Idahoans' breakfast memorable

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN

Times-News writer
PORTLAND, Ore. — Twin Falls County Commissioner Merj Leonard and Kelso Mayor Jerry Selfert this morning had a breakfast they won't soon forget. The two Magic Valley officials ate with the President of the United States in the Benson Hotel in Portland. Leonard and Selfert were two of about 25 locally elected officials from Idaho, Oregon, Washington and Alaska who sat with President Carter at a breakfast meeting to discuss the problems of small cities throughout the Northwest. The President wanted "to find out what local people were really thinking about and what kind of problems they have making the federal government work," Selfert said Thursday night after he and other northwest officials met with the President's White House staff secretary, Jack Watson, in an orientation meeting. "He wants to know what kind of problems they have with the federal bureaucracy," Leonard noted Thursday. The meeting was informal, with the local mayors and county commissioners spending slightly over an hour with Carter in a question and answer period.

"He doesn't normally have a chance to just sit down and talk to several different mayors and commissioners from places that are normally heard from in the federal bureaucracy on the presidential level," Selfert continued. "And in many respects I think what we will tell him — the problems we have — will represent the problems of smaller communities throughout the nation." Along with Leonard and Selfert, other Idaho officials invited to attend this morning's breakfast meeting with the President were Boise Mayor Dick Eardley, Parma Mayor Patricia Romanko, Ammon Mayor George Wenmann, Bannock County Commissioner Boyd Johnson and LaLain County Commissioner Jerry Morris. Despite the smoothness of Thursday's orientation meetings and the favorable impressions made by White House staff members on local officials, Leonard said protesters in Portland were out in force to express their discontent with many of Carter's policies. "The magnitude of protesters was incredible," Leonard said, noting that many of them dressed in costumes with faces similar to clowns in a circus. Following a regionally televised news conference Thursday night, Carter told Republicans invited to a Democratic Reception that they should consider asking him about the polls and the economy. "One thing I've found," he said. "Every time my polls go down, the stock market goes up. So maybe this is a way to solve the problems of the economy."

After the breakfast meeting with Carter, Leonard said the local officials would spend time in a similar question-and-answer period with under secretaries from the Department of Agriculture, Commerce and Interior. "There's no gimmickery to the whole thing and no magic," Selfert observed after Thursday's preliminary meetings. "The President genuinely wants to know how local elected officials feel about the federal bureaucracy and if it is it not doing what it is supposed to be doing for them. He wants to know how they perceive the federal bureaucracy and how they perceive it working for their com-munites." "He doesn't normally have a chance to just sit down and talk to several different mayors and commissioners from places that are normally heard from in the federal bureaucracy on the presidential level," Selfert continued. "And in many respects I think what we will tell him — the problems we have — will represent the problems of smaller communities throughout the nation." Along with Leonard and Selfert, other Idaho officials invited to attend this morning's breakfast meeting with the President were Boise Mayor Dick Eardley, Parma Mayor Patricia Romanko, Ammon Mayor George Wenmann, Bannock County Commissioner Boyd Johnson and LaLain County Commissioner Jerry Morris. Despite the smoothness of Thursday's orientation meetings and the favorable impressions made by White House staff members on local officials, Leonard said protesters in Portland were out in force to express their discontent with many of Carter's policies. "The magnitude of protesters was incredible," Leonard said, noting that many of them dressed in costumes with faces similar to clowns in a circus. Following a regionally televised news conference Thursday night, Carter told Republicans invited to a Democratic Reception that they should consider asking him about the polls and the economy. "One thing I've found," he said. "Every time my polls go down, the stock market goes up. So maybe this is a way to solve the problems of the economy."

Three months of work pay off

By RAY SULLIVAN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A boisterous Ken Carter sat in the lounge at a motel bar Thursday afternoon and grimed his crooked smile at what had taken him three months to accomplish — finding land to use for his jump of the Snake River. Canyon this summer in a rocket-powered car. Ten minutes before, in the motel lobby, he had signed contracts leasing property in Jerome and Twin Falls counties which ended a bitter battle to get his plan off the ground. When he first came to Twin Falls in February, the Canadian daredevil had verbally agreed with Tim Qualls to use the Evel Knievel jump site, only to have Qualls back out soon after he arrived. Then, Carter tried to get the commissioners of both counties to help him with security arrangements when the time came to jump the canyon. He agreed to withhold the date of the jump to comply with the crowd-limitation ordinances in each county. But despite meetings in which he assured both groups he would be responsible for any trouble occurring because of the jump, Carter couldn't convince either group he was not following in Evel Knievel's 1974 shadow, when crowd control problems and financial hassles soured some area residents and businessmen on ever staging another such jump attempt. Carter, 40, on legal advice, rejected suggestions of both commissioners to get permits in case of large crowds, fearing the government agencies might find a way to stop him from jumping. There is no provision, however, preventing him to jump once he obtained lease agreements from property owners. White Carter remains an enigma to the commissioners, Wanda Traugber, who with her husband, is allowing Carter to use their Jerome County property as a takeoff site, finds him a good, easy-going person.

"At first, we were quite negative," she said when Carter made initial inquiries about their property, "but after we met him and talked to him, we knew he was just an all-round guy and we kind of liked him." "I think he'll make it," she says of his upcoming jump. "If he wants to do it, that's OK with us." She said neighbors Fred Peterson Jr. and Jerry Callan were for allowing Carter to jump after personal visits quelled initial doubts.

More Americans join work force

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The nation's unemployment rate fell to its lowest level in 2 1/2 years in April as Vietnam War veterans and coal miners led a blue-collar surge of one-half million people landing jobs, the Labor Department reported today. The 6 percent unemployment rate last month was the lowest since October 1974 when it was 5.9 percent. The jobless rate stood at 6.2 percent in February. The department said 535,000 workers got jobs in April to swell the employment ranks to 93.8 million. The number of unemployed fell 165,000 to 6 million. "The reduction in unemployment occurred exclusively among adult men, as women and teen-agers showed little movement," the department disclosed.

Among males, veterans who served during the Vietnam War era continued their year-long gains. The jobless rate for these veterans was 7.5 percent a year ago compared with 7.5 percent for nonveterans. Last month, the jobless rate for Vietnam vets was 4.5 percent compared with 6.5 percent for those without military experience. Settlement of the 110-day coal strike boosted mining employment by 100,000 in April to its highest level in a quarter of a century. The department estimated nearly 900,000 miners were employed last month. The large gain in jobholders and the drop in the politically sensitive unemployment rate, will give President Carter more room to expand anti-inflation activities. Large hikes in wages and prices this winter and spring have boosted the cost of living at a near 10 percent annual rate. The department said average weekly earnings increased 1.4 percent in April, largely on the basis of higher pay for workers paid by the hour. Pay for workers who punch time clocks has increased 8.7 percent since April 1977. In dollars and cents, the average hourly wage was $5.60 in April. This was 6 cents higher than March and 45 cents more than April 1977. Average weekly earnings increased $2.71 in the month to $201.60. Better weather in April contributed to a resurgence of new home and apartment construction. Employment in the construction industry climbed by 175,000 workers. Despite their jobless rate falling to a four-year low, one of every 10 construction workers was unemployed last month. Overall, the department said, "blue-collar workers paced the over-the-month employment gain." The jobless rate for all blue-collar workers declined from 7.1 percent in March to 6.5 percent. For white-collar workers the rate increased slightly, from 3.4 to 3.5 percent. All the while-collar attrition was at the clerical level. Although men reduced their jobless rate by the largest amount in April, women continued to enlarge their share of total employment. "In line with recent trends, adult women led the increase in the labor force," the department said.

Betty Ford heads home

LONG BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — Today is the day Betty Ford goes home from the Navy hospital where she has been under treatment for alcoholism and addiction to prescription pain killing drugs. Former President Gerald Ford planned to return from a trip in time to greet her when she arrives at their new home in the desert at Rancho Mirage, about 30 miles east of the Naval hospital in Long Beach, a Ford spokesman said. Mrs. Ford, 60, has been under treatment since April 11 in the hospital's Alcoholism and Drug Abuse Center.

May brings surprise snow

TWIN FALLS — What happened to Spring? The calendar may say it's only a month and a half until summer, but a snowstorm Thursday evening and this morning must have convinced low Magic Valley residents they were looking at the wrong month. One immediate result of the wintry weather was creation of hazardous driving conditions on the Perrine Bridge. About 8 a.m. a three car pile-up occurred on the south bound lane crossing the bridge, and a one car accident occurred in the north bound lane. No injuries were reported, but damage to vehicles was extensive. State police and county sheriffs directed traffic for just under an hour.

Police have issued a warning to motorists the bridge may be icy and more slick than the road on either side of the bridge. According to National Weather Service reports, temperatures in Twin Falls plummeted to 29 degrees. A total of .02 inches of precipitation was recorded. At least part of this was snow. Other Magic Valley towns also recorded low temperatures and snowfall. Those towns are: Jerome, low - 28 degrees, high - 50 degrees. Precipitation totaled .11 inches, and one inch of snow was reported on the ground. Mountain Home, low - 30 degrees, high - 52 degrees. Wendell, low - 28 degrees, high - 48 degrees. A trace of snow was reported. Burley, low 29 degrees, high - 48 degrees. A trace of snow was reported. Rupert, low - 28 degrees, high 47 degrees. A total of .01 in precipitation was reported. Winds and light snow are expected today and tonight, with partial clearing by Saturday. The clearing on Saturday is expected to bring lower temperatures. The low reaching tonight is expected to be 25 degrees. Elsewhere in the nation, snow covered sections of Wyoming and the Dakotas, more rain fell across the southern states, and a destructive storm system which spawned several tornadoes in Florida moved out to sea. # Hot line sizzled during 1973 war

New York Times Service
Leonid I. Brezhnev, the Soviet Communist Party leader, used the Moscow Washington "hot line" in October 1973 to complain that Israel had violated the just-concluded cease-fire and to urge the United States to force Israel to stop.

This "hitherto unreported use" of the direct link between the capitals was disclosed by former President Richard M. Nixon in excerpts from the sixth of seven installments from his memoirs, appearing today in The New York Times and other newspapers.

The book, "RN: The Memoirs of Richard Nixon," is to be published May 15 by Grosset & Dunlap.

This installment, devoted to the Middle East, provides some additional footnotes to the October 1973 war between the Israelis and the Arabs but failed to answer fully some of the controversial questions surrounding the American role in the war.

It also included some lavish praise for Henry A. Kissinger, who as secretary of state began what became known as his "shuttle diplomacy" after the war, when he sought to reconcile differences between Israel and two of its Arab neighbors, Egypt and Syria.

Referring to the first Egyptian-Israeli disengagement accord of January 1974,

Nixon said, "It was a tribute to Kissinger's enormous stamina, his incisive intellect, and not least, his great personal charm."

It was not a greater tribute because he had to cope with the burden of a President weakened by political attack at home," referring to Watergate.

On Oct. 22, 1973, a cease-fire negotiated by Kissinger in Moscow went into effect, but the fighting continued, with the Israelis and Egyptians charging each other with violations.

"At 11 a.m. on Oct. 23, Brezhnev over the Washington-Moscow hot line charged the Israelis with rupturing the cease-fire," Nixon wrote. "He urged that the United States move decisively to stop the violations. He curiously implied that we might even have colluded in Israel's action."

Nixon said he replied that the United States had insisted that Israel take steps to halt hostilities, "and I urged Brezhnev to do the same on the Egyptian side."

Later, it became well-known that on the evening of Oct. 24, Brezhnev sent a message to Nixon through the Soviet ambassador in Washington warning that the Soviet Union might intervene unilaterally if the United States did not stop the Israelis by joining with the Soviet Union in sending military contingents to the Middle East.

Nixon wrote in his memoirs that he regarded this message as "perhaps the most serious threat to U.S. Soviet relations since the Cuban missile crisis" of 1962. He related how American military forces were put on alert as a result of the message, and disclosed — for the first time — parts of his response to Brezhnev.

The former president said he sent a letter to the Soviet leader warning that a unilateral Soviet move "would produce incalculable consequences which would be in the interest of neither of our countries and which would give us no respite so hard to achieve."

The Soviet behavior during the October war, particularly Moscow's failure to tell the United States that was about to "break out, and that means Soviet airlift to the Egyptians, was cited by critics of détente to show the perils of such a relationship.

Nixon, however, said that it was not an example of the failure of détente, but rather "an illustration of its limitations — limitations of which I had always been keenly aware."

"The Soviet Union will always act in its own self-interest," he said, "and so will the United States. Détente cannot change that. All we can hope for is that it will minimize confrontation in marginal areas and provide, at least, alternative possibilities in the major ones."

"At the result of that war, a major controversy arose over the American airlift to Israel of needed supplies that did not begin in earnest until the eighth day of the fighting.

Kissinger and his supporters have contended that the delay was caused mostly by bureaucratic problems in the Pentagon. Critics of Kissinger have said that he and Nixon wanted to see the airlift bring pressure on the Israelis to accept a negotiated settlement, and that the airlift was only allowed to operate fully when Israel was close to disaster.

Nixon said that on the third day of the war, when it was clear that the Israelis had missed their Soviet airlift to the Egyptians, he told Kissinger that we would replace all their losses, and asked him to work out the logistics for doing so."

"When I was informed that there was disagreement in the Pentagon about which of our planes should be used for the airlift, I became totally exasperated," Nixon wrote. "I said to Kissinger, 'God damn it, use every one we have. Tell them to send everything that can fly.'"

House passes farm price measure

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House today passed a bill to increase discretionary authority to increase target prices for wheat, feed grains and cotton in years when government programs to reduce planted acreage are in effect.

The bill, approved 212-182 and sent to the White House, is a follow-up from more generous emergency legislation that was killed in the House last month after a veto threat from President Carter.

It is expected to result in immediate action by the administration to raise the target price for this year's wheat crop from $3.19 to $3.40 a bushel.

However, officials have indicated no increases will be forthcoming for feed grains or cotton because those crops have already benefited from economic aid under a special program of acreage diversion payments.

If the wheat support price were raised to $3.40, it could boost wheat farmers' income for this year by nearly $600 million. Another provision of the bill that is expected to bring about a minimum four-cent-a-pound increase in the cotton loan rate could cost an extra $100 million.

Congressional budget experts peg the overall cost of the bill at $1.8 billion for fiscal 1979 through 1983. The other emergency farm legislation rejected by the House on April 12 would have cost $5.7 billion just for 1978 crops, a price tag that prompted the Carter veto threat.

The legislation allows the administration to raise target prices to compensate producers for participation any time the government asks farmers to cut back planting under a set-aside program. The discretionary authority runs from 1978 to 1981.

Critics said wheat farmers clearly need extra help to overcome their financial troubles but the discretionary authority would be used only in years when the administration is on an agricultural policy.

Rep. James R. Bohlen, D-Colo., said the bill gives the president "unchecked authority" to decide how much cropland will be planted, what crops will be planted, and what farmers will receive for loans and target price support.

"These factors that relate to the market price, Johnson said, "so by passing this act, the president can in effect set market prices."

Johnson added, "If this passes, we can change the title of the Secretary of Agriculture to Secretary of Agriculture."

"Our administration does not really give us any choice in this matter," said Rep. Don Glickman, D-Kan. "The crisis in wheat is now because the price of wheat is so low that there is no incentive to participate in the set-aside program."

The House public galleries were only partially occupied for this round of the farm debate. When previous emergency farm measures were discussed, the galleries were packed with farmers and their families, holding their red and yellow and blue farm strike caps in their laps.

Rep. W.R. Foegbe, D-Tex., said the bill "tries to get the farmers of America something

Mondale in Indonesia

JAKARTA, Indonesia (UPI) — Vice President Walter Mondale arrived in Jakarta today, the third stop on his Asian-Pacific tour, and said that Indonesia and Washington share a "fundamental interest in safeguarding the security of the region."

Mondale flew to Jakarta from Bangkok, where he had toured a hot and crowded crowd earlier today and received a rousing welcome from Indonesian hosts for the United States.

Debartering from Air Force Two, Mondale was greeted by Vice President Adam Malik, the entire Indonesian cabinet and the diplomatic corps who formed a long line along a red velvet carpet running from the plane some 330 feet to the VIP lounge.

No summer summit plans in works

New York Times Service
WASHINGTON — The White House press secretary Jody Powell, said Thursday that there were no present plans for a summit meeting this summer between President Carter and Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev.

