

Guaranteed income experiment called waste of time

SEATTLE (UPI) — One of the most costly social experiments ever conducted by the federal government has led those who guided the program to conclude the government should not waste time worrying about family stability for welfare recipients.

The $60 million Income Maintenance Experiment, conducted in Seattle and Denver, found that a guaranteed income for welfare families resulted in an increase in the divorce rate.

"But if the income transfer (guaranteed income) were high enough, I think we'd find the same thing would hold true in higher income, middle-class families," said Joe Bell, project director for the experiment.

"We set out to find whether we had policies built into the welfare system that contributed to dissolution and came away concluding that whatever the system, whether guaranteed income or a job guarantee program, we're not like to improve the family stability," Bell said.

"This" the ultimate question becomes whether the government is going as we aren't structuring programs which fail to give people a choice, should be at all concerned about family stability," he said.

Preliminary results of the Income Maintenance Experiment, outlined last week at a national conference to explore the program's findings, predicted some changes on the cost of a full scale income maintenance program and the motivation of welfare families to work.

"But it failed to answer the question of family stability and left open the question of whether it can be resolved," Bell said.

He said the current welfare system generally prohibits women who have husbands in the home from receiving aid for dependent children. Welfare workers have long suggested the restriction contributed to the breakup of families.

The income maintenance program guaranteed a certain percentage of each grant to each member of the family involved and found "an independence effect" came into play and provided the opportunity for family separation.

"While the reasons for family breakup were very different, the results were the same as in the current welfare program," Bell said. He said the current system can lead to breakup because of government policy while the experiment provided the opportunity to break up as a matter of choice.

"A guaranteed jobs program could well have a similar result," Bell said, since the only way the second head of a household could get one of the guaranteed jobs "would be to split from the family."

Bell said that while it has never been government policy to specifically foster family stability, "it has sometimes seemed implicit in the mind of the public that this should be the government's role."

Satellite arms monitor plan given UN session

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing today proposed a revamping of global forums aimed at achieving disarmament and the creation of a satellite monitoring agency to assure compliance with agreements to limit the arms race.

Speaking to the special session of the United Nations General Assembly on disarmament, Giscard said in a reference to Soviet and U.S. domination of the current Geneva conference on the arms race, "The time has come to replace it with another body having more concrete ties to the United Nations system."

He said France, which has boycotted the Geneva talks, "will be prepared to discuss ways to establish such a body and would then participate in it."

Giscard also proposed creation of another forum to deal exclusively with disarmament in Europe. He said that on Friday "we will submit a plan detailing the goals, field of application and procedures for such a conference."

Giscard pointed out that previous disarmament agreements have been mostly fruitless due to the lack of adequate inspection procedures.

"This is why France is proposing studies on the creation of a satellite monitoring agency," he said.

He said the problems of armaments inspection were complex "but the advantages of such an agency for the international community are too obvious for each state not to do its part."

Vice President Walter Mondale said Wednesday the Soviet Union is building up its nuclear threat against Western Europe. That worries France, whose president wants the United Nations to set up a spy satellite system to monitor such military buildups.

Giscard's appearance before the 149-nation U.N. General Assembly came on the heels of Mondale's charge, before the same body Wednesday, of Soviet deployment of 14 triple-warhead SS-20 missile against Western Europe — a "substantial increase" in Moscow's nuclear threat to western Europe.

Shootout aloft foils prison escape

MARION, Ill. (UPI) — A helicopter pilot today said he wrestled a pistol from a woman hijacker while flying above the nation's chief maximum security prison and shot her to death to foil a daring escape planned by three inmates.

"We were all over the place everywhere except upside down. I felt sure we were going to crash," Allan Barklage, 30, St. Louis, said.

The woman, identified by the FBI as Mrs. Barbara Annette Oswald, 43, Richmond Heights, Mo., planned to free three inmates from the recreational yard of the Marion federal penitentiary, which replaced Alcatraz as the lockup for the most dangerous federal offenders.

After Barklage shot Mrs. Oswald, he landed the helicopter outside the prison fence. The inmates waiting to be picked up where other prisoners had congregated but guards spotted them running and picked them out of the crowd, prison officials said. The FBI would not release the inmates' names.

Barklage said Mrs. Oswald chartered the Bell 206B Jet Ranger with a $500 deposit at the Downtown Heliport in St. Louis Wednesday afternoon, saying she wanted to fly to Cape Girardeau, Mo., to inspect flooded property.

About halfway through the flight, "She pulled a pistol and ripped out the headset so I couldn't communicate with anyone," said Barklage, the chief pilot and manager of Fofaire Helicopter Co.

"She told me to fly east to the prison and land in the prison at a low level and come in about treetop height. She showed me a detailed map of the prison and who I should look for. She said I should look for a prisoner wearing a yellow shirt. She said that I would pick up three prisoners and then I would get further instructions."

"I told her that I wanted to get a better look at the prison and convinced her I should make a pass over at 2,500 feet. I convinced her that she would have to open the door because it would be difficult to get it open when we went in. She moved the gun from her right to her left hand to open the door and I noticed she had her finger on the trigger guard and not on the trigger. I grabbed her and got control of the gun."

But he said the woman told him, "I don't mind, I've got another one." As she started to raise up, I fired five times but I only know I hit her once, toward the ear," Barklage said. "The bullet came out the back of her head. She never got off a shot."

Barklage served in combat in Vietnam as a helicopter pilot.

Acting prison warden M.C. Lennon said the three inmates suspected of attempting to escape were in an "out of bounds" area of the prison yard, near the double fence that separates them from the outside world. They scurried to join the other inmates when the helicopter landed on the wrong side of the fence.

Hotel attorney seeks mistrial

RUPERT — The attorney defending Burley's Lee Hotel against charges of being a house of prostitution says a mistrial should be declared because a Times-News article about the hotel was prejudicial.

The hotel's attorney, Mike Douglas, lodged a motion for mistrial Wednesday with 5th District Court Judge Sherman Bellwood in Rupert, saying an article in Tuesday's Times-News on a pretrial hearing in the case was "extremely prejudicial to the defense."

In the motion, Douglas said a mistrial should be declared because an article in Tuesday's Times-News incorrectly reported that the hotel housekeeper and three women identified as "Jane Does" were arrested on a charge of soliciting for sexual intercourse.

A retraction of that statement was made in a story on the case in Wednesday's Times-News.

The women were detained, not arrested, in the hotel the night of a April 27 raid led by Cassia County Prosecutor Al Barrus and agents from the Idaho State Department of Law Enforcement.

In the civil complaint filed against the Lee Hotel, Barrus claimed three state investigators or agents had earlier been solicited to perform sexual intercourse for fees ranging from $20 to $100.

The women have not been charged with solicitation.

Douglas' motion for a mistrial said a statement in the Tuesday story referring to the Lee Hotel as "an infamous spot in southern Idaho" was also prejudicial.

The comments of Cassia County Prosecutor Al Barrus quoted in the story were also prejudicial, Douglas' motion said. Specifically, it said Barrus statement that he had heard two of the three "Jane Does" had left Burley was prejudicial.

The motion also says the editor violated the Idaho State Bar code of professional ethics by repeating a statement which he attributed to an inebriated man in the hotel the night of the raid and by commenting on the condition of some of the hotel's rooms.

Judge Bellwood said he would rule on the mistrial motion at the same time he rules on the defense motion argued at Tuesday's pretrial hearing to quash all evidence and dismiss the complaint.

The county is also seeking a temporary injunction closing the hotel for allegedly being a "moral nuisance." That request also will be ruled on by Bellwood at the same time.

"Times-News managing editor Chris Peck said the newspaper regretted the error and corrected it prominently on page one at the earliest possible date.

Barrus has until June 2 to file a brief and then Douglas has 10 days to file a brief in response before the judge rules.

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Tom Horley, 30, Campbell, Calif., was stood up for a date, and he is not taking it lying down.

He has filed suit in small claims court for $38 against Allyn Chesselet, also 30, San Francisco, because she broke an oral contract "to have dinner with him and see a show."

Ms. Chesselet says Horley is "nuts" to think she would pay.

But Horley said "most guys would be just as angry." He asserts he spent time, money and energy to plan the date.

Carter basks in victory

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter has won the biggest victory so far for his energy policy, but perils lie ahead for what he calls the key to his plan: the tax on crude oil.

The House-Senate energy conference committee voted Wednesday to approve a natural gas pricing plan lifting federal controls from newly produced gas by 1985.

The plan would insulate householders from higher gas prices at first.

The next big chore for the conferees is the tax package. The House approved something last year similar to what Carter proposed: taxes on crude oil and on industrial use of oil to boost conservation, but the Senate instead passed a package of mostly tax incentives designed to spur domestic production.

When the conferees get to that — if ever — is uncertain.

Although they approved the natural gas compromise Wednesday, 24 technical issues remained to be cleared up before conferees actually sign the natural gas bill and send it to House and Senate for a vote.

Some issues remain also on the three previous energy bills conferees worked on: energy conservation, industrial conversion to coal and utility rate reform.

Leaders differ on whether to have the conference go ahead and work on energy taxes or wait until Congress acts on the non-tax issues.

"The crude oil tax would in effect raise the price charged a refiner for domestic oil to the world oil price.

Ford favors more presidential latitude

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former President Gerald Ford said today Congress has "encroached much too far" on presidential authority to respond to foreign policy crises and now ought to back off.

Ford said he had fought to get presidential "flexibility" restored when he was in office and now believes President Carter is feeling "that need now."

"I have said emphatically, repeatedly that I believe Congress has encroached much too far on the prerogatives of the commander in chief to conduct foreign policy," Ford told a news conference.

"The president does need flexibility," previous presidents had that authority," Ford said, noting with a reference to the Vietnam War.

Court ponder souper script

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Nettie divorced John and married Robert but left him and filed for divorce before becoming pregnant. Her divorce was granted and she remarried John before the baby was born.

The baby, now almost 6 1/2 years-old now, wants part of the $10 million estate of a child born to Robert's second wife before she remarried John.

Continued?

So is the man who must decide the case.

"It does sound sort of like the script from a soap opera, doesn't it," Marion County Probate Judge Victor Plau said Wednesday. "It seems like almost everyone involved in this case was married and divorced a couple of times."

Plau must decide who will share in slain grocery heiress Marjorie Jackson's estate.

Mrs. Jackson, 66 at the time she was shot and left to bleed to death a year ago during a multi-million-dollar burglary at her northside home, left no will. So under Indiana law, the estate will go to her nearest relatives.

Robert O'Connell, Koers filed a claim as Mrs. Jackson's half-sister. The two women had the same mother, but Mrs. Koers testified that Marjorie's father was Jessie Montgomery, a brother of their mother after her first husband died and before she married Robert O'Connell.

Vivian Walls has also filed a claim, saying she believed until last year that her father was John Murnan, but she now believes she legally is the child of O'Connell. She said that makes her legally a half-sister to Marjorie Jackson and on equal footing with Mrs. Koers to share the estate.

... who gets estate?

The divorce between O'Connell and Nettie Murnan — who is now 94 and living in Michigan — was not final when she was conceived, even though Nettie had remarried John before Vivian was born, Vivian's attorney said.

"I haven't conceived during a marriage is presumed to be the legal issue of the man to whom the woman is married," Plau said, noting Nettie filed for divorce June 17, 1912; Vivian was conceived about Aug. 31 and the divorce became final Dec. 20.

Plau said even if he grants Mrs.

Walls' request for ruling that she legally is O'Connell's child, she would not necessarily be declared an heir, since Mrs. Koers has asked him to rule O'Connell was not Mrs. Jackson's legal father.

"Under the law at the time, if a man married a woman who had a child before he was married and publicly acknowledged the child as his, it was legally his legitimate child even if biologically he was not the father," Plau said. "He may rule later on your request — or the case will go to trial July 24."

Mrs. Jackson inherited about $15 million from her husband, Chester, whose father had founded the Standard Food Stores and who made millions more off Illinois coal land.

Legion starts Kolwezi pullout

KINSHASA, Zaïre (UPI) — French Legionnaires today made final sweeps through war-torn Shaba province looking for several hundred rebels hiding out in the bush and began a 36-hour pullout from the copper-mining town of Kolwezi.

In Paris, the defense ministry said four Legionnaires had been killed in the operation that began last Friday to drive the insurgents from Kolwezi and ended in the slaughter of an estimated 200 whites.

A spokesman for the Congolese National Liberation Front, the political force behind the insurgents, said in Brussels they had captured seven French soldiers in their retreat from Kolwezi but denied reports they had seized white civilian hostages.

Military sources said the French troops were making final sweeps around Kolwezi to try to break the back of the rebels before completing their departure from the Kolwezi area within 36 hours.

But the sources estimated up to 500 invaders were hiding out in the forest, apparently still disciplined and capable of striking at targets throughout the copper-rich province.

Western diplomats in Kinshasa expressed fears the insurgents might attack Kolwezi again, they said they had expected the French to stay on for several weeks.

The French defense ministry announced the paratroopers were leaving for the province capital of Lubumbashi, 170 miles southeast of Kolwezi, for a rest from a week of combat.

It said the pullout was the first stage of the paratroopers' return to France.

A French military detachment Wednesday moved into Likasi, 63 miles east of Kolwezi, to bolster the confidence of whites shaken by Kolwezi massacre, the military sources in Kinshasa said. Other units were reported already in Lubumbashi.

Kolwezi, ravaged by nine days of rebel occupation, was showing signs of returning to life with the restoration of some electricity for the first time in a week.

A group of high-level mining officials arrived the town to survey the situation at the copper and cobalt mines and several hundred black workers showed up at the mines Wednesday ready to work, officials said.

The defense ministry in Paris denied reports the Legionnaires were pursuing the fleeing rebels in an attempt to rescue the 60 whites.

"We are in Zaïre on a strictly humanitarian mission which is near completion," a military spokesman said, adding it was up to Zaïrean troops to chase the rebels as they retreat toward neighboring Angola and Zambia.

On Wednesday, officials in Kinshasa said the Legionnaires had set out in camouflaged jeeps after reconnaissance aircraft spotted a rebel convoy of about 60 trucks and stolen cars racing along a dirt road near the Benguela railroad line that runs from Zaïre to Marxist Angola.

"The hostages are clearly an insurance against attack by the Legionnaires," a Western diplomat said. "But once the rebels reach the border, the whites will become a burden and they'll have no further use for them."

"We fear the worst," the diplomat said. Angola has said it would ensure the safety of any Europeans found on its territory, but would call out the army to resist any attempt at "hot pursuit" across its frontier.

"Another fleeing rebel column, their stolen cars and trucks laden with goods looted from white homes in Kolwezi, was reported moving through northwestern Zambia out of reach of the French forces.

Zambian army troops Wednesday arrested three truckloads of local tribesmen near the Zambia-Zaïre border, retreating from the same Lunda tribe that lives in the area where the borders of Zambia, Zaïre and Angola meet, were taken to Mwinilunga, 360 miles northwest of Lusaka, for questioning, the tribesmen said.

Zambian soldiers declined to comment on the arrests, which authorities in Lusaka have not confirmed. The soldiers ordered western correspondents from the area and prevented photographers from taking pictures.

Satellite monitoring proposed

Foreign Secretary Andrei Gromyko, for something more pressing than a utopian world free of weapons.

Gromyko had a round of SALT mini-talks set for today with Secretary of State Cyrus Vance. Then, later this week, the Russian will fly to Washington to take up the same subject — in even more detail — with President Carter.

Gromyko insisted without flinching Tuesday when Montale lambasted Moscow for installing the SS-20s within striking range of not only Western Europe, but also Africa and the Middle East — a move "totally contrary to all that this special session seeks to achieve."

The SS-20 is no insignificant weapon, said Montale. Each of its three warheads carries a 500-kiloton nuclear kick — 25 times that of the U.S. atomic bombs that destroyed Hiroshima and Nagasaki in World War II.

Neutral Sweden also expressed concern about the SS-20 after lambasting the neutron bomb, which is still kept in abeyance in U.S. defense plans for western Europe.

"This missile," Swedish Prime Minister Thorbjorn Fälldin said, "could be employed with great precision and terrific destructive power."

Would this indicate an appeal for compromise in the upcoming U.S.-Soviet talks? Scrap the neutron bomb and scrap the SS-20?

Proposals for cutting up the arms race were expected to come up a dime-a-dozen in the assembly's two and a half week debate. Some serious and realistic, others utopian and wishful thinking.

Realistic was Giscard's idea of a "world satellite monitoring agency." Never mind idealistic professions. He suggests to establish a U.N.-controlled system of watchdog satellites that would survey the military wherever in the Soviet Union, the United States or in their detente orbit. Modern technology could spot anything suspicious, within 10 yards or less.

No details about death

BOISE (UPI) — Morrison-Knudsen Co. said today the firm still has a company on how Lonnie Glen Jr., a repressed employee found dead in Zaïre, died.

Spokesman Bob Smith said no word has been received other than confirmation that Glen, believed to be the first American killed when fighting broke out in Kolwezi two weeks ago, was found dead. His wife and daughter were evacuated a week ago when Glen was missing.

"We haven't heard any word yet," Smith said. "We don't know what happened."

Glen, of Yerington, Nev., was one of two M-K employees injured in the fighting. A Boise man was shot but made it to a hospital and is recovering.

Legal form copied in embattled will

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Howard Hughes was a neurotic man with an extreme fear of death who used "lawyer talk" in his handwritten will which was copied from a legal form, a Nevada jury was told Wednesday.

"He was a man who was neurotic, a man who had a strange fear of death. We all have it. Hughes was extreme," attorney Harold Rhoden told the jury in the third day of final arguments. He is trying to convince the panel the so-called "Mormon Will" was written by Hughes.

District Judge Keith Hayes told the jury the case would be recessed until next Tuesday because of personal reasons. At that time Rhoden will complete his arguments.

Rhoden told the jury Wednesday that a person contemplated death while writing a will.

"Hughes was thoughtful. He was thinking. He must have been copying (the first part of the will). This is 'lawyer talk.' He (Hughes) was copying from some type of legal form.

"His mind was on his last will. His mind was on death. He wrote slowly," said Rhoden.

The three-page handwritten document, found in the Mormon Church headquarters in 1976 in Salt Lake City, contains numerous pen lifts and overwritings, which some experts explain as forgery characteristics while others contend results from a person who writes slowly.

Rhoden spent most of Wednesday attacking testimony of American handwriting experts who told the jury during the seven month trial that the purported Hughes will is a fake.

Los Angeles handwriting expert Jack Harris was described by Rhoden as a man who lacked "integrity, honesty and competence" and who "insulted the jury" by assuming the panel would not think for itself and check the evidence.

Rhoden, substitute executor of the will and the man in line to become administrator of the Hughes empire if the jury decides the will is authentic discounted the testimony of seven expert witnesses called by the other side which contends the document is phony.

Western states benefit from federal aid grants

DENVER (UPI) — Twenty-one states paid more to the federal government in fiscal 1977 than they received in federal grants-in-aid to state and local governments, according to figures released Wednesday by the Tax Foundation Inc.

Twenty-nine states and the District of Columbia received more than they gave, the foundation reported.

The Tax Foundation, a private, non-profit research organization, analyzed the grants-in-aid program, which was designed to redistribute federal tax revenues among states the District of Columbia. Last year, the federal government distributed about $66 billion in grants-in-aid.

The list of grants consists of 97 different programs, ranging from "animal and plant inspection services" to "water resources research," offered by virtually all the departments of the federal government.

To calculate how much each state contributed in tax dollars, compared to what it got back from the federal government, the Tax Foundation used a special formula developed by its own economists.

According to the foundation's calculations, Colorado taxpayers paid $1.12 in fiscal 1977 for each dollar of federal aid.

Colorado state and local governments got about $59.6 million in grants-in-aid during fiscal 1977, said the foundation, but taxpayers gave $78.7 million to federal coffers during the same period.

Ten years ago, Colorado contributed only 72 cents for every dollar sent back. The state was in the same "windfall" position 20 years ago, when it paid 61 cents to the federal government for every dollar's worth of aid.

Last year, Indiana led the list of states that contributed more than they got, chipping in $1.43 for every dollar received. Colorado ranked 15th among the states that contributed more than they received.

The biggest return last year was realized by the District of Columbia, which contributed only 29 cents for every dollar's worth of federal aid. Next in line was Vermont, which contributed 53 cents for every dollar received.

Pennsylvania broke even last year, getting a dollar in federal aid for every dollar the state's taxpayers contributed. Of the 13 Western states, only Colorado, California and Washington gave more than they received in grants-in-aid last year. California paid $1.06 for each dollar received and Washington contributed $1.14

Posts vacated

MOSCOW (UPI) — Sherman Carter and Thomas Richardson have resigned as vice presidents at the University of Idaho, effective July 1.

Carter, vice president for finance, is leaving to accept a similar post at the University of Alaska. He has been at Idaho since 1969. Richardson will become chairman of the Department of Music at the University of Idaho.

Earlier, Dr. Robert Conrod resigned as academic vice president to return to teaching history.

Task force pared

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Los Angeles Police Department's Strangler Task Force, which included 142 officers and civilians earlier this year, will be cut to 24 investigators next month.

Police Comdr. William Booth announced Tuesday that 11 more persons will be dropped June 3 — leaving 22 sworn officers and two civilians still working on the case.

Police have named four possible suspects at various points in the probe, but later cleared two of them and have not charged anyone in the string of slayings of 13 girls and young women that began last fall.

The last apparent Strangler victim — Cindy Lee Hudspeth, 20, of Glendale — was found dead Feb. 16. Clues and new leads have dwindled since then to less than 10 telephone calls a day, police said, compared with about 150 a day three months ago.

"It's like finding a thread and starting to unravel it," Glendale Police Chief Duane Baker explained.

Booth and Baker both said the task force will now concentrate on following up clues it already has.

MEET ONE OF OUR BEST

FRED T. LEWIS, FIC
325 S. G. Lane
Twin Falls

Once a year we at Aid Association for Lutherans take a moment to recognize some of our best people. You've just met one of them.

Fred was the leading representative in 1977 in the Thomas Fabricius Agency, Gravelly. We're proud of him. And we want to tell you about it.

What's it take to be one of the best at AAL? Well, it takes training and experience — so Lutheran families get the best coverage possible. It takes genuine interest in the fraternal and benevolent activities of AAL local branches. And it takes a special kind of dedication to AAL's concern for others.

We think that describes Fred pretty well.

Steel price increase warning issued

NEW YORK (UPI) — U.S. Steel Chairman Edgar B. Speer has warned the Carter administration that if inflation is not held under control, the steel industry will have to raise prices at least 7 percent more this year.

"Labor has to work to make a commitment, government has to make a commitment, and the private sector has to make a commitment," Speer said of the need to combat inflation. "The private sector is only one element."

The annual rate of inflation was 9 percent in the first quarter.

But Speer said Wednesday at the annual meeting of the industry's trade association, the American Iron and Steel Institute, that "Assuming an 8 percent inflation rate and what's in place right now, it would take a minimum 7 percent increase in prices" to cover rising costs.

"The industry is going to have to recoup its increased costs—either through increased productivity or a combination of increased productivity and increased prices," the leader of the nation's largest steelmaker said.

Inland Steel Chairman Frederick G. Jaicks and National Steel Chairman George A. Stinson identified rising energy and transportation costs as the main pressures behind a possible third round of price hikes in 1978.

"The industry already has raised prices 7 percent this year."

