

Peace push may follow jet sale

WASHINGTON Star — President Carter, a substantial congressional victory for his Middle East policy behind him, must now demonstrate that his quest for influence among Arab nations will pay off with progress toward peace.

Carter pledged to intensify U.S. peace efforts following a Senate vote Monday that endorsed, 54-44, his package of warplanes for Egypt and Saudi Arabia, as well as Israel.

(Reaction reports, p.A5)

Administration officials had to new U.S. peace initiatives to unravel following the vote, but they made clear that it was lack of progress in direct talks between Middle East belligerents that fueled the president's push for a more active middleman's role.

Carter's hard-won victory came at the expense of the so-called Israeli lobby, an effective collection of supporters of the Jewish state in and out of Congress which had never before lost such a fight.

The influence of the American Jewish community and other pro-Israel elements will continue to be felt, however, despite the loss. An unusual convergence of factors, not likely to be repeated, helped Carter shape a majority of the Senate in favor of his warplanes package.

An all-out push by business interests for the proposal, for example, helped overcome traditional Republican support for Israel and was largely accountable for the 26 GOP votes in the Senate for the package. Carter was supported by only 28 of the 61 Democrats in the chamber, who voted.

Carter also benefited from a well-conceived and well-executed plan for jumping the three sales as a Middle East "package," an unexpectedly well-run lobby effort by the Saudi Arabians themselves and the successful public relations campaign of Egyptian President Anwar el-Sadat.

Opponents, by contrast, were hurt by the impression of inflexibility Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin left with many Americans by Israel's use of U.S. weapons in its incursion into southern Lebanon, conflicting signals from Israel about its support for the package and the stress on Israel's opposition to the sale without sufficient reference to U.S. interests.

Beyond these factors, members of the Senate were clearly swayed by suggestions that Saudi Arabia's moderation on oil prices and its support of the dollar would deteriorate if its relations with the United States were dampened by refusal to sell the fighters.

Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., an important administration supporter, said such economic concerns were as "important as military policy" in determining the national interest of the United States.

Critics of the package complained that, in the words of Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., the United States was "trading integrity for energy."

The administration's once-bumming lobbying team, honed by its experience in the three-month-long Panama Canal treaty debate, may have provided the margin of victory with a quiet, early effort to persuade members of the Senate before the lines of confrontation were sharply and publicly drawn.

In the closing days of the public debate, administration officials were particularly effective in playing on congressional concerns about Communist adventurism in the region by emphasizing what they contended were the legitimate needs of Saudi Arabia to defend its vast oil fields.

The President's victory was not won without political cost, however. The administration was already in trouble with the American Jewish community over the Middle East, but the issue reached beyond Carter's personal relationship with this constituency.

Federal stalling charged

BOISE (UPI) — Attorney General Wayne L. Kidwell accused the federal government of stalling on Idaho's in-lieu land selections today and suggested the Land Board bring legal action to get land over to the state.

In a letter to Gov. John V. Evans, who serves as president of the constitutional board, Kidwell cited reports of a Coeur d'Alene environmentalists' meeting in which a BLM official said there are problems with transfer of some northern Idaho timberlands chosen by the state.

Uncle Sam owes Idaho some 27,000 acres for lands promised the state under the Admissions Act but which the federal government took for other uses. The state selected some 19,000 acres of timberland in northern and central Idaho with the backing of Interior Secretary Cecil D. Andrus, a former governor.

"Unfortunately, despite the promises of the secretary, it appears that the State of Idaho has been let astray by the Bureau of Land Management which is under the Department of Interior," Kidwell wrote Evans.

Kidwell said that at a May 4 meeting in Coeur d'Alene spokesmen for the BLM said they had inherent problems from a management standpoint because of the way the Land Board chose the lands.

"This statement is truly shocking," Kidwell said. "Quite simply, these lands were chosen by the state because of the pressure place upon us by the secretary of the Interior."

Canal enlargement proposals washed out?

By KEN HODGE Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A broken dike on the High Line Canal last Friday has lessened chances the canal will ever carry additional water to new irrigation projects.

Numerous agricultural developers have proposed widening the High Line Canal to carry more water which could then be siphoned across Salmon Falls Creek Canyon to irrigation systems which would water desert lands in western Twin Falls County.

One group, Canyon View Irrigation, Inc., has stirred controversy in recent years with its proposal to make improvements in the existing High Line Canal and Main Line Canal to handle its 300 cubic feet per second water right.

The proposal brought a landslide of opposition from farmers on the Twin Falls tract.

Stockholders in the Twin Falls Canal Company voted unanimously in 1976 not to allow the project.

Now many of the same farmers are even more convinced the project would be dangerous.

"They cite Friday's mini-disaster which flooded Rock Creek Canyon property and washed out a farmer's pasture as proof the canal can't handle extra water."

"I think we have everything to lose and nothing to gain by allowing any other canal company to enter into any part of our system," said Bob Becker, a Castelford farmer whose farm is on the end of the line.

Farming on the end of the line presents special water problems, according to Becker. He claims his problems would be compounded if Canyon View or any other group enlarged the canal to hold more water.

"To jeopardize our system, which is one of the most economical known, to outside interests is a disgrace," Becker said. "It is hard enough now to deliver water to end laterals during heavy irrigation season."

"I'm kind of curious as to how people will see this canal break in view of Canyon View's proposal," said Tugley, another Castelford farmer, said.

Canyon View is not the only group of developers with plans for irrigating desert lands to the west, Tugley added.

"People are standing in line," Tugley said. "I just wonder if people are going to put all that together and worry about what we can stand."

Working overtime, canal company crews had the broken canal repaired Sunday and the canals were filling up early today.

Although bean planting is at a critical stage and farmers must pre-irrigate their fields before planting, Tom Olmstead, president of the board of the Twin Falls Canal Company, says he received no complaints about water shortages due to the break.

"We had several people anxious," Olmstead said. "But if there were any complaints, I didn't hear them. The farmers have been real cooperative. The weather has been cool."

Pete Brown of Filer, a former bean commissioner doesn't expect the Magic Valley bean crop will be hurt by the three-day interruption in irrigation water.

"It wasn't critical," Brown said. "If it were the middle of August, it might have done some damage. At this time of the year, they can catch it right up."

A similar interruption during the drought of 1977 would have been critical, but this year rainfall and cool weather helped ease the situation.

Flood victims who own land in Rock Creek Canyon are still moping up and beginning to add up their damages.

Ken Ellis, owner of Valley Trout Farms, reports his small hatchery near the Singing Bridge suffered approximately $30,000 in damages by preliminary estimates.

Bob Davis, owner of Colonial Concrete, has made no guess yet at his dollar losses. He still has workers removing mud from his plant.

"It will be days and weeks before we can catalogue what soil we lost and floated down the stream," Davis said. "It's too soon to tell."

Several flood victims say they are considering action they can take if the Twin Falls Canal Company is not forthcoming with insurance coverage or damage compensation.

Rules drawn

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Occupational Safety and Health Administration said today it does not seek a "risk-free workplace" with new cancer control proposals, but feels workers should not face any risk that can be avoided.

Grover Wrenn, director of OSHA's health standards program, said progress has been slow and inconsistent in dealing with exposure to cancer-causing substances at work.

Help for childless couples

DETROIT (UPI) — An attorney has filed a lawsuit designed to allow couples physically unable to bear a child to pay a "surrogate mother" to have the baby for them.

Lawyer Noel Keane said the suit, filed Monday in Wayne County Circuit Court, seeks to clarify the state's adoption law that bars paying a mother to encourage her to give up her child.

Keane already is handling three cases involving "surrogate mothers" — women who agree to be artificially inseminated with a husband's sperm, bear the child and then give it up to the biological father and his wife.

"We think there are some important constitutional issues involved," said Keane, who drafted the suit with attorney Robert Harrison, a constitutional specialist.

"Our contention is that there are certain private rights of the individual that the state cannot interfere with unless they have an adequate interest," he said. "We don't think they do."

Keane, who two years ago used newspaper advertisements in seeking a surrogate mother for a couple he represented, said the suit would not lead to "baby selling" or black marketeering in adoptive children.

The intention is to circumvent the adoption law's payment section only in cases involving surrogate mothers, he said.

The ads Keane placed in 1976 offered a fee for a prospective surrogate mother. After receiving an informal opinion from a new-retired juvenile court judge, however, he was decided not to pay the woman to have the baby.

"Offering a fee would give a couple more control over the situation," the attorney said.

"From what I saw in the past when we first advertised for a fee, we got a tremendous response," Keane said. "I think it would be much better if we could at least have some selection of the girl who's going to have the child."

Production increases

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Industrial production, an important indicator of the nation's economic health, rose 1.1 percent in April to register its second consecutive strong performance, the Federal Reserve Board said today.

The hefty gain in output of the country's mines, factories and utilities lent support to President Carter's decision, announced Friday, to pare back the size of his tax reduction package to $19.4 billion and delay implementation until Jan. 1, 1979.

Carter's original $25 billion tax-cut plan was aimed at stimulating the economy and creating jobs during the second half of this year. But the improved economic outlook, supported by today's industrial production report, indicates the additional stimulus of the larger tax cut may no longer be required.

April's 1.1 percent gain followed a revised 1.3 percent advance in March, the Federal Reserve said.

Major Zaire mining city airborne assault target

KINSHASA, Zaire (UPI)—Army paratroops dropped today in an airborne assault aimed at recapturing the key mining city of Kolwezi from rebel forces holding it in the sixth day of bitter fighting in the Zaire civil war.

Diplomatic sources said both Kolwezi and the railroad center of Mutshasha to the west were in rebel hands.

The official news agency AZAP said the paratroops flew to the scene aboard C-130 Hercules transport aircraft and staged a drop designed to link them with ground units already in combat with the rebels.

AZAP said the paratroops were given the mission of recapturing the town and its important military airfield.

Earlier, diplomatic reports said the center of Kolwezi was quiet after heavy seaway street fighting.

Several foreigners were reported killed during the fierce combat, but U.S. officials said all Americans in the area were accounted for and presumed safe.

The government of President Mobutu Sese Seko had no immediate comment about the reports of the capture of the two key towns.

Monday night, the government denied either town was in the hands of the rebels, whom it describes as secessionist-minded Katanga exiles trained and partly led by Cubans.

The diplomatic said the rebels took Kolwezi in heavy street fighting but the center where many foreigners live — including about 100 Americans — was now quiet.

Officials at the U.S. Embassy said all Americans in the Kolwezi region were accounted for and assumed safe. The Americans include missionaries and engineers working for the Idaho-based Morrison Knudsen.

The government of Sese-Seko ordered a general mobilization, and diplomatic reports from Paris said France had placed its transport aircraft on alert.

France transported Moroccan troops to Zaire last year to help Mobutu's government win an 80-day war in the same region of the copper-rich province in the former Belgian Congo.

In neighboring Angola, Defense Minister Iko-Carreira formally denied any involvement by his country in the Zaire fighting.

Diplomats said several Belgians, French and an Italian were among those killed as the Katanga rebels battled the government's North Korean-trained Kamanyala Brigade.

In Brussels, a foreign ministry spokesman said the reports were true, but no information could not be released until next-of-kin had been informed.

Sese Seko has appealed for help from the West, Morocco and China — the same group that provided aid during a similar invasion 14 months ago by secessionist rebels from the former Katanga province, now called Shaba.

In Washington, a State Department spokesman said the United States was considering the evacuation of nationals with Belgium and France. Over 3,000 whites live in Kolwezi, Zaire's main copper and cobalt mining center.

Diplomatic sources in Brussels reported late Monday that the 4,000-strong rebel force had captured most of Kolwezi, the nearby airfield and the important rail center of Mutshasha, 63 miles to the west.

The multi-million-dollar transmission line project, described by Smith as "major," has been under construction for more than two years.

He said the firm has been in communication with the camp, located two kilometers outside of Kolwezi, and that the situation is being evaluated.

"Communications are sporadic and we are monitoring the situation closely," Smith said. "We have regular contact with the State Department in Washington concerning the situation."

He said the firm has no idea when evacuation may occur. "I can't answer that at this time."

In Brussels, Zairean Ambassador Inonga Lokongo L'Orne said: "Heavy fighting is still going on in Kolwezi. The Zairean government forces are using heavy arms and the situation is developing in favor of the rebel army."

The ambassador again charged Cuban soldiers had been seen among the attackers. "It has been possible to identify at the frontier a concentration of Spanish-speaking elements. At that place those can only be Cubans," he said.

Construction crews, kin in battle area

BOISE (UPI) — The Northwest's largest construction company said Monday some 100 of its employees and their dependents are in an area of Zaire occupied by rebels late last week.

Morrison-Knudsen Co. said the Americans, who are working on a multi-million-dollar transmission line project, may have to be evacuated following the Russian-backed invasion of Shaba.

The country's official news agency reported Sunday that Cuban-led Zairean rebels have invaded southern Zaire for the second time in a year.

Some 4,000 rebels, backed by Libya, Algeria, Cuba, and Russia, moved against Kolwezi, 800 miles southeast of Kinshasa, late last week.

Bob Smith, a spokesman for M-K, said the employees are working on the southern terminus of a 1,700 kilometer transmission line in Kolwezi and no one has been injured. The site of a large converter station where power from the line will terminate.

"We're investigating the possibility of terminating but we don't know if it's feasible now," Smith said. "We have a camp there and everyone is accounted for at this time."

Smith said none of the firm's officers are at the project site and that it is uncertain if the men are in any immediate danger.

Rain, snow sweep West

By United Press International
Rain and some snow swept into sections of the West and rain-clashed large parts of the East today.

A strong Pacific cold front with heavy winds brought rain and some snow to California and east to the Rockies.

Travelers advisories for strong winds with blowing dust and sand were issued over the mountains and deserts of Southern California and most of southern Nevada. A high-wind warning was posted for extreme east-central California with gusts to 50 mph reported at Bishop.

A wide band of showers followed the cold front as it moved through the northern intermountain region. The rain stretched from northern Utah through western Montana. Snow, fall-at-some higher elevations. Scattered showers also occurred in northern Nevada and northeastern California.

Rain, drizzle and fog dampened the Northeast from the middle and northern Atlantic Coast through the Tennessee and Ohio valleys.

Scattered thunderstorms occurred over the eastern Gulf Coast region. A few showers also were spotted in west Texas.

Skies were mostly fair across the western Gulf Coast states, the Plains and the Mississippi Valley.

Fifteen cities, mostly in Texas and the central Rocky Mountain region, set record high temperatures for the calendar week.

Presidio, Tex., reported the highest reading, 106.

Temperatures in the 90s across the lower elevations of Colorado and 70s as high as 10,000 feet caused snow to melt dangerously fast.

The U.S. Forest Service issued an avalanche warning for all Colorado mountains, saying the warm temperatures would create snow slide conditions. The service said several small snow slides were reported along the Front Range, the Elk Mountains and the San Juan Mountains during the weekend.

Fire in Tennessee hotel kills 11, injures score

JELICO, Tenn. (UPI) — Flames raged through an old three-story residential hotel before dawn today, killing at least 11 people and sending about 20 other mostly elderly residents fleeing through smoke-filled hallways.

The blaze, which broke out about 2:10 a.m., gutted the Jenkins Hotel, occupied mainly by low-income elderly who rented rooms by the week or the month. The hotel had been cited for eight safety violations in a state inspection March 3.

Police Chief Charles Bruce said 11 persons were known dead although only "six or seven" bodies had been found.

Many of the some 30 residents escaped down a back fire escape and one young man broke both legs when he leaped from a third-story window onto the pavement below.

"There could be as many as 15 (dead)," Bruce said. "I don't know for sure until we go through that rubble. It's awfully hot in there right now. I hope that's all we'll find."

Bruce said of the victims, "There's very little of them left. It's not pretty."

A spokesman at Jellico Community Hospital said 11 injured residents were admitted. One, identified as Marty Burchett, was in critical condition after leaping through a window. Five others were admitted for treatment of smoke inhalation, and five others were treated and released.

One of the occupants, Charlie Foster, 55, said he was in bed asleep. "Someone yelled 'Fire fire!' I hit the floor. I got to the fire escape door by keeping next to the floor."

"It happened so quick, I was lucky to get out of there alive."

Another occupant, Joe Dunaway, 31, said he was lying on his bed reading a magazine when he heard someone yell. "I opened the door and saw all the smoke," Dunaway said. "I bolted to get everyone out."

"I heard people crying," he said. "One boy jumped. I seen him in the window."

Dunaway said he fled down the fire escape after ringing the night buzzer to attract attention in the lobby.

The hotel, built near the turn of the century, was one of the tallest buildings in this East Tennessee mountain town on the Kentucky border.

"It wasn't in the best of shape, that's for sure," said Fire Chief W.C. Deuel. "There were some fire extinguishers in the building, but there sure weren't enough. There's never been anything like this in Jellico."

Ed Puckett, assistant director of the state Division of Motel and Restaurant Inspection, said the hotel was given 30 days following the March 3 inspection to correct conditions but he did not know if they were corrected.

He said the hotel was cited for lack of sound construction, design of the windows and doors, junk in storage areas, rooms and furniture not in good repair and lack of smoke detectors.

"The hotel has a low grade and has been graded that way since 1970," said Puckett. "It is low B. The lowest is A C."

Jellico policeman John Weaver spotted the blaze. "It was about two blocks away when I saw the flames coming out of a first-floor window," said Weaver.

