

Americans listening when atom bomb fell

WASHINGTON (UPI) — While the first reaction of Japan's military, the newly declassified files show, was to urge that work be stopped up on trying to build a Japanese atomic bomb.

"Research into this is considered to be of considerable value. It is believed essential that this be completed immediately," said "Hiroshima Air Raid Spot Report No. 3," transmitted the day after the attack.

In a U.S. Army operation called "Magic," cryptologists had started decoding Japan's secret military communications even before the war began. "Magic" also intercepted the messages about the bomb. Now they have been declassified and turned over to the National Archives, where UPI examined them.

Hiroshima was bombed Aug. 6 Far Eastern Time, killing 100,000 at once and ultimately another 100,000 of the city's 344,000 residents. On Aug. 9, Nagasaki was bombed, killing 39,000.

A few days later, a Japanese message said, "The substance of this bomb is not an ordinary explosive charge or incendiary material. We conclude that it is an atomic bomb."

Two days later, naval vessels were flushed the message, "Japan is willing to accept the Potsdam Declaration." At Potsdam, the allies had presented Tokyo with an ultimatum: unconditional surrender or total destruction.

Japan made its first offer of surrender Aug. 14. The papers were signed Sept. 2.

The Japanese initially thought a huge magnesium firebomb had exploded, but within two days the military apparently suspected the truth and speculated about Japanese atomic research.

That message said "researches into the atom, Uranium-235... have not gone beyond the limits of theory." But the somewhat garbled message speculated that research into the practical application of uranium may have been completed and called this work "essential."

This confirms a report in the January 1976 issue of Science magazine that Japan was trying to develop an atomic bomb during the war. The magazine said the effort was probably doomed because of a lack of manpower, funds and uranium and the disorganization of its military sponsors.

Arms debate bruising for Church

By LISA MYERS
Chicago Sun-Times

WASHINGTON — In the recent brawl over Mideast arms sales, the Israeli lobby wasn't the only combatant left with a black eye.

The future chairman of the prestigious Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, also came out bruised.

But in Church's case, the injury was self-inflicted.

Too much fancy footwork and what a friend described as "one of the greatest flops in modern Senate history" have provoked widespread criticism of the man in line to take over for retiring Chairman John Sparkman, D-Ala., in January.

A fundamental question has been raised as to whether the Senate can be led effectively on sensitive foreign policy matters by someone perceived to have strong presidential ambitions.

A lust for the Oval Office is cited by most of Church's colleagues as well as outside observers as the most rational explanation for his erratic performance on the warplanes package showdown. In less than 18 hours, the man nicknamed "Sen. Cathedral" because of his booming oratory and lofty posing shifted from selflessly pushing an administration compromise to vigorous opposition of the entire arms package. Because of him the White House was unable to avoid the bloody Senate floor fight that few wanted.

"I told my wife that evening that we may well have just witnessed the kickoff of the 1980 presidential campaign," said a Democratic member of Foreign Relations, who like the Carter administration, was stunned by Church's acrobatics.

"If I were Jimmy Carter slipping in the polls, I'd keep an eye out for Frank Church," another Democrat said. "He didn't do that about-face on arm sales to please the vast Jewish community in Idaho."

Church denies that his 180-degree pivot was prompted by political considerations or pressure from Israel. He says that when the compromise failed to win overwhelming support, he felt free to vote his conscience. There was never a commitment to the administration to support the package, he insists.

As a practical matter, the fine point of whether there was or wasn't a formal commitment is almost immaterial. For in a Senate where perceptions often are more important than reality, what counts is that most of his colleagues believe he set up a deal and walked away from it. That perception is reinforced by the fact that the day before he joined the ranks of the opponents, he vigorously jolted Senator Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., and John Glenn, D-Ohio, to accept the compromise and thus the package. The Senate eventually approved the proposal to sell jet fighters to Egypt and Saudi Arabia as well as Israel.

"Church had the opportunity to set the tone for his future chairmanship by showing leadership," a colleague said. "Instead, he caved in for whatever reason."

Chester Crocker, director of Georgetown University's foreign service program and a Church watcher, said: "It was clear that for political reasons, Church wanted to have it both ways — to vote against the package, but be sure it got through anyway."

Out of the Senate's old-fashioned sense of courtesy, none of Church's colleagues will criticize him on the record. But

No signal

TYING an American flag to a post in the Twin Falls Cemetery this morning is Glen Wilkison, 76, of Twin Falls. He was among local residents who observed Memorial Day by placing flowers, wreaths and flags on the graves of friends and loved ones.

Wilkison said later he wasn't aware the flag was upside down but the caretaker at the cemetery subsequently turned it right side up. The American flag is legally flown inverted only as a distress signal.

Death toll soaring

By United Press International

Holiday travelers died with sickening regularity despite an unprecedented nationwide effort to apprehend speeders during the first two days of the Memorial Day weekend.

By late Sunday, the casualty count climbed to more than half the 500 fatalities predicted by the National Safety Council. One of the states with the worst death tolls was Indiana, a leader in organizing the joint program among state highway patrols to enforce the 55 mph speed limit.

Hot, humid weather through most of the nation sent millions to pools and beaches, where at least 67 people drowned.

A United Press International count at 8:50 a.m. EDT showed at least 332 persons had died in traffic accidents since the start of the holiday period, which began at 6 p.m. local time Friday and ends at midnight tonight.

A breakdown of accidental deaths:

Traffic	357
Drownings	62
Planes	413

Terrorists arrested

By United Press International

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — Yugoslavia has arrested four of West Germany's most wanted terrorists, including at least three members of the Baader-Meinhof urban guerrilla gang, the government announced today.

Justice Ministry spokesman Sepp Binder told a news conference — Yugoslav authorities were holding Brigitte Mohaupt, Ralf Clemens Wagner, Peter Book and Siegfried Hoffmann.

He said the four suspected terrorists were arrested in Yugoslavia before may 2, but declined to give further details.

Miss Mohaupt, Book and Miss Hoffmann all were described as veteran members of the Baader-Meinhof gang. Little information was available on Wagner.

Binder said West Germany has asked Yugoslavia to extradite the four and Belgrade, in turn, had asked for the extradition of some Yugoslav citizens being held in West Germany. But, he said, no swap was planned.

Blood pump project may gain new support

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Recent successes may provide new impetus for a federally supported project evaluating the use of implantable blood pumps to save the lives of some patients whose hearts fail following open-heart surgery.

The pumps have been used in 22 people since the trial began in December 1975, but up until February of this year, doctors in Houston and Boston were frustrated by the results. The machines worked, but the patients died anyway.

Then a team led by Dr. John Norman at Houston's Texas Heart Institute implanted the pump on Valentine's Day in a 21-year-old oil-field worker whose heart failed during open-heart surgery.

Although the pump was designed as a temporary substitute for only one of two heart chambers, it functioned as a total artificial heart for six days until his heart was replaced by a transplanted organ. He died 15 days later of a combination of liver, lung and kidney failure.

Surgeons at University Hospital in Boston, under the direction of Dr. William Bernhard of Children's Hospital, used a similar pump in April to keep an elderly man alive for 4½ days while his heart regained its strength. He is expected to be released from the hospital in a week or two.

"That initial success was followed by another in Boston in early May and that patient, a man in his 40s, was reported showing steady improvement."

The project is supported by the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute at a cost of about a half million dollars annually. The annual contracts expire in September.

The Institute's influential Cardiology Advisory Committee will review the program at a meeting Wednesday and is expected to recommend whether it should be extended for another year.

The committee indicated at a meeting early this year that it might decide the program has achieved all it could and no longer merited high priority in the competition for limited research funds. At that time, there were no survivors.

"The presence of total death tends to cast a cloud over any kind of program," Bernhard said in a telephone interview.

With survival of patients, I think it's possible the advisory committee may have second thoughts.

"I think we stand a good chance of learning a fair bit in the next year."

Before the recent successes, Norman said in a letter to the committee chairman that a decision to end the program "would seem shortsighted; at best, when clinical information is just beginning to accrue, to abort these efforts after such investments in time, personnel and material."

In addition to the Boston and Houston efforts, the Institute also is supporting in part a similar effort by a team at Pennsylvania State University's Hershey Medical Center. That team, led by Dr. William Pierce, achieved the first long-term success with a similar heart pump in a woman last July.

Doctors and engineers in Zurich and Vienna are using similar pumps in similar situations and two long-term survivors have been reported by the Zurich team.

