhism. Some people feel this pure joy with a simple walk through the woods.
Perhaps women feel more than men do; their bodies put them in touch with the life force. Christ knew this, for we know southern Idaho doesn't suffer from a lack of exposure to Christianity.
So what went wrong is anybody's guess, but it is clear that developers have never felt the ecstasy that comes from giving in to nature. Otherwise they would never again settle for the cheap high they get from shaping and modeling this planet with their bulldozers, steamrollers and other toys. Hopefully they will learn someday that one doesn't have to destroy to create; that construction doesn't have to result in something you can touch.
Until that day, Idahoans must remain on the alert to the dangers of development. Listen to people who have lived elsewhere. Growth creates more growth. Bigger is not always better. We don't want the crowds, the traffic, Pocatello and Boise are already stained with ugly air pollution, but it is not too late for Magic Valley to start the pendulum swinging the other way.
For instance, by resisting Idaho Power Company's attempts to build a power plant, we can send a message to the company's out-of-state stockholders that Idaho is one place in this country which will not be spoiled by their greed. And by supporting a tough land-use plan, we can preserve our rural character forever.
It is a cliché of history that people often don't know what they have until it is gone. Human beings have demonstrated their environmental irresponsibility throughout the world. But here in Idaho we live in harmony with the land. We know that nature is an important pathway to God. Our landscape is a gem of wildness that needs no cutting or polishing. We shouldn't wait until all of Route 20 looks like Blue Lakes Boulevard to make our stand against growth.

Help farmers through letters

Editor, Times-News:
We can't all take a tractor and drive with the farmers in protest against starvation prices for our farm products but we can all write letters to our Congressmen, president and agricultural department and let them know how we feel.
I am old enough to remember one of the first times Congress tried to raise their own salaries, but we weren't so apathetic then. We all rushed to write poor Congressmen by sending in all sorts of help — our old clothes, unmentionables and such rummage. Sally Pond, a daffy stilette of that era, even sent them some of her tams. Results?
Congress was overwhelmed with our "help" and dropped their salary bill in a hurry because we let them know our feelings.
Now all we do is talk among ourselves. Just talk, talk! "Somebody should do something," we say. Well, we are somebody, so let's wake up and let Congress know. Bombard them with letters and timely news items we can clip every day. If they can't listen and be subservient to those who pay their salaries, let him know we are tired of talking among ourselves. It's time to talk to them and it's time they listened.
Write and send clippings every day to the White House, senators and representatives, Idaho's or any other key legislator.
So let's get out of our apathy and bombard all legislators with letters. Let us wake up and wake them up.
Address: Senators: Frank Church and James McClure, Washington, D.C. 20510. Representatives: George Hansen and Steve Symms also Washington, D.C. 20510 or the White House, Washington, D.C. 20500.
Let's help our farmers and ourselves.

Tax money needs protection

Editor, Times-News:
Many new non-tax dollars have been flowing into our local governments from interest earned on investments of public funds made by the various treasurers. Now the Idaho Bankers Association has taken the legislature into introducing a bill which would cut this investment income by as much as 90 percent in many cases.
The bill was introduced as an attempt by Idaho's large banks to force the state to return most of its investments to bank time certificates, which are unprotected beyond the first $100,000, the only amount covered by federal insurance. Last year, I switched millions of investment dollars from those unprotected bank time certificates to secured Idaho bank repurchase agreements, after a law I proposed to require complete protection for ALL public deposits failed to get out of a legislative committee. This law was opposed by the bankers, even though Idaho's legislative auditor, Clyde Koontz, termed it "one of the most important pieces of legislation that could be passed" to protect public deposits against possible financial loss.

The bankers disagreed with my position that the taxpayers are entitled to complete protection for their public money. But they refused to work with me on legislation which would be acceptable to them as well as the public fund treasurers, although I urged them on numerous occasions to do so. Instead they have now come to the Legislature with this shotgun approach to kill my repurchase agreement use by wiping out much of the public fund investment programs of treasurers all over the state — programs which have benefited our taxpayers so much by providing millions of dollars of new non-tax money to help finance governmental operations.

What has happened to the free enterprise system as it applies to carrying on the business of investing public moneys? The bankers want to dictate to the public treasurers just how to invest and just where to put the people's money. Their bill would abolish the varied safe and profitable investments in United States government and other securities long authorized by law for cities, other public funds and the state. It would restrict the treasurers to investing tax moneys only in Idaho banks, mostly in unprotected time certificates, and in insured deposits in Idaho savings and loans. But it goes even further, only allowing the investment of 10 percent of the large amounts of money now earning interest for overnight or short periods. The effect of the bankers' proposal would be that the remaining 90 percent of the money now available for short-term investment would just have to be left in bank checking accounts, earning no interest at all for the taxpayers.

It makes one wonder — who owns the public moneys, the taxpayers or the big banks?

State Treasurer, Boise.

Hansen's achievement lauded

Editor, Times-News,
Re. Editorial, Feb. 14, 1978, "Kress, Harding face tough bout in '78."

I realize that the official policy at the Times-News, "If you can't say something bad about George Hansen, don't say anything at all," but after almost two years one would think that the old lie, "George didn't pay his taxes," would have died a natural death.

The truth is, George Hansen has always paid his taxes ahead of filing time through payroll deductions just as all other wage-earners do. His great sin was that he did not file for his refund by April 15, and that is not illegal. His political opponents, for lack of any legitimate arguments against him, chose to use the tax smoke screen to obscure the real issues.

Let's talk about a few of the things that our hard-working Congressman is doing in Washington that the Times-News refuses to print even though you receive daily news releases from his Congressional offices. Developments in Congress which affect agriculture, business, national security and the Panama Canal negotiations are certainly as important to your readers as some of the gossip that you print about entertainers.

Your most recent omission is Hansen's announcement that for the first time in history, your Congressman secured 219 Representatives to co-sponsor his concurrent resolution to require both houses of Congress to ratify the Panama Canal Treaties. (The only way that the new Panama Canal treaties can be ratified and be Constitutionally correct, is for both houses of Congress to ratify, because it involves the transfer of American real estate.)

For Congressman Hansen to involve such a large number of co-sponsors for his resolution, attests to his effectiveness, influence and the respect he enjoys from his fellow Congressmen.

Patrolman let traveler down

Editor, Times-News:
On Thursday, Feb. 17, 1978, I broke down 27 miles south of Twin Falls on Highway 93.
A State Police officer called for an AAA Tow truck at 11:30 a.m. Being a member of the Northern California club, I specifically requested an AAA truck and I was told one had been sent. I was also holding the orange fluorescent AAA emergency sign when requesting the truck from the officer.
At 12:30 a truck arrived. On the trip into Twin Falls I learned it was not an AAA truck, which resulted in a $35 charge.

This is a formal complaint that the officer violated my rights as I am a paying AAA member who was dishonestly cheated out of $35 dollars by an officer who lied to me.
I hope that this situation is stopped so that other stranded victims aren't taken advantage of.

Chad's back in court room

United Press International
PAPA CHAD
 Five years ago, actor Chad Everett thought he'd settled the paternity suit brought against him by actress Sheila Scott. When she sued him in 1973, he settled out of court — for $5,000 and $25 a month in support of the child she says he fathered when they both were featured in the television series "Medical Center." But Everett was back in a Los Angeles courtroom again Monday. This time, Ms. Scott wants Everett legally declared the father of her son — to give the boy "stability."

Laser gunsight missing

LONDON (UPI) — A highly accurate laser gunsight built for use against terrorists has disappeared from a science museum and may have fallen into the very hands against which it was designed, its makers say.

"It may have been stolen by terrorists, by people acting on behalf of a foreign manufacturer, or by a government which we had refused to let look at it," Paul Cook, managing director of Scientifica and Cook Electronics, said Monday.

He said the sight, which sells for $2,350, throws a continuous red laser beam onto a target, giving accuracy "far in excess of normal." It can be fitted onto any rifle or submachine gun.

DECADE FOR KIRBY
 Comedian George Kirby will have to do his entertaining behind bars now. He's drawn two concurrent 10-year sentences in Las Vegas, Nev., where he was convicted Dec. 21, 1977, of selling $26,000 worth of high-grade heroin to an undercover agent. U.S. District Judge Roger Foley pronounced the prison sentence — says Kirby can be released on $100,000 bond, pending appeal.

STITCHES TO STRINGS
 Medicine's loss is music's gain, and Dr. Shyam Yodh — a New York neurosurgeon with 1,000 operations behind him — says he likes it that way. Yodh has traded the scalpel for the sitar — jiving up his practice and its lucrative salary — to pursue his first love full time. He plays the multi-stringed Indian instrument nightly now at Manhattan's Nirvana Restaurant. Says he, "I've gone from stitches to strings and have peace of mind." Understandably, news of the switch broke in the New York medical journal, Hospital Tribune.

GLIMPSES
 *Kirk Douglas, Amy Irving, Carrie Snodgrass and producer Frank Yablans all will be in New York next month to promote "The Fury" ... Tiny Tim is in concert at Manhattan's Copacabana through March 4 ... Princess Grace of Monaco was awarded an honorary doctor of humane letters degree Monday — for her patronage of arts and letters — by Duquesne University in Pittsburgh ... A divorce has been granted in St. Louis to 78-year-old brewer and baseball team owner August A. Busch Jr. from his estranged wife, Gertrude.

Cook said 25 of the newly developed "Laser Marksman" have been sold to foreign security forces and the British military for testing.

Scotland Yard detectives said the sight was stolen Friday from an exhibit on laser technology at the Museum of Science. A spokesman said there were no signs of forced entry.

"We developed this highly accurate device for anti-terrorist use or against would-be assassins," Scientifica sales manager Tony Follmi said.

"The frightening thing is that it may have fallen into the very hands against which it was designed."

Court decision still stands

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI) — Harry Ray Noe claims he was only trying to get a little fresh air when he blasted out some windows in his house, but a court says his nine-month sentence for attempted murder still stands.

The state Supreme Court Monday voted 2-2 on Noe's appeal of his prison term, thus defeating his petition.

Noe claimed on court briefs supporting his appeal that the Sept. 11, 1976, shooting incident was just a misunderstanding.

He said someone called the Lincoln County sheriff's department and made threats, leaving the deputies a name — Noe's.

Noe was staying at his mother's house, where four lawmen showed up. He asked for a warrant, which the officers didn't have, and he refused to let them in, he said.

According to Noe, the officers then fired tear gas inside, so he used a rifle to shoot out the Venetian blind-covered windows "in an effort to get ventilation into the house."

The sheriff then arrived with a warrant, charging Noe with four counts of attempted first-degree murder. Noe was convicted following a trial on one count and sentenced to a nine-month term.

