YOU might say this Twin Falls youngster was caught with his pants down in downtown Twin Falls Saturday. He didn't seem to worry about being arrested for indecent exposure, but when eyes were cast his way from a passing truck, his modesty got the best of him and he decided that enough was enough.

Whites massacred in Zaire

KOLWEZI, Zaire (UPI) — Rebel troops went into a frenzy of killing and looting in which they massacred at least 150 whites during their occupation of Kolwezi, Belgian and French army officers said Saturday.

French Foreign Legionnaires and Belgian paratroopers occupied the town and later began airlifting out about 2,500 survivors, many of them weeping and traumatized with shock.

I toured the white residential areas of Kolwezi with two French legionnaires and counted 24 bloated corpses lying in the roads, in gutters, outside gates and in shot-up, abandoned cars.

Outside one house, five whites lay huddled together. The leg of a woman had been partly eaten by dogs roaming the streets.

Kolwezi was once a pretty lakeside town, but now the stench of rotting corpses hung heavily on the quiet streets.

The Belgian paratrooper chaplain, who asked not to be identified, told of the scenes of "carnage" that he had witnessed.

"I saw in an area of four streets dozens of dead whites. In some houses, the rebels had thrown hand grenades into rooms and then opened fire on whoever remained alive. There were many women and children among them, their bodies riddled with bullets. The walls were pockmarked with shrapnel."

The chaplain sunk his head in his hands. "Oh my God, it was so horrible and awful," he said.

Inside a small house on the edge of what is called "the new area," I saw a pile of dead whites, knee-deep, all on top of one another.

A man had thrown his arm around a small girl in a futile attempt to protect her. In one corner, a dead woman leaned against a wall still holding her fingers in her ears as if still expecting an explosion.

Soldiers said the whites had been gunned down at point-blank range. There was a pile of spent machine-gun cartridges on the lawn, amid the scattered debris of looted suitcases and automobiles.

Shocked refugees at the Kolwezi airstrip told how, in one incident, the rebels grabbed a 16-year-old girl and chopped off her head with one blow of a machete.

Medics said many of the wounded had machete cuts. One man came in with 17 bullet wounds, and surgeons battled to save his life.

An American mechanic, Bill Starkey of Boise, Idaho, said several rebels came to his house on Thursday and "cleared out everything I have including a box of golf balls. Then they told me to get into a car and they drove around a while in the late afternoon as if looking for a specific place.

... the battle continued after the airport was captured

"Near an open space beside a bombed out school they told me to get out and run. I tried to argue with them but they wouldn't listen.

"Then I ran and when I was about 20 feet away, they fired a single shot which hit me in the lower right side. I ran a bit further and dove into a ditch. Then they just got back into the car and drove away."

Belgian housewife Marie Simeon said of the nine days of terror in which the rebels held the town.

"They came into a home and asked for something to eat or they wanted something to drink. Then they wanted the keys to the car and the people gave everything.

"But when they leave, they kill the people." The horror left some people numb, others angry.

Nevadan a victim?

BOISE (UPI) — Morrison-Knudsen Co. said Saturday it has an unconfirmed report that one of its employees may have been killed in Zaire.

A company spokesman said the U.S. State Department said it had received a report that the body of Lonnie Glen Jr., 39, Yerington, Nev., was seen floating in a pond in Kolwezi.

But the spokesman said they have not been able to confirm the report.

The State Department also informed the company that Glen's wife, Harriet, and 6-year-old daughter, Annetta, had been evacuated to Kinshasa.

Another M.K. employee, William Starkey, 32, Boise, was reported to have been shot in the leg and also evacuated.

M-K was able to evacuate some 60 employees and Glen and Starkey were the only ones reported missing.

However, the company said it had not been able to verify the State Department report because of communication difficulties with Zaire.

PARIS (UPI) — Three gunmen, believed to be Palestinians, opened fire with submachine guns on 150 French charter passengers waiting to board an El Al flight to Israel at Orly International Airport Saturday. Officials said the three terrorists and one policeman died in a 10-minute shootout.

Three policemen, a stewardess and a passenger were seriously injured during the gunbattle and several other passengers were slightly hurt by flying glass.

Although first reports said there might have been as many as six gunmen, police official Jean Perier told a press conference, "Nothing permits us to think there were more than three."

At about the same time as the Orly attack, there was a false bomb scare at Paris's other international airport, Roissy-Charles de Gaulle. An El Al plane about to take off for Tel Aviv was evacuated and searched but no bomb was found and the flight left on schedule.

Orly police chief Paul Roux said identification on the bodies indicated the three slain gunmen were Palestinians. They carried Lebanese and Tunisian passports, although the documents were believed to be forged.

Roux said the gunman were ticketed passengers on a flight scheduled to leave about the same time as the El Al flight.

The moonies are looking for Idaho money

By DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — "Moonies" followers of South Korea's Rev. Sun Myung Moon, were in the streets of Idaho cities and the halls of the Idaho Statehouse the past two weeks, practicing the same deceptive fund raising techniques which national Unification Church leaders say they have put an end to.
The number of cases of deceptive fund raising by members of the Unification Church have been reduced, Dan Fefferman, national missions coordinator for the Unification Church told the Times-News in an interview Tuesday. Fefferman was in Idaho as part of a national tour designed to spread the beliefs of the Unification Church.
But at the very moment Fefferman and other national and state Unification Church leaders were explaining how they were correcting improper fund-raising activities by church members — giving the Times-News a three-page official national policy on fundraising — six Unification Church members were in Twin Falls raising money by the very procedures Fefferman said the Church had "largely corrected," and which were prohibited in the national policy.
In addition, just days earlier, Unification Church fund raisers were going from office to office in the Idaho Statehouse and the Boise City Hall building, also practicing deceptive fund raising tactics.

Lynn Musgrave, Idaho Director for the Unification Church, said the presence of the fund-raising team in Twin Falls at that moment, and the methods they were using for raising money, was a "coincidence."
"I didn't know we had a fund raising team there," Musgrave said. "My fundraisers don't fund raise like that," she added.
National fund-raising policy of the Unification Church insists members identify the organization for which they are raising money. Not to do so might lead persons to believe they were contributing to some organization other than the Unification Church, the policy says. Such misrepresentations, whether intentional or not, have led to bad feelings about the Unification Church, Fefferman said.
Yet in at least five instances in Twin Falls this week, Unification Church members solicited funds not for the Unification Church but for organizations with other names. The Unification Church membership of the fund raisers was acknowledged only after instant questioning.
Unification Church members, sometimes called "Moonies" for their belief that Korea's Sun Myung Moon is a prophet of God with a new message for mankind, have been at the center of controversy for several years. The organization has been labeled "not a Christian church" by the National Council of Churches of Christ and criticized as "anti-semitic" by the American Jewish Committee.

Most recently the Church has been part of the focus of the Congressional "Koreagate" probe, for alleged connections to the South Korean government.
Unification Church leaders have criticized the formal finding by the National Council of Churches that many of their beliefs are "incompatible" with Christian beliefs, and have denied that their doctrines are anti-semitic. They have also criticized the Congressional hearings as producing no evidence linking them with the South Korean government.
But some of the sharpest attacks on the Unification Church have centered on what critics have said were "deceptive fund-raising tactics." The Catholic News, a weekly newspaper, published a special edition in February of 1977 listing what it called 61 "front organizations" of the Unification Church. Critics have charged that Moonies have solicited funds for these organizations — bearing names like "Judaism: In-Service to the World" and the "International Federation for Victory Over Communism" — in an attempt to raise money from persons who would not knowingly give funds to the Unification Church.

Unification Church members have also refused to identify themselves when fund-raising, critics say, telling contributors only that they work for "Christian activities," or "Christian youth organizations."
Unification Church members have denied any intentional misrepresentation of Church activities, has taken place, but acknowledge "over-zealous" members of their organizations have individually misrepresented their cause.
"We do have over-zealous members," Fefferman told the Times-News, adding "my feeling is that this has improved." Fefferman said there was "no excuse" for Unification Church members misrepresenting themselves when soliciting donations, but added "that is a problem that we have become aware of."
In response to the criticism, the Unification Church has issued a three-page "National Policy on Fundraising," Fefferman said. Parts of that policy are as follows:
"Vague, misleading or misrepresentative statements that imply something other than the true nature of our work can only cause serious complications and damage."
"All members must clearly display official Unification Church Identification Cards on their outer garments."

Now, it's 15¢
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Beginning on Memorial Day, it will cost 15 cents to mail a letter with first-class postage.
"Americans will not get any special 'citizens' rate' proposed by President Carter for personal letters."
Both results were assured Friday when the board of governors of the U.S. Postal Service voted to turn down Carter's idea and accept the recommendation of the Postal Rate Commission for an across-the-board rate increase effective May 29.
The National Association of Greeting Card Publishers, which had backed the Carter plan, promptly filed a federal court suit in Washington challenging the legality of the new rate.
NACGP press spokeswoman Jackie Roddy said the action was "a bare-bones appeal" asking the court to reconsider the decision. "We are not seeking an injunction," she said. "We are just appealing the decision."
The rate increases will boost postal revenues by an estimated $1.9 billion.
Carter's proposal for a "citizens' rate" would have kept the cost for personal letters at 12 cents while increasing the first-class business rate to 16 cents, but the board voted 4-2 to accept a system without the citizens' rate.
It subsequently voted 5-1 to implement the new set of rates.
Robert Hardesty of Austin, Texas, and Wang Ching of Honolulu dissented on the citizens' rate issue, while Ching was the sole dissenter to the overall rate increase.
The new rates become effective at 12:01 a.m. local time May 29 — Memorial Day.

Two Soviet UN workers charged with espionage

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two Soviet employees of the U.N. Secretariat were arrested Saturday on espionage charges involving the passing of U.S. Navy secrets to Moscow, FBI Director William Webster announced.

Rudolf Petrovich Chernyayev, 43, a U.N. personnel officer, and Valdik Aleksandrovich Enger, 39, an assistant to the U.N. Under-Secretary General, were arrested while in the process of receiving or passing classified material along a highway in Woodbridge, N.J., a spokesman said.

Rudolf Petrovich Chernyayev, 43, a U.N. personnel officer, and Valdik Aleksandrovich Enger, 39, an assistant to the U.N. Under-Secretary General, were arrested while in the process of receiving classified material from an American along a highway in Woodbridge, N.J., a spokesman said.

A spokesman said the American cooperated with the FBI and passed classified documents to the Russians on several occasions. "Most of the meets (where material was exchanged) were along the New Jersey Turnpike and the Garden State Parkway," he said.

In addition, Webster said the complainant named Vladimir Petrovich Zinyakin, 39, an attaché in the Soviet Mission to the United Nations, as a co-conspirator. Zinyakin was not arrested because he possesses diplomatic immunity, the FBI said.

A spokesman said the Soviets were charged with "conspiring to communicate and deliver and transmit to a foreign government, in this case the U.S.S.R., sketches, photographs, photographic negatives, plans, documents, writings, notes and information relating to the national defense of the United States."

He said the classified material the Soviets sought included "anti-submarine warfare, submarine detection systems and their platforms, Lamps helicopter systems; and other classified Navy programs."

Webster said the investigation dated back to August 1977 and the arrests were based on warrants issued May 12 in Newark.

He said the FBI worked closely with the Naval Investigation service and the arrests came "with the full cooperation of a U.S. citizen."

In Newark, U.S. Magistrate William Hunt set bail for Chernyayev and Enger at $2 million each, at the request of U.S. Attorney Robert Del Tufo. They were to be lodged at the Metropolitan Correctional Center in Manhattan until bail was posted.

Zinyakin, who has diplomatic immunity, was identified by officials of the Russian mission and was released. Enger and Chernyayev were to appear before a U.S. magistrate in Newark as soon as possible, the FBI said.

Church urges U.S. to stay out of Africa

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, said Saturday that Cuban and Soviet presence in Africa is destined to be counterproductive, and the United States has done well to stay out of the continent's internal strife.

"We should let (Cuban Premier Fidel) Castro make his own mistakes — and Russia too," said Church, who is ranking member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and will become chairman in January.

"They will win no influence on that continent. It's going to be Africa for the Africans."

"There is a foreign presence that will come to be resented in time. That is what we learned — or I hope we learned — from Vietnam. And the situation is not that different."

Church, at a news conference prior to speaking at the Utah Democratic Party's Jefferson-Jackson Day dinner, said President Carter had shown proper restraint by limiting American activity in Africa to air and logistic support for French and Belgian troops.

Police find one of the three Red Brigade bands

ROME (UPI) — A mystery witness helped police smash one of three Red Brigades terrorist bands in Rome, investigators said Saturday.

Charges filed against five of 10 people arrested two days ago in raids on two terrorist hideouts said evidence against them included statements by a person "whose identity it is not seen fit to disclose at this time for security reasons."

Investigators would not say if the mystery witness was a neighbor, an underworld informer, an arrested suspect or a police infiltrator in the guerrilla gang that kidnapped and killed ex-Premier Aldo Moro.

The infiltration technique worked once in the past.

"Friar Submachino Gun" — whose real name is Silvano Girotto — was a former Franciscan friar who turned guerrilla in South America and later infiltrated the Red Brigades for the police.

Information he supplied led to the arrests in 1974 of gang founder Renato Curcio and other terrorist leaders.

Girotto appeared as a witness this week at the Turin trial of Curcio and 48 other Red Brigades members.

Investigators earlier discounted newspaper speculation that the source of their information this time was a tip provided by common criminals either for money or to get police off their own backs.

Magistrates said material evidence discovered in Thursday's raids on a Red Brigades print shop and another hideout included weapons, machinery used in printing and typing Red Brigades literature and communiques, pictures of kidnap victims and banknotes from the ransom paid in 1977 for the release of abducted Genova shipowner Piero Costa.

Four of the 10 persons arrested Thursday were released early Saturday after extensive questioning. Five others were charged with membership in an armed band, attacking prisons and party offices and committing or attempting to commit murders and kidnappings.

RIOT POLICE SURROUND A HUT ENTRENCHED BY ANTI-AIRPORT ULTRA-LEFTISTS ... the new Japanese airport opened despite a lengthy period of protests

New Japanese airport finally opens

NARITA, Japan (UPI) — The first passenger jetliner landed at the embattled new Tokyo international airport at Narita today despite violent protests by radical leftists and dissident farmers.

The Japan Air Lines DC-8 with 82 passengers and 12 crewmembers from Frankfurt, West Germany made its landing at the airport, located 41 miles northeast of Tokyo, at 12:05 p.m. (11:05 p.m. EDT Saturday) while hundreds of helmeted radicals and farmers gathered outside the heavily guarded $2.6-billion facility to protest the plane's arrival.

The plane, flying in from Frankfurt via Moscow, touched down at the 4,000-meter runway after two JAL cargo aircraft arrived from Los Angeles and San Francisco to mark the first day of normal operation at the airport.

The airport, whose inauguration was delayed for more than five years after its completion, was formally opened Saturday with a simple Shinto religious ceremony.

As the JAL cargo jet from Los Angeles arrived radicals and farmers in shelters outside the sprawling airport set off fires, sending black smoke high into the air. They also released about 100 balloons into the air before the plane landed.

Hundreds of helmeted youths, throwing firebombs and rocks, tried to break through the main gate. Police fought back with tear gas and water cannons.

The radicals warned all travelers against using the Narita airport.

The violence came only hours after the airport officially opened with a simple Shinto religious rite attended by Transport Minister Kenji Fukunaga and about 50 airport and airline officials and guarded by 13,000 riot police.

The ceremony capped a decade-long campaign against the airport by radicals and farmers whose land was taken for the facility. The Narita terminal, designed to relieve congestion at Tokyo's Haneda airport, has been finished for five years, but protests and violent attacks kept it closed.

The violence Saturday began when a small gang of radicals broke away from a protest march by 6,000 airport opponents and hurled hurled rocks and firebombs at police, who fired water cannons to turn them back.

The Moonies in Idaho

"Steer away from using vague phrases such as: Christian youth counseling, youth development. Too often people mistakenly interpret these phrases as the official title of group soliciting."

"Since we are not selling items but asking for donations, two words that create a wrong impression are 'buying' and 'selling.' The use of these two words imply that our solicitation is of a commercial or marketing nature. Remember that no product used in connection with solicitation or contributions may be offered for sale."

Yet in at least five instances this week, members of the Unification Church have solicited funds in Twin Falls using all of the above actions. Candy and home-made key chains have been offered for sale, by persons identifying themselves only as individuals working for a "Christian youth group," or for an "interdenominational Christian group." No identification suggesting the sales were for the Unification Church was offered or displayed. In each case fund raisers acknowledged membership in the Unification Church only after persistent questioning.

In addition, the Times-News has learned Unification Church members solicited for funds in Idaho statehouse offices last week, saying they were raising money for a "Christian school for the handicapped." The same week Unification Church members went to offices in the Boise City Hall, selling "Mothers Day candy." In both cases, the fund raisers identified themselves as members of the Unification Church only after questioning.

One fund raiser in Twin Falls, a young woman who identified herself as Marjorie Brown, said six Unification Church members were fund raising in the Magic Valley area.

Asked why Unification Church members were in Twin Falls using fund raising tactics the Church condemns, at the very moment Church leaders were also in Twin Falls attacking those tactics, Musgrave said the incident was a "coincidence." The fund raisers did not arrive with Her, Musgrave said, adding she had no idea they were in Twin Falls. The fund raisers were not Idaho members, Musgrave said. "My fundraisers don't fund raise like that."

Democrat dinner

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Democratic Central Committee will sponsor a "Democrats for Agriculture" fund-raising dinner and public awareness program today at 7 p.m. at the Blue Lakes Inn.

Most Democratic candidates for county, state and national office will be present. Sen. Frank Church will take part in panel discussions.

The program will feature a recent film, titled "Food Prices Too High? Compared to What?" Also on the program will be a panel discussion with agricultural experts, including Clarence Farr of Burley, Alan Wood of Caldwell, and Carl Reynolds of Boise.

Tickets can be purchased for $10 from any Democratic Central Committee member or by calling David Woodruff at 733-6727.

Army says no injuries resulted from bomb leak

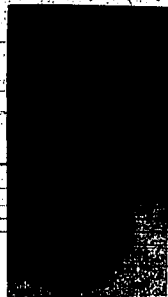

DEANER (UPI) — The Army Friday confirmed a Weyeye nerve-gas bomb was found leaking at the Rocky Mountain Arsenal two months ago, the second such incident since 901 of the bombs were stockpiled at the facility in 1969.

Art Whitney, an arsenal spokesman, said the leak did not escape a protective, pressurized case surrounding the bomb and there were no injuries. He said the amount of gas that escaped from the bomb last March would not have been dangerous even if it had reached the atmosphere.

"I seriously doubt the leak would have hurt anyone," Whitney said.

But the incident, together with a similar leak 14 months ago because of a faulty weld, prompted an aide for Rep. Tim Wirth, D-Colo., to say the lawmaker was considering introduction of a bill to block the proposed transfer of 899 Weyeye bombs from the arsenal to the Tooele Army Depot in Utah.

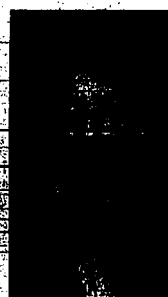

Sen. Floyd Haskell and Gary Hart, both D-Colo., said they would ask the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to review Pentagon plans for the transfer.

The school's graduation exercises are scheduled for May 22 at 8 p.m. at the high school.

Randy Kolar, Anna Wagner, Douglas Brailey, Brenda Falash, Susan Atkinson, Connie Swenson, Dorothy DeGorde, Dana Peterson and Heather Arrington all received straight A's during their three years of high school and were selected as valedictorians on this basis.

Kolar, son of John and Dorothy Kolar, has been president of the National Honor Society and the Fish and Game Explorer Post. He was chosen Elk's Teenager of the Year and obtained three varsity basketball letters.

Wagner has been involved in National Honor Society, International Club, Girls League, concert orchestra, football, annual staff, French Club, Bruin Club, rodeo, gymnastics team, powder puff and student council. She was chosen Elk's Teenager of the Year and in her senior year was head varsity cheerleader. She is the daughter of Mrs. Jay Swenson and Joseph Wagner, both Twin Falls.

Brailey was president of Theatians and was selected best actor and most professional actor for Twin Falls plays. He was also co-editor and vice president of In-scapes, the school's literary magazine. In addition to Theatians, he belongs to Theatre II Acting Company, Twin High playhouse, National Honor Society and In-scapes. Brailey is the son of Carl and Lorraine Brailey.

Falash, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Falash, is active in sports, participating as captain in track, cross-country and basketball. She won the Boy Scout Young American award for athletics. She placed seventh in the 880 and sixth in cross-country at the National Junior Olympics. She is also president of the art club, D.A.E.'s outstanding student, a delegate to Girls State and was Altissa Girl of the Month.

Atkinson has spent much of her time on drill team and was chosen Miss Drill Team 1978 and homecoming queen. The daughter of Mrs. David F. Atkinson and the late David F. Atkinson, she also participated in National Honor Society, Hi-Y, Outdoor Living Association, varsity volleyball and the Bruin Club.

Swenson, daughter of Mrs. Thelma Swenson, she is Future Farmers of America chapter and district secretary, holds a state degree in FFA, is Builder's Club president, 4-H club vice president and the National 4-H Club Conference delegate. She is also active in the National Honor Society.

DeGorde is active in pep band, marching band, symphony band, National Honor Society, Hi-Y, Spanish Club, French Club and German Club. The daughter of John and Jill DeGorde, she held offices as president of the French Club and won many awards in German and French.

Peterson is active in the Bruin Club, International Club, National Honor Society, Girls League, junior varsity and varsity volleyball and varsity track. She is active in her church as player-coach for the volleyball team. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gary B. Peterson, Twin Falls.

Arrington is a member of the French Club and is active in school choir. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman E. Arrington.

Governor declares a disaster area

Post-flood mopping up starts in Wyoming

By United Press International

The sun came out and flood-weary people in northern and central Wyoming were returning to their homes Saturday as officials assessed the damage in a wide area declared a disaster by Gov. Ed Herschler.

Most of the 1,000 people who were ordered out of their homes during the height of the flooding went back, officials said. But in the northern Wyoming community of Big Horn, it was "return at your own risk" because of questions about the stability of an earthen dike.

"The sun is shining. It's a nice spring day," said John Isaacson, civil defense coordinator in Sheridan County, the hardest hit area.

The sun and temperatures that were moving toward the 60s brought concern about more flooding from melting of intense, heavy snow that fell in the mountain west of Sheridan and southwest of Casper. "We're not expecting a wall of water, but if it's coming to be more of a gradual increase," Isaacson said.

State Civil Defense Coordinator Harry L. Palmer said in Cheyenne the worst is probably over.

Herschler, who inspected some of the flooding during an airborne swing Friday, declared as disaster areas Sheridan, Johnson, Washakie, Big Horn, Campbell, Weston, and parts of Converse and Natrona counties, Palmer said. Federal officials will now determine which areas qualify for disaster relief.

Roads and bridges were washed out over a wide area. Farm lands and grazing areas were inundated. Basements in the flood zones have been turned into lakes.

No injuries or deaths have been reported.

Complete damage estimates have not been made, Palmer said, but Sheridan County alone officials believe destruction exceeds $4 million.

People evacuated from the tiny Big Horn Basin community of Manderson began going back to their homes Friday evening when the danger of flooding passed.

Most evacuees stayed with friends or relatives, but bar owner Keith McMahon had a good time at his establishment, located on higher ground. "That's where everybody congregated," he said. "We kind of used that as a stronghold." He said some drinks were even on the house.

HEW report is released

SEATTLE (UPI) — Most mentally ill and retarded people who leave institutions in Idaho and Washington are not just dumped into the street without services and support, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare said Saturday.

A report from the department shows that 90 percent of the mentally ill released two to three years ago from state hospitals in the two states have received therapy and supportive services since they left.

Brezzezinski begins talks with Chinese

PEKING (UPI) — Zbigniew Brzezinski, President Carter's national security adviser, was reported today off to a good start with Chinese officials with whom he is discussing common world problems.

Brzezinski arrived in Peking Saturday and was to meet today for the first time with Vice Premier Peng Huan-pling, while the small group of aides who accompanied the U.S. diplomat hold separate talks with their Chinese counterparts. On Saturday Brzezinski met for three and a half hours with Chinese Foreign Minister Huang Hua and their talks were described as cordial and wide ranging.

Huang was host at a banquet Saturday night for the visiting Americans. He and Brzezinski exchanged toasts which were widely reported today by Chinese radio.

Brzezinski said the Carter administration was determined to reject China's insistent attempts by any country for world dominion.

Hua replied that while "China and the United States have different social systems and ideologies" they hold similar views on numerous international issues.

The American official arrived earlier in the day from Tokyo for a four-day visit to the Chinese capital and held talks with Hua and other Chinese officials.

The two men's comments were reported by the New China News Agency and monitored in Hong Kong.

Hua said that despite "aggression and expansion" by the Soviet Union, the Chinese leadership is "confident that there is great hope for the world."

Both men reaffirmed their countries' commitment to the normalization of relations between Washington and Peking as set forth in the Shanghai communique signed during former President Richard Nixon's 1972 visit to China. "The President of the United States desires friendly relations with a strong China."

Moscow trip canceled

Scientists protest trial of dissident physicist

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A National Academy of Sciences delegation Saturday canceled plans to attend a symposium in Moscow to protest the political trial of Soviet physicist Yuri Orlov.

The NAS warned that the Soviet crackdown on dissidents may stifle U.S.-Soviet scientific exchange altogether.

In addition, President Carter said the labor-camp sentencing of Orlov "subverts the spirit" of the Helsinki human rights agreements, and it appeared HEW Secretary Joseph Califano might cancel a scheduled visit to the Soviet Union because of the case.

A Soviet court reportedly packed with anti-Orlov hecklers sentenced the 53-year-old civil rights crusader last week to the maximum sentence of seven years in labor camp and five in Siberian exile.

Denied his request to call defense witnesses, he had been convicted of distributing "slandering concoctions, smearing the Soviet state and social order" in the form of leaflets and contacts with Western journalists.

Orlov, who spent 15 months in pre-trial detention, led a group that tried to monitor Soviet compliance with human rights provisions of the 1975 Helsinki accord on European security and cooperation.

"We have repeatedly informed Soviet authorities that the issue of human rights threatens to erode the willingness of American scientists to cooperate with their Soviet counterparts," NAS President Philip Handler said in announcing the academy's delegation had withdrawn from the Moscow symposium on condensed matter theory scheduled to start Monday.

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Portland's prolific pachyderms added another to their number late Friday night with birth of a male to Me-Tu at the Washington Park Zoo. Zoo spokesman Paige Powell said the 200-pound infant appeared healthy.

