

Rhodesian transition — a few days away?

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI) — A black leader negotiating with Prime Minister Ian Smith for an end to white rule in Rhodesia says the creation of a multiracial transition government is only a few days away.

Smith and three black moderates were meeting again today to discuss new compromise proposals for an eventual transfer of power to the nation's black majority — with safeguards for the whites.

Following 2½ hours of talks Tuesday, nationalist leader Nkomo said, "We are hopeful. We made much progress."

He said Rhodesia, governed by the white minority for nearly a century, now stands "very close" to a multiracial interim government. "It's a matter of a few days," he said.

Smith said the conference participants, including black leaders Abel Muzorewa and Jeremiah Chirau, have "resolved partially" the dispute with Smith over an interim government's chairmanship and racial make-up.

Conference sources said the negotiators also discussed a target date for a full transfer to black rule, with the blacks proposing December 1978.

Smith raised no major objections, prompting some black conference participants to express confidence the prime minister tentatively accepts the prospect of a complete transfer then.

For the past two weeks, Smith has been demanding that he be chairman of an interim government composed of an equal number of blacks and whites.

The black leaders have demanded 75 percent representation for blacks in a transitional administration headed by an independent chairman.

Smith told the black leaders Tuesday his Cabinet feels there should be rapid movement toward formation of a transitional administration to counteract sagging national morale, conference sources said.

He also said the Cabinet has urged him not to back off "too much" from his demand for an equal number of blacks and whites in an interim government, the sources reported.

The black leaders, the sources said, consulted among themselves and reached a compromise formula they feel will make a significant contribution toward breaking the deadlock.

U.S. dollar falls to all-time lows

ZURICH, Switzerland (UPI) — The dollar today plummeted to an all-time low against the Swiss franc and German mark and fell sharply against the Japanese yen, reflecting a growing sense of crisis surrounding the sagging American economy.

"There simply is no confidence either in the dollar or in Washington's assertions that it will act forcefully to support the dollar," a leading Zurich dealer said.

In Frankfurt, the American currency continued its spectacular decline to slide below the 2-mark level for the first time, opening at a median rate of 1.995. It had fallen overnight from Tuesday's close of 2.0330 marks.

A banker in Frankfurt, when asked why the dollar collapsed said, "There is no confidence in the dollar or in American promises to support it."

The dollar opened on the Zurich exchange at 1.9130 Swiss francs, down overnight from the Tuesday close of 1.8430. Within the first 10 minutes of trading, it rallied to a buying rate of 1.725 Swiss francs, a new low.

Six years ago, one dollar fetched 4.33 francs.

In Tokyo, the dollar plunged against the Japanese yen on the Tokyo Foreign Exchange Market, falling below the 238-per-dollar level for the first time in eight sessions.

The American currency ended the day at 237.62 yen despite the Bank of Japan's intervention in the market.

The historic low came as no surprise. Nevertheless, the dollar's decline below 2 German marks was a shock that brought home the American currency's sad plight.

Families of low-ranking American soldiers have been so hard hit that some are said to be living below the poverty level in Germany.

Switzerland has taken drastic monetary measures to stop the trend.

Pierre-Languetin, managing director of the Swiss National Bank, is in Washington to plead with the Carter administration to back the dollar and agree to an emergency international monetary conference to stabilize money rates.

The falling dollar is jeopardizing the exports of these nations with stronger currencies such as West Germany, Japan and Switzerland, and thus jeopardizing the world economy, Swiss officials say.

They say Washington cannot expect the stronger-currency nations to speed up their economies if the dollar continues to slide.

This makes it more difficult for them to sell their goods on world markets with weaker currencies, whose monies are pegged to the dollar, and who are hardly able to afford to buy yet more expensive Japanese, German and Swiss products.

Lenaghan claims vendetta

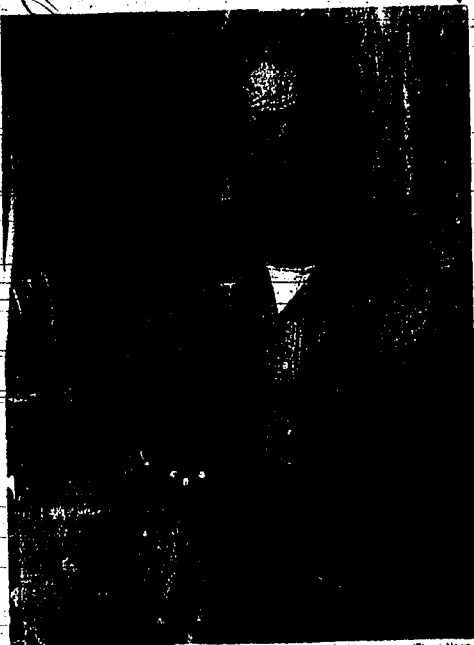

BOISE (UPI)—Idaho Public Utilities President Robert Lenaghan said today Rep. Myron Jones "has conducted a vendetta" against him for the past two years in southeastern Idaho.

Lenaghan made the charge in response to reports Jones has been questioning former PUC employees about Lenaghan and the commission.

Lenaghan said he will explain the commission's 39 percent turnover in the past two years to the House Resources Committee today as the result of too much work and too little pay.

"Essentially, I'll tell them the same thing I've been telling them for quite some time. You can't keep plugging work on people without some way of dividing it up—and having more people do it," Lenaghan said.

He explained, "It takes a high degree of expertise in people to do the kind of work we demand—and when they're able to do it successfully they find out somebody else can pay them more to do it."

Eden man claims headaches, hair loss tied to nuclear test

By BOB ZUCKERMAN
Times-News writer

EDEN — Jack Parrott suspects a nuclear test in 1956 caused some of his hair to fall out and gave him headaches that kept him from working for three years.

In an effort to resolve his suspicion, the 41-year-old Eden man said he will visit the Veterans' hospital in Boise next week.

Parrott, now operator of an Eden towing service, said he was ordered to witness a nuclear blast during the summer of 1956 while a United States marine.

About 500 marines were ordered to sit down on the ground about two to three miles from the place where the bomb exploded, Parrott said. "We were sitting with our backs to it, with our hands over our eyes."

When the bomb went off, the flash was so bright, "you could see the bones in your hands," Parrott said.

After the flash, the soldiers stood up and feared the blast. Parrott said he heard a terrible noise "like if you take a shotgun up to someone and pull the trigger."

Then Parrott said his company was ordered to march to the blast site without any protection from nuclear radiation.

Parrott's bizarre story is just one of many which surfaced recently after the Pentagon announced it was trying to reach some 300,000 men involved in more than 250 nuclear tests from 1946 to 1963.

A Defense Department spokesman said the government is trying to reach the men to determine if they have suffered any health problems that might have been caused by low levels of radiation.

The announcement touched off an avalanche of phonic calls to Washington, D.C., from more than 30,000 men around the country.

But because the Pentagon only opened eight phone lines to receive calls, the wires have jammed for weeks. A Pentagon spokesman said Monday about 11,000 men have gotten through, and an additional 1,000 have written letters to the agency.

Though the number of callers is slowing down, the spokesman said the Defense Department would install an additional 12 lines by next week to help with the overload.

Parrott said he got through to the Pentagon about two weeks ago and then called Boise for an appointment.

About the same time he visited a Twin Falls doctor for blood tests to determine if he had leukemia, a disease which has been linked to high dosages of nuclear radiation.

Doctors are nothing new to him, Parrott said.

Early in the 1960s, Parrott said he began having such bad headaches he couldn't work. He said he spent several days in the Twin Falls hospital clinic.

Doctors, he said, told him he apparently had an upper respiratory disease possibly brought on by carbon monoxide poisoning.

Nine days after Parrott left the hospital, he said he began having bad headaches again.

"This time he went to the veterans' hospital in Boise. They ran a whole bunch of tests to see if it was carbon monoxide poisoning but they could never tell," Parrott said.

Later, when the headaches began again, Parrott said he went to the Veterans' hospital in Salt Lake City for help. No success.

Parrott said today he still has headaches, though "not as bad" every day. He also has occasional loss of hearing, stomach and teeth problems, and spells of weakness.

In addition, his head hair which he said began falling out in 1958, just two years after the nuclear test, has thinned out considerably.

Was it just premature balding or the result of nuclear radiation?

"I don't know," Parrott said. "When you take it all together, it's pretty strange. A man don't go all too pieces usually till he's a lot older."

But if the federal government is responsible, they should pay for Parrott to regain his health, the towing service operator said.

Klansmen say they will keep patrolling streets

COLUMBIUS, Ga. (UPI) — Ku Klux Klansmen, insisting "we are not bed-sheeted bigots," say they will continue their nighttime patrols of a neighborhood where the "stocking strangler" has killed six women.

The Rev. Johnnie Flakes, president of the local NAACP chapter, said Tuesday the "very presence of the Klan is destructive in nature" and the black community was disturbed by the patrols.

Unarmed Klansmen in street clothes began Monday to cruise the Wynnton Road residential area where the stranger had killed six elderly women since September. The first patrols were uneventful.

"Nothing happened," reported Klansman Mark Stuart, who said he and three other Klansmen rode in two cars during their three-hour patrol on the lookout for "anything of a suspicious nature."

He said the patrols "would continue indefinitely."

About 480 residents of the Wynnton Road area presented Columbus Mayor Jack Mickle with a petition Monday, asking that he block the patrols. The mayor took no action.

Assistant Police Chief Robert Matthews said, however, "As long as the law is not being violated, there is not much you can do."

Flakes praised the petition opposing the Klan patrols.

"I thought it was a very good gesture on the part of the white community to say that the Klan patrolling the area does not reflect the attitude of the entire community," Flakes said.

The petition said, "We... do not want the Klan or any unauthorised private vigilante group patrolling our neighborhood and interfering with the publicly authorized law-enforcement."

Stuart defended the patrols.

"I feel that we are not bed-sheeted bigots as some people think," Stuart said.

STRIKING UNITED MINE WORKERS MEMBERS DISCUSS CONTRACT IN CEDAR GROVE, W. VA.

Hot debate on coal contract

International An angry and divided UMW rank and file, wrangled over the union's proposed new contract with the Bituminous Coal Operators Association Tuesday, as their strike — now in its 86th day — lightened an economic noose on the power-hungry Midwest.

In West Virginia — where opposition to the new pact burned hottest — ranks of the unemployed stood at 67,000, with 7,000 laid off in non-mining industries as a result of the walkout. Officials said the strike so far has cost the state about $31.5 million in tax revenues and personal income losses came to about $34 million — $218 million of that in miners' wages.

In Indiana, an estimated 40,000 were out of work — including 30,000 UMW members — and public utilities in the stricken areas prepared electrical cutbacks to schools and industries as their coal supplies dwindled.

The miners, now taking the proposed pact apart line by line, were unmoved by the growing crisis.

"Right on the face of this thing, you got nothing — absolutely nothing," shouted miner Bob Bess, brandishing a copy of the new contract at a rally in Cedar Grove, W. Va.

"If it were up to Local 1412, then (UMW President) Arnold Miller would have to go back to the bargaining table and do some more sweet talking," said local president John Secon of Spring Church, Pa.

With the ratification vote looming over the weekend, UMW district officials spearheaded a $50,000 media drive to sell the contract to the membership, and for all the sound and fury in the coal fields, most of them predicted approval.

"All the average coal miner looks at is the bottom line," said Ohio local president Gene Oiler, who opposes the contract himself. "It will probably pass, but I am saying this, I don't think it should."

"There's good and bad in everything," said Thomas Shoemaker, an Illinois miner backing the pact. "Some of the workers don't have the complete picture of this contract... Some of them are just picking out parts they don't like."

"I have three boys who work underground and at this moment I couldn't say they all would vote for this contract, but after we talk it over around the family table, I believe they will vote for it."

For all the muscle with which the striking miners slowly are bringing utilities to their knees, however, the ultimate whiphand rested in Washington with President Carter's threat of the Taft-Hartley Act and federal seizure of the mines.

Defiance of Taft-Hartley — and the striking miners, almost universally have vowed to defy it's back-to-work order if invoked — could bring savage reprisals, both to the union and to the miners themselves.

The UMW could be bankrupted by fines in such a stand-off, and the strikers, without paychecks since Dec. 6, would lose their eligibility for federally subsidized food stamps.

"If it isn't ratified," said Illinois local official Leroy Bauer, "we are going to jeopardize our union."

While the debate raged, Indiana police hovered protectively in the background

Unwelcomed visitor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — For the second time in less than a month, someone has tried to crash a car through the gates to the White House.

Tuesday night, Jane Ashman, 67, of La Jolla, Calif., rammed her automobile into the south gate leading to West Executive Ave., running along the west side of the White House.

The woman, alone in her 1966 Ford Galaxie, was not injured. She was arrested and charged with damaging government property.

President Carter was entertaining the nation's governors at a party in the East Room at the time of the incident, which occurred about 7:35 p.m. EST.

"We're not sure of motivational aspects at this point," a Secret Service spokesman said.

The spokesman said there was considerable damage to the car but less damage to the gate.

About three weeks ago, a Washington, D.C., man tried unsuccessfully to crash through the northeast gate, which normally is used by tourists visiting the White House.

No surprises in Park testimony

WASHINGTON (UPI) — South Korean rice merchant Congdon Park's testimony held no surprises as, under tight security and from a witness stand, he began telling the House Ethics Committee about some of his payments to congressmen.

Park evidently still denies giving bribes to help South Korea's government.

Several committee members agreed that Park, who was resuming his secret testimony today, had no great revelations at his first appearance Tuesday despite his pledge to try to "clear the air."

Park declined to make public any details of his testimony, including the names of congressmen, and House rules forbid committee members or staff to do so.

But, informed sources said Jaworski, former Watergate special prosecutor and now the ethics panel's special counsel, sharply pressed the 42-year-old bachelor witness — describe the specific payments he made to congressmen as part of alleged Korean influence-buying on Capitol Hill.

Committee member Bruce Caputo, R-N.Y., said Park gave congressional investigators "the same substantive material" he provided to Justice Department officials, when interrogated at length in Seoul

New tax relief bill appears in Idaho senate

BOISE (UPI) — A new tax relief bill surfaced in the Idaho Senate today. Senate Minority Leader Cy Chase, D-S. Maries, said he is seeking bipartisan support for a bill which would place industrial and commercial property on the same level as residential property for taxation purposes.

