

New teacher certification standards delayed

BOISE (UPI) — In an effort to avoid legislative rejection of new teacher certification standards, the State Board of Education voted Thursday to delay the effective date for one year to allow time for further study of problem areas.

The board is scheduled to meet Friday with the Senate Health, Education and Welfare Committee to discuss House Concurrent Resolution 41 which would declare "null and void" certain portions of the new requirements approved by the board one year ago and scheduled to become effective Sept. 1. The House approved the resolution 63-1 last week.

Superintendent of Public Instruction Roy Truby, who suggested delaying the effective date of the new secondary, elementary, and special education certification standards and guidelines until Sept. 1, 1978, said during the interim the standards would be turned over to the Professional Standards Commission for further review.

He suggested the review focus on provision for a fifth year or masters degree and provision for reinstatement of a lapsed certificate.

Miles Williams, administrator of the commission, agreed to the delay and told the board "We frankly went through all kinds of contingencies to try to salvage the standards if at all possible."

Board member John Swartley of Boise asked whether a one-year delay would be better, noting a one-year postponement might not make much difference "as far as the committee (HEW) is concerned."

But Dr. J.P. Munson of Sandpoint said the one year would give the board and the commission a chance to "get out and do a job of selling that we apparently haven't done."

He also said the board and commission might consider ways not to tie the fifth year or masters degree requirement so closely to other requirements.

On a motion of Janet Hay of Nampa, the board agreed to ask the State Department of Education to study the fiscal impact of the new requirements on school districts, which must consider the impact if teachers move upon salary scales by earning more college credit.

She also asked the office of the State Board of Education to study the fiscal impact on colleges and universities, which must prepare to provide the additional course work.

"The ones who are now in the classroom are not required to get a fifth year," she said, noting current teachers are covered by a grandfathered clause. "But they have to go back every five years to earn six credits."

She said some information suggested the fiscal impact will not be felt for about seven years and then it will be very minor.

Ian Smith, black leaders agree to transition plan

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI) — Prime Minister Ian Smith and three Black moderate leaders today signed an agreement to end 89 years of white supremacy and turn power over to the black majority Dec. 31.

The three-part document, signed under the glare of television lights, defied the threats of the Patriotic Front guerrillas and the misgivings of the United States and Britain who fear that without participation of the Front the agreement is doomed to failure.

The six-page agreement sets forth in simple terms the legal machinery to set up an interim government. Elections based on universal suffrage, a new constitution and safeguards for the white minority.

"What we have agreed to do is to bring in now an interim form of government, a transitional government which is the kind of half-way stage to the final step — rule by Rhodesia's 6.3 million blacks."

One of the black participants, the Rev. Ndabani Sithole, challenged the claim of the Patriotic Front that the five-year guerrilla war, which has so far claimed 8,000 lives, will escalate. The agreement, he said, was reached "on behalf of the people and the guerrillas."

If the guerrillas refuse to lay down their arms, "Well, we'll have to go on fighting against them," Smith said. "They will be fighting against a majority government and I just don't believe that they will receive the support of Rhodesians, black as well as white."

He again said Patriotic Front leaders Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe could take part in a settlement, the sole condition that they "forego terrorism."

In London, Foreign Secretary David Owen said it was "too early to celebrate" and that the agreement "will need careful study." Owen has said it would be impossible to hold free elections in Rhodesia if the guerrillas attack polling booths as they have threatened.

Senate confirms G. William Miller

WASHINGTON (UPI) — After two hours of debate, the Senate today overwhelmingly confirmed the nomination of G. William Miller to a four-year term as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board.

It was a voice vote, and the only "no" was called out by Banking Committee Chairman William Proxmire of Wisconsin.

The strong support of President Carter's nominee ended a lengthy investigation into Miller's economic qualifications and background. The Senate Banking Committee conducted an extensive examination of a $2.9 million payment made by Miller's company, Textron Inc., to a company in Iran.

Miller will succeed Arthur Burns as head of the Federal Reserve, a post which many financial experts consider the second-most powerful job in Washington: He will play a major role in controlling the nation's money supply and interest rates.

Proxmire, chairman of the banking committee, offered lengthy and at times emotional arguments against Miller.

Labeling Miller a "raw, outside amateur," Proxmire said that "the number of Americans better qualified to serve in this job is in the hundreds."

He charged that Miller did not have enough monetary experience for the job, that the Federal Reserve would be "under a cloud" of suspicion for months while the government investigates Textron.

"If my son was going to have brain surgery, I would not want the operation performed by a veterinarian," said Proxmire.

But other senators did not agree.

Sen. Adlai Stevenson Jr., D-Ill., said Miller's "reputation is without blemish."

"There is no evidence whatsoever to justify any suspicion," Stevenson added.

Day of joy for District of Columbia

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The District of Columbia's non-voting delegate to the House of Representatives wept with joy. District residents stood and applauded from the public galleries.

For the first time since the nation's capital city was created in 1790, at least one house of Congress had voted to give the district full congressional representation: two senators and two House members.

The 289-127 vote in the House came Thursday on a constitutional amendment, and work started immediately to expedite the measure in the Senate, which is expected to offer much stiffer opposition.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., said he would move to put the amendment on the Senate calendar and thus bypass the Judiciary Committee, where it could be blocked for the rest of the year.

Additionally, 17 senators, nine of them Democrats, urged their colleagues in a letter to support the amendment and put an end "to the long-standing and unjust second-class status of District of Columbia citizens in our government."

In addition to full representation, the measure would repeal the 23rd Amendment that limits the district's vote in the electoral college to three, and would permit the district to initiate and vote on constitutional amendments.

If the amendment gets the two-thirds vote needed in the Senate then it must still get ratified by three-fourths of the 50 state legislatures within seven years to become effective.

But for Walter Fauntroy, the man the district elected when Congress voted in 1970 to give the city a non-voting vote in the House, Thursday, March 2, was a day of emotional triumph.

"Your action today... reaffirmed my faith in the American people and in you," Fauntroy said, his voice choking. He wiped at his eyes and as his colleagues gave him a standing ovation he embraced Democratic leader Jim Wright of Texas and Rep. Peter Rodino, D-N.J., chairman of the Judiciary Committee, which drafted the amendment.

Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., manager of the measure, said it was "the major civil rights issue of this decade" and he was one of the few backers who predicted in advance it would pass.

"This will be a proud day for the House of Representatives," he said before the vote.

Rep. Caldwell Butler, R-Va., leading the opposition to the measure, offered a substitute that "would have limited representation to the House only. It lost on a head-count vote."

PUC deposit rules rejected by House

BOISE (UPI) — By an overwhelming vote of 81-19, the House approved Thursday a resolution rejecting the Public Utilities Commission rules on utility deposits and termination.

The resolution goes next to the Senate. If that body approves it the rules adopted recently by the PUC will be thrown out.

Proponents of the measure said state law already prohibits utilities from discriminating against customers and that it should be enforced. They also contended that the utilities should have the right to determine who is a good credit risk and to whom they must give service.

Opponents of the measure said the new rules simply require the utilities to prove a customer is a deadbeat before shutting off his service or refusing it without a deposit. They said present deposit requirements presume that 90 percent of the people are not to be trusted.

Winter keeps up its attack with snow and rain storms

By United Press International

The Winter of 1978, already the roughest on record in most of the country, struck again today with snow, rain and bitter cold weather throughout much of the United States.

Two men were killed and a third was presumed drowned Thursday after the three of them were swept away by raging waters of the Salt River near Mesa, Ariz. The men were on top of a land cruiser and the Arizona National Guard was beginning rescue operations when they were washed away.

Arizona Gov. Wesley Bolin declared a state of emergency and National Guard helicopters were used on more than one occasion to rescue residents stranded on rooftops of homes and industrial plants.

The rains began to subside in the southwest today but Bolin said the "three days" of rain and flooding "have caused extensive destruction" to many public facilities and have resulted in a condition of extreme peril to the health and safety of the citizens of the state.

Chicago's snowfall record climbed close to 80 inches for the winter. Snow fell throughout the night and officials said more than 100 trucks were used to salt streets before accumulations started Tuesday.

Hundreds of schools closed in the Midwest Thursday and three other winter-related deaths, including a 4-year-old from Kansas whose sled slammed into a skidding pickup truck, were blamed on the storm.

Intensifying as it moved eastward, the storm dumped up to 6 inches of snow throughout the northern Mississippi Valley and the Ohio basin as it cranked into the mid-Atlantic states.

The National Weather Service issued heavy snow warnings for the Northeast and winter storm watches for most of the country east of the Mississippi and north of South Carolina. It predicted snow for Southern Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Kentucky, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, western Maryland, Virginia and South Carolina, New Jersey and southern New York.

The storm was the sixth back-to-back of the season, which the NWS said Thursday was not only the stormiest but also the coldest for much of the country. It surpassed the bitter winter of 1977, which caused the most severe energy crisis to date.

In Virginia, the Lexington City Council summoned up the winter with a resolution asking its mayor to do something about it.

"Whereas in excess of 30 inches of snow has descended from the heavens upon our fair city of Lexington... and whereas the city government has spent in excess of $200,000 on snow removal... it shall therefore be resolved by the Lexington City Council that the mayor be authorized and directed to communicate in an official capacity to the proper authority the city council's wish that the dastardly, inclement weather desist forthwith."

But the mayor said he did not know who the proper authority was, and hours after the council passed its resolution, snow was falling in the northwestern Virginia city.

Soviets will set space record tonight

MOSCOW (UPI) — Two Soyuz 28 cosmonauts today maneuvered their capsule toward a docking with the Salyut 6 space lab, where two other Soviet cosmonauts were about to break the U.S.-held space endurance record.

Soyuz 28's international crew — Czechoslovakian Vladimir Remek, the first non-Soviet and non-American to be in space, and Russian Alexei Gubarev — were expected to dock with the space lab in a matter of hours.

The official Tass news agency said that as of 6 a.m. EST the Soyuz 28 crew was preparing for docking with the Salyut 6 space station, already occupied by Soviet 26 cosmonauts Yuri Romanenko and Georgy Grechko. Romanenko and Grechko were launched into space Dec. 10 and will equal the space endurance record, set by three American astronauts aboard Skylab 4 in 1974.

at 9:36 p.m. tonight.

The official Tass news agency said the flight opened a new era of joint space exploration by Soviet-U.S. cosmonauts.

Remek, 29, son of Vice Minister of Defense Josef Remek, was chosen for the flight from six candidates in the first group, which began a 10-to-12-hour daily training program at Star City near Moscow in December 1976.

The others, from Poland and East Germany, will make space flights later this year, Tass said.

Remek is the first non-American, non-Soviet spaceman.

The Intercosmos program was seen as a Soviet bid to reinforce its prestige in the communist world. The Soviets also are cooperating in scientific programs in space with France and India.

Radio Moscow interrupted a program of music to report the successful blastoff and national television showed films of the cosmonauts aboard the Soyuz capsule.

Tass said the Soyuz 28 cosmonauts will spend only a few days' aboard the Salyut, leaving Romanenko and Grechko to continue the space flight begun with blastoff Dec. 10 and docking Dec. 11.

Romanenko said he and Grechko welcomed the new arrivals because "we'll carry out interesting experiments together — and because they will bring us letters from our friends and relatives."

The Soyuz 28 cosmonauts carried an unprecedented first double docking with the Salyut. Jan. 11 and returned to earth six days later. They were followed by the robot Progress 1 capsule which linked up automatically Jan. 22, delivering fuel and other supplies to prolong the stay of the Soyuz 28 crew.