Demonstration

WASHINGTON (UPI) — More than 5,000 demonstrators, carrying bright banners and chanting "We're fired up, we'll take no more," marched past the White House Saturday to demand an end to U.S. diplomatic and economic ties with South Africa.

The African Liberation Support Committee organized the march on what it called "African Liberation Day."

Rocket bound for an orbit around Venus

By PAULA SCHWED
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — Pioneer Venus 1 dashed off unhesitatingly and hurtled through space Saturday on a 400-million-mile journey that will put the satellite into orbit around Venus Dec. 4.

The 131-foot-tall and 10-foot-wide orbiter took off only 73 seconds past the scheduled lift-off time of 9:13 a.m. "I don't remember one with less problems," Dr. George Page, director of expendable vehicles, said of the countdown which began at midnight. "Our biggest problem was keeping people awake at that ungodly hour."

The $250 million Pioneer Venus project is aimed at providing scientists with information about Venus unavailable from telescopes and three previous U.S. explorations. Never before has a spacecraft circled a planet solely to gather atmospheric data.

The only hitch in pre-flight plans was a spider web which clogged a tiny jet of the Atlas Centaur rocket which launched the Pioneer Venus 1, then dropped off into the Atlantic.

"We roasted and consumed him on the spot," joked John Gossett, Centaur operations manager.

A warning had been issued for thunderstorms 40 miles east of the launch site, but NASA technicians said the cloudy skies did not change the flight pattern.

Pioneer Venus 1 initially traveled at 25,000 mph, trailing behind earth on an elliptical path. The satellite gained steady speed as it was pulled toward the sun.

Venus resembles Earth in size, density and distance from the sun, but its total lack of water is puzzling to scientists.

"Why is a planet that might be our twin so hostile to life?" said Dr. Thomas Donohue, in charge of science steering for the project.

NASA officials speculate that the earth may also become dry and devoid of life because our own atmosphere is slowly thickening with carbon dioxide from burning of fossil fuels.

The first satellite will be joined around Venus Dec. 9 by Pioneer Venus 2, which will travel a shorter flight path. It will be launched Aug. 7.

Pioneer Venus 2 will split into five independent space vehicles, which will penetrate the hazy, yellow clouds surrounding Venus. Each will relay data back to Earth while flying down to the Venus' searing hot surface and will almost certainly burn up.

Because the 800-degree temperature on Venus remains the same all day every day, it is an ideal weather laboratory. Many of the 30 experiments on board the spacecrafts will test those atmospheric conditions.

NASA officials believe radar mapping will confirm that the planet's surface resembles a rocky desert.

Senators near limit in last year's honoraria

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two first-term senators earned the maximum $23,000 allowable from making speeches and writing articles last year, and a third freshman was right behind, according to records released by the Senate Friday.

Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, and Donald Riegle, D-Mich., each earned the limit — Garn getting much of his honoraria from speeches to banking groups, and Riegle much of his from a variety of sources including oil, banking and automobiles.

Others in the Senate were right behind in lining up to collect fees from business, labor, religious groups and universities. One-third of the membership earned at least $15,500 in honoraria.

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., was third with $14,945, followed by Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., with $14,900. Hollings, chairman of the Senate communications subcommittee, got many of his fees from the television industry.

The reports were made available in conjunction with the release of senators' financial holdings. The Senate ethics code now in effect limits senators to $23,000 in honoraria a year with no individual payment of more than $2,000. A new law going into effect next year will limit outside earned income to 15 percent of a senator's $57,500 salary, or $8,625 a year.

Nineteen senators reported no speech income, and the records did not include the three senators who died last year, John McClellan, D-Ark., Lee Metcalf, D-Mont., and Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn.

No honoraria was listed for Sens. Spark Matsunaga, D-Hawaii; Robert Morgan, D-N.C.; Kamehater Hodges, D-Ark.; or Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., who all got extensions of time to file.

Some senators, such as Democratic leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia and Sens. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and James Sasser, D-Tenn., gave part of their honoraria to charity.

Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., donated his entire $18,700 to a variety of causes.

Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., noted he returned an honorarium paid by the New Mexico Council on Humanities for a public television appearance on "ethics in politics."

Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, got $250 for a speech to the Calvin Bullock Forum plus a replica of Lord Nelson's sword, which he valued at $108.

Many senators got payments for articles written for some of America's leading publications. According to the reports, the Washington Post pays $75 for senatorial contributions, while the New York Times pays $150.

GM executive pay will be kept down

DETROIT (UPI) — General Motors Corp., in a gesture of support for President Carter's anti-inflation program, has pledged to trim salary and bonus increases for its highest paid executives.

Chairman Thomas A. Murphy told GM stockholders the company also will work to hold down car prices but declined to indicate whether it increases this year.

"We intend to redouble our cost-control efforts in every area of our business — to take every reasonable action to stem the rising tide of both costs and prices," Murphy said.

One of the inflation-fighting steps outlined by Murphy at a stockholder's meeting Friday was to hold this year's pay hikes for top GM executives below 5 percent — the guideline President Carter suggested.

Other executive salaries will be "prudently evaluated" and decelerated in the coming year, he said.

On trial

Peter Nelson describes night of slayings

ROCKFORD, Ill. (UPI) — With tears in his eyes, Simon Peter Nelson, accused of killing his six children, testified Saturday he envisioned the spectre of his dead father stabbing the children the night of the slayings.

The hulking, 46-year-old employment counselor said he even saw himself being stabbed by his father, who committed suicide when Nelson was a child.

The butchered bodies of the Nelson children, ages 3 to 12, were found by police in the family's blood-spattered home Jan. 7. Their heads had been crushed with a rubber mallet and their throats slashed with a Bowie knife.

Nelson, who stands 6-foot-4 and weighs 275 pounds, has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity to six counts of first degree murder. The defense contends he was driven temporarily insane by marital problems.

The prosecution has argued he is guilty of brutal and cold-blooded murder, patterned after the book "Anatomy of a Murder," and is asking that he be put to death.

During two days of testimony, Nelson described his own unhappy childhood, his work and marital problems, and, finally, his own recollections of the night his children were methodically massacred as they slept.

Carter back in Georgia for niece's wedding

DAVID HALL

BOB BERGLAND

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL
President Carter will return to his southwest Georgia home today for the strictly private wedding of his 18-year-old niece, Billy Carter's daughter, Jana.

The president's presence has focused a great deal of unwanted news media attention on the wedding, which the young couple has decreed will be confined to family and friends at the bride's home near Ellaville this evening.

Miss Carter, a desk clerk at an Americus motel, is to marry Johnny These, 19, an employee of an Ellaville mobile home manufacturing plant.

"The recent graduates of Tri-County High School plan to live in southwest Georgia after a two-week honeymoon.

They have shunned any publicity about the wedding, rejecting interviews and insisting that President Carter's presence not interfere with the solemnity of the ceremony and gaiety of the reception at Billy and Sibil Carter's home.

The president's brother moved his family near Ellaville to get away from the crowds of tourists that were drawn to Plains following the 1976 campaign.

Sen. Alan Cranston, 63, D-Calif., married Norma Weinstein, 58, of Encino, Calif., Friday in a private ceremony.

An aide, La Haas, said Saturday the ceremony was conducted by Superior Court Judge John Suddeth at his home. Cranston was divorced from his first wife in Former Oklahoma Gov. David Hall will leave federal prison early Monday, ending an 18-month stay.

Hall is being paroled after serving half the three-year prison term he received in 1975. He was convicted of extortion and bribery in an alleged attempt to influence the investment of state funds with two Texas businessmen.

Hall, Oklahoma's governor from 1971 to 1974, plans to live and work near San Diego, Calif., where he has bought a house.

His father, William Hall, said his son's family already is in southern California.

U.S. Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland arrived in Budapest Saturday at the invitation of Hungarian Minister of Agriculture and Food Pal Romany.

They will discuss possibilities of improving agricultural cooperation between the two countries.

Bergland earlier wound up a three-day, fact-finding visit to Poland.

Festus slept through another robbery and Matt Dillon wasn't around to provide a happy ending.

Ken Curtis, the actor who played Festus Hagan on the "Gunsmoke" television series was asleep in his Vernon, Texas, motel room Friday when a gunman — a mere 150 feet away — robbed a motel clerk of more than $400.

"I didn't hear a thing," Curtis said. "I didn't hear anybody whoopin' and hollerin'," so I didn't know anything was going on."

Bergland was in town to perform at a rodeo.

Motel manager Dick McLeod joked, "I have the most famous deputy in the nation staying here and we still get robbed."

Carter aide has a beef

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Margaret "Midge" Costanza, ordered out of her prestigious White House office to the nearby Executive Office Building, has gone public; contending that election ploys diminished presidential interest in women's rights.

"It's not me. I can work anywhere," the 45-year-old presidential assistant, told interviewers in reports published Saturday. But the "importance of the issues" requires that she remain in her present office only doors away from President Carter.

"We can't do this to women's rights and human rights. It's not me, it's these issues," she said.

The EOB is just across from the White House, a mere telephone call away. But in status-conscious Washington where the appearance of power is power, the building is light years away from the daily swirl that influences a president.

James Schlesinger, a presidential assistant on energy and veteran bureaucratic firefighter, clung to his White House office for months after being named secretary of the Department of Energy.

The loss of prized office space down the hall from the president is the latest evidence that Ms. Costanza, a former vice mayor of Rochester, N.Y., and early Carter partisan, has lost favor.

The broad duties of the $56,000-a-year presidential assistant to act as liaison with organized groups have been steadily trimmed since she joined the White House staff in January 1977 as the highest ranking woman. Many of Costanza's responsibilities have since been parceled out to others and much of her staff has been shifted elsewhere.

Even the distinction of being the highest-ranking woman on the presidential staff has been diluted, with the addition to the White House staff of Anne Wexler, a former deputy under secretary in the Commerce Department.

Never a member of the president's predominantly Georgian inner circle, Ms. Costanza often went public with concerns. When the administration lagged appointing women to top-level jobs, Ms. Costanza championed their cause.

And in the weeks when Carter loyalists were standing behind White House budget director Bert Lance, she suggested Lance resign to spare the president further difficulties.

Amy saved from elephant

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Secret Service agent was slightly injured Saturday when he and another agent saved Amy Carter from a runaway elephant at the home of Ethyl Kennedy.

The 10-year-old daughter of President Carter twice had to be thrown from one agent to another across fences to get out of the elephant's path, said Mary Hoyt, press aide to Amy's mother, Rosalynn Carter.

One of the agents suffered a broken finger and twisted ankle. The Secret Service declined to release the identity of the agents involved.

Amy and other youngsters were at Hickory Hill, the home of the late Sen. Robert Kennedy, in a Virginia suburb just outside Washington, for an annual pet contest.

The elephant had been brought in from a circus and was being guided into a van when it was spooked by a barking dog, Mrs. Hoyt said.

The elephant started running through the crowd toward an open grassy area behind Amy and the Secret Service agents.

"Several evasive tactics were used before they were able to get to the safety of the house," a Secret Service spokesman said.

Jane Fonda in protest

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Encouraged by speakers Jane Fonda and Dennis Banks, a downtown crowd of about 400 faced the high-rise buildings and shouted: "Full employment now!"

The Friday rally culminated an hour-long march from San Diego City College to Newton Park near the center of downtown. The rally and march was part of the local NIA cultural organization's 11th annual observance of the birthday of Malcolm X.

Ms. Fonda said the cause of unemployment in California is the lack of public input into corporate decisions, coupled with the large amount of tax dollars going to "that inflationary, military rajah."

Discounting charges that it is "illegal" aliens who have caused unemployment problems in California, she said, "The real illegal aliens are the American corporations" that have moved to Mexico and hired workers "at slave wages."

Eugene gay vote coming up

EUGENE, Ore. (UPI) — Residents in Oregon's second largest city vote Tuesday on whether to repeal a "homosexual rights" ordinance.

Similar measures have been repealed in recent months in Dade County, Fla., St. Paul, Minn., and Wichita, Kansas. Leaders of the homosexual community in this university city of 100,000 predict the ordinance will survive the repeal try.

"We think Eugene is much different," said Dominick Vetri, a homosexual rights activist. "Eugene is full of open-minded people, a more sophisticated breed that accepts a diversified society."

"The campaign in Eugene has had a 'high level of exposure of gay people,'" said Vetri, a University of Oregon law professor who represents the Eugene Citizens for Human Rights.

"We're trying to show the people we're normal, decent citizens worthy of our rights."

We're also getting tremendous support from churches and religious groups. Many ministers are working actively with us on our advisory committee.

The ordinance, designed to stop discrimination against homosexuals in public accommodations, jobs and housing, was passed by the Eugene City Council last November. A similar effort was defeated by the council four years earlier.

An organization known as VOICE, which stands for Volunteer Organization Involved in Community Enactments is leading the repeal campaign, but it does not feature the religious fervor of the successful repeal efforts in Dade County, St. Paul and Wichita. VOICE is using billboard space for an advertisement that says simply, "Keep it straight," and explaining a yes vote is for repeal of the ordinance.

'Longjohn' mystery in Salt Lake City

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Federal agents say they are looking for a suspect who may have planned to blow up himself and "a dignitary" by detonating a set of longjohns wired with several pounds of explosives.

The "bombjohns" were found last week in a remote area of southern Utah, along with a hypodermic syringe, a bag of chemical designed to speed up explosions and a mysterious sealed capsule marked "Contains Radioactive Material."

Nick Dereta, special agent in charge of the Salt Lake office of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, said Friday the longjohns were being photographed and analyzed and would be sent next week to the ATF laboratory at Treasure Island, Calif.

Dereta said agents have a suspect in mind but declined to elaborate.

"There are just all kinds of threads here," Dereta said. "The guy could use (the suit) to intimidate somebody or it could be designed as a suicide where he would take some dignitary with him."

Experts from the Nuclear Regulatory Commission flew from Texas earlier this week and determined the capsule was no longer radioactive because it had been decontaminated, a process Dereta said was sophisticated and not the kind of thing "that some kid off the street could do."

A plastic outer portion of the capsule had been opened but a metal container inside is still sealed. Radiographs taken Friday in Salt Lake City showed that there was still some kind of material inside, even though it is not radioactive.

"It might be a bomb," Dereta said.

Settlement in Elks case

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (UPI) — Tony Bryant, 11-years-old and black, has won a $29,000 out-of-court settlement from the Annapolis Elks Club in a suit charging the Elks kicked him off their kids' football team because of his race.

The club did not admit the charge, but Tony's lawyers disclosed the Elks had agreed to pay the money and had made assurances no discrimination would occur in their future policies.

Reports of big raises by Evans denied

BOISE (UPI) — Republican gubernatorial candidate Allan Larsen of Blackfoot said Saturday the governor's administrative assistance received a 32 percent pay increase despite a denial by the chief executive's office that any employee received more than a 6 percent raise.

Larsen said Pat Hawley was boosted to $1,848 per month in December 1978 from $1,361 the previous fiscal year, or a gross increase of 35.7 percent.

The GOP candidate for governor had charged Friday three employees of Gov. John Evans had been given raises averaging 43.74 percent, but declined to name them. Saturday, he revealed their names after the governor's office denied his charge.

The governor's office had said the largest raise was to Kay McReynolds, a secretary boosted from a CETA position, whose pay went from $378 to $745 per month, a raise of nearly 31 percent.

In his latest attack on Evans, Larsen said Steve Leroy and Chris Smith, key aides of the governor, both received substantial raises. He said Leroy's salary went from $936 to $1,378 per month, or a 47 percent increase, while Smith was boosted 31.56 percent from $1,000 to $1,315 per month.

Larsen said he was reluctant to release the names but didn't feel he had any choice since the governor denied the increases.

"The governor denied the 42 percent and said it was 31 percent," Larsen said. "I am tempted to let it go at that. I am sure property taxpayer who were denied relief by the governor's veto will view even a 31 percent increase as outrageous."

"It is possible that the government has gotten so fouled up under Evans that you can't get accurate figures out of it," he said. "However, we checked with three different departments that deal with these matters and they all gave us the same numbers. We found it impossible to obtain the fiscal year 1979 figures for the governor's office salary increases but we don't think they will be that high since this is an election year."

Sheriff declares news blackout

CALDWELL, Idaho (UPI) — Canyon County Sheriff George Nourse has declared a news blackout between his office and The Idaho Statesman newspaper.

Nourse said in a written statement issued Friday that "I feel they are intentionally and indelicately slanting the news, and in some cases, lying to the public on matters that concern my office."

He said that he would "no longer speak to anyone connected with The Idaho Statesman in reference to the Canyon County sheriff's office."

Nourse wrote that he was suspending his office's association with the Boise-based newspaper because "in the past news articles have been written about the sheriff's office that the Idaho Statesman that I have written rebuttals to and those rebuttals were never printed."

"On numerous occasions the Idaho Statesman has written articles about the sheriff's office which contained quotes from persons they allegedly talked to and upon checking with those persons, I have found that The Idaho Statesman had grossly misquoted them, and, in some instances, had never even talked to them."

Candidate interviewed

Rise in legal age urged by Larsen

BOISE (UPI) — House Speaker Allan F. Larsen, R-Blackfoot, says he favors raising the legal age for consumption of alcohol above the present 19 and would like to see table wine put back into state liquor stores.

In an interview with The Idaho Challenge, a publication of the Allied Christian Forces, the Republican gubernatorial hopeful also said he would not sign any bills liberalizing drinking laws or making liquor more available if he were governor.

Larsen said he felt Idaho has created more problems for young people by lowering the drinking age to 19 and that the minimum age "probably ought to be increased." He said he would sign such a bill as governor.

He called the table wine act, which made non-fortified wines available in grocery stores, "a gross mistake."

"It has made it available to our young people on a scale that we'd never dreamed of," he said, saying sale of it should be limited to state liquor stores as it used to be.

Larsen, an LDS church leader and a member of the board of directors for the Christian Forces, also called for strong enforcement of anti-pornography laws, a crackdown on vice and gambling and spoke out against state control of textbooks used in private, church and parochial schools.

He said he is opposed to legalized gambling, including efforts to legalize bingo and raffles for churches and certain civic organizations.

Hydro power estimates given by researcher

MOSCOW, Idaho (UPI) — A researcher for the Idaho Water Resources Research Institute said an additional 10,000 megawatts of electricity could be generated in Idaho through low-head hydro power sites.

Cal Warnick said Friday the topography and river flows in other parts of the region make the Northwest as a whole particularly conducive to low-head hydroelectric development.

"Low head" refers to power that can be generated by dropping water from a relatively low dam and passing it through a turbine especially designed for smaller flows and lower heads.

Warnick said low-head turbines will cause some environmental losses, but these effects will be considerably less than the losses created by conventional high-head dams.

The Idaho Water Resources Research Institute reports there has been serious interest nationwide in developing small dams because of the renewable nature of water as an energy source and its relatively low cost.

Man accused of wiretapping

BOISE (UPI) — A Boise man is accused of willfully and maliciously tapping his estranged wife's telephone in what is believed to be Idaho's first criminal wiretapping case.

Bernard J. Vandenberg, 53, is charged with attaching a device to the telephone equipment of his wife, Gloria. The Vandenberg are separated. Police found the device in April after Mrs. Vandenberg told them she suspected her calls were being monitored.

A new breed wins poker tourney

BOBBY BALDWIN (LEFT) CONGRATULATED BY TEXAN ADDINGTON
The 28-year-old "new breed" gambler won Las Vegas poker tournament

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Mild-mannered Oklahoman Bobby Baldwin did it with three queens — in a lime green jogging suit.

Before the 27-year-old "new breed" gambler faced cigar-chomping Texan Crandall Addington in the final round Friday night, he took advantage of an evening break with a shower and a change of clothes.

Addington, wearing a milk Stetson shrouded in a gray cloud of cigar smoke, held three nines when Baldwin laid out his queens to win the final pot and collect $210,000 and the World Series of Poker championship.

Addington was given $84,000 for placing second.

Baldwin, formerly of Dallas, locked skills with Addington, 40, a San Antonio businessman, for some four hours before winning the final pot which totaled about $70,000.

The gamblers played "Hold 'em," a poker game in which each player is dealt two hole cards and combines those with any three of five cards dealt on the table.

In the final pot, Baldwin had two queens in the hole and Addington held two nines when a queen, nine, and king showed when the cards were flopped. Then an ace and a ten were dealt giving Baldwin three queens and Addington was low man with three nines.

Host Jack Binlon, owner of Binlon's Horseshoe Club in downtown Las Vegas, carried out $420,000 in $100 bills, stacked the cash on the poker table and doled out prize money to the top five finishers.

"That's what it's all about," Binlon said. "That's why people gamble."

The tournament started four days ago when 42 high-stakes poker players bought into the world's richest poker tournament with a $10,000 individual buy-in.

Louis "Sager" Hunsucker, 44, an Austin, Texas, businessman, was knocked out Friday when he lost a $60,000 pot to Baldwin's three kings.

"Next year I'm going to practice more," said Hunsucker. "But I feel good about getting in on the money." He will receive $23,000 for third place.

Buck Buchanan of Killen, Texas, won $42,000 for winding up in fourth place and Jesse Alto of Houston won $21,000 for placing fifth.

Bulletproof vest for governor

DENVER (UPI) — Gov. Richard Lamm bought a $108 bulletproof vest last year after his life was threatened and wore it to and from the Colorado Capitol for at least two weeks during November, an aide said Thursday.

"Most members of the governor's staff were unaware Lamm was wearing the vest. He decided to use the protective device on the advice of Colorado State Patrol officers who serve as his security guards.

"He goes along with every suggestion they make," said press secretary Jack Olsen. "His personal safety is completely in their hands."

Although the governor averages about two threats per week on his life, most are dismissed because they are far from known "crackpots" or because they are obviously not serious, Olsen said.

However, last November State Patrol officers became worried when they heard about a new threat and were unable to locate the man who made it. The person who made the threat was an alcoholic and eventually committed himself to the Fort Logan Mental Health Center for treatment.

After he entered the center, he was interviewed by officers. He was extremely apologetic about the incident, officers said, and the governor's protective vest eventually was placed in storage.

Olsen said the $750 vest, which the governor purchased from the Rocky Mountain Police Supply, was worn by Lamm in his car as he went to and from the Capitol, but usually he took it off when he arrived.

Hugh Humphreys, administrative assistant to Lamm, said he thinks the governor wore it on "a couple of occasions" during the working day.

John Fox, a spokesman for the police supply firm, said the vest was designed to be worn under a shirt and is "very comfortable to wear." The vest is constructed of Dupont Kevlar and normally is available only to law enforcement agents.

"Of course, we'll make an exception for someone like the governor," Fox said.

A plea of ignorance

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (UPI) — Wyoming Sen. Clifford P. Hansen did not know that he was required to file a financial disclosure form with Secretary of State Thyra Thomson, a Hansen aide has said.

Hansen's report — required under a new Senate rule — "is enroute to Secretary Thomson's office now," Press Assistant Patty Howe said Friday.

Hansen filed the report with the Secretary of the Senate last week, well before the deadline last Monday. It showed that he possessed more than $500,000 in assets.

"He did not realize at the time he filed that the statement also had to be sent to the Secretary of State in Wyoming," Ms. Howe said. "That fact was brought to his attention by a letter from Secretary of State Thyra Thomson which was dated May 8, but received in the office May 17 — two days after the deadline."

Castration disallowed

PHOENIX (UPI) — A Phoenix man was sentenced to 50-to-60 years in prison for rape Friday after a judge rejected his request for castration.

Maricopa County Superior Court Judge Ed Hughes sentenced Robert Gray, 36, who was convicted of second-degree rape and lewd and lascivious acts in an attack on a teen-age girl at his apartment last July.

Gray had served prison sentences on two previous rape convictions in Missouri and Iowa.

Before sentencing, Gray asked that he be castrated and placed on probation rather than be sent to prison.

Deputy warns graduating seniors

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

MAGIC VALLEY — During graduation time and the arrival of summer weather, law enforcement officers face an increased problem of managing young people out to have a good time.

Twin Falls County Sheriff's Deputy Sheriff James Munn has issued a reminder to southern Idaho seniors to keep their wits about them in the last week of school.

"We have written letters to the student bodies of our schools and to school officials, asking cooperation. It isn't that we want to harass the young people. We are just trying to keep them alive," Munn said.

Deputy Munn has some bad memories about beer parties, including some resulting in traffic fatalities or injuries and one in Buhl which ended in the beating death of a young man.

"We have had a couple of personal injuries already this spring and we don't want to have anything more serious," Munn said.

Because of the proximity of the Snake River Canyon to Twin Falls and Jerome counties, Munn said his office is cooperating closely with Jerome in an effort to keep posted on such parties.

He said a recent tragedy in northern Idaho's Kootenai County pretty well explains what officers are hoping to prevent here.

Les Routh, chief juvenile supervisor and detective in Kootenai County, and a former Twin Falls resident, said two juveniles were killed there recently on a forest road leading from the scene of a keg party.

Routh said, the girl, a 14-year-old, and the driver of the vehicle, age 17, were dead at the scene when officers arrived.

"If we could publish the pictures we took at that accident scene, I don't think we would have any trouble convincing parents their children should not participate in the mass beer parties," Routh said.

He said the young man's body was badly mutilated.

"It's a horrible thing to witness," Routh said. He said the car in which the three were traveling on a narrow winding road, went out of control, hit a pine tree some 14 to 18 inches in diameter and broke it off, then crashed into another tree, hitting it about 14 feet above the ground.

Routh said in his area, too, officers are attempting to work with the schools, parents and beer distributors to stop the beer parties at the source.

"We want to get to the people who provide the beer and plan the parties," he said. "We have arrested about six people in connection with the party that preceded our double fatality. Some are 18 and some as old as 20. They are charged with procuring beer for minors and other related acts."

Munn said Twin Falls county officers are working with beer distributors asking them to report the sale of more than one keg of beer to an individual party.

"There are ways they get around this however. They just get more buyers and go to different distributors or sales outlets," Munn said.

The deputy said he feels the school students themselves are doing a good job in Twin Falls County.

The student committee at the Twin Falls High school, he said, has planned a number of activities including parades and mall activities to give students something better to do than drink beer. Many parents, he said, are also cooperating, but some feel the students have a right to enjoy themselves and celebrate their graduation in their chosen way.

Routh said he feels the fatal accident did more to shake up the parents than anything officers could say or do.

"It's 100 best it takes something like this," he said, "but often that's the case. We can't help the two young people who are already gone and it's no help to their parents, but if the accident prevent's others meeting the same fate then that's about all we can hope for."