Speer also urged the industry to build new steel plants—known as greenfield plants—rather than just modernize and replace existing facilities.

"I am convinced that our tomorrow must be built on greenfield sites if we are to maintain our current competitive position," Speer said. "We are going to have to build new greenfield plants at a faster pace than about one every five years that we have averaged in the past several decades."

But Speer said "no" when he was asked if his company now has the necessary cash flow to build its proposed $5 billion integrated mill at Conneaut, Ohio, on the Ohio-Pennsylvania border.

Discussing the industry's poor cash flow, Speer called for an end to tax changes and for the government to "get the hell out of our business."

He also labeled the trigger price system, which is designed to speed antidumping action against foreign steelmakers "a Band-Aid in lieu of enforcing the dumping laws of this country."

Others were pessimistic that the building of new plants will be soon possible.

EDGAR B. SPEER cites joint roles

"I can't bring myself to predict the kinds-of conditions which will make possible the building of a greenfield steelmaking plant in this country—anytime soon," Armco Chairman C.W. Verity Jr. said.

Last October, a study by the White House Council on Wage and Price Stability found greenfield expansion a "less attractive" way to increase capacity than modernizing existing facilities, largely because of high construction costs.

Classic getaway

VASSAR, Mich. (UPI) — It was a classic getaway scene.

With police in hot pursuit, their quarry dashed down the middle of the town's main street — jumping over the hoods of a few cars on his way — as shoppers gawked in disbelief and traffic came to a standstill.

The object of all the attention was a deer that for some reason decided to leave the woods Wednesday and roam the streets of Vassar.

JFK files studied

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A federal judge is reviewing more than 200 pages of still-secret files on the assassination of President Kennedy and will decide if they should be made public despite objections from the Justice Department and intelligence agencies.

Release of the documents is being sought by Michael Levy, a 31-year-old pharmacist, who said he previously had been told by the various agencies that the documents did not exist.

Troopers arrest suspects in Kansas officer's death

HERINGTON, Kan. (UPI) — A young Kansas Highway Patrol officer, whose wife is expecting their first child, was shot to death on the Kansas Turnpike Wednesday.

State troopers arrested three suspects.

The three men were arrested after the slaying of Conroy G. O'Brien, 26, a three-and-one-half-year veteran of the Highway Patrol. The suspects were captured in rolling farmlands about four miles south of town.

O'Brien was shot near the Matfield Green rest stop on Interstate 35 between 4 a.m. and 6 a.m., the patrol said.

The slain trooper, a native of Abbeville, Kan., living in Mulvane, was stationed in Wichita and was assigned to the turnpike patrol.

"He worked for a lot of farmers around here while he was going to school," said one of O'Brien's former neighbors in Abbeville. "I've heard them say he always did want to be a cop. I just can't believe this has happened."

The trooper, the third patrolman slain in the line of duty, was shot once in the head, apparently as he stood outside his car parked on the shoulder of the northbound lanes of the highway. His body was found in a ditch 60 feet from the patrol vehicle.

Authorities said the suspects, driving a white and brown Mercury with Mississippi license plates, were seen by a trooper who picked the car up on radar on U.S. 77 about four miles south of Herington.

The trooper, Charles Smith, said that as he turned his vehicle, the southbound Mercury turned east onto a dead-end county road. When the car reached the end of the road, the suspects leaped out and began firing at the patrol car.

"They were hellacious shots," said a highway patrol spokesman. "They put six shots in the windshield that you could cover with the palm of your hand."

The trooper returned the gunfire, hitting one of the suspects, identified as Jimmie K. Neims, 31, Tulsa, Okla. Neims and another suspect were captured at 9:52 a.m., the third at 11:52 a.m.

Neims was listed in satisfactory condition in St. John's Hospital in Salina Wednesday where he was receiving treatment for bullet fragments in the left eye.

The other two suspects, Walter Myrick, 25, Tulsa, and Stanford Swain, 21, Tulsa were not injured.

Neims is believed wanted for the armed robbery of a Springfield, Mo., jewelry store last month that netted handily an estimated $75,000-$100,000. He is also wanted by authorities in Huntsville, Texas, for parole violations while serving a four-year sentence for burglary.

Potential oil areas untapped

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Almost half of the world's potential oil fields lie in underdeveloped nations and have yet to be tapped, the World Bank says.

The bank's new forecast reports those fields may hold a long-ignored bonanza — larger than the combined reserves of Alaska and the North Sea — that could turn some developing nations from oil importers to exporters during the next decade.

Although developing nations outside the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries now account for only about 6 percent of world production, it says they have more than 40 percent of the world's prospective oil producing areas.

"Vast sedimentary" areas that probably contain 75 percent of all potential petroleum resources for Latin America, 80 percent of those of Africa and 95 percent of Asia and the Far East are yet to be intensely prospected and developed," the forecast says.

The bank said Wednesday it is ready to stake up to $500 million a year on new programs to help about 45 developing nations exploit their oil and natural gas riches.

Officials predicted the developing nations — the hardest hit by price hikes since 1973 — could ease their own energy and financial crunch with such development.

HOW TO PROTECT YOURSELF FROM INCOME TAX OPPRESSION

Thousands of taxpayers are needlessly subjecting themselves to IRS oppression and mental torture every year due to ignorance of their legal and constitutional rights as decreed by the Supreme Court. There is absolutely no need for anyone to endure it any longer. If you don't know what to do, when the tax man calls, then you should not fail to See and Hear MARVIN L. COOLEY.

Mr. Cooley tells it like it is; he tells the truth; and when he speaks, people listen! He will tell you:

- How to lawfully refuse an IRS audit
- How to lawfully decline to answer questions on a 1040 tax return
- How to deal with additional assessments and petition the tax court without having to employ expensive legal assistance
- The proper legal defenses for omitting to make any return at all

PLUS

Written "How To" material will be available at the seminar.

Mr. Cooley enthusiastically and dynamically covers these timely topics. He presents his point of view with convincing force.

If an income tax crisis struck you unexpectedly, would you be prepared? Would you know what to do? Are you and your family prepared to deal with it? There is a way, a very good way for you to prepare. Listen to Marvin L. Cooley!

Consider this:

Senator Henry Bellmon of Oklahoma testifying before the Finance Committee October 2, 1969 said: "In a recent conversation with an official at the Internal Revenue Service, I was amazed when he told me that, 'if the taxpayers of this country ever discover that the Internal Revenue Service operates on 90% bluff, the entire system will collapse.'"

The Seventh Circuit Court, in U.S. vs. Dickerson, 413 F.2d 1111, said: "Only a rare taxpayer would be likely to know that he could refuse to produce his records to IRS agents."

The Supreme Court case of Garner vs. U.S.; 424 U.S. 648, proves, without doubt, that there is a lawful way for taxpayers to refuse to answer questions on a 1040 tax return.

Senator Long of Missouri, after conducting hearings on IRS abuses, said: "Do all lawyers even know what the obligations of taxpayers are as to record keeping, record producing, and question answering? The answer seems to be 'No.'"

MR. COOLEY is nationally known for his dedication to the fight against what he believes to be the tyrannical and unjust practices of the IRS. He has spent more than 200 hrs. on T.V. and radio talk shows nationwide. He is married and the father of ten children. He is largely self-educated and exceptionally well-read in constitutional and case law; and he has acquired much knowledge and information from his ten years experience in battling IRS, and assisting others.

If unable to attend, cassette tapes of the seminar are available from Tax Facts Council, 525 E. Baseline Rd., Mesa, Ar. 85204. Price: $18.00.

Press ahead with Bruneau study

A comprehensive study of diverting Snake River water to irrigate farmland south of Bliss and Hammett has been proposed and endorsed. Now it should be done.

Although some would argue that putting new farmland into production is not necessarily a virtue in these days of over production and surplus, the plan for the new diversion is so logical in its initial form that it is obviously worthy of at least a feasibility study.

The project would serve about 80,000 acres presently being farmed and up to 250,000 total acres, including new farmland which could be developed on what is called the Bruneau Plateau. Some of the land presently being farmed in that area may go out of production soon because it is getting too expensive to farm.

The program would be using water that currently is going unused down the Snake River. It would be a good way to protect the Snake River water from use by other states. In short, such a program would mean Idaho would be using more of Idaho's water.

If enough interest is shown in the program, it will be presented to the legislature for consideration of financing the planned two-year study. By initial reactions, there appears to be enough interest for the study. Now it remains for this interest to emphatically channel its way to The Idaho Water Resources Department and then to the powers that be in Boise.

Polishing up the city band

On summer nights the music drifts through the elms and over the rooftops of downtown Twin Falls. Retired farmers sit on park benches listening to the Twin Falls city band while kids scurry through the trees and lovers eat picnic dinners to the notes of John Philip Sousa.

Backyard audiences to the north and east of the city bandshell tap their toes to the sound of the brass. For nearly 65 years, the Twin Falls city band has camped up a musicfest storm on the Thursday nights of summer.

While other Idaho cities have found it inappropriate or unnecessary to support a city band, the Twin Falls town fathers have always allocated a few dollars in the budget to clean the band uniforms and replace the skins on the city-owned kettle drums. Already this year the city band has received an extra $500 appropriation to repair the drums and clean the uniforms. And the band got its usual $3000 funding for the token salaries paid to the 40 or so members of the troupe.

But as city councilman Gordon Cox, a 20-year trumpet and baritone player knows, the city band's sheet music is a tattered reminder of how little city money has been spent on the band in recent years.

And the band uniforms, purchased in 1966, show the wear of 13 seasons.

For $1000 more, Cox says the city band could buy its own music and replace the shiny-seated uniforms with a newer cut of pant.

The Twin Falls city budget this year is around $8 million.

A $1000 expenditure for new band music and uniforms would polish up considerably one of the finest traditions in Twin Falls.

How many ways to use mice?

NEW YORK — This is no time to be a mouse. Several days ago, by without another newspaper report that some four mice had been pressed into a laboratory and subjected to deadly experiments. Last week there was the story of the mouse who had been stuffed with well-done hamburger until he developed cancer. If it isn't hamburger a mouse is being stuffed with, it's saccharin, red-dye No. 2, pork treated with nitriles, cigarette smoke. You name it and some scientist will try it out on a mouse.

here, for example, who has a cauliflower ear. This results from an experiment conducted by a research team to test a theory that the telephone leads to slight head pressure. This particular mouse was shanghaied on Eighth Avenue and taken to a laboratory in which he causes cauliflower ear hasn't been published yet. It is being held back for release some dull week when there is no grimmer news from the hospitals to keep public anxiety at desperate heights. A household mouse of whom we are rather fond disappeared last winter and turned up the other day after a long absence, looking 10 years older. The bags under her eyes suggested she had been held by scientists and injected with three-fifths of bourbon daily to test a theory that alcohol leads to bloodshot eyes.

and, eventually, irreversible coma. After three weeks during which the Nixon memoirs were read to her 16 hours a day, the mouse became lethargic, morose and developed an intense hostility toward everyone involved in the former president's downfall. By then, however, the scientists who had been reading her had each entered irreversible coma, which made her easy prey for another group of researchers who wanted to test the theory that, at 85 a pound, the book was just as economical a buy as beef.

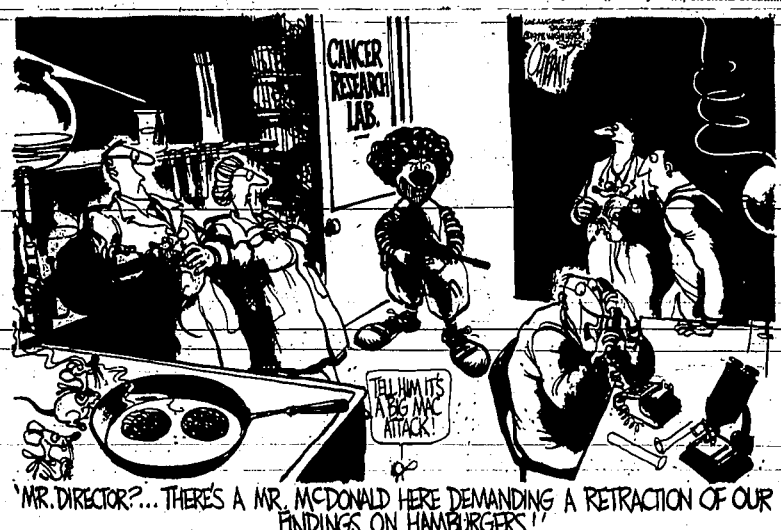

RUSSELL BAKER

Not long ago a scientist planted coins in mice and, after getting the usual results, announced that money causes cancer. He was reprimanded by the medical profession for lack of seriousness which was not startling. The medical profession's interest in upholding the good reputation of money is comparable to the tobacco industry's stake in maintaining the harmlessness of cigarettes.

was required to keep a telephone receiver pressed to his ear eighteen hours a day. After six weeks his ear looked like the ear of an old boxer mouse who had stayed on in the ring 10 years after he should have hung up the gloves.

It was like trying to swat a fly with the states pound club. Next month the research team will publish its findings: "R.N. The Memoirs of Richard Nixon" is no good for killing mice.

It is good to have the poor creature back, but she disdains the $1.39 cheese we put out for her nightly. Hooked on the quality stuff, I suppose.

Surviving sailors meet again

CHICAGO — Three men in a tiny hotel room. It is time for their annual reunion again, and so they have come. The reunions used to be crowded and boisterous and full of talk about women and the sea. Now it is just the three of them, and an open bottle of Early Times sitting in the bathroom sink.

"We don't go out to a bar," Mr. Marshall said. "We don't belong in a bar. We don't want to get in anyone's way. The time will come when you know you don't fit. The bartender knows it, you know it, and everybody else in there knows you don't fit."

Mr. Zislenko's wife has been dead for 20 years. Mr. Marshall was married for 50 years. The three sailors said that seeing each other once a year was still important to them, even though the reunion is slow to three.

"Used to be, we'd all get drunk and run on the street car," said Ray Marshall, 79, one of the surviving three. "I remember once we had a golf outing. We never got off the second tee."

"The truth of the matter is, when you hit our age, you can't promise anything," Mr. Marshall said. "As long as God lets our bodies work, we'll have our reunion. No one wants to be in a last man's club."

"I haven't got very much to say. There's not much I can add to it." "We may even tell each other a lie once in a while," said Mr. Marshall.

Weapon sales deserve notice

By MANTHA ANGLE and ROBERT WALTERS WASHINGTON (UPI) — Although the export of jet fighters to the Middle East has become the topic of considerable public debate, too little attention has been paid to this country's sale of less sophisticated but highly lethal equipment to many of the world's most undemocratic governments.

Customers for such equipment include many of the world's most notorious secret police organizations — such as Chile's DIA and Iran's SAVAK — known for their incarceration of civilian dissidents and suppression of popular uprisings.

Pedaling our way toward more energy

WASHINGTON — Ben Blumberg, Power Systems Program manager in Sunnyvale, Calif., has a solution to the energy problem that should be followed up. Mr. Blumberg wants to supply the entire country with pedal machines, similar to stationary bicycles, and have Americans produce their own power while they are doing something else.

ART BUCHWALD

"If each person in the United States is given a pedal machine connected to a generator, the total energy output would equal 40 nuclear power plants." "Operation of these machines for just four hours a day would save 100 million barrels of oil burned to generate electricity each year."

Blumberg advocates putting machines in schools, where children could generate their own electricity while they were learning. The machines would replace desks and the children would be getting much-needed exercise from which they would all benefit.

Blumberg advocates a plan whereby each family would be solely responsible for the amount of energy it produced. Everyone's meter would be set to zero as soon as they received their pedal machines.

Blumberg knows he will face opposition from the lobbyists and fuel companies who could lose if Americans go for his plan. But he is prepared to fight for it anyway. "Once people discover they can make their own electricity, instead of depending on someone else, they will demand their pedal machines and the Department of Energy will have to supply them. A whole new industry will be born, and this nation, which has gone soft physically and mentally, will soon have a population of men and women and children with the strongest legs in the world."

Carlsbad new home for Hall

United Press International NEW NEIGHBOR

from W.W. "Doc" Taylor of Dallas in return for helping place $10 million in state retirement funds with Taylor's investment firm. Carlsbad is a small town on the Southern California coast, 23 miles south of San Clemente — home of another former political figure.

ANew PRECEDENT?

It might just work. After all, a California court ruled a year ago in a suit against Lee Marvin that mistresses have the same financial rights as legal wives once the relationship ends. Now Tom Horley of Campbell, Calif., is suing Alvin Chesselet in small claims court in San Francisco for $8 because she broke an "oral contract" by standing him up for a date. Ms. Chesselet says Horley is "nuts." Horley says he's mad — "most guys would be just as angry" if they had spent time, money and energy planning the evening — for nothing. Horley's next date with Ms. Chesselet is July 24 — in court.

BETTER LATE — FERIOD

What to do when you're late for your inauguration? A little more pressure on the gas pedal would help, as long as there aren't any cops around — as there were last Tuesday in Sulphur City, La. Mayor Dennis Sumpter, late to his swearing-in, was doing 42 mph in a 25-mph — and was stopped by one of his own policemen. Sumpter says he offered no alibi but pulled out his wallet and paid the $19 ticket on the spot. "I'm not above the law," Sumpter says.

John Ehrlichman reviews feelings

WASHINGTON (UPI) —

Former White House aide John Ehrlichman predicted today that some of the still-secret Nixon-taped conversations "are going to make fascinating listening" someday.

Ehrlichman, Richard Nixon's assistant for domestic affairs, is free on parole from his one-to-four-year sentence for conspiracy in the Watergate scandal.

He reviewed his feelings about being in the highest seats of power, about being in control, about Nixon and about the media in a post-midnight interview with Larry King on the Mutual Broadcasting System.

After a 1½-hour interview, he answered telephone calls from the public for another couple of hours.

He had no harsh words about Nixon, who he variously described as "remote ... an extraordinary man of great abilities and talents ... an enormously complex man."

Ehrlichman said he first learned about the White House taping system when the rest of the world did — during the televised Senate Watergate hearings.

He was not critical of Nixon and presidential aide H.R.

Haldeman for keeping him in the dark about the taping, but said "I would rather have known about it."

Looking back some of the meetings in the Oval Office, Ehrlichman said with a laugh, "There are some conversations that are going to make fascinating listening for the American people — some of these days."

Ehrlichman, who had grown long hair and a heavy beard before he entered prison, once again had close-cropped hair and was clean shaven today. He appeared relaxed during the questioning; he was in short sleeves, wore rimless glasses, and smiled easily.

He said he thought Gerald Ford was right to pardon Richard Nixon, and the act was the best thing for the country. "If the resignation and the pardon were a package, it was sensible," he said. "If not, then it was a statesmanlike act by Mr. Ford."

But he said he believes Ford should then have announced that he would not seek the presidency — on his own because "I'm not willing to give the nation a head-on view without" and probably doomed the campaign from the start.

Betty's portrait officially unveiled

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former first lady Betty Ford, in a now-rare public appearance, heard President Carter call her "perhaps" the most popular person in the country.

Mrs. Ford accompanied her husband to the White House Wednesday for the unveiling of their official portraits which will be hung in the Great Hall after spending a few days on easels in the East Room.

Accented by reporters, she ducked all questions except about how she was feeling. "Very wonderful," she said.

The Felix de Costo portrait of Mrs. Ford, in a pale blue chiffon gown, will replace the portrait of Jacqueline Kennedy, which will be shifted to the ground floor of the East Lobby.

Mrs. Ford, in a mauve silk two-piece dress, was warmly received. It was one of her first public appearances since being released from a hospital where she battled alcoholism and overdependence on drugs.

Carter asked Ford how his wife was doing. "She's doing very, very well, just beautifully," Ford said. "That's just great," said Carter.

"We're very, very proud of her," Ford said. "I know you are," said Carter. He added that Mrs. Ford "may be the most popular person in the country."

Her husband agreed.

First tax lid petitions filed

BOISE (UPI) — A group seeking voter approval of a proposal to limit property tax increases to 1 percent of market value handed over the proposal to the Secretary of State Wednesday. The first petitions to place the question on the November general election ballot.

The Idaho Property Tax Association, which is sponsoring the drive, presented nearly 7,000 certified names from Ada, Kootenai and Bonner County. Nearly 4,000 of the signatures were from Kootenai County.

At the same time, the organization submitted nearly 5,500 voters to place on the November ballot an initiative to allow counties to make it permissive rather than mandatory counties to enforce the Land Use Planning Act of 1977.

Congolese front strongest of Zaire opposition groups

BRUSSELS, Belgium — The Congolese National Liberation Front, whose forces invaded Shaba Province in Zaire from Angola earlier this month, has established itself as the strongest of the many opposition movements trying to end President Mobutu Sese Seko's 13-year rule, in the view of diplomats and officials here.

The front's immediate aim, according to its European spokesman, Medar Mblondo, is to take control of Shaba's rich mines, paralyze Zaire's already shaky economy and provoke a general uprising.

"We are a political-military force dedicated to overthrowing the fascist neo-colonialist Mobutu regime," he said Tuesday. He asserted that the front favored a united Zaire and enjoyed widespread support throughout the country.

Mblondo and other representatives of the front interviewed at the organization's European headquarters here said that the invasion of Shaba, the second in 14 months, had been limited to exploit both signs of discontent in the Zairian Army and popular dissatisfaction caused by the country's deepening economic troubles.

They contended that the front's forces might have committed atrocities against Europeans in the copper-mining town of Kolwezi last week, attributing this to anger and fear when they heard of plans by Belgium and France to send in paratroops. But they accused the Zairian Army of killing and looting as well in a government-backed effort to persuade the French troops to remain in Shaba and encourage other African countries to send in forces to protect the mines.

"The moment the foreign troops leave, we will retake Kolwezi," Mblondo said.

Several European refugees returning here from Kolwezi confirmed this picture of events, saying that the killing started only when word of French and Belgian intervention reached the mining center last Wednesday and asserting that the Zairian troops also committed atrocities.

It is generally accepted that the front did not harm foreigners during its invasion of Shaba last year, but its forces did not reach Kolwezi, where most foreigners in the province live.

Belgian officials question the front's assertion that it is a national opposition movement with support throughout the country. They believe its support in Zaire is confined to the Lunda-speaking groups in Shaba Province, who have never fully accepted the authority of the Mobutu regime in Kinshasa 800 miles away.

The front's cutting edge, these officials say, is a band of mercenaries who have lived much of their lives in Angola but now want to return to Shaba Province.

The original nucleus of this force was the Katanga gendarmes, who supported an unsuccessful secessionist movement in Katanga, as Shaba was then called, in the early 1960s.

Harshly treated by President Mobutu, many of the gendarmes went into exile among the Lunda of neighboring Angola and Zambia. They earned the gratitude of Angola's Marxist rulers by fighting on their side against opponents backed by President Mobutu during the civil war that followed Portugal's withdrawal from its former colony.

Although few of the original gendarmes are thought to remain in the front's forces today, Belgian experts believe their children and relatives are often active supporters.

Over the years, other Lunda people dissatisfied with the Mobutu regime have joined them in Angola. These include the front's present commander, Col. Nathaniel Mbumba, who was police chief in Kolwezi until he had a falling out with Jean-Foster Manzikail, a Mobutu-appointed governor of Shaba, who is said to have driven around in a Rolls-Royce, worn a bowler hat and kept the bodies of victims in the cellar of his mansion.

The front has acquired the reputation of being leftist as a result of its dependence on Angola's Soviet-backed government. Its representatives here even call each other "comrade."

