

Korean jet passengers' long trip to Asia ends

SEOUL, South Korea (UPI) — A Korean Air Lines relief plane carrying 47 passengers and crew members from the ill-fated jetliner that strayed over the Soviet Union and was fired on by MiG fighter planes landed in Seoul today.

The Boeing 707 relief plane, which first stopped at Tokyo on the flight home from Helsinki, Finland, also carried the body of one of two passengers killed in the shooting incident over the Soviet Arctic Friday.

The flight to Seoul carried 34 Koreans, two Bylones and 11 crew members of the Korean Air Lines jet that was forced to land on a frozen lake after a Russian jet fighter opened fire over a remote northwest area of the Soviet Union.

The plane also carried the body of Bang Taw-hwan, a 36-year-old Korean construction worker who was killed in the attack. He was returning home from a job in Libya when the plane was attacked.

In Tokyo, 55 passengers, most of them Japanese, disembarked before the plane took off on the final leg of the flight to Seoul.

The body of a 31-year-old Japanese passenger, Yoshitaka Sugano, was taken off the plane in Tokyo. Sugano's wounded brother, Yasuo, 33, was taken to a hospital from Haneda airport, accompanied by his father.

Nobuki Oki, 23, who was wounded in the shooting, said on reaching Tokyo, "I felt I was in the middle of a struggle. What I feared most was that the plane might go down. For two hours after the forced landing on the lake nobody showed up and I feared anything could happen."

For the survivors it was the end of a nightmare journey that began Thursday when their KAL Boeing 707 took off from Paris for Seoul flying a polar route via Anchorage.

"Some hours after the plane left Paris we spotted a jetfighter. The red star mark on its side was clearly visible," said Yoshio Otani, a 50-year-old photography shop owner who kept a diary of his ordeal.

The red star belonged to a Soviet interceptor and it served notice that the plane had strayed into Soviet airspace over the top-security area of Murmansk.

"The compass gave false readings four hours after the plane left Paris. When we got in over Soviet territory, the captain said he tried to talk to Soviet air control but he received no answer," Otani said.

"The fighter appeared and began flying alongside us. It wagged its wings for about two minutes and then disappeared.

"All of a sudden it seemed like there was a rainbow in the seats in the left rear. Then there was a lot of smoke and the plane began to dive. The pilot told us later we dropped from 38,000 feet to 5,000 feet," Otani said.

The pilot, who managed to straighten out the plane and land it on a frozen lake near the town of Kem, 230 miles south of Murmansk, was later taken into custody along with the navigator. The Soviets said they wanted to hold them for questioning as to why the plane had strayed so far off course.

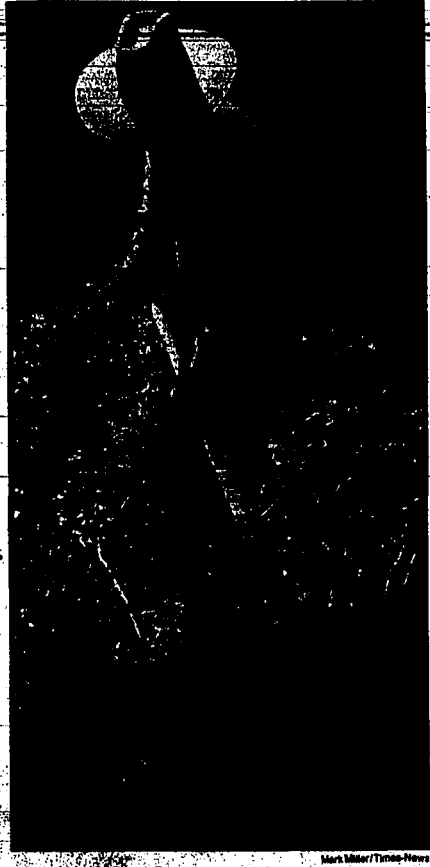

In Seoul, Korean Airlines President Cho Choong-hoon said an electrical shock had knocked out the plane's guidance systems in an area where it is particularly difficult to navigate due to proximity to the magnetic pole.

After about two hours spent on the frozen lake, the passengers were finally picked up by Soviet helicopters and taken to Murmansk where a Pan Am 777 was flown in to take them to Helsinki Friday.

"We all felt a lot easier when we saw that Pan American plane at Murmansk," Otani said.

Jerome man found slain

JEROME — A Jerome man, Roger Mudge, 20, was found dead early Sunday morning in a dairy barn by the foreman of a large dairy located four miles south and two west of Jerome.

Hall said Mudge was shot to death about 12:14 a.m. Sunday and his body was found in a dairy barn by the foreman of a large dairy located four miles south and two west of Jerome.

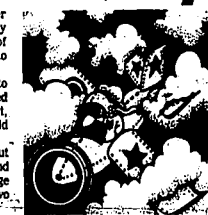

Jerome County Coroner Lauren Neher said Mudge was found dead at the scene of a bullet wound through the heart.

The murder weapon, which officers have recovered, was an automatic rifle, Hall said.

The sheriff said he believes Mudge was single and lived and worked at the dairy and had previously worked along with his father at other dairies in the Jerome area.

The names of the two suspects already in custody at the Jerome County Jail will not be released pending capture of the third suspect, Hall said.

Hansen trails two Demos in poll

By DAVID MORRISSEY Times-News writer

BOISE — Republican Congressman George Hansen would be defeated by either of two Democratic challengers, Stan Kress or Ralph Harding, if the election were held today, according to a poll released today.

A large number of those polled said they were still "undecided" how they would vote in this year's second district congressional elections.

The poll, conducted by Management

Communications and Research, Inc., a professional Idaho polling organization, was paid for by the Stan Kress for Congress Committee.

A majority of the 500 randomly selected Idahoans interviewed said Hansen should be reelected by either Kress or Harding.

The poll shows the widest margin of disapproval over Hansen's campaign to solicit funds to pay off personal, non-political debts.

When asked "Do you feel it was right for Congressman Hansen to solicit funds to pay off personal debts?" only 13.6 per cent said "yes," while 72.1 per cent said "no." Just under 13 per cent said they had "no opinion."

According to analysis of the poll, prepared by the Boise polling corporation, "It would appear that the Congressman's fund solicitation has deeply wounded his re-election chances."

When asked who they would vote for if the second district congressional election were held today and the two candidates were Republican Hansen and Democrat Kress, 41 per cent said they would support Kress, and 29.5 per cent said they would support incumbent Congressman Hansen. "Undecided" voters totaled 29 per cent. Kress is a Fifth school superintendent, who narrowly lost the 1976 election to Hansen.

Democratic candidate Ralph Harding, a Boise businessman, would also beat Hansen if the election were held today, the poll shows.

But the Harding margin over Hansen is narrower. Harding was supported by 37.7 per cent of those polled, while 31 per cent said they would vote for Hansen. The

Conservationists assail ad distortion

By LARRY SWISHER Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Conservationists are charging the Idaho Forest Council presented a "badly distorted picture" of the wilderness issue last week in a widely circulated advertising supplement.

A forest council official said today the conservationists have twisted the council's words and that the council is not taking an anti-wilderness position.

The forest council, whose members include Idaho's four largest timber corporations, two unions and many smaller companies, paid for a two-page supplement inserted last Tuesday in most Idaho daily newspapers.

Mark Ingram, director of the Idaho Conservation League, said last week the timber industry's "expensive advertising campaign" distorts the amount of roadless land in national forests which might be designated wilderness as a result of the Forest Service's Roadless Area Review.

"Idaho's wilderness could grow from its current 2.9 million acres total to more than 11 million acres (of the 21 million acres of national forest land in Idaho), if all roadless lands under study are designated wilderness," the insert stated.

"This is nonsense and the Forest Council knows it," Mark Ingram, director of the Idaho Conservation League, said last week.

He said the present wilderness issue involves only a part of the roadless acreage and that "we can keep the best of our Idaho wilderness and still have a strong timber industry."

Sam Donaldson, director of the council, said the program is intended to provide information to the public and urge them to decide how much wilderness Idaho should have.

Donaldson said the 11 million acre figure is just the maximum and that the forest service will present that amount as one alternative when it makes its preliminary recommendations in June.

"The words aren't misleading at all," he said. "They (conservationists) are supplying the interpretation. We think there should be some more wilderness. We're saying let's have it and get it done, meanwhile asking what about the supply of timber and recreation. Are there trade-offs?"

Under review are some 60 million acres nationwide and 8 million acres of roadless forest in Idaho. The Forest Service is expected to make its recommendations on how much to designate wilderness to Congress next year.

But conservationists are also concerned the timber industry advertising campaign to get public support for less wilderness designation under the RARE program is actually aimed the more immediate issue of the three million acre Salmon River primitive area, the largest contiguous primitive area outside Alaska.

Ingram said conservation groups want to protect 2.3 million acres including most of the drainage of the Middle Fork of the Salmon River. About 1.5 million are now protected, and Congress could act this year on increasing this wilderness.

He said if the additional area is logged, the yearly cut would equal only about two weeks of Northwest log exports, and that the logging would cause extensive erosion and destruction of salmon spawning beds.

Concerning the remaining RARE lands, Ingram said the timber industry is "trying to turn people who enjoy motorized recreation against wilderness."

He said Idaho contains thousands of miles of forest roads and that there will more, even if "the best of our wilderness is protected."

The roadless areas with wildlife, water, fishery and wilderness values should be classified as wilderness, "so people are assured that they remain wild."

He pointed out $70 million a year is spent in Idaho on back country recreation and $30 million on elk hunting, which depends on wilderness.

The value of the timber on much of the wilderness areas under review is marginal, Ingram said, and recreation spending has actually exceeded the timber cut on national forests south of the Salmon River.

Study claims overdependency on drugs epidemic

WASHINGTON — Women's overdependency on prescription drugs and alcohol is reaching "epidemic" proportions, according to the author of a new study conducted for the National Institute on Drug Abuse.

The study, obtained by The Washington Star, reported these findings: — Many women use anti-drug abuse more than one prescription drug;

— Sixty percent of psychotropic (mind-altering) drugs, 71 percent of anti-depressants and 80 percent of amphetamines are prescribed to women;

— Eighty percent of women alcoholics in one study reported that they used other drugs as frequently as alcohol, making multiple drug abuse and cross-addiction a significant problem among women;

— Middle-age, middle-class women are susceptible to prescription drug abuse with medications provided to help them cope. Eighty percent of prescriptions for mood-altering drugs are from internists, general practitioners and obstetrician-gynecologists who have no training in psychopharmacology;

— Up to 60 percent of those who seek prescription assistance for depression have alcohol problems. One in three of them is a woman;

— Half of the presumed 10 million Americans who are alcoholics are women.

These and other findings support the fact that millions of women across the country, like Betty Ford, misuse prescription drugs and alcohol, the report says.

"Women tend to believe that if a drug is prescribed for them, it is good for them.

They don't question the doctor. Their attitude is the doctor knows best. Women are not given enough eyeball supervision by doctors or pharmacists," said Muriel Nellis in an interview.

Nellis coordinated this nationwide study on the problem of drug and alcohol dependency for the National Institute on Drug Abuse of the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare. She is principal author of the report, called "Drugs, Alcohol and Women's Health."

"It is a major health problem — an epidemic," said Nellis. "My own guess is there are 20 million women out there in jeopardy. That's a conservative estimate."

And — there's has not been a careful measurement of its implications. We have no idea what percentage of this newest generation has been impaired not just by ingestion of alcohol but also by mood-altering drugs."

The use of prescription drugs by women exceeds the use by men. According to statistics compiled from other sources by the National Institute on Drug Abuse, 22 million women compared to 19 million men have used tranquilizers prescribed by a doctor; 18 million women compared to 12 million men have used sedatives prescribed by a doctor; 12 million women compared to five million men have used stimulants prescribed by a doctor.

Last year alone, 8.5 million women and 4 million men used tranquilizers prescribed by a doctor for the first time; 3 million women compared to 2.6 million men used prescribed sedatives for the first time; and almost 1 million women compared to 400,000 men used prescribed stimulants for the first time.

There are several theories on why women use prescription drugs more than men. One is that women use the health-care system more frequently than men — most middle-class women see a gynecologist twice a year — and come into more contact with prescription drugs.