The bill provides that "undepreciated replacement cost shall be the major consideration when determining market value of operating property and of property used in manufacturing, processing, mining, and fabricating operations."

Further, the measure would make annual uniform adjustments to insure that all property is assessed at 15 percent of full cash value by Jan. 1, 1982, instead of 20 percent as presently required by law.

"It puts everybody in the same boat," said Chase.

The Senate Democratic leader said his bill would provide more money at the local level, thus providing the property tax relief being clamored for by the state's citizens.

Chase said "with additional funds available, local units of government would be able to reduce taxation at the local level."

By putting all property at actual value, there will be more money to the counties and the mill levies could be reduced," he said.

Chase said he knew of one logging operation in North Idaho being assessed at half its worth and then the county assessor reduced the valuation 30 percent with permission of the state Tax Commission. This same principle was being applied to mining operations, he said, although they only received an additional 30 percent reduction from their assessed valuation.

By assessing them at market value and with depreciation, Chase said, it would shift more money to the local level with a resultant reduction in property taxes.

Although there was some doubt Tuesday a bill allowing use of laetril in Idaho for cancer treatment would be sent to the Senate floor because of lack of a floor sponsor, Sen. Dean Van Engelen, R-Burley, finally agreed to carry the measure.

The Senate Health, Education and Welfare voted 7-4 to send the measure to the floor without recommendation, but shortly after Committee Chairman John Barker, R-Buhl, informed the Senate none of his committee members wanted to carry the measure. He said unless he found a sponsor he just as well keep the proposal in committee.

Later Van Engelen, R-Burley, said he would carry the bill.

Elsewhere on the legislative scene: —Senators voted 35-0 approval of a bill to provide $153,948,000 in state funds for public education.

—By a vote of 30-5, the Senate approved a proposed constitutional amendment to provide that a majority rather than a two-thirds vote can approve revenue bond issues to finance airport and air navigation facilities.

—With several members absent, the House State Affairs Committee sent to the floor with approval a bill to allow sale of liquor by the drink on a Sunday if New Year's Eve falls on that day.

—The House Health and Welfare Committee called for introduction of a new disease immunization bill for school children, this one written to meet objections to a previous proposal.

Laetrile bill gets a sponsor

BOISE (UPI) — Even though the Senate Health Education and Welfare Committee voted Tuesday to send to the floor a bill to allow use of laetril in Idaho for treatment of cancer, there was doubt for awhile the bill would leave the committee.

Shortly after the committee voted 7-4 to send the bill out, Chairman John Barker, R-Buhl, told the Senate none of his committee members wanted to carry the measure on the floor and unless he found a sponsor he just as well keep the proposal in committee.

Later Sen. Dean Van Engelen, R-Burley, agreed to be the floor sponsor.

The House-approved measure was sent to the floor despite arguments the bill was misleading to the public and testimony by members of the medical profession there was no evidence laetril was effective.

Sen. Norma Dobler, D-Macaw, called the legislation misleading. She said she didn't feel qualified to say whether laetril was "good or evil," but passage of the legislation would "give people the feeling we're legalizing it."

"It doesn't legalize it," Mrs. Dobler said. "It's dishonest to pass legislation that is misleading to the public."

Dr. Roy Ellsworth, president of the Idaho Medical Association, said if the Legislature passed the measure it will look like the lawmakers are saying that laetril is effective. He said there is no evidence that it is effective.

Ellsworth said the concern of the medical profession is that people who have curative cancer will be misled into thinking laetril is a cure and they will progress from the curative stage to the inoperable stage and the result will be some "unnecessary deaths."

"This is not a harmless bill but a life and death bill for some in Idaho," Ellsworth said.

Filer High School's grand experiment

Filer High School's science teachers have a novel idea. They think science class ought to be interesting and fun for freshmen and sophomores at the school. In many high schools, science classes such as biology, geology, chemistry and physics, prompt groans and groans from timorous students. Filer High School students take a different view of science class. The unified science classes are favorites of the student body.

Filer High is the only Idaho high school offering a 'unified science' program, an experimental concept designed to show how science relates to everyday life and the issues of the day. Freshman and sophomore students at Filer now take two years of unified science instead of a year of earth sciences and a year of biology.

Some back-to-basics dogmatist will argue the 'unified science' classes allow students to weasel out of the rigid routine of the more fundamental classes.

But Bruce Holderreed, director of Filer's unified science program, believes the novel program accomplishes as much, or more, in the classroom than the old earth sciences and biology classes.

Holderreed notes that the unified science program shows high school students how science ties into events common to southern Idaho, something the more traditional classes couldn't do.

Students at Filer, for example, study biology by examining the question of predator control. They look at studies on what happens to rabbit populations when coyotes are killed by man. They listen to Idaho Fish and Game officials talk about wildlife management. Some students work with models of population growth to see what effect increased human population will have on the earth's energy and natural resources.

A year of unified science class isn't a year limited strictly to the study of biology, or physics, or chemistry, or any one science. The year of study is built around the theory that many scientific fields are inter-related.

And, the classes are designed to show students how science underlies many of the problems facing the world and man today.

Some students build solar collectors in the classroom as part of the physics and earth science coursework. Other students go on field trips to the Snake River canyon to learn some principles of geology that have shaped the landscape of Magic Valley.

In each year of the unified science programs, students choose the science modules they want to study. Science class no longer is an hour to read but an hour to enjoy. Science class in Filer now is a time when students learn by doing something they find interesting.

That represents a victory for the educational system.

The pilot program at Filer is only a test and the teachers of the unified science course know the educational results of the program aren't yet tabulated.

But the Filer instructors are betting their students learn as much about science as students in the more traditional classes.

To prove the point, Filer high school sophomores at the end of this year will be rated against Gooding High School sophomores who are taking more traditional science classes to see which class has learned more in the last two years.

If the Filer class wins, other Idaho schools should follow the Filer example.

WASHINGTON—The Carter administration is going through another of those periodic reappraisals of its policies toward the Communist nations, and several subtle changes are underway.

First, Washington is not going to allow the Soviet military intervention in Ethiopia, to the Ethiopian territories.

It is not quite clear to officials here why the Ethiopians need over a billion dollars worth of Soviet arms and over 10,000 Cuban troops to handle the military threat. According to U.S. intelligence reports, Ethiopia has armed forces numbering 192,000 to 200,000 for the Somalis.

The Soviets have poured more arms into this region in the last five years than the United States has provided in the last 25 years. They have, again according to official estimates here, 810 advisors in the Adis Ababa region, but the Cubans have an infantry brigade in the Harar area, and 40 pilots in Soviet planes stationed at Dire Dawa, and another brigade at Asstab.

Washington is more concerned about the political consequences of this than the military consequences. There is no doubt in the minds of officials here that Castro's intervention in Africa makes him feel like a revolutionary leader. It is easier for him to dispatch a Cuban expeditionary force to Angola and Ethiopia in Soviet ships than to solve Cuba's economic problems at home, and besides, this helps relieve the unemployment pressures around Havana.

But this creates an awkward problem for President Carter. A well-armed modern Cuban dominate the mouth of the Red Sea and threaten the oil supplies and sea routes of Saudi Arabia to Europe and Japan.

Second, the Carter administration is no longer trying to be neighborly to Fidel Castro in Cuba. He prefers or feels compelled by his million-dollar-a-day subsidy from Moscow to provide attack forces can be decisive in these primitive African wars, and can create the political feeling that the way to win is to cooperate with the Soviets and the Cuban mercenaries. Carter is now consulting with Egypt, Saudi Arabia and Iran on practical ways of denying any more cheap victories to the Communists around this strategic corner of Africa.

Maybe more important, Washington is also trying to analyze why Moscow is playing this game in the first place, just when it is proclaiming a policy of cooperating with Carter on the control of nuclear arms, and arguing for more trade, grain and advanced technology from the West. There are two theories here about this. The first is that the Soviets think they can please on the big issues of arms control and trade, and still be free to use military force to achieve their political objectives in Africa, and elsewhere.

The second theory is that Brezhnev, who has a peace-maker in his heart, is not strong enough physically or politically to impose a coherent world policy on his associates, and therefore, that the Soviet military are doing as they please in Africa while the political arms of the Moscow government are arguing for compromise agreements with the United States.

In any event, Washington is trying to hold a balance between cooperation and compulsion with the Soviet Union. It will keep pressing for a strategic arms agreement, but confront the Soviets whenever they use force to establish power centers, and insist on increasing U.S. influence in the Communist states of Eastern Europe, as Moscow is using its influence on Cuba.

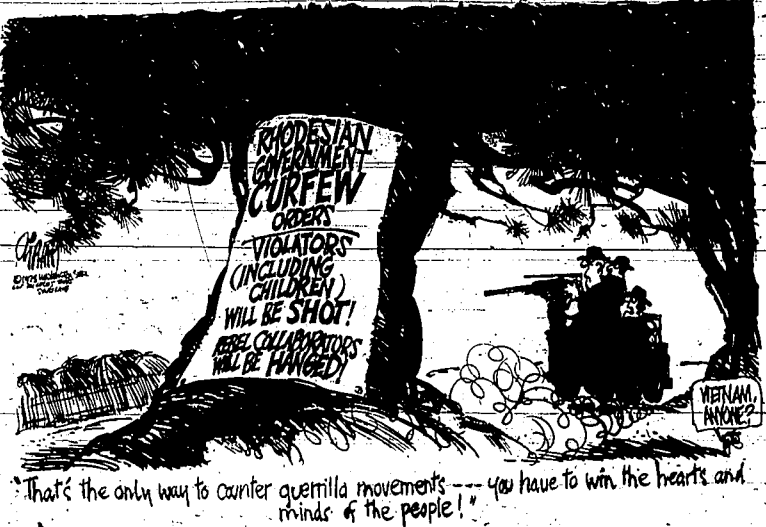

Officials here are also reviewing their attitude toward China. There is a feeling in Washington that relations between Washington and Peking have deteriorated since the death of Chou En-Lai and Mao Tse-tung mainly because, while the Chinese Communists were sorting out their leadership problems, nobody here knew who was in charge. But this is changing. Leonard Woodcock, Carter's representative in Peking, has been back here recently, and the decision has been made to try to increase the consultation between the two capitals.

Nothing can be done for a while about establishing formal diplomatic relations between Washington and Peking. An attempt to do this with the Chinese would infuriate conservative senators and almost certainly lead to the rejection of the Panama Canal treaties. But China wants help from this country in developing its oil resources. It wants more trade, not only with Japan but with the West. It is more pragmatic and less ideological than it was before the death of Mao, and it wants to be consulted on what's happening in Africa, Europe and the rest of the world.

Accordingly, Washington will be talking more to Peking about world problems in the future than it has in recent months. It will be consulting more with the Communist nations of Eastern Europe. Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia will be coming here in a couple of weeks to exchange views on the transformation of world politics. What will happen in the Balkans after he goes is what he thinks of the Euro-Communist movement, and what can be done to avoid war in the Middle East and in Africa.

Carter is not choosing up sides between these Communist countries, but trying to find some common ground between them—and the free nations of the West and Japan, and the developing nations of Africa, Asia and Latin America. It is a serious exercise. The government here is trying to convince all the principal leaders that they have more to gain from cooperating with one another to create a new world order than by competing with one another for national or ideological advantage.

For the moment all this is very abstract, but this policy in Washington is significant. It is the United States that is taking the lead and trying to compass the differences in the Middle East, in Rhodesia, in the Horn of Africa and in South Africa. No other nation has both the will and the power to do so, and officials here wait for the support they need from other nations to make a third beginning, after the League of Nations and the United Nations, toward a better world order.

That's the only way to counter guerrilla movements --- you have to win the hearts and minds of the people!

Mexican boy struggles for survival

ACAPULCO — People look past him. He is 10 years old, and they don't want to see him. They are on their way to the fancy hotels where they will spend $100 a day, where they will grease their bodies down with lotions and try to turn their American skins brown, and he is a bother.

His name is Juanito Garcia. He was born in 1967. He supports his family.

It is no wonder. Acapulco is built on the concept of escape; that is what the tourists are seeking, and that is what the gleaming hotels are all about. But in addition to being a resort city, Acapulco, away from the beach that runs along the bay, is a city of almost unbelievable poverty. Juanito and his family live in a miserable, tiny shack off a dirt road, just nowhere near the hotels. He is ashamed of his home; he is surprised when a reporter asks to visit, and then reluctant to say yes.

Juanito is the oldest of five children. The father's dead. He was killed in a gunfight some time ago, some say that the father was involved in a robbery attempt. Juanito does not like to talk about it.

Every day he walks from the shack where he lives to the Acapulco International Airport. Juanito stands in the glare of the hot sun for 12 hours.

He has no skills, of course. He can do one thing: he can earn a suitcase. So he approaches the American tourists as they come out of the customs area, and he pleads with them: can he carry a piece of luggage out to the cab stand? Often he is cursed. What he does is little more than a form of begging, and the tourists do not like seeing Juanito as their first glimpse of Mexico.

It is no wonder. Acapulco is built on the concept of escape; that is what the tourists are seeking, and that is what the gleaming hotels are all about. But in addition to being a resort city, Acapulco, away from the beach that runs along the bay, is a city of almost unbelievable poverty. Juanito and his family live in a miserable, tiny shack off a dirt road, just nowhere near the hotels. He is ashamed of his home; he is surprised when a reporter asks to visit, and then reluctant to say yes.

Juanito is very easily, but he is extremely small, for his age, and the baggage brought to Mexico by the American tourists is almost universally bulky and heavy. Sometimes it stands as tall as he does. Because of his size, Juanito is often made fun of by the other boys who work for tips at the airport. Juanito is very self-conscious about this. He does not like being teased, and he does not like having to be at the airport.

But because of his family, there is no alternative. It is the only way to bring money home. Most of the boys at the airport, besides the arriving tourists like a pack of dogs, yelping and screaming and grabbing for the bags.

Juanito — because of his size, and because of his shyness — does not do this. He knows it would be no use. The other boys would only push him out of the way. So he waits until the others are done, and then, if there is a straggling tourist who has not been seen, Juanito approaches, looks upward with his big, frightened eyes, and says:

"Please?"

Usually it doesn't work. The tourists push past him and on to the taxi stand, and Juanito must wait for another opportunity.

On a good day — and he doesn't have many — Juanito will make perhaps $5. But even then he can't count on taking the money home to his mother. Sometimes the bigger boys will see him heading away from the airport, and will steal the money that Juanito has earned during his 12 hours in the sun.