But many experts on Africa here believe that the front is really opportunistic at heart and lacks firm ideological commitments. They point out that it has supported both right-wing and left-wing governments in the past.

"While the front has now established itself as the most effective opposition to President Mobutu, it has had no success in unifying the many other movements seeking his downfall.

In 1977 Antoine Gizenga, an exiled political leader, tried to forge these movements into a united front against the Mobutu regime, but without any noticeable success.

Zaire bank credit shaky

NEW YORK — The invasion of Zaire last week has left United States bankers uncertain as to whether they will extend further credit to the country.

"Everybody is just sitting back waiting to see what's going to happen, and to see how bad the damage is," said one banker who was in Zaire recently. The willingness of the bankers to try to accommodate Zaire may hinge in part on the support shown by friendly countries, including the United States, Belgium and France.

Before the fighting began, a consortium of some 80 banks in the United States and in other countries, had been in the last stages of making a $215 million loan to Zaire, that was considered important in bolstering the country's economy.

Zaire had defaulted on a previous loan by an international consortium of banks in 1974, in large part, because of depressed prices for copper, its largest export.

The new loan, which has been in negotiation for more than a year, was sitting at the central bank in Zaire awaiting its approval when the war broke out.

"Informally, the government had said the terms were acceptable," said an executive at one bank in the lending group. "Now it is not clear whether Zaire will be willing to sign the agreement or whether the banks will be willing to sign."

A further question is whether Zaire would be able to meet the conditions of the loan — or whether the banks will undertake the grueling task of renegotiating those terms.

One condition of the loan called for Zaire to pay the banks $135 million or more in past-due principal on its previous loan, in order for it to get $215 million in new money. Reportedly, the country had some of the money set aside in a special Swiss bank account, and felt it could raise the rest.

Furthermore, the new agreement required that the International Monetary Fund allow Zaire to draw against a standby credit facility.

An IMF team was reportedly in Zaire last week working on an analysis of the economy, preparatory to establishing its own conditions for credit to that country. One banker speculated, however, that the IMF may still grant Zaire further credit.

The fighting in Zaire, which apparently damaged some of its metal production facilities, will make it harder for its depressed economy to recover. But bankers in the United States say they will not necessarily abandon efforts to help the country recover and to recoup their original investments.

There are at least three kinds of conditions that must be handled before the economy can return to normal.

First, expatriates who ran the production and escaped to Europe in the face of the invasion must decide to return to Zaire. Second, a transport system must be formed. The attacking rebels are said to have taken many trucks and other vehicles with them as they escaped back to Angola.

Finally, the production facilities must be refurbished. That includes chipping metal out of furnaces, which requires special equipment, as well as pumping out mines.

Havana loses aid

OTTAWA (UPI) — Canada is phasing out all foreign aid to Cuba to show its displeasure with the Caribbean island's military involvement in Africa. Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau says.

Conservative members of parliament Tuesday demanded a halt to Canadian aid to Cuba "because it has been learned that military advisers from Cuba trained and possibly led the Katangan rebels in Zaire's horrendous bloodbath."

Trudeau told the House of Commons that Canada's multi-million dollar program of co-operation with Cuba began long before there was a Cuban military presence in Angola.

"It is being brought to your attention," he said. "There are no present plans for any future projects in Cuba. The present projects are either terminated or on the verge of being terminated."

Peking's ambassador introduced to 'real Americans'

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. — Official representatives of China have finally met what one of them termed "the real Americans." In a visit that began Saturday night and ended Tuesday morning, Han Hsu, acting chief of the Chinese liaison office in Washington, became the first Peking diplomat since the mission was established 14 years ago to wade into the countryside for a casual, face-to-face meeting. Until Han's visit, Chinese diplomats had made only occasional formal appearances in large American cities.

Han, who carries the rank of ambassador, yielded to the entreaties of Rep. Paul Findley to come out and meet the people in his 20th Congressional District in the flat and fertile corn, soybean, wheat and hog country of central Illinois.

Han, accompanied by Hsu Shang Wei, an aide, and both their wives, smiled, shook hands and made small talk through a small-college commencement, a Holiday Inn breakfast given by the mayor of nearby Jacksonville, a Rotary Club meeting and tours of every major Lincoln historic site in the area.

Findley was pleased at the warmth exuded by both sides, but remarked with some amazement on the changes time had wrought, permitting him to drive about his conservative district in a station wagon filled with Chinese Communists and decorated with his campaign signs. The Republican congressman, who is seeking his 10th term, acknowledged that things would have been different when he first ran in 1960.

"It would have been very controversial then," said Findley, who recently returned from his second visit to China. "It could have tipped the scales. And frankly, at that time I wouldn't have been in favor of it. But rural Illinois values today any prospects for grain trade. And they see China as a great prospect."

Monday night, Han and his party were treated to the hospitality of the Springfield

Rotary Club.

It was "ladies night" and small potted plants were on each table in the ballroom of the Forum 30 Hotel for the women guests to take home. But the Chinese visitors were probably responsible for the somewhat larger than usual attendance of about 200.

The meeting started, as is the custom, with the singing of "The Star Spangled Banner." Han and his group, except for a team of six visiting Australian Rotarians, seemed to be the only ones who did not know the words.

After a somewhat clumsy but rousing salute to the flag, the Rotarians indulged their enthusiasm for a good song. They started with "A Pretty Girl is Like a Melody" for the women guests, following the words projected on a screen by slides. Then they did "Kooka-Burra Sits in the Old Gum Tree" for the Australians.

Larry Cadwell, the song leader, conceded that neither he nor the piano player knew any Chinese music.

"So, Mr. Ambassador," Cadwell said, "we'd like to recognize your presence here tonight by singing the only song we know that has China in it at all. We're going to sing 'Chinatown.'"

And they did.

Han smiled. Hsu smiled. Their wives smiled.

Findley leaped to his feet, dashed over and whispered in the song leader's ear. Cadwell said he had had a request for "Smile and the World Smiles with You." They sang it. Everybody smiled.

Finally Robert Uleg, president of the club, introduced Findley and his slide show on his latest trip to China, as part of an 18-member Illinois agricultural delegation.

Recalling Findley's two trips and his strong advocacy of increased trade and the full normalization of relations with China, Uleg said with a laugh: "We'll soon be calling him Paul 'Chop Chop' Findley."

After the slide show, Findley introduced Han, noting that the ambassador had often worked closely with the late Chairman Mao Tse-tung and Premier Chou En-lai.

"If any of you were asked to list the 10 people in all history who have had the greatest impact," he said, "I think every list would have Chairman Mao."

"You have a very outstanding congressman," Han said. "He's trying to enhance the understanding between our two peoples and develop the trade between our two peoples."

He declared that the Chinese were "looking forward on the question of normalizing relations," but that the issue of Taiwan, on which Peking "brooks no interference," was a barrier to that. Then he added:

"We hope the friendship between our two people will last from generation to generation."

That brought standing applause from the Rotarians.

The Friendship Will Last From Generation to Generation" was the title of Han's commencement address Sunday to the 127 graduates of Illinois College, a small, private institution in Jacksonville, 40 miles west of here. The college is Findley's alma mater.

Although college officials acknowledged that there had been some grumbling among alumni and townspeople about inviting a Communist to address the class, the 1,000 or so students, faculty members, parents and friends who gathered on the lawn of the shady campus for the ceremony welcomed Han in apparent good spirits.

They seemed somewhat puzzled by his references to the troubles visited upon his country by "the interference and sabotage from Liu Shao-chi, Lin Biao, and particularly from the Gang of Four."

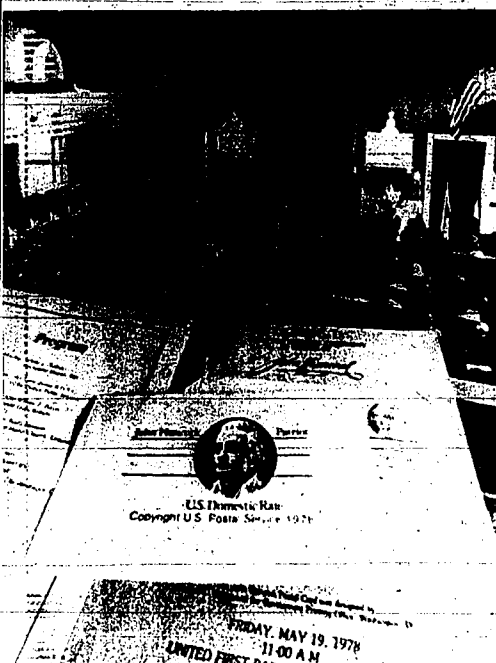

But most of the audience cheered heartily when he concluded with the part about friendship lasting from generation to generation.

"It was a lot of propaganda, but he has a right to believe what he wants," an elderly, red-faced man in the third row said benignly. "God gave us brains to think for ourselves."

Before returning to Washington Tuesday morning after a private breakfast with Gov. James R. Thompson, Han said he would like to make more such trips.

"We actually want to understand the American people," he said. "We want to get in touch. But sometimes I have to keep the store."

"Ambassador Han is very busy," Hsu interjected quickly. "He can't accept too many invitations like this."

Fadeout for sugar beets predicted

SEDGWICK, Colo. (UPI) — The sugar beet industry is going to decline quickly and may be nonexistent in five years, according to the president of the Rocky Mountain States Sugar Beet Growers Association.

Earlier this week the board chairman of the Great Western Sugar Co., Jack Powell, said in Washington, D.C., he thought foreign competition and increased use of corn sugar would drive the sugar beet industry out of business in 30 to 35 years.

"I'm not that optimistic," said Kish Otsuka, who heads both the Rocky Mountain and American Beet Growers Associations. "You're going to see a fast decline in the industry next year and, after five years, there may be no hopes or beets left."

Otsuka said he and his brothers lost about $2,000 on 321 acres of sugar beets last year.

Otsuka was to testify today before the House Agriculture Committee on proposed sugar legislation.

Consider medical deductions now

(Second in a series of seven)
 The White House tax package would knock out the medical expense deduction for home improvements, starting in 1979 — eliminating countless tens of thousands of dollars in deductions for ill or disabled U.S. taxpayers, their spouses, children or parents.
 So, if you need, say, a central air conditioning unit to alleviate asthma in your household, consider installing it this year.
 For tax purposes, next year would be too late if the administration's proposals become law. And this is not a minor point. The cost of a medically prescribed home improvement — an elevator, air conditioner, etc. — is a deductible expense to the extent it exceeds the increase in the value of your home. And it's deductible in the year you pay for it. Don't be intimidated by the size of the deduction; if you paid in '78, deduct it in '78.
 As an illustration, a woman needed to swim daily to prevent paralysis of the spine. On her physician's recommendation, her husband and she added an indoor swimming pool to their home at a cost of $172,000. They figured the pool hiked their home's value by $86,000, and deducted the remaining $86,000 as a medical expense. With a minor adjustment, the Tax Court okayed the deduction, ruling there is no dollar limit on medically essential home improvements. The couple was not restricted to buying the cheapest form of medical care improvement.

 Over the years, the courts have approved such items as chair-seat elevators for cardiac victims, home elevator to mitigate an elderly person's arthritic condition, special beds, even an attached garage.
 If you are planning installing a medically related home improvement soon, here are some recommendations:
 1. Get a written recommendation for the improvement from your physician. This is critical.
 2. Get a written opinion from a competent real estate appraiser stating the amount, if any, the improvement adds to value.
 3. Keep a detailed record of the amount of your expenses.
 A vital strategy reminder: If you already have a deductible home improvement in place or if you put one in this year, don't forget this tax break. What you spend in '78 for its operation and maintenance is deductible on the '78 return you will file next spring.
 Many of these are big-ticket items. How do you "pay" for them in '78, so you get the deduction in '78?
 Borrow the money. Say you borrow $5,000 from a bank to pay the cost of the improvement and you use this cash to pay the bill. Result: It's a '78 medical deduction even if you pay off the loan over a four or five-year period. You also get the deduction in '78, if you use a credit card as payment.

 More key reminders on '78 medical expense deductions:
 • Non-prescription drugs, a deduction so frequently overlooked. Aspirin, decongestants, antihistamines, cough syrup, antacids, many other medicines you buy without a prescription, qualify as deductible medicines. But before drugs become medical expenses, they must exceed 2 percent of your income. After that, they are lumped together with other medical expenses for the 3 percent floor.
 • Nursing care, and it's not necessary to hire a registered or licensed practical nurse. A medical deduction doesn't hinge on who provides the care; it rests on the care itself. For instance your mother's physician told your father that she — suffering from severe arthritis — needed someone to help her in and out of bed, and he paid you $72 a month to help care for your mother's needs. Half the service you provide would be medical care, so half the money he paid you would be deductible, even though, you had no nursing experience.

 • Medical transportation. You're not entitled to a deduction for medically essential transportation expenses — say, costs of traveling to and from the doctor's office or hospital. If you use the family car for these visits in '78 to your physician or dentist, you can take an automatic 7-cent-a-mile deduction for the travel, plus parking fees and tolls.
 In sum, 1978 may be your last chance to nail down these big deductions — which can go a long way in offsetting the soaring cost of medical care. The White House's proposals in this area could be disastrous to the average taxpayer hit by whopping family medical and dental bills. A 10 percent instead of the current 3 percent floor could easily make the difference between a big tax reduction and none at all.
 So use these tax tips to crowd as many of your medical expenses as you can into this year.
 Next: Protecting your dependency deductions.

Gas exploration backed

BOISE (UPI) — The vice president of a New York-based brokerage firm testified today that Intercontinental Gas Co. is relatively small to be engaged in gas development.
 But Thomas W. Berry, of Goldman, Sachs and Co., testifying at a hearing to consider the utility's supplemental rate increase request, said the company is capable of holding its own in that area.
 "I don't believe the company's program is overcapitalized relative to its base and capital structure," he said.
 "But I don't believe the Public Utilities Commission would let it go into something that is financially imprudent."

 "A smaller operation just doesn't have the financial wherewithal to be as effective."
 The utility has applied for an interim increase which would produce nearly $3 million in revenue. The request comes in light of a substantial drop in earnings and reports of financial woes within the operation.
 Berry said the earnings drop is not a result of exploration and development.

Import sales boom slowing?

©New York Times Service
 DETROIT — Last month's sales decline for foreign cars, the first in nearly two years, may be the first tentative sign that the boom in imported motor vehicles may be slowing.
 A spokesman for Toyota said in Japan that as a result of the rise in retail prices, the company's car shipments to the United States had declined 16.5 percent in April from a year earlier. Toyota, he said would consider itself successful if its 1978 exports to the United States equaled the 560,000 cars it exported there in 1977.
 A spokesman for the Nissan Motor Company, which makes Datsun cars, said in Japan that shipments of Nissan's automobiles to the United States (which reached 483,216 units in 1977) registered a 10 percent decline in April.

 The Honda Motor Company said in Japan that at the beginning of 1978 the company drafted a program for car exports to the American market calling for up to 275,000 units, up 10 percent from 1977. It has since raised retail prices by 20 percent, following the yen's sharp appreciation. A spokesman for the company said the impact of the price rise was expected to be felt in the coming months, so it would be very difficult to attain its goal this year.

Justice Thurgood Marshall expects to stay on at the Supreme Court

Thursday, May 25, 1978 Times-News, Twin Falls, Idaho - A-11

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Justice Thurgood Marshall, who turned 70 July 2, says he expects to stay on at the Supreme Court "for many years to come."

He discussed his plans in a speech to the University of Virginia graduating class earlier this week.

Marshall, the court's first and only black, has had a long career — twice in the past eight years and suffered a heart attack in 1972.

These physical setbacks have led to speculation he might retire in the near future and thus make a Supreme Court appointment available to President Carter.

But Marshall told the graduates he intends "to keep on plugging at my present job for many years to come."

He could, if he chose, retire in July on full salary of $72,000 a year.

Following his heart attack, Marshall told a reporter he had a "deal" with his wife: "When I'm starting to get senile, she's going to tell me. Then I'll retire."

Marshall told the graduates his generation's turn to take a stand for things that matter is drawing to a close, and now it is up to the young "to undertake the projects of this age."

President Lyndon Johnson appointed Marshall to the court in 1967, and prior to that he was U.S. solicitor general. Earlier, as a civil rights lawyer, he argued on the winning side in the high court's 1954 school desegregation decision.

Marshall and Justice William Brennan, 72, often vote together. They and fellow liberals carried the day in many major cases when Earl Warren was chief justice.

But since Richard Nixon's appointees began to take over, starting with the arrival of Chief Justice Warren Burger in 1969, their influence has waned.

Brennan could have retired in 1971 and Burger in 1972.

The numerous dissents by Marshall and Brennan sometimes are joined by John Paul Stevens, 56, the court's junior member from the standpoint of service. He came to the court from the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals and will not be able to retire at full salary until 1985.

Justices Potter Stewart, 61, and Byron White, 60, could retire in 1980 and 1982, respectively. Stewart sometimes is seen as a "swing man" in votes on individual liberties cases, but White most often stays with the Nixon group.

Other Nixon appointees are Harry Blackmun, 59, Lewis Powell, 70, and William Rehnquist, 53.

Colby talks on CIA

CHICAGO (UPI) — Former CIA Director William Colby told Playboy magazine it would be "moral" for the Ugandan people to kill President Idi Amin and the CIA could morally aid in the assassination, it was disclosed Wednesday.

In an interview in Playboy's July issue, Colby said he believed, "If a man is a total tyrant, then somebody under him has the right to shoot him."

"But that doesn't mean a separate country has a right to do it. If I am being oppressed by someone — my family has been destroyed, I've been sent to jail and all the rest — then I have the right to respond."

He noted, as an example, it would be a "moral act" for the Ugandan people to kill Amin.

Asked if the CIA would encourage such act, Colby responded:

"No, that's different ..."

"But helping them in what they want to do? There it would be moral. If the safety and welfare of the United States could somehow be retarded ..."

Colby doubted Amin would "die a natural death."

"That's a prediction," he said. "I'm not saying that we're going to do anything."

Colby emphasized the word "could" declined to say whether the CIA had agents in Uganda.

He also called the CIA the "best intelligence service in the world" and dismissed a congressional report that criticized the agency as outrageous, saying it was no more than a collection of the agency's own "internal post-mortems."

Colby described the CIA's involvement in the overthrow of Chile's Salvador Allende as limited to "some little, minor propaganda activities" and said the agency's penchant for developing macabre new weapons was merely "bureaucratic momentum."

"You set up a little group that's responsible for developing weapons and it'll develop a lot of weapons," he said.

Picnic Weather Ahead

Colby described the CIA's involvement in the overthrow of Chile's Salvador Allende as limited to "some little, minor propaganda activities" and said the agency's penchant for developing macabre new weapons was merely "bureaucratic momentum."

"You set up a little group that's responsible for developing weapons and it'll develop a lot of weapons," he said.

California purchases BPA power

SPOKANE (UPI) — Bonneville Power Administration spokesman Norman Gilchrist, Spokane, said the northwest power situation is doing so well, the BPA has been selling power to California for more than a month.

The situation is in sharp contrast to this time last year when the northwest was rapidly running out of water and facing an unprecedented drought.

"We're in great shape," said Gilchrist.

The key areas for measurement are Washington, Idaho, British Columbia and parts of Oregon and Montana, all of which drain into the Columbia River system.

"This year, the Columbia will flow at a near average rate," said Robert Davis, snow survey supervisor for the U.S. Soil Conservation Service.

He said a key measuring point, the Dalles, Ore., will measure 90 per cent of normal from May to September.

Average is 915 million acre feet. This year the flow will be 82.5 million acre feet.

Davis added another plus is that this year the runoff is more evenly divided because of the weather.

When the water comes down the hills, into the riparian and over and around the turbines of dams, it's in an orderly runoff like this year makes the use of the water nearly 100 per cent usable for producing electricity.

Cost warning issued

TWIN FALLS — Home owners with septic tanks were warned today by Twin Falls sheriff's officers and city police to make certain they get a firm price quotation before contracting services with septic tank cleaning companies.

Chief Deputy Sheriff James Munn said the office has received several complaints from local residents who feel they have been over-charged by an out-of-state firm which has been soliciting septic tank cleaning work in Twin Falls County the past few weeks.

Munn said residents should check costs of the services against charges of local septic tank cleaning firms for the best bargain and should get a definite cost estimate before contracting for the work.

One woman said she was told the cost would be 50 much per pound of material pumped from the tank and the price was $80. This was reduced to $70 when she told the firm she would have to make payments as she didn't have $80 available now.

Another woman was charged $73, also on a per pound basis. She said the workers spent about 25 minutes cleaning the tank. Local firms quote charges of $35 to $45 for septic tank cleaning.

Land sale negotiated

TWIN FALLS — Montapa-rancher Zon Lloyd is negotiating the sale of "a couple of parcels" of land in the City of Rocks south of Burley.

Lloyd currently owns 170 acres in the historical area and has placed 130 acres up for sale. The land sale now being negotiated will amount to 90 or 100 acres.

He said he will sell the land "right away if I can do it," at an asking price of $300 an acre.

Lloyd said he is negotiating with private parties for the land. He added he feels they would agree with an evaluation he made that the only reasonable use for the land would be to preserve it as a park.

Lloyd has said he plans to retain control of the other 40 acres he owns in the City of Rocks for his family.

The historical area is a geological area of massive boulders through which wagon trains bound for California traveled in the 1840s.

Lloyd decided to sell the property after having trouble with visitors leaving rangeland gates open and having his cattle shot, and after losing hope the state or federal governments would buy the land to create a park.

Dam agreement signed

TWIN FALLS — An agreement was signed Wednesday afternoon by the Twin Falls County commissioners, Salmon River Canal Co. and Bureau of Land Management for the maintenance and operation of the recreational facilities at Salmon Dam.

A caretaker is employed by the three participating agencies and resides at the dam to keep the fishing and picnicking area clean and supervised. County Commission Chairman Merl E. Leonard said the county will pay $2,600 per year toward cost of the maintenance and cleanup of the public facility.

The county built a boat landing, picnic tables and shelters and provided landscaping for the park area. Land was furnished by the Bureau of Land Management. A house at the dam is provided by the Salmon River Canal Co. and the caretaker also assists the canal company in maintaining service to irrigators using water from the dam.

Leonard said some vandalism has been reported at the picnic area as is the case in all county parks in recent years. A picnic table was burned during the past weekend. He said keeping the caretaker on duty at the facility on a 24-hour basis keeps this vandalism at a minimum and makes it more difficult for vandals to slip in and destroy the county property.

Second opinion sought

KETCHUM — With a storm of controversy hanging over an avalanche hazard study in Ketchum, the city has hired another avalanche expert to give a second opinion on slide hazards in the residential Warm Springs area.

Last fall, Ketchum commissioned California avalanche expert Norman Wilson to study avalanche dangers in the Warm Springs Canyon. In a formal report to the city, Wilson said about 100 property owners possessed land in high hazard avalanche zones.

Wilson's report caused a furor among local citizens, lawyers and editors, who attacked the findings of his avalanche study and his credentials as an avalanche expert.

Ketchum planner Russ Pinto said in view of the "gravity of land use decisions" which could be based on the avalanche study, the city council decided a second opinion should be solicited.

Pinto said the City Council this week hired Colorado avalanche expert Arthur Means to study the Warm Springs Canyon area and prepare a second avalanche hazard report.

"The city planner said the City Council hopes the second opinion "will augment and give a greater depth of understanding of what the problems will be."