Speaking to reporters in Denver, Powell said that while the administration favors such a meeting, Moscow has said that a new Soviet-American strategic arms agreement must be wrapped up first. He said, however, there might be a Carter-Brezhnev meeting "if and when we can reach an arms agreement which the president feels protects our security."

"That has not happened yet," he said, adding that though bargaining remains in progress, the administration officials said Powell's remarks were an accurate assessment of the current situation at the talks and that two major issues, as well as several smaller questions, still stood in the way of a completed agreement.

Whether a summit meeting would be held this summer, it said to depend, in large part, on the talks expected later this month between Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko. He added that there was also a good chance that Gromyko, during his projected visit, would meet with Carter.

Memorable breakfast

Carter said he had never heard any Democrat say so.

But he said he found a "strong and constructive relationship" between himself and the members of Congress and governors during his current trip and found "a very warm reception."

Carter conceded that he was trying to counter some of the criticisms of himself and his poor showing in the polls by trying to explain and clarify his policies.

But he said some of the issues he has addressed "are very difficult to resolve" and are not conducive to boosting his popularity.

He said he tries to "address those issues as simply, openly and aggressively" as possible.

The president spent the night at the home of Paul and Janet Olsen, a couple in their early 30s, and their two blond youngsters, Kristen, 5, Ehen, 3.

Carter ignored several hundred shouting, chanting, anti-nuclear demonstrators, muscled in with the Olsen's and carried him normally quiet residential street and walked up to the family with a wide grin and outstretched arms.

"I do hope I'm not disrupting your home," he said, sweeping Kristen, who was wearing a long pink nightgown, into his arms.

S. African raid criticized

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (UPI) — Prime Minister John Vorster, apparently ignoring American criticism of a South African raid against Namibian guerrillas in Angola, today congratulated his troops on their one-day invasion.

Angola said it had mobilized its Cuban-backed army.

Defense Minister Pieter Botha said South African forces crossed the Angolan border Thursday and destroyed several guerrilla bases to stop their incursions into West Africa, also known as Namibia.

In Washington, a State Department spokesman said the United States had informed the South African government of its "disapproval and grave concern at the implications of their action."

He said Pretoria had been asked "for an urgent explanation."

The Lisbon-monitored Angolan national news agency ANGOP said the Cuban-backed Angolan army has taken steps to repel the invaders but gave no further details.

"This hateful attack on Angola and on thousands of women, old men and children fleeing from the terror of the criminal occupation of Namibia is part of imperialist action in southern Africa, and is preparatory to a new invasion of our country," a Defense Ministry statement said.

There was no immediate political explanation for the South African move against the guerrillas at such a delicate stage in negotiations on the future of Namibia.

Botha said Vorster telephoned him early today and asked him "to convey his appreciation to the elements of the army, and air force who participated in the limited follow-up operation against the terrorists."

Ken probe balked

NEW YORK (UPI) — Nixon aide John Ehrlichman instructed the Justice Department not to conduct an investigation of the shootings at Kent State, NBC News reported Thursday.

NBC said it had obtained a copy of an "eyes only" memo written shortly after the 1970 incident from Ehrlichman to then-Attorney General John Mitchell.

Ehrlichman reportedly quoted Mitchell as telling Mitchell, "In your office the other day I showed you the president's memorandum."

Ehrlichman reportedly reminded Mitchell, "The president had decided no such grand jury would be sought."

Later in 1973 under a new attorney general, the case did go to a grand jury. NBC quotes a top Justice Department official as saying that when Nixon heard about it, "he had to scrape the president off the wall with a spatula."

In his memoirs, Nixon writes he was warned by Kent State and that it was a dark day in his presidency.

And the fact that Carter is putting up a $30,000 cash bond in case of any property damage also helped settle the matter.

Meanwhile, Carter said Thursday he would leave Twin Falls today to fly to Canada and get the $250,000 from his bank that is necessary to pay for the jumpsite camp, property losses, and expenses which will be incurred in testing his rocket car at Clab's Boneville Suit Flats in June.

Carter still talks bitterly about the way the commissioners tried to prevent him from jumping, emphasizing a point made during several meetings with the commissioners that they haven't even bothered to check his credentials.

But the publication of signing the contract has been a relief for the daredevil, who encountered ladders quickly as Carter talks with associates in the lounge of the upcoming attempt and future promotions.

Board clears contract hearing

COEUR D'ALENE, Idaho (UPI) — The Idaho Board of Education agreed Thursday to reveal procedural aspects of a decision not to renew the contract of Robert Hall, Boise State University's information services director.

Milton Small, executive director of the office of the state board of education, said the initial hearing will be held to determine if a proper procedure was followed in Hall's non-reappointment.

Small said the board's next scheduled meeting was June 12 at Driggs, Idaho, but he said he did not know whether Hall wanted to attend a hearing at that location.

Hall was notified in March that his contract would not be renewed after the current fiscal year ends on June 30. Hall has indicated he plans to appeal the action.

Also Thursday, the board approved 1978 fiscal-year salary levels for most exempt employees of higher education institutions in Idaho, but decided to wait until Friday before acting on salaries for top administrators such as presidents or agency heads.

Approval of the proposed BSU salary level was contingent on changing the initial distribution of "merit" monies between faculty and nonfaculty members.

Asa Bayle, BSU financial vice president, said available funds were rationed differently between the two groups because "BSU administrators felt the approved distribution endorsed by faculty members was intended to apply only to faculty members."

As a result of the board's decision to require the change, about $7,000 in money available for merit increases would be shifted from nonfaculty employees to faculty members at BSU.

During discussion of the hall hearing, Janet May, a board member from Nampa, said the BSU executive committee agreed to the hearing because current board policy is unclear regarding appeals procedures for exempt nonfaculty employees.

Power board plan assailed

IDAHO FALLS (UPI) — Republican gubernatorial candidate Vern Ransavick said Thursday the proposal by Democratic Gov. John V. Evans to establish a Domestic and Rural Power Authority would not only be "disastrous" but also amounted to "a blatant attempt to pirate power."

"If we can do that simply on the basis of need, what's to prevent the same principal from being used with water?"

In a talk to the Idaho Falls Civitan Club, Ransavick noted that several surrounding states such as those in the Colorado River

System "would see such an act of piracy as a precedent entitling them to our water which, demonstrably, they need."

"This effort has been presented only as an attempt to reallocate power from other states, but this concept would also result in power steals from rural electrification associations and from municipal power authorities such as that of Idaho Falls."

"The governor's current policies on power would put the state in the retail power business — a position in which the state does not belong."

Tainted beef warning issued

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Department of Agriculture issued an alert Thursday about canned beef products from Argentina bearing establishment number 1964, saying it may be unprocessed and could cause food poisoning.

Dr. Vernon Colner, Boise, chief of the agency's bureau of meat inspection, said here are reports of some of the suspect cans in Idaho.

"The U.S. Department of Agriculture last month announced a voluntary recall of all Argentinian canned beef products which carried establishment number 1964," Colner said.

Laboratory tests on sausage cans intercepted by federal inspectors at ports of entry indicated the products were underprocessed and could be spoiled.

Colner said the establishment number is embossed on the lids of the cans and may or may not be printed on the labels. He said products involved are canned corned beef, beef and gravy and beef with natural juices.

He said the products are distributed throughout the U.S. under various brand names to retail markets, restaurants, institutions and to plants for reprocessing into other products such as corned beef hash.

Consumers are urged to return the cans to stores where purchased, Colner said. The retail can size is 12 ounces and the commercial institutional size is 6 pounds.

Auditor's office commended

BOISE (UPI) — A legislative audit has commended the State Auditor's office for its performance in voucher processing and control, production of computer reports, and employee working relationships.

But the fiscal year 1977-78 audit, presented Thursday to the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee, said the office has experienced problems in accounting for the payroll trust account and social security trust account, could save hundreds of dollars by purchasing more supplies from the Bureau of Supplies, and has experienced problems in complying with state travel recommendations.

Some 30 fiscal and operational recommendations were suggested in the document prepared by Ken Winkler, managing auditor.

With regard to the payroll trust and social security trust accounts, the audit determined "the combination of several problems resulted in $55,824 being transferred incorrectly from the payroll trust account to the social security account between 1974 and 1977."

No trouble

CALDWELL (UPI) — The president of the board of commissioners of the Idaho State Bar Association doesn't believe live radio and television coverage of the Idaho Supreme Court would be disruptive.

Dean Miller, Caldwell, said the sophisticated equipment presently used by the broadcast media "wouldn't disturb the court."

The Idaho Supreme Court presently is making appointments to a 14-member advisory committee to consider the possibility of such broadcasts.

Fee change policy approved

COEUR D'ALENE, Idaho (UPI) — The State Board of Education approved a policy statement Thursday establishing a schedule for considering requests for changes in college and university student fee levels.

Fees with effect on the general operating budget of an institution will be considered during July, while fees with no impact on appropriated funds will be considered in April

Robbery trial scheduled

CALDWELL (UPI) — Third District Court has set Oct. 17 for the trial of David F. Sherman, 20, Garden Grove, Calif., on charges stemming from the attempted robbery of a Boise motel.

The Canyon County charges stem from alleged incidents surrounding his arrest.

for final action in May.

The policy exempts "emergency situations" and also provides that room and board rates will be established no later than May.

Board member J.P. Munson of Sandpoint said he hopes a schedule would "protect the student from actually being the goat" for balancing a budget.

GOP buries 'fiscal responsibility'

O.N.Y. Times Service

EASTON, Md. (UPI)—The new wing of the GOP is a topic to be avoided at all costs, the acronym stands for "My Eyes Glaze Over." Typical MEGOs are petrodollars, foreign aid, government reorganization, your tires are growing heavy even as you read these words.

that less can be more: If taxes are substantially cut, the economy will be productively stimulated, and the lower tax rates will actually produce more revenues than today's incentive-strangling high rates. Bigger pie, you see.

A good case can be made that such a cut might lead to the desired result. When talking to Democrats, the zealous of economic neoclassicism recall the results of the Kennedy tax cut in the early sixties—lower rates and higher revenues, the best of both worlds!

When talking to conservatives, the taxcutters harken to the days of 1954, when Robert Taft and Daniel Reever, proposed tax reduction to Eisenhower, but Treasury Secretary George Humphrey turned it down, citing a fear of deficits. House Minority Leader John Rhodes, listening to New York congressman Jack Kemp make his dynamic, hunched-forward pitch, could not help reflecting "but you were in high school." (Rhodes, however, gladly waves back to the ways of the future; he's tired of losing.)

Which brings us to the question: Is the real tax-cut idea too good to be true, too obviously a popular proposal to be "responsible"? Can such good politics also be good public policy?

The Republicans in-conclave assemble think so. The liberals (Sen. Charles Mathias of Maryland, Jacob Javits of New York) did not object. The conservatives (Senate Minority Leader Howard Baker, Delaware's William Roth, Idaho's Jim McClure, Wyoming's Malcolm Wallop) were enthusiastic. The promise of stimulating higher revenues choked off the worries of liberals concerned about reduced government services, and the prospect of greater rewards for those who work and save attracted the conservatives.

But it is old-fashioned to measure reactions along the old left-right scale, with the left pushing big government services while encouraging more personal freedom and individual economic growth.

As Carter populists prattle about simplifying the tax code while making more government grants more complex, tomorrow's leaders talk of using the tax code to provide incentives for people to promote the public interest (thereby simplifying and eliminating many federal grants).

Whatever may have been a turning point, the language is new, the attitude is constructive, and—who knows?—the ideas may even be fiscally responsible.

It may not be easy for Cesar Chavez

The Idaho farm workers may just be living too good a life for the Cesar Chavez treatment.

Not that the Idaho farm workers' wages and living conditions couldn't be improved. No doubt they could and should be in several instances, but as was proved in the long years of bitter struggle in the fertile fields of California—the conditions and wages have to be bordering on pathetic before a serious farm workers' movement can be initiated.

The workers have to be willing to risk a lot in order to get United Farm Workers representation, and when the amount being risked is much greater than the potential benefits of such representation, the organizers usually find an uphill battle on their hands. That probably will be the case when Cesar Chavez and/or his United Farm Worker assistants come to Idaho to attempt worker organization in the fields. They will find that the risk/benefit ratio is just too high to hurdle.

The wages being earned by the farm workers in Idaho may not be as high as many of the farm workers' current wages in California, the state that spawned the Chavez-type farm worker movement, but neither are the costs of living. As with all arguments of parity, the various claims for equality in the paycheck break down when inequalities are noted in other areas. The question of the quality of the farm workers' life can't be measured solely in dollars and cents, especially when comparing farm workers in California and Idaho.

The battle that may loom in Idaho for the United Farm Workers may be more of one for the lawyers than one for the workers. As was pointed out in last week's announcement, that the UFW may be focusing next in Kansas and Idaho, the organization is centering its attack in those two states on farm labor laws, which are similar to the one in Arizona. The UFW recently won a federal court decision declaring Arizona's Agricultural Employment Relations Act unconstitutional. The UFW apparently wants to parlay its success in other states.

The laws in Kansas and Idaho, which make farm worker organization quite difficult, may indeed not be 100 percent aligned with the thoughts of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, and they may indeed be declared unconstitutional if challenged. In fact, as some farm leaders in Idaho say, it was inevitable that this state's law would be tested in the courts.

The UFW could very well win its case in the courts but it is not too clear what kind of reception it would receive in the fields. The farm workers in Idaho seem to be woven from a different cloth than are their California counterparts. Many of them have chosen Idaho as a place to live because they like it here, and that's why they stay here even during the off-season months. The migrant workers in Idaho aren't as migrant as those in California. They identify more with one specific area, and that's one big reason why they may not want to go along with the UFW in bringing the farm workers' organization issue to the courts.

In order to bring the case to the courts, of course, there has to be some sort of incident activating such legal machinery. The UFW would no doubt like to provoke such an incident, but it probably will find that it has less leverage to do so than it had, and has, in California even though it has a few years of high-level labor warfare under its organizational belt.

The Idaho law was passed in 1972 but it has never been tested. The fact that a law hasn't been tested in six years doesn't automatically mean that it isn't needed, as some Idaho farm leaders have suggested. In fact, that lack of a test could be one sign of a completely valid law. The law could indeed have been used in the past six years, but not in an active manner in the courts; perhaps it has been used to deter any impulsive organization on the part of the farm workers. The effect of the law cannot be easily determined.

Perhaps Chavez and his UFW will help clear the air surrounding the farm labor law, whether it is needed, whether it is constitutional, whether it should be replaced by another law. In that way, Chavez can help more in the bureaucratic halls of Boise than he can in the potato fields of the Magic Valley.

The bottom-line of the UFW's concern must, by definition, be the farm workers' welfare, and they can be the only ones determining the effect that the UFW will have in their lives. It is hoped that the UFW remembers that while it plots its legal course to Idaho.

The most stupefying political MEGO of our times has been "fiscal responsibility," a slogan behind which Republicans have been slogging for nearly half a century while the rest of the world has gone by. Cut federal spending, balance the budget, so went the GOP catch-phrase. But that never happened, even when Republicans were elected.

Last weekend, with neither a bang nor a whimper, the now-Republican leadership said goodbye to all that. At the Tidewater conference, organized by Sen. Bob Packwood and attended by about 100 legislative leaders of all shapes and sizes, the body of "fiscal responsibility" was gently interred.

Not that irresponsibility was exalted; no, the change was from means to ends. The question was not "how do we balance the budget?" but "how do we spur economic growth?" Not "how do we slice the pie?" but "how do we make the pie bigger."

The central issue that divides Democrats and Republicans today, it was decided, is tax policy. Although the Carter administration and the Democratic leadership in Congress pretend to be for a "tax cut," that is a transparent deception: even if the Carter proposals are adopted, two out of three Americans will pay more taxes over the next two years than they do today. The new Social Security tax is anonymous, and the 9 percent inflation-driven wages earners into higher tax brackets, even though their purchasing power stays the same.

The Republicans want a slashing of income tax and capital gains tax rates which would have a profound effect on increasing the take-home pay of the middle-income American, and in attracting the capital needed to create new jobs.