Former Vietnam prisoners find few scars from captivity

New York Times Service
LOS ANGELES—Five years after they came home from North Vietnam, almost 300 former prisoners of war, many of them now beginning to show the paunch and gray hair of middle age, were reunited here Saturday for the first time.

For most of the former prisoners, the reunion here was a time not only to reminisce about an ugly past but also to wonder at how little, and after five years, these lives had been scarred by the deadly captivity.

"The thing that impresses me most about this group is how normal we all turned out," said George Day, a former Air Force colonel who won the Medal of Honor while being held prisoner in Vietnam. Day, now 53 years old and a lawyer in Fort Wallon Beach, Fla., is being urged by local groups to run for political office.

"We had all these forecasts from the doctors and the head-shrinkers of how bad we'd all turn out because of the deprivation, the isolation, the bad food, the malnutrition, and so forth," he said. "But it didn't happen that way."

"You can't go through an experience like that and have it not change both your lives," said Connie Collins. Her husband, Tom, an Air Force colonel who was among the first Americans captured in 1965, had just met and warmly embraced his prison roommate, Lt. Cmdr. Denver Key, whom he hadn't seen in five years.

"I had to take over some of the things that he used to do and it was hard to relinquish things," she continued. "Even now, he says I'm too tough on the children, and I say he's too lenient; but really, he's normal and we're normal and we're very zappy."

"I think faith was the common thread that got a lot of us through; the thing you get out of faith is hope," said Capt. Eugene McDanel, who spent six years in captivity after his A-1H Intruder was shot down over Hanoi in 1967.

McDanel, who is 46 and is the commanding officer of the aircraft carrier U.S.S. Lexington, said that many prisoners had known in North Vietnam that he developed a religious faith that remained after their release, and a deep appreciation for simple things in everyday life.

"You've got to go through the valley to appreciate the mountain top," he said. "I learned to appreciate the small things."

He acknowledged that a few of the former captives had trouble adjusting to life after their return to the United States, but he insisted that they were very few.

Researchers at a Navy facility in San Diego that has sought to monitor the progress of the former captives said that studies of previous prisoners of war indicated that physical and mental difficulties resulting from captivity sometimes arose five to 10 years after release. But the researchers confirmed that, with relatively few exceptions, the POW's of the Vietnam War had not had serious problems.

"They're fine; they're no different than anybody else," said Cmdr. William Ferris of the study center, adding that special physical examinations were administered to the men every year and that no problems had been found.

Similarly, he said, there had been no pattern of psychological ailments.

Other points made about the prisoners by researchers at the San Diego center include the following:

- About 75 percent of the former prisoners have remained in the military service.

—The rate of death and serious illnesses among the former prisoners is about equal to that experienced by other men of similar age, and has been substantially lower than that observed for POWs from World War II and Korean prison camps.

—Almost one-third of the former prisoners have been divorced, most of them during the first year or so after their return. The rate is about twice that for the military service in general, but not greatly different than that in the civilian population.

—Reflecting the self-reliance that captives' wives developed when their husbands were gone, the families of the former prisoners tend to be more matrifocal — wives have a broader voice in how things are run — than other military families.

—Some of the former prisoners experienced periods of depression after their return, and a few had problems diagnosed as post-traumatic stress disorder, but there have been no psychotics in the group, and only two known suicides.

"I think there's almost zero incidence of mental disorders and not a very high incidence of physical disorders," said Day.

"I think primarily it's because we were a little different than some of the prisoners before," he continued. "We were organized; we had an effective religious program; there was a high incidence of college degrees in the group — I'd say it was close to 90 percent."

For the most part, the reunion, which

Plains region awash

By United Press International
 Tornadoes and severe thunderstorms crisscrossed the nation's midsection today, spilling the Memorial Day Weekend for some but causing no injuries and little property damage.

Violent weather covered large portions of Texas, the central and northern Plains, the Mississippi Valley and the Southeast during the night, in other areas east of the Rockies, it was generally warm and humid.

The National Weather Service reported tornadoes during the night near Howard, S.D.; Loring, Texas; Alpine, Texas; Ellsworth, Mont.; Round Lake, Mont.; Olivia, Mont.; Springview, Neb.; Rose, Neb.; and Cahokia, Ill.

The sheriff's office at Springview, a community of 800 in north central Nebraska, said a tornado did little damage but flooded some farmland.

"There was 2 1/2 inch hail and 2 inches of rain, along with high winds that broke some windows," a sheriff's dispatcher said. "A farmer reported 4 inches of rain on his land, but no hail."

Large hail and high winds frequently accompanied the thunderstorms, but damage generally was confined to trees and power lines, the NWS said.

Near Stamford, Texas, west of Abilene, 2.9 inches of rain fell in two hours. A full inch of rain hit Norfolk, Neb., within one hour, flooding some low-lying areas.

More flash flooding was expected in West Texas and a flash flood watch was posted for the southern half of Oklahoma.

Near Amarillo in the Texas Panhandle, authorities pressed their search for cars and campsites at Palo Duro Canyon State Park, where at least three persons died in flooding during the weekend. Officials said they fear more bodies will be found in two or three days when the waters subside.

"At least 100 persons stayed at the park during the weekend, although water was still 4 to 6 feet deep Sunday at water crossings, and authorities were attempting to persuade them to leave the area."

Ray Newkirk, claims manager in Amarillo for Hartford Insurance Co., said he did not believe most area residents carried flood insurance.

"We had about a three-year drought up here and flash floods are normally 8 to 10 years apart so people normally don't worry about that," Newkirk said. "This is about all the worst I've seen and I've been here all my life."

Elsewhere, fog spread over the coastal areas of New Jersey, Delaware and portions of the Virginia coast early today, reducing some visibilities to less than one-half mile.

Fair skies, warm temperatures and high humidity prevailed in most of the Great Lakes region and Southern New England.

Tribute paid Vietnam vets
BOISE (UPI) — Rep. George V. Hansen called today for Americans to give Vietnam War veterans the same honor and respect they accorded the nation's soldiers in all other wars.

"I think we have delayed too long the tribute we owe these men and women because of the sensitivity of some about the war," Hansen said.

Hansen spoke at the annual Memorial Day observance at Veterans Memorial Park in Boise this morning and then flew to Dubois for the dedication of the new American Legion Hall there.

Texas search goes on for victims of flood

CANYON, TEXAS (UPI) — Authorities searched campsites and stranded autos today for more possible victims of weekend flash flooding that killed three persons at Palo Duro Canyon State Park and left three others missing.

Officials said they were afraid more bodies would be found when the flood waters subside.

While officials made estimates on the damage — $8 to $10 million — to the homeowners along the still-swollen Palo Duro and Tierra Blanco Creeks continued their own cleanup operations late Sunday.

A Red Cross spokesman said preliminary reports showed 12 homes and 13 trailers destroyed, 51 homes and two trailers with major damage and 47 homes with minor damage. He said Red Cross equipment and personnel were in the area, serving meals and helping flood victims.

Department of Public Safety officers evacuated 61 persons by helicopter from Palo Duro Canyon State Park, where several hundred people were camped when the Prairie Dog Fork of the Red River overflowed late Friday and early Saturday. Authorities were searching cars and campsites for more victims.

"At least 100 persons stayed in the park during the weekend, although water was still 4 to 6 feet deep Sunday at water crossings."

The body of a 24-year-old Amarillo man, which was found Sunday in the back seat of his car, which had been swept downstream by the flood.

Earlier, rescue workers found the body of Grace Taylor in her Palo Duro Canyon home, swept off its foundation by a wall of water. She also recovered the body of Nita Marie Stribling, 15, who was riding home with her boyfriend when the floodwaters washed over his car Saturday night. They became separated and her body was found later.

Mrs. John W. Storey, 59, was among the residents who saw their homes and furniture destroyed or drenched in mud.

But with her family alive Sunday, she said she would rebuild.

"We built it from the ground up," she said of her home on the banks of Prairie Dog Fork, a stream usually favored for wading and rock collecting because of its shallow, calm nature.

"We had things in there that we had accumulated for over 45 years of marriage," she said, walking through the muck and peering at two feet of water in her den.

"I don't feel angry. I don't feel like it was unjust. When you get up in the morning, you don't know what's going to happen to you."

Mrs. Storey's grandson, Jay, 18, survived the flood by straddling a bedroom door, one foot on each doorknob, until the water rose to within inches of the ceiling. He was trapped for four hours until 7 a.m. Saturday when he was pulled to safety by a passing motorboat.

privately—may echo Crocker's biggest complaint about the man who likely will command the spotlight as Congress' top foreign policy spokesman.