Third judge assigned

BOISE — Fourth District Judge Gerald F. Schroder, of Boise, has been assigned to preside over the retrial for convicted murderer Delbert Crawford.

Schroder is the third judge involved in the Burley man's retrial, ordered by the state's high court in April.

Fifth District Court Judge Sherman Bellwood, of Rupert, who presided over the initial trial, disqualified himself from hearing the retrial.

Gordon Nielson, special prosecutor for Cassia County, then disqualified Sixth District Judge Douglas Kramer, of Hatley, while unsuccessfully attempting to have the high court reconsider its ruling.

The high court said Crawford's rights were violated during his 1974 trial for the shotgun murders of Greg Solosab and Paul Peterson, because he was restrained before the jury with handcuffs and leg irons.

Crawford was convicted of second-degree murder and robbery charges.

Women still critical

POCAHELLO — Two women from the Mini-Cassia area injured in separate automobile accidents last week are in critical condition in the intensive care ward of Pocatello's St. Anthony's Hospital.

Brenda Rasmussen, 16, of Rupert, was listed in "stable" but very critical condition.

She has not regained consciousness since the May 18 accident. Luanan Hogg, 44, of Burley, was in a "critical condition" and is "semi-conscious," hospital authorities said.

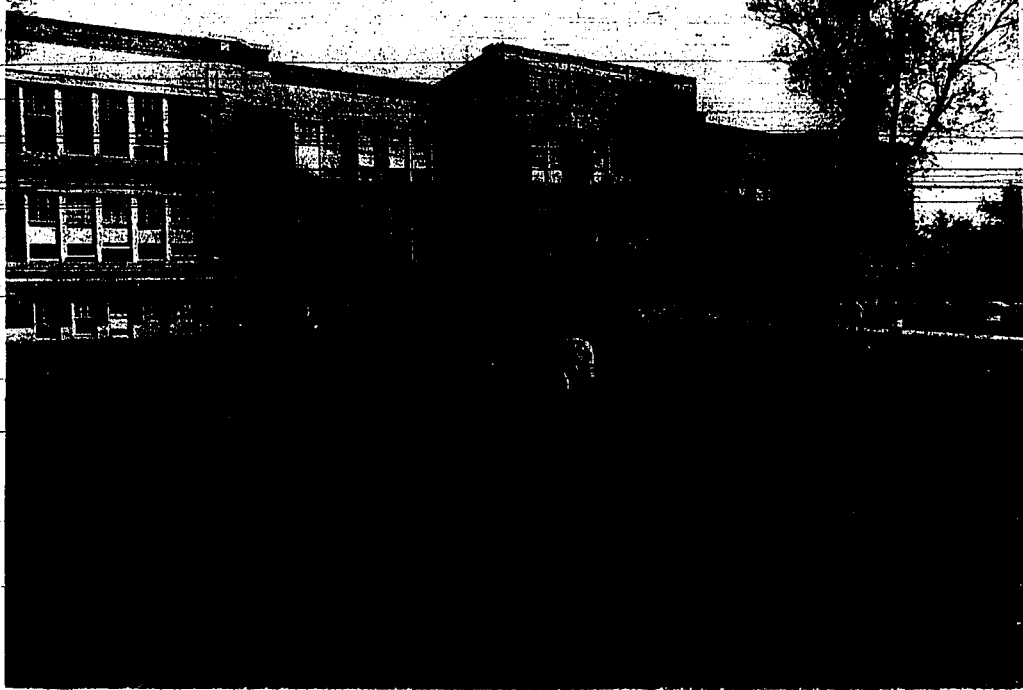

She was injured May 18 and transferred to Pocatello Tuesday from Cassia Memorial Hospital in Burley.

Cassia County Deputy Sheriff Don Taylor said a citation for reckless driving has been issued to a truck driver involved in the accident with Mrs. Hogg on Highway 27 south of Burley.

Taylor identified the man charged as Craig Stoner, 25, of Ucon, who was the driver of a dump truck plowing a winter dump truck driven by William Alma Meppen, 44, of Idaho Falls.

Rasmussen was injured when her car was involved in an accident at the intersection of 100 West and 300 South.

Minidoka County Sheriff's officers are still investigating the accident.

Airport officials balk at land cost

By JEFF SHER Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Roy Smith thinks the land he owns west of the Twin Falls airport is worth a lot more than the Twin Falls Airport Commission wants to pay him for it.

The commission needs Smith's 235 acres and another 40 acres of which Smith is part owner to complete a land acquisition program designed to create a buffer zone around the airport.

"The commission has already acquired the rest of the needed buffer zone land west of the airport and south of the Hightime Canal to shield airport neighbors from noise and other side effects of airport operation."

The city, hoping to protect its investment at the airport, wants the buffer zone will to allow future extension of the airport runway.

Smith, an attorney who is representing himself and his co-owners in negotiations with the commission, has a different idea than the commission of what his land is worth.

The commission offered Smith $221,000 for all 275 acres, and when Smith refused, the offer was upped to $240,000, $308,500 for Smith's 235 acres and $31,500 for the other 40 acres.

Smith, however, is holding out for $313,000 for the 275 acres, $63,000 more than the commission wants to pay.

Smith said Wednesday he is willing to sell his land and he is not "antagonistic" toward the commission. "Whenever they offer me what I think is worth, we'll sell to them," he added.

But the commission has ample reason to balk at the $136,000 fee tag.

The Federal Aviation Administration (FAA), is funding 90 percent of the cost of the land acquisition program for the airport, as long as the commission does not purchase any property for more than its appraised value. The city and county must pay 100 percent of any money spent to purchase property over and above its appraised value.

The commission had two appraisers and one review appraiser evaluate the property, and all agreed on a value for the 275 acres of $221,000.

At a meeting of the county commissioners and members of the City Council Tuesday to discuss alternatives in acquiring the Smith property, consulting engineer Bill Block of JUB Engineers said if the commission purchased the 275 acres for $250,000 (the maximum amount of which the FAA said it would pay 90 percent), the total land acquisition project would cost the city and county each $10,660.

This figure is based on a total project cost, as estimated by Block, of $426,000, of which 90 percent, or $383,760, would be paid by the FAA. That would leave $42,640 to be paid by local governments, of which the State of Idaho has promised to pay half, leaving $21,320 to be split between the city and county.

But if the city and county paid Smith $313,000 for the 275 acres, the total project would cost the city and county each $38,510, Block projected.

Thus the only economical alternatives facing the commission appear to be to either talk Smith into lowering his asking price, or initiate the process of eminent domain.

Under the eminent domain process, the courts would decide what price should be paid for Smith's land, and the FAA has committed itself to pay 90 percent of whatever price the court decides is fair.

As of Wednesday, however, Smith indicated his asking price was firm, and it appeared the commission would be forced into the eminent domain process.

Trout farm owner rebuts state claim

By LARRY SWISHER Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Contrary to what two state agencies claim, trout farm owner Earl Hardy says he will not use more water from Niagara Springs to expand his operations.

Hardy was referring to charges recently made by the Idaho Fish and Game Department and the Idaho Parks and Recreation Department.

Both agencies are fighting the trout businessman's request, because they say, if granted, it would virtually dry up the streamflow from the springs and ruin the popular state park and fishing hole there.

"I don't understand their protests; I'm not proposing to do what they are talking about," Hardy, owner of Rim View Trout Co., Boise, said Thursday. "Why should I be painted the bad guy?"

Hardy said his April 15 request to the Idaho Department of Water Resources, which will decide the matter, is for the reuse of water he is already using and is legally entitled to.

He said his plans to build more trout farm raceways do not involve any more water diversion.

Hardy, in a telephone interview, said the state agencies have misunderstood his request, and apparently think he wants to take more water.

William Webb, regional director for the Fish and Game Department, said, however, there is still a question about how much water actually belongs to Hardy.

"He's got a license for some and a permit and an old claim, but we feel a 1966 agreement and a few other things will have to be decided in court before he gets what he thinks he has," Webb said today.

DWR is still studying the history of water rights at Niagara Springs and has yet to schedule a hearing or a conference with the parties involved.

The springs are located on the Snake River south of Wendell.

In addition to the Rim View trout farm, water from the springs serves Idaho Power Co.'s Steelhead hatchery, a fish and game wildlife area, and a 29-acre park.

Unused water flows to the Snake River down a three-quarter-mile-long stream, which is stocked for year-round fishing.

Both Webb and Hardy said the present dispute will require some kind of compromise, because there is not enough water from the springs to go around.

"I can am down with the agencies," Hardy said. "There is a way we can solve all this, and everybody can come out with something. We'll all have to give up something, but we'll all benefit."

Webb said, "I hope the door's open all the way around. There's not that much water in the spring. Everybody will have to take a cut or bypass back into the springs."

But the basis for a compromise looks shaky right now.

Hardy said Rim View is now using an average of almost 120 cubic feet per second from the Niagara Springs streamflow. He said it will ultimately use 140 cfs and has used as much as 138 cfs at times.

He said Idaho Power is entitled to 132 cfs and Fish and Game is entitled to 32 cfs. If Hardy ultimately uses 140 cfs, the total diversion will amount to 304 cfs — more than the 260 cfs average flow from the springs.

The only reason there is any streamflow now, Webb said, is because Idaho Power and Fish and Game are not taking all their water.

"I'm taking the biggest chunk," Webb said. "I'm surprised if he's willing to compromise very much."

The fish and game supervisor said the steelhead hatchery runs its water back into the stream after using it, while Rim View runs its used water into the Snake River.

"It looks like we're doing all the worrying" about the stream and the park, he said. "If we do all the sacrificing, the public is going to suffer."

But Hardy said he is not attempting to detract from the park.

"I can understand the concerns of people, but the way to resolve this is to deal in facts, not point the finger at someone else. I'm just not guilty in this case and I'm not violating any law. Why should we forfeit our rights anymore than the state should," he said.

Crowe would freeze state spending

TWIN FALLS — State government spending should be frozen at present levels for two years, Republican gubernatorial candidate James Crowe said Wednesday.

Crowe, in Twin Falls on a campaign swing, said a major effort of his administration — should he be elected — would be to "put a lid on government spending for 24 months, except for cost of living increases." During the two-year freeze, Crowe said, "we could bring in some financial-management consultants from outside to look at our state agencies, see where we're wasting money, and introduce management concepts."

Crowe, a Coeur d'Alene businessman, said former California Governor Ronald Reagan reformed that state's government through similar actions. Reagan did an "excellent job" using business expertise to examine and re-organize state government, Crowe said.

Crowe said his government freeze would make the one per cent initiative unnecessary. That initiative would limit property taxes to 1-1/2 percent of actual market value of property. Crowe said he would not sign the initiative petition "because it has too many problems in it," but that he is "totally in favor of the tax rebellion" which caused the initiative drive.

Crowe said that in addition to freezing state government growth for two years, he would expand the use of zero based budgeting and encourage passage of "sunset legislation."

Both zero based budgeting and sunset laws require state agencies to justify their existence at fixed intervals of time.

Crowe also commented on other subjects:

- Local Option Taxes. Crowe said he supports "giving all Idaho counties the opportunity to apply the local option sales tax to their economies."
- Coal Fired Power Plants. Crowe said he supports "coal-fired energy production as long as it can be developed in Idaho without ravaging the air."
- Hydropower. Crowe said Idaho should develop electricity production from existing dams "before spending tax dollars to create new hydroelectric projects."
- Nuclear Power. Crowe said he would support construction of nuclear power plants in Idaho providing there are "safe, long term methods of handling waste material."

Public health service cost to go up in Magic Valley

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Residents of the South Central Health District will be paying only a slight increase this year for public health services.

Members of the district board of directors have approved a $3.89 per-capita assessment for each of the eight counties in the district. This compares to $3.67 charged last year.

William L. Chancy, chairman of the board said this will raise $403,562, or about half of the total $885,995 which will operate the district during the coming year. The remainder comes from state allocations and from contracts and fees charged for specific services.

Each county within the district pays on a per-capita basis, with the larger counties, such as Twin Falls, providing the bulk of the cost. Health services including sanitation, immunization, food inspections, water supply, toxic, family planning, crippled children clinics are made available in all counties or at the district office in Twin Falls to all residents of Magic Valley.

Chancy said this year's budget will include a small salary increase as set by the state because district workers are state employees. He said this would be about a 5 to 7 percent increase. He said there are no new programs and no expansions planned this year in an effort to hold down taxpayer costs.

Members of the budget committee, which includes the chairman of each board of county commissioners in the district or his designated representative, will have to approve the proposed budget and return it to the board for final action.

Of the total budget, the board proposes $541,625 for physical health programs, $299,774 for environmental health and $44,196 for health education. Emphasis has been placed on immunization during the past two years and the district proposes spending about $1,000 on immunization services expected to involve some 22,630 persons during the coming year.

"It's all very sketchy at this point," Evans said, in a morning news conference, adding the feasibility study on the "south side extension" might also suggest the need for new canal construction in the Magic Valley area. But the aim of the feasibility study, Evans said, would be developing new irrigation facilities and supplies for "additional land above the Snake River."

Southern Idaho farmers earlier this week favored a study of ways to get water to farm lands on the Bruneau desert, but Twin Falls Canal Company officials said they would oppose increasing the flow of water in existing canals.

As pumping costs rise on farm lands in the area, the IDWR recently began looking for alternatives to high lift pumping to irrigate prime desert lands south of the Snake River.

A proposed IDWR project would divert Snake River water at Miller Dam and transport it to off-stream storage reservoirs south of Hammett instead of pumping the water up onto the high plateau, IDWR director Stephen Allred said.

Evans said additional off-stream storage would be needed for the new water demands. According to Allred, also present at the Twin Falls news conference, studies of the area show sites exist for off-stream storage with a capacity "in excess of a million acres."

"This possible south side extension is a top priority reclamation development in the State of Idaho at this particular point," Evans said.

The idea is not a new one. Canyon View Irrigation, Inc., a local group of developers, has been working on ways to transport about 300 cubic feet per second of water rights to lands near the west rim of Salmon Falls Creek Canyon for several years.

Currently the corporation is pursuing condemnation proceedings against the Twin Falls Canal Company for rights to transport water through that company's existing canal system to a siphon which would take the water to the other rim of the canyon to a canal system.

Allred said a request for funding for the proposed feasibility study would be submitted to the next legislature. If funding is approved "we can complete the feasibility studies within a two-three year period and be ready for authorization for construction."

Creation of some power production would be a side benefit of the project, Allred said.

Benefit nets league $1,000

WENDELL — The benefit rock-and-roll concert Sunday at Niagara Springs raised nearly $1,000 for the Idaho Conservation League, concert organizers reported.

The groups which donated their talents were Cobalt Blue, Freestyle, Jimbo Break, Woodland Express, Sweet Country Air and soloists Tenley Stevens.

Garin, Yost of Hagerman organized the musical portion of the production, and Greg Williams of Wendell handled publicity and other organizational details.

The public address system was provided by John Reynolds and Larry Crookham of Twin Falls, and the technicians who worked on the system were Louie Owens and Jim Soran.

Survivors are his wife and one son, LeRoy V. DalSoglio, both Rupert; one daughter, Mrs. Dora (Don) Brockie, Hockessin, Del.; four sisters, Mrs. Josephine Maccani and Mrs. Victoria Peterson, both Los Angeles; Mrs. Julia Fisher, Camlin, Calif.; and Mrs. Jane Klebe, Rupert; seven grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Mass of the resurrection for Mr. DalSoglio will be celebrated at 11 a.m. Saturday in St. Nicholas Catholic Church by Father John Koelsch. Burial will be in the Rupert Cemetery with graveside rites under direction of the Elks Lodge.

Friends may call at Hansen Mortuary Friday afternoon and evening and prior to services Saturday.

Postal rate increase slapped by Jensen

BOISE — Democratic senatorial candidate Dwight Jensen said Monday the postal rate increase "emphasizes once again the deterioration of postal service since it stopped being a cabinet office and became a separate corporation."

"If they are going to charge 15 cents to mail a letter, it should get across the state the next day as it used to with a three or five cent stamp," Jensen said.

Jensen said the emphasis in the postal service should be on service. "We kept hearing that we should get the post office out of politics. When it was politics — when members of Congress and the postmaster general had to fight to get postal employees and provide service or lose votes — the mail got delivered promptly."

Environmental group hits nuclear mishap plan lack

CHICAGO (UPI) — A national environmental group today accused the federal government of negligence for failing to establish effective evacuation plans for use in nuclear power plant disasters.

David Dismore, committee executive director of Citizens for a Better Environment, said in a statement the CBE conducted a study of the federal government's evacuation plans for areas surrounding the nation's nuclear power plants and found the plans lacking.

"The role of evacuation planning thus falls to state and local agencies, who are ill-equipped, undertrained and almost totally un-funded," Comey said. "Their degree of preparedness to evacuate significant numbers of people in a nuclear plant accident ranges from negligible to nonexistent."

Without effective and tested evacuation plans, a serious accident at a nuclear power plant could kill 300,000 people, Comey said.

Changes made in voting precincts

Sexual anthology reveals some old-time beliefs

TWIN FALLS— Voters of Twin Falls County who need to register or re-register for the fall elections should contact the registrars in their precincts, says Richard Pence, county clerk and recorder.

He said many of the registrars have been changed as a result of the precinct boundary changes. There is no precinct in Twin Falls as it is divided among others for a more equitable precinct area.

Registration books are now at the homes of 47 registrars and will remain open through July 28, Pence said. Those who must register before the elections are persons who have just become 18 years of age and are eligible to vote for the first time, new residents in the county or those who have changed their addresses. Persons who have failed to vote in recent elections may have been dropped from the registration books, he said.

Pence said persons needing assistance with registration information may call the registrar in their precinct or the clerk's office. He said, however, he would like persons to register at the homes of the registrars as registration books are now open in these homes. The registrar works for a compensation of 50 cents per registration and Pence said this is the only the county has of paying them for their services. If the voter registers at the clerk's office the registrar does not receive a salary. There is no charge to the voter for registering.

Registrars, their addresses and telephone numbers by precinct include:

The centillion, a 10 followed by 60 zeros, is the largest number with a name.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Men — don't be fooled into marriage by the nubile charms of California girls.

An expert on sexuality warns that "in California — women are handsome" in their careers, untidy youth, but break down after 10 or 15 and become many of them, positively ugly.

And before legions of California women start a justifiable rampage, let it be known that the sex expert was J. Richardson Parke writing in 1906 in his book "Human Sexuality — a Medical-Literary Treatise on the Jaws, Anomalies and Relations of Sex, with Especial Reference to Contrary Sexual Desire."

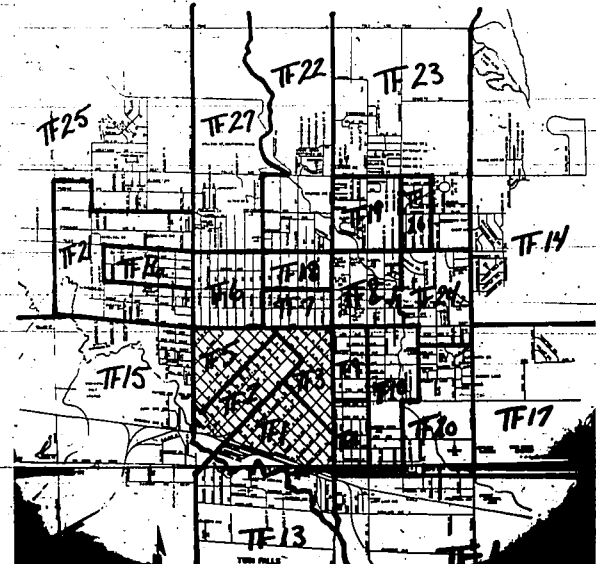

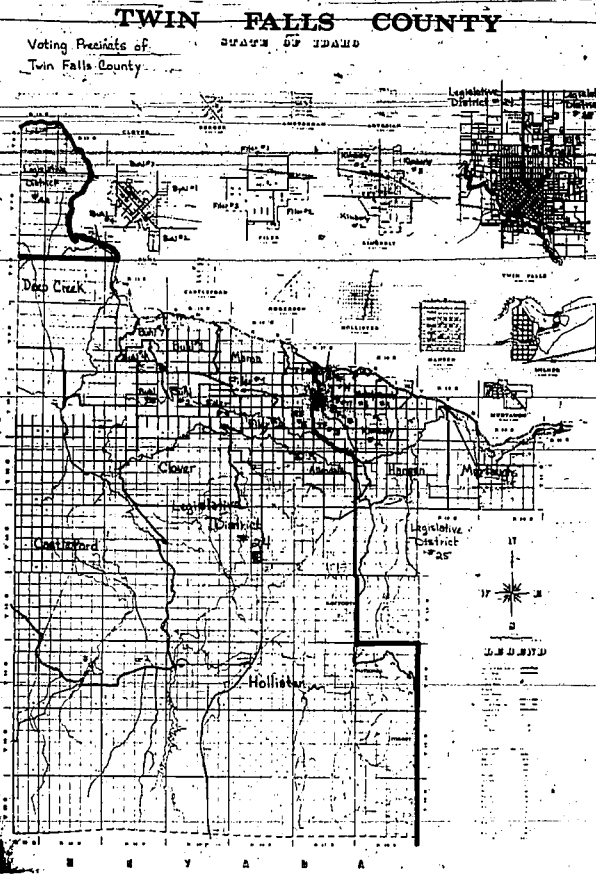

Parke's warning is included by Sandy Teller in his tongue-in-cheek book "This Was Sex," a collection of bizarre and funny myths and opinion about sex culled from sex books published around the turn of the century.

Teller, a public relations consultant who advises on the use of humor in business, read 200 of the old treatises on sex, love and morality to find the examples he quotes.

For instance: Prof. G.S. Fowler, "Sexual Science," 1879: "The studious — the worst human being on earth — Compared with his crime, murder is innocence. Even hanging before would be too good for him."

Prof. Thomas W. Shannon, "Personal Help For Men," 1918: "A woman has no more moral right to dress in such a manner as will excite in men wrong desire, than a man has to tempt a woman to do wrong. A reform in low-necked dresses is a moral necessity."

Civil defense springs anew

TWIN FALLS — An effort to give some new life to civil defense programs in Idaho has begun with a team of experts scheduling a meeting in Twin Falls in July to discuss local organization.

Merl E. Leonard, county commission chairman, said state Civil Defense director Darrell Walter, Boise, and regional assistant director Dick Hanuoka, Seattle, met with commissioners and county Civil Defense director Cloyce Edwards to discuss plans for the July meeting.

Leonard said the aspect of civil defense has swung back to nuclear attack preparedness. Because of Idaho's existing civil defense plan and the fact the state is inland and less vulnerable, regional officials say they plan to concentrate on a sound civil defense plan in the state, Leonard said.

He said Mountain Home Air Force Base is a likely target for nuclear attack and the plan calls for evacuating residents of that area to Twin Falls County.

Leonard said shelters will be designated and plans made for providing food, heat and sanitation for accommodating not only local residents but those who would be brought here from Mountain Home.

These people would likely be housed in the county for a period of several days, and in the event of an actual attack, would remain until fallout danger had cleared their own community.

In July, he said, the civil defense officials will be meeting with key people of the community to make arrangements for shelters and services. He said public utility representatives, fire, police and government officials as well as College of Southern Idaho representatives and others with building space will be asked to meet.