Angry farmers jailed in Texas

EDINBURG, Texas (UPI) — Striking farmers, jailed for blocking an international bridge over the Rio Grande, shouted through cell windows today they would accept no compromise for their release.

"No deals!" yelled from the more than 200 jailed farmers filled through his cell window after meeting with Texas Attorney General John Hill. "We can post bond if we want to, but we're not guilty."

Members of the crowd of 500 supporters cheered approval while others set about letting the air from the tires of police vehicles in the parking lot at the Hidalgo County Jail.

Hill met with the farmers for more than an hour inside the jail where they have been held since Wednesday on misdemeanor charges of obstructing a public road. All but a few of those arrested have refused to post bond of less than $20 each.

Hill did not explain the compromise, but local authorities did not want to drop the cases despite the farmers' demands.

"We hope by noon we can resolve this situation," Hill told reporters and farm strike sympathizers after negotiating with the farmers and local District Attorney Oscar Melimis.

During the negotiations, the crowd outside the jail waved state and American flags, pushed against the entrance to the building and chanted: "Let them out! Let them out!"

Many of the strike sympathizers called the arrest of the farmers at the bridge, that broke the farmers' blockade of the bridge between the United States and Mexico in a demonstration against importation of Mexican produce.

Spokesmen for American Agriculture, the group that has led the strike, said Thursday they thought the arrests would become a rallying point for strikers across the nation.

"We give thanks to McAllen, Texas, as we give thanks to the Alamo for ringing the bells that rallied the common people of America," said Arnold Paulson of Granite Falls, Minn., who was one of about 30 people who gathered outside the jail Thursday to protest the arrests.

The farmers contend the police were brutal in their use of teargas and night sticks to sink the blockade.

Hill said said there would be a complete investigation of the arrests.

"If we determine civil rights were violated I will make a recommendation to the Justice Department," he said.

Despite news reports and television film showing officers striking some farmers, Marmolejo said his men did not use excessive force.

"All I want to say is I'm standing behind my men," he said. "I'm glad nobody was hurt."

Retirement bill passed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Millions of Americans who now must retire at 65 soon may be legally entitled to work until 70.

House and Senate negotiators reached agreement Thursday on a bill to limit effect.

Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., 77, the chief author, said final approval is expected in a matter of days or weeks. And President Carter, who has endorsed the concept of the legislation, probably will sign it.

The bill would take effect Jan. 1, 1979.

but where mandatory retirement under 70 is part of a collective bargaining agreement, a company and union would have two years or the life of the contract, whichever is less, to comply.

For most federal workers the mandatory retirement age already is 70. The bill would remove that limit entirely Oct. 1, leaving no fixed upper age for these employees.

The negotiators included two main exceptions:

Business could continue mandatory retirement at 65 for employees in a "bona fide executive or high policy making capacity" and who would draw pensions of $2,000 or more without Social Security.

Colleges and universities could continue to make tenured professors retire at 65 until July 1, 1982.

Different versions of the bill were passed by the House 350-74 September and by the Senate 88-7 in October, but disagreement over the exceptions delayed conference agreement until this week.

Carter, Brezhnev may meet

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter said today he may have to meet with Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev to produce a final agreement on limiting strategic weapons.

Saying the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks are "now down to about 12 highly technical issues," Carter told a group of college students the time required has been much greater than we anticipated "to reach agreement on a pact."

"I had a meeting yesterday on the SALT negotiations," he said. "We are making good and steady progress on the issues — three or four of which are highly significant in their nature and will be difficult."

"My guess is that the negotiators will resolve most of these issues in Geneva and it will probably require a direct meeting or communications between myself and President Brezhnev," Carter said.

On another topic, Carter, a frequent critic of the Moscow-Havana military connection in Africa, told a questioner he "did not" "indicate any threats" to the United States from the Soviets through their Cuban allies.

Carter Thursday repeated comments by his national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, that Russian involvement in the Ethiopian-Somalian dispute could complicate chances for a final SALT agreement, particularly in gaining Senate ratification.

About 200 college editors attended the press conference.

Park denies he delivered bribes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Tongsun Park has testified under oath that Korean intelligence officials provided a list in 1975 of congressmen they wanted to influence, but he considered it "ridiculous because... I was doing that on my own anyway," UPI has learned.

A Korean real estate dealer emphatically denied to U.S. prosecutors, according to still-secret transcripts of his recent 17 days of testimony in Seoul, that he ever worked for the Korean government or delivered bribes on its behalf to congressmen.

"Whatever I did, I did in my own individual capacity, without any outside interference or instructions," he testified under an agreement providing immunity.

During the testimony Park submitted to some 25 live detector checks, the results of which have not been made public.

The indicted millionaire, now a witness in the alleged Korean bribery scandal in Congress, was asked to return today for more closed-door House ethics committee hearings. He said his testimony before the panel resembles the thrust of testimony in Seoul.

The Justice Department transcripts, portions of which were made available to UPI, showed that Park admitted receiving the Korean Central Intelligence Agency's so-called 1975 "Ice Mountain" plan.

Park said the document included a list of U.S. officials the Seoul government sought to influence.

Defeated Korean intelligence agents have told federal investigators of such a plan.

The one-time Washington socialite testified he did not take it seriously.

"I always made it a policy not to make (an) enemy out of anybody," he said. "I thought the whole thing was ridiculous because if I wanted to be helpful to anybody, especially in terms of enhancing relations between two countries, I was doing that on my own anyway."

Flu hits 24 states

ATLANTA (UPI) — The Russian influenza virus, showing a tendency to spare the general population in favor of young people in colleges, military installations and high schools, has spread to at least 24 states and two major metropolitan areas.

The national Center for Disease Control, in its latest flu surveillance report, listed seven additional states as large metropolitan regions since last week where Russian flu outbreaks have been reported.

In contrast to previous flu epidemics, the Russian influenza activity has been confined almost entirely to the campus and the training ground.

Tax-relief package remains alive

Special-election bill defeated in House

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. John V. Evans said today he has not closed the door on a legislative "going home" tax relief package, which includes a 4-mill reduction in the county school levy.

After meeting with the Senate Democratic leadership Thursday and informed of their general agreement with Senate Republicans on a tax relief package, Evans said, "We are a lot closer to what I view as acceptable."

Both parties in the Senate seem to be in agreement on a package including the 4-mill reduction and the House is taking a serious look at the proposals, although House Speaker Allan Larsen, R-Blackfoot, said he was reluctant to accept it without some assurances.

Larsen said he wanted assurance that the governor would not veto the 4-mill reduction or there would be sufficient votes in the Senate to override such gubernatorial action.

Evans' "United Press International he would have to wait and see if the other tax relief measures in the package were adopted and there was enough money to fund everything. But he did not close the door on the 4 mills.

He said, however, that he would like to see a contingency written into any mill levy proposal that if the money was not available, there would be no tax relief in that area.

Earlier this session, Evans vetoed an 8-mill school levy reduction and last session, put his stamp of disapproval on a temporary 3-mill bill.

But he said this year "we're in a different ballpark" when asked how he could sign a 4-mill bill when he vetoed one a year earlier.

"There are different circumstances this time around. There is more money available. Last year it didn't appear to be there and we would have to cut back on education funding."

The governor said if the 4-mill bill is passed, he will review it very carefully. It is a 4-mill levy, which would be what we began with — the 8-mill levy.

Evans said the current tax package being talked about gives broad-based tax relief.

In addition to a permanent 4-mill school levy reduction, the package also would include adopting the federal income deductions, doubling the circuit breaker for elderly homeowners and boosting the grocery tax relief for the elderly.

Total cost of the package would be $165 million, which probably would leave $34 million for other relief.

Legislative leaders indicated that the additional funds could be used to provide even further school levy reductions, but Evans said he would rather see it go for another temporary repeal of the 4-mill head tax, which the Legislature authorized last year on a temporary basis.

Evans also said he still disagrees with the legislative revenue projects. He said he felt the projections were $8 million too high.

Elsewhere on the legislative scene:

—The House approved and sent to the Senate legislation to increase bonded indebtedness and tax levying authority on regional airports.

—A Senate bill to substitute a retrial injunction for hanging in executions won House approval 40-27 Thursday, despite contentions it amounts to a mere slap on the wrist for a heinous crime.

A bill to permit sale of liquor by the drink next New Year's Eve went down the drain in the House 30-37.

—It took two tries to do it but proponents of a sales tax on hotel and motel rooms to help pay off auditorium district bonds talked the House into passing such a bill Thursday.

—Senate Republicans were successful in having returned to the State Affairs Committee Gov. John V. Evans' Rural and Domestic Power Authority Legislation for new changes.

—By a vote of 51-14, the Senate passed and sent to the House a bill providing zoning classifications can not be changed for 4 years after adopted.

—The House approved 51-19 a resolution rejecting the Public Utilities Commission rules on utility deposits and terminations.

BOISE (UPI) — After an hour-long debate the House voted 22-47 Thursday a bill to require a special election on annexation when 10 percent of those to be taking into the city ask for it.

Floor sponsor Wendy Unreicht, R-Boise, said the idea is not new — that 20 other states have such provisions in their laws. She said this simply would give those to be annexed a voice about whether they want to be.

"At this point a person to be annexed has no say as to what happens to his property," she said. "It's a people's bill!"

Rep. Linden Bateman, R-Idaho Falls, led the fight against the bill. He said it had a lot of merit but that he felt it should require a two-thirds vote of voters or voters to be annexed rather than a simple majority to block annexation.

Hitting the measure in the Senate, Rep. Herb Ellis, R-New Meadows, said it seemed to be too small a percentage to trigger an election. He said initiative and referendum petitions require 20 percent.

Rep. Gary Ingram, R-Coeur d'Alene, defended the bill. He said at present "it might make a difference."

"This is a democracy," Ingram said. "We don't bully people."

Rep. Gene Wachscher, R-Kuna, said legislation such as this would encourage cities to do a better job. He said some communities annex an area but take a long time to provide the city services for which those annexed are paying through their taxes.

House passes hotel, motel bill

BOISE (UPI) — It took two tries to do it but proponents of a sales tax on hotel and motel rooms to help pay off auditorium district bonds talked the House into passing such a bill Thursday.

Rep. Michael Gwartyner, R-Boise, urged passage of the legislation, saying it is a new concept that will help spread the load for financing auditorium facilities among more people. It would permit sales taxes on such rooms up to a total of 5 percent.

Gwartyner noted that earlier the House approved legislation to lower the authorized mill levy on property within auditorium districts to 2 mills from 5. He said the bill also will help bring in outside trade. He said the motel-hotel industry favors it.

But Rep. John Reardon, R-Boise, said he objected to the bill on grounds it opens the door for issuance of general obligation bonds. That, he said, he cannot support.

Rep. Carl Braun, D-Orofino, said he called six or seven motels Thursday morning and found not one of them in favor of the legislation. He said they favored only a broad-based tax.

Twin killings

BOISE — The House Local Government Committee Thursday killed two proposed constitutional amendments which would have, if approved, permitted counties to adopt optional forms of county government.

House Joint Resolution 7 and House Joint Resolution 9 were part of a packet of legislation introduced by Gov. John Evans at the start of the year. Evans said then the purpose of the proposed legislation "is to allow citizens of counties throughout the state to choose by ballot optional forms of county government which best serve their needs and desires."