Victor Jauregui, who works for Las Brisas, the most prestigious hotel in Acapulco, noticed Juanito hanging around the fringes of the other boys at the airport day after day, and took the trouble to find out Juanito's story. When he learned it — from the other boys — he supported his family, and of the harassment Juanito suffers at the hands of the other boys — Jauregui began to make a point of letting Juanito help him when he came to the airport to greet important arriving guests, and giving Juanito tips that he otherwise would never have seen. When he can, Jauregui drives Juanito home at night, also so that he will not be robbed.

Sometimes Jauregui will invite Juanito to come with him and eat lunch under the shade of a tree. It is the closest thing to kindness that Juanito ever sees, but soon he is up and walking back toward the airport.

And there he can be found, seven days a week. They boys standing — at the rear of the orders — praying for someone to let him carry a bag, and give him a small coin. It is brilliant in the sun, and it is exhausting work, but Juanito has no choice. At the age of 10 he is the man of the family, and a man must do his job.

Comic Woody Allen deserves Oscar

BOSTON — The word part is that he originally thought of making the movie "Annie Hall," which, according to the dictionary, "is the psychological state characterized by an absence of pain." "Annyndia," I mean, Woody Allen without his pain, would be like Charlie Chaplin without his moustache. Just another pretty cheer. Pain is his capital. Pain is his security blanket. Hence, there he is.

How he must have struggled last week with the fact that he tied the all-time record and won three Oscar nominations for the movie he finally called "Annie Hall." Woody, who looks like a Sisyphus look like a happy-go-lucky goldbrick, and he tries to mentally turn all his successful films into successive fluffs: "To me, they are all personal failures." But it must have been tough to find a bad sign in the nominations.

But never mind his own anti-comedy. The Flabbish Failure has spanned the time period from Mort Sahl to Steve Martin without a single unemployment check. Allen, who insists he's a "child of the forties," is more than ever a comedian of the seventies.

His long-term popularity is based on one thing: stability. Who else has clung to the same neuroses for 42 years? I've known people who held onto Boston Bruins season tickets through two marriages, but I talk about your commitments. Allen has been in analysis for 22 years. While everyone else went into therapy for a cure, he went in for maintenance: "It's hard to feel confidence in an analyst who doesn't wear a belt, shoelaces or a tie."

It is no wonder. Allen has been in analysis for 22 years. While everyone else went into therapy for a cure, he went in for maintenance: "It's hard to feel confidence in an analyst who doesn't wear a belt, shoelaces or a tie."

Allen's universe may be a banana peel, but his neuroses have kept him up right. Stable. When God died in the late sixties, Allen wrote his own kind of obituary: "Not only is God dead, but I'm getting a plumber next week-end." And who else were "born again" in the seventies? He said: "If there is a God, he isn't trustworthy. Through it all, he remained a devout agnostic."

Let everybody else talk trendy; he remained Freudian. When other fictional characters got busted for profanity or for pot, his were in trouble. Let's say for immortality purposes. "He was never single enough to 'deal with death,'" explaining: "I'm not afraid of dying. I just don't want to be there when it happens.

Through the sexual revolution, the post-sexual revolution and the asexual revolution he kept his obsession intact and his failure rate high. When someone finally asked him what a woman could do these days to initiate sex with him, he responded: "She has to show up."

A 1976 existentialist might get trapped into talking about the relationship between sex and death, but Allen would hold to his basic feeling that "the difference between sex and death is with death you can do it alone, and nobody's going to make fun of you."

Allen deserves three Oscars for "Annie Hall." An incredibly funny movie. He deserves more than that just for being our resident survivor, for holding on.

Woody Allen is one of us who refused to pursue happiness. He probably thinks Werner Erhard is an actor in "The Sorcerer and The Pigeon." He looks at success as another failure opportunity. And in an age of relentless egotism, who wouldn't give an Oscar to the guy who once said: "When I first started going (to analysis) I was worried my personality would be changed to conform to a norm representing typically middle-class Viennese of 1920. Now, I'd settle for that."

Union problems cited

Editor, Times-News:
I read with interest the article in the Times-News February 3 about the Teamsters Union squaring off against Idaho Frozen Foods. Inc. It was interesting to read what Roy Corson could do as a union organizer.

This same Roy Corson was a business agent for the Teamsters Union Local No. 483 to which I have belonged for 16 years. He was the business agent four or five years ago, and we were having trouble with seniority and job bidding at Pet Milk in Buhl. He came to the plant and we had a meeting, and he heard both sides of the story. He said he would be back soon with the verdict.

Three weeks went by and he hadn't shown up, so I went to the Union office in Twin Falls and told him that if I didn't have a legitimate gripe, then we would just forget about the whole thing. He said no, that he would come over to the plant. This was on Wednesday, and he said that he would be down in Buhl Friday and said, "I'll put everyone back on the job where they were before the trouble started."

He did come down Friday p.m. He and the can shop foreman went out to the parking lot and visited for half an hour. Then they came in and called a meeting and he said, "We are going to leave you guys right where you are at." After the meeting, I asked him how come he let the foreman brainwash him. He said they didn't even talk about the job. He told me that he had called our shop steward and talked with him on the phone, and they decided to leave things the way they were in terms of seniority.

Our shop steward was on vacation but when he came to work Monday morning, I asked him if Roy Corson had called him on the phone and talked about this deal, and he said no that Roy hadn't called him, and besides, he didn't have a phone. This is the kind of service I have gotten from the Teamster's Union.

Shortly thereafter we had a meeting in the plant manager's office (Roy Corson, the plant supervisor, the shop steward and myself). Corson said, "From now on, when an opening comes up in the can shop, it shall be bid." The next time an opening came up, they just let them bid in the can shop the way they had in the past and our shop steward told them that was wrong because Roy Corson, representing the union, had agreed to bid these jobs separate, but the union didn't back us up and disregarded the contract.

On April 26, 1976, my lawyer wrote a letter to H.W. Reynolds and asked him to explain about the bid jobs and seniority and sent him a copy of the contract which says that these jobs will be bid and seniority will be on a plant-wide basis and we have never heard from him.

So, the contract means nothing, and the men that signed it are not men enough to back up what they agreed to and signed their names to. So, you people that are working for a company that is not Unionized should count your blessings.

be thankful that you are not tied up with something like this. I paid my initiation fee and monthly union dues and get nothing in return for it. We haven't had over three union meetings this last year, but the union sees that they get our dues each month.

It's up to the people

Editor, Times-News:
There are issues facing our State Legislature right now that are going to have a far-reaching effect on our future here in Idaho and on the futures of our children. I'm speaking of the Water Plan, floating fish farms and coal-fired plants for power.

These issues are red hot right now, and the people who want these things placed in our valley over the objections of the people will not stop. If they are stopped now, it will only be temporary. The issues will surface again and again, and they will, in fact they are, attempting to change the laws that are in the way now.

It's up to the people to stop these things presently. You, the people! Let your congressman know your feelings. There is an election coming up and congressmen are willing listeners, so speak up. Don't complain to your neighbor; he can't help you. Complain to your congressman. That's why he's in office.

In a way, your congressman is like an expensive car. There might be a lot of horsepower there, but it needs your hand at the wheel to direct it where you want it to go and your foot on the brake to keep it from running out of control. Your letters and opinions are the wheels and brakes of Congress, state and federal.

Please pick up a pen and state your opinions or objections. It just might be some of the best "driving" you've ever done!

Dennis to market new looks in Elvis act

DENNIS WISE
...adopts Elvis appearance

ELVIS PRESLEY
...retains many fans

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI) — Looking like Elvis Presley is never having to feel sorry, according to Dennis Wise, who went to considerable lengths to achieve that state. Wise said he first got the idea from a movie.

"The idea of plastic surgery came when I was 14 or 15 after I had seen it on a science fiction movie," he said. "I thought it would be great to look like Elvis Presley."

And after such surgery, Wise bears a fair resemblance to his late idol, though one fakeup man said it still took a lot of work.

Wise, 24, held a news conference Tuesday and admitted, now that he's presented his new face to the public, "I'm scared to death. It's hard to get used to. But I'll never feel sorry for what I did."

He admits adopting the appearance of a dead man may seem "kind of bizarre" to some people, but "if you are an Elvis Presley fan, you may understand what I'm talking about."

Although he's had no entertainment experience, Wise plans to market his new look-in-an-Elvis impersonation act. He hopes will raise money for a Presley Museum.

Wise, a native of Joplin, Mo., made his first public appearance since his surgery on a network television program Monday, but he wore big sunglasses that obscured his face and gave rise to speculation the operation was a flop.

He shunned the sunglasses at a news conference Tuesday and sat in the glare of TV lights so everyone could get a good look.

The nostrils of Wise's remodeled nose aren't as widely flared as Presley's were, but with his hair dyed black and him wearing a frilly blue-Elvis-suit, Wise looked like a young version of the man he worshipped.

Wise said he underwent 35 minutes of makeup before his news conference.

A professional fakeup man who has worked with Wise said during the week-end he thought Wise "doesn't look like Elvis" and needed hours of "corrective makeup" to look like Presley.

Frisbie dead ringer for Clark

PETALUMA (UPI) — The King may be dead, but there is a dead ringer for him alive and well in Petaluma.

James M. Frisbie, 47, bears a striking resemblance to the late Clark Gable, the "King of Hollywood" who died in 1960.

Frisbie causes crowds to stop and stare; receives repeated requests for autographs; and even confuses those who knew Gable personally.

Now, he has decided to do something about it.

He has hired a business manager and a talent agency and said Tuesday that he would be glad to do TV commercials that "would not be demeaning to Gable or myself." There is even talk of Hollywood interviews.

Frisbie said he enjoys the idea of looking like the late star. It picks me up and makes me feel good. I really like people and enjoy meeting them. If I didn't look like Gable, there are a lot of people I wouldn't have met."

Frisbie, who is a local real estate man, is ready to do anything to start a new career based on his physical similarity to Gable—except one thing. He said he and his wife will not leave their home in the Petaluma area, where his three grown children and six grandchildren also reside.

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Miss Cully is survived by two children, four grandchildren and two great grandchildren. A son-in-law, John A. Bugas, is deputy director of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission in Washington D.C.

The character of Mother Jefferson had an occasionally sharp tongue, often disapproved of her son's wife, Louise, and was given to taking daytime naps through on-by-nipping at the liquor supply.

Miss Cully was admitted to Cedars-Sinai Medical Center Saturday and died at 1:23 a.m. — a hospital spokesman said.

A spokesman said funeral arrangements were in complete, but actor Paul Benedict, who plays the Jeffersons' white neighbor, said he had accepted an invitation to be one of the speakers.

Willetta Says...

Wow! what a weekend tripping to Salt Lake City to hear Isaac Stern, world's most recognized violinist, perform under the baton of world-famous conductor Maurice Abravanel and the Utah Symphony Orchestra.

For old time's sake, one of us met after the concert. This newspaper, handing my brain with the week's subject, prompted me to confirm long-ago-stated garnish preferences of both. That, by the way, is our subject. Both friends, being masters in connoisseurship and enjoying the sublime art of glittering with nuance, trills and frills, appreciate that a mundane dish can be turned into a piece of resistance by a simple and delicate turning. Unexpectedly and rather incongruous with each personality, their favorites remain any form of fresh onion for Stern and curry condiments for Abravanel. These can be eaten for main entertainment but are oh, so much more enjoyable if used as co-appeals for a main dish.

WILLETTA WARBURG

Over the years, many have asked how I turned my dishes for TV commercials and magazine editorials, and even plain-at-home when blinds are down, not to be photographed, main dishes look photogenic. The answer is to employ colorful, contrasting, nutritious edibles to garnish dishes in scarcity to testify what all taste positives. It sounds complicated but it's not. You eat with your eyes. Chewing different textures is pleasurable to the ears. A garnish is nothing more than a "leaser" for a plate of food. I always make my garnishes edible, eye appealing and attractive with what I'm decorating. It's a more positive experience. Not only color, edibility is important but so is texture. The food is soft eating, the contrast should be chewy such as the contrasting toasted almond slivers used to garnish my fish-banana dish pictured on this page or the canned peach texture is next to the spicy beef roast. Besides texture you need taste difference so you can notice the garnish. Don't garnish cooked potatoes with cooked cauliflower buds. However, cooked potatoes garnished with fresh cauliflower buds which have been sprinkled with paprika or tumeric are good. Get the story?

Use your imagination when garnishing. You'll be surprised what you have sampling your skin in the kitchen. Open the cupboard, refrigerator, freezer and pantry. To be sure, you'll find something if your mind's unbuttoned. How much should one garnish? Remember that a garnish should tease, not be a course or accompaniment meant to complete a fill-up. For anything to be effectively stimulating is to leave something to be desired. Thus it's remembered. A good cook knows this as does a fine musician. Leave the audience crying for more. It'll come back. In other words, God forbid you shouldn't run out.