"Two-thirds of the consumers of the health care system are women," according to an NIDA spokesperson.

Another thought is that women have been "taught" that it is okay to cry to be depressed — to show and accept these feelings, and more likely than a man to use the health care system.

The new study conducted for NIDA was critical of the tendency of physicians to "help" women by prescribing tranquilizers or sedatives.

"By allowing automatic refills or renewing prescriptions over the telephone, dependency is encouraged. Warning is rarely given about the hazards of using multiple drugs and in combination with other substances," the report found.

While Betty Ford prominently admitted last week that she was overdependent on a combination of drugs to combat arthritis pain and was addicted to alcohol, many women — perhaps the majority of those who abuse drugs and alcohol — are "hidden," according to the report, since so many are alone throughout the day.

"While society tends to accept the fact of alcoholism and drug abuse in men, women's drug problems are neither acceptable nor tolerated," the report said.

Begin hints at stiffening on pullback

KIRYAT ARBA, Israel-Occupied Jordan (UPI) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin told cheering supporters in this Jewish settlement today that Israel must be prepared to refuse to withdraw from the West Bank of the Jordan River.

Begin, bundled up in an overcoat and scarf in what of unseasonable cold, wind and rain, spoke to an estimated 2,000 persons gathered to celebrate the 10th anniversary of the founding of this settlement near Hebron, 25 miles south of Jerusalem.

His appearance came a week before he was scheduled to meet with President Carter in Washington to try to end the deadlock in the peace talks between Egypt and Israel. One of the thorniest issues in the talks is Israeli withdrawal from the West Bank. "We are asked to accept things that may endanger our security and future," Begin said. "We must be prepared with a strong heart to respond to such demands with one word — It's small, it's great and it's quiet: the word 'no.' No, we will not accept it."

The crowd burst into applause. Begin commended the 350 families representing about 2,000 persons who settled the community and said it was "the start of the development here for the coming years. I wish you that with God's help Kiryat Arba will continue to grow and the city of fathers will be the city of sons."

Someone in the crowd held up a placard with the Hebrew scrawl, "Any More Concessions to the Arabs Just Forces Us Into the Sea."

An American tourist, Bob Jacobs of Staten Island, N.Y., held up a sign in English that said, "American Jews Love Begin." He attended the celebration with his four sons.

"We feel 99.9 percent of the American Jews support him and just a few loudmouths make it seem otherwise," Jacobs said. "That's why I came here today — to show my support."

Namibia compromise offer winds up Vance journeys

LONDON (UPI) — Secretary of State Cyrus Vance headed home to Washington today following five-nation London talks that a U.S. spokesman said produced compromise proposals for the future of South West Africa (Namibia).

Vance's plane left London's Heathrow airport at 5 a.m. MST, ending the secretary's 25,000-mile swing that took him to southern Africa, the Soviet Union and Europe.

The Secretary of State, on his way home from "useful and constructive" arms limitation talks to Moscow, had stopped off in London for discussions on ending white rule in southern Africa.

Vance made no statement at the airport, but an American spokesman said he and four other Western foreign ministers had agreed on compromise proposals for South West Africa.

Vance and the foreign ministers of Britain, Canada, France and West Germany met Sunday night and agreed that South Africa should turn over power to the black majority in the former German colony of South West Africa by the end of the year.

A U.S. spokesman said the five ministers agreed on a formula for the preservation of law and order in South West Africa — also known as Namibia — after independence.

The five nations, which are also South Africa's leading trading partners, agreed on a set of proposals which were put to South Africa.

South Africa in turn asked for a clarification on some issues which were dealt with in the meeting Sunday night.

U.S. officials said the agreement resulted in no dramatic changes in the Western proposals for Namibia and Canadian Minister for External Affairs, Donald Jamieson, killed.

Donald Jamieson, will present the Western views at the U.N. General Assembly's special session on Namibia Tuesday.

A Foreign Office spokesman said the five ministers had a "thorough discussion" over dinner Sunday night on what Jamieson should say. Others attending the dinner were British Foreign Secretary David Owen and Foreign Ministers Hans Dietrich Genscher of West Germany and Louis Gulinquand of France.

U.S. officials said significant progress was made in the strategic arms limitation talks in Moscow but declined to discuss the sessions in detail for fear that premature disclosure could "screw up" negotiations.

As he left Moscow after 11 hours of talks with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko over three days and a session with President Leonid Brezhnev, Vance described the discussions as "useful and constructive."

"We have made some progress during this meeting toward a SALT agreement and we hope to carry these efforts forward in subsequent meetings," Vance said. Gromyko said he shared Vance's feelings.

A senior American official aboard Vance's plane on the way to London confirmed progress was made on arms limitation but said he did not want to go into detail because he didn't "want to screw up the negotiations."

Gromyko was scheduled to meet again with Vance in Washington in May, but no date was set for the talks.

The official Communist Party newspaper Pravda said Sunday it was the Soviet Union's "constructive stand" that created a favorable atmosphere for the arms limitation talks in Moscow.

Montana shaken

HELENA, Mont. (UPI) — A moderate earthquake and a milder aftershock rumbled through western and central Montana Sunday but caused no damage or injuries.

A Missoula, Mont., radio station reported that the sharper tremor knocked a needle off a record, and in Helena, Mont., it sent a needle off a seismograph machine.

The National Earthquake Information Service at Golden, Colo., said the quake's epicenter was 30 miles northeast of Missoula in western Montana.

The first tremor, which occurred at 4:25 p.m. MST (6:25 p.m. EST), was felt across the Continental Divide at least as far as Great Falls, Mont., and as far north as Polson, Mont., on the shores of Flathead Lake. The second aftershock occurred 12 minutes later.

Seismologists said the quakes measured 4.5 and 3.7 on the Richter scale.

Tornadoes hammer Indiana, Florida

Tornadoes spun through parts of Indiana and Southern Florida Sunday and spring thunderstorms drenched scattered areas of the eastern half of the nation.

Heavy thunderstorms, including some funnel clouds and large hail, raged across north-central Indiana Sunday night.

A private plane crashed during a heavy thunderstorm near Rushville, killing eight officials and members of the U.S. Auto Club and the pilot, who were returning to Indianapolis from the Trenton, N.J., 200-mile stock car race.

Tornado touchdowns were confirmed one mile southwest of Lincoln, Ind., and four miles south of Russellville.

The Tippecanoe County sheriff's office confirmed three funnel clouds north of Lafayette, while there were unconfirmed reports of funnel clouds south of Lafayette and four miles northwest of Frankfort. Atteca police reported two funnel clouds in Fountain County.

Patty's bid fails

WASHINGTON — Newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst's appeal of her conviction as a bank robber failed in the Supreme Court today.

Without comment, the justices refused to hear the claim that her trial in 1976 was unconstitutional.

Miss Hearst now faces a return to prison to continue serving a seven-year sentence. Her attorneys, however, are expected to try several legal maneuvers to keep her free.

Miss Hearst was found guilty after an eight-week trial of joining in a radical group's robbery of the Hilberia Bank in San Francisco on April 15, 1974.

At that time, she had declared herself to be a member of the so-called Symbionese Liberation Army, even though members had kidnapped her two months earlier.

After being convicted of armed bank robbery and using a gun during the robbery, Miss Hearst was sentenced to seven years in federal prison.

She was freed in November 1976 on a $1.2-million bond, and has since been living with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Randolph Hearst.

Hansen trails in poll

(Continued from p.1) remainder of those persons polled, 34.8 per cent, said they were "undecided" who they would vote for were the congressional election held today.

When Kress was pitted against Harding in the Democratic primary election, Kress received the support of 29.6 per cent of those polled, against 13.4 per cent for Harding.

The remainder of those polled, 54.1 per cent, said they were still "undecided" whether they would support Harding or Kress in the Democratic primary election to be held today.

When Idahoans were asked only if they agreed with the statement, "Congressman Hansen should be replaced by someone else," without naming a specific candidate to replace Hansen, a plurality also agreed. The poll shows 48.1 per cent of those polled agreed with the statement, 32.8 per cent disagreed, and 24.4 per cent had no opinion.

According to the analysis of the poll, provided by the Boise polling corporation, "In general, Congressman Hansen is an extremely vulnerable opponent. For a sitting Congressman, he enjoys little respect or support from his constituents."

Overdependence of women on drugs now 'epidemic'

"A woman is labeled, instead, as unfit, deviant, 'fallen' or 'in need' as well as society. Consequently, a woman tends to ignore or hide her drug problem."

"Women do not become statistics until confronted by a crisis that forces them to seek help. The stigma attached to the use of drugs or alcohol by women makes it difficult for them to admit their problem, seek help, be rehabilitated and then accepted by society."

While Mrs. Ford is receiving treatment at the Long Beach, Calif., Naval Hospital in a special ward for the rehabilitation of persons addicted to drugs and alcohol, in many parts of the country "a woman in a drug treatment program will not be accepted by an alcoholism program, even though the problems co-exist," according to the report.

"There is little help available for women with polydrug or cross-addiction problems," the report said. "There appear to be few differences between the needs of the woman drug addict and the woman alcoholic, yet the needs are separated, bureaucratically as well as by a therapeutic rationale that establishes alcoholism as a 'disease' and drug problems as a self-imposed habit."

The report is under internal review by the National Institute on Drug Abuse, which has not been released publicly, NIDA officials said.

Federal budget debate begins

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A blueprint of the nation's priorities for the next five years has been drawn by Congress to help the lawmakers thrash out a new federal budget.

As the Senate today began several days of debate over the government's spending plan for fiscal year 1979, it had before it a more detailed picture than ever before of what the budget and national priorities might be each year through 1983.

The Senate Budget Committee has proposed $498.9 billion in federal spending in 1979, $500 million less than President Carter proposed, with a deficit of $55.6 billion.

Projecting decisions implicit in the 1979 budget proposal, the committee estimated spending would increase to $681.5 billion in 1983. It said the budget could be balanced then if the economy is reasonably healthy.

The committee report spells out suggested national priorities five years ahead in some areas. In others it presents only budget figures which are hard to interpret.

Among specific five-year projections:

- Continued "real" growth in defense spending to modernize strategic nuclear forces and bolster NATO.
- Funds to permit expansion of aid to the poorest areas of the world.
- Sales and grants of weapons to fewer countries.
- Money for the civilian space program would be less than needed for initiation. Therefore, to minimize projects such as a fifth space shuttle orbiter, other space projects would have to be pared.

Similarly, the committee recommended less than full adjustments for inflation in the areas of science, federal law enforcement, some air and water transportation activities, operation of the Executive Office of President, the Treasury and the General Services Administration.

Not included in the projections were proposals which the committee said are likely to be made in Congress and which could add as much as $466 billion to the five-year budget if all were adopted.

They range from national health insurance to grants to make drinking water safe. The panel made no recommendations on them.

Sen. Henry Bellmon of Oklahoma, chairman of the public member, said that though the panel has made a start it "has not dealt as effectively as it should with the issue of national priorities."

ANATOLY SHECHARANSKY — LOLITA LEBRON — ROBERT THOMPSON

Spy swaps start

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Mozambique, East Germany and the United States are involved in a complicated spy swap that may set the stage for another set of trades involving imprisoned Soviet dissident Anatoly Shecharansky.

The first stage of the delicate exchange — which was initiated by an Israeli member of parliament — occurred Sunday as Mozambique officials handed over Miron Marcus, an Israeli held in prison for 18 months, to a New York congressman.

Rep. Ben Gilman, R-N.Y., greeted Marcus at the Mozambique-Swaziland border and escorted him to relatives in South Africa, his aides said in Washington.

To complete the deal, the East Germans are expected to free a Minnesota college student, Alan Van Norman, held since last year for attempting to help an East Berlin family escape to the west, and the United States planned to hand over convicted Soviet spy Robert Thompson.

Both trades are expected to occur sometime this week, although a Gilman aide said, "The logistics haven't been completely worked out yet."

Thompson, a former Air Force cryptanalyst imprisoned since 1963 for giving classified documents to the Soviets, is expected to be turned over by the United States to an East Berlin lawyer, Dr. Wolfgang Vogel. In Washington, Vogel was a key figure in the exchange of Soviet spy Col. Rudolf Abel for U-2 pilot Gary Powers in 1962.

