

Jet sale heads for bitter Senate fight

WASHINGTON (UPI) — On an 83-vote, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee today blocked an effort to reject President Carter's proposed Middle East jet sale, giving him a slim initial victory in his bid to provide warplanes to Israel, Egypt and Saudi Arabia.

The committee then voted unanimously to inform the Senate it could make no recommendation on the sale of 200 warplanes to the three Middle-East nations.

The 83 vote came on a move by Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., to kill the package. The Senate now must vote on a move to discharge the committee from further responsibility on the arms sales issue. If it refuses to discharge the committee, the sale automatically would go through.

If the discharge petition carries, a resolution of disapproval of either part or all the package would be debated by the full Senate for 60 hours before a vote. Israel has complained bitterly over the inclusion of 60 F-15s, considered the world's best jet fighter, to Saudi Arabia. The sale will go through unless Congress objects.

The committee failed to heed a plea from Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, to "give peace a chance," and permit the parties in the Middle East to settle their historical conflicts at the peace table.

Both Church and Sen. Clifford Case of New Jersey, ranking Republican on the committee, had urged rejection.

The vote came after nearly two hours of discussion which revealed deep divisions over whether selling sophisticated jets could torpedo the search for Middle East peace.

Voicing against the Biden resolution were: John Sparkman, D-Ala., committee chairman; George McGovern, D-S.D.; John Glenn, D-Ohio; Muriel Humphrey, D-Minn.; James Pearson, R-Nan.; Charles Percy, R-Ill.; Robert Griffin, R-Mich.; and Howard Baker, R-Tenn.

Besides Church, Case and Biden, those voting to disapprove the sale were: Claiborne Pell, D-R.I.; Dick Clark, D-Iowa; Richard Stone, D-Fla.; Paul Sarbanes, D-Md.; and Jacob Javits, R-N.Y.

In addition to the 60 F-15s for Saudi Arabia, the package includes 15 F-15s and 75 F-16s for the Israelis and 50 slower F-5s for Egypt.

Despite charges he is bowing to pressure from the oil-rich Saudis, Carter has stressed he would not tolerate breaking up the package to weaken what the two Arab countries are to get.

But in a separate move to cool opposition, Carter today told Congress he will seek 20 additional F-15s for Israel next year.

McGovern said committee rejection of the sale would harden the position of the moderate Saudis and "make Middle East peace more difficult, forcing Saudi Arabia to buy similar jets from France."

Canyon jumper licensing law under review

By RAY SULLIVAN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A "tentative draft" of an ordinance providing Twin Falls County Commissioners with the power to license daredevils who want to jump the Snake River Canyon is being reviewed by Jerome County lawyers, Twin Falls County Prosecutor Frank Dykas said this morning.

Dykas drafted the ordinance at the request of the Twin Falls officials, after Canadian daredevil Ken Carter announced he plans to jump the canyon in a rocket-powered car sometime this summer. Despite opposition from both county governments.

Dykas and Jerome County Prosecutor Gene Fredericksen both said they expect to take the draft to the respective commissioners within a week.

Dykas would not comment on the proposal, except to say it is "designed to assure the safety of people jumping the canyon and provide crowd control, and other safety precautions."

Fredericksen said he has not yet had a chance to go over the draft in detail and is not yet sure that the county would want to get involved in trying to retain more control over such stunts.

Asked if the proposed ordinance was just another attempt to stop Carter from jumping, Fredericksen said, "Obviously, it is specified along these lines to give the counties more control over someone like Mr. Carter, and someone in the past, like Mr. (Evel) Knavelev."

"It was crowd control problems attendant to Knavelev's unsuccessful 1974 attempt in the 'Skycycle' that brought about the commissioners' objections that Carter's jump could bring on more of the same problems.

Meanwhile, Carter is in California showing his rocket car to potential Hollywood backers. He is trying to raise at least $250,000 to cover the expense of a jumping ramp, land leases and to test the car in June at Utah's Bonneville Salt Flats.

Movie producer and veteran stunt man Hal Needham said in a telephone interview from his Los Angeles office two days ago that he is reviewing the proposed jump to determine its feasibility and whether backers could make a profit.

He cautioned that negotiations are just in beginning stages, and when anyone tries to raise up to $500,000, an undertaking that big does not jell overnight.

Attack follows Moro rites

WOMEN PLACE FLOWERS UNDER PORTRAIT ... at site where Moro's body was found

ROME (UPI) — Terrorists in Milan pumped four bullets into the legs of a director of an American bank in the second Red Brigades-style "kneecapping" in 32 hours since the discovery of former Premier Aldo Moro's body.

Police said a man and a woman attacked 37-year-old Marzio Astarita, director of the Milan branch of the U.S. Chemical Bank, shooting him three times in the left leg and once in the right as he walked to work.

No group immediately claimed responsibility for the attack but such leg shootings, or "kneecappings," are a favorite Red Brigades method of warning their enemies.

It was the second attack in Milan in 24 hours despite stepped-up security that included a special "Plan 3" to guard politicians.

Wednesday, four terrorists in Milan pumped five bullets into the legs of businessman Franco Giromazzi, 50.

In Rome, Moro's widow fulfilled her husband's last, embittered wish — that politicians who "ratified my death sentence ... stay away from my funeral" — and buried him in a private service.

Eleanora Moro's snub to government plans for a state funeral coincided with the sudden resignation of Italy's interior minister in the face of deepening controversy over the handling of the Moro affair.

It also came as police activated emergency "Plan 3," sending hundreds of reinforcements to guard politicians against an anticipated "sensational terrorist" follow-up to the Moro assassination by the Red Brigades.

Yet despite the stepped-up security, terrorists demonstrated their impunity and struck again in Milan, shooting a prominent businessman in the legs.

While all this was going on, Italy's Chamber of Deputies sought to pass a tough anti-terrorist law but were forced to debate through the night because of parliamentary delays by the splinter Radical and Proletarian Democratic Parties.

The bitter feud between the Moro family and the government worsened with the disclosure by Communist Party sources that a final call from the kidnapers to the family said they would free Moro if the government released just one of the 13 terrorists jailed in Turin.

TWIN FALLS — Sandy Sabin and Don Brinham think the idea of cutting down trees on Second Avenue North is wrong.

For that reason, they tried to protest the cutting of trees for a street widening project Wednesday afternoon by tacking a small sign to a tree.

About the only attention their sign at the corner of Second North and Fifth North received was from one of the construction workers who read it and agreed that it was a shame to cut the trees down and then gave the two young people a dime to call the Times-News.

"They say they need to widen the street for better traffic but the only time I've seen a traffic jam here is when the equipment is out cutting down the trees," Sandy complained.

"Just look what happened to the other Second Street. See how it looks now? What do they want to do, make this like Los Angeles?" she cried. "What they ought to do is drop an atomic bomb on Blue Lakes, that's where they need to work."

"It's gonna do everything I can to stop em," Sandy growled, "but I gotta work. You stop 'em," she told Don. "I gotta work too," he replied.

As a result, the tree was cut down today — without much protest or fanfare — and hauled away just like the rest.

Aid pledged

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter met with the Congressional Hispanic Caucus today and its spokesman said later Carter promised to push for an increase in the number of Spanish-speaking federal employees.

Rep. Edward Roybal, D-Calif., whose Los Angeles district is heavily Hispanic, said the five-member group pointed out that the unemployment rate among Spanish-speaking persons in the United States is 10.4 percent.

About 8 percent of the nation's population is Spanish-speaking, but only 0.8 percent of the federal work force is Hispanic.

Common trademarks may lose protection

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Trade Commission may remove the exclusive rights from some trademarks that have become so common they are now a part of the language, Commissioner Paul Rand Dixon said today.

He did not specify which trademarks might be singled out, but it has been reported that "Formica" is one of them, and there is a case pending before the agency that would force Borden to license the name "RealLemon" to anyone who wanted to use it for a lemon-juice product.

"A trademark is a perpetual monopoly over one segment of the most powerful means of influencing the thought and behavior of American consumers ever invented — the English language," Dixon said.

The law confers and protects such monopolies in the first place. It is in the interests of maximizing the output of our economy, and if a trademark should happen to stop performing the useful function that it has been performing, by becoming generic, then it seems to me appropriate for the law to withdraw protection from the mark," he said.

Dixon made the comments in a speech prepared for a meeting today of the United States Trademark Association in Palm Beach, Fla. A copy of his remarks was released in advance by his Washington office.

He noted the word "linoleum" was once a trademark but was ruled to be generic by a British court 100 years ago. Other words that have "lost" their "special trademark protection are "shredded wheat," "asp I rin," "cola," "Irmpolaine," "yo-yo" and "brassiere," he said.

"You might say that the inability of compellers to use the generic word creates an information gap which is detrimental to consumers," Dixon said.

"With some products, this gap may not be very serious ... with other products, consumers may wind up paying a price premium to obtain a generic brand name product in the belief that it has a different fundamental character from products which must be called by different names."

The government has a role, he said, because individual companies may be reluctant to take another to court in a costly trademark fight just to win something that everyone else could use.

Dixon said a 1945 law empowers the FTC to petition the Trademark Trial and Appeals Board, an arm of the U.S. Patent Office, to cancel trademarks on several grounds, including cases where a trademark has become the common descriptive name of an article or substance.

Fed hikes discount rate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Reserve Board today raised the interest rate its charges member banks to borrow from it — the so-called discount rate — from 4 1/2 percent to 7 percent.

The action was taken to "bring the discount rate into closer alignment with short-term rates generally," said the board in its statement.

A Federal Reserve spokesman said the new rate — highest since early 1975 — will have virtually no immediate effect on the average bank borrower since other rates already affecting small loans have already gone up.

"It's simply to bring our tools in line," he said.

It was the second time this year the board has hiked the important borrowing rate. It was increased from 6 percent to 6 1/2 percent on Jan. 9.

The Federal Funds Rate, the rate at which banks borrow from one another, has already gone up more than one-half percent to 7 1/2 percent this year.

The new discount rate is effective immediately, the board said.

The Federal Reserve, which is responsible for the nation's money supply, has been under pressure from the administration and labor to keep check on rising interest rates.

The action comes one day after the AFL-CIO, the nation's largest labor organization, criticized the board for pursuing "high-interest rate policies."

The AFL-CIO said such interest rate boosts are "threatening disaster for the housing industry and severe problems for small business and local governments, thus adding to the dangers of a general recession."

Stuart Eizenstat, the White House domestic affairs adviser, also has attacked the Federal Reserve on its monetary policy.

A reserve spokesman said the decision to raise the discount rate was made "late" Wednesday. Treasury Secretary Paul Blumenthal and Charles Wihlborg, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, were informed of the move in advance and the word was passed along to President Carter, the spokesman said.

He said the board vote to approve the move was unanimous.

"The increase had been widely expected on Wall Street."

House, Senate start job of settling 1979 budget

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There's $2 billion difference between what the House and Senate say the 1979 federal budget should be, but behind that figure lie many other differences.

These are to be negotiated in a House-Senate conference beginning today.

After five days of debate, the House late Wednesday approved a $500.9 billion spending ceiling for fiscal year 1979, which begins Oct. 1. The Senate has proposed $498.9 billion. President Carter had called for $500 billion.

The biggest issue between the two branches of Congress is likely to be defense. Carter proposed $128.4 billion in defense budget authority. The House figure is $1 billion less than that, the Senate's $1.4 billion higher than the president.

Both houses propose $19.4 billion in net tax cuts in 1979, compared to Carter's $2.3 billion.

But while the Senate and Carter would make their cuts largely in individual and business income taxes, the House would have smaller income tax cuts and include a $7.5 billion reduction in Social Security taxes.

The House would allow tuition tax credits for college and non-public elementary and secondary schools. The Senate would allow them for college only.

The House version calls for a $7.9 billion deficit, compared to the Senate's $5.6 billion and Carter's projected $6.6 billion.

House Budget Committee Chairman Robert Glimco, D-Conn., said negotiating with the Senate should be easy compared to getting the budget through the House.

The House approved the budget by a vote of 201-197, with only three Republicans supporting it. House GOP leader John Rhodes called it "a program of higher taxes, higher spending and huge deficits" and said it will lead to more inflation.

By a vote of 206 to 192, the House reversed itself and restored $3 billion it had cut Tuesday from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. The cut had been designed to make that agency receive less "higher management and fraud," estimated by HEW's inspector general at more than $6 billion.

But Democratic leaders obtained a new vote, saying the cut would not necessarily reduce waste and would hurt medical research, health benefits for the poor and elderly, and could force some community mental health centers to close.

Shooting follows Moro rite

The government refused despite highly emotional appeals from Moro's wife.

In one letter from captivity, Moro accused the government of "ratifying my death sentence" by refusing to negotiate with the terrorists. He ordered all party and government officials to "stay away from my funeral (because) I want only those who truly loved me."

So when the government announced its plans for a state funeral Saturday, Mrs. Moro, her son and three daughters claimed the dead statesman's body at the city morgue.

It was placed in a white oak casket and taken to Fortia-Fiberina 30 miles from Rome where the Moros kept a summer home.

Mrs. Moro refused an offer of a police escort. The black hearse followed by only by three cars carrying family and close friends.

As a steady rain fell on the thousand villagers attending the ceremony, the body was placed in a vault of a family friend. Family sources said a chapel and burial plot for Moro would be prepared in the cemetery and the body would be moved to the new site when it was completed.

The government said it was going ahead with a symbolic state funeral, even though Moro's body and his family would not be there.

At the same hour Moro's body was being placed in the ground, Interior Minister Francesco Cossiga, Italy's top police and anti-terrorist official, resigned so Parliament could freely review his actions in the case.

FRANCESCO COSSIGA
Interior minister quits

... I thereby intend to assume full political responsibility for the work of my ministry, of the police forces who worked under my direction and of the intelligence and security services of which I made use," he said in his letter of resignation.

Hundreds of thousands of workers and students jammed St. John Lateran Square in a driving rain to condemn the Red Brigades murderers of the soft-spoken former premier.

Black-rimmed photographs of Moro and placards bearing the word "Assassins!" stood out from the sea of umbrellas that lined the giant square as union leaders delivered emotional speeches calling for unity in the fight against terrorism.

In Milan, terrorists pumped five bullets into the legs of a director of Italy's Montedison Corp., Franco Giacomazzi, 50, in a Red Brigades-style "knee-capping." Police said the attack was carried out by three men and a woman.

An autopsy report showed Moro was shot probably by two gunmen and that 11 bullets hit his chest in the vicinity of his heart. Doctors said Moro apparently lifted his hands to protect himself and one bullet grazed his hand.

Interior Ministry spokesman Giorgio Merola said, "Moro was not shot in the head and his body was not chained or bound."

Police threw a light dragnet over Fregene Beach north of Rome in a intensive hunt for the gang that kidnaped Moro March 16 and held him captive for 55 days before murdering him in cold blood.

Lab experts said sand found in the cuff of Moro's trousers matched the white beach sands of Fregene.

Police seek cycle gang

DENVER (UPI) — Authorities today searched for members of a northern Colorado motorcycle gang who stomped to death a 32-year-old parachutist who drifted off course last month and landed near a cyclone meeting site.

Police said the parachutist, David Armour, died Tuesday at Denver General Hospital of injuries suffered in the April 22 attack. He initially was taken to St. Anthony Hospital and later transferred to Denver General.

Weld County authorities in Greeley said they received no report about the incident after it occurred at a race track north of Denver. They were notified only after Armour was admitted to Denver General Hospital.

Investigators said Armour was jumping with a friend when both landed off course near the Colorado National Speedway, 20 miles north of Denver. Nearly 600 cyclists were at the speedway, which is a popular area both for parachutists and cyclists.

Weld County Sheriff Sgt. Rick Hill said the other parachutist, whose name is being withheld for his protection, landed first and drank a beer with members of one club. But Armour landed some distance away near another motorcycle group and became involved in an argument when one cut a piece out of his parachute for a souvenir.

Hill said one man pointed an automatic handgun at Armour while seven to 12 others beat and kicked him. Armour's companion and his brother, Dennis, who was waiting to pick up his brother after he landed, also were beaten.

Denver police said the incident could mean some serious problems this summer with motorcycle gangs.

Small rattles banned as danger to infants

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Citing at least 10 cases where infants have choked to death, the Consumer Product Safety Commission today banned baby rattles small enough to get stuck in a child's throat.

The rattles which prompted the action are about 4 inches long and shaped like telephone receivers, barbells, clothespins and safety pins, the agency said, although other types of rattles could be hazardous as well.

The ban, basically the same as the agency proposed last November, will outlaw all rattles small enough to fit into a 35-by-50-millimeter cavity in a testing device, and project to a depth of 30 millimeters. The agency said those dimensions approximate the size of a baby's throat.

The commission said it knows of 10 infant deaths from choking on small rattles since 1974 and has had reports of 10 non-lethal accidents as well as 19 other cases "where suffocation was stopped by quick-thinking parents who pulled the rattle from the child's throat."

When the ban was proposed last fall, about three-quarters of all rattles sold in the United States did not meet the requirements, the agency said. But since that time, it added, many American companies are already retooling to manufacture larger rattles.

The ban takes effect 90 days after publication, which is expected shortly.

Rains drench plains

By United Press International

Today is the second in a row of those that make spring worth waiting for.

Clear skies and warm — almost summery — temperatures dominated the weather across most of the nation both Wednesday and today.

Summers covered wide bands along both the Atlantic and southern Pacific coasts. The Great Lakes region and most of the South also had fair weather.

Temperatures Wednesday broke the 100-degree mark with a 104 reading at Alpine, Texas. Readings in the 60s, 70s and 80s were common.

Chicago, though its skies were sunny, had its first ozone advisory of the year. People with respiratory or heart ailments were advised to avoid strenuous activities and motorists were asked to use public transportation to reduce pollution held over the city by the warm temperatures and light winds.

Funnel clouds were sighted during rains in Kansas, Missouri and Illinois Wednesday night. A tornado blew down a barn and a shed near Plattburg, Mo. Minor wind damage was reported near Cameron, Mo. Other tornadoes touched down near Lake Lotawanna east of Kansas City, Mo., and near Buckner, Ill., but no damage was reported.

Thunderstorm gusts up to 75 mph were reported at Alliance, Neb. Golfball-sized hail hit Flasher, N.D., and marble-sized hail was reported west of Leoti, Kan.

Heavy thunderstorms occurred in Texas. Austin received three-quarters of an inch of rain Wednesday night, the most in the nation.

A cold front pushed rain in front of it over Washington early today and Oregon and another cold front stretched from Minnesota into Montana.

Mahoney chased and caught the man only to be grabbed from behind by inmate Henry Ramirez.

China charges Soviet forces with foray over border

HONG-KONG (UPI) — China charged today that Soviet troops staged an armed intrusion of more than two miles into Chinese territory in the northeastern Heilongjiang province in what it protested as a "serious infringement," the New China News Agency reported.

The agency said 18 Soviet military boats, a helicopter and some 30 Russian soldiers were involved in the intrusion Tuesday and some Chinese inhabitants along the border were injured by gunfire.

"It was only due to the restraint of the Chinese side that the incident did not develop into an armed conflict," the agency quoted a protest note handed to the Soviet Ambassador V.S. Tolstikov by Chinese vice Foreign Minister Yu Chan in Peking Thursday.

The note said the Soviets "On the morning of May 9 1978, dispatched a helicopter to intrude into China's space, crossing the border river Wusuli and penetrating four kilometers (2.4 miles) over Ydeyapao district, Hailing county, Heilongjiang province."

North Korean sea raid condemned

PANMUNJOM, Korean Demilitarized Zone (UPI) — The U.N. Command charged today that a North Korean vessel entered South Korean waters last month in a "lawless" act and demanded that such missions stop.

North Korea called the charge a fabrication.

At the 380th meeting of the Korean Military Armistice Commission, U.S. Rear Adm. Warren C. Hamm Jr., chief UNC delegate, said the Communist intrusion was a major violation of the Korean Armistice in effect since the end of the Korean War in 1953.

"The intrusion of your armed vessel into waters contiguous to the Republic of (south) Korea and your vessel's unprovoked attack on our side's patrol vessels; in our own waters; is an act of lawlessness and irresponsibility," Hamm said.

"I expect you to take action to see those personnel responsible are punished and I expect you to guarantee that such acts of armed aggression cease," he said.

South Korean military authorities said an armed North Korean spyboat was sunk in an exchange of fire with two South Korean naval patrol boats April 28 near Kudo-Island off the nation's coast, about 245 miles south of Seoul.

A South Korean seaman was killed and four others were wounded in the gun battle, the authorities said. Four North Korean bodies and a number of items on board the sunken communist boat were recovered.

As evidence, the UNC delegate presented photographs and 52 pieces of equipment and items found along with the bodies in the area.

"Your words of peace mean nothing when compared to these senseless, irresponsible actions," Hamm said.