UP&L seeks rate boost

BOISE (UPI) — Utah Power & Light Co. has asked the Public Utilities Commission for authority to increase rates to Idaho customers by $26,000,000 or 52 percent, the PUC reported today.

The commission said the company has proposed a simplification of rate design to include a customer charge, energy charge and demand charge to further flatten its rates.

It said UP&L also proposes seasonal rates for summer peaks, an irrigation conservation rate, a conservation incentive rate of 200 kilowatt hours per month and a senior citizens rate.

— Rates of all Idaho customers — of the company, including those governed by contract, are at issue and are subject to change in this proceeding, the PUC said.

The PUC has scheduled a public hearing on the application for June 6 at the Idaho State University Ballroom in Pocatello.

— The initial phase of the hearing will be confined to a presentation of the power company's direct case together with clarifying questions which appear to be timely to the commission.

Cross-examination of the power company's witnesses and presentation of evidence by other parties will be scheduled at a later date.

The Finance Department within 10 days of the purchase. It is designed to protect Idaho companies from surprise raids.

The state brought legal action in Fourth District Court, obtaining a temporary restraining order against Crane. A hearing was scheduled for today to determine if it should be made permanent.

Then, last Friday, Boyd filed a copy with the state of the 130 statement. Crane earlier filed with the federal agency.

Accordingly, the state moved to dismiss the injunction "without prejudice" — meaning the state could go back to court later. If necessary — and Judge Gerald Schroeder certified an order vacating the case, McElDowney said. This eliminated the need for today's hearing.

Although Crane apparently now has complied with Idaho law and Boyd said Evans' intentions are "passive," the State Finance Department nonetheless will continue to analyze the 130 statement, McElDowney said. He said the state may ask Crane for additional information.

Now hamburgers join cancer hazard list

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Hamburgers cooked directly on hot metal may produce a cancer-causing substance, according to results of a study released today by environmentalist Barry Commoner.

A team at the Washington University Center for the Biology of Natural Systems performed the study, which uses a test that detects the mutation of cells under certain conditions.

The results were prepared for presentation this week to the annual meeting of the American Society for Microbiology in Las Vegas. Commoner said the initial results are tentative and will need further clarification, but he added that enough is known now to change traditional methods of cooking hamburger.

Using a somewhat controversial method known as the Ames test, the Commoner team found that hamburger fried on a grill, in a frying pan or in an electric hamburger cooker showed a much greater amount of mutagenic activity — change in the structure of the cells — than did hamburgers cooked under a broiler or in a microwave oven.

The crucial factor appears to be the cooking temperature, which is higher when the meat comes into direct contact with hot metal. The time of cooking also is important, the study says.

The mutagenic activity has also been found in beef extract which is found in some commercial bullion and gravy paste products.

Commoner defends the Ames test, which is discounted by other scientists, saying it is 90 percent accurate in predicting cancer-causing substances that are later confirmed in tests with laboratory animals.

His study team has not yet identified the molecular structure of the mutagenic substance involved in hamburger, but experiments indicate that the substance is created in the cooking process and is not present in the beef tissue itself.

"At this stage of our knowledge," the research paper said, "it would make little sense to suggest that because we have found mutagens in hamburgers cooked in certain ways that people should generally give up eating hamburgers."

Crane labels M-K stock investment

BOISE (UPI) — The Crane Co. of New York has filed papers in compliance with Idaho's Corporate Takeover Law which indicate its purchase of 10 percent of Morrison-Knudsen Co.'s common stock was a "passive investment," a state official said today.

State Finance Director Tom McElDowney said attorney Peter J. Boyd of Boise indicated the purchase of 300,000 shares of M-K stock was such an investment by filing the required documents last Friday.

"It's not passive then they should have indicated under the law that it's a takeover," McElDowney said.

Boyd declined comment except to say he could not recall telling McElDowney the purchase was passive. However, he indicated such a conclusion could be drawn from a study of the papers themselves.

"I made no representation whatsoever — I made no company told me to do and that's the papers," Boyd said.

"A passive investment," McElDowney said, means the company has no intentions at this time of trying to take over control and management of the worldwide construction and engineering company which is headquartered in Boise.

However, McElDowney said, filing under the Idaho law brings Crane under jurisdiction of Idaho courts should it decide to try to take over M-K, assuring the Idaho company of a chance to prepare a defense against such an attempt. Under the law, he said, someone trying to take over a company must do so in an orderly manner.

Crane announced April 17 that it had purchased about 10 percent of M-K's outstanding stock and filed a "13D" statement with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission. At that time, it did not file a report with the State of Idaho as required by Idaho law.

Under the Idaho Corporate Takeover Law, which was drafted by M-K and passed by the Legislature three years ago, a company buying more than 5 percent of the stock in another company must notify the Finance Department within 10 days of the purchase. It is designed to protect Idaho companies from surprise raids.

The state brought legal action in Fourth District Court, obtaining a temporary restraining order against Crane. A hearing was scheduled for today to determine if it should be made permanent.

Then, last Friday, Boyd filed a copy with the state of the 130 statement. Crane earlier filed with the federal agency.

McClure snipes at cuts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. James McClure Monday criticized President Carter's proposed cuts in nuclear research, nuclear waste management, and uranium resource studies.

The proposed cuts were announced to the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee Monday by the Department of Energy.

McClure said the administration was to cut research and advancement of light water reactor technology by $10 million, waste management facility work by $31 million, and work on a national uranium resource evaluation by $10 million.

"These proposed cuts in vital research and development are another clear signal from the Carter administration to the president's anti-nuclear bias," McClure said. "All of this research is needed if we are to develop into an energy self-sufficient nation."

McClure said he did not know how much the proposed Carter cuts might affect work at Idaho's National Engineering Lab. He said he was particularly disturbed by proposed cuts in the national uranium resource evaluation.

"This is a study to see just how much uranium we have," he said. "Without it, we have widely conflicting reports just how much resource there is and how much we would have had to depend on the breeder reactor to produce plutonium to fuel conventional reactors."

"I strongly suspect President Carter doesn't want us to know just how short our supplies of uranium actually are because it would look bad for his case against development of a breeder reactor."

McClure said he will study the president's proposed cuts and attempt to set a "more prudent and realistic course of energy research."

Carter takes low key approach to jet sale approval

THESE WARPLANES FIGURE IN MIDEAST ARMS SALE, STRATEGIES modern jets superimposed over area where peace sought despite tensions

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter is "deeply gratified" by the Senate vote approving his Middle East arms package, but his administration is taking a low-key approach to the victory and not about to gloat in public.

The Senate decision Monday night did not draw what has become the typical response of an administration often hungry for a win. In fact, the White House did not want to further antagonize the Israeli lobby that bitterly opposed the Israeli deal.

Reactions from elsewhere were more predictable. Arab spokesmen were pleased, Israel and her supporters were concerned.

Republican National Chairman William Brock said the vote was "a dangerous precedent" that "emphasizes Carter's effort to shift traditional U.S. policy away from the commitment to the survival of Israel."

Previously when there was a showdown in Congress, particularly the struggle to win approval of the Panama Canal treaties, administration officials made themselves readily available to reporters for questioning.

Several times Carter himself has entered the press area to speak of the victory and his pride in the actions of Congress.

This time, the officials were not around and Carter was not available. One formal statement was issued before they began turning off the lights at the White House.

In it, Carter said he was "deeply gratified by the Senate's decision" and promised to "intensely our effort to help the parties narrow their differences" in the Middle East. "Our own national interest and moral values permit us to do no less," he said.

At the top of the statement, however, to Israel "will continue to have the unwavering support of this administration and the American people."

After following up on that message, he noted that the "vote strengthens our ties with moderate Arab nations who share our goal of peace and stability in the region."

A White House spokeswoman was asked about the shift in official reaction to a major victory, involving many hundreds.

"It speaks for itself," she smiled.

All Abdullah Alireza, Saudi Arabia's ambassador to the United States, said:

"We are very gratified by the vote... I look forward to close cooperation and a continuation of close friendship with the United States."

A spokesman for the Egyptian embassy, Mohammed Haki, interpreted the vote as meaning "Congress is... helping bring about the just and lasting peace we have been aspiring to."

Pledging continued peace efforts, he said the vote was "further testimony of the end of polarization in the Middle East."

Hisham Sharabi, president of the National Association of Arab Americans, urged the administration "to develop a Middle East arms policy that... will result in a total reduction of tensions."

Hanoi brags about ambush

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Vietnamese officials today publicized winning battle tactics against Cambodia for the first time, boasting that 113 Khmer Rouge soldiers were killed in a minefield ambush.

Radio Hanoi broadcasts in both Vietnamese and English, monitored in Bangkok, said 113 invading Cambodians were killed in the April 24 battle in the southwestern corner of Vietnam's Kien Giang province.

The broadcasts — the first public mention of battle tactics — said at least two Vietnamese brigades amounting to 6,000 men ambushed four Cambodian battalions of perhaps 800 soldiers, forced them into minefields and sent survivors fleeing in disorder back to Cambodia.

The battlefield, the broadcasts said, was just north of Ha Tien, a district capital about 160 miles southwest of Saigon. The town was evacuated by its 20,000 civilians last year.

Radio Hanoi indicated Vietnamese intelligence troops had watched Cambodian military movements. It hinted, but did not state, that its troops crossed the border on reconnaissance missions and knew the Khmer Rouge attack was coming.

Israelis display dismay; Cairo, Saudis delighted

By United Press International

Egypt today hailed the U.S. Senate's approval of sales of warplanes to Saudi Arabia and Egypt as well as Israel "a drastic change" in American policy in favor of the Arabs.

Saudi Arabia called it a "defeat for the Israeli lobby" in Washington and a victory for President Carter.

But Israeli opposition leader and former Defense Minister Shimon Peres called the vote "a sad day in Israeli-American relations," and Defense Minister Ezer Weizman said he hoped the Jewish state would not have to fight against the F-16 aircraft supplied to Saudi Arabia.

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin expressed "deep regret" at the U.S. decision but said it will have nothing to do with Israel's willingness to negotiate peace with the Arabs. "We want the peace process to continue and it will," Begin said.

Begin said Israel's primary objection to the warplane proposal was the package deal concept and that a 1975 U.S. commitment to Israel to supply F-15s and F-16s should not have been put in the package.

"The commitment given to Israel in September, 1975, was an absolute one and unconditional and there was no justification whatsoever to connect it with any supply to countries which are in a state of war with Israel," Begin said.

Egypt gloated over the 54-14 Senate vote Monday night that upheld Carter's decision to sell Israel 15 F-15 Jopline Eagle interceptors and 75 F-16s, Saudi Arabia 50 F-15s and Egypt 50 less advanced F-5s.

The Senate action marked the first time combat jets will be sold to the Arabs, and Egyptian-Saudi Information Director Morsi Saad-Eddin told UPI the vote "is a kind of warning signal" to Begin.

He called it a policy shift toward the Arabs and attributed it to President Anwar Sadat's Middle East peace initiative launched with a visit to Jerusalem last November.

"This shows there has been a drastic change in U.S. policy toward the Arabs as a result of President Sadat's peace initiative," Saad-Eddin said. "The change involves not only the administration but also the American people and the Congress."

Saudi Arabia's state-controlled radio, monitored in Lebanon, called the Senate vote of the $4.9 billion warplane package a "victory for President Carter and at the same time a defeat for the Israeli lobby in Washington."

In Jerusalem, Begin went before parliament's Foreign Affairs and Defense Committee in a secret session devoted to the sale of F-15 warplanes to Saudi Arabia.

Labour party leader Shimon Peres condemned the sale as a "serious development" and termed it "a sad day in Israeli-American relations."

Defense Minister Ezer Weizman told the newspaper Ma'ariv: "I'm very sorry the whole matter happened. We fought against it and I hope that we will not have to fight against these planes."

Tokyo airport foes defiant

TOKYO (UPI) — The government said today it has set up jamming stations to head off a possible attack on the new Tokyo International Airport by radicals using radio-controlled model airplanes loaded with homemade bombs.

The Transport Ministry, which oversees operations of the controversial airport at Narita, 41 miles north of Tokyo, said it has set up 18 radio sets in five frequencies to cope with the radicals' latest purport strategy.

The government began the jamming program following reports that radicals and local farmers opposed to the new airport planned to use model planes as bombers to block the facility's opening Saturday.

Airport officials, acting under a new law, today arrived at a fort built by anti-airport protesters at the end of a runway of the $2.6 billion facility and warned the occupants it would be leveled before the opening.

The officials, guarded by riot police, drove signboard stakes into the ground outside the wooden hut topped by a 39-foot wooden tower designed to improve aircraft navigation and told the more than 80 helmeted farmers and radicals inside they must vacate the structure.

The anti-airport group shouted "Go home!" and "We will protest the hut at all cost." Protesters then pulled out one of the two boards and burned it. There was no violence.

The posting of the hut came under a law enacted by parliament last week that banned structures near the airport that "could be used as a gathering spot of violent and destructive persons."

More than 13,000 police have taken up positions inside and around the airport, which is surrounded by a high wire fence.

The airport is scheduled to go into regular operation Sunday with the arrival of a Japan Air Lines cargo plane from San Francisco. Flight departures are scheduled Monday.

The airport was originally scheduled to open March 30, but the government was forced to reset the date after a band of radicals broke into the control tower and smashed a half million dollars worth of radar and flight guidance equipment March 26.

Ethiopians attack

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — Ethiopia today announced the start of its long-awaited offensive to crush rebels in the northern province of Eritrea, aided by Cuban and Soviet forces who are "fighting with us and fighting with us."

Eritrean guerrillas confirmed the Ethiopian army had launched "the largest offensive ever" in the 17-year war.

"At this very hour and minute, the popular masses and the anti-imperialist forces are falling on the battlefield in the Eritrean administrative region," radio Eritrea quoted the Eritrean leader, Mengistu Haile Mariam, as saying.

He added, "The blood of many of our brothers is being shed every hour and many of them are dying."

Mengistu said Ethiopia was receiving aid from the Cubans, Russians and other friendly nations.

"In the friends' camp we have the U.S.S.R., Cuba, South Yemen and the German Democratic Republic..." he said.

"The genuine progressive comrades whom we have mentioned above are living with us, dying with us and fighting with us, standing side by side with the broad masses of Ethiopia."

Mengistu, however, did not spell out the specific roles the estimated 1,000 Soviet advisers and 17,000 Cuban troops now in Ethiopia are playing in the Eritrea offensive.

UN force prevails

NEW YORK Times Service

MARAKEH, Lebanon — The United Nations peacekeeping force won its most important test of strength Monday with Palestinian guerrillas since its arrival in south Lebanon seven weeks ago.

After long, tough negotiations between United Nations officers and guerrilla leaders in the hills near this farm center, six miles east of Tyre, a large group of guerrillas agreed to move out of the U.N.-controlled territory without a shot being fired.

"Our orders were to exercise restraint," said Col. Satchit Rana, the Nepalese operations chief for the U.N. forces in Lebanon who led the force's side of the negotiations.

Could newsmen run the country?

Being friends with both sides

On first glance, the Senate's decision Monday to sell $5 billion worth of American military jets and hardware to Saudi Arabia, Egypt, and Israel doesn't seem the best way for the United States to promote peace in the Middle East.

The sale of arms to opposing sides of an historically warring region might seem akin to that cynical anti-war slogan of "killing for peace."

Idaho Sen. Frank Church vigorously opposed the deal, charging the military deal will "...only make it more difficult to revitalize the peace process" in the Mideast.

But a reasonable defense of the multi-billion dollar military deal can be made, and should be made.

For 30 years the United States has supplied arms to Israel and, to a lesser extent, to Saudi Arabia and Egypt.

Those who say the U.S. shouldn't be in the arms business ignore the political realities of America's economy. Quite simply, arms manufacturing is a gigantic industry to the United States and an important element of foreign trade.

Since 1973, for example, the U.S. has sold more than $12 billion of arms to Arab nations, sales that partially offset the cost of importing oil from the Persian Gulf.

Other nations, particularly the Soviet Union, also are in the arms business and will supply nations with weapons if the United States chose not to do so.

The philosophy behind America's sale of arms to the rest of the world has been to keep a rough military balance in most regions of the world.

In the Mideast particularly, the intent of the U.S. has been to make sure Israel is never at a military disadvantage when compared to potential Arab enemies.

But Israel no longer is America's only ally in the Middle East.

Today, Saudi Arabia, the largest Arab oil-producing country, is an important friend of the U.S.

The Saudis keep the lid on the price of oil and, as arch anti-communists, keep the Soviet Union from gaining influence along the Persian Gulf.

And Egypt, while not an important oil exporter, has taken a risky position of trying to negotiate a peaceful settlement of its Mideastern disputes with Israel, again, a move encouraged by the U.S.

The defense of the sale of jets to Saudi Arabia, Egypt and Israel, then, is that the U.S. should become the ally of both sides in the Mideast, thereby assuring us a key role as a stabilizing force in the region.

The danger of selling arms to both sides, of course, is the possibility one side will emerge from an arms deal with an offensive edge that could lead to war.

The Israelis argued precisely that point in the debate over the current sale of 60 F-15 Eagles to Saudi Arabia.

Israel claims the sale of the 60 advanced warplanes gives the Saudis an edge that could be critical in the event of another Mideast war.

But the package passed by the Senate last night offers Israel 20 additional F-15s and reduces considerably what gap existed in the total arms sale.