Magruder book soon released

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jeb Magruder, one-time White House aide and now a divinity student, says Richard Nixon planned to perpetuate his presidency by choosing successors capable of destroying their opposition.

Magruder is the latest Watergate personality to publish his version of the historic events which led to their own imprisonment and Nixon's resignation. The book, "From Power to Peace," is to be published in May. The Trib obtained an advance copy of the manuscript and detailed it in today's edition.

Nixon planned to establish "a perpetual presidency," it says. Magruder recalls, Nixon "was so convinced that his kind of administration was better for the country than anything the Democrats could offer, that he wanted to be able to pick his successors."

"The main two things," the account continues: "a Republican candidate had to be able to win elections—we had just proved that could be done; and he had to be able to destroy any opposition candidates — we were well on our way to doing that."

Unsolved stranglings keep women still on guard

NEW YORK (UPI) — A number of stranglings — a number of stranglings — a number of stranglings — have women in three separate regions of America looking over their shoulders these days as they hurry down darkened streets or dart to their cars in parking lots.

Fear is not confined to places where strangers allegedly have struck. Psychologists who are expert in deviant behavior fear an increase in this kind of crime — multiple murders on the installment plan.

Their worries stem from the fact that many severely mentally ill persons are on the streets instead of in hospitals. These people may seem perfectly normal even 99 percent of the time but on occasion a few may lose control over an urge to kill.

In the last 10 years the mental hospital population dropped to 200,000 from 500,000. Many former patients don't take medicine that helped them in the hospital.

According to psychiatrists interviewed by United Press International, the stranglers police are seeking are not necessarily psychotic, but it's a good bet they are.

At large in Wichita, Kan., the Los Angeles area of California, and Columbus, Ga., are killers who follow a "modus operandi" something like that of New York's "Son of Sam" and the "Boston Strangler."

"Patterns repeat. Each time the killers may be responding to a demonic urge they no longer can control. What kind of persons are they? The psychiatrists speculated.

Dr. Shevett H. Frazier, chief psychiatrist at McLean hospital in Belmont, Mass., and a professor of psychiatry at Harvard University School of Medicine, doesn't think stranglers differ much from murderers who kill by sinking a knife in a heart or shooting a bullet into a head.

Frazier is chairman of the American Psychiatric Association's Joint Committee on Public Affairs. He thinks it's over simplistic to say the killers are bidding for attention.

"That may be a factor," he said, "but the whole life experience is at work — a lot of early damage, later experience and perhaps there is a genetic connection. Murder is just the final pathway."

He gave this profile of persons who might commit multiple murders like these: — The persons were abused or even brutalized as children. They suffered indignities, humiliations and physical suffering at the hands of parents or other adults. As babies they may have been burned by cigarettes, dropped on their heads or put out naked in freezing coats.

— Most multiple murderers are men who were socially deprived early in life. As a result they tend to be loners but their fantasy life, diaries have shown, are rich and violent.

They also probably suffer from gender confusion. "I think that's why they are interested in sexually active women," he said.

— Multiple murderers often are collectors of injustices they feel they've got to avenge.

— They usually are not violent in their daily behavior or vicious looking. They tend to be very quiet and may be low key. Some are quite disturbed mentally and very often have episodes when they lose contact with reality.

Dr. Emmanuel Tanay, chairman of the law and psychiatry committee of the American Psychiatric Association, based a prediction about more crimes of this type on the fact that it has become increasingly difficult for psychiatrists to commit persons to mental hospitals.

"Professionally one feels helpless as one sees what's happening and watches society suffer," he said in an interview.

Tanay, professor of psychiatry at Wayne State University Medical School in Detroit, said such persons, on the surface, do not appear sick and "that's why it's so easy for them to operate."

"If he comes to your door and wants to use your phone, you will not send him away and you will let him in, he looks so respectable."

Strangling, according to Tanay, is "a highly sadistic method of killing another human being."

Dr. Lawrence Z. Freedman, professor of psychiatry at the University of Chicago School of Medicine, is an authority on deviant behavior. He was involved in the case of Charles Whitman, the Texas Tower killings at Austin and the Richard Speck case (killing nurses) in Chicago. He said:

Fake badges stolen

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Police warned citizens Tuesday to beware "highway patrol officers" with fake — stolen — badges. But those who look closely should be able to distinguish the impostors from the real thing.

The 20 badges were stolen from the wardrobe department at MGM studios, where they were part of the costumes for the television series "CHiPs," about the California Highway Patrol, police said.

They can be distinguished from genuine badges, police said, because in place of the seal of the State of California the fake badges bear the letters "CHiPs," the slang name other law enforcement officers use for Highway Patrol officers.

Danny and Sara learn to face real world

In this last of a two-part series, Psychologist Mira Rothenberg continues her work at a special school for autistic and schizophrenic children.

Autism, n: absorption, in self-centered subjective mental activity, daydreams, fantasies, delusions and hallucinations especially when accompanied by marked withdrawal from reality. Autistic, adj. Schizophrenia, n: a psychotic disorder characterized by loss of contact with the environment and by disintegration of personality expressed as disorder of feeling, thought and conduct. Schizophrenic, adj. Webster's.

Part two of this series, "Refuge in Silence," is an excerpt from the book "Children with Emerald Eyes" by Mira Rothenberg. Copyright is 1969 and 1977 by Mira Rothenberg. It is reprinted by permission of Dial Press and all rights are reserved.

Danny had come to our school from a school for retarded children, where he sat and rocked for two years, doing nothing else. He was six. His shoulders were stooped and hunched. His eyes were vacant. No one could touch him or communicate with him. His body was in constant motion.

"I know she's retarded; still there are times when she's so bright, so wise."

Danny would barely talk and the only words to come out of his mouth were: "Danny little," "stars and sky," "God doesn't love little things," and "be lost." He was assigned to me. My first autistic child. On the third day I touched him. He kicked and scratched. For the next three months, I sat at one end of the room with him at the other, and like the hunter and the hunted we studied each other.

He was always busy with something - and destroying ("wrecking," he called it) walls, chairs, tables, himself. He bloodied himself continuously, never punishing himself by beating himself mercilessly. There was no way of stopping him or comforting him and if he stopped himself, it was a different withdrawal. He'd get into his rocker and stare out the window for hours, murmuring.

But we began to learn more about each other. He liked the seagull. I'd collected the seemingly meaningless words that came out of Danny's mouth, and from them I made up a song for him: And the birds do fly
Way up, up high into the sky
Where the sun is golden and warm
Bright

Where the moon is yellow and lights up the night
And the stars do shine in the sky
Danny's hair is like the sun

MEET SIX-YEAR-OLD SARA she talks to her hand

Danny's eyes are like the sky. Up and down Up and down we go. Way up, up, up into the sky Where the wind does howl And the clouds roll by Continuously he began to trust, even to touch, and to call me by "Miria," but nothing else changed. His terrors were still the same. His rocking and wrecking and his hurting himself continued. Little frightened Danny needed love, and he was ready to beat himself into showing a loveable child.

My first definite act was to show him that Danny wasn't bad or unlovable. In the midst of one of his punishing rages, I grabbed the child, put him over my lap, and said: "I'm not going to let you beat yourself like that. From now on, if any anything is to be done, I'll do it, not you." So I proceeded to spank. The spanking did not hurt much, and yet I was serious.

He was by turns, terrified, outraged, relieved and surprised. Two minutes later he came running back. "Danny needs a walloping," he told me. Again I put him over my lap and began spanking. "You count with me," I told him. He laughed and forgot a little bit about his badness. The healing had started.

Danny had been a normal, even precocious child until, at age four, he became "different."

His parents were interesting people, very bright, very idealistic. The father was a test pilot. The mother, very creative. There was a religious household. Neither of them was child-oriented, and a child like Danny made it impossible for them to be anything else but rejecting parents. They were both afraid of the child - of his rage, the physical havoc he wrought, his strangeness, his isolation and pain, and of their inability to help him.

Danny had a grandfather to whom he was very much attached and who was devoted to the child, probably the only member of his family who was. The grandfather died when Danny was three years old. The child was told that grandfather was "with God...in Heaven on a star."

There were other specific traumas. When Danny was two and a half years old, he got lost in the forest. He was alone for two days and two nights. Planes and posess were sent to look for him. Eventually, he was found. Also, at age three, he possibly witnessed the death of a little girl and attended her wake.

I've often tried to imagine what it must be like to be lost when you are two and a half years old. Lost for two endlessly long days. What is mental illness but a getting lost of the self? Danny experienced it concretely in the forest, then forever experienced it in all the aspects of his life. "Be lost."

I needed constantly to reassure Danny that he wouldn't "be lost," whether he "felt little" or "be little." This "be lost when little" was diminishing day by day.

But the fear was replaced by the feat of "be lost when big." This I think had a direct connection with Danny's fear that "Daddy be lost way up high in the sky - in the stars" while flying. Sometimes Danny became the father and got "lost in the stars."

As he dared "to be little" and nothing happened, and as he dared "to be bigger" and nothing happened, Danny began to dare to grow. He began to walk straight, and to say, "Danny is now bigger." He began to talk more, do more activities, began to ask for help and to learn his physical limits and limitations.

As he learned these, his behavior slowly improved. He was less destructive of things and himself. And as he developed a better image of himself, he learned to come closer to other children, adults and animals. He learned to know what he liked and what he didn't like and how to express it.

There was still the need for the seagull and the song at times but this was more for the sake of remembrance, and he added happy new words:

Way up high into the sky we go Up and down, up and down And down we are - safe.

He would still go off to his rocker and stare. But these withdrawals were fewer and shorter. He would say "Danny wants to be alone." These withdrawals were necessary to integrate what he had learned, reassure himself, maybe even to take a step back so he could go ahead again.

Then his mother, father and sister dared to think of a vacation. I promised to keep Danny for a month. I love the child so much, enjoyed him so much that I was really looking forward to it. It was work, the kind of work I never imagined existed.

It was then that I learned to have respect for the parents of such children. To live with these kids is at times beyond the realm of imagination. It is a test of all human endurance and a ripping of one's guts.

For Danny, his stay with me was a great success. It was his first separation from hope and he made it. Not only did he make it, but he continued his improvement.

By fall, the psychiatrist and the director felt that the child was ready to move on to a more integrated class in the same school. There the children's disturbances were not so extreme, and they were ready for school.

In my heart I did not want him to go to another group yet. He wasn't ready. But I suspected my heart so I let my head rule and agreed to the transfer.

In the other group, Danny - furious with me - became worse and worse. He was regressing. His tantrums came back; and then he began to wreck - the wall at home, the wall at school, the window. His feet were bloody and again he went back to the rocking chair, back in the forest. But was told that I interfered now, he could never readjust.