Last year's bean blight remains a big mystery

By KEN HODGE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — An epidemic of bacterial blight in Twin Falls County bean fields last year could have been caused by a variety of factors, according to an Idaho Department of Agriculture official.

Fred Bode, state plant pathologist, came to Twin Falls Monday to clarify IDA rules and regulations concerning bacterial diseases of beans which may have confused bean growers.

"Our program is essentially the same as it has been for the last 15 years," Bode said. "The whole hearing was intended to clarify and simplify the regulations so they are more easily understood."

Rules and regulations for certifying bean seed in the state were established in the mid 1960s when bean blight reached serious proportions in Idaho crops.

Since that time Idaho's bean inspection program has cleaned up blight in the state and been instrumental in making Idaho one of the foremost seed bean producing areas in the world.

Last year, however, an outbreak of blight occurred in the Hansen Butte area which destroyed 2,113 acres of beans. The epidemic cost the South Central Bean Blight Control Association about $510,000 in compensation payments for ruined beans.

Bode, however, could not pinpoint a single factor which caused the costly epidemic.

A Hanson man was charged with a misdemeanor this year for failure to comply with the required inspection procedures set forth in the IDA rules and regulations.

Marion Tanner pled guilty in March to charges he planted five acres of Pink Eye beans without following the required inspection procedures set forth in the IDA rules and regulations concerning bacterial diseases of beans.

Bode said Monday's hearing was to clear up misunderstandings about regulations to try to avoid future spread of bacterial bean diseases in the state.

"There were a number of factors that probably led to this year's epidemic," Bode said. "Growers and fieldmen that are unaware of the problem is one."

Bode said since bean blight has been under control in Idaho since the late 1960s, many young or inexperienced fieldmen and growers are not familiar with symptoms of the disease.

"Changing cultural practices such as conversion to sprinkler irrigation and use of minimum tillage are other factors which could have contributed to spread of blight in fields near Hansen."

Bode says where beans are grown in the same fields year after year, blight has an excellent chance of getting established. And in some areas planting many fields of beans adjacent to each other creates a bean monoculture which can facilitate quick spread of disease.

"These are all factors that could have contributed to the epidemic in 1977," Bode said. "But which one would be paramount, I wouldn't even hazard a guess."

Bode said most of the misunderstanding in printed regulations occurred in the section applying to trial ground.

Strauss mixes insults with politics

By ARNOLD SAWISLAK
UPI Senior Editor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Bob Strauss is the Don DeSantis of American politics. Nothing gives him more pleasure than to greet an old friend with some such greeting as "You're doing a damn fine job, despite what everyone says."

This is the man the United States sends to places like Geneva and Tokyo to negotiate the complex and immensely important issues of international trade. And, by all accounts, he's doing a damn fine job despite what anyone thought when Jimmy Carter picked him for it.

Testimony to that comes from Carter himself in Straussian terms. After Strauss returned from Japan with an agreement better than many thought was possible, the president was quoted as telling the cabinet "Bob Strauss brought home a C-minus trade agreement which he has talked up to an A-plus all around town."

Now Carter has chosen Strauss to be his "jawbone" in trying to keep business and labor from aggravating inflation. On the basis of his track record to date, this would seem to be a good choice. If Strauss does anything well, it is persuading people to do things they really don't want to.

During the four years (1972-76) that Robert Schwarz Strauss was chairman of the Democratic National Committee, political reporters tried to explain what makes this flamboyant Texas lawyer-banker tick. Since Carter appointed him special representative for Trade Negotiations with the rank of ambassador — last year, diplomatic and economic correspondents have taken up the challenge.

The consensus appears to be that Strauss is one of those immensely bright and hyperactive people who always surfaces when a mean job needs doing and who seems to require little reward beyond the undivided attention and unqualified adoration of everyone around them.

Strauss' work in getting the Democrats to pull up their socks after the McGovern disaster of 1972 — sometimes is described in terms usually reserved for such events as the Miracle of the Loaves.

Actually, the decline and fall of Richard Nixon and the opportunity that presented to put a Democrat in the White House probably contributed more to the Democrats' 1976 unity than any single thing Strauss did. But it was the chairman, who replaced McGovern-selected Jean Westwood by only a handful of votes in the winter of 1977, who kept the party together enough to profit from the Republican misfortune.

Strauss arrived on the scene sensitized to the charges that the Democratic Party had been subverted by an overuse of elitism: New Politics reformers' claimed old-line bosses had frozen out the rank-and-file; political professionals and elected officials complained that amateur do-gooders and over-educated theoreticians had driven practical politics out of the party.

So instead of trying to circle the wagons, Strauss opened the circle. He brought entirely new power blocs into the party's ruling council: liberal labor leaders, political scientists and representatives of George Wallace's then-feared political operation.

Once he got this mix together, Strauss was able to lead because no group could dominate. He used his position to force them all to face a reality that had been lost in all the ideological squabbling — that a political party has to win elections to survive.

As Nixon's troubles mounted, Strauss' argument made increasing good sense to the Democratic leaders. And they quit fighting long enough to nominate and elect a president for the first time in eight years.

Strauss gave no indication after the election that he wanted a plum out of the freshly baked electoral pie. He was asked, but claimed no spoils and none were offered. After the inauguration, he turned over the national committee to former Gov. Kenneth Curtis of Maine and returned to private law practice. But as comfortable as life in the firm of Akin, Gump, Strauss, Hawer and Feld may be, Strauss, in the words of his long time secretary, Vera Murray, "missed the action."

Two months in private life and he was back in harness as the president's trade representative, so proud of his ambassadorship that he bragged, in the super-Texas hyperbole he loves: "Of course I love this 'Your Excellency' stuff. I even make Helen (his wife) stand up when I walk into the room."

The job Strauss took is not exactly a high visibility Washington post (William Eberle and Frederick Dent were his predecessors).

N.Y. police searching for killer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Police Wednesday searched for a New York City bus driver suspected of beating his two sons to death, killing his estranged wife and another man and dismembering their bodies with a chain saw.

Detectives found the decapitated bodies of Joyce Mapp, 35, and Charles Dellasperanza, 23, crammed into two garbage cans behind the modest two-story Queensborough home of Mrs. Mapp Tuesday evening.

The Mapps' sons, 11-year-old George and 14-year-old Bernard, were found stuffed under a bed in their upstairs bedroom near a bathroom where police believe the two adults were killed.

The blood-stained chain saw was found in a downstairs bathroom.

Police said they conducted extensive interviews of friends and neighbors but the motive for the deaths remained a mystery.

Neighbors told detectives the dead man might have gone to the family's home to town or fix Mrs. Mapp's car, but police were unable to confirm that. Police said Dellasperanza was employed as an auto parts sales clerk.

Homicide detectives put out an alarm for George Mapp Sr., 38, who was reportedly at the house of his estranged wife shortly before police discovered the bodies.

"The fact that Mapp is missing gives us a feeling of his culpability. We just hope he will make his whereabouts known so we could clear this up," said one of the 24 detectives on the case.

Detectives were alerted that something might be wrong at the house Tuesday evening by Mapp's brother, Arthur. Forcing in a side door, they discovered signs of a fight including overturned furniture and traces of blood.

Angola aid question

Carter undecided on African plans

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter has not decided whether he will ask Congress to allow the law barring U.S. intervention in the Angolan civil war, press secretary Jody Powell said Wednesday.

The administration, said Powell, is looking into the laws that preclude actions and aid in Angola, but that does not "necessarily mean the president wanted to take those actions."

The Washington Post today quoted Sen. Dick Clark, D-Iowa, as saying, "It is increasingly clear that President Carter has made the decision to reinvoke the United States in the Angolan civil war." Clark is the author of an amendment that prohibits U.S. aid for military or paramilitary operations in Angola.

Clark, the Post said, strongly opposes any move to lift that restriction.

Powell said David Aaron, a deputy national security affairs adviser, and CIA Director Stansfield Turner have spoken with Clark about the possibilities of sending military aid to Angolan and Ethiopian forces fighting Soviet and Cuban supported troops.

Turner, the Post said, reportedly showed Clark a paper outlining the transfer of equipment through a third party to the United Front for the Total Independence of Angola, led by Jonas Savimbi. UNITA is conducting guerrilla warfare against Angola's Marxist central government.

Turner, Powell said, neither Aaron nor Turner acted on Carter's orders and he was not consulted before their meeting on Capitol Hill. Powell said it is proper to consult members of Congress and to "run past them" some of the proposals under study.

At least 17 dead in Iranian train crash

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Hundreds of tons of rock and earth tumbled by days of torrential rains hurled down a mountainside Wednesday and struck a passenger train, burying the derailed coaches and killing at least 17 persons.

The national newspaper Ettelaat said the landslide occurred shortly after midnight near the agricultural market town of Gorgan in a mountainous region 235 miles northeast of TEHRAN.

Witnesses said at least 17 bodies were recovered from smashed coaches of the train, which derailed when the mass of boulders and earth struck it broadside. More than 30 were injured.

Officials said an area of rock and earth 460 feet long and 60 feet high smashed into the train, burying some of the derailed coaches.

Most passengers were asleep when the landslide hit. "I thought it was an earthquake," said Roqaya Fatahadi, who escaped the falling rocks by a few inches. "There was a horrible roar, then the brakes screeched and the train was jolted as if in a quake."

She said her railroad car screeched to a halt inside a tunnel under the mountainside.

Idaho First Announces The Money Market Certificate.

Newly Authorized

Money Market Certificates Offered at Average Interest Rates of Newly Issued Six Month U.S. Treasury Bills.

THE IDAHO FIRST NATIONAL BANK

Money Market Certificate: This short-term instrument being offered has many characteristics of the 6 month Treasury Bill. It is issued in minimum denominations of $10,000.00 with a 6 month maturity. The interest rate that you will receive on a purchased certificate will be the average yield (discount rate) for 6 month Treasury Bills established in the weekly auction. These rates will become effective each week as the 6 month U.S. Treasury Bills are issued, normally on Thursdays.

This new instrument offers you the opportunity to earn on a short-term basis at national money market Treasury Bill rates.

The certificate is subject to existing early withdrawal penalties, namely a loss of 90 days interest and the payment of any remaining interest at the established passbook rates.

Additional specific information concerning these offerings may be obtained from the 65 Idaho First National Bank offices in the cities listed below:

NEW SHORT-TERM EARNING POWER FOR YOUR MONEY

How much will Atlantic City be gambling Friday?

THE ATLANTIC CITY EXPRESSWAY MAY BE ALMOST VOID OF TRAFFIC NOW ... but it probably will be bumper-to-bumper when the gambling starts Friday.

By DAVID L. LANGFORD

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (UPI) — At least $1 million will be in the bank when New Jersey Gov. Brendan Byrne cuts a ribbon Friday to lure high-rollers to legal casino gambling in the East for the first time in history.

The long-awaited opening of the $30 million Resorts International Hotel-Casino will come with little ceremony, but a lot of action.

In what was later called a "clerical slip-up," the casino officials Wednesday handed busts of reporters from New York and Philadelphia a news release saying, in part:

"Resorts International opened its casino here today, Friday, May 25th, 1978, after being given the green light for an operating permit by the New Jersey Casino Control Commission in Trenton."

That indicated the casino operators are not too worried about the outcome when the commission meets Thursday to take its final action.

However, the casino operators—and some commission members—were still bickering over ground rules for minimum bets.

"We want to make this as high-class a casino as there is in the world," said James Crosby, chairman of the board of Resorts International. "To do that you have to have reasonably high minimums."

J.C. Davis, president of Resorts International, said Governor Byrne will cut the ribbon at 10 a.m. Friday to open the casino, which is the site of two football fields, with 1,000 slot machines and 82 tables for blackjack, baccarat, craps, roulette and the Big Six wheel.

Asked at a news conference how much money he expects to bring in on Friday, Crosby said he preferred not to give a specific figure for security reasons.

"But it will be ample," he said. "It will be more than $1 million."

City officials launched a public campaign to offset widely-circulated reports that this old seaside resort might be strangled by traffic over the Memorial Day weekend.

The head of the New Jersey State Police said last week he would direct his troopers to divert visitors elsewhere if traffic became too congested.

Local hotelmen said that statement prompted hundreds of outsiders to cancel their room reservations and that present bookings are even less than on a normal weekend.

"With less than 50 percent of the rooms in Atlantic City reserved, as compared with 80 percent normally, the prospect of a banner weekend appear dim," said Roger Gelula, director of the city's public information bureau.

In Israel

Begin wins confidence

JERUSALEM (UPI) — The coalition government of Prime Minister Menachem Begin survived a motion of no-confidence by a 2-to-1 margin Wednesday during one of the most boisterous Israeli parliamentary debates in memory.

The motion brought by the two-man left-wing party, Shelli, was defeated by a vote of 55-32 with one abstention after a three-hour debate that was interrupted repeatedly by jeering and catcalls. The government's ability to survive such a motion came as no surprise.

The voting went along party lines with the opposition Labor Party joining with Shelli in trying to bring down Begin's year-old government. Begin commands a 78-seat majority in the 120-member Knesset parliament.

Arye Ellav of Shelli charged Begin's government with ignoring the Knesset during its recent 40-day recess, implying it should have been called into session for discussions about Lebanon, Begin's trip to Washington and the U.S. warplane package deal.

"On all these questions there is no one to talk to," Ellav said. "The Knesset knows more and more like a collection of wax puppets."

Moshe Nissim, a minister without portfolio, responded for the government and the low level of the response was indicative of the seriousness with which Begin viewed the motion. Begin remained in his front row seat through most of the raucous debate.

The call for no-confidence is totally groundless and is not based on facts," Nissim said. Catcalls from the back benches greeted his remarks.

"We do not have confidence in the government — not today, not yesterday, not in the morning and not in the afternoon," said former Police Minister Shlomo Hillel of Labor. "We will vote no-confidence today because we do not have confidence in any of the areas in which this government is operating."

The Labor opposition, led by former Defense Minister Shimon Peres, has criticized Begin's peace plan and has charged the government with eroding Israel's close relationship with the United States.

Israeli authorities responsible for land transactions on the occupied West Bank of Jordan began processing papers normally following charges Tuesday by Bethlehem Mayor Elias Friej that Israel sought to redefine property held by absentee owners as abandoned in a step toward a takeover for Jewish settlement.

He said 108,000 acres were involved.

Ethiopia planning a new offensive

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — Ethiopia's military government said Thursday it is preparing a major new offensive against secessionist Eritrean guerrillas, who claimed to be beating back a previous Ethiopian attack.

Addis Ababa radio quoted Ethiopian leader Mengistu Haile Mariam as saying fresh troops and equipment had been sent to the strategic Red Sea province of Eritrea, where Ethiopian forces "were impatiently awaiting the campaign."

The Eritrean rebels maintain that Ethiopia illegally annexed their territory in 1962 and they have been fighting for independence ever since. Ethiopia earlier this year put down a similar uprising, backed by Somalia, in the eastern Ogaden Desert.

Mengistu, addressing a rally in the Ogaden, said the forces involved in the war against Somalia were being ferried to Eritrea. He said it was an "historic responsibility" of the victors over Somalia to take part in the Eritrean "victory."

Mengistu 10 days ago announced that a campaign to crush the rebellion in Eritrea had been launched.

Fighting at that time appeared to be concentrated in an area around the provincial capital of Asmara, where 20,000 government troops tried to break a rebel encirclement, apparently without success.

In Danabas, the Ethiopian News Agency said the rebels had repulsed an Ethiopian offensive near North and South Derkalin and were now pursuing the retreating Ethiopians' forces northward toward Asmara.

The agency said that despite continued Ethiopian reinforcements in Eritrea, the guerrillas had captured large numbers of Ethiopian soldiers and officers.

On the eve of its new Eritrean offensive, the Ethiopian government was reported to have asked two diplomats from two of its closest friends — Cuba and Southern Yemen — to leave the country immediately.

Diplomatic sources in Nairobi said reports from Addis Ababa named the diplomats as the Cuban ambassador and his counselor and the minister of the Southern Yemen Embassy.

They said the reason for the expulsions was still obscure, but the most frequently heard theory in the Ethiopian capital was that the diplomats had become friendly with the leaders of the All-Ethiopia Socialist Movement.

President pushes system overhaul

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Saying "antiquated and unfair hiring practices" in the Civil Service have made Americans unhappy with the quality of their government, President Carter has given Congress his final plan to overhaul the system.

Under the plan, which goes into effect automatically unless vetoed by either house of Congress within 90 days, the Civil Service Commission would be eliminated and replaced by a Merit Systems Protection Board.

It creates an Office of Personnel Management to replace the antiquated and unfair hiring practices with the same kind of modern personnel management that is routine in any efficient private industrial organization," Carter said.

"The reorganization plan is the second and final phase of administration proposals to revamp the Civil Service system to improve its performance.

"The American people are not happy about the level of service they are receiving from their government," Carter declared at a Rose Garden ceremony for 11 civil servants whose efforts led to savings of more than $13.6 million last year.

The president hailed the proposals for showing "how much difference one person's efforts can make."

"Instead of giving awards once a year... what we need most is a Civil Service system that rewards good performance every day, day in and day out," Carter said.

Carter said in a message to Congress that the proposal "would neither increase nor decrease the costs" of running the system but would improve its management.

The main thrust of Carter's efforts thus far, including previously submitted Civil Service legislation, is to make it easier to rid the government of incompetent workers while still safeguarding the system from politics.

The merit board would consist of three members appointed by the president and would have a special "counsel's" office that would investigate charges of wrongdoing.

The proposal also would create a new Office of Personnel Management that would administer and enforce civil service laws and rules and advise the President on any matters involving employment of civilians.

A director, appointed by the President, would head the agency.

Fireworks worry Michigan lawmen

LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — A federal court ruling could allow Michigan children to greet the Fourth of July with a bang, and the prospects of a good old fashioned Fourth has both police and lawmakers worried.

Fireworks are plentiful and easily obtained in Michigan as a result of a federal court decision which struck down the state's fireworks Act of 1931. Consequently, fireworks and other such devices are readily and legally available for the first time in 47 years.

"I'm getting about 50 calls a day from anxious county prosecutors and local police agencies wondering what the heck the law says about fireworks," said Lt. William Ferguson, assistant commander of the Fire Marshall-Division of the Michigan State Police.

"I'm telling them that I think we are handcuffed in terms of enforcement and, as much as I don't like it, the people selling these fireworks this year are following the law. Last year, we weren't allowing people to sell more than sparklers."

The problem stems from a 1976 federal court decision in Grand Rapids. The court said the state's fireworks Act was superseded by the more lenient and later federal law.

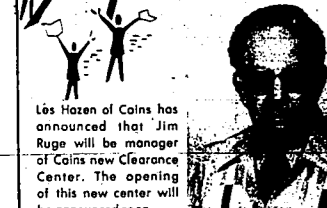

The state law prohibited fireworks containing more than one-quarter of a grain of explosives — roughly the amount used in caps for toy guns. But the federal law allows charges containing up to two grains of powder.

"I think we need fast action to forestall a string of accidents with small children playing with fireworks," said state Rep. Connie Binstfeld, who has introduced a pair of bills to bring back the state's old fireworks law.

The measure is tied up in the House Judiciary Committee.

"I have a letter on my desk now describing how a dog choked himself to death after getting tangled in a rope because he was so excited after children threw fireworks at him," she said.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Les Hazen of Cains has announced that Jim Ruge will be manager of Cains new Clearance Center. The opening of this new center will be announced soon.

Jim Ruge has been with M&Y Electric of Twin Falls, since 1954, being sole owner since 1962. He recently closed out his business. He invites all of his friends and customers to drop in and see him or call him on the phone. If there is any problem mechanical or otherwise, he wants to be advised. Bob Adamson, Cains Service Foreman, will do anything practical to help where he can.

Jim has expressed his enthusiasm in becoming a part of Cains. He says that Cains is the type of company he is proud to be a part of — where complete customer satisfaction has been the main key to their continued success and growth.

Mr. Hazen stated that he was happy that he could obtain Mr. Ruge's years of experience and reputation of honesty and high integrity. He feels that Jim will be a great asset to Cains as the manager of their new Clearance Center.

Carter aides OK diplomat law revision

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Administration officials endorsed legislation Wednesday revoking outdated laws by which foreign diplomats have flaunted traffic laws and evaded paying U.S. victims for their traffic accidents.

Sen. Paul Sarbanes, D-Md., said under current laws enacted in 1972, "diplomats, their families and their servants can flaunt traffic laws, leave a trail of unpaid bills, break leases, fail to pay rent, damage or destroy property, or even commit serious personal torts and crimes with impunity."

Richard Cookin, assistant chief of protocol, told a Senate Foreign Relations Committee panel chaired by Sarbanes that the State Department favors modernizing the laws that presently grant full or partial immunity to 23,569 diplomatic personnel, most of them here and in New York City.

Cookin said immunity now extends even to servants, janitors and chauffeurs, and "bears little relation to the essential purpose of immunity, which is to ensure the efficient performance of the functions of diplomatic missions representing sovereign states."

Bruno Ristau, chief of the Justice Department's foreign litigation unit, said the current law permits foreign diplomats and their staff to "claim immunity in the United States under circumstances no longer sanctioned by international practice."

Both said they favored making U.S. law conform to a 1961 Vienna convention signed by the United States in 1972 that grants absolute immunity only to top diplomats, gives partial immunity to others on a declining scale according to their official duties and eliminates protection for private servants.

They also favored mandatory liability insurance for all foreign diplomats who drive, fly planes or operate boats, something they said already is required of American diplomats abroad.

Earthquakes shake Aleutian Islands

PALMER, Alaska (UPI) — Two earthquakes shook the sparsely inhabited Aleutian Islands Tuesday night and early Wednesday.

Both quakes were felt strongly on Adak Island but there were no reports of damage.

The first with a magnitude of 6.4 on the Richter scale and the second of 5.1 occurred in the islands about 100 miles west of Adak, the Alaska Tsunami (tidal wave) Warning Center reported.

The first quake was recorded at 9:18 p.m. Alaska time (8:18 p.m. MDT) Tuesday and the second tremor, described as an aftershock, was recorded at 12:04 a.m. (11:54 a.m. MDT) Wednesday.

CSI meets Flint, Mich., in national tournament opener

TWIN FALLS — With a lot of confidence and no cockiness, the College of Southern Idaho Golden Eagles left Thursday morning to begin the national junior college baseball tournament Saturday at Grand Junction, Colo.

The Golden Eagles, who had eight men picked to the all-district and/or all-region team, will open at 11 a.m. Saturday against C.S. Mot College of Flint, Mich. They will go against either Monroe 21, or Iowa Western Sunday. If they win Saturday, the Eagles play at 5 p.m. and should they lose Saturday they will play at 11 a.m. Sunday.

"We're looking to better our finish the last time we were there — which was fifth place," Coach Jim Walker said.

"The thing I like is the players aren't cocky but they have a confidence, I think, that they can finish well up in this tournament," he continued. "I think we can hit with any of the teams we'll see there. Our pitching and defense will decide what we do. In numbers of bodies on the pitching staff, it appears we'll be one of the thinnest there. But that doesn't tell us anything about the quality of the other ones."

"I feel we are in an excellent bracket.

Ranger (Texas), Merrimac (Va.), Miami Dade and those teams that are among the high-ranked ones are downstairs (in the lower bracket away from the Golden Eagles)."

"The last time I saw Merrimac they beat us 13-3 in what I thought was an awesome attack. I don't think I've ever seen a junior college team hit the ball that hard. They were ripping ropes that were moving just on velocity."