Don't be afraid to mix sweet flavors with meats, poultry or fish and likewise with unsweet garnishes. It's amazing what goes with what. Believe it or not, chocolate slivers are delicious with roast turkey or chicken. Anyway, here are a few garnish suggestions for your main dishes and maybe there are more you can conjure up:

- APPLES: Pickled crab, straight from the jar, or fresh, core, wedged, or sliced in rings. (If fresh, rub with Fruit Fresh).
- APRICOTS: Fresh or drained, canned halves.
- BACON: Crisp slices — whole, in pieces or broken into bits.
- BEETS: Cooked or pickled — thoroughly drained and sliced, shredded or diced.
- CAPERS: Thoroughly drained. (Save juice for salad dressings).
- CARROTS: Cooked, canned, or raw (sliced or shredded, or made into sticks, cubes or curls).
- CAULIFLOWER/TYPES: Pickled, steamed, or raw; the pieces shouldn't be too large. Sprinkle with ground paprika or tumeric for color and taste.
- CELERY: Raw small whole stalks, with leaves; these come from the center of the bunch.
- CHEESE: Any variety, cut into strips or cubes, or coarsely shredded.
- CHIVES: Chopped, frozen or fresh.
- CRANBERRY SAUCE: Whole or jellied; jellied can be cut into slices, sticks or cubes.
- CROUTONS: Plain or seasoned.
- CUCUMBERS: Raw — cut into circles, strips, or cubes, with or without skin.
- EGGS: Hard cooked — sliced into circles, wedged, or sliced (both parts together or separately).
- ENDIVE: Cukry variety — in pieces or broken.
- GRAPEFRUIT: Canned or fresh — in wedges or slices.
- GRAPES AND GRAPE LEAVES: Fresh or canned as is.
- JELLY: Sweet or salty, colored and cut into cubes.
- LEMON: Fresh — cut into thin slices or wedges.
- LIME: Fresh — cut into thin slices or wedges.
- LETTUCE: Any kind — broken into small pieces or shredded.
- MUSHROOMS: Canned, sautéed, or fresh (caps or slices).
- OLIVES: Stalled — sliced, broken, halved, or whole as is or toasted.
- OLIVES: Green or ripe, cut into slivers; or if pitted, cut into rings.
- ONIONS: Canned small, pickled cocktail, or raw small whole (cut into rings); or fresh garden onions (scallions) — sliced, cut into strips, or whole.
- ORANGE: Canned wedges or fresh (cut into thin slices or wedges).
- PARSLEY: Chopped or in sprigs.
- PEACHES: Fresh (Fruit Fresh rubbed) or canned, drained slices.
- PEPPER: Sweet green or red, steamed or raw, and cut into strips, circles, wedges, or tiny cubes.
- PICKLES: Sweet or sour — cut into strips, wedges, slices or tiny cubes.
- PIMIENTO: Canned, drained pieces cut into wedges, strips, or small cubes.
- PINEAPPLE: Canned or pared fresh — in cubes, strips or circles.
- RADISHES: Whole, with a few leaves left on top whole, without leaves — cut into cubes or circles.
- TANGERINE: Sections, with seeds removed.
- TOMATO: Raw — cut into wedges or circles.
- TURPLES: Canned — thinly sliced or minced.
- WATERCRESS: Chopped or in sprigs.

Additional go rooms to exploit ideas are canned or fresh pickled cherries, kumquat, melon balls or cubes, mint leaves, canned or fresh pitted and halved plums and prunes, raisins, dollops of sour cream, whipped cream and yogurt.

THIS WEEK'S BEST MARKET BUYS:
Price landings are a bit bumpy in every area, but things are lowering to a reasonable cost again. So, go ahead and low those apron strings. Shop around for the "high" buys of beef. They are here again and widely expected for at least a month. Appropriate for the spring pot roast dish on this page.

Fish is getting better and will swim a little easier in a few weeks. There are some terrific canned fish specials here and there in the markets — search them out. Citrus is tailing its season and can be found at good prices. Last ripening makes for the most valued citrus tastewise. Strawberries are naively filtering good prices but wait for naturally ripened ones soon to appear. They'll be much more satisfying.

Of course there's a time for long days of cooking with steaming pots on the range and tantalizing fragrances wafting through the house.

But what a relief to know that you can also present a marvelous meal by taking the easy way. In just a little while the Peachy-Devised Chicken is ready to be served along with a steaming pot of hot tea. All this with no loss of atmosphere, either; for the aromatic fragrance of the seasoned chicken is truly mouthwatering.

With the convenience of simple recipes, plenty of delicious, young broiler-fryer chickens, canned cling peaches and the stimulating flavor and fragrance of freshly made tea, taking the easy way can become a way of life.

PEACHY DEVILED CHICKEN

- 2 cans (29 oz. each) cling peach halves
- 1 cube butter
- 1 tsp. curry powder
- 1 broiler-fryer chicken, cut in serving parts
- 1/2 tsp. dry mustard
- 1 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
- 1 tsp. lemon juice
- 2 cups fresh bread crumbs
- 1 tsp. parsley, chopped
- 1 tsp. poultry seasoning
- 1/8 tsp. salt
- 1/8 tsp. pepper

Drain peach halves, saving 1 cup syrup. Melt 1/2 cube (1/2 cup) butter in large saucepan. Add saved syrup and curry powder. Bring to a vigorous boil. Turn off heat and add peach halves 1/2 syrup, marinate while preparing chicken. Melt remaining butter. Add mustard, Worcestershire sauce and lemon juice to melted butter. Mix bread crumbs, parsley and poultry seasoning in blender. Dip chicken parts in melted butter, then roll in bread crumbs.

Arrange breaded chicken in one 3-quart baking dish or two 1 1/2 quart greased oblong baking dishes. Arrange marinated peach halves around chicken parts. Pour marinade over parts. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Cover baking dishes tightly. Bake for approximately one hour at 350 degrees. To brown, remove cover for last 15 minutes of baking. Serves six.

Note: If preparation steps are done the day or night before baking, refrigerate, then add 15 minutes to baking time.

Sandwich filling

Did you know that cottage cheese combined with hard-cooked eggs makes a good sandwich filling? Combine four hard-cooked eggs, chopped, with one and one-half cups of cottage cheese, one tablespoon Worcestershire sauce, two teaspoons prepared mustard and one and one-half teaspoons seasoned salt. Blend thoroughly and chill several hours before using.

HOW-TO BREW

Perfect Tea

When you want it hot, follow these simple rules to insure a heartily full flavored brew:

- Rinse teapot with hot water to warm it.
- Bring freshly drawn cold water to a full rolling boil.
- Put 1 teabag or 1 teaspoon loose tea per serving in the pot.
- Pour the boiling water (about 5 ounces per serving) over tea.
- Cover and let stand 3 to 5 minutes.

When you want it iced, follow the rules above but use 50% more tea to allow for melting ice. Or try one of these easy-to-do methods:

Using boiling water: Bring 1 quart of cold water to a full rolling boil in a saucepan. Remove from heat and immediately add 15 teabags or 1 1/2 cup loose tea. Stir, cover and let stand 5 minutes. Stir again and strain into a pitcher. Boiling another quart of cold water.

Using cold water: Fill a quart container with cold water. Add 1/2 to 1 1/2 teabags (remove tags). Cover. Let stand at room temperature or in refrigerator at least 6 hours or overnight. Remove teabags, squeezing against side of container.

Current status on dried peas

United States Department of Agriculture, Wash., D.C., February 13, 1978

If you look for ground pea flour in the market place now you probably won't find it. But — researchers at the U.S. Department of Agriculture predict that you may find it in the not-too-distant future since they have found that bread can be made more nutritious (at no extra cost) by substituting pea flour for some of the wheat flour used in baking. Peas are high in lysine which complements wheat when the two are combined in flour form. Dried peas have been used throughout the world as a protein source in low-cost diets — but, until now, in this country we generally use pea flour only in thickening soups. Agricultural research scientists have found that by substituting 15 percent of the wheat flour in a loaf of bread with flour made from ground peas, the protein value of the loaf rises 15 percent. It doesn't affect the taste, baking quality or the cost of producing the bread. Breads fortified with pea flour, in addition to being high in protein value, are also high in fibers and carbohydrate rates — but low in fats. Americans eat nearly 100 million pounds of bread daily, and although wheat is high in protein, it has an imbalance of amino acids that make up that protein. Wheat is low in lysine, the essential amino acid that determines the human body's ability to utilize protein. Consequently, nutrition researchers are trying to fortify wheat flour with a low-cost material that is high in lysine. Soy flour has been the most often-used substitute ... while nutritionally good, it has a strong taste that some people do not like.

The green pea color is bleached out during the baking process so the color of the bread is not affected. The bread-eating public will benefit from this kind of bread in three ways: 1) The bread will be a more nutritious product. 2) Wheat farmers of the Pacific Northwest where 90 percent of all U.S. peas are produced) will benefit because of the use of their product. 3) In the Northwest they usually have severe erosion problems in wheat fields ... but growing wheat on pea stubble offers excellent erosion control. The wheat-pea crop rotation system in this area has been limited by the small U.S. market for peas ... which resulted in most of our peas being exported. Now — the tide has changed — we can use our own peas! The research is being conducted at the Agricultural Research Western Wheat Quality Laboratory, Pullman, Washington.

TWIN FALLS — Glory be! There were two readers' letters this week. It seemed that the address and postal service wasn't working for Willetta, c/o Times-News, P.O. Box 548, Twin Falls, Idaho 83401, where you can send your questions and/or hints along with your name and telephone number.

Also, vitamin content is reduced about 60 percent in powdered milk when stored nine months, so figure out the gradual deterioration from day of purchase.

It behooves all of us to check expiration date on a plastic parameled milk powder and store it in airtight containers, in the dark in a refrigerator or cool place and not to buy anymore thick powder than we can use up in a few weeks before it's dead.

A Twin Falls nameless cook asked if keeping dry milk powder in a clear glass container on the counter killed it. The answer is a big yes. Milk is packed with nutrients. Glassware conducts heat slowly and allows the destruction of Vitamin B2 (riboflavin) by the exposure to light. The milk powder also turns rancid rapidly because of the renewed food expert and author, only to find out that he was in agreement with me that the grape leaves probably reflect the mosaic-decorated, jarred, pickled vegetables of Mediterranean countries. Grape leaves are very decorative fresh and breaded and add minimal flavor and nutrients.

Justice students disobey

WESTFIELD, Mass. (UPI) — Campus police at Westfield State College say 90 percent of the crimes reported to them are committed by students majoring in criminal justice.

It's downright scary to think that these people are going to be enforcing laws they can't seem to obey," said one student in the popular course.

Criminal justice students are trained to be police and probation officers and law enforcement administrators. Many work as interns in area courts and police departments.

Campus security chief Thomas Connors said most of the offenses are not serious but range from minor disturbances to vandalism caused by drunken students.

The 330 criminal justice students make up 16 percent of the college's enrollment. Connors said most of the trouble is caused by a group of 16 to 20 students.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag
Bidding is 80 percent of bridge — card play the other 20.

South bid properly to the correct contract of four hearts, but his play of the dummy — night well qualified for inclusion in the Guinness Book of Records. He managed to misplay each one of the four suits.

At trick one he played dummy's king of diamonds after East opened the bidding in that suit. This allowed East to make a diamond return at trick two. South ruffed and planned down his ace of hearts. He should have entered dummy in order to finesse against the king. Misplay number two in just three tricks.

Now South was ready to attack clubs. He led to dummy and finessed the 10. Not as bad a play as the others, but just as much a loser.

East took his queen of clubs, cashed the king of hearts and got out with a third diamond.

South was ready to go after the fourth suit and committed the final and worst misplay of the hand. His only chance to avoid the loss of two spade tricks would be to find East with ace and one spade. In that case he could enter dummy, lead a spade toward his queen, lead back a second spade from his own hand, duck in dummy and watch East play his ace.

This is a normal last resort play that works fairly often and would have worked this time. But it was not South's. He led the first spade toward dummy's king and lost two spade tricks in addition to the three tricks already gone, to wind up down two at a hand where he might easily have scored an overtrick.

GOAT XING

Don't get their goats

OREGON State Highway department workers, Phillip Moore, left, and John Thlems, right, display the latest in interstate highway signs. The signs are probably the only ones of their kind in the country and will warn motorists on Interstate 5 that the goat herd on Mount Nemo ranges there. The herd recently began straying onto the freeway.

Coca leaves get a new life

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Harvard doctor believes coca leaves — now legal only for medical use in cocaine and for the coca flavor in Coca-Cola — could be a beneficial stimulant, anti-depressant and remedy for stomach aches.

Andrew Weil, a physician working at the Harvard Botanical Garden, hopes to win government approval to develop a prescription chewing gum, as a safe and useful addition to the medical cabinet. It is not addictive.

"The leaves of the South American shrub are illegal in the United States except for limited use. The cocaine used illegally is 30- to 70 percent pure.

Coca leaves contain only one half of 1 percent cocaine and when the leaves are chewed, the little cocaine they contain enters the bloodstream slowly through the stomach and membranes of the mouth and throat.

"That's very different from snorting cocaine or injecting cocaine when there's a sudden rise in blood level," Weil said.

Coca — which is different from cocoa powder made from cocoa seeds — has been chewed for centuries by the people of Peru, Colombia, Bolivia and Ecuador.

"Coca is one of the most important medicinal and stimulant plants in the world and is also one of the oldest crops cultivated by humans," Weil told an American Association for the Advancement of Science symposium last week.

But little basic research has been done on the plant's medicinal properties, he said. Once cocaine was isolated from coca in the 1870s, work with coca itself stopped, Weil said. Scientists incorrectly assumed the properties of coca would be the same as cocaine.

But cocaine is only one of a number of alkaloid compounds in coca, and Weil believes the others modify and may act with it to produce therapeutic results when the whole leaf is used.

Weil has spent many months in South America studying coca, and said coca leaves taste good.

Senate considers land bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Legislation to free a number of farming families from regulations which would limit federally-irrigated land to 160 acres per person was introduced in the Senate today by Sens. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., and Frank Church, D-Idaho.

The bill would increase the average allowances for farms receiving water from federal irrigation projects to 1,280 Class 1 acres, or the equivalent of lands of lesser productive capacity.

It would amend the 1902 Reclamation Law which placed a limit of 160 acres per person on the quantity of irrigable land for which a farming family may receive water from a federal project.

Hatfield said he believed the legislation would "go a long way in both preserving and protecting the family farm, a tradition that's well established in Oregon, against arbitrary limits fashioned quite literally in the horse-and-buggy days. At the same time it will insure that the true family farm does not give way to the absentee, corporate landlord whose closest contact with the land is a potted plant in a Beverly Hills office."

The Bureau of Reclamation estimates there are 1.8 million acres in Western states in excess of the 160-acre limit, including an estimated 16,979 in Oregon.

Hatfield and Church are members of the subcommittee on public lands which is currently considering the issue.

Under the 1902 act, a farm family receiving federally irrigated water was given a 160-acre allowance for each family member up to a total of four persons. One family with four or more members thus was allowed to own 640 acres of federally-irrigated land under the 1902 act. The also were allowed an additional 640 acres of leased land for a maximum total of 1,280 acres.

For a husband and wife alone, for example, the limit under the 1902 act for owned and leased land would be only 320 acres. Under the Hatfield-Church proposal, all farm families, no matter how large, would be entitled to the 1,280-acre total of land considered "Class 1."

The governors were treated more like kings

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There was a time when the nation's governors got no respect when they came to the White House. Now they're treated like royalty.

The governors wound up their annual winter conference Tuesday night and almost to a man and woman agreed they never had such a relationship with an administration. Republicans and Democrats alike praised President Carter throughout the meeting, not only for his cooperation, but for giving the governors a role in developing such key administration issues as welfare, reform and urban policy. A n d the administration showed the governors it considers the their clout to be considerable. Consider — Carter met face-to-face with them for an hour and a half to discuss the nation's energy problems.