"Church is quick to seize the political advantage, regardless of what a responsible and thoughtful response to a situation might be."

As an example, Crocker cites Church's skillful use of an investigation, exposing botched CIA escapades to launch his belated 1976 presidential bid. During that probe, Church employed a number of gimmicks—ranging from instant-moral indignation to waving a dart gun in front of television cameras, to attract national attention.

In an individual senator, a penchant for scoring political points is, at worst, annoying. In a powerful committee head, it could spell big trouble for the President and further turmoil in the Senate's chaotic attempt to exercise its foreign policy powers.

Church's relationship with Carter, which the 54-year-old senator describes as "cordial," has never been close. The Georgians remember that the "Boy Scout from Idaho" gave their boss headaches by winning four late Democratic presidential primaries in 1976. Even Church's expert firm-managing of the marathon Panama Canal debate didn't erase old political scars.

Nevertheless, the administration has opted to downplay its obvious dismay over Church's arms sale behavior. "It does no good to create bad blood when we're going to need Frank on a lot of things over the next few years," a pragmatic administration official said. "But I can assure you, next time we'll be more careful in exacting promises."

Over the long haul, Church's political thrust may become a problem secondary to his over-all international affairs philosophy, as far as the White House is concerned.

Considered a pacifist by most, Church was one of the first to oppose the Vietnam War and to sponsor legislation to cut off funding. He generally opposes foreign aid, covert intelligence activities and arms sales — three conventional foreign policy tools.

"I view him very much in the McGovern-Come Home, America's tradition, which was overwhelmingly rejected in 1972," said Peter Crow, Dean of Georgetown's School of Foreign Service.

Two die in Idaho crashes

By United Press International
 Two persons have died in Memorial Day weekend traffic accidents in Idaho and another was listed in critical condition today.

Meantime, the head-on collision of two motorcycles on Iona Road near Idaho Falls last Monday claimed one life over the weekend and threatened to take another today.

Latest victims were Hefen E. Green, 29, Middleton; Larry V. Zaldain, 14, Nampa, and Roger Newell Piquet, 31, Idaho Falls.

Bryan W. Johnson, 16, Idaho Falls, was reported in critical condition and attends at Idaho Falls Hospital said his condition was deteriorating. David Bruce Star was reported in critical condition at St. Alphonsus Hospital in Boise.

Ms. Green was killed Sunday evening when the car she was driving and another vehicle collided at Farm Way and Utelak Road near Caldwell, the Canyon County sheriff's office said. The driver of the other car was treated at a hospital for minor injuries and released.

Zaldain died Saturday when the car in which he was riding and a vehicle driven by Jodeen Jordan, 25, Nampa, collided at the intersection of Cleveland and Latale in Caldwell.

Piquet and Johnson were hurt in the motorcycle collision near Idaho Falls last Monday. Piquet died Saturday.

Bruce was hurt Sunday evening when his motorcycle and a car driven by Paul Sigman, Emmet, collided just west of the Pierce Park Lane State Street intersection near Boise. Sigman apparently was attempting to make a left turn off State at the time of the accident, state police said. Bruce underwent surgery late Sunday night.

Files show FBI, black activist merged anti-King efforts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Newly released files reveal the FBI and an unidentified black activist worked together "in an effort to eliminate (Dr. Martin Luther) King" a few years before the civil rights leader was murdered.

The late FBI director J. Edgar Hoover's secret office files were obtained under a Freedom of Information Act request by the Center for National Security Studies, a private organization, and published Sunday.

They "reveal the extent to which King and his close associates were perceived as a threat by the FBI and kept under government surveillance during the five-year period before King's assassination" in 1968, the center said.

It said, for instance, a Dec. 1, 1964, interoffice memo to William Sullivan, then

No. 3 in the FBI hierarchy indicated "the FBI and a black leader apparently worked together in an effort to eliminate King."

The name of the collaborator was blanked out in the released document.

"(Blank) stated to DeLoach (another top FBI official) that he was faced with the difficult problem of taking steps to remove King from the national picture," the memo said.

"He indicates in his comments a lack of confidence that he, alone, could be successful. It is therefore suggested that consideration be given to the following course of action:

"That DeLoach have a further discussion with (Blank) and offer to be helpful in connection with the problem of removal of King from the national scene."

It suggested that (Blank), black leaders such as James Farmer and labor leader A. Philip Randolph, and "on a highly confidential basis could bring such a group on the security background of King," including "the use of a tape ... with a transcript for convenience in following the tape, (and) should be most convincing."

"This might have the effect of increasing the stature of (Blank) who is a capable person and is ambitious," it said.

The Senate intelligence committee reported in 1976 that the FBI had "bugged" hotel rooms used by King, allegedly recording meetings he had with women.

With the purpose of "destroying his marriage," the Senate report said, the FBI mailed King a copy of the recording, with an accompanying note "which Dr. King and his advisers interpreted as threatening to release the tape recording unless Dr. King committed suicide."

King was shot and killed in Memphis, Tenn., April 4, 1968. James Earl Ray, an escaped convict, pleaded guilty to the murder and is serving a 99-year prison sentence.

Soviet, E. German links to Zaire invasion hinted

WASHINGTON (UPI) — National security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski has widened the administration's charges of those responsible for the rebel invasion of Zaire to include the Soviet Union and possibly East Germany.

ZBIGNIEW BRZEZINSKI offers Senate proof

Brzezinski, interviewed on NBC's "Meet the Press" Sunday, said the administration has evidence that "sustains the conclusion that the Cuban government and in some measure the Soviet government bear the responsibility for the invasion by rebels based in Angola, a Marxist country."

He also suggested the involvement of yet another Soviet ally, saying the invasion "could not have taken place without the invading parties having been armed and trained by the Cubans and indeed perhaps also the East Germans."

The interview followed President Carter's accusation Thursday that Cuba armed and trained the rebels, and a clash Saturday in which Secretary of State Cyrus Vance took exception to a remark by Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko that Carter was misinformed about the situation in Africa.

"I do not believe that this kind of Soviet-Cuban involvement ought to be cost free ...," Brzezinski said. "There are a variety of ways in which concerned countries can convince the Soviets and the Cubans that their involvement, their intrusion, is not only conducive to greater international instability, but in fact carries with it consequences which may be inimical to them as well."

Brzezinski also offered to provide information about the Zaire invasion to Congress: "If the Senate desires more information, I am certain that we can provide it."

Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, told reporters last week that Cuban officials informed him privately their nation had not promoted the invasion.

Brzezinski also said he discussed the problem of Soviet-Cuban intervention in Africa with Chinese leaders on his trip this month to Peking.

He said the Chinese have been very critical of the Soviet and Cuban presence on the African continent, "and in my very comprehensive consultations with the Chinese leaders I did have the opportunity to discuss this issue."

In response to a question asking whether detente with the Soviets is dead, Brzezinski said detente is competitive as well as cooperative.

"At one time or another, either the cooperative or the competitive aspects tend to be more predominant," he said. "I would say that today the competitive aspects have somewhat surfaced and I would say categorically that this is due to the short-sighted Soviet conduct in the course of the last two or so years."

Oil well burns

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Flames leaping from a raging oil well fire that has killed seven engineers, including two Americans, turned back a team of Texan Red Adair's crack firefighters today.

William Henry and Raymond Dwyer, employees of Adair, moved in earlier with explosives to try to blow out the well fire burning into its fifth day near Ahvaz, about 340 miles southwest of Tehran.

Tongues of huge red flames drove the truck, and a spokesman at the National Iranian Oil Company said Henry and Dwyer will not use dynamite now to plug the flames but will try to cap two valves on top of the well that are "still intact."

They will try and enter the perimeter of the fire later today in a special fireproof cabin, cooled by two six-inch water hoses running full-blast, the spokesman said.

Now it's psychological war

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Communist party newspaper Pravda said today the United States has switched from force to psychological warfare in a drive aimed at making the world over "American style."

Pravda said that on taking office, the Carter administration stepped up psychological warfare against Communist countries. It cited appropriations for construction of additional transmitters for Radio Liberty, Radio Free Europe and the Voice of America. It described the first two as the radio stations of the CIA.

Pravda also noted the administration's merger of the U.S. Information Agency with the State Department's Bureau for Education and Culture, Pravda said.

The newspaper said "only naive people can believe" these actions were taken because of "some moral considerations or religious fears of the leaders of the Washington administration."

"The point at issue is a large-scale psychological warfare operation against the socialist countries, the world Communist and working class movement," it said.