When the ghost of fiscal responsibility, dragging its chains, asks if this will not reduce government revenues and increase the deficit, the answer is shot back (perhaps too quickly):

Goodbye to plaint, simple

Quiet barroom refuge lost to remodeling

There is something about a hotel barroom, something anonymous and sterile and plain and comforting. You can sit in a hotel barroom and be bothered by no one. You are a transient, just like all of the other people in the bar. No distractions, no frills, no gimmicks. Just a hotel barroom. I know a barroom in particular. It is the first-floor barroom of the Executive House in Chicago. It is the plainest of the plain, the most anonymous of the anonymous. For years it has been going into the barroom and, in the dingy light, keeping company with myself. It was a safe haven. Going to that barroom became a habit with me.

Until the other night, I walked to the Executive House, went to open the door of the first-floor barroom, and found it bolted.

Had I been paying closer attention, my senses would have flashed onto... CUTENESS ALERT.

Because it is true. This plainest of the plain hotel barrooms (as far as I know, it doesn't even have a name, except "first-floor barroom") is being torn down. The latest victim of the cuteness plague that is ravaging the land.

That wonderfully drab, unassuming barroom is being replaced by a cute restaurant. You know what I'm talking about. Picturesque decor. Theme menus. Waiters and waitresses who insist on telling you their names. Multi-level seating. Food named after puns. Things hanging from the walls. Cuteness.

Hell. This new place is going to be something called "The Chicago Storage Co. Food Emporium." A spokesman told me all about it. (The old first-floor barroom never had a spokesman, unless you wanted to count Pete the bartender, but Pete didn't speak much and, besides, he's dead now, anyway.)

Inside the theme will be carried out with the use of brick, barn wood and textured wall treatments. The decor will suggest a step back through a time warp with period pieces on display and tables in mix-and-match patterns, colors, shapes and styles suggesting post-remnants or odds and ends that might be found in an old warehouse.

Oh, for the old first-floor barroom. If someone thought to bring out a hunk of cheese from the kitchen, it was an extravagance. The decor was Early Nothing. The customers sat on straight-backed chairs at what seemed to be card tables. There was deadly silence. It was the nicest place in the world.

The waiters and waitresses will be dressed in period garb, the spokesman for The Chicago Storage Co. Food Emporium said. They will be wearing old-fashioned striped shirts with Hoover collars, denim aprons and bowties and cooney caps. The hostess will be wearing a Gibson Girl outfit. The manager will be wearing a 1910-fashion suit.

He was making his point all too clearly. Those of us who like to have a drink in a dank, personality-rich atmosphere are apparently doomed. In America these days, if you go out, you had better be prepared to eat in a Jules Verne aquarium, or a moon landscape, or a Sioux Indian reservation.

The idea of having a quiet drink in a simple room seems to have disappeared, devoured by the cuteness barrage. It's not enough to have a beer or a sandwich. People want fantasy. It's not enough to stop into the barroom for a quick hit. Having a drink has to become an Event. God forbid, you should have your drink in a hotel barroom. It has to be in a dridgible, or on a roller coaster, or in a true-to-life reproduction of a genuine Arctic tundra.

The spokesman for The Chicago Storage Co. Food Emporium said that this menu carries through "the storage company and mercantile motif." He said that appetizers will be known as "Early Deliveries." Salads will be found under "Cold Storage." Soup will be "The Great Melling Pot." Sandwiches will be "Freight on Board." Seafood will be "Off the Dock." Side orders will be "Additional Merchandise." Desserts will be "Close Outs."

It's useless to complain, of course. The cuteness epidemic has already captured the rest of America, and with the birth of The Chicago Storage Co. Food Emporium it will conquer downtown Chicago. The restaurant will be a huge success; pretty people, many of them single, will gather there, and before long no one will even remember that they used to be an ugly little first-floor hotel barroom. Some day, though, I'll meet Pete in that great barroom in the sky. He won't say a word. He'll just hand me my drink. And he won't be wearing any denim apron or cooney cap, either.

Only service industry in U.S. is the self

BOSTON — It was Saturday and she was in one of those shopping malls where trees spend their entire lives in 36-inch wooden containers never knowing sun or rain.

She was not there out of her own free will, you understand. It was because of the Small Person in her life who had this nasty, constant and horribly expensive habit called Growing. No matter how many things she repudiated, the girl kept growing. In fact, she kept growing her feet out in front of her like an advance warning about the size of the body that was to follow. It was, rather like living with a St. Bernard puppy. Except that a St. Bernard puppy, doesn't wear shoes.

For this reason then she had been planted in this mall like the trees for some time, seated on the floor of a shoe store, jacking a variety of sizes and shapes of sneakers. These particular sneakers were, of course, called running shoes. The label used to convince the American parents that they aren't in fact paying $15 for $1 children's sneakers—but for Athletic Foot Equipment. Parents are suckers for equipment.

At that moment a stream of light came through the glass ceiling of the mall illuminating the girl. She had once again been a victim of The Self-Service System.

The only service industry in America was the self. She was a perfect dupe and she had done it to herself.

During the post-work she had served herself money by pushing a cashcard into a hole in the brick wall of her neighborhood bank, and served herself gas by pushing a hose into her car from her neighborhood shop. She and her small person had even served themselves lunch at one of those restaurants where you have it, Your Way, by doing it your way.

The television table she had purchased had come in 12 pieces not counting the instructions—which were in French. Since no one in the store would put it together for her, she and her small person had struggled mightily before they discovered that "les bouts des boulons" were bolt ends.

At least she was not alone. Most of the time in America is a supermarket, a salad bar. We the people serve the economy, the economy doesn't serve the people.

The only reliable pickup and delivery system in the country belongs to the consumer. Indeed, we citizens of this most advanced country in the world race about from dry-cleaning machines to car washes, pausing only to throw money into automatic toll booths.

We so rarely encounter a person in the marketplace that we have taken to saying "thank you" to vending machines and parking meters.

Difficult as it is to purchase things, we live in a terror of breaking anything. Repair people prefer office visits to house calls. They always want us to bring in broken items, like, for example, refrigerators. Only if we file an affidavit swearing that we didn't break it, of purpose, will they arrange for an appointment at a minimal service charge. Minimal service is the operative phrase. They consider "service" the act of walking across the street and the door which lists it on their schedule, not ours.

Meanwhile, Ma Bell penalizes her chilluns who are unable or unwilling to direct dial. The only information they give out willingly to those of us asking for help these days is that the number may be in the white pages.

If that isn't sad enough, try asking for assistance in a department store. It's like asking for a Phillips' head screwdriver in Tiffany's.

The real service industry laborers of America today are the consumers. We also serve the economy who only stands and waits on ourselves.

The new room is going to be a fun, entertainment sort of concept in a fun sort of atmosphere," the spokesman for The Chicago Storage Co. Food Emporium said. "It will be one of the new types of fun-type entertainment restaurants."

Apparently you won't be able to sneak into this new place and have a quiet drink in your miserable self. If what the spokesman said is true.

Interestingly, there is some evidence that one group is not losing faith in higher education—American students.

A serious attitude toward studies was apparent in responses to a recent poll of collegians from campuses throughout the nation gathered at Daytona Beach, Fla., during the spring break.

An overwhelming 87 percent of the 212 men and 1,046 women queried by Tom Home Waves in a survey on career, lifestyle and fashion trends said they were pursuing higher education either from personal desire or because they considered it a necessity.

The group also registered a very strong career interest, with 68 percent declaring definite plans for post-college work. Among freshmen, the proportion was 63 percent.

Awareness of the tough job market was an acknowledged factor in early career planning, with 51 percent noting they were concerned about finding jobs following graduation.

Some House members well paid

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House members got their salary hiked to $7,500 a year ago, and now, complying with new financial disclosure requirements, they are revealing outside incomes — many above $100,000.

But in statements released Thursday some of the House's 435 members said they had no major earnings beyond their official pay, a few indicated they were actually in debt, and many who listed extensive assets reported heavy liabilities as well.

The records designed to expose potential conflicts of interest — covered the final three months of 1977 and were the first such documents required under the revised House code of conduct adopted last year. They were filed with the House Ethics Committee, which made them public.

The statements gave no clear picture of how many millionaires sit in the House, or even a firm estimate of net worth in most cases because holdings and outside income could be listed by broad categories going up to "over $100,000." Members also did not have to report personal property such as homes, jewelry or art.

But the statements indicated several dozen congressmen own blue chip corporate stock, bonds and real estate valued in the hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Among the wealthiest was Rep. Bill Green, D-N.Y., who listed securities worth over $1 million. Jonathan Bingham, another New York Democrat, put down a long list of stocks and bonds worth $837,000. Rep. Millett Fenwick, R-N.J., said she got $33,000 in interest on three trust funds for the three-month period.

Rep. Silvio Conte, R-Mass., reported owning rental properties worth at least $500,000, and many other congressmen listed major income-producing property.

The material also showed why many congressmen are fighting another prying of the ethics code, which would limit earnings from speaking and various other services to $8,625 a year starting in 1979. That ceiling was agreed to a year ago as the price for raising congressional salaries from $44,600.

About 30 members filed quarterly reports indicating they took in well over $25,000 last year in outside earnings. Many are lawyers, like Morgan Murphy, D-Ill., who listed $30,000 in such income for the three months; or Claude Pepper, D-Fla., who got $26,000 from his law firm in the same period; and Mario Biaggi, D-N.Y., who received $13,300 from his.

Texas Democrat Jack Brooks, chairman of the Government Operations Committee, said he got $11,000 in pay from banks and insurance commissions amounting to more than $160,000 on an annual basis.

Others reported substantial honoraria for making speeches, writing articles or attending conferences. Among the leaders were three Californians: Republican Barry Goldwater Jr., with over $10,000; and Democrat Thomas Burke, at nearly $15,000; and Ron Dellums at $18,000.

Democratic leader Jim Wright of Texas got $12,750. Oregon Democrat Al Ullman, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, had $5,400 in honoraria and Agriculture Chairman Thomas Foley, D-Wash., had $17,500, mostly from farm groups.

House approves tuition credits

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House wants to make room in the 1979 federal budget for tuition tax credits at the college, secondary and elementary school levels.

The Senate, in a version of the budget it recently approved, would provide such credits only for the college level.

While the two branches negotiate their differences, the resulting budget resolution for fiscal year 1978, which begins Oct. 1, still would not put the credits into effect.

The budget only serves to guide legislators in passing specific bills this summer and will be revised in September to reflect those bills.

President Carter opposes all tuition tax credits and has indicated a possible veto if Congress enacts specific legislation for college tuition.

The House allowed budget leeway for credits from elementary through college levels Thursday by votes of 199-173 and 227-136.

Rep. Thomas Luken, D-Ohio, author of the provision, said it would allow families to take credits on their federal income tax for up to 25 percent of tuitions, with a limit of $150 per college student and $100 for youngsters in non-public elementary and secondary schools, including parochial schools.

Rigged GM tests probed

DETROIT (UPI) — A U.S. attorney and the FBI are looking into charges that General Motors Corp. rigged emissions tests of its 1978 model Buicks in violation of federal anti-pollution laws.

U.S. Attorney James K. Robinson announced Thursday that his office and the FBI are beginning a criminal investigation of the accusations leveled by the Environmental Protection Agency.

The EPA claims GM employees at the Buick Division plant in Flint, Mich., illegally altered carburetors and pollution control devices on a handful of Buick LESures that were to be inspected by EPA technicians during an emissions spot-check.

GM officials have denied any wrongdoing by Buick employees. In a statement released by the company Thursday, a GM spokesman said the firm "is aware of the investigation" and is "confident that when it is concluded, GM will be cleared."

The matter was turned over to the Justice Department in March after GM officials barred EPA investigators from the Flint plant and filed a federal lawsuit challenging the EPA's authority to question Buick employees or obtain company records.

Robinson said a review of the matter "indicates that further investigation is appropriate" and the FBI has been asked to assist.

"The decision to undertake an investigation of this matter should not be construed as evidence of wrongdoing on the part of the General Motors Corp. or its employees," Robinson said.

The EPA began looking into the Buick tests in January after it received an anonymous letter charging that GM employees had tampered with the test cars just before the inspection last December.

The EPA also said some cars that would have failed the tests were held in a storage area away from EPA technicians and later were released for sale.

The agency notified GM of the alleged violations and began an inquiry into the matter.

GOV. DOLPH BRISCOE
 ... 83 million so far

Primary campaign expensive

AUSTIN (UPI) — Gov. Dolph Briscoe, twice elected governor of Texas on a platform of fiscal conservatism, is waging the most expensive primary campaign in the nation's history against four Democratic challengers.

Briscoe hopes to extend his tenure in office to an unprecedented 10 years.

The South Texas rancher and banker who is fond of cowboy boots, based his campaign on a third term on a familiar theme — no new state taxes.

He used similar slogans in 1972 and in 1974, when he won the first four-year term in Texas history.

Briscoe is challenged by Attorney General John Hill, who has the backing of the 137,000-member Texas State Teachers Association and most of the state's liberals.

Briscoe's campaign already has cost more than $3 million, while Hill reported with a week remaining before Saturday's primary he had spent $1.4 million. Former Gov. Preston Smith also is in the race, but is given little chance of doing more than perhaps facing a runoff between Hill and Briscoe.

The winner of the Democratic nomination will face a challenge in November from the Republican nominee, either former Deputy Secretary of Defense Bill Clements or one-time state GOP chairman Ray Hutchison, both of Dallas.

The other race attracting the most attention among the 1.8 million Texans expected to vote Saturday is a Democratic primary contest between Rep. Bob Krueger, D-Texas, and former State Insurance Board chairman Joe Christa for the party's nomination for the U.S. Senate.

Politics not for Redford

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Robert Redford, shaken after a two-hour, seven-page battle with Utah's two Republican senators, says he has no plans to run for any political office in his adopted state.

"I am so tired of being asked that question. Every time I speak out on an issue or debate somebody, someone assumes that I'm going to be running for office," the popular movie star said in an interview.

"What I am is an actor. I have an interest in the issues that affect my life. But I have no desire to go into politics."

Redford, 40, a California native who married a Mormon girl from Provo, became a young resident of Utah in 1969. He owns Sundance Ski Resort and a home in Provo Canyon where he spends about seven months of the year with wife, two daughters and his son.

Rumors about his political ambitions surface every time he makes an appearance on behalf of one of his many pet causes — conservation, solar energy, preservation of the historic outlaw trail once used by Butch Cassidy and the Wild Bunch.

Some Utah Republican leaders view him as a possible candidate for the U.S. Senate in 1980 when Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, must face reelection. The speculation heightened when Redford told a Brigham Young University political science class that Garn and Sen. Orrin Hatch were viewed in Washington as an embarrassment to the state. He said Garn was considered a "fool" and Hatch as a "dangerously slippery man."

The comments brought swift criticism from Utah Republican Chairman Robert Wright who accused Redford of making vicious personal attacks instead of discussing the issues on their merits. Garn and Hatch also took exception to the remarks.

Redford insists his comments were not meant for public consumption, but were informal observations he thought he was making at a small, private gathering of students.

"That was not a public statement and not a public statement on my part. It was an informal gathering where I was asked to come and talk with, not to, students. It was blown way out of proportion."

But the incident fueled fires smoldering since he publicly opposed construction of the Kaiparowits Power Plant in southern Utah — and was hanged in effigy — by the citizens of Kane County.

Letters by the score poured forth to the state's newspapers accusing him of being a out-lander, who is not qualified to criticize the state's elected officials and suggesting what he stick to his movie business.

The image bothers Redford, who left California when he became dismayed with rapid development and pollution.

"I guess not enough people realize I have been a voting resident here for almost 20 years," he said. "They see my face on a screen, read about me in national magazine and assume I'm from somewhere else."

"But I'm not. I live here and I care a great deal about the state. Every time I speak out, someone thinks I have an ax to grind. My ax to grind is that I care about Utah's future. It's that simple."

After he opposed the Kaiparowits plant, former Interior Secretary Thomas Kloege accused him of being an "environmental extremist."

"That's just an irresponsible statement," said Redford. "But it happens a lot and it's sad. People who call me that are basically hostile and don't want to listen to another point of view."

"I don't think I'm an extremist in any way unless it's being concerned about the quality of life my kids are going to lead."

Redford said he opposed the Kaiparowits project because of the pollution threat it posed to nearby national parks which are part of our national heritage.