Coach Walker said he had nominated Lee Cline, the Eagles' 8-Lace, for the opener.

"We talked about it today. I told the staff what I wanted and what I felt we needed. I decided on Cline because I feel if he can get his curve over we would have a good shot at winning that first one. My thinking is that Flint would have a season about like ours. Lots of unpredictable weather and not very many games on the schedule. For that reason, they shouldn't be hitting the curve like the southern teams that play 50 or 70 games and get a chance to see all the pitches."

"I also told (Tim) Mueller to pump up," Coach Walker smiled, referring to the relief job Mueller did when he had two wins and a save in the regional tournament.

The national tournament is a double elimination affair, meaning the Eagles would have to play until next Saturday if it went the distance. The bracket is only 10 teams, however.

"I talked to one of the guys (tournament officials) down there and he tells me this could be the toughest field the tournament has had in a long time," Coach Walker said.

Meanwhile, the coach said he anticipated third baseman Marc Sordar and center fielder making all-America due to the all-district selections just announced. All the players in the area are ranked by the coaches according to how they stack up against the rest.

Lynn Benton had the No. 1 pick with Sordar ranked No. 2 and McNeely No. 3. Joining in the top ten selections were Jim Good (9), Tim Mueller (7) and Al Romero (8). "There is a chance that Good could get all-America, too," Walker said. "But that's getting down to fifth place in the rankings and with 19 other players in the country — the all-America selection list may not reach that far."

Three other Eagles joined those five on the all-region team. They included pitchers Lee Cline and Brian Lundon and second baseman Gene Ulmer.

Walker was named regional coach of the year for the second time.

Bullets face 'big game' woes tonight

LANDOVER, Md. (UPI) — The Washington Bullets, trying to shake their fast-growing reputation for "not winning the big ones," must improve in several areas Thursday night to even their best-of-seven NBA championship series with the Seattle SuperSonics at one game apiece. Among them:

—Rebounding, especially on the offensive end. The Sonics outrebounded the Bullets 57-38 overall and 21-8 offensively in winning Sunday's opener at Seattle, 106-102.

—Scoring, particularly by forwards Elvin Hayes and Bob Dandridge. Hayes had 21 points Sunday, but only two in the final 16 minutes, while Dandridge was held to just six in the whole game.

—Execution. Most of the reason Hayes and Dandridge were ineffective in the fourth quarter was that Seattle center Marvin Webster was able to help other defenders double-team their men. The Bullets couldn't find the open jumpers.

The reason Webster was able to help John Johnson on Dandridge and Paul Silas on Hayes was that the Sonics were conceding Bullet center Wes Unseld 15-foot jump shots. There have been some suggestions that the Bullets should benefit by playing 6-foot-11 Mitch Kupchak at center more, even though Kupchak has been in a shooting slump for weeks.

However, Washington Coach Dick Motta plans no changes, except that he hopes his Eastern Conference champions can execute better.

"I'm not worried about Seattle," he said. "When the Bullets are playing right, no one can beat them. Half the time we're our own worst enemy."

Motta also suggested things might turn out differently than in Game 1 — when the Bullets blew a 19-point lead — because of other circumstances. For instance, the Bullets won't be fighting an eight-day layoff and jet lag at Capital Centre this time.

"We didn't have any speed Sunday," he said. "We didn't get a blocked shot, there was no skying for rebounds. We were just a little slow."

Bullet guard Kevin Grevey, who sprained his left ankle late in Game 1, practiced with the team Wednesday and is expected to play.

"He practiced all day, and looked good," said a team spokesman.

The SuperSonics were scheduled to arrive from the West Coast Wednesday afternoon and practice later in the evening at a Washington area high school.

Frazier's comeback off

NEW YORK (UPI) — Former heavyweight champion Joe Frazier said Wednesday he feels fully recovered from the hepatitis that hospitalized him two months ago but he has given up the thought of returning to the ring.

"I feel good," Frazier said from his gym in Philadelphia where several top boxers train. "I won't bother with fighting anymore, though. I'm just gonna watch."

"I might work out with the fellows a little, y'know show them what the left hook and the body punches are all about. But I ain't gonna do any more serious fighting. I'm gonna do serious training."

Frazier, whose illness forced him to cancel an April comeback bout against South African Kalle Knetze, is planning to get his "Joe Frazier Revue" back on the road again, now that he's feeling healthy.

"I'm back in rehearsal," he said. "I'm gonna hang with it as long as I can. It's fun but it's also hard work. I'm about 226 now but you lose weight strong."

One show "Smokin' Joe" is particularly looking forward to is a benefit for the children's wing of Cambridge Hospital in Boston on June 21. The next day the wing will officially be renamed in Frazier's name.

"I love kids," Frazier said. "Anything I can do for them, I love it. I got five kids of my own. It's a great honor naming the children's hospital for me. It shows they love you."

Stretching them out

EAST MAGIC VALLEY all-stars going through some limbering up exercises under the eye of head coach Forrest Fonesbeck, Valley High school. The team is preparing to meet the west in the first annual Shrine all-star game in Twin Falls June 2.

East stars prepare for grid battle

EDEN — Despite the wind, cold and rain, Eastern Magic Valley all-star football coach Forrest Fonesbeck is getting a "pretty good" look at his charges and liking what he's seeing.

The team has been working out without pads, fulfilling the five-days conditioning requirement, in preparation for meeting the west at Twin Falls Bruin stadium June 2. The game is sponsored by the Magic Valley Shrine Club with all proceeds going to that group's charity projects.

"I'm impressed with the overall quickness of the team," Coach Fonesbeck said. "They get off the ball very well. Defensively, we don't know yet. That's just a matter of wanting to get there."

"About our weaknesses I can't be sure yet. But I do know anytime you're playing man-to-man in the secondary you can get burned on the long play at anytime. But I feel that overall we should do pretty well defensively."

"Offensively it's just a matter of continuity and we should be able to get that pretty well by the time of the game," he added.

The coach doesn't want to get into individuals yet but adds "all of the kids are working really well. It's a pleasure to work with kids who are here because they want to play football. I mean, it's tough to coach a kid who's playing only because his dad has offered to buy him a car or something if he will. Right now I'm impressed with the Minico kids. They are good football players. The others are coming and I'm sure they'll impress me. I get better acquainted with them. We're still in the process of learning first names."

Kimberly Coach Gordon Hogan, helping Fonesbeck by handling the line, says "we can put a line out there that will average, oh, 220 across the front. This (Brad) Cooper is really quick. I think we'll see him in the backfield more than a couple of times in the game," he said of the Minico tackle.

"But the problem is we don't have many down linemen. Some of them are going to have to go both ways. But I don't expect that to be a problem because most of them probably wear both ways at least part of the time for their teams."

The east will go into the affair with 26 players. Lanny Morrison of Richfield, a running back, will miss it due to a collarbone broken in a motorcycle accident. Chris Daw of Hansen can not get a medical okay due to a back problem.

"The weather's been pretty miserable and the kids have been working out. But we have a darned good time," Coach Fonesbeck summed it up.

Guthrie to stick with pre-race plan

It's a refreshing sight after the years of coveralls and flight sneakers that make up the usual garb of auto racing drivers.

Guthrie is on the inside of the sixth row on Sunday's starting 33-car field by virtue of a 190.225-mile-an-hour qualifying speed.

"When you consider that I started 26th last year, this position is a vast improvement," said Guthrie, who trusts that everyone is keenly aware that she has an extremely fast car for the first time in USAC competition and that critics will kindly refrain from making spurious remarks about her slowness in a race.

"However, starting in the sixth row instead of the ninth doesn't mean I'll change my strategy. I don't want any part of the mad scramble for the lead that ensues after the green flag. I don't care how many cars pass me, I'm not going to drive with abandon.

"I expect the car to handle easily and drive fast for the entire 500 miles. We'll finish strong."

Guthrie completed only 27 laps last year as she became the first woman to drive in the famed 500-mile Indy. Her official finish was 29th.

"I've got to give Gordon Johncock and mechanic George Bigonetti credit for my present start in the field," Guthrie said Wednesday between answering fan mail and speaking to well-wishers on the telephone. A group of insurance executives passed her garage and gawked at the feminine racing driver who has single-handedly brought women's progress in auto racing to its peak.

"I had difficulty pushing my car to qualifying speed and I thought it was my fault," Guthrie recalls of her time trials. "In addition, I hadn't driven an Indy car in eight months."

"But Gordie and George at their heads together, made several adjustments here and there and the next day the car ran fine. I had hoped for 192 miles-an-hour, but the tires were squealing and I didn't dare push any harder."

"Bigonetti said the car would go 190 and he was right on target."

Is Guthrie nervous about Sunday's race?

"I'll have a rousing case of butterflies on race day, but that's normal," she says.

Reno indicates it will join Big Sky

RENO (UPI) — Officials of the University of Nevada, Reno, indicated today the school will accept a bid to join the Big Sky Conference.

Big Sky representatives made the offer Tuesday at their annual meeting. If accepted, UNR would be eligible for competition in the 1979-80 academic year.

"I think it would be safe to say we are leaning toward acceptance," said Dr. Joseph Crowley, acting UNR president. "The Big Sky members are state schools, they are comparable in their views on athletics, and there are some opportunities to establish some good rivalries."

Athletic Director Dick Trachok, vacationing in Palm Springs, was happy with the offer. He said the Wolf Pack needs a more balanced athletic program. The West Coast Athletic Conference in which the school now competes consists of private schools that concentrate on basketball.

The move has the support of the student senate, faculty senate, boosters club, intercollegiate athletic board and coaches.

Last season, the UNR basketball team finished with 18-4, second to San Francisco in the WCAC. The football team, playing as an independent and against some Big Sky teams, was 7-3.

SKULL SESSION is conducted on the blackboard — by Kimberly Coach Gordon Hogan, who is handling line assignments for the eastern all-stars. Hogan says size and quickness are good but depth isn't for the lads who will be in the trenches against the west stars June 2 at Twin Falls stadium.

Blackboard routine

Irwin enjoys return to 'thinking man's' course

ATLANTA (UPI) — Hale Irwin figures that the reason he has a shot at winning the Atlanta Golf Classic this week for the third straight time is because the tournament is played on a "thinking man's course" and in his view, that eliminates a lot of the competition.

"It's not enough to hit the ball long and straight here at the Atlanta Country Club," the two-time Classic champ said Wednesday before going into a pro-am to play the course for the first time this year.

"The course is so hilly, it has so many side-hill lies, that you've got to plan each shot when you come to it," Irwin, who has won more than $100,000 this year in 12 tournament appearances despite failing to pick up a victory, has put together eight straight sub-par competitive rounds in the Atlanta Classic.

He set the tournament record in 1975 with a 17-under-par 271 on rounds of 66-68-68 and last year the Classic was not played in 1976 because the U.S. Open was played in Atlanta at a different course that year) he posted a 15-under 273 with rounds of 70-70-66-67.

"I have played exceptionally well at Atlanta in recent years," said the golfing millionaire who will be 33 a week from Saturday. "It wasn't always that way though. I failed to make the cut here the first few years and it wasn't until I realized how important it was to think through every shot that I began playing this course good enough to be a contender."

Irwin, who had a closing 79 last week at Muirfield to win in a tie for 40th, has been in the top 10 in six of his 12 previous tournaments this year. He was second in the Heritage and third three other times.

"I've played pretty well all year," said Irwin who hasn't missed the cut in his last 66 tournaments (longest current streak on the PGA tour). "I've spaced out my tournaments in order to stay fresh and I've been close enough so many times that I figure I'm due for a win pretty soon—maybe this week."

Irwin faces pretty tough competition in this 200,000 event. Seven of the top nine money winners on his "year's" tour—including Tom Watson, Jack Nicklaus and Gary Player, the 1-2-3 performers—are in the 150-man field—and 18 of the top 25.

The only two members of the top nine who are missing are Lee Trevino, who won the "Colonial" two weeks ago, and Bill Kratzert, who was second last week at Muirfield. Muirfield winner Jim Simons, 13th on the money list, is also skipping the Atlanta Classic.

Nicklaus, playing in the pro-am Wednesday after earlier saving a move, might force him to wait until the Classic began officially on Thursday, is making his last appearance at Muirfield in the U.S. Open in Denver three weeks from now.

Nicklaus, who played himself out of contention at Muirfield last Sunday when he suffered a double bogey on the next to last hole, also is a two-time Atlanta Classic champion—winning here in 1973 and again in 1974, shooting 16-under-par 272 both years.

"My foot feels okay now," said Nicklaus. "It bothered me earlier in the week but I don't expect it to affect my play."

Irwin didn't get to practice at the Atlanta Country Club prior to Wednesday's pro-am because of charity commitments elsewhere earlier in the week.

"I know this course pretty well though and I started planning it out in my mind before I ever arrived," said Irwin. "I've been thinking a lot about the shots I'll need this week."

Scout credited with Sonics' success

SEATTLE (UPI) — Seattle SuperSonics Coach Lenny Wilkens says the man doesn't miss a thing and Les Habegger, Wilkens' assistant, calls him "amazing."

They're talking about Mike Uporsky of Watavosa, Wis., the SuperSonics' superscout.

They credited Uporsky's scouting on NBA opponents during the regular season with helping the Sonics into the playoffs.

Wilkens and Habegger said it was Uporsky's scouting reports on the Philadelphia-Washington series that enabled the Sonics to form their successful attack against the Washington Bullets in the first game of the NBA playoff finals, Game No. 2 will be played Thursday evening in Landover, Md.

"He's a detail man," said Habegger. "Here's an example of how thorough he is. We were going into Milwaukee and he gave us a report."

"He noticed going over the stats that the Bucks shoot better at the north basket than the south basket because when they come out of the locker room for practice, the north basket is closer. So Lenny and I said, 'Just for the fun of it, let's take the north basket first.'"

Visiting NBA teams always have the choice of basket-for-practice shooting. Seattle won that game 108-105.

"He doesn't miss a thing," Wilkens said. "I've only seen one guy who gave that much detail: Jimmy Rodgers, who was the Cleveland assistant when I was there. I couldn't believe how accurate he was and that's how Mike is."

Uporsky was a high school basketball coach when he met Habegger's son, Scott, last summer while vacationing in Poland. Young Habegger mentioned his father's job and Uporsky said he'd be interested in scouting for the Sonics.

"I talked to him on the phone," said Wilkens. "We asked him to scout a game and see what it was like. His report was terrific."

"And each succeeding report was fantastic," Habegger chimed in.

Uporsky's report on the Bullets "was exact," Wilkens said. "He was right on."

Habegger said Uporsky had a resume on each Washington player.

CSI signs 6-6 all-Georgia guard

TWIN FALLS — Fred Hall, a 6-6 guard with all-Georgia credentials, has signed a basketball letter of intent with College of Southern Idaho.

Coach Mike Mitchell said Hall, a graduate of Lake Shore high school in College Park, Ga., gives the Eagles good versatility in that he could play "the big guard or the small forward. I've seen him play and I feel very strongly that if he had been here last year he definitely would have started."

The coach said he tentatively had pencilled Hall in for the guard spot vacated by graduating Dave Ferguson.

Hall was named all-state and also chosen to represent that state in mid-season playoffs against surrounding state all-star teams.

He joins with Idahoans Quinn Hegworth of Minico, Jim Grigsby of Borah and Mark Stroud of Pocatello as incoming Golden Eagle cagers. Stroud, a BYU transfer who played his prep ball at Highland of Pocatello, is the only sophomore.

Jarbridge: well kept secret and likely to stay that way

JARBIDGE, NEV. — The gently rolling hills of the Jarbridge Mountains slope casually to the Snake River plain to the north and travel across that country gives little indication that anything unusual is approaching. The landscape rolls, much like the gentle rolling plains of Nebraska or Kansas, but at the junction of each gentle roll is a canyon deep enough to swallow the best of streams and rivers and wild enough to be called the home of mountain goats, rattlesnakes and deer.

The trip from Twin Falls to Jarbridge was an adventure in itself.

The stay began with a call to a Twin Falls number to make reservations at the Outdoor Inn in Jarbridge for a night for myself, my wife and our three sons.

Traveling south from Twin Falls, there is little change in the landscape from farms to the sagebrush covered hills. Driving west from Eugene still gives little hint of the ruggedness of the land until crossing the Salmon Dam and a gouge that plummeted some 600 feet to the stream below.

From there it's on west on a newly paved road with no dust and a few potholes. The desert-like area is broken every few miles by a ranch house and beautifully green meadows with crystal clear streams flowing through them.

Melting snows from the Northern face of the Jarbridge Mountains just across the Idaho border in Nevada collect the water and which empties into the Bruneau River and eventually into the Snake River south of Boise.

The road rises and falls with the landscape and with shocking abruptness the pavement ends with a cattle guard and a breathtaking descent into the Jarbridge Canyon on a dirt and gravel road.

At the bottom of the canyon is an enjoyable hot springs where the weary, or just curious traveler can take a dip in a naturally hot pool. The hot springs is called Murphey's Hot Springs and from there it is 13 miles, according to the sign, to Jarbridge.

It took less than two hours to travel the 80 miles or so from Twin Falls to Murphey's but the last leg of the trip from there to Jarbridge took almost an hour. Between watching the strange shapes and dodging chud holes, the average speed was something less than 15 miles per hour.

In the late afternoon, the canyon becomes the abode of strange tall sentinels that stand guard over the Devils Canyon.

According to a survey done in 1912 by F.G. Schrader, there were two different lava flows in that area. The first look place in the distant past while the last one was as recent as 150 years ago.

The melting snow and the rushing water washed away the younger lava flow to create the canyons but pockets of the older flows were left as banded pillars and stand as such today.

The canyon began as a steep walled rimrock canyon but in the 13 miles or so, mellows to a riverbed between rolling hills.

One of the most fascinating parts of the trip is to see the designs in the rocks which were once hot lava trying to flow to the surface. Several place contain sheer walls with curled designs in them, along with extensive areas of slate slides.

One strange part of the civilized world provides, excluded from the Forest. The town may never be a big tourist attraction, but no one wants it to be.

Jarbridge is not hard to reach, except for the last 15 miles or so and that last few miles could probably be traveled faster in a stagecoach than in a pickup. Although there are no potholes that would swallow a car, there are a few that will present business to the tire dealers and wheel alignment specialists.

Lodging is available at the Outdoor Inn and some cabins can be found for overnight keeping but about the best bet is to enjoy the mountains to the south and camp overnight. Wait, however, until the snow is melted a little and the temperature is survivable.

While there are plenty of places to go that are rugged and remote few are as unaccustomed to the footprints of humans than the canyons of the Jarbridge and Owyhee rivers.

the introduction to Jarbridge. That introduction is in the sign at the edge of town that announces the Jarbridge land fill, garbage to the left, metal dump to the right.

The introduction to the Jarbridge land fill and the hearty meal prepared at the Outdoor Inn-Cafe was welcomingly contrasty.

The hospitality offered by the folks at the Outdoor Inn was superb. The reservations at the Inn included a rib steak dinner, overnight lodging and breakfast for $25 plus tax.

The rib steaks were cooked to perfection and were much more than anyone but a lumberjack could eat. That huge piece of meat along with the home cooked potatoes, bread and a half a cup of peas created a meal that lasted quite a few miles.

The folks who own the "Outdoor Inn" have converted what looks like an old barn into a hotel of sorts with seven rooms and separate mens and womens shower and bathroom facilities.

While the beds are a little on the soft side, the sound of the rushing stream a few yards away was more than enough to lull the sleepless traveler into comfortable slumber.

For those inclined, the saloon next to the cafe offers a wide variety of entertainments including dancing with the town Justice of the Peace and the clanging of bells from the eight slot machines.

During the summer, the cafe and bar are more than full and everyone seems to have a lively time. Breakfast again was just about more than one person could eat. Sourdough pancakes, eggs, bacon or sausage and a drink provided the go power to climb and explore the hills and mountains around the town.

For the backpacker seeking solace, that country is ideal but harsh. Although water runs through the canyons, there is little on the plains area above and the rattlesnakes thrive.

As for game, there are deer and some mountain sheep that were re-introduced to the area by the Idaho Department of Fish and Game, not to mention the other varieties of wild cats and coyotes.

The Jarbridge Mountains are a favorite hunting spot for a lot of Nevada hunters and several out of states.

For the fisherman, the Jarbridge and Bruneau rivers offer rainbow and Dolly Varden fishing if you can survive the hike. The Jarbridge River and its tributaries are open year round on the Idaho side and the harsh winters make it tough to get in and out but the fishing is there. If fishing is done on the Nevada side of the line, a Nevada license is needed.

A trip through the canyon and on to Jarbridge is something like taking in a show about the roaring 1800's in the gold rush days and at the same time, getting a complete course in geology with the most fantastic teacher around: Mother Nature. The trip is one that is difficult to describe in words but will leave a lasting impression on those who take it.

Unchanged main street

Stone sentinel — HUGE columns of stone guard the canyon and are a part of Indian legend that named the gorge Devil's Canyon.

A canyon of beauty, history

JARBIDGE, NEV. — The Indians called it Ja-Ha-Bich or Devils canyon and were afraid to enter the steep walled cut. The white miners called it several different names and discussed it because it was so difficult to travel through and the local stockmen appreciated it because it offered shelter from some of the worst winter weather for their cattle, sheep and horses.

That canyon, with its sheer walls and huge uprushing columns, lies on the Nevada, Idaho border some 80 miles or so southwest of Twin Falls is now known as Jarbridge canyon and is possibly one of the best kept secrets around.

The canyon is steeped in history. Although the history is less than 120 years old, the legends and traditions that surround it and the others that merge with it are fascinating.

Stockmen and ranchers have long used the gently rolling plains for range for their cattle, sheep and horses but the real interest that put the canyon, and the town of the same name on the map was the crazy dust, gold.

According to some historians, gold was discovered in the canyon by stockmen who did not let the secret out for fear of attracting too many people. That kind of secret could not last long and soon, a small band of men camped on the Humbolt National Forest land and began seriously looking for the yellow metal.

It didn't take long for the word to spread that a big gold strike had been found in Northern Nevada and the small cluster of tents soon became a three mile long tent town of 150 hard drinking, hard living and hard spending miners.

The strikes lasted for about 20 years and when the veins ran out and the mills and tunnels shut down, nearly everyone left town.

But a few have stayed and now make their year-round home in that remote little town.

Little has change except the few new homes or the ones that have been resided or painted.

The few permanent residents take pride that they live in the town year round. "We don't look at it as if we're snowed in but that everyone is snowed out," Town Constable Bill Joyal asserted. "We've got a tunnel out back and we've got enough food to last us through the winter."

Joyal runs the gas station and says the town is pretty quiet except around the Fourth of July and Memorial Day. A lot of outside people come in and get to enjoying the back country a little too much.

"Last year, I had to meet the dirt bike riders at the edge of town and tell them they couldn't bring the bikes in," he said. He added that the bikes were running all over the place raising dust and causing too much danger to anybody walking along the street.

The snow comes early to Jarbridge since the altitude is around 6,000 feet, and stays late in the spring. "We were running snowmobiles on Main street until about six weeks ago," Joyal said.

One of the biggest attractions of Jarbridge is that it is out of the way and is still untouched. When compared with the Ketchum, Joyal said Jarbridge is probably what the Wood River area was 100 years ago.

Another of the attractions of the Jarbridge area is that it is an island in the middle of the Humbolt National Forest.