Displays ducks

Antique show goes on

FILER — Magic Valley residents will have an opportunity today to inspect displays of antiques, art work of collector items and jewelry at the Twin Falls County fair grounds.

Today is the last day of the annual "Shrine Club" antique show.

Morris Roth, Shrine club official, said Saturday exhibitors have come from Salt Lake City, several Montana towns and all parts of southern Idaho.

Many of the exhibitors offer items for sale including items such as carved wooden birds and Indian figurines.

Among those displaying wares at the show are Vera Smith of Buhl, whose collection of old china and glass, antiques including clocks and household wares and bottle attracted some attention on Saturday.

Another bottle collection was displayed by Barbara Cothorn of Astoria.

Many of the exhibits feature a number of purple bottles for sale or display.

Insulators, old harnesses, antique furniture and some modern patio items are also among the exhibits.

Hand mounted and polished turquoise jewelry is on display and sale in the Tom Parks Pavilion.

Bank charged with illegality

BOISE (UPI) — Assistant U.S. attorney Warren Derbridge has charged the Bank of Idaho with illegally deducting $5,000 in 1972 political contributions on its income tax return.

The attorney said the federal government is considering charges against individuals but that it would not be appropriate to comment at this time.

Chief justices discuss televising of trials

PRINCETON, N.J. (UPI) — Supreme Court Chief Justices from six states have been presented with the advantages and drawbacks of televised trials, with several of the jurists saying they lean toward the practice under limited circumstances.

The justices from New Jersey, Delaware, Colorado, Georgia, New Mexico and Arizona served as a panel Friday as four lawyers presented their arguments during a forum called "The Judiciary and the Media," sponsored by New Jersey Public Television.

Georgia's Chief Justice H.E. Nichols said his state started allowing cameras in the courtroom in September and so far the system has been without incident.

A record on wheels

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — A Provo resident, who lost his legs in a farming accident several years ago, set a new long-distance wheelchair record Saturday to help other handicapped people.

Our Brinkman, a native of Shelley, Idaho, rolled 275 miles from Cedar City, Utah to Salt Lake City. It took him 5 days to complete the trek and collect $9,000 in pledges for the Utah Easter Seal Society during National Handicapped Awareness Week.

Woe for cookout chef

Hamburger-linked to cancer

BBQ NOTES — Sellers of Visine eye drops won't like him, but Barry Commoner wins my vote as Hero of Summer.

Just days before the start of that annual aberration known as backyard barbecuing, biologist. Commoner grimly announced hamburgers cooked on hot metal may cause cancer. His words fell like the song of a Meadowlark on my ears.

For weeks, I have dreaded the inexorable approach of Memorial Day and, regrettably, the smoky beginnings of barbecue season.

Now, in the nick of time, Dr. Commoner has rushed into public view the results of his preliminary experiments. Identifying a cancer-causing agent in cheeseburgers cooked in a pan or, presumably, on a hot barbecue grill.

What exquisite timing. In only one more week beleaguered burger cookers everywhere would have been forced to confront the rusted gears frozen hard beneath the rain-filled charcoal burners of seasons' past.

They half-heartedly would have tested the crank on a greased-covered grill only to have the cheap tin handle twist off in their hands after only one turn.

Then, with slumped shoulders, the tender-eyed burger cookers of America would have shuffled off to the hardware store looking for a put-it-together-yourself eye tester for the summer.

Next would have come the interminable evenings over the charcoal, staring into the smoke, trying to shove up a blackened crisp of cow meat without singeing the hairs on the hand. Why, another summer of barbecue madness was almost here, but thanks to Barry Commoner summer can be saved for less dangerous activities such as ordering a box of Kentucky Fried Chicken.

The only disappointment modern backyard barbecuers must now ruminate is that Barry Commoner wasn't born 400 years earlier.

Chris Peck

Because, cookbookers credit Caribbean Indians with the first barbecues as early as 1500.

For Caribs, it was homemade quarter-pounders but toasted whole English explorers that cracked over the coals.

If only Commoner had been on the scene he could have run cancer tests on the Indians who ate their explorers raw and compared their health with those Indians who browned their conquerors before dousing them.

The test results could have circulated among the pilgrims and America could have long ago taken up the tradition of eating their hamburgers raw instead of charred.

Our only problem would have to invent a cheese meller.

But better late than never, Barry Commoner. You have done your best to take the fun out of backyard cookouts.

You have planted a seed of paranoia in those who dare to dab a splash of ketchup on a bun.

That is the best hope for the overburdened backyard hamburger chef.

If it isn't fun anymore to visit neighbors who cook hamburgers on soft summer nights, fewer of us hamburger helpers will have to stand over the coals fretting about keeping the grill too close to the coals.

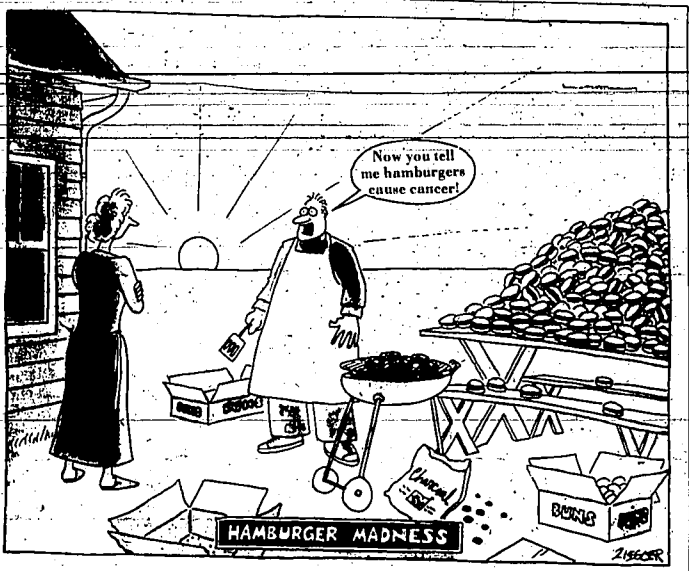

No longer will bosses have company barbecues on the 4th of July.

Gone are the family reunions where hamburgers and baked beans coolase, long separated siblings.

Sure, a few martyred masters of the char-broiled burger will risk the dangers. They will try to laugh and joke about the quarter-pound cancer burger, or yak it up when somebody tries to cook a burger on a stick.

But the rest of us, thanks to Barry Commoner's warning that hamburgers cooked on hot metal grills could cause cancer, can spend more time inside this summer, more time reading about the carcinogen-of-the-week.

More time worrying about what dangers lurk within the peanut butter and jelly sandwiches we wolf down for dinner.

Dandelion's steady tyranny versus sunny fishing trips

Growing a lawn is the most useless form of horticulture ever devised.

It's nothing more than a poor excuse for making husbands do something supposedly more constructive than spending a time at the local fishing hole.

A lawn is nothing more than organic asphalt, flat and monotonous.

The flatter a lawn is, the more lawn freaks will like it. The essence of lawn is its neat, everything-under-control uniformity, row upon row of identical blades, swaying as one in the wind. Of course, one never speaks of the squirming, mindless mass of worms and other unmentionable quirks of nature which lie untamed beneath the lawn's placid surface.

brother out against the Green Berets with a BB gun.

Resistance is useless because, let's face it, the dandelion is one of the world's great competitors.

Dandelions can be found growing in places where man will never establish permanent dwellings, from the tops of the mountains to the midst of the desert.

How long do you think you'll last if someone came along every three weeks and sprayed 24-D all over you?

Dandelions are not only tough. They are indolent and unscrupulous. They warp the minds of the young. How many little children have you seen innocently launching another wave of dandelion shocktroops by blowing the wonderfully aerodynamic, parachute-shaped seeds to greener pastures, as yet untaunted by the yellow peril?

They don't know the pain and suffering dandelions can cause a man who is late for a date with a six-pound trout. But maybe these children know better than we.

After all, the dandelion can be a very useful plant.

If picked before the flower buds appear, its leaves not only taste wonderful, but are the most concentrated source of Vitamin A available in the plant world, containing 7,000 units of the vitamin per ounce.

Kids, and their parents, too, should nurture dandelions, not drive them out.

More dandelions, less grass, a sure-fire prescription for health.

Besides, who are we to buck the flow of nature. We would do well, as Matthew admonishes, to emulate the lilies of the field, (and the dandelions) that " toil not, neither do they spin."

I intend to claim my rights under the last will and testament of Williston Fish, published in Harper's Magazine in 1898, who left to me and all other children and fishermen like me the following bequest: "I leave to children exclusively, but only for the life of their childhood, all and every the dandelions of the fields and the daisies thereof, with the right to play among them freely."

Which is why, and I hope my neighbors will understand, I have given up my fight to stop dandelions from taking over my lawn, and decided to go fishing instead.

Jeff Sher

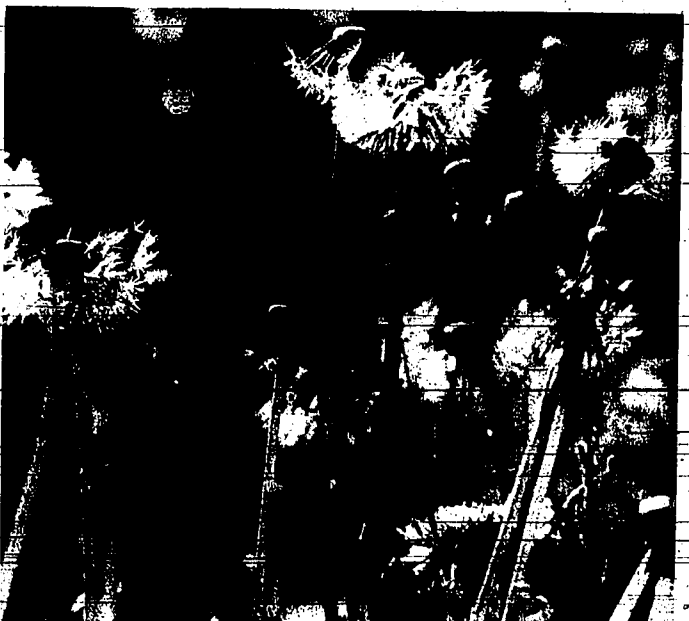

A neat lawn bespeaks a neat mind, the saying goes.

A healthy lawn is undisturbed by the unruly presence of foreign infiltrators, like the tyrannical, ruthless weeds of the world.

And the most merciless of sinister forces pressing on the borders of the American lawn is the dandelion, so-called king of weeds.

When man was given dominion over the creatures of the earth, somebody forgot to tell the dandelion.

When a flight of dandelion paratroopers decides to invade your lawn, fighting is useless. It's like sending your kid

Discouraging note buried in ski rates

Skiing at Sun Valley next winter will cost more than skiing at almost any other resort in the country.

The $15-a-day lift ticket price requested by Sun Valley leaves only the $18 a-day Jackson Hole tram as a more expensive daily lift ride on western ski slopes.

Compared to last winter's daily lift ticket price of $13, the new Sun Valley rates amount to about a 15 percent increase in price.

President Carter, in his ongoing anti-inflationary liturgy would glower at the price increase, roughly twice the 1977 inflation factor.

But Americans seem willing to pay for entertainment and leisure activities at any cost and Sun Valley's rate hike almost certainly won't diminish the popularity of the resort.

After last winter's phenomenal season, more skiers than ever consider Baldy the king of the American ski mountains.

From around the West and in Idaho, skiing Sun Valley will remain a leisure activity thousands will consider a bargain at $15 a day.

And, a good case can be made for the lift rate increase.

Maintenance of its image as a premier ski resort has prompted Sun Valley's owner, Earl Holding, to invest $2.5 million in new lift equipment this summer.

When the refurbishing is done, Sun Valley will be able to move more skiers up the mountain more quickly and more comfortably than most other resorts.

To pay off this investment Holding now will ask a premier price for the enjoyment of his mountain.

That will seem a fair bargain for those skiers who come hundreds of miles to traverse Baldy.

But the new rates at Sun Valley erode considerably the preferential lift ticket prices offered Idaho skiers since 1974.

Out-of-state skiers, it appears, will feel less pressure on their wallets than Idaho skiers.

For example, few Idahoans buy the multiple-day ski passes. Yet Sun Valley director of operations Wally Huffman noted recently the six-day tour passes are the most common ski lift tickets sold in Sun Valley.

Huffman said most of these passes are sold to out-of-state families who vacation for a week at Sun Valley each winter.

The price of these six-day passes will rise only 11 percent next winter, from $62 to $68.

Meanwhile, Idahoans who generally buy either a $100 season discount pass or an Idaho card for $25 will face much higher costs for their skiing.

The $100 ski pass allows a holder to ski at a discount rate any day of the week while the Idaho card allows a skier to ride the lifts at a discount rate only on weekends.

When figured out on a cost-per-day basis, these two discount cards have increased the daily cost of skiing Sun Valley by 38 percent and 44 percent respectively.

Ski packages most often sold to Idaho residents, then, will cost an average 41 percent more next year.

The most popular ski package sold to out-of-state vacationers has increased by only 11 percent.

That's the discouraging news buried in the Sun Valley lift rate increase.

Good luck, Buhl, with sewage plant

Buhl city officials worry they may star in the next chapter of the Magic Valley sewage follies.

For months, Buhl councilmen have debated whether to go ahead with plans to upgrade the city sewage treatment system.

But they have watched in wide-eyed amazement as Twin Falls and Rupert have slowly slipped into an ever-deepening mire of problems with new sewage treatment facilities.

Idaho Department of Health and Welfare environmentalist Ian vonLindern a few days ago recommended Buhl try to avoid the managerial and engineering boo-boos that have bogged down the Twin Falls and Rupert sewage treatment plants from the construction through the operational phases.

A sage suggestion, Mr. vonLindern.

What city anywhere would want to see a $7 million sewage treatment plant built that has never been able to meet minimum environmental protection standards.

Twin Falls has one of those.

And what city would want to relive the unspeakable mistake made in Rupert where a new sewage lagoon was built on top of a huge lava rock outcropping—that cost thousands of dollars to remove?

One reason Twin Falls and Rupert slipped into the quagmire of a malfunctioning public works project seems to be that both cities relied too heavily on the word of the engineers who designed the plant and consistently took too much for granted when early problems cropped up and were quickly explained away.

Buhl's council should take to heart vonLindern's suggestion the city hire a layman, not connected with city government or the engineering firm, to oversee construction of a new plant.

Then the council must be disciplined enough to make sure it is kept abreast of goings-on at the sewage plant during the entire construction process.

Maybe then Buhl will have better luck than Twin Falls or Rupert building a fancy, new sewage treatment facility.

Letters • Times-News readers discuss proposed firearms numbers, city council, T-N stories

Serial numbers proposed for firearms

Editor, Times-News:
The Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms (BATF), "BATS," of the U. S. Treasury is busy playing the unique numbers game. The game consists of 14 numbers which denote central control record keeping of all firearms manufactured in the United States, privately owned or transported interstate.

Emphasis was given the unique serial numbers, which would be affixed on all firearms, explaining that the serial numbers would deter theft of firearms. Present manufactured firearms have serial numbers. The serial numbers do not prevent firearm theft. Automobiles have serial numbers. Auto theft is at a record high. The proposed serial number is so unlike as to conflict with the U. S. Constitution, Articles II and IV of the amendments.

BATF will accept comments pertaining to their rule making. Comments must be submitted by May 22, in duplicate, which indicates that the circulated petitions to prevent BATF rule making will be trashed if submitted to BATF.

The BATF has a questionable record of atrocities. Their rule making is outrageous.

The Congress is the lawmaker. The BATF displayed reckless, deceptive, asinine tactics in disregarding Congress by writing and publishing firearms regulations that would affect every American citizen.

What is your solution to prevent these encroachments from recurring? My suggestion is to ask Congress to abolish the firearms division of the Treasury Department. If you like this suggestion, write your representative in Washington, D. C.

Personally, I'm disgusted with the "BATS."

Erosion of law and order disturbs many

Editor, Times-News:
May 1, May Day, was also Law Day -- at a time many are disturbed by the erosion of law and order and the legal profession itself. Statistics indicate that in our country we have 350,000 lawyers representing 240 million people, almost 35 times as many as Japan, for instance, where a population of 115 million is served by 10,000 lawyers.

Could our over-supply of lawyers and over-reliance on "legal" means working for proper objectives, be fruit of the controversial Legal Services program initiated to accommodate activists returning college campuses some years ago? Initially, under the Office of Economic Opportunity, the Legal Services program was finally rejected because of its activism and the fueling of radical movements. Then the 1974 Legal Services Corporation was born. What have we today?

A backlog of cases in the courts, with "anti-social agitation" in the areas of abortion, "desegregation, busing, homosexuals, equal rights etc.

Law reform projects lean strictly on the liberal left side of things.

Actions against welfare departments, employment security agencies, surplus food distribution systems, housing authorities, zoning officials -- all at government levels on a "law-reform" basis.

Law and order are breaking down, the criminal has rights over and above those of the victim, and too often the guilty point the finger at the innocent.

Penal institutions are overflowing, the crime rate is rising, and law enforcement is breaking down.

Today many of the initial supporters of the Legal Services Act remain steadfast in the belief that their fight for equal rights and justice remains valid for the rich and poor alike. But, too, many are now convinced that the Legal Services Corporation has provided a base for illegal activists working to the detriment of all.

Bradshaw responds to American Legion

Editor, Times-News:
The American Legion has severely criticized me for opposing the Veterans' Nursing Home in Boise. In their April issue of the "Idaho Legionnaire" the lead article on Veterans' Nursing Home, third paragraph, they state:

"... and one or two in this session were completely anti-veteran."

Since I was one of the two senators who voted against the appropriation, I would like to clarify the record and explain why I opposed the legislation.

Senate Bill 1592 calls for a state appropriation of $754,800. This amount would be matched by $1,150,000 or $1,500,000 in federal funds (I have heard both figures), for a total cost of about $2,250,000 to construct a 90-bed veterans' nursing home in Boise. The cost of this Veterans' Nursing Home would be in the neighborhood of $23,000 to $25,000 per bed -- all taxpayers' money.

The 1122 Health Review Council has recently approved new construction of three private nursing homes in Boise, totaling 280 beds at a cost of from $9,300 to $13,700 per bed. This bed cost for the private homes is in the neighborhood of $10,000 to $12,000 less per bed than the Veterans' Nursing Home. These 280 beds are being built by private industry -- no cost to the taxpayer. It is a requirement in the State of Idaho that in order to build a nursing home in the state you must have permission from the 1122 Health Review Council. For some reason the veterans by-passed this council and went directly to the legislature for the appropriation request, while private industries went through the 1122 Health Review Council, as required by law. Doesn't the same law apply to veterans?

Whenever private industry is doing the job, and paying taxes, I am opposed to the government stepping in and competing with them at taxpayers' expense. This holds true in any business or endeavor, whether it be a nursing home, a steel company, or a peanut stand.

Also, I would like to emphasize that the cost per patient day care in a government facility runs from $45 to $50 while in a private institution the cost per patient day care is from $23 to $24. The construction of this Veterans' Nursing Home at taxpayers' expense cannot be justified from a business, economical or practical standpoint. The appropriation is a wasteful and extravagant expenditure of taxpayers' money. People demanding too much from government and getting it is the principle reason our country is so far in debt.

My number one prerequisite in any nursing home facility would be to see that anyone confined to a nursing home receives the best nursing home care. Anything other than this should not be tolerated. This objective includes all patients -- veterans, private patients and those on welfare. Furthermore, any veteran now confined to a private nursing home, whether in Boise or any other town, can receive all the veterans' benefits he is entitled to, just as if he were in a veterans' home. Veterans are now being taken care of in private institutions, and their care is being checked by the Veterans' Administration, state and federal officials.

You are certainly aware that the average citizen of our country is now working four to five months of the year to pay his taxes. In other words, you work from January 1 to May 15 of each year for the government, then you start to work for yourself. I opposed S.B. 1592 because of these excessive taxes, and the fact it called for an additional expenditure of $2.5 million tax money to build the Veterans' Nursing Home, when private institutions who are paying taxes can do and are doing the job.

Many veterans have informed me they also oppose the construction of a Veterans' Nursing Home for the same reasons as I, knowing full well the cost of everything the government does exceeds that of private industry. These veterans know how high taxes are today, and the further expenditure of taxpayers' money for the Veterans' Nursing Home was unnecessary. Therefore, I believe they are unfair in their news release where in the third paragraph they stated we were completely anti-veteran. Are they also going to call those veterans who do not agree with them anti-veteran. Simply because some of the legislators and some of the veterans do not agree with them in no way stipulates they are "anti-veteran."

1% property tax needs defining

Editor, Times-News:
The one percent property tax proposal is an exercise in deception until someone defines which market value the one percent is to be applied to.

Idaho state law says properties will be put on tax rolls at 100 percent of market value. Market value is the value of a property. Expressed in money, a willing buyer will pay a willing seller.

Market values determined by county assessors on individual properties will vary from 35 percent to 80 percent of true market value. This inequity exists in all classifications of property.

An example of what could happen: Present market value of a property is $100,000. The county assessor carries it at 40 percent or $40,000 market value.

Presently at 2.1 percent the assessed value would be $2,400. Under the one percent initiative the assessed value would be $500. However, if the one percent initiative passes and the county assessors go to 100 percent of true market value, the assessed value of the same property would be $1,000.

Ada County was forced to go to 100 percent of true market value last year and if this happens to all other counties the example piece of property at 2.1 percent would have an assessed value of $2,100.

I doubt if the one percent initiative serves any realistic purpose especially in light of the fact we don't know whose definition of market value the proponents of the initiative wish to use.

I for one am more concerned about the 45 percent variance within classifications of property which results in an inequitable distribution of the tax burden than I am in worrying about whether I'm being charged one percent of true market value or 2.1 percent of 50 percent of true market value.

Bad street plan

Editor, Times-News:
After a touch-and-go drive home on Blue Lakes Boulevard North this evening, I picked up the newspaper and saw a picture and an article about widening Second Avenue North.

It seems to me, as a highway and a city street, Second Avenue North is wide enough. Why don't the highway department and city consider widening Blue Lakes Boulevard North? With all of the drive-ins, the Lynwood and Blue Lakes shopping centers and the hurry-up rush hour traffic and people wanting to turn left onto or off of Blue Lakes Boulevard North make circumstances twice as bad as Second Avenue North.

It's too late to do anything about it now, but I personally think it was poor planning by the city and the state.

Parents with 'premies' helped

Editor, Times-News:
A grandparent-parents have recently formed an organization called Parent To Parent. The purpose of this group is to bring comfort to parents of premature babies or babies requiring intensive care. All of the members of Parent To Parent have had children that were either premies or spent some time in the intensive care unit at the hospital.

We are trying to get together a task force of parents who have shared this same experience. When we do, we hope to be able to go into the hospital and talk to parents who have children in the intensive care unit. We feel that we can offer some hope to these people and a shoulder to cry on when they really need it.

If your child was premature or required intensive care, please try to remember what it was like. Think of the agony you went through just wondering if your baby would make it through the night. Remember how frightening it was when you first saw your baby with needles in its head and tubes up its nose as it struggled for precious life. It was frightening to you then, and it is to parents in the same situation today.

We're not asking for the sun and the moon, just a little of your time. If you would like to help please give us a call, and we will let you know when our next meeting is.

City vs. sewer

Editor, Times-News:
What you miss when you don't attend the meetings!

SPORTSMAN CLUB CALLS ON CITY COUNCIL TO END SEWER HOOK-UPS.

This should have been the headline in your local newspaper. The highly respected Twin Falls Wildlife and Conservation Corporation did call upon the council to end sewer hook-ups until the treatment plant is operational.

I suppose I scared the gross-net out of the news media. The local TV mentioned the club was there; the radio hinted they were there; the Times-News hoped they were not there at all -- and said nothing.

It is the first indication that maybe just maybe, the sewer treatment plant is in fact inadequate for the city.

We can all thank the federal agency that makes us clean up our water. If left to the cities, we would end up like a backyard at spring high, knee deep in our own excrement.

The mayor said that more, not less, sewer hook-ups are needed for the water flow. Surely, the city would be running additional water into the sewer system if this would help. Is the city willing to pay the $10,000 per day, every day the plant does not function properly?

What about Feast of Pentecost?

Editor, Times-News:
I read with interest your short editorial entitled, "Mother's Day still special" (May 12) in which you took the area churches to task for not making mention of Mother's Day. I agree that Mother's Day is special and that some observance in the churches is appropriate. However, let me take you to task on at least two points:

First, you didn't read your own newspaper. In addition to the observance by the churches of Religious Science (which you mentioned in your editorial) I count three advertisements for church services which mention Mother's Day, as well as one radio broadcast. So your complaint is not justified.

Second, Mother's Day happened to fall on a day which, for the Christian, clearly takes precedence -- the Feast of Pentecost, which is the "birthday" of the Church, the time when the Holy Spirit descended upon the disciples and began to lead the Church into all truth. The three great holy days of the Church are Christmas, Easter and Pentecost. I don't wonder that so few churches made mention of Mother's Day -- I wonder that only two of the area churches made mention of Pentecost!

Let me add that the religious page is not devoid of humor: the advertisement for First United Methodist Church listed as the sermon topic, "Don't let mother carry too much weight." The chancel choir must have agreed for the title of their special music was, "Oh My Soul, Bless God the Father."

T-N story said irresponsible

Editor, Times-News:
The Times-News' irresponsible approach to journalism is well-known, but your recent expose on "teen-age drinking" was the worst form of sensationalism you have ever peddled.

The biased articles were loaded with generalizations and unsupported facts. The subject was hardly worth a boxed, front-page article topped by an over-size headline, a complete page carrying stories containing the same information, plus Chris Peck's story.

Being a teen-ager currently attending Twin Falls High School, I greatly resent your misleading "reporting" of the problem. You have portrayed all teen-agers as alcoholics.

Where were student opinions? Being the victims of your series, we surely were entitled to equal space with the administrators, alcohol experts, and law enforcement officials.

The Times-News owes apologies not only to students, but also parents, who have been presented with a distorted view of their children's educations.

Your misguided assumption that the First Amendment guarantees your right to slander, as in this case, can only damage your already questionable reputation.

Council should explain actions

Editor, Times-News:
There are several questions which the citizens of Twin Falls, and the taxpayers in particular, would like to have answered.

What is the dark secret which the City Council seems compelled to keep concealed behind its closed doors?

Did someone receive a little extra money under the table to have this ineffective though highly sophisticated sewage disposal plant installed?

Why was the amount of solid waste so much greater than anticipated?

Why did the council recently choose to hire Montgomery engineers to operate the plant instead of Envirotech, Inc., who was the major equipment supplier for the plant and obviously should best understand the details of its operation?

Why has the council procrastinated for two years before taking any action to find a solution to this problem?