MENACHEM BEGIN PLACES WREATH
...honors war dead during ceremonies

Heavy tank on display

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Israel rolled out its new heavy tank under a cover of its most advanced American-built warplanes today in a low-key 90-minute military show that highlighted the Jewish state's 30th anniversary celebration.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin — who fought back fatigue — and members of his government and parliament reviewed the nationally televised parade in Hebrew University Stadium.

All air branches of the armed forces were represented at the parade but the highlight was the armored corps' display of its new tank, the Merkava (Chariot).

The 56-ton tank with a revolutionary front-end engine and the ability to carry 10 infantrymen stood in a corner of the university playing field alongside one of Israel's oldest weapons, a French-built Hotchkiss tank used in the 1948 war — Israel's first of four against the Arabs.

A distinguishing feature of the sleek, Merkava, the development of which began in 1970, is armor plating that cannot be pierced. It carries 105mm cannon and a 950 horsepower U.S.-engine built by Teledyne Continental and is estimated to cost $700,000.

Four F-15s, the advanced interceptor proposed by the Carter administration for sale to Saudi Arabia, swept over the stadium followed by three squadrons of Israeli-made Kfir C-2 delta winged jets to give spectators a glimpse of Israel's air power.

But the entire military display only was a glimpse of Israel's military prowess. It bore no resemblance to the massive show of armed might that marched through and flew over Jerusalem during 25th anniversary celebrations in 1973, five months before the outbreak of the October war.

Begin sought a similar parade this year. But he was turned down by the defense establishment, which viewed it too costly and time-consuming for rehearsal.

Begin canceled two appearances Wednesday because of fatigue and a heat wave but the 64-year-old prime minister turned out to watch the veterans of Israel's four wars parade.

Some 250,000 Israelis from all over the country crowded into the stadium in the high point of the celebrations of Israel's birth 30 years ago.

Some 8,000 security personnel have fanned out throughout Israel to safeguard the festivities that began Wednesday night following memorial services for the nation's more than 9,000 war dead.

Stepped-up aerial and naval patrols crisscrossed the Mediterranean coastline to watch for possible Arab guerrilla strikes.

In an Independence Day message on radio and television, Begin appealed to the nation not to lose patience in the quest for peace with the Arabs.

Don't abuse right to roads

With the coming of spring come the usual warnings about road damage caused by over-eager motorists taking to the side roads of the surrounding countryside...

What does it take to stop these vehicular morons? Heavier fines, larger physical barriers, more patrols (that proposal would probably mean more government spending)...

Or are we forever doomed to put up with certain illogicalities and just write them off as the price we have to pay for having a system based on personal freedoms with less of an accent on a police state?
If anything is taken for granted in the United States today it is the concept of a road and the freedom to travel thereon...

Perhaps all that can be done, in addition to persistent sign-postings and patrols by the Forest Service, is to keep reminding motorists of the damage caused by spring driving on certain roads...

To such people, here's wishing one or two days' worth of being stranded out in the wilderness in a few feet of snow or mud...

Brock taking a wrong track

Railroad travel has become one of those political oddities in recent years that sees many persons promoting what they don't use.

One of the favorite questions asked of persons testifying at public hearings involving discontinuance of train service is, "How often did you ride this train last year?"

But train travel still seems to be relished by the American public even though so many don't use it. Perhaps many Americans trust Amtrak service as they would a museum...

That forgotten factor is the increase in the number of train riders since Amtrak's inception in 1972. Even though financial losses have continued, ridership has steadily increased...

Amtrak is slowly proving its worth. It's a slow process and an expensive one, but the public treasury will have to be patient. Decades of damage were done to the rail passenger network prior to Amtrak's arrival...

They simply wouldn't make it. They were restrikes of early model role-models, barely able to take a nostalgic trip around the block.

Agricultural report from Virginia

FIERY-RIVING: The annual agricultural or garden report from this corner of the Blue Ridge is bad as usual, but not too bad. Everything in our garden buffered from inflation except our production...

What then to do? We were now the owners, not merely of 10 1/2 acres, but of 10 1/2 acres, with our own private bridge from the cabin to the Miller's house. Our budget was more than balanced, so we plunged.

Over the entire spread of our domain, however, (10 1/2 acres) there were some unexpected bounties this last year. The state of Virginia, which is always straightening out roads, if nothing else, decided that the old iron bridge over Flory Run by the Miller's house...

JAMES RESTON

With the dogwood and the red bud, and the silent mountains at dawn and sunset — and if you try, we'll call the police. For all of things that must be left to the children in this age, privacy and beauty are the most important, and most difficult to preserve.

Every year there is some new surprise in this remote triangle in the Virginia hills. The dogwood is resting after a spectacular display last year, but the wildflowers, for some reason, are recklessly beautiful, and the violets and trillium are obviously running for office.

But above all, this is the year of the dandelion in these parts. Never so many of them, never so big or brassy yellow or so concentrated precisely in the middle of our lawn. So our glory this spring is our dandelion garden, constructed by the simple process of cutting the grass around it and leaving it there blazing in the sun in the shape of a ring.

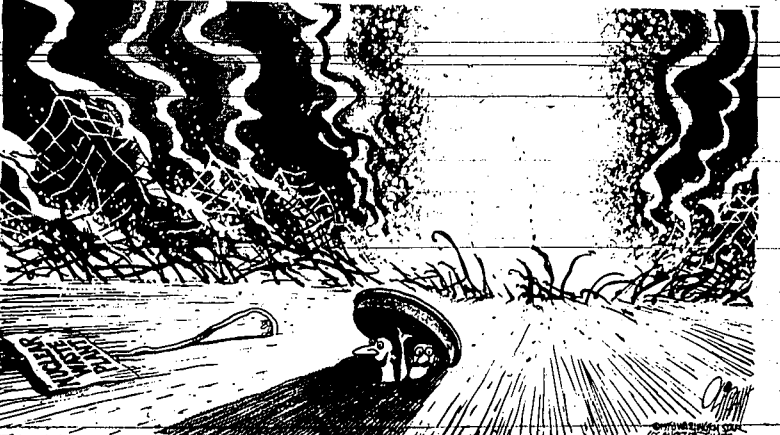

You should see it now in the Virginia spring, to look the dandelion as the symbol — "The pessimists of my boyhood," he wrote in his autobiography, "when confronted" with the dandelion, said with Swinburne:

"I am weary of all hours blown buds and barren flowers / desires and dreams and powers / and everything but sleep"

"And at this," added Chesterton, "I cursed them and kicked at them... (And at the strange and staggering heresy that every human being has a RIGHT to dandelions... and need feel no wonder at them at all... the aim of life is appreciation...)"

He would not have liked this Age. He took his philosophy out of the old Penny Catechism that "the two sins against Hope are Presumption and Despair..."

Dangerous disco epidemic sweeps U.S.

There is a dangerous epidemic sweeping the nation, destroying the minds of America's young. This plague has been known to attack young men and women with such brutal viciousness that it leaves them sunken-cheeked, dumb-eyed shells of their former selves...

Disco dancing was originally a secret political weapon devised by the late President Lyndon B. Johnson when he was in office, and then picked up by the architects of the Nixon administration.

Disco dancing is now a rampant social and political weapon used by the late President Lyndon B. Johnson when he was in office, and then picked up by the architects of the Nixon administration.

continued to march in the streets. The one great breakthrough of Lyndon Johnson's life, it is said, is that for all the good he was able to accomplish domestically, he knew he would be remembered only as the man who failed to bring disco dancing to America.

Disco dancing is now a rampant social and political weapon used by the late President Lyndon B. Johnson when he was in office, and then picked up by the architects of the Nixon administration.

BOB GREENE

By choice! It is a documented fact that all people who choose to disco dance are aloof, vacant cows who are unable to contribute to society in a meaningful way, and cannot even maintain a normal conversation. This is the major reason that the music in disco is so loud: the disco dancers, embarrassed that they are unable to speak to one another on an intelligent level, need the noise to give them an excuse not to talk.

So for hour after hour they stand in their expensive clothing and let voluntary spasms rule their bodies while they avoid eye contact. This refusal to look one another in the eye, by the way, is no coincidence; people who disco dance are, at their essence, ashamed of themselves, and thus prefer to keep their eyes averted.

Disco palaces are open until unreasonably late hours. People who disco dance often stay until closing, thus spending their time dancing when they could be engaged in something constructive, such as illicit sex.

This insistence on the part of disco dancers to keep dancing speaks to another point of the uselessness of their existence. In the 1950s and 1960s, when a young person would go to a dance, it would be for one of two reasons:

(A) To pick up a member of the opposite sex and leave the dance.

(B) To arrange a fight in the parking lot and leave the dance.

Now this concept is gone. Disco dancers do not want to leave the dance. Their brains are so rotted they are convinced that the dance is an end in itself.

Well, that role-model had been a gas guzzler. The women who tried to follow her act had produced a psychic energy crisis all over America. The fact was, the boss was right. They needed a better idea — a baseball, apple pie idea. A new road model role-model for the Era of Lowered Expectations.

PR people on the prowl

In search of perfect role-model mother

BOSTON — It is nearly Mother's Day and the public relations department still didn't have a role-model. Mother's Day without a role-model will be like Christmas without a Santa Claus. A role-model was a cultural necessity, a merchandising must.

Besides, they reasoned, you couldn't leave an entire generation of mothers on their own, wailing. It was entirely too unscientific. Definitely bad for business. Probably un-American.

So, once more they spent their morning meeting sitting through the files. First there was the Devoted Solis Mother file. They pulled out a quote by Gloria Connors: "I've done nothing for 22 years but work for Jimmy."

So they went on Past Mrs. Whistler, past Elaine May, past Betty Crocker, past the peculiar lady who raised her daughter's underwear, past the Heloise heiress who polished her son's copper baby shoes with secondhand toothbrushes.

They simply wouldn't make it. They were restrikes of early model role-models, barely able to take a nostalgic trip around the block.

Then, one of the PR people fondly recalled the last model they'd tried to sell. It had come with lovely accessories for home and work. The most marketed mother of the 70s had been the chic Wondervorn-Kingmother of four children and three corporate titles who jetted to Paris but was always home in time to make dinner. Yes, she was the one who cared for horses and children and corporations without ever neglecting her skin-care routine. She jogged in fluff.

But the Wondervorn-Kingmother model had gone over like an Eisenstein. The final attempt to sell her had been a recent Vogue article on "Supersuccess! Mary-Wells-Lawrence! Someone, a trailer in the office, no doubt, had written graffiti all over that piece: "Think What God Could Do If He Had Money!"

Well, that role-model had been a gas guzzler. The women who tried to follow her act had produced a psychic energy crisis all over America. The fact was, the boss was right. They needed a better idea — a baseball, apple pie idea. A new road model role-model for the Era of Lowered Expectations.

So, on deadline, they went back to the drawing board. One drew a portrait of a mother who was neither martyred nor oblivious to her children. At least not all the time. Another drew a profile of a woman holding a list of priorities that had kids' feelings at the top and their ironing at the bottom. Usually.

One sketched a mother at work who wasn't defensive when someone asked her, "Are my children suffering?" Another sketched (mother) a mother who wasn't defensive when someone asked her, "What on earth do you do all day?" At least not always.

They had a picture in their minds of a mother who was asking the right questions: When are kids being demanding and when are they needy? How can a mother lead her own life and not let down her children? What is the line between encouraging independence and fostering neglect? What is the line between nurturing and smothering?

But in the end, they simply couldn't draw a composite. The mother of the late 70s came with options and hassles and individual classis. Her one standard piece of equipment was a simple Desire to Cope.

Ex-football star faces sentencing on battery charge

By United Press International
YEDD OFF
 Jim Brown, the former pro football star turned actor, faces sentencing June 28 for punching and choking Frank Snow, 33, a former golfing partner. The 6-3, 230-pound Brown was convicted in Inglewood, Calif., Wednesday of misdemeanor battery for beating Snow during an argument over the way Snow played his ball on the ninth green in a match last October. Municipal Court Commissioner Wardell Moss found Brown, 42, guilty after a two-day, non-jury trial. Brown, former fullback for the Cleveland Browns, faces a maximum sentence of six months in jail and a $1,000 fine. He remained free without bail.

After a champagne toast, the Sklouses, from eight to 10 o'clock, including Belgian caviar at $54 an ounce, coquette st. Jacques au champagne and patis de foie gras Strasbourg. The meal included escaloapes de veau escoffier, bouquetierre des legumes, chouffeur Polonoise, artichauts Bernaise, carottes a la Vichy, champignons aux fines herbes, pommes a la Parisienne and asperges a la choron. And the tab, not counting tax and tip, came to a tidy $2,783.

Hsing-Hsing still batting zero

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Hsing-Hsing, the male giant panda in the National Zoo, failed again this spring to mate with Ling-Ling, his female friend, but zoo officials believe he's not unwell.
 Up to now, Hsing-Hsing's reputation has been pretty much of a zero. Ling-Ling, at 7 years somewhat older and slightly bigger, had even appeared to scare him with her mating screams.

This spring, the macho Mr. Hsing-Hsing began to show up. He was much more aggressive and Ling-Ling did not intimidate him with her female ways.
 "He was really worked up. We haven't seen that before," said William Xanten, the zoo's curator of large mammals who has been trying to breed the two pandas since they arrived from China in 1972.

 "I think at this stage we're a little closer," said Xanten, but despite the good intentions by both parties, they never did get their act together in a dozen or so close encounters.
 "It looked like this year both animals were just tumbling around," he said.

This spring's efforts included a lovers' quarrel — followed by the pandas spending a weekend together for the first time. To get started, zoo officials put Ling-

Ling on a diet to slim her down from a fat 226 pounds to a svelte 278. On April 17, Hsing-Hsing, weighing 273, was allowed into Ling-Ling's enclosure for the first time.
 "I thought, twice daily encounters were undertaken on selected dates until last Friday."
 With Ling-Ling reported "in strong health very receptive," the two got together and appeared to have a heck of a fight with lots of roars, lots of screaming," Xanten said.

It turned out to be more noise than combat and neither was hurt.

Court upholds suspension order

SEATTLE (UPI) — A 6-foot, 400-pound go-go dancer named Big Fannie Annie was a little too generous with her ample talents, so a King County Superior Court judge upheld a temporary suspension of her employer's liquor license.

Judge Horton Smith has ruled that the State Liquor Control Board properly suspended the license of Bellevue's Bavarian Gardens where she danced. The board ruled after a June, 1977, incident that the establishment permitted suggestive, lewd or obscene conduct on the premises.

Ross Johnson, an enforcement officer for the board, testified that when he went to the Bavarian Gardens on a routine check in June he observed "this huge woman" dancing at a table, straddling a male customer's leg.

Big Fannie Annie's measurements were billed at 70-48-54. Johnson reported that there were times when the customer's face was almost lost in her breasts.

Operators of the Bavarian Gardens contended that dancers had been instructed not to have physical contact with customers and that Big Fannie Annie's job was terminated after the report. They had asked the board to only issue a warning.

Princess Margaret plans divorce action

LONDON (UPI) — Princess Margaret's 18-year marriage to commoner photographer Anthony Armstrong-Jones will end in divorce, the first marital split in the immediate royal family since Henry VIII's 1533.

The 47-year-old sister of Queen Elizabeth will initiate the unprecedented divorce proceeding within a few days, a palace spokesman said Wednesday.

Margaret, separated from her husband for more than two years, is in King Edward VIII hospital where for treatment of suspected gastroenteritis, an inflammation of the stomach and intestines.

Announcement of the divorce came almost 18 years to the day after Margaret married Armstrong-Jones, then a court photographer, in a magnificent state wedding in Westminster Abbey May 6, 1960.

PRINCESS MARGARET IS SHOWN WITH RODDY LLEWELLYN ... she officially announced divorce plans Wednesday

Armstrong-Jones, who was given the title earl of Snowdon after his marriage to Margaret, had no comment on the divorce announcement.

"Her royal highness, the Princess Margaret, countess of Snowdon, and the earl of Snowdon, after two years of separation, have agreed that their marriage should be formally ended," the palace statement said. "Accordingly, her royal highness will start the necessary legal proceedings."

The last divorce involving a member of the immediate royal family took place 445 years ago when King Henry VIII annulled his marriage to Catherine of Aragon to wed Anne Boleyn.

Palace spokesmen stressed that Margaret had no plans for remarriage and had no man in her life — a reference to rumors she might want to marry her frequent companion, 32-year-old socialite and pop singer Roddy Llewellyn.

While Armstrong-Jones, who no longer uses his title of Lord Snowdon, had no comment on the divorce, he did say a few hours after the announcement. "I just hope you will give support and encouragement to Princess Margaret when she comes out of the hospital and goes about her duties again."

Palace sources said the royal couple will file a "special procedure" divorce petition which is granted after two years of separation if both parties agree. It does not require a court appearance.

Margaret will retain custody of their children, Viscount Linley, 16, and Lady Sarah Armstrong-Jones, 14.

Margaret met Armstrong-Jones in 1960 on the rebound from her romance with war hero Group Capt. Peter Townsend, whom she was not allowed to marry because he was divorced.

The day she heard Townsend had married a Belgian woman, Margaret stunned her countrymen by announcing her engagement to Armstrong-Jones.

Magician not injured, 'only cold'

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Geoffrey Hansen, a magician, was rushed to an emergency hospital after performing an underwater escape act at a pier in San Francisco Bay Wednesday.

Hansen appeared to have blood on his head when he was removed from the box in which he was pulled in the bay, Harbor Emergency Hospital, where he was taken, reported he was not injured but was "cold."

Despite repeal, gays claim win

WICHITA, Kan. (UPI) — The repeal of the city's homosexual-rights law was not something gays wanted to celebrate, but the post-election party atmosphere at one gay bar Tuesday night was anything but somber.

"I'm not really discouraged," Romie Blaker said, turning to pick up another drink and welcome a new arrival with a hug. "We kind of expected it, but we've made some pretty good gains too."

Blaker was one of about 100 persons — both homosexuals and heterosexuals — who gathered at the south-side bar to work off tensions of the campaign to save the ordinance many had assumed dead shortly after it was approved last September.

That ordinance fell in an almost 5-to-1 vote in Tuesday's referendum, but it was hard to get that impression from the laughing men and women at the bar.

Keith Smith leaned against the door, sipped his drink and said the bar was "wall-to-wall people" who had fought hard to retain the law, but were basically unchanged by its repeal.

"That vote meant nothing to them," said Smith, co-director of the Wichita Gay Community Association. "They're far too open for that. It's far from a loss for us — far from it. It's a kind of victory anyway — people got concerned, became aware, and it helped some gays feel better about themselves."

"(But) apathy is the reason we lost. Apathy, apathy, apathy. If the gay community had got out and voted we would have had a lot more votes (than 10,000)."

Carter's aide will pay fine

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Presidential aide Margaret "Midge" Costanza has become the first candidate to be fined by the Federal Election Commission for late filing of a finance report.

After six months of negotiations with the Federal Election Commission, Ms. Costanza agreed Wednesday to pay a $500 fine for failing to file a campaign spending statement from her unsuccessful 1974 race for a House seat.

The conciliation agreement marked the first time the FEC has fined a congressional or presidential candidate for late filing. Because of that her lawyers said the fine was unduly harsh.

There are hundreds of such cases, but most are settled through voluntary compliance and don't reach the conciliation stage.

The violation involved a fund-raising party to pay off an old campaign debt, after Ms. Costanza joined the White House staff.

In the agreement, the FEC and Ms. Costanza agreed that her campaign committee was 90 days late in filing a quarterly report, that such action violated the law, but that it was not violated intentionally.

"There is no reason to believe that there was a knowing violation," said the report signed by FEC General Counsel William C. Olsaker.

Misconduct count based on old laws

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (UPI) — With an intriguing application of 17th-century English legal doctrine, a state grand jury has charged the Wyoming attorney general with misconduct in office.

Five counts in three separate indictments charge V. Frank Mendicino violated the "common law" by failing to investigate properly alleged...

last year. All of the wondering and waiting is over. So unusual was the grand jury's tactic of turning to common law for charges against Mendicino that Maier told the attorney general he did not know if the charges amounted to felonies or misdemeanors — so he could not speculate on the possible penalty.

Until this day I did not know of the possibility of such a crime, Mendicino's attorney, David Carmichael of Cheyenne, told the judge.

The common-law approach to prosecution has been an extremely rare application in American jurisprudence where high state officials are concerned, a UPI survey has shown.

American Jurisprudence, the legal encyclopedia, lists only two significant cases — one in 1967 involving a Philadelphia city magistrate who was indicted and convicted of the common-law offense of "mistakenness" and other crimes; the other in 1872 involving a Chicago alderman indicted and convicted of offering to receive a bribe.

For states that still can turn to common law, it provides an age-old alternative to areas not covered by statute.

The common law speaks generally, where the statutory law of the state is silent upon a given question," states American Jurisprudence.

England's unwritten common law came to this country with the colonists, it further notes, and eventually was adopted by each of the states.

While prosecution under the concept of common law crime remains available to a few states like Wyoming — others have passed legislation expressly forbidding prosecution unless violations of specific statutes are cited.