Carter invited them to the White House not only for the ritual formal dinner, but the first dancing-after-dinner event since he took office. —Vice President Walter

Mondale's speech to the governors was almost entirely devoted to forming a "new partnership" with the states. —The Cabinet members who came to the conference to discuss issues with the governors included Secretaries Cyrus Vance of State; Joseph Califano of Health, Education and Welfare; Patricia Roberts Harris of Housing;

John Evans calls the governors' meeting productive

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Idaho Gov. John Evans said Friday the National Governors Association meeting in Washington, D.C., was productive and that final day highlights included talks with Vice President Walter Mondale and Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus on water policy and gubernatorial input. Evans, who spoke Tuesday with United Press International by phone from Washington after the formal sessions closed, said Mondale "emphasized the strong role (President) Carter and he expect the states to take. He called it a partnership in all areas of national concern and said the governors can be of great service to the country by giving the administration input. Evans said the national water policy was discussed with Mondale and that there are problem areas. But he said a cooperative effort between governors and the Department of Interior is working. "One area of conflict was how states would pay for water projects," Evans said. "There had been some talk about 50 percent matching funds but it looks like 10 percent state funding is going to be a more likely figure." Evans said Friday sessions included discussions with Andrus on the Roadless Area

Review, Evaluation (RARE II). "As far as the RARE II program goes, he indicated there will be a substantial block of Forest Service land transferred to commercial timber states soon." Evans said talks with Andrus did not include the 100-acre limitation. But he said he met with Sen. Frank Church and Sen. James McClure and that proposals to up-the limitation are being considered. Of President Carter, Evans said he got the impression he was happy to be in the position of having gone from the governor's mansion to the White House.

They had a ball

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter, declaring the evening one of "hospitality and friendship," entertained the nation's governors and their spouses at the White House in "the first dancing-after-dinner affair since taking office. "It's your home as well as ours," the president told the gathering. The president squired Metropolitan Opera Star Beverly Sills in a Viennese waltz in the White House ballroom to the music of "The Merry Widow." And baritone Alan Titus twirled Rosalynn Carter on the dance floor. It was a special evening for Carters — their first ball in the White House. Ten-year-old Amy, wearing a powder blue velvet gown, danced the waltz with her brother Chip. "This is an evening for hospitality and friendship, dancing and conversation, not for speeches," Carter said. The president, a former Georgia governor often criticized by other governors as an outsider during his long campaign for the presidency, said he feels a special kinship with the governors. "Your conference has been superb, hard-working and dedicated," Carter said in praise of his guests. Then he introduced Sills, a sang familiar duets with Titus from "The Merry Widow." The chandeliers were dimly lighted. The fires crackled in the fireplaces in each of the formal rooms where the guests dined at round tables on roast beef, turkey and croques. But mostly it was the Viennese waltz that captivated the crowd. After dinner, Carter was the first one on the dance floor in the East Room. He danced with several of the governors' wives and then, as is his custom, retired with his wife for the family quarters about 10:30 p.m. EST. Several governors and their wives continued dancing, but the party began to break up within a half hour after the president left.

User fee hike will pay for Jerome plant

By LARRY SWISHER Times-News writer

JEROME - About 3,000 Jerome residents can expect their yearly sewage service fees to increase by an average $15 to $20 if voters approve financing a new sewage treatment plant, city officials estimate. The increased fees will be used instead of property tax levies to repay the $630,000 sewage plant bond issue, to be decided by voters April 1. The city this week is finalizing plans for the general obligation bond election, which requires a two-thirds majority for passage. While the city plans to repay the bonds through revenues from sewer system user fees, general obligation bonds have a lower interest rate than revenue bonds. Jerome Mayor Marshall Everheart indicated the savings in interest were worth the increased difficulty of passing a general obligation bond issue. Revenue bond elections require only a simple majority, not two-thirds, for passage. The city expects to be able to sell the bonds at an approximately six percent interest rate, City Attorney Robert Williams said. Williams estimated annual interest payments at $36,000 to $39,000. With this amount of interest plus principal payments, amortized over 20 years, Williams said, "it's hard to see fees escalating more than $15 to $20 a year."

revenue to make the annual payments on the bonds, Williams said. "The intention is to make the plant self-supporting through user fees, but the interest rate is much less with general obligation bonds than with revenue bonds," he said. The election will take place April 4 at two polling places, which will be open from noon to 8 p.m. The city's two pre-emptive vote-at-city-hall and Pioneer Hall. Any resident of Jerome 18 years old who is registered to vote or who voted in the last general municipal election in November, 1977, is eligible to cast a ballot. Residents can register to vote at City Hall from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Mondays through Fridays, except March 30, 31 and April 1 when registration hours will be 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and 7 to 9 p.m. There is no length of residency requirement. Those scheduled to be polling judges and workers are: Precinct No. 1 (Pioneer Hall), Catherine Crupeh, Ellen McVey, Dora Hurd, Maxine Stroder and Donna Hovey; Precinct No. 2 (City Hall), Luwana Halverson, La Rue McKenney, Louise-Walton, Betty Bubak and Charles Hovey. About 1,300 Jerome residents were registered to vote in the last election. Jerome recently had to increase the amount of the bond issue from $550,000 to $630,000 to incorporate a sewage-receiving facility not previously planned and to provide a cushion in case of inflation. The ability to receive sewage pumped from septic tanks is being required by the state health department for all new treatment facilities.

Few new weed control chemicals available

By KEN HODGE Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Instead of a steady stream of new chemicals being developed each year, farmers will find only a trickle of new weapons added to their weed control arsenal in 1978, according to a University of Idaho official. "The current EPA (Environmental Protection Agency) review has really slowed down registrations of materials coming through that are available to you," Jesse Wilson, Jerome County extension agent, told a group of Magic Valley farmers at the 1978 U of I Weed School

Monday. According to Wilson and Bill Freutel, an EPA official from Boise, the EPA is in the midst of reregistering some 35,000 chemicals under its jurisdiction and has not focused on registering new chemicals which manufacturers have tested. "There are fewer people working on new registrations this year," Wilson said Monday. He said only five new herbicides were added to the list of those farmers can use to control weeds in the coming season. Wilson told farmers the EPA registered a herbicide called Sencor this year for weed control in alfalfa while the crop is still dormant in the spring. The sale until this year, Sencor was used mostly for weed control in sprouts. Another new chemical for use in alfalfa is called Toban, according to Wilson. He said Toban will be useful for alfalfa which has been overseeded with peas. Farmers previously used Treffan when overseeding peas in alfalfa.

The third new registration Wilson listed Monday was Avage. Although the chemical has been in use for several years, farmers could not mix it with 2-D because of a chemical reaction which could be set off, causing dissatisfaction in the results in the field.

According to Wilson, the chemical makeup of Avage is slightly different now and the chemical can be safely mixed with 2-D for wild oat control in barley and wheat.

A chemical called Carbyne, Wilson told farmers at the school, was previously registered for wild oat control, but farmers found a slight application would not get the second sprouting of the noxious weed.

In hopes of solving that problem, EPA granted registration of the chemical for a dual application. Wilson told farmers they could apply the herbicide when they first noticed the wild oats in their field had reached the two-leaf stage and put it on again when a second crop of the weed springs up.

Finally, according to Wilson, a new chemical called Holon is in the experimental stage for wild oats.

In addition to the shortage of newly registered chemicals this year, Wilson also noted some of the chemicals farmers now count on for weed control may be "gone next year" due to the reregistration process now underway at EPA.

Wilson explained the difficulty and high cost of chemicals registered for general use by private and licensed applicators on the farm.

He said once a chemical is found which works in the laboratory, it is given experimental status and chemical companies contract with farmers in different areas to test it.

The cost of getting a new chemical registered for use can be high, Wilson explained.

School District 415

Hansen voters favor rezoning proposal

By KEN HODGE Times-News writer

HANSEN - Voters in the Hansen School District 415 voted yesterday to adopt a rezoning proposal which would reflect more accurately recent changes in population distribution in the district. According to Garth Miller, Hansen school superintendent, 59 voters came to the polls and 57 voted in favor of the rezoning proposal. "It passed," Miller says. "We don't have to worry about a revision." Miller says all five members of the school board will stand for reelection in May in the annual school board election after the rezoning changed the zones in which some of the board members live. The new Zone 1 now includes the central city of Hansen, according to Miller.

Zone 2 includes the one-mile strip of land north of Highway 30 and east of Main Street, including the new housing development east of Hansen.

Zone 3 now encompasses the rest of the area north of Highway 30 and east of Main Street including the rural area north of Zone 2.

Zone 4 includes the two-mile strip of land between Highway 30 and the two-mile road designated as Zone 1.

Zone 5 now encompasses all the area south of the two-mile road in the school district.

Miller says the new zones represent a more equitable distribution of the 2,300 people now living in the district. He says each trustee on the board now represents approximately the same number of constituents.

In the May school board election the candidates in Zone 1 will run for a one-year term, Miller says.

In Zones 2 and 3, candidates will vie for two-year terms. And in Zones 4 and 5, a three-year term will be up for grabs.

After the May election, according to Miller, the Hansen School Board will get back on its regular rotation of trustee terms. New trustees will take office in July, according to Miller.

NO CSI prison training plan in works

By LORANNE O. SMITH Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - The president of the College of Southern Idaho says he has had no involvement in any vocational training program at CSI for prisoners at the proposed women's prison at Gooding.

Dr. James Taylor told the Times News today he feels the former Tuberculosis hospital at Gooding, now housing an alcohol treatment center, is not the appropriate place to house women prisoners.

"The Gooding facility is not suited for that kind of endeavor," Taylor said. He reiterated an opinion given in an open letter last weekend in Boise to persons lobbying in the Legislature against placement of the prison in the state-owned facility at Gooding.

The main reason for his letter, Dr. Taylor said, was to set the record straight about any involvement of CSI in providing vocational training for women prisoners.

The college head said he has never been contacted by anyone, state or federal, about setting up any vocational program, even though "it has been reported that I had been involved in setting up a vocational program for women prisoners at Gooding."

At several public meetings last summer and fall in Gooding, Don Erickson, head of the State Board of Corrections, had indicated, when questioned about training for prisoners, that CSI would be utilized.

Taylor said today "CSI would be happy to cooperate, but we have not been approached. If we were approached, we probably would try to provide training at the Gooding facility."

He indicated such training would be given in Gooding and prisoners not brought to the college campus if any such arrangement ever is made in the future.

The proposal to utilize the newest of the three-building complex in Gooding for a woman's prison has been the subject of controversy ever since Erickson revealed the plan last summer. The plan underwent what was described as a test vote in the Idaho House Monday when legislators first narrowly defeated, then narrowly passed a bill to transfer funds used for maintenance of the facility to the Department of Corrections.

The State Land Board approved the plan last fall, but the decision is dependent upon adequate funding from the legislature.

The CSI official said two of the three buildings in the Gooding complex are so old that the cost of converting them to meet life safety codes would be prohibitive.

"If I had all three of them I'd tear two of them down," he said. The board of correction plans to convert the middle building, which is the newest, into the prison quarters.

The Idaho Regional Treatment and Training Center, which has operated a 26-day community-based alcohol rehabilitation program there, since October, 1976, would have to move if the prison becomes a reality.

Center officials first said they would have to leave Gooding, but later indicated they would move into the building on the west side of the complex.

Court date March 20

TWIN FALLS - Fred M. Frazier, president of Sierra Life Insurance Co., is scheduled to appear in Magistrate Court in Twin Falls March 20 at 11 a.m. to answer charges brought by the office of the Idaho Attorney General.

Magistrate court officials said a representative of the attorney general's office will attend the hearing to represent the state.

Frazier is charged with having signed two disclaimer statements, one in 1975 and another in 1976, stating he had no material interest in any transaction or proposed transaction involving Sierra Life Insurance Co.

Frazier has stated the charges are false and the disclaimers were signed on the advice of an attorney and sent to the state as a courtesy.

Blood-drawing set

GOODING - A Red Cross blood drawing will be held in Gooding Friday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. in War Memorial Hall.

Moore estimated loss at $6,000, but said he would make a complete list of missing items after members of the family had an opportunity to inventory their jewelry and check the home completely.

Moore told officers his wife left their home about 7:50 p.m. Tuesday and when he arrived home at 8:30 he discovered a rear door had been forced open and the entire house ransacked.

He said drawers in several bedrooms had been gone through and jewelry boxes in his daughters' rooms as well as those of the master bedroom were emptied and the contents missing. A small amount of change was also missing and pennies and small change had been dumped on a bed and left behind.

Moore estimated the value of one missing diamond ring at $2,500 and said assorted jewelry represented about $3,000. Police are continuing their investigation.

Gem agency attrition leaves 11 vacancies

By BOB ZUCKERMAN Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - The Magic Valley regional division of the state Health and Welfare Department has experienced a roughly 30 per cent job turnover rate since June, 1976, recently released department statistics show.

While department employment has fluctuated from 176 to 185 since June, 1976, 50 persons have left the department, according to statistics prepared by personnel technician Mrs. B. J. Hottel.

The attrition leaves the department with 11 vacancies, including openings for three program managers.

Region director Kent Henderson, himself appointed to replace the former director who resigned last August, said Tuesday the turnover rate "has certainly had an effect on services." Job vacancies have meant some employees have had to fill in at other positions while doing their own work, he said.

Henderson himself has taken on the administrative duties of the mental health program since former manager Jerry Gardner resigned last month for personal reasons.

Robert Wright, administrative services manager responsible for region fiscal matters and building operations, has taken on the administrative duties in the substance abuse program since former manager Clay Robertson resigned last September because of health problems at the Gooding-Alcoholic Treatment Center.

Patrick Murphy, normally a therapist in the social services program, has become acting social services manager, Henderson's old job.

The three men are expected to handle the extra administrative duties until new managers can be hired in the next two months, Henderson said. The regional director said the turnover rate "was not that unusual. It's just the way it always been."

It could be expected turnover in other large businesses, including school districts, was just as high.

As a reference point, the Twin Falls School District showed turnover rates of 19 percent during the 1974-75 school year, 16 percent during the 1975-76 school year and 21 percent during the 1976-77 school year for roughly 300 certifiers in the regional Health and Welfare Department has been caused by several factors including funding cutbacks, employees' frustration with the resources available for their use, and better jobs luring employees from the department.