The disillusionment for Danny's parents became too great. A new unit was being set up at a state hospital; they wanted to try it for Danny. They could not take him at home any longer.

To my pleas, "Don't send him away. Don't place him," came the inevitable, "If he were yours, Miria, what would you do?" And "Don't we have a right to the life too? Don't the other children?" What was there to answer - what right does one have to tell another he is to bear a cross and how, when you cannot promise its end?

I came to the hospital time and time again. We'd sit on the stairs or in the visiting room, and I'd sing the songs he loved so much. He'd give a forlorn little smile and not want to let me leave.

And then I did not come any more because impotence is terrifying and helplessness is devastating. And the heart can break many, many times and then can break no more.

Sara, a pretty little girl, was brought to me with a diagnosis of mental retardation. The only one who sometimes questioned it was her mother:

"I know she's retarded; still there are times when she's so bright, so wise. But it disappears before you can hold onto it. Sara developed normally," she said. "Then at two and a half years when her brother was born she changed and became impossible." Impossible?

Sara was six. She hadn't slept through a night since she was two and a half, she hadn't calmed a proper meal since she was two and a half. She hadn't focused her eyes since she was two and a half. She hadn't gone to the bathroom since she was two and a half. She hadn't gone to the window since she was two and a half, nor had she

Mira learned to understand

Compassion felt for their pain

By MIRA ROTHENBERG Field Newspaper Sociolocate I've written these stories about these children because I loved them. And having loved them, I've learned something to understand them; to have compassion for their pain, respect for their effort, and admiration for their courage.

The insane child is forced to take a path within his psyche, the same child a path more familiar. And that is a difference not so much in kind as in degree. The insane child, just like the sane child, is frightened, hurt, rages, and cries. He, too, protects himself by rage, attack, or withdrawal. Only more so.

The sane child goes through all the stages of development one can see in the insane child. However, the insane child often stays arrested in a stage and uses it to a different end, while the sane child passes through it and grows.

The seeming illogic of insanity is really very logical within the context of the individual insane child. Each individual insanity is, given its author, a very reasonable and sensible reaction, made to protect its author from what he is mortally afraid of.

Each child builds his own citadel. And as each child is different from the other, so are the citadels and so are the kinds of bridges one must build to get into the citadels. Each child defends himself against his terror in his own inimitable way. Yet all protect themselves against the same terror - destruction. Each child fights in his inimitable way. Yet all fight for the same thing - survival.

I want to show the common denominator of sanity and insanity in all kids - to seek what they so desperately want, the love and understanding that means survival. Sanity or insanity are neither bad nor good, but they both exist and both are an answer to and about to survive. It is that we do with them and need them that is good or bad, insanity, no matter how it hurts society, hurts the child more.

I want the reader not to sentimentalize insanity, as is the fashion of the day. Murder, crime against oneself or others, is harmful and wasteful. And it hurts. What we must do is to help the individual, looked in the mirror since she was two and a half, and she had not let her mother out of her sight since she was two and a half. Because of the impossibility inherent in the nature of demands, Sara had terrible rages.

I did not believe that she was retarded. But I felt that she was so frozen in her terror and her agony that she could not move, and therefore appeared retarded.

Sara's isolation was so devastating that no one could give her the security she needed. Sara resolved the dilemma for herself. She made herself a friend, a friend she could control completely - her hand. Sara could stretch out her hand before her name in deep concentration, converse with it for hours on end.

Her isolation and her terror, forced her to control her world by controlling another part of her body - her eyes. She was afraid to see again what had frightened her so she put her eyes out of focus.

It was this need of hers to control her life situations completely that enabled her to get better in a comparatively short time. I saw Sara for over a year, once a week and sometimes twice. Sara was my teacher. The initiative in Sara's treatment was always Sara's. So was the method and the pace.

The second and third week she came to see me she insisted I was a doctor. The fourth week, she threw one of her tantrums. It lasted over three hours. The fifth time Sara came, she said "Okay. You are not a doctor. You are Mira. So I am going to be little and you will be my Mommy. You must do what I tell you."

She then literally lived the growing from babyhood. The artificiality in the situation was quickly gone, the child, though acting, was really not. I followed her commands to the letter, feeling I was invited into the child's most private and desperate world.

Finally she could say, "Now I am Sara six years old." Then she ran out to the waiting room, where her mother was waiting, and she said "Okay, her you don't have to wait for me any more. When it is time for me to leave, come pick me up."

Sara, whose demands on her mother were incessant, suddenly said "Go." She became more cooperative to and accepting of her parents. She was better at school.

Summer came and I took Sara to camp with me. It was her first time away from home and she was terrified.

For the first few days she refused to eat. At mealtimes, she would hide under the dining room table. On the third day I took the food in my hand and held it under the table, feeling that if the child was to give in to her hunger she would not do it openly. Sara, like a hungry puppy, took the food and ate it. After a week or so, Sara sat herself on a chair. From then on, Sara ate.

Sara's eyes could see straight. If you got in front of her, quite low, you could see her eyes focusing when she talked to her hand. I told her that when she talked to me, she had to look at me with both eyes or I would think she was avoiding me. I know that she didn't look straight at things, I told her, because they frightened her.

Sara tried. When she really wanted to convince me of something, her eyes straightened, since she knew that otherwise I wouldn't listen. "Miria is not sure that I'm really talking to her if I don't look at her," she explained bitterly to her hand.

It was in camp that her sleeping problem became real to me. Night after night Sara would lie in bed with her eyes wide open. If she managed to doze off, she would wake frightened beyond description.

Then one night when I dozed off from exhaustion, I fell a tugging on my sleeve. Sara looked pale as if she had seen a ghost, and, in bits and pieces, she began telling me the story. "And then," she began, "there were two people and a lot of arms and a lot of legs. And they were all wiggling. And then Daddy..." she was so absorbed in reliving the scene, she was soaked through with perspiration. Like a rag doll, she let herself be held, then suddenly she began to scream: "Miria, I'm afraid; hold me, hold me. Don't let them kill me!" She bore her eyes into mine, then as suddenly relaxed. "I know you won't let them," she said, and she burrowed her head into my breast and fell blissfully asleep.

She saw what was murder to her - the primal scene. Night after night we went through the same actions and words. And sometimes Sara would add, "But if Mommy is dead, how come she is alive?" "Is she alive?" "Is she my Mommy?" "Will she come and kill me, or will Daddy kill me?" Sara finally rid herself of this memory and could sleep.

The hand we tackled last. Sara consulted her hand about everything and the other children got used to the hand: Whenever they talked about Sara, they'd say "they," meaning the two of them, Sara and the hand. Just as Sara would say "we." The children and the staff would often say to Sara, "What does the hand think?" or, "I bet the hand isn't afraid."

I would listen to them and think, "My God, they've all gone crazy!" And in the next breath I'd hear myself say, "So ask your hand already and let's get going."

Then one day about a week before going home, Sara came to me giggling and said, "You know, the kids all talk about my hand as if it was a real person. Aren't they silly? Tell them it is only my hand and it is part of me."

How she arrived at this decision, when and what made her give up her need, I'll never know. Whenever I talked to her about it, she would look at me as if I was deranged and say, "Come on, Miria. A hand is only a hand."

She had become a favorite among adults and children alike. Her suntan, her beautiful eyes, now straight most of the time, her sensitive features made her face beautiful.

"Blueberry Hill." Sara would say. "Let's go to Blueberry Hill." She loved and forever spoke of that little hill on which the berries grew and she loved the berries she picked. She laughed and sang there and was there the freest. So she named it Blueberry Hill. And we named her Blueberry.

And this was how our camp was named. After Sara: Blueberry.

actively; not condone and forgive, nor, inexcusably, ignore. No insanity is incurable - it is just that we don't know how to cure some forms of it. No insanity is so frightening as to make it untouchable and hence incurable. If touched with understanding and compassion, it becomes curable.

I want to show that these children are our children. I want to dispel the fear of these crazy children - these children with their all-seeing emerald eyes. Once people see the reason for their insanity, if not the cause of it, the fear will be gone.

And last - I want the reader to see the kids and love them, whether sane or insane. Not because they are sick or not sick, but because they are.

Abby

By Abigail Van Buren
1278 W. Chicago Tribune N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married for three months and we just had our first big fight. It all started when I mentioned to him that I had read that the longest marriage on record was 86 years! My husband then replied that 25 years is our limit—and no more.

Abby, I got married for life and I hope that he did, too, so this really got me upset.

Then he said, "You should be pleased with a guarantee of 25 years."

What do you say, Abby?

V.V.

One day at a time

DEAR B.: Nobody has a "guarantee" that he'll wake up tomorrow morning, so your husband's "guarantee" of a 25-year-long marriage doesn't mean much.

Live your life one day at a time, and if your husband tells you after 25 years that your "guarantee" has run out, write again, and if I'm still around (and I hope I am), I'll help you deal with it.

DEAR ABBY: I have a boyfriend who has three favorite sayings: "I'm starved," "I'm tired" and "I'm broke." I can't see why he should always say those things. He lives at home, gets, and he shouldn't be broke either since he has a job. He comes over every Friday night, and when I ask him to take me to a movie, he says he's broke. When I suggest going somewhere else, he says he's too tired. I don't understand why I want to marry him, but I do. What's wrong with him?

SUZIE Q.

DEAR SUZIE Q.: He needs someone who will feed him, give him an allowance, and tuck him in every night. (A mother.) He's for ADOPTING—not MARRYING.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 45-year-old widow in love with a 47-year-old widower I'll call Bill. Bill's wife died four years ago and left him with a daughter who is now 12. (I'll call her Betty.) The problem is the way Betty feels about me. She's insanely jealous. Bill once kissed the back of my neck while helping me on with my coat and Betty became hysterical. She yelled and screamed and cursed me, saying, "You will NEVER take my mother's place!" It took Bill an hour to calm her down. Whenever we have sex, she says, "Betty has to sit between us. When we throo are together, Betty sulks and looks at me with hate in her eyes. Until recently, Betty slept with her father, but I told him I thought it was very unhealthy so he stopped it."

Bill is begging me to marry him. He says Betty will outlaw her jealousy after we're married, and I really love to love me, but I'm afraid to take a chance. A really love Bill and don't want to give him up. Please help me.

NEEDS HELP

DEAR NEEDS: Tell Bill that unless (and until) he gets Betty to a psychotherapist for some counseling, and her attitude changes, marriage between you would be a disaster. (He could also use some therapy.) Under no circumstances should you marry Bill with the situation that now exists. If he doesn't agree to getting help for Betty, say goodbye. And don't look back.