Certainly if the planes America sells to the Arabs and Israel lead to war, the deal will be remembered as one of the worst blunders of the 20th century.

But if the planes entrench the United States as an ally of both the Arabs and Israelis then the deal will have been worth the risk.

It is in our best interest to be the best of friends to both sides in the Middle East.

WASHINGTON — Martin Tolson, who covers the White House for the New York Times, poked his head in my office a little while ago to wonder aloud: "What if the press were really running the country? Could we do it any better?" Let's dream about that.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

No, Walter Cronkite would not be right for president. The obvious choice (Taff, Rockefeller, Reagan, William Seward) never makes it, because he is usually well-known enough, and around long enough, to make enemies. Cronkite reminds too many people of Vietnam and Watergate and space shots. Though his voice is of presidential timbre, Walter would never get the nomination. Put him down for Senate majority leader.

Other TV anchors are similarly marred. John Chancellor has a Stevensonian flavor that could win a nomination but not an election (just thought you'd like to know) and Harry Reasoner's publicized irritation with his female sidekick would cost his party much needed support. So it's Chancellor for ambassador to the U.N. and Reasoner for permanent governor of California — "talented, independent," with "no place to go at the moment."

The vice presidency is a job that requires a willingness to adapt and an ability to listen with great intensity. The slot belongs to Barbara Walters.

The Cabinet could use editors. Ed Kosner of Newsweek would be secretary of defense, issuing annual posturing statements with a stripe across the corner reading "Crisis of Confidence" or "U.S. Navy: That Sinking Feeling." Clay Felker could profitably shrink the circulation at HEW; at Justice, though, I would turn to a writer, Roger Wilkins, who knows where the bodies are buried.

At Foggy Bottom, Marvin Kalb would make the perfect secretary of state, with Henry Kissinger trailing along as his biographer. That would mean Bernard Kalb would get director of central intelligence, since the last time we had brothers in those posts the world had a streak of peace and security. (No, not Daniel Schorr for CIA; Schorr for director of the FBI.)

In the White House, the chief of staff who can knock heads together is publisher Rupert Murdoch; for press secretary, Dan Rather, who knows all about palace guards. For national security adviser, New York Times reporter Les Gelb — no, he's already director of State's Politico-Military Affairs Bureau; mustn't let reality race ahead of me — so let's give Zbig's office to columnist Joe Kraft (watch out, Marvin Kalb, he'll use the back channel).

Pundits would do best in the advisory area; Anthony Lewis for White House counsel (and ultimately, elevation to the Supreme Court); David Broder to energize the Domestic Council; Mary McGrovy to deal with all the pressure groups that demand compassion, and Evans and Novak to be contact with American Jewry. The New Republic's Martin Peretz for intellectual-in-residence, handling the Charles River gang and columnist Pat Buchanan back in the White House speech writer.

But let me not duck the central question: what kind of media man would do well in the Oval Office? Must be well-known, not utilized, reek with trustworthiness. Of the available, David Brinkley is a touch too acerbic, John Hart a few years too young; that leaves Robert Mann to be President. A safe choice; that means we can appoint Tom Brokaw to be Ted Kennedy (doing well in the polls — threat to Mudd if he stumbles). Mudd would have a choice of Charlotte Curtis, Sally Quinn or Barbara Howar as activist First Lady.

Of course, if media biggies were kings, most current politicians would gravitate to the real power in the country — the positions vacated by today's press lords. Zbigniew Brzezinski would take over for Kremlinologist Victor Zorza, Walter Mondale would be saying "that's the way it is" on CBS, Ann Weaver would gather John Moss at Rolling Stone.

Hamilton Jordan, bureau chief of the New York Times in Washington would poke his head into the office in which I sit at this moment, and ask my replacement, Joseph L. "Jody" Powell, "What if we were really running the country? Could we do it any better?"

Bossell would look up from some tedious disbar in his typewriter and point down the hall to the office today occupied by Scotty Reston, which would be occupied then by a man whose administration's name became the same as Roger's: "Ask Jimmy. He's discovered it's a lot more fun on the outside."

"NUCLEAR WASTE? NO PROBLEM—WE'LL JUST BURY IT!"

For those who miss Richard Nixon

CHICAGO — Well, the Nixon memoirs are out, and they're boring. Which is kind of too bad; the country is in the midst of a Richard Nixon revival right now, with interest in Nixon at a fever pitch, and the former President has the foresight to write an even more intriguing autobiography, it would have been the talk of America.

In the spirit of the Nixon revival, however, this column has had the decency to commission a Richard Nixon trivia quiz. The purpose is to provide someone entertainment for all of you who love Nixon, and wish he were still around making news every day.

The author of our quiz is Paul Slansky, an associate editor of New Times magazine, and considered by many journalists to be the leading expert on the minute details of Nixon's life. We approached Slansky with the idea of the trivia quiz, and he responded in a manner of a starting cue reacting to red meat.

"My overriding interest in Nixon just sort of happened," Slansky said. "As a kid, I was drawn instinctively to him. He was just kind of... always there. I find him absolutely fascinating, I think he is the star of the century."

By the way, although some of this information may be new to you, Slansky says he has researched it by reading every book ever written about Nixon, and most major magazine articles. As his authorities for the quiz, Slansky cites authors, historians, journalists, political scientists, and Nixon himself. Slansky and his editors at New Times — where Slansky served as chief Nixon expert during the Watergate days — swear that Slansky is deadly serious about the Nixon trivia quiz, and painstaking with his facts.

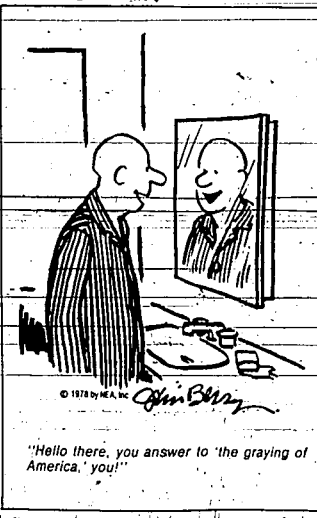

And now, the Richard Nixon trivia quiz:

- QUESTIONS
1. What was Nixon's father's name and birthplace?
2. Why did Nixon's father become a Republican?

Berry's World

"Hello there, you answer to 'the graying of America,' you!"

Basketball team is talk of Washington

WASHINGTON — The biggest thing in Washington these days, or at least the talkiest, is the Washington professional basketball team that has just won the Eastern championship of the National Basketball Association.

This is not an event that should be restricted entirely to the sports pages, but a sociological and psychological "happening" that restores a sense of pride to this community.

Washington has been regarded by its critics in the past as an elegant hick town, that is always doing things people don't like. It hasn't had a big winner since Roosevelt, and maybe not even since Walter Johnson, "The Big Train," pitched Washington into the World Series and the world baseball championship in 1924. Lately Washington hasn't even had a baseball team, and its trains, while big, are broke.

So the capital, which seems to divide on almost everything else, is united and delighted about its basketball "Bullets," and is turning from politics to sports for temporary relief.

In politics these days, there are plenty of fights but no heroes, very little party loyalty or teamwork, no referees except the Supreme Court, no clear rules or lasting decisions. Jimmy Carter may have a "game plan" for the Middle East and the Middle West, but we won't know for years whether it was any good.

On the basketball court, there are clear boundaries, time-limits, judges who can whistle down players for misdemeanors or fouls without delay, or even banish them to the bench or the locker room for excessive bad manners. And at the end, the result is definite and final. Nothing else is definite or final in these parts.

JAMES RESTON

It is silly, of course, to compare sports with what is called "the great game of politics," but maybe not all that silly. It would be hard to overestimate the frustrations of American life today. This is what Jimmy Carter has been grappling with at home and abroad, and the harder he tries, the more he seems to fall in the popularity polls. But sports, at least, have a way of bringing a community together, particularly when it has a winning national team.

Other major political unit in America today. It is integrated politically. It has a black mayor, and over 80 percent of the children in the District's public schools are black. But in general, it is still segregated geographically, with most whites living on the west side of Rock Creek or in the surrounding middle class colonies of Alexandria and Arlington in Virginia, and Montgomery in Maryland. In short, the District is divided, with most blacks living on the other side, not of the "tracks" but on the other side of the creek.

The federal government, with its equal employment policies, has made great progress in bringing these two parts of Washington together, but nothing has unified the two parts of the District and the rich suburbs of Virginia and Maryland more in their common interest in the Washington football Redskins and the Washington Bullets, where blacks have played such a prominent, and in basketball, such a decisive role.

Elvin Hayes, "The Big E" struggling against Dr. J. of the Philadelphia-Seventy-Sixers, both black, have probably done as much to help Joe Callahan of HEW to compose the differences between the races in this area as anybody else. For the moment, "The Big E," with the help of — as Usual, Larry Wright, and Bob Dandridge, are the heroes of the capital these days, and as the ad-men say, "We needed that!"

Resident philosophers around here, who seldom go to the games at the stadium or the Capital Center, nevertheless wonder, when the point is put to them, if politics in this country doesn't have something to learn from sports. Should politicians not have to meet the same test of success or failure as players on the court or field? Is it ridiculous to hope that they might act with the same precision and discipline as the players who have struggled in the play-offs here in the last few days? More important, shouldn't the major political parties pay as much attention as the sports managers to drafting the coming year who have to carry them along in the coming years?

This is the time when the football and basketball teams look for the best of the young college players. It is an elaborate, expensive, and computerized exercise, based on the assumption that a team must recruit to lose.

Carter signs farm bill boosting wheat subsidy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Experts say farmers will be aided and consumers will not likely be hurt under terms of a new farm law enacted in response to the farmers' cries for help.

President Carter signed the farm bill Monday. It is expected to put federal price supports at $3.5 billion in 1979, adding up to $700 million in new outlays for 1978 wheat and cotton crops but falling to satisfy farmers' demands.

The compromise bill fell far short of the logical aid sought by strikers' farmers. Despite the cotton and wheat increases, overall supports are expected to drop by as much as $1.6 billion compared with estimates for 1978.

The experts say that because the United States has a large wheat surplus, there is little chance the higher support will increase food prices to consumers.

Soon after the announcement, Carol Foreman, acting secretary of agriculture, raised the target price for wheat from $3 to $3.40 a bushel and the loan rate for upland cotton from 44 cents to 46 cents per hundred pounds if farmers set aside some of their land.

The target rates do not fit farm prices or prices under "market" markets, but the Agriculture Department and pay farmers for any gap between market prices and the target levels, thereby providing some protection for farm income.

Budget experts in Congress predict the bill may mean as much as $800 million in added wheat price supports and $100 million more in cotton loans, with the latter eventually being repaid.

Total federal price support spending in the 1979 fiscal year, mainly for 1978 crops, is expected to reach about $5.5 billion after the new provisions are added, experts estimated.

The total, which includes spending on crops like milk, peanuts and tobacco as well as the grains and cotton included in the new farm bill, would be $1.6 billion below estimated outlays for fiscal 1978.

Carter said he signed the bill "because it will help us meet our goal of food and agriculture policies which are fair and equitable for farmers and which maintain our ability to compete effectively in world markets."

He objected to the 48-cent-per-pound minimum upland cotton support price for 1978-81 crops, and said "I intend to propose legislation to remove this minimum-price provision, but I will not propose to change the modifications in the formula used to determine the cotton loan rate."

Earlier this year, a more generous crop-support bill was passed in the Senate but defeated in the House after Carter threatened to veto it as inflationary.

Navy flares to light desert skies

HILL AFB, Utah (UPI) — Skies over Utah's Great Salt Lake Desert will light up Wednesday and Thursday nights when Navy F-15s conduct a series of night bombing missions.

A Hill Air Force Base spokesman said the pilots, in 50 fighters and fighter-bombers assigned to the Fallon, Nev., Naval Air Station, will be dropping a million candlepower flares about 10:30 p.m. (MDT) each night to illuminate the desert landscape on the HUD's Wendover Bombing and Gunnery Range.

The spokesman said the Navy fliers will also conduct a second series of night training exercises May 22-23, using the Superonic F-14 Tomcat and five other types of fighters and fighter-bombers.

"Depending on weather and atmospheric conditions, light from the flares might be seen from as far away as Ogden, Provo and Salt Lake City to the east, and in eastern Nevada on the west," said Bob Bowman.

Bowman said the planes will be flying "at various altitudes, up to 45,000 feet."

Social Security recovers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Tax increases Congress passed last December have restored the financial soundness of the nation's Social Security system until the year 2020, the government said today.

The Trustees of the Social Security Trust Fund, headed by Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal, projected in its annual report that the near-bankrupt system will actually recover enough to show a $7.4 billion surplus in 1981.

The report is good news for more than 33 million Americans now on Social Security and millions more who will join benefit rolls the future. They include retired and disabled people, widows, widowers and other dependents.

The system had verged on bankruptcy until Congress last Dec. 20 increased both the Social Security tax base and percentage of income to be paid by 100 million American workers and their employers beginning in 1979.

Some lawmakers are having second thoughts, however, and there is a move in the House to roll back at least part of the tax increase. Such a step faces strong opposition from President Carter.

The trustees, in addition to Blumenthal, are HEW Secretary Joseph Califano and Labor Secretary Ray Marshall.

"The Social Security amendments of 1977, enacted last Dec. 20th, restored the financial soundness of the Social Security cash benefits program through the remainder of this century and into the early years of the next one," the report said.

It projected the trust funds will have sufficient income to meet the cost of benefits and administration until almost the year 2021.

The Advisory Council on Social Security, a group of private experts working on the problem for the government, is currently reviewing long-range solutions for the system past 2020. They will report on their study late next year.

"In view of the time available for planning, the trustees recommend that no immediate action be taken to change the financing arrangement," today's report said.

It said Social Security tax income will total $91.8 billion this year compared to $87 million in payments to recipients.

But that deficit will gradually turn around so that in 1981, income payments will total $138.5 billion and benefit payments will take up only $131.1 billion of that total.

Social Security tax increases in effect this year were enacted through prior legislation.

Auto sales set hot pace during early May period

DETROIT (UPI) — The Big Four U.S. auto companies reported passenger car sales in early May climbed to near-record heights and surpassed last year's sales pace by almost 10 percent.

Combined sales in the May 1-10 period, posted Monday, totaled 230,065, with each of the firms reporting gains over a year ago. It was the fourth consecutive period that sales were up.

Chrysler Corp. led the advance with a 24-percent increase over last year's early May sales. Ford Motor Co. and General Motors each set company records for the period.

The automakers sold an average 31,122 cars in each of the nine business days, just 428 short of the record daily rate of 31,550 set in 1973.

Auto company officials were elated with the news, and renewed their predictions that 1978 will be a strong year for the U.S. auto industry.

"Industry car sales are on target for a near-record year, and the economy is benefiting from the increasing share held by domestic makes," said Gordon B. MacKenzie, Ford vice president of sales.

Chrysler Executive Vice President R.K. Brown said the No. 3 auto firm is "off to a strong May start and (we) expect this strength to continue."

GM's passenger car sales during the period total 140,944 units, up 21 percent from a year ago and topped GM's old May 1-10 record of 137,514 units set in 1973.

So far this year, the No. 1 automaker has sold 1,790,224 domestic passenger cars, down less than 1 percent from last year.

Ford's sales totaled 73,113 for the period up 19.8 percent from a year ago, and surpassing Ford's old record, also set in 1973. The No. 2 auto firm has sold 923,497 units so far this year, up 2.2 percent from last year.

Chrysler's huge gain came on total sales of 58,973 units, compared with 27,916 a year ago. For the year, Chrysler sales total 423,373, down 1.9 percent from last year.

American Motors Corp. reported a sales gain of 0.4 percent with new-car deliveries totaling 5,788. AMC trails its year-ago sales pace by 10 percent, with total sales of 62,459 units.

AMC also reported record Jeep sales for the period. It said Jeep dealers sold 3,794 units, a 40-percent gain from the 2,717 Jeep vehicles sold a year ago.

Evans meets Carter

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. John V. Evans leaves Boise for Washington, D.C., today for a meeting with President Carter on the national water policy.

Evans said Monday it is the last in a series of meetings and communications he has had with the President on the national water policy before the document is publicly announced in the near future.

He said he feels his talks with the President and communications among Carter and other western governors have "softened the administration point of view on water, it developed that originally included provisions for the transfer of water from state to state, an idea I, as governor, absolutely oppose."

Evans will return to Boise Wednesday night.

VW workers union target

DETROIT (UPI) — The United Auto Workers Union, in a stepped-up drive to unionize the nation's newest auto company, has asked for a representation election at Volkswagen's New Stanton, Pa., assembly plant.

UAW President Douglas A. Fraser announced Monday the union had filed a petition with the National Labor Relations Board in Pittsburgh, seeking a vote by the plant's 598 hourly workers.

An NLRB spokesman said the board would review the petition and give Volkswagen officials a chance to respond before an election date is set.

Company officials declined comment on the move, but earlier indicated they would remain neutral in any attempt to unionize the recently opened facility.

"We are confident of winning this election by an overwhelming majority," Fraser said. He said more than 80 percent of the plant's production workers signed UAW authorization cards during a months-long organizing drive.

The plant began operating April 10, culminating a $200-million investment by the West German auto giant Volkswagenwerk A.G. in what it hopes will be a more economical way of supplying Rabbit subcompact to its U.S. dealerships.

Production is gearing up slowly and is not expected to reach its peak level of 800 cars per day until near the end of the year. By that time, a second shift will have been added, swelling the employment rolls to 3,000.