If the triple exchange is completed, there were hopes another swap could be engineered in which the Soviet Union would allow Shecharansky to leave Russia; Cuba would free American Lawrence Lunt, jailed for 12 years as an alleged CIA agent; and the United States would release Lolita LeBron, one of the Puerto Ricans involved in a 1964 shooting attack on the House of Representatives.

The negotiations began last August after Marcus' father-in-law asked an Israeli member of parliament, Samuel Flatto-Sharon, for help. Flatto-Sharon contacted Vogel through an intermediary in an effort to negotiate the release of Marcus along with Shecharansky and several other Soviet Jews.

Gilman was brought into the deal after Flatto-Sharon talked with a rabbi from Gilman's Rockland County constituency while the rabbi was visiting Israel.

The Russians apparently turned down the request for Shecharansky, but the triple deal began to take shape. After months of undercover negotiations, Gilman flew to South Africa last Thursday and then to the Mozambique border to pick up Marcus, who was captured when his plane was forced to land because of fuel in 1976.

Loan record protection sought

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Reserve Board today was urged to adopt an emergency rule to prevent the destruction of records that may be needed to prove hundreds of millions of dollars of overcharges on consumer loans.

The Consumers Union said in its petition the board should force banks, savings and loans and other lending institutions to keep records longer than the present two-year requirement.

Consumers Union, publisher of Consumer Reports magazine, noted that government agencies are considering forcing the lenders to make restitution to their customers for overcharges, but that may not be possible if loan records are not available.

Two-year-old records are being destroyed on a daily basis, the consumer group said.

"We believe an emergency rule is justified because each day increases the number of transactions, and therefore records of violations, that will be destroyed," said Mark Silbergeld, head of CU's Washington office.

The possible restitution to loan customers is being considered under provisions of the Truth in Lending Act. The government agencies responsible for enforcement of the act have been considering restitution guidelines since last year.

CU lawyer Ellen Broadman said most of the violations involve such things as misrepresentation of the amount of interest on a loan — telling the consumer the annual percentage rate is 9 1/2 percent, for instance, when in reality it is 9 percent.

French test of neutron bomb denied

PARIS (UPI) — The presidential — Elysee — Palace today officially denied reports that France had exploded its first neutron bomb in the Pacific.

In the first formal denial of the report published last week, the Elysee palace said, "No experiment has taken place and no such experiment is planned for the moment."

The statement did not say whether France was studying the possibilities of developing such a weapon.

On Thursday, Defense Minister Yvon Bourges said about the reports of a neutron bomb test, "That's not serious."

The original reports, published in the newspaper France Soir and the news magazine Le Point, said France had conducted a "full laboratory test" of a neutron device that could be produced as a bomb within three or four years.

BPA AND CONSERVATION

As the region's largest wholesaler of electric energy, the Bonneville Power Administration plays a major role in the region's energy picture. Conservation has become an important part of this picture but it must become an even larger part. What role should BPA play in conservation?

The Picture Now

BPA now sells firm power to 138 customers. For most of these BPA is the sole source of supply. However, current studies, based on critical water years, indicate large deficits of firm energy for BPA customers and all of our region for at least the next 10 years. This means that, if we have water conditions similar to those of 1973-74 or 1976-77, there may not be enough electricity to meet the demand.

What Should BPA Do?

For some years BPA has provided guidance and assistance in conservation to Northwest utilities and consumers. This program has been beneficial but it will not assure attainment of desired energy conservation goals. We need to do more and intend to do so. There are many options to be considered such as: grants or loans for insulation and weatherization, improved efficiencies in commercial and industrial uses and in home appliances; rate incentives and penalties; power allocations; and use of waste heat for cogeneration.

Furthermore, new generating resources are more costly than the resources which the region currently uses. BPA and many others feel that in order to assure an adequate energy supply for the region and to hold down accelerating energy costs, the region must rely increasingly upon conservation.

We Want Your Suggestions

If you have ideas concerning BPA conservation policy, we would like to hear from you in writing by May 15, 1978. This summer, after assessing your recommendations and analyzing the alternatives, BPA will announce a proposed conservation policy. We will then conduct public comment forums to hear from you again.

Send your written recommendations to the Public Involvement Coordinator, Bonneville Power Administration, P.O. Box 12999, Portland, Oregon 97212. For further information, write to the above address or call 503-234-3361, Ext. 4715.

Constitution worked on canal treaties

Largely, it is the conservative to ultra-conservative faction of the American political spectrum which has raised the massive assault of letters, speeches and petition drives opposing the Panama Canal treaties.

Now that the vote on the Panama Canal treaties is over, cries of future doom and pledges of future battles are coming from the same factions.

This course contradicts fundamental conservative philosophy.

Conservatives, traditionally, have insisted on the quality of the original American democracy, and have placed a great deal of faith in the mechanism of government, as designed by our founding fathers...

In the instance of the Panama Canal treaties, a very controversial issue has been run through the system, and the system has provided a decision.

As was established in the U.S. Constitution, the Senate considered the treaties and ratified them. Now, if the majority of American people are as outraged by that decision as the treaty-opponents would have us believe, then Frank Church and 67 other U.S. senators will be turned out of office at the next election...

Opponents of the treaties say, "Ah yes, but the founding fathers did not envision a set of events so catastrophic to America's future as the 'giveaway' of the canal."

But that is the most important facet of the strength of our constitutional government. The founding fathers did not attempt to anticipate every future circumstance and design a constitution to resolve these issues.

Instead, they sought to draft a constitution of broad philosophies and basic functions to deal with whatever circumstances might arise. For 200 years, that constitution has worked wonderfully well.

It is interesting that Rep. George Hansen, R-Idaho, one of the most vocal treaty opponents who would probably consider himself a philosophical conservative as well as a functional one, was not willing to allow the method designed by the founding fathers to work.

He sought to give the U.S. House of Representatives a direct voice in the treaty voting.

The adoption of the canal treaties does not herald disaster for the Republic. This nation has weathered far worse crises and far wider chasms of opinion.

America has enough strength to survive the perils foreseen by the treaty opponents if they do come to pass. It could have survived the perils foreseen by the treaty advocates should the vote have gone the other way.

It is a strong country and it is guided by a strong governmental system. Our constitution is not so badly out of date that we need to abandon it over the Panama Canal. If treaty opponents believe otherwise, they should probably look for another philosophy with which to identify themselves, because they are not reflecting traditional conservatism.

DAVID MORRISSEY

At the same time polling is continuing in what appears to be an effort to compile a "hit list" of right-to-work opponents, vulnerable enough targets for defeat.

The right-to-work issue never surfaced in the 1976 Legislature, causing more than a few lawmakers on each side of the aisle to breathe signs of relief. In 1977, that bitter controversy so sharply divided the state that public hearings on the subject were parroted by Boise policemen and state troopers.

But for most union members, right-to-work legislation is nothing but a tool which will be used to divide and exploit labor.

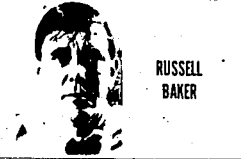

But supporters of right-to-work legislation were also vocal. "Freedom of choice," was the frequently repeated phrase of 1977, with advocates arguing union membership should be completely voluntary.

Here come European tourists

NEW YORK — We shall soon be engulfed by European and Japanese tourists. Because of the dollar's decline in relation to the franc, the mark, and the yen, it is now cheaper for people from the hard-currency countries to spend a month touring the United States than it is for an American to spend a week in Düsseldorf.

automatic rifles and fast getaway cars, but the average European neither approves nor participates in this lawlessness. It is true, of course, that most of these foreign tourists will be brash and ignorant of the older American culture. This should not be surprising.

RUSSELL BAKER

Thus, many will doubtless sneer at such things as our American railroads and declare them antique and ridiculous. In Europe or Japan, remember, they have spent their lives arriving on time at railroad stations for appointments without frozen food. They have never known the pleasures possible in a two-hour delay on the Metroliner when one is trying to advance a love affair with a passenger who got on in Newark.

And so we must not, upon being introduced to a Japanese visitor, invite him home to repair our television set. Despite popular mythology, not all Japanese are wizards of television mechanics, and it is rude to treat them like stereotypes.

For the same reason, one should not, upon meeting a Swiss tourist, ask him to turn a bundle of dollars into gold. There are many Swiss who know nothing more about banking and currency speculation than the average American banker.

One should not ask a German couple who have dropped in to see a quaint American household if they knew Adolf Hitler. One should not invite a French visitor to come by the house and prepare a six-course meal. This insults the visitor by invoking the tired old stereotype of the Frenchman as one who prefers food to frozen TV dinners.

With a modicum of civility, the American should be able to profit from its foreign guests. Block parties at which Americans perform traditional native dances like the jitterbug, the twist and the hustle, should not, a pleasant shower of yen, francs and marks when the tambourine is passed.

There is always posing on street corners in native costume for the tourist with his insatiable camera and bottomless purse. The manufacture at well-traveled intersections of native products — the car that breaks down the day the last installment is paid, the light bulb that burns out the instant it arrives home from the store — this sort of thing may net a handsome profit from tourists looking for a souvenir to take back to Bavaria, Osaka or Basel.

Demonstrations of traditional American pastimes such as squeezing the toilet paper or denting a fender on the supermarket parking lot can not only be profitable, but also enrich our brassi. European and Japanese visitors through exposure to the subtleties of an older, more complex culture.

We are, after all, the Old World, and though these innocents from materialistic new cultures cannot be expected to grasp it on a first or even a tenth visit, our examples can at least give them a glimpse of what is possible in a seasoned civilization.

Still, there are areas where gains can still be made, like the following: — Harvard, the country's largest law school, has only one woman professor, and slightly less than a quarter of its students are women, which is fewer than most other law schools have.

— Harvard, the country's largest law school, has only one woman professor, and slightly less than a quarter of its students are women, which is fewer than most other law schools have. In its catalogue, Harvard lists a $750 prize that shall go to a prospective male student best fitted "by intellect, character, and physique" to be influenced by the example of Endicott Peabody.

— By and large, women lawyers have yet to break the institutions of white male conservatism: the partnerships in Wall Street and Park Avenue firms in New York City and in large corporate firms elsewhere.

Bombs away or we need that Neutron

WASHINGTON — I like Rippliepan because he has an opinion on everything. The other day I asked him how he felt about the neutron bomb and he said, "I like the neutron bomb. It's safe and it's sane, and God knows this world needs another war weapon to protect itself."

ART BUCHWALD

"But," I said, "it seems so expensive." "For a tactical weapon it's a steal. Maybe it might sound expensive today, but let's say by the year 2000, when we give the Panama Canal back to Panama, somebody says the United States can't go through the canal before El Salvador. What do we do?"

"That's a good point. If we used conventional nuclear weapons to blast the El Salvador boat out of the way, no one would be able to use the canal," I said. "The only thing that worries me is that if I build a neutron bomb, Iran and Saudi Arabia and Israel will demand we sell it to them first. Since we're dependent on their goodwill, they have first crack at all our new weapons."

"Then we'll sell it to them. After all, if Iran, Saudi Arabia and Israel offer to buy the neutron bomb from us we can make it a lot of cheaper." "I was hoping that the neutron bomb would be just for us. It would be nice if the United States had one weapon it could call its own."

"We can't build weapons just for ourselves," Rippliepan said. "They're too expensive. But if we can get every country to say they'll take a gross of neutron bombs we can bring it in at a price our Defense Department can live with."

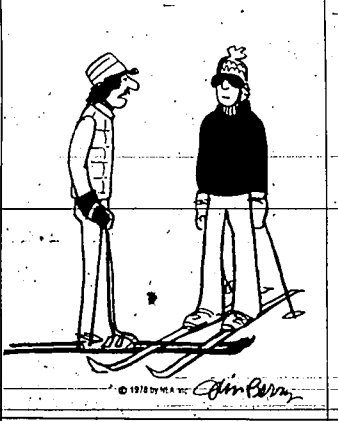

"We'll have to give them a piece of the country by our latest war weapons, how will we have the advantage over them in case they do something stupid like let an El Salvador boat go through the Panama Canal before we do?"