Union strife may halt mail

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A bitter inter-union dispute is disrupting U.S. Postal Service negotiations with four unions and threatening a nationwide strike when current contracts expire July 20.

The National Alliance of Postal and Federal Employees — which includes militants who staged wildcat postal strikes in 1970 — has filed a petition seeking jurisdiction over 40,000 members of the Mail Handlers Union, one of the four unions that have been bargaining with the Postal Service since April for a new contract covering 550,000 workers.

The NAFPE is not represented at the negotiations and wants to take over the Mail Handlers' seat at the bargaining table.

If the National Labor Relations Board determines the challenge petitions contain enough valid signatures, it could stop the Mail Handlers from participating in the bargaining.

The new development comes amid reports the administration has prepared plans to cut the military to assure some form of mail delivery in the event of a strike.

TWIN FALLS - Political campaigns produce gimmicks like rainstorms produce mushrooms.

And with eight persons running for governor it's not surprising a few candidates have pegged themselves as "the man with the plan." The plan to cure the woes of government, that is. James Crowe, a Coeur d'Alene businessman and Republican aspirant for governor, is the latest candidate with a clutch of fine sounding ideas.

Zero-based budgeting and sunset laws look terrific on paper.

Sunset laws, for instance, are aimed at eliminating "unnecessary" government. In Colorado, where sunset laws first appeared, a special procedure is established - generally a reviewing committee - by which government agencies must justify their existence at fixed intervals.

The premise of zero-based budgeting assumes previous budget requests have tended to establish a base amount - usually the funding needed to continue last year's services - and then restrict debate to questions of additional appropriations.

What Crowe is saying is Idaho government is too large. That's a debatable but defensible position.

But zero-based budgets and sunset laws aren't the answers to growing government. They're merely attempts to find a quick fix for a complex problem. They may also backfire, producing more difficulties than they solve.

Sunset laws would force agencies to undergo periodic examination. But they would also surely produce agencies spending an increased amount of time lobbying for their own existence.

Government would be increased in the process of decreasing government.

Crowe isn't the only candidate searching for a quick fix. Gov. John Evans, a Democrat, has also scored a few cheap publicity points arguing before the television cameras for zero-based budgets and sunset laws.

no realize his two concepts are little more than gimmicks, something which can't be said of a political veteran like Evans.

It isn't that government doesn't occasionally become bloated or unresponsive. It does. It's just that the answer to that problem is harder than merely passing a new law. The hard part is saying no.

Every idea proposed in zero-based budgeting and sunset legislation has already been advanced. Every power those laws would give government, the legislature already has.

A governor or a legislature can perhaps slow the growth of government by hiring fewer persons to staff agencies. But if government is ever to be severely cut back, voters must learn to say no and ask for fewer services from government.

Some will drink, others will recycle

The long Memorial Day weekend could provide a big boost to the city of Hansen's drive to raise money for a new fire truck.

A mountain of aluminum beer and soft drink cans will stack up this weekend around Twin Falls County, giving Hansen's recycling brigade the chance to collect hundreds of dollars worth of cans for their fire truck fund drive.

So far, Hansen residents have generated about $300 toward the purchase of a new fire truck simply by collecting and recycling aluminum cans.

The $300 will only buy about one wheel rim of a new fire truck but a few more crowded holidays like this one and the new fire truck could be paid off in no time - if only the cans emptied alongside a favorite fishing hole could somehow end up in Hansen's recycling bins.

On a less frivolous note, the recycling efforts in Hansen show again that recycling has come of age in Idaho.

More than 148,000 pounds of aluminum cans, screen doors and TV trays have recycled at the Reynolds aluminum recycling center in Twin Falls the first three months of 1978.

The figure represents a 50 percent increase over the record recycling pace set in 1977 at the Twin Falls facility.

The Coors beer recycling center in Twin Falls also reports 1978 as bumper year for crushed cans being returned for cash.

On this Memorial Day, then, the city of Hansen's town motto may well read, "while some will drink, others will recycle." It's an adage more people than ever will remember as they begin picking up their aluminum cans after three days of celebrating in the sun.

Janet Guthrie kept her cool

On Sunday, Janet Guthrie drove through a decades-old barrier at the Indianapolis Speedway. Al Unser won the Indianapolis 500 Sunday but Janet Guthrie was the darling of the crowd.

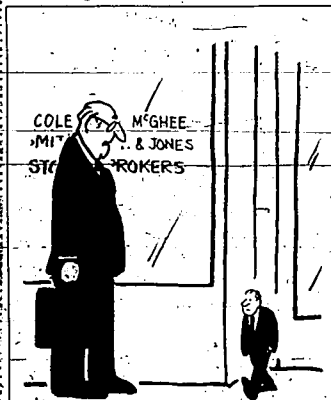

The only woman at the Indy 500 starting line yesterday, the 40-year-old Guthrie allayed for all time the notion that women shouldn't race automobiles or can't perform as well as men in big races.

Guthrie finished eighth at Indy, ahead of 25 of the best male racers in the country.

After her last pit stop, Guthrie's mechanics help up a chalkboard message that read, "Keep Cool Baby."

That's what Janet did on Sunday. She kept her cool and drove into the Indy 500 record books as the first woman ever to finish among the top 10 at the Memorial Day Classic.

Warming up for Atlantic City

NEW YORK - Knowing nothing about gambling and being eager to cut a suave figure in Atlantic City, I went to Reno this week for instruction under a man named Ernie.

"It'll start you out on slot machines," said Ernie, which seemed appropriate since the entire city of Reno seemed to be one gigantic slot machine. He took me to one that seemed suspiciously small. "Just put your money in the machine," he said.

I objected. When I put money into a slot machine, I expect it to give me back 30 pounds of damp laundry. This machine was too small to wash two pairs of socks.

"It's not supposed to wash things," said Ernie. Do I get a candy bar? "Of course not."

A pack of cigarettes, a stale sandwich, a diet cola? "Don't be silly," said Ernie. "It's a slot machine. It pays off in money."

I put in a large sum of money quickly. The machine gobbled the money with a series of satisfied clicks and belches and stared at me like a machine that wanted more.

"This machine is broken, Ernie. Let's report it to the management."

Ernie said not to behave like a greenhorn. The machine was designed to keep most of the money put into it so there would be enough in it for some lucky person to whom it took a fancy.

What could I do to make it like me? "Put in more money," said Ernie.

I did. This apparently angered the machine. It was a machine whose affections could not be bought.

"Could I not have saved myself from the humiliation of rejection, in addition to the costs of a trip to Nevada, by taking my week's salary to the 5th Street Bridge and dropping it into the East River? "True," said Ernie, "but you would have missed the thrill of gambling." All around us for blocks and blocks thousands of people were enjoying the thrill of gambling. Most of them, people of advanced years, were pumping their ~~hair~~ ~~sewing~~ ~~stitching~~ ~~checks~~ into machines with an intensity of purpose and a glassiness of eye that would have appalled their life-insurance agencies.

"You don't have the dedication it takes to make a great slot machine player," said Ernie. "You're probably a roulette man."

He pointed to a large wheel and a small ball engaged in counter-rotation. All around it sat people surrendering money in return for the right to see where the ball would come to rest on the wheel.

I had never been interested in watching balls come to rest on wheels.

"Of course not," said Ernie. "That's because you don't have a week's pay riding on a bet that the ball will come to rest on a number you like. Try it."

A quick look at the wheel indicated that the ball had a choice of something like 35 or 40 numbers to come to rest on. I didn't like any of them. I put down a large sum on number one; because it reminded me of Richard Nixon, so seemed to make money at whatever he did.

The ball stopped on number 23. The ball didn't like me.

"Don't be paranoid," said Ernie. "There are almost 40 numbers that can choose from. When you choose one, it means you got almost 39 chances to lose against only one chance to win."

"Then why didn't I bet on myself to lose, since it was almost a sure thing?"

"Because that's what the house bets," said Ernie, "and under the rules you've always got to bet against what the house bets."

It sounded as if the house could never lose. "Practically never," Ernie said.

And what it could never lose was my money? "You don't understand the thrill of gambling," said Ernie. "The thrill of gambling is what happens to you that big night when you prove to the house that nobody - even you - can be a sap 100 percent of the time."

How long did it take to experience this thrill? "You're probably a poker man," replied Ernie.

It seemed unlikely. "A dice player," Ernie said.

I said I preferred laundromat. You hardly ever lost more than a few socks.