When the gold boom began in 1910, the residents of Jarbridge began writing representatives and congressmen to get the area taken out of the National Forest so a town could be permanently built. The congress complied with the requests and the town just was excluded from the Forest. The town may never be a big tourist attraction, but no one wants it to be.

Salmon season to be opened in Idaho

Another "economic" salmon season will be opened in Idaho. The Season will open June 10 and run thru July 16.

The daily bag limit is one, the possession limit is two, the weekly limit is two and the season limit is four.

$2,000 salmon were counted at Lower Granite Dam. Last year there were 28,000.

A $2 permit is needed for salmon fishing and the permits will be available at vendors after June 1.

Footie! Why open a game season of any kind when so few are there to be harvested? It's an economic thing. Various cities and towns insist that their survival is based on the foolish salmon fishermen, who will snag, stab or shoot his salmon in order to come home with a smile.

Power will be off to the booties for a week and stemming all the while over this opening.

Where to go opening day? I suggest Salmon Falls reservoir or C.J. Strike reservoir. I will be at C.J. Strike giving my lucky try for the crappie and bass in this lake.

The stream below Magic reservoir may produce some smaller fish. With the drought last year, I don't know where or when the fishing will be up to par. Another standard opening day stream is Billingsley Creek in the Hogerman Valley. Of course the crowds will tramp the banks bare the first two weeks of the season, but the pressure will slack off then and the fishing will be good in the openings on Billingsley Creek.

The Big Wood should be fair. The Little Wood and Silver creek should be good bets for larger fish. Reservoirs Reservoir will be another good bet for opening week. The lake was fair during the partial winter season and some nice trout were taken.

If you want to leave the pressure of crowds behind, I suggest fishing the Snake river in Hogerman Valley. If you like the boot fishing you can troll the mouth of all the springs and come up with the 6 fish limits.

Nation's farmers lag with spring crop work

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Planting is exceptionally late this spring as rains and wet fields delay spring fieldwork throughout the nation.

As of Sunday, just 54 percent of the nation's projected corn crop was planted. It was an increase from 40 percent the week before, but far short of last year's early planting.

At the same time last year, 93 percent of the nation's corn crop was planted. On the average, 78 percent of the corn crop is planted by the third week in May.

Last year farmers finished land preparations early, the Agriculture Department said in a weekly report. "This year they have had to plow and plant under less than favorable conditions."

Farmers in Indiana and Missouri were way behind the average. In Indiana, just 15 percent of the corn crop was planted and in Missouri, 22 percent. The picture was brighter in Texas where 97 percent of the crop was in the ground.

Soil temperatures during the cool spring finally, increased enough to germinate seeds, but remained below normal. The Agriculture Department said rain and wet soil kept farmers out of the fields from three to six days last week, except in some areas of the Midwest.

The soybean crop was only 16 percent planted, compared with 60 percent at the same time last year and a 39 percent average.

There was some improvement from the week before when a mere 5 percent of the crop had been planted nationally.

In the past week, Indiana's crop was less than 5 percent planted. Farmers in Illinois, Kansas, Kentucky and Michigan had planted 5 percent. Minnesota farmers had better planting conditions and led the nation with 42 percent.

The spring wheat crop was 77 percent planted, less than a 98 percent level of last year, but closing in on an average of 82 percent. A week earlier little more than half of the spring wheat crop was in the ground.

North Dakota and Montana lagged and held the nation's average down. The winter wheat crop, which is approaching harvest time, was rated fair to mostly good. Harvest had begun in Texas and Arizona.

Kansas wheat was 70 percent headed, behind the 85 percent level last year and the 70 percent average.

About 75 percent of the Nebraska crop was jointed, compared with 85 percent last year.

About 14 percent of the Oklahoma crop had reached the soft dough stage, compared with 40 percent last year.

More than half of the cotton crop was planted, which is the average for this time of year. But it fell below the 72 percent level of last year.

Cold soils and rainy weather reduced germination to the point that many acres may require replanting, the department said.

About a third of the grain sorghum crop was planted, lagging behind the 49 percent rate of last year and the 42 percent average.

Rice planting was almost completed except in Arkansas. Spring oats seeding ranged from 60 percent in North Dakota to 100 percent in Wisconsin. Barley planting also was behind normal.

Set-aside may exceed 22 million acres

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Farmers have told the Agriculture Department they intend to idle nearly 22.3 million acres of land under a set-aside program intended to boost crop prices by holding down supply, the department said Tuesday.

With sign-up open until May 31, the acreage to be idled surpassed a 22-million-acre goal the department set earlier this spring.

"We're quite pleased with the progress," said William T. Cherry, an assistant to the administrator of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service. He said there is little danger that more acreage will be set aside than the administration would like because actual acres idled may be less than present intentions indicate.

As of May 18, 1.1 million farms were enrolled, representing 48.7 percent of the eligible farms. The enrolled farms have 191.9 million acres — representing 70.4 percent of the acres normally planted with wheat, feed grain and cotton.

Choice beef price may climb 16-18%

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Retail prices for choice beef may increase 16 to 18 percent this year, the Agriculture Department predicted Tuesday.

For cattle farmers, choice steer prices will be even higher, averaging 25 to 30 percent more than 1977 prices with an annual average of $50 per 100 pounds.

In releasing a May report on livestock, the department noted, "Despite the impact of inflation on processing and marketing costs, the gross spread between farm and retail prices is expected to narrow."

Beef prices will continue to increase beyond this year, the department predicted, as beef output will slow down for the next two or three years.

After a time of high beef supply and relatively low beef prices, producers are withholding heifers from slaughter to rebuild their herds. It is part of a cycle that is normal to the beef business.

"Projected larger levels of pork and broiler production are not likely to offset the price impact of growth in consumer demand coupled with reduced supplies of beef," the report said. The April 1 inventory of cattle on feed in 23 states was 11.7 million head, 10 percent greater than last year. The number of heifers was nearly 4.3 million, 21 percent more than a year ago.

L.M. BOARD

Question arises as to where we got the term "cold cash." Not just a few but quite a few guesses old kept their paper money in pantries, cellars and elsewhere. The money they put milk and vegetables to keep some cool. They believed the currency of the day deteriorated in the salty heat. Maybe they went to their bankers for credit, but they went to their cold storages for cash. Or so explains one language expert.

Historical footnotes say Benjamin Franklin habitually got up at daybreak to lounge around his bedchamber for a half hour or so staked naked. This he reportedly called his "bath." It's said he believed it was just as refreshing as a water bath in the high-heeled shoe tub he invented. Might try that.

CRICKET CHIRPS
Count the chirps of an ordinary cricket in 14 seconds, add 40, and what you get is the temperature in Fahrenheit. You've heard that. This, preliminary to a problem you can present to the mathematical genius in the family. Ask said savant to come up with the count of a certain cricket.

Come on, Voltair never said, "I disapprove of what you say, but I will defend to the death your right to say it." Rather, his biographer, S. G. Tallentyre, wrote it. In a book called "The Friends of Voltair." She finally admitted it was her own line, not his, when other literary historians challenged her to come up with documentation. Those other literary historians cared.

CAR COLOR
Not many a car is painted dark on the fenders and light on the body. Fortunately, that's said to be the most dangerous color combination for a vehicle. Make it appear narrower than it actually is, thus to invite side-swipes. Safest car color is known to be a green-yellow combination. That seems to be particularly more visible in the twilight. Next best color, in descending order, are white, orange, light gray, light blue, medium red, blue, blue and dark black. So reports the Minnesota Department of Public Safety.

Question arises as to what animal is the best jumper. If you want to call a flea animal in the animal-vegetable-mineral sense, then credit the flea as the best of all jumpers. It has been known to jump 13 inches. Proportionately, if the flea were as big as a man with his power still intact, it could long-jump 500 feet and high-jump 300.

So you thought a grown male deer was a stag and a grown female a doe, did you? All right, but if you're talking about red deer, the male is a hart, the female a hind.

Abby

All rules forgotten

DEAR ABBY: What happens to parents when they become grandparents? Mine are too young to be getting senile, but they certainly don't show nearly the good judgment in handling MY children that they did when they raised me.

My parents ruled their children with an iron hand. No back talk, we did as we were told, and if we forgot our manners, we heard about it. We weren't permitted to eat between meals, and we had to be in bed with lights out at a certain time, and no nonsense.

But you should see the way they handle our children! All rules and regulations laid down at home are out the window at the grandparents' house. The kids whine and beg until they get away from us. They talk back, and are fed soft drinks, candy and cookies all they want at all hours. And they don't have to nap or do anything they don't want to do.

I love my parents, Abby, but I wish they'd realize how tough they are making it for me when they do this. It's difficult, especially for me, to tell their parents anything, so even though this is from Iowa, I hope you won't think it's too corny for your column.

CEDAR RAPIDS, IOWA

Stories turn grandparents into ogres

You'll want to have a heart-to-heart talk with your librarian after you've read this column.

Here we are, sweet, loving, kindly, elderly men and women—grandparents. But in children's stories, we come out as ogres.

We are old cronies. We are silly-old men. We are wicked-witches. We are the old-humpbacks who cast evil spells on lovely princesses.

It's a long time since "Hansel and Gretel," the classic seven-year-old girl and boy tale.

Agelism in today's books for children works against us in two ways: We are either pictured as enemies of children or we're not recognized as people at all.

Two social scientists studied 549 illustrated children's books published between 1968 and 1976. The books comprised 22,500 pages and 18,000 pictures. Here's what the survey found:

- Only 3.84 percent of the 549 children's books focused on an older person as a principal character. At a time when we older Americans have little continuous contact with our grandchildren, this is dismaying.
- Few of us are presented in heroic or active roles. Our grandchildren may, therefore, think as little of us as do their parents.

IN MY STUDY, WE SENIORS get into the story only marginally. More than 75 percent of older characters have uninteresting roles.

— And we're peripheral to the story. We oldersters are pictured alone in fewer than one-half of one percent of the books. We are background figures.

The situation gets worse when it comes to personal descriptions of the elderly in children's books. The most frequent adjectives, "old" and "young," appear in 5 percent of the time. In 17.7 percent of the books, the most frequent personality adjectives are "dear," "happy" and "pleased."

Thus, we seniors are dear, old, ancient grandparents. Sad and poor though we are, we remain happy and pleased by saying the authors and illustrators.

They discussed their findings with the directors of the Council on Interracial Books for Children, a resource center for educators and librarians.

With the council's approval, the researchers extended their study to include the representation in children's literature of other people from racial minorities. Among their findings were:

- Black old people appeared in 3.4 percent of children's books.
- Elderly hispanics were present in 1.7 percent.
- Fewer than 1 percent of the books included elderly Asians or native Americans.

Lou Cottin

— In general, we perform uninteresting tasks rather than creative ones.

In 549 children's books studied, our physical characteristics are covered by only three adjectives. A total of 75.3 percent use the word "old." Some 5.8 percent use the word "little." And 2.8 percent use the word "ancient."

It's interesting to point-out-how-this study came about.

Edward F. Ansello, associate director of the Center on Aging at the University of Maryland, got the idea while reading picture books to his daughter. The unappealing treatment of the aged in prose and picture started him.

Working with Joyce Lester, a doctoral student, he set out to quantify the types of behavior assigned to older characters in children's literature.

Ansello and Lester examined the collection of "Easy and Juvenile Picture Books" circulated by the Montgomery County, Md., Public Library.

Their distorted view of older people may give rise to ageist attitudes that last a young reader's lifetime.

We seniors are not boring, inconsequential people. We don't want our grandchildren to think so.

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR CEDAR RAPIDS: There's a kernel of truth in almost every corny letter. Let's hope your parents have ears, too. Good luck!

DEAR ABBY: I am 28 years old, not married, and I work to support myself. I'm not bad looking and live a fairly normal, happy life, but I'm beginning to wonder if maybe I'm foolish to work the way I do.

What I'm trying to say is, I have a girlfriend who works part-time like maybe two weeks. She has had three husbands, and now she's single again. She has boyfriends for everything. One pays her rent, another lets her drive his car, another painted and repaired her whole house and she bragged that all she gave him was lunch and a few daughterly kisses.

She does the rent-payer on weekends, and she also has a truck driver staying with her off and on when he's in town. I don't know how she gets away with it. Shouldn't someone tell these chumps the score?

BABE IN 'HAM

DEAR BABE: Don't worry about the chumps. Some men don't care what the score is as long as they're in the game.

DEAR ABBY: I am in the United States Navy. I love the service, but most of all, I love my parents. Before I came into the service I felt I knew just about everything. I was sure my parents no longer needed me, and all I could think of was the day I would be "on my own."

The first time I realized how much my parents cared was the day they took me to the airport to see me off. When my father said goodbye to me, he broke down and cried. I had never seen my father cry before, and I won't forget it as long as I live. I have had a lot of time to think. I never told my father I loved him, and I gave both my parents a hard time when they tried to guide me for my own good.

Now I write home every chance I get, and I am trying to make up for all the heartaches I must have caused them, and for my failure to be a better son. When my next leave comes up, I am going home to get acquainted with my wonderful parents.

I have written this letter in hopes that other thoughtless teenagers will wake up before it's too late. Thanks, Abby, for letting me get this off my chest.

WISER NOW

DEAR WISER: And thank you for a wonderful letter.

Are your problems too heavy to handle alone? Let Abby help you. For a personal, unpublished reply, write: Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Excess fat gone

Dear Dr. Lamb,

I am a 51-year-old male. I have had high blood pressure since I was 18. At that time I weighed 145 pounds. Since then doctors have suggested I lose some of my weight to lower my pressure. Since it was high originally at 145 pounds I didn't think they knew what they are talking about. Since my mid-30s I have weighed between 190 and 200 pounds.

After my 51st birthday I went on a 1200-calorie diet and dropped from 205 to 163 pounds. My blood pressure dropped from 130 over 90 while taking three Ser-Ap-Es per day to 118 over 69 on two a day.

A number of friends have cautioned me against losing too much weight. I think I may continue as I still have some fat on my lower abdomen. As you remark in your column, how much fat you have under your skin is more important than what the scale reads.

My waist measure has dropped from 40 to 36 inches but I'm disappointed by all the fat I still have in that area and the loose skin. One doctor has warned me the loose skin will probably stay there — just part of the aging process. Can you recommend an exercise to help with this? Or does this have to be done surgically? I will be having a second heart operation soon and it could perhaps be done at that time. I had the hernia repaired five years ago and it returned in less than seven months.

I have been doing about 20 to 30 sit-ups a night and they seem to help the muscle above the waistline but not below.

Dear Reader,

The high blood pressure seen in young men is often caused by "reflex" constriction of the arteries and may have been something different from what you're referring to in this column.

In any case, many people who have high blood pressure improve markedly if they get rid of the excess fat. I agree with your idea of staying with a program long enough to get rid of all your excess fat. You might need to go on a maintenance diet for awhile then go back to losing weight.

Your results show what a person can do if he will. Many people who take high blood pressure medicine would not need it if they would only get rid of all their fat.

I'm sending you the Health Letter number 3-7, Glitch Control, Avoiding the Big Middle, to help you tighten up your abdomen. You have proved that the waist will shrink if you get the fat out and off. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. It will give you the exercise program you need.

If you are right, the sit-ups are for the upper abdomen only. If you want to do something about the "pot" area below the belt you need to do a variety of leg lift exercises. These will tighten you up.

'Green Thumbers' take to jobs

Nationwide program enables seniors to earn extra funds

By LORAYNE O'SMITH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — At 73 Lillian Armga is pleased and proud to have a job and "almost an office of her own."

She works about 20 hours per week as a library aide and clerk at the South Central Health District office here under a federally funded program known as the Green Thumb. The nationwide program, initiated by Lady Bird Johnson when her husband was president, is administered in this region through the Utah Farmers Union.

About a dozen positions or "slots" for senior citizens of limited income were available in Magic Valley last year through the regional Office of Aging headquartered at the College of Southern Idaho.

Mrs. Armga feels her many years of volunteer work were an important factor in her selection for one of the few placements in Twin Falls. She credits Tom Moreland, regional director for the Office of Aging here at the time, with helping her land the job.

She checks immunization records and works in the health district's immunization clinic every Tuesday. One of her many tasks is creating a card file of resource organizations and agencies for reference of the health agency workers.

With only 20 hours a week at minimum wage the "Green Thumbers" hardly get rich, but in addition to the welcome extra spending money, the psychological lift of having a job is equally as important.

Officials at the CSI Office of Aging say of the 13 slots they filled throughout Magic Valley, "not one person has quit."

One of the best things about her job, Mrs. Armga says, is that she can get off work to attend meetings of the organizations in which she is active. This means a great deal to her.

Working in an office is nothing new to Mrs. Armga, although getting paid for her efforts is. She "worked" as a volunteer clerk at the Senior Citizens Center five days a week for four months, handling registrations, banking the money paid for meals and getting volunteers. She was doing volunteer work at the Magic Valley Rehabilitation Services Inc. prior to the Green Thumb opportunity.

Mrs. Armga said her volunteer work at the Senior Citizens Center where she served on the board of directors for seven years as a representative of the Golden Age Club, helped her through the time after the death of her husband, William, in 1970.

The Armgas came to Twin Falls in 1930, "at the height of the Depression," and she remembers "how wonderful it was to be able to get apples, beans and potatoes." She and her husband did volunteer work for the Red Cross in return for help they received during those hard times.

They had farmed briefly in her native Wisconsin after their marriage, then lived in Pennsylvania and Wisconsin again where he did construction work. But jobs became increasingly hard to find and Mr. Armga "had always wanted to come West," his widow recalls.

Lured by the promise of a job through a friend who was then helping build the Twin Falls Feed and Ice Co. plant, they came here only to discover the friend had been fired from the construction project.

Mr. Armga helped build the original buildings at Sun Valley and the family lived in a cabin on Wood River on the old Ned Foster Rocking N-F ranch during summers of 1936-37. Sun Valley Lodge and Challenger Inn were constructed at that time at the resort which was to serve as a navy hospital during World War II.

It was about that time Mrs. Armga started developing arthritis and by the mid-1950s she began doctoring for the chronic ailment.

Like so many arthritic sufferers, Mrs. Armga found it was increasingly difficult to get around. She feared she would be unable to walk, and even worse, continue to "get out and go in that damned old car."

Then "out of the blue" her doctor suggested surgery.

Even though she protested she couldn't afford it, in less than three weeks time Mrs. Armga underwent the first of a series of operations in which both hips and one knee were replaced with artificial ones.

She also had cataracts removed to make four surgeries, including three major ones, between March, 1976, and January, 1977. The fact she gets around today without even a cane is a miracle she credits in no small part "to the many prayers my many friends offered for me."

Her doctor told her he never had seen a worse knee, Mrs. Armga said.

"Usually in such cases they would just fuse it and make it stiff, but knowing my determination to dance again and drive my car I went ahead with the extensive surgery."

Seventy-three at the time, Mrs. Armga said before the surgery she felt sure "she was headed for a wheel chair."

"It's so absolutely wonderful to be able to walk now without a cane and go up and down stairs," she said. "It means everything to me to be able to drive." She "graduated" from a walker to using just a cane last spring and since June, 1977, has discarded even the cane.

In addition to the obvious blessing of mobility, Mrs. Armga has a special reason for appreciating her new hips and knees. It means she once again can participate in ritual floor work in the Royal Neighbors Lodge, to which she has belonged for 33 years.

Still an active member in the several organizations to which she belongs, Mrs. Armga was oracle of the lodge three times and has served as district oracle and state flag bearer.

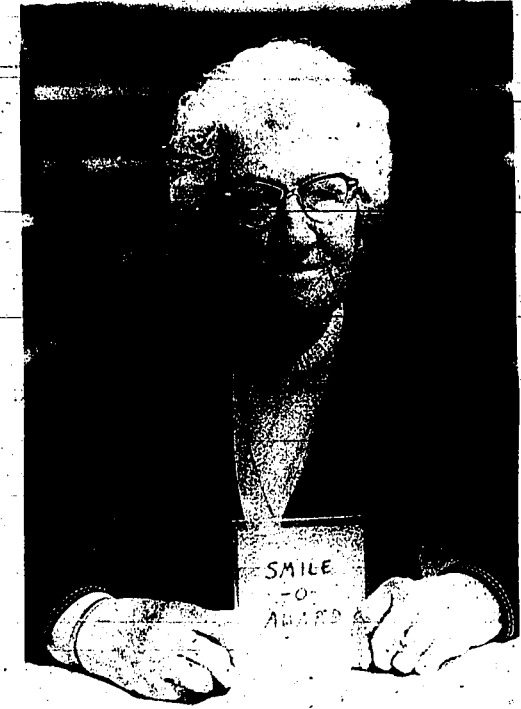

For 10 years she was state recording secretary of the American War Mothers and served as chapter president two years. Recently she was presented a certificate for 300 hours of volunteer work, and also has earned a 200-hour certificate.

Another group in which she has long been active is the World War I Veterans. She was the first president here in 1957. Later joining the Jerome group where she has been secretary, treasurer and also district chaplain.

She is a 20-year member of the Golden Age Club, joining when the group's first started, representing it on the Senior Citizens Board for seven years.

Among her other volunteer activities are the newsletter for the Retired Senior Volunteer Program (RSVP) at CSI and serving as a board member for the Foster Grandparent program.

She has worked as an election judge here for many years and hopes to continue doing so, and while serving in a similar capacity for the American Falls Reserve District yearly elections. While the advent of voting machines has greatly expedited the work of election judges, Mrs. Armga recalls staying until 2 a.m. one time "when we'd made a mistake in the counting and couldn't find it."

For 14 years she has participated in the Wednesday Night Card Club and this year is acting as secretary-treasurer for the annual Flag Day Tea June 14 at the Disabled American Veterans Hall by the United Women's Patriotic Organization. She will represent the American War Mothers in the event.

Born in December, 1902, on a farm near Waupun, Wis., Mrs. Armga's mother died when she was 9 years old, leaving five children, of which Mrs. Armga was the youngest and the only one still living.

The Armgas had three children, Larry Armga and Jean Carr, both of Twin Falls, and William "Bill" Armga of Boise.

Mrs. Armga says some of her friends envy her her job but those who have more income aren't eligible. Throughout her nearly half a century in Twin Falls Mrs. Armga has been employed "off and on" in several stores, including Woolworth's department store, Parlane Laundry and the Idaho Lunch Counter store for three years during World War II, but never, she says, has she been made to feel as vital as in her present Green Thumb position.

Hanging on the wall above her desk is a small placard bearing the words "Smile-O-Award" which symbolizes Lillian Armga's outlook on life.

Heartline

Rules given on retirement annuitants

Heartline is a service for senior citizens. Its purpose is to answer questions and solve problems — fast. If you have a question or a problem not answered in these columns, write Heartline, 14 East Dayton Street, West Alex-Ohio, Ohio 43381. You will receive a prompt reply, but you must include a stamped self-addressed envelope. The most useful replies will be printed in this column.

HEARTLINE: I worked in the railroad industry and I presently draw my railroad retirement benefits. I am 68 years old. I have seen that the Social Security recipients can now earn more money and still receive their full benefits. Will people on railroad retirement get the same earning restrictions as those of Social Security?

A: Yes. Those railroad retirement annuitants subject to earnings restrictions (generally, retired employees and spouses who are also qualified for Social Security benefits and almost all survivor annuitants) can earn more work deductions are made in 1978. Annuitants age 65 or over can earn $4,000 in 1978 before work deductions are made; for annuitants under age 65, earnings of $3,240 in 1978 are allowed before deductions are made.