Idaho is currently one of only seven states which requires the same form of government for all its counties. The Idaho Constitution specifies that each of Idaho's 44 counties must have a county commissioner form of government.

Both measures failed 75, after legislators said they had received little input from county officials who would be affected by the proposed amendments.

Rep. Tom Silvers, R-Twin Falls, who opposed both measures, also criticized the two amendments because they were introduced by the Governor, rather than at the request of county officials.

When the bill came up for a vote it went down 34-36. Rep. Patricia McDermott, D-Pocatello, successfully moved 39-23 to reconsider the vote and on the second try the bill passed 39-28. It goes now to the Senate.

During reconsideration of the vote by which the bill failed the first time, Rep. Walter Little, R-New Plymouth, expressed concern that it will open the door to alternate funding of other units of local government.

Senate OKs injections

BOISE (UPI) — A Senate bill to substitute a lethal injection for hanging in executions won House approval 40-27 Thursday, despite contentions it amounts to a mere slap on the wrist for a heinous crime.

Rep. Robert Hosack, D-Moscow, guided the legislation through the House, calling it a lethal injection one of the more advanced methods of capital punishment in use today. He said two states use this method while 17 use electrocution and nine use a gas chamber.

Arguing against the bill, Rep. T.W. Silvers, R-Twin Falls, said the present method of hanging has a "tremendous deterrent effect" against capital crimes.

House to consider zoning bill

BOISE (UPI) — Zoning classifications could not be changed for 4 years under a bill adopted 21-14 by the Idaho Senate Thursday and sent to the House.

Sen. James Leese, D-Pocatello, floor sponsor, said the measure provides that zoning commissions "give a little thought before the make snap decisions."

Soviets' high-priced gas a warning to US

Soviet drivers found an expensive surprise awaiting them when they pulled into the gas station this week.

The price of petrol in Moscow, Leningrad and other Soviet cities doubled overnight from 62 cents a gallon to $1.25 a gallon.

Apparently the western nations are not the only societies struggling to deal with an energy crisis.

The USSR produces more oil than any nation in the world, including Saudi Arabia. Word of the doubling of gasoline prices suggested to western observers the Soviets are finding it difficult to keep enough oil flowing from even their own stockpiles.

Their largest oil field, in the western Siberian province of Tyumen, apparently has reached its peak flow. The Samotlor fields produce 25 per cent of the Soviet oil and much of the oil used by Eastern Europe. With the Samotlor field now producing at peak capacity, the Soviets were forced to double the price of gasoline to finance exploration in other regions, and to encourage conservation by their drivers.

The price hike of Soviet gasoline should remind the United States once again that the energy crisis is not a mirage.

The Soviets estimate their oil reserves will begin to decline rapidly in the mid-1980s. The CIA already has suggested the USSR may be forced to start bidding on Middle East oil by 1985 in direct competition with the West.

If that day comes and the United States has not yet formulated a cohesive energy conservation policy and begun to rely on an energy supply other than Mideastern oil, tensions over who gets the Middle-East crude could reach the flash-point of international crisis.

The doubling of gasoline prices in the USSR is a warning to the West. The oil crisis is real, for us and our enemies.

Public Hearings needed on power-line location

A drive by the house of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Heglund at 6th Avenue North and 5th Street North in Twin Falls leaves little doubt about why the couple is upset with Idaho Power Co.

Towering over the Heglunds' well-kept yard is a 65-foot-high metal power pole.

The pole defines the word eyecore. It is twice as tall as a standard, wooden utility pole and cannot help but induce neck-cracking stares into the air much like a skyscraper on Manhattan.

Idaho Power planted the pole in front of the Heglunds' house while running a 138,000-volt line through the alleys and backroads of Twin Falls and out toward Idaho Frozen Foods.

Putting the pole in front of the Heglund house wasn't illegal because Idaho Power has a 99-year lease to use city right-of-way, including street corners, as they wish.

The Heglunds knew the company planned to use the corner plot for a power pole, but they had no idea the pole would be twice as big — and twice as ugly — as a standard pole.

So far, the city of Twin Falls has taken the position that it is powerless to stop Idaho Power from putting a powerline through town.

That isn't right.

Although the city has granted a right-of-way to Idaho Power, the city must retain some say over where poles are set and what kind of poles are used.

A 65-foot-high metal pole so near a private lot detracts from the property value of the lot and also diminishes the quality of an entire neighborhood.

In the future, perhaps the city should hold public hearings on Idaho Power's requests for new power lines through town.

Residents shouldn't look out their front windows, as the Heglunds did, and be surprised to see a monstrous transmission line pole in the front yard.

By MARY McGRORY... WASHINGTON — It was, officially, the third annual National Leadership Awards Dinner of the U.S. Citizens' Congress Education Foundation.

The Oscars went to an unlikely pair — President Anwar Sadat of Egypt, in absentia, and Sen. Russell Long, D-La., in person.

It was, in reality, an evening with Rabbi Korff. Rabbi Korff? Rabbi Baruch Korff? Richard Nixon's rabbi? It was none other.

He was everywhere. If they had been giving prizes for off-awards, he would have won it going away. He ordered senators around like pages. He steered speakers to the microphone, sighed when an admiral missed a cue and sat down too soon and hauled him back to the podium. He did everything but wipe the noses and straighten their ties.

Although he functioned as a kind of Jewish stage mother, he was also the star. After he had been onstage in one capacity or another for two hours, he was solemnly "introduced" by Little Sen. Carl Curtis, R-Nebr., last year's recipient of the U.S. Citizens' Congress Foundation Award, who pronounced the rabbi "a man of supreme joyalty."

He is also a survivor. You might have thought that in 1974, when Richard Nixon left town, Rabbi Korff might have gone, too, or at least gone underground, as do some who have backed the wrong horse.

You would be wrong. He didn't even drop a stitch. Out of the catapillar of the National Committee for Fairness to the Presidency, aka, as Curtis put it delicately, "at a time of national distress," came the butterfly of the U.S. Citizens' Congress, which is vaguely devoted to "the preservation of the traditional values."

The rabbi is its shepherd, and it shall not want. The price of the tickets ranged from $2,500 for sponsors (who included Henry Ford and the Gulf Oil Co., and, inevitably, Rabbi Korff) to $25 for people who just came for dinner. The take has not been counted, but the hall, a hearing room in the Dirksen Senate Office Building, was full.

The crowd summoned forth by the champion of the president, whose commitment to the free enterprise system was never in doubt, but whose contribution to the "traditional values" is included, a number of somewhat bewildered diplomats, some older folks wearing sweaters and the stunned glare of George Price characters, a smattering of liberals — Senators Jacob K. Javits and Abraham Ribicoff made the reception, whether out of deference to Russell Long or the rabbi is not known — a sizable turnout of retired generals and admirals and such regulars of the right-wing circuit as Anna Chennault and Tommy Corcoran.

The rabbi called on them in his commanding guttural. "Stand up, Admiral Turner. Vere are you, admiral?"

He was just as much in charge as on that torrid evening of July 19, 1974, when he quick-marched the White House staff to the head table of what turned out to be a death-waltz banquet where he was producer-director and star.

The only difference is that he now wears a beard, and he does not speak of Richard Nixon. He did not need to. Among the U.S. Citizens' Congress members present — it has 50,000 nationwide — Richard Nixon is a victim of what the rabbi used to call "the savage press."

Recent revelations have merely reinforced their anger. "That awful Hindeman," turned a woman clerk from the Department of Agriculture, "writting that kind of a book when you think of all the wonderful things he could have said about Nixon — how he ended the war and brought our prisoners home."

The rabbi does not look back. He is onto other things and, as usual, has had no trouble getting a foot in the door. He had a long, apparently earthy chat with Sadat in Cairo on Dec. 29. He shared some of their confidences with the audience. He commented on the tender age of Sadat's wife at the time of their marriage — she was 15. "He mated his own," said the rabbi slyly.

Then he briskly bade the senators and congressmen to come forward for the presentation of the "Pharaonic concept" which the Congress foundation is bestowing on Sadat. It was a large statue of a young woman with an exceptionally big dove perched on her arm. The rabbi impatiently ordered the legislators to hold the thing high. They strained like furniture movers.

The rabbi looked on indulgently and explained that it weighs 150 pounds.

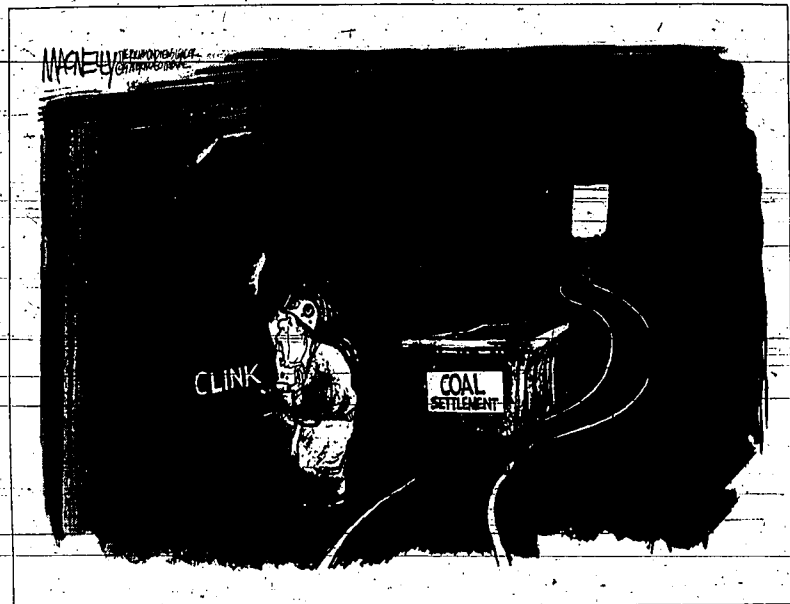

More fully, Sen. Long's trophy was a scroll which limned his virtues under a heading, "a man lives forever, or not at all — and a scholarship to be given at his alma mater, Louisiana State University."

The chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, looking as radiant as when he has crushed a welfare bill, acknowledged the honor in a defiant speech about his habit of passing bills that affect "only one taxpayer."

"The truth of this country is that we do have a very complex, dynamic and productive economy," he said, and everyone applauded.

The truth of the evening was that Rabbi Korff had proven once again that it doesn't matter if you're wrong — as long as you're preposterous enough to carry it off.

Hard-to-label '70s saw people change

© Chicago Daily News... CHICAGO — The 1970s have been a difficult decade to get a handle on. And one of the reasons is the way so many people have completely changed personalities. It has been like watching a procession of Jekylls and Hides.

White radicals of the 1960s, such as Kenzie Davis or Jerry Rubin, have become Dagwood Bumsteads, selling insurance or holding bureaucratic jobs in government. Once ferocious Black Panthers are designing lines of men's wear or studying accounting.

A sly politician who shames Charles Colson, who stalked the threats of White House enemies, now ventures Halleluja, thumps a Bible and cries that Jesus is a better boss than Nixon.

And now it is happening to weird Harold Rubin. He, once considered this city's leading creep. In the Past, I had a certain fondness for Rubin because he was consistent. If nothing else, as far as a would-be writer he always been a creep.

As a young man, he got into one of the more exciting lines of photography. Harold used to go along with private detectives who had been hired by suspicious wives to get the goods on their husbands.

When the detective burst open the hotel room door, Harold would lead the way in, flashbulbs popping. I don't know how many heart attacks Harold caused — or cases of terminal frigidity — but by the time he was 25, he had one of this world's biggest collections of pictures of bald, pot-bellied, wide-eyed men sitting up in bed with their mouths open.