The common-law tactic applied against Mendicino's attorney general apparently was the only means for the grand jury to deal with that matter.

Another common-law violation involved Mendicino's alleged tip to his brother, Mike, that Mike was under investigation for drug trafficking.

The dapper, 38-year-old Mendicino, the highest Wyoming state official to face criminal charges, pleaded innocent to each count Wednesday. His attorney told Laramie County District Judge Joseph Maier that Mendicino would be ready for trial in one month.

Freeed after posting 10 percent of a $5,000 bond, the attorney general said, "I probably feel more relieved at this moment than I have in the

Legislators given boot

LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — Convicted embezzler Monte Gerald, the first lawmaker expelled from the Michigan Legislature, was ousted on an 84-20 House vote Wednesday. The vote was preceded by four hours of exhaustive debate and weeks of agonized soul-searching by his colleagues.

The 43-year-old lawmaker was convicted in March of embezzling $34,000 from a former law client. He used the funds to buy stock and put a down payment on an office building, but claimed he never intended to profit personally.

He was to be sentenced today, but that has been put off until next week.

Gerald, who insists he is innocent, took the vote calmly and said he will take his case to the people by running in the special election which will be called some time this summer to fill the vacancy. He conceded he faces an uphill battle.

"I know when I go to some doors, the door is going to be slammed in my face," he said. "As he made his way down a flight of stairs and out of the building, Gerald ran into House Speaker Bobby D. Crim — one of those who argued for his expulsion. As the two shook hands, a smiling Gerald said: "Bobby, I'll be back."

He said his immediate plans were to go back home and see my wife. She knew it was coming, but she needs me." Asked by reporters how he could stay calm in light of his defeat, Gerald said: "It's amazing what you can do when you have a clear conscience."

The second-term lawmaker said post-Watergate prejudice against politicians was responsible for his conviction and — to an extent — his expulsion.

As he spoke, a small group of supporters including his son, Jim, and his secretary looked on from the House gallery.

Legislators demanding his ouster argued that the legislature's integrity and reputation would be called into question if they allowed a law breaker to be a lawmaker.

Those opposing his expulsion — including many of the more liberal, reform-minded lawmakers — argued the House ought not to overrule the decision of Gerald's constituents to select him as their representative.

Possible refunds for power users

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There may be refunds in the future of millions of American homeowners who were hit by electric bills that in some areas averaged more than $400 a month during the coal strike.

Federal officials say some electric utilities may have overcharged customers substantially during the 110-day strike by using such things as improper fuel adjustment fees and inflated power transmission costs.

If preliminary findings are supported by a full-scale investigation, officials say, refunds may be ordered.

The Federal Energy-Regulatory Commission says an "extraordinary operating and billing practices" boosted wholesale power charges during the strike that ended March 25.

Unusually high wholesale costs are passed immediately to retail consumers in many areas of the nation through such things as the fuel adjustment clause.

Alerted by the staff audit, the commission ordered an investigation Wednesday of virtually all emergency wholesale power transactions during the strike.

The investigation covers an area bounded by Virginia and New York in the East and Kentucky and Illinois in the West. It includes areas of electricity by utilities that had oil-fired generators or adequate coal supplies to those that were short-on-coal, as well as transmission charges by utilities that serve as conduits for power shipments from one part of the country to another.

"As a result of a preliminary staff audit of a limited number of (sales of) wholesale electric power during the recent power shortages resulting from the coal strike, the commission had concluded that some utilities may have collected revenues in excess of a just and reasonable rate for the involved transactions," the commission said.

The staff report said just one questionable billing practice — boosting the price of emergency shipments of electricity each time they crossed utility system boundaries as the fuel adjustment clause — produced substantially more revenues than would have been the case had the fixed transmission charge... been utilized."

Washington tax slash plan rapped

SPokane (UPI) — Gov. Dixy Lee Ray said Wednesday Harley Hoppe's initiative to reduce property taxes appeared to her to be "self-defeating, costly to administer and possibly unconstitutional."

Hoppe's proposal would provide a minimum $100 across-the-board property tax exemption for all residences worth at least $10,000 and would include nearly all types of dwellings from mobile homes to condominiums.

The estimated drop in property taxes has been estimated as high as $125 million.

The governor said the state Department of Revenue was making a more extensive study of the initiative on her behalf and it would be out soon.

Meanwhile, the governor made her assessment when asked her "gut feelings" on the initiative.

"I'm sympathetic with any move to reduce the property tax burden — particularly for the elderly, retired and persons on fixed incomes. But there must be something to replace the losses to the state."

She said what's needed is tax reform and a shifting of the burdens of all forms of taxation in a more equitable manner.

There will be a significant increase in the state's support to basic education and that money must come from somewhere, she said.

"The hope now is the economy will grow and take care of the added needs. But if that doesn't happen, we would likely have to increase taxes. I hope it would involve a modest increase, if any at all."

She pointed at the sales and business and occupation taxes as likely target areas for increased tax revenue.

She said Hoppe's proposal would only increase the need for additional taxes.

Legislation aids Gem dam change

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. James McClure said today two Idaho dams are due for structural modifications as a result of legislation passed by the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee.

McClure said Black Canyon Dam near Boise and Island Park Dam in eastern Idaho are due for some structural work to bring them up to current safety standards as a result of today's passage. Jackson Lake Dam in Wyoming's Teton National Park also will be modified.

"This is a positive step which the federal government can and should take to ensure that existing dam structures are safe and that 'inflow' and 'outflow' capacities will withstand times of flooding without sacrificing the basic integrity of the dam itself," McClure said.

The legislation authorizes $3.2 million for construction of an auxiliary spillway at the Black Canyon Dam; $2.4 million to modify the spillway and outlet works at Island Park Dam; and $1 million for work to protect the Jackson Lake Dam against seismic events near the structure.

McClure said the authorizations are part of the Bureau of Reclamation's scheduled work for fiscal year 1979.

Banner year due for crane flock

SODA SPRINGS (UPI) — This could be a banner year for the experimental whooping crane flock at Greys Lake-Refuge in southeast Idaho.

Refuge Manager Ed Loth said that is because for the time being predators are not a problem and the drought which caused problems during last year's nesting period is over.

The experiment is to bring in eggs from the only other flock of wild whoopers, in Canada, where they are placed in nests of sandhill cranes at Greys Lake. The sandhills then hatch the eggs and act as foster parents for the young cranes.

Loth said more eggs from Canada should be arriving soon to be placed in sandhill nests for the hatching season. Only eight young whoopers out of 40 have survived in the two years the program has been in operation and Loth said three of the eight have returned to Greys Lake from winter nesting grounds in New Mexico.

He expects the other five to arrive soon and added there is no timetable in trying to get the whooping crane population restored. But he said it is something that will take a lot of time.

Robbery hearing due

CALDWELL (UPI) — Mark J. Eisenbarth, 23, Reno, Nev., is being held in the Canyon County jail in lieu of $50,000 bond while awaiting a hearing May 22 on a robbery charge.

Eisenbarth is one of two men accused of robbing an Albertson's store in Nampa Friday. He was arrested as he and another man ran from the store. The other suspect still is at large.

Police said Reno authorities notified them that Eisenbarth is wanted there on two counts of armed robbery.

Airport bond passes

IDHAO FALLS (UPI) — Idaho Falls residents turned out in light numbers Tuesday night but overwhelmingly passed a $2.8 million bond to expand the city's airport.

Some 3,837 persons voted yes and 548 voted no representing an 87 percent margin of approval, far beyond the two-thirds needed to pass the bond.

Plans call for expanding the air terminal lobby and building a second floor for passengers. The baggage, loading, and parking facilities also will be enlarged.

Idaho Falls Mayor Tom Campbell said he hopes construction can begin in the next six months.

State adds interest

BOISE (UPI) — The state treasurer's office said Wednesday interest totaling $48,706 was received by Idaho's Public School Endowment Fund during April.

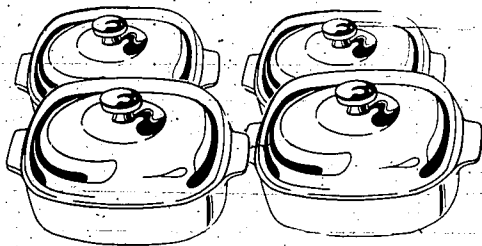

Treasurer Marjorie Ruth Moon said reinvested income received $55 in interest during the month.

Miss Moon said the fund's principal showed $37,553 in losses on the sales of securities during the month and $58,097 in gains on the sales of securities.

The April interest collections brings the total fiscal year investment received to $5.2 million for the endowment fund's principal investors and $103,422 for the fund's reinvested income.

Federal judge wants to know what tribe yielded

POCATELLO (UPI) — Federal Judge Marion Callister wants to know what the Shoshone-Bannock Indians sold when the tribe gave up some 400,000 acres of reservation land under the Fort Bridger Treaty of 1868 — land alone or land and rights such as hunting, fishing, and grazing.

Pocatello attorney Max Whittier, representing members of the Pocatello Grazing Association, told Callister Wednesday that in the early 1950's through the early 1970's the federal government paid off a $15 million settlement to the four Indian reservations affected by the Bridger treaty.

Whittier said the payments would make invalid a treaty ratified by Congress in 1900 giving the Shoshone-Bannock Indians grazing privileges on the Caribou National Forest. The Pocatello Ranger District of the Forest Service land was once reservation land.

Whittier made the remarks during closing arguments at a hearing on an injunction request against the 1900 Grazing Rights Treaty filed by the cattlemen.

The association members had lease permits for their cattle from the Forest Service that were to be honored through 1985. But the Shoshone-Bannock Tribal Business Council and the Forest Service signed a memorandum of understanding this winter making the 78-year-old pact effective this summer.

The cattlemen argue that without proper time to find other grazing space for their livestock, economic disaster will result.

U.S. Attorney Karl Shurtliff said the Shoshone-Bannock Indians reserved the grazing rights under the treaty, and Callister has given the attorneys seven days to file opinion briefs.

Caribou National Forest spokesman Ron Delhardt said Forest Service officials expect a decision by May 22 or 23.

During the two-day hearing, several witnesses were called including representatives of the Forest Service, the Grazing Association, and the tribal members who want to use the grazing space. The Pocatello Ranger District has a grazing capacity of 2,300 head of cattle and the Indians have applied for grazing space for 522 head.

Nampa may have four schools closed

NAMPA (UPI) — The Nampa School Board has been told unless it makes plans to correct violations of the city fire and life safety code in four schools, those schools may face closure in the fall.

Schools which might be affected by such a closure include Roosevelt and Eastside Elementary schools and West and South Junior High schools.

The board received a letter from Nampa Fire Chief W. K. Wallis stating if it did not prepare a definite plan for clearing up the problems by the beginning of the 1978-79 school year, he would be forced to close areas not in compliance with the code.

The violations at the two junior high schools relate to the lack of emergency lighting in windowless interior areas, according to Supl. Rex Engelsing.

He said the gyms at both schools would be affected as well as other areas inside the school buildings.

Both Eastside and Roosevelt lack automatic sprinkler systems required by the code, Engelsing said. The sprinklers are required in any area below the floor of existing areas. The letter warned of the lack of necessary protection that from old shop areas. The board authorized Engelsing to develop a year plan for compliance with the code to be accompanied by cost estimates.

The plan is to be presented at the July board meeting. Engelsing said Wednesday there should be no problem getting a plan to Wallis by fall. He noted that the plan will include studies of the problems in the schools.

Idaho court telecast study panel selected

BOISE (UPI) — A 14-member advisory committee to consider the possibility of telecasting live television and radio broadcasting of Idaho Supreme Court proceedings on an experimental basis was announced Wednesday by the court.

The committee, which is comprised of media members as well as representatives of the Idaho Bar Association and judicial courts, will hold its initial meeting in Boise on June 18. It will be chaired by Supreme Court Justice Joseph McFadden.

"Since this is an inquiry into the advisability of allowing media coverage of Supreme Court hearings, it is appropriate that the committee meetings themselves be open to media coverage," McFadden said.

McFadden said the work of the committee will be to advise the court whether to revise its rules to allow live broadcasting, and photographic coverage of proceedings. Such a rule change would apply only to hearings held in the courtroom of the Supreme Court and not to Idaho trial courts.

Judge seeks position

CALDWELL (UPI) — Judge Lloyd C. McClintock, Caldwell, announced Wednesday he is a candidate for the 3rd Judicial seat that was created in 1977.

Presently the position is held on an interim appointment by Robert L. Jones.

McClintock, who is the senior lawyer magistrate, has served more than 15 years on the Canyon County bench. He had been probate judge, justice of the peace and police judge prior to his present position.

The 58-year-old McClintock also served as president of both the Idaho Prosecutor's Association and the Idaho Magistrate's association.

Caldwell fire officials resign

CALDWELL (UPI) — Caldwell Fire Chief Harold Perfect and his assistant, Don Machos, announced Wednesday their resignations in June for personal reasons.

Both men have served the Caldwell Fire Department for more than 25 years. Caldwell Mayor Robert Pasley accepted the resignations.

Utah prosecutors chalk up conviction in cult slayings

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Prosecutors Wednesday obtained their first conviction in a string of polygamist cult murders, and indicated the strategy they plan to use against other suspects in the cases.

Donald Eugene Sullivan, 25, pleaded guilty in district court to criminal conspiracy in the attempted murder of Verlan LeBaron on May 11, 1977.

The guilty plea came exactly one year after the last known killing — the Nov. 1977 "religious" assassination of Utah polygamist patriarch Dr. Ronal Alford.

Verlan LeBaron is the leader of a Mexican plural marriage religious sect and the brother of rival cult leader Ervil LeBaron. Sullivan has been identified as a follower of Ervil LeBaron.

After Sullivan entered the guilty plea to a second degree felony — a reduced charge — Deputy Salt Lake County Attorney David Yocum asked that sentencing be delayed indefinitely, and that Sullivan be released on his own recognizance. He had been in custody on $3,000 bail.

Judge Ernest F. Baldwin Jr. delayed sentencing for 30 days and ordered that Sullivan be released. The move apparently means that Sullivan has agreed to cooperate with the state in its prosecution of other suspects in the crimes.

Tuesday, Donald's cousin John Sullivan, also 25, pleaded innocent to criminal conspiracy charges. He too was released on recognizance. Both Sullivans apparently will be put in hiding, under police protection, until their testimony is needed.

A third member of the Sullivan family, 51-year-old Lloyd Sullivan — Donald's father and John's uncle — is free on bond. The elder Sullivan also is apparently helping authorities in their investigations.

A fourth witness, who has never been named or charged, is also cooperating with law enforcement agencies.

All were followers of Ervil LeBaron, the 33-year-old leader of the Church of the Lamb of God. He has publicly preached that those who disagree with his polygamist theology face punishment by death.

Ervil LeBaron served time in a Mexican prison for masterminding the 1972 assassination of his brother Joel, leader of the rival Church of the Firstborn in the Fullness of Time. Verlan LeBaron succeeded Joel as leader of that cult based in northwestern Mexico.

A group of Ervil LeBaron's followers has been charged with the May 10, 1977, murder of Alford, a 71-year-old Murray, Utah, naturopath and leader of yet another band of polygamists.

The attempt on Verlan LeBaron's life was allegedly made May 14, 1977, on the day of Alford's funeral, attended by many polygamist group leaders.

Ervil LeBaron, and half a dozen followers have been charged in the Alford case. Ervil and two disciples are also charged with the murder of Robert Hunt Simmons, yet another plural marriage sect leader who "disappeared" from Grantsville, Utah, in 1975.

Authorities, acting on a tip, found Simmons' body in Utah's remote Carbon County early last month.

Another disciple of Ervil LeBaron's — Vonda White, 38 — is charged in San Diego, Calif., with the June 1975 slaying of Dean Grover Vest in suburban San Diego. White has been identified as one of Ervil LeBaron's wives, and Vest as a follower who planned to defect from the cult.

Four suspects in the Alford killing went to have gone on trial in Utah last month but two jumped bail. Baldwin has issued bench warrants for the arrests of Mark Chynoweth, 46, Dallas, and Ramon Marston, 21, Denver.

Marston is believed to have been one of two women who burst into Alford's office and gunned him down in front of horrified patients. Chynoweth, already charged in Alford's killing, jumped bail shortly after prosecutors also charged him in the Simmons slaying.

Baldwin has continued trial for two others charged in the Alford case until July 10. Tuesday he set the same trial date for John Sullivan.

Funds for Bikini win OK in Senate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate authorized $15 million Wednesday in an effort to make it possible for natives of the Bikini Atoll to return to their homeland from which they were driven in 1946 by U.S. atomic bomb tests.

But there is no hope at the present time, that the approximately 500 who want to return can come back to Bikini Island, the largest in the atoll, because of the lingering effects of radiation.

The legislation was approved by voice vote, without dissent, and sent to the House.

The money was part of a package which also includes $8.8 for water service facilities in the atoll; $1 million for postnatal work at a hospital in the Virgin Islands.

The Bikini Atoll, located in the Marshall Islands which were administered by the United States as trust territories, was severely damaged and much of it rendered uninhabitable by atomic testing between 1948 and 1958.

Beginning in 1968, the exiles of the atoll increasingly pressed for a return to their home. Ten years later, President Lyndon B. Johnson announced that the island would be returned to the people of Bikini following cleanup and rehabilitation.

Despite earlier optimism, a radiological survey in 1975 revealed that Bikini Island would not be safe.

James A. Joseph, Interior Department undersecretary, wrote the Senate Energy Committee that Bikini Island "should not be used for residential purposes; that well water should not be used for human consumption; and that locally grown food products must be placed on a restricted basis."

The restriction on the use of coconut products produced on Bikini Island for food and export additionally make the island of Bikini unrealistic as a permanent place of settlement and for agricultural use.

Joseph said a number of alternate plans are under consideration and added that the most feasible appears to be to settle most of those who want to return on Eneu Island — 12 miles south of Bikini — which did not receive significant amounts of radiation fallout.

Peer's wife victim

SYDNEY, Australia (UPI) — Lady Hallsham, wife of the former leader of the House of Lords in Britain, was killed in a horse riding accident in Sydney Wednesday, police said.

Lord Hallsham's Australian aide Lloyd Waddy said Hallsham was riding with the right honorable Cecilia Hoag — and his wife, Mary, were riding with a group of New South Wales state mounted police in Centennial Park when the accident happened.

"After riding for some time together, Lady Hallsham rode on ahead," Waddy said in a statement.

"Her horse became fractious and left the riding track. Lady Hallsham was thrown and fell heavily onto the bitumen roadway, sustaining head injuries."

A police spokesman said Lady Hallsham was rushed to nearby St. Vincent's Hospital, but was dead on arrival.

Waddy said Lady Hallsham was visiting Australia with her husband, who was to deliver an address at Sydney University on Friday night.

He said Lord Hallsham would still deliver the address, but will then cancel all other engagements and return home.

Punishment arrangement inverted

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ernest Fitzgerald hopes the day will come when federal employees not only feel secure in speaking out against inefficiency and wrongdoing in the government, but will feel compelled to do so.

Fitzgerald was one of four so-called "whistle-blowers" who appeared before the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee this past week to urge that Congress enact a sort of bill of rights for dissenting bureaucrats.

Fitzgerald was a $30,000-a-year Air Force civilian manager until he was fired in 1969 after disclosing cost overruns in the C-5 transport plane program.

After a four-year legal battle costing $500,000, largely financed by supporters, he was reinstated at the same pay grade but given duties substantially below those he formerly held.

"I'm not allowed to look at the major military contracts," he said. "My career is effectively over. I'm doing work I did 20 years ago."

Fitzgerald said the government's reward and punishment system is "upside-down" — those who "condone or cover up" wrongdoing prosper, while those who try to protect the taxpayers' interest are disciplined.

Robert Sullivan, a $22,500-a-year General Services Administration investigator in Boston, testified he was fired after protesting procurement practices he believed invited favoritism.

He is now "an" $11,700-a-year Massachusetts disability examiner.

Dr. Anthony Morris lost his $35,000-a-year job in the Food and Drug Administration after warning that the government's proposed nationwide swine flu vaccination program was dangerous. The program was suspended after some who received shots became ill. Morris said he now lives on savings and small lecture fees.

Thursday, May 11, 1978 Times-News, Twin Falls, Idaho A-13

Frank Swope, a Central Intelligence Agency official, said the agency wouldn't let him write an internal report critical of U.S. actions in the final days of U.S. involvement in Vietnam. He resigned, wrote a book about it and now is being sued by the government.

The witnesses generally said Congress should set up machinery under which a government employee could disclose wrongdoing without a dangerous policy, as Morris saw the vaccination program — to some impartial forum within the government, without reprisal.

The Southern Colonel, bless his heart, puts a 2 1/2 lb. chicken in the 9 piece bucket, which after it's breaded and fried may or may not still weigh 2 1/2 lbs., but will definitely cost you about 3 times as much as Swensen's eight piece tray with 2 1/2 lbs. of unfried chicken.