Rippliepan said, "It's quite simple. The fact that they buy the weapon from us doesn't necessarily mean they know how to use it. A neutron bomb is a very complicated piece of hardware. Only by lighting the fuse will it go off."

"And you don't think someone can learn how to fire one?" "No unless he's had an American high school education. You take two soldiers facing each other with the neutron bomb, one with an American high school diploma and one with a diploma from Albania. Who do you think will win?"

"The American, of course," I said. "Right," said Rippliepan. "But why?" "I don't know." "Because the American GI has been taught to think for himself. If he can't set the bomb off he'll hit the Albanian soldier over the head with it."

Women come up law ladder

By TOM GOLDSTEIN © 1978 N.Y. Times News Service CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — In the late 1950's, when Prof. Ruth Bader Ginsburg was a student at Harvard Law School, "women were not looked upon as people who should be there," she recalled. Furthermore, prosecutors' offices would not assign women lawyers to criminal cases, only a handful of women taught law and the pace-setting law firms wanted no women at all.

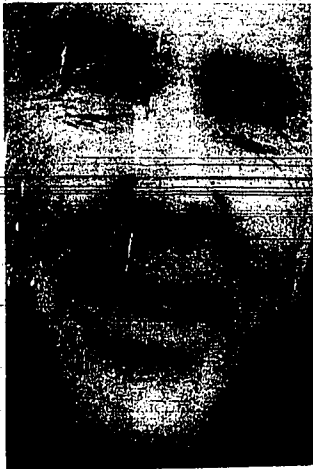

the last decade has been the influx of women. Of the country's 118,453 law students, 32,934 are women. That is 10 times the number of women enrolled 10 years ago and nearly as many as the total number of law students 25 years ago.

Of the country's 460,000 practicing lawyers, from 50,000 to 40,000 were women, and in contrast to the days when Professor Ginsburg was a student, women are now routinely prosecuting, counseling and teaching.

When Professor Ginsburg, who teaches at Columbia University Law School, entered in 1966, there were 30 women students at Harvard Law School. Now there are 394.

Carter may have energy bill in 30 days

WASHINGTON SEN. HENRY JACKSON
...thinks Congress will pass energy bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter will probably get his long-delayed energy bill within 30 days, one of the key senators working for the legislation says. "We're over the biggest hurdle," Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., said Sunday, referring to last week's agreement on the natural gas deregulation issue by leaders of a House-Senate conference committee. However, Jackson said on CBS's "Face the Nation" program the final element of the energy package — a proposed tax on domestic crude oil — may not win congressional approval.

As the lawmakers resumed work today, the House was expected to approve an emergency bill to provide financially distressed farmers with government-backed loans. Congress had earlier refused to pass a multibillion-dollar aid bill that, Carter said, would spur inflation.

The new bill, similar to one in the Senate, has the backing of the administration, Democrats and Republicans in the farm bloc and farm groups including the farm strike movement.

It would establish a two-year, $4 billion program of government guaranteed or insured loans — the capital coming from banks or private investors — to help farmers facing foreclosure. Individual farmers could borrow up to $400,000.

A proposed $495.9 billion budget for fiscal 1979 came up for the start of debate in the Senate today.

The budget proposed by the Senate Budget Committee reduces Carter's recommended spending package by $500 million and would result in a $55.6 billion deficit.

The proposal calls for continued increases for defense, above those due merely to inflation, more emphasis on energy programs and increased targeting of jobs programs toward the disadvantaged.

An income tax cut roughly the size Carter recommended is provided for, but the cut would not take effect until January 1979, three months later than Carter wants.

The week is also expected to include Senate action on a number of controversial nominations that have been pending for some time. Included is that of Benjamin Civiletti, named by Carter to become deputy attorney general.

The work schedule for the House an issue its members least like to face — ethics standards.

A bill expected to come up this week would put into the statute books parts of the ethics package that must be backed by law rather than just House rules.

A fight is brewing over a move, which has bipartisan backing, to repeal a provision limiting outside earned income to 15 per cent of a congressman's annual pay, or $8,625.

The House leadership opposes the repeal because it is certain to attract wide attention and would, if passed, tarnish the House image.

Positive attitude

NATO commander Gen. Alexander Haig said Sunday President Carter's delay of a final decision on the neutron warhead has "placed the guns" on the Soviet Union to slow its arms buildup.

'Sam' slayer may face trial

NEW YORK (UPI) — A judge will rule David Berkowitz is competent to stand trial for one of the Son of Sam slayings, a newspaper reported today.

The New York Daily News said that Brooklyn Supreme Court Justice Joseph Corso would rule today that Berkowitz is fit to stand trial for the death of Stacy Moskowitz, 20.

Corso, who held 15 hours of closed hearings earlier this month, will declare the 24-year-old former postal worker from Yonkers mentally competent to face the charges in court.

The news said Corso is expected to rule Berkowitz fit for a trial to start as early as May 8.

Miss Moskowitz was the last victim of

Son of Sam, who killed six persons and wounded seven others in a year-long shooting spree in quiet neighborhoods in New York City.

Berkowitz has been confined in a psychiatric ward of Kings County Hospital in Brooklyn since his arrest in August.

Bias battle may be lost

Washington Star

WASHINGTON — Unless the Supreme Court steps in to help, complaints that Congress discriminates against women members of its staff will be handled by Congress, no one here expects to take such complaints to federal court has now failed, except for one final appeal — not very promising — to the Supreme Court.

A decision by the 5th U.S. Court of Appeals last week practically barred the courthouse door to sex bias cases involving Capitol Hill staff members.

That court threw out a lawsuit by Shirley Davis, who had complained that she lost her job with former Rep. Otto Passman, D-La., solely because he wanted to put a man in the position.

Although a single sentence in the eight-page ruling offered a hope that some victims of sex bias might yet find a basis for suing, that seemed to have little practical promise.

Moreover, it offered no promise to Davis herself because the lower court reasoned that there may be no remedy at all for persons, like her, whose former boss has now left Congress.

Her only remaining hope is a plea to the Supreme Court to hear her case. Her lawyer, Peter Barton Hutt of Washington, says an appeal definitely will be taken to the court.

There are, however, no signs that the justices would be willing to be drawn into a potential dispute with congress over its employees.

The defeat in the Davis case is seen as a major one by feminists in Capitol Hill. Because her case was such a clear example of a firing based on a woman's sex, it had appeared to be nearly an ideal test case on the right to sue.

One of the dissenting judges in the appeals court remarked that Miss Davis was "the victim of an blatant case of gender-based discrimination as is within my experience on this court."

Feminists had wanted the courts to allow lawsuits like hers because Congress has expressly exempted itself from the existing Civil Rights Act's ban on sex bias in government and private jobs.

Moreover, Congress at present has no internal procedure for dealing with complaints of sex or race bias in employment. The Senate Governmental Affairs Committee proposed such a procedure earlier this month, and that idea will be considered next Friday by another Senate panel, the Human Resources Committee.

But the proponents of the measure say they are gloomy about its prospects. They think its chances of succeeding, this year at least, are poor.

Moreover, there is no present effort in the House to set up a bias review office with official powers. An informal committee to review complaints of discrimination has been set up there, but it depends upon members' voluntary participation.

Turning to the courts as an alternative had seemed promising early last year, after a three-judge panel of the 5th U.S. Court of Appeals ruled that Shirley Davis could sue Passman.

Soviet satellite eludes trackers

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (UPI) — Scientists say they can not immediately determine exactly where a non-nuclear Soviet satellite fell to Earth and still have doubts the craft survived its descent through the atmosphere.

The North American Air Defense Command estimated the vessel, one of about 4,500 orbiting the Earth, re-entered the Earth's atmosphere about 6 p.m. Sunday. Providing it did not disintegrate in its flight, the satellite would have crashed somewhere north of Australia.

NORAD officials said the craft fell from its weakening orbit and predicted it entered the Earth's atmosphere at a spot 4 degrees south, 126 degrees east but scientists said that prediction could be off by as much as 6,000 miles.

"With current technology, you can't get much more accurate than that," said Capt. Tom Koch, NORAD public information officer. "There is a good chance it will not survive; most of them burn up as they enter (the atmosphere)."

The Soviet satellite was expected to burn up as it re-entered the atmosphere, but scientists can not be certain the vessel did not reach Earth, unless a sighting is reported or remains are found because radar does not track objects all the way down, said Koch.

Koch said scientists later will be able to provide a more precise estimate of where the satellite entered the atmosphere, perhaps within an accuracy range of 250 miles.

"Even after the final predictions are computed, we won't know for certain if the satellite reached the earth unless we get a sighting or someone finds it," said Koch.

NORAD officials had announced last week that the satellite's "orbit has decayed and the vessel would re-enter the Earth's atmosphere sometime Sunday. Their original estimate had put re-entry time at 3:15 p.m. Sunday.

"We can't predict where it will hit or if it will," said Lt. Col. William Bertino of NORAD. "We can predict when it will re-enter, but we never know until after the fact if it will hit the earth."

Teeny-bopper idol plans trek to the altar in June

DONNY OSMOND

United Press International PUNCH LINE
 It's a wedding scheduled to shatter about 100,000 hearts—Teeny-bopper idol Donny Osmond—who's making a film with sister Marie in Honolulu—says he'll make the trek to the altar in June with 19-year-old Brigham Young University freshman Debra Glenn. Quips the 29-year-old superstar, who met his intended on a double date with brother Jay in 1975. "Deb and I have always played pranks on one another so I decided this would be one she would never top." For a surprise wedding present, the bride-to-be was written into the Osmonds' new movie.

 George Willig—the "human fly"—had no trouble walking up the vertical side of New York's 110-story World Trade Center last year, but he almost didn't make it up a cliff in Zion National Park, Utah. Matous reeled him in and they made it—after 23 hours on the 1,500-foot cliff face. Says Willig, "I'm still a little shook up from that fall. It really knocked the wind out of me."

About 70 people attended the nuptials, with female members of the wedding party lifting the hems of their long gowns to keep them clear of grease spots. Exclusive gowns target for thief

NEW YORK (UPI) — British fashion designer Eric Hall says he'll pay top dollar to get back $40,000 worth of exclusive gowns stolen by a crafty thief as the fashions were being wheeled into a New York hotel.

On Sunday, a man in a bright green satin shirt helped New York Hilton bellmen wheel in designer goods for today's show by the British Fashion Designing Group.

Before anyone caught on, the man had helped himself to two bright red boxes, containing the entire fall line of London's Bellville-Sassoon salon.

No one stopped the man, Hall said, because hotel personnel assumed he was with the designers and the designers assumed he was with the hotel. "I thought it was odd that this one man helping move the clothes had no uniform," he said.

The one-of-a-kind gowns are worth a few hundred dollars apiece, and Hall, who coordinated the show, said Sunday he is ready to deal with the thief.

"Crime is a business in New York," Hall said. "I'm prepared to pay that guy (the thief) more than he can get on the open market." He said he wants to keep the designs out of the fashion industry's black market.

"It's like paying ransom for the kidnapping of a person."

Geer services announced

WILL GEER
 ... "Grandpa"

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Will Geer loved his grandfatherly image on "The Waltons," but his heart also belonged to the theater, especially the "Theatrical Bolanicum," an outdoor theater he created in the Hollywood Hills near his home.

Memorial services will be held at the theater this weekend for the 76-year-old actor, who died Saturday on the set of his heroic, William Shakespeare, Geer, whose career began on "Hverboats" and in tent shows and ended with his portrayal of "Grandpa" on the popular television series, died of respiratory failure at Midway Hospital in Los Angeles.

He was hospitalized March 25 with a chronic respiratory problem and a hospital spokesman said Geer's condition declined late last week. At his bedside when he died were his former wife, Herta Ware, two daughters, Ellen Geer and Kate Linville, and a son, Raleigh. Raleigh Geer said the family recited poems by Robert Frost and sang "This Land is Your Land," written by Geer's friend, Woody Guthrie.

In an interview, Geer once said he liked his grandfather image because "I get to kiss all the old ladies and the young ones don't mind sitting on my lap."

Geer, a frequent crusader for liberal causes, combined his love of the theater and nature—at the Bolanicum, which he used to train young actors and produce free plays in an outdoor setting.