Dissident's trial into second day

MOSCOW (UPI) — The trial of dissident leader Yuri Orlov moved into its second day today but supporters and reporters were not even permitted into the yard of the courthouse.

Orlov's wife, Irina, and their two sons entered the courtroom at about 10:20 a.m. (11:30 a.m. EDT), indicating the trial, scheduled to resume at 11 p.m., had begun.

On Monday, Orlov's supporters and the reporters swarmed word of the trial in a courtyard outside of the building, but they were not permitted to enter the courtyard today.

Soviet police said they were restricting access to the courtyard "because of the behavior yesterday." A West German television crew was not allowed to film on the street outside of the courtyard.

The official Tass news agency reported Monday that the trial was "open," but only Orlov's family was allowed to enter. Others, including a U.S. Embassy observer, were told the room was full.

During the nearly seven-hour trial session Monday, Soviet prosecutors charged Orlov with "slandering the Soviet state and social system," according to the indictment released by the Tass news agency.

The crowd of reporters for the second day of the trial was much smaller than on Monday. Only a handful of Moscow dissidents waited outside.

On Monday, Irina Orlov said court officials held up many documents submitted by the group on such subjects as Jewish emigration, psychiatric abuse and religious persecution. The Helsinki group, however, was never mentioned by name in court, she said.

One document referred to a small Soviet town where almost every Jewish resident had requested permission to emigrate.

The judge contended that a film had been made of the town that showed everyone very happy. But when Orlov suggested the film be shown in court, his request was denied, his wife said.

Mrs. Orlov said her husband told the court it was his right to criticize and his right under the Helsinki Accords to distribute his criticism.

In a two-hour exchange, Orlov said his motives were humanitarian not political.

"What he said was that he, as head of the Helsinki group, was responsible for all of the documents and their distribution," dissident sources said.

"But he insisted that because there is nothing criminal involved, he is not guilty of anything."

Bianca Jagger seeks divorce

United Press International

SHEDDING MOSS
Bianca Jagger, 32, filed suit in London Monday to end her seven-year marriage to Mick Jagger, 33, who's been spending time recently with model Jerry Hall. At the same time, sources tell Rolling Stone magazine that Mick himself is thinking of splitting with the Rolling Stones to pursue an acting career. So it's just as well that the band recently put about 30 tapes on tape at a recent Paris recording session, enough to fuel many an album after "Some Girls," to be released next month. Jagger has consistently denied all reports of his leaving the band, but is mum on the divorce.

"GYPSY" BASH

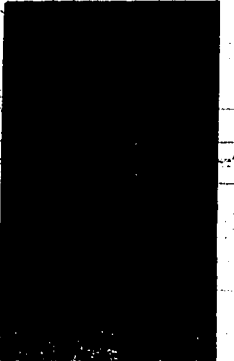

There was a party in New York City at Regine's Monday night for the new film "King of the Gypsies," based on Peter Maas's book on American gypsies and starring Sterling Hayden. Celebrating — in addition to Regine herself — were Hayden's co-stars Shelley Winters and Susan Sarandon. Brooke Gleason also appeared, and there was a slew of other partygoers, including Cicely Tyson (who came with make-up artist Diana Harvati), Melba Moore, Eartha Kitt, Tina Turner and Betsy Palmer.

BROWNED OUT

Linda Ronstadt says she's been driven out of her "Malibu home" because of sightseers attracted by publicity over her alleged romance with California Gov. Jerry Brown. Miss Ronstadt stayed put during a recent stage of sanddunes and wave erosion because she likes the $350,000 house — the first she has owned. But the flood of publicity was worse, she says, attracting scores of gawkers until "there were so many crazies outside my place it looked as if they were filming 'One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest — Part 2.'" She moved to a West Hollywood apartment and says she'll sell the house.

Patricia to serve remaining sentence

PLEASANTON, Calif. (UPI) — Patricia Hearst's next 14 months in a federal prison should be the final chapter in a strange odyssey that began when she was kidnapped by a small band of dedicated terrorists in 1974.

Miss Hearst, 34, returned to federal prison Monday to finish out a seven-year sentence imposed after her conviction on charges she was a member of a Symbionese Liberation Army team that robbed a San Francisco bank.

She spent 14 months in a county jail and the Federal Correctional Institution in Pleasanton before and during her U.S. District Court trial in San Francisco. Because of the time already served and good behavior, she will be eligible for parole in July, 1979.

There were about 35 newsmen on hand at the medium-security prison awaiting Miss Hearst. She arrived in a four-car caravan, accompanied by her pet German shepherd, a sister and former U.S. Marshal Jamie Jimenez who berated her while acting as her guard during the trial.

Marshals and private security men formed a wedge to protect Miss Hearst as she ran to the prison compound. The group was led by the Rev. Edward Dunke, an Episcopal minister and family friend who straight-armed two cameramen in the rush for the main gate.

A family source said Miss Hearst had been "extremely depressed" by the prospect of returning to prison. She spent last week at the Hearst Castle at San Simeon on the central California coast before returning Sunday to the family home in Hillsborough, a fashionable community just south of San Francisco.

Her parents, Randolph A. Hearst, president of the San Francisco Examiner, and his wife, Catherine, said in a statement about their daughter's return to prison that they "are devastated, not only because we love our daughter and fear this decision could affect her health and safety, but also because we had hoped so much for a sign of leniency."

Miss Hearst was kidnapped in February 1974 by the S.L.A. from her Berkeley, Calif., apartment. The following April she participated in the bank holdup. She was arrested in 1974 and convicted in 1976.

After her conviction, she was released on $1 million bail. She was forced to return to prison because the U.S. Supreme Court refused to consider her appeal and U.S. District Judge William Orrick refused to modify her sentence.

In the motion for a modification of sentence, Miss Hearst's lawyers said she faced physical danger by going back behind bars because of her testimony against members of the S.L.A.

Orrick had imposed a "gag order" on the case and it was not made public when Miss Hearst would resume her sentence.

Pat Nixon treated for lung infection

LONG BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — Pat Nixon, hospitalized for treatment of a lung infection, was reported in good condition today.

Mrs. Nixon, 66, was admitted Monday afternoon to Long Beach Memorial Hospital, the same hospital where she was treated for a stroke in 1976 and where her husband almost died of complications following surgery in 1974.

where their physician, Dr. John Langren, practices.

Langren issued a brief statement Monday saying Mrs. Nixon was being treated for a pulmonary infection and "would remain in the hospital until the end of the week." He gave no details of her ailment.

A hospital spokeswoman would only say the former first lady was "in good condition and resting comfortably."

Nixon's office at the former Western White House would not comment on Mrs. Nixon's latest hospitalization.

It marked the second time a former first lady has been hospitalized in Long Beach this month. Betty Ford was released May 5 from a Navy hospital less than three miles away following more than two weeks of treatment for drug abuse and alcoholism.

Mrs. Nixon checked into the hospital by herself during the afternoon, but former President Richard Nixon appeared for a visit several hours later. He appeared in good spirits and waved cheerily to reporters and camera operators who pursued his limousine onto the highway after he left.

Mrs. Nixon spent 18 days in the same hospital after she suffered a stroke July 7, 1976, which slightly paralyzed her left side, causing her to limp and slur her speech.

She has been working daily with therapists to strengthen the weakened muscles and regain her speech.

During her 1976 hospital stay, Mrs. Nixon had the same room that her husband occupied in October 1974, when he had surgery on blood clots caused by a phlebitis condition.

Nixon went into cardiovascular shock following the operation and was "clinically dead" until doctors revived him.

Abby

Teen-ager disagrees

DEAR ABBY: Can you help me get the answers I need for my 17-year-old daughter that if it is in extremely poor taste for young people to put on a show of affection in public? I refer to the disgusting manner in which a girl will hang on a boy and let him put his hands all over her. Our daughter hangs down the street with her arm around her boyfriend's waist and his arm around her. And when they drive together in an automobile, she practically sits on his lap. Our daughter says she sees nothing wrong with it. Maybe you can tell her. We can't.

MINNESOTA MOM

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR MOM: Hello, young lovers (wherever you are), and for the older ones, too: All the world may love a lover, but he doesn't have to act out his role in public. A boy who respects a girl will keep his hands off her in public, and a girl who respects herself will make sure he does.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 12-year-old girl and my problem is my mother. She won't let me have anyone over to the house unless it's in perfect order because she's afraid the kids might go home and tell their mothers that she is a poor housekeeper. Abby, this is silly, because kids couldn't care less how the house looks. I know I don't pay any attention to the housekeeping when I'm visiting at someone's house. And when I did notice that a place was a mess, I sure wouldn't ever mention it to my mother.

Thank you in your column. My mother never misses a chance to put this in my column. My mother never misses a chance to put this in my column.

SANDY

DEAR SANDY: I never give advice to one who hasn't asked for it, but in your case, I'll make an exception and give you this to your mother. There is nothing more reassuring to a mother than ways knowing where her daughter is—and with whom. You can assure this feeling by making your daughter's home welcome in your home anytime. Youngsters take the words of "housekeeping" in fact, the "sparkle" home nearly as inviting as the one that looks "lived in."

DEAR ABBY: We have a real problem in our neighborhood. Every morning at 8, our neighbor woman wakes up the entire neighborhood. She is a nurse and has to be at work at 4 a.m., so she leaves her house at 3. When she backs out of her garage, she honks her horn. Then her husband, who is a doctor, waves to her from the window. She honks again, waves back to him and drives off. This is terribly annoying to everyone. Abby, but these neighbors are such lovely people, we hate to mention it. If you print this, perhaps they will take the hint. I know they read your column.

JANGLED NERVES

DEAR NERVES: All right, I've done my part. If you get any more honking from Florence Nightingale, call her name and ask him to give you something for your nerves.

Big money macho spins wheels

Can Janet Guthrie, or any woman driver, win the Indianapolis 500 race? Salt Walther gives the Indy car is as tough "success has taken a baseball bat, wrapped a pillow around it, and is smacking the living hell out of you." He concludes this two-part series with the wry observation that, in this race, you're only as fast as your money.

By SALT WALTHER

Field Enterprises, Inc.
Janet Guthrie made Indianapolis 500 history when she became the first woman to enter the race in 1976. She didn't qualify, but she did run an easy 181 mph lap in A.J. Foyt's backup car. Last May, she pushed Lola Volstead's Lightning to a fifty-four-lap average of 188 mph, becoming the first woman to start in the 500. Her car expired early and she was never a factor.

But, is Janet Guthrie competitive? Does she or any other woman have what it takes to run among the leaders?

GRACE UNDER PRESSURE
The pressures on her are immense, and she handles herself extremely well. When I first saw her drive at the Speedway, she looked very smooth, and I felt she had a chance to be a very good race driver.

A lot of the drivers badmouth Janet, but I wasn't one of them. I talked with her, and as most race fans have from TV reports, she is basically a very nice, very shy person. And she is serious about her racing.

But I don't know if a woman has the physical stamina to run hard for 500 miles. It's one thing to run by yourself, but when you get into an Indy car with the big wings behind them and you're following someone, or trying to pass, the wind is so great that the car shakes violently. The cockpit and windshield shake around you and it can be absolutely miserable.

The G forces on the head and neck are pretty high. That's why as part of my daily weightlifting routine, I strengthen the neck muscles with 100-pound weights. It would be very difficult for a woman to take that kind of physical punishment in an open-cockpit car.

A PROMISING TALENT

I'm very curious to see how good a job Lella Lombardi of Italy would do in the Indianapolis. I rather think she might be the first woman to win. In fact, she's driven in the Formula One circuit in Europe and seems to have done a pretty good job. She also held up well in a stock car at Daytona last year although she had never driven one before.

Certainly I expect other women to come to Indianapolis, but it won't be an invasion. And maybe one of them will do a damned good bit of driving. The big problem for them will be in handling the awesome horsepower. That skill doesn't come overnight.

And when push comes to shove, the battle isn't between men and women. Don't let anyone kid you that the little guy (or gal) with the big dream has any chance of winning the Indianapolis 500 race. He doesn't. It's strictly a battle among the big money boys.

Sorry, but unless you've got about $350,000 at your disposal, you may finish but you won't lead the greatest show on earth. They say that you go only as fast as your money—and, at the $1 million Indy 500, it's true.

THE BIG MONEY BOYS

Consider some of the really big-money teams. Pat Patrick, who backs George Bignotti, spends $1.5 million a season. Gordon Johncock, the 1973 Indy winner, is the top driver. Jim Gillmore, who bankrolls A.J. Foyt, spends between a million and $1.2 million.

My sponsor, Dayton Walther Corporation, which makes wheels, brakes and brake drums, trailer jacks, refrigerators and other equipment, operates on a comparatively shoestring with annual sales around $150 million, but I'm just complaining. We'll be very competitive.

Why does a company spend hundreds of thousands of dollars on a race-car sponsorship? Take a good, close look at an Indianapolis race car. It's a moving billboard. Those stickers represent sponsors—major, minor, and in-between—if a corporation didn't generate business as a result of its racing program, the program would stop. The companies operate on the principle that this type of exposure leads to bigger sales.

THE BIG IT

The fact is, nothing's much bigger than the big I. The Indianapolis 500 began in 1911 and will be the Big Race for as long as there are wheels turning on roadways.

There has been controversy over race-car innovation and experimentation from time to time, but anyone who has ever looked in the rear-view mirror of the family sedan can thank an Indy driver for thinking of it.

Personally, I thought Andy Granatelli's turbine-powered cars at Indy in '67 and '68 were the best things to happen in a long time, and they were being tested on American roads by Chrysler. But they met resistance at Indy, where rules all but eliminated their advantage. Now, the only place you're likely to find a turbine engine is in an auto museum.

The only major trend I can see for the future is in the emergence of the two-cylinder engine and the demise of the good old four-banger. It won't happen this year, but it will happen. The Cosworth V-8, developed in England and proven on the Grand Prix track for 10 years, made its U.S. debut in '76 and was a winner in '77. Right now, the biggest problem in manufacturing and only a handful of the Cosworths are working.

George Bilgotti will try an 8-cylinder Daimler-Benz engine this year, and if it's successful you can look for whole platoons of them in the future.

As for the drivers who move those engines around the track—guys like A.J. Foyt, the Unser brothers Bob and Al, and Johnny Rutherford—they're all in their 40s. When they retire, a new breed will take their place.

Tom Sneva is just 29, and his future is very bright. Danny Ongais started out in drag racing, moved to sports cars and then to Indy cars. He's a future superstar. Others, such as Parnis Carter and Johnny Parsons Jr., also will be great contenders.

I look for Tom Bagley, who has emerged from the Super-Vee (Volkswagen-powered) circuits to make it well. Super Vee should prove excellent training ground for future Indy drivers, since they will have had all that rear-engine experience. "Oldtimers" like me came up through the midgeets, sprint and then championship cars. It has been the established route—in fact, the only route—for many years.

NO LIMIT TO SPEED?

Finally, I've been asked many times to speculate about car speed. Is there a limit? Have we come close to reaching it?

Drivers have hit 200 miles per hour at Indianapolis, but there's still room for even faster laps. I honestly do not know what the limit is, but, if there is one, it has nothing to do with how fast the engineers and mechanics can make the wheels go around. It will have to be decided by finding out at what point the driver can no longer drive the car safely.

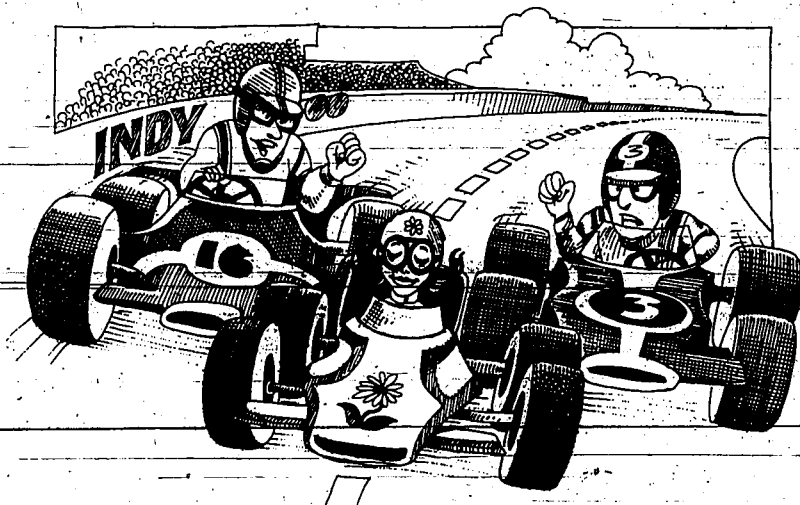

We're using space-age techniques now, after all. Cars are wind-tunnel tested, and principles of aerodynamics are being applied, just as with airplanes. An important difference between Indy cars and airplanes, though, is sort of chilling when you consider it: with airplanes, you want to air in; at Indy, you want to stay on the ground. Nobody gets a trophy for bumping the Goodyear blimp.

As for the trophy itself, is it worth the risks? Is it the answer to the question I keep hearing: "Why do you race?" It's a good question to ask anyone in the racing business, but usually the people who ask me are thinking about my 1978 crash.

I've been hurt about as badly as you can be hurt and still come back. Two things a driver fears most are death and fire, and I looked one in the eye as the hot tongues of the other lapped my skin.

I've suffered broken bones, nothing compared to the agony of burns over 40 percent of my body. I had 20 operations on my left hand, still others on my legs. But I came back and I'm racing, because there's nothing else I'd rather do.