Army private finally comes home

OMAHA, Neb. (UPI) — More than 35 years ago, Army Pfc. Forrest Reynolds and two fellow-crewmen were lost on a World War II Army Air Corps mission over the Himalayas in northern India.

It wasn't until 1974 that the plane's wreckage and the three bodies were found by an Indian hunter who was traveling through the mountains. And it was only recently that Reynolds' body was identified.

Today, Reynolds finally was to be buried with full military honors — including an Army and Air Force honor guard and firing squad — in the country he died for 3½ decades ago. He was to be buried at Forest Lawn cemetery.

Reynolds, then 27, and the two other crewmen died in the crash of their C-47 cargo plane on Dec. 20, 1942.

While the wreckage was discovered in 1974 by an Indian hunter in the Himalayas, a climbing team only last year gathered the occupants' remains, which later were identified through dental and physical records.

"It was a relief to find him," said Robert Reynolds, 67, one of Reynolds' two surviving brothers. "For all we knew he would 'stay up' in those Himalayas forever."

He said the loss of his brother 35 years ago "shook everyone up, including me. When this came up, it brought back a flood of memories — it's just like he's coming home."

Marvel Reynolds, wife of Reynolds' other brother, Milton, was notified in February that the body was found. Since then, she has handled most of the details concerning Reynolds.

"They" (the military) inquired about the parents, realizing they would be quite elderly if still alive. Then it was the next of kin and Milton was the oldest," she said.

Hughes relatives call last witness

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Attorneys for relatives of the late Howard Hughes who believe a will found in the Mormon church headquarters in Salt Lake City is a fake called their last witness Thursday.

Attorney James Dilworth, representing Hughes class living relative, took Judge Keith Rhodes in a closed door session that the contestants case was concluded except for the reading of a brief stipulation Monday when the trial resumes.

Dilworth represents Annette Gano Lunnis, Hughes' 87-year-old aunt.

Attorney Harold Rhoden, substitute executor of the will, told the court earlier this week that Rebuttal would be brief. However, in several closed door sessions Thursday in Judge Hayes' chambers Rhoden indicated he wanted to call several rebuttal witnesses, possibly more handwriting experts.

The jury heard testimony from two witnesses Thursday — both designed to impeach testily regarding Alaskan contractor LeVane Forsythe. The contractor said in a sworn statement read to the jury earlier in the trial he acted as a secret courier for Hughes for a number of years and that he delivered these-called Mormon Will to Melvin Dummer in Willard, Utah, shortly after the industrialist died.

When present James Braeger of Las Vegas told the jury Thursday he was present when James Braeger of Willard, Utah, made a sworn statement. The purpose of the testimony apparently was to point out that Braeger's recollections were inaccurate because he could not remember whether Braeger wore glasses at the deposition hearing. Braeger gave a physical description of Forsythe when he testified.

Braeger told the jury in the earlier testimony he saw a man described as Forsythe in Willard, Utah, the same day the Mormon will was delivered to the gas station operated by Dummer.

Retired Lockheed pilot Warren Lee was the last witness Thursday. He told about picking up seven passengers in Las Vegas, including Hughes, and piloting them to Nassau, Bahamas, in November of 1970. Lee said he took off from nearby Nellis Air Force Base with six men and a man on a stretcher at 9:25 p.m. Forsythe has said in a sworn statement he was present when Hughes left the Desert Inn Hotel in 1970. Forsythe placed the time at 1 a.m.

Attorneys for the contestants are expected to read a brief stipulation to the jury Monday and officially rest the case.

Judge Hayes said after Rhoden concluded rebuttal the trial will be recessed for a week while attorneys prepare final arguments which are expected to take at least a week.

Dead man linked to earlier 'strangler' slaying

GLENDALE, Calif. (UPI) — Detectives hunting the Hillside Strangler had Richard Reynolds on their list of suspects when he was shot to death by a woman as he tried to kidnap her.

Reynolds, a registered sex offender, "is a very good suspect," even though he's dead," Police Chief Duane Baker told a news conference Thursday.

He cautioned that detectives have found no evidence that would stand up in court to show Reynolds was the strangler — or one of the stranglers — hunted for the rapes and murders of 13 women.

But Reynolds had been linked to an earlier strangling slaying and his name was on the list of 30 suspects remaining to be checked out from a list that began with 240 names, he said.

"It just happened we hadn't gotten around to Reynolds yet."

Reynolds, 37, of La Crescenta, Calif., and Roxanne Barnwell, 29, shot each other to death

Monday night in a pistol duel in the front seat of Mrs. Barnwell's car, apparently after Reynolds got in and tried to abduct her 13-year-old daughter.

Mrs. Barnwell fired five shots into his chest and head and he killed her with two shots to the chest.

Her husband, John Barnwell, gave her the pistol several months ago as protection against the "strangler." He said Thursday he did not doubt his wife "died for a good cause."

"I think when she died she believed she got the "strangler she had that satisfaction."

Reynolds has been under suspicion since December, Baker said, but was not under surveillance when he killed Mrs. Barnwell.

"We can't keep up with all the suspects," Baker said.

Detectives have established that Reynolds and Mrs. Barnwell did not know each other and that he was waiting for her when she drove up to the block where she lived, Baker said.

"He was a total stranger to her," he said. "It appears he was trying to kidnap her."

He disclosed that Reynolds was a registered sex offender, released from prison 11 years ago following a sex offense sentence. Asked if Reynolds' job — director of the pulmonary or breathing problems laboratory at La Vina Hospital since 1971 — should give him knowledge of strangling techniques, the officer said: "It's a plus."

Prisoner names Roberts

PHOENIX (UPI) — PHOENIX ATTORNEY Neal Roberts, currently on trial on federal charges in San Diego, reportedly has been named as a conspirator in the bombing slaying of Phoenix reporter Don Bolles.

Roberts was named by gambler Hank Landry Jr., 41, a one-time houseguest of John Harvey Adamson, who is serving a 20-year prison term for his part in the killing.

Roberts has not been charged in the newsman's death in June of 1976, but he is currently being tried in U.S. District Court on charges of conspiring to explode a bomb inside a Phoenix building that was leased for federal offices. A codefendant in that case is Chandler plumber James Robison. Robison and Phoenix contractor Max Dunlap have been sentenced to death for their parts in the Bolles' killing.

Landry was reported to have named Roberts in interviews with Phoenix policeman Jon Sellers and assistant attorney general Ronald Crismon.

Landry, a Minneapolis resident, told Sellers that days before Bolles was fatally injured by a bomb that exploded beneath his car he asked Roberts about the use of explosives in the planned killing.

According to official transcripts, Landry said he asked Roberts, "Why not just use a gun and get it over with?"

Landry said Roberts replied "that he wanted it loud and clear."

On the morning of the bombing, Landry said he heard Dunlap ask Roberts, "Are you sure he knows what he's doing?" The question referred to Adamson.

Attorneys for Landry have asked for access to the transcripts, claiming the information from Landry would help to clear Dunlap.

Scouts dance their way to trophies

FOURTEEN-YEAR-OLD DONNY DAVIS, JEROME
junior war dance champion

JEROME — Magic Valley Boy Scouts of the Order of the Arrow took two of three first place trophies at the annual Indian dance contest in Boise recently.

The winners were Donny Davis, 14, Jerome, junior war dance champion, and Larry Robbins, 15, Richard Day, 18, and Davies, all Jerome, champion dance team.

All were from the Northside Chapter of the Order of the Arrow and represented Magic Valley's Maishu Lodge in the order's Southern Idaho annual conclave and dance competition in Boise. The Northside chapter advisers are Milton Robbins and Charles Howell and dance instructor is Russ Howell.

This is the first time in five years a lodge outside Boise has won the championship, Howell said.

The Maishu Lodge includes chapters from the Wood River Valley, Twin Falls, Northside and the Burley-Rupert area.

Howell said the Northside chapter is sponsoring an Indian Day to be held from 1 to 5 p.m. May 20 at the Jerome Public Library. Collections of artifacts and modern Indian art will be on exhibit, and chapter members will perform old and new style Indian dances.

The purpose of Indian Day is to promote scouting and the Order of the Arrow and raise funds for books and film strips for the library.

The dancers competed in four events: team dancing and junior and senior war dances. Teams performed a free style dance and a hunting dance.

Judges mark dances on skill and coordination with the drummer, who beats several different types of rhythms. Dancers must stop when the drum stops, and if they lose any piece of their costume they are immediately eliminated.

Dancers make their own apparel. Order of the Arrow is a branch of the Boy Scouts and members are elected by the troops. The order promotes camping, citizenship, public service and camping and scouting skills.

Lydle Gulch artifacts reveal early Gem lifestyle

MOSCOW — Continuing study of artifacts from the Lydle Gulch archaeological dig in the Boise Valley is revealing that Idahoans of 2,000 years ago made use of a wide variety of animal foods as well as plant foods.

A clearer picture of the relationship between prehistoric Native American people in the Boise area and their environment is emerging from the artifacts unearthed last summer, says Dr. Ruthann Knudson, assistant research professor of anthropology at the University of Idaho and principal investigator of the site.

The Lydle Gulch site, located below the Lucky Peak Dam eight miles southeast of Boise, was excavated during the summer of 1977 with funding from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. Thorough excavation of the site will prevent the loss of valuable artifacts and understanding of early Idaho culture that would have occurred when the Corps installs an alternate spillway at Lucky Peak in the near future.

principal investigator

"Most of the food remains are animal bones, though there are hackberry seeds at the site," Knudson said. Small mammal remains include rabbit and ground squirrel while large animal remains include deer.

"For example we found the bones of a whole rear haunch of deer with the associated rock tools," Knudson explained.

There are also extensive amounts of mussel shells at the site which appears to be a spring or fall camping ground. "Many people don't consider the importance of mussels, but I'm finding them at every site I dig in Idaho. They were a reliable food because they didn't have legs to run away," Knudson said, adding mussels may have had low status as food but were heavily used.

An ankle bone found during last summer's dig may prove to be the oldest recovered evidence of buffalo in the Boise Valley area.

"The bone is stuck in calciche, a layer of calcium phosphate precipitate which takes from 1,000 to 2,000 years to form — so it looks like there is a good chance it is buffalo," said Lee Sappington, a master's degree candidate at the university who is carrying out the detailed study of the artifacts. He stressed that positive identification has not yet been made, and the date may be early.

Large fish bones, probably salmon, have also been found at the site, Sappington indicated.

"Basically, the remains support the historic picture. Everyone said these people used fish in their diet, but now we have the fish bones," he said.

Choppers and scrapers used on the animal foods, and grinding stones with plant foods have also been found at the site.

"One of the major changes in archaeology is to develop an understanding of how the land has been used, how people have adapted to the land over time," Knudson explained. "To do that takes bits and pieces of information about different people at different times and places."

The Lydle Gulch site is important for understanding Idaho's past, he said, because the state is one of the most archaeologically unknown places in the United States, Knudson said. Only in the last few years of so has extensive work on Idaho's archaeological chronology been done.

Also, this site is out in the open rather than in a rock shelter. The light and fresh air distribution from Idaho's sites is better than elsewhere, she said. "The open sites help give us the chronological layers," she said.

layers has been excellent.

Radio carbon dating of artifacts from the various layers isn't due back until May, according to Sappington. However, the layers seem to be corresponding well to typical Great Basin prehistoric chronology.

Last summer's crew excavated down to bedrock, from one to 2.3 meters (approximately 11 to 26 yards) down. The culture of the lowest layer was typical of the archaic period before the use of bow and arrow. Typical items are three-inch spear points of obsidian.

"Identical artifacts have been found at other sites in the Great Basin that have been dated at from 2,500 to 5,000 years old," Sappington said.

"The site was fairly continually occupied from that archaic period right up to the time pottery came in, about 800 years ago," he said. Five pottery shards were found in the upper layer of the site.

"There were no European artifacts unearthed, so habitation apparently ended before 1800," Sappington said. Evidence of a corral, apparently used at the turn of the century, was found on the surface.

Who used the Lydle Gulch site? The people were prehistoric Native Americans, in particular people who spoke the Shoshonean language, the archaeologists say. That identification is based in part on their genetic remains.

And when did they use the site? "Deer used to winter in Boise Valley, then migrate up into the mountains to summer range," Sappington said. "Judging by the amount of deer remains, the camp was used when deer were available, probably spring or fall." The fish remains also point to that time period.

It is still unclear if they used duck or goose bones among the artifacts, he said, but they probably were used in a specific time period for use based on times when those birds migrate through the area," he said.

For Knudson, the site helps confirm an understanding about the prehistoric Americans that many people are still skeptical about.

"These early people were not nomadic hunters who simply wandered aimlessly. Their lives were scheduled to meet the patterns of nature," he said, pointing out that his seasonal scheduling meant arriving at the river at the time of the salmon run, for example.

The Lydle Gulch site also reveals a small glimpse of its residents' subsistence lifestyle. After making and using a large amount of earth or stone tools, they left the site, the researchers learned. They found bones and a small lamp, cannot conduct like a part of deer.

Widower looking for new romance

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: What do you make of a man who buries his wife on a Thursday and asks you for a date for the following Wednesday? I accepted, thinking he needed someone to console him, but I got the surprise of my life. He acted like a sailor on shore leave after six months on a ship.

His wife and I were very good friends and I realize that she had been sick for a year, but I can't see any excuse for the rush this man was in to make up for lost time. When he asked me out for the next night, I told him I didn't think we should be seen in public together because people might talk. So he's been parking himself over here every night telling me how lonesome he is, and how much he needs "female companionship."

Abigail Van Buren

Abby, I'm a widow and I am lonesome, too, but I'm not THAT lonesome. How long do you think I should wait before I let him court me? I know lots of women in this town who would be glad to have him.

EUNICE
DEAR EUNICE: The man shows a shocking lack of respect for the memory of his wife. Put him on ice for about a year. He could use some cooling off.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is that I am a very poor hostess—at least I think I am. It's not that I can't relax around people, because when I'm a guest, I'm perfectly relaxed and have a wonderful time. But when guests are in my home, I am nervous and tense and I am just not myself. I am not the busy kind of hostess who runs around emptying ashtrays all the time, but if there's a lull in the conversation I feel embarrassed and worry that I'm not giving my guests a good time.

When I invite people over, they say "why don't you come HERE instead" which leads me to believe that they have noticed my nervousness, too, and would rather spare me the agony. What's wrong with me? And is there a solution?

POOR HOSTESS
When I invite people over, they say "why don't you come HERE instead" which leads me to believe that they have noticed my nervousness, too, and would rather spare me the agony. What's wrong with me? And is there a solution?

DEAR POOR: Guests can't relax unless the hostess is relaxed. The secret of being a good hostess lies in getting compatible people together in a comfortable atmosphere. No host of hostess can give guests a good time. The guests must make it themselves.

DEAR ABBY: What's wrong with one of the smartest women in town who's so convinced she can't pass the driver's test that she's been driving without a license for six years?

I try to tell her that all she has to do is read the driver's manual, then go take a test and maybe drive around the block a few times with the examining officer. But she won't believe me.

What can I do? She's a good driver, but I can't persuade her to get a license. A husband can't turn his wife in to the police, but I am tempted.

DEAR NO NAME: The "smartest woman in town" could be the sorriest, and her husband could be the "brokest" should she become involved in an accident. So, if you can't talk some sense into her head, ask your insurance agent (or lawyer) to try.

CONFIDENTIAL TO NEW MOTHER: I could write a book on advice to the new mother, but if you want happy, well-adjusted, secure children, never say:

- "If you do that once more I'm going to punish you."
- "Why can't you be good like your sister?"

Jerome student soloist

JEROME—Jed Moss of Jerome will be the featured piano soloist at the Idaho Civic Symphony Orchestra Spring concert Sunday.

Moss, who studied piano with Georgia Blalock for eight years, has received superior ratings by the National Federation of Music Clubs and at Jerome Junior High and high school festivals. He was selected from 15 students auditioning from around southern Idaho.

Moss, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Moss of Jerome, has also been a performing pianist at several master classes in Idaho and Utah, and is an accompanist for the Chorale, varsity chorus and jazz ensemble at the school.

The pianist will play the Greig Piano Concerto Opus 11 at 8 p.m. at the Idaho State University Goresen Fine Arts Building.

NBC 10-hour mini-series begins Sunday

NEW YORK (UPI)—"Wheels" is a mini-series that asks the question: Do Americans want a race sports car or an automobile that looks like a four poster bed?