Born March 9, 1902, in Frankfort, Ind., Geer attended the University of Chicago and Columbia University, where he earned a masters degree in botany before joining repertory companies.

After his Broadway debut in 1928 in "The Merry Wives of Windsor," Geer had several stage successes, including "Bury the Dead" and "Waiting for Lefty."

He appeared on the road and on Broadway with such stars as Helen Hayes, Katherine Hepburn and Ethel Barrymore, and was once Walter Huston's understudy.

During the depression years he traveled the country with folk singers Burl Ivey and Guthrie, entertaining mostly at government work camps.

His motion picture credits included "In Cold Blood," "Winchester '73," "Jeremiah Johnson" and "The Reivers."

Geer refused in 1951 to testify before the House Un-American Activities Committee and was blacklisted in Hollywood for many years.

He appeared in scores of television shows and was a regular in "The Young Rebels" series before joining the cast that originated "The Waltons." His portrayal of "Grandpa" earned him an Emmy for best supporting actor in a dramatic series for the 1974-75 season.

He was married three times and is survived by seven children and two grandchildren.

Bess Truman returns home

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (UPI) — Bess Truman has returned home from an almost month-long session of dietetic and physical therapy and doctors say the former first lady has no serious health problems.

Mrs. Truman and her group of Secret Service agents returned to the 17-room Truman home Sunday after 30 days at the Research Hospital in Kansas City, Mo.

Hospital spokesman Gordon Thompson said the wife of the late President Harry S. Truman, "looked very, very good for 93 years of age."

He said Mrs. Truman, who walks with a cane, was admitted for an annual check-up to improve her diet, and for physical therapy. Doctors had hospitalized her so that she might gain weight.

"She's doing quite well," said Dr. Wallace D. Graham, Mrs. Truman's personal physician. "She had that (therapy) because she's incapacitated to a certain extent, but she is doing quite well so there's no problem."

Graham would not comment on the extent or type of treatment she underwent.

Mrs. Truman, admitted in satisfactory condition—March 25, was released in the same condition although hospital employees said she looked much better.

Mrs. Truman rarely has left her home since the death of her husband in 1972.

In 1959 she entered Research Hospital for surgery and was admitted in July 1976 for treatment of arthritis. She also received hospital treatment last year for a fractured rib suffered in a fall at her home.

Mrs. Truman has one child, Margaret, who is married to Clifford Daniels, a former New York Times editor. She is the grandmother of four children.

She has been forced to use a cane due to recurring arthritis, but makes occasional visits to a beauty shop and library and keeps in touch with friends and relatives by telephone.

Voice of America follows U.S. policy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Voice of America editorial broadcasts will follow the line of U.S. policy, but news broadcasts will remain independent, officials of the new International Communication Agency have pledged.

Deputy Director Charles W. Bray III told the Senate International Operations Subcommittee Friday he sees no alternative to having VOA editorials be in line with U.S. Government policy.

But he said in order for VOA's news operations to have credibility overseas, administrators are maintaining a hands-off policy.

Bray and Assistant VOA Director R. Peter Straus were questioned on the point by Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., who said he was concerned about the need for protecting the "integrity" of VOA newscasts.

Percy noted testimony by a government employees union official who complained of continuing "interference" with the work of VOA writers.

Kenneth T. Blaylock, president of the American Federation of Government Employees, said all foreign-policy-related news analyses must be submitted for clearance and sometimes are altered to "distort or obscure facts."

"This in itself, conflicts with the stated hands-off policy with respect to 'straight news' and which certainly can raise questions of credibility in the minds of intelligent and sophisticated listeners who can thus hear one thing in a VOA news report and another in a news analysis," Blaylock said.

Blaylock said there were also direct prohibitions on some topics, such as a "right unexplained and continuing prohibition against any really interpretive treatment of political developments" in the Peoples Republic of China.

Straus said a distinct line was drawn between those who broadcast the news and those who comment editorially, with the statements of the latter being "carefully coordinated" with administration policies.

Straus estimated that 10 to 15 percent of VOA's total product represents the "editorial function" and that it was important to separate it from the news function.

Abby ERA explained

DEAR ABBY: I read that you were all for the Equal Rights Amendment. Can you tell me why women need it? Use plain language, please. I only went through the 9th grade.

CONFUSED IN ELGIN, ILL.

DEAR CONFUSED: No one explained it better than Shana Alexander, when she debated James J. Kilpatrick two months ago on CBS's "60 Minutes" TV program.

She said: "Under the law today, women are not being treated as equals with men. Examples: Social Security: Divorced women don't get a fair share of their husband's earnings—even if they were married 30 years."

Abigail Van Buren

Divorce Law: A man can divorce a wife on the grounds of drunkenness and adultery, but in some states, a woman cannot divorce her husband on those grounds.

Property Tax Law: In all 50 states, the husband owns the farm. When he dies, his widow must pay inheritance tax—even if she has to sell the farm. But when the wife dies, he pays no inheritance tax!

Physical Abuse: In most states, a wife can't sue her husband for beating her up.

Negligent Injury: If the wife is injured, her husband can sue for loss of her "services," which includes sex; because under the law, he has a legal right to companionship, sex and domestic services. (It's called "coverture.") A woman has no such right.

Alimony: Most states don't allow it, which isn't so bad in wealthy families. But with poor couples, whose only assets are in the man's earning capacity, the woman comes out of a divorce dead broke!

As things stand now, the law is unfair to both sexes. (The Supreme Court says widows get an automatic property tax exemption; widowers don't!)

The Court says pregnancy discrimination is not necessarily sex discrimination. It isn't? When's the last time you saw a pregnant man?

The Equal Rights Amendment would take these inequities out of the law and extend the law's protection to both sexes.

DEAR ABBY: I hope you can straighten out my head. My husband and I are in our late 20s and have been married for four years. Our sex life is excellent. The problem is me. My husband begs me to do a striptease dance for him, but I just can't bring myself to accommodate him.

I know there's nothing wrong with it, and I'm no prude, but I just can't go through with it. I've tried, but at a certain point I get a terrible case of stage fright.

I have a nice figure, and I'm a pretty good dancer, but dancing totally makes me embarrassed.

Striptease dancing turns my husband on. He admits it. He has even taken me to striptease joints with him so I could learn how to do it. Abby, what's wrong with me?

STAGE FRIGHT IN ILLINOIS

DEAR STAGE FRIGHT: You're inhibited. You can lose your inhibitions and really want to, but don't feel guilty if you prefer to leave a little something to his imagination.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "SOS IN MACON, GA.": I don't buy that saying, "As you have made your bed, so must you lie in it."

He discovered that the bed you made is giving you a headache, get out of it and make it over. People who sleep on the same mental lumps night after night and do nothing about it but complain, have only themselves to blame.

Are your problems too heavy to handle alone? Let Abby help you. For a personal, unpublished reply, write: Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Your health

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb,

I am 56, my husband 62. He has told me he feels our love life is over because we are getting too old and it is just too hard to get "cranked up." He has a problem with high blood pressure but it is controlled with medication. Could his medicine be affecting this and is there anything he could take to counteract this?

He is a little overweight but is physically active and happily retired. The doctor has recommended an special diet on any method of controlling this other than the medication he is taking. I would be most grateful for anything you can suggest as this is terribly important to me.

Dear Reader,

Of course, it is important to you. A normal well-adjusted woman of your age enjoys sex and needs the closeness that it brings between her and her mate. Although your husband is older than you he should consider your needs, not just his own.

It is true that many American men begin to have a significant decrease in capability at your husband's age. However, about half of them remain active to age 75. In other societies where heart and vascular disease are less common, men remain sexually active well past that age.

Neither of the medicines that your husband is taking will have any effect on his sexual ability. He should discuss his lack of interest with his doctor. It is a symptom and its cause needs to be studied like any other symptom, just as you would a pain in the abdomen, fever or cough.

It could be caused by poor circulation which he could have with a history of high blood pressure. If so, that is important to his general health. He could be an unrecognized diabetic. He could have a decrease in male hormone production, but that alone in his age group is seldom a factor and it could be psychological. And it may even be an indication that your emotional relationship with each other is not what it should be.

I am sending you the Health Letter number 3-12. Impotence, to give you a better idea of the range of factors that can be involved. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P. O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019.

If your husband cannot get "cranked up" that still does not prevent the two of you from having some kind of closeness that may fill some of your normal emotional needs. He should be told that and make a real effort to fill that part of your life for you. The two of you may need to learn to communicate better with each other regarding what you need and like.

I noted your comment about your husband being overweight and questions about a diet. He needs to get thin and stay thin if he has high blood pressure. Put him on a low-fat, low-cholesterol diet and reduce him. Also restrict his salt. One of his medicine's principal action is to eliminate salt from his body so he certainly does not need to be taking an excess amount.

Also I hope he is taking a nice bit of eating enough, fresh fruit to provide a daily good intake of potassium. Water pills, such as the one he takes may deplete a person's potassium stores; you can usually prevent this with adequate amounts of fresh fruit and fruit juices.

COLONEL SIR FRANCIS CHESNEY, PLAYED BY DON ROBERTS steals a kiss from Donna Lucia D'Alvadores (Lottie Bruining)

Charley's Aunt mingles love with deception

EDEN HAZELTON — The Valley High School Drama Club will present its production of "Charley's Aunt," a comedy take-off on deception, courtship and the sometimes unavoidable mingling of the two, on April 27.

In the play, Jack Chesney, played by Scott Stewart, is violently in love with Kitty Verdun (Lori McFarland).

Charley (Jerry Coulson) is equally in love with Miss Spettigue (Dianne Call).

The two young schemers invite the girls to their rooms for a luncheon, in order to meet Charley's wealthy aunt from Brazil ("where the nuts are from").

But at the last minute, the millionaire aunt sends word that she must defer her visit for a few days.

Unwilling to give up their luncheon date, and equally unwilling to compromise the honorable young objects of their desires, the suitors hit on the compromise scheme of forcing a friend (young Lord Babberly) to imitate the missing aunt.

This impostor is introduced to the sweethearts as Charley's Aunt, and also to Jack's father (who is advised by his son to marry her millions) and to Stephen Spettigue, Miss Spettigue's guardian.

The sweethearts hug and kiss the impostor. The men flirt with her. Then the real aunt unexpectedly shows up and assumes another name.

In the ensuing confusion, various promises of marriage are agreed to, by hook or by crook, and everyone ends up with the woman of their dreams. The final pairings may not be what you might expect, but even "Charley's Aunt" is well rewarded for his part in the charade.

The play will be presented at 8 p.m. at the high school. Admission will be $1.50 for adults and 75 cents for students.

Francis Kish is a profile of courage

NEW YORK (UPI) — Frances Kish is a profile in courage. An artist since she can remember her first box of colors, she paints again even as she still recuperates from a stroke that in January, 1977, paralyzed her right side.

"Get back into something, no matter what," Miss Kish tells others who can function only partially.

After the long period of hospitalization, during the ongoing physical and speech therapy at home, the confinement to a wheelchair, a live-in attendant around the clock, Frances is back at her easel.

"Frances was always such a right-handed person," said her sister, Henriette, who shares a New York apartment with her. "She had to learn all over again with the left hand."

"The adjustment was terribly difficult at first," said the artist, whose speech still is sturred from the paralysis.

"But I knew I had to get over thinking that I could never paint again." She resumed with 12-inch sketches using a line drawing technique.

"Then one day," Henriette recalled, "Frances said, 'Will you get out my easel?'"

Now, she paints for a couple of hours almost every afternoon.

A rapid worker even under handicap, the artist soon had enough major canvases, still life and landscape, for a second one-woman show at the Kalerson Gallery four blocks away in Manhattan's Antiques Center of America, Inc. Kalerson is run by three young graduates of the prestigious Pratt Institute, where they studied art, photography and interior design. The three are Elizabeth and Kenneth Larson and Ira Yellen. Larson's mother, Marian, also is an artist.

Frances Kish's post-paralysis art, mostly in oils, are in much stronger colors than her previous paintings. Flowers painted from memory are hot pinks, oranges and reds, as if the artist were taking some of the cancer of her fade out on the canvas. Landscapes show bolder strokes.