In short, what is the stink behind the stink?

Surely an explanation to dispel the false rumors and incorrect speculations about these questions is in order.

Frankie's buying your vote

Editor, Times-News:
In regard to a letter that appeared in Times-News Sunday, April 23, by a Bessie B. Erickson regarding all the fine things Sen. Frank Church is doing for senior citizens.

What happens to the increases that Senator Church supposedly gets for senior citizens? They are gobbled up by inflation and then some, right? What causes inflation? It's our federal government continually spending more than they take in; deficit spending. Who continually votes for all these big spending bills? Sen. Frank Church and the rest of our overwhelming Democrat-controlled Congress.

All "Frankie" is doing is buying your vote and then stabbing you in the back. The most foolish thing the voters of Idaho could do would be to send another Democrat back to Washington this November to add to that already overwhelming majority of Democrats that are causing all our problems.

QUESTION: They tell me that most professions have some sort of an arbitration committee or special group you can complain to if you feel you are getting the short end, ripped off, or overcharged. This is true for the doctors and lawyers. What about the home buyer who has a house built for him? We are dissatisfied by the contractor doing our job and we feel we are being overcharged.

ANSWER: You're in luck. The Homebuilders and Contractors Association of Magic Valley to which most reputable contractors belong, has just such an arbitration committee set up in its ethics board to help you solve such problems. If you have a legitimate complaint why don't you give Jim Betcher, who is the president of the Magic Valley chapter for this organization and, as such, can arrange for an arbitration committee to look into the complaint and bring it to the attention of the contractor and also help you get the job corrected if such is called for. This is something new in the Magic Valley and it can do a great deal to improve communications between homebuilders and buyers. Incidentally, your comment about other professions having such a similar set-up for handling complaints including lawyers - don't fool yourself on that last one. Believe me, it doesn't work with the law profession.

QUESTION: Isn't there some program available other than the Federal Housing program that you mentioned in one of your recent real estate columns in which someone buying a home can have a lower payment at the beginning of the loan and gradually increase it as their income goes up?

ANSWER: This is an idea whose time has arrived. More and more, banks and savings and loans are now going to a graduated monthly payment schedule whereby young couples getting started - who have some promise of increasing their income - can start out with lower payments and gradually increase them over the first five-year period, when presumably their earnings increase in their profession or occupation. One savings and loan organization in Twin Falls (Equitable Savings and Loan) - already has such a program - initiated. Sometimes they might require a down payment, or some other item, but the idea is great and it has terrific potential. Of course it isn't going to do you much good if you are already at the peak of your earnings because of your skill, education, and talents and you aren't going to be doing any better five years from now than you are today.

QUESTION: We recently bought a house and when the deed was made out it had my husband's name on it, but not mine. After his name it has the words "ET UX." Is that me?

ANSWER: That's you. ET UX is an abbreviation for "et uxor," which means "and wife." Why they don't say "and wife" or better yet, as many deeds do today, say something to the effect: "John P. Jones and Mary P. Jones, husband and wife." This seems like it would be a more appropriate phrase in this day of liberation.

QUESTION: We recently saw a copy of an appraisal that you had done for a bank on our property. In it you indicated that you were penalizing the property for "economic obsolescence." What was that all about?

ANSWER: Economic obsolescence is a fancy name for one of the forms of depreciation. In this particular case, it applies to the loss of value the property has suffered due to outside influences over which you had no control. This can take many forms. It could be a matter of a house being located in a run-down or deteriorating neighborhood, or a home located in an industrial area, or possibly a piece of property located on main traffic thoroughfare that causes it to lose value. In other words, it is a loss of value as a result of outside influences on the property, rather than anything functionally wrong with the property itself.

Tax shelters — a third dimension

Question: Preserving my capital and increasing my assets have long been my two chief goals. But today's income tax picture makes it more and more difficult to do either one. Congress, lawmakers, the Internal Revenue Service, and local agencies are all hard at work to plug tax loopholes, and people who want to build savings — for retirement, to send children to college, even to buy luxury items — find new problems at every turn. Your recent article on Deferred Annuities was most valuable, however, I am not paying current taxes on interest since I now have a Deferred Annuity. I need help on saving taxes on my income to meet my goals of preserving capital and increasing my assets.

Answer: Preserving capital and increasing assets have long been two chief goals for many investors. One of the most popular methods used by investors who want to protect capital and build funds at the same time is what we call the "third dimension" of investing — that is, tax-favored vehicles that can make your investment program more responsive to your needs.

TAX SHELTER PROGRAMS

Tax shelter is a broad term that covers investments which offer opportunity for profit, yet also reduce or defer current income tax liability. The shelter concept stems from a policy decision by Congress to encourage private investment in socially desirable areas by offering tax incentives. If you have a high income, a large tax bill, and you can commit funds to a high-risk venture for two years or more, tax shelters may be just what you're looking for.

SOME BASIC FACTS ABOUT TAX SHELTERS

Participations in tax shelters are normally limited partnership interests. The general partner contributes operational and managerial skill, while a group of limited partners supplies capital for investment. Tax benefits flow through the partnership on a pro rata basis to all participants. Many limited partnerships are registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission, which means they offer a prospectus of detailed terms and conditions. Tax shelters require that you give up some liquidity, because fractional interests in limited partnerships are often difficult to sell in a hurry. Even those that promise to be bought out on demand have initial waiting periods, and you may suffer adverse tax consequences, too.

Funds for tax-sheltered investments, then, should come from expendable, not emergency, dollars. Tax shelters involve investment as well as tax risks. Your apartments may not rent; your oil wells may not produce. And Congress, though mindful of the need to encourage operations that help the economy, could change the status of investments that now receive direct tax benefits.

Among the most popular shelter outlets are oil and gas, real estate, and equipment leasing. Well give prospective investors some basic guidelines on the profit opportunities and tax benefits in each of these three areas in forthcoming articles.

I am sending you a copy of our new booklet entitled "Your Guide To Tax Sheltered Investments." Copies of this booklet are available to the public by phoning or writing Loop Rhodes, Hornblower & Co., at the address below.

Wallace Rasmussen

It's a long way from ice hauling

By WILLIAM ROBBINS
O.N.Y. Times Service

CHICAGO — A few months ago, a group of employees gave Wallace M. Rasmussen, chairman of the Beatrice Foods Co., a pair of nickel-plated ice tongs.

"Maybe they thought I needed a reminder," said Rasmussen, smiling the other day as he recalled his start at Beatrice Foods 44 years ago when both he and the giant international corporation were young, when tongs were his tools and hefting blocks of ice was his job.

Beatrice Foods is hardly a household name outside the investment community, but it is a rare home that hasn't hosted some of its 9,000 products, ranging from Dannon yogurt to Louis Sherry ice cream to Samsonite luggage.

Over the years, Rasmussen has learned to help companies instead of ice, quietly buying solid specialty producers in regional markets in the food-processing industry and elsewhere. Now the company is taking an abrupt new tack. It is about to pick up a major company in the orange-juice business, and put the squeeze on a tough competitor. Assuming stockholder approval on both sides this June of a $490 million agreement to acquire Tropicana Products Inc., Beatrice will take on Coca-Cola, owner of the Minute Maid brand, in a fight for the national market for chilled orange juice.

Does the proposed takeover mark the beginning of a new course? Says Rasmussen: "When you're maturing, you try to avoid the bullies. There is an advantage to being underestimated. But there always comes a time when you have to stick your head up above the table."

That time has clearly come for Beatrice Foods. But Beatrice will probably attempt it in its own, aw-shucks manner.

"We're just country boys," Rasmussen said. "Country boys can't afford to be pretentious." The affable chief executive officer wants no one who works for him to forget Beatrice Foods' modest beginnings — the years when it was growing up as a penny-pinching dairy business — any more than Rasmussen can himself lose the heavy-lifters and thick, muscular hands his early work gave him.

The country boys at Beatrice Foods, spurred by contests and perquisites with unabashed evangelical fervor, have pushed their company to the top of their industry, locking the lead in both sales and earnings over such food-processing titans as Kraft, General Foods, Ralston Purina, Borden and General Mills. It has long been known to analysts for its 26-year unbroken string of sales and earnings records.

Big business from little sounds

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A Bible that preaches, bird cards that chirp, an encyclopedia that teaches language — all new ways of learning by adding sound to the printed page — are being developed for sale in the near future.

David Hackman, president of Microsonics Corp., says the various products all rely on miniature phonograph records, about the size of a quarter, and a handheld player device. Microsonics has licensed several applications of the concept, including a series of talking books for children called "Adventures Through the Alphabet" to be put out by Encyclopaedia Britannica.

The talking books are designed to teach English to Japanese, Spanish, Italian and Arabic students.

There is another talking books idea being marketed by Fisher-Price Toys, a children's encyclopedia edited for audio use. The encyclopedia was produced at the American Toy Fair in New York City earlier this year.

Hackman said Fisher-Price, which has the rights to Disney and Sesame Street, was introducing a series of 18 books initially.

New forest regulations

WASHINGTON (UPI) — New Forest Service regulations to restore oral auction bidding on federal timber sales in Idaho and the rest of the Northwest will be finalized Monday, Sen. Frank Church said Friday.

"Now with the finalization of the Forest Service regulations, the last step in the process is complete, and oral bidding will again become the norm," Church said.

He said the final bidding regulations will be published in the Federal Register Monday and become effective immediately.

Car shortage confirmed

PORTLAND (UPI) — The Western Wood Products Association says lumber stocks on-hand and unfilled orders at western mills at the end of the first quarter confirm a western rail car shortage.

Inventories at western sawmills on March 31 stood at 2.54 billion board feet, the report said, or 108 million board feet more than on the same date last year.

H.A. Roberts, executive vice president of the association, said the shortage of rail cars caused by heavy storms this past winter is directly responsible for the large stocks-on-hand at mills throughout the 12-state western lumber producing area. He said it would take about 2,500 rail cars to move the increased mill inventories to market.

McClure criticized

BOISE (UPI) — Senatorial candidate Dwight Jensen says Sen. James A. McClure is not going far enough in his opposition to a slurry pipeline bill.

Jensen said the Senate Energy and Resources Committee and the House Interior Committee are reviewing legislation to encourage construction of a 38-inch pipeline to carry coal mixed with water from the Rocky Mountain coal fields to the Gulf states.

Senator James McClure said that he would filibuster that bill unless it provides a guarantee that Idaho's water would not be used in the pipeline, Jensen said.

"I comment to the senator, who helped unlock the barn door, for finally noticing that the horse might be stolen," he said. "But simply demanding a guarantee for Idaho water rights is not enough."

"There are many other reasons for opposing that bill and Senator McClure should pledge himself against it with or without the water rights guarantee."

Jensen said McClure has helped to create a situation endangering Idaho water rights by supporting out-of-state energy corporations whose sole motive is profit.

"By supporting virtually unrestricted strip mining, by discouraging the subsidized development of shale oil and by disregarding environmental considerations almost completely, the incumbent junior senator has helped intensify pressure on Idaho water," Jensen said.

Brothel hearing slated

RUPERT — A preliminary hearing is scheduled in Rupert Tuesday morning on a civil complaint alleging the Lee Hotel in Burley is a center for prostitution and should be closed.

Fifth District Judge Sherman J. Bellwood, of Rupert, will preside over the 9 a.m. hearing in the Mindoka Judicial Building.

Bellwood is the second judge named to hear the case. He was appointed after Larry Duffin, a Burley lawyer representing hotel owner Katherine Summers, disqualified 5th District Judge George Gramata.

The civil complaint was filed by Cassia County Prosecutor Al Barrus on April 28, alleging that the Lee Hotel is a "moral nuisance."

The complaint followed a nighttime raid of the hotel led by Barrus earlier that week. In the complaint, Barrus alleged regular hotel activities included showing lewd films.

He also said three state undercover agents were solicited to engage in sexual intercourse in the hotel at prices between $20 and $100.

Bellwood also will hear a motion from Barrus seeking a temporary injunction closing the hotel.

GOP ladies meet Monday

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Republican Women will meet Monday at 1 p.m. at Morgan's Rogerson Round-up Room. Several Republican candidates for office will be present. Those attending will be Dick Nelson and Jerry Evans, both candidates for Superintendent of Public Instruction; David Leroy, candidate for Attorney General; and Phil Batt, candidate for Lieutenant Governor. The public is invited.

Concert staged today

WENDELL — A free outdoor concert kicks off at 11 a.m. today at Niagra Springs, 10 miles south of Wendell. Greg Williams and Garin Yost of Hagerman said Saturday concert-goers should bring food and drink since no refreshments will be served at the Niagra Springs park.

Donations will be accepted to benefit the Idaho Conservation League, they added.

Williams noted persons attending especially should bring water with them as drinking fountains at Niagra Springs aren't turned on yet.

Persons driving to the concert should take exit 157 off Interstate 80-North, and turn south off the exit ramp, he added.

Bands entertaining today will include Cobalt Blue, Jimbo Break, C and R Express, Special Delivery, Tenley Stevens, The Jets, Freestyle and Sweet Country Air.

Williams said the festival should last until about 8 p.m.

Small canal bursts

HAZELTON — A small break in the Northside Canal early Saturday did very little damage, according to a Northside Canal Company official.

Ted Diehl, manager of the canal company, said he first learned of the break about 6 a.m. Saturday and crews proceeded to the scene to stop the flow and make repairs.

A section of the canal with a water capacity of only about 20 cubic feet per second was leaking after heavy rains washed out part of the bank, Diehl said.

"There was so much rain the water wouldn't flow through a pipe under the road," Diehl said. "We had the water stopped early, but it was around noon before we got it patched."

He said canal company crews hauled in fill dirt to patch the broken canal bank.

Escaping canal waters reportedly flowed across the property of Rex Wood, a Hazelton farmer, and into a pond on his property.

According to Diehl, the canal company will have to bring in some fill dirt to replace topsoil washed out by canal water.

Other than the wash-out on Wood's property, Diehl said the break caused "very little damage."

Magic Valley

Democrats crossing fingers in '78

By DAVID MORRISSEY Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — After a decade of being a minority party Idaho Democrats are looking to 1978 as the year the political tide turns in their favor.

In the last legislative session, Democrats were outgunned better than two to one in the Idaho House of Representatives.

In the state senate, a body with half the members of the house, Republicans still had a decisive five vote edge.

As November's election approaches key Democrats are crossing their fingers and hoping this year will turn the tide.

A few areas — such as Twin Falls County — show increased Democratic activity, but most of Idaho seems firmly locked in Republican control.

"I think we're as strong as we've ever been in north-Idaho," Democratic State Chairman George Klein said.

The Democrats have been recruiting state legislative candidates in northern Idaho, and Klein added, "we'll fill most of the seats."

Klein cited three other counties where Democratic candidates looked promising.

The state Democratic chairman singled out Canyon, Bannock and Twin Falls counties as possible Democratic turf in 1978.

But he added, "Don't make this thing look hopeful. It's going to be tough."

Klein holds out little hope for major Democratic victories in Ada County, north central Idaho or the Idaho Falls area, all of which he termed "rough."

Klein said the Idaho Democratic Party has difficulty recruiting candidates for several reasons.

"The hardest part is getting someone to go to Boise. That means someone has to take time from their job. The reality is that not a lot of Democrats are financially able to do that."

Financially independent candidates are more often Republicans than Democrats, Klein added.

Klein said the Magic Valley "looked better than in the past," although Republicans outnumber Democrats 17-1 in the legislature from Magic Valley and neighboring legislative districts.

The state chairman said his party is encouraging candidates who ran in 1974 to again seek legislative office.

"I think that with the exposure they got last time some of the candidates, like Claire Wetherell (a Mountain Home Democrat) who came within a few hundred votes of winning, might make it this time," Klein said.

Wetherell in 1974 received 47 per cent of the votes cast for Senator in District 22. She was defeated by Republican J. Wilson Steen. District 22 contains Elmore, Camas and half of Gooding County.

Most of Twin Falls County is divided between legislative districts 24 and 25. Not only are all Representatives and Senators from these two districts Republican, no Democrat has been elected from Twin Falls County since 1938. That year the electoral coalitions of Franklin Roosevelt helped Dan Conner, H.E. Powers, Dan Cavnagh and Frank Atkins sweep into office.

Magic Valley Democrats have seen 40 dry years since then, but two area Democrats say its possible this year may break the pattern.

"I think we'll have four possibly five legislative candidates," said Twin Falls Democratic County Chairman Marge Slotten.

Slotten said it was still too early to know how many of the six Republicans from Districts 24 and 25 would be challenged, but added "I think we may have candidates opposing everyone but Sen. (Richard) High."

Former Democratic County Chairman Steve Carter said five Democrats on Twin Falls ballots would be a "large improvement" over the 1976.

That year, Carter noted, only two Democrats ran for the legislature. Both received less than 40 per cent of the votes cast.

But Slotten said "it looks better than it has for some time."

Buhl farmer pulled from burning tractor, unhurt

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES Times-News writer

BUHL — James McArthur of Buhl took a day off Saturday.

McArthur, 58, said he fell pretty lucky to be alive and decided to go slow after a tractor he was driving tipped over, caught fire and pinned him Friday afternoon.

The Buhl farmer and four police officers had several anxious moments Friday afternoon when the McArthur's farm tractor overturned and burst into flames with the operator pinned beneath it.

McArthur was operating the tractor along a county road about three-quarters of a mile south of the Burley corner at Buhl when the farm vehicle overturned at the edge of the harrow pit.

McArthur was pinned by the legs and unable to free himself.

Twin Falls County Deputy Sheriff Jim Hopkins, one of four officers who rushed to the scene, said gasoline dripping from the tank ignited and the gasoline continued to feed the fire.

Fire extinguishers in the police cars were pumped dry but would not hold the fire down for any length of time.

Officers were unable to lift the tractor from the victim and when they tried to jack up the tractor, the jack would not raise the machine.

Meanwhile, flames edged ever closer to the tractor's gas tank.

"I was afraid the gasoline tank would explode. The flames were burning back over it and increasing the heat while we worked. I don't think McArthur or any of us would have had much of a chance if it had blown," officer Hopkins said Saturday.

He said the first emergency vehicle to arrive after police reached the scene was a wrecker.

It was hooked to the tractor and was able to lift it from the operator. Officers pulled McArthur to safety just as the rural fire equipment from Buhl reached the scene.

McArthur said he was not afraid of an explosion as long as the gas continued to burn, but said he was afraid the flames would reach him before officers got him out from under the machine.

"I thought I might have had a broken leg. I was hurting but I was scared the fire would get to me," he said Saturday.

"The hydraulic fluid was running on me and if one flame had reached me I would have been in pretty bad shape," the farmer said.

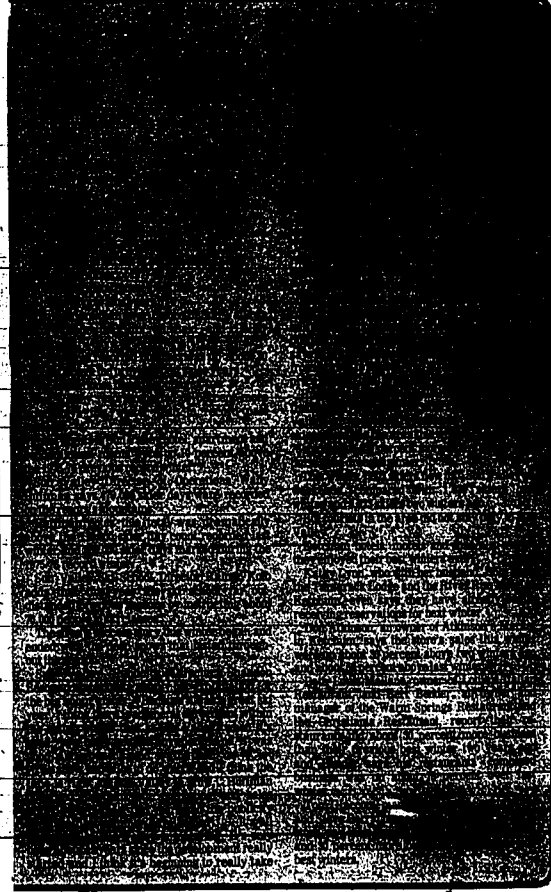

Buhl police officer Francis Johnson and deputies Hopkins, T.M. Kendrick and Jack Hopwood assisted in the rescue.

McArthur was taken to Magic Valley Memorial Hospital by ambulance and treated for minor injuries. He did not suffer burns.

McArthur said the first vehicle to drive past after he turned the tractor over, reported an overturned tractor.

"They didn't see me and didn't tell officers I was under it. Lucky for me Johnson was only a quarter of a mile away and the other officers were pretty close too. I was sure glad to see them," he said.

Graduation marks school's end for seniors

MAGIC VALLEY—It's graduation time in Magic Valley. Today 12, or half of the 24 high schools in Magic Valley will hold either baccalaureate or graduation exercises. The season opens May 15 with the school holding their events last week.

Another dozen programs are scheduled throughout this week. By the time the 1978 graduation parade ends Friday night at Carey, a total of 1,871 southern Idaho young people will have marched across a stage decorated with flowers, accompanied by the strains of music from the school band and received a diploma marking the end of 12 years of public schooling.

Speakers for the services vary from Idaho's top office holders through university presidents to local businessmen, with a sprinkling of political candidates and a local doctor, lawyer and educator.

In some schools seniors have opted in recent years to forego an outside speaker, with students providing the entire graduation program.

Sen. Frank Church appears the most popular public official among area seniors with three appearances scheduled. He will speak today at Valley High School, Monday night at Minico and Tuesday at Richfield.

Other top officials among the graduation orators include Gov. John V. Evans, Sen. James McClure and the presidents of Boise State University and the University of Idaho.

Dr. Richard Gibb, of the University of Idaho, is making two trips to southern Idaho. He returned to Moscow Friday after speaking at Wendell Thursday night. Monday he will drive from Pocatello to Twin Falls to address seniors here.

An increasing number of schools have dropped the traditional baccalaureate program or combined it with graduation so there is only one formal event for busy seniors and their families to attend.

Twin Falls, the largest high school in the valley, and the four schools in Cassia County as well as a few others still hold separate baccalaureate services with clergyman as speakers. Some school office employees spoke fondly of remembrances of their own baccalaureate.

Two Twin Falls County schools, Murtaugh and Castelford, opened the graduation season with exercises last Monday night. John Hepanath, Buhl, addressed the 18 Castelford seniors, while Gerald Meyerbercher, College of Southern Idaho assistant to the president, spoke to the 15 Murtaugh graduates.

Today's ceremonies are scheduled at Bliss, Shoshone, Jerome, Valley, Burley, Oakley, Raft River, Declo, Carey, Twin Falls, Buhl and Filer high schools:

Bliss— Kelly Pearce, chief of the Idaho Department of Law Enforcement, will speak at the Bliss High School graduation at 7:30 p.m. today, where 15 seniors will be graduated.

Shoshone— The 39 Shoshone seniors will conduct baccalaureate services at 8 p.m. today with graduation scheduled for 8 p.m. Monday. Fred Trunkle, a Shoshone alumnus and now a coach, will be the speaker.

Jerome— Sen. James McClure will address the Jerome High School graduation ceremony at 2 p.m. today. School officials said 144 seniors will receive diplomas in the combined service.

Valley— Sen. Frank Church will speak at the other Jerome County high school, at Valley, where 54 seniors from the Eden-Hazelton area will receive diplomas in the 2 p.m. ceremony.

Burley— Mark Orton, Mormon Church seminary principal, will speak at baccalaureate services at 2 p.m. today. Student speakers are scheduled for graduation at 8 p.m. Tuesday for the 200 seniors.

Declo— Declo High School baccalaureate services will be held at 8 p.m. today with Devere Harris, a Portage, Utah insurance executive, as speaker. At graduation exercises at 8 p.m. Wednesday the two valedictorians, Angela Tuttle and Sherri B., will speak. Lynn Davis' salutation will give the class history for the 22 seniors.

Oakley— Isaac Lee, Burley stake president of the Mormon Church, will address the 30 Oakley seniors at baccalaureate services at 8 p.m. today. Valedictorian Marc Aho and Salutatorian Mike Wadsworth will speak at the commencement ceremony at 8 p.m. Wednesday. Both events will be held in the LDS stakehouse.

Raft River— John Sinclair, a Rupert businessman, will be baccalaureate speaker at the Malta LDS chapel. Speakers for graduation for the 35 member class Tuesday at 8 p.m. will be Valedictorian Julie Duree and Salutatorian Vary Ward.

Twin Falls— Rev. Sheldon Slagel, of the Twin Falls Christian Center, will speak at baccalaureate for the 407 Twin Falls High School graduates at 2:30 p.m. today. Dr. Richard Gibb, University of Idaho president, will speak at graduation at 8 p.m. Monday.

Carey— Gale C. Roberts, Carey LDS seminary instructor, will address the 18 Carey seniors at baccalaureate at 2 p.m. today. Speaker for graduation at 8 p.m. Friday, will be J. Burns Beal, state brand inspector.

Buhl— Dr. Fred McCabe, a Buhl physician, will address the combined baccalaureate and graduation exercises at 3 p.m. today for the 115 Buhl High School seniors. Chris E. Honick and Valirel Adams will give the senior addresses.

Filer— Boise State University president, Jerry Davis, will be the speaker for the 77 Filer seniors graduating at 2 p.m. today.

Gooding— Jack Hemingway, Ketchum sportsman, will address the Gooding High School graduation at 8 p.m. Tuesday when 90 seniors will receive diplomas.

Hagerman— Hagerman High School graduation speaker is Tom Hamilton, who is associated with the nationwide Christian Athletes movement. The 27 seniors will receive their diplomas Wednesday night.

Richfield— Richfield's 19 seniors and their families will hear Sen. Frank Church at 8 p.m. Tuesday.

Dietrich— Dietrich High School, Magic Valley's smallest, will graduate 50 seniors at exercises scheduled for 8 p.m. Monday.

Minico— Sen. Frank Church also will address the 300 Minidoka County High School seniors at 8 p.m. Monday. His appearance at the Rupert event was the subject of considerable controversy earlier this spring because of his support for the Panama Canal treaties.

Wood River— Idaho Gov. John V. Evans will speak at the Wood River High School graduation at 8 p.m. Thursday at Halley, where 94 seniors will receive diplomas.

Graduation was held Friday at Kimberly and Thursday night in Wendell, Fairfield and Hansen.

Dr. Richard Gibb, of the University of Idaho, addressed the 51 Wendell graduates.

At Fairfield, 28 Camas County High School graduates heard Vernon Ravenstrol, former legislator now seeking the GOP nomination for governor. The 20 eighth grade graders at Fairfield held graduation exercises Wednesday night putting on their own program.