Harold got out of that profession for something a little classier. He began producing his own movies. They were the kind of short, grainy movies that used to be shown in the basements of Legion halls. The stars usually wore nothing but "black shoes."

middle-aged men, but the store gave the late Mayor Richard J. Daley fits. The mayor always believed that a respectable middle-aged man should be engaging in respectable activities, such as fixing highway contracts or slipping a few coins to an alderman.

So the police, some of whom had been weird Harold's customers, began raiding him regularly, and he finally went out of business.

But before he gave up, he received quite a bit of attention, for a professional creep. He held the nation's first mate-swapping convention, one of the truly disgusting events of the social season, and was written about in Esquire Magazine and invited on the talk shows, where he babbed about freedom of expression.

He went into semi-retirement in, of all places, the suburb of Berwyn. That is so conservative a blue-collar town that anybody who doesn't wear long underwear is considered a pervert.

And now Harold has made the complete transformation. I have received a copy of a publication called PTA Today.

It is published once a month by the National Parent-Teacher Assn., one of the straightest, most responsible bunch of tea drinkers in the nation.

And what do you think is all over the entire front page of the February issue of PTA Today? It is a long story under a headline that says:

"Why 'Weird' Harold Rubin Switched from Pornography to the PTA." There is even a picture of weird Harold, looking like somebody out of Father Knows Best, with his arm around his 8-year-old son.

The story tells, at considerable length, how Harold stopped being weird and decided to join the PTA so he could help improve the level of education in Berwyn and protect young minds from the terrible influences of pornography, drugs, confused sexual information, teen gangs and other bad habits.

"I joined the PTA," Harold said, "to give me a sense of belonging legitimately, so that when I speak out on the school system, it'll be like from inside it. Part of it."

That from a man who once had the craziest giggle in the loop, a man who once had a display case filled with strangely shaped things that even I didn't understand.

All that is over from Rubin. From now on, it is meetings in the school gymnasium, and munching little sandwiches and cakes and cups of tea. But I'm not sure the Berwyn PTA is completely ready for "Rubin." In the PTA magazine he says they need sex education in the schools.

"They're not progressive in Berwyn," he says. "About all they'll allow, maybe, is a course in the 'sex life of a mushroom.'"

I'm sure Harold could teach it.

A contract on Ham

WASHINGTON — I've tried to avoid it, but I don't seem to have much choice. I'm going to do a think-piece on Hamilton Jordan. Last week the White House ordered its mimeograph machines put on a war footing and issued a 33-page White Paper concerning a subject of urgent national interest: "Whether Ham Jordan, while eating a steak at a singles' bar, called Sarsfield's, did or did not spit a part of his Amaretto topped with whipped cream at a lady sitting next to him at the bar."

The unidentified woman said he did. The White House, after interviewing the bartenders and witnesses, concluded he didn't.

From the time he took the Washington Post columnist who printed the item produces the smoking pistol, which in this case would be the lady's Amaretto-stained blouse.

But the question isn't whether Ham did or did not spit his drink as much as what is behind it? The fact of the matter is that there is now a "press contract" on Hamilton Jordan, and he is a marked man in Washington.

Somewhere out there at this moment is a woman, lady or girl, who is prepared to show

Ham Jordan he isn't any better than she is, and "he may be the second most important person in the Administration, but by god he's just another guy trying to pick her up in a bar etc. etc."

Ham may be sowing his wild oats in Washington, but he isn't any different from those guys of his age who sow oats — with one exception. He now has a REPUTATION and someone is out to cut him down to size. He's now in a class with Muhammad Ali, Joe Namath, Marion Brando and many other personalities who can no longer go as far for a steak without some girl challenging him to spit an Amaretto on her blouse.

If there is anyone to blame for Ham's position it's President Carter. By refusing to let his people drink liquor and whipped cream in the White House the President is driving them out into the streets, where they are forced to take abuse and whatever else they dish out at a singles' hangout on Friday night.

Do you think Ham wants to go to Sarsfield's to relax and unwind? Do you think it's fun for him to fight through the women to get to a bar stool for a shot? Do you believe, for one second, that if Ham could get a decent drink in the White House from a friendly bartender he would put up with all the girl that goes with trying to get a bite in a joint reeking with spilled Amaretto drinks? The answer is obviously "no."

If Ham Jordan was a cheating kind of person, he could tie a liquor bottle on a string outside his White House window as Ray Milland did in "The Last Weekend," and pull it up every time he wanted a slug. But as Ham told Jody Powell, "I could do it but it would be wrong."

So what have you got? An assistant to the President of the United States who has been fingered by the gossip columnists. Since he has been recently separated from his wife, he is a marked man by every woman who goes to a singles' bar looking how to get even with a guy who won't pick her up. Bring on the photographers and you've got the greatest no-win situation since Norman Mailer took a poke at Gore Vidal.

My real problem is that the aide who sits next to the Oval Office is supposed to be taken seriously. If the aide calls up an official and says, "I'm speaking for the President. He wants you to start mining coal right away," and the person on the other end says, "Yeah, tell it to the boys at Sarsfield's," this country is in a lot of trouble.

My only solution for Ham is that he stay in the White House day and night. Some day, maybe a year from now, people will forget about the pyramids of Egypt and the Amaretto with the whipped cream on the blouse and he will be a free man again. Right now, he's a sitting duck.

It isn't your fault, Ham, but when lady has to start putting out White Papers on how you spend your nights, you have to choose, but to dig a foxhole in the Rose Garden, cover yourself with a poncho and wall until, cover long nightmare is over.

FRANK SINATRA

Frank Sinatra, friends plan Israel trip

United Press International FLYING WITH FRANK
It should be the super-jet set blast of the year, with Old Blue Eyes doing the honors. ABC-TV's Barbara Walters says Frank Sinatra has invited 200 of his best friends to join him next month aboard an Israel-bound chartered airliner — refilled with plenty of extra bars — for lunch at the Israeli Knesset, and for meetings with Menachem Begin and Moshe Dayan. The price — a $2,500 donation to Hebrew University for each guest. Sinatra figures that will come to half a million dollars.

UNLONESOME GEORGE
Alabama Gov. George Wallace never exactly has been billed as a sex-symbol, but he does have his following. Billy Joe Camp, the governor's press secretary in Atlanta, says since his divorce from Cornelia, about 50 women from all over the country have proposed to Wallace. But, says Camp, "I don't expect him to make any effort to get romantically involved with any of these." Camp says some of the eager candidates for matrimony sent pictures with their proposals — that "Some were pretty and some were pretty ugly." Camp adds, "There are a couple I'd like to go and check out for him."

OLD MAYORS' HOME?
New-York-television-anchorman Carl Stokes — himself a former mayor of Cleveland — summed it up after his new roommate introduced on WNBC-TV's nightly news show: "I hope the station hasn't become the employer of last resort for ex-mayors." The new colleague, making his debut as "urban affairs consultant" — former New York Mayor Abraham Beame. And how does he like the new career, precipitated by his loss at the polls to John Lindsay? "I'm not going to wake up in the morning and not have to face a crisis."

Getting an early start

MINUTES before the siren sounded signalling the beginning of the 1978 trout season, fishermen lined the banks and waded into the chilly waters at Bennett Spring State Park in Missouri during the pre-dawn hours Thursday.

Chances are dwindling for quick end to coal strike

Survival odds for a contract to end the 89-day-old coal strike appeared to dwindle Thursday as growing ranks of angry miners voiced their voices and their feet in advance of weekend balloting that will make or break the pact.

Retired miners, who have lost pension checks as a result of the strike and who would gain very little with ratification, have vowed to set up their own picket lines if the contract is accepted, and more and more active UMW members were rallying to their cause.

Everything we have gotten so far is due to the retired miners, but they are being treated like dogs, said Alabama miner Terry Johnson. "They don't have the right to vote on the contract; so we have to do it for them."

At least 100 more took a walk at a similar meeting in St. Libory, Ill., where one miner branded the proposed pact with the Bituminous Coal Operators Association "not worth a piece of toilet paper."

The strike appeared to be sailing straight into the guns of a Taft-Hartley back-to-work order and a federal mine seizure — unless President Carter has indicated he will be prepared to seek as early as Monday if the new pact is rejected.

Miners are apt to think twice before going to the doctor, said Margaret Light, administrator of a clinic at Cabin Creek, W.Va.

Residents returning home following chlorine gas scare

YOUNGSTOWN, Fla. (UPI) — Hinton Miller, 72, worried about his tools and his open grocery store. His wife fretted about her pet cat Caesar, who was abandoned in their flight from a deadly cloud of chlorine gas seeping from a derelict tank car.

Bay County civil defense authorities permitted all of the evacuees, except the residents of about 50 homes within a two-mile radius of the wreck site, to return to their homes Thursday night.

VEVEY, Switzerland (UPI) — Swiss police say they have found tire tracks in the cemetery where grave robbers stole the body of movie legend James "The Tramp" Charlie Chaplin.

Chaplin, 88, died Christmas Day and was buried two days later in Corsier Cemetery overlooking Vevey and Lake Geneva near the manor house in which he lived since 1952 with his wife of 34 years, Oona.

Bubbles faces net attack

IRVINE, Calif. (UPI) — Bubbles the fugitive hippo is safe from assault by bow and arrow but may have to contend with air freight cargo nets one of these days.

Officials of Lion Country Safari, the wild animal park that Bubbles escaped from almost two weeks ago, said they had been offered the use of the nets by two airlines.

One of the latest, offered by a specialist, rangers said, was to "get four or five guys with bows and arrows and just start firing arrows into her — just to irritate her."

Abby

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Thought you'd like to know the following: My CB buff neighbors have quite unusual handles. She is "Dear Abby," and her husband is "Abby Grabber." How does that grab ya?

MYRTLE CREEK, ORE.

DEAR MYRTLE: Beautiful. It made my day.

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to REALIST who's tired of hearing women gripe about unpleasant surprises after marriage. She wonders why these things aren't noticed before marriage.

How on earth is a woman supposed to know how many showers a guy takes before the marriage? It's not your everyday topic of conversation while going together.

'Abby' makes CB scene

No way could I have known that the guy I married would snore, thrash around and grind his teeth in his sleep, or that his beer intake would triple and his cigarette smoking double.

How could I know beforehand what kind of father he'd make—and for that matter, how could HE know a lot of things about ME before we got married?

When we were going together he was into sports. Now he finds them "too strenuous." He used to love the beach. Now it's "too crowded." He used to like to dance. Now it's "silly." And socializing is "too boring." I wonder why men "slow down" so much earlier than women?

NOT PERFECT EITHER

DEAR NOT PERFECT: Maybe when there's a comfortable home to come to, a man finds fewer reasons for leaving it. But apropos "surprises" after marriage: While going together, both men and women are inclined to be on their "best behavior." However, characterized as basic as violent tempera, physical uncleanliness and "me-first" attitudes rarely go undetected even in the courting stage.

DEAR ABBY: I've been going with Kurt for a year. He's 30 and has never been married. I'm 29, divorced, with a child who stays with my mother most of the time.

Maybe I'm old-fashioned, but I don't believe in living together before marriage, so when Kurt asked if he could move in with me, I said no. (He was having financial problems.)

Next thing I knew, Kurt told me he was sharing an apartment with a guy. He didn't say where, but he gave me the phone number.

I called him up and a girl answered! He explained that he's living with her only "temporarily." He says she is just a friend.