Behind the slick production of the series, there is something strange on NBC's latest dramatization of a novel, "This Time by Arthur Hailey. There's an idea lurking back there behind the bedroom and boardroom action.

"Wheels" is to be presented Sunday, Monday and Tuesday and May 14 and 15 at 9:30 p.m., Eastern time, each night.

The closure Rock Hudson, who still looks like a matinee idol despite the extra bulk beneath his sports jacket, and Lee Remick, who plays a millionaire's daughter and looks like a million.

The year is 1967, and Rock plays Adam Trenton, executive of the automobile corporation of which his father-in-law, played by Ralph Bellamy, is chairman of the board. Bellamy doesn't like Rock because Rock practically abandons his wife, Lee Remick, for his job—and particularly for the "pet" car he wants to introduce.

The car, called the Hawk, looks like a sports car, sounds like a sports car, has big thick tires like a sports car—but actually is just a conventional auto jazzed up to look like something it's not.

Miss Remick loves her husband, but after her youngest son runs away from home and puts himself in danger of being drafted and sent to Vietnam, she begins an affair with a handsome racing car driver (John Beck).

All this fails to distract Hudson from his pet car and his continuing squabble with the president of the auto firm, who gets secret information on Rock from Rock's secretary, played by Jessica Walter. What to do is a him is his affair with an advertising account executive, played by lovely Blair Brown.

The Abby series is "pure soap opera," slickly produced and performed, with the emphasis on sex that has characterized a number of the miniseries. There also are a few memorable lines, like the one concerning an auto exec during the Detroit riots: "Arnold's tiddling around while Detroit burns."

The most interesting part of the show is the continuing argument about automobiles and consumers—and the wide gap in philosophy between mid-time auto-baron Bellamy and up-and-coming young Rock.

Recital Sunday

TWIN FALLS—The last recital in a series of three will be presented Sunday at the YM-YWCA.

Mrs. Teal Bellini, piano instructor, will present a group of students in the recital, to begin at 2:30 p.m.

Students playing will be Carolee Cox, Elizabeth Gloney, Beth Allen, Robin Snow, Julie King, Diane Ethington, Kathy VanOrman, Mrs. Janice Griffin and Mrs. Jo Ann Parrish.

he will open the king, not the fourth best.

Now suppose South makes the expert play of the queen of spades. East gets in with the king of clubs. He may still shift to a diamond. Some players just don't like to return their partner's suit. But there is a far better chance that he will play his partner for having led that three of spades from the 3-2 and be able to fake four spade tricks right then and there.

Ask the Experts

A California reader wants to know what happens if the dealer deals the cards without his right hand opponent cutting them.

If a player who has not looked at any of his cards calls attention to the oversight it is a misdeal. Otherwise, the deal stands.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Which honor should you play at trick one?

The question would be purely academic if the king of clubs were held by West, but you can see that East has it and is going to get right in with that card. If East returns his partner's suit, you are going to make your contract, but if he shifts to a diamond your hand is going to collapse.

Consequently, lots of players win that first spade with the ace. East does get in with that king of clubs and if he stops to think he will know for sure that South also holds the king of spades.

Why does he know this?

Because if West holds a suit headed by king-queen-10

There will be a celebration of the Eucharist at 9 a.m.

Presbyterian exchange pastors

TWIN FALLS — The Presbyterian churches in the Magic Valley and all of Kendall Presbyterian will be having a pupil exchange Sunday. All churches will have their regular programs and worship at the regular time, but the pastors in the pulpits will be different.

Rev. Michael Shaw of Rexburg will be speaking at the Twin Falls church; Rev. Robert Van Nest of Twin Falls will be at Rexburg and St. John. Rev. Thomas Young of Twin Falls will be at the Hollister church. Rev. Hugh Garner of the Buhl church will be at Jerome and Rev. Rollin Kirk of Hazelton will be in Buhl.

Miss Lila Rhodes of Aberdeen will be at the Wendell church and Rev. Francis Horner of Wendell will be at Idaho Falls. Rev. Dan Klingler of Jerome will be at Salmon. Rev. Robert Bigler of Burley will be at the Valley church in Hazelton and Rev. Norman Sawyer of Malad City will be at Burley.

The public is invited to any of these services.

Ascension hosts growth seminar

TWIN FALLS — Ascension Parish Church will host a two-day church growth seminar Sunday and Monday.

The seminar, which will involve about 125 persons from Magic Valley Episcopal churches, is to be led by Rev. Bruce Shortell, rector of St. Stephen's Episcopal church, Harrington, Del.

The seminar will begin at 2 p.m. Sunday and continue on Monday evening at 7. In charge of local arrangements are Rev. Douglas J. Hadley, diocese of Idaho's director of evangelism and Mrs. Marcia Slavin.

Tyler Baptist hear Brockway

TWIN FALLS — Carol Brockway, Image of Loveliness teacher from Twin Falls, will be the guest speaker at the Mother's Day Dinner at Tyler Street Baptist Church May 12 at 7:30 p.m.

The Berean Fellowship of the church is hosting the event. All ladies and girls are invited to attend.

Film scheduled at Wendell

WENDELL — A film which has been known to change the whole life of congregations will be shown at the United Presbyterian Church, Wendell, Sunday at a song service to be held at 2 p.m.

The film is entitled "In His Steps," and is based on the book by the same name by Charles Sheldon.

The public is invited to attend.

Churches combine Bible schools

WENDELL — The Presbyterian and Methodist Churches in Wendell are once again combining to organize a vacation Bible school which will take place at the Presbyterian Church, Wendell, from June 5 to 10.

Members and friends of both congregations are urged to contact Mrs. Barbara Larsen as soon as possible if they would like to help in any capacity.

Science church plans workshop

TWIN FALLS — Sermon topic for First Church of Religious Science will be "The Principle of Abundance" at services at 11 a.m. Sunday at the "Chapel."

Everyone is invited. Child care is provided, says Rev. Doreen Williams, minister.

A prosperity workshop will be given starting May 17 for four weeks from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. For more information call 734-6348. All interested persons are invited.

Filer Methodist women meet

FILER — Friendship Circle of the Filer United Methodist Church met at the home of Mrs. Ruth Sackett. Helen Beem was in charge of the Scripture reading and Mrs. Claire Theener presented the lesson.

Martha Circle met at the home of Mrs. Alda Orthel. Mrs. Joyce Bowen directed the lesson study.

Sarah Angle Circle held an evening meeting at the home of Donna Silgar. Bible study was held and the group made plans for Mother's Day and the May luncheon.

Women pray for teenager

FILER — Mrs. Helen Meyer led a special meditation and prayer for birthdays at the April meeting of the Clover Lutheran Women's Missionary League at the Clover Lutheran School.

A special feature of the meeting was a birthday party in honor of Holly Caudell, a teenager from Spokane, Wash., who was in a serious car accident a year ago. She has been paralyzed from the neck down and doctors gave her no hope of recovery. Holly, however, has been an inspiration to many because of her deep conviction of God's help and she has made miraculous improvements. To assist with Holly's medical expenses, the LWML contributed birthday money.

Delegates to the district convention in Idaho Falls May 2-3 are Helen Meyer, Rulina Kneip, Helen Gintler, Shirley Lutz and Irma and Karla.

Hostesses for the evening were Shirley Lutz and Donna Lutz.

Confirmation service scheduled

TWIN FALLS — A confirmation service will be held at 9:30 a.m. Sunday at the Immanuel Lutheran Church, 2055 Filer Ave. W.

Eighteen young people will be confirmed and joined in membership in the Lutheran Church.

Charter members

Church observes 41st anniversary

TWIN FALLS — The First United Pentecostal Church of Twin Falls will celebrate its 41st birthday May 12, 13 and 14 with five charter members who helped organize the church in 1937.

On May 14 that year, Mrs. Mae Herron, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer McGinnis, John McGinnis and Annie Hills and 21 other charter members joined in forming the new church in the Twin Falls area.

The group held the first of a series of prayer meetings at the home of Rev. Frank Yadon in Rock Creek Canyon south of Kimberly and purchased its present church building at 202 Fifth Ave. E. for $2,500 from the German Lutheran faith.

The live-remaining charter members of the church have all lived in the Twin Falls area for 40 years or more. Mrs. McGinnis recalls coming to the Twin Falls area in 1909 with her family, the Herrons.

She still recalls as a child taking a ride on the street car which carried passengers to and from Shoshone Falls. When the car came to a hill, she remembers, passengers sometimes had to get out and push.

Today, Rev. Haskell Yadon presides over the historic church and recalls about 27 people who have been members and have moved on to become involved in the ministry of the church in other parts of the world.

Yadon's father pastored the church in its early days. The younger Yadon finally joined the ministry and returned to Twin Falls recently from Buenos Aires, Argentina, to head up the church locally.

Yadon says 13 families from the Twin Falls church have become missionaries and some local church members now hold national positions of authority in the church.

Yadon's father, C. M. Yadon, after helping found the church in Twin Falls, is now the national home missions director. Harry Seism, a former Twin Falls church member, moved on to become national foreign mission director of the church.

The elder Yadon will speak at anniversary festivities next weekend, according to his son.

Church members will get their celebration off to a start Friday night with a "Banquet of Honor" in the Round Up Room at the Rogerson Hotel. Rev. Ellis Seism will speak.

Saturday at 7 p.m. members will hold an old-fashioned open air prayer meeting at the former Yadon home in Rock Creek Canyon. "What a Great Heritage" will be the theme of the day. Rev. Haskell Yadon will speak.

May 14, commemorating founder's day, Mother's Day and Pentecost Day, Rev. Ellis Seism and Mrs. Betty Toole will speak at 7 a.m. at the church. Members will gather for a public lunch afterward in City Park.

Meeting at 7:30 p.m. the celebration will close with a luncheon on the theme "What a Great Future." Rev. C. Haskell Yadon will speak.

Rev. Yadon invites the public to attend the meetings. Call 734-6693; 733-8277 or 734-5288 for more information.

GARY HOLLINGER

Hollinger to serve mission

TWIN FALLS — Spencer W. Kimball, president of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, has appointed Elder Gary "Glenn" Hollinger, Twin Falls, to the Taiwan Kaohsiung Mission, Republic of China, for a two-year mission.

Hollinger will enter the language training mission home at Brigham Young University in Provo June 1. He is a member of the Third Ward LDS Stake. He is the son of Mrs. Sharon Moore, Twin Falls, and Gary Hollinger, Burley.

Hollinger completed one year at BYU in April. He is a 1977 graduate of Twin Falls High School and was named in Who's Who Among American High School Students for 1976-1977. He was the Key Club secretary for two years, was a member of the Twin Falls High School Madrigals for three years and was president of the Madrigals, his senior year. He was the one-year president for one year also.

He was the third ward priesthood pastor for five years, serving in the BYU LDS Branch of 40 members of Elders his past year. He was a member of the BYU Oratorical choir and the men's chorus. He has also served as a Sunday school teacher.

Hollinger will have his farewell luncheon at 6:30 p.m. at the Third Ward LDS Chapel on Elizabeth Boulevard. The public, friends, and members are invited.

Adventists dedicate

EDEN — Reuben C. Remboldt, secretary for the North Pacific Union Conference of Seventh Day Adventists, and F. W. Bieber, president of the Idaho Conference of Seventh Day Adventists, will be featured speakers at the dedication services of the Eden Seventh Day Adventist Church.

In the Seventh Day Adventist denomination, where a local church has been paid for in full, a dedication service is held.

Two former pastors, Oliver W. Lange of Gaston, Ore., and Uriah Worth of La Junta, Colo., will also take part in the services.

The Eden church was chartered as a church in February 1974. The present pastor is Alfred Griffiths.

The dedication service will begin at 2:30 p.m. Sunday.

Experiences shared

LARRY Kling, left, and Jim Howell, will speak at 7 p.m. Saturday to the Full Gospel Business Men's Fellowship in the Morgan's Restaurant Roundup Room, Twin Falls. Call 733-2973 or 334-2027 for reservations.

Women voice opinions

NEW YORK — In a national survey of 60,000 women of all faiths, ages and incomes, the overwhelming majority of respondents — 9 out of 10 — reveal that they believe in God. The results were announced in the May issue of McCall's magazine. The poll was conducted by McCall's.

In contrast to this monumental endorsement of personal faith only a small number — 17 percent — identify organized religion as "the principal influence on their morality." Supporting this stand only 6 percent cite church or synagogue as having — major responsibility in shaping their moral outlook.

Although a sizeable proportion — 7 out of 10 — judge extra-marital sex as "sinful" only slightly more than half — 53 percent — object to pre-marital sex.

The McCall's survey reports that two-thirds of the women "categorize homosexuality as sinful, unethical or immoral." Whereas 70 percent of those polled are in favor of the institution, women only 37 percent would approve of homosexuals as part of the clergy.

Statistics reveal that Christians more consistently make stricter moral judgments than do Jewish women. Half of all Christians consider pre-marital sex sinful, for example, while only 16 percent of Jews take that stand. On the question of suicide 42 percent of Jews call it a sin in contrast to 20 percent of Christians.

Among the 60,000 respondents the greatest group on moral issues showed up between "born again" and traditional Christians.

"Among Christians alone the most significant differences of moral attitudes were between Catholics and Protestants but between the majority of women who identify themselves as born again and those who do not," McCall's reports.

Free speech discussed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Religious groups have started drawing lines on free speech issues that threaten to undermine and erode everyone's First Amendment rights, according to a prominent religious activist.

"I am disappointed about the response some religious bodies have given to important First Amendment issues," said Rev. Harry Evans of the United Church of Christ's Office for Church in Society.

"I hear a lot of people drawing all kinds of lines when, for example, it comes to free speech."

"Many feminists in the churches and synagogues support free speech — except insofar as it relates to dehumanizing portrayals of women," he said. "Many members of denominations support free speech — except insofar as it applies to Nazis in Skokie, Ill."

"We may soon find ourselves with so many exceptions that there is no viability to the principle at all," Lynn said.

Lynn made his remarks at a symposium on constitutional rights sponsored by his Office for Church in Society, the Washington Office of the Unitarian - Universalist Association and the Church of Scientology.

Also speaking at the symposium were Roger Shattuck of the American Civil Liberties Union, former House Judiciary Committee counsel Earl Dudley and former National Security Council staff member Morten Halperin.

A major topic of the symposium was the controversial FBI raid last July on the offices of the equally controversial Church of Scientology.

The FBI seized thousands of church documents in the raid and questions concerning its legality have been appealed to the Supreme Court.

"The court will soon announce whether it will accept the Scientology case for consideration," Dudley told the symposium.

"Upon that decision, much, in my judgment, depends," he said. "For whatever you think of Scientology and its tenets, if the church loses this one, we are all in trouble."

Shattuck centered his remarks on what he called the "son of S. 1," the proposed reform of the federal criminal codes. The proposed legislation has passed the Senate but still is in committee in the House.

"The bill is essentially aimed at protecting the government from the people," Shattuck said. "In section after section it would limit political or controversial speech — sometimes by enacting new law, sometimes by lowering the standard of proof of crime in existing law."

He said while there are some reforms in the area of victimless crime, decriminalization of marijuana possession and repeal of the anti-subversive Smith Act, those reforms "are not worth the price."

Appears at church

"THE Family of God Singers," Pocantello, will present a concert of sacred music at 11 a.m. Saturday in the Twin Falls Seventh-Day Adventist Church. Members of the group range in age from young girls to grandmothers. The public is invited to attend the concert, according to Judith Thietten, publicity secretary for the church.

Concert planned

"THE Collegians," Mountain View Bible College, Alberta, Canada, will present a concert at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Filer Missionary Church. Pastor Bilderback invites the public to attend.

Manuals teach LDS concepts

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — A University of Utah religious philosophy professor and former Mormon seminary teacher says teaching manuals in the seminaries promote LDS concepts of theology.

Justifying Thursday at the trial of a suit brought against seminaries in the Logan School District, Dr. Lewis Rogers said students are taught the Mormon interpretation of scripture and do not hear other Christian interpretations.

Rogers, who taught seminary classes for two years, said the scriptural passage, "God created man in his own image," is followed in the teacher's manual by the comment, "Therefore, God has a body."

"That is trying to get a doctrine out of the Old Testament text," Rogers said. "I have serious reservations about that. A teacher should let the text speak for itself rather than to direct a student to a particular concept."