When the sound is all around the cockpit and the smell of exhaust and oil saturates the air, and the crowd is cheering and waving, and the wind and heat are pounding in my face, there's simply nowhere else I could be than behind the wheel of a race car. Nothing else matters.

CAN A WOMAN DRIVER EVER WIN THE INDY 500?
Janet Guthrie made history when she entered in 1976

Going for gold and glory at the Indy 500

- 10 YEARS OF INDY 500 WINNERS
- 1968 — Bobby Unser
 - 1969 — Mario Andretti
 - 1970 — Al Unser
 - 1971 — Al Unser
 - 1972 — Mark Donohue
 - 1973 — Gordon Johncock
 - 1974 — Johnny Rutherford
 - 1975 — Bobby Unser
 - 1976 — Johnny Rutherford
 - 1977 — A.J. Foyt

As anyone can see from the list of the last-10 years' Indy winners, good things often happen more than once.

Back in 1958, 23-year-old Texan A.J. Foyt qualified for his first Indianapolis 500. It wasn't what we would call a triumphant debut—he spun out on lap 148—but he finished 16th in a race won by Jimmy Bryan.

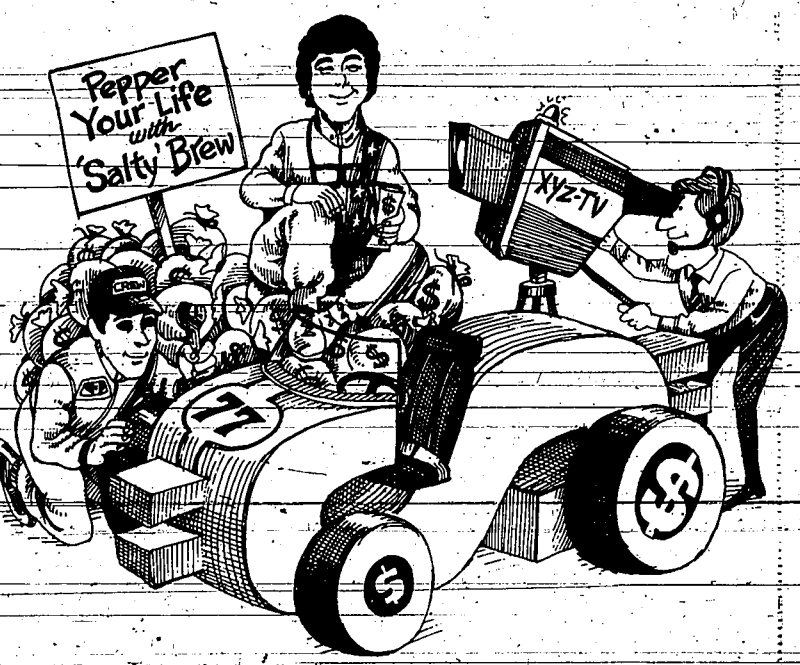

Now, 20 years later, that Texan is still around. He won his first 500 in '61, following up with triumph in '64, '67 and again last May. The '77 victory made him the first driver to carry away four checkered flags.

Many people thought that would be enough for him, but he's shooting for No. 5 this year. Cautious, moody and unpredictable, Foyt would like to get that record just a little bit further out of reach of the rest of us—and almost any driver would want to do that, as long as the burning desire to win keeps from cooling to an ordinary red-hot ember.

Three veterans have won two 500s each. Al Unser won back-to-back in '70 and '71. His older brother Bobby Unser won in '68 and '75, and Johnny Rutherford in '74 and '76.

All three are capable of joining a select group of triple winners: Wilbur Shaw ('37, '39, '40); Louis Meyer ('28, '33, '36); and Mauri Rose ('41, '47, '48).

Mario Andretti, who has been devoting most of his energy to winning the Grand Prix title, took the 500 in 1968. Gordon Johncock, who battled Foyt for the lead until he engine blew itself to fuses in the last minutes of the '77 race; won the rain-shortened 500 in '73.

your health See a dermatologist

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb, I am a woman of 29 and I would like to know how I can get rid of blackheads on the chin and side of the face. I have used hot water and then squeezing, which only leaves my face red.

Should I go to a dermatologist or beauty parlor? What can be done? I know when I wear makeup it only makes the problem worse. Can you help with some information?

Dear Reader: Squeezing is usually a mistake. The soaking with hot water is often helpful. It sounds like you are having enough trouble to warrant seeing a dermatologist. Most of the conditions can be controlled today with modern methods.

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

The forehead is accumulated sebum, an oily secretion from the glands in your skin. Washing and soaking two to three times a day with warm water and a milk soap may help. The oily secretions can sometimes be controlled by wiping the face clean several times a day with alcohol or a mixture of half alcohol and half water.

You are right that many cosmetics make matters worse. You need to avoid anything that contains oil or grease, as the skin is too much oil in the first place.

If a cosmetic dermatologist may want to give you a peeling agent designed to peel off surface skin cells that tend to block the pores and cause the fatty secretions to accumulate. A good one here is vitamin A acid (not the same as vitamin A). Peeling agents that do the most for you need to be prescribed and used under a doctor's care.

In addition to drying and peeling the doctor may want to give you some antibiotics. These eliminate the tiny bacteria inside the pores that break down the fat into irritating products and cause inflammation.

I am sending you the Health Letter number 82, Acne. Can be treated to give you a better idea of the problem and what can be done about it. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1151, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10101.

Dear Reader: Diabetes was a screening and my husband had his blood checked. It was a finger blood test. His reading was 45. Two nurses checked the stick color with the small charts on a bottle and said it was normal.

A check later he received a letter stating it was abnormal. When he called the Diabetes Society they said their cut-off was higher than the nurses'. They said he had no diabetes, but had low sugar. What does this mean? What is the cure? He does not appear to have any symptoms. Do symptoms develop from diabetes?

Dear Reader: I'll give you some good advice in just two words, "forget it." While some people do have real trouble with low blood sugar, questionable reading in a healthy person who has no symptoms, nothing. A lot of people are inaccurately diagnosed as having low blood sugar (hypoglycemia) because the point is not widely understood.

It is commonly said that values below 50 are abnormal but 25 percent of the normal population has readings below this level and that is not a useful criterion. In a study of continuous monitoring of healthy people 42 percent had levels below 50 and 50 percent of healthy people had levels as low as 34 and 37. So again, forget it.

Goedhart, Reitkerk wed

WENDELL — Nancy Goedhart and George Reitkerk were united in marriage Apr. 28 at the United Presbyterian Church of Wendell.

Rev. Francis Hörner performed the ceremony. The bride is the daughter of Henry Reitkerk, Wendell. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Goedhart, Wendell.

The bride wore a gown of tulle, organza and embroidered chantilly lace. The sheer organza corsage bodice had a high lace neckline and a satin striped front.

The bishop sleeves were adorned with cameo lace and a satin striped organza insert. The sleeves were edged with lace cuffs trimmed with organza ruffles. The skirt featured a chapel train with many layers of self-fabric ruffles and a draped apron tapered to the back bodice.

The bride wore an alecon lace bandeau with pearls, which held a two-tiered fingertip veil of imported English tulle edged in lace. She carried a bouquet of starburst mums, peach roses and baby's breath.

Glenda Higginbotham, Dietrich, was maid of honor. Janet Goedhart, Wendell, was bridesmaid.

John Donkersloot, Wendell, was best man. Groomsman were Jack Ricketts, John Reitkerk and John Goedhart.

Steve Saitz, nephew of the bridegroom from California, was ringbearer while Toni Goedhart, niece of the bride from Wendell, was flower girl. Teresa DeWitt of Wendell was at the guest book and Kathy Veerstra of Jerome was hostess.

The buffet luncheon reception was held at the Wendell American Legion Hall. Music for dancing was played by the Siles brothers.

Reception assistants were Sally Hoagland, Nita Clemmons, Jeanne Kirk and Shill Phillips, all Wendell.

The bride and bridegroom work for the bride's father at S-J Dairy.

After a wedding trip camping near Stanley the couple will reside in Wendell.

Twin Falls Boys Staters picked

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twelve Twin Falls High School students have been selected to attend Boys State in Boise next month.

Frank Mogensen, commander of the Twin Falls American Legion Post, said the delegates were selected on a basis of citizenship, academic achievement and leadership. All 12 delegates will be sent to the local high school this fall.

Richard Duane Crowley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Crowley, is a member of the LDS Church and is active in music and outdoor sports. He is junior class president, an Eagle Scout, member of the Order of the Arrow and attended the national Boy Scout Jamboree. He is a member of several musical bands, was in the Reader's Digest national speaking contest for two years, and is active in football, basketball, H-Y, and youth government.

Stuart John Starry, son of Amy Starry Hlebert, is interested in a career in law or engineering. He is vice president of the Debate Club, and of the Barnacle Club. He won honors in the district and state debate contests, and is a member of the Brotherhood of Magicians and of the National Forensic League. He is interested in football and performs as a professional magician.

Patrick Wayne Allison, son of Dr. and Mrs. Ed Allison, is active in DECA, was president of his junior high school student body and student body manager last year. He was club editor for the high school annual this year and a member of the Positive Action group. He is interested in medicine, probably dentistry, as a career.

Michael James Harrison is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jules Harrison. He hopes to become a marine biologist and is now interested in sailing and scuba diving. He is an Eagle Scout, treasurer of the Young Republicans, aquatic director for Boy Scout camp, president of his Explorer Post, member of the Bruin news staff, and active in the Oceanic Society and Outdoor Living Association.

Robert L. Newell is interested in law as a career and active in outdoor sports. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Newell. He is active in football, basketball and works with the city recreation department. Newell is a member of the top Modern Woodmen Oratorical team, and is an ardent hunter and fisherman. He is active in Debate Club, scouting and school organizations.

Keith Briggs, son of Dr. and Mrs. Kenneth Briggs, is interested in music, swimming and speaking. He is a member of the Christian Center and of the High School Finance Committee, serves as a lecturer-instructor at Herrett's Planetarium and is a member of the debate and swim teams. He also is active in judo.

Douglas Donald High, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert High, is a Lutheran Church member, interested in a military and music career. High is commander of the local CAP Cadets, vice president of his church youth group, active in band, received the Elks Club teen award and is a football player and enthusiast.

Steve Michael Wirsching, son of Mr. and Mrs. Neal Wirsching, is a member of the Christian Church and likes math and coin collecting. He is an Eagle Scout, president of his Explorer Post, received his God and Country award and attended the national Jamboree. He is a Bruin newspaper reporter and member of H-Y. In addition, he plays football, basketball and baseball.

Robert Keith Myrland expects to attend the U.S. Naval Academy. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. I.P. Myrland and is an Eagle Scout. He is active in the school student body serving as room representative. He was a YMCA Youth Government senator, H-Y president and staff member at Camp Bradley. He is a member of the German Club and interested in sports.

Kevin Burton Huish, son of Mr. and Mrs. Burton Huish, a member of the LDS Church, would like to be an interpreter in German and is interested in photography. Huish is vice president of the high school student government, editor of the yearbook and interested in scouting and choir. He is a member of the Outdoor Living Association and International Club.

Scott Douglas Nass is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Nass. A member of the Lutheran Church, he is interested in veterinary medicine as a career. He is an Explorer Scout, active in 4-H and is state vice president of the 4-H clubs as well as president of his church youth organization. He is a member of his church choir and interested in all sports.

Jeffrey C. Denison is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Denison and is interested in architecture and music and is a member of the LDS Church. He is an Eagle Scout, president of his church seminary class, a member of the Twin Falls madrigals and high school choir. He is active in basketball, swimming and enjoys hiking.

Each Boys State candidate was required to complete an essay on two of three subjects including the Panama Canal Treaty, the Regional Airport or his own hopes for the future.

Forrest Hymas will show a modern native American art collection; game mounts will be from Ernest Hancock; artifacts and paintings will be displayed by Doria Baldry; stone ahead and gun collections, Hap Wilson, and old cars by the Magic Valley Horseless Carriage Club.

Winds subside, temperatures drop

Twin Falls, North Side, Burley-Rupert area: Clearing and cold with subsiding winds tonight. Chance of spotty frost by Wednesday-morning. Overnight lows 30 to 35 degrees with high temperatures Wednesday 60 degrees.

Canons Prairie, Hatley, Lower Wood River Valley: Partly cloudy, less winds and cold tonight. Mostly sunny and warmer Wednesday. Overnight lows will be in the 20s with high temperatures Wednesday 55 to 60 degrees.

Synopsis: A rather fast-moving

Pacific cold front arrived in the Magic Valley Tuesday. Rainfall amounts ranged from a trace at Burley to .16 of an inch at Castelford. Strong-gusty winds dominated the weather picture. Behind this front is chilly air. Under cloudy skies and gusty winds, temperatures were mostly ranging in the 30s. As skies clear and winds diminish—late—tonight, Wednesday morning temperatures should be near 30 degrees with areas of frost likely. The forecast for Thursday through Saturday calls for mostly dry weather with a warming trend. High temperatures 65 to 75 degrees and low temperatures 35 to 45 degrees.

Firewood available

MAGIC VALLEY — Free firewood will be available on the Sawtooth Forest as soon as access roads dry out sufficiently to allow travel.

Sawtooth Forest Information specialist Velda Lawrence said she anticipates firewood-cutting areas in the South Hills will open sometime between June 1 and 15.

Free-use firewood permits for up to 10 cords will be issued for designated cutting areas within the Deadline Burn. Outside of the South Hills area, limits of five cords of firewood will be granted.

Firewood will also be available in designated areas in the South Hills outside the Deadline Burn area at a cost of $10 per cord.

Permits are required to cut firewood on national forests and are available at district offices throughout the Sawtooth Forest. Permits must be obtained from the district in which the wood will be cut.

Permits will also be available this year at self-issuing stations at the Rock Creek and Oakley Guard stations on the main access roads to the South Hills.

Spark arresters with openings no larger than 0.23 inches will be required on all chainsaws.

Many Magic Valley residents take advantage of the firewood cutting in the Sawtooth National Forest although the $10 per cord charge in the South Hills is expected to reduce some of the activity in that area of the forest.

Court refuses homosexual appeal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court refused again Monday, in a homosexual case, to take up the question of how far states may go in regulating the private sex activities of adults.

The justices, in a brief order without comment, rejected an appeal by Eugene Enslin, operator of a massage parlor and other places of business in Jacksonville, N.C., who was convicted of violating the state's "crime against nature" law.

A number of appeals have gone to the high court challenging statutes against private homosexual activity, but the justices have declined to accept any for full review.

However, the court in 1976 sustained without opinion a Virginia law, similar to North Carolina's, which applies to voluntary homosexual acts by adults in their own homes.

On the other hand, the court has provided protection for the personal privacy of women seeking abortions and of people, including minors, wanting to obtain contraceptives.

In orders and opinions on returning from a two-week recess, the court:

- In a 7-2 ruling, eased some of the restrictions on FBI wiretapping in connection with narcotics and other crimes.
- Rejected an appeal by 60 House members who have been trying for months to block implementation of the Panama Canal treaties.
- Agreed to rule on the constitutionality of a New York law barring aliens from teaching in public schools. But it let stand a ruling overturning New York's law requiring aliens licensed as doctors to become citizens within 10 years. In a third case involving aliens, the justices ordered a lower court to re-examine the constitutionality of California's requirement that all "peace officers" be citizens.

— Agreed to examine the federal law requiring all foreign services officers, except those of the very highest rank, to retire at age 60.

— Refused to block one order requiring an Iowa reporter to disclose sources and notes she used in writing articles about a divorce case.

— Turned down a bill collector's challenge to the Texas law forbidding telephone harassment.

In the North Carolina case, a Jacksonville detective testified he sent a 17-year-old Marine from Camp Lejeune to entice Enslin into committing sodomy so that Enslin could be "run out of town."

Hagerman teachers raises approved

HAGERMAN — Hagerman teachers and non-certified employees all will receive about a 10 per cent salary increase.

The new salary schedule for next year, adopted at Monday night's board meeting, brings the starting salary in the Hagerman district to $9,500.

Ken Black, superintendent, reported that the Idaho State Bank has given the school $1,000 in honor of this year's senior class. Norman Hansen, bank manager here, made the announcement earlier to the school officials.

Trustees also approved next year's school calendar, which calls for the 1978-79 term to begin Aug. 28 and conclude May 25, 1979.

Gibb chosen speaker

WENDELL — Dr. Richard D. Gibb, president of the University of Idaho, Moscow, will be commencement speaker at the Wendell High school graduation Thursday at 8 p.m. in the physical education building.

Talks also will be given by the five seniors who are in the top 10 percent of the class scholastically. They include Janet Taylor, Ronald May, Wayne Butler, Tracie Smith and Kattie Rose Goodner.

Butler, also senior class president, will introduce Dr. Gibb who is a native of western Illinois. He received the B.S. degree in vocational agriculture and the M.E. degree in education from the University of Illinois. He also has a Ph.D. in agricultural economics from Michigan State University.

Gibb became president of the University of Idaho in July, 1977. Dr. Gibb was Indiana commissioner of Higher Education, for three years and held the same post in South Dakota from 1968 to 1974. He spent 10 years at Western Illinois University where he was dean of administration, administrative assistant to the president and assistant and associate professor.

Awards at the commencement exercises will be presented by Principal Will Spalding and Superintendent Lawrence LeaRoe, with Ted Taylor giving the American Legion award.