I was furious and gave him an ultimatum—move out of her apartment and into mine immediately, or forget me completely. He said, "I'll think about it." Does this sound like he loves me and intends to marry me?

I don't want to lose him, but I can't let him live with another girl, even though he claims she's only a friend. Hurry your answer.

BOSTON MASS

DEAR MESS: Kurt sounds like a loser to me. If you're wise you will forget him.

your health

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb, About five years ago I suffered a mild stroke. Since then, the doctor has restricted my diet and physical activity. Also I take one tablet of Apresoline daily. My blood pressure was 152 over 90 during my last checkup.

If for any reason I should require an operation in the future, is there anything to prevent it? In other words can I have surgery? I will be 62 in a few months.

The only apparent lingering effect of the stroke is that my memory is bad now and plays tricks on me.

Dear Reader, Whether or not you can undergo surgery will depend on your condition if and when such a need arises and the type of surgery contemplated. The probability is that you can have surgery with no difficulty.

It has been long enough since your stroke, your well-controlled blood pressure and apparently good health otherwise should mean you would not be a bad surgical risk.

Many people have surgery with rather severe medical problems and I mean major surgery. A recent heart attack or stroke of very recent times could pose a problem but five years later it shouldn't make much difference.

You should continue to keep your weight down, follow your doctor's advice to keep your blood pressure down and maintain a reasonable degree of activity. I would think you could develop a daily walking program if you have not already done so.

I am sending you the Health Letter number 25, Strokes, to give you more information. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10101.

Dear Dr. Lamb, Could you please advise me about magnesium? Exactly what does it do for you and what should it be used for? A friend of mine recommended that I take vitamin D and calcium and magnesium. After getting these I find that my regular multiple-vitamin preparation contains D, calcium and magnesium. Also my instant breakfast and Digeal contain magnesium.

Dear Reader, We all need magnesium because the body uses it in our vital enzyme system within our cells to release energy from foods and carry on vital metabolic functions.

A true magnesium deficiency, however, is rather rare because it is so wide-spread in so many common foods in a normal diet. Mature bean seeds and cereals are usually good sources of magnesium.

About the only people who develop a magnesium deficiency are alcoholics and those taking water pills to eliminate water. There are quite a few people who do use water pills (diuretics) for high blood pressure or to prevent accumulation of water.

You won't have any harmful effects from taking the magnesium but you won't get any advantage from it either. Your story is typical of so many people who obtain a new vitamin or mineral preparation when they are already getting those same things in their fortified and enriched foods they buy at the grocery store. Your milk also has vitamins D and A added; not to mention the abundant source of calcium in the milk. After eating food that has been improved with vitamins, then taking any number of vitamin pills, a person may be pushing the upper limits of safe intake for vitamin A and D.

MARIE SCOTT AND KAREN ROBERTSON MEET WEEKLY AT TALIESEN HOUSE with their on-going women's growth group counseling sessions

Assertiveness training classes slated

By IRENE LINK
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Whether you are young or old, male or female, black or white, rich, middle class, or poor, single or married, extrovert or introvert, you can learn to be assertive. You can learn how to express your opinions and wishes and stand up for your rights.

Soon in Twin Falls a class will be offered in which you can gain the necessary skills to accomplish these goals. Two Magic Valley women, both experienced and engaged in individual, group and marriage counseling, will be instructing a class in assertiveness training for men and women.

The classes will be offered from 4 to 5:30 p.m. Tuesday afternoons for six weeks. The sessions will be held March 7 through April 11 at Taliesen House, 1133 Locust St. In Twin Falls. Constructing the course will be Karen Robertson, who has a master's degree in social work and counseling from Tulane University in New Orleans, and Marie Scott, who obtained her master's degree in social work and counseling from the University of Utah. Both are engaged in private practice.

Many people often confuse the terms assertive and aggressive. As Scott, one of the constructors, explains, "To be assertive means that you stand up for yourself without putting the other person down. To be aggressive means you force your will upon another person regardless of how that other person feels. The aggressive person focuses solely on the achievement of his goal in spite of the expense to others. On the other hand, the assertive person states his position firmly, but is willing to listen to the position of others."

While much has been said and written about the need for assertiveness training for women, both counselors feel that there is also a vast need for men to learn to be assertive, too. Robertson says, "Men in our culture are taught to be aggressive rather than assertive. Aggressiveness doesn't lead to happiness even if you get what you want, especially when others are hurt in the process."

"Often the behaviors that are expected of men, such as aggressiveness, do not coincide with what they feel and want. They are pressured into acting in a certain, prescribed way. Assertiveness training allows a person to correlate his feelings with his actions."

What are some common kinds of situations that assertiveness training can help a person deal with more successfully? A partial list includes the following:

- How to turn down a request to borrow money.
- How to give and receive compliments.
- How to apologize when you know you've done something wrong.
- How to return merchandise.
- How to start a conversation with a stranger or new acquaintance.
- How to admit "I don't know" when you're ignorant about something.
- How to apply for a job.
- How to ask for a raise.
- How to tell someone "I like what you did" or "I didn't like what you did."
- How to answer a hostile, unjustified put-down.
- How to discuss a justified criticism of your behavior with the other person.
- How to speak up at a meeting.
- How to say "I love you" aloud and mean it.
- How to get off the telephone with a long-winded friend.
- How to say no when someone makes a completely unfair demand of you.

These skills are useful to even self-confident people because they refine and enhance their interpersonal skills and relationships. Even most people who already feel that they are assertive enough could benefit from developing specific skills that work reliably, rather than depending upon instinctive reactions in difficult situations.

Scott continues, "We all need to improve our expertise in dealing with others. Everyone can benefit from assertiveness training. There is a big need for both men and women to take an inventory of their own comfort with asserting themselves. Most of us are not as free to assert ourselves as we think we are."

Robertson adds, "We are frightened of others taking away our right to speak, but we are guilty of taking away our right to speak up. Much of this is due to our not knowing how to fairly and accurately express ourselves. And we are very concerned with how others will accept what we have to say."

There are four basic ways in which we react to situations. One way is passively; in which we do not express our thoughts and feelings but just accept a situation, often begrudgingly. Secondly, we can react aggressively, which is nearly always destructive. Another way we can react is indirectly, which involves someone manipulating someone else. This is obviously not a desirable situation. And the fourth way is to react assertively, which is the most constructive and beneficial for everyone involved.

Are assertive women unfeminine? "Of course not," says Robertson. "The key to assertiveness is choice. As long as a woman has choices, she can define her femininity in whatever terms are comfortable for her. She can be both traditionally feminine and assertive, or she can choose non-traditional behaviors and still know that she is feminine."

"An assertive woman — or man — is not threatening like an aggressive person is because assertive people are sensitive to others' feelings."

The benefits of assertiveness training are wide and varied. According to Marie Scott, "One of the best results is the great increase in self-confidence. When a person learns some simple new skills and puts them into practice, self-confidence follows and then being assertive is not so frightening. We encourage people to begin with simple kinds of assertions so they can have some early successes. And we use techniques that build self-esteem. We teach communications skills. Methods that increase awareness and the ability to focus and concentrate attention on the situation at hand are utilized too."

"Assertiveness training also helps in take-charge of our lives," says Scott. "It helps us get better jobs. It makes us more successful in social situations. Marriages and other personal relationships are vastly improved. And it helps us to clarify who we are and what we want, to others as well as to ourselves."

In addition to the Assertiveness Training program which will begin March 7, other seminars are being planned by Robertson and Scott and will soon be underway. Some of these are advanced assertiveness training, female identity, yoga, effective parenting, basic listening skills, self-care for people in the helping professions, understanding relationships and developing intimacy, morning run — a mind and body experience, learning to be okay with who you are — a course in transactional analysis, and the whole person. There will also be a continuation in what the two counselors call an ongoing women's growth group (group counseling for women).

Obviously, there is something offered for anyone interested in self-improvement and growth.

what's what

E.M. Boyd
Client asks if there were a real Count Dracula. Some say so. One Vlad V. who ruled Wallachia in Southern Rumania from 1456 to 1462. That Vlad Dracula supposedly was a religious fellow who built several churches and a monastery near Bucharest. Recent students of his life say he got his nasty reputation from a whispering campaign started by a political rival named Stefan of Moldavia. Am advised Vlad-Dracula is still a national hero in Rumania.

Argument continues over just how widespread that "Ban the Bra" movement remains. None too widespread anymore, say the survey takers. Nine out of 10 teenage girls wear bras. And their purchases of bras average out to four a year. Women out of their teens buy an average of three each a year. It was recently reported that the most popular size is 34 B.

HORSEFEATHERS
Q. "Where'd we get the expression 'horsefeathers' meaning 'bunk' or 'nonsense' or 'what?'"
A. Credit that one to Billy DeBeck, the cartoonist who originated the old comic strip "Barney Google and Spark Plug." It was DeBeck, too, who came up with the expressions "heebie-jeebies" and "yim's awassin'."

Q. "What's the strongest beer in the world?"
A. A brew out of Kulmbach, West Germany. Am told it's 28 percent alcohol. The most expensive beer comes from Treuchlingen, West Germany. It's matured for several years and marketed in serially numbered bottles.

SUGGESTIVE DIALOGUE
Sexually suggestive dialogue turns up on television about three times as often as on radio, say researchers for the National Federation of Decency. ABC's "Soap" was the show called the most loaded with such talk. In 15 weeks, it broadcast 324 sex scenes or lines, according to the NFD. "Police Women" with seven instances was the show said to be least suggestive.

Western Electric ought to know. It uses the mark on all its Touch-Tone telephones. The company says it's a "number sign." Maybe so, I don't know. An old dictionary identifies it as a "crosshatch." As youngsters, we always called it a "yig-lee" sign. Simple truth, though, is it has no official name. None. It's just a /.

Stocks at Midday

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices opened higher Friday in moderately active trading of New York Stock Exchange issues.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average, which gained 1.21 points Thursday, was up 0.70 (0.74732) shortly after the opening bell.

Advances led declines, 181 to 70, among the roughly 400 issues crossing the tape.

Buyers stabilized on foreign exchanges for the second day. President Carter told a news conference Thursday that 1978 will be a better year for the U.S. currency and suggested some of the alarm expressed by the weakies for the dollar was unwarranted.

The Commerce Department reported a U.S. balance of trade deficit of $2.3 billion for January. It was the 20th consecutive month the United States has recorded a deficit.

Wall Street observers attribute some of the market's firmness Thursday to a statement from the chairman of the House Energy Committee that a possible compromise on President Carter's energy package may have been reached.

There was promising news on the money supply front. The Federal Reserve Board late Thursday reported the basic money supply in the latest week fell by $400 million. The second consecutive weekly decline in the money supply eased fears that the Fed would tighten credit, a move which would drive up interest rates.

Milk supports are going up and soybeans may be following

WASHINGTON — Milk supports will go up April 1 and the Carter administration may reach decisions this week on higher supports for soybeans and an acreage reduction program for cotton, Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland said.

Bergland told Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., during a House Budget Committee hearing Wednesday that the milk support hike will be automatic — dictated by a formula in a 1977 law which requires semi-annual adjustments to keep pace with changes in farm costs.

Bergland said it now appears the formula will probably raise the current 50¢ per hundredweight government support price for manufacturing-grade milk up to $4.43. That would be equivalent to a hike of about 3.7 cents per gallon.