COLONEL SWENSEN'S

8 PIECE TRAY AT $1.25

(2 1/2 lbs. & 49¢ EA.)

At Colonel Swensen's, you can buy an eight piece, 2 1/2 lb. tray of unfried chicken for only $1.25. (That's 49¢ lb.) It'll be a young, plump, tender frier that could easily taste better cooked by "good old Mom," than some retired Army Officer, which might be more convenient, but it will sure as shooting cost you over $3.00 per chicken to have the other Colonel be the cook. That's allowing about 40¢ per chicken for shortening, breading, spices and electricity, if you do it yourself. How much is Southern Convenience worth anyway?

Population doubles at Hansen

By KEN HODGIE
Times-News writer

HANSEN — Residents of the small farming community of Hansen knew their town was growing rapidly, but until they completed a census last week, no one knew the city's population had more than doubled in the last eight years.

Concerned about growing pains their city has felt in recent years, Hansen residents started holding old-fashioned town meetings to help patch bulges and cracks in the city's shell caused by rapid growth.

In the last eight years, two new housing developments have sprung up in the sleepy hamlet, making it a bedroom community for bustling Twin Falls, according to University of Idaho community development specialist Arthur Rathburn.

"Hansen is a nice sleeping area," Rathburn says. "It has a small town environment and the lots and houses are affordable to low- and moderate-income people."

"There are a couple of reasons for this rapid growth — the development of the mobile home park and the FmHA housing project," says Rathburn.

He says the relatively inexpensive housing opportunities afforded by a new trailer park in Hansen and an 80-unit subdivision for which Farmers Home Administration loans were available.

"As the community grows real fast, they just grow out of their services," Rathburn says. "They grow out of everything at once. Hansen has no commercial function. Just like New York City has all those bedroom cities, Twin Falls has three of them: Hansen, Kimberly and Filer."

After concerned citizens had decided they needed to do something to fix up their ballooning city, one of their first steps was to take a census. The information they gathered from the study will aid them in securing federal funds.

According to last week's census, Hansen now has a population of 1,058 persons living in 333 homes. That figure is a jump from the 415 residents who lived in the town when the U.S. Census Bureau took a head count in 1970.

"We had a good response on the survey," John Yates of Region IV Development Association says. "A total of 277 of 285 homes responded and they did it over a period of three days."

Yates says there was a 97-percent response on their census and a 90-percent response on questions about income range needed to apply for federal grant money to renovate parts of the city. Yates says the average family size in Hansen is 3.18 persons.

Hansen residents will present the latest figures to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development this week. They will apply for between $1 and $2 million to help them tackle some of the problems brought on by sudden growth in the city.

According to Yates, to qualify for a HUD comprehensive small cities grant, a small town such as Hansen must show that a significant number of low- to moderate-income people will benefit from projects completed with grant money.

"From our information we found that 49 percent or 480 people meet the HUD guidelines for low- to moderate-income," Yates says. "Fifty-one percent were above moderate-income."

He says when Hansen people make their application to HUD this week, they will show where grant money will be spent and how it will benefit residents. Low- and moderate-income people have been pinpointed approximately on a map of the city and correlated with the location of city improvements.

The HUD comprehensive small cities grant that Hansen will seek is earmarked for additional fire protection for the city, a new city park, bicycle paths for the city, housing rehabilitation for low-income residents, resurfacing of city streets, construction of a safety crossing on U.S. Highway 30 and renovation of the city's water system.

In town meetings earlier this year, Hansen residents ranked all the problems in the city according to priority. They established about 71 items that needed attention in the city's facility program.

Alcohol center

State funding drops

Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — State funding of the men's and women's alcoholic rehabilitation centers in Twin Falls is falling off drastically as a result of clients leaving after the sudden firing of the center's executive director.

There are no women clients presently staying at the Women's Crisis Center and just six clients in the men's center.

Bob Wright, acting substance abuse manager of Region 5 for the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, said Tuesday afternoon the contract between DIW and the Magic Valley Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center for men and the Women's Crisis Center calls for MVARC, Inc. to receive $9,000 a month from DHW to work with at least 20 alcoholics a day between the two centers.

Wright said because there are no professionally trained staffers left at the women's center, he will only allow client referrals for the 17-bed men's center for the time being.

MVARC's internal battle "becomes our worry when it tends to effect the services," Wright said. "Thus, we are withholding referrals to the women's center." He said they would continue referring clients to the men's center if the space is available.

Under the minimum, the centers are paid $15 a day per client. If those figures remain constant, the state will be funding MVARC to the tune of only $2,700 a month instead of $9,000.

New Rock Creek bridge

TWIN FALLS — A new fill-type crossing of Rock Creek at the site of the burned-out Pole Line Bridge will soon be under construction.

The Idaho Department of Transportation's Division of Highways has approved a request from the Twin Falls Highway District for the project.

The bridge is located one-half mile north and 3/4 mile west of Twin Falls and serves as an important farm area road.

The old bridge burned in the spring of 1977. The proposed crossing is 3,650 feet long with maximum fill height of 40 feet and a maximum cut depth of 28 feet at the canyon rim. The roadway will have a 40-foot width. Asphalt surface will cover two 12-foot travel lanes with two 6-foot shoulders and edge striping and guardrails.

Project plans are available at the Twin Falls Highway District office and the Shoshone office of the Idaho Division of Highways.

Barker will run again

BUHL — Sen. John M. Barker, R-Buhl, this week announced he will seek re-election to the Idaho legislature.

Barker, a 12-year veteran of the Legislature, is chairman of the Senate Health, Education and Welfare Committee and a ranking member of the Senate Judiciary and Rules Committee.

In announcing his re-election bid, Barker said there are several major issues that led to his decision to run. These include:

- Efforts to reduce property taxes by replacing local property taxes now going to finance education with general state funds.
- Further implementation of the State Water Plan.
- Proposed implementation of legislation calling for mandatory minimum sentencing.
- Effectively controlling state funds spent in the fields of health, education and welfare.

• Making public retirement plans sound.

Barker, a resident of Twin Falls County for 61 years, said his experiences in the legislature would help him to deal effectively with these and other issues. Barker said he had also been active in area businesses and activities, including 20 years as a director of the American Falls Reservoir District and 12 years as school board chairman of Joint School District 412 at Buhl.

Barker is president of the John M. Barker Agency, an insurance, real estate and real estate broker agency.

State drops appeal of Frazier decision

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Idaho Attorney General will not appeal a Twin Falls magistrate's decision to dismiss perjury charges against Sierra Life Insurance Co. president-Fred Frazier.

Rudy Barchas, assistant attorney general in charge of the case, Wednesday gave two reasons for not appealing.

First, he said the appeal would involve a lengthy period of court negotiations to determine if the attorney general's office holds the authority under Idaho law to prosecute the case against the Twin Falls insurance company president.

Barchas said the disagreement could probably be settled more rapidly and easily by conferring with the state's prosecutors during their annual convention in July.

Also, he said the appeal would have the undesirable effect of pitting the attorney general's office against prosecutors of the state in a court action.

"We are the top law enforcement agency in the state and work closely with county prosecutors," Barchas said.

The attorney general's office has maintained it has the authority to prosecute any criminal case in the state over the objections of local prosecutors.

Dykas and Smith disagreed, saying Idaho law does not give the Attorney General such broad powers.

Twin Falls Magistrate Paul Smith ruled last month the attorney general did not have jurisdiction in the case without receiving the permission of Twin Falls County Prosecutor Frank Dykas. Dykas said he had not been shown evidence sufficient to warrant Frazier's prosecution and wanted time to review the state's case.

Smith refused to grant a delay and dismissed the charges against Frazier.

When Barchas attempted to order Dykas to appoint the attorney general as a special prosecutor for the county, but Dykas refused and Smith said the state lacked such authority.

The attorney general originally charged Frazier with signing false disclaimer statements in 1975 and 1976, saying he had no personal material interest in connection with certain Sierra Life Insurance stock transactions.

Barchas said Dykas could have designated Barchas as a special prosecutor in court.

"We had a letter from his office suggesting we take whatever action we wished, but did not have the official designation. I don't think the county prosecutor is interested in getting involved in the case," Barchas said.

He added the statute of limitations on the 1975 charge has now run out but the 1976 perjury charge against Frazier could be refilled if the matter of jurisdiction were settled.

Nursing home feasibility study gets nod

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN
Times-News writer

HAILEY — The Blaine County Commission has given the go-ahead for the Blaine County Hospital to prepare a feasibility study for a 25-bed nursing home at the hospital's facilities in Hailey.

The three county commissioners told Blaine County Hospital Administrator Frank McNamara Monday to begin the feasibility study, for which McNamara said a maximum of $3,000 will be authorized.

The Blaine County Hospital Board recently authorized an appropriation of $3,000 to fund the feasibility study but needed commission approval before any work could begin.

McNamara said he anticipated that the nursing home can be financed by the Idaho Health Facilities Authority, which was created by the state legislature three years ago.

Preliminary plans propose that a 25-bed nursing home, costing about $500,000, can be built onto existing facilities at the Blaine County Hospital.

"But not wanting to be held absolutely by these preliminary figures, McNamara noted: "These are magic numbers that everybody is pulling out of the sky."

McNamara said the county commission's approval of the feasibility study would simply give the hospital board permission to move one step further along with plans for a nursing home.

The hospital administrator said the feasibility study would be presented to the IHA for its review and that before construction could begin, further phase approvals would have to be received from the commission as well as from federal and state government agencies.

But McNamara is enthusiastic about the nursing home proposal. He told the commissioners that he has already been contacted by a county resident asking to reserve a place in the proposed nursing home for an elderly relative.

Key Airlines seeks extension on route permit

By JEFF SHER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Key Airlines, encouraged by increasing passenger loads, has asked the Idaho Public Utilities Commission (IPUC) to allow it to continue operating between Twin Falls and Boise for another three months.

The airline also asked to expand its service to Burley.

Key Airlines has been flying two round trips a day between Boise and Twin Falls since April 4 as a test to determine the prospects for establishing a permanent route.

The number of passengers flying the route thus far has prompted the airlines to ask for an extension of their permit through Aug. 31. Key Airlines sales and service director Brent Wiseman said today. The current permit expires May 28.

Although Key's passenger loads have not exceeded 25 percent of capacity in any week, Wiseman said a 22 percent weekly average is three times the average number of passengers Hughes Air West normally carries on the Twin Falls-Boise route.

Wiseman said the passenger load would have to increase to about 50 percent of capacity for the route to be profitable, and he said the company intends to alter its service pattern and add a stop in Burley to make the route more attractive and profitable.

Key's 19-passenger De Havilland Twin Otter aircraft now fly from Hailey to Boise to Twin Falls to Boise and back to Hailey.

Wiseman said Key wants to alter the route so that its aircraft will fly from Salt Lake City to Burley to Twin Falls to Boise and back to Salt Lake with the same intervening stops.

The route change will serve a dual purpose, Wiseman said.

It will add the Burley stop, which will serve a need and contribute to the flight by bringing in more revenue than it costs, and it will alter the arrival time of flights from Twin Falls to Boise so that connections with other flights out of Boise will be easier to make, he said.

Under the new route plan, Key flights would leave Twin Falls for Boise at 7:45 a.m. and at 5 p.m., and flights would leave for Salt Lake at 8:35 a.m. and 7 p.m.

Flights would leave Burley for Twin Falls at 7:10 a.m. and 2:45 p.m., and for Salt Lake at 10:30 a.m. and 7:30 p.m.

Wiseman said he does not expect any opposition to Key's application to the PUC from either Hughes Air West or Gem State Airlines. Gem State opposed Key's application for the first temporary permit on the grounds that the here-gain-gone-gain service could damage the confidence of passengers in local air service.

Gem State plans to begin servicing the Twin Falls to Boise route late this year.

Key's Twin-Falls-Hailey service, which also began on an experimental basis in April, is carrying few passengers, Wiseman said, but the service will be continued. Key's Salt Lake-Hailey flights are regularly filled, Wiseman said, ("I wish we had more seats," he said), and the Twin Falls stop on that route has not diminished its popularity.

Wiseman said Key's early morning flight to Boise from Twin Falls will offer travelers better connections to Chicago, Portland, Seattle and San Francisco, and he said Key is attempting to negotiate with larger airlines operating out of Salt Lake and Boise to establish joint fares for connecting flights.

Anonymous letter: 'dirty politics'

BY DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — An anonymous letter attacking Republican gubernatorial candidate Vernon Ravnescroft has Idaho political workers crying "dirty politics."
 The letter, mailed to voters around Idaho in late April, attacks Ravnescroft's stand on right-to-work. The letter was an attempt to distort our position on right-to-work legislation. Bill Fay, Ravnescroft campaign manager said.
 Fay said they heard from their supporters who had received the letter "on the 28th of April."
 The letter, mailed to an undisclosed number of Idaho voters, contained a photocopy of a 1970 news clipping. That clipping quoted Ravnescroft as saying he would veto a right-to-work law. The photocopy was unsigned and no return address appeared on the envelopes mailed.
 Ravnescroft has since said he would support right-to-work legislation.
 Fay said however that while Ravnescroft has modified his position on right-to-work legislation since 1970, the change is not inconsistent as the letter tried to suggest. "Very far in favor of a fair right-to-work law," Fay said. The right-to-work law in 1970 — which Ravnescroft said he would veto if elected governor — did not meet this definition, Fay added.

 "By far what we're talking about is that the employee and the employer would both have to be represented equally. The 1970 bill was designed specifically to destroy the labor unions."
 In 1970, Ravnescroft, then a Democrat, also agreed to support his party's state platform, which opposed any right-to-work legislation, Fay added. "He supported the platform that year, so in that sense there has been a change of position," Fay said.
 The tactic of sending anonymous unsigned letters quickly brought sharp criticism from the other Republican candidates, all of whom denied any knowledge of the letter's origins.
 "It's something we would never engage in," said Larry Burke, former Governor media director. Larry Burke. "We intend to win by discussing issues openly, fairly and above board."
 John Stegner, media secretary of Citizens for

C.O. "Butch" Otter was also critical of the letter. "We deplore the tactic of using anonymous mailings," Stegner said.
 "This is the type of attitude that has led to some of the recent problems we have had in politics," added Don Todd, campaign assistant in the Allan Larsen for Governor office.
 "Whoever would do something like this doesn't have respect for our political system, it cheapens our system."
 Criticism also came from candidate Jay Anney, who said it was "stupid" any candidate "would stoop to this level."
 Jim Crute, campaign coordinator for the James Crow gubernatorial campaign also attacked the mailing. "This type of malicious thing just needed in this campaign," Brulte said.
 Beverly Shepard, the seventh Republican gubernatorial candidate, could not be reached for comment.
 Steve Leroy, press secretary for Gov. John Evans said the governor has no knowledge of the letter and wouldn't engage in that kind of attack.

Alcohol rehab center fight results in fund withdrawal

 The women's center was left without qualified help after the MVARC board of directors fired Jim and Bess Butcher May 1. Soon after the Women's Crisis Center house manager and her assistant quit because the board had Edmond Cormier, acting director, curtail a pre-emptive training program to train counselors in-house.
 Cormier is the only qualified staff member left at the men's center because the manager there quit the day after the Butchers were fired.
 Wright, an ex-officio board member, said he could see friction developing between both sides, but he disagreed with the board's evaluation of the Butchers had not set up an effective alcoholic treatment program.
 "I'm satisfied they were doing an excellent job," he said. "There were no real complaints about service rendered under the contract."
 Joann Saunders, a DHW substance-abuse counselor in Burley, agreed with her boss.
 "The program was very effective when the Butchers ran it as far as treatment goes. We've had a very good success rate when the Butchers were there."
 Saunders also said she is in the process of drafting a letter to the board complaining about armed security guards stationed to the Women's Crisis Center on the grounds of the Butchers' dismissals, while Bess Butcher moved out of her office.
 She said the guards' presence almost caused two clients to leave alcoholic treatment programs entirely.
 She explained she received numerous complaints from clients and their relatives about the guards being in the center.
 Nighttime is a period of high anxiety to alcoholics, she added, and seeing the armed guards "shattered their faith" in the program.
 Saunders also said she authorized Bess Butcher to take some women patients to a halfway house in Blackfoot — after her dismissal by the board — at the request of the clients and patients, including a woman who had just been admitted to the Women's Crisis Center the day of the firings.

US copper hearings to open May 22

NEW YORK (UPI) — Hearings will open May 22 in Tucson on the domestic copper industry's plea to the International Trade Commission for permanent relief against rising imports from countries where copper is produced by state-controlled companies.
 The domestic industry contends that state-controlled copper industries in Africa and other third world regions feel constrained to maximize copper output exports regardless of supply and demand and other normal market considerations in order to maintain full employment.
 In a brief filed with the commission late in April, the domestic copper companies said that this has forced them to bear a disproportionate share of the burden of excess world copper inventories.
 Even though global copper consumption is rising, the market remains depressed.
 Kennecott Copper Corp., for example, said it made its expensive purchase of the profitable Carborundum Corp. out of fear the copper business may remain unprofitable for some time.
 The United States has been the world's biggest producer of copper and traditionally an exporter. But since 1970, imports of foreign copper have risen from 5.8 percent of domestic production to 20.8 percent last year. The imports were halved in the 1975 recession but started rising fast again in 1976.
 The industry's brief to the commission said state-owned or state-controlled mines in foreign lands now account for 40 percent of the free enterprise world's copper.
 Although global copper demand fell sharply in the 1974-75 recession with a resulting big drop in prices, demand has been rising since 1975.
 And in spite of the fact that the copper business has been notoriously cyclical, the industry's brief said it has increased domestic capacity to nearly two million tons annually and that the American mines and smelters are among the most modern in the world.
 The rising imports has caused several major mines to close in the United States and displaced 12,000 of the industry's 50,000 workers.
 Arizona is hardest hit with the loss of much of the most important payroll in 14 counties. But Utah, New Mexico, Montana and Nevada also are affected.
 States with auxiliary copper operations that have been struck by the recession in the mines are New Jersey, New York, Michigan, Texas, Tennessee, Maryland and Washington.
 The 12,000 displaced copper workers have been ruled eligible for special federal employment benefits and 5,000 already are receiving the benefits.
 The industry brief said one ironic factor is that U.S. foreign aid agencies, such as the World Bank, have provided financing to the state-controlled foreign copper producers at much cheaper terms than the $3 billion a year domestic industry can hope to get.
 What the industry is asking for is a formal declaration by the commission that copper imports threaten serious injury to the United States and a recommendation to President Carter for appropriate relief, which could take the form of a substantial tariff duty.

Teachers accept pay plan

By LARRY SWISHER
Times-News writer

JEROME — Jerome teachers are willing to accept the school district's offer of a 10 percent pay increase next year, but negotiations are continuing on other items.

Following a contract negotiating meeting Tuesday night, Jerome Teachers Organization spokesman Wesley Gates said the 10 percent salary increase is acceptable to the teachers but added, "We're not jumping for joy."

The teachers had proposed an 11.7 percent increase at the start of negotiations last month between teacher representatives and a school district team for next year's teacher contracts.

Gates said teacher salaries in the Jerome schools are near the bottom of the list, 100th among 116 Idaho school districts.

He said the pay increase "won't move us up or down," and that the teachers view it as coming originally from the legislature and passed on by the school board.

The legislature this session increased its appropriations for state education "to allow for, but not require, a 10 percent rise in each of three areas: personnel, capital outlay and operations."

Gates stressed the teachers' pay increase has nothing to do with the plant facility levy, which the district is asking voters to approve May 16. The levy would be used only for school building improvements and completing projects at the new high school.

Gates said he has received comments from members of the public that if the teachers got a 10 percent pay increase they will vote against the plant facility levy.

"Even if it passes, the money will not come in till next January, after our contracts begin," Gates said. "Our pay increase came from the legislature."

The Jerome school board in a special meeting Monday rejected a teacher plan for a health care benefit package. The plan would have allowed a teacher to use the $75-a-month per person paid by the district for health insurance on any coverage the teacher chose. Instead of the one now available.

Board Chairman Alvin Chonucky said the majority of the board wanted to stay with the original offer to increase support from $24 to $27 for the present Blue Cross health insurance coverage.

He said board members had various reasons for their opinion but that the matter was not closed as a negotiable item.

Other items remaining to be settled are a proposed sick leave bank and an unused personal leave day reimbursement plan.

The teacher and district negotiating teams will meet again Monday.

Jerome candidates state positions

JEROME — Two three-year school board positions are up for election May 16 in Jerome.

In zone 3, five-year incumbent Trustee Lyle Van Orman is running unopposed, while in zone 4, Jerome homemaker Joyce Martin is challenging Merna Johnson, who was appointed to the board in 1976.

Also May 16, voters are being asked to approve the district's first plant facility levy to complete the new high school and improve older buildings. The three-mill levy would be for 10 years and would produce about $78,000 a year at the district's 1977 level of assessed valuation.

All three trustee candidates strongly support passage of the plant facility levy.