Rogers said the idea that God has a body is an LDS concept not shared by the majority of Christian churches. "Other views of that same passage should be presented to the students, but not this."

The suit, which is being tried without a jury before Federal Judge Clarence Brimmer of Wyoming, was brought by the American Civil Liberties Union and challenges the credit and released time allowed students who take the seminary classes.

The ACLU contends that the Bible courses are taught from a Mormon point of view and violate the constitutional guarantee of separation of church and state.

Judge Brimmer was assigned to the case after Utah Federal Judge Aldoh Anderson, a Mormon, disqualified himself.

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, MAY 6, 1978

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Dispose of undone tasks by completing them to the best of your ability. Avoid taking chances because you feel imposed upon or want to get out from under chores that have become tiresome or ineffective. Don't spend more than you can afford.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): Use care and caution in handling monetary problems. Budget money more carefully, too. Avoid those who want to con you in some way.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20): Take time to improve your appearance so that you make a better impression on others and gain your aims. Be of help to those who deserve it.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Take care of important personal affairs and stop procrastinating. Wait for a better time to make a pleasure trip.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Your friends are busy with their own affairs so don't expect much from them now. Go after your own aims quietly and get good results.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Use care in handling community affairs and get the fine results you want. Be careful in dealings involving your credit. Take time for social fun.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Use spare time to study a new venture that intrigues you, but don't jump into it yet. Clear a new contact who is too glamorous.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Carry through with promises to others since they are important to your welfare and ends. Reach true harmony.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Whatever is expected of you by associates should be well thought-out and right decisions reached. You have to handle addressing matter in a most intelligent way. Be poised.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Forget about recreational plans until you have finished the work ahead of you. Then take treatments that will make you more dynamic.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Don't let anything stand in the way of you having a good time now. Do whatever will be best appreciated by kin.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Take care you do not start any arguments at home or there can be a serious severance of connections. Don't permit others to pressure you into some new interest that is not for you.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): Use care in motion now so that you do not have trouble. Take care you do not argue with an associate or serious trouble can ensue.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will tend to look for trouble by getting involved in other persons' affairs, if you do not teach to be more objective and to work with the hands rather than the life. There is some musical talent here that all will appreciate, if trained properly.

The record shows that a New York City mother paid the going rate - is it $50 an hour? - to a psychoanalyst three times a week to read comic books to her 6-year-old son. This went on for quite awhile. She was furious, but the doctor urged her not to stop, saying he needed more time to find out why the boy wanted him to read to him that way.

APPLE PEEL

Rare is the youngster who hasn't tried to peel an apple in a long coil without breaking that peel. But credit Kathy Waffler, 17, of Rochester, N. Y., with the slicing of the longest unbroken apple peel of all time. It measured 172 feet 4 inches. She did it with an apple 18 inches around in October of 1976. Took her 115 hours.

NAMES

The women of old Rome did not have individual names of their own, but rather masculine names made feminine by changed endings. Julia, the feminine of Julius. And Claudia of Claudius. And Cornelia of Cornelius. It could be assumed that the men carried feminine names simply made masculine by different endings - but that's not the way it was. Certain masculine names without feminine versions of same did indeed exist. But not feminine names without masculine counterparts.

'Zone of impact' law under fire in Blaine

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN
Times-News writer

HALLEY — The Blaine County prosecuting attorney said Thursday that Idaho's "zone of impact" statute, which allows cities to negotiate with counties about control over county land outside city boundaries, may be unconstitutional. Prosecutor Maurice Ellsworth said he plans to challenge the law in court if a "justifiable controversy" arises in Blaine County's stormy impact zone discussions.

The county and Halley and Ketchum have been haggling over how much and what kind of control the cities should have over certain key areas outside their city limits. The zone-of-impact negotiations are required by the Local Planning Act passed by the state legislature in 1975. They are designed to give cities better development control in outlying county areas expected to impact city services. Ellsworth, however, said he thinks the law is poorly drafted and may be unconstitutional. If the county cannot reach an agreement with Halley and Ketchum over their impact zones, the prosecutor said he will probably challenge the law in court. Ellsworth said the zone-of-impact statute may violate due process rights guaranteed under the U.S. Constitution. He said people who own property outside a city may find that city officials whom they have no opportunity to elect, can determine what they do with their property. "It may put people into a situation where people who have not elected, will be making decisions over them," Ellsworth observed. "To me that's unconstitutional."

He also said a second point of legal attack might be that the law is not specific enough to be enforced. "The law itself — to my way of thinking — is not very well drafted," the prosecutor stated. "It's not clear exactly what they are after. It's ambiguous and it ultimately throws the whole thing before the court which is essentially inquiring legislative powers upon the court. This is another possible attack." "I do anticipate this will be challenged."

Ellsworth said. But before he can take the matter to court, he said there must be a "justifiable controversy." Such a controversy would arise if the county and cities could not reach agreement on the impact zones, the prosecutor said. "We've been talking about challenging this for months," he said. "But the challenge will only come about if the city insists on a zone-of-impact that the county feels is totally unacceptable."

Conflict case still cloudy

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN
Times-News writer

HALLEY — After recently withdrawing a request for a special prosecutor to investigate possible conflict-of-interest violations by two Blaine County commissioners, the county prosecutor said Thursday an investigation into the matter will not be made unless a complaint is filed against the commissioners. Blaine County Prosecuting Attorney Maurice Ellsworth said he does not believe Blaine County commissioners Ivan Gustafson and Andy Gardner violated conflict-of-interest laws when they participated in recent zone-of-impact negotiations with Halley and Ketchum without disclosing they had direct or indirect economic interests in the areas discussed. Ellsworth also said he thinks the Idaho code's zone-of-impact statute, which required the two commissioners to serve on a zone-of-impact committee, may be unconstitutional and that it would be unjust to prosecute anyone for violations relating to an unconstitutional statute.

However, the prosecutor has admitted he cannot fairly investigate the matter because, as legal counsel for the Blaine County commission, both Gustafson and Gardner are his clients and his involvement would constitute a clear conflict of interest.

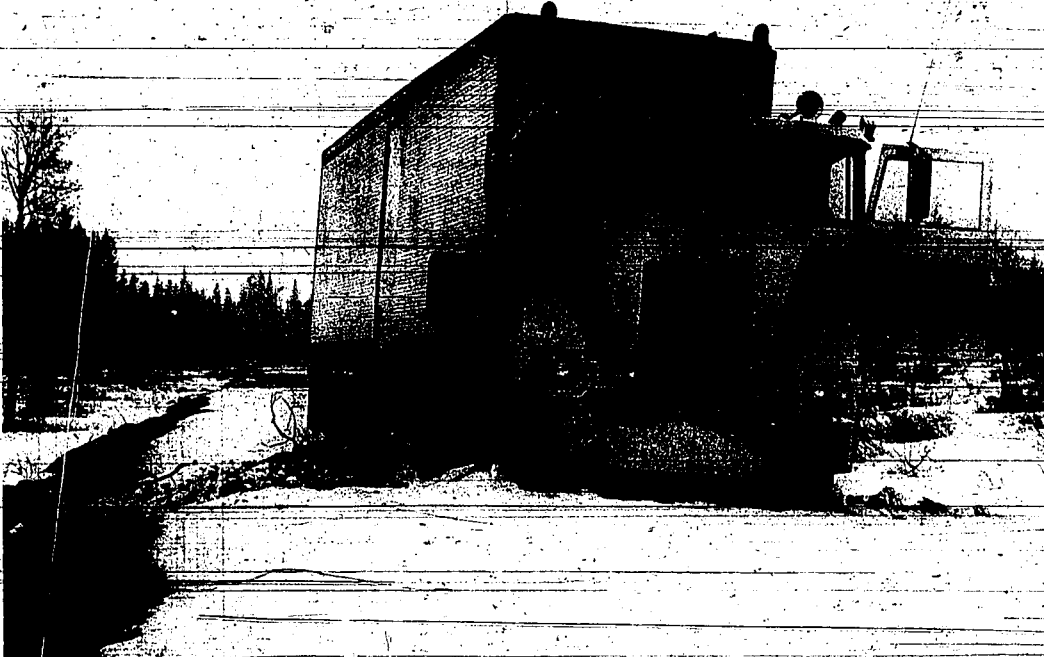

Ellsworth hastily filed a motion in mid-April asking Fifth District Judge Douglas Kramer to appoint a special prosecutor to look into the matter, but before a special prosecutor was appointed, Assistant Prosecutor Keith Roark, acting in Ellsworth's absence while he was on vacation, withdrew the motion.

Roark cited apparent conflict between laws and a deep concern that the zone of impact statute may be unconstitutional as reasons for his action, which was designed to gain more time to evaluate the matter.

Having now evaluated the matter, Ellsworth said Thursday he may attack the zone-of-impact statute in court, but he has no plans to sue any individual one of the commissioners' actions, unless a complaint is filed against them.

"If they're in conflict of interest, which I don't think they are because I can't see what they've done that constitutes a conflict, we're still stuck with a violation pursuant to what I perceive to be an unconstitutional statute," the prosecutor said. "You don't go around prosecuting people for what I see to be unconstitutional statutes." But Ellsworth added, "If someone actually files a complaint and signs their name to a paper and is willing to risk a malicious prosecution lawsuit, we can do that, and I will then immediately submit my motion for a special prosecutor."

The possibility of conflict-of-interest violations was raised several weeks ago when newspaper reports noted that the two commissioners owned property in areas disputed in impact zone negotiations between the county and city of Halley and that Gardner's daughter-in-law owned property in a similarly disputed area south of Ketchum.

TRUCKER RON RUSH FOUND A SHORT-CUT WAS THE LONG WAY AROUND ABOUT 1 A.M. THURSDAY as he slid into snow and mud in the South Hills as he attempted to skirt state police weigh station.

Trucker's plan brings double trouble

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

A Nevada truck driver who didn't want to get into trouble because of a 2,000-pound overload found Thursday there can be worse trouble than an overloaded station. Ron Rush, Yerington, Nev., drove his heavily loaded semi into the south hills after a fellow trucker had told him he could reach Highway 77 by driving from Hansen to Okey.

What his fellow trucker didn't tell him was that the road through the mountains was still under several feet of snow.

Rush, who works for JEC Trucking Co., Yerington, told Forest Service officials he was attempting to skirt the ports of entry because of the overload and drove south of Hansen toward Okey. About 200 yards above the Diamond Field Jack Snowmobile area where highway crews ended their winter road clearing, Rush's truck dropped into about two feet of snow and soft roadbed. He said he became stuck about 1 a.m. and walked down the road about seven miles to a gravel weighing site in the hope of finding some heavy equipment. He then walked back to the truck and was attempting to get out by putting chains on the truck. James Priddy, of the Twin Falls Ranger District, contacted the man's employer who in turn called a wrecker to help pull the loaded truck out of the snow. To make a difficult job more difficult, snow began falling in the area Thursday afternoon and was continuing today. Walker Hamby, weigh station control officer, Hollister, said a large wrecker worked until 2 a.m. today and was unable to free the truck because it could not get close enough to it because of the snow.

He said even if a driver thinks he is a few thousand pounds overweight he sometimes passes the limit on the official state scales. Hamby said the wrecker would not receive a citation until the truck is weighed and found to be overweight. Forest service officials said it may take a time for road damage, however. Officers also estimated the cost of getting the big truck out of the mountains may run into several thousand dollars. Whatever the fine, it would probably have been less costly to face the chances of an overloaded fine, Hamby said.

Alcohol center house manager resigns

By RAY SULLIVAN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The house manager of the women's alcoholic rehabilitation center in Twin Falls said she has resigned because she feels the board of directors of the Magic Valley Alcohol Rehabilitation Center Inc. was "playing a game" to keep her on to make the board look good in wake of its findings Monday of the managers of the women's and men's centers.

Iona Klein said her resignation is effective at 5 p.m. today. It follows the board's dismissal of Jim and Bess Butcher at a closed-door session Monday night and the resignation Tuesday of the men's house manager.

Klein said the acting director of the centers, Edmond Cormier, cancelled a pre-internship training program of alcoholic counseling Wednesday that had been started under the Butchers' administration. She said she was invited Thursday morning to talk with MYARC Chairman Greg Fuller, Cormier and board secretary Ella Nelson about starting up the program again without two other women who had been in it.

Klein said she decided to resign because she had felt Fuller and Nelson were trying to keep her on as house manager to improve the board's public image and reinstating the pre-internship program was a bribe it was using. Klein said she rejected the proposal because she wouldn't feel right about it without the other people who had been in the program. Magistrate Judge Dan Meehl, speaking for the board, said they did want to keep Klein on as house manager but did not offer to reinstate the program just as a public relations move. He said it was done simply to try and retain an employee the board wanted to keep.

All three women have been accepted to continue the pre-internship program at the Gooding-alcoholic rehabilitation center, Klein said.

Also resigning effective today is the women's center cook and assistant house manager, Dorothy McMurtrie. She is one of the three who had been in the pre-internship program. The board will hold its regular meeting Monday night at the Twin Falls Judicial Building in one of the courtrooms at 7:30 p.m., Judge Meehl said, and will discuss how to stabilize the transition period. The board may discuss what to do about appointing a permanent director for the crisis centers, he added.

Klein said she and McMurtrie are asking for pay settlements for compensation time owed or $350 and $200, respectively, which Cormier has recommended be paid. The judge confirmed her

New Buhl superintendent

BUHL — Robert Pratt, 34, now assistant principal at Borah High School in Boise, was announced Wednesday as the new school superintendent in Buhl. Pratt will succeed Dan Mabe July 1 when Mabe leaves to accept a position with the Meridian School District.

Pratt was selected from a large number of applicants for the position, and his selection was confirmed Wednesday. He served in his present capacity from 1970 until accepting the Buhl post position, saying it would be discussed at the board meeting.

Prior to being assistant principal, he was a teacher in the Borah school. Pratt attended high school in Fairfax, S. D., and attended a college in Rapid City, S. D., before attending the University of South Dakota where he received his bachelor's degree. He also attended the College of Idaho and received a master's degree there. From 1975 to 1977 he returned for post-graduate work at the University of Idaho.

Pratt is married and the father of three children, ages 10, 8 and 3 months.

Chamber backs levy

TWIN FALLS — For the first time, the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce is entering the arena of school district finances.

The chamber voted unanimously Wednesday to support the continuation of the Twin Falls school district's two-mill plant facilities levy coming up for a vote May 16.

Jay Hoyer, manager of the chamber, said the chamber's new participation stems from the major role of the school system in the community.

"We have an obvious interest in Idaho Frozen Foods, for instance, or the College of Southern Idaho, but the school system affects the community and the chamber members at least as much as any other major institution."

"We're planning on taking a different tack in this direction," he added. "I do think history of the chamber's of commerce has gotten particularly active in this type of community activity. Sure, we plan to get involved in the future."

Explaining the chamber's endorsement of continuing the plant facility levy, Hoyer said, "We would hate to have $20 million in assets (school buildings) deteriorate unnecessarily."

The chamber also commended first-year Twin Falls schools Superintendent James Sawin, who spoke at the Wednesday meeting.

Sawin told chamber members, "We have some excellent facilities that must be properly maintained or they will rapidly deteriorate to the point that we would have to come back to the voters at some time in the future for more funds for costly repairs."

Hoyer said, "Dr. Sawin is running the district efficiently, setting up good procedures there are clear parallels between a school system and business."

He said the two-million levy is not "that great a load compared to the loss we would have without it."

Meeting slated Monday

HAZELTON — The second public meeting to discuss Hazelton's plans for an improved water system is set for 7:30 p.m. Monday at city hall.

The public meetings are required as part of the city's application for federal housing and urban development funds to completely finance the project.

At the second meeting Twin Falls city engineer Gary Marshall will present revised plans for the approximately $20,000 proposal.

Included are a new water storage tank and several new water lines to improve the present weak pressure and low city water supply. The project would end a moratorium on annexation of new subdivisions now in effect.

Harker named to post

KETCHUM — Ketchum resident John Harker has been appointed by Gov. John Evans to serve on the state development and publicity advisory council.

Harker, who is president of the Elkham Resort at Sun Valley, succeeds Ray Roston of Twin Falls, who recently resigned from the advisory council.