"People here want desperately to help others, but they perceive the level of frustration arises because they perceive the level of resources in the community is relatively small," Henderson said. This frustration can lead employees to leave the department, he said.

Others finally leave because they can not maintain the "emotional energy" required to help the needy, a large part of department work, Henderson said.

Since June, 1976, 35 employees have resigned, five have been laid off because of funding cutbacks, and four have transferred to other department positions.

He hopes to have filled within six months, the department also has six vacancies on its advisory board, a panel of Magic Valley volunteers who advise the regional office.

In addition, a current member of the 16-person panel has not attended a board meeting since she was appointed four months ago, according to Henderson.

The regional director said he did not think the vacancies or absenteeism showed that the public was apathetic to department work. All six vacancies were created when long-standing members resigned because they had other pressing responsibilities that were interfering," Henderson said.

Mrs. Margaret Kenison, appointed four months ago, said this morning she's been unable to attend board meetings because on "a whole series of bad luck."

In the last four months, Mrs. Kenison, a Jerome welfare recipient, has accidentally cut off her finger while chopping wood, and seen one daughter through knee surgery and another baby daughter through monoconiosis.

She said she hoped to attend the next board meeting March 15.

Henderson said the department hasn't been actively searching for new board members because it hasn't had time. Part of the reason it hasn't had time is because the department has been busy trying to fill employee positions, he said.

Cassia's oldsters may make move

By RAY SULLIVAN
Times-News writer

BURLEY — A move to a larger building may be upcoming for the Cassia County Senior Citizens Center.

Burley officials refused to comment on just what plans might be forthcoming from the city, saying it is too soon to speculate.

The city now leases the center, located east of here on the Burley Municipal Golf Course grounds, to Cassia County Senior Citizens for $5 a month, including lights and water.

However, at Monday's Cassia County Commissioners meeting, the county officials asked the Region 4 Economic Development Administration to see what funds could be raised if the city got out of the operation. Currently, the county joins the state and federal governments in funding the senior citizens group, but has nothing to do with providing facilities.

Mayor Chuck Shaddock initially denied Wednesday that any informal discussions were taking place, but later said: "At the present time, if we discuss this it might make a big change in plans. This is so premature."

Shaddock said if anything was done, the information would be released immediately. He said the senior citizens had outgrown the single-story structure, but would not comment on what the city's future role might be.

Councilman Walter Peterson said it is too early to discuss details, but said he does not anticipate the city not participating in the program.

"At the present time I'd rather not comment on it. There's just nothing. I'd rather not comment," Councilman Floyd Taylor said of future city participation and the possibility of moving the center.

Councilman Norman Nelson said there has been some discussion of taking over a building in Burley just vacated Sunday by the Mormon Church because it is a larger building and has kitchen facilities.

Councilman Garth Payne also noted, "It is just discussion at this point. Nothing formal has ever come before council. But the building is apparently too small for their needs. I don't know what the city responsibilities would be, if any. I'm not sure the city has a legal responsibility to provide a facility."

George Mitchell, treasurer and board member of the senior citizens group, said he has only heard rumors of a move. The group would not protest moving from the building they refurbished four years ago, he said. "Not if we can get something better."

Mitchell said the center is crowded at times, pointing out there were 175 persons in the building last Friday to meet and have a meal together. There are 300 active chapter members, he estimated, and visitors sometimes drive from Malta, Albion and Oakley to attend functions.

Elizabeth McIntyre

JEROME — Elizabeth M. McIntyre, 89, Kalspell, Mont., former Jerome resident, died Friday morning in a Kalspell hospital.

Born May 18, 1888, in Hungary, she was educated there and moved to the United States at the age of 14.

She married John P. McIntyre in 1908. They had two children.

She moved to Idaho in the spring of 1910 where they farmed. Mr. McIntyre died July 5, 1943.

Mrs. McIntyre continued to farm until she retired in the spring of 1957. At that time she moved to Twin Falls. Ten years later she moved to Billings, Mont., and then to Kalspell four years ago. A member of the Catholic Church, she was a member of the St. Matthew's Catholic Church in Kalspell. Graveside services will be conducted at 1 p.m. Friday in the Jerome Cemetery by Rev. T.A. Heenan.

Friends may call at Bird Funeral Home Thursday evening and until noon Friday.

Dorothy Colton Frazier

TWIN FALLS — Dorothy Colton Frazier, 60, Twin Falls, died Tuesday at Magie Valley Memorial Hospital.

Born Dec. 14, 1917, in Portland, Ore., she graduated from Whitman College in Walla Walla, Wash. She came to Twin Falls in 1949 and married Mr. A. Frazier June 8, 1941, in Twin Falls.

Mrs. Frazier was a member of the Methodist Church, Chapter 85 of the PEO Society, Twentieth Century Club, Kappa Kappa Gamma Sorority Alumni and at one time was active in Camp Fire Girls and Job's Daughters. Surviving besides her husband are two daughters, Judy Livingston, Seattle, Wash., and Linda Ouzreun-Chicago, and two grandsons. She was preceded in death by one daughter.

Memorial services for Mrs. Frazier will be conducted at 2 p.m. Friday in White Mortuary Chapel by Rev. Robert VanNest.

The family suggests memorials be made to an organization of the donor's choice.

Helen S. Arellano

HAMMETT — Helen S. Arellano, 73, Hammett, died Monday in a Mountain Home nursing home.

H&W job turnover rate 30%

The department has begun conducting a survey of all personnel that leave the department to find out why they are leaving, Henderson said.

The survey is not being conducted because the director views the attrition rate as a major problem, but because "I want to insure working conditions are as positive and beneficial as I can make them," Henderson said.

The survey is a part of a larger plan to improve relations between employees and administrators, he said. Relations have not been bad in the past but "there's always room for improvement," he said.

Three of the five employees who resigned this year have already returned questionnaires. Henderson said the department will try to reach employees who resigned earlier, "when time permits."

Buhl drops Jerome in A-2 district finals

Not a chance, just trying

LONG-REACH of Jerome's Karl Emerson got him in trouble with a foul as he tries to stop Buhl's Terry Clayton on a field-goal attempt Tuesday night. Buhl dropped Jerome 74-58 to claim the district A-2 cage championship.

TWIN FALLS — Jim Smutny and Vince Hamilton provided the early punch and Roland Hansen took over in the third quarter Tuesday night to pin Buhl past Jerome 74-58 in the final of the fourth district basketball championship.

The victory carries with it the lone berth available in this area in the state A-2 playoffs which open March 9 at the Idaho State Reed gymnasium. Buhl is slated to go against the third district runner-up at 7 p.m. in the first round of the meeting.

It was Buhl's fourth straight victory of the season over Jerome and this one appeared to come the easiest. The Indians rushed into an early 12-2 lead and led throughout although, true to their reputation, the Tigers refused to be blown out until the late third and early fourth quarter. Even then the final margin was the skinkest Buhl had over the last four minutes of the game.

Hamilton, who turned into a scoring whiz in the tournament last week, picked up the string in the early going and swished 12 of his 16 points in the first half on baseline jumpers ranging from eight to 20 feet.

Smutny, who took scoring honors with 20 points, was pretty consistent throughout. In the third quarter, Hansen, pretty well ignored offensively through the first half by his teammates, started getting the ball inside and he ran in nine points in the third quarter to stem any second-half hopes Jerome may have harbored.

Smutny hit six and Hamilton four of Buhl's first 12 points before Jerome coach Pat Hoke called a time out to rally his charges. Immediately after the Tigers came up with a five-point play on two free throws for a shooting foul, another charity for a technical foul and a field goal by Jeff Sauer off the in-bounds throw-in. Kent Thibault added another field goal as Buhl reduced the deficit to three but then Allyn Reynolds clicked off two field goals and Jerome was never closer than seven again.

Hamilton and Smutny guided Buhl into an 11-0 lead at 2:18 early in the third quarter and at one point the Buhl advantage stretched to 13 points. But Adams hit eight points and Kerley added a late bucket to put the Tigers back to within eight at intermission.

Hansen opened the second half with an inside shot and after Dennis Christensen replied for Jerome, the Indians got unanswered points from Hamilton, Reynolds and Hansen — the held that 15-point lead a short time later with Jerome inching back to within 13 at the rest.

The early fourth quarter was all Buhl as Smutny rejoined the firing line with Hansen the Indians marched ahead 61-46, then 63-46 on two Hamilton free throws. Smutny and Hansen kept things going with two points each, cresting the Buhl lead at 67-46 and the Indians coasted in.

In the Jayvee portion of the tournament, Buhl's sophomores downed Wood River 54-41 for the championship while Gooding won Jerome 58-33 for consolation honors.

Over reaching his territory

THUMPED from behind, Buhl's Roland Hansen picked up a three-point foul and Jerome's Jeff Sauer got the play. Action came Tuesday night when Buhl was beingaling Jerome 74-58 in the A-2 district finals.

Pirates tip Trojans to gain A-4 finals

BURLEY — The Hagerman Pirates jumped into a first-quarter lead and prey much held it Tuesday night when they defeated Raft River 60-51 and moved into the finals of the fifth district A-4 basketball tournament.

The Pirates — will go against undefeated Murtaugh at 8 p.m. Wednesday for a possible final time. Should Hagerman win, however, the same two teams will rematch for an extra game at 8 p.m. Thursday at the Burley high school gymnasium. Wednesday will mark the fourth time the two teams have met this season with Murtaugh holding three victories, one easy, one close and the other in overtime.

Hagerman proved too tall for the hustling Trojans who tried to stay in the game on hustle but couldn't dent a six-point deficit once Hagerman had opened that up.

Hagerman took the lead at 18-12 in the first quarter and pushed that to 31-20 by intermission, thanks to the consistent scoring of Ted Choules. Raft River hung within eight over the third quarter and early in the fourth period pulled to within six.

But Ted Choules then came up with four field goals to let Hagerman turn back the Raft River bid. In the final period Hagerman scored 21 points against Raft River's 20 to establish the final margin.

In Jayvee action, the Hagerman sophomores dropped Oakley 41-39 for consolation honors while Raft River was eliminating Hansen 43-35. Raft River will go against Castledale at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday for the Jayvee championship.

TF and Minico gird for tourney rematch

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Bruins host the Minico Spartans at 8 p.m. Thursday in a rematch of the region III A-1 tournament opener — but this time there's no error of margin.

The loser of the matchup starts thinking about track and baseball while the winner turns its attention to the undefeated Burley Bobcats and a trip to state Friday.

The last time the two teams met at Twin Falls in the regular season finale, Minico took home a two-point decision. But Twin Falls earlier had avenged an 18-point loss on the Spartan home court by nipping Minico in the tournament opener.

Which team was this one will be home Friday night when the Bobcats come to call. However, Burley needs just one win to sweep up its first trip to state in 16 years while its challengers will have to win both Friday and Saturday.

So far both teams can pin their tournament setbacks to "big man" troubles. Minico lost top scorer-rebounder Quinn Heppworth to fouls over the last three minutes in its loss to Twin Falls in the tournament opener and that had to hurt. Against Burley, Twin Falls saw Dave Nutting, off to a good scoring and rebounding start, sprain an ankle and miss all but about 10 minutes of the game. Leading scorer-rebounder, 6-5 Randy Kolar, was plagued by fouls and played only 16 minutes of that contest.

But Bruin Coach John Astorquia isn't worried about fouls right now. He's worried about the flu. He called off Tuesday's practice because four players, Kolar, Chris Meyerhoeffer, Dave Wetter and Robb Newell, missed the day's school with flu. A couple of the other players reported filling punk.

"It's a great time for flu, isn't it?" Astorquia asked. "Even if the boys are capable of playing well Thursday night, they're bound to be weakened by it and we would have to play three nights in a row to win it."

Former investigator hits NCAA tactics

WASHINGTON — A former investigator for the National Collegiate Athletic Association has told congressional probes the powerful sports organization is tyrannical and capricious and ignores violations by popular coaches and schools while cracking down on mavericks.

The charges against the NCAA were leveled Monday by Brent Clark during hearings before the House subcommittee while it reviews the association's actions while overseeing college athletics.

The hearings are being held at the request of Rep. Jim Santini, D-Nev., who became angry when the NCAA placed two Nevada universities on probation.

Clark told the panel the NCAA's chief enforcement officer once offered a basketball player a pro tryout to cooperate in an investigation, and another investigator withheld charges against an athlete when provided "the services of a young lady."

Clark said universities justifiably fear the NCAA because the organization punishes mavericks and enters to the establishment. He said Mississippi State, being somewhat of an outsider, is a typical target.

Clark said he found "likely" illegal recruiting activities at Ole Miss "at least as serious" as those that led to probation for Mississippi State. But Mississippi State had shown itself to be a maverick by seeking court relief from NCAA sanctions.

He said his superiors told him to "switch gears" — ignoring possible Ole Miss recruiting violations to develop as much damaging information as possible against Mississippi State.

"In the end, Mississippi State lost its court case and, in my view, has good cause to be nervous about the next time it encounters the NCAA enforcement machinery," Clark said.

Gooding mulls athletic future decision

TWIN FALLS — Gooding high school is in the throes of making the decision of which way it will take its athletic program next year.

The Senators have shrunk to A-3 size and are eyeing the possibility of going that way as soon as next basketball season.

Basketball Coach Jay Durfee said "it's a matter of record that Gooding has been in the A-3 classification ever since the reclassification. That first year our enrollment was something like 367 and the superintendent Jim Muscat reported it to the state at 376 but something like that."

"Since then we've been in that classification (by enrollment with a maximum of 475 frosh through seniors) but we've stayed up in the A-2 classification. The board is looking at the situation. It called in all the high school staff to get their feelings. I know that John (Billetz, football coach) said he would prefer going A-3 because he just isn't getting enough bodies out to play with the biggest schools in the SCIC. I told them," Durfee said with a smile, "that it really didn't matter that much to me. You either have to beat Buhl or Gordon Brown (at Glens Ferry). You don't have to be around the district 20 years like I have to know where the problems are on both sides."

"Similarly, Wood River high school also reports dwindling attendance and might be moving into the A-3 classification soon. Wood River, through consolidation with Bellevue and then the influx of population in the Wood River valley, grew out of the A-3 classification it traditionally had been.

Hence, there is a possibility that Maple Valley's largest conference may soon be the Canyon Conference, which at one time had dwindled to five member schools.

LARRY HOVEY

Since any decision made on the matter now won't become fact until after Oct. 10, it would appear that Gooding is locked into an A-2 football situation this season.