"You've got no sense of public responsibility," said Ernie. "Do you realize that Nevada needs your money to avoid bankruptcy? That Atlantic City needs your money so it can quit being a crummy, rundown dilapidation and become the Queen City of the Eastern Seaboard?"

I proposed sending a month's salary to the governor of Nevada and another to the mayor of Atlantic City.

"That would look like you're trying to corrupt public life," said Ernie.

I didn't want to corrupt public life. I found a slot machine that despised me and pumped a quick fortune down its jaw, and after that my shirt. It was thrilling.

Washington housewives have it tough

WASHINGTON - As you have probably read, Washington is a tough town for wives, especially when they go to dinners and cocktail parties. The first thing a woman is asked is, "What do you do?" If she admits to being just a housewife, the person who asks the question immediately loses interest in her.

A friend of mine named Lucy told me she got sick and tired of being asked the question, so she has come up with some replies that really throw the person who asked it.

Lucy said, "It came by accident one night when a man sitting next to me asked, 'What do you do?'"

"I told him 'I'm a paper clip inspector for the State Department.'"

"He said, 'You're kidding me.'"

"I said, 'I am not. They have to be twisted just right or the State Department papers won't stick together, and some of them could get lost. What do you do?' He just blushed and said, 'Nothing.'"

Lucy said, "Ever since then, while I'm dressing to go out, I think of something to say for that moment when the inevitable question comes up."

"Give me some examples," I pleaded.

"Not long ago a woman who thought she was important asked me what I did and I told her, 'I'm a food taster for HEW Secretary Callfano.' And at another party, a congressman put the question to me and I told him, 'I design white lines for shopping mall parking lots.'"

"I also told a general once that I run a half-way house for FBI informers."

"Those are very good," I said.

"My husband thinks I'm overdoing it," Lucy told me. "But he doesn't try to stop me. Once we were at a Georgetown party and all the people were full of themselves, dropping names and quoting VIPs they had shaken to that day. Then someone asked in a very patronizing way, 'What did you do today?'"

"I finished carrying the last garbage on the Washington Cathedral. I thought the wind would blow me off the steeple."

"What did they all say?"

"What could they say? After that we were the quietest table in the room."

"Does anyone get thrown when you tell them what you do?"

"All the time," Lucy replied. "A few weeks ago a commissioner from one of the federal agencies asked me the question and I said, 'I can't do anything for the moment until the grand jury decides whether or not to indict me. I promised to pay back the money, but my lawyer says the Feds still want to pursue it. His eyes popped out of his head, and then I added, 'Maybe you can help me. You don't know any judges who can be bought in this town, do you?'"

"What did he say to that?"

Lucy chuckled. "He said, 'May I get you another drink?' And I never saw him again."

She continued, "Newspapermen are the worst. If you're not 'somebody' they refuse to talk to you. Once a columnist who was working a room of an embassy stopped for a moment between ambassadors and asked, 'Who are you?'"

"I told him, 'I'm from Lloyd's of London assigned to watch Elizabeth Taylor's diamond necklace. If anyone makes a move toward it, I have orders to shoot. Now get out of my way because you're in the line of fire!'"

"What did he do?"

"He couldn't keep his eyes off my pocketbook for the rest of the evening."

Is saving going out of fashion?

By DON GRAFF

Saving for a rainy day has been going out of fashion in the United States.

Or it could be that for most Americans that day is already here - a veritable cloudburst - in the form of apparently no-end inflation.

Whatever their reasons, U.S. wage earners are socking less of their income into savings than those in any other major industrial country, according to a recent survey by The Wall Street Journal.

In 1977, Americans saved 5.1 percent of total after-tax income. This put them at the bottom of a list headed by Japan (21.6 percent) and followed by France (11.1 percent), West Germany (14 percent), Britain (13.4 percent) and Canada (9.8 percent).

Worse, the U.S. savings rate has been declining steadily - from 7.5 percent in 1967 while the trend is up for the others. Canada, for example, starting at 6.2 percent picked up 8.5 points in the same period.

Inflation does not adequately explain the U.S. trend. Britain, for example, has been hit much more severely during the past decade but nevertheless has outpaced the United States in rate of savings.

If the reasons are unclear, the implication is not Americans are not interested as much in their future as their industrial partners, competitors are.

It is interesting that the savings growth countries included those with shaky economies - Britain, France and currently Canada - and also the powerhouses - West Germany and Japan.

None of these economies, as it happens, is expanding at the rate of the American - currently some 7 percent annually.

Expansion and growth, however, are not necessarily the same thing. U.S. expansion is primarily the product of spending on consumables. This is spending for present gratification.

Capital spending, which is an investment in future growth and for which savings are a major source of funds, has not been keeping pace. The Commerce Department figures total capital investment in 1977 at 17 percent of the gross national product, against the lowest figure among major nations. In Japan it was 30 percent, in Canada 21 percent.

An immediate consequence, according to the survey, could be a sharp rise in interest rates - in the event an optimum in industrial expansion placed too great a demand on the limited supply of savings resources. For the individual, this would translate into higher rates on mortgages, bank loans and the like.

Kolwezi fears new rebel attack

KINSHASA, Zaire (UPI) — About 150 French Foreign Legionnaires and 1,000 Zairian troops guarded Kolwezi today amid fears that hundreds of Katangese rebels lurking in the bush would regroup for another attack.

The bulk of the 700-man French force that parachuted into the town 11 days ago to rescue 7,500 whites withdrew Sunday to Lubumbashi, 125 miles to the north, before returning to their base on the Mediterranean island of Corsica.

As the legionnaires left, sources said the security in Kolwezi and Shaba province was precarious, with several hundred Katangese rebels roaming the area and capable of launching another attack.

News reports from Kolwezi said some of the handful of whites who remained in the town have received written death threats. Sources said looting, allegedly by black civilians and Zairian troops, already was taking place.

In Paris today, Zaire President Mobutu Sese Seko held an unscheduled 30-minute meeting with President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing at the Elysee Presidential palace and then left for Rabat, Morocco.

The Zaire president, who arrived in Paris Tuesday before going on to Rabat, to meet with King Hassan II, made no comment as he left the presidential palace.

Hassan II last year sent troops to Shaba to help quell a similar rebel incursion.

Reporters in Kolwezi said the 150 legionnaires left in the town awaiting the arrival of a relief force of 100 Moroccan soldiers had barricaded themselves in their Impala Hotel headquarters.

"It's like a Beau Geste castle down there now, with the legionnaires patrolling the white walls of the hotel and setting up machine-gun nests on the roof," one witness said.

"The atmosphere down there is already very different," another said. "It has become very ominous."

The official AZAP news agency said Sunday the 1,000 Zairian troops were "cleaning up rebel pockets" near Kolwezi. Sources said the rebels recaptured the key railroad town of Hutshabata, 83 miles west of Kolwezi, but there was no direct communication with the area and the situation remained confused.

But several hundred rebels, who quickly gained a reputation among the French troops as tough bush fighters, were believed to be hiding out throughout Shaba province.

The French Legionnaires, dropped over Katwezi May 19 and joined later by a Belgian paratrooper, drove the rebels from the key mining center but not before an estimated 200 had been massacred.

The rebels withdrew into the bush, taking with them about 60 whites as hostages, military officials said. A column of rebels in stolen vehicles fled into Zambia and other rebels made it to Marxist Angola where they were received with open arms by the government.

Castro pledges friendship

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — President Fidel Castro of Cuba has pledged "militant solidarity" with Ethiopia despite reports of growing strains between the two Marxist countries.

Castro's statement, reported by Addis Ababa radio Sunday, was sent to Ethiopian leader Lt. Col. Mengistu Haile Mariam to mark the 18th anniversary of the Organization of African Unity, headquartered in the Ethiopian capital.

The radio said Castro's message "renews Cuba's support for, and militant solidarity with, the just struggle of the Ethiopian people."

The Cuban leader was quoted as saying the anniversary celebrations coincided with the "historic Victory achieved by the Ethiopian people in defense of their sovereignty, independence and territorial integrity."

This was a reference to the Ogaden desert war, in which Ethiopian troops with the crucial aid of thousands of Cuban soldiers defeated Somali forces last March.

Last week, there were reports that the Ethiopian government had expelled Cuban Ambassador Jose Perez Nova, and his aide, Frank Ortiz Rodriguez, after they became close with the leadership of a banned political group known as MEISON, the Amharic-language initials for the All Ethiopian Socialist Movement.