The Kish sisters grew up in Chicago. Both are Journalists. Henriette free-lances for magazines, and Frances had had a long career that spanned fashion illustration, editorships of movie magazines and writing for television.

Many of the artist's works before her stroke were realistic recalls of scenes from their travels of the American West, the Middle East and all over Europe, including the Soviet Union.

Their apartment walls are covered with autographed pictures of celebrities with whom they've worked and of Frances' paintings. "And you should see what's in the closets!" said Henriette.

The artist began her career officially at 16 when a vice-president of Marshall Field's looked at a fashion sketch she'd submitted. She did drawings for the department store, then for a Chicago daily newspaper, illustrating fashion ads for stores. She also studied at the Art Institute of Chicago.

The Kish sisters moved to New York, where Frances went to work as a "girl Friday" for Photoplay magazine, then became its managing editor. For 17 years she was under contract to write for MacFadden Publications.

She also sold articles about television and wrote television shows when the medium was in its infancy.

But she never abandoned painting, "my first love." She studied at night at Cooper Union, the Trophagen School of Fashion, and the Art Students League, where she is a life member. She has had exhibits in the New York-New England area.

Treatment for the stroke (and the pacemaker installation in 1976 after a heart attack) wrecked the Kish savings, but Medicare, Medicaid and Social Security all are now being drawn on.

"I've seen a lot of improvement in her health and attitude," said the artist's sister said. "The doctors tell us a lot of recovery depends on her. We believe in miracles."

FRANCES KISH, ARTIST, PAINTS AGAIN as she recuperates from stroke

Teaching: a contagious habit when raising children

By ERMA BOMBCEK

What do I like to grow up with a mother or father who is a school teacher?

Janet, a 23-year-old reader from Glendale, Ariz., contends it's less than a religious experience. She writes, "I went past, puberty thinking all mothers put candles on birthday cakes with a 'ten's' and a 'ones' column. I always got pencils in my Christmas stockings, saying 'Greetings From Your Teacher,' and once for Christmas, I got a stovetop plastic ruler with the name of some kid who moved away."

I told myself teaching was the last thing I wanted to do, but somehow I find myself not only teaching school, but saving empty Pringles cans and little scraps of felt. I label margarine tubs using wide-tipped magic marker and color code things in my junk drawer.

"I even caught myself putting a frowning face on a letter to the gas company about an over-billing."

Now you know, Janet, Teaching is contagious.

I married a teacher 28 years ago. Together, we spawned three children. The kids took a vow of silence at the end of each grading period. They sat through 21 commencement exercises. They never sent a letter from camp that wasn't corrected in the margins, graded, and returned.

Isn't easy living with a parent who can interpret your ACT scores ... who is never convinced the library has no books on Trotsky ... who can snap you awake with a piece of chalk at 60 paces.

Who knows when a holiday isn't ... how many juniors really drive to school ... and who, when the chips are down, always sides with the administration?

When it came time for our first son to make a decision on his career, I asked him, "Do you want to spend the rest of your weekends for the rest of your life grading papers? Do you want to see everyone else's kids in the daylight — except your own? Do you want to go on a honeymoon and have a pair of little square scissors fall out of your pocket?"

"Do you want to build your social life around the football, basketball and track schedules? Do you want to sit through the 8th grade doing 'The Mikado' 12 years in a row? Do you want to stand around at proms going deaf?"

He handed me his paper. "True, true, true, false, true, true."

He inherited the disease all right. © 1978 Field Enterprises, Inc.

Oswald: "South's analysis was incomplete. He should have attacked diamonds first and would have been sure of his contract that way."

Alan: "He should have led a heart to dummy at trick two and led a diamond from dummy. If East held the diamond ace and rose with it South would be sure of three diamond tricks. If East ducked South would shift to clubs and be sure of two clubs and one diamond. In any event the game would have been safe."

Oswald: "South's ace of spades took East's king at trick one. South promptly led a club to dummy. East won with his ace and led another spade. South's ten lost to West's jack and West continued spades."

Preschool clinic

PARENTS in Twin Falls can bring their preschool children to the YM-YWCA free clinic from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Wednesday through Friday. Children will be tested on deficiencies in sight and hearing—and no appointment is necessary.

Scholarships awarded

MAGIC VALLEY — Three Magic Valley students were named scholarship recipients of the Trust Fund Scholarship fund given by the Idaho Federation of Music Clubs.

Students auditioned at Idaho State University, competing with applicants from about the state.

Winners were Shelley Balsech, vocalist from Jerome, $200, third place; Carolyn Castor, trombone, Halley, $200; and Lydia Mizer, xylophone, Halley, amount not named.

School clinic set

TWIN FALLS — Parents in Twin Falls will have an opportunity to find out if their preschool children are ready for the start of first grade and kindergarten classes in free clinic beginning Wednesday.

The hearing and sight screening clinic will be sponsored at the YM-YWCA building by the New Corners Club, Delta Gamma Alumni and Junior Club.

Parents may bring their children to the Y from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Wednesday, Thursday or Friday. No appointment is necessary. Children believed to have deficiencies in either sight or hearing will be referred to a medical specialist for further examinations.

Volunteers from the sponsoring organizations have been trained to conduct the screening tests. Telex is assisting by furnishing earing equipment for the three-day program.

Sponsors say even if children have been screened in the past, they should be retested as vision and hearing may change quickly in small children.

Chairmen for the event are Vivien Goss of Delta Gamma, 733-8263; Mary Courtney of Newcomers, 734-5117; and Deanna Dal Soglio of the Junior Club, 733-0638. Parents may call the chairman for additional information.

markets Stocks at Midday

NEW YORK (UPI) — Aided by the dollar's strengthening in foreign exchanges and today's solid earnings, the stock market headed higher Monday in fairly heavy activity.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which fell 1.24 points Friday, was added 1.85 points to 817.45 around noon EST. The Dow gained 17.67 points overall last week, leaving it 20.85 points above its Feb. 12, 1978, low of 792.12.

The dollar triggered an early spurt when it rose sharply on foreign exchanges as a result of Federal Reserve tightening credit last week in a bid for an inflationary $2.1 billion increase in the nation's money supply. This credit tightening, however, had many investors worried.

Kodak's report that first-quarter earnings rose 50 percent, higher than analysts had predicted, also sparked some buying. Kodak stock, a Dow average component, was the third most active New York Stock Exchange issue, up 1/4 to 49 1/2.

Against this background, advanced declines, 744, 500, among the 1,715 issues crossing the NYSE tape in the early going.

NYSE turnover at the two-hour mark amounted to about 1,110,000 shares, down from the 13,400,000 traded during the corresponding period, Friday.

How to treat check swindler

(Second of five columns)

Have you, owner of one of this country's millions of small businesses, warned the receptionist who sits near your office entrance how to handle a checkwriter swindler if this crook walks into your office? Have you thoroughly discussed with whoever handles advertising solicitations in your shop, office, plant, etc., how to recognize "minority" advertising solicitation (fraud) if and when you're the "target" of this?

Not? Then you're an easy mark for these impostors which already are sweeping the U.S. in '78 and will hit new highs this year.

Victimizing you as well as countless hundreds of thousands of others unless you are on guard from this day on.

To illustrate, in the scenario for the checkwriter maintenance fraud, a couple of repairmen will walk into your office, brush by your waiting receptionist with the gib claim, "We have been called to repair your office checkwriter." They examine the machine, report it needs bench work, and take it with them. Within a few hours, you, the business owner, get a phone call informing you the work will cost $150. Or perhaps the claim will be that your machine is beyond repair and you will be offered a rebuilt model at a "special" price.

You counter with, "But I have a service contract." The answer: "Not with us, sir." Only then do you discover that these men are not from the legitimate service company with which you have dealt for 12 years, but are from ZYX Checkwriter Co., Downtown, U.S.A. "It'll be $150 plus pickup and delivery charge... total $210... in cash."

In the checkwriter forgery insurance variation, you get an agent's invoice for, say, the $95 premium for the renewal of your "forgery and alteration policy." You pay it. A few weeks later, you get a bill for the extension of the policy for a "full $6 monthly." You call the toll-free customer service number to learn that this is not the company with which you have insurance. This impostor has used a look-alike invoice and a local post office box to deceive you into buying duplicate insurance coverage. You order cancellation because you do have bona fide coverage. The phony mail-order agent says, "That was just a sales gimmick: Your company's policy is illegal in your state."

To protect yourself, have two people in your office authorize payments to vendors for services.

measure of your continuing good faith, we are confirming your $750 contribution to our annual program...

If you reply you can't manage a contribution of that size in '78, the promoter will bargain you down to $100 amount — even $25.

The pitch is typical. No matter what questions you ask, you will get no answers because there was no inspection, there are no inspectors. If you persist, there will be implied threats about reporting your lack of cooperation to the "Equal Opportunity Division."

Or instead of a phone call, your bookkeeper may receive an invoice for, say, $258 and a newspaper letterhead with your company's name listed among hundreds saying "we support equal opportunity." Or there may be just an invoice and a note confirming your order.

Don't pay the invoice. Hang up the phone. This type of high pressure pitch is the giveaway that an unscrupulous promoter is operating a minority advertising scheme. The legitimate concern for equal rights has been twisted by these con men into schemes that "have been" and are presently serving the needs of the handicapped.

A California company operating from 1971 to 1975 used more than 30 different names and mail service-P.O. box addresses. The misrepresentations ranged from organizations dedicated to job training for minorities to aiding handicapped writers to promoting equal opportunity employment. The promoter finally was convicted of 22 counts of mail fraud, sentenced to a five-year prison term and a $15,000 fine. He reportedly had raked in more than $2 million.

Next: The phony "police" pitch, office supply gypsies.

prepare and keep at hand a list of firms with which you have service contracts, the date of the last visit and by whom. Record the full name and address of the service company on the equipment.

If a phony service company victimizes you, notify the district attorney at once. If a forgery insurance invoice swindler hooks you, write to your local postal inspector. Complain!

In the minority advertising solicitation rip-off, the pitch will be a phone call from a person claiming to be with a committee for inter-racial, etc., etc. harmony and adding, "Your firm has been checked out by our inspectors and approved because of your commitment to equal opportunity. As

Stocks strike buying high

NEW YORK (UPI) — A massive 212.3-million-share turnover, heaviest in the New York Stock Exchange's 186-year history, drove stocks to a three-month high this week in an institutional buying stampede.

The Dow Jones industrial average, a 25.55-point winner last week, rose another 17.67 points to 817.45. Its 814.54 close Thursday was the highest since it finished at 817.74 on Jan. 3. The Dow is 70 percent above its 1978 low of 742.12 on Feb. 22.

The Dow's gain was disappointing considering the fact that volume, the week's big story, totaled 212,289,550 shares, shattering the record of 162.2 million set Jan. 26-30, 1976. Last week's volume of 167,350 was the fourth heaviest in NYSE history. Turnover during the same week a year ago totaled 105,856,690 shares.

The 63.5 million shares traded Monday set an all-time daily record. The 43,227,020 issue listed on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter totaled 236,111,270 shares, compared with 161,549,730 last week.

The market's surge, following a lengthy slide, was an emotional institutional buying stampede triggered a week ago by a smaller-than-expected rise in the nation's money supply. It involved panic, follow-the-leader buying by those afraid of being left out of a major rally.

The rally involved the replacing of borrowed shares. Turned options players to scramble to buy stock to cover their positions. It brought in foreign investors.

It also produced controversy among analysts who noted the Federal Reserve's latest money supply report showed a $2.1 billion rise that put pressure on the board to tighten credit. Fed Chairman G. William Miller confirmed credit already had been tightened and Wall Street wondered if more was in store. The Fed's action and the Treasury's plans to sell gold monthly propped up the dollar abroad and helped the stock market. But foreign money managers are wary of Carter's 0.6 dip in the gross national product, the first in three years.

Fisell gold monthly propped up the dollar abroad and helped the stock market. But foreign money managers are wary of Carter's 0.6 dip in the gross national product, the first in three years.

Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps expects the economy to recover and post a 4.5 percent gain for 1978. Her argument was supported by a 1.2 percent rise in March personal income, a 2.1 percent hike in durable goods orders, a sharp rise in industrial production and a record 32 percent March housing starts surge.