The 21 seniors at Hansen High School also conducted an all-student program with Kris Daw, valedictorian, and Sally Miller, salutatorian, among the speakers. The Hansen seniors have painted the letters "Hansen Huskies" above a picture of the school mascot in the gymnasium. The project was dedicated to the school by Senior Brad Baily during the graduation ceremonies.

Sewage treatment for Hagerman studied

By BONIE BAIRD JONES

TWIN FALLS—The South Central Health District is considering a novel sub-surface sewage treatment system for the Thousand Waters subdivision in Hagerman Valley.

The Thousand Waters development proposes 213 lots near the Snake River in the vicinity of Thousand Springs in the Hagerman Valley.

The eventual population of the subdivision would be about 600 persons.

Gary Shook, an environmental engineer specializing in health with JUB engineers in Boise, said the new concept calls for using only about three acres for drain-field facilities in addition to treating some eight "dousing beds."

Waste would be sent into the dousing center under pressure by means of a pumping system. With close and continuous supervision and maintenance, the entire drainfield would be equally doused continuously and the pressure would eliminate the build up of sludge.

Effluent would be discharged only about three feet from the surface where bacteria could get to it and complete the treatment process.

Ground water monitoring wells would also be a part of the system.

Shook said his plan could be a solution to other Magic Valley growth problems, asking it provides use of marginal land and would protect farm land from septic tank drain field pollution.

Board members questioned the idea of 60,000 gallons of effluent per day on three acres of land and said because Thousand Waters development is proposed to be located so close to recreational water and areas, they would want to give the proposal some extensive research.

Board Chairman William L. (Bill) Chaney said board members should consider the proposal and attempt to come up with some answers by the June 21 meeting.

Dr. Wayne Carte, medical director for the health district, said he would check with other districts to determine the success of similar installations in Ada, Elmore and Canyon counties.

Gerald Hurst, an environmentalist for the South Central Health District, has suggested it might be less costly to hook the Thousand Waters homes into the Hagerman sewer system, only a few miles away.

He said the town of Hagerman has only about 500 population, less than that of the proposed subdivision, and a cooperative arrangement might be feasible.

Originally, the Thousand Waters subdivision called for a central sewage treatment facility along with a central water system with a single well.

This plan was not acceptable to the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare's Division of Environment.

The original development plan for the subdivision also called for geothermal development of natural hot water in the area for heat.

The water system and geothermal development were acceptable to the Division of Environment.

Affirmed wins Preakness by neck

BALTIMORE (UPI) — This time, Alydar had no excuse. Affirmed scored only a neck victory over his arch rival in Skurdur's $188,700 Preakness, but it proved what his length victory in the Kentucky Derby could not simply that he is a better 3-year-old than Alydar.

The darker, copper-colored colt was able to stay close to the pace at Pimlico, much closer than he had in his losing effort in the Derby. This time, under Jorge Velazquez, he was able to uncork his stretch drive within striking distance of the leader.

As Affirmed, under another well-rialed from Steve Cauten, blazed the last 3-16th mile in a record-tying 1:15.5 en route to his 1:54.2 victory, just two-fifths off the track record.

"I was waiting for Alydar the whole race," said Cauten, who rode Affirmed in the June 10th Belmont Stakes, the final leg in racing's Triple Crown. "I set my horse down at the head of the lane (stretch), he set his horse down and I beat him."

Affirmed gained control as the field of seven turned into the backstretch with Alydar laying sixth along the rail. At that point Velazquez began stalking the leader and as they skipped through fractions of :47.35 and 1:11.45, brought his mount around horses and attempted to engage Affirmed on the far turn.

Joined by Believe It, who was to run out of fuel and finish third, Affirmed and Alydar left the pack far behind and Cauten whipped his mount six times in keeping the golden chestnut alive with brisk handling.

"Affirmed did not show any signs of weakening despite tremendous pressure put on him by Alydar and seemed within himself as he crossed the finish line."

"The last few jumps Alydar might have gained a few inches," said Cauten, "but my horse was still running. Everything went very good."

"Alydar ran a better race today than he did in the Derby — he had no excuse today."

In the Derby Alydar had been sent off as the favorite, but Velazquez later claimed the Calumet colt couldn't "get hold" of the Churchill Downs surface. Now Affirmed leads the series between the two 6-2, and with the win, his sixth straight this year, raised his lifetime earnings for trainer

Laz Barrera and Harbor View Farms to $1,023,227.

"He ran a kind race," said trainer Barrera. "I was where I wanted to be, right with him at the head of the stretch. But he wouldn't be passed. My horse ran a fine race. We tried, but Cauten will ride Affirmed as he attempts to become just the 11th Triple Crown winner in history and the second in two years. Seattle Slew last year. The horses he can join include Sir Barton, Gallant Fox, Omaha, War Admiral, Whirlaway, Assault, Count Fleet, Citation and Secretariat.

"I hope Affirmed goes good (in the Belmont)," said Cauten. "I see no reason why he shouldn't. He was still running today."

It was the duplicate order of finish as the Derby, only this time Affirmed as the favorite returned $3.00, $2.10 and $2.10 with Alydar paying $2.10 and $2.10. Believe It, 7 1/2 lengths back, also returned $2.10 and was followed by Noon Time Spender, Indigo Star, Dar's and Track Reward.

Affirmed now has won 13 of his 15 starts, and seven straight races for earnings of $1,023,227 for Lou and Patrice Wolfson of Harbor View Farms.

The record crowd of 81,251, drawn by sunny skies and temperatures in the 80s, had made Affirmed the 1-2 favorite, betting a record $1,698,911 on the race.

Soccer to meet team

TWIN FALLS — Men interested in joining the Twin Falls soccer team should attend a practice at 1 p.m. Sunday at Robert Stewart Junior high school.

Ed Tyrrell said about a dozen have shown up to try to learn about the sport and join a place on the team but about 20 are required.

IOC charged with double-cross

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Councilman Bob Ronka returned from Athens Friday and said the International Olympic Committee so "double-crossed and conned Los Angeles there is no chance in the world" the city will give it IOC demands.

Ronka said the city was deceived by the IOC and Lord Killanin, whom he described as "archaic and arcane aristocrats who don't understand the realities of the 20th century."

Ronka, shunted aside in Athens while Mayor Tom Bradley and his aides did the negotiating with the IOC, announced a day ahead of the mayor to get a head start on the campaign to reject the 1984 Summer Games.

Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee, Saturday denied the allegations.

"We refute that entirely," Killanin told a news conference at the end of the 80th IOC session. "We don't think there was a misunderstanding

"We just don't think all the city councillors were aware of the IOC rules."

"He said the city was deceived into agreeing to a conditional pact whereby Los Angeles would get the Olympics if an insurance policy or bond could be found to protect the taxpayers. Ronka said there is no way to insure against cost overruns."

"They told us they found our bid in order," he said, "then three days ago the IOC suddenly switched everything."

Killanin again made it plain that the contract that Los Angeles must sign before Aug. 1 in order to get the Games must conform with every IOC rule. There would be no compromise, he said.

"The assumption made by many people was that because they were the only city-bidders they could dictate," Killanin said.

But the Irish peer said he refused to get in a slugging match with opponents of the Olympic movement in Los Angeles.

"I will not get involved with personalities. My views on a city councillor might be equally rude as a city councillor was to me," he said.

"My worst fears have been realized," Ronka said as he greeted reporters at Los Angeles International Airport. He said the IOC had dealt in "bad faith" and all the protections the city fought for during the past eight months were lost.

Bradley, Ronka said, was "well intentioned" but his "negotiating team of bureaucrats did not serve us well."

Jerome fourth in golf meet

POCATELLO — The Twin Falls Bruins were two shots better than the favored Highland Rams at the end of the playoff of the State High School Golf Tournament Saturday but only managed a second place as the Borah Lions ran away with the win by 21 strokes.

The Bruins four-man, 36 hole total was 630, two ahead of Highland with 632. Borah managed 639 over 36 holes and Boise trailed distantly with a 646.

The Bruins had a chance to stay close to the Lions as Tracy Frank had 16 pars Saturday, four of which rained out of the two days.

Those four missed bogies would have given Frank the medalist honors with a score of 71 but that honor went to Al Wright of Borah who shot a 72. That 72 qualifies him to attend the high school all-American tournament this summer in Oklahoma.

The top four teams of the tournament after the first round Friday entered the playoff Saturday.

Frank was the Twin Falls low scorer for the two days with scores of 78 and 74. Other members of the team and their scores were Mike Hamblin 78 and 79; Mike Donnalley, 76; 87; and Mike Schlagenhaut with 78 and 81.

The turning point for the Bruins seemed to be the second hole of Saturday's competition when Donnelly hit a drive from the tee which ended up three-inches out-of-bounds. After a 76 during the first day of competition, Donnelly seemed to lose some concentration and skied to an 87 Saturday.

The Borah Lions took over the tournament shortly after the first nine holes of the second round on one shooting of sophomore Jim Schooner. He had been inconsistent all year long but put together a strong game Friday as he shot 64 six over par 41 over the first nine holes but came back with a two under 33 on the back nine to help the Lions.

Both Hamblin and Donnelly earned All-State team honors with their scores the first day. Frank and Schlagenhaut were one shot out of that honor.

Last year, Twin Falls was third behind Highland and Borah.

In the B competition which includes the smaller schools, Jerome captured fourth in the event behind American Falls, Weiser and McCall-Donnelly. Bukal placed ninth and Gooding 12th.

Kelly Trujillo led the Jerome team with a score of 85 both days. Kelly McIntyre shot 76 the first day but jumped to a 86 the second. Karl Emerson had 86 and 90 and Vance Turdeville shot 89 and 94.

Medalist in the B class was Jess Holdman of Wallace and Jim Wild of McCall-Donnelly with 75.

Weiser's Rand Carpenter, a former Jerome resident, shot an 84 and an 84 to pace the Weiser team.

McIntyre was named and All-State team.

Modern farmers make their marks in cross-breeding

By RICHARD RHODES
Not only does the modern farmer work more acres than his predecessors, but he has also found ways to get more production from every acre he farms.

Hybridization has been among the most important of those ways.

As far back as the 1930s, American agricultural scientists were aware that crossbreeding two distantly related strains of animal or plant resulted in a phenomenon they called heterosis and farmers called hybrid vigor.

Distant crosses suppressed undesirable genetic recessives; hybrids were stronger than their parents, grew faster, were more resistant to disease.

Properly fertilized and cultivated, hybrid corn can yield 100 bushels or more to the acre, compared to its parents' 35 or 50.

Hybridization alone can add 10-15 percent to the "rate of gain" of cattle. A purebred, Hereford calf may weigh 60 pounds at birth; a hybrid Hereford-Simmental calf is likely to weigh 90 or 95. Other factors being equal, the Hereford calf won't ever catch up.

Hybrid corn and hybrid soybeans now dominate the corn belt. After years of difficult research, hybrid wheat today is beginning to come on line.

The cattle industry, traditionally the most conservative sector of agriculture, resisted hybridization until the late 1960s. But, eventually, hybrid crosses will dominate the cattle industry as they already dominate the grain, poultry and swine industries.

These changes have altered the look of farming, though the difference may not be obvious from the road. Diversified farming is a thing of the past. A wheat farmer in eastern Kansas grows two crops, wheat and soybeans, planting the soybeans after he harvests his wheat in June. He buys his meat, milk, eggs and vegetables at the supermarket as you and I do.

An Iowa farmer may plant corn and soybeans, but he almost certainly runs no cattle or hogs.

Farming today is specialized. Its technology requires it. Maximum productivity requires it. Fixed costs and narrow profit margins require it.

Where wheat grows best (or, rather, where nothing else survives without irrigation), wheat is grown. There are a few counties in Iowa devoted almost exclusively to popcorn.

That's why, in grain country, with no animals to confine, so many of the fences are down.

The raising of animals has changed even more dramatically than the cultivation of grains. More slowly in some industries, more rapidly in others, all the animals are being moved indoors for all or part of their lifecycles.

The production of broilers has become a factory operation. A poultry "farmer" no longer needs a farm. He needs a building, a feed mixer or loading dock, a sewage aeration system and adjacent lagoon, and, crucially, a back-up power supply. If his operation is large enough, he also needs a slaughterhouse.

Domestic animals were seldom treated as pets on the old family farms, since sooner or later they would be killed and eaten.

Increasingly today, they are being treated as biochemical factories, fed scientifically balanced diets mixed with vitamins and antibiotics, confined in "monitored" housing to direct all their energy to growth, killed younger and packaged in close proximity to the farm.

Devotion of grain to food and other uses abhor these high-pressure efficiencies. Because of pesticides and the injection of hormones, they fear for human health. And those of us who remember home-grown vegetables and meat notice the decline in flavor.

So much criticism has been leveled against the practices of modern farming that it seems fair to present here the opposite side of the argument. Many such practices are indirectly the result of government policy designed to hold down the cost of food — policy that has been remarkably successful.

The chicken may be bland, but it's also the best bargain in town. To ask for a return to the 12-week yard-scratching, worm-fattened chicken of yesterday is at least romantic.

American consumers might be better served by a two-tiered agricultural economy, one that supplied high-priced, organic, old-fashioned vegetables and meat to those who are willing to pay the difference and mass-produced foods to those who can't or won't.

Senate studies freight car shortage

By SONJA HILLGREN
UPI Farm Editor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Senate Agriculture subcommittee held hearings last week on a record shortage of railroad freight cars that is preventing farmers from moving crops to market.

The full committee was able to do little of substance because a solution lies outside its jurisdiction.

But the committee passed a resolution urging the Interstate Commerce Commission, which holds the keys in this card game, to act on a number of issues before it. The resolution is merely a nudge and carries no force of law.

"We can't tell them or require them because that would go to the (Senate) Commerce Committee," said an aide to Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kans. Dole has been a leader on this issue.

"It's a form of pressure, so to speak," the aide said. "The effect of the shortage — worse than one caused after 1973's unexpected foreign grain sales — is to drive down prices received by farmers when shipping delays occur.

The shortage threatens to worsen when the current winter wheat crop is harvested in a few weeks. There is a shortage of 30,000 to 50,000 grain hopper cars.

Senators of all parties, including Kansas Gov. Robert Bennett, presented a bleak picture to the subcommittee.

Chairman A. Daniel O'Neal Jr. of the ICC told the subcommittee members that some of the changes they seek are under consideration.

The ICC has held seven public meetings on the problem for the past two months. A meeting was held Thursday in Portland and two remain, one June 6 in Atlanta and another June 8 in New York City.

"The committee welcomes the resolution of the committee," said an ICC spokesman. "We share the committee's concern over the various serious car shortages."

Already, the ICC has ordered railroads to distribute cars more equitably so that small shippers, including country elevators, will get more cars. But witnesses told the subcommittee the order failed to work. In times of emergency, large and small shippers are treated alike and large shippers receive too few freight cars.

The additional changes the ICC is considering are complicated.

For example, railroads are required to pay other railroads a daily rate for use of their boxcars. The ICC could raise the rate for boxcars and institute a similar payment for use of covered hopper cars, allowing funds to be used for repair as well as purchase of new cars.

Barbara Schlei, the Agriculture Department's Agricultural Marketing Service administrator, told the committee last week that 24,000 freight cars, which are out of service because they need repairs, could be repaired if rules were changed.

Late bloomers Lots of cherries bud in Michigan

TRAVERSE CITY, Mich. (UPI) — Cherry lovers can expect another bountiful crop in Michigan this year, even if growing conditions have been the pits.

"We expect a sizeable crop," said George McManus, a spokesman for the Agricultural Extension Service.

He said a number of new sweet cherry trees were expected to come into production this season and could boost the sweet cherry crop to 50 million pounds.

The size of the crop depends largely on a number of factors, he said, such as last year's drought and the severe winter.

"What effect did last year's drought have on this year's crop? We don't know yet. There aren't a lot of buds on the trees. Less bloom can mean a smaller crop."

Budding usually occurs after one year's crop is harvested. Because of last summer's drought, not as many buds as usual set, especially on farms where there was no irrigation.

"That isn't all bad though," McManus said, adding that usually buds are too thickly set for all of them to come into bloom anyway.

Bill Harmon and his wife, Judy, who run a 200-acre cherry farm just northeast of Traverse City, expect a sizeable crop this year but some of their neighbors won't be as lucky.

Harmon said severe storms destroyed a lot of cherry trees. He lost about 50 — that's half an acre — but he said many neighbors lost more.

Because of unseasonably cool weather so far this spring, this year's crop was not in bloom until about May 15. In other years, the crop has bloomed as early as mid-April.

White water kayaker died as he lived

Salmon's Dr. Blackadar conquered many rivers no one else would dare

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN
Times-News writer

GARDEN VALLEY — Walt Blackadar used to tell his kayaking buddies if a river ever swallowed him, he wanted to be buried by the roar of the rapids.

On May 15, his family and a small group of friends dug his grave in the Garden Valley Pioneer Cemetery, overlooking the swift South Fork of the Payette River. They all helped lower his body — still in wet suit and river gear. Then they took turns, using kayak paddles as shovels, and filled the grave.

The famous white-water kayaker, who challenged and beat the biggest and most dangerous rivers in the country, had died two days earlier in a kayaking accident on the South Fork near the little town of Garden Valley in central Idaho.

Dr. Walter L. Blackadar, 55, a surgeon in Salmon, was the father of big river white-water kayaking in America. He conquered rivers that once were thought unpaddable and that no one since has dared. But the rolling fury of the fast water wasn't what finally took him. Ironically, a stretch of small rapids caught Blackadar and drew him into a misjudgment.

Blackadar put into the South Fork of the Payette River with six other kayakers about noon on the second Saturday in May. They paddled easily for about three hours. As one of the kayakers with him put it:

"We were just tuning up and getting ready for the kayaking season." About 3:15 p.m. they came to a narrow rapid. It had to be run one at a time.

The kayakers pulled off into some slow water. They examined the rapids and took note of a partly submerged log jutting five feet out of the water in the middle of the rapids. Clearly the leader of the group, or of any group he kayaked with, Blackadar entered the rapids first. It looked like an easy passage.

But 15 feet into the rapids the current suddenly pulled him toward the log. He was committed to the rapids and could not pull out. His kayak hit the log head-on and became pinned parallel to it. Then the boat, ripped by the current, went into a nose-dive under the log. The force of the current broke the kayak in two and pinned Blackadar under water against the log. The tail of the kayak jutting out of the water. The other kayakers said there was nothing they could have done to have saved him.

But Walt Blackadar always said he wanted to die on the river. Ketchum kayaker John Dondero, a close friend, recalled nights during river trips when Blackadar would say, while sitting by the campfire: "If the rapids down river eat me, I want everyone to know I want to be buried by the roar."

Blackadar treated dying patients for 20 years as Salmon's leading physician, and on the river he unflinchingly faced the possibility of his own death. He spoke frankly about death and was ready for it. He lived hard and fully.

"Most of us are able to forget about death," Dondero observed. "It's not a part of our everyday life. With Walt, he could never escape the thought of death — or the reality of it. He was well-prepared to die."

He didn't want to die slowly of old age or cancer, and friends say if he ever developed cancer, he planned to paddle Niagara Falls. He was prepared to die, but a wish for death did not obsess him. It was the thrill of life, which allows a new, intense or fuller view of itself when experienced on the edge of death.

"Dr. Blackadar was an adventurer," observed Jean Pomita, who worked with him for 22 years in Salmon. "He wasn't satisfied with what you and I would consider a mundane life. He liked the challenge that these things offered."

"Naturally, he had gone through fears. He had gone through complicated experiences trying to get himself out of the situations he had gotten into. But once he had gotten out of them, he felt exhilarated that he had accomplished these feats. He was filled with so much energy. He was filled with life."

White water was Blackadar's trademark. He first became famous in 1971 when he ran the Alek River in Alaska. No one before or after has run the Alek in a boat, so fierce are the river's white-water rapids and so menacing the icebergs which break away from glaciers along its banks.

"If the rapids down river eat me, I want everyone to know I want to be buried by the roar."

"I know any sensible person will say I shouldn't run this river, but it is in my blood," Blackadar wrote in his journal two days before he began the Alek trip. "I must prove things to myself."

His Alek journal was published in Sports Illustrated, and soon he was filmed by television and movie crews running rivers from Colorado to Alaska. Kayakers from across the country came to paddle with him and to learn from him. He was a great and inspiring teacher. He pioneered white-water kayaking in Idaho.

"He wasn't a good finesse paddler, but he was a great survivor," one Idaho kayaker said. "He had lots of guts — more than any boater I know. He felt that this was his medium of expression and he was going to do it harder than anyone else."

His friends say that in kayaking Blackadar found his identity. He was held in awe within the kayaking world and through his exploits he created a public self which brought popular attention as well.

But there was a private side too, which revealed a man who liked to hoe in the garden and would go alone into Idaho's back country, where he once trapped enough minks and beavers to make his wife her own mink stole and beaver coat. And it was Blackadar, who, floating inconspicuously in his kayak, rescued

Evel Knievel from the bottom of the Snake River Canyon in 1974 when Knievel failed to jump the canyon in his rocket-powered motorcycle.

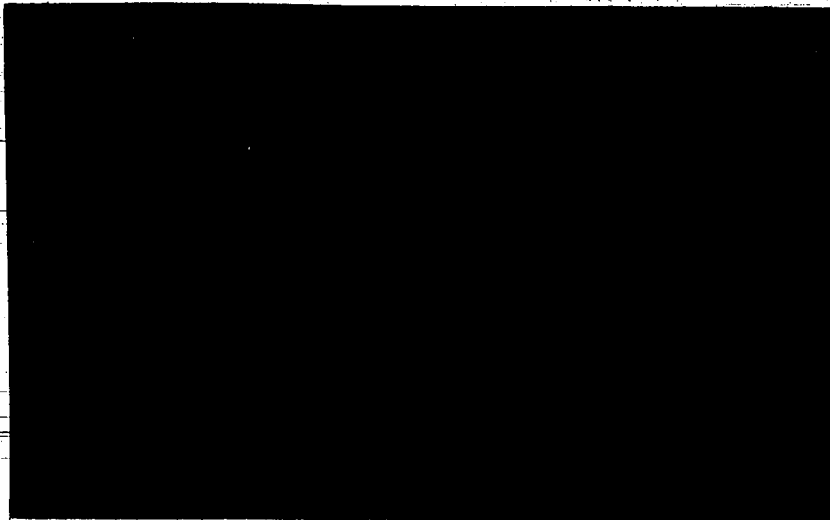

Blackadar was a flamboyant man, but his flamboyance was tamed by a sense of humor. Dondero recalled how Blackadar, dressed in suit and tie, arrived at Dondero's wedding along Trail Creek in Sun Valley, by paddling his kayak to the ceremony.

He was many men and many things to different people. "I hate to try to define the man because he was so diverse," Dondero said. "A kayaker, a surgeon, an outdoorsman, a teacher, an outspoken conservationist — he was all of these. One friend and medical colleague marvelled that 'he was as capable with a back hoe and a dump truck as he was with a surgical tool.' In the end, he died doing what was perhaps closest to his heart."

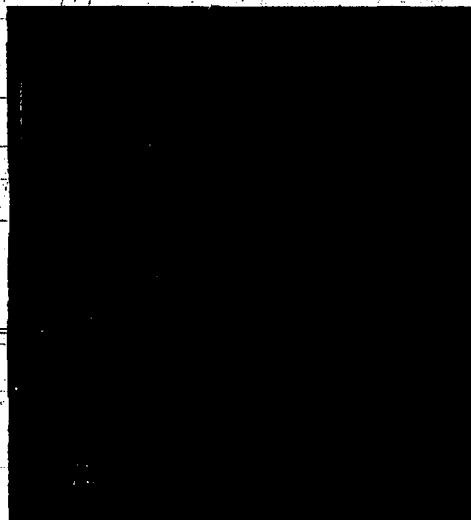

When the Blackadar family received word last Saturday that the doctor had died, they took out a letter he had written months before. The letter, written in the event of a kayak accident, left instructions to bury him without a casket in sight of the river on which he had died.

Two days later, the family and a small group of kayaking friends placed Walt Blackadar in his grave at the Garden Valley cemetery on the Payette River's South Fork — the river that killed him.

There was only one order left then to be carried out. In his letter Blackadar instructed that one month after his death his friends and family should all gather to have a party. The drinks were to be on him.

DILETTANTES TO OFFER SCHOLARSHIPS TO DESERVING STUDENTS IN MAGIC VALLEY
... vice-president Vera Redman and president Al Dougherty discuss awards

By KEN HODGE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — After the best season in its 20-year history, the Dilettante Group of Magic Valley will give nearly $2,000 in scholarships to deserving students of the performing arts.

With the overwhelming support of local residents, the group's 20th anniversary presentation of Rodgers and Hammerstein's "South Pacific" netted a profit of more than $6,000, according to business manager Tom Driscoll.

During its 20 years of producing Broadway musicals, the Dilettante group has given away more than $20,000 in scholarships to local music, voice, drama and dance students.

This year the group will help qualified local college and high school students attend college and summer workshops in music, voice, dance and drama.

Dilettante scholarship chairman Vera Redman announced the group will award two $500 scholarships to college students from Gooding, Twin Falls and Jerome Counties majoring in the performing arts.

In addition, the group will award smaller scholarships to help students of junior high school age and older to attend summer workshops at Sun Valley, Boise State University and Snowbird, Utah.

To qualify for the scholarships, students must audition before a panel of impartial judges at the College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts Building June 17.

Piano students should prepare two solos, one from the classic or romantic period and one contemporary piece.

Voice students should audition with an aria from an opera in the original language or from an oratorio and one contemporary song.

Orchestra students must play the first movement from a concerto and a contemporary piece.

Drama students should prepare three presentations of the following styles: comedy; serious; and musical comedy including a song and dance.

Dance students, in order to win a scholarship must participate in a one-hour movement workshop with the judge which will consist of a half hour of barre technique including modern dance and a half hour of center floor dance with emphasis on modern technique.

Students of junior high school age or older who wish to compete for scholarships to a summer festival should prepare similar auditions for June 17.

The summer festival for which the Dilettantes will award scholarships include:

— a six-week dance workshop at the Sun Valley Center, including ballet, modern and jazz. Set for July 17 through August 25, the workshop is open to Idaho students. The Sun Valley Center will offer ten scholarships and will match Dilettante scholarships.

— a five-week drama workshop with Walt Jones, director of the Yale Drama School, from July 21 to August 16. There are 16 theater scholarships available to Idaho students for the workshop. The Sun Valley Center will match Dilettante scholarships.

— the Idaho Music Festival at Boise State University for strings only. Set for July 12 through 23, the summer camp included three private lessons. Only four piano students will be selected for the festival.