For annuitants over age 65, the annual exempt earnings amount increases to $4,500 in 1979, $5,700 in 1980, $5,500 in 1981 and to $6,000 in 1982.

HEARTLINE: I started drawing Social Security retirement benefits at age 62. I have been drawing benefits for 14 months. Now I have an opportunity for an exceptionally high-paying job, which will last for three or four years. Can I stop drawing Social Security retirement now and start drawing again three or four years from now?

A: Yes, you may suspend your Social Security retirement benefits for the duration of your new job. But your age 62 reduction will NOT apply when your benefits resume after your high-paying job ends.

When a retired person age 62-64 receives no monthly benefit or only part of a monthly benefit due to work deductions, these months are no longer counted at age 65 and a new reduction factor is computed. In your case, if you are 65 or older when you start drawing benefits again, your benefit would only be reduced by the 14 months you received benefits and not 36 months. Thus, at 5/9 of 1 percent per month, your benefit would only be reduced 7.8 percent, not 20 percent.

On top of this, your high earnings up to the year your starting work will be included in your benefit increase, depending on how high the earnings actually were. You should notify Social Security as soon as you start this job so that you are not paid benefits for your months of work, and then notify them again when you stop.

Students evaluate special Wendell reading program

GREG ROBERTS, MRS. RANELLIS
... during a conference

... student

WENDELL — "I don't feel dumb in here. I can shoot for an 'A' and get it."
"You sure learn one thing — how to work!"

These are among the comments Wendell students made in evaluating the Communication Skills Center recently at the end of the first year of the special reading program in the junior high school, according to Mary Ann Ranells, project director.
She said the major objective was to improve student attitude toward reading. The individualized instruction technique used in the center was extremely successful, she said.

The director attributed the organization and excellent discipline, key elements in the success of the program, to Mrs. Annette Eaton, teacher in the skills center.

Funding for the program came from a Title IV-C adoption/adaption proposal of West Junior High's Communication Skills Center in Nampa.

The program was implemented in cooperation with Ted Lindley, National Diffusion Network, and George Hunt, Title IV director, State Department of Education.

All three grades, seventh, eighth and ninth, participated in the reading program, Ranells said.

Activities in the class included listening skills, vocabulary development, study skills, increased reading rate while maintaining a high level of comprehension, writing an identity book, reading a wide variety of paperback books and individual conferences with the teachers.

In their evaluation of the program, students expressed approval of the fact they could work at their own level, and that the controlled readers and stories which accompany them have helped them to read better.

"Writing my identity book made me think about what kind of person I am and what kind of person I would like to be," another student wrote.

Ranells said the professional staff, administration and community members have expressed support for the new program in the junior high school. She expressed appreciation to Lawrence LaRue, superintendent, for his support and involvement in the project.

Baby's birth brings double blessing to family

WICHITA, Kan. (UPI) — Beau Boggess' birth four months ago was a double blessing for his family along with the new baby, they have won a new car.

Beau's birthdate, Jan. 16, coincided with the day Chrysler Corp. introduced a pair of front-wheel-drive cars, the Dodge Omni and Plymouth Horizon.

Jerry and Sammy Boggess had entered the national competition open to babies born around the 16th by filling out a form at a Chrysler dealership. They were notified Tuesday they could have their choice of either an Omni or a Horizon, both with suggested prices of $3,881, free.

"My mother told me I was going to win that car, and she always picks the winners in everything — football games, the Kentucky Derby, all that," Mrs. Boggess said upon learning they had won the drawing. "The first thing I thought was, 'My mom was right again!'"

A Chrysler spokesman in Detroit said the Boggess' form was picked from 3,808 applicants — all of whom received 25 savings bonds for their efforts. The win came as a complete surprise to Mrs. Boggess, who said that just a few days earlier, a certified birth certificate of Beau's birth had been returned by Chrysler with no explanation.

"I thought they'd had the drawing and I forgot all about it," she said. "Then I got the call and I couldn't believe it."

Mrs. Boggess, who says she enters things only when the mood strikes her, entered the contest at the urging of her doctor, whom she said was sure she would deliver Jan. 16. Beau was born at 4:34 a.m.

"I went in for my regular doctor's appointment (back in January), and he said, 'I think you're going to win this car,'" said Mrs. Boggess, who has three daughters, 16, 11 and 2½, in addition to Beau. "I didn't know what he was talking about. But, for some reason, he just encouraged me so much I had to enter."

"Our only vehicle now is a '72 Ford van with 105,000 miles. I can't tell you how happy we are," she said she doesn't know which car she and her husband would pick because they had not looked at either one.

Donna Stepp, Kruger wed

TWIN FALLS — Donna G. Stepp and Roger A. Kruger, both Twin Falls, exchanged wedding vows May 6 at the Immanuel Lutheran Church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Stepp, Paul, and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kruger, Twin Falls.

The double-ring ceremony was performed by Rev. Arthur Crossen before an altar flanked by baskets of pastel-colored flowers. Solist was Tim Key, with Ruth Shepman as organist. The bride wore a floor-length satin gown fashioned with high neckline and long puffed sleeves accented with lace cuffs. The gown featured a midriff belt with a bow in back and was enhanced with a long train and ruffle edging. She carried a cascade bouquet of white roses and pastel flowers.

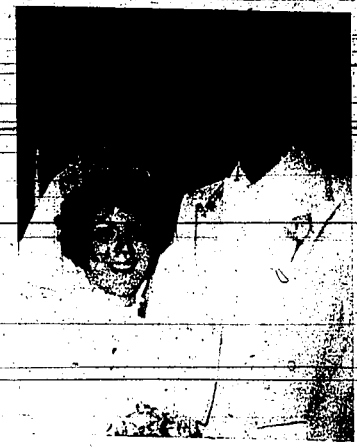

The bridesmaids were Toni Kruger, Twin Falls, sister of the bridegroom; Tina Mullins, Paul, and Patti Palmerston, Pocatello. Maid of honor was Connie Stepp, sister of the bride. Flower girl was Tomi Onishi; Paul, Sherri Reno and Larry Stepp, brother of the bride, served as candlelighters.

Steve Whitmore, Hansen, was best man, with Doug Werner, Twin Falls; Mike Kruger, brother of the bridegroom, Thornton, Colo., and Ralph Andrews, Filer, as ushers. Mark Kruger, brother of the bridegroom, Twin Falls, was ringbearer.

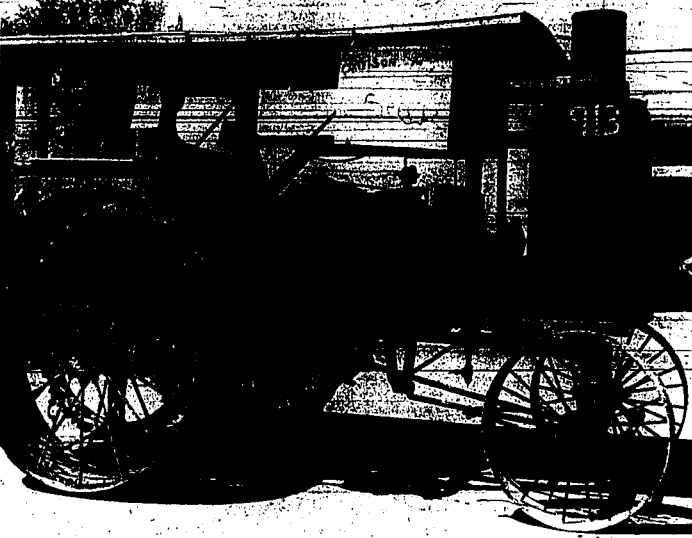

A reception was held immediately after the ceremony. The bride's table was centered with a four tiered wedding cake accented with floral arrangements and a fountain at one side.

The cake was served by Gladys Stepp, Fort Worth, Tex., and Blanche Stepp, Shafter, Calif., aunts of the bride. Others assisting at the reception included Sherri Reno, Tomiko Onishi, Kelly Reno and Patti Kincaid. Susan Trospen, Boise, was in charge of the guest book.

The newlyweds will reside in Twin Falls where both are employed.

MR. AND MRS. ROGER KRUGER

THIS 1913 CASE TRACTOR IS OWNED BY CARL PAULSON, RICHFIELD ... It will be featured along with others in the Outlaw Days parade

Richfield Outlaw Days scheduled

RICHFIELD — Richfield's annual Outlaw Days will be held June 10 and 11. Thousands of people are expected to swarm into the town of 350 for the festivities, which include a "fun rodeo," a parade, a dance, a queen contest and regular rodeo competition.

Entries for the parade and both rodeos are still being accepted, and prizes and trophies will be awarded to the winners.

The Richfield Rodeo Club, whose president is Terry Swainston, sponsors the celebration. Tickets must be purchased for most events but family rates are available.

Featured in the parade, which begins at 10:30 a.m. June 10, are several tractors used in the Magic Valley in the early 1900s. The antique but still functioning tractors include a steam powered 1901 Case, a 1927 Oil Pull model "Z," which runs on a mixture of kerosene and water, and a 1913 Case, two-cylinder gas operated model.

The first two are owned by Chuck Sluder, who collects the machines, and the third was inherited by Carl Paulson from his father who bought it new in Richfield. All three were used mostly for threshing.

The "fun rodeo" at the Richfield arena beginning at 1 p.m. will test the skills of wild cow milkers, ropers and riders; wild calf and bucking shtetlan horse riders, and horse racers. Some of the contests are especially for cowboys and cowgirls under 14, and the milking contest pairs husbands and wives in teams.

Three men at a time will compete to rope a "wild" cow, fresh from the range, and ride it across a finish line.

Contestants pay a nominal entry fee, and the winner gets the jackpot. The Richfield Outlaw Days Queen will be crowned at a live music dance beginning at 9 p.m. June 10 at the Richfield American Legion Hall. Sunday, June 11, the regular rodeo competition will be held in the afternoon at the arena. Again, prizes, partly supplied by entry fees, go to the winners.

Nixon to host party for former POWs

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (UPI) — Former President Richard Nixon will play host at his home Saturday to 273 former prisoners of war and their wives and girlfriends — his first big social event since going into seclusion after his resignation almost four years ago.

The cocktail party for the estimated 550 guests will be held on the grounds and around the pool of Casa Pacifica, the Nixon's oceanfront home, starting around 5 p.m.

The former POWs will come in buses to San Clemente from Los Angeles where NAM-POW Inc., the association of American servicemen held prisoner in North Vietnam, will be holding a weekend convention celebrating their release in 1973. Col. Jack Brennan, Nixon's aide, said he had talked some months ago with Navy Cmdr. John S. McCain, himself a former POW in charge of convention arrangements, and McCain suggested that a few of them would like to come to San Clemente to "pay their respects."

"It grew and grew and finally I told the President that it seemed everyone would like to come so he said, 'Why not?'"

Brennan said the party would have a Mexican motif with a mariachi band, Mexican food and six bars.

He said it was hoped Mrs. Pat Nixon would be feeling well enough to act as hostess and that she planned to escort the ladies on a tour of the house. If she is not up to it, Tricia Nixon Cox will take her place.

The reception is scheduled for 5 to 7 p.m., Brennan said, but it may go on longer, since Nixon plans to give each of the men a copy of his recent memoirs and autograph those who desire it.

Nixon has been gradually emerging from virtual exile at San Clemente.

He first made his trip to China, then attended Hubert Humphrey's funeral in Washington, spent a few days in New York and recently vacationed with Mrs. Nixon in the Bahamas.

Last week he played host to 37 guests, most from the publishing field, at a party given to toast the publication of his memoirs.

NBC documentary will concentrate on the U.S. family

NEW YORK (UPI) — If television networks broadcast documentaries exploring themes in which the audience is interested, people will watch.

On the other hand, if they show documentaries on subjects people ought to be interested in, the ratings reflect vast apathy.

NBC has proved it both ways. The network has a tradition of presenting an entire January night each year for a three-hour look at a single subject.

In 1977 it was three hours of "Violence in America," which portrayed though vivid violence to have drawn howls of protest if it had been billed as entertainment. Instead of editing, "Violence" received a 20.9 Nielsen rating and captured a 32 percent share of the audience, making it one of the top programs of its week.

In 1978 the subject was "Medicine in America: Life, Death, and Dollars," a three-hour look at the state and economics of American medicine. It scored a 14.1 Nielsen rating and a 22 percent share, which is much closer to the normal dismal rating world in which most documentaries live.

NBC now has announced its topic for 1979 — "The Family in America," with Stuart Schulberg, who did the "Violence" show, as executive producer.

The show will concentrate on intimate family portraits to show what easier divorce laws, the birth control pill, women's lib, the youth movement and open marriage, among other things, have done to the American family. Sometimes the changes are small, sometimes they are as major as the single parent family or as startling as the same-sex family.

The family might be the kind of show audiences will want to watch.

There was good news and bad news for NBC in the Nielsen ratings for the past week.

Good news first: NBC beat out CBS for second place, although ABC continued in undisputed command of the top spot.

Bad news: The hour-long pilot of NBC's new fall sitcom, "Legs," ranked 56th out of 57 shows in the ratings, which is not an encouraging start.

CBS had the bad news of being in the cellar, but the good news of having its critical judgment verified. One of the pilots for a show that CBS decided to reject for the fall season, "Danny and the Heavenly," ranked a poor 94th.

The 10 top network programs for the week ending May 21, according to the A.C. Nielsen Co., were:

- 1: "Three's Company"; 2: "Wheels," part V; 3: "Laverne & Shirley"; 4: "How The West Was Won"; 5: "Carter Country"; 6: "Happy Days"; 7: "Olivia Newton John"; 8: "Incredible Hulk"; 9: "Love Boat"; 10: "Adventures of the Wilderness Family" (ABC Monday movie).

RAISIN SPICE BREAD

1 pkg. (1 tsp.) active dry yeast
1/2 cup water
1/2 cup milk
1/2 cup butter
6 tbs. sugar
1 tsp. salt
2 tsp. cinnamon
1/2 tsp. nutmeg
1 egg, beaten
3 cups all-purpose flour
1 1/2 cups raisins
3 tbs. caraway seeds
3 tbs. orange rind

Mix the yeast with warm water in small bowl, let rest a few minutes.

Heat milk in a small saucepan and add butter, sugar, salt, cinnamon and nutmeg. Stir until blended. Cool.

Put milk mixture in warmed bowl, add dissolved yeast and egg. Beat in flour, raisins, caraway seeds and orange rind. Cover and let rise 1 1/2 hours in a warm place.

Punch dough down, place in greased bowl and let rise until double in bulk, about 45 minutes. Punch dough down and shape into a loaf. Place in buttered loaf pan and let rise again until dough reaches top of pan.

Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven 45 to 50 minutes or until bread sounds hollow when rapped on the bottom.

Drizzle top with a small amount of powdered sugar frosting.

The Times-News will pay $5 each week for Magic Valley Favorites. If you have a favorite recipe, just mail it to the Recipe Department, Women's Page Editor. The recipe becomes the property of the Times-News and cannot be returned.

Tops and Pants for Spring

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

The weak jump overall is designed to create excitement and upset the opponent's partnership communication.

When it succeeds it is wonderful. When it fails it means going back to the old drawing board.

West's preempt didn't keep North and South from reaching their normal four-spade contract which would be one down on normal play. However, it did give South a chance to try an abnormal play and the abnormal play let him make an impossible contract.

The play wasn't too abnormal. South just decided that West held just one spade as part of his preemptive hand.

Therefore, at trick two South led dummy's queen of spades.

What would you do as East? Looking at that singleton king in the West hand you would duck. But, you are just a bridge player sitting there — not a superhero. You don't have X-ray eyes. You don't see any way for your ace to do better than catch the queen. You play your ace. West's king of spades goes to the scaffold and North and South win the rubber.

Carter honors Bob Hope

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter tossed a 75th birthday party for Bob Hope Wednesday to lead off sparkling Washington tributes to old ski nose and his favorite cause, the USO.

The late afternoon White House gala, with a guest list of 500 celebrities, backers and major Republican financial backers from the Nixon and Ford eras, preceded salutes to the great comedian in Congress and at the Kennedy Center Thursday.

On hand for the festivities was former President Gerald Ford, Hope's old golfing pal and favorite 1976 presidential candidate, who was in town to see his portrait hung in Carter's White House.

Hope — who has "hobnobbed" with presidents since Jimmy Carter was a Navy cadet — was returning to the White House for the first time since Ford was president for a reception requested and paid for by the USO, the service organization Hope has been boosting with round-the-world, at-the-front stage shows since World War II.

Many Hope, press secretary to Rosalynn Carter, said the USO, which often uses Hope's birthday as an occasion for fundraising events, asked the Carters if they would launch the Washington galas that climax with Thursday's Kennedy Center spectacular.

"The Carters were delighted at the idea," Ms. Hoyt said — provided no taxpayer expense was involved. "The USO is paying completely for this reception."

At $12 to $15 estimated cost per head, the bill would range from $5,000 to $7,500 for champagne, wine, juices and such buffet yummys as steamship round of beef, marinated mushrooms, quiche lorraine, paties and Mrs. Carter's personal recipe cheese ring.

Guest list for the White House affair included the elite of Washington's political and government circles plus stars such as Elizabeth Taylor, Lucille Ball, Redd Foxx, Danny Thomas, Fred MacMurray, Elliott Gould and Charo.

It also included a number of Republican party stalwarts and financial backers not seen before in the Carter White House, including industrialist Clement Stone, who contributed an estimated $5 million to Richard Nixon's presidential campaigns. On Thursday, Hope will have the extraordinary distinction of sitting in the House of Representatives gallery and listening to members of Congress pay him tribute in floor speeches — no doubt laced with groaning attempts at the one-line joke that is Hope's stock in trade.

He and his family will also lunch with Speaker Thomas O'Neill.

Grand finale will be the Kennedy Center affair produced for the USO by Gerald HATFIELD, the professional TV expert who, ironically enough, is also Carter's chief adviser on matters of public image.

Appearances are Miss Taylor and Miss Ball, Pearl Bailey, MacMurray, Danny Thomas, Don Rickles, Anne-Margret, Tony Orlando, Carol Lawrence, Donny and Marie Osmond, the Muppets and Sammy Davis Jr.

SUSAN Atkinson, daughter of Mrs. David F. Atkinson and the late David F. Atkinson, is the 1978 recipient of the K.E. Otto Memorial Scholarship Award of $1,000 for outstanding achievement during her years at Twin Falls High School. — she plans to major in engineering at the University of Idaho.

Wandering white bowler attacked, shot by blacks

CHICAGO (UPI) — An 18-year-old black youth has been charged with attempted murder in the shooting of a white youth from Ohio who got lost and wandered into a predominantly black neighborhood.

"I was just walking, minding my own business, trying to find my way," said Ronald Schultz of Toledo, Ohio. "I lost my way, I became frightened. I didn't know where I was."

Police said Tuesday the shooting on Chicago's poor North Side apparently was racially motivated and that the victim was surrounded and taunted by a group of 15-20 blacks when he was shot in the neck on Sunday. After he was shot, police said, several persons robbed him and fled.

"They went at him like piranhas," an investigator said.

Clifford Finley of Chicago was charged with attempted murder, aggravated battery, armed violence and attempted armed robbery. Ordered held on $250,000 bond, Finley has been arrested 16 times since he was 9 years old.

Schultz was paralyzed from the waist down, and was listed in fair condition at Northwestern Memorial Hospital.

Schultz, a member of a bowling team in town for... competition, left his teammates at a restaurant and was walking back to his hotel. His route took him near the Cabrini-Green housing project, a predominantly black area with a high-crime reputation.

"It looks like a racial thing," police investigator Robert Royce said.

Police said Schultz met two men near Cabrini-Green and either asked for directions or was forced to accompany them. At an intersection, they told him, "You owe us some more money." Schultz did not resist, but one man pulled a gun and shot him, authorities said.

"He tried to rob me, but he never gave me a chance to give him the money," Schultz said. "The next thing I knew, this guy shot me."

Pam Neale wins hair styling contest

TWIN FALLS — Pam Neale, a student at Mr. Juan's College of Hair Design, placed first in the annual student hair styling contest recently with her model, Anita Lemmon.

Eleven students and their models competed in the 10th annual contest which was judged by four owners of local beauty salons. Hair styles were judged on adaptability to model and awareness of style.

Other winners include Dale Danichek, stylist, with his model, April Roskelley, winning second place; Terry Todd, with Linda Cramer as her model, third, and Patty Kincaid, stylist, and Bebe Day, model, fourth.

Trophies were presented to the winners.

Today's job hunters mighty finicky

NEW YORK (UPI) — Unemployed job hunters have rejected offers to return to the corporate world because a McDonald's isn't within walking distance of the boss is three inches too short, according to a personnel expert.

"In fact," observes Robert Half, "their strange attitudes and demands may make many applicants their own worst enemies."

The president of Robert Half Personnel Agencies, which has more than 50 offices in the United States, said recent conversations with corporate personnel executives have turned up many cases of eccentric behavior among American pavement pounders.

For example, a Chicago credit manager refused to accept a job with a large retail chain after lunching with the corporate vice president, who ordered two glasses of chablis. The credit manager concluded he didn't want to rub professional shoulders with someone "who obviously had a drinking problem."

A Milwaukee accountant remained in the ranks of the unemployed after insisting he couldn't start a coveted job for a month — on his astrologer's advice.

A financial executive nixed a position with a San Francisco manufacturer after the company said it would not pay for his weekly visits to an acupuncturist.

A Milwaukee executive, who had visions of driving a Cadillac Seville on the job, decided he didn't want to work for a firm that only came up with a Chevrolet as a company car.

A Boston cashier said "no" to a slot in a branch bank because it was too far from a McDonald's to fill her lunch-time job specification.

A Los Angeles financial analyst turned his back on a film production company because his prospective boss wore bow ties and, therefore, couldn't be trusted.

A 5-foot-9-inch Houston woman closed the door on a spot at a computer programming company because her would-be supervisor was only 5-foot-6-inches. She told the company she "couldn't respect a man" shorter than she.

Half says he was "understandingly relieved" to find that these job candidates were not referred by his offices, which specialize in financial executive, accounting and data processing employment.

And although he hasn't yet heard of applicants refusing a job because of four-day "vacations" or inflated salaries, Half maintains that "he wouldn't be too surprised if it did happen."

College to auction campus

FRANCONIA, N.H. (UPI) — For sale: one college campus includes 220 acres of scenic countryside and 15 to 20 buildings. Will accept best offer.

Franconia College, which closed after 16 years last fall due to financial difficulties, will auction off its land and buildings Friday in an effort to pay $1.1 million in debts.

Peter Anderson of the Manchester Bank said Tuesday the campus has been heavily advertised along the East Coast and in such newspapers as the Wall Street Journal.

"We've had some inquiries, but whether they turn into actual bids remains to be seen," he said.

The auction is the second phase in foreclosure proceedings against the school. About 1,100 items, mostly contents of the buildings, were sold May 19-20. Anderson declined to say how much money was raised, but said it was a "low to moderate six-figure amount."

Amel Harding's Ad appeared in Sunday morning's paper, by Sunday evening the Camper Was Sold!

Amel Harding had a problem, a 15 ft. camping trailer that was no longer needed. The solution was easy, sell with a Times-News Classified Guaranteed Results Ad. Amel was right. The ad appeared on day and the trailer was sold.

15' CAMPING TRAILER, furnace, 3 burner stove, ice box, inner spring bed. $300.

Thanks For Your Confidence Amel!