The support program applies to milk used in making butter, cheese and non-fat dry milk powder. Any increases in those prices, however, are also automatically cranked into formulas used under federal marketing orders for setting prices for hot fluid-grade milk.

Bergland told reporters after the House hearing he hoped a committee of top administration economic officials could meet today to discuss soybean and cotton actions.

Stills may help in energy crisis

DES-MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — A state legislator suggests Iowa farmers bring back the old "moonshine" stills — this time to produce cheap fuel for their machinery to ride them over a possible energy crisis.

Cooper Evans, Republican representative, farmer, and engineer, is not the only person who believes in the idea. A proposal to fund an Iowa State University study is ready for debate in the House.

"I don't know whether it would go or not," Evans said Wednesday. "But it's something we should try because our country could face a crisis and most anything could mess up that supply of alcohol."

The goal of the $51,000, 18-month study would be to develop a farm-scale unit for making ethyl alcohol, better known as grain alcohol or moonshine. It would supply the liquid fuel needs of field and other mobile farm machinery.

Evans said diesel farm machinery would have to be modified to run on the homemade fuel, which has more alcohol than moonshine. He also said the brew would be illegal unless poisoned with wood alcohol.

But, he conceded, there would be no way for the government to keep tabs on all farmers if production of the fuel became widespread.

"Sure, people could abuse it," he said. "Some would probably do it for the fun of it and a little cheap booze on the side."

Founded religion The Mormon religion was founded by Joseph Smith Jr. When he was 25, he organized the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints at Fayette, N.Y., in 1830.

Wild horses in Sierra are facing rough winter

SUSANVILLE (UPI) — The graceful herds of wild horses that make their home in the foothills of the Sierra Nevada will be a lot smaller this spring.

Bureau of Land Management crews said Wednesday that they have found at least 20 wild horses frozen to death by mountain snows that turned to ice in the Buffalo Hills area. Gene Nunn, a spokesman for the bureau, said that although his men rescued 62 wild horses, snow and ice took an unusually high toll on their herds this winter.

Gooding center will stay at present site

GOODING — The Gooding Alcohol Treatment Center will remain at its present location for at least another year, the board chairman said today.

Archie Walker, Bliss, said the governor's announcement Thursday that the proposal to put a woman's prison in the state-owned facility now partially occupied by the alcohol center was a "dead issue for this year," means the alcohol program will continue operation in the former TB hospital.

Walker, who along with Margo Brown, Gooding newspaper woman, has been lobbying against placement of the prison here, said today in Boise he was pleased with the reprieve.

"We're glad to have that threat off our back for at least a year," Walker said. He said he hoped the report that the issue has been shelved for further study will reassure potential patients that the center is still functioning.

looking good. The only people who might be shortchanged, he said, are the women prisoners now held out of state. But they had been placed in Gooding immediately, there probably would never be further consideration about their welfare, he said.

The people who want a prison in Gooding haven't lost it, he said.

"It's the only political solution that I've seen where nobody is really hurt," Walker said.

The alcohol center official said the state's responsibility to provide adequate prison facilities is a difficult problem and one that must be met.

Walker said he understood that the legislature plans to have an interim legislative committee study the issue. Gov. John Evans said Thursday he would recommend formation of a citizens committee in Gooding to study all possible uses for the former hospital, including that of a prison.

Mayor Don Morrow was unavailable for comment today, but several Gooding city council members said they would welcome formation of a citizens committee to study all aspects of future use of the facility.

Gooding Leader, said an informal poll conducted by the weekly newspaper in conjunction with a subscription drive shows 51 per cent of the 200 persons questioned oppose placement of a prison in Gooding.

He said 46 persons or 23 per cent were undecided while 18 or 9 per cent favored the prison with 188 against. There was no effort to conduct the poll in a scientific method, Crompton said.

Earlier, Jay Robertson, director of the alcohol treatment center, had said if the prison plans materialized the center would move into the adjoining building to the west to the older structure than the middle building now occupied by the 28-day treatment program.

But Walker said today there are no plans to move. He said the $30,000 appropriation suggested by the governor and Don Erickson, director of the board of corrections, for remodeling the building "wouldn't even buy the materials."

He said the building contains 21,000 square feet and the suggested appropriation amounted to only $1.50 per square foot, a situation "no contractor would even look at."

"We'll stay the year and if we have to move then we'll go," Walker said. He believes the year's study will provide information so the legislature then can look at the "whole picture."

today Jerome vote set

JEROME — An election to form a sewer district along Lincoln Road south of Jerome and choose a board of directors has been officially set for April 10.

Attorney for the proposed district, Robert Williams, said the 5th District Court this week approved the date of the election, which had been postponed from Feb. 27.

Formation of the district, which is expected to be financed by user fees, should improve the pace of commercial development in the area, Williams said. The proposed Jerome South Sewer District, to be connected to the city sewer system, encompasses most of the area between Interstate 80 and the Jerome city limits for one-quarter mile on either side of Lincoln Road. A sewer line which could be connected to the city system has already been installed along the road.

Voting will take place at the Klaus Auction Center on Lincoln Road from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

To be eligible to vote, persons must live and own property within the proposed district. Williams said about 27 are eligible.

Five persons are seeking election to a five-member board of directors. They are Ollie Adfield, Beverly Glodowski, Shirley Bengoechea, Melvin Bengoechea and James Glodowski.

Bill hike clarified

JEROME — Ed Evans, Jerome public works director, said an article in the Times-News Wednesday correctly reported sewer service fees would probably increase by $15 to $20 a year if a new sewage treatment plant is built.

But some Jerome readers apparently failed to spot the word "yearly" and thought their bills would increase by $15 to $20 a month, Evans said. As a result, some told him they planned to vote against the April 4 bond election to finance the new facility because they could not afford such a high increase, he said.

The city has received several calls, and Evans said he wants to make it clear the estimated $15 to $20 increase would be spread over a year.

Ski conditions good

TWIN FALLS — New snow was falling today at most Sawtooth National Forest ski resorts, promising skiers another ideal weekend.

The Sawtooth National Forest recreation report for this week shows excellent conditions for skiing, snow tubing and cross country skiing.

Results in the south end of the forest received new snow this week. Pomerelle reports six inches of new snow, while Magic Mountain has four new inches with more falling today.

Both Pomerelle and Magic Mountain continue to operate every day with night skiing Monday through Saturday at Pomerelle. Snow depths total 50 inches at Magic Mountain lodge and about five feet at Pomerelle. Soldier Mountain has 50 inches at the lodge with good road conditions. The resort operates Wednesday through Sunday each week.

Rotarun is operating weekends with night skiing each Tuesday and Thursday. The snow depth there is about three feet.

Sun Valley has between 37 inches on the valley floor and 20 inches at the top of Bald Mountain.

Proper endorsement

Board sets deadline on teacher policy

By BOB ZUCKERMAN Times-News writer

BOISE — The state Board of Education Thursday agreed to allow state school districts until next September to live up to a recently approved board policy calling for more instructors to be endorsed in the subjects they are teaching.

School superintendents agreed the new September deadline would give larger districts enough time to comply with the policy, but might mean smaller districts would have to cut back staff or curriculum.

Dr. James D. Sawin, Twin Falls schools superintendent, and Dan Mabe, Buhl schools superintendent, said their districts would be able to meet the deadline.

Four teachers in the Twin Falls district and two in the Buhl district are currently teaching some subjects they are not endorsed to teach. The teachers would either attend summer school to obtain the necessary credits for state endorsement in those subjects or be reassigned to subjects for which they are already endorsed.

Minidoka Red Cross

No interest shown in program

By RAY SULLIVAN Times-News writer

RUPERT — "What If They Had a War and Nobody Came?" is an anti-war poster slogan that echoes Minidoka County's problems in organizing a strong Red Cross program.

Thursday, there wasn't a war in Minidoka County, but there was a meeting which was to have outlined the county's first Red Cross fund drive in three years. Only nobody came.

This morning, Pat Lane, Red Cross county chairman, told the Times-News she is resigning from the job as of today because family illnesses prevent her from devoting the time necessary to the program. She said she was typing a letter of resignation to Regional Red Cross Director Jesse Hays.

Mrs. Lane said family health problems prevented her from attending the Thursday meeting and she is convinced she does not have the time necessary to do a good job.

Maureen Stefan, in charge of the Red Cross's service to military families, program in the county, said she was the only one at the 3:30 p.m. meeting at East Minico Junior High.

problems are reflected by the chapter budget, which while showing $100 in its bank account, is really $1,800 in arrears on bills it has no money to pay.

Stefan explained they are even running out of money to pay the monthly $20 phone bill.

Hays said not only has the county not organized a fund drive in three years, if it doesn't have one in 1978, but in the last nine years, only $2,500 has been raised in Minidoka County.

He compared this sum to the more than $22,000 Cassia County's Red Cross fund drives have collected in the same period.

The difference, he said, is leadership. "I'm sure the people of Minidoka County would contribute, but we just haven't had strong leadership in Minidoka County."

"We just haven't been able to get an organization going... We need strong people and people to volunteer to come in on their own time. I work with 20 chapters in my territory and only two have paid help. The other 18 are volunteer chapters."

Hays said Minidoka County's leadership

But smaller district superintendents said it would not be that easy.

Dietrich Schools Superintendent Wayne Perrow said his district would probably have to offer classes for credit next year under the education department's new section.

Four of the district's eight school instructors are teaching topics for which they have no endorsement, and none of the four would be able to pick up the necessary college work during the summer to receive a state endorsement.

As a result, the district may have to stop offering courses in arts and crafts, woodshop and jewelry-making and photography, he said.

Castleton Schools Superintendent Richard Peters said his district probably would be unable to live up to the policy for at least three years.

Five of the district's 12 instructors are teaching subjects for which they have no endorsement, he said.

Under the policy, state officials have said they might withhold state funds to pay the salaries of non-endorsed instructors.

Perron called the policy "unfair," because smaller districts are often unable to find teachers who are endorsed to teach four or five subjects.

"They're trying to make teachers go back to school and then not providing any money for this," he said. Because of already low salaries, teachers in the Dietrich district would not be able to afford to return to college for necessary endorsement credits.

Peters agreed, saying if the board were to strictly enforce its policy, he would be faced with hiring new instructors and not having the money to pay them or his current teachers.

"If we had to have a special teacher for every category, we'd have to hire twice as many teachers as we have now," he said.

Miles Williams, state education department official, suggested this morning the policy would not be strictly enforced at first.

He noted withholding of state money for teachers' salaries "would be at the discretion of the state superintendent." The state superintendent might be willing to allow some districts more time "if... the circumstances warranted it," he said.

The policy permits some misassigned teachers, Williams noted.

Up to 10 percent of a district's teachers may be assigned to areas for which they are not endorsed as long as the non-endorsed topics do not make up more than two-fifths of the teacher's load and the teacher has taken at least six hours of college credit in that topic, Williams said.

4 apply for county post

TWIN FALLS — Four men have applied for the position of county clerk, auditor and recorder in Twin Falls with Saturday the deadline for accepting applications.

Merl E. Leonard, chairman of the board of county commissioners said all applications received by the board have been turned over to the Republican Central Committee for processing and recommendations. Leonard said he did not feel the board should release the names of applicants at this time since they may have other jobs which would be jeopardized.

County Clerk Gary Whitwell resigned effective March 15 after serving the past 14 months under appointment. He was named on recommendation of the Republican Central Committee to fill the vacancy left by the resignation of Harold Lanaster, Democrat office holder of a number of terms.