— Snowbird Music Camp, for which dates have not yet been announced. The camp includes positions for piano, voice and instrumental students.

The Dilettantes also announce election of new officers for the 1979 season. Al Dougherty of Twin Falls will serve as president and Vera Redman of Twin Falls will serve as vice-president. Helen Lee of Jerome will serve as historian, while Rosemary Wall of Twin Falls will serve as secretary. Don Matheson of Twin Falls was elected treasurer, and Jim LaGrone of Castleford was elected to a three-year post on the board of directors.

Court won't stop closure of bordellos

PIOCHE, Nev. (UPI) — A District Court judge Thursday denied an injunction, sought by two brothel madams, that would have delayed closure of bordellos in the county.

Madams last week, approved by a 2-1 margin a ballot measure outlawing prostitution in Lincoln County.

Attorney James Brown, representing the brothel, said he would ask the Nevada Supreme Court Friday for a stay of the order.

District Attorney John McGinley said the Lincoln County Commission would courtily the vote Monday and the brothels would be closed as soon as the vote was certified.

"The ban on prostitution becomes a law as soon as the vote is certified," said McGinley. "The people approved it and the people enacted the law."

Many of the prostitutes working at the Lincoln County brothels have said they would head for Las Vegas where prostitution is illegal but flourishes around the posh gambling resorts.

Lorraine Helms, madam at Sheri's Ranch; and Judy Kuban, madam of Judy's Coyote Springs Ranch, said they sought the injunction to delay enforcement of the anti-prostitution vote to give their attorneys time to challenge the legality of the election.

The madams said signatures on the initiative petitions were certified even though many signers did not list addresses, as required by law. They also questioned the method used by county commissioners in certifying the initiative petitions.

A judge had said in an earlier ruling that there was "substantial compliance" in the initiative petition method used to force the question onto a special election ballot.

Hagerman speakers chosen

HAGERMAN — Tammy Pearson, Debbie Jolley and Connie Jo Sturtevant have been selected class speakers for Hagerman High School's graduation ceremony.

Miss Pearson and Miss Jolley were chosen co-valedictorians and Miss Sturtevant was selected salutatorian.

Miss Pearson is a two-year member of Who's Who Among American High School Students. She is active in school organizations as Future Homemakers of America treasurer, annual business manager, honor society secretary, president of OEA and secretary of Junior National Honor Society.

She is also cheerleader, in pep club and rodeo club and has been active in volleyball, track and basketball. She is the daughter of DeLora Pearson.

Miss Jolley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Jolley, has also been a two-year member of Who's Who Among American High School Students. She was Girls' State alternate and vice president of honor society, cheerleader and mascot. Miss Jolley is active in the Pep club, volleyball, basketball and track, high school band, chorus, drama and the annual staff.

Miss Sturtevant has been active in student government four years, serving as student body president this past year. She is also active in volleyball, track and basketball, along with annual staff, pep club, and honor society. Miss Sturtevant, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Sturtevant, is president of the Rodeo Club and last year participated in the National High School Rodeo Finals in Montana.

Hills reception May 28

TWIN FALLS — Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hills will be honored Sunday, May 28, for their 35th wedding anniversary.

A reception will be held for the couple from 2 to 5 p.m. at the Twin Falls Nazarene Fellowship Hall, 401 Sixth Ave. N., Twin Falls. All friends and relatives are invited and the couple requests no gifts.

Mrs. Hills attended schools in Eden and Twin Falls. After graduation from high school in 1936, she attended art school in Los Angeles, Calif., and returned to Idaho to continue her education in Nampa at Northwest Nazarene College.

Hills was born on a farm south of Twin Falls and graduated from high school in Twin Falls in 1936. He continued his education at NNC, preparing for the ministry and graduated with a bachelor's degree in theology.

They married May 28, 1943. Hills pastored churches in Cut Bank and Billings, Mont., for ten years. They returned to Idaho in 1957 and are farming north of Jerome.

They have two daughters, Karleena and Bonny, both Jerome, and one son, David, Coeur d'Alene.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

The unlucky expert had cornered us again. This time his complaint was about his partner. Let's quote from his tirade:

"As you can see from the bidding, it wasn't much of a game. Imagine North jumping to six with only one ace. However, South wrapped up the slam after my partner opened the deuce of clubs. South's ace took my king. He led a trump to my ace and I had to guess whether to lead back a club or a heart. I was sure of one thing. My partner had led fourth best so declarer had one more club. I did lead a club on the theory that if my partner held an ace he would have opened it."

It is hard to have some sympathy for the unlucky expert, but very little of it. We agree that West should have led his ace of hearts against the slam. However, East had given himself that third trick guess when he made the wrong play at trick one.

It was unthinkable that West would underlead an ace against that slam. Therefore, East should play his jack of clubs at trick one. Now when South wins with the queen East will know enough to lead a heart at trick three.

Ask the Experts

A Vermont reader wants to know if we think that any comparatively unknown player could be one of the greatest of all time.

Marwyn D. (Jimmy) Maler, who died in 1942 at the age of 32, had already won the Vanderbilt and Spingold Cups twice each, and, in Oswald Jacoby's opinion, Jimmy was likely to be the greatest player of all time.

Abby

High class lady, poor reputation

DEAR ABBY: My wife died 18 months ago, and this lady I'm interested in has been a widow for three years. We knew each other "way back when." I'm 68 and this lady is 63.

Before I renew our friendship, I'd like to ask you a few questions. Since her husband died, she's had several men staying with her (one at a time) in her one-bedroom trailer. I've also heard that she has visited an old farmer at his farmhouse (just the two of them) for days at a time.

Last week she headed for Colorado with another old buddy in his camper truck. She said she planned to sleep in motels on the way, and he would sleep in the truck; she didn't say where they would sleep once they got to Colorado.

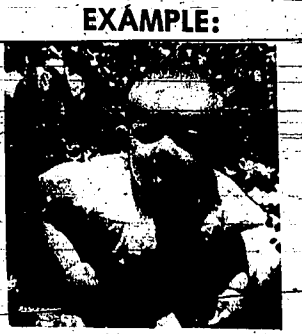

Now Abby, I don't want to marry a woman who has a bad reputation. She's the talk of this little town, but she is really a veeey high-class lady and everybody likes her. What is your advice?

Americans infiltrate 'Aussie life'

By BRIAN DEWHURST
SYDNEY, Australia (UPI) — Apart from the British, no other people have infiltrated the Australian way of life as have the Americans.

Some have found a sort of utopia, a new frontier with a magnificent climate and a gentle society.

Others have found the Aussies a crude lot, lacking the drive to work hard. They criticize the Australian "she'll do" attitude.

There are two views about the modern American immigration to Australia.

The popular view of the media and of most Australians is that the American migrant is facing the problems at home — pollution, racial tensions, the hectic pace of city life, the muggings.

The second, put forward four years ago by academics who made a study of Americans in Australia, concluded that the American immigration "just happened" and that the people came for a variety of reasons none of which was associated with the above.

Dennis Phillips, a former American now teaching in a Sydney university, carried out an independent study of 75 immigrant families and only 10 suggested that the prime motivation was to get away from the problems of the United States.

Phillips found that the bulk of Americans who chose to live long terms in Australia came here initially for prearranged jobs, were "rolling stones" or former Vietnam servicemen who took their leave in Australia, liked the place and decided to come back.

Between 1945 and 1977 more than 115,000 Americans migrated to Australia.

And while Australia has always held a certain fascination for Americans, the migrants don't have a good staying record. Figures show that about 72 percent of annual U.S. migrants leave within two years.

There is no official figure on the present number of Americans in Australia, but consular officials believe it to be between 28,000 to 45,000.

Australia has imported McDonald's hamburgers and the colonel's chicken. It has not imported U.S. electricity.

The Americans quite rightly are used to fast efficient service in stores and restaurants. Such service does not exist down under.

Education standards in Australia are nearly the equal of those in the U.S. but American kids rebel against the wearing of the English traditional school uniform and the stricter class control of Australian schools.

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR FRANK: It seems almost a disservice to the community to take this aging swinger out of circulation — if indeed you could. But if you regard this woman as a "high-class lady," any advice I could give you would fall on deaf ears. And your vision isn't too good, either.

DEAR ABBY: I have recently moved into a high-rise apartment, live alone, and have a problem that I imagine other single girls who live alone must have. (I am 20 and am saving myself for marriage.)

When my date brings me home, should we say good-night in the lobby, where the doorman, night watchman and tenants can watch us? Or should I ask my date to walk me to my apartment door and say good-night there? Or should I invite him to step into my apartment to say good-night?

When I first moved here, I let my date step into my apartment to thank him for the lovely evening and it ended up in a one-hour wrestling match. I had a terrible time getting rid of him.

Please answer soon as I have no mother to ask.

SAVING MYSELF IN TULSA

DEAR SAVING: A girl's date should always see her safely to her door. Don't allow anyone to "step inside" if you have any doubts about how he will behave once he's inside. Even the most careful girls sometimes misjudge a man, so should you find yourself with the "wrestling" type, don't say "good-night" — say "GOOD-BYE!"

DEAR ABBY: I am a 17-year-old girl who has a very unhappy home life. My folks have been fighting ever since I can remember. They treat me like dirt, and I want to tell you, it is miserable and rotten.

My boyfriend, Brad, is 18, and he comes from a home that is even worse. If there is such a word — His folks not only fight all the time, but his father beats on his mother. Anyway, Brad has been crazy about me ever since 7th grade and we are thinking of getting married when he graduates from high school in June. He plans to work days at a garage and go to trade school for mechanics at night. He's a real good with cars and motors.

Should I quit school and get a job when Brad graduates? I'd have only a year to go, and could finish later. We wouldn't have much money, but we wouldn't need much, and at least we'd have each other. I need advice. Thank you.

TEARS ON MY PILLOW

DEAR TEARS: Don't use marriage as an excuse to get out of the house — no matter how "miserable" it is. I urge you to finish high school while you have the chance. The "later" you mention rarely comes. Children usually do, instead.

Ruffing makes list

TWIN FALLS — Richard Ruffing has qualified for the autumn 1977 dean's honor list at Columbia University School of Engineering and Applied Science.

In order to qualify, the Twin Falls student must receive a grade point average of at least 3.66 and be in the top ten percent of the undergraduate student body.

Ruffing, a junior in mining engineering, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Ruffing, Twin Falls.

Contest winner

FILED — Vickie Pree was chosen first place winner of the American Legion Auxiliary Americanism Essay contest.

Students wrote essays on the topic "America's Future Is In My Hands."

Christie Kaster received second place; Brian Ochsner, third place, and Robbie Hult, junior high winner.

PEEK-A-BOO — Eyeglass wearers should use more eye shadow than usual, but avoid bright, glittery colors.

Strange disease discovered

STAFFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Administration offices at Johnson Memorial Hospital have been sealed off because most employees are suffering from mysterious itching and a rash.

Hospital administrator William Stoppard said Thursday the first floor accounting and administration offices "were sealed off about a week ago and the 18 employees were moved to two trailers behind the hospital."

He said most of the 18 employees experienced the itching and one employee missed several days of work because of it. None required hospitalization. He said he suffered from the itch himself and found it was usually gone about an hour after he had left the building.

Stoppard said no one in any other area of the hospital has complained of the itching or the rash.

Some employees have had an itch but not a rash, some have had a rash only on exposed parts of the body and others have had a rash on unexposed parts of the body as well, Stoppard said.

He said one employee suffered a nosebleed and several other workers complained of ear infections.

Hartford, have ruled out the possibility that a "bug, virus or bacteria" is causing the condition.

He said the consultants are looking into ventilation problems as a possible cause.

Cookoff finalist

TWIN FALLS — Mrs. Marvin Cox has been selected as a finalist in the Idaho State Beef Cookoff held in Pocatello.

Mrs. Cox was presented with a plaque in recognition for her finalist recipe, Idaho Beef in Sour Cream Pastry.

High school students who would like to enter a beef essay contest can win $25 and $10. The contest is open to all high school seniors. For more information call Donna Fuller at 734-4837.

IDAHO BEEF IN SOUR CREAM PASTRY

Mrs. Marvin Cox, Castletford
 2 lbs. round steak, trimmed
 1 tsp. paprika
 1 tsp. garlic powder
 1 tsp. MSG
 1 tsp. pepper
 1 tsp. oil
 1/4 cup bourbon
 1/2 cup chopped green pepper (optional)
 1 cup chopped onion
 1/2 cup chopped celery
 1/2 cup chopped mushrooms
 1/2 cup frozen peas
 2 tbsp. butter
 4 tbsp. flour
 1 cup boiling water
 1 packet instant beef broth

Sour Cream Pastry
 1 1/4 cups flour
 1/2 cup butter (room temperature)
 1/2 tsp. salt
 1/2 cup dairy sour cream
 1/2 cup grated cheddar cheese
 1 egg
 1/2 cup chopped nuts

For pastry, toss flour with salt, cheese and nuts. Work in butter until mixture looks like coarse meal. Blend sour cream and egg, stir into dry ingredients. Chill dough about an hour before rolling out on a floured board.

Line a 2-quart casserole dish with 2/3 of dough. Roll out remainder for the topping. Cut meat into bite size pieces, sprinkle with paprika, garlic, MSG and pepper. Heat oil in 10-inch skillet, brown meat over high heat two minutes, stirring.

Warm bourbon, add to pan, ignite. Set skillet aside, then add vegetables and simmer. In a small pan, melt butter, add flour and stir. Stir in boiling water and instant beef broth. Cook until sauce thickens and boils. Mix sauce with meat and vegetables, adjust seasonings with salt and pepper.

Four into pastry lined casserole. Top with crust, slash crust. Bake in moderately hot oven (350 degrees) about 40 minutes, until pastry is brown and filling bubbling hot.

Announcing!

Toyota's 1 Million For Olympics

— (Henry L. (Hank) Wills) —

I'm proud to announce that we at Wills-Motor Company have launched a campaign to help raise a $1,000,000 contribution to the United States Olympic Committee for the training of American athletes preparing for the 1980 Summer games in Moscow.

Called "Toyota's Million-Dollar Dash for the Olympics," the program will raise the funds through donations made by Toyota and its dealers for every retail new car or truck sale before June 30.

"Since our Olympic efforts received no direct government financial aid, donations are always needed to help field a team, and we hope that this program will make it easier for our Olympic officials to meet the expenses they will face in putting together a winning U.S. team.

"A joint contribution by Toyota and participating dealers will be made for each car or truck sold during the "Million-Dollar Dash" period. In addition, the buyers of the vehicles will receive a Toyota Owner's Package that includes a specially designed Olympic pin, jacket patch, windshield decal, and certificate of appreciation from the U.S. Olympic Committee.

"A second phase of the program is one of the most extensive consumer sweepstakes ever offered by an automobile company. Consumers visiting a participating Toyota dealership during the promotion period may fill out an entry blank and become eligible for $1,000,000 worth of prizes.

"Three grand prizes, known as "Gold Medal Prizes," will be presented, and these consist of a $100,000 condominium in Snowmass, Colorado; his and her Toyotas; a $5,000 AMF sports shopping spree; $1,000 worth of Levi clothing; a three-week trip for two to Munich, Montreal and Moscow; a Sony color television set; a Nikon FM camera; and $10,000 in cash.

"Ten Silver Medal second prizes also will be awarded, and these consist of a Corolla SR-5 Liftback, a one-week trip for two to the European track and field championships in Prague, Czechoslovakia; $2,500 in cash; $1,000 worth of AMF sports equipment and a Nikon camera. One thousand Nikons will be awarded as Bronze Medal prizes.

"Toyota will conduct a major multi-media advertising campaign to promote the fund-raising and sweepstakes programs.

QUESTION: Cesar Chavez has indicated he would like to come to Idaho to organize the farm workers. If he does, do you feel he could successfully organize Idaho agricultural workers and what effect would this have on agriculture here?

Kevin Kramer, Castleford:
I don't believe farm workers in Idaho should be organized. If they were, I think it would be a definite detriment to our agricultural economy.

Bob Niven, Kimberly:
Well, I would not like to see the farm workers organized, and I don't think we need farm worker unions. I'm a farmer so I am on the paying end, and I would be opposed to it. Costs of producing farm products are high enough now.

Brent Kennedy, Filer:
I'm formerly from California, and I think if Chavez comes to Idaho he will be successful in organizing farm workers. If he offers them an opportunity to better themselves, they will take it. I think labor unions have outlived their usefulness. They create inflation because they raise costs but do not make the workers any more productive.

Steve Douglas, Boise:
I don't know if he would succeed in organizing the workers, but it would no doubt raise food prices. If labor costs were to go up, also, I wonder what effect it would have on the many farm workers who are in the country illegally but are engaged in farm work. I'm sure lower labor costs benefit the farmers.

Mrs. Bill Berry, Twin Falls:
I hope not. I think organizing the farm workers would pose problems for our farmers. Labor unions, in my opinion, are responsible for much of the inflation, and I don't think we need to encourage that.

Betty Bylund, Filer:
I think we can do without Chavez. I can't see where his coming to Idaho to organize workers would help anyone. I don't think it would help the farmers, and I don't feel it would benefit the workers either.

Newscasters' work hard off screen, too

KMVT's news team can spend 10 hours daily putting together interviews and news

By SUSIE VAN TUYL
Times-News writer

There's more to a television newscaster's work than meets the eye.

Newscasters at KMVT in Twin Falls are on the job 10, and often times, 12 hours or more a day. Newscasters Betty Smith, Jay Hildebrandt, Dave Meeks and newcomer Wes Harris must set their own schedules, make their own decisions and be creative at the same time.

It takes some grueling behind-the-scenes work to produce a news show for Magic Valley viewers.

"I come in at 11 a.m., work until 6 p.m. with a lunch break, and am back from 8 p.m. until 11 p.m.," says sportscaster and weatherman Dave Meeks, describing the "usual" schedule he works under. "When we have stories to do, which is quite often, I come in at 9:10 a.m."

"It's probably one of the disadvantages of the job — the weird hours," he continues. "It doesn't leave much time to do anything else, but it's never boring. That's why I like it so much — there is a lot of variety."

In one day Meeks checks the wire and sports copy, rewrites and uses any stories that apply locally, picks up weather maps at the National Weather Service office in Kimberly and — in his free time — conducts interviews and produces stories for the evening news.

Another busy person at the station is Betty Smith. Her "beat" is "almost everything in Twin Falls County and City, including firefighters, police, city council and commissioners. She also takes care of news for the city of Buhl."

As co-producer Smith selects stories for news programs, decides which story airs and when and produces five-minute interviews. She is in charge of the Changing Communities, five-minute interviews which run three times each morning, at 6:25, 7:25 and 8:25. The show focuses on Magic Valley events. She also appears on "Views," a half-hour, pre-taped talk program dealing with public affairs.

"At a smaller station, you get much more experience doing many more things than you would at a larger station, where you would be more specialized," she says.

Smith graduated from Bowling Green State University in Ohio in December, 1978. She was hired at KMVT in June of 1977.

"I was in broadcasting in college from day one," she says. "I started out in production and promotions and got into news. I've been both sides of the scene ... both sides of the camera."

After working in the production end of television, writing and producing commercials, Smith decided to try news and found her niche. She worked at the Republican National Convention in Kansas City — representing her college station, and this kindled her enthusiasm for news.

"It was a tremendous experience," she says.

Smith likes anchoring the news show and producing stories equally, but says, "The novelty of being on the air" wears off."

Wes Harris, farm correspondent, hosts KMVT's new farm show, "Country Midday," because of the perspective wanted on the farm magazine-styled show. Wes spends his afternoons searching out feature stories which have a farm angle.

He spent three hours one day filming stories on winners of a cooking contest and a farmer who ran a one-man, efficiently operated farm. Since he is relatively new to the KMVT staff, he still spends time learning how procedures and equipment operate.

Jay Hildebrandt's experience in broadcasting goes back a long way into his childhood.

When he was 5, his father ran a special children's show on a UHF station called WXIX in Milwaukee, Wis., where Hildebrandt grew up.

It was called "The Cookie Show" and he starred his brother, Steven, 12, who was "Cookie," his sister, Janelle, 14, who was "Candy," and toddler Jay who was "Crumb."

"Dad wrote and produced it, and we used cue cards, had little puppets or played records that were popular," he recalls, and they often "lippped" the words to popular songs like they were actually singing.

"I remember my brother sang (actually lippped) the song by Maurice Chevalier, 'Thank Heaven for Little Girls.' We also showed Laurel and Hardy and Flash Gordon films," he says.

Hildebrandt was also in children's theater and as a teen read radio announcements for the Wisconsin Council on Safety.

He worked at a television station at Brigham Young University, where he graduated last June. Last year Gary Leavitt, news director for KMVT, was visiting the college looking for new prospects — for news-reporters. He happened to see Hildebrandt's broadcast that evening and hired him even before he had a chance to apply. He is currently co-producer of the evening news and works with Betty Smith.

Gary Leavitt is a veteran among these newscasters. He has been employed by KMVT for three years in August.

Leavitt has been news director at KMVT for one year. Before being appointed news director, he was a reporter, co-anchorman and sports director.

On being news director, he says, "This is probably the most demanding of jobs as far as time. You have so many responsibilities — if anything goes wrong, I have to bear the responsibility for it. I have to make sure that everything goes right."

Some of Leavitt's responsibilities are assigning stories, producing stories, supervising news coverage and hiring news personnel.

He has seen many changes during his three-year tenure.

"When I first got here we were using black and white film. In October of 1975 we went to color on film. In October of 1977 we went to videotape. We only use film as a supplement to videotape now."

Videotape is similar to a cassette tape but is larger in size. A cameraman can shoot an interview with the camera, and the moment the film rolls it is developed. When film on reels was used, it had to be sent to Boise for processing and any interview had to wait at least a day before airing.

"Of videotape, Leavitt comments, "It's a lot better. Number one is your quality. There is no guesswork involved. If I have any question I can play it right back after I shoot. You can see anything you are photographing played back that instant."

"Number two is time spent." By adding "I can videotape something and have it on the air within a half hour."

The only disadvantage he notes on using video tape is: "You can inadvertently erase something you worked on that afternoon."

When a newscaster goes out on an interview, he or she takes an ENG — Electronic News Gathering device. An ENG is a portable videotape unit used to film stories, edit and show stories via cassettes placed into a recorder. According to Gary one complete self-contained unit costs $20,000. The station has two units at present and one is on order.

Leavitt says there are three types of news stories: the straight interview or talking-head, the voice-over and the wrap-around.

The talking-head is an interview with one person who is shown on film talking.

The voice-over is a narration about a story. An example of a voice-over would be a film clip on a house being moved. No interviews are recorded or shown and the viewer hears a voice telling the story "over" the picture, or while the film is running.

A wrap-around contains all the elements of the talking-head and voice-over. According to Leavitt a wrap-around is the most complex of stories to produce. A 30-second wrap-around story can take anywhere from one to three hours on location filming and interviewing, an hour to an hour-and-a-half editing, time for writing plus driving time.

"That's one of my greatest frustrations — not enough time," Hildebrandt comments. "First of all it's the nature of news — you don't have as much time as you need to put it together. It's hard to put something on the air when you wish you would have had more time to work on it. But then there are times when you do get to work on it so it all balances out."

Television, compared to newspaper, is a faster pace, because we have more deadlines," Leavitt notes. "I have three deadlines every day — noon, 5 p.m. and 10 p.m. It's different in that we are writing for a visual medium."

A newscaster has an advantage over television because it can reveal more details on a particular subject.

"We are throwing out stories in a newspaper you are writing and length. Television is concise, and short," Leavitt says.

Although television is concise, at that point, it takes dedicated time to produce good news.

"Free time is scarce," Smith says. "You don't have much time to yourself."

Despite the time involved KMVT's newscasters say they enjoy their work — an important ingredient in being successful.

Cuban film hit deals with repression

By VINCENT CANBY
© 1978 N.Y. Times Service
NEW YORK — The time is the late 18th century — Holy Week — and the place a huge, isolated Cuban sugar plantation owned by a Spanish count from Havana who appears to represent the best of the ruling aristocracy. The count is middle-aged and has the gaunt look of someone who suffers spiritually, as well as from physical disorders. He does not take lightly the responsibilities of power. He is as much concerned for the souls of his slaves as he is for their physical fitness. When his overseer, a brutally practical man named Manuel, punishes a returned runaway by slicing off the slave's ear, the Count doesn't question the system, of course. Instead he devotes himself to making it work. To this end he invites 12 slaves, picked at random, to join him for dinner on Maundy Thursday, in effect to re-enact the last supper that Jesus shared with his disciples the night before his crucifixion.

"The Last Supper," a new Cuban film by Tomas Gutierrez Alea, the director whose "Memories of Underdevelopment" was one of the critical hits of 1973, is fine, cool, almost detached political parable told entirely in religious terms. In this way it recalls the kind of contradictions that made "Memories of Underdevelopment" so fascinating, and that are, for Alea, virtually a stylistic method.

Though "Memories" looks at the Cuban revolution through the eyes of a middle-class intellectual who can't bring himself to participate, the film itself is passionately committed. "The Last Supper" is about death and resurrection, not only about the death and resurrection of freedom, but also of repression.

Like the earlier film, it seems to say more than one ever expects to hear in popular revolutionary literature, where ideas and feelings are supposed to be recognized and accommodated by even the dimmest minds.

"The Last Supper" is not an easy film. It has something of the haunting, guilt-ridden manner of the count, the character who dominates the film and who remains forever mysterious. It's not, I think, the director or Nelson Villagra, who is the Count, withhold information. Rather, that the truth of human behavior can never be more than action.

The film's centerpiece is the extraordinary last supper presided over by the count, who begins by washing the feet of the 12 slaves while he is in turn, sipping and panics at the last behavior of the master. In the course of the meal, as the wine flows, the count attempts to instruct the slaves in Christian mythology and dogma.

"Sorrow," he says, "is the only thing that can give God with joy" — everything belongs to God anyway. The slaves, in this concept continuing, while all, some former cannibal, are amused at the thought of consuming the body and blood of Jesus in the form of bread and wine.

Rock star legend

... toned down rock and laidback country come together

By RAY BACHAR
CountryStyle News Service

A legend after a decade-and-a-half-as a rock star, Englishman Eric Clapton has sent shock waves reverberating through the staid world of country music.

Clapton's "Lay Down Sally" has all but knocked versions of the song by Red Skynine and Jack Paris off the country charts.

Clapton, whose slashing guitar work with the Yardbird and Cream made him a superstar during the golden age of British rock, has toned down, virtually copying the stage presence of his hero and close friend, laidback country luminary Don Williams. In addition, the guitar virtuoso of late has eschewed his characteristic dynamic solos on the instrument in favor of laconic vocals, ala Williams.