Mail positions open soon

TWIN FALLS — Applications are now being accepted by the Twin Falls Post Office for clerk and carrier positions.

Lloyd Libert, postmaster, said interested individuals can submit applications until May 18.

Applicants will then be notified of a date for examinations which will serve as a basis for selection of workers.

Libert said the minimum age for clerks is 18 and the minimum for carriers is 18 years with no maximum age limit. Salaries range from $13,604 for full timer starting pay to $16,189 per year after increases. Part time employees receive up to $6.04 per hour with increases up to $7.04 per hour.

Application forms are available at the local post office. Libert said persons working as clerks will be indoors and must be able to handle mail sacks weighing up to 70 lbs. They will sort mail and distribute it using a complicated memorized system. Carriers will work outdoor and some will drive while others will be walking. They must be able to carry mail sacks up to 35 lbs. and will have to load and unload mail at times. Clerks are required to work on their feet most of the day, reach, stretch and throw mail.

draw trumps, cash his ace of spades, lead the nine of diamonds to dummy's 10 and be sure of an entry to get three club discards on the good spades. Once the jack of diamonds was led, the queen, nine and seven became equials. But it was necessary to drop the queen in order to be able to force an entry to the dummy with the 10 in case trumps failed to break 3-2.

Here is another old-time unblocking hand. It is the sort of hand that everyone will make the second time around, but most players will play carelessly at trick one and wind up with nothing but regret.

With the preceding paragraph as the hint, the play should be easy. Start with the ace of diamonds and drop his queen.

Windfall test

JEROME — A test of state Health and Welfare Department "windfall" regulations is scheduled to take place in 5th District Court in Jerome today.

Carol Wade, 32, Jerome, is suing the state of Idaho over the loss of one month's benefits last August when she received an insurance claim for damage caused by a fire in her home.

The health and welfare department considered her insurance money a "windfall" resource, although she used the money to replace damaged furniture and possessions, according to Idaho Legal Aid attorney Louis Garbrecht of Twin Falls.

The department's rules say a welfare recipient may have only a maximum of $500 on hand to be eligible for benefits. "They feel they must go by way of the written regulations," Garbrecht said. "It's an uncommon thing that happened, and the regulation has no provision for it."

He said he will claim for Mrs. Wade that she never lost her eligibility because she reinvested the insurance check into furnishings.

Mrs. Wade is the mother of two and receives benefits under the aid to dependent children program.

An earlier departmental hearing resulted in Mrs. Wade's claim being denied, and the district court suit is an appeal of that hearing decision, Garbrecht said.

"We felt the decision was wrong, because under law the personal property of people on welfare is exempted in figuring the $500," he said.

The amount of benefits involved in the case is about $250 to $300, Garbrecht said.

Flood costly to CSI

TWIN FALLS — Flooding caused by Friday's break in the High Line Canal caused "between $5,000 and $6,000 damage" to College of Southern Idaho property, CSI President Dr. James Taylor said Monday.

Taylor, speaking at the CSI Board of Trustees meeting, said waters from the canal partially destroyed a CSI fish farm located in Rock Creek Canyon. A gravel road leading to the farm and an irrigation pump were also damaged.

Taylor said CSI was apparently uninsured against this particular type of damage, but added CSI attorneys are still investigating the college's legal coverage. CSI attorneys are also checking into possible litigation in an effort to regain losses, Taylor added.

Jensen blasts McClure

CASTLEFORD — Dwight Jensen, Democratic candidate for the U.S. Senate, Monday accused incumbent Republican Sen. James McClure of being willing to "let Idaho farmers to continue suffering from inadequate returns on their labor and investment."

Jensen told the Castleford Men's Club McClure is on record saying farm workers ought to be treated differently from other workers.

"What he is really saying is that he does not think farmers can afford to pay fair wages. Of course farmers can't pay good wages unless they can get a fair income for crops and livestock," Jensen said.

Jensen said better farm prices constitute the number one priority facing agriculture and said Sen. McClure is not helping solve the problem.

Charging McClure has made no effort to solve the farm price problem, Jensen reiterated his own campaign promise to come up with a detailed farm proposal to guarantee a fair return on investment.

Jensen charged McClure with trying to set off a labor-management fight on the family farm while he avoids the real priority—the need for a boost in farm income.

CSI gets $38,000

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho is $38,000 richer today, thanks to a fund raising drive which began in 1964. The Civic Auditorium Association Inc. delivered a check for that amount Monday to CSI President Dr. James Taylor. The check represented the final funds raised in a 1964 fund raising effort for construction of a civic auditorium for the Magic Valley.

The fund raising began before CSI was in existence, said association treasurer David R. Mead. Speaking at the monthly CSI Board of Trustees meeting, Mead said the original goal of the fund raisers was construction of a Magic Valley auditorium for local, state and nationally known artists.

But soaring land prices and building costs made construction of an auditorium solely by the association seem doubtful. And in 1966, the association and the College of Southern Idaho combined assets to fund the CSI Fine Arts Center. Just over $500,000 — raised by the association in its fund raising drive — was turned over to CSI. Monday's check marked the final funds raised and pledged collected by the association, said Harry Brumbach Jr., association president. The association will now incorporate, Brumbach said.

By JEFF SHER Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A Montana rancher is trying to sell 130 acres he owns in the core area of the historical City of Rocks south of Burley.

Zon Lloyd, who once owned a 1,500-acre ranch in and around the City of Rocks, has put 130 acres of the 170 acres he still owns in the historical area up for sale because he can see "no great advantage to keeping it."

Lloyd said he doesn't expect any federal or state government agency to offer to purchase the land in the immediate future for the purpose of creating a park there.

Cassia County farmers and ranchers last year largely opposed a proposal by Idaho Senators James McClure and Frank Church to turn the City of Rocks into a national monument.

The City of Rocks is a spectacular geologic area of huge boulders where immigrants bound for California traveled in the 1840s.

Lloyd said he would be willing to sell the land to any government agency who wanted to buy it "for the purpose of preserving the area, but he said he does not think the area will soon be converted into either a state or national park."

Lloyd acknowledged the only reasonable use for the area would be to preserve it as a park because "it's a pretty second-rate range land."

He said he sold his own land in the area for the same reason local ranchers opposed the park plan, namely, because of problems with the people who visited the area.

"There was so much public going there it was a question of who owned it then, you did or they did," Lloyd said.

He remembers gates left open and cattle shot, and he is sympathetic to the arguments of the ranchers, who don't want to deal with the increased public use of the area park status would create and who don't want their property broken up.

Without the prospect of a forthcoming offer from a government agency, Lloyd put his property on the market.

He thinks the 130 acres could be used for a summer home area, and he said he has had several offers for the property, including one from an Grem, Utah, man. He also expects an offer from a Twin Falls man shortly, he said. Lloyd would not disclose the names of those who have offered to purchase the property or what they plan to do with the property.

As of today he had not sold the property. He did explain, however, why he is retaining 40 acres in the City of Rocks for his family.

He said the property contains "quite an outcropping of silica and mica," and he is holding the land on the basis that mining of those minerals may someday be economically feasible.

And even if the area is never mined, Lloyd plans to retain the property "for the family, so that we've got a place to go that's ours."

Spokesman for Idaho Sen. James McClure said when the original National Park Service proposal was rejected after last year's Burley hearing, the federal agency was asked to submit a revised proposal.

According to one Park Service official, a revised proposal calling for a monument of less than 6,000 acres was submitted in draft legislation form to the Department of Interior on April 20.

Plant won't meet deadline

Twin Falls seeks sewage order extension

By JEFF SHER Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls City Council Monday asked the state of Idaho for more time to find out what ails the city sewage treatment plant.

But officials with the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare said any extension of the DHW order to solve problems at the plant would be granted only if the city could show good reason why it cannot meet the original 240-day deadline given in January to get the plant functioning.

At its working luncheon Monday, the council asked DHW district environmentalist Dan Von Lindern, Al Murray, chief of the division of water quality, and Orlando Dalke, manager of grants and training, if a 240-day order issued in January by DHW to identify the plant's problems and solve them could be extended.

The city was asked to request the extension, Mayor Leon Smith told the DHW officials, because a cooperative effort between the city and the plant's designer and primary equipment suppliers collapsed.

As a result, the city hired an outside consultant, James M. Montgomery, Consulting Engineers, Inc., to identify problems at the plant, but the consulting firm said its study would probably not be completed for at least 150 days, while only about 100 days remain on the consent order.

Murray told the council, "There's probably a good chance (for an extension), if you justify it," but he noted that any decision on an extension would be up to the board of health and welfare.

Von Lindern added that more than the date of the compliance order might be changed. He said a new order might be issued requiring specific plant modifications, depending on the findings of the consultant.

In other sewage-related discussions, mayor Smith complained to the city administrator that assistant sewage plant superintendent Larry Filer had been slow in vacating the residence he occupies at the sewage plant.

In early April the council ordered Filer to immediately vacate the residence, which is provided to him in return for overtime hours he works at the plant.

The council later softened and allowed Filer until the beginning of May to find another residence.

Despite threats Monday from several council members to move him out in 24 hours, Filer appeared before the council just before last night's public council meeting and convinced them to allow him until the end of May to vacate the residence.

Councilmen Chris Talkington and Hank Woodall both said later they did not consider the meeting with Filer an executive session because it was not planned in advance, although both said the discussion with Filer could have been handled in public. Talkington added, "There was a decision made."

At the luncheon, the city's progress in upgrading plant personnel to levels established in the DHW consent order was also discussed, and Filer again figured prominently.

The DHW order required the city to hire four, grade-three certified employees at the plant, but as of today there is only one grade-three employee working at the plant.

Additional Grade-three workers, DHW feels, are necessary at the plant if the facility is to be run efficiently.

In general, a grade-three sewage plant worker must have four years of experience and, two years of job-related education.

City Manager Jean Millar told the council no additional grade-three employees have been hired because until recently because the city administration believed that three plant employees (Filer and two others) would qualify to take an examination in June to achieve grade-three certification.

But DHW informed Filer and one other plant employee within the last two weeks they would not be allowed to take the exam because they did not meet the minimum requirements for grade-three certification.

Filer was the closer of the two men to meeting the standards. He needs one more year of experience to qualify for the grade-three exam.

Murray said he informed city officials as early as December that Filer would probably not qualify for grade-three certification this year.

Assistant City Manager Tom Courtney defended the city's hesitation in hiring new plant employees.

Courtney said the city could not be sure what DHW's decision would be concerning the possibility of Filer and others being allowed to take the grade-three certification tests because the regulations allow so many substitutions of experience and job-related education and are impossible to interpret.

Dalke, however, disagreed with Courtney's assessment of the regulations and said, "They're pretty well spelled out."

He added that DHW is not likely to lower its standards because that would "be defeating the whole purpose of the certification program itself," and Idaho certified employees could "lose reciprocity" with other states.

At present, Millar said, two grade-three employees are being interviewed for employment at the plant to bring the city into compliance with the DHW order.

Councilman Gordon Cox asked Millar how long it would be before one of the new grade-three employees would take over Filer's position as assistant plant superintendent.

Plant Superintendent Don Snelling said Filer "knows more about the physical plant than I do" and would have to train any new grade-three employees coming into the plant.

Snelling added that, in his opinion, it would not be necessary to replace Filer as assistant superintendent.

Expansion approved by hospital board

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — An $8 million expansion of Magic Valley Memorial Hospital was approved by the hospital board Monday night.

Twin Falls County voters twice have voted down general obligation bond issues to finance the expansion.

Monday the hospital board voted to go ahead with the expansion without going to voters a third time.

The hospital will finance the expansion with revenue bonds provided through the Idaho Health Facilities Authority, an independent agency providing financial assistance to Idaho health care facilities for plant and equipment improvements.

To repay the $8 million in bonds and interest, the hospital board proposes a rate increase of between 5 and 6 per cent.

Hospital board members were told the revenue bonds will be paid off over a 30-year period at a cost of 6.75 per cent interest.

In addition, rates at the hospital will increase at a rate of 6 per cent annually to counter inflation, the board announced. The 6 per cent rate hike to counter inflation will take effect in October.

The proposed expansion project will add 74,000 square feet of hospital space to the total facility.

"We have studied this thing to death," Hospital Board Chairman Joe Savage said prior to the vote Monday night. "Tonight we have to make up our minds. Many times we have been ready to go but have had our plans changed by one thing or another. Tonight we have to decide."

Hospital administrator James Rosenbaum said the board held many special meetings in preparation for final action Monday night.

Hospital building committee members drafted the final proposal in a meeting recently with the architect and accountant.

Rosenbaum said it is hoped the expansion, phases 3 and 4 of the master hospital plan, will be ready for a call for bids by the end of the year.

He said certain improvements are necessary if Magic Valley Memorial is to maintain necessary standards.

With the rapidly rising cost of construction, board members feel there are no bargains in the future, only what can be saved by as early a building project as possible.

Included in the expansion proposal as submitted by R. W. Flier, building committee chairman, will be eight modern surgical units and expansion and relocation of the intensive care and cardiac care unit near the surgical area.

Other improvements will include recovery rooms, radiology, pathology, cardiopulmonary services, medical records and improvements in the building's heating and cooling equipment.

The proposed expansion is generally scheduled for the county owned property to the north or rear of the hospital building.

About 17,000 square feet of the present hospital will be included in the remodeling.

Savage said a major benefit of the project will be relief from overcrowding in the emergency room, one of the most crowded facilities in the building at this time.

Rosenbaum said a study by Tonkin, Johnson and Associates, chartered certified public accountants, shows expansion and updating is needed now. He said the forecast of inpatient and ancillary service beds shows an increase of about 17 per cent in hospital care demands by 1983. He said the hospital, which serves an eight county area, is presently overcrowded in many areas.

An inflationary cost of about 13 per cent during the coming year alone in construction costs makes the issue more pressing, he said.

Rosenbaum said the hospital board will seek $7.95 million revenue bonds to cover the project. Regular hospital revenue will provide another, estimated $1.25 million to be used over the next two to three years to cover equipment and financing costs.

Flood waters

COLLEGE of Southern Idaho officials survey flood waters, which washed across part of their trout farm in Rock Creek Canyon near Blue Lakes Boulevard South Friday at the peak of flooding.

The CSI hatchery was not damaged as severely as other property in the canyon, although a home on the property was flooded and landscaping and a bridge were damaged.

By Sunday, Twin Falls Canal Company crews had repaired the breached canal and farmers down the line began receiving irrigation water early Monday. Farmers at the end of the line received water early Tuesday. Their ditches were dry for three days.

Rehab Center hearing Monday

By RAY SULLIVAN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—An open hearing on the firing of the executive director of the Magic Valley Alcohol Rehabilitation Center in Twin Falls is scheduled next Monday night, the board of directors of the center says.

The board of the Magic Valley Alcohol Rehabilitation Center for men and the Women's Crisis Center voted in its regular meeting Monday night to hold the hearing at 7:30 p.m. in Judge James Cunningham's courtroom in the Twin Falls County Judicial Building. They agreed to an open hearing if the former directors, Jim and Beas Butcher, asked for one.

The Butchers have said since they may 1 firing that they wanted an open hearing. Jim Butcher confirmed this morning they still want the doors open. Rupert lawyers Don Chisholm and Larry Duff will represent the Butchers.

Greg Fuller, chairman of the board, said the division of management for Idaho's Department of Health and Welfare also notified board treasurer Marilu Lampe that MVARC's books will be audited—per her request—May 30. MVARC receives most of its operating funds from a $100-a-month fee from the state's agency to provide alcoholic rehabilitation treatment.

Mrs. Lampe's request followed charges by the Butchers that their firing resulted from their push since last Fall to have the books audited.

However, the board said in its resignation letter to the Butchers that they were fired because they could not get along either with the board or the executive board (made up from the full board) or staff members of the center. They could not manage finances and that they had not set up an effective alcohol treatment program in Twin Falls.

The MVARC board also authorized acting director Edmond Cormier to hire house managers and other non-professional personnel for the two centers pending a 60-day review period, followed by a six-month probation. They could not manage finances until they take approval of the board and Cormier.

Cormier said he has interviewed four persons for two positions at the Women's Crisis Center but so far has not found any acceptable candidates. He said he is trying to locate someone fluent in Spanish for one of the positions.

In other action, the board:

•Delayed approving claims of compensation time three women who were on a pre-interviewing counseling program the board cancelled after firing the Butchers. Speaking for the board, Fuller said the board would review the claims of Marianne Sessions, Dorothy Coulton and Rose Kline if they would submit in writing a dated breakdown of the number of hours in each case claiming they had worked. Sessions is seeking 10 days of compensation time, and owes $264 for room and board, Lampe noted. McCormie is seeking $300 and Kline $350. The latter two say their figures are settlements they would accept for hours worked and compensation time built up.

•Approved raising the salary of men's center secretary Irvy Evans from $800 to $850 a month. Although the board noted the center's funding is shaky since many clients left the two centers following the Butcher firings, it agreed with Fuller's reasoning that Evans performs a valuable service—they could not afford to lose. Fuller said a raise at this time for Evans would be a vote of confidence for her.

•Heard Lampe report that MVARC's accounts receivable went up $1,396 in April for a total of $14,577 on the fiscal year, which ends June 30.

The board agreed to send former clients owing money a letter, along with a statement, in an attempt to collect some of that unpaid amount.