In the wake of the brief melee that followed the Ricks-CSI basketball game at Rexburg recently, it was reported here that Ricks was preparing to register a complaint and bring charges against CSI. The Ricks investigation, that school said, indicated that CSI guard Dave Ferguson had precipitated the only if you could get something in the back of the head.

Asked about that, Ferguson shrugs "only if you could get something in the back of the head. I was out there about midcourt when the game was over and started toward the dressing room. I was hit in the back of the head by this big dude. Yeah, I got in a couple of swings and hit him once on the side of the head. Then a bunch of Ricks people started tackling the guy and I took off for the dressing room. I would doubt if Ferguson adds away, "that it was going to start something like that I would try it on someone 6-9 and 200 pounds."

"Mel Reynolds—the coach of the Robert Stuart frosh basketball team, no longer poohs late night thoughts.

Reynolds has a pretty spiffy lunch this year that has far surpassed folks pretty well. But Coach Reynolds worried about the day that someone might try a showdown against this zone-defense, fast break offense alignment.

"I was thinking about that one night in bed when I couldn't get to sleep and dreamed up this defense," he reports. "I put it into our defense the next night at practice and the other day when a team looked to me like it was going to try the slowdown I had the kids go to it (the new offense)."

"You know," Reynolds adds with a smile, "it worked just as well on the floor as it did in bed."

Harking back to the R and T Steel Junior college basketball tournament here in December, "You'll recall we reported to you that the Snow College coach was banished from the game by the officials, that under the direction of Steve Erickson of Casper, an NCAA official, the coach's action was reported to Hutchinson headquarters and Snow and his coach were put on a one-year probation as a result. Okay, you've got all that."

A couple of weeks ago, Darrell Ogden, who officiated here that night, and Frank Urquien were assigned by the ICAAC to work the Snow at Ricks game. Snow, of course, wasn't overjoyed with the prospect of seeing Ogden again and asked if other officials could be assigned the Rexburg game. The answer was no unless Snow paid the officials assigned to the game.

So a couple of days after Ogden and Urquien spent the night at home in Rupert, they each received 50 checks from Snow College.

"I told them I'd take all those kind of assignments," he says, "give me," Urquien laughs.

Palmer one of Weaver's biggest boosters

MIAMI (UPI) — Jim Palmer is built along the general lines of a whipper, but he's more like a bulldog. He never lets up, especially on Earl Weaver, who always bites right back.

"You gonna become complacent now that you've got a new three-year contract?" Palmer needed his boss five minutes after checking into the Baltimore camp.

Weaver never so much as batted an eye.

"Gonna be the opponent?" "I'm gonna make those two mistakes I made last year."

That stopped Palmer, but only for a second. "You forgot one," he said, and they both laughed.

Palmer and Weaver go back and forth at each other like that all the time. They've been doing it now for nearly 10 years and if either stopped, the other one probably would brood about it.

They don't go out water skiing together and you wouldn't exactly call them boom-buddies, but underneath all the give and take, there's not only a genuine mutual affection but a sincere mutual respect as well.

Palmer readily recognizes the fact that Weaver may be the best manager in the major, having won three pennants, five division titles and one world championship since taking over the Orioles nine-and-a-half years ago, and Weaver feels Palmer is the best pitcher in baseball and will show you his record to prove it.

Nobody can downgrade Palmer to Weaver and the same thing goes the other way around.

During the course of the season, Weaver batters from the bench so much, he frequently comes up hoarse. Right now, he's in good voice. Spring training is young yet. Give him a little time.

Weaver is always thinking about something.

When Palmer told him he had forgotten one of the mistakes he made last year, he was kidding him, and Weaver realized it, but he still tried to figure out who else Palmer had in mind.

"I made a lot of mistakes," he said, lighting a cigarette at his desk following an Orioles workout. He began thinking of a few.

"I walked someone to get at (Larry) Hise and then brought in (Scott) McGregor, a left-hander, to pitch to a right-hander," he recalled. "Boy, was that a mistake."

Weaver got up from his desk and walked over to the refrigerator the Orioles keep in the room where he and his coaches dress. He got a can of beer and snapped off the cap, sitting down again. Weaver talked about last year and how his 30-name Orioles started trying by the remarkable 10: they made four consecutive winning streaks, only three less than the World champion Yankees.

"I'd like things to go as smooth as they did last year, and win five more," he said.

"The day after we were eliminated last year, I told the players in Boston that the way they played was going to get me recognition, and I got more than I deserved. They did the job. They made it easy. I wasn't the one who hit Gaylord Perry, Nolan Ryan or Bert Blyleven, they did it. If they hadn't done it, I would've looked like a dummy."

What was most gratifying to him, Weaver said, was the way the baseball judgement, because it was the Orioles who were vindicated by what the Orioles did last season.

"Hank got the 40 players on the roster and my coaches and I sat down and picked out the best 25 that we felt could compete in the American League," he said. "Nobody believed it, but after 97 wins, we satisfied our feelings as far as our baseball judgement was concerned. Again, the players had to do it on the field, and the fact that they did can't help but make you feel good."

Weaver doesn't have bows too often. He rates one though, one thought, Mike Flanagan, the 27-year-old left-hander from Manchester, N.H., who was drafted with the Orioles in 1976 and insisted on a five-year contract last spring.

"How good is this guy?" Peters asked Weaver before signing Flanagan.

"I think he can become another (Mickey) Lolich," answered the Orioles manager.

By June 26, Flanagan's record was 2-8, leading Weaver to meet with his coaches.

"Were we wrong on this guy?" he asked them.

They all said no, and they were right because Flanagan won 13 of his 16 decisions to wind up a 15-game winner and compensate for the loss of Wayne Garland, who had gone over to Cleveland for more than $2 million as a free agent.

Duke's resiliency keys ACC tourney

GREENSBORO, N.C. (UPI) — When last seen, the Duke Blue Devils were limping from the floor after suffering a devastating loss to sub-ranked North Carolina that ended their strongest bid in 10 years for an Atlantic Coast Conference regular-season basketball championship.

How real Duke's snags back from Saturday's snafu that gave the Tar Heels their first straight ACC regular-season title could be one of the biggest factors in the outcome of the league's tournament, which opens today in Greensboro with Duke ranked alongside the Tar Heels as tournament favorites.

"I think we're in good shape both mentally and physically going into the tournament," said Duke coach Bill Foster. "It was a pretty hard loss, but we haven't had two consecutive losses all year."

The tournament's first round begins at 3 p.m. at the Greensboro Coliseum with the Blue Devils (20-4) meeting Clemson (15-17). At 7 p.m., North Carolina State (18-8) takes on Maryland (14-12) while Virginia (20-8) meets Wake Forest (18-9) in the 9 p.m. game. Top-seeded North Carolina has a bye in the tournament's first round.

At stake in the tournament is a bid to the NCAA Eastern Regional's first round playoffs in Charlotte March 11 to meet the Southern Conference champion. The tournament pressure is clearly on Duke, since North Carolina is virtually assured an at-large bid after winning the regular season title.

"I don't play and at our best games ever," said Duke's Mike Gminski, the league's premiere scorer. "Losing the regular season race should make us just that more determined to win the championship. I think we'll be as ready as we can be."

The winners of Wednesday's games will play a semi-final round Thursday night, with the nationally televised championship game scheduled for 4:30 p.m. Saturday.

While the Blue Devils are highly optimistic, Clemson coach Bill Foster recalls his Tigers tied two straight ACC tournament games on Duke. "We're here with a smile on our face," said Foster, whose team is on probation and thus ineligible for an NCAA playoff berth. "There's no pressure on us. As a matter of fact, we're about in the same situation Virginia was when they won it two years ago. I'll tell you something when the tournament starts strange things happen. There won't be any pressure at all on us."

Tar Heel coach Dean Smith expects the tournament to be just as wide open as the season itself, and according to Smith, it's been pretty wide open all year, ever to win the regular season championship, said Smith. "We want the tournament championship pretty bad. It's one of our goals. Duke has to be a favorite, but I think we've surprised if any one of the teams wins it."

The Tar Heels' injury situation seems to have improved. The team's second-leading scorer, Mike O'Koren, who was clearly rusty Saturday after being out of the lineup from Feb. 12 to Feb. 25, worked out Monday by running laps in an attempt to get back in shape.

South African declines to participate in Davis cup play

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — Black-American tennis player Arthur Ashe applauds South African Ray Moore's decision against competing in the Davis Cup matches next month, but says his friend may face a backlash when he returns home.

"He has to go home one of these days," Ashe said Tuesday after Moore denounced his country's apartheid policies. "He's a white South African and it's a very momentous decision."

A coalition of civil rights groups has threatened massive demonstrations at Vanderbilt University in Nashville March 17-19 when the South Africans play the U.S. team.

Moore, in Memphis for the U.S. National Indoor Tennis Championships, announced his decision after losing his first round match.

"I am a South African and I tend to remain one," Moore said in a news conference after losing his first round in the tournament. "I neither embrace nor endorse the policy of apartheid. However, I do resent the interference of politics in the Davis Cup."

Reading from a prepared statement, he said "in particular, I wish to play no part in a situation which threatens to turn a sporting event such as the USA-South African Davis Cup into a political demonstration."

"I, therefore, withdraw my

Moore refused to answer any questions and said it would be "at least two years" before he discussed the issue again.

Ashe, who was forced to withdraw from the Indoors Tuesday with vision problems, said he and Moore discussed South African apartheid "as friends."

"I think what he did today was the best thing for Ray Moore as a person," Ashe said.

"Ashe plans to be in Washington for another tournament during the Davis Cup competition, saying he could not "in good conscience" play against South Africa. He said he supports any demonstrations at Nashville, as long as they are peaceful.

The 1975 Wimbledon champion criticized other South Africans—particularly golfer Gary Player—who have not spoken out against their country's racial policies.

"Anyone who says sports and politics are not related is guilty of the worst form of naivete," Ashe said. He said Player was one of those who "cop out" and tries to avoid the issue.

Moore, a South African junior titleist, has played in his native country since he was 15 years old. He first represented his country in the Davis Cup matches in 1967.

Randle calls off brief retirement

St. Petersburg, Fla. (UPI) — New York Mets third baseman Lenny Randle reconsidered his contemplated retirement Tuesday and called Manager Joe Torre to say he would report on time Wednesday.

"He didn't say why he had changed his mind and I didn't ask him why," Torre said. "I'm just glad he's coming. He's a fine ballplayer and I want him on my club."

"I think Lenny has had a lot on his mind the last few weeks but hopefully everything will be okay when he gets here."

While Randle was calling Torre, his agent, Gary Walker, was calling Mets' General Manager Joe McDonald to advise him that the third baseman had called off his plans to try and renegotiate his contract.

"I believe in the sanctity of a contract," Walker said, "but I don't think there is anything nefarious or evil in trying to renegotiate."

Randle, who signed a five-year contract with the Mets last April after he had been suspended by the Texas Rangers for punching Manager Frank Lucchesi, wanted a three-year extension on his current contract.

"He was asking for double his current salary," McDonald said, "plus a $100,000 bonus for signing and another $35,000 salary advance, interest free."

The Mets, who had raised Randle's salary during the 1977 season, rejected the renegotiation attempt.

Randle was the Mets' leading batter last year with a .303 average and set a club record with 33 stolen bases.

Moore refused to answer any questions and said it would be "at least two years" before he discussed the issue again.

Ashe, who was forced to withdraw from the Indoors Tuesday with vision problems, said he and Moore discussed South African apartheid "as friends."

"I think what he did today was the best thing for Ray Moore as a person," Ashe said.

Metro Seven opens post-season action

CINCINNATI (UPI) — A tripleheader gets the Metro Seven Conference post-season basketball tournament started with a bang Thursday, as only top-seeded Florida State gets the day off.

The Seminoles, who sport a 22-4 record and are ranked 11th in this week's UPI ratings, enjoy a first round bye thanks to their regular season league title.

Thursday's three-game card at Riverfront Coliseum opens with Memphis State favored over St. Louis at 12:30 p.m. (EST). Louisville is a solid choice to whip Tulane at 7 p.m., but hometown favorite Cincinnati figures to have a tougher time against Georgia Tech in the 9 p.m. nuptial.

The semi-finals are scheduled Friday night, with the Memphis State-St. Louis winner playing the Louisville-Tulane survivor at 7 p.m. and Florida State debuting at 9 p.m. against the Cincinnati-Georgia Tech victor.

The championship game will be played Saturday at 9 p.m., with the winner receiving an automatic bid to the NCAA tournament. And, a strong touring showing by one or two other teams could merit an at-large NCAA berth.

Although tourney host Cincinnati was a pre-season conference favorite, the Bearcats suffered a mid-season slump and are now only regarded as darkhorses.

Louisville, the only club to place two players on the all-conference first team — Rick Wilson and Darrell Griffith — figures to be Florida State's stiffest challenger.

Cardinal coach Denny Crum doesn't think Florida State's top seed means much. And, he has the two-year history of the tourney to make his point. Louisville was top-seeded in both previous Metro tournaments — and the Cardinals lost both times.

"The past two years I thought there was some advantage to only playing two games, but each time we've gone in seeded first, the other team has played its best game," says Crum. "So, I don't think that's much of an advantage."

And, Georgia Tech coach Dwane Morrison says the same.

"Anything can happen in a sudden-death tournament," he notes. "We feel our chances are good no matter who we're paired against."

Tech is paired against Cincinnati, which faces its own mid-season slump.

WHO SHOULD GET BONNEVILLE'S POWER?

How should the Bonneville Power Administration divide the power that it sells? Should BPA continue selling to its present customers? Should BPA sell to new customers? What about industries?

WHO GETS BPA POWER NOW?

BPA currently contracts for the sale of firm power with 115 preference customers (public bodies and cooperative utilities), 6 Federal agencies, and 17 direct-service industrial (DSI) customers in the Pacific Northwest. These contracts will expire between 1981 and 1994.

BPA has given notice to its current preference customers that it won't have enough firm power to supply their load growth after July 1, 1983. There is also a strong interest in the formation of new public bodies to qualify as BPA preference customers. With these demands on its firm power supply, BPA does not anticipate being able to continue its present service to DSI customers when their contracts expire.

BPA realizes that, with the increasing demand, it is advisable to develop a formula to allocate its power. BPA will consider many alternatives and variables. We expect to consider: class of customer served, customer-owned generation, type of load, grades of energy, rates, energy conservation, and other matters.