Problem? Tell them to Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, write Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

The greatest gift you can give a bedwetter and a source of the family too is an end to this serious problem, and make no mistake, bedwetting is serious. It can cause a lifetime of psychological problems that last a lifetime. It's so needless because bedwetting, when not caused by organic defect or disease, can be ended. Here is a hand that is a cinch with correct play and likely to fail miserably if the declarer doesn't remember to get a count before attacking the club suit.

The defense starts with three rounds of diamonds. Declarer ruffs the third lead to force West to ruff also if he holds four trumps. West, however, the use of "even" and "never" is very strong. You don't follow this procedure when you have some good reason not to do so.

A Rhode Island reader wants to know the meaning of "eight-ever," nine never. It means that with eight of a suit you should finesse for a missing queen; with nine you should play for a drop. However, the use of "even" and "never" is very strong. You don't follow this procedure when you have some good reason not to do so.

Rate of inflation continues to mount

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The inflation rate doubled from 0.4 percent in December to 0.8 percent in January and workers' spendable income took "the deepest dive on record," the Labor Department reported Monday.

"What we had was a very strong and widespread rise in prices last month," said Julius Shiskin, head of the Bureau of Labor Statistics. The inflationary surge is "a cause of concern" despite the apparent influence of bad weather, he said.

Shiskin said the record 3 percent drop in workers' spendable earnings "was for the most part attributable to the big rise in consumer prices" and higher payroll taxes.

The lowest previous showing, since the government started keeping records on spendable income in 1964, was a 1.6 percent decline in August 1973.

pushed up prices, especially for food, and cut income by reducing the work week.

The rapid rise in prices for January boosted the cost of living 6.7 percent higher than a year ago, the department said. The Consumer Price Index stood at 167.2 in January from the 1967 base of 100.

The old survey was broadened by the department's expanded survey of consumer prices. The old survey was broadened from an urban worker family of four to include professional and management families, the unemployed, and low-income non-urban families.

The department said the new survey covers about 80 percent of the national population compared with 45 percent under the old one. Both surveys rose 0.8 percent in January when the old survey was adjusted for commodities not previously measured.

Food and housing got the biggest share of two-thirds of the January increase in consumer prices. There were rapid rises for meat, poultry, eggs, fresh fruit and vegetables. The food sector as a whole rose 1.2 percent in January.

The cost of buying and maintaining a home rose 1 percent in January. This reflected higher prices and mortgage interest rates for buyers, and higher costs for maintenance, repairs and services.

Train derailments point up problem

By United Press International
Three train derailments in the South within the past five days with loss of life in two instances points to an increasing problem for government and the railroads — the hauling of potentially dangerous cargo through populous areas and over roadbeds that may be in bad need of repair.
The issue comes before the National Transportation Safety Board in Washington April 4-6 when hearings will be held. In addition to railroads, the NTSB hearings will also cover dangerous cargo handling by trucks.
A NTSB spokesman termed the three southern derailments involving dangerous material within the first two months of the year "quite an alarming rate." During 1977, about 7,000 train derailments were reported to the government.
Final figures are not available for last year.

(although one person died in a derailment in Pensacola, Fla.), but in 1976 there were 146 people injured in train derailments involving hazardous materials. The next year the figures jumped to two killed and 198 injured.
So far this year, 20 people have died and more than 200 have been injured in train derailments.
The railroads currently carry about 1,600 substances that the government labels as potentially hazardous and figures indicate about one in 20 rail cars haul some sort of dangerous cargo.
The Tennessee and Florida derailments of the past five days Monday prompted an official of the Mississippi Public Service Commission to wonder aloud what may be on the minds of many state officials.

Thursday's outlook calls for partly cloudy.

Halley, Camas Prairie, Lower Wood River Valley:
Partly cloudy through Wednesday with chance of a few snow flurries. Overnight lows will be zero to 10 degrees, highs in the 30s Wednesday.
Thursday's outlook is for partly cloudy.

Synopsis:
Clear skies predominated over southern Idaho this morning. This allowed temperatures to drop well below normal in most areas. Rupert reported a cool 18 degrees and 21 degrees was reported at Gooding. However, up in the Camas Prairie, Fairfield recorded a chilly seven degrees below zero with a snow depth of 23 inches.

The split flow aloft over Idaho will keep most incoming storms well north and south of the Magic Valley for several days.

The three-to-five day forecast for Thursday through Saturday indicates very little change in the overall weather pattern.
Mostly, dry weather with near normal temperatures are expected. High temperatures will be mostly in the 40s with overnight lows mostly in the 20s.

Boy's frozen body found in snowdrift

UXBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI) — Peter Gosselin's small, frozen body was found by a mailman Monday just a few steps from the boy's own front door.
The 10-year-old died during the February blizzard, after he struggled through a snowdrift but failed to reach the safety of his home.
The snowbanks near Mary Jane Avenue today are still pockmarked with holes from poles, sticks and shovels pushed deep in an attempt to find the boy's body.
But despite a widespread search by hundreds of volunteers, Peter's body wasn't found until natural melting of the snow exposed part of his mitten.

Peter, a fourth-grader, loved to play in the snow like most of his friends. When the blizzard struck New England on Feb. 6, he must have been delighted with the prospect of no school and tons of snow to play in.
This town of 9,000 near the Rhode Island border was hardhit by the storm. Up to three feet of snow fell. Peter was last seen about noon the next day — with the storm still raging.

He was well-dressed for the weather with a snorkel jacket, blue pants, boots and mittens. But this storm was a killer — it took the lives of more than 50 people in New England.

When Paul and Mary Gosselin first realized their son was missing, they searched frantically for him during the storm. Later, police and fire officials joined relatives and neighbors in a still wider search for Peter.

The story was in the newspapers and on TV, and in the next few days literally hundreds of people from nearby communities volunteered to help. Plows carted away mountains of snow as workers sifted through it.

Parts of the neighborhood today look as though they missed the blizzard. Volunteers even searched acres of nearby woods, where it was believed the boy could have been driven by blinding gate-force winds.

The eight-foot snowdrifts in Peter's front yard were searched several times, even as late as Sunday. The yard still hasn't shoveled out, and the family enters the house through a side entrance.

No. 1 on that lengthy list of things that make people happy still "is a good marriage," says the pollster. Then, in descending order, come good health, good family life and a good country in which to live. After that, loyal friends, a satisfactory house or apartment, an interesting job, a strong personal faith and sufficient leisure activity. That list gets long before "plenty of money" shows up on it.

Ponies bred on Salloway in the Shetlands weren't the quality of horseflesh bred elsewhere on those islands. Undersized, they were generally regarded as worthless. That's where we get our word "salloway."

Item No. 462C in our Love and War man's file is an observation by the poet Baudelaire: "What is irritating about love is that it is a crime that requires an accomplice."

BURGLARS

Q. "You once said the police can tell whether a room has been ransacked by a professional amateur by looking at the dresser drawers. That is, if all the drawers are left open, it was a pro. If only the bottom drawers are left open, it was an amateur. Why so?"

A. The amateur usually starts at the top drawer and works down, thus having to close each drawer to get into the next one. The pro usually starts at the bottom and works up, thus getting time by not having to close any drawer.

Q. "What were the names of the original Siamese twins?" A. Chang and Eng Bunker. In the Thai language, Chang and Eng mean right and left. They weren't called Siamese twins in Siam, incidentally. Being of Chinese descent, they were called the Chinese twins.

POLLUTION
The body of an Alaskan Eskimo woman had been preserved in ice for 1,600 years. Carbon tests proved that. Doctors during an autopsy found she'd been a victim of that ailment the miners call black lung. They theorized it was caused by fumes from what oil lamps. Hardly anyplace seems less likely to have been a scene for pollution as that land of the Arctic so many centuries ago.

Stocks at Midday

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices were lower at the opening Tuesday of New York Stock Exchange issues. Volume was light to moderate. The Dow Jones industrial average, which dropped almost eight points in the previous session after a two-day gain, was off 0.60 to 747.25 within minutes of the opening bell. Its close Monday was the lowest in almost three years. Declines led advances, 177 to 66 among the 433 issues crossing the tape. A lack of inspiring news faced traders and investors. The dollar, which improved in foreign exchange trading Monday, was down sharply in early trading Tuesday. The Swiss central bank reportedly has sent one of its directors to the United States to ask for support of the dollar in the exchange market. The depressing report on inflation released Monday by the Labor Department also hung over the stock market. The report showed that the inflation rate doubled from December to January while spendable income of workers during the period took its biggest fall on record. Continued depressants included the coal stoppage. While a tentative pact has been worked out, there is some doubt that the union's bank-and-file will accept it.

Legislators ponder tax relief package

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho's legislative leaders will have to decide what they want out of a $20 million tax relief package, the co-chairman of the Joint Finance Appropriations said today.

Rep. Larry Jackson, R-Boise, said there just isn't going to be enough money to take care of all the tax relief proposals presently floating around the 1978 Idaho Legislature.

"The money being proposed in the tax relief programs are bumping up against the budget pretty hard," Jackson said.

He said the Legislature just can't afford legislation which would cost $16 million to bring Idaho's income tax in compliance with federal deduction standards, doubling the circuit breaker, increasing the grocery tax for the elderly and 7 mills of property tax relief costing $16.2 million.

"We can't have it all," said Jackson.

Jackson said the joint committee, which could wind up its work Thursday, is trying to stay at least near the governor's recommendations, except in the area of property tax relief.

Gov. John V. Evans proposed an across-the-board $50 tax rebate to property owners. This has yet to surface while Republicans proposed an 8-mill school tax reduction — a measure that passed both houses and was vetoed by the governor and was sustained.

With the exception of circuit breaker tax relief for the elderly, Jackson said, the joint committee is $1 million under the governor's recommendation.

Evans has proposed a modest increase in circuit breaker which would cost $1.7 million, but the Senate already has adopted a bill by Sen. Edith Miller Klein, R-Boise, doubling circuit breaker and $4 million more than recommended by Evans.

Jackson said the Legislature could not adopt the federal deduction standards, Mrs. Klein's bill and the 7 mill reduction "without going back and cutting the governor's (budget) recommendations."

In the Senate State Affairs Committee Monday, it was decided to amend Gov. John V.

Evans' Domestic and Rural Power Authority legislation, but the committee did not specify what amendments should be tacked onto the proposal.

Asked who should draft the amendments, and after silence from committee members, Chairman Leon Swenson, R-Nampa, said "every man should be for himself."

Only Senate President Pro-Tem Phil Batt, R-Wilder, provided a specific amendment for the measure, which would allow the state to negotiate for future federal power.

Batt said he would like to see the private sector deleted from the legislation.

Over in the House, the Resources Committee sent to the floor for amendment a bill to repeal the Land Use Planning Act of 1975 so that plans already enacted would be protected and old planning laws would be re-enacted.

Rep. Lyman G. Winchester, R-Kuna, sponsor of the repealer, called for the amendments because, he said, outright repeal of the controversial act would wipe out all planning done since 1975.