CHINESE CROSS BORDER AFTER VIETNAM EVICTED THEM ... persecution charges leveled against Hanoi

Hanoi seeks Peking talks

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Vietnam today charged China with supporting Cambodian "aggression" and asked for talks in Peking within two weeks in a sign of a widening rift between the former wartime allies.

Radio Hanoi, monitored in Bangkok, said officials at the proposed talks would discuss a Chinese plan to evacuate overseas Chinese from Halphong and Ho Chi Minh City, formerly Saigon.

But other broadcasts carried high-level criticism of China, which for the first time directly linked China to cross-border attacks by Cambodia, and charged the Peking government with ignoring "persecutions and massacres" of ethnic Chinese in Cambodia.

The proposal for talks "in the early part of June" came in a note handed to the Chinese Ambassador to Hanoi; Chen Chih-fang, early today by Vietnam's deputy foreign minister, Hoang Bich Son, the radio report said.

"The two sides will discuss among other things China's proposal of sending ships to Halphong and Ho Chi Minh City to pick up Hoa (ethnic Chinese) people who want to return to China," Radio Hanoi said.

"The two sides will also discuss other problems of mutual interest concerning Vietnam-China relations."

Vietnam took the offensive in its five-day public dispute with Peking in an article in today's Nhan Dan (People's) newspaper. The editorial was signed by "the Commentator," a pseudonym used by members of the ruling communist party Politburo.

While it called for talks with China as soon as possible, the tone of newspaper article was highly critical of Peking.

"The Vietnamese people are not stupid when friends change heart," it said. "They are not blindly loyal."

Some observers said the article, broadcast by Radio Hanoi and monitored in Bangkok, likely will widen the deepening split between the Communist neighbors recent wartime allies.

The mention of Chinese support for Cambodia in its conflict with Vietnam was the first time Hanoi media have directly linked the two. Previously they said only that "international reactionaries" were helping Phnom Penh.

The Chinese propaganda attack on Vietnam "comes exactly at the time Cambodian authorities are intensifying their large-scale war of aggression along the entire Vietnamese border," the editorial said.

Honorary degree presented to TV's Alan Alda

By United Press International
ALDA LANG SYNE

Alan Alda, Hawkeye of TV's "M.A.S.H.," returned to his alma mater, Fordham University, Sunday to pick up an honorary degree in fine arts and talk about — what else? — television. The graduate of '56 told the class of '78 in New York City that censors may be missing the mark in their all-prevailing efforts to regulate what goes out over the tube. Says Alda: "Networks employ dozens of censors to prevent us from using language on television that 12-year-olds might have to explain to their parents. But it's not so much what we say that teaches as what we don't say. It's the unspoken assumptions that mold an audience."

ROCKING THE HOUSE

The screenings are over at Cannes and now the bodies of filmfest royalty have little to do but work their way up to Tuesday's awards announcements. Best American bet for the coveted Golden Palm Award include Paul Mazursky's "An Unmarried Woman" and Hal Ashby's "Coming Home." But if the fans had their way, Martin Scorsese's "The Last Waltz" — not an official entry — would be right up there. The film about a 1976 farewell party for the rock group The Band created the biggest ruckus of this year's film fest, as admirers strained at police lines for a glimpse of Scorsese or leading guitarist Robbie Robertson.

THE BOBORN
Jim Garrison, former New Orleans prosecutor and conspiracy hound in the John Kennedy assassination case, has a new life on the other side of the bench. The 6-foot-6 Garrison Saturday was elected to a seat on the 4th Louisiana Court of Appeal — his third try for a judgeship since being dropped as D.A. in 1972. "Rumors of my (political) death were greatly exaggerated," whooped the man whose efforts to crack the Kennedy "conspiracy" ended in nothing more than a $5 million damage suit against him. "I was right for the job and the job was right for me. I never had a moment's doubt."

THE SELLING OF THE PRESIDENT
Early word was that Richard Nixon's memoirs were bombing at the book stores, but now publishers Grosset and Dunlap say the word may have been premature. G&D president Harold Roth told reporters in Atlanta this weekend that far from being a sales catastrophe, "The Memoirs of Richard Nixon" is a moderate success. In its third week of distribution, the book has sold 150,000-175,000 copies — well past the 50,000 break-even point and "very satisfactory," Roth says. He's not so happy with efforts to boycott the book. He says: "It's shocking and deplorable that some people find something inappropiate about the right of Mr. Nixon to express his point of view."

GLIMPSES
Susan Anne O'Neill, daughter of U.S. House Speaker Thomas "Tip" O'Neill, is planning to marry Rhode Island legislator Bruce Daniel, Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker, chief U.S. negotiator for the new Panama Canal treaty, was awarded an honorary doctor of jurisprudence degree Sunday by St. Michael's College in Vermont. Miriam Makeba will be in New York June 16 for a concert at the Felt Forum, her first U.S. appearance in four years.

Cugat listed fair

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Latin band leader Xavier Cugat, 78, hospitalized for medical evaluation, was in fair condition today and "seems to be doing fine."
A spokeswoman at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center said the 78-year Cugat did not suffer a heart attack, as was previously believed, and was in a regular room, not the coronary-care unit. Cugat, whose name became synonymous in the 1930s with Latin rhythms and dances such as the rumba, mambo, samba and cha-cha, was taken to the hospital by ambulance Sunday. Initial reports said he had suffered an apparent heart attack at his home.
However, the spokeswoman said Cugat's physician ordered the band leader brought in by ambulance because "he felt it would be most appropriate since he had a stroke five years ago. He seems to be doing fine."

AMY CARTER PERFORMS WITH HER VIOLIN
... at eighth annual Suzuki String Recital

First family watches Amy play in Virginia concert

VIENNA, Va. (UPI) — President Carter and his wife Rosalynn were proud parents in the audience of a two-hour concert in which daughter Amy played "Twinkle Twinkle" on the violin.
The first family was among some 3,000 fond parents and relatives who watched a two-hour performance Sunday at Wolf Trap, a national park for the performing arts located about 10 miles from Washington.
Some of the young musicians cried, some giggled, others sat and stared and the crowd and one boy used his bow to tidy up the stage. Amy was serious throughout her performance although her parents' expressions turned to smiles as she played.

About 600 youngsters, some as young as 3, used violins, cellos and violas to play the music of Bach, Vivaldi, Beethoven and other composers. All are learning the Suzuki method, which stresses listening to the music "rather than reading it."
Amy, a beginner, performed in the final segment of the program, along with most of the rest of the cast.
Amy has been taking lessons since the fall, along with her mother. Mrs. Carter did not perform.

Legal gambling

Opening day receipts high

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (UPI) — The long lines outside the East Coast's first gambling den during the Memorial Day weekend and its awesome gross receipts make local merchants confident they will hit the jackpot.
"It is very definitely going to help us," said Lawrence Alber, operating partner of the Steel Pier, an amusement pier on the Boardwalk as the crowds filed by Sunday on their way to the Resorts International Hotel-Casino.
On the third day of legal gambling in Atlantic City, Alber said, "I think the town definitely is on the upswing. It can't be stopped now. It's a matter of how far and how fast."

tables since that historic moment.
One reliable source — not associated with Resorts — told UPI the casino was taking in over $500,000 a day. The source said the receipts for the opening day were higher than for any one day of any Nevada casino.
Resorts officials were more cautious. Vice President H. Steven Norton said that if the MGM Grand Hotel casino in Las Vegas — which is about the same size as the casino here — is any indication, the Atlantic City gambling hall is taking in about $25,000 a day.
Local merchants say the visitors aren't confining their spending to the chrome slot machines, the colorful roulette wheels, the bright green gaming tables and the huge Big 6 Wheels.

"It has increased my business maybe 40 percent already," said William Rowan, owner of Alan's Cigar Store.
"It will give us a boost," said Marie Hagins, assistant manager of the 36-year-old Flanders Peanut shop. "This past winter was nothing. We never closed so much. This winter, we hope it will be different."
"We've definitely turned the corner," said Philip DeGroot, vice-president and general manager of the Sheraton-Seaside Hotel, located across the street from the casino's back entrance.

Nixon book 'success'

ATLANTA (UPI) — Despite boycotts and hostile editors, Americans appear to be making the recently published memoirs of former President Richard M. Nixon a moderate success in the bookstores.