Clapton's next single release was scheduled to have a Top 40 A Side, with a Williams tune, "We're All the Way," on the flip side.

One major music trade magazine sees Clapton crossing over into country. In fact, he is seen as the male answer to rock/country star Linda Ronstadt.

At least one knowledgeable observer of the music/show business scene says a totally country album by Clapton is not far-fetched.

"I wouldn't doubt he'd do it," says the observer, a columnist and critic for two industry publications, "... although he tends to want people to appreciate him for what he does and has done ... for himself."

Clapton, obviously, is being strongly influenced by friend Williams, who is even more popular in Great Britain than he is in the U.S.

Williams is his favorite composer and Clapton has carried the identity so far as to have Williams open one of his shows, a rock concert in (of all places) Nashville.

Further duo concerts are planned, Williams indicated, saying:

"Eric and I really want to work together more because we appreciate each other's music so much. Hopefully we'll get to try it out some other places and maybe approach it a little differently."

"We're All the Way" was included on Clapton's hit album, "Slowhand," which borrows its title from the star's Yardbird nickname. And it has been received warmly by rock devotees and critics alike. (Indeed, Patrick Goldstein — writing in the Chicago Sun-Times — says of "Slowhand": "Clapton's presence on guitar is hard to tell. With the exception of the lead on each side, he burrows into the rhythm section, content to sing duets with Kerry Levy.

"The record's strongest cuts are tender, devotional ballads, such as 'Wonderful Tonight' and 'We're All the Way,' a country weeper by Don Williams.

But it is Clapton's astonishing showing with "Lay Down Sally" — that has the country music world agog — and talking.

The lead paragraph in a Record World article succinctly tells the story:

... With three versions of "Lay Down Sally" on the market, country radio is faced with choosing one above the others, and Eric Clapton (RSO) is coming out on top as RW's Country Singles Chart has his version bulletted at No. 65. Red Skynine (Gusto) is slowing down at No. 83 and Jack Paris (50 States) has not charted."

Even more important was Clapton showing in Billboard. As this was being written, he rated No. 66 with a "bullet" in the March 25 issue, up from No. 78 (the previous week), while Sovine's version was No. 72 and Paris' effort No. 86.

Neither of the latter two had bulletted in Billboard, but indicating whether a selection was moving upward.

A spokesman for RSO (the Robert Stigwood Organization) claims the Clapton success with "Sally" is due, because, "First of all, we've got the original version which usually carries the more impact than a cover, and secondly, Clapton has got a legitimate country record."

Part of its success, however, can be attributed to astute program directors, who saw a chance to pull a larger audience to their country radio stations.

Says Ron Tater of WFOK in Miami:

"When you've got a record that country listeners accept and is a pop record, you can't pass up that kind of opportunity to maybe grab a casual listener and turn him into a regular country listener."

Hollywood makes 'Jackie-Ari' story

By VINCENT CANBY
©1978 N.Y. Times Service

NEW YORK — The full-page ad is dominated by an illustration that shows the head of a familiar-looking woman who wears large dark glasses and seems vaguely miffed. Check-by-Jowl is the face of a dark-skinned, gray-haired man, also familiar-looking, also in dark glasses, who seems to be comforting the woman, though one has the impression they might be on a private jet the size of Coney Island. Below them we see a montage of smaller images that call to mind high-life in high places — a speedboat, an ocean-going yacht, beautiful women in evening dresses or bikinis, the ruins of a Greek temple on the top of a Greek hill and, in the lower left-hand corner, the White House with, standing in front of it, two beautiful people in beach gear.

"She was the most famous woman in the world," says the ad. "He was a peasant, a pirate, a shark. What he couldn't buy with money he stole with charm."

As movie ads, this one is actually pretty good. It tells us what the movie is about, which is exactly what we see in the images — pretty settings, virtually non-stop traveling, and a beautiful woman, who has connections to the White House, and a swarthy older man, both of whom fancy the same kind of huge dark glasses that protect their eyes from the glare and are guaranteed to attract the attention of the three people in the world who don't already know who they are.

If "The Greek Tycoon" had one tenth as much style and imagination as it haschutzpah, it would be the "Citizen Kane" of junk movies, which it isn't. Still, this kind ofchutzpah is not to be sneezed at. Such gall must be saluted if not admired. How, one is bound to ask, do they get away with making a movie that so freely helps itself to the lives of Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis and her late husband, Aristotle Onassis, with supporting characters modeled on the late Robert F. Kennedy, his widow Ethel, the late President John F. Kennedy, Winston Churchill, Maria Callas and others? Even though the Onassis character is called Theo Tomasiis and the character who stands for Mrs. Onassis is called Liz Cassidy Tomasiis, and even though all the Kennedys are named Cassidy, there's obviously no doubt about who is who. If there were any doubt, the people who made the film would have to count themselves failures, which, in this respect, they're not.

How do they get away with it? The answer, I suspect, is quite simple. People who live in the public eye would have a difficult time proving invasion of privacy, and though there may be other grounds on which the film could have been stopped, it's easier and cheaper to let it go by without providing it the kind of publicity that any lawsuit would present the producers.

All fiction is, to a greater or lesser extent, a spin-off of history, but the screenplay that Mort Fine has written falls even that minor test. It's not as well researched as Truman Capote's "In Cold Blood," which was called a "non-fiction" novel and which used real names. In its extremely few lively moments, it recapitulates facts culled from the gossip columns, but though it's not fact, really, neither is it fiction. It's an over-dressed plot outline.

Though "The Greek Tycoon" gives short and rather nasty shrift to the Kennedy family, I suppose it could be argued that ANY movie in which the Kennedys are supporting characters to the Onassises would automatically have to be regarded as nasty. After all, the Kennedys were the stars of an era, not the comic relief. Yet "The Greek Tycoon" doesn't pretend to be about the Kennedys. Rather it presents us a picture — wittily or not — of one of the greatest non-love stories of our generation — the courtship of the widow of an assassinated United States president by one of the richest men in the world, a Greek who owns oil tankers, airplanes and islands and who may or may not include in a bit of blackmail to see a deal successfully concluded.

With a face that is absolutely straight, leaving the legal reasons as an afterthought for lack of literary skill. "The Greek Tycoon" characterizes Liz Cassidy (Jacqueline Bisset) as a woman who loves her president-husband deeply but who doesn't hesitate to run off on a Greek island vacation after her baby is still-born, leaving the president to make out as best he can in the White House.

The movie, I think, wants us to take Liz seriously, though it sometimes is hard put to succeed. When, early in the film, Liz announces she is going to Greece whether the president (James Franciscus) likes it or not, he knows who she is, but who are you? You're the wife of the president of the United States? Liz: "Oh, for God's sakes, James, I know who I am... and I need a change." They clinch and vow undying love.

Russell: 'just beginning to entertain'

CountryStyle News Service

Johnny Russell is getting ready for B-I-G things to come.

In an unpretentious manner, he talks about a new record contract, movie offers, a possible television series, radio commercials, songwriting, and more package shows.

Aimed to prepare him for S-U-C-C-E-S-S, John Bright Russell — ("38 going on 32" who is married to an attractive brunette "18 going on 33") — is streamlining those physical proportions which have testified to his highly developed love for Southern cooking.

In short, the well-nourished country music star has lost between 65 and 70 pounds on a steady carbohydrate diet which includes steak and salad — but no cornbread, butterbeans, fried okra and other goodies he used to enjoy with his buttermilk and red onions.

He's preparing himself to expand his horizons, as he terms it.

Friends say superstardom may be just around the corner, and ol' Johnny doesn't want to be fat when he's in heaven.

Already, this country genius has laid a career foundation that is the envy of many a show business celebrity — and he's been putting the knowledge he gained to work ever since.

He's a major songwriter ("Act Naturally" has sold upwards of 12,000,000 copies), a major recording artist with a string of hits ("Redneck, White Socks and Blue Ribbon Beer," "Cattish John," "Mr. and Mrs. Urtrue," "The Baptism of Jesse Taylor") and a well-received in-person entertainer who is kept on the road 200 days a year.

You might think — with all those accomplishments — that Johnny Russell is ready to sit back and enjoy the rewards of his success.

...You'd be dead wrong.

"I'm just beginning to entertain," he told "CountryStyle" in the offices of Polydor Records in Nashville's Music Row. "Just watch me now."

He paused for a split second, glanced at producer-promoter Paul Randall, (one of the best promotion men in the business), and declared:

"My goal is to do as many different things in this business as I can.

"I don't want to be just a country music singer. I want to do movies, a television series, radio commercials, write more top hits, and draw bigger crowds at my concerts.

Frankly, he has been unhappy with the dry spell that hit him two years ago.

"I've made some changes, and I'm hitting the road toward a B-I-G career," he proclaims. "And one of the first things I had to do was lose some weight." Johnny pulled his shirt around him, obviously pleased that it almost wrapped half-way over again.

"I weighed about 355 pounds when I started this," he grinned. "I began dieting about 1 1/2 years ago, and stayed on it for eight months. I lost about 50 pounds. Then we went on a cruise, Next came Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's Day, and I put 15 pounds back on again.

"So — with the first of the year, I began all over. Just look at me now. I can have up to 65 carbohydrates a day. And I supplement this with exercise. Would you know, I moved from five pushups and situps a day to 12 pushups and 30 situps T-W-I-C-E a day?

"I didn't realize how much work was involved. But now it's fun. I'm after my new goals."

Johnny's first shot at stardom was not so heavenly.

"I came to Nashville back in 1959 when I was just a 19-year-old kid," he says. "I had my first record with me, and they didn't send me a big check or anything for it. It did get me in to talk to the right people, though."

He now believes there were a few Music Row executives interested in him back then, but there were no immediate takers in those early days.

Russell returned to the West Coast, but his dreams remained in Nashville. Not long after that, he was working for a recording company when he got a call to come to Hollywood. He had to break a date with it to "keep my business" — as he puts it — appointment, and later wrote a song about the situation — "Act Naturally." The song was a hit by the Beatles.

The lyrics hint of Russell's ambitions: "They're gonna put me in the movies; They're gonna give me a big star out in L.A."

That — and a few of Russell's other compositions being bringing in steady royalties, but the young man still wasn't satisfied. He decided to take another shot at Nashville.

Upon returning, he drifted into music publishing, a move which brought him security for a while, but later proved to be a trap.

"I had to leave Nashville to get rid of that publishing image," he recalls. "Nobody would take me seriously as an artist."

"I was doing very well working for the Wilburn Brothers and their publishing company, working on record sessions, writing, and what-have-you.

"It was hard for people to take serious that you want to go through the struggle to try to start a career as an artist when you have these things going for you."

"So, I had to stay for a couple of years, and then come back... and start all over again.

"But I'm happy I did it — except that now I can look back and see how I could have done it a different way... a way that would have been easier.

"Now I've got to enlarge on my image... not my physical one."

Johnny admits he doesn't know what keeps a person going in the entertainment business.

"It's not the glamor. I knew there wasn't much glamor when I started. It's not the money. When you get a certain amount of money, it doesn't mean much anymore. But for me, this is the only thing to do."

Russell is an "ambassador" for the country industry.

"I've always told people, 'If you don't want to like country music, don't listen to it. Cause if you listen to it, you're gonna like it.'"

"I have never seen anybody who would sit down and listen to country music over a period of time who didn't say, 'I love it.' It just doesn't happen."

AUTHOR SHARON CADWALLADER DOES IT ALL
... advocates cooking from scratch with variations

'Complete Cookbook' gives wide array of food facts

By STEPHANIE ZVIRIN
American Library Assn.

At a time when cookbooks — like everything else — are becoming increasingly specialized, it's a treat to find one that still attempts to do it all.

"Sharon Cadwallader's 'Complete Cookbook' — stuffed with recipes, preparation hints, storage, purchasing, preserving, and baking tips — does exactly that. Its wide array of basic food facts and nutrition information makes it particularly useful to less experienced cooks.

Cadwallader advocates a return to cooking from scratch, but with a few interesting variations. By substituting vegetable oil and honey for butter and sugar; carob for chocolate, and yogurt for sour cream, she lowers the calorie and cholesterol count of many traditional dishes, without sacrificing palatability.

Try yogurt pancakes or cream-of-asparagus soup made with a base of low-fat milk and low-fat cottage cheese. Many favorite, unaltered recipes (for the most part, the author excludes really rich dishes) appear as well, for everything from beverages and main dishes to sandwiches and baby foods. A well-rounded, down-to-earth cookbook with a nice dash of difference.

Another back-to-basics cookbook comes from Jean Anderson, a contributing editor of Family Circle and author of the award-winning "Doubleday Cookbook." For her latest, more specialized "The Grass Roots Cookbook," Anderson scoured kitchens across the country and came up with more than 300 original, regional recipes from the files of 22 seasoned cooks — some of whom have been kitchen-testing for more than 10 years.

No convenience foods or instant fixin's here — everything's fresh from the garden or farm. (Don't let recipes for chokecherry syrup or fricasseed muskrat scare you. Such exotic items are few.)

Anderson has done an admirable job of adapting her contributors' individualized cooking styles for general use. Five of the contributors hail from the Middle Atlantic and New England states; seven from the South; three from the Midwest; three from the Plains and Southwest; and four from the West and Mountain states. They bring the influence of Portuguese, Cajun, black, Norwegian, Mexican, Indian and Italian cooking traditions, evident in such dishes as adobe oven bread, machacado (eggs scrambled with beef), and calderada (Portuguese fish stew).

Anita Borghese's latest "Foods From Harvest Festivals and Folk Fairs" is more than a cookbook in the strict sense. It's a sampling of recipes and information gleaned from ethnic, harvest and civic festivals celebrated in 22 states across America.

Borghese has assembled, and modified for home kitchens, favorites from gatherings like Danish Days in Solvang, Calif., the National Cherry Festival held yearly in Traverse City, Mich., and the Chili Cook-Off in Terlingua, Texas. Descriptions of festivals, dates and traveling directions share space with recipes in a delightful armchair tour for cooks, travelers and eaters.

—Steamy, tender, buttery noodles: The average Italian eats 50 to 70 pounds of them per year. The Chinese often serve them at birthday parties instead of cake. They are low in cholesterol; excellent for someone on a salt-free diet; and not in themselves fattening (it's the sauce that tips the scales).

Noodles, says Karen Green in her "The Great International Noodle Experience," can be used in soups, main dishes, salads, desserts and snacks. Serve them cold in salads, hot, covered with sauce, stuffed with meat or unadorned.

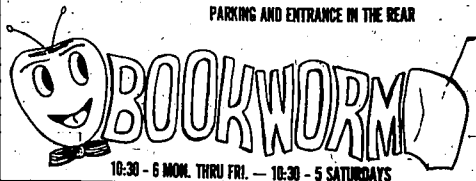

Beginning with directions for simple homemade dough, Green proceeds to roll out recipes from around the world: Oriental recipes, including won tons (frozen skins can be purchased in the supermarket), dim sum, and soba; recipes drawn from traditional Italian and Jewish cooking; and noodle favorites from America, Europe and Asia, with Russian varenik (noodles stuffed with mashed potatoes), Greek pastitsio, and tuna noodle casserole among them.

To help cooks distinguish among noodle varieties (Green notes 27 Oriental kinds alone), the author has placed each section with a glossary. Prize-winning noodle recipes and an unusual chapter on using noodles as a camper's food round out a comprehensive specialty cookbook — a book that goes a long way toward elevating a versatile product to its proper place in the modern cook's repertoire. VALERIE PERRINE TO PLAY ZIEGFELD SHOWGIRL
... in NBC TV's "Ziegfeld: A Man and His Women"

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Valerie Perrine had just emerged from a shower in her San Fernando Valley home, her hair, sopping wet, clung to her head like a helmet and her blue outfit did little to hide her charms.

Her nose was shiny and she wore not a speck of makeup. Nevertheless, Valerie managed to look fetching and feminine. She will look altogether different tonight when she stars in NBC-TV's "Ziegfeld: A Man and His Women," dressed in lavish gowns of the early days of the 20th century.

Her blonde hair will be curled and tumble from beneath ostrich-plumed hats and her décolletage will be suitably plunging.

A shameless sexist exploitation of the female anatomy?

You bet, and Valerie is all for it. A former Las Vegas chorine herself, Valerie spent seven years displaying her considerable charms in showgirl numbers to the glee and appreciation of the paying customers.

Valerie, moreover, is the daughter of an Earl Carroll showgirl. So displaying one's beauty is something of a Perrine-family tradition.

"Playing a showgirl in this project was easy for me," Valerie said, perched on a sofa in her living room. She ran her fingers through her dripping hair in an attempt to keep it from tangling.

"In fact, it was much easier than my days in Vegas. Somebody brings you coffee and treats you like a movie star. In Vegas we killed ourselves rehearsing 15 hours to get those numbers together.

"It was tough work, two shows a night, three on Saturday nights and I got six days off every three months. You worked seven days a week come sickness or not.

"The pay wasn't bad, about $600 a week which beat working as a secretary. On this show I worked only three days and got paid what amounts to two years salary in Vegas.

"But no matter how hard the work, there was something about walking out on that stage wearing a $2,000 dress and a $500 hat and having the spotlight on you and hearing all the applause.

"After seven years of dancing and walking around in fancy costumes, this role came naturally. In one big production number I have to walk down 40 stairs which were covered with thousands of balloons. It was like old times."

Does Valerie find such roles demeaning or exploitive of women.

"She tossed her head in annoyance. 'Certainly not. There will always be room in this world for showgirls and real women whether it's Ziegfeld, George White or Earl Carroll putting on shows.

"I got a real feeling of the old days and the Ziegfeld era when I did this TV movie. The costumes and the hair-do were really authentic. The girl I play never married Ziegfeld. She hustled him and became his mistress.

"I'm biased. I have an old-fashioned mentality. I like to have a man shower me with flowers, with gifts, with lots of attention. A lot of women nowadays are just the opposite. They want, as they say, their own 'space.'

"I feel better off when my space is underneath a man's arm. Women in the old days had it better.

"Today women fight men instead of hustling them. You don't hear of women getting gorgeous gifts and having men send them flowers three times a day and taking them to beautiful vacation spots and winning and dining them the way they used to.

"You get more the old way. When you're reliant and vulnerable. Hustling."

"I'm all for playing games the way women used to do. You flirt, play hard to get, pretend to be running away. You play it shy, innocent and flirty which is the way I really am.

"But fight men and they quit opening doors, lighting cigarettes and sending flowers or buying you little gifts. Why on earth would a man want to spoil and pamper and love a woman's libber... who is fighting him all the way?

"No wonder women are turning off so many men. They've lost their femininity, the very quality that makes them different and attractive to men.

"Guys today have to turn to other men for feminine traits. That's why there are so many more gay men around, not that I'm putting down gays.

"It's a lot more fun being a girl and being proud of it. All men like feminine women who sit in a corner, don't drink too much or smoke or take dope. They also like to feel protective toward a woman, especially if she appears to be helpless, even though she isn't.

"If you want something from a man, go about it in a feminine way rather than demanding it or going to court. That's the way I feel.

The Yearling' featured in two parts

A young boy's attachment to an orphaned fawn relieves the loneliness of his harsh life in the Florida wilderness, in "The Yearling," the award-winning classic motion picture to be rebroadcast as a two-part premiere presentation of the CBS Family Film Classics," from 7-8 p.m. Tuesday, May 23, and Tuesday, May 30. The 1947 MGM release was originally broadcast Nov. 9, 1976.

Gregory Peck, Jane Wyman and Claude

Jarman Jr., who won a special Junior Academy Award for his role as the youngster, star. The film, nominated for eight Oscars, is based on the Pulitzer Prize-winning novel by Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings.

Peck and Miss Wyman portray Penny and Ma Baxter, a couple desperately trying to scratch a living from the land in Florida's scrub country just after the Civil War. The harsh, lonely life they lead particularly affects their young son Jody.

While hunting for a marauding bear that had killed Ma's calf, Penny is bitten by a rattlesnake. To save his own life, Penny kills a doe to use its liver as an antidote. Young Jody discovers the doe's newly orphaned fawn and decides to raise it as a pet.

The relationship that the boy develops with his pet is complicated by the cruel necessities of frontier living. Jody must learn to accept difficult decisions, as a result of growing into manhood with a better understanding of and rapport with his parents.

Both Peck and Miss Wyman were nominated for Academy Awards for their performances in "The Yearling." The film won three Oscars for art direction, interior decoration and cinematography.

"The Yearling" was produced by Sidney Franklin, and directed by Clarence Brown from a screenplay by Paul Osborn.

BEAGLE ON ICE

The ever-bullient Snoopy (Judy Schulz); his creator, and the show's host, Charles M. Schultz; and Olympic Gold Medal winner Peggy Fleming are joined by skating headlines (back row) Rob Steiner and pat Baker, in "Snoopy's Musical on Ice," Wednesday, May 24.

Mysterious Whodunit

If there is one overriding attitude among the cast of Dashiell Hammett's "The Dain Curse," it is a peculiar reluctance to reveal too much of the plot.

The CBS version of Hammett's 1920s whodunit will air May 22, 23, 24 and will feature Beatrice Straight, James Coburn, Jean Simmons, Jason Miller and Nancy Addison.

Beatrice Straight, who won the Academy award as the wronged wife in "Crush," is a peculiarly found between takes holding informal talks in an upstairs room of the mansion in which some of the film's action takes place.

"Do you remember the game of 'Clue,' where you had to guess the murderer, the weapon, and the room in which the murder occurred?" Doing the movie is a lot like that. In the game, you got to choose Mrs. White, Mrs. Peacock, or Col. Mustard, and you had your choice of murder weapons, like a candlestick or a rope; and it could be done in the library or the kitchen. It all depended on how you rolled the dice... In this film, there are a half-dozen murders and lots of suspects... Oh, I don't want to tell too much."

Jason Miller, who plays Owen Fitzstephan, an eccentric author with a penchant for the bizarre, says,

"I still receive scripts of a supernatural nature because of my role (as the Catholic priest) in 'The Exorcist.' Now I play the author in 'The Dain Curse,' and the price to be paid was opposite James Coburn. In a way, Fitzstephan is a fringe of society.

"That's pretty heavy. Hamilton Nash, who is a private detective, and this way I don't have to give away the plot."

Of Dashiell Hammett, he says, "Hammett caught a political corruption in his writing. He predicted the crash of 1929. He had a field grim vision, grown from the soil of his time. He adapted the book for television, says of Hammett that he was for years a field operative with the Pinkerton Detective Agency.

James Coburn stars as 1928 detective Hamilton Nash and Nancy Addison portrays Gabrielle, a young woman convinced she carries a deadly family curse, in Dashiell Hammett's "The Dain Curse," Monday, May 22, Tuesday, May 23; Wednesday, May 24 on CBS.

WEDNESDAY

OUTLAW HUNT

Academy Award winners John Wayne and Katharine Hepburn portray two unique characters who, despite their differences, team to hunt down a band of outlaws in "Rooster Cogburn," a western drama on "NBC Movie of the Week," Wednesday, May 24.

John Wayne reprises his "True Grit" role of a condescending but effective lawman and Katharine Hepburn joins him as Eula Goodnight, a minister's daughter. Together, they track down a stolen shipment of nitroglycerin and stolen rifles.

Lou Costello's famous cry, "Heyabbaunt!" will ring again when Harvey Korman and Buddy Hackett play Abbott and Costello in an NBC comedy, "Bud and Lou." Red Buttons will play the comedy duo's manager Eddie Sherman in the MGM production based on Bob Thomas' book "Bud and Lou."

Additions to the cast of "ABC's 'Pie'" include such stalwarts as Richard Anderson, Dana Andrews, J.D. Cannon, Darren McGavin and Laurence Luckinbill, who will return briefly to Hollywood for the project after being heavily involved in the New York theatre scene.

Waiting to go on when a star falls at NBC are two series pilots: "Coast-to-coast," a one-hour comedy about the misadventures of a New York-to-Los Angeles airline crew. Linda Watkins, Melvyn Griffith (daughter of Tippi Hedren) and David Amram star. Appearing in cameo roles will be Ross Martin, Jack Carter, Abby Dalton, Adrienne Barbeau and LeWanda Page.

Cliff Gorman, who won an Obie for "The Boys in the Band" and a Tony for "Lenny" is perfect for host of a glib talk show in "Hello, Larry," another comedy try-out. Joanna Gleason will play his producer and Kim Richards and Donna Wilkes play the daughters who are even more glib than their recently separated father.

Dick Rammbo, who scored with viewers in two unsuccessful series, "The Guns of Will Sonnett" and "Dirty Sally," will play a playboy who is framed on tax evasion charges and sent to prison in "Sword of Justice," a two-hour development drama. Also starring are Larry Hagman, J.D. Cannon and Cliff Gorman as lawyers. Rock 'n' rollers won't be able to catch themselves un-sung heroes any more, says Jack Haley, Jr. is working on "The Heroes of Rock 'n' Roll" for ABC, a history of rock from rhythm & blues to London, where he and his siblings are filming the Beatles and punk.

their new Hudson Brothers syndicated series, "Bonkers!" Also in London-down were John Ritter and Diabano Carroll who will appear on the show "Bud and Lou," Red Buttons will play the comedy duo's manager Eddie Sherman in the MGM production based on Bob Thomas' book "Bud and Lou."

A couple of the stranded duos will play the comedy pioneers in NBC's "The Sherman in the MGM production based on Bob Thomas' book "Bud and Lou."

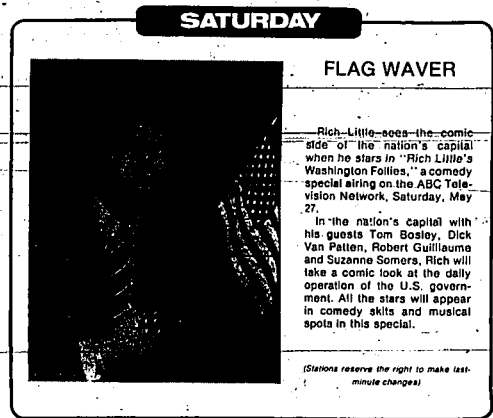

The first one he accepted so far is to play opposite Elizabeth Taylor in "Ripcord Engagement," the Hallmark Hall of Fame drama about a musical stage star who becomes a professor of ancient Egypt. Bottoms will play a star-struck pupil.

Elizabeth Taylor will also be among the show biz biggies who'll help Bob Hope blow out the candles on his 75th birthday tribute, airing May 25. The other backslappers are Angie Dickinson, Alan King, Lucille Ball, Sammy Davis Jr., Don Rickles, Ann-Margret and The Muppets.