Outright repeal also would leave counties without any authority under law to conduct planning and zoning, he said.

Elsewhere on the legislative scene:

—Senate State Affairs members voted to send to the Commerce and Labor Committee a resolution to establish a committee to study the management of the Idaho Public Utilities Commission.

—House Revenue and Taxation Committee members discussed but took no final action on a packet of bills providing additional bonding authority for regional airports.

—After three debates the House reserved itself and approved 34-33 the transfer of maintenance funds this year to the Department of Corrections for the Gooding Tuberculosis Hospital. Initially, the House killed the transfer 34-34 and then voted 35-33 to reconsider its action and subsequently approved the bill — paving the way for the location of a women's prison at the old hospital grounds.

Building plans nixed by solons

TWIN FALLS — State building projects planned in Twin Falls received a setback Monday in the Idaho Legislature.

House members voted 41 to 20 for a concurrent resolution deauthorizing state building projects in four Idaho cities, including Coeur d'Alene, Pocatello, Boise and Twin Falls.

Rep. Gary Ingram, R-Coeur d'Alene, who steered the measure through the House, said it was not a question of whether the structures were needed but who should build them.

He questioned whether the State Building Authority should be the agency to construct them. The resolution does not affect building authority projects already under way in Lewiston, Boise and Idaho Falls, but rather those still on the drawing boards.

He said these should be held up until the legislature has a better idea of the total cost.

In Twin Falls a study has begun on the need and possible sites for a building to house several state agencies.

Gas company hearings opened by PUC

BOISE (UPI) — The Public Utilities Commission opened hearings Monday on a proposal to restructure the Intermountain Gas Company, and company officials disagreed with PUC staff members about the impact of the reorganization on the PUC's ability to regulate the company and protect the interests of Idaho consumers.

The utility has proposed to form a holding company called Intermountain Gas Industries, and reorganize the existing company to create wholly-owned subsidiaries of the new holding company strictly segregating utility operations and non-utility operations.

The company is involved in both exploration operations and gas appliance sales and service in addition to its utility functions of providing gas to consumers.

The gas company maintains that the proposed reorganization would more clearly separate the utility and non-utility activities of the parent and its subsidiaries and thereby make the PUC's job of regulating the utility functions easier and cheaper.

R.D. Crim, president of Intermountain Gas, also told the commission in his prepared testimony that the merger is being proposed to improve the company's ability to finance operations and simplify personnel management.

However, two PUC staff members testifying at the hearing said the reorganization would not simplify the PUC's regulatory problems and could perpetuate the possibility of conflicts of interest between utility shareholders and Idaho consumers in transactions between the parent company and its subsidiaries.

Michael Epperson, a PUC utility security analyst, gave an example of the sort of conflict of interest that can arise in such transactions under the current organization of the company. Currently the parent company, itself a utility, has a wholly-owned subsidiary called HomeGuard Systems, which deals in gas appliances and services that are not utility operations.

In 1977 net payables due to Intermountain Gas Company from HomeGuard increased from $170,019 in June to $570,415 in December and the parent company also increased its investment in HomeGuard from $1,188,390 to $1,674,822.

"Clearly, HomeGuard has not been a profitable operation and has had to depend on Intermountain Gas not only to cover its losses, but also to provide all operating capital," Epperson said in his prepared testimony.

Tax repealer passed

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. John V. Evans' bill to repeal the six-dollar store license tax sailed through the House 60-9 and heads now to the Senate.

Russell Westerber, D-Soda, said the present tax is little more than a nuisance tax and is discriminatory as well.

He said the act finances, the Idaho Division of Tourism and Industrial Development, benefits all the people of the state and the revenue to support them more properly should come from the state's general fund.

Panel to amend Evans power plan

BOISE (UPI) — The Senate State Affairs Committee decided Monday to amend Gov. John V. Evans' Domestic and Rural Power Authority legislation, but did not specify what amendments should be tacked onto the proposal.

Asked who should draft the amendments, and after silence from committee members, Chairman Leon Swenson, R-Nampa, said "every man should be for himself."

Senate President Pro-Tem Phil Batt, R-Wilder, was the only committee member who provided a specific amendment for the measure, which would allow the state to negotiate for future federal power.

Batt said he would like to see the public sector deleted from the legislation. He said he agreed with the intent of the governor's proposal to allow the state to enter into negotiations with the Bonneville Power Administration, but he didn't feel that the private sector should be regulated under the bill.

An attempt by Assistant Majority Leader J. Wilson Steen, R-Glenns Ferry, to keep the measure in committee died on a 5-5 tie vote.

Senate Minority Leader Cy Chase, D-St. Maries, said the main thing was to get something moving to provide for a future power supply.

"If we don't do something, there will be serious problems down the line," Chase said.

Assistant Senate Minority Leader Ron Twillegar, D-Boise, said of the 16-18 bills of the governor's "this is one of the most important."

Meanwhile, after three debates the House reversed itself and approved 34-33 the transfer of maintenance funds this year to the Department of Corrections for the Gooding Tuberculosis Hospital.

Initially the House killed the transfer 34-36. Then it voted 35-33 to reconsider its action and then subsequently approved the bill — paving the way for the location of a women's prison at the old hospital grounds.

Magie Valley legislators fought hard to kill the appropriations, saying the people of Gooding did not want a women's correctional facility located in that town.

Elsewhere on the legislative scene:

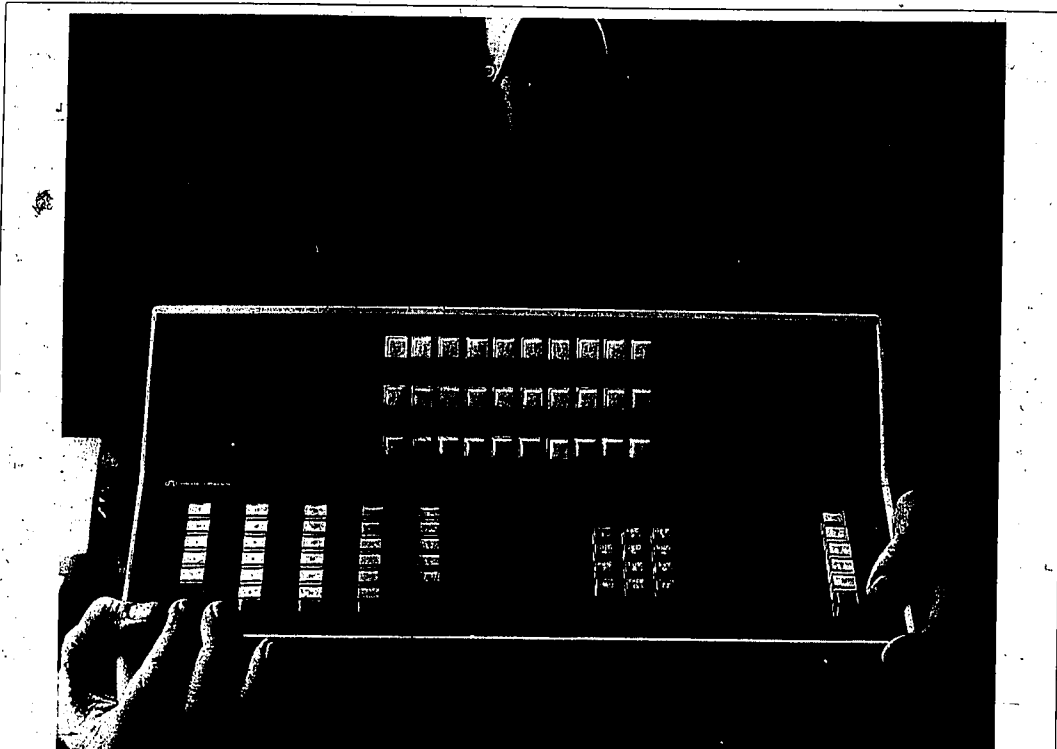

—The Idaho Senate passed and sent to the governor a measure to establish minimum standards for detention facilities for juveniles.

—Senate State Affairs Members voted to send to the Commerce and Labor Committee a resolution to establish a committee to study the management of the Idaho Public Utilities Commission.

—House Revenue and Taxation Committee members discussed but took no final action on a packet of bills providing additional bonding authority for regional airports.

—The House approved 41-29 a concurrent resolution deauthorizing state building projects being planned for Coeur d'Alene, Pocatello, Boise and Twin Falls.

—House taxwriters assigned to subcommittee for further study Speaker Allan F. Larsen's bill to cut the levying authority of school districts to 20 mills from 27 millions and replaced the $16.2 million lost at the local level with state aid.

Caldwell seeks help from state attorney

BOISE (UPI) — The attorney general's office said today it will take no "drastic action" against what some Caldwell residents consider obscenity in their town until the state meets with the county prosecuting attorney's office.

Gordon Nelson, senior deputy attorney general, said the staff will contact the Canyon County prosecutor and "meet him to see what he wants" in the way of assistance before the attorney general's office takes any "drastic action."

Attorney General Wayne Kidwell agreed Monday to work with Caldwell and Canyon County officials in an attempt to outlaw what some city residents consider obscenity in Caldwell.

A visiting delegation asked Kidwell for direction in riding the county seat of pornography.

The Top Theater, which advertises "triple-X-rated" films has operated in Caldwell for several years. Officials also expressed concern about the remodeling of a building in Caldwell which they believe may be used for an adult bookstore.

House OKs measure on attorney pay

BOISE — Despite contentions it is unconstitutional the House approved 40-30 and sent to the Senate Monday legislation authorizing county commissioners to set the pay of prosecuting attorneys.

Rep. Wayne Tibbitts, R-

Lorenzo, steered the measure through the House saying county commissioners are the ones who employ the attorneys and they are best qualified to evaluate their performance.

Decision reversed on Gooding prison funds

By DAVID MORRISSEY

BOISE — In what was seen by some legislators as a test vote on the proposed Gooding Women's Prison bill which would have transferred funds used for maintenance of the former tuberculosis hospital to the Department of Corrections was first narrowly defeated and then narrowly passed by the Idaho House Monday.

The measure, House Bill 426, dealt with approximately $70,000 in funds not yet spent for yearly maintenance of the three-building complex in Gooding. H.B. 426 proposed transferring those funds to the Department of Corrections, which has been given approval by the Idaho State Land Board to convert the former hospital into a women's penitentiary.

But lawmakers argued no funding for the prison had yet been approved by the legislature. Until the $500,000 Gooding prison appropriation requested by the governor is approved, legislators said, transfer of any monies for a prison was premature.

Rep. John Brooks agreed with Olmstead. Brooks said the bill should not be considered until the legislature had actually voted on placing a prison in Gooding. "We could bring this bill back then," Brooks said.