Teachers reach agreement

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls teachers and school board negotiators reached tentative agreement Thursday on all items for next year's teacher contracts. Dr. James Sawin, superintendent, announced today.

The only action remaining is ratification by the Twin Falls Education Association, followed by the formal adoption of the school district's board of trustees.

Sawin said he expects the settlement to be finalized within the next week.

This is the first year the two sides have been able to reach an early settlement, Sawin noted.

In contrast to a bitter strike by teachers in the Fall of 1976.

This year the school district is offering an overall salary increase of about 11.5 percent.

Base salary for a first-year teacher would jump from $9,600 to $9,300.

The second major settlement item is an increase in health care benefits. The district is offering to pick up an 18 percent boost in insurance premiums coming next year.

Sawin said as soon as the teachers ratify the contract agreement, he will call a special meeting of the board of trustees for their approval.

Money's where his mouth is

SUN VALLEY — Who says politicians are a dime a dozen? Perhaps, but that category apparently doesn't include the public gubernatorial candidate Jim Crowe of Coeur d'Alene.

Crowe, a one-time professor at Coeur d'Alene's North Idaho College, and now a real estate developer, announced Friday that he will place $10,000 in a special trust account. One year after he is elected governor, Crowe said, this "seed money" would be readily available to begin a recall election if he has so dissatisfied his constituents that they want him out of office.

Calling it a "faith contract bond," Crowe said in a press release that "people have lost faith with government. I want this bond to let them know I want to turn it (government) back to their hands." Crowe added this "bond" would be similar to the performance bonds required from business contracting with the government. His bond, Crowe said, will show voters that he believes in himself and the free enterprise system.

Crowe made his announcement in Sun Valley today before the Idaho Jaycee Convention.

Crowe, a Texas native, came to Idaho in 1965. Currently he is the president of the Idaho Homebuilders Assn., and director of the National Assn. of Home Builders. He is the seventh Republican to enter the gubernatorial contest. Other Republican candidates are House Speaker Allan Larsen, of Blackfoot, former state representative G.L. "Butch" Otter, of Caldwell; state representative Larry Jackson of Boise; former Boise Mayor Jay Amick, former GOP state chairman Vernon Ravenscroft of Tuttle, and Boise housewife Beverly Shepard.

School principal to resign

HAILEY—Wood River Junior High School Principal Thomas Strela, will resign his position at the close of the school year to take another principal's job in Clinton, Iowa.

The Blaine County School Board accepted Strela's resignation, effective June 18, at a board meeting Monday.

Strela, who was appointed junior high school principal in August, said he was leaving after his first year because of family health problems, the high cost of living in Blaine County, and the attraction of a better job offer.

"The job I've accepted (as a junior high school principal) is a more lucrative job as far as the salary," Strela said. He indicated he will be earning close to $10,000 more per year.

"I gave that much up when I came here," he said, "and I'm finding it pretty difficult to keep what I have, particularly because I haven't sold our home in Grand Rapids (Mich.)."

Strela was a former school administrator in Grand Rapids before moving to Blaine County to take over as principal of Wood River Junior High School.

He said that he couldn't afford to hold the house in Grand Rapids, based on the high cost of living here and his current salary.

He also said certain "personal matters" were prompting him to leave his position as junior high principal, but he declined to say just what those "personal matters" were.

"I've enjoyed serving here, and I'll be leaving with some positive memories," Strela said.

Alydar even money favorite for derby

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Alydar, who drew post No. 10, was established as the even-money favorite for Saturday's 141-mile Kentucky Derby with the arch-rival Affirmed drew post position No. 2 and was tabbed as the 7-5 second choice.

Alydar, who runs under the devil's red and blue of Calumet Farms, is undefeated this year in four starts in Florida and Kentucky while Affirmed, to be ridden by Steve Cauthen, is also undefeated in his four starts as a 3-year-old on the West Coast.

Even horses were drawn for the 1 1/4-mile Derby, with the unexpected entry of Special Honor swelling the field. That colt, who drew post position No. 4 and odds of 30-1, finished sixth behind Alydar in the Blue Grass after rapping an ankle and had not been expected to start.

Completing the field, in post position order, were: 1, Raymond Earl (Bobby Baird), 30-1; 2, Special Honor (Chris McCarron) 30-1; 3, Hoist the Silver (Richard DeFazio) 30-1; 4, Danby (Raymond Earl) 30-1; 5, Dr. Valet (Steve Riera) 30-1; 6, Believe It (Eddie Maple) 8-1, and 11, Sensitive Prince (Mickey Solomon) 6-1.

With 11 starters, the gross purse will be $229,400, with $106,000 to the winner. L. B. Barers, whose Affirmed was the last horse out of the entry box, said he was not disappointed in his colt's post position.

"It is the one God gave to me," said the two-time Trainer of the Year. "I won with No. 2 in the Hollywood Derby. The only thing I don't like is thinking my horse wasn't in the entry box."

Alydar's trainer, John Veltech, had expressed hope that his colt would draw an outside post.

"Actually, the post doesn't really matter in a 1 1/4-mile race," said Veltech, who has been training for Calumet Farms for three years.

Sensitive Prince, the speedy colt trained by Allen Jerkens, drew post No. 10 just inside of Alydar and is expected to set the pace for the race with Affirmed and Raymond Earl not far behind.

Raymond Earl set the pace in the Blue Grass and held on for a well-beaten second to Alydar, who with Believe It, is a come-from-behind horse and should stay well back in the early running, provided the pace is not too slow.

"I wouldn't be concerned [he was as far off the pace as the other 10 horses] as he was in the Blue Grass because he's got an extra eighth-mile and a very long stretch," commented Veltech.

Foote, Fobles, the Arkansas and Louisiana Derby, also drew an disappointing second in last Saturday's Stepping Stone, also has demonstrated an explosive late charge and trainer Loren Roteve says he expects his colt to make a move as late as the 34 pole.

"I would expect Sensitive Prince and Affirmed to be right up there," said Roteve. "If I had Affirmed I'd like to see him go to the front, but I'd guess they would place him anywhere."

Showers are expected to continue through Friday, but each of the "Big Four" horses—Affirmed, Alydar, Believe It and Sensitive Prince—has shown he can run in the mud and the weather is not expected to be the decisive factor.

Nevertheless, Believe It's trainer Woody Stephens said he wouldn't mind if it continued raining. Last year, Believe It became the only other horse besides Affirmed to defeat Alydar, who he called "the Derby favorite" to take the 1 1/4-mile Remyen by two lengths last fall.

Believe It used the Wood Memorial as his prep race.

"He likes the mud," said Stephens, who trained 1974 Derby winner Cannonade. "I've been paying attention to the weather reports."

Stephens said he would "leave the running of the race up to jockey Eddie Maple, who had the original mount on Alydar but was yanked in favor of Jorge Velasquez."

"You can make plans, all right, but when that gate opens something might happen that won't fit in at all," said Stephens, who has saddled more than 200 stakes winners. "Then it'll be up to the jockey."

Alydar, who this year has won the Florida Derby and Flamingo as well as the Blue Grass, defeated Affirmed in two of their six meetings last year and won in the mud in the prestigious Champagne Stakes.

Affirmed, however, has trained all winter in rain-plagued California where he won the Hollywood and Santa Anita Derbies and should be used to wet surfaces by now.

"He can run on anything," said Barrera.

Dent shoots 65, leads Palmer by stroke in Byron Nelson classic

Rain is falling on Nancy's parade

HILTON HEAD, S.C. (UPI) — You'll have to forgive young Nancy Lopez, if she appears a bit anxious to get the rain-delayed Women's International under way.

When you are 21 years old and already more than half way to your goal of winning $100,000 your very first full year on the LPGA tour, any delay can be bothersome.

N. M. skipped last week's Lady Tara Classic and after picking up only $395 the previous week at Raintree and feels it is imperative that she start adding to her touring income of nearly $55,000 as quickly as possible.

The opening round of the $80,000 Women's International was postponed Thursday after a rain and wind storm swept over the Moss Creek course, just across the inland waterway from Hilton Head Island, playground for the rich.

Officials waited two hours before announcing the postponement, then pushed the entire 72-hole tournament back a day because the weatherman forecast mid-afternoon thundershowers.

"It was really anxious to get started," said the dark-haired Lopez. "But, when I look out on my swing and see all the flags and wind and all these tree limbs flying around on the ground I figured we were out of luck."

Since this $80,000 tournament, billed as the ladies' version of the Masters, is not being televised this year, it was decided to play the final round next Monday, weather permitting.

That bothered Janet Coles, a last-minute entry after winning the Lady Tara Classic at Atlanta last Sunday, because the young Californian was anxious to get home to her boyfriend.

DALLAS (UPI) — Jim Dent, who has never converted his ability to hit the ball a long way into big bucks, grabbed the first round lead of the $200,000 Byron Nelson Golf Classic Thursday with a 5-under-65, but that was good for only a one-shot lead over golf legend Arnold Palmer.

Dent posted his round in the morning in chilly, windy conditions, and after the sun came out to warm the Preston Trail Golf Club layout, Palmer drilled his high gallery with a 66.

"That's the best playing round I've had in more than a year," said Palmer, 48, who last won a tour title five years ago.

"It was the best I've played in all aspects of the game for quite some time."

Palmer did not miss a fairway or a green and would have tied Dent for the lead had his six-foot putt on the final hole not lipped out.

One-shot back of Palmer at 3-under-67 were Steve Melnyk and Barry Jaeckel. Defending champion Ray Floyd was among the pack at 8.

Lee Trevino shot 70, had week's tournament winning Lon Hinkle had a 71 and Gary Player, whose streak of three consecutive tournament victories was broken last week at New Orleans, had a 75. Player did not make a birdie all day.

For years Dent has been considered the longer driver of the tee, but that has done him little good.

"I don't care how far you hit it off the tee," said Dent. "If you can't put you can't win. And I've been working very hard for the last two years on my putting. It's not an overnight thing."

Dent's round — aided by five long birdie putts for the lead with two holes to play in the 1975 Florida Citrus Open.

On that occasion, he made a 7 on the 17th hole and fell from contention.

Dent termed his trip around the tree and water-infested "40-degree mink" and "the clouds" rounds of his career.

That career, which has spanned eight years, has seldom been productive. He has never won more than $49,000 in a single year and this season ranks 105th on the earnings list with $6,712.

He began the day as temperatures hung around the 30-degree mark and the clouds threatened to produce a shower at any moment. Dent wore two sweaters and a pair of rain pants to fight off the chill.

"A 66 under these conditions is like shooting a 62 in good weather," he said. "I've been playing better than I've been scoring lately and this is something I've been needing."

After playing a front 9 on even par Dent made a 30-foot birdie putt at the tough 10th hole and then at the 12th made a putt he said "was at least 100 feet." He then ran in putts of 10, 20 and 20 feet for birdies at the next three holes and missed makeable birdie putts on the 16th and 18th.

"The pins were tucked in some tough places," said the 30-year-old Dent, "and the clouds threatened to ruin the day, but I think I can win it. If you shoot under 70 you have it locked."

Palmer has had only one other round lower than this year, the 65 he shot on opening day of the Florida Citrus Open.

Palmer was tied for the lead at the close of the first round of that event, but he lost in the playoffs to Tom Weir, 7th in the tournament, players championship, 37th at the Masters and 49th at the Houston Open.

Lopez will unveil new 'secret punch'

LIDO DI CAIAPORE, Italy (UPI) — California's Alvaro "Yaqui" Galindez boasted Thursday that he had developed a "secret punch" sure to destroy reigning light heavyweight champion Victor Galindez of Argentina.

The 26-year-old Yaqui refused to demonstrate the punch but his trainers said it "packed the force of dynamite." "It was a kind of speed punch, a mix of his fists and that way," said one member of his camp. "He's got a better reach and a much better technique than Galindez who is speedy but unimaginative."

Galindez's trainer Tito Loutoure laughed off Lopez's claims of a "secret punch" and said there was not the slightest doubt his man would win the title bout in the Riviera resort, Viareggio on Saturday.

Lopez's timing is perfect; the climate here is just right and his training has gone beyond all hopes," said Loutoure.

Loutoure said Galindez was much better prepared than he was when he beat Lopez in a decision in Rome last September.

"Victor had the fit then and he wasn't very well prepared," said Loutoure. "But he took Lopez then and he'll take him again Saturday."

The 29-year-old Galindez completed his training schedule Thursday.

"The Mexico-born Lopez put in a much more trying day of training and I'd like to get all my cards ready if I'm going to beat Galindez, he's not going to be an easy one."

Lopez again complained that he had gotten a raw deal from the referee during the Rome fight with Galindez.

"I don't want to start anything," said Lopez, "but in Rome Galindez only won because he was punching low and behind the knees."

"I don't expect a world champion to fight like a girl but he should at least fight clean."

Fight promoters said they expected an overflow crowd at the fight and that all 20,000 seats at the Viareggio ring had been sold.

Dome unbalances Pontiac's budget

PONTIAC, Mich. (UPI) — The Silverdome, which lured professional football and basketball from Detroit to Pontiac, has thrown the Pontiac city budget into the red, it was reported Thursday.

The Oakland Press reported the city will wind up its fiscal year next month $3.1 million in the red — a budget deficit due entirely to stadium subsidies.

The Press, in a story based on an inter-departmental memorandum, said the financial crisis may necessitate a local tax increase and cutbacks in city services, including employee layoffs.

"All of the deficit was created because the stadium, in its early operation, is not covering its operating expenses as well as the debt," City Finance Director Jose Santiago was quoted.

Two months ago, the city allocated $3.3 million to the stadium, home of the Detroit Lions football team and Detroit Pistons basketball club, to cover a deficit three years in the making.

The stadium shortfall was blamed on debt retirement, depreciation and various improvements needed to accommodate the newly arrived Pistons — a new heating system, second floor, temporary seating for basketball and a building to store the seats during football season.

The stadium also will need $2 million in capital improvements over the next two years.

The interdepartmental memo showed that the city-owned stadium suffers a net loss of $2 million this year and faces a prospective additional loss of $2.7 million in the fiscal year that starts July 1.

The city deficit, according to the memo, could grow to $4.5 million in 1979.

"It doesn't seem encouraging at all," Mayor Wallace Holland was quoted. "I wish it could be lowered. At the end of the year, it may be. That will depend on gas, belt-tightening and what expenditures can be put off for other years."

The fiscal crisis in Pontiac came a light just five days before a legislative hearing on whether to continue the state's $800,000 subsidy for the Silverdome next year.

"The stadium seems to be pulling the city of Pontiac down, but it was heralded to be uplifting," said state Rep. Dennis Hertel, D-Detroit, an opponent of the state subsidy.

"I think the legislature will be very interested in finding out how the stadium is spending their money, I feel sorry for the residents of Pontiac. The people of Pontiac are suffering while (Lions owner William Clay Ford) is making a profit."

The stadium is designed for the Detroit Lions. A millionaire is making a profit while the people of Pontiac and the state of Michigan are getting it all the way.

Sportscasting not the same

First, there was Graham McNamee. He was a great announcer because he never let the action on the field get in the way of his imagination. He called the game as it should be. If he forgot the score, he described the sunset. Ring Lardner said sitting next to McNamee was like having a doubleheader — the game you were watching and the game you were hearing.

Then there was Bill Stern. O. Henry with a mike. "And that dirty-faced little kid today is the King of England."

Bill made it up as he went along. He died in socko endings. "And on his deathbed, Abraham Lincoln called this general to his side and said 'General, don't let baseball die.' And that general was Abner Doubleday."

Jim Murray

Ted Husing was polished urbanity. The original young man from Manhattan. Husing was the first to enliven baseball with obscure terminology as though it was a Latin mass; 10-wrap-a-truck-driver's sport in crime; Red not only had a second name but advanced trigonometry.

The logical successor to these great larynxes of the past is as unlike them as color TV to superheterodyne radio. I had lunch with this new voice of the 70's the other day, this symbol of the NFL today and countless other network sport shows.

I could never imagine taking Graham McNamee to lunch and notting what he had to say. I couldn't picture anything about Bill Stern's smiles I could hardly be expected to notice Ted Husing's legs or if he were wearing Gucci shoes.

Because this was the first sportscaster I ever saw I wanted to dance with.