Another actor whose having no trouble finding work these days is Louis Gossett Jr. He recently appeared in "To Kill a Cop," and will be seen in "Lawman Without a Gun," "Backstairs at the White House" and "The Critchfield." Gossett will play a black rights activist who unleashes a scandal in the hospital-based film.

You can now say it for real: TV has gone to the dogs. Joe Garagiola will be "Casino, Hot of Fame," a tribute to our mutts, pure-breds, pals, performers and workers. Among the two-legged performers will be Jerry Lewis and "Casino, Hot of Fame," a tribute to our mutts, pure-breds, pals, performers and workers.

BRIAN ADAMS SLOAN

Q: Now that "F.L.S.T." is out with mixed reviews, is Sylvester Stallone still full of himself? Is fame still going to his head? — M.J., Detroit

A: Stallone is pretty full of himself these days. We hear he changed the script of the movie so that his character would be more heroic. He also tried, unsuccessfully, to change the ending so he wouldn't be killed. Stallone found himself totally upstaged at the Los Angeles opening of the film. At the dinner afterward, the actor was at the center table with Gov. Jerry Brown. But it was Brown most people wanted to shake hands with and talk to.

KEITH CARRADINE

Q: Someone told me that tennis star Chris Evert has gotten impossible and blamed her parents saying they keep Chris under tight rein. True? — A.H., Atlanta.

A: Not at all. Chris is a nice straight girl and liked by everyone who knows her. She and her parents are close but they have given her plenty of freedom. She now has her own apartment in Hollywood with their blessings. The only problem Chris has these days is with tennis fans. She feels that when she was 18 and an underdog they were all rooting for her but now that she's been such a success she feels that the crowds are against her.

Q: We loved the Broadway musical "The Wiz." When's the movie version due? — D.O., Trenton, N.J.

A: Latest word is that Sidney Lumet's version of "The Wiz" will be out in November. There's something of a controvery about just how much the movie cost. Director Lumet puts the cost at about $15 million but other production sources say its closer to $23 to $25 million. Whatever the figure, some movie insiders are already wondering whether "The Wiz" can make all that money back and still show a big profit. You can't discount the presence of Diana Ross, of course, nor the effect of a big publicity campaign for the film.

STOLEN LOVE: Rumor has it that the robber baron of romance, Ryan O'Neal, has struck again. Ryan, as you know, has swiped girlfriends from some of the most charming men in the world, including Warren Beatty, Jack Nicholson, and now the latest victim, Phillip Natchos, son of the Greek millionaire, Stavros Natchos. Ryan seems to have stolen the model Barbara Hall away from Phillip.

Q: I've read so much about Barbra Streisand's movie-set temperament. What's she like when she's just hanging out, and not making films? — R.G., Miami

A: Recently, Barbra and Jon Peters vacationed at Rancho La Puerta, a rustically chic resort in Tecate, Mexico (about an hour from San Diego). Fellow guests — especially ladies — really dug Jon, who was affable, expansive, and into exercise classes. However, Barbra came across as rather moody and remote. Also, she was something of a complainer. Recalls one resort-goer: "She behaved more like a visiting efficiency expert than a guest."

Q: Does Marisa Berenson still have a lock on the Vivien Leigh role in the forthcoming movie biography of the great "Gone With the Wind" star? — P.N., Dallas.

A: Just the opposite, it appears. Marisa's marital woes and separation from Jim Randall have thrown a wrench into career plans, at least temporarily. Movie insiders say that Randall is close to Allan Carr, producer of the projected Vivien Leigh project. For that reason, it's considered highly unlikely that Marisa will be the one tapped to star in the movie.

Q: I really do see my kid, Keith Carradine, in that movie "Pretty Baby," and am still rooting. In his weird beard and frunky threads, he seemed more like his father, John Carradine, in an old monster picture. What are they trying to do to my kid? — R.C., Denver

A: For a real shock, you should have caught the skills of Keith in his original makeup! Initial plans were for the actor (cast as an eccentric photographer hanging around a New Orleans brothel) to

JACK LEMMON

... among 'Power' stars

CHERYL LADD

appear as a deformed, dwarf-like character. However, the result turned out to be a lookalike for Jose Ferrer as Toulouse-Lautrec, so the odd makeup was modified. Now, Keith looks merely strange in this film — which is pretty strange, too.

Q: Am I mistaken or has Britt Ekland done something to her hair in the aftermath of her breakup with rock star Rod Stewart? — J.W., Houston.

POPE PIUS XII

... he's not the one

A: A shattered romance didn't wreck Britt's hair — it was experimenting with a henna rinse. Her hair turned orange and then had to be bleached to get the color out. Three bleachings and her long blond locks simply broke off. Then she had a permanent to give it some shape. But it broke off even more and that's why Britt is short these days.

Q: Can we expect any more movies in the "Network" mold that take a skeptical look at the television industry? — E.H., New Orleans.

A: The success of "Network" was bound to invite similar films. One, just completing production in California, stars Jane Fonda, Jack Lemmon, and Michael Douglas. Titled "Power," the movie is being kept under wraps, but word is that it includes some scalding scenes about suppression of news on TV. Some local-network affiliates, the producer says, were so nervous about the project they actually refused to have their facilities used as shooting locations.

Q: I hear Pope Pius XII is to be the subject of a new movie, and am quite interested in this. Can you tell me more about it? — R.W., Columbus, Ohio

A: The movie's titled "Pope Play," but it isn't exactly what you'd expect. Actually, the character of the pontiff is a fictional one, and he's called Pope Pius XIII. The story's a comedy-thriller starring Goldie Hawn and Chevy Chase, and it's about a wild scheme to assassinate the pope (Cyril Magnin) while he's visiting San Francisco.

The bizarre climax, which sounds reminiscent of "The Man Who Knew Too Much," takes place as the pope is watching "The Mikado" at the opera house. The film opens this June. M.E. TOO: Cheryl Ladd, one of Charlie's angels, was among the guests at the ERA fund-raising party at actress John Fackett's house in Hollywood. As guests were making contributions, Cheryl pledged $500 and she explained that was all she could afford because she had not had a regular job until recently. The party netted about $55,000.

HOLLYWOOD SIZZLER: Actress Elizabeth Ashley, a very irreverent no-holds-barred lady, has just written a book about moriwanda. We hear it's so gossipy that the Book of the Month Club made a quick decision to buy it as an alternate selection. The club usually doesn't move this fast but apparently the book is so deliciously scandalous, they couldn't resist. It's called "Actress."

Q: What's happened to Patricia Neal and Roald Dahl's rebellious daughter, Tessa? Wasn't she getting married or something? — N.M., Indianapolis.

A: Tessa hasn't gotten married. The "something" was that she had a baby girl six months ago. She is still going with the father of her child, actor Julian Holloway. Unfortunately, Julian is still married to actress Zena Walker.

ELIZABETH ASHLEY

... a really gossipy book

Q: Why did Judy Carne, the "Laugh-In" girl, divorce Bert Remondini? I thought she always said she was still in love with him. — W.T., Washington, D.C.

A: She and Bert had a rough time of it during their marriage from 1963 to 1965 — particularly when she was working and he wasn't. At one point during an argument she fled their apartment. In an effort to shock him she threatened divorce. But to Judy's dismay, he agreed and that was the end of the marriage. She married Robert Bergmann in 1970 but they were divorced six months later. Later, she's been seeing a lot of Bergmann.

'New York Dolls' inspire love, hate

CITY N.Y. Times Service
NEW YORK — The New York Dolls — loved by some, despised by others but indisputably the precursors of New York's present-day punk-underground rock scene — consisted of five members. But the undisputed leader was the singer, David Johansen. When the Dolls broke up in 1975, Johansen and Sylvain Sylvain, another Doll, tried for a while to carry on the old name with a largely new band, but it didn't really take.

Now, finally, three years later, a band bearing his name — the New York Dolls (from Staten Island), a new record and a tour. The group has been playing around New York for about two months, carefully skirting Manhattan (with tentative plans for some kind of showpiece here in late June). Friday night they play their first major concert, at the Tower Theater in Philadelphia, and in June they have a 10-concert tour of the West Coast as the opening act for Tom Petty.

As a performer, Johansen was always a lot of fun — as were the Dolls as a whole. In some aspects he's another of those Mick Jagger clones, both in looks and in his limboed but unpretentiously rock-and-roll, slinging style. But he also has plenty of individuality both as a singer and as a songwriter — usually in conjunction with Sylvain, who now has his own band, too, called the Criminals. But he will be playing with Johansen's group through June.

"Syl and I still work together," Johansen said the other day. "We're a pretty good songwriting team — we think so, anyway. We think we came up with some pretty good ditties."

The solo record, entitled "David Johansen," suggests that they do, indeed. This is a record full of the hearty signatures of basic, blues-based rock-and-roll. But those signatures are delivered with lots of panache, and here and there Johansen reaches out convincingly to suggest stylistic extensions beyond basic rock. It seems that so far, at least, he is avoiding one of the pitfalls that tripped up the Dolls: his record is being played on radio stations around the country, and not just in his New York home base.

The record is so good, in fact, that it makes one wonder once more why Johansen hasn't made a major career move sooner. Several rock writers have suggested that the main reason was that he was tied up in an unsatisfactory management situation from which he's only recently extricated himself, but Johansen himself discounts that explanation.

"I HAD a band," he says. "That's how we used to pay the rent. We did some interesting things — we toured Japan, we toured Canada, we went to New Orleans once a month for the weekend to play. New Orleans is a great place. That's how we wanted to live."

The Dolls were rejected by the world outside New York, which saw in them something absurd and hateful, a symbol of the supposed excesses of the New York underground. "They thought we were too crazy, too young, too energetic," was the way Johansen put it. But when just that kind of music started cropping up regularly at CBGB's in 1975, Johansen held aloof, except in the social sense. The implication was that he'd played in clubs before, and didn't want to start over.

Johansen says that his new group avoids the campy glitter that defined the former images of the Dolls, but that the stage show will still be lively to look at. "It's gonna be a whole rock-and-roll show of the first order," he said. "We definitely try to maintain the party atmosphere — which is the essence of it, the reason it was invented in the first place."

Hope, anxiety mark debut of Atlantic City gambling

By JAMES F. CLARITY

CITY N.Y. Times Service
ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — On the Boardwalk of this once-prosperous, now-shabby resort city by the sea, merchants of practically everything, from the usual tourist items — to women's expensive handbags, are sprucing up their shops and sometimes recruiting them (for example, "Gamblers Gift").

A mile or so away, in a part of the city where black and Hispanic people live, some blocks recall the devastation of downtown Beirut, smashed and deserted in an urban civil war.

The garish scenes clash as Atlantic City waits with both hope and anxiety for the start next week of legalized gambling, an ambitious and unusual American experiment that is officially supposed to put life back into a city that has been virtually dead for decades.

With the gambling expected to start on Memorial Day weekend at the refurbished $40 million Resorts International Hotel and Casino facing the sea, most of the 43,000 people who live here feel that the future of Atlantic City depends on the success or failure of the renewal-through-route experiment.

The people, about half of whom are black or Hispanic and about half of whom are jobless most of the year, are aware that state and city officials persuaded the rest of New Jersey to vote "yes" in the 1978 casino referendum by promising that gambling would bring boom times, like those the city had found by increasingly moneyed and mobile tourists began to go elsewhere for their fun in the 1960s.

But people here wonder whether they will really see the promised golden days, predicated on the success of Resorts International's casino, which is supposed to lead to the opening of other casino hotels in the next few years.

About 40 percent of the city's population is over 65 years of age, and they wonder whether the boom, if it comes, will change the fabric of life here, which is frayed but familiar and manageable. Many seem to feel that new, sudden prosperity based on gambling might bring new troubles. These could range from huge traffic jams and increased prostitution to the forced removal from their homes of members of minorities and old people — groups who may be unable to compete for living space as real-estate prices, already up 10 times over their value a year or so ago, continue to soar.

— So while there is more optimistic anticipation than fear of change, the people of Atlantic City still have a strong level of worry in their attitudes toward what is going to happen in the coming months.

"This was kind of a neat place to be when I was a boy," said Victor A. Bressler, a 54-year-old physician whose mother and father, immigrants from Central Europe, met in Atlantic City when she was a hotel chambermaid and he was a pastry cook.

"It was always the place where the middle class and the lower middle class, especially from Philadelphia, came for fresh air," Bressler said. "There was the Boardwalk, which is an excellent means of transportation and a way of getting people together. The air was not polluted. There were trolley cars."

The changes in the city, which is set on Absecon Island off the marshes of the New Jersey mainland and extends about three miles north and south on the Atlantic Ocean — have been drastic since Bressler's youth, and since the city was founded by a group of speculators who built a rail line here from Philadelphia in 1852.

The founders' moneymaking idea was to give the working masses of Philadelphia a Victorian-family camp resort. But along with the luckies came illegal gambling, prostitution and the numbers rackets. The city officials have alternatively sought to clean up the city and, sporadically, been jailed for corruption. The city's red-light district prospered for decades until it was finally closed, under the government's pressure, with the arrival of thousands of soldiers and sailors on leave during World War II.

Surviving from better days are the rolling chairs on the Boardwalk, the Miss America pageant and, of course, the broad beaches and the dark green sea. The last event of national importance here was the 1964 Democratic Convention, which nominated Lyndon B. Johnson for president.

'Spores' spread rose black spot

By GEORGE ABRAHAM
BLACK SPOT OF ROSES

Can you do anything now to prevent black spot disease of roses later on? Indeed, The first thing to do is gather up all the old leaves in the bed, and burn or trash-bag them. The fungus (diplocarpon) lives overwinter in old leaves and possibly in lesions on old canes. In spring, rains splash spores ("seed") from the fungus to young foliage on the plants. If the foliage is wet for six or so hours, the spores germinate, causing black spots which in turn can produce an astronomical number of spores. Even a 1/4-inch black spot can generate over 30,000 spores and each spore can generate another spot.

After old leaves and trash are removed in the rose bed, give the soil a good dusting or drenching with sulfur dust or Benlate. You can loosen up the rose bed soil first, then treat with a fungicide.

Of course, any winter-injured canes should be cut off (back to live tissue) before treatment.

A good mulch of peatmoss, cocopeat, bean shells, peanut shells, buckwheat hulls, bark, etc., will do a lot to prevent splashing of spores from the soil to foliage. They can be applied before the leaves appear so that spores can be trapped in the soil. Good rose growers will tell you that sanitation is a big step in controlling black spot, even if you use fungicides to cover the foliage later.

HOME GROWN SPUDS

Today, potatoes are the cheapest vegetable you can buy, and regardless what price you pay for them, they're still a bargain. If you plan to put in some spuds, use certified "seed" pieces (potatoes are not planted from seed but from sections of the tuber cut up.) Ten pounds of "seed" will give you from 100 to 150 pounds of potatoes. This year try the roasting method—just press the seed pieces into the soil surface and cover with a loose mulch of at least 8 inches of hay or straw. No weeding or watering is needed. You harvest just by lifting the mulch and picking the spuds. Potatoes have suffered a "fattening" reputation, but that's not true. One average (6-ounce) potato has only 115 calories—the same as a large apple, or 1/4 cup cottage cheese, rice, noodles or bran flakes. They supply vitamins B and C, iron and phosphorus. Bake or boil them in the skins and peel thinly to save the nutrients. Try growing some spuds this year because the superior flavor and texture of home-grown spuds over market potatoes is unbelievable.

BLOOD LEAF PLANT

The so-called "Blood Leaf Geranium" is not a geranium but is Iresine. The one with wine-red, heart-shaped leaves with paler veining and red stems is I. herbastii and is found in 9 out of 10 homes in America. The "Chicken Ozzard" plant (Iresine aureoreticulata) is a close member and all have the same cultural requirements: 72 degree day and night, good light, and watered freely with lukewarm water. Do not let the soil ball dry out. These plants have a tendency to grow leggy but you can stop this by occasionally pinching out the tips to induce bushier growth. Put the tip cuttings in plain tap water and they'll root readily. The flowers on these plants are small and insignificant, so the main show is the leaves themselves. During the summer months pot and all can be set outdoors and kept watered until fall. Troubles: none, except legginess, and regular tip pruning will prevent this. A good potting mixture consists of 1 part each of sand, peat moss and garden loam. Puckered leaves are natural, although sometimes aphids can cause foliage to pucker, in which case you can wash in soapy water.

CARROT TROUBLES

What causes forked carrots? Is it the variety? You find forked carrots in a gravelly soil, or one that's compacted. It's seldom you find forked carrots growing in a muck soil. Some seed houses recommend laying a plank down over the garden soil while you're sowing seed to prevent compaction. Hairy carrots can be due to bad weather (too wet or too dry), and a disease known as carrot yellows. Weed killers and too much fertilizer can also cause hairy carrots. Last year many gardeners had split carrots. This can be due to sudden, heavy rains or too much water just as the roots reach full maturity. We've seen this happen within 48 hours after a rain. To avoid some of these problems it's a good idea to make successive sowings every 2 or 3 weeks.

POOR MAN'S ASPARAGUS

Leeks are called a lot of things, but "Poor Man's asparagus" fits it pretty well. You start a patch, using seed. Once they come up, you'll always have them.

Chives are also worth starting for people who like to use them in scrambled eggs, omelets or cottage cheese. A pot full of chives in the kitchen window comes in mighty handy.

QUESTION BOX

Chives of the week — D. F. of Twin Falls: "I started my own geraniums from cuttings rooted in perlite. They developed a fine set of roots and after we potted them, trouble began. Leaves started to turn yellow. Why?"

A pale, green to yellow condition could be due to poor drainage (overwatering), too much fertilizer or a nitrogen shortage. Sometimes, the plants will get yellowing between veins of older leaves and this can be due to a magnesium, potassium or an iron shortage. Check your geraniums for reddening of the foliage which shows up now. This can be due to low temperature, dry soil, a nitrogen shortage, root loss or low soil temperature.

Geraniums are very sensitive to potassium shortage, and this appears as brown edges on the lower leaves. To get nice bushy plants with large flowers geraniums need full sunlight. Supplemental light at night has proven of little value, except on seedlings in the early stages of growth. Give your plants the brightest window possible and don't crowd them. There's no truth to the idea that geraniums like to be grown on the dry side. The soil should be kept moist at all times.

C.H. of Idaho Falls: "Our window is full of house plants and some of them are quite tall. Should these be given a pinching now?"

Most plants growing indoors should have a regular pinching to keep them nice and bushy. Take a cactus plant or impatiens, for example. These must be pinched or they get leggy. With your thumb and forefinger you snip out the tips of shoots to induce bushiness. Otherwise the plants will grow straight up and become weak and leggy. Just about all self-stemmed plants need pinching. Such as gardenias, azaleas, etc., to keep them better shaped. To prune, you need a pair of clippers, usually since the growth is tougher. Nearly all plants that are pruned or pinched can be rooted simply by putting the clipped parts in a rooting medium such as sand, perlite or vermiculite. Usually the woodier clippings take longer to root.

A RECIPE BOOK HOLDER

It's often difficult to maneuver a recipe book when you're using both hands to measure and mix ingredients. A book stand like the one in the sketch, however, will hold the publication securely while allowing you to see an entire page at once.

The holder either can be cut out of the corner of a wooden box, or can consist of two pieces of scrap lumber held together with corner, angle or shelf bracing. (The length of the back board determines the slope of the book rest.) The front board is then fitted with two screw eyes from which you've removed the section labeled "A."

In the following article, Mother reader Lee H. Arten describes one person's way of making use of left-over plastic:

I'm not exactly wild about plastic, but—like everyone else — I end up using it anyway. And — like more and more folks these days — I end up reusing what little plastic I come in contact with before throwing it out.

Over the years, I've seen lots of ways to "recycle" plastic, but it wasn't until I visited my father-in-law's garden last summer that I learned of a way to recycle plastic and keep birds, rabbits and groundhogs out of the garden at the same time.

It's like this: One windy day, Ed, my father-in-law, took a large plastic trash bag full of grass clippings over to his garden to work into the soil. After dumping the clippings, however, he found himself clutching a big, empty sack that was flapping violently in the wind.

Not wanting to be left holding the sack (so to speak), Ed opened the bag, dropped it over a nearby post and started doing something else. Then — before going home — he tied the bag to the post so it would stay put.

As he worked in the garden the next few days, Ed watched birds fly into and out of his strawberry patch. Not just into, but into and out of the patch. The birds didn't stay long when they landed, and they didn't seem to land as often as before.

Ed also noticed that — oddly enough — when the plastic crackedled in the wind, rabbits left the area in a hurry. Even groundhogs kept their distance. (one lived close by all the summer, but never bothered the garden.)

to bother the other. All you need are some stakes or posts (which you might already have in place), a little twine and a used trash bag or two. Put them all together, and you've got a plastic scarecrow (or, I should say, "scare bag").

If scare bags have one drawback, it's the fact they work too well. People in Ed's garden, for instance, are always looking to see who or what is behind them. (Ed admits that he's turned and said, "fowdy," to a plastic bag more times than he likes to remember.) I'd say that's a pretty small price to pay for a device that lets you make good use of "useless" plastic and helps put more food on the table!

Parton's husband remains an enigma

CountryStyle News Service

Despite the best efforts of a number of determined, highly skilled reporters to pierce the shield of anonymity which envelops him, Carl Dean remains an enigma.

His boyhood friends — whom he seldom sees anymore — describe him as "kind of quiet," a loner who "kept to himself" in high school.

Mysteriously, he is seldom seen (or recognized) in public, never photographed and has steadfastly refused to grant interviews.

Tall and slender and with a firm determined jaw line and steely eyes, he strikes some who have known him as the strong, silent "Gary Cooper type."

Others maintain he looks remarkably like movie actor Anthony Perkins and is, in reality, equally shy.

There's no doubt he leads a reclusive, almost hermit-like existence by choice.

But something about this intriguing, puzzling man captivates one of the sexiest women in the world.

And Carl Dean certainly wasn't shy or introverted — or strong and silent — the day he met Dolly Parton. Just the opposite.

He pursued her from the moment he set eyes on her 14 years ago, initiating the romance by unceremoniously whistling at the heroically endowed blonde beauty from the cab of (of all things) his pickup truck.

On their first real date, Dean took Dolly to meet his folks — a serious step in the mores of Middle Tennessee.

Dolly since has become his wife (they have been married 12 years, an eternity by show-business standards) and one of the top female stars in the entertainment world.

She constantly is in the public eye. And even if her career didn't demand it — which it does — Dolly would be a public person; she's outgoing, gregarious.

Dean is not. A recent episode involving Bill Hance, country music specialist for The Nashville Banner, illustrates.

Hance was given the job of tracking down the elusive Dean for an interview, an assignment meant to clear up the perplexing Carl Dean mystery once and for all.

"Find him," Hance quotes his editor. "Find him even if you have to hire a detective to do it."

Hance and crack Banner photographer Don Foster, true to their profession, did just that. Hance explains:

"Eleven days later — without a detective — I came face to face with Carl Dean. It was outside his fashionable Williamson County (Tenn.) home.

"He was cordial, but refused to give an interview . . .

"That made me more determined — hell bent to find out something about the man nobody seems to know, the man who has remained in the shadow of one of show business's most exciting performers.

"I began contacting neighbors, relatives, some of his wife's friends, even the young boy who sometimes sells Dean-a-six-pack of Budweiser at the nearby general store.

"Sure, Carl comes in here sometimes, not too often," said Rich Hargis. 'Carl doesn't talk much. He's bashful.' . . .

Hance said he spent considerable time finding Dean, eventually locating him in Dean's own backyard. He describes the encounter:

"The Dean home is massive and is situated on a hill overlooking a small one-lane country road. A drive leads past a locked gate up the hill and into a gravel circular driveway.

"There were no 'Keep Out' or 'No Trespassing' signs in sight, but there was a large padlock on the gate.

"I finally made it to the house and knocked on its huge white front door. There was no answer. I knocked again. Then, from the rear of the house, came the sound of a door closing.

"Seconds later a tall, thin man walked from beside the house. He was dressed in brown corduroy pants, a brown plaid shirt and brown work shoes. He said, 'Hello.'

"We're looking for Mr. Dean," I said.

"Okay," he said.

"Are you Mr. Dean?"

"What's left of 'im," he said.

"After the introductions, I explained why we had come to his house.

"No. No interviews. Sorry.

"We'll go to some beer joint, sit down and talk all day. But not for print.

"I'm sorry. I just don't want to. I don't want to be interviewed."

Hance asked whether Dean would pose for pictures and was turned down. He continues:

"I persisted. He refused again. Then I told him I had been sent to get the story, and if I returned empty-handed it would be 'bad news.'

"I'm sorry," he said. "But I don't sign your paycheck."

"I tried again, asking wasn't it time he came out of hiding and said something. His wife had been on TV and in the papers talking about their marriage.

"Boys," he replied. "Look. Like I said, we'll go to some beer joint and talk, but that's about all."

"Then, Dean commented, 'To hell with all that other stuff!'"

Hance resorted to tracking down boyhood acquaintances of Dean, including Tommy Cayce Jr., now a juvenile court probation officer.

"Carl Dean was my best friend back at Central High School," said Cayce. "I used to call him 'Deano.' It's been years since I've seen him."

"But Deano was a great guy. We used to run around a lot in school. I'd let him drive my 1948 Chevy. He was alright. Kind of quiet. Pretty sharp student."

Another friend, Leroy Hollis, told Hance that Dean was "a hard worker," adding:

"He worked with his daddy in the paving business . . .

"We didn't associate too much. He kept to himself at school.

DOLLY PARTON'S HUSBAND, CARL DEAN, IS A LONER . . . some describe him as a 'Gary Cooper type'

'New Train — Same Rider' is another Tom T. Hall hit

CountryStyle News Service

Occasionally, when he lets serious matters interfere with his rollicking, partying lifestyle, Tom T. Hall remembers the old axiom: If you want to dance, you've got to pay the fiddler.

So he drifts, every now and then, into the studio. And what comes out is another superb, typical Tom T. effort — a record gluttonous Hall addicts can't send back to the kitchen, no matter how strong their will power. And Tom T. Hall's got another winner.

Thus, it is with "New Train — Same Rider," his first album since balling out of the Mercury stable and joining RCA. And it's a double treat, because the prodigal teams with two ladies who, music-wise, have been around: Maxine and Bonnie Brown (you remember them . . . they used to sing with a fellow named Jim Ed).

"Train" leaves the depot fast with Hall's ode to the outlaws, "Come On Back to Nashville" — destined to become a classic; accelerates through "Dark Hollow," steams into "Whisky" and "No One Feels My Hurt" and high balls it through "Mabel, You Have Been A Friend of Mine," and "I Wish I Loved Somebody Else."

The silly "May the Force Be With You Always" is the only excess baggage.