New National Smoker Study:

“Easy Switch” Say 85%.

Research concludes MERIT taste makes move to low tar smoking unexpectedly easy.

Every smoker knows it's tough to find a low tar cigarette with enough good taste to switch to—and stick with.

Does MERIT with 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco deliver enough taste to make the switch to low tar easy?

For new evidence—solid evidence—read the results of a new national smoker study conducted with MERIT smokers.

Results Endorse MERIT Breakthrough

Confirmed: 85% of MERIT smokers say it was an "easy switch" from high tar brands.

Confirmed: Overwhelming majority of MERIT smokers say their former-high tar brands weren't missed!

Confirmed: 9 out of 10 MERIT smokers not considering other brands.

And in extensive taste tests against leading high tar cigarettes—

Confirmed: Majority of high tar smokers rate MERIT taste equal to—or better than—high tar cigarettes tested! Cigarettes having up to twice the tar.

Confirmed: Majority of high tar smokers confirm taste satisfaction of low tar MERIT.

First Major Alternative To High Tar Smoking

MERIT has proven conclusively that it not only delivers the flavor of high tar brands but continues to satisfy!

This ability to satisfy over long periods of time could be the most important evidence to date that MERIT is what it claims to be: the first major alternative to high tar smoking.

Freight train hits herd of sheep, kills 130

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

GOODING — A Union Pacific freight train ploughed into a herd of sheep northeast of Gooding Saturday, killing as estimated 130 animals and injuring scores more.

David Sliman, who owns the sheep with his father, Lester Sliman, said the animals are worth $60 apiece for an estimated loss of $7,800.

Additional loss probably will result, he said, because lambs whose mothers were killed will not do as well.

C.R. (Rocky) Rockwell, public relations officer for the railroad in Salt Lake City, said he understood livestock men usually obtained schedules of the trains when they were planning to move sheep or cattle over a rail crossing, but he did not know if this had been done in this case.

In Gooding today, Sliman said, "It seems to be difficult to find out about the schedules."

He said he and his father were "beginning work" today on filing a claim with the Union Pacific Railroad Co. Sliman said they also were trying to obtain a copy of the train schedules so they would know what times to expect the fast moving trains through the desert between Gooding and Shoshone.

The sheepman said there is no way to know how many of the dead ewes and lambs were matched since ewes do not stay with their lambs when the flock is being moved, so he cannot estimate how many of the young lambs may be orphaned. Some of them may not survive, he said.

Engineer on the mainline freight was H.F. Beebe, Pocatello, and conductor was CA. Pipkin.

Rockwell said the train probably was traveling about 60 miles per hour as it was a through train which made no local stops.

Both the Gooding county sheriff's deputy who investigated, along with the State Police, and Sliman said the death of so many sheep by a train is unusual. Sliman said he had been involved in the sheep business for more than 30 years and his father for many years before him, and this was the first time their sheep ever had been hit by a train.

The bodies of the dead animals were to be removed from the site this morning.

According to Mrs. Sliman, there were two herders moving the sheep from one range to another and "when they looked there was no train coming."

The accident occurred at 8:37 a.m. at the Tunapa crossing, a dirt road into the desert off the old Shoshone highway.

Sliman said this is the second accident he has had with his sheep this year. On April 1 another 30 head were killed when struck by a car on Highway 46 between Wendell and Gooding, Sliman said the animals had sought shelter from a storm on a section of the highway which goes between cuts in rocks.

That accident occurred the first day the flock was put out to summer range.

today KLIX wins awards

TWIN FALLS — Top radio news honors in Idaho went to Twin Falls radio station KLIX at the 1978 Idaho Press Club Awards Banquet.

In two categories, KLIX announcers were voted best in the state.

News Director Annette Jenkins won first place for the best radio newscast of 1977. Jenkins and KLIX reporter Don Wimberly shared first place for best radio spot news in Idaho in 1977. The spot news award was for coverage of the Twin Falls tractorcade protest.

The awards were presented Saturday at a ceremony held in Sun Valley.

Public views sought

TWIN FALLS — The public is invited to make suggestions on wilderness policy and procedures of the Bureau of Land Management at a meeting Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at the Holiday Inn.

Rob Helle, outdoor recreation planner for the Shoshone district of the BLM, said the agency is anxious to get public input before deciding on definite procedures used in wilderness reviews of public lands.

One of the requirements of the Federal Land Policy Management Act of 1976 is to inventory all roadless areas of 5,000 acres or more to see if they have wilderness characteristics, he said, and public participation in such decisions also is required.

He said the meeting is not to discuss any specific sites at this time, but to outline procedures for future use in reviewing public lands for possible wilderness areas. Similar meetings have been held in Boise, Coeur d'Alene and Pocatello, with future sessions scheduled in Idaho Falls Thursday and Salmon May 2.

Malta youth injured

BURLEY — A 19-year-old Malta youth was reported in stable condition at Cassia Memorial Hospital here after the pickup truck he was driving rolled about three times early Sunday morning.

Hospital authorities said Danny Lee Smith suffered a broken pelvis in the accident, but said he is satisfactory and improving in the intensive care ward.

The Cassia County Sheriff's Department said a friend of Smith, Paul Barnes, reported Smith was driving west on Hillcrest Lane about three-quarters of a mile east of Burley about 1:10 a.m. Sunday when the pickup suddenly veered into the left lane.

Undersheriff Bill Crystal said the driver apparently overcorrected to get back to the right-hand lane and went off the right side of the road, up a ditch bank and rolled about three times. Smith was taken to the hospital by ambulance, Crystal said. No citation was issued pending completion of the investigation.

Eden man files suit

TWIN FALLS — An Eden man who says he suffered a crushed foot when a trailer tongue fell on it is seeking $254,643 in damages from the manufacturer of the trailer.

In a complaint filed in Fifth Judicial District Court here, Leo C. Hite of Eden, seeks damages from Bucko Inc. of Buhl, makers of Beavertall Trailers.

Hite charges he was employed at a service station last April and was helping load a Beavertall trailer when the hitch of the trailer came loose, allowing the trailer to drop onto his foot, crushing it.

Hite says the manufacturer was careless in design of the equipment and in failing to give warning that such an accident could occur.

Ketchum policeman wins Mr. Idaho title

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN
Times-News writer

KETCHUM — After 19 years since his last flex in the Mr. Idaho body-building championships, Ketchum Policeman Jerry Engelbert, now 41, went to Boise Saturday and won the title that eluded him almost two decades ago.

Engelbert, who placed second in 1959 to Larry Scott, former Mr. Idaho and Mr. Universe, showed a standing room only crowd at the Boise YMCA, just what 20 years of weight-lifting and body-building can do for a man's physique.

The quiet, mild-mannered Ketchum police officer took the title of Mr. Idaho from a field of eight younger contestants. Engelbert was named the man with the most perfect and powerful body in all of Idaho.

But 19 years ago, as a 22-year-old from Jerome, Engelbert was a soon-to-be forgotten runnerup in the state's last Mr. Idaho contest. However, it wasn't a middle-aged paunch that Engelbert developed over the 19-year interval between the two contests and the live judges and bull-house crowd chose him to receive the new title.

Halley resident Mike Coullidge, 30, Engelbert's training partner, received fourth place in Saturday night's competition.

Both men also won first place honors in their weight divisions of the senior bench press contest in the 1978 Idaho Power Lifting championships also held Saturday night at the Boise YMCA.

Coullidge pressed 330 pounds to win the 185- to 191-pound class. Engelbert pressed the same amount to win the 181- to 198-pound class.

Ketchum Police Chief Dennis Haynes pressed 315 pounds to finish third behind Engelbert.

District judge takes pen in hand

By RAY SULLIVAN
Times-News Writer

RUPERT — Fifth District Judge Sherman J. Bellwood may be about to fight another battle with himself that will require as much thought as his first inner struggle over whether to become a lawyer or a dentist.

The judge is accomplishing what untold numbers of writers seek and never attain: getting his first attempt at writing a novel published nationally by a well-known New York publishing house.

And if the book sells successfully, the choice he might face this time would be between his robe and gavel and a typewriter containing a blank page.

Judge Bellwood, inmate correspond

The following is an excerpt from Judge Sherman J. Bellwood's soon-to-be released book, "The Judge, Episodes and Encounters." The character's name, Newman B. Gorham, is the real one of a prisoner. Bellwood began corresponding with eight years ago after he received hair mail from Gorham.

He and the former professional bank robber are friends today and Bellwood even flew to Atlanta to visit him in prison a few years ago. The excerpt is in letter form between the two men:

Dear Judge,
...But you ask how I feel about the man with a family who works an armored car, who carries a payroll, who works in a bank, him or her. Well, I suppose you have a right to ask and I feel I am obligated to answer. Too, you may find this information hard to get from anyone else.
Well, let me start. For one thing, I do not consider the guard in the truck or the man who carries a payroll. He is armed. He is doing a job he gets paid for. He takes a calculated risk that something could happen. To me, he is a professional and dangerous.

Vantage Press is printing Bellwood's semi-fictional work, "The Judge, Episodes and Encounters" for distribution around the country late this summer or in early fall. Vantage's Leonard Zimmerman, director of publications, says Bellwood, 60, said the book contains nine characters beside the Judge and his wife, with the Judge's character threaded throughout the story. He said the story line revolves around the relationship the Judge has with each person, and contains a prologue and epilogue.

Bellwood readily admits some of the incidents described pertain to cases he has been involved in, but he also noted some of the characters are based on people he has never met, but with whom he has corresponded as a result of his being on the bench.

To the uninitiated, the 15-year career of the bench makes it look easy to get a book published. He said he has been developing the story line for about seven years and just decided in January 1977 to start writing. Finishing the manuscript late last October, he sent letters of inquiry to several publishing firms. A few rejection slips later, however, Vantage Press popped up with an acceptance and a contract was signed Nov. 3, the judge added.

He said the initial printing will be at least 4,000 copies (Vantage only prints hardback books), with more to be printed if sales deem it necessary.

"I don't know how to describe that damn book," Bellwood says. "It's based on fact but I have twisted a lot around to fiction."

For instance, one of the real characters actually does know how to fly a plane, as described in one of the chapters, but he cannot be licensed to fly since he is a three-time loser.

Judge writes book

"It's just a story I wanted to tell and it had been suggested to me by several people locally that it was an interesting story," Bellwood explained. "One day I just started writing."

Following the set schedule, Bellwood typed the story out both at work and home. He said he was surprised by the quickness between when he sent out letters and the contract signing.

"I didn't have any experience to bank on. I didn't know if I could write or not," he added.

He said several friends pre-read the 335-page, double-spaced manuscript before he sent it off. Those friends, as did Vantage, only made minor changes in punctuation and sentence structure, the jurist said.

Bellwood said he will receive a standard percentage of the 85 book profits and the contract calls for him to promote the book anywhere the publishing house designates at autograph parties.

Asked if he is working on another manuscript, yet, Bellwood's mouth quickly lit up at a smile. "Yes, I am. It's a love story in poetry form. That's all I want to say about it now. I haven't had it reviewed yet. I just thought I'd try my hand at poetry. It will be larger than the usual books of poetry you find."

Just what his future on the bench is may depend on the success of his writing, Bellwood says. He is up for re-election this year, but doubts he will stay on until he is 70.

This is Bellwood's second stint as judge, beginning with his appointment to the 11th District bench in 1957. He left to return to private practice 2 1/2 years later.

"I didn't know which I wanted to be the writer or the judge," he said. "By 1961, after the judicial districts had been restructured, he had chosen the latter role and was appointed to his present position."

"I like the variety and I guess maybe like to try to solve problems better than preventing them."

Bellwood was born June 13, 1917, in Sugar City and graduated from Kimberly High School in 1934. He received a bachelor's degree from the University of Idaho four years later and in 1941 picked up his law degree from the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor.

With time out for four years as an officer during World War II in the Coast Artillery Corps, Bellwood was a lawyer in Halley from 1942 to 1947.

He spent the next 10 years in Rupert before being named to the bench, as Rupert city attorney and as Minidoka County prosecuting attorney.