Nixon's lengthy autobiography, entitled "The Memoirs of Richard Nixon," is in its third week of distribution and has already sold between 150,000 to 175,000 copies, according to the book's publishers, Grosset and Dunlap.
Harold Roth, president of the firm, told reporters in Atlanta the book is doing much better than early, "premature" publicity indicated. He said sales had already greatly exceeded the break-even margin of 50,000 sales and indications were sales would increase.
Roth and Robert Markel, editor-in-chief of Grosset and Dunlap, spoke with reporters Saturday at a convention of authors and publishers in Atlanta.

"The book right now is selling very well in some parts of the country; less well in others, but overall the results are very satisfactory," said Roth.
Roth said sales were increasing despite a formal boycott by a group which admonishes the public: "Don't Buy Books By Crooks."
"I do understand, by virtue of Mr. Nixon's performance, the violence of the emotion he has aroused," he said of the boycott. "But I do not understand anything that reflects the implicit censorship bookstores or the press may be trying to impose."
Roth said he was "shocked and dismayed" that critics regarded the book's publication "as either an immoral or inappropriate act."
"I think it's shocking and deplorable that some people find something inappropriate about the right of Mr. Nixon to express his point of view. Bookstores that take it upon themselves the role of censorship to determine the right of people to read what they want to read are treading on extremely dangerous ground."

New trial ordered

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (UPI) — The Supreme Court today ordered a new trial for Dutch millionaire art collector Pieter Menlen, 78, sentenced to 15 years jail last year for participating in a Nazi massacre in wartime Poland.
Menlen appealed the sentence handed down by an Amsterdam court last December and the Supreme Court nullified the lower court's judgement, finding it ruled incorrectly on certain requests by Menlen's lawyer.

These included requests that the Justice ministry make available all its documents on Menlen for the period 1950-1952 and a defense request to present witnesses not on the list prepared by the court.

Americans want to know when beef spiral ends

BY NICK GREGORY
CHICAGO (UPI) — Americans will eat less beef in 1978 than they did in 1976, and they will pay more for it. But they want to know why, and when prices will end their upward spiral.

"That was the word from a two-man team of cattlemen on a recent visit to Chicago where they explained what has happened, what they think will happen, and what they hope they can do to eliminate extreme and rapid price changes in their industry."

Richard A. McDougal of Lovelock, Nev., president of the National Cattlemen's Association, and Lauren Carlisle of Chokio, Minn., NCA vice president, agreed the beefs coming from American households are not only justified but manifested in industry projections indicating per capita beef consumption in 1978 will drop to 118 pounds compared with 129 in 1976.

But the cattlemen also are businessmen and contended laws of supply and demand have made their "Home on the Range," a harsh experience the last five years.

"In the period from 1973 to 1978," McDougal said, "our production costs have gone up 49 percent. The price we received in the same time has gone up only 11 percent. It was the worst depression in the history of our industry."

"Thousands of cattlemen were forced out of business or went broke, and few if any have received a fair return on their investment."

The problems in the five-year period included the usual occupational hazards, plus some that are not usually present, such as price controls, a consumer boycott and a jump in feedgrains prices of more than 100 percent over a relatively brief period of time. All were damaging to cattlemen's profits.

But the consumer benefitted because prices declined dramatically.

The bargains came along because "too many cattle producers were forced to liquidate prematurely," McDougal said. "The droughts of 1977 and 1978 caused some of it. And there were overvalued loans forcing others out."

"All of that early liquidation brought a flood of supplies into the market within a short period of time and at a sacrifice in quality and taste. Animals that normally mature at around 1,000 pounds, were sold to packers as low as 800 pounds."

Communications within the industry, McDougal said, also is a serious problem.

"There are about 1.5 million cattlemen in the country. And they're all making decisions individually, none knowing what the other is doing."

McDougal said the industry would like more stabilization of pricing and a fair profit for producers. He conceded the goal might be difficult to achieve.

"We feel it is our responsibility to modify cycles and temper growth to avoid extreme highs and lows. It's a big order, but we've got to try if we're going to survive."

McDougal said he would like NCA to establish guidelines for herd rehabilitation as one step that would bring more stability. He said "preaching moderation should help, too."

McDougal said loans to prospective cattlemen should be scrutinized closer by lending agencies, especially in cases involving marginal operators.

"What about pricing relief for the consumer?"

"With prices going up as they have been recently," McDougal said, "there should be more beef available eventually, because cattlemen respond to that economic signal of profit that tells them it makes sense for me to keep some cattle home and build up my herd."

But building up a herd, McDougal said, could be a four-year program — or as long as it takes for cattle being withheld today to grow to maturity, bear offspring and then wait for the offspring to reach market weight.

High pressure building off the West Coast is changing the air flow over Idaho to northwesterly, and this is bringing about the change in weather.

About the only effect of this change on southern Idaho will be gusty winds and slightly cooler temperatures.

The extended outlook for southern Idaho for Wednesday through Friday: Dry with a warming trend. Highs around 70 by mid-week, and 75-85 by Friday. Lows 35-45 Wednesday and in the 40s by Friday.

Hard times grip U.S. farm center

By WILLIAM DICKINSON IV
BONNER SPRINGS, Kan. (UPI) — A blood-green-eyed mannequin, fashionably dressed in a circa 1870 red satin dress, stands next to a Stetson and Sons plow.

But the mannequin, like the Agricultural Hall of Fame and National Center which it is displayed, has fallen on hard times. One hand is raising a finger to get from the other.

The hall, located 12 miles west of Kansas City, opened its doors in 1965 to honor the "American Farmer" under a charter granted by Congress.

But financial success has been elusive. Unable to pay off its $500,000 mortgage due May 15, the hall had to obtain an extension of the note.

Bill Davis Jr., president of the hall, said that despite the financial problems, "We are probably doing better now than any time during the 18-year history of the hall." He estimates up to 100,000 visitors may stop by the hall this year — 20,000 more than the 1977 record of 80,000.

Officials also said they have plans to drill into one of three or four abandoned natural gas wells on the 25-acre property in an effort to cut utility costs. Surplus gas would be sold off to help meet mortgage payments. Drilling may begin this month, according to Tom Higgins, a member of the hall's board of trustees, said members of the state bureau passed a resolution at their annual meeting this year asking each farm family donate 20 cents to the center. The American Farm Bureau has also expressed support. Armstrong said the Bureau's slogan is, "80 cents, the price of one Big Mac, to get the bankers off the Ag Hall's back."

"We have to make the first move," Armstrong said. "Other industries then will be forthcoming (in support)."

Future plans for the hall, established as a national education and historical corporation, include a learning center and a science technology center. The latest addition, a library, opened last month.

"I think it is a shame to the agriculture industry and something I think is very appropriate," Armstrong said. "It's not just another museum. We have plenty of them."

The exhibits contain a variety of antiques and memorabilia. On a wall in the main building hangs a console mirror from the first opera house in Kansas City, Kan. Several old-time record players sit nearby.

Other exhibits in the main hall include pictures of the 50 state flowers, a collection of washing machines, various farm tools, oen bells, water pumps, weight scales, hundreds of different pieces of barbed wire, a collection of salt and pepper shakers and butter churns. Amidst the antiquity is a modern display on artificial insemination of cattle.

The main hall also boasts such items as a mail cart, baby cradles, a vacuum cleaner, a horse-drawn pleasure carriage and a collection of ovens.

On a wall hangs a large painting, which in 1915 won George Melville Stone first prize at the Panama Exposition. It depicts a woman in a corset at harvest time holding a scythe in one hand, a shield in the other, and the horn of plenty at her feet.

Behind the main building is a second exhibition hall. About 30 rusted tractors, some with hand cranks, and other farm machinery are parked along a path to a two-room school house.

States due fund from timber sale

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Agriculture Department expects to return to 43 states and Puerto Rico an estimated $240.9 million from timber sales, grazing and other uses of federal lands this year, the department said Tuesday.

Assistant Secretary M. Rupert Cutler said advance notice is being given to states so they can plan their budgets, but actual shares may differ from estimates.

The funds are earmarked for public schools and roads.

The national forest payments to the states and Puerto Rico will be made about Dec. 1, based on receipts from the fiscal year that will end Sept. 30. State shares of grasslands will be based on revenues collected this calendar year and will be paid about March 1, 1979.

Money is returned to the states under a law which requires the Forest Service to turn back 25 percent of its collections from timber sales, grazing, recreation, mineral and land use charges.

Deducted from the 25 percent are credits to timber purchasers for building roads and funds used by the Forest Service to improve timber sales.

The funds are returned to states where the 187 million acres of National Forest System lands are located.

McCartier said the Idaho Falls office reported the greatest volume of emergency loan approvals — $3.4 million — as of March 30.