WE WANT YOUR IDEAS

If you have ideas concerning how BPA should divide its power, we would like to hear from you in writing by May 1, 1978. Next year, after assessing your recommendations and analyzing the alternatives, BPA will announce a proposed allocation policy and conduct public information and comment forums to hear from you again.

Send your written recommendations to the Public Involvement Coordinator, Bonneville Power Administration, P.O. Box 12999, Portland, Oregon 97212. For further information, write to the above address or call 503-234-3361, Ext. 4715.

CSI faces similar teams in regional tournament opener

TWIN FALLS—College of Southern Idaho will be playing a team very similar to itself Friday night when the Eagles travel to Coeur d'Alene for the regional basketball tournament.

The opponent will be Lane Community College of Eugene, Ore., which matches up physically with CSI and philosophically with CSI.

Their forwards carry the burden of scoring. It appears since they run one-two in average. At center CSI is a little taller with Orlando Bryant in the lineup and at guard Lane holds a slight edge.

Lane's top gun is 6-5 forward Steve Halverson who is averaging 19.7 points per game with 6-6 forward Bill Schaefer seconding him at 15.0. The Lane center is Keith Baltzer who is 6-7 and weighs 215 pounds.

At guard are 6-6 Pat Fendel who is supposedly the quarterback of the outfit and his running mate is 6-3 Roger Bates.

Lane also is similar to CSI with a record right at 25-5 against the Eagles' 26-5.

The information that I was able to glean from phone interviews they are a medium tempo team that doesn't have to use the fast break to score on the basis of what I've heard. I would guess this will be a game of similar tempo.

Cowhittell said.

"Certainly we are going to Coeur d'Alene with the knowledge that we could be beaten in the first game. Lane won two out of three games with Central Oregon and we know that Central is capable of playing well enough to beat us, at least shooting well enough.

Lane beat them 76-66 in the playoff for the conference title and that's about the spread we beat Central on our home floor. So the possibility is there."

"Similarly, we can not assume that we automatically will be playing North Idaho for the championship if we win the Friday game. I can see where if North Idaho gets into a running game with Central or tends to overlook Central toward Saturday night's championship game, Central Oregon could beat them."

"Still, if I were Coach (Rolley) Williams I wouldn't want to trade my position. I like it (the tournament) at home and knows that two more wins could give them a trip to nationals—for the first time in his 17 years there. I'm sure Coach Williams will have his charges ready for a maximum effort both nights."

Pacers drop plans of drafting Bird

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI)—The Indiana Pacers have just about given up on making Indiana State star Larry Bird their top choice in this year's National Basketball Association draft.

"We're about ready to mark Larry Bird off our list," said Bobby Leonard, Pacers' general manager and coach. "He has said he's going to stay in school."

Bird, a 6-9 high-scoring forward, is only a junior in eligibility but is available for the draft because he graduated from high school four years ago. However, the ISU star said recently he is "right on target" toward a degree and plans to return to school next year.

Bradley will fire coach

Peoria Ill. (UPI)—Bradley University was expected to announce the firing of its basketball coach and the appointment of a new athletic director in a Thursday morning press conference.

Bradley plays at Indiana State Wednesday afternoon in a semi-final game of the Missouri Valley Conference tournament. Stowell was not available for comment Tuesday when it was learned Thursday's press conference would announce his firing.

There was speculation that Stowell, a 1950 graduate of Bradley, already was fired. He was named Missouri Valley Coach of the Year in 1973-74.

Suggested as possible successors to Stowell were Tony Yates, an assistant coach at Illinois, Jerry Sloan, an assistant coach of the Chicago Bulls, and Sherrill Hanks, coach at Quincy College.

Ron Ferguson, the expected replacement for former Bradley basketball coach Chuck Osborne as the school's athletic director, has been assistant basketball coach and assistant athletic director at Illinois State University.

Kodak cancels meet support

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (UPI)—The Eastman-Kodak Co. has decided to drop its sponsorship of the annual Kodak Classic college basketball tournament in order to venture into more consumer-oriented national events.

A spokesman for the University of Rochester, which announced the decision, said the annual holiday tournament has been renamed the Rochester-University Basketball Classic.

The spokesman said the University of Rochester basketball team, however, will not play in the tournament for at least the next two years "until it can play on a more even footing."

The Yellowjackets have been "outclassed" in recent classics sponsored by the Rochester-based photographic firm. They lost in the consolation game of this year's 14th annual tournament.

Although the University of Rochester hosted the tournament, Kodak was the primary sponsor.

K-State gridders convicted on rape

MANHATTAN, Kan. (UPI) — A jury of seven women and five men Tuesday convicted three former Kansas State University football players of raping a 19-year-old Topeka coed last spring.

The jury deliberated for 3½ hours. Defendants Ken Lovely of Dallas, Nate Jones of Chicago and Michael Woodfin of Topeka displayed no emotion, but several persons in the crowded courtroom wept.

The three remained free on bond, pending an appeal by their attorney, Charles Stapp. Stapp said his clients were awaiting a trial in the federal court in Manhattan.

Scott, in his closing argument, termed the trial a "racist prosecution."

"I did not think an all-white jury could reach a fair decision with black defendants," Scott said following the verdict.

Scott said the amount of pretrial publicity was too great for the defendants to receive a fair trial in Manhattan. An earlier motion for a change of venue on that ground had been denied.

Ilwaco County Attorney Dennis Sauter, who prosecuted the case, said he was "somewhat surprised" by the jury's verdict. "I guess in the end, it proved that the jury system always works."

Two other former players allegedly involved in the case testified for the prosecution during the trial. Kirk Boykin of Houston pleaded guilty to conspiracy to rape just before the trial began a week ago. He indicated that he might be given probation. Jerome Hollwell of Manhattan was granted immunity for his testimony.

Sauter, in his closing statement, recounted the testimony of the victim, saying, "she fought, she cried and she screamed the entire time."

He reminded the jury of Hollwell's testimony and said, "Do you think it's easy for that young man to get up on the stand and testify? He admitted his involvement because he had done something wrong."

Players' families plan combined suit

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (UPI) — The families of 10 victims of the University of Evansville basketball team's fatal charter flight last Dec. 13 have agreed to hire a New York law firm to bring suit on their behalf.

Dr. Donald Moon of Fairborn, Ohio, father of player Keith Moon and organizer of the group of families, said they decided to retain Kreindler and Kreindler, a firm specializing in aviation law.

Moon said the lawyers would determine amount and form of the legal action and when and where it will be filed after investigating several areas of possible negligence.

"I think it will be realistic," he said of the amount sought. "I think it will be fair and objective."

The DC-3 chartered from National Jet Services Inc. of Indianapolis crashed after takeoff from Evansville airport, killing all 29 persons aboard, including the 14-man basketball squad and its coach.

Moon said the families decided to band together for two primary reasons.

"Well, obviously there's strength in numbers," he said. "Also, there's no sense in having a duplication of effort. If we can hire the finest law firm in the nation to do investigative work, why duplicate it 10 times?"

North Park still No. 1

MISSION, Kan. (UPI) — North Park (Ill.) retained its top spot for the fourth consecutive week in the National Collegiate Athletic Association's final Division III basketball poll of 1977-78.

Coches Dan McCarrell's squad collected a unanimous 120 points. The first seven positions in the final poll remained intact.

Following North Park in order were Hamilton (N.Y.), 19-1, Scranton (Pa.) 21-6, Widener (Pa.) 22-4, Ashland (Ohio) 19-5, Central (Iowa) 20-3, and Humboldt (Calif.) State 16-9.

Kansas overpowers Colorado by 82-66

LAWRENCE, Kan. (UPI) — Center Paul Mokeski scored 11 points and pulled down a career-high 16 rebounds Tuesday night to lead fifth-ranked Kansas past Colorado 82-66 and into the semifinals of the Big Eight post-season tournament.

The victory upped the Jayhawks' record to 24-3 and propelled them into the semifinals Friday night in Kansas City against Kansas State, which defeated Oklahoma 52-44 in another first-round game.

Colorado scored just one basket during the first eight and one-half minutes of play to fall behind, 20-4, as Ken Koenige, Darrell Johnson and Clint Johnson scored for six points for Colorado.

Toney Ellis started to hit his long-range jumpers at that point and Colorado twice pulled to within 10 points, the second time at 37-27 following a 20-foot jumper by Bobby Rutledge.

But Brad Sanders came off the bench to hit six points in the final two minutes as Kansas outscored Colorado 11-6 to take a 48-33 terminal lead and insure the Jayhawks' berth in the 14th of 15 games at home this season. The only loss Kansas has suffered in Lawrence came at the hands of top-ranked Kentucky six games into the season.

Clint Johnson scored a season-high 16 points to lead Kansas while Rutledge also had 16 for Colorado.

Mokeski grabbed 12 of his rebounds in the first half, just four less than the entire Colorado team. The Buffaloes hit a meager 35 percent from the field in the opening minutes and the Jayhawks took advantage of all the missed shots to outbreed the Buffaloes 34-16. The 7-foot-1 Mokeski's previous high rebound game was 14 in a non-conference match earlier this year against Murray (Ky.) State.

Mokeski hit two baskets to help Kansas outscore Colorado 9-2 in the opening four minutes of the second half to push the Jayhawks 22 points in front. The game deteriorated into a ragged run-and-gun affair at that point with Rutledge scoring 14 points to keep the game respectable.

Nine Kansas players reached the scoring column although Johnson and Mokeski were the only two in double figures. Ellis added 14 points for Colorado, which lost its third straight game, 13 in 15 on the road and fell to 3-12 overall.

It was the ninth of 15 games this season, which captured the Big Eight regular season title with a 15-1 record.

KSU tops Oklahoma

MANHATTAN, Kan. (UPI) — Kansas State, led by the shooting of Mike Evans, Curtis Redding and Steve Soldner, capitalized on a poor shooting streak by Oklahoma and defeated the Sooners 52-44 Tuesday night in the first round of the Big Eight post-season tournament.

The win sets up the fourth meeting of the season between Kansas State and conference champion Kansas, which won the three previous outings, in Friday night's semifinals in Kansas City.

Oklahoma took a 24-20 halftime lead but the Wildcats, behind Evans, Redding and Soldner, came back to shoot a stinging 65.2 percent from the field and take control of the game.

The trio combined to hit the first four shots Kansas State attempted in the second half and Soldner connected on a 15-foot jumper with 12:58 remaining to put the Wildcats ahead for good at 38-34.

Evans led the Wildcats, now 17-10, with 14 points and Redding and Soldner each had 12. Senior guard Scott Langton helped in the second half with a five-minute burst in which he scored six points, came up with three steals and baited away five Sooner passes.

Oklahoma, which finished the season at 14-13, was plagued with cold shooting throughout the game. The Sooners hit only 35.1 percent from the field in the second half and were 38.8 percent for the game.

Missouri stuns Iowa State

AMES, Iowa (UPI) — Missouri senior Clay Johnson sunk a corner jump shot with four seconds remaining to give the Tigers a 65-63 upset victory in the first-round of the Big Eight basketball tournament Tuesday night.

Missouri pulled to an 10-4 early lead, riding on a 63 percent shooting spree in the first half as compared with ISU's 33 percent.

ISU stormed back early in the second half and took the lead for the first time at the midway point 51-49 after Andrew Parker had tied it at 47-47. The Cyclones could never get farther than four points ahead and Missouri scratched back and stuck close enough for the fatal shot.

Guard Larry Drew led the Tigers with 18 points followed by Johnson with 16. Parker led ISU with 17.

The loss ends ISU's season at 14-13 while Missouri advances with a 12-15 record.

Huskers trim Oklaks

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — Guard Brian Banks and center Carl McPhee combined for 40 points Tuesday night to lead Nebraska to a 71-63 non-conference season playoff victory over Oklahoma State.

The win advanced the Cornhuskers to the semifinal round of the Big Eight Conference playoffs at Kansas City, Mo. The Huskers are scheduled to meet Missouri, which eliminated Iowa State, in the first round of the playoffs.

Banks scored 22 points on eight field goals and six free throws, and McPhee scored 18 points and grabbed nine rebounds in beating Oklahoma State.

McPhee, however, game-high career honors went to Cowboy Mark Tucker, who hit for 31 points, including 11 of 11 free throws in the second half. Nebraska led from the start, holding an 11-point lead with three minutes to play in the first half and a 22-23 advantage at the half. The Cornhuskers held their biggest lead of the game at 60-47 with 6:33 to play.

what's what

J. M. Boyd

Three partners put together a business firm that required one of another of them to be the firm alternately much of the time. When all three were in town they decided each would be a vice president. But when any one of them was out on a sales trip; that one for the nonce would be the president. Theory was the top title would give leverage in negotiation. Actually, though, it was their private joke, and they claimed it worked to let them keep on balanced good terms with one another.

Only one out of five murder victims is killed by some body unknown to said victim. You see what this means, don't you? You're a lot safer hanging around with strangers.

In the North Temperate zone, the average person weighs more in September and less in February than in any other months, report the science boys.

YANKEE

Q. "Where'd we get the word 'yankee'?"
A. Argument continues over that. But some theory of word origin contend it came from Jan-kees, a disparaging nickname the New York Dutch used in reference to Connecticut English.

Q. "When did the British government issue postage stamps with paid advertising on them?"
A. In 1881, and 1887. The ads for Pear's soap were on the gummed sides.

Q. "What do savings accounts pay in the Soviet Union?"
A. From 2 to 3 percent.

GOLDFISH

How big the goldfish depends on how big its bowl is, that you know. But the question arises as to just why a small bowl tends to stunt the fish rather than a big pond lets them get larger. It's now believed that fish secretes a growth-inhibiting substance. Unusually, its potency is affected directly by how concentrated it is, highly so in a small volume of water, less so the larger the volume of water.

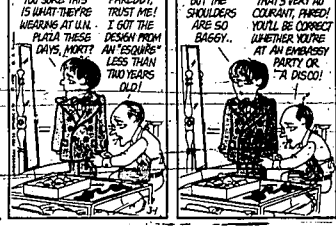

If Santa Claus were to light out from the North Pole by the most direct route, he could get to Tundra more quickly than to Los Angeles, and to Los Angeles more quickly than to Shanghai. Typical February time, this.

A cat in Fairbanks, Alaska, licked its paws-it shouldn't have-and when it put them on the cold bold ground, they froze there, stuck solid. A fireman freed the critter.