Harris, R-Boise, Harris noted last year's legislature had directed the Board of Corrections to locate a site for a women's penitentiary in Idaho, and to bring Idaho women prisoners — many of whom were housed out of state — back to Idaho prisons. The legislature should realize the Gooding prison site is the best answer to the two directives, Harris said.

Group rejects bid for another hearing

BOISE — A move to hold another public hearing in Gooding on the proposed women's prison was rejected Tuesday morning by the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee.

Rep. Joe Wagner, D-Lewiston, told committee members such a hearing should be held before the committee considers the budget for the proposed prison. But by a 19-7 vote the committee left the final decision on whether such a hearing should be called to its two co-chairmen, Sen. Richard High, R-Twin Falls, and Rep. Larry Jackson, R-Boise.

Panel tags 'do pass' on airport bill

By DAVID MORRISSEY

BOISE — After two days of discussion, the House Revenue and Taxation Committee Tuesday tagged a "do pass" recommendation on two of three bills designed to provide additional fiscal and legal authority for regional airports.

The committee held House Joint Resolution 11 until similar Senate legislation could be examined. This proposed constitutional amendment provides that regional airport authorities may — with the assent of a majority of the qualified electors — issue revenue bonds that would be paid off solely from revenues of the authority.

Ag department asks approval to use DDT

By KEN HODGE

BOISE — After being denied its use for about nine years, Magic Valley bean growers may be spreading DDT on their bean fields again next spring if an Idaho Department of Agriculture request for "restricted use" of the banned chemical is granted.

Priority number one, Kellogg explains, is for blue grass seed growers in the Idaho panhandle who could not cope with destructive insects last year and sought relief through the department to help stop heavy losses in their crops.

The Jerome Republican said that "first we should hold an election in the Magic Valley counties to see if we have a five, six or seven county regional airport. Then once we determine what we have we can draft legislation to meet that need."

Hollifield said, "People think I'm just opposing the regional airport authority. That's not what I'm saying. I'm saying that by passing these bills and then having a vote we're not being fair. If we have a vote it would be prejudiced by these bills."

Should either Twin Falls or Blaine County wish to join the South Idaho Regional Airport authority, that addition would have to be approved by the voters in each new county, and a majority of the voters in the counties now in the existing authority."

Idaho fish lawsuit dismissal sought

BOISE (UPI) — Oregon has asked the U.S. Supreme Court to dismiss a lawsuit brought by Idaho claiming its share of anadromous fish in the Columbia River Basin, the Idaho attorney general's office said today. The office received a brief filed with the court by Oregon and expects to get a copy sometime this week of Washington's arguments also asking for the dismissal of the case. Idaho is suing Oregon and Washington for an equitable portion of the anadromous fish in the Columbia River Basin. "There are no short term or long term solutions to the complexly interrelated environmental, social, and the city of 1,200 is anticipating sufficient future growth to create a need for additional sewage treatment. According to Bill Block of JUB Engineers, a firm that has been retained by Hansen to advise the city on possible solutions to the problem of obtaining added capacity, Hansen first approached the City of Kimberly and asked if Kimberly would allow Hansen to pump sewage to the Twin Falls plant as part of Kimberly's input into the plant. Kimberly has roughly 1,300 to 1,700 people and 425 connected with Twin Falls to have their sewage treated at the Twin Falls plant. Kimberly's agreement with Twin Falls allows Kimberly to send an amount of sewage to the plant equivalent to that produced by a population of 6,000 people.

Kimberly understandably refused Hansen's request, according to Block, hoping to avoid the possibility of having to secure additional treatment capacity for its own needs as long as possible. Thus Block presented Hansen's request to the Twin Falls City Council at the council's working luncheon Monday. Block said if Twin Falls grants Hansen's request, a sewer line could be built from Hansen which would bypass

Kimberly along Park Street on the north side of town and connect with the Kimberly, Twin Falls line. Block said Hansen would seek Kimberly's agreement to the plan if Twin Falls grants the request. The Twin Falls council told Block it would consider the request, but Councilman Chris Tacklington said he would not like to see Twin Falls make a commitment until it is able to handle its own sewage at its malfunctioning plant.

Vandalism suspect arrested by police

TWIN FALLS — Troy Kurt Yetter, 19, Twin Falls, was arrested by city police Monday on charges of destruction of mail boxes. A resident of Rose Street North called police late Monday to report someone had driven over the curb, struck and broken his mailbox and then driven away. A short time later a resident of Grandview Drive reported a pickup truck which had broken several mailboxes in that area was stuck in a private driveway. Police said it appeared the driver of the pickup had attempted to turn around but became stuck on tree stump. The vehicle was found stuck in a private driveway and officers said Yetter, allegedly driving it at the time, was arrested on charges of malicious destruction of property and driving while intoxicated.

- We got married to Mohawk, America's largest carpet mfg. We are the only Mohawk dealer in Twin Falls, and we agree not to buy any other carpet — other than styles & colors not made by Mohawk.
  - No samples are left in our display except those that can be shipped from Coast warehouses, immediately — Orders are received in 3 to 5 days, usually our installer can be scheduled by the time the carpet arrives.
  - We have the latest styles and colors, with the Mohawk representative responsible for maintaining our displays.
  - As a Color center dealer, Mohawk stells to us for less than a roll stock dealer.
  - Our customers save from $3 to $8 per sq. yd. for these reasons.

1. We buy for less as a Color Center Dealer.

Buhl to face Jerome again, R.R., Hagerman tonight

MAGIC VALLEY — Buhl can wrap up a trip to a state tournament tonight and Raft River and Hagerman battle to keep their hopes alive as the second and climactic week of the high school district basketball tournaments begin.

Buhl will meet Jerome for the fourth time this season at 8 p.m. in the gymnasium and this will be the most important game. If Buhl wins it the Indians have the A-2 district tie in hand and Jerome turns to track. If Jerome wins the two matchup for a fifth time Wednesday night and the winner of that game will claim all the marbles.

Hagerman and Raft River, meeting at 9 p.m. at the Burley high school gymnasium, are vying for the right to go against undefeated Murtaugh for the A-1 title. The winner of the Hagerman-Raft River match would have to beat Murtaugh Wednesday and Thursday to win the trip to state — and no one has beaten Murtaugh once-in-a-row yet this year. Hagerman has scored the Devils twice but never brought

CSI to face tough regional quest

TWIN FALLS — There will not be an "easy way" for the College of Southern Idaho to win a fourth straight trip to the national tournament.

A flip of the coin Monday morning decided by placing the regional tournament in Coeur d'Alene and that's Coach Mike Mitchell and his CSI Golden Eagles will be at 7 p.m. (Pacific time) Friday to play Oregon champion Lane Community College of Eugene.

terred the regional in Twin Falls but they took the coin flip's judgement in stride. "I hate to see the regional championship decided by a coin flip and maybe there would be a better way to settle ties. But of the other ways it could have been decided, I wouldn't have been satisfied with them either," he commented.

Imagine that Lane is capable of beating us the first night, too."

"I like to be optimistic but realistically optimistic," he continued. "Certainly we're capable of beating North Idaho there. But I would have been much more comfortable having them come here."

Coach Mitchell said the Eagles probably would be leaving Thursday morning and workout that afternoon at University of Idaho if arrangements can be made. The team probably will stay in Moscow on Thursday night and travel into Coeur d'Alene about midday Friday.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Kentucky is No. 1 again in the UPI college basketball poll, but if the trend of recent weeks continues, an old and familiar squad may soon experience the cherished spot.

UCLA, no stranger to the role of leader in the basketball ranks after years as champion, inched closer to the top with 318 votes, good for second place.

Victory perks Nicklaus' confidence

LAUDERHILL, Fla. (UPI) — Nine months is a long time between wins for Jack Nicklaus — and golf's all-time leading money winner isn't afraid to admit he was starting to wonder about it.

Gleason Inverrary Golf Classic. "I was beginning to think that the Memorial was going to be the last one for a long time," Nicklaus said after shooting a rousing 65 in the final round at Inverrary.

"Jones had a lot of trouble shots, but when he had to make them he made great trouble shots," Nicklaus said. "He kept making every putt he needed to make. It was a gutsy performance."

PULLMAN, Wash. (UPI) — Washington State University announced Monday the appointment of Mark Smaha, 32, as head athletic trainer for the Cougars.

Nicklaus bided his time (five holes at Inverrary Sunday to overtake first runner Grier Jones on the 18th hole for a one-shot win.

"I was really hoping to get one under my belt going into the Masters," said Nicklaus, who as always has his eyes on the major titles.

CSI girls top Ricks, prepare for regional

TWIN FALLS — The CSI women basketball team earned a berth in the regional junior college basketball tournament Monday night as they downed the Ricks College women team 42-33.

There is still a question who the CSI team will face in their first encounter which will be held on the Flathead Community College campus in Kalispell, Mont.

The Eagles were depending on the strength of Lopez and Smith to help in the scoring. Rebounding but both players got into foul trouble with just seven minutes left in the first half and sat out much of the game.

Peggy Painter picked up the scoring punch and poured through 18 to lead all scorers. CSI jumped off to an 8-1 lead in the first half but then went cold and the Vikings caught up but the Vikings got the lead again and took a 27-15 advantage into the locker room at the half.

The Eagles steadily pulled away during the first part of the second half, but Ricks began pressing on defense and pulled the margin back to nine but could not close.

In the last few minutes, Ricks began to foul in an attempt to get the ball but both Painter and King calmly sank free throws to tie the game.

The win for the CSI girls gives them a 16-2 record for the year. The only losses came at the hands of Ricks in the first outing of the two teams hand and at the hands of the ISU varsity women team.

CSI has had a women's team for the past three years but this is the first time they have made it to a post season tournament.

Lennie Randle

Lennie Randle plans retirement a year after belting manager

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (UPI) — Lennie Randle, who put his baseball future in grave doubt a year ago by severely punching his manager in spring training, Monday informed the New York Mets he is now retiring because of a contract dispute.

"To quote Rodney Dangerfield, if you don't mind, I get no respect," said Randle from his home in Redding, Conn. "Please make this absolutely clear, this has nothing to do with money. I have asked for an extension which they (the Mets) are not willing to give me."

"While a member of the Texas Rangers last spring, Randle was suspended for 30 days and fined $10,000 when, in a moment of frustration over not getting enough playing time, he punched out his manager, Tom Lucchesi. Lucchesi, who spent a week in the hospital was eventually fired by the Rangers, while Randle was purchased up by the Mets April 29 and awarded a five-year contract worth a reported $400,000."

"Randle has said he does not intend to report," confirmed Mets Public Relations Director Arthur Richman. "It seems he has a disagreement over his contract. I guess maybe he wants more money. The Mets feel we were fair with him in fact, when he asked for an extra year on his contract last year we gave it to him although we told him it might not be his advantage."