Voting will take place in the junior high school gymnasium from noon to 8 p.m. To be eligible to vote a person must be 18 years old and a resident of the district.

Following are the candidates' statements on several issues, including their philosophies of education, reasons for running, and position on a few recent issues in the district. The candidates were asked to comment on a proposed migrant workers summer school, teachers' salaries and the "closed campus" and new no smoking policy at the high school.

Merna Johnson

Mrs. Johnson is an installment loan officer at the Jerome First Security Bank and was appointed to the school board to fill an unexpired term in November, 1976. She is currently on the board's teacher-contract negotiating team and is a past officer in the March of Dimes, the Heart Fund and the business and professional women's club.

Here are her comments:

"Education is one of the most important things we give children. A quality education affects the rest of their lives. We should give them the very best it is possible to give."

"I've always been interested in the school system. All three of my children went through and receive a lot of benefits."

"I really feel the past year and half of experience gives me a beneficial advantage over someone who hasn't been on the board."

"I would like to see the high school finished and other problems areas corrected. It could be done if the mill levy is passed."

"An open campus at the high school would create problems. The district is obligated to uphold the laws the best it can be done, including not smoking on school property, but it's not something that's going to be stopped entirely. The administration is trying to work on the problem and is doing the best it can."

"I would have voted against the migrant worker children summer school. I'm against so many federally funded programs. We should have the control in our own district without being told what we can do by the federal government."

"The 10 percent salary increase is fair for teachers and can be worked out of the budget, but we have to give a little somewhere else. I'd like to see the level of salaries in Jerome compared to the rest of the state) raised, but I don't see any way to bring it up."

Joyce Martin

Mrs. Martin is running for public office for the first time. She and her husband, Kenneth, who is a farmer, have five children, two of whom have graduated from the Jerome schools. She is a registered nurse, a 4-H leader, and is involved in church work and have been involved in the Girl Scouts and Boy Scouts.

Here are her comments:

"Education is probably one of the most important things we can do for the community and our children. Without education, a community cannot grow and prosper. It's the basis for everything, being contented, being and individual on one's own and being able to give of yourself to the community."

"Several friends talked to me, and we decided I was as good a person in the area who could be a spokesperson for some ideas parents wanted answered from the school system. I really can't be specific, because I'm going to be in a learning situation. I don't think it's good to go into a job with ideas with no basis for them."

"I hope, if elected, to continue with the same hardwork that has been put into the present board's years of service, and help with any problems that arise and relate problems to the board that come from parents or teachers and find a good solution."

"(The migrant children summer school) goes right back to the issue of how important education is. There should be everychance made that our children have an education. These are citizens of the U.S., and if there is no other way of them getting an education than through summer school, then we'd better look into it and see if possibly we can have it."

"If for nothing else than the safety of the students concerning traffic problems, we should stay with the closed campus. I don't support those students behavior, but I don't think the student body should be judged on the basis of a minority. I don't know what the administration is doing out there now. I think a person should get informed on both sides of an issue. Many people were only taking a quick view."

"I can't think of a better person to be paid well than a good teacher. They definitely should have adequate pay. They're very important people to the development of good citizens. I'd like to know where the sales tax went we voted for years ago. The idea was the major percentage was to go to schools and I don't think it has."

But when they are offered the same as all the student-body receives, I don't think it's necessary we spend another $500 per student for six weeks of summer school. It's still taxpayers money and has to be paid for by the people in the state."

"If (the closed campus) doesn't work out, I'm for change. The policy should continue like it is to see how it works. The closer supervision seems to be working much better."

"The 10 percent (teacher salary increase) is fair to both sides. I'd like to see salaries brought up at least to the average (in the state). The problem is a matter of priorities. You put the money where it will do the most good. The state sets the money we get."

Aliens expected to accept U.S. residence

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Millions of illegal aliens who have entered the United States since 1970 are likely to accept the administration's proposed grant of temporary residence, Attorney General Griffin Bell said Wednesday.

Bell testified at a Senate Judiciary Committee hearing on President Carter's plan to deal with the growing problem of people who enter the United States seeking work, strain local services and don't pay taxes on their earnings.

The administration's proposal would make it illegal for employers to knowingly hire undocumented aliens and would classify the immigrants into three categories: Those in the United States since 1960 to 1970, those who came between 1970 and 1977, and those who entered since Jan. 1, 1977.

Those in the first category would be granted permanent resident status. Those in the second would register with the government and be given temporary resident alien status for five years until the government decides what to do about them. People in the third group would be subject to deportation.

Those granted five-year temporary status would not be eligible for various welfare benefits, and since most of them are working would not need them anyway, Bell said.

Washington would revise its revenue-sharing with states having large numbers of the temporary residents to account for the cost of local services. The aliens would gain protection of wage and hour laws and be allowed to travel to their home countries and back freely without being classed as criminals.

At the same time, Bell said, the administration is not granting amnesty to all illegal entrants. The legislation, Bell said, is a compromise attempt to meet legitimate humanitarian and practical concerns without creating incentives for increased migration, which a complete amnesty most surely would do.

He said the most important question is whether or not the facts as presented, the undocumented aliens will decide that it's worthwhile to come out of hiding. We believe that they will because the advantages of the temporary status so outweigh the disadvantages.

Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher said the United States must help with the economic development of countries the immigrants come from as an incentive for them to stay there.

He said the administration has assured Mexico that "mass deportations will not be part of the president's program" because the influx of more people into the work force would disrupt Mexico's already weak economy.

First Lady hints at line on Vesco

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (UPI) — Rosalynn Carter ended her official visit to Costa Rica with a surprise announcement that she hopes fugitive financier Robert Vesco will stand trial in America.

Vesco, who since 1973 had lived in exile here and successfully fought extradition efforts, left Costa Rica 10 days ago presumably for a Caribbean island nation.

Mrs. Carter, who relaxed Wednesday at a suburban country club after ending her official duties at the inauguration of President Rodrigo Carazo, stunned the press corps in a 15-minute news conference Tuesday by referring to the financier.

"We want him to return to the United States to stand trial," she said.

Mrs. Carter dropped her remark after President Carazo said he did not want Vesco to return to Costa Rica.

And in an interview with the morning newspaper La Nacion, Carazo said he has signed a decree barring Vesco from ever returning to this country.

He said all immigration and border officials have specific instruction to refuse entry to Vesco should he try to return.

Vesco is charged by the Securities and Exchange Commission with "looting" the mutual funds company he formally headed — International Overseas Services — of some $24 million.

Mrs. Carter planned a private three-day vacation in Costa Rica before her departure Friday, making a stop in Guatemala for a brief chat with President Kjell Laugerud.

Iran riot kills nine

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Nine people were killed and hundreds more injured in rioting that broke out in the holy city of Qom, one of 23 Iranian cities torn by political violence recently, newspapers reported.

The government condemned the "inhuman and anti-national acts" of the demonstrators and warned that its patience was not unlimited.

Reports from Qom said the rioters ran through the streets for 10 hours Tuesday burning shops, fighting police, straying trains, smashing buses and roughing up passengers.

At one point, a group of rioters attacked a police station and officers opened fire on them, the reports said.

Military drug abuse still threat to nation's security

©New York Times Service
 WASHINGTON — Last December, while the U.S. aircraft carrier Midway was being towed to Singapore to be repaired, Navy conducted urine tests on some of the sailors and found that more than 20 percent were using opiates or heroin.
 Last year the opiate overdose rate for U.S. Army personnel stationed in Europe increased by an alarming 50 percent to a level three times that of the average for U.S. cities.
 And reports by Carter administration officials who have toured bases in Germany indicate that there has been a marked increase in the availability of cheap high-quality heroin in recent years. Furthermore, one Carter aide heard "anecdotal estimates" that heroin usage may be as high as 40 percent of some units on the front line of Western Europe's defense against the Soviets. And among those involved in drug abuse are military personnel assigned to sensitive nuclear warhead missions.
 Thursday the House Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control issued the results of a year-long investigation into drug use in the military that indicates drug abuse, while on the wane since the Vietnam war, still poses serious problems for the nation's security.

 "The committee is certain that regular drug use by military personnel affects the combat readiness, job performance and morale of our armed forces," said Rep. Lester L. Wolff, D-N.Y., chairman of the committee.
 At the opening session Rep. Glenn English, D-Ohio, released the results of a poll of 1,000 military personnel worldwide which attempted to assess the impact of drug use.
 About 85 percent of the officers responding to the survey said they believe drug abuse is hurting combat preparedness, discipline and overall effectiveness of military personnel. Over 90 percent said that overall job performance is being adversely affected, and 71 percent attributed moral problems to drug abuse.
 Some 75 percent of the officers believe that at least half the lower ranking personnel are using marijuana at least once a week and 77 percent believe that heroin is being used at least once a month by a small number of personnel.
 Officers also reported significant use by lower-echelon personnel of cocaine, barbiturates and amphetamines.

"We have a serious problem," acknowledged Vernon McKenzie, acting assistant secretary of defense for health affairs.
 "The problem is that the availability of drugs in a given area and inversely proportional to the effective attention given the problem by the local commander.
 "With few exceptions, the military drug-abusing population consists of the enlisted men or women in the 18-to-25-year-old age group," he said.
 "They seem to use drugs primarily for recreational purposes while off duty. The most prevalent drugs of abuse are the cannabis derivatives — marijuana, hashish and hashish oil. Thereafter the drug of choice depends on the availability in the part of the world in which the service member is stationed.
 "For example, in Korea it is barbiturates and in Germany it is heroin and Methuagonone among army personnel and amphetamines on Air Force bases. In the United States we see nearly everything — use of LSD, heroin, but use of PCP and cannabis is on the rise," he said.
 McKenzie said that there is more abuse of drugs among troops stationed outside the United States. "We find that when young servicemen are moved to a location where drugs are cheap and readily available, where they are housed and separated from the restraints of their families, where living conditions are difficult and sometimes dangerous, the conditions for drug abuse are present."

 He said the military is beefing up the number of spot tests for drug use and that it is his goal to reduce hard drug use by about 15 percent in the coming year.
 In a letter sent to Secretary of Defense Harold Brown March 1, Dr. Peter Bourne, special assistant to President Carter for drug programs, said he was alarmed by the reports of increasing drug abuse, particularly in Western Europe.
 "We face the potential for serious embarrasment if we do not deal aggressively with the problem, particularly in light of the strong congressional interest," Bourne told Brown in the letter, which was obtained by the committee.

 "I would like to demonstrate that the administration is clearly in the lead on this issue," Bourne said.
 Bourne said the administration was also concerned that programs the United States has embarked on in an attempt to cooperate in attacking drug abuse might be damaged with the growing drug problems in its own ranks.
 He claimed that the military was not taking advantage of new technology for assessing drug use in the ranks and that the rate of urinal testing for drugs "seems to be decreasing at the lowest common denominator rather than increasing to a more effective level."
 One alarming aspect of the drug abuse in the military involves personnel who have their finger on the button at nuclear stations around the world.
 "The impact of drug and alcohol abuse on military effectiveness in the nuclear weapon security program has been minimal," said Joseph P. Liebling, deputy secretary of defense.

 However, statistics provided by the military show that 30 to 35 percent of the disqualifications within the nuclear program were for drug abuse. The personnel in the special nuclear program are hand-picked for their reliability and fulfill such jobs as maintenance and handling of nuclear weapons; security or serving as air crews on nuclear military missions.
 Of the 115,855 personnel in the nuclear weapon program in 1976, 4,968 had to be transferred for serious problems. Of those transferred, 1,474 were for drug abuse and 184 for alcohol abuse.
 But part of the decline came about because of a controversial but more flexible disqualification policy allowing commanders the option of not transferring a first-time marijuana experimenter.

Texas governor orders 30 day execution delay

AUSTIN, Texas (UPI) — Gov. Dolph Briscoe, upholding a 28-year tradition, scheduled to die by lethal injection after midnight Friday night, Doyle Glenn Boulware, 43, Tuesday was granted a stay of execution by U.S. District Judge Patrick Higginbotham. Boulware, convicted of killing a Dallas policeman, was granted the reprieve pending appeals of his sentence.
 The method of execution in Texas was changed during the last legislative session from electrocution to death by injection.

Under the new system, the condemned man would be strapped to a hospital gurney with an intravenous catheter in his arm. The long plastic tube from the catheter would lead to a separate room where TDC director W.J. Estelle or an executioner he designates would inject sodium thiopental, a general anesthetic.

Wednesday used the power of his office to keep convicted murderer William David Hovila alive for at least 30 more days, even though he wants to die.
 Briscoe issued a stay of execution for the 30-year-old Hovila, who was scheduled to be injected with a lethal dose of drugs late Sunday.
 "We're going to notify the Texas Department of Corrections this afternoon and the paperwork will follow," said Jay Floyd, Briscoe's administrative assistant.

Forest-aid due

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Three forestry bills including plans to expand federal aid to forestry research and extension work approval Wednesday in the Senate Agriculture Committee.
 Similar measures sponsored by Rep. James Weaver, D-Ore., are pending in the House.
 The Senate bills, sponsored by Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., include one authorizing up to $15 million a year for expanding educational programs aimed at promoting more efficient forest and rangeland management.
 Another bill in the package clarifies and broadens older legislation on forestry research and includes specific new authority for a competitive grant program to finance research on renewable resources.
 A third measure, codifying and expanding on a number of old laws, would lay down a unified federal policy of cooperative aid to state agencies to improve management of non-federal forest lands.

Once the drug enters the body, loss of consciousness occurs almost immediately. Given in excess, the drug causes a progressive coma in which vital portions of the brain cease to function, resulting in declines in blood pressure and respiration until death occurs. The method is considered painless.
 Eighty-three persons are on death row in Texas.

The execution would have been the first since Gary Mark Gilmore was shot by a Utah State Prison firing squad Jan. 7, 1977 and the first in Texas since 1964.
 In April Hovila told District Judge John Vance that he would not appeal his death sentence. He fired his attorney and said he wanted "to get it over with" for both his family's sake and the sake of the family of the man he killed.

Montanan suggests federal financing rail car building

CARS LIKE THESE NEEDED NOW THROUGHOUT NATION'S FARM AREAS ... shortages hamper movement of farm commodities to markets

By BERNARD BRENNER
UPI Farm Editor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Montana farm official says the federal government should begin financing the construction of railroads to move the nation's grain.

The proposal by W. Gordon McComber, director of the Montana Department of Agriculture, was outlined Tuesday before a Senate Agriculture subcommittee hearing on the rail-car crisis gripping many agricultural areas.

Despite a series of Interstate Commerce Commission orders to give country grain elevators priority in getting boxcars, government and farm officials have reported in recent weeks that the current rail car shortage — the worst in more than a decade — may continue well into 1978.

McComber told the subcommittee chaired by Sen. John Melcher, D-Mont., that past efforts to solve the problem by railroads, the grain industry and the government have failed. The only practical long-term solution now, he said, is a government-financed program to build more railroad hopper cars.

The Montana official said the program should finance construction, directly or indirectly, of a fleet of hopper cars that could be made available to railroads during periods when there are not enough privately owned cars to handle grain movements.

The goal of the program should be construction of enough cars by 1981 so that all orders for grain cars, even during peak movement periods, can be filled within 48 hours, McComber said.

The official said that if the government does step in to supply a standby pool of rail cars or to pay the costs of standby equipment, railroad companies should be required to continue their own construction of hopper cars "on a five-year historical average."

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., said reports from his home state indicate the current car shortage is biting deeply into the pocketbooks of wheat growers.

Dole said grain buyers who had purchased wheat from Kansas country elevators had resuffed the elevators that late-delivery discounts would be put into effect beginning last Monday.

These discounts, which are being imposed because the country elevators could not get rail cars in time to make scheduled shipments, generally average from 3.5 cents to 10 cents per bushel weekly, Dole said.

"Now that the discounts are being taken, the elevators have no choice but to drop the price (paid to farmers) to reflect them," the Kansas pointed out.

Every 1-cent drop in the market price of wheat takes $3 million out of the Kansas farm economy, Dole's aides estimated. They pointed out, also, that the decline in market prices may increase the amount of the income support subsidy that will be due to wheat growers on the 1978 crop.

A spokesman for the National Association of Wheat Growers, meanwhile, joined McComber Tuesday in urging direct government action to solve the grain car shortage.

Vivian J. Thuesen, the NAWG official, said Congress should "embark on a program that will provide assistance to increase car fleets."

Daniel O'Neal, chairman of the Interstate Commerce Commission, told the subcommittee hearing the current rail car shortage is due partly to severe weather last winter and partly to a heavy demand for grain exports this spring.

Dole reminded the subcommittee that current ICC priority orders, earmarking some railcars for grain shipments, will inevitably mean a shipping pinch for other industries including fertilizer producers.

"I only hope that we are attaining a balance so that everybody is sharing in the burden. This is about the only equity we can hope to attain until more equipment is available," Dole said.

Grains, pork up but meats slide

CHICAGO — Grains and pork were stronger but potatoes and cattle declined in commodity futures trading Wednesday.

Commodity News Service said late commercial buying in wheat resulted in short covering which helped boost gains to final readings of 1 3/4 cents higher to 1 1/2 cents off. Bull spreaders followed the back that continued exports could lighten near term supplies.

Corn staged a modest late recovery, ending a quarter cent lower to a penny higher after fluctuating most of the day.

The soybean complex was stronger, with beans closing 4 1/2 to a cent higher, oil up 36 to 10 points and meal 30 cents to 1.90 higher.

Maline potatoes settled 7 to 9 cents lower on a trade of 518 carlots but short covering brought prices back from the low. May western russets were unchanged at 8.00 per hundred-weight.

Live cattle closed 40 to 25 points lower after a day labeled evening up ahead of Friday's cattle on feed report. Losses came, despite higher-cash-and-dressed-prices. Volume was 28,944 contracts.

Feeder cattle finished 5 to 50 points down in sympathy with weaker live cattle as selling kept futures on the defensive. Volume was 892.

Live hogs were mixed but mostly higher, settling 25 points up to 5 points down with nearby June off 2. Some unwinding of bull spreads may have depressed that month. Volume was 7,826.

Pork bellies posted strong gains again, closing 125 to 17 points higher. Volume was 8,309 contracts.

New York Sugar 11 slipped 16 to 9 points on a trade of 4,350 lots.

New York Comex gold gained 210 to 250 points in continuing recovery although June failed to clear a crucial chart point at 175.00.

New York Comex silver gained 530 points across the board in light activity. Of 5,500 contracts traded, there were 1,100 switches.

New York apple industry healthy now

By MARK FRANK
ROCHESTER, N.Y. (UPI) — Growers and industry experts say a "return to nature" by Americans and other factors point to a relatively healthy future for New York's apple industry.

But problems facing the industry include a maze of government regulations, a shrinking labor force, a shortage of storage bins, rising costs and declining profits.

The New York industry — coming off some rough years — is attempting to respond with new apple varieties and planting techniques, and improved marketing.

"We still have problems but I think the outlook is very positive," said Richard Norton, Cooperative Extension fruit specialist for Monroe, Orleans and Niagara counties.

Growers in western New York and the Hudson Valley said most of their trees made it through the harsh winter in good shape, although girdling by mice and rabbits — chewing off bark all around the tree — was the worst in years.

"The 1977 crop is moving through the market places in record fashion which could mean better prices for the grower this year," said Don Nielson of the New York State Department of Agriculture and Markets.

"For the first time in two or three years we will have favorable bloom conditions," said Gary Orbakker, another Wayne County grower.

Warren Smith, a Cooperative Extension fruit specialist for Ulster and Orange counties in the Hudson Valley, warned that "another bad year would be disastrous." And Rockwood Berry, executive director of the New York-New England Apple Institute labeled 1978 as "a critical year for the growers."

The state produced 90 million pounds, or about 21 million bushels last year, up 10 percent from 1976. Berry called the crop less than average.

The price for growers rose to an average of 8.6 cents a pound last year from 7.9 cents the year before.

Livestock center due expansion

REXBURG (UPI) — Students enrolled in agriculture classes at Ricks College are attending those classes about six miles west of Rexburg at the Ricks College Livestock Center.

That is because the college has purchased 113 acres there where two trailers have been moved and plans call for construction of an Ag-Ed Building. The facility will include an indoor arena of some 30,000 square feet and 8,000 square feet for classrooms, offices, and a meats laboratory.

Charles Frost, director of physical plant facilities at the college, said plans call for a bid opening this summer on the Ag-Ed Building with construction set for the fall. Agriculture students will begin using the new building in the fall of 1979.

Frost said a master plan for the site is being developed, and work involves a sewer system, storm sewer system, heating, and electrical system.

Architect on the project is Richard Heindel, Twin Falls. Acreage purchased from Gerald-Lewis, Rosburg, includes farm land, a dairy site, and river bottom pasture land.

Two-mile mark set by Ochsner to open A-3 district meet

TWIN FALLS — Flier's Brian Ochsner smashed the district A-3 two-mile record down to 9:43.5 and Beth Rupprecht picked up the mile victory for the Wildcat girls to get the district track and field championships underway Wednesday afternoon.