The position pays $12,648 per year. Whitwell said he did not feel the salary was sufficient for the job which requires supervision of the county auditing, recording and district court clerking.

These office responsibilities include handling elections and registration duties, as well as setting tax levies for all taxing agencies such as school districts and municipalities among other things.

Leonard said the commissioners hope to make the appointment as soon as applications are reviewed and the most promising individuals are interviewed by the central committee and a recommendation received.

GOP hopeful hits campaign trail

By LARRY SWISHER Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Republican gubernatorial hopeful Jay Amyx, on his first swing through Twin Falls as a candidate Wednesday said Idaho's governor should open offices in the eastern and northern parts of the state to make him more accessible.

Mayor of Boise for eight years, Amyx said Idaho needs a "bold, efficient governor" responsive to citizen feedback.

"If you give people the opportunity, they will tell you," he said, adding the governor's office should be a "place of service."

Amyx, who announced his candidacy in January, said the state's governor should staff an office in both eastern and northern Idaho and spend three or four days a month there himself. There should also be a telephone listing citizens can easily call in any part of Idaho.

As an example of present lack of response, Amyx cited recent tractorcades and demonstrations by farmers, saying: "It's a shame the farmers have to take the time, money and fuel to go to the streets to get the attention of the governor. We better well recognize the plight of the number one industry in the state."

He said he would rather work toward developing markets which could help the farmers instead of toward a federal-parity or subsidy structure. But he said it might not be possible in some cases to develop the markets and the government should then look at other options.

Amyx called the proposed 160-acre limitation ridiculous and said if it is not changed farmers will devise some way of working around it, because "they can't make it on that," he said he did not know if he would support a recently proposed bill in congress to raise the limit to 1,200 acres without setting the bill.

Citing his experience as mayor, Amyx said he is the only candidate in the race for governor who has sat in the "hot seat."

"I don't downgrade the legislature, but I'm glad I haven't been there. I can walk in with a fresh clean start, and bring the government back down to being responsive to people," he said.

Amyx said he knows how to stop government from growing, how to make it run efficiently to save money and how to "wade through the red tape and cause the bureaucrats to respond to citizens."

He indicated this would be the best way to keep down taxes, adding he does not believe circuit breaker tax relief or a 50 cent rate helps property owners enough.

TWIN FALLS — Snow depths and water content on the Roseworth and Salmon Tract watersheds continue to show in excess of 100 percent of normal moisture in the March measurements. Soil Conservation District officials report.

Measurements, completed last weekend, show as much as 127 percent of normal for March on the upper elevation courses—Conservationists say. If this trend continues or even if there is a near-normal snowfall through the next month, there will be an adequate supply of water in both the Roseworth and Salmon Dam reservoirs this year.

All courses show moisture well above that of last year and officials say soil moisture under the snowpack is better than a year ago. Only the Pole Creek and Cedar Creek courses are below the 100 percent of normal figures and these are close to the long-range averages.

Courses by snow and water content this year, snow and water last year and percent of long range average and long range water average are:

Magie Mountain, 85.1 inches of snow, 18.5 inches water, 17 inches snow and 3.3 inches water last year, and 110 percent of the 16.7 inch water average.

Deadline Ridge, 56.4 and 19.6 inches, 16 and 3.6 inches, and 102 percent of 19.1 average; Shoshone Basin, 20.8 and 5.8 inches, 5 and 1.1 inches, 116 percent of 7 inches; Hummingbird Springs, 68 and 22.6 inches, 39 and 11.2 inches, 127 percent of 17 inches; Pole Creek, 20.1 and 16.3 inches, 33.2 and 7.9 inches; 99 percent of 16.5 inches; Cedar Creek, 29.9 and 8.9 inches, 11.9 and 2.5 inches, 96 percent of 9.2 inches; Goat Creek, 52.6 and 17.5 inches, 28.5 and 5.9 inches, 113 percent of 15.4 inches; Bear Creek Meadow, 60.2 and 20.7 inches, 38 and 8.6 inches, 120 percent of 17.2 inches; Fox Creek, 37.6 and 10.7 inches, 21 and 4.8 inches, 111 percent of 11.3 inches; 74 Creek, 30.5 and 12.4 inches, 34 and 9.8 inches, 114 percent of 11.7 inches, and Wilson Creek, 41 and 12.1 inches, 16 and 4.7 inches, 111 percent of 10.9 inches average.

Measurements have been recorded for 44 years on the Bear Creek and Fox Creek courses and 32 years at Magie Mountain. Other courses have been measured for about 10 to 45 years and with the exception of 76 Creek, all were added in 1957.

Conservation officials say there is sufficient water on the snow courses this year to result in some lower flooding of Rock Creek if the temperatures warm suddenly.

House passes two regional airport bills

By DAVID MORRISSEY Times-News writer

BOISE — The Idaho House Thursday passed two bills which would make it easier to form a six or seven-county regional airport authority in the Magic Valley.

By a vote of 44-24 the House passed House Bill 476. House Bill 477 passed by a margin of 44-27. There was little debate.

House Bill 476 would increase the amount of general obligation indebtedness which a regional airport authority could issue. It is 476 would increase the maximum from two percent to three percent of the aggregate assessed valuation of the property within the counties of the authority.

House Bill 477 would increase from one to two and one half mills the assessed valuation on taxable property within the counties in the authority which can be levied by the authority.

The bills, supporters have said, would make it financially possible to begin construction of a regional airport if just one county in the Magic Valley joins the existing authority. The Southern Idaho Regional Airport Authority now contains Jerome, Gooding, Lincoln, Camas and Minidoka counties. Both Twin Falls and Blaine counties have been mentioned as counties which might possibly join the authority.

The two bills, which now go to the Senate, come to the House from the House Revenue and Taxation Committee. Rep. Steve Antone, Jerome, chairman of that committee, said he was "pleased" with passage of the two bills. "These bills will not build an airport," Antone said. "Six counties are still needed and a two-thirds vote of those people involved. This will involve a terrific selling job, but if people are convinced on the idea, these two bills will be needed."

Now you know

Acting and being smart are two different things.

Nothing travels better on its own than a lie—even if it doesn't have a leg to stand on.

Reason we can't take that two-week rest in the mountains is that we've got to work the time to pay the specialist for the advice.

Red Cross failing in Minidoka

The Rupert City Council agreed to look into ways it can help Red Cross and other volunteer agencies facing fiscal problems, and setting up a United Way campaign, may be the answer. A committee is being set up to advise the council what action to take.

A discouraged Stefan, who noted the chapter board hadn't met in about two years, said she still plans to try to get people to attend a fund drive meeting later this month. "We've got to try to bring it back to do something or get rid of it entirely."

Stefan said the blame cannot be placed on the resigning chairwoman alone. "People just don't want to get involved. We can't get anybody in from the community hierarchy. I think maybe we have asked the wrong people. If I just knew who the right ones were," she laments.

"We've been very frugal. And we've had to turn down requests for loans if a serviceman is out of money to get back to his base. We can't even buy them a bus ticket to get over to Mountain Home to hop a military flight.

"But you begin to feel kind of lonesome in it, I'll tell you," she said of the fruitless efforts.

For example, she said only four members were on the board until Lane quit in chapter. There are supposed to be 12. The chapter does have a secretary, Stefan noted, but since there hasn't been a meeting in two years, she doesn't even know who that person is since there has been no work to be typed up.

Gubernatorial branch offices proposed

Amys was critical of the state's failure to use the sales tax to finance education as promised when the sales tax was adopted by referendum ten years ago.

He said the people of Idaho were told the sales tax meant education would not have to be financed from property taxes but that the voters have been let down.

"We should live with our commitments," he said, adding voter apathy is "the result of the state's failure."

Amys said he supported permanent tax relief taking educational funding off property taxes at the state level.

He also favors limited local option taxes for cities and counties.

"If city or county constituents hold an election and want to tax themselves in a way other than property taxes, they ought to be able to do it," the former mayor said.

If the legislature wants to limit local options to certain forms of taxation, "that's fine," he said, noting people have asked why they should pay taxes to the state and federal government just to have it returned in the form of revenue sharing.

Also on the subject of property taxes, the Boise builder and developer said people's homes should be appraised as residential property even if in a commercial zone.

"Just because a piece of property is appraised as commercial doesn't mean somebody will actually buy it tomorrow," he said.

Amys said people are "sick and tired of abuses" of the welfare system and want something done about it.

He said the state welfare program still has room for improvement and that there are a tremendous number using it fraudulently.

"Everyone knows it happens," he said.

The fourth Republican to officially enter the gubernatorial race, Amys said the Idaho Public Utilities Commission needs "people who can think big." He said he believes the state has oil and gas and mentioned other possibilities such as minerals, geothermal energy and nuclear energy to meet future needs.

Racquetball boom invades Twin Falls

TWIN FALLS — Today's sports quiz: The fastest growing sport in the country today is easy to play, is played indoors, is relatively inexpensive, and burns calories like few other activities. The answer: Racquetball.

Racquetball will grab an estimated 40 million Americans in the next five years and is one of the most sought after activities around. Twin Falls has two racquetball clubs which are full all the time and the pressure is mounting but those who have tried the game the first time find they can succeed right from the start.

"It's a great activity. I like the quickness of the game and the good conditioning without having to jog or run," Twin Falls school teacher Kathy Anderson said.

"The one very attractive point of the game is that it is played on an enclosed court which is 40 feet long, 20 feet wide and 20 feet high and when a volley or game or match is completed, the ball is always within a few feet of the player.

While the problem of not having to run after the ball to recover it after each volley may sound a little on the lazy side, the game is anything but lazy. An hour of racquetball is equal to about three hours of tennis according to some exercise experts.

The thing about racquetball is that the arms and shoulders are firm up along with the legs and most of the other muscles of the body.

"The satisfying thing about seeing people come in here is their reaction to firming up those muscles and looking much better when they haven't really lost any weight," says Venita Huggins, wife of Ganyon Walls Racquetball Club owner Gene Huggins.

"Anybody can play the game and there is a good successful level," Mrs. Huggins said.

Handball, which is the mother sport of racquetball, requires terrific amount of coordination and conditioning and takes some time to pick up and play.

Racquetball, on the other hand, uses a softer and slower ball and a racquet that is about five times the size of the hand. That size makes the ball easy to hit.

There is also only one basic rule to the game which makes it simple to learn. That rule requires that the ball hit the front wall before it hits the floor. A beginner can the ball to hit the front wall and come back without much coordination or effort right from the start.

The ease with which it is picked up and played has attracted many who have only an hour or so for recreation. The popularity is grimly testified to by trying to get a court at either racquetball club in town the day you want to play.

While professionals can punch the ball around the court at anywhere from 120 to 160 miles an hour, the recreational player will stick to 80 miles an hour and the balls sometimes cannot take the punishment and split open.

The industry has gone from using sawed-off tennis rackets on handball and squash courts six or seven years ago to a multi-billion dollar industry today and experts predict that the growth will not stop.

Knothole tournament to begin tomorrow

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Recreation Department knothole basketball program will begin winding down tomorrow as the year end tournament for fourth, fifth and sixth grade teams get underway.

The games will be played at Robert Stuart Junior High beginning at 9 a.m. tomorrow and the championship games will take place Tuesday night beginning at 6 p.m.

Heinold Hawks will begin the sixth grade play at 9 a.m. and will take on Moore's Muskies. The 10 a.m. game will feature Munson's Murders against Collin's Cobras. The winners of those two games will then play Tuesday night for the championship.