"We will have a contract to contract and we wouldn't renegotiate if he had had a bad year either." Upon joining the Mets, Randle was inserted at third base, a longtime Mets' trouble spot, and responded by hitting .304 with 35 stolen bases.

"I've got battle fatigue," Randle said. "These negotiations have been dragging on all winter and I have chosen to retire, that's it. This something I've been contemplating for awhile now. There are other things I want to get into now."

Randle, of course, is not the first Met to show his displeasure with the organization. Last year Tom Seaver, their pitching star and longtime New York hero, became involved in a contract dispute with the front office and was dealt to the Cincinnati Reds in June in one of the most popular trades in New York history. Similarly, the Mets traded away slugger Dave Kingman the same day after refusing to meet his contract demands.

Falcon-coach looks for speed

ATLANTA (UPI) — Coach Leoman Bennett said Monday that the Atlanta Falcons require more team speed, especially among its running backs, but that he is unwilling to give up any of his top young players to improve chances for meeting that need in the next college draft.

"We'll send out feelers for trades prior to the May 23 draft," said Bennett, "but, we're not willing to give up a Warren Bryant or an R. C. Thielman (two offensive linemen who started last season as rookies) to get a higher place in the draft."

"And we don't want to give up a No. 1 or No. 2 draft choice for some player who has played out his option."

Bennett said the Falcons may find the running back speed they need in Bubba Bean, who missed all of last season because of injury, or in Seidick Johnson, who was picked up late last season as a rookie free agent.

"Bean has been undergoing a rehabilitation program with (Falcons trainer) Jerry Rhea and is reported making good progress," said Bennett. "His injured leg is still one and a half to two inches smaller than the other one, but Jerry feels he can be back to pre-injury speed before we open camp this summer."

"McIntyre showed us a little something in the last couple of games last season and we'll just have to wait and see how he fits in during pre-camp practice."

Bennett said the Falcons, who led the NFL in scoring defense last season while posting a 7-7 record — their best in four years, "have four or five positions we can draft in and not hurt ourselves."

"But, we don't plan to draft by position," the Falcons coach added. "We have prospects listed on our board in the order of which are the best athletes and that's the way we plan to pick each time our turn comes around."

"We'll send out feelers for trades prior to the regular draft picks plus one extra in each of the seventh, eighth and ninth rounds, will make the 13th selection in the first round and the 15th selection in the second round. "We feel that pretty good players will be available through the first three rounds," said Bennett. "After the third round, you've got to have a certain amount of knowledge and a little amount of luck to get a football player."

Bennett said he would prefer holding the college draft earlier in the year, as used to be the case, "because, as a coach, it would give me more time to work with the people we draft. Drafting less than two months before camp opens doesn't allow enough time for a player to put on or take off 20 pounds as sometimes is necessary."

But Bennett pointed out that the main reason the draft is delayed until May 2 is because players who have played out their option have until April 15 to resign with their present clubs and the general feeling is that the veteran situation should be squared away before drafting begins.

"We're taking advantage of the extra time to recheck with the people we are interested in," said Bennett. "We have our scouts out now, rechecking on the weight, speed and attitude of the people we hope to draft."

Bennett said the Falcons do not plan to draft a quarterback this year because they already have four — Steve Bartkowski, Scott Hunter, Kim McQuilken and June Jones — they are planning to take to camp, at Furman University in Greenville, S.C.

"We are counting on Bartkowski as our start for the season," he said. "I would say from what he played in the last couple of games last season, that he is back to where he was before he re-injured his knee last summer."

The Falcons took about 100 prospects to camp last summer, but Bennett plans to take only 80 to 90 this year because the regular season, which is being expanded from 14 to 16 games, will start two weeks earlier "and we need to make a quicker judgement on who will be playing for us this year."

Kuhn criticized for decision in alleged tampering case

NEW YORK (UPI) — Marvin J. Miller, executive director of the Major League Baseball Players Association, took a pot shot Monday at Commissioner Bowie Kuhn for what he termed his "improper handling" of a case involving Milwaukee outfielder Larry Hise.

"The situation arose over an alleged attempt by the Texas Rangers to sign Hise, who became a free agent after playing out his option year with the Minnesota Twins."

"More than three months ago, Commissioner Bowie K. Kuhn issued a press release announcing that he would investigate possible violations by Larry Hise of the Major League Rules covering tampering," Miller said in a prepared statement.

"That announcement grew out of a prior investigation hearing held by Mr. Kuhn on Oct. 25, 1977 concerning allegations that Don O'Brien, General Manager of the Texas Rangers, had violated the no-tampering rules."

Miller added that prior to that press release Kuhn's office said there was no indication that Hise was guilty of any improper actions and the Players Association would be notified if information to the contrary was received.

"Instead," Miller said, "Mr. Kuhn issued a public statement that he was about to investigate Mr. Hise."

Miller explained that "it became clear after a Dec. 14 hearing that there was no evidence Hise was involved in the tampering case."

He said that on Feb. 10, Kuhn made a decision on the O'Brien case and that the commissioner stated "... Mr. Hise was not a participant in any improper tampering activities in relation to this matter."

Miller said Hise was never notified that he was absolved. "I do not believe that, having alleged publicly that a player may have violated an important rule, and later properly concluding there was no violation, that there is any justification for the office of the commissioner to make a secret of the player's innocence of wrongdoing by failing to correct the public record or even informing Mr. Hise of his findings," said Miller.

Billy Jean on verge of top spot

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Billie Jean King, bolstered by a third place finish in Detroit, thinks she is on the verge of once again becoming a factor on the women's winter tennis tour.

King was awarded the third place purse of $6,300 when Virginia Wade defaulted in their consolation match Sunday. It was the highest singles finish by King in four tournaments this year, although she has teamed with Martina Navratilova to win four doubles events.

King, who has won $25,520 for a sixth place standing on the winter tour earnings list, will face Dianne Fromholtz Tuesday in the first round of the Kansas City tournament.

"Last week was the turning point," said the 35-year-old queen of women's tennis Monday. "My game is starting to come together. If I can get by Dianne in the first round, I'll have a good shot at winning the whole thing."

"I'm starting to hit the ball better. I had been trying to hit a lot of shots. I'm fascinated with spins. I like slicing and cutting shots to see the different spins I can get. It doesn't win many tournaments but it sure is fun to do. I have been playing so badly lately that I can't help but get better."

King, who has had three operations on her knees, won five tournaments last fall but came in December and the women's rec rejoined the winter tour circuit. "My backhand is my best shot," she said. "My approach, my chip, my slice — I think it's starting to come back. My backhand is what carried me in these tournaments last fall. I'm starting to feel comfortable. When my backhand arrives, I'll arrive. I think I'm ready to win this week."

King was ranked 11th in the Kansas City list. (AP/247) — he was the runner-up to Navratilova in Detroit, seeded seventh. The lack of a seed does not seem to bother King, however.

"When the seedings done, something like two weeks in advance?" asked

King. "It doesn't bother me. I'm not seeded. A seeding is something you have to earn and I haven't. Maybe if I perform well here, and with my showing in Detroit, I can get a seeding somewhere down the road. But right now I don't deserve one."

Yount joins Brewers camp

SUN CITY, Ariz. (UPI) — Shortstop Robin Yount reported Monday to the Milwaukee Brewers training camp two days early but still unsigned to a new contract.

Yount, who broke into the majors with Milwaukee in 1974 at 18, is in the option year after expiration of his three-year pact with the club. There has been talk about whether Yount will sign again with the Brewers or be traded.

"I'm going to wait and see," Yount said. "It depends on a bunch of things. It's personal, my business."

New General Manager Harry Dalton greeted Yount but no formal talks were held. Dalton said there has been no trade talk and the Brewers want to sign him.

"His name hasn't come up," Dalton said. "People anticipate, as we do, that he's going to sign. We have not made any overtures and I don't even want to talk about trading Yount."

Bill Castro, a relief pitcher, reported a week late because of minor leg injuries suffered in an auto accident and he was able to run and throw his first day in camp.

Yankees add pitching depth

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) — Sparky Lyle might feel that breaking up is the better thing to do, but Rich Gossage would just as soon see their act stay together.

Lyle, the American League's Cy Young Award winner last year, has been asking the New York Yankees to trade him ever since the club signed Gossage to a lucrative, long term contract as a free agent last winter.

Quite simply, the 29-year-old Lyle doesn't think there will be enough work in the bullpen for the two best short relievers in baseball. Gossage, pitching for the Pittsburgh Pirates last season, worked in 72 games — the same number as Lyle — and that doesn't leave a whole lot for anybody else.

To make things even more congested in the bullpen, the Yankees signed another free agent reliever, Rawly Eastwick, although he figures to be used more as a "long man" if he isn't traded.

Gossage, though, doesn't share Lyle's viewpoint. He thinks "Lyle and Gossage" could become as famed a duo as "Simon and Garfunkel."

"I don't think there's going to be any problem at all," said Gossage. "I mean if we were with a bad ballclub that was going to be out of a lot of games there wouldn't be enough work for two guys. I've been on a couple of those clubs so I know."

"If we're out of 10 ball games this year, it's going to be something. I don't know how Billy (Manager Martin) is going to work it, but any time after the sixth inning somebody will be in there."

Wearing the famed Yankee pinstripes is admittedly a kick for the 26-year-old Gossage, who grew up in Colorado where his only indoctrination to major league baseball was on the weekly televised "Game of the Week."

"I was a front runner like everybody else," said Gossage. "I rooted for the Yankees. My dad did, too. The Yankees are baseball." When I was drafted last winter, I kept an open mind where I wanted to go. Thirteen clubs drafted me but I didn't sign. I was hoping for the Yankees or the Dodgers.

"I look forward to this season very much. It's more exciting for me than for other guys. Playing for the Pirates last year we had a good ballclub, but nothing like this."

There's no doubt playing for the Yankees is exciting. It also can be a mind-boggling experience and a place to begin a course in psychology.

Gossage has heard all the stories about the club's internal problems, but he pays them little mind.

"I'm sure it's blown out of proportion and I think playing in New York has a lot to do with that," said Gossage. "We had problems in Pittsburgh, but nobody ever heard about it."

"The Oakland A's had problems but they won. I don't think anyone is here to win a popularity contest. We're here to play baseball and we're here to do one thing — win the World Series."

Catfish pins future on hope

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) — There is not much left for Jim "Catfish" Hunter to achieve before he swaps his spikes for his hertford, N.C., home to live out the rest of his life as a farmer.

He has accomplished just about everything a pitcher could want in major league baseball. He has been a 20game winner (five times), pitched a perfect game, won the Cy Young Award (1974) and played on four world championship teams.