The two distances were the only finals conducted Wednesday. It was a session of running preliminaries and it took from 4 p.m. to just after 8 p.m. to complete the heats for the various events.

By the end of that time the finalists had been pared to eight for the finals which will start at noon Saturday at Bruin stadium.

It appears Ochsner takes his task seriously early and late in the season. In his first outing this spring he turned a 4:28 mile. He put in a lot of effort in the two mile and has passed the event in some meets. But Wednesday he went gunning for his own record of 9:43.5.

"He says he wants to be under 9:40," Flier Coach Wayne Humphrey said as the race was just underway.

From that point on he ran almost alone and he wound it up by turning a 60-second final lap for his 9:43.5. A junior, Ochsner will have a chance to break the mark for a third time next year.

For a while it appeared there might be a race for second place as Chris Black of Glenns Ferry, Andrus of Hagerman and Bennett of Gooding State ran in a tight little knot. Dixon of Valley was there for a while but lost contact about the sixth lap.

But Black started stretching away mid-way through the course and ran his second best time of 19:02 for second. Andrus came in third at 10:15 with Lowell Black of Glenns Ferry, Bennett and Dixon finishing that way and all qualifying for state under the 10:42 qualifying standard.

The girls mile was picked up by Rupprecht in 4:23. She was followed home by Lubmeyer of Richfield; Ainsworth of Hagerman; L. Viner of Glenns Ferry; Shaffer of Andrus, and Houk of Castleford. Again the top six bettered the state qualifying standard of 6:42.

The one thing certain after the boys qualifying that anyone could win the 100 and 200-yard dashes. All the heats battered around the modest 10.5-10.6 area in the century and 23.6 to 24 was a fair norm in the running.

Prospects picked up well in the high hurdles where Dietrich's Leland Towne turned in a career best 15.6. Shoshone's Jason Webb had a 15.8 and Dalin of Camas County was in the hunt at around 16.

Smith of Carey lowered the girls quarter-mile record to 61.5 to highlight the qualifying on the district division. Camas County sustained a setback there when its 800-yard relay team was disqualified because its starter had her feet too high on the blocks — not in contact with the ground — in violation of the rules. However, that rule wasn't what enforced throughout the day and some got away with it.

Flier sustained a setback when its boys 800-yard relay team overran the second exchange zone, an error that will hurt the Wildcats in their battle against Valley and Glenns Ferry for the team title.

HIGH KICKING Julius Erving uses his leg to block Bullets' Wes Unseld during NBA playoffs Wednesday night. Philadelphia won to stay alive, although trailing three games to two.

76ers topple Bullets to stay alive in NBA series

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Julius Erving and Doug Collins each scored 24 points Wednesday night to help the Philadelphia 76ers stave off elimination in the NBA playoffs with a 107-94 win over the Washington Bullets.

The Bullets, leading 3-2 in the NBA Eastern Conference finals, get another chance to clinch a berth in the finals when the series moves back to Landover, Md., for Game 6 Friday night.

Collins, who has been mired in a shooting slump against Washington that has seen him hit just 41 percent of his shots, sank 10-of-17 shots. He scored 12 points in the third quarter as the 76ers extended a 24-1 lead to an 82-62 margin entering the final quarter.

Collins' shooting outset the hot hand of Washington's Earl Wright, who scored 11 points in the quarter, including a jumper with 4:07 left that cut the 76ers' lead to 70-60.

But Collins and Steve Mix sparked an 8-point surge that put Philadelphia up by 18, 78-60, with 1:16 to play.

Collins hit two foul shots with 9:42 remaining to make it 91-67 and the 76ers coasted from there.

Erving hit 14 of his 17 in the first half, including three key baskets in the final five minutes after the Bullets cut a 17-point lead to 37-32 with 5:34 left. Reserve guard Charlie Johnson scored 10 points to lead the Bullets rally.

Erving hit two layups and a jumper and Lloyd Free scored five points to enable the 76ers to regain command, 90-37, with 1:53 left in the quarter.

The Bullets almost shot their way out of the game in the first quarter, missing 11 of their first 12 shots, and went on to their lowest quarter output of the season as the 76ers led 23-12 at the end of the period.

Collins hit two baskets and George McCinlis hit one in the first minute of the second quarter to extend Philadelphia's lead to 28-12 before Johnson's shooting and the rebounding of Wes Unseld, who missed three games with a sprained ankle, got the Bullets back into the game.

Ten teams to reintroduce fastpitch to Magic Valley

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls will host its first fastpitch softball tournament in nearly 20 years this weekend with some of the top teams from Southern Idaho coming here to welcome the ball back into the field.

The tournament features the Montie Wite Champions of Idaho Falls, last year's state A state champions and EM-Kayans, Boise, which was second in that division.

Twin Falls spokesman Mike Murphy said a Magic Valley all-star aggregation will represent this area, but he noted the sport is still only a couple of games old now and local fans shouldn't expect miracles.

All the action will be played on diamonds one and two at Harmon Park.

The first-round pairings include 8 a.m., Saturday, Broadway Bar of Boise vs. Nelson Electric of Blackfoot, and Les' Body Shop, Boise vs. Don Wiebold T-Birds; 9:30 a.m., EM-Kayans of Boise vs. Art Smith Jewelry of Boise and Montie Wite Ford of Idaho Falls vs. Hunter-Saucerman of Idaho Falls; 10 a.m., Saturday, Security National of Elko vs. winner Broadway Bar of Nelson, and Dale White Toyota vs. winner of Les' Body Shop Don Wiebold.

At 1 p.m., Magic Valley all-stars vs. winner of Montie Wite Ford-Hunter-Saucerman.

Loser bracket play takes over for one game at 1:30 and two more at 3 p.m. with the championship quarter-finals going at 4 p.m. Loser bracket games are slated at 5:30 p.m. with the championship semi-finals the only action slated for 7 p.m.

It will be followed by two loser bracket games at 8:30 p.m. Action resumes with the loser bracket quarter-finals at 10 a.m. Sunday and the loser bracket semi-finals at 11:30 a.m.

The survivor of that game goes against the undefeated team for the championship at 1 p.m. Should the unbeaten team lose at 1 p.m., the extra game will go about 2:45 p.m. Sunday.

"We think we are introducing a very enjoyable, spectator sport to Magic Valley with fastpitch and we urge everyone to come out and take a look at it," Murphy concluded.

Players want free agent rule changed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The NFL Players Association has filed a motion with the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals asking that Judge Earl Larson review the league's free agent signing system, it was announced Wednesday.

"This action was taken because it is now apparent that the NFL clubs, with one or two exceptions, are not engaged in serious bidding for free agents under the new bargaining agreement," said David A. Executive Director Ed Garvey.

"Because most clubs are refusing to make offers to players, it is believed that the District Court should have an opportunity to review the entire first refusal-compensation system to determine whether or not the clubs are violating the antitrust laws."

Garvey said that of the 126 players who played out the option years of their contract in 1977 and became free agents, Feb. 1, only one received a "offer sheet" from other clubs, setting in motion the process by which the old club has "first refusal" to match the offer.

Another 33 received no offer from their old clubs, and thus were free to sign anywhere with no compensation involved.

"Objective people must conclude that something is wrong," said Garvey. "We believe we have discovered the reason why it is not working. The clubs are taking the position for the first time that they have a perpetual option on free agents who fall to the clubs' front runners."

"We vigorously oppose their interpretation of the agreement and want to bring this new development to the court's attention."

The NFLPA contends that players who play out their option year — for a 10 percent raise in salary — are then free to move to any team they get an offer from.

Larson, who oversees the administration of the collective bargaining agreement, originally agreed to retain jurisdiction to make sure the system worked. But after hearing several parties who opposed it, including Los Angeles-based lawyer Howard Slusher, he refused to keep the case.

Unorthodox but effective

Minico tops Burley to remain unbeaten

BURLEY — The Minico Spartans jumped into the drivers seat in the district baseball tournament Wednesday by knocking off the Burley Bobcats 7-4 and becoming the only undefeated team left in the double elimination affair.

The Bobcats were scheduled to play the Bruins at Twin Falls Thursday afternoon with the loser out and the winner going against Minico needing two victories to claim the district title and the lone berth in the state tournament in Lewiston next week.

Burley, which won the Cross State Conference last week, led the Bobcat 2-1 going into the fifth inning, thanks to a two-run double by Kyle Carpenter.

But the Bobcats ran into a moment of indecision on a pop up and the Spartans capitalized on that miscue to the tune of five runs that led the victory.

Minico set the stage by loading the bases with two men out. The next Spartan popped up between home and the pitcher's mound. The defenders played. "I got it — you take it" and the ball fell in as the tying run scored. An error at shortstop let in two more runs and a solid single wrapped up the five-run slugger.

Minico added another run in the top of the seventh and Burley replied with two in the inning to no avail.

Coach wins suit

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Bill Musselman, coach of the former San Diego Sails of the American Basketball Association, Tuesday won a $177,800 suit for breach of contract.

A Superior Court jury ruled in Musselman's favor following a three-week trial.

The jury concluded that Leaf Management Inc. and its principals, Frank Goldberg and Arnold Fischer, were liable.

Musselman said he signed a three-year contract with the team shortly before it folded in 1976 for annual salaries of $40,000, $45,000 and $50,000. In his suit for breach of contract and fraud, Musselman argued that the contract was signed three months before the team folded, which proved a lack of good faith by management.

Musselman was awarded $145,300 in personal damages.

Judge Wesley Buttermore said Goldberg and Fischer were personally accountable for claims against Leaf and they could not shield themselves from the liability.

Goldberg was ordered to pay $25,000 in punitive damages and Fischer $7,500.

MILTON RICHMAN Rapp hasn't time for second-guessing

NEW YORK (UPI) — Some people get fired from their job and the first thing they do is go out and get drunk. The next thing they do is go home and brood.

Not Vern Rapp.

He never felt he could find the answer to any problem of his in a bottle nor is he given to brooding over what happened to him. He's not second-guessing himself, either.

Two weeks have gone by now since Rapp was replaced by Ken Bayer as manager of the St. Louis Cardinals and he's back home in Lakewood, Colo., but he isn't brooding over what happened to him. He's not second-guessing himself, either.

"Trying to go back and next to yourself this should've been this way and that should've been that way serves no real purpose," he says. "I've never been one for that."

Rapp, who reached 50 today, had spent 15 years in the minors as a manager before the Cards gave him a chance to handle their club in 1977. He came up utterly determined to make the most of it, but in the end he fell victim to what only can be described as a difference in philosophy.

During all his time in baseball, Rapp was schooled to believe the manager was the boss of the team. He had the last word in any difference of opinion and when he told you something, you didn't argue with him.

In the minors, where players are much more tractable because they know they are more expendable, that worked out fine for Rapp. In the majors, where a great many players draw far more money than the manager and know they can make it rough on him if they choose, it didn't work out at all. Not for Rapp, anyway.

Under the tolerant, easy-going Red Schoendienst, who had managed them for 12 years before Rapp got there, the Cardinals did more or less as they chose and dressed the way they liked. They looked like a bunch of hippies who had just gotten off their marijuana.

Schoendienst ran a loose ship and everybody was happy. The Cards won two pennants and one world championship during his first four years as manager but never were able to win again after that and after Schoendienst was let go, many of those he left behind agreed he was "too easy."

Compared with him, Vern Rapp looked like Captain Bligh.

He was the authoritarian Schoendienst wasn't and whenever he issued an order he expected it to be obeyed. Rapp immediately set, issued a code for the way the players should dress and wear their facial hair and that triggered the now famous Battle of the Beard, between him and reliever Al Hrabosky.

Only a few days after Rapp took over last year, I detected some sense of trouble when I walked into the Cardinals' clubhouse in St. Petersburg, Fla., during spring training. I was wearing a sport shirt and jeans at the time and after looking over, Garry Templeton, the Cards' young shortstop, said he couldn't talk to me.

"Why not?" I asked him.

"Because of what you're wearing," he said. "No jeans allowed in the clubhouse."

He was kidding, but he was telling me something at the same time. Vern Rapp wasn't big on blue jeans. He wasn't very happy about his players' wearing them and they, in turn, weren't very happy about that.

The late Joe McCarthy, one of the best managers in baseball history, had essentially the same ideas as Rapp and lasted 24 years. He won nine pennants and seven world championships, but these are much different times. Before he died not long ago, McCarthy conceded he would have a lot more trouble handling today's players.

In McCarthy's day, the leaders WPA stood for Works Progress Administration, which was a make-work program instituted under Franklin D. Roosevelt to create jobs for the unemployed. Baseball has its own version of the WPA today and it stands for With Player Approval. That means no manager can really run a team the way he wants. It's the boss, but only up to a point.

Herman Franks, the Cubs' manager, has been around a long time, for nearly 50 years now, in fact. He has watched the transition in baseball, especially as it applies to the players, and he puts the situation in pretty good focus when, in speaking about today's players, he says:

"Some you gotta kick in the butt and some you gotta kiss their butt."

Vern Rapp never could bring himself to that second part, and for that, he should be applauded rather than impeached.

To the charge that he was "too rigid" in his thinking, pitcher Pat Zachry of the Mets, who played for him in Indianapolis, says:

"I never found him for that. He helped me tremendously as well as many others."

Joel Youngblood, also with the Mets, played for Rapp with Indianapolis and with the Cards, and he agrees with Zachry.

Bucs obtain Freitas

PONTIAC, Mich. (UPI) — The Detroit Lions traded veteran offensive tackle Roque Freitas to the Tampa Bay Buccaneers Wednesday in exchange for an undisclosed future draft choice.

Freitas, who will be 33 next season, is attempting to make a comeback from knee surgery after getting hurt in Detroit's third game last season. He had started 11 straight games at right tackle before his injury.

"It was not an easy decision for me to reach," new Coach Monte Clark of the Lions said, "but Rocky has been a solid performer for the Lions."

However we have decided to look to some of our younger offensive linemen. We feel we have a handful of very promising offensive linemen. I consider it a forward move as we look to the future, and one I feel I had to make."

The Lions drafted five offensive linemen and have several young prospects returning from injuries give Clark some work with in shoring up what has been a weak spot with the club in recent seasons.

Freitas, a native of Hawaii, is a product of Oregon State who has 10 years in the National Football League. He was obtained in 1967 after being cut by the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Seattle seizes 2-1 playoff lead on Broncos

SEATTLE (UPI) — Johnny Johnson and Fred Brown combined for 21 of Seattle's 28 fourth-quarter points as the SuperSonics defeated the Denver Nuggets 105-91 Wednesday night to take a 2-1 lead in their NBA playoff series.

Johnson scored 10 points and Brown 11 in the final period while the Sonics built a three-point advantage to an easy 14-point victory.

The Nuggets scored just five points in the first 7:47 of the last quarter as Seattle moved 11 points in front.

The teams remain in Seattle for the fourth game Friday night in the best-of-seven semifinal series. The Sonics hold the home court advantage after winning one of the first two games in Denver.

Johnson finished with 20 points to lead six Sonics in double figures. Dennis Johnson scored 18, Brown 17, Gus Williams 16, Marvin Webster 14 and Jack Sikma 10.

David Thompson led Denver with 21 points but connected on just 6-of-19 shots from the floor under tight defense by Dennis Johnson.

Webster also shut down the Nuggets' Dan Issel, holding Denver's powerful center to 13 points after Issel had scored 25 and 28 in the first two games of the series.

Issel managed just seven rebounds while Webster had 16.

The teams were tied at 30-30 after the first period, but the Sonics took a 31-30 lead at halftime by outscoring the Nuggets 14 in the final 4:53 of the half.

Denver's defense then forced Seattle outside in the third period, and the Sonics managed to connect on just 29 percent of their shots as Denver crept within three, 74-77, going into the fourth period.

For the first time in the series the Sonics committed more fouls than Denver. The Sonics were whistled for 25 fouls to the Nuggets' 24. In the first two games, Denver committed 72 fouls to Seattle's 63.

L.A. city council OKs Olympic pact

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The City Council Wednesday approved by a 10-5 vote the city's contract for the 1984 Olympic Games despite claims the city could still be liable for millions of dollars in costs.

The official delegation, headed by Mayor Tom Bradley, is to begin talks in Athens, Greece, with the International Olympic Committee next week.

Deputy City Attorney Sally Dico, who was scheduled to travel to Athens with the delegation, told council members the financial risks to the city could not be eliminated, but the contract did minimize the risks.

The IOC is expected to make a decision on Los Angeles, so far the only bidder, in meetings beginning next Monday.

The cost of security for the games was a key question during the council debate over the contract.

Councilman Zev Yaroslavsky said it was now estimated by the police department that security would cost about $22 million. He also said the contract contains no provision to insure the city would be reimbursed for the cost.

Security costs for the 1976 Montreal Olympics were estimated at between $100 million and $150 million.

Tarkanian battles NCAA

CARSON CITY, Nev. (UPI) — Jerry Tarkanian, basketball coach of the University of Nevada-Las Vegas, Wednesday charged the NCAA was guilty of sportsmanlike conduct in its efforts to get him suspended from his job the last past two seasons.

Tarkanian, through his attorney Samuel Lionel, asked the Nevada Supreme Court to reject efforts by the NCAA to file an Amicus-Curtis or "friend-of-the-court" brief in behalf of university officials.

UNLV was placed on two years probation by the NCAA which also indicated it wanted Tarkanian ousted from his basketball job during the period. The university suspended Tarkanian but he secured a court injunction last year, preventing the university from carrying out its order.

Utah Tech edges CSI in 10th

PROVO — Utah Tech scored in the bottom of the 10th inning to pin a 4-3 decision on the College of Southern Idaho Golden Eagles Wednesday night.

The game, a prepper for this weekend's doubleheader at Ricks which could lead the Eagles into the host spot for next week's region 16 playoffs, ended with a runner at third with two out and two strikes on the batter. He hit a roller into the hole that CSI shortstop Rover Zernardo got a glove on but couldn't control. It went for a hit as the deciding run romped home.

Coach Jim Walker used relays of pitcher with Brian London giving up one run in the first three innings, Lee Cline another in the next three. Scott Job one in one and the loss then went to Cliff Helbert who worked the final two and two-thirds.

CSI scored only in the seventh inning and Utah Tech wildness helped that. Jerry Hollett opened with a single and came around on three straight walks. Bob Schuler followed with a two-run single but that was the end of the CSI offense.

In the 10th, the leadoff man tagged a misplayed fly ball into a triple although the Eagles made it a close play at third base. Coach Walker bitterly protested the call. "I should have been run," he said afterward. CSI then got the next two out and within a strike of getting out of the jam.

The Eagles were slated to play Utah Tech again Thursday and return to Twin Falls for a day's rest before the Ricks game at Rexburg Saturday. CSI needs one of two wins Saturday to clinch the regional. If it does, the regional will be played Thursday and Friday at Jaycee Park in Twin Falls with the winner advancing to the national tournament in Colorado the following week.

Ongais turns Indy lap at 202 MPH

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Hawaiian Danny Ongais late Wednesday drove his race car around the Indianapolis Motor Speedway track at a speed of nearly 202 mph to stamp himself as a top candidate for the pole position in the 500-mile race.

Ongais was clocked unofficially on the electric eye at a clip of 201.974 mph just before the track closed for the day, ending the busiest seven-hour test since the famed oval opened last Saturday.

Thirty-four cars made practice runs under near-perfect racing conditions with a bright sun warming the pavement.

Mario Andretti, practicing for only the second day, turned in a lap almost as fast as Ongais at 201.838.

The official one-lap record, set by pole winner Tom Sneva last year, was 200.535. Official records can be set only during the time trials or the race itself.

With only two full days of practice left before qualifications get underway, 11 cars have now been clocked at better than 195, and 16 over 190.

Two-lime race winner Johnny Rutherford, Gordon Johncock and Wallyallenbach had speeds of better than 197. Salt Walther and Al Unser, another two-lime 500 king, were in the 195 bracket.

Bobby Unser, also a two-lime Speedway winner, Sneva, Johnny Parsons and Steve Krihaloff had speeds in excess of 195.

Bobby Unser escaped unhurt earlier in the day when his car spun coming out of the south-west turn and lapped the outside wall. Unser continued on into the pits and damage to his machine was minor.

Defending 500 champion A. J. Foyt made his first practice runs on the track late in the day, but drove only two laps — his second at better than 189.

Ongais appeared to be unemotional after his quick trip around the 2 1/2 mile track.

"I have a very good crew and it's a team effort," he said. "They helped me a lot to do my job."

Ongais, at this Mecca of auto racing for only the second year, was expected to battle the veterans for the pole position up for grabs Saturday.

"I think we have a real good combination — Danny and this car," said Vel Miletich, co-owner of the black colored Parnelli with Ongais at the wheel. "I think Danny is the hottest thing here since Andretti."

"He's a very conscientious and very dedicated. If he holds up, he can win the race."

Last year Ongais started seventh in the race but was out before the halfway mark of the 200-lap grind due to mechanical problems. He finished 20th in a field of 33.