•Directed Cormier to look into ways of cutting center expenses by seeing which clients could pay part of their board charges using food stamps. Cormier said he has begun checking into such a program. Board member Dan Mehl noted the board had authorized the Butchers to check into the food stamp program three to four months ago, but that the matter apparently had not been followed up.

•Approved Archie Walker of Gooding and Bruce Glandon of Burley as members of the board. Walker is chairman of the board of the Idaho Regional Treatment and Training Center in Gooding, which handles alcoholics. The board now number 16 persons, leaving five vacancies, Fuller noted.

Lagoon tests stymie Rupert

RUPERT—A seepage test on the sealant lining the bottoms of its new sewer lagoons is stymieing Rupert because it may take months to pump enough water into the three lagoons to offset the evaporation rate.

Officials unveiled their problem Monday afternoon at a special city council meeting with officials of the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare and the federal Environmental Protection Agency.

Rupert Public Works Superintendent Don Courtright said a full test showed the water level in the lagoons is dropping faster than the city can pump water into the lagoons. He said cell 2 has the highest level at 28 inches. Cell 1 is at 14 inches and cell 3 is between 16 and 18 inches.

Replying to a query by Rupert Mayor W.F. "Bill" Whitton on whether the two agencies would help cover the cost of pumping in supplemental water, Warren McFall, EPA's grant manager for Idaho, said they would not. He said the city can't pump enough water into the three lagoons to offset the evaporation rate.

Courtright said the city is getting supplemental water being pumped into the lagoon system by Magic Valley Foods and from two city fire hydrants, and still is having a problem. As one official noted, the lagoons could be filled by August, but that is not the problem.

McFall noted "something has got to be wrong" if the water level can't be topped before hot weather even arrives. Either "there is too much seepage" or the lagoons are over-designed.

The city, state and federal officials discussed closing off one cell if it is found that the lagoons are larger than needed, which would mean the sealant would crack and have to be replaced if and when that cell would be used in the future.

No cost was placed on such possible action, but Midstate Distributing Co. of Pocatello, which is supplying the sealant, is being paid $486,365 to seal the cells.

In the meeting Monday, officials noted they were concerned with completing the seepage tests, which take 10 days to two weeks to perform, before a performance bond with Midstate expires.

However, Gary Lee, project engineer with Hamilton and Voeller, which is overseeing the project, said today the bond does not run out until Midstate meets all contract obligations and the work has been given final approval.

Gooding Senior Citizens seek home

GOODING—The Gooding Senior Citizens Organization still is looking for a permanent home, according to Howard Niccum, of Wendell, chairman of the group's building committee.

Nicum met with the Gooding City Council Monday night to see what the status is on the public meeting room which will be included in the new city hall-city library complex, currently being remodeled by August.

Earlier the seniors had thought this room could provide a permanent home for them. The group's current meets twice weekly for room meals and activities at the former state tuberculosis hospital, where they share facilities with the alcohol treatment center and some other state offices.

"There's no quarrel about it," Niccum said today, "but we both know that meeting room in the new city hall is not really satisfactory for us, even if there was money to complete the kitchen facilities."

According to present city plans, the room will have lights, carpet, and a lowered ceiling but there will not be money to install kitchen facilities.

Nicum said the seniors need a place where their supplies and materials could be locked and which they would not have to share the space with many other groups.

Nicum said both Mayor Don Morrow and city councilmen assured him they would "work with" the seniors in an effort to find financing for another meeting place.

The group will continue meeting in the old TB hospital as long as the state-owned facility is available, Niccum said, but with the proposal to place a woman's prison there still pending, he said he feels it "is only a matter of time before we will have to move."

He said the Tuesday luncheons draw from 50 to 60 persons, and "more to 100" persons attend the Thursday meals, although attendance drops this time of year.

The county-wide senior group applied for a federal grant last year to finance purchase of a building in a more central location, but the grant was turned down.

Wendell residents complain of extra high water bills

WENDELL—New water meters will be installed for two Wendell residents whose bills appeared unreasonably high last month.

Six persons representing four different households complained to the Wendell City Council last week about their bills. It was explained that during the winter no meters were read and the amount of water used was only estimated for billing costs.

April was the first month meters were read. This explanation apparently satisfied Ken Davis, according to City Clerk Mary Wolford. She said Frank Merritt left the meeting before any decision was reached on the matter.

But councilmen decided something must be wrong with meters on property owned by Leticia Olsen and Sarah Harms.

Ed Harbaugh, who rents the Harms property where he operates an auto repair shop, said it would be impossible to use the 32,000 gallons for which he was charged.

Olsen said her bill had jumped from $5.28 to $35.10 which must be inaccurate since she had not lived in the house for three weeks during April because of a fire at the place.

Council members agreed that new meters should be installed in the Olsen and Harms property.

The council agreed to purchase liability insurance coverage from Jack Davis, Halley of Consolidated Agency for for the same cost as last year. The coverage is for all city owned vehicles.

It was reported Jim Burke has been appointed official police chief for a year. He has been acting in that capacity for some months. Garnet Sanderson has been hired as a policeman, bringing the city's police force to two members, Wolford said.

Autopsy reveals woman died of .22 bullet wound

RUPERT—Minidoka County Coroner Kim Christensen said today autopsy results show a 56-year-old Heyburn woman died of a .22-caliber bullet wound in the heart early Monday morning in her home.

Christensen said the autopsy on Betty Mitchell was done by Dr. David Wick at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital in Twin Falls Monday afternoon. The coroner said Mrs. Mitchell, who lived a half mile north of Heyburn at 500 West and 350 South roads, also had a .22 caliber bullet lodged in her stomach.

Christensen said he could not rule her death a suicide until after he determined the sequence of the bullets entering her body, if the bullet lodged in the stomach had been deflected from entering the heart and where her husband, Jay, was in the house at the time of the shooting.

The coroner admitted there is no scientific method to determine the sequence of the bullets. "Just by speculation, if one went through the heart that would seem like that was the second shell," Christensen surmised.

He added that authorities would check to see if the bullet in the stomach had struck a bone and been deflected from entering the heart.

Minidoka County Sheriff Ray Jarvis is questioning family members, the coroner said. The incident took place between midnight and 12:30 a.m. Monday.

Jerome board, teachers near agreement

JEROME—Teachers and school board negotiators in Jerome are moving closer to agreement on next year's teacher contracts.

In a Monday night negotiating session, Jerome Teacher Organization spokesman Wesley Gates said the teachers have indicated they will accept the board's offer of a 10 percent pay raise and a plan for unused personal leave day reimbursement.

Gates said a poll of teachers found nearly unanimous acceptance of the salary increase offer and three-to-one acceptance of the personal leave reimbursement offer.

This means only two other items, a sick leave bank and a fringe benefit package, remain to be settled by the two negotiating teams, who meet again Thursday.

Gates called a sick leave bank plan presented by the district negotiating team Monday a "fairly good compromise," and said 170 representatives will be discussing it with teachers.

Under the personal leave reimbursement plan, a teacher would receive half a day of extra sick leave for every unused personal leave day. About a health care benefit package, board chairman Alvin Chonacky said the district's offer is "not completely closed." But he said the district had made a good offer which "doesn't leave any fat in the budget."

The teachers want to be able to use the district's 87 percent, per-month health insurance support for any health plan of an employee's choosing. The district has stood by its offer to pay that support only for one company's plan.

The salary increase is somewhat lower than the 11.7 percent increase originally requested by teachers. But board members have said the 10 percent increase is possible only because of planned personnel cuts. The district plans not to replace two resigning elementary school teachers in music and physical education.

The sick leave bank plan, which has gone through two redraftings, now calls for creation of a sick leave bank committee to award up to 200 days extra sick leave in case of illness or accident of a member of the bank or certain of his immediate family. Membership in the bank would be voluntary, and employees would contribute unused sick leave days to the bank each year.

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 17, 1978

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A good time to work out the details of any arrangements or plans you may have in the works. Get facts and figures straight to know just where you stand now.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Enlist minor chores you might have to do early and spend more time on important matters. Take health measures you may need and become more dynamic.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Get into the details of any recreational activities for the near future. Pleasing the male gender is most important at this time. Avoid those who bicker too much.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Be firm at home and see to it that there is more harmony and stability there. Confide in a bigwig and get good advice.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Study into money matters ahead of you and handle those that are most important first. Set up a better budget and plan for any needed repairs. Avoid one who twists things around.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Look into the profits that can come from a new business that another is proposing, but be sure it is ethical. Try to please an adviser more and get better results in the future.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Going after your personal aims with enthusiasm will see you gaining them easily. Be with progressive individuals and accomplish a good deal.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Get all the confidential information you need so that some new venture can be made understandable. Be with individuals you like and show more understanding, devotion. Be happy with loved one.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Being with good friends and gaining their backing for your project is wise now. If invited to a social affair, attend only if close ties will be there. Be sure you dress nicely.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Showing that you are a conscientious citizen is important today. Avoid some extra work that will bring you added security. Avoid a situation that could get you into trouble.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 30) You have fine ideas that can bring advancement now, so put them in operation. New doors of opportunity will be open to you. Take that trip you are planning with another person.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 31 to Feb. 19) Show greater efficiency in handling promises you have made to others. Be more willing to do little errands for mate, loved one. Avoid a troublemaker who could get you into trouble.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20) Be conscientious about handling association matters and get good results now. A situation arises unexpectedly that needs careful handling. Show that you are good in an emergency.

COMMUNISM

Q. "Have any of the free-love communes been successful?"
A. It's debatable. There may still be quite a few of the households functioning here or there. Most, though, have come apart. Couples tend to pair off, choosing to devote themselves to each other to the exclusion of the rest. Quakers crop up over shared work. Heavy arguments seem inevitable. Some theorists who've looked into the matter now think the unsuccessful commune experiments tend to prove that monogamy is instinctive, although others disagree.

Cancer-causers in bacon ordered eliminated over year

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Suspected cancer-causing substances in bacon are to be reduced in a month and then nearly eliminated next year under a program announced Monday by the Department of Agriculture.

By next year the level of sodium nitrite added to bacon to prevent botulism and add taste and color — will be cut by two-thirds and replaced with other preservatives.

Carol Foreman, assistant secretary of agriculture, said, "The bacon on the market contains cancer-causing nitrosamines in sufficient quantities that we find it to be a hazard to health and that's why we're acting to reduce them."

The nitrosamines — formed when the sodium nitrite is heated when bacon is fried — have caused cancer in laboratory animals. There has been no link between the substance and cancer in humans, Ms. Foreman said.

"We don't believe there is an imminent health hazard involved. If there were... we would act immediately, obviously, to ban the product," she said.

She said the changes would have little impact on bacon prices because 90 percent of the nation's approximately 600 bacon producers already have reduced sodium nitrite use to the 120 parts per million level required by June 15.

Ms. Foreman proposed that in a year meat packers reduce further the level of sodium nitrites to 20 ppm and add 20 percent potassium sorbate to the level of nitrosamines will be about 5 ppb, an amount barely detectable.

The regulation requires the addition of 550 ppm sodium ascorbate or sodium erythorbate, which would allow only 10 parts per billion nitrosamines to be formed when bacon is fried.

She said the Agriculture Department and the meat industry also are studying the safety of other cured meats, particularly fermented sausages and pork.

A Meat Institute scientist said the industry supports the immediate reduction wholeheartedly and will go along with the further reduction. The initial regulation was criticized by Michael Jacobson, executive director of the Center for Science in the Public Interest, but he said the second step is "welcome."

Idaho grain planting behind 1977

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho's spring grain planting, delayed by wet weather, was 50 percent complete on May 1 compared with 80 percent a year ago.

The Idaho Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said most crops are making good progress and that soil moisture is ample in most areas.

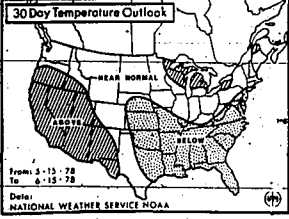

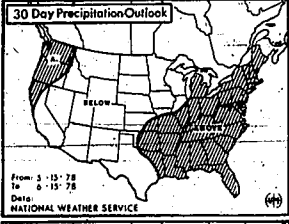

The sugar beet crop was 75 percent planted by May 1 and the potato crop was 25 percent planted.

The May 1 forecast of the 1978 winter wheat crop is 37.8 million bushels, 17 percent above last year's 32.4 million bushels, but is 3 percent less than the 39.2 million bushels in 1976.

Growers expect to harvest 840,000 acres of winter wheat, one percent above last year's 830,000 acres but 6 percent below the 890,000 acres reported in 1976.

The expected yield of 45 bushels per acre is six bushels above last year and one bushel above the 1976 figure.

Idaho hay stocks were estimated at a record 1 million tons compared with 738,000 last year and 533,000 tons the previous year. The disappearance of 1.9 million tons from Jan. 1 was 5 percent more than during the same period a year ago.

Utah wheat crop gain forecast

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — The Utah Agriculture Department says — with 1977's drought in the past — a pre-harvest forecast of the state's 1978 winter wheat crop indicates a 15 percent increase in production, compared to last year.

The state agency said the 1978 winter wheat crop, planted late last fall, "was growing well in most counties, and many fields were nearing the boot stage. And soil moisture supplies seem to assure a good crop this year."

The department said 177,000 acres were planted in winter wheat last fall — down 2 percent from last year. But production is estimated at 4.78 million bushels — up from 4.14 million bushels harvested in the 1977 drought year.

As a newspaper carrier you could earn bonus points by selling subscriptions. These points can be traded for cash, trips, or super prizes.

As a newspaper carrier for the Times-News you would get paid for every newspaper you delivered. It adds up. A newspaper route could give you the extra money you need for new clothes, a hobby, or going out with your friends.

Through newspaper route work, you would learn to handle your own business. You would learn how to sell, how to manage money and how to organize your time. Route work could be a valuable first job for you. As a Times-News carrier you would deliver newspapers to your customers through Fridays. On Sunday you would deliver newspapers to customers in the morning.

Talk it over with your parents. If they agree that a newspaper route would be a valuable experience for you, fill out the coupon below and mail it in. Or you can phone 733-0931 or the toll-free number listed under "Times-News" in your local phone book.

GOOD LUCK!!

Maybe the next time you want to go to the movies, you won't have to ask Mom and Dad for the money.

Talks hint of possible move of Pacers to Salt Lake City

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — The financially troubled Indiana Pacers may be sold to a group that wants to move the NBA club to another location, but nothing firm has been presented and club officials say they will keep the franchise in town.

John Jewett, the club's executive chairman, and James Walker, its representative on the NBA Board of Governors, commented on the latest round of rumors Monday as the club managed to squeeze out another semi-monthly payroll.

Walker acknowledged reports that an offer had been made to move the club to Salt Lake City and possibly bring the Buffalo-Braves to Indianapolis, but said the news of such plans "is premature."

"Our preference still is to work this thing out on our own through local financing," Walker said. "An offer has been made from a purchaser that would move the club out of town. We had a couple of those last year. But they still have some things to work out before they can come back to us. That is not our preference, however."

Jewett, an officer of F.C. Tucker Inc., which owns 30 percent of the team, said his group might be willing to start in the pro basketball business "if needed." He represents a minority stockholders group but is chairman of the team's five-member executive committee.

However, Bill Eason, who represents Arena Sports Inc., owner of 70 percent of the team, said he "would like to turn the responsibility over to somebody else."

Ozzie and Dan Sina, textile executives from New Jersey who formerly had the St. Louis franchise in the old American Basketball Association, confirmed they had talked to Eason about moving the Pacers to Salt Lake City, but said the move was just "speculation" now.

Jewett said his group's "primary interest is to keep the Indianapolis franchise here, but if the club were to be moved at all, it would have to be replaced with some other NBA club in Indianapolis."

Buffalo franchise owner John Y. Brown is reportedly willing to move to Dallas, Birmingham, Miami or his hometown of Louisville and presumably would add Indianapolis to the list of possibilities if the Pacers were moved.

Eason said his group already has put $6.5 million in the Indianapolis-based franchise even though it has debts of $1.5 million and needs $500,000 to get through the current fiscal year. However, he added it wanted to make a condition of any sale the requirement that Indianapolis keep an NBA franchise.

Mud slide

SLIDING, if it can be called that, is Craig Crandall of Troy National Laundry. The afternoon rains made the diamonds slippery to everyone except those trying to slide into bases. The wet fields created a bounce, not a slide. Twin Falls Realty stopped Troy National in the last inning 13-12.

Olympic host for L.A. slim

United Press International

The Los Angeles Times, in a report from Athens, said today the IOC had presented the city with "an ultimatum" and city representatives "were all but abandoning their efforts to secure a contract for now."

The Los Angeles delegation was pinning its waning hopes on an agreement to award the city the 1984 games conditionally Thursday, pending a compromise on the contract at some later date "outside the pressure cooker of this meeting," said John Argue, president of the Southern California Committee for the Olympic Games.

But, the Times reported, "the consensus ... was that it is now highly doubtful whether Los Angeles will be awarded the games, conditionally or not." The IOC members are in a tough, negative and resentful mood toward the Los Angeles demands, the report said.

Los Angeles bid for the 1984 Summer Olympics crumbled further when sources on the International Olympic Committee's executive board disclosed the U.S. Olympic Committee did not support Los Angeles' proposed contract.

The U.S. Olympic Committee originally chose Los Angeles over both New York and New Orleans as the American bidder for the games. But Los Angeles, as the lone city to apply, has put forward such a tough contract that first the IOC and then the USOC have refused to accept it.