Fifth grade champions Jason's Jocks will play Harr's Hustlers, and Berg's Bobcats will take on Ellis' All-Stars at 10 a.m. Treas's Trotters will play Flynn's Falcons and Anderson's Andriads will play Petersen's Pirates at 9 a.m.

The winners of the four games will then play-off at 1 p.m. that afternoon to determine who will play for the championship and the winners trophies Tuesday.

Lucero Superstars will take on Hite's Hustlers and Baumert Broncos will play Dimaggio's Devils in the fourth grade division for the right to the Tuesday night championship.

The public is invited to watch the games and a small entrance fee will be charged at the door.

Coors win creates women's league tie

Coors and Century Yamaha are tied for the lead of the YMCA Women's Volleyball League with two games to go while Beutler Bernina dined the Times-News team to retain the lead in the B league.

Coors defeated Barger Mattison in two close games, 15-13 and 15-12 and the Pepsi team defeated Century Yamaha 15-13, 15-12 and 12-15 to throw the Coors team and Century into a tie for the league lead.

In other games, Magic Valley Memorial Hospital beat Otis News and Independent Meat stored Winn Construction-Master Auction. The Pour Hus defeated Moores Business Forms in two games 15-0 and 15-7.

Two games are left in the regular season schedule. They will be played March 8 and March 15.

Recreation leagues open final competition

The Twin Falls Basketball League year end tournaments began this week for the A league and B league competition will start March 27.

In the first tournament game played Thursday night, LeMoine Really-Sierra Lila defeated Budget Tape & Records.

In the second game, Donnelly Sports-Factory Tire Outlet defeated George K's-Beans Inc.

Wednesday night LeMoine will take on Faux Cigar and the Donnelly will play Mc & Ed's in the semi-final game. The championship game is scheduled for March 13 at Robert Stuart Junior High.

The first B league championship games will be played March 27 with finals scheduled for April 10. The complete listings of games and pairings will be announced later.

TOUGH EXERCISE and a lot of fun attracted Angie Nail, foreground, and Kathy Anderson to racquetball. The girls say they find the sport easy to pick up, enjoyable and a good way to get tough exercise.

Marquette's Lee tops vote getters for UPI's all-American cage squad

NEW YORK (UPI) — Butch Lee, Marquette's all-purpose guard who helped lead the Warriors near the top of the national rankings all season, was the leading vote-getter Thursday on the 1977-78 United Press International All-American basketball team selected by the nation's sports writers and broadcasters.

Also chosen for first-team honors were guard Phil Ford of North Carolina, forwards Larry Bird of Indiana State and David Greenwood of UCLA and center Mychal Thompson of Minnesota.

Lee, a 6-foot-1 guard averaging 17 points a game this season and leading his club in assists, has been the key this year for the third-ranked Warriors, who look to defend their NCAA title.

The Puerto Rican-born Lee, a second-team All-America selection last year, was the Warriors' instrumental figure in their 1977 championship season which culminated in a victory over North Carolina.

Marquette, whose strength is defense and ball control, was never the ideal setting to showcase Lee's offensive talents. Still, they would have been impossible to ignore.

"He's everyone's All-American," Marquette Coach Hank Raymond has said. "He's probably the best one-on-one player in the country as far as penetration is concerned."

With nearly 200 ballots cast, the 21-year-old senior received 144 votes with Ford being his nearest competitor.

Ford, also a second-team choice last season, totaled 131 votes in leading the nine-ranked Tar Heels to an Atlantic Coast Conference title this season. The 6-foot-2 senior from Rocky Mount, N.C., averaged 21 points and six assists a game this year in becoming North Carolina's all-time scoring and assist leader.

"Ten years from now after Phil has gone on and had a great pro career," says North Carolina Coach Dean Smith, "I think we will look back and say 'He was the greatest guard to ever play the game.'"

There were no surprises in this year's selections. Each of the five players was a leading candidate for All-American honors and each lived up to pre-season expectations.

Bird, who was on the cover of at least two national sports publications, scored 30 points a game this year. The 6-9 junior from French Lick, Ind., shot 51 percent from the floor besides grabbing 12 rebounds per game and leading his team in steals.

Greenwood, who is certain to take his place among UCLA's gifted forwards down the years, averaged nearly 12 rebounds a game — the best mark since Bill Walton was an undergraduate. Greenwood, a 6-9 junior, provided power and quickness for the second-ranked Bruins, now 23-3. A Los Angeles native, Greenwood joins a tradition that includes Marques Johnson, Richard Washington, Curtis Rowe, Sidney Wicks, Jermal Wilkes and Dave Meyers.

Thompson, who began this season on a loss, then promising note, was a devastating force under the boards for Minnesota. The 6-foot senior from Nassau, Bahamas — a second-team selection last year — averaged 22 points and 12 rebounds after being suspended for the first seven games this season by the NCAA for alleged rule infractions while he was a freshman.

The second team in the bottom consisted of Rutgers Freeman Williams of Portland State, the nation's top scorer, and Sidney Moncrief of Arkansas, forwards Rick Robey and Jack Givens, both of Kentucky, and center James Bailey of Rutgers.

On the third team were guard Reggie Miller of Bradley and Kyle Macy of Kentucky, forwards Rod Griffin of Wake Forest and North Carolina and Jerome Whitehead of Marquette.

State and center Dave Corzine of DePaul.

The following received honorable mention: Danny Ainge, Brigham Young; Ron Brewer, Arkansas; Bill Cartwright, San Francisco; Marvin Dolph, Arkansas; Reggie King, Alabama; Ron Lester, Iowa; Mike O'Keefe, North Carolina; Ron Perry, Holy Cross; Dean Utloff, Iowa State; and Jerome Whitehead, Marquette.

Wilkinson to coach NFL Cards

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Bud Wilkinson, whose powerful Oklahoma teams dominated college football for 17 years, was named coach of the St. Louis Cardinals Thursday, returning to his first love after a career in politics, broadcasting and business.

The unexpected announcement came from owner Bill Bidwell, who staged a similar surprise five years ago when he plucked Don Coryell from San Diego State and turned the Cardinals into a playoff contender.

This time the name Wilkinson was certainly better-known than Coryell, but newsmen questioned whether the famed Sooner coach would be able to successfully return to football after a 15-year absence.

"I think that we all have plateaued in our life where what we've been doing, we've enjoyed, but the idea of a new frontier out there is something that gives you a great sense of 'hey, this would be a good thing to do,'" Wilkinson said.

"Just say the timing was right. I'm delighted to have the opportunity and I'll give it the best shot I have."

Wilkinson's teams at Oklahoma led to seven state titles, including winning streaks of 47 and 31 games, a 62 record in postseason competition and an overall mark of 143-29-4. He was the winningest coach in college when he retired in 1963.

County ditch protection law sought

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — An ordinance protecting irrigation structures, ditches and waste ditches in the development of subdivisions in agricultural zones was requested Tuesday in a meeting of Twin Falls Canal Co. representatives, zoning board members and county commissioners.

Canal company directors told county officials they are having difficulties with water deliveries and waste drainage as a result of housing development. In many cases they said, developers or home builders are erecting buildings or "doing landscaping" which eliminates a farmer's drain ditches or blocks a delivery ditch. County Commissioner Chairman Merle E. Leonard said the commissioners have asked the canal company with the help of attorney John Rosholt to make some suggested regulations and submit them to the county. The county prosecutor will then review these recommendations and attempt to come up with an ordinance which will provide the needed protection. Leonard said there are a number of lines installed in the county to drain seepage water and some of the new rural subdivisions are being built with homes located directly over these. Other builders are constructing streets, curbs and other improvements over drain ditches leaving farmers with no means of running waste water from irrigated fields. When the farmers turn the waste water loose, they find they are creating flood conditions because the ditches which normally carry it off are blocked.

Maps showing drain ditches and seepage drains are available from the canal company but how to get the information to developers, and some builders "is now a major question," irrigation officials said.

Leonard said such a map can be posted in the zoning office, but not all of the building representatives would be apt to see it.

"I suppose it will take an ordinance requiring protection of the irrigation facilities and rights of way to assure delivery and run off of the water. This irrigation water, after all, is the most important resource we have and we need to assure the farmers it will be protected," the commission chairman said.

Researchers probe sudden infant death syndrome

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A silent killer, striking suddenly and without warning, kills 6,000 to 7,000 seemingly healthy babies every year.

Research can tell when the so-called crib death is most likely to strike, and who is most likely to be its victim, but nobody has identified the killer other than to call it Sudden Infant Death Syndrome.

Now the newest research indicates the victims may not be healthy infants after all, said Dr. Julius Richmond, the government's top doctor. In an unusual session of a Senate subcommittee Wednesday evening.

These infants appear to have subtle anatomic and physiologic defects ... of a neurologic, cardio-respiratory or metabolic nature, Richmond testified.

Richmond, assistant secretary for health in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare and a former pediatrician, said he has seldom encountered a more harrowing tragedy for parents.

In my years as a practicing pediatrician, I don't think I have observed any other experience which is as shattering a personal tragedy for those families, who without warning lose their seemingly healthy babies," he testified.

An estimated 6,000 to 7,000 infants die suddenly, quietly and unexpectedly in their cribs or baby carriages every year, during what has been considered normal sleep.

... Sun Valley performance set

Dances of India planned tonight

SUN VALLEY — For those who have never been to the Far East it is still not too late to taste the culture.

The Sun Valley Center for the Arts and Humanities is sponsoring an Indian dance group at the Sun Valley Opera House.

Led by Indian-born dancer, Bhaskar, the group will perform various dances of India at 8:30 p.m. today.

Bhaskar has made television, film and concert appearances in countries throughout the world.

Before Bhaskar came to the United States and became a U.S. citizen, his title was the "Zamindar of Medinipur and Bhawanipur." He began his career as a welter weight boxer, winning 13 out of 14 bouts.

It was, however, the 14th encounter that made him decide to turn to the gender art of dance.

"I was beaten to a pulp by Tiger Terry, an experience I don't want to repeat," Bhaskar says today.

And the dance world is richer for his decision. He formed his first company in India in 1950 and shortly thereafter was brought to the United States. In his several Broadway appearances, Bhaskar has been hailed as a fine actor and choreographer.

Performing dances of India, he wears a spectacular crown which is a unique showpiece. Constructed of rhinestones and metal, the crown weighs 11 pounds and breaks down into 11 pieces; it is valued by the famous New York Jewellers, Tiffany's, at $4,000.

Tickets are $4.50 in advance and $5.50 at the door.

Fertility pills out — birth control in

CHICAGO (UPI) — Lack of space and government red tape have made it necessary to give birth control capsules — instead of fertility pills — to members of four endangered species at the Lincoln Park Zoo.

Dr. Eric Mischenig, the zoo's resident veterinarian, surgically inserted hormone capsules Wednesday in two jaguars, two leopards, a Bengal tiger and a Siberian tiger.

The gradual release of the hormone will prevent each animal from conceiving for about two years, a park district spokesman said.

When a member of an endangered species in the zoo gives birth and the zoo does not have room for the new addition, the spokesman said, the zoo must apply for a permit from the federal Department of the Interior to transfer the animal to a zoo in another part of the country.

The permit can take from nine months to a year to process, forcing the zoo to take care of the offspring during the wait.

Each of Wednesday's operations — the first of their kind performed at the zoo — took about 30 minutes, the spokesman said. The animals were returned to their cages after an hour of recovery.