Ongais, a native Hawaiian and former motorcycle champion, indicated there was no reason why he shouldn't be among the fastest in early practice for the million dollar race May 28.

"We were prepared when we got here," he said. "And I think I understand this racetrack a bit more than last year. I have also had a year to be around these cars."

Janet Guthrie, who made Speedway history last year by becoming the first woman to qualify and race in the holiday classic, said she felt much more at ease in her third year at the ancient racetrack.

"I think the pressure is off," she said, in obvious reference to being the first woman racing at the Speedway. "I feel a lot more comfortable. I am more relaxed, having qualified once."

Guthrie, who was not sure of a ride this year until an oil firm agreed last month to sponsor her, said she hopes to qualify this weekend at about 190 mph.

"I believe 190 will be a good, solid qualifying run," she said.

RACER Bobby Unser's right rear tire just touches the wall between turns one and two as he lost control of the car during practice for the Indy 500 Wednesday.

Georgia Tech hits scheduling problems

ATLANTA (UPI) — Doug Weaver knew Georgia Tech might have scheduling problems when it deserted the Metro Conference to join the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Football isn't involved because the Metro doesn't sponsor that sport. But Georgia Tech finds itself in the need of opponents in basketball and other sports for next season. The problem is that Tech won't start playing ACC schedules until 1979-80 and the snubbed Metro says it doesn't want Tech hanging around during 1978-79.

"We hoped it might not happen," that the Metro people would continue to play us until we moved over to the ACC officially," said Weaver, Tech's athletic director. "Unfortunately, from our standpoint, most of the Metro schools aren't willing to do that so we're scrambling around trying to fill the holes."

Weaver, who confesses that he is more optimistic than some of his Tech colleagues, is skipping the first half of the ACC meeting at Myrtle Beach, S.C., this week to attend the Metro meeting at Tallahassee, Fla. In hopes the Metro people will have a change of heart.

"I don't feel there are any hard feelings about our joining the ACC," said Weaver. "I certainly haven't heard of any. The Metro people understand our position. I think they respect it. But they have to look after themselves: If they feel they can't afford to wait another year before lining up replacements for us, I can understand their position."

Weaver said he was aware that Tech was taking a calculated risk so far as non-football scheduling for 1978-79 was concerned. "But, when you look at it down the road how it will affect us over the next 30 or 40 years, you realize that it was a risk that had to be taken."

Basketball probably will be Georgia Tech's hardest hit sport next season. Weaver has hopes of retaining a couple of Metro foes, but that would mean eight gaps and, with most schools scheduling their basketball two or three years in advance, they aren't going to be easy to fill.

Once Georgia Tech starts playing in the ACC, beginning with cross country in the fall of 1979, football will become a problem. The Yellow Jackets have only one ACC foe, Duke, on its gridiron schedule in the immediate future and, before joining the ACC, hadn't planned on playing more than one or two each year over the next decade.

"We admit it's going to take some juggling," said Weaver. "While I'm over at Tallahassee, John O'Neill (Tech's athletic business manager) is going to go to Myrtle Beach ahead of me to start talking schedules with the other ACC athletic directors."

"John is going to put our schedules for the next 10-12 years on the table and see what can be worked out," said Weaver. "Right now we are pretty well locked in for the next decade, but there are a couple of holes."

"What we've got to try to do is talk some of those people we are scheduled to play into letting us out of our contracts," he said. "Only time will tell how successful we are."

"There has been some talk that we might be locked out of competing for the ACC football championship until 1990. I don't feel that way. I don't know what openings will be available, but I'm not going to be discouraged."

Since the official entry date into the ACC isn't until July, 1979, Georgia Tech probably could insist that it remain a full-fledged member of the Metro Conference during the next school year.

"It's rather keep our relationship harmonious," said Weaver. "I don't believe you should force yourself on a league that didn't want you to compete."

"I'm going to take one last shot, in Tallahassee, at getting the Metro schools to agree to play us next year. I hope to find out soon where we stand."

PGA tour settles in for Colonial

FORT WORTH, Texas (UPI) — The yagabond professional golfers make one of their favorite stops on the PGA tour beginning Thursday. At least it has been one of their favorites.

That may change once they reach the tee of the revamped 13th hole at the Colonial Country Club.

The Colonial National Invitation, featuring a select field of 102, opens Thursday along the tree-lined banks of the Trinity River.

Tour golfers have proclaimed this to be one of their most enjoyable weeks because of the access of Texas hospitality and because of the almost legendary array of attractive young ladies who try to see who can wear the least and still be admitted to the grounds.

Tom Watson, winner last week at the nearby Byron Nelson Golf Classic, will be favored although such competition as Hubert Green, Gary Player, Lee Trevino, Ben Crenshaw, Gene Littlen and Tom Weiskopf will be present.

side of a hill and has two levels — one four feet higher than the other.

"We have put a questionnaire in the packet we give to each of the entries," said tournament chairman William Spears. "We want them to tell us what they think about the 13th hole. I'm afraid their remarks may not be too constructive."

"The green, I'll admit, is awfully severe." Trevino's first encounter with the hole came last Tuesday during a practice round.

His tee shot was hit nicely enough, putting him on the lower tier where the pin was. He had about a 15-foot putt, signifying uphill.

"I don't think this green is so bad," he said as he walked toward his ball. Then he struck his putt, it rolled past the hole on the left, looped around the hole and rolled back down two feet below the cup.

"Gee," he said. "I didn't know it was that slick."

Jack Nicklaus will be missing since he is putting the final touches on his own tournament, which will be played next week at Muirfield Village.

Much of the pre-tournament talk this week concerns the 13th hole, which in the past has been a fairly routine par-3 affair. But in the past year the hole has been turned into 170 yards of all carry over water to a green that is built into the Trevino was playing in a group with New Orleans Open champion Lon Hinkle.

"Just wait," said Hinkle, "until you are down stairs and the pin is upstairs. Then see what you do."

"I'm afraid that, if you don't hit your tee shot on the correct level," said Spears, "that there is not much chance of getting it down in two."

LeCount won't fight NCAA

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — Florida Coach Doug Dickey said Wednesday senior quarterback Terry LeCount has indicated he will drop his battle for another year of college eligibility and will turn pro next season.

"Terry indicated to me on Tuesday he probably would go pro, but as far as I know no final decision has been made," Dickey told UPI. "I asked him to come back Thursday morning to meet with me again and talk over the situation."

LeCount, who sat out his freshman year because of academic difficulties, apparently had won another year of playing eligibility in January, when the NCAA changed its rules regarding the red-shirting of freshmen.

But because LeCount had already signed a contract with a professional agent at the end of the 1977 season, an NCAA eligibility committee ruled two weeks ago that he had lost his amateur status and could not play college football.

Dickey said the university will try to get a special hearing on the matter by the NCAA Council before July 1 "depending on what LeCount decides to do."

Big Sky loop mulls expansion

BOISE (UPI) — Big Sky Conference officials will look into possible expansion later this month at a meeting in Pocatello.

The officials will be meeting in Pocatello May 22-24, at which time they will look over a survey of teams which could be included in the conference, executive director Steve Belko said Wednesday.

Belko said there was nothing definite about expansion, but several schools were being considered if the league decides that they want to expand the conference to more than 8 teams.

Schools being studied as possible candidates if expansion is decided by the conference are Nevada-Reno, Portland State, North and South Dakota and Eastern Washington.

Belko said those schools have been selected for study because they have something in common with the present makeup of the Big Sky Conference.

"However, we don't know whether we will expand," he said. "If we do, those teams will be considered."

Fitzsimmons selected to coach K.C. Kings

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Cotton Fitzsimmons has been a head coach in the National Basketball Association for seven years but has not had a winner in his last four tries.

But the 47-year-old Missouri native feels he can still win in his league and so he has accepted the job as head coach of the Kansas City Kings on Wednesday.

Fitzsimmons inherited a stumbling Kansas City team that went through two coaches en route to a 31-31 record last year and missed the playoffs each of the last three seasons.

"I'm tired of losing," Fitzsimmons said. "I just want the opportunity to win. The opportunities for Cotton Fitzsimmons were just better in Kansas City than anywhere else I could be."

Fitzsimmons began his coaching career at Moberly Junior College and guided the Missouri school to a 23-35 record in nine seasons. He went from there to Kansas State for two years and won the Big Eight title with a 20-8 record in his second season. Fitzsimmons then coached the Phoenix Suns for two years, posting 48-34 and 49-33 records. He took over at Atlanta in 1972-73 and guided the Hawks to a 46-36 record but has not had a winner since.

Fitzsimmons was 35-47, 31-51 and 28-46 in his next three years with the Hawks and finished a dismal 27-55 last season in his one-year stint as head coach of the Buffalo Braves.

"You just have to be in the right situation," Fitzsimmons said. "There's no doubt in my mind that we'd have won in Atlanta if we had signed David Thompson and Marvin Webster. Thompson's team (Denver) is a winner now and so is Webster's (Seattle). I was involved in drafting them but we just didn't sign them."

"The attitudes of people and the chemistry is what it takes. Seattle is an excellent example. Lenny Wilkens look over a losing team and told the players, 'This is kind of fun... we can win.' The players looked around and saw he was right. They aren't the greatest shooting team in the world; they're not even good from the free throw line. But they play good, tough defense and pound the boards. They are sound in the basics and that can take you a long way."

The Kings fired Phil Johnson Jan. 8 after Kansas City had lost 24 of 37 games. Assistant General Manager Larry Slaverman was named as an interim replacement and guided the club to an 18-27 finish.

"Fitzsimmons becomes Kansas City's third coach in the last eight months and has been armed with a two-year contract."

"A two-year contract is nothing," said Fitzsimmons. "A one-year contract is nothing. A one-day contract is nothing. You have to win. Contracts do not concern me — winning does."

"All this team needs is a little confidence. I like the personnel and I like the attitude. We've got a good draft position (second overall pick). This team does not need to rebuild. One or two changes and this team can win immediately. This team can be a winner and will be a winner next year."

Johnson unfazed by rookie oversight

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Marquies Johnson, the Milwaukee Bucks stellar rookie forward, has come in second to Walter Davis for most post-season rookie of the year honors, but the former UCLA star is still wearing a contented smile.

"I'm just thankful it was such a successful season and I'm extremely optimistic about the future," Johnson said Wednesday, a week to the day after the Bucks were knocked out of the NBA playoffs by Denver.

He said he didn't begrudge post-season honors to Davis because "he won the awards and everything and he deserved it. I'm just gratified I got a chance to go into the playoffs and gain a little respect for myself."

Johnson said when the season started "there was a lot of negative feeling" about the Bucks because they were so young.

"People felt we wouldn't go anywhere for a couple of years," he said, "but we proved them wrong."

The team jelled, he said, because the players weren't prima donnas.

"That was the main reason, we played together. That's the best way to play, unselfishly. It starts a chain reaction."

"There's extreme optimism for the future. We have a group of guys that get along good on and off the court... we're going to be around for a long time."

In two games against Phoenix in the qualifying round of the playoffs he dominated Davis, and a lot of people who saw the two games would have gladly handed him any rookie awards available.

The Bucks season was longer than expected as they made the playoffs, knocking out Phoenix and then forcing Denver over seven games before losing in the Western Conference semifinals.

It was an outstanding year for a club that had been abysmally bad the season before, and Johnson was a major force.

"I felt if given the playing time I would be able to contribute as much as I did," Johnson said. "And I felt if I could contribute that much we would do much better than we were predicted to."

He averaged nearly 20 points and 11 rebounds a game in his rookie year. He is a Julius Erving-type of soaring slamdunker and also can take control of the backboard.

Russians drop team Canada

PRAGUE (UPI) — Vladislav Tretjak turned in a superb performance in goal Wednesday to lead the Soviet Union to a 5-1 victory over Team Canada in the opener of the title round of the World Ice Hockey Championships.

Tretjak thwarted every opportunity of the hard-checking Canadians until midway through the final period when Tom Lysiak scored the Canadians' only goal.

Left wing Sergey Kapustin put the Soviets ahead 1-0 at 5:54 of the first period when he skated past Rick Hampton and Bob Picard, who got entangled, and beat goalie Dan Bouchard.

Two minutes later Bouchard made a difficult save, but Lysiak skated into the goalie, allowing Zhitkov to score the Soviet's second goal.

The Soviets increased their lead to 4-0 before scored his third-period goal on a pass from Don Lever on a power play.

Alexander Malisev made it 5-1 after he sneaked behind the Canadian defense, picked up a pass from Valeri Vozniat at the red line and skated in alone.

The game was marred by several fights, including a slashing incident between Hampton and Sergey Kapustin. While the Russian drew a minor Hampton was sent off for five minutes, setting off a loud protest by a pro-Canadian crowd against referee Raimo Sepponen of Finland.

The Soviets outshot the Canadians 37-17.

Those who ought to know contend that the new dollar coin will have a woman's face on it. Question is, Which woman's face? Do you have a candidate? In the running are Betty Ross, Eleanor Ketter, Florence Nightingale, Nellie Tayloe Ross, Eleanor Roosevelt, Susan B. Anthony and the Statue of Liberty.

Remember that old radio show called "Information, Please"? Listeners were asked to send in questions. The one question most frequently asked to be answered was: "What two presidents of the U.S. died on July 4th?"

A. Figure a possible 972,800,000 in North America. Bell now uses 132 of the possible 132 area code numbers. There are about 640 three-digit prefixes, and 10,000 four-digit suffix combinations. Phone company spokesmen contend it's highly unlikely that all 972,800,000 numbers ever will be assigned at one time.

Until the Ninth Century, the traditional Christian attitude of prayer called for the arms to be outstretched and the eyes cast upwards. Then something happened, what I don't know. But thereafter the traditional Christian attitude of prayer called for the hands to be clasped and the eyes cast downward. What caused this change?

LONGEST HOLE-IN-ONE

A 444-yard hole-in-one! Imagine that. A man named Robert Mitera, age 21 at the time, hit such on Oct. 7, 1965. The hole was wind-blown through a hole about 40 yards off the ball over a 290-yard drop-off, and golfers ahead testified that the ball continued on for another 154 yards, sinking perfectly. The hole, which is in Omaha, Neb., where this happened, appropriately, is called Mitera Hill.

Hagerman recollections

The Justice family history is intertwined with Hagerman's, the grade into the Hagerman Valley bears the family name

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

HAGERMAN - The Hagerman Methodist Church was organized in the home of Ethel Jones' parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. William Justice.

In the early 1900s there was only a Baptist church here, and although the roads were often terribly muddy, "we always went to church just the same."

But since the Justices were Methodist they wanted a church of their own denomination. As Mrs. Jones recalls, in about 1909 her father contacted the Methodist district superintendent in Shoshone, inviting him to organize a local congregation here.

The meeting was set up at the Justice home preceded by a picnic on the lawn. People came with teams and buggies, and Mrs. Jones' mother played the family's small pump organ. He never played for any other public event, so that incident has stuck in her memory, even though she says her sister "can't remember a thing about it."

Mrs. Jones' mother, Willis Justice, was the first Sunday school superintendent and also served as president of the Ladies Aid.

Much of Hagerman's history is intertwined with that of her parents. The Justice Grade into the valley is named for them.

Her father came here in 1874, from Nebraska City, Neb., attracted by the placer mining. In 1883 he purchased a ranch once owned by John Bill and served as the land from Billingsley Creek to the Malad River on the east side of the present highway.

Meanwhile her mother came to Idaho in 1870 from Bentonville, Ark., arriving in Shoshone with her family via railroad freight wagons.

Mrs. Jones said the railroad cars were called freight wagons because they were loaded with the miners' total savings. Her mother attended school in Toponah, (now Gooding) and Bellevue, later learning telegraphy at the train depot at Bliss where there was a lady agent.

The Justices were married in 1893 in Caldwell by Dr. Boone, the first president of the College of Idaho.

A native of Hagerman where she was born May 22, 1894, Mrs. Jones' early schooling was in the old District No. 7 School at the foot of Justice Grade on Billingsley Creek, where she went until the sixth grade.

"We all drank from the same dipper," she recalls in 7 years in the one-room school.

Later she rode on a school "bus" driven by two mules. She was one of four graduates from Hagerman High School in 1916. One of her classmates, Mamie Durfee who married another classmate, Fred Glauner, is still living. Hilda

Cook, the fourth graduate, and Glauner have died.

Mrs. Jones taught for four years after attending the old Normal School at Albion. She taught at a country school out of Bliss, then in Hagerman and also seventh and eighth grades in the present Bliss School.

In 1922 she went back to Albion for her life teaching diploma. That same year she married John W. Jones Sr., who died in 1973.

He was a shepman, coming here when he was 16. She often accompanied him on his treks taking his flocks to summer pasture in the Sawtooth Mountain area.

She has lived in the same house in Hagerman since the fall of 1922, but unlike some "oldtimers," Mrs. Jones welcomes newcomers to the community. Long active in church and civic affairs, she belonged to the Hagerman Civic Club until its demise and was church pianist for many years, playing for weddings and funerals and also for events at the American Legion Hall.

Her musical interests began as a child when a brother, Earl Justice, would play violin while she accompanied him on the piano.

She says people often ask "What we did for recreation in those days?" long before television, movies and even automobiles. One common pastime was having several families gather on a lawn at one of their homes for a Sunday picnic. Before the era of constant bombardment of radio and TV and so many other places to go, people genuinely appreciated getting together for sociability, she said.

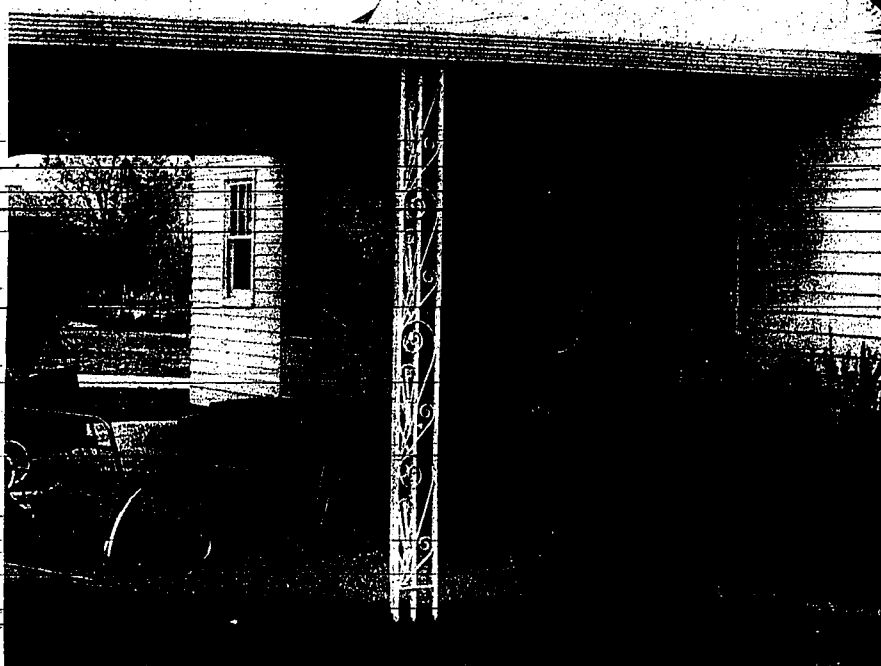

One of the most pleasant memories was when the Chataqua would come to Gooding. Her father would load the family into a big wagon covered with canvas over a bowed framework to protect the passengers from the sun on the long trek up the canyon and across the desert to Gooding. They would take food along for two meals as there were no road restaurants.

The Chataqua, a nationwide program of traveling culture before the advent of motion pictures, would set up in a large circus tent, complete with folding chairs for the audience. Mrs. Jones particularly remembers seeing the opera "Il Traviatore."

Lights would be hung on the back and front of the wagon for the long journey home so the vehicle wouldn't collide with another wagon in the black of the night. She recalls that people would come "from far and near" camping along the Little Wood River for the event.

Mrs. Jones has two children, John W. "Bill" Jones Jr. and Florence Sandy, both of whom live in Hagerman valley, and seven grandchildren.

A brother, Arthur Justice, lives in Glenside Ferry. Her sisters are Florence Sharp of Pacific Grove, Calif., and Marjorie Thomas, Albany, Ore.

ETHEL JONES STANDS THE PATIO IN HER HAGERMAN HOME OF THE PAST 56 YEARS her family history is intertwined with that of the town

Four needs must be met to draw Social Security disability

Heartline is a service for senior citizens. Its purpose is to answer questions and solve problems as fast as you have a question or a problem not covered by Social Security, write Heartline, 114 East Dayton Street, West Alexandria, Ohio 43081.

You will receive a prompt reply, but you must include a stamped self-addressed envelope. The most useful replies will be printed in this column.

HEARTLINE: I am 83 years old. I have been working my whole life in private industry so I am covered by Social Security. I had an accident recently and my doctor says that I cannot work again. He told me to apply for Social Security disability. Can you tell me what the requirements are? - T.J.