You know, the usual route to the national sportscaster's life is through an apprenticeship covering prep sports, reading nightly scores on the local 50-wattler, then graduating to dying play by play for the Memphis Club on the Valdesota-Tigers or somebody and sending the tapes to the network big shots periodically.

Sportsmaster George found a fantastic shortcut. Nobody ever thought of it before. Sportsmaster George won the Miss America contest.

The network wouldn't need any tapes. If she could do for the NFL today what she could do for a bathing suit, their ratings would be over. Like, who needs a game? CBS didn't need to give Ms. George a crash course. "Now, this is the football, you use it to score a touchdown, not a homerun. There are 11 men on a side and everyone tries to catch the one with the ball. Are you going too fast for you?"

Phyllis George, you see, was a fan. The worst kind. The kind who used to keep stats and used to go in her room and cry in her pillow on the day when the Dallas Cowboys lost. That kind of fan. The kind that couldn't bear to look when the home team had the ball on the one-yard line with a minute to play and the score tied. The kind who would wear the same color throughout an entire winning streak.

Phyllis George had been a cheerleader at Denton, Tex., a town almost exclusively populated by beauty-contest winners. Not that that was her story. She had come from there to say nothing of countless Miss Texas, Miss Cotton and Miss Congeniality winners. Ann Sheridan was from there.

Ms. George is probably the first sportscaster in history who thought to ask Roger Staubach about his sex life as well as just fine. Staubach said he was married to her. The sports news was shocked. Presumably, they thought Roger, the All-American boy, had found his three children in the bushes.

Phyllis had never asked the athletes how the old man was. She was interested in the subject as a person. With Phyllis, so were they. Athletes seem to respond better to digress than to be asked a question, although Joe Namath has unhooked his mike and terminated an interview with Phyllis. He didn't mind questions about his love life, his keep habits or his style, but when Phyllis asked how came the team was so lousy, he took that as an invasion of privacy.

Phyllis is branching out onto a new CBS show. People, this fall, but that doesn't mean the football guys will have to go without, her expert analysis. I mean, what "winnit" she means is "winning" he without her? A team-Cowboy game?

I can't say Husing, Stern and McNamee would be jealous if they were around today. But you can be they'd let their hair grow. And try to look better in bathing suits.

Drug blamed in death

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Jockey, Buddy Turcotte blames the accident that killed fellow jockey Robert Pineda at Pimlico Race Course on the fact that the horse that collided to start a four-horse pileup had given a pain-killing drug.

Turcotte was riding Easy Edith, who fell with a broken leg Wednesday, and he said the horse had been given butazolidin, a pain-killer that is legal in Maryland.

"Bute is like Novocaine," Turcotte said. "It numbs a horse that may be sore. Without bute, if a horse starts to hurt, he will pull himself up. If he can't feel anything, he'll keep on running."

Authorities said Easy Edith snuffed a left-foreleg before collapsing and was later destroyed. Turcotte suffered a broken collarbone and was to be released from the hospital Friday.

Pineda, 25, riding Easter Bunny Mine, crashed into Easy Edith, followed by jockey James Thornhill on Columbus G. and jockey Fred Kratz aboard Friendly Emma.

Thornhill suffered a fracture of a neck vertebra and was admitted to the intensive care unit of a local hospital.

"He is alert and well oriented," a hospital report Thursday said. "He is now on the progressive side of the ICU."

Karate, kids: Joyce Houston likes both

TWIN FALLS—Karate, the gentle art of breathing bricks and boards with the hands and feet brings to mind the small-oriental person kicking or gouging or slashing at an opponent but for Mrs. Joyce Houston, Karate is a state-of-mind.

She should know about it too because in February, after four years of work, Mrs. Houston, who is a second grade teacher at Harrison Elementary School, was awarded a black belt in the sport. That black belt identifies her as an expert in karate but is only the first of 10 degrees in that class.

"The thing I like about karate is that you are striving for perfection in mind, body and spirit," she explained between defense exercises with the class.

That working for perfection in mind body and spirit have done wonders for her, both physically and mentally she insists. "My husband Bob began explaining the philosophy to me and I got interested. Now, I wouldn't give it up for anything," she explained.

"A wise person never gets tired; therefore, no one is in competition with him," goes one of the sayings in the book "The Ways of Lau Tzu," the textbook for the CSI karate class. Mrs. Houston says she has taken that and other sayings to heart and it has helped her to become a better teacher.

"Now I don't try to compete with anyone else, just do the best job I can," she insisted. "Karate also gave me more self confidence."

As for the physical, she said she didn't want to give away any secrets but after working in the sport for the time she has, she has lost about 40 pounds and is now able to run one to two miles twice a week.

"The exercise of the sport was evident as the students and instructors soon began to perspire from the exertion. "I didn't think I'd ever be in this good of condition in my life again," she noted.

She helps CSI Instructor Robert Tidd teach some of the karate classes at the college for the enjoyment of it and also teaches self defense for women, usually on Saturday mornings.

The instructing of women in karate and self defense is difficult at first because women are not used to using all their energy or ability to protect themselves, she said.

"After a while, they come out of their shell and are a little more confident," she added. One of the big problems with institutions and groups that sponsor one day seminars on protection is that it takes time to build up that confidence and it usually can't be done in just one day.

"One of the very real problems women have in trying to protect themselves during an attack is their reluctance to injure a man. You can't protect yourself using your strength because a man is stronger than a woman but, if he is disabled, then a woman has a chance," she said. "I don't know how a woman could expect to protect herself if she doesn't injure him first."

While injury is a means of protection, Mrs. Houston stressed that it is the last resort. "The best thing to do, of course, is to talk to him and try to talk your way out of it. If that doesn't work, the only thing left to do is use force."

The idea of the self defense for women is to give them a chance to escape, not a way to kill a person, she said.

"One woman went home and showed her husband the moves she had learned and he told her she couldn't come back," Mrs. Houston added. "That, however, is an isolated case. Overall, she said the self defense course has been well received by Magic Valley women."

As for the karate classes at CSI, the 20 or so students in the class showed plenty of energy in their exercises to get into shape for the session. Included in that preparation is a period of meditation at the start of the class. "The meditation is to clear the mind of other things and get you mentally prepared for the class."

After the meditation, the students go through several exercises and routines of karate moves.

"The theory is that there are eight people around the points of a compass and one person is in the middle of the circle fighting the eight," Instructor Robert Tidd explained. The theory teaches the students to expect attack from almost any direction and to be ready for it.

The students get a chance to try their skills against each other wearing padded hand and foot protection which keeps injuries from occurring.

Mrs. Houston said the women usually don't get involved in the hand to hand fighting but do get a little experience with the men to see what it is like to try to fight someone much bigger than they are.

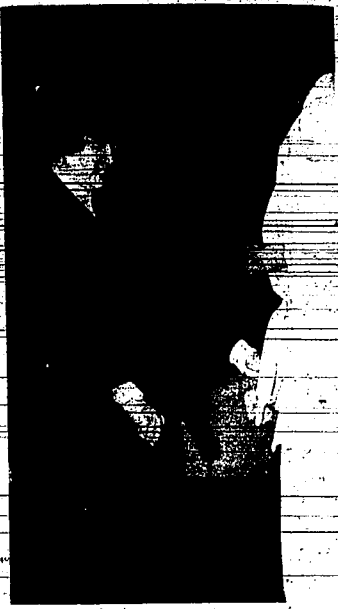

A person must be dedicated to continue the sport. "The routines are hard and tedious and some nights I would come home and really wonder if it was worth it but then I'd decide to go to class and I would find out how important it is."

Mrs. Houston is continuing to be dedicated to the sport. She has gone through white, blue, orange, three degrees of brown and is now working on the 10 degrees of black belt. The top degrees of black belt are almost impossible to obtain and it takes a lifetime to achieve them but she says that is her goal and she is going after them.

KICKING up a storm are members of the CSI Judo class under the watchful eye of co-instructor Joyce Houston.

TWIN FALLS—Junior League Baseball registration for those 13-15 years-old will take place May 20 at 1 p.m. and May 22 at 5 p.m. at the J.C. Park in Twin Falls.

Players who sign up for teams will be drafted May 23 after which coaches will notify the players of the teams they will be playing with. Season play begins May 30 and games will be played on Tuesdays and Fridays.

The registration fee is $7 and all those who register for to play will be placed on a team. Uniforms will be provided to the players.

Later registration can be made by calling Gene Gamet at 734-7433 or by calling the Twin Falls Parks and Recreation Department at 734-4831.

Harley-Davidson schedules VIP visit

JEROME—Magic Valley will get a visit from some motorcycle types May 23, but not from the type of motorcycle people normally associated with big bikes.

Two executives from the Harley-Davidson Motor Co. will pass through Jerome on that day as a part of the company's Anniversary Executive ride.

Rides representing the factories of Harley-Davidson are riding cross country from seven different sections of the U.S. and will meet in Louisville, Tenn. June 3 for a motorcycle race.

The trip will include Charlie Thompson, vice president and general manager and Don Valentine, Chief Product Engineer. They will stop at Jerome Implement, the local Harley-Davidson dealer, at 11:30 a.m. and will meet with dealers and the public.

The public is welcome to the meeting and more information will be available later.

CBS extends NBA contract

NEW YORK (UPI)—The National Basketball Association and the CBS television network Thursday announced a new four-year contract to televise games through the 1981-82 season, replacing the current $48 million contract which had two years remaining.

The agreement was jointly announced by Larry O'Brien, Commissioner of the NBA, and Frank M. Smith, Jr., Acting President of CBS Sports.

The new agreement represents an increase of about 55 percent over the existing contract and insures that all 22 NBA clubs will realize $1 million each in the final year of the contract.

The four former ABA clubs which joined the league in 1976-77 (Denver, Indiana, New Jersey and San Antonio) will begin sharing in the television revenue next season and will equally share in TV revenue in the third and fourth years of this contract.

"I am extremely pleased with this agreement," O'Brien said. "Our continued relationship with CBS Sports is a clear indication of the popularity and wide appeal of professional basketball. We are looking forward to even greater fan interest during the next four years with CBS."

"I am delighted to announce this extension of our fine relationship with the NBA which began in 1973," Smith said. "Affirmation of this has been demonstrated by our increasingly wider coverage of NBA games through our concept of broadcasting games of particular interest to individual regions. We will continue to initiate original ideas into the NBA telecasts and look ahead to four more years of growth."

Nuggets open with new 'Cinderella' team

By United Press International

The Denver Nuggets, weary from a seven-game battle against the young, upstart Milwaukee Bucks, host another would-be Cinderella team in the Seattle SuperSonics Friday night in the opening of the NBA's Western Conference finals.

Meanwhile in the Eastern Conference, the Washington Bullets, who won one of two games in Philadelphia, will be hoping for a quick recovery from injuries to two starters — center Wes Unseld and guard Kevin Grevey — when they host the 76ers in game three Friday night.

Denver seemed to be succumbing to fatigue after the Bucks' fourth win from a 2-1 deficit in the series at 9:30. All-star guard David Thompson even skipped a workout Tuesday because of mental and physical exhaustion. But Thompson "pulled himself together—and accounted for a game-high 37 points Wednesday night to lead Denver in a 116-110 victory over Milwaukee.

Thompson hit 16 of 30 field goal attempts and added five free throws for his total. But even with Thompson's outstanding shooting, the Nuggets had to struggle at the end as the Bucks pulled to within three with 32 seconds remaining.

Time ran out in Milwaukee, however, and the Bucks were forced to foul to get the ball. Bobby Wilkerson and Bobby Jones hit three free throws to ice the game.

"We put out a lot of effort," Thompson said. "We were slaying about when checking and fouling and all that. I guess that gave us a little more incentive."

"Anything something is negative, that's not really called for, that's going to upset certain parties, and I guess I fit into that category."

Rookie Anthony Roberts chipped in 26 points for the Nuggets and center Dan Issel added 13 points and 13 rebounds.

"We let them back in the game, but they made some unbelievable shots," said Brown. "I think the one thing I got out of this series is you've got to give Donny Nelson (Milwaukee coach) and that team a lot of credit. They never quit."

"It was like the sands in an hour glass running out on you," said Milwaukee trustee Warren Johnson. "You wish you had more time. That was the frustrating thing, not being able to stop that clock."

The SuperSonics are hoping midnight doesn't toll for them when they go up against Denver.

Like Milwaukee, Seattle also had one player named to the coaches' All-Rookie team joined Thursday. Spokes forward Jack Sikma joined the Bucks' Johnson as the All-Rookie front court.

For Marvin Webster, the Sonics' 7-foot center, the series with Denver will carry some extra meaning. He was traded with forward Paul Silas by the Nuggets to Seattle before the season began as part of a five-player deal.

"I told my wife a long time ago that I hoped we'd play Denver in the playoffs, and it's happening. It's amazing," Webster said. "People are gonna talk it up. You can't level that. The game is going to be built around myself and Paul returning to Denver. But you can't, as professionals, go out there and take revenge of anything like that and lose concentration. I really think we'll beat them 4-1 or something like that. I'm not underestimating them. You never underestimate your opponents. But I just have that much confidence."

Seattle's best-defending NBA champion Portland in six games and the absence due to injuries of several key Trail Blazers, including center Bill Walton, played a big role in that series.

Injuries could be just as significant in the Philadelphia-Washington series. Philadelphia played a sluggish game Wednesday night but still beat the undermanned Bullets.

The sprained ankle that forced burly center Wes Unseld to sit out the game hurt Washington of the boards, especially in the second half. Grevey, who gave Washington some spectacular shooting in the opening game victory, was forced to leave in the first half of a game two when his neck stiffened. Grevey said he slipped coming out of a shower at his home Tuesday and jerked his neck.

New Jersey unveils vast sport complex

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (UPI)—The New Jersey Sports and Exposition Authority Thursday unveiled a $45 million plan to build a sports arena to compete with New York's Madison Square Garden.

The proposed facility, scheduled for completion in the fall of 1980, would become the home stadium for the New Jersey Nets, who moved to East Rutherford last year from Nassau Coliseum.

Architect Harry Mahler, who unveiled the plan after the sports authority's monthly meeting, said each of the 21,000 seats in the proposed arena was designed to maximize the view.

He said the architectural firm of Grad Partnership of Newark, N.J., had spent months studying existing arenas in Houston, Denver, Philadelphia and other cities before coming up with the plan.

Mahler listed a number of features of the proposed arena that he claims gives it advantages over New York's Madison Square Garden including entrances around the building and space to allow trucks to drive right into the arena to set up equipment.

"Spectators, he said, would enter the arena mainly on ramps that have virtually eliminated the need for elevators.

"For some time we've been people-mechanically like you do at the Garden," Mahler said.

Monday, Gov. Brendan T. Byrne announced a plan to refinance the outstanding debt of the sports authority, which would produce $138 million in increased revenue for the state.

In a separate matter, the sports authority said it received a feasibility study on the question of rebuilding the Garden State Park Race track in Cherry Hill, N.J., which burned down last year.

Sports and Exposition Authority Chairman William Hyland said the $30,000 report would be evaluated, and the details possibly disclosed, at a special meeting on May 19.

The state legislature has voted the authority the right to rebuild the track, which is estimated to cost about $30 million.

House's NCAA investigator quits

WASHINGTON (UPI)—J. Brent Clark, a former NCAA employee hired by the House Subcommittee on Oversight and Investigations to aid its probe of the collegiate governing body, has resigned. It was disclosed Thursday.

Clark's resignation letter, dated April 24, was made public by a subcommittee member, Rep. Norman F. Lent, R-N.Y., who also released a 42-page report challenging the credibility of Clark's subcommittee testimony against the NCAA.

"I must conclude that J. Brent Clark was a misleading and deceptive witness who cavalierly utilized such terms as 'arbitrary' and 'fresh peedling' to besmirch the reputations of innocent individuals who, as yet, have not had an opportunity to present their testimony before the subcommittee," said Lent.

Lent also charged that the date of Clark's resignation, which coincides with the date of the report, "was a significant point." Clark claimed he quit to get married.

The report challenging parts of Clark's testimony was prepared by three investigators at the behest of the subcommittee chairman, Rep. John E. Moss, D-Calif., who had refused to release the document.

Clark, a former NCAA investigator, told the subcommittee that the NCAA routinely uses tactics that would violate its rules if a college used them.

As an example he cited a case in which the NCAA's chief enforcement officer offered a basketball player a pro tryout as "bait" to cooperate in an investigation.