A source on the IOC executive board said the USOC had advised Los Angeles its contract must be within the rules of the IOC and if it is not, USOC support will be withdrawn. Without the approval of the USOC, the IOC will not consider the bid.

The source said USOC President Bob Kane agreed with the IOC that the present contract that gives the Los Angeles city council and not the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee the IOC veto power over costs was not acceptable to the USOC. Kane declined to comment.

The source said the disagreement between the IOC and Los Angeles included:

- the refusal so far by Los Angeles to draft a contract within the framework of the existing Olympic rules;
- the insistence that the city council take over the cost-control veto;
- the Los Angeles demand that it maintain all television rights and;

— the failure of Los Angeles to form an official organizing committee.

Lawyers from both sides spent hours trying to find some compromise Monday with just two days left before the full IOC session votes on the issue.

Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley, who was scheduled to arrive later Tuesday from West Berlin, was expected to take control of the final stages of the negotiations.

Although Bradley's relations with the IOC are much better than some of the other Los Angeles delegates', the mayor's hands are not so much as his city council. No major changes in the contract can be made without the council's vote.

Among the official Los Angeles delegation is councilman Bob Ronka, who believes even the current contract called unacceptable by the IOC is not tough enough, because it does not cover a potential $20 million or more on security expenditure.

Ronka, however, has not been included on the six-man delegation to make the official Los Angeles presentation to the IOC Wednesday.

Tribe closes Salmon take

BOISE (UPI) — Closure of spring chinook salmon fishing by the Nez Perce Indian Tribe on the Rapid and Little Salmon rivers in the interest of conservation and to assure adequate escapement was announced Monday by Joseph C. Greenley, Idaho Department of Fish and Game director.

"Such action is to be highly commended," Greenley said. "The tribe, through its cooperation, has demonstrated its interest in conserving a valuable fishery and has aided the department in its management programs for salmon.

The tribal executive committee, empowered to act for the tribe, closed the fishery for spring chinook on the Rapid River and the Little Salmon from its mouth to Rapid River until 5,000 adult fish are impounded at the Rapid River hatchery.

Indian fishing will automatically resume when the 5,000 salmon are counted, except that waters within 100 feet of trapping facilities will remain closed until 7,000 fish are held.

Meantime, Greenley said prospects for a general spring chinook season have improved.

Lower Granite Dam is the key and as of Sunday, the count at the dam was 21,490 fish. An assurance of 32,000 fish at Lower Granite is necessary before consideration is given to a favorable recommendation.

The Fish and Game Commission is expected to announce a decision on the spring chinook season when it meets May 18 in Boise.

Atlanta Hawks coach honored

ATLANTA (UPI) — Atlanta Hawks Coach Hubie Brown, who led a team of young and inexperienced players into the NBA playoffs, has been named Coach of the Year.

The Hawks, after four straight losing seasons, finished 41-41 under Brown in his second year as coach. The record was good enough to land a playoff berth, but the Hawks were eliminated in the first round by the Washington Bullets, who have advanced to the championship series.

Brown received 28 1/2 votes from sports writers and broadcasters in 22 league cities, nine more than Lenny Wilkens of Seattle. Doug Moe of San Antonio was third while Jack Ramsay of Portland and John McLeod of Phoenix tied for fourth.

The Hawks made the playoffs with only one genuine star — forward John Drew — and a roster of 25, a few holdovers and rookies, including 28-year-old Charlie Criss; the smallest player in the NBA at 5-foot-8.

Brown said an award "bestows just praise on a young and deserving team that worked extremely hard to overcome difficult odds."

Those odds included owner Ted Turner's decision to make the payroll the smallest in the league.

Brown said recently he had to find a style of play that would enable Atlanta to be competitive.

"I decided we would commit ourselves to 48 minutes of pressing and trapping on defense," he said. "It was the only way we could survive, two of our guys against their one."

The Hawks were picked to finish at or near the bottom of the NBA's Central Division. But the team started the year with an 8-1 streak and gate receipts almost doubled.

Brown was the third Hawks' coach to win the honor but the first since the team was moved to Atlanta from St. Louis in 1968. Others were Richie Covert in the Hawks' last year in St. Louis and Harry Gallatin in 1963, the first year in which the award was given.

Martin sorry for outburst

CHICAGO (UPI) — New York Yankees Manager Billy Martin says he will apologize to catcher Thurman Munson about an argument aboard the team's airplane Sunday night.

It was Mickey Rivers, not Munson, with whom he was angry, Martin indicated.

"He (Munson) was right, and I was wrong, and I'm going to tell him so," the hot-tempered Yankee skipper said Monday prior to the club's game with the White Sox.

Martin and his star catcher argued as the plane was landing at Chicago Sunday night after a 10-9 loss in Kansas City. But Martin and other Yankees played down the significance of the near-altercation.

"It was all a misunderstanding," Martin said. "I have the greatest respect for Munson. I was not and he wasn't. If anybody was at fault, I was."

Martin said the argument "had nothing to do with Thurman. It was about someone else," and that indicated the target of his anger was center fielder Rivers.

Rivers confirmed that Martin "talked rough" to him after a ninth-inning incident in which Martin believed Rivers did not hustle after a hit which scored the winning run for Kansas City.

"I didn't like the way Mickey played," Martin said. "Maybe he's got a sore leg; so we'll sit him down and see."

Rivers was out of the lineup for Monday night's game and White Sox Manager Bob Lemon said, "It might not be a bad idea with two left-handers going for us." Rivers said he doesn't "see why he (Martin) carries on and carries on and carries on. I think you should talk to a man and get it over with. I told him I messed up. That's all I could tell him."

"I don't want to look bad. Nobody wants to look bad and nobody wants to be embarrassed."

"I think the whole thing was bad. You can't get the respect of the people shouting like that. When a man overlooks it because anything can come out when a man is drinking, I don't hold that against anybody."

Rivers said Martin "never asked me about my leg. I told him the leg was bad but if he put me in the lineup, I'd go out and do my best."

"He talked rough to me, but I don't mind. I overlook it because I want to go out and play and look good for the team."

Munson reportedly made repeated visits to Martin in the airplane before the shouting match occurred.

Yankee public relations director Mickey Morabito sided with Martin, saying the incident was blown out of proportion.

"If it had happened in the hotel, or in the airport, after we got in," he said, "nobody would have paid any attention to it. But it happened on the airplane and so it got blown up in the papers."

Munson was unavailable for comment, and according to Morabito, "has not been talking to anybody about anything all year."

NBA coach of the year

MILTON RICHMAN Rivers, not Munson point of flare-up

NEW YORK (UPI) — Billy Martin was so upset he had tears in his eyes.

What brought them on was a mixture of frustration and depression plus sheer anger, directed not so much at Thurman Munson as at Mickey Rivers.

This was more than two hours after the Yankees had dropped a 10-9 decision to the Royals Sunday, the second time in three days they had lost a ball game in the bottom of the ninth, and stewing there in a plane carrying his team from Kansas City to Chicago, the Yankee manager hadn't gotten over it yet.

Nobody likes to lose, but with Billy Martin, it goes far beyond that. Each defeat is like some terrible personal tragedy that eats him up inside. The only thing that can possibly make any loss worse in Martin's mind is when he sees one of his players not hustling enough, not trying hard enough to win. Then the tragedy becomes a catastrophe.

The Yankees' loss to the Royals Sunday affected Martin like that, and in this case the player he felt he had "short-legged" it on him, not giving it everything he had, was Mickey Rivers.

At first, Martin was said to be angry with Munson. The two did have words on the plane, but Martin wasn't nearly as upset with Munson as he was with Rivers. Munson had thought Martin was criticizing him, but Martin was more concerned with Rivers.

Personally, Rivers is a likable sort. He's also an exceptional ballplayer — on given occasions. He has this one big drawback, though. His proudest light is out. He's not always with it.

When Rivers is in the mood, he looks like a million dollars. But, the thing that exasperates everybody most about the speedy little Yankee center fielder is that no one can ever be sure whether he's in the mood or not.

Rivers has a way of performing in moon. He seems to be at his best only when the moon is orbiting in complete harmony with the rest of the planets. Other times, forget it.

In Saturday's contest with Kansas City, the Yankees won and Rivers had one hit and a stolen base, but he also forgot to run on a 2-and-2 pitch with two out. That oversight didn't escape Martin's attention.

Not did the Yankees manager fail to notice that Rivers let one fly ball fall 10 feet in front of him Sunday and then came nowhere near Ames Otis' game-winning double to right center in the ninth.

Rivers claims his leg is bothering him, which may be true.

What Martin knows for sure is how Paul Blair and Reggie Jackson nearly tore each other apart in a collision hustling after Otis' game-winning blow in the ninth inning of Friday night's game. And after he saw the way Rivers played Sunday, Martin angrily made up his mind he'd go with Blair in center field instead of Rivers. Until Rivers got back in the mood, anyway.

In the clubhouse after Sunday's game, Martin was not. Seeing Rivers joking with Cliff Johnson, he snapped:

"That's right, laugh it up on the bus, guys, keeping laughing."

One of the things Martin did before leaving Kansas City was call Al Rosen, the president of the Yankees.

"Billy was upset and I can understand why he was," says Rosen. "When he sees something on the field he feels is intolerable, he gets all well up inside. He'll do everything he possibly can to win. He felt Rivers could've done much more than he did against Kansas City."

Al Rosen can appreciate Billy Martin's general feelings over defeats because he was the same kind of competitor when he played for Cleveland. He was just as outrageous as Martin but inside it churned him up just as much.

"One time when Chuck Stobbs struck me out three times in Washington, I broke down and cried like a baby," Rosen recalls. "Striking out three times was bad enough, but to think Chuck Stobbs was pitching — that really killed me."

He won 15 games for the Senators one season and hung around the majors 15 years.

Royals Rich Gale holds hard hitting Boston to two hits

KANSAS CITY (UPI) — Rich Gale limited the powerful Boston Red Sox to two singles Monday night and allowed no runs in the first inning to give the Kansas City Royals a 2-0 victory.

Gale, making his third major-league start, allowed a single to Rick Burstein in the third and another to Jerry Remy in the eighth in juggling his record to 3-0.

He set down 13 batters in the first and pitched hitting streaks of 11 games by Carl Yastrzemski, six games by Fred Lynn and four games by Carlton Fisk. Gale walked five and struck out five.

By the Royals on from Omaha Gale, called on from Omaha to not allow the American League's hottest hitter — Jim Rice — to get the ball out of the infield as he struck him out twice in four appearances.

A bases-loaded double play ball by Rice ended the only Boston run in the third.

Hal McRae poked a one-out single and Al Cowens was hit by a pitch from loser Alan Ripley prior to Hurdle's error. Hurdle's error allowed Cowens to score.

City added one more run in the seventh when Frank White doubled, moved to third on a sacrifice bunt by Willie Wilson and scored when shortstop Remy's burlesque mishandled Fisk's throw to second base on Wilson's single.

surgery last December. The Royals scored twice more in the second on a walk to Toby Harrah, a single by Kurt Bevacqua and a double by Mike Harrove.

After Richie Zisk had singled to open the third, Sundberg doubled and Juan Betancourt drove in with a double to start left field off the glove of shortstop Robin Yount. A sacrifice fly by Harrah brought in Sundberg, with Texas' fifth run.

The Rangers scored two more runs in the fourth on a single by Sundberg, a double by Benitez and a single by Harrah and John Lovestein added a solo homer in the seventh.

Milwaukee scored twice in the fourth on a single by Paul Molitor, a double by Bill Cooper and a single by Jim Wohlford, and Sixto Lezcano hit his sixth home run to lead off the fifth. Milwaukee scored an unearned run in the eighth and added two more runs in the ninth on a walk, a two-run error by reliever Len Barker and a pitch by gloveless Len Barker.

Ferguson Jenkins, who gave up seven hits and struck out six in eight innings, won his fourth straight game.

Toronto 10, Angels 6

TORONTO (UPI) — Sam Ewing keyed a club record nine-run, sparkling win in the pinch-hit two-run single in the seventh inning Monday night to spark the Toronto Blue Jays to a 10-7 triumph over the California Angels.

Trailing 6-1 in the seventh inning, the Blue Jays sent 14 batters to the plate against three pitchers. Starter Ken Brett, who had been coasting with a four-hitter, walked Rico Carty, gave up a single to Otto Velez and walked Rick Cerone to load the bases.

Hartzell, who walked in one run and was touched for Ewing's single. The rally continued with two fielding errors, a run-scoring single by Rick Bosetti, a run-scoring double by Bob Bailor, a run-scoring single by Roy Howell, a fielder's choice RBI by John Mayberry and a run-scoring single by Cerone. Rico Carty scored two runs in the inning.

The Angels staged a four-run rally of their own after two were out in the second when they ripped starter Jerry Garvin for five hits sandwiched around a walk. Brian Downing's run-scoring single, a two-run double by Bobby Grich and a run-scoring single by Merv Rettenmund highlighted the inning.

Yankees 4, Chisox 1

CHICAGO (UPI) — Sparky Lyle yielded two hits in 3 1/2 innings of relief for his sixth win and Buddy Dent batted in two runs with a bases-loaded single Monday night to lead the New York Yankees to a 4-1 decision over the Chicago White Sox.

Lyle took over from starter Jim Bevan, the winner, with one out in the sixth after Bob Molinaro singled, Don Kessinger walked, Jorge Orta singled to drive in Molinaro for the lone Chicago run. Lyle faced only two batters.

The Yankees overpowered White Sox rookie starter Rich Wortham with 10 hits after their runs in 4 1/3 innings. Singles by Reggie Jackson, Lou Piniella, Chris Chambliss and Graig Nettles brought in one run before Dent's single scored Piniella and Chambliss. The other Yankee run came in the fifth on a double by Jackson and Piniella's single.

It was the ninth win in the last 12 games for the Yankees and the 18th loss in the last 23 for Chicago.

Center fielder Mickey Rivers, the center of turmoil after the Yankees' 10-9 loss to Kansas City Sunday, was benched by manager Billy Martin in favor of Paul Blair. Martin exchanged heated words with several of his players after Sunday's loss but later confirmed that it was Rivers' apparent lack of hustle which triggered his displacement.

DETROIT (UPI) — Jim Slaton, backed by Mill May's three-run homer, pitched his first complete game of the season Monday night in a 4-2 victory by the Detroit Tigers.

ASTORIA PHILLIES 0

HOUSTON (UPI) — Right-hander J.R. Richard fired a two-hit shutout.

Watson slammed his 10th home run of the season Monday night to give the Houston Astros a 5-0 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Richard's victory was his second two-hitter of the season and his second complete game win over the Phillies in six days. It was also his second shutout this year. He beat the Phillies 5-1 on a four-hitter last Tuesday.

Watson unloaded a two-run homer in the fourth inning.

over the Seattle Mariners. Slaton yielded five hits to win his fourth straight game following a season-opening loss. It was his first complete game since being assigned during the off-season by Milwaukee, for whom he had seven complete games in 31 starts a year ago.

Jason Thompson sent Rusty Staub to third base in the third inning and one out later May planted his sixth home run of the season into the upper deck to pin Glenn Abbott, with his second loss in three decisions.

Rookie Lou Whitaker singled with one out in the first, was hit at second on a booted double play attempt on which Staub was out at first and then scored when Thompson ripped a single to right.

Craig Reynolds and Bill Stein sandwiched sacrifice flies around the walk to produce the two Seattle runs in the fourth inning.

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Jerry Turner's bases-loaded pinch hit single with two out in the 14th inning Monday night drove home Bill Almon to give the San Diego Padres a 4-3 win over St. Louis, the Cardinals' fifth straight loss.

Reliever Pete Vuckovich retired the first batter he faced in the 14th, but then gave up a single to George Hendrick. Almon forced Hendrick at second and advanced on a wild pitch.

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Rookie Dwayne Murphy, hitting .059 entering the game, lifted a sacrifice fly in the sixth inning Monday night to score pinch runner. Mike Edwards with the run that gave the Oakland A's a 3-2 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

After the Indians grabbed a 2-1 lead in the fifth on Ron Hassey's sacrifice fly, the A's chased starter and loser Rick Wise, 2-6, with a two-run sixth which was triggered by a leadoff double by Wayne Gross. Gary Alexander followed with a single, moving Gross to third, and Alexander took second when the throw from the outfield went to the plate.

Edwards ran for Alexander and Jim Essian, who singled home Oakland's first run in the fourth, fouled out. Dennis Kinney replaced Wise and Gary Thomsom, hitting .143, singled home Gross and Murphy followed with his fly ball to left.

Andre Thornton homered off Oakland starter Alan Wirth in the second inning and singles by Johnny Grubb and Buddy Bell chased Wirth in the fifth. Joe Coleman, who hurled three innings to his scoreless inning streak to 15 in picking up his third triumph against no losses, served up Gene Tenace and Rick Sweet drew walks to load the bases and Turner follows with game-winning hit to give rookie Mark Lee his second win.

San Diego had gone ahead 3-1 in the seventh when Tenace hit a two-out, two-run homer and Sweet followed with his first major league homer. The home runs came off reliever Dave Hamilton, who had taken over for starter Bob Forsch in the sixth inning. Forsch was forced out of the game with a pulled hamstring in the left leg.

The Cardinals led the score at 3-1 in the eighth with right fielder Dave Winfield's throwing error permitting the tying run to score. Jerry Mumphrey began the inning with a single but was forced