There are four basic requirements which must be met to be eligible to draw Social Security disability: 1 - You must be "fully insured" under Social Security. In other words, you must have worked enough under Social Security to be eligible for a Social Security retirement benefit.

2 - You must have at least 20 quarters of covered earnings under Social Security in 40 consecutive calendar quarters ending the quarter in which your disability began. In other words, you must have worked five years out of the 10-year period immediately preceding your disability.

3 - You must have supporting medical evidence showing that your disability will prevent you from doing any substantial, gainful work.

4 - Your disability must be expected to last (or has lasted) for at least one full year or expected to result in death.

For people who are on Social Security or for those who are going to be drawing their benefits, Heartline has written a book especially for them, Heartline's Guide to Social Security has been developed to aid all people understand what benefits they might be eligible to receive. This book covers regular retirement, disability, wife's benefits, widow's benefits, allowed earnings and many other important facts on Social Security. This book also goes into detail on some of the medical areas of Social Security. You may obtain this book by sending $2 to Heartline's Guide to Social Security, P.O. Box 11934, Chicago, Ill. 60611. This book is completely guaranteed and if you are not satisfied your money will be refunded. Please allow six weeks for delivery.

HEARTLINE: I have heard that there is a new law in Congress concerning part-time jobs for senior citizens. Do you have any information on this? - N.C.

seeking a gradual transition into retirement" are specifically recognized as one of the four categories of persons the legislation is intended to reach.

Currently, permanent part-time opportunities are few and limited mostly to low-level jobs. Those are people whose productive potential is wasted because they cannot meet the requirements of a standard work week. The bill requires agencies to establish part-time hiring programs. It also requires the Civil Service Commission to provide technical assistance to the agencies and report annually to Congress the progress of the part-time hiring program.

This bill is currently pending action by the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee.

HEARTLINE: I am 39 years old and I have three children (ages 9, 12, 10). My husband passed away last month. He was in a management position with a large company and made very good money. Since he worked in private industry, he was covered by Social Security. Can I now receive Social Security benefits? - J.R.

Yes, you and your children are now eligible for survivor's benefits from Social Security. Your children can all receive benefits until they are 18 or until they are 22 if they continue as full time students. The portion of the benefit for you would end when your youngest child turns 18 years old. You should apply for this immediately at your local Social Security office.

HEARTLINE: My mother is 83 years old. She lives with my wife and I because she cannot take care of herself at all. We have recently purchased a bath lift for her to help her get in and out of the tub. Will this be covered under Medicare? - A.S.

A bath lift is not covered service to the medical portion of Medicare. This would be considered a piece of durable medical equipment.

Under the law, payment may be made under the medical insurance part of the Medicare program for rental or purchase of durable medical equipment used in a patient's home. For purposes of this part of the program, durable medical equipment has been defined as equipment which can withstand repeated use, is primarily and customarily used to serve a medical purpose, and generally is not useful to a person in the absence of illness or injury.

Although a bath lift for use in a beneficiary's home may be useful in assisting a person to enter and exit a tub, it is primarily a convenience item of equipment. Accordingly, this equipment does not satisfy that part of the definition of durable medical equipment which requires that such items should primarily and customarily serve a therapeutic purpose.

For people who are now on the Medicare program and will soon be turning 65 and going on Medicare, Heartline now has available their brand new 1978 version of "Heartline's Guide to Medicare."

book is still written in easy to understand question and answer form, but the 1978 issue has much more information. Included in the new issue are the new deductibles for part A medical insurance, more items and conditions that Medicare covers, a more concise explanation of reasonable charges, and detailed instructions on how to fill out your Medicare claim form.

You can receive the 1978 edition by sending $1.75 to Heartline's Guide to Medicare, 114 E. Dayton St., West Alexandria, Ohio 43081. This book is completely guaranteed and if you are not satisfied your money will be cheerfully refunded. Please allow six weeks for delivery.

HEARTLINE: My wife and I are over 65. We are planning to travel to Europe this summer. We know that Medicare will not cover any medical attention

(b) Age 60 with 20 years of service; (c) Age 55 with 30 years of service.

Both age and service requirements must be met at time of separation to be eligible for an optional retirement. For instance, an employee who separates at age 58 with 31 years of service will not be eligible for annuity at age 55 but will have to wait until age 62 when he or she may be eligible for a deferred annuity.

HEARTLINE: I have been wearing glasses all my life, but lately I have lot of trouble reading books or newspapers. It seems to cause a lot of strain on my eyes. I have always worn glasses. Do you have any suggestions for me? - B.F.

HEARTLINE: I am a veteran, drawing VA pension. I have no dependents. I will be entering a VA hospital soon for 90-day period. Will I continue to receive my full pension during my period of hospitalization? - B.D.

No, the pension of a hospitalized veteran without a spouse or child is reduced to an amount not in excess of $50 a month after two full calendar months of hospital care.

HEARTLINE: I am going to be 65 years old in May of this year. At that time I am going to start drawing my Social Security benefits. My next door neighbor retired last year and he received a large check when he started to draw. I was wondering how I can go about doing this. Can you help me? C.S.

A. When your neighbor retired, he must have taken retroactive Social Security benefits for the 12 months prior to his retirement. Since the passage of the new Social Security bill on Dec. 15, 1977, this is no longer possible in most cases.

Under the old law, a person was permitted to elect to receive benefits for up to 12 months prior to the month in which they filed an application. If such months were prior to age 65, benefits were actually reduced. The new bill will eliminate retroactive benefits where permanently reduced benefits would occur. It does not apply to cases where the benefits are disability-related or where unretired dependents' benefits are involved. This became effective with all applications filed on or after Jan. 1, 1978.

For people who are on Social Security or for those who are going to be drawing their benefits, Heartline has written a book especially for them, "Heartline's Guide to Social Security" has been developed to aid all people to understand what benefits they might be eligible to receive. This book covers regular retirement, disability, wife's benefits, widow's benefits, allowed earnings and many other important facts on Social Security. This book also goes into detail on some of the medical areas of Social Security. You may obtain this book by sending $2 to Heartline's Guide to Social Security, P.O. Box 11934, Chicago, Ill. 60611. ## HEARTLINE we receive there, but we wonder if you could give us any information on doctor's care in foreign countries. - C.M.

One of the main problems when traveling abroad is the need for medical care. If it should occur, even though Medicare will not pay medical bills while traveling abroad, it does add a measure of confidence if you know a doctor who speaks English. If you will write to the International Association for Medical Assistance to Travelers, Empire State Bldg., 350 Fifth Ave., Suite 5620, New York, N.Y. 10001, they will send you a booklet with names of doctors in foreign countries who do speak English. They also enclose other pertinent information concerning foreign travel.

HEARTLINE: I am a veteran with a 60 percent service-connected disability. I have a severely handicapped child who will be 20 years of age Oct. 1, 1978. What should I do to continue to receive an additional allowance for this child? - A.M.

Send a medical statement to your nearest VA office, between July and October, 1978, which describes the type of disability, giving the facts, symptoms, and diagnosis.

HEARTLINE: I am a Civil Service employee. Can you tell me under what conditions an employee may take optional retirement? - P.S.

An employee is eligible for optional retirement on meeting one of the following minimum combinations of age and service: (a) Age 62 with 5 years of service; declines as we age, and our reading glasses, particularly, need to be adjusted to this trend.

If your glasses are bifocals or trifocals, adjustment may be required in only one part of the lens. Therefore, you could find it less expensive and more convenient to get a special pair of glasses for a special purpose, such as reading.

It's easier to put on a pair of glasses in which the entire lens area is focused for reading distance. Then you can hold the book or newspaper above eye level, wherever that's more comfortable. Further, you can keep this special pair of glasses by your armchair or bed or wherever you do your "most intensive reading."

In any event, when you consult your optometrist, as the American Optometric Assn. suggests you do every year or so, it pays to tell him what you enjoy doing and what your work requires you to do so he can prescribe your lenses accordingly.

Due to chemical changes within the eye, older people need more light to see effectively. The average 60-year-old, says the AOA, requires seven times as much light as the average 20-year-old.

Older people should increase the amount of light used for reading, sewing, and card playing. If you're using "100-watt" bulbs in your lamps, you might try increasing them to 150 watts.

Increase the wattage of hall and stairway lighting, too, so that you aren't as likely to trip or stumble. Keep a small flashlight handy to guide you through the hazards at night and, if feasible, apply

Religion finds way into porn district

PITTSBURGH (UPI)—The Storehouse of Love, opening next week in the heart of the city's downtown pornography district, plans to offer blue movie patrons a look at a different form of affection.

The Storehouse will open Monday in a run-down storefront along bustling Liberty Avenue, surrounded by fast food restaurants, flashy art movie houses, massage parlors, and late-night street prostitution.

But the Storehouse plans to offer religious guidance in place of the popular 25 cent peep shows, and the only books and magazines on sale will carry a firm Christian message.

"The Lord spoke to me and laid it on my heart," said James Deglau, one of the founders of the Storehouse. "This is something that has to be done."

The location, Deglau said, was intentionally chosen after numerous weekend excursions during which he found the Liberty Avenue patrons highly receptive to his religious message and pamphlets.

A simple South might just have bid six hearts directly after North bid three, but South had some idea of getting to seven.

A simple South might well have gone down one at six. He would simply discard his ace of diamonds on the second club finesse and a 3-2 club break.

This South worked out a complicated play to make the contract against any 3-2 club break.

A Wisconsin reader wants to know if we open with one heart or one spade? The correct opening bid is one heart. You want to play in hearts if your partner holds the same length in each major suit.

Little Theater plans party

TWIN FALLS—When Magic Valley Little Theater gives a performance, a "night at the theater" is not a night viewing a play, but an evening of entertainment, including dinner, cocktails and nostalgia.

Tickets will go on sale May 15 for the organization's fifth annual Spring Celebration at the Blue Lakes Inn.

Attendants will arrive at 6 p.m. for a no-host cocktail hour and a leisurely dinner will be served at 7 p.m., with show time at 8:15 p.m.

Magic Valley Little Theater, in existence since 1968, was the organization to introduce dinner theater to Magic Valley with their first musical review, Celebration '74. The group has performed plays like Prisoner of Second Avenue, Come Blow Your Horn, The Odd Couple and

Mousetrap. They have also performed for service clubs and organizations throughout Magic Valley. The actors and actresses are making plans in the future to do live radio plays by reviving some of the nostalgic radio theater classics.

R.L. "Nick" Nicholson will direct the musical review, Celebration '78. Nicholson has a bachelors degree in theater arts from Idaho State University and is a candidate for an MA in speech and drama. Assistant director is Marilyn Hankins, and Dianne Van Engen is choreographer.

Tickets will be $9 per person which includes dinner and the show. For more information on attending or joining Magic Valley Little Theater call 733-6139.

Lovely-dovey with each other's mates

DEAR ABBY: It all started eight months ago when Ron and I started running around with Lynn and Dave. Dave and I would sit in the front and Lynn and Ron would sit in back. It was all in fun. We'd hold hands and hug and kiss once in a while. I sort of liked it at first, then I noticed Ron was overdoing it with Lynn.

I said I thought the whole idea was silly and suggested we get back with our own mates, but Ron and Lynn didn't want to quit. What do I do now? I am sure Lynn and Ron haven't gone any further than hugging and kissing, but I'm worried about where it might lead. I love my husband and I know he loves me. There are 5 preschool children between the two families. What should I do?

RON'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: I don't have to tell you how foolish you were to have started this dangerous game—now the fat is in the fire. Tell Ron that if you are going to continue the friendship with Lynn and Dave, there will be no more switches. Then gradually see less and less of them, and more of other couples who are content to stick with the mates they married.

DEAR ABBY: Golf is a great sport, but why do so many people who play the game cheat?

I have had the same sad experience with both men and women. They lie through their teeth about their scores.

HONEST-GOLFER

DEAR HONEST: People lie about their golf scores for the same reason they lie about anything else. They lack the self-confidence and security to tell the truth. And since golf is a game involving an exclusive and confidential relationship between the player and the ball, the cheating player can usually get away with it.

DEAR ABBY: Please answer this soon as Mom and Dad are planning a trip and we kids will be alone.

We are both young adults. My parents have asked our married brother to "look in on us" while they're out of town. Does that give my brother the right to barge in whenever he feels like it without giving us any warning? Do you think he should have a key to our house just like his did when he lived here? Doesn't the fact that he is now married with a house of his own make him somewhat of an outsider here?

This is causing a terrible fight. We would like your opinion. We are two girls, 18 and 19.

US KIDS IN NEW CANAAN

DEAR KIDS: What "rights" your brother has, can (and should) be clearly defined by your parents. And to avoid any misunderstanding, your parents should tell you in your brother's presence exactly what "looking in on" entails.

CONFIDENTIAL TO BLEW MY TOP IN HORNELL, N.Y.: You blew more than your top. You blew your chances. The test of a man's breeding is how he behaves in a quarrel.

Oscar special May 23

c.1978 N.Y. Times Service
NEW YORK — Oscars are awarded once a year, but there may have been some reason that you've missed during the half-century of their presentation. In that case, there is: always...TV's Oscar special on May 23.

The one-hour show, produced by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, is called "Oscar's Best Actors." It will pay tribute to the 50 winners in that category. No one could say positively, but a spokesman said it seemed likely that there would be a similar show dedicated to the best actresses.

The hosts will be William Holden, Gene Kelly, Marsha Mason and John Wayne. Wayne's segment was made before his recent illness. There will be some, but not many, excerpted reruns of past acceptance speeches and words from winners who will speak about what the award did for them.

Memorable segments will also be screened. There will be a replay of the touching acceptance speech of an award to Gary Cooper in 1961, when James Stewart choked up and gave the cue that Cooper was incurably ill.

The show is the fourth made for ABC, showing by the academy, outside of the annual awards ceremony. Under an agreement between ABC and the academy made three years ago, and running through March 1982, the academy is to make one such program a year. The other three dealt with "Oscar's Best Music," with Jack Lemmon; "Oscar's Best Movies" and films made during World War II.

There are several new ideas being prepared for next season on "ABC After School Special," a much-acclaimed show for youngsters that is shown on some Wednesdays from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m.

The program concerns itself with real-life issues that young people often have to face. It has received praise from organizations that want to uplift children's programming and it has also picked up Emmy awards along the way.

your health

Dear Dr. Lamb:
I need your help and advice. Can a woman's health be affected by suppressing her sexual feelings and emotional desires? Because that is just what I have been doing and I am broken out all over my face, scalp and other areas. I also feel so nervous and depressed that I cry over the least little thing.

My husband and I have been married for four years. This is the second marriage for each of us. I am 28 and he is 31. He says he loves me but sex is nothing. He said he's getting too old for sex. Yet, he told me about all his sexual conquests before he married his ex-wife and all about his sexual relations with her.

When we do have sex it is just a two-minute bout and not a love affair which makes me feel left cold and stranded. I approach him 75 percent of the time or nothing would take place even the once or twice a week that we do have sex. Even then when I do approach him he'll say he has a headache or a backache or something, like he's too tired.

I saw a doctor six months ago. He said I was normal. His advice was to get a lover, take care of myself or get a divorce. I don't like any of those solutions. What is your opinion?

Dear Reader,
If the story is as you have represented it, your husband has not seriously considered your needs. It is necessary in any deep lasting relationship between two people that each consider the other person's needs as well as his or her own needs.

It is not normal for a 43-year-old healthy male to have no interest or very little interest in sex. The level of desire and frequency may vary greatly but the feeling is there. Your husband's lack of interest may be caused by a fear of impotence which is a symptom in itself. I am sending you the Health Letter number 5-12. Impotence, to give you more information on this. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

None of the solutions you mentioned will solve his basic problem either. If you really love him you would want him to remain whatever the difficulty is and enjoy a full normal life. To do that he will need some professional guidance. He could be depressed. Depressions often appear as a loss of interest in sex. He could have a medical problem or he may have some psychological difficulties. Then the basic relationship between the two of you may not be good in other areas.

How do you find out what causes such a problem and how do you resolve it? I think both of you could profit from seeing a marriage counselor. All the while you see the Health Letter you need to see a psychiatrist and obtain both a good medical evaluation and a review of problem areas in his emotional life that might be the underlying cause. Such a move could save your marriage and have a chance of providing some happiness for you both.

Yes, emotional tension of any kind can affect a person's health and even cause the skin to break out. Certainly unresolved sexual conflict is a potent source of emotional tension. Simple physical or mental strain can also affect the skin. Sex in such a situation is simply part of the whole emotional picture. Your strong desire for it is probably increased because it becomes a symbol of the love you want and need. This is often more important than the physical act alone.

Irving Berlin observs his 90th birthday today

NEW YORK (UPI) — There was no business like show business until Irving Berlin made it his business. Berlin, who is observing his 90th birthday today, will agree it has been a good business. Since that day seven decades ago when Berlin sat down at a piano and picked out a tune which he called "Marie from Sunny Italy," he has written more than 3,000 songs. That output netted him enough millions to make him one of the richest men in America.

Several generations remember Berlin for his songs, from the vanishing veterans of World War I whom he serenaded with "Oh How I Hate to Get Up in the Morning" to the survivors of an even greater war who whistled tunes from "This is the Army."

In between there were the great Berlin standards which cheered Americans in good times and bad — among them "Always," "Blue Skies," "A Pretty Girl Is Like a Melody" and "Marie."

One of Berlin's greatest songs was originally a flop. He titled it, "Smile and Show Your Dimple." That was the opening line and decades later it was almost forgotten when Berlin, using the same melody, changed the beginning words to: "In Your Easter Bonnet," and there was "Easter Parade."

Eddie Cantor, the beloved singer-comedian who "plugged" many of Berlin's songs, wrote an open letter in "Joe Stalin" during the early days of the postwar cold war in which he extolled the greatness of America. Of Irving Berlin, he noted that here was a Jew who wrote songs about Christmas and Easter.

"White Christmas," popularized by Bing Crosby, became Berlin's most successful single work, selling more than 110 million records, according to industry sources.

Farther more than any other composer, Berlin changed the musical scene by planting the seeds of the popular song.

There had been successful song writers before Berlin — Stephen Foster and Victor Herbert to mention two. But it was not until Berlin composed "Alexander's Ragtime Band" that song writing moved into a new sphere.

That was in 1911. "Alexander's Ragtime Band" was not ragtime music, but more like a march.

During World War I, Sgt.

commercial radio, popularized "God Bless America" in the years just before World War II and the song was so melodic and easy to sing that it became a second national anthem.

Berlin arrived on Broadway in 1931 with "Face the Music" and followed this success with "As Thousands Cheer," "Louisiana Purchase," "Annie Get Your Gun," "Call Me Madam" and "Mr. President."

Berlin wrote "Annie Get Your Gun" for Ethel Merman and she found numbers from that musical — "Doin' What Comes Naturally," "I Got That Falling in Love Is Wonderful" and "There Is No Business Like Show Business" eminently suited to her style of song writing.

President Truman directed that the Medal of Merit be awarded to Berlin in 1945. Berlin, an admirer of Truman, put an actor impersonating him in the final scene of "Call Me Madam."

an Ethel Merman musical based on the party-giving "hostess-with-the-mostest" Perle Mesta.

Members of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, better known as ASCAP, planned to join Berlin at his New York office and wish him a happy birthday in a simple celebration. Berlin is active and maintains his Manhattan office at 150 West 57th St. daily.

As he entered his 91st year on this memorable May 11, messages from well-wishers around the world hailed the occasion. One of them seemed to speak for all:

"I'm trying Berlin. "It is a pleasure for me to send my warmest congratulations to you upon the occasion of your 90th birthday.

"I hope this special day of music has given others for so many years return to you in full measure on this day. God bless Irving Berlin!"

It was signed: "Jimmy Carter."

Audience applauds fur show

c.1978 N.Y. Times Service NEW YORK — Revillon led off this year's fur showings with a smash hit that had the audience at the Pierre Hotel on its feet and cheering the other half.

The company set the mood with its opening number: a trio of ankle-length coats of snowy lamb, one for a man. The lamb is Icelandic and looks like Mongolian lamb with its hair straightened, therefore looking longer.

After this dramatic beginning came Revillon's first collection for youngsters. A parade of kindergartners filed out wrapped in baby-bunting coats of white rabbit or dappled squirrel, followed by teen-agers wearing enormous fringed ponchos and parkas of pieced furs.

Revillon, celebrating its 100th anniversary in New York (its 255th in Europe), displayed a collection of the biggest and snappiest furs in its history, designed by Jean-Paul Avizon in Paris. If it had classic ranch mink coats it had left them back in the Saks Fifth Avenue vaults.

Hugeness was the general theme. There were long-haired furs a customer might have envied in coats as big as blankets, or longish jackets piled with hoods the size of pillow cases or wrapped in scarves made of fur tails. There were clouds of foxes, from palest platinum through red and the silverest of silver, fox, lynx, raccoon, coyote, some of them clipped to resemble leathers. Flusher, the sable look-alike that is so popular, it's getting scarce, and sable, the golden variety that's sportier than the dark kind, were present, too.