Yet, there is one thing more he seeks before he walks off the pitcher's mound for the last time. His pride demands that he walk away a winner and that could be his thoughtful assignment of all.

Hunter has already decreed that he is through with major league baseball when his contract with the New York Yankees expires after the 1979 season. So, he will work extra hard this spring to try to revive an arm that has become shopworn from too many innings and, hopefully, by next season there will be enough left to grab at the brass ring one more time.

"I said five years ago when I signed with the Yankees it would be the very last contract I would ever sign in baseball," Hunter said before a spring training workout. "I repeated it just before spring training and everybody thought it was something new, but it's not.

"I think it's time after the next two years of my contract to be home with my little boy. He'll be 10 years old at that time and he'll be playing Little League and everything, so it'll be time for me to be with him."

"The only thing I'd like to do now is go out a winner. Maybe build up my arm a little bit this year and next year go out as a 20-game winner."

It's a big dream. Maybe even a pipe dream. The arm that put together five consecutive 20-victory seasons from 1971-75 has been hurting the past two years. Last year it hurt so bad Hunter struggled through a 9-9 campaign and spent part of the year on the disabled list.

Indeed, it may already be over for the 31-year-old righthander ... and he knows it.

"My arm feels good so far," Hunter said as he prepared to pitch batting practice. "But I haven't tried to get anybody out yet. Maybe I'll start hurling as soon as I do that, but thus far it feels good."

Good enough to last two more years?

Newcomers join Yankees

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) — Nine newcomers joined the early birds Monday as the defending world champion New York Yankees went through their first full day of spring training with one absentee.

The absentee was a notable one, World Series star Reggie Jackson, who was given permission to report late in order to clean up some personal business. He is expected to join the club Wednesday.

There was no indication that Jackson's lateness would cause a problem among his teammates. The Yankee camp, in fact, has been surprisingly problem-free to date, which is fine with Manager Billy Martin.

"I like it just as it is," Martin said. "I think we're going to have a nice, smooth camp this year."

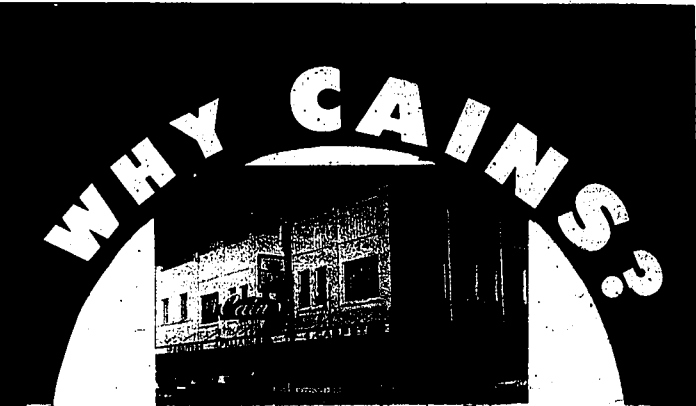

The nine players working out for the first time were Mickey Rivers, Chris Chambliss, Roy White, Fred Stanley, Dell Alton, Graig Nettles, George Zober, Willie Randolph and Roy Stalger. Stalger was obtained from the Mets in a minor league trade this winter.

STEALING SHOES were presented to the baseball hall of fame Monday by Lou Brock who stopped on his way to spring training. The shoes and the trophy replica represent the 833rd base he stole last year to break Ty Cobb's record.

Kentucky tops Georgia

ATHENS, Ga. (UPI) — Kentucky, back on top the UPI national ratings, sloped down a feeble Georgia rally Monday night and rode the 15-point effort of Rick Robey, to a 78-57 victory over the Bulldogs which clinched the Southeastern Conference championship.

The No. 1-ranked Wildcats hit 60 per cent from the floor to build a 17-point halftime lead. 46-29. Truman Clayton and Jack Givens contributed 12 points each to the Wildcats' cause.

Georgia, led by Walter Daniels, the game's high scorer with 25 points, closed to 71-63 with 4:09 remaining. But Kentucky regained control and with Kyle Macy scoring four free throws at the end, was never really in trouble.

Alabama defeats Florida

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (UPI) — Alabama's Reginald King and Ken Johnson built a 17-point first-half lead and the Crimson Tide coasted to an 81-70 Southeastern Conference basketball victory over Florida Monday.

King scored 18 points while Johnson tallied 16. King also pulled down 12 rebounds in the regionally televised contest.

The Tide, stunned by an earlier loss to the Gators in Gainesville, took the first four points of the game — all by King — and never fell behind.

Providence posts win

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — Bruce Campbell and Bill Eason, each scored 15 points to lead Providence College to an 65-62 romp over Long Island University Monday night.

Providence, ranked 16th in the nation, had little trouble when its regulars were in the game — last of the regular season for the Friars.

Using a number of reserves, Providence led by only one point, 37-36, at the half. The Providence starters return disaction in the second half and put the game out of Long Island's reach, scoring 14 consecutive points during one stretch.

High scorers for Long Island were John Nelson Bailey with 15 points and Kim Malcolm with 12.

Providence, going into postseason play, its 22-6. Long Island ended its season at 8-17.

Syracuse adds home win

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (UPI) — Syracuse University stretched the longest home winning streak in major college basketball to 29 Monday night with a 100-59 victory over Canisius.

Senior forward Marty Byrnes scored 17 points and sophomore forwards Louis Orr added 16 others to lead the 14th ranked Orangemen, who Wednesday take on St. Bonaventure in the ECAC Upstate playoffs.

Junior forward Ron Peaks led all scorers with 25 points and senior guard Rene Stepiens contributed 14 to the Griffins' effort.

The Griffins stayed within a dozen points for the first 15 minutes of the game, before Syracuse pulled out to a 49-32 halftime lead.

The Orange totally outclassed their opponents in the second half however, and sustained freely. Their 51-point winning margin was also their largest lead.

Syracuse finished the regular season with a record of 22-4, and Canisius ended up 7-16.

Vols downs Vanderbilt 59-46

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Reggie Johnson's 15 points led Tennessee to a 59-46 Southeastern Conference win over Vanderbilt Monday night in the final home game for the Vols this season.

Mike Rhodes led Vanderbilt with 18.

The Commodores jumped to a six-point lead early in the game but Tennessee caught Vanderbilt midway through the first period, running off 10 straight points to take a 22-16 margin with 4:27 remaining in the period.

The Vols, who hit only 39.4 percent from the field in the first half, went into intermission with a 28-26 lead.

Tennessee outscored Vanderbilt 14-4 in the first five minutes of the second half to take a 42-20 lead and coasted the rest of the way.

NM state tops Tulsa 76-75

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (UPI) — Forward Cyrus Cormier scored a rebound basket with one second left Monday night to give New Mexico State a 76-75 victory over Tulsa in the opening round of the Missouri Valley Conference Tournament.

The Aggies, who finished fourth in the MVC during the regular season, now face Drake, an upset winner over Southern Illinois, in a game Wednesday at Las Cruces.

Florida State stops ORU

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — Florida State guard Murray Brown sent the game into overtime with one free throw.

Brown came off the bench and hit his first free throw to tie the score 74-74 at the end of regulation time.

Forward Harry Davis led the Seminoles with 24 points. Brown and center David Thompson each scored 14 and guard Eugene Harris contributed 12 to the victory.

The Titans were led by forward Antonio Martin with 20 points, center Elvis Fells with 14 and guard Lamont Reid with 19.

ORU moved from a 36-35 halftime deficit to a 73-point lead midway through the second half before the Seminoles closed the gap and Brown forced the overtime period.

Florida State improved its season record to 22-4 and the Titans now stand 13-14 on the year.

NCAA track limits to stop USC meets, coach claims

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — An NCAA limitation on scholarships for track and field athletes will force the University of Southern California to drop dual meet competition next year, USC head track coach Vern Wolfe said Monday.

"This will be our last year of dual track competition, because of the NCAA rule that limits scholarships to 14," Wolfe told the Southern California track writers at their weekly lunch meeting.

"With only 14 kids, we can't do it," he continued. "Yes, that will mean the dual meet with UCLA, too."

"Private schools will be hurt the worst. It is difficult to get a 'walk-on' when he will have to pay $6,000 (a year's tuition and expenses)," Wolfe said there isn't any hope the NCAA will change the rule. He pointed out the scholarship limitations were established because of the cost of the women's programs mandated by Title IX to make scholarships available to women athletes as well as men.

Wolfe said the Trojans will compete next year in relay meets such as the Drake and Penn relays "to get exposure in the Midwest and West" and in some local Southern California relay-type meets.

He bemoaned the fact that Dennis Smith, a 7-2 high jumper and Charles White, a world class intermediate hurdler will not compete for USC in track this season.

Both are at the school on football scholarships and will devote their time to spring practice.

Wolfe also announced that sprinter Kevin Williams, a wide receiver on the football team, will leave the track team when spring football practice begins in mid-March.

UCLA track coach Jim Bush did not take as dim a view of the situation as Wolfe and said, "I hope we will be able to continue the dual meet with USC next year." That's up to the two athletic directors.

The USC-UCLA meet has attracted sell-out crowds of more than 12,500 during the past several years.

Also at the writers' meeting was Al Franken, promoter of 300, 600 and 900 indoor meets. He announced he will put on a new outdoor meet to be known as the UCLA-Pepsi Invitational May 7 at the Drake Stadium on the UCLA campus.

Weber, Montana players honored by Big Sky

BOISE (UPI) — Montana's Michael Ray Richardson and Weber State's Bruce Collins share Big Sky player of the week honors this week for their play during the final weekend of the regular season, the Big Sky Conference announced Monday.

Richardson was a scoring machine on offense and a master blitzer on defense in leading Montana to wins over Idaho State and Boise State. The senior guard scored 32 points with eight rebounds, seven assists and five steals against Idaho State and then came back with 29 points, eight rebounds, six assists and four steals against Boise State.

Collins, a sophomore, scored 30 points against Gonzaga and 24 against Idaho State as the Wildcats picked up two wins to capture third place in the conference standings. Collins also contributed 18 rebounds, five assists, five blocked shots and five steals in the two games.

Honorable mention this week went to Boise's Steve Connor, who hit 43 points in two games; ISU's Lawrence Butler and Jeff Cook, who hit 52 and 43 points respectively; Montana State's Craig Finberg, who surpassed the 1,000-point mark for the season; Idaho's Bill Hensing who hit 30 points and Northern Arizona's Troy Hudson, who led the Axers to two wins with 29 points.

The Big Sky Conference holds its postseason championship tournament beginning Friday in Montana. The

That's mine
IT'S MINE, University of Detroit Center Terry Tyler seems to be saying. The Titans won the contest against Loyola, Chicago Monday.