He is married to Elizabeth Jane Lee, daughter of the late Idaho Supreme Court Justice, T. Bailey Lee.

Bellwood has been listed in "Who's Who in America," "Who's Who in the West," and "Who's Who in American Law" in addition to being active in many judicial and civic groups.

BLM wants radio shed down

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN
Times-News writer

HAILEY — A concrete communications building, erected by Blaine County on a mountain 10 miles east of Bellevue, is trespassing on Bureau of Land Management property and will have to be torn down, according to BLM officials.

BLM Shoshone District Manager Chuck Hazler said a concrete building to house radio and communications equipment for the Blaine County Sheriff's Office in Halley was erected on BLM property atop Bell Mountain last October.

The only problem, according to Hazler, is that Blaine County didn't get permission to build the communications shed and the 8-foot by 16-foot concrete building, which stands about seven feet high, violates nearly all BLM specifications required of a communications building at the site.

Hazler said the structure was poured in a two- or three-day period in early October and then discovered by BLM employees working on the mountain.

Because the building is legally in trespass on BLM land and falls to meet BLM specifications, Hazler said the building will have to be removed and the county will have to rebuild it properly.

It has not been disclosed exactly who ordered the building to be erected, although Blaine County Sheriff Orville Drexler admitted one of his officers, acting in the sheriff's absence, gave the go-ahead in early October for a Bellevue construction company to pour the concrete communications building.

Drexler, who was on vacation at time of construction, claimed the incident was a misunderstanding and that neither his office nor the county were willfully violating BLM regulations.

"There was a misunderstanding," Drexler said. "It was a matter of oral communications and a misunderstanding on the part of the department and the Bureau of Land Management."

The sheriff's office contacted BLM about a year-and-a-half ago concerning radio communications sites to link the Carey area in southeastern Blaine County with the sheriff's communications network, according to Hazler.

Currently, the sheriff's department in Halley has no radio communication with that section of the county.

Because communications sites are scarce, Hazler said detailed specifications were given to the sheriff's department on what would be required of a building built on Bell Mountain.

BLM specifications required the building to be able to house additional parties wishing communications facilities, meet strict building specifications and be unobtrusive in design and location.

Hazler said the concrete building, which was suddenly erected, failed to meet site, building, environmental and safety specifications. As well, the BLM never granted Blaine County the right of way to build the structure; consequently, Hazler is asking that the building be removed.

Gov. Evans pushes gasahol

IDAHO FALLS (UPI) — Gov. John Evans said today gasahol can be of great importance to Idaho but that institutional barriers and basic economics are obstacles which could preclude its development.

But the governor, addressing the Statewide Conference on Gasahol, said the economic feasibility of its use as a fuel is a two-headed coin.

"If the price of gasoline continues to increase as it has in the past, by the time gasahol plants are in production in Idaho — assuming that the price of raw products for alcohol production does not increase — gasahol will make economic sense to the consumer," he said. But he said the other side of the coin depends on the price of farm commodities.

"The business of America would come to a tragic standstill if we did not have efficient secretaries (secretaries are countless offices). This is what one of the nation's top business executives recently said at a New York convention. In keeping with this sentiment, we salute all secretaries and wish them continued success. A special week acknowledging the contributions of all secretaries to the vital roles of business, industry, education, government and the professions, honors them. They are to be further commended for their high caliber exchange of information and ideas for mutual benefit. Thus they are further serving in their worthy calling. All across the land, events will be staged honoring these fine, dedicated people, whose talents keep the wheels of progress humming. We salute you, each of you, for your outstanding contribution to America's progress. You are making our country even greater!"

Inmate's letters included in Judge Bellwood's book

In spite of this I will attempt to take him or them in such a manner that he or they are unable to resist. I'm a fair judge of people. I will know the character and general habits of these men before I act. I have access to such information on anyone. I pick the time and location, and I allow for situations not in the plan.

The weapon I use will probably be a 12-gauge automatic shotgun with an 18-inch barrel and loaded with double-0 buck. I can get off five rounds in four seconds. There are nine lead balls the size of a .32 bullet in each round. I use a homemade extension tube which allows me to carry fifteen rounds (125 balls).

Now, Judge, no man in his right mind, with or without a family, is going to do anything stupid in front of such a weapon. Remember, these men are experienced in the use of weapons. Most are ex-servicemen or police officers.

I have never had a serious problem in which violence was called for.

The Judge recalled a previous letter from Norman: "It is true that I have, in the past, shot animals, but they were armed and hunting me."

Now, a bank is quite another matter. Here we deal with unarmed people. I've had young women deliberately, in front of a machine gun, stomp down on alarm buttons and reach out to start cameras. I simply ignore them. I already know how long it will take the police to reach the area. I carry a transistor radio, altered to pick up the police band, and I know their code. Too, I have alternate escape plans, and carry army surplus smoke projectiles and other equipment. I work with, and use, men. We have rubber head masks. We can clean a bank in three minutes with no real danger to ourselves, but the strain is considerable. Bank employees are nice ordinary people. No matter what action they take you cannot hurt them. For this reason, I do not do many banks. In fact, I have only worked eleven, including the two I'm in here for. I never said it was easy!

Well, Judge, you get me the lecture circuit — 40 per year at $2,000- and I'll hang up the shotgun, forthwith! Provided, of course, you supply me with "brave pills." Otherwise, I'd probably pass out...

Judge, I'm concerned. I think you are getting to me. I'm uncomfortable with myself. But I'm getting awfully comfortable with you. A Judge, yet!

I hope our (friend) is all right. Perhaps he could be trained to cut meat. If not, he may end up doing it to people.

Good night, brother,
Norman

Soviet scientist sees quake for California

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — U.S. scientists reacted with skepticism — or annoyance — at a Russian scientist's prediction that a devastating earthquake will strike the Los Angeles area this year.

"I think it's irresponsible," protested Dr. Peter Ward of the U.S. Geological Survey in Menlo Park, near San Francisco.

"It's poor science to discuss an earthquake in someone else's country without involving the local scientists in the discussion."

Dr. Robert O. Castle of the Geological Survey said there was "no basis to support the Russian scientist's predictions."

"I am very skeptical of the prediction and I believe we have an obligation to be skeptical of such reports until we have some firmer evidence in hand," said Professor Clarence Allen of the Caltech seismology laboratory, the region's leading center for the study of earth tremors.

Dr. Andrei Nikonov, of the Schmidt Institute of earth Physics in Russia predicted a quake "within the next nine months centering on the 'Palmdale bulge,'" near Lancaster about 40 miles north of Los Angeles, measuring 7.5 or greater on the Richter Scale — "10 times greater than the San Fernando earthquake of 1971."

Copies of Nikonov's prediction, published in the Soviet magazine "Znaniye," were mailed to news agencies in Southern California by the Soviet Information Agency Novosti through the Russian embassy in Washington.

The Los Angeles Times quoted an unidentified U.S. scientist as saying that "if he's the same Nikonov I'm thinking of, some of my Russian colleagues have told me to watch out for him — he's a little wild."

Nikonov declared that "According to the theory I discovered, an earthquake of no smaller magnitude than 7.5 should occur at the site of the bulge in 1978," the article said.

"The energy of such an earthquake will be 10 times greater than the San Fernando earthquake in 1971."

"My estimate is based on experience with studying dimensions of structural movement of the earth's crust prior to earthquakes," he said.

"I compare the duration of all preceding structural movement and the magnitude of the earthquake that followed.

"The correlation of these two parameters for the 28 earthquakes I analyzed proves to be a direct one — within the limits of acceptable precision, and can be expressed in a rather simple equation."

He did not publish the equation.

The bulge, centered on Palmdale, extends 360 miles from Point Arguello eastward to the Arizona border, according to the U.S. Geological Survey.

The swelling has been going on for more than 20 years, scientists believe, but was only recently discovered.

Scientists are unsure of the meaning of the swelling. Some say there is evidence such as a bulging indicates forces building up in the earth that may be released in a large quake. Others say further research shows that such "bulges" have occurred in the past, swelling and receding with no quake involved.

WSU team says antibiotic fights VD

PULLMAN, Wash. (UPI) — A series of new antibiotics that are effective against such diseases as gonorrhea has been developed by two Washington State University scientists.

The new antibiotics, known as Graminimycin A and B, come from a type of fungi found in or on live or decaying trees.

The two scientists, Drs. S. Gurunaldal and Robert Ronald, say that the A strain appears to be as potent as penicillin, at least on laboratory animals.

Simenon hates fiction but loves Muppets

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (UPI) — Georges Simenon, settling back in his soft leather armchair and re-lighting his perennial pipe for a 75th birthday interview, said he hates fiction but loves the Muppets.

The author matter-of-factly refers to U.N. statistics, however, showing his own books are outsold only by Lenin and Marx.

"I hate novels," snapped the Belgian creator of Inspector Maigret.

"I only read non-fiction, on psychiatry especially. I don't know if I like my own books because I've never read any of them."

Simenon has written 240 novels, including 82 Maigrets, but not one of them can be found at his Lausanne home.

Maigret has been seen in any of the 60 movies and numerous television series adapted from his books.

What about the color television set in the corner of his study?

"I never miss the Muppet Show," Simenon confessed. "It's my favorite program."

Sesame Street was his former favorite.

"I turn the television off as soon as a politician starts talking," he said.

"Politicians are nothing but ghosts: They think they have power but it's an illusion. Multinationals and big banks are running the show, not politicians."

He watched the first Sadat-Begin meeting, however, because of its "historic significance."

Simenon writes mysteries but does not read them.

"I read Agatha Christie. She writes about rich people, castles and beautiful scenery. I tried to read one of the books once, but I never made it to the end. It's not literature, it's embroidery."

Edgar Allan Poe and Raymond Chandler are among the few writers Simenon ever enjoyed.

"But the moment I began writing my first Maigret, when I was 26, I stopped reading because I was afraid of imitating other people."

Simenon likes people, and they like him.

On his birthday Feb. 19, he received hundreds of letters and presents from readers from all over the world.

An unknown Russian sculptor carved a long, thin wooden statue of the author smoking a pipe, wearing dark-rimmed glasses and a hat.

But what amused Simenon most was a picture of a Japanese Maigret and his wife. Maigret looked more like a fierce samurai than a quiet detective, he found, and his original frontally wife was "a bit too sexy." But Simenon liked it.

The author, whose first book was published when he was 16, has sold over 400 million copies translated into 131 languages.

But he has remained modest and looks upon his work as "semi-literature."

"Maigret's secret," he says, "is his gentleness. Maigret does not behave like an ordinary policeman. He is human. He does his job, but he likes people whatever they may be and tries to understand them without judging them."

"This is the only thing I have in common with Maigret, besides smoking a pipe," the author said.

Simenon smoked his first pipe when he was 13 and has never tried cigars or cigarettes.

He collected 320 pipes during trips around the world and keeps the 15 he still smokes on top of a fireplace in the only room he really uses at his little, renovated farm.

Simenon has been "everywhere," including the United States, where he spent 10 years from 1945 to 1955. He now leads a secluded life, leaving the farm on the outskirts of Lausanne only on daily walks to a nearby lakeside park.

The house is squeezed between high-rise buildings, but he does not mind because no one ever disturbs him: "The Swiss are discreet and polite. This is why I chose to settle here 20 years ago."

"I do everything in this room," he said, referring to his studio. "I write here, sleep here and even give interviews."

The rest of the house, which consists of three rooms upstairs, is empty.

The studio is a bare, square room furnished with leather armchairs, a simple white wardrobe in one corner, a bed in another and sparse bookshelves.

The light-orange painted walls and curtains of a darker shade make it warm and peaceful.

It looks out on a small garden swarming with birds and when the weather is milder Simenon likes to sit under his only tree, a massive 250-year-old pine. "It is the oldest tree in the whole city," he said.

Simenon's Italian companion, Teresa, is always by his side. She attends all interviews and discreetly intervenes when the author forgets dates and events.

Simenon claimed one year ago that he had slept with 10,000 women, but one woman is "quite enough" now.

"I have never really counted them," he admits. "But it is a fair estimate considering that I started at 11."

"Some of them were very short affairs. I have not always spent a whole day or a whole evening with all of them."

Women are one of Simenon's favorite subjects and he talks freely.