Other offices reporting included Shoshone, $7.5 million; Soda Springs, $7.2 million; Pocatello, $5.9 million; Malad, $4.9 million; Gosport, $4.3 million; Boise, $4.1 million; Welter, $3.8 million; Lewiston, $3.1 million; and Gooding, $2.5 million.

"This large amount of assistance has, I am sure, resulted in keeping many family farmers in business," McCartier said, "who otherwise would have been forced to liquidate."

$70 million aided victims of drought

BOISE (UPI) — The Farmers Home Administration says its emergency loan program helped avert the blow struck by drought conditions last year which left many Idaho farmers and ranchers in financial straits.

Joe T. McCartier, state director of the U.S. Department of Agriculture rural credit agency, said financial assistance of some $70 million has been approved for hundreds of Idaho drought victims.

"More than 300 million has already been distributed through our 30 field offices," he said.

McCartier said the Idaho Falls office reported the greatest volume of emergency loan approvals — $3.4 million — as of March 30.

Other offices reporting included Shoshone, $7.5 million; Soda Springs, $7.2 million; Pocatello, $5.9 million; Malad, $4.9 million; Gosport, $4.3 million; Boise, $4.1 million; Welter, $3.8 million; Lewiston, $3.1 million; and Gooding, $2.5 million.

"This large amount of assistance has, I am sure, resulted in keeping many family farmers in business," McCartier said, "who otherwise would have been forced to liquidate."

Kentucky tragedy: The fire is still raging

Survivors are still haunted by the fire that claimed 165 lives and injured 60

One year ago, the worst U.S. fire disaster in a quarter century struck the Beverly Hills Supper Club in Southgate, Ky. The final death toll of 165 could have been far worse but for the quick thinking of an 18-year-old busboy, Gene Zorick, a Pulitzer prize winning reporter, who helped direct coverage of the tragedy, recreating the moment when courage confronted death in the first of a two-part series.

By GENE GOLTZ
© Field Enterprises, Inc.

The Beverly Hills Supper Club went up in a dreadful torchlike spectacle the night of May 28, 1977, killing 165 persons, seriously injuring some 60 more and forever changing the lives of hundreds of others.

The nightclub fire was Kentucky's worst disaster ever. It was the worst multiple-death building fire since 491 persons were killed in the Cocoanut Grove blaze in Boston in 1942.

The survivors are finding, a year after the horror-filled night, that they cannot escape their memories of it. The reality is THE FIRE, and everything else that has happened since is a dream, a shadow, a blur of existence. Time — at least not yet — has not been the great healer it is supposed to be.

The Beverly Hills was on a hill in the small town of Southgate, Ky. (pop. 2,300) about a three-mile drive across the Ohio River from Cincinnati. A sprawling complex with 19 separate party rooms, the Beverly Hills, billed as "the Showplace of the Nation," was the only club in a 300-mile radius large enough to support big-time acts.

An estimated 3,000 to 3,400 persons came to the Club that warm, sultry night of May 28, 1977, to drink, dine, dance and party. The largest gathering, an estimated 1,300 persons, was crammed into the Cabaret Room, a plush, red-carpeted showroom set in three levels facing a stage. On this Saturday night singer and entertainer John Davidson was the headliner.

There had been a wedding reception in the club's Zebra Room earlier in the afternoon. This 15-by-30-foot room was near the front of the sprawling club and was connected with the Cabaret Room mainly by a 150-foot corridor.

About 6:30 p.m., several persons at the reception noticed uncomfortably warm temperatures. Oran Hall of Elyria, Ohio, who had rented the room for his daughter's wedding reception, finally paid off the maitre d' at 8:25 p.m. Everyone left because it was too hot.

At 8:30 p.m., waitress Janetta Johnson, 36, was working in the Cabaret Room. "I thought, well, there's a whole hour before the floor show; I will take a break and get a Coke," Mrs. Johnson said. "I said, my God, it is getting hot. The air conditioning must not be working."

"I was working the first level, and chairs were in the aisles so I couldn't get through," said Mrs. Johnson. "The second ramp was crammed with people, and the hostess was seating a party of eight in the exit ramp. I had to go to the third level and then around and back down to the first level to serve my drinks."

Meanwhile, about 8:55 p.m., Janet Zorick, 30, arrived with her husband, George Zorick III, 33, a truck driver for Kroger's and a volunteer fire captain in the Mack, Ohio, fire department. With them were Zorick's father, George Zorick Jr., 52, and aunt, Irene Muddiman, 48, a widow. They were seated at a table in the center of the second level.

"The waitress said, 'I'll get you in a minute. We're so crowded,'" Mrs. Zorick said. They were destined never to get their drinks.

At this time, comedians Jim Teter and Jim McDonald began a 20-minute comedy routine as a prelude to Davidson's main act. A busboy, Walter Bailey, 18, loitered to watch the act and was reprimanded by Rick Schilling, one of the three sons of club owner Richard Schilling. Bailey moved down the corridor to the Zebra Room to see if it needed cleaning.

In front of the closed double doors of the Zebra Room, Bailey saw smoke creeping out the cracks and through the top and traveling down the center of the crack between the doors.

In that crucial moment as he stared, fascinated, at the creeping smoke, young Walter Bailey made a decision that was credited with saving hundreds of lives.

Bailey sprinted up the corridor, past a line of 75 persons waiting to be admitted to the packed Cabaret Room. "I was running, running," Bailey said. "I went right up to the stage, and Teter and McDonald were on. I stared at them for a second. I thought, the fire could be out. I thought, I'm going to be fired for this. So I just said, what the hell, I'm going through with it anyway. I reached for the mike, and one of them handed it to me."

Bailey quietly and calmly told the customers: "Okay. Everybody turn and look at this exit. There's a green exit sign at this side of the room and another at the other side. I want my left half of the room to go out this side, and I want my right half of the room to go out over there."

Only after telling them where and how to leave did Bailey say: "There's a small fire at the entrance of the building. No one should go toward the entrance. Everyone should follow the exit signs."

Some persons thought Bailey was part of the act. They smiled and kept on drinking and some smoking and eating.

But the others got the message right away. George Zorick, the fireman, stood up and began to swear as he looked at the huge crowd and the two plitfully small exits — double doors with posts in the center, on each side of the vast Cabaret Room.

Down the 150-foot corridor the Zebra Room suddenly erupted with a whoosh — some witnesses described it as a muffled explosion — in a phenomenon known as "flashover." The heat had built up to such an intensely behind paneled walls that the fire suddenly burst into the open room, and every single combustible material in the room broke into flame at once.

A dense cloud of deadly black smoke roared up the corridor like an express train and rolled into the Cabaret Room through the main entrance, blocking further escape through that exit.

Waitress Janetta Johnson had a strong premonition of danger as she rushed there. "There was a fire somewhere in the vast nightclub — even though at first there was no smoke or fire visible in the Cabaret Room."

"I zipped down to my station (where 90 senior citizens were having a night out under the auspices of the Dayton, Ohio, Automobile Club) on the first level," Mrs. Johnson said.

"I thought we had time. Terri Rose (her waitress friend) and I helped old people up. They said (later) that people panicked; but at first the people did not panic. They were a very nice crowd. When they heard the announcement of the fire they were ready to go out immediately, and they did not panic."

"All of a sudden there was a swish, and smoke and flames came rolling in from the hallway. When people saw the smoke and flame they went berserk. There were no windows. If you didn't get out of there, you knew you were going to die."

Mrs. Johnson made an instant decision and hopped up on the long banquet table in front of her.

"The only way I knew I was going to make it was to climb up on top of those tables and run across them. It just seemed like I was flying through the air, over those tables. Terri Rose was right behind me."

The thick smoke was enveloping the crowd, and screams, gasps and shouts rent the air.

HE STOOD IN FRONT OF CLUB CROWD AND ALMOST SAVED THE LIVES OF 165 ... his heroic efforts couldn't prevent Kentucky's worst disaster

Janetta Johnson reached the end of the tables and made a flying leap into the crowd. "People were packed, jammed in the double door. They looked like a ball with arms and legs."

Mrs. Johnson grabbed a man's belt. As he pulled his way through the trampling crowd, she was pulled along beside him. She smelled the sweet, cool outside air.

She had barely made it. The fire singed the back of her hair. She still has her white blouse showing black soot and singe marks from the flames. On the back of the blouse is the imprint of "spitkissed lips," where some woman behind her had been frantically pressing against her.

"Terri Rose was six inches behind me," Mrs. Johnson said. Terri Rose died in the fire.

Meanwhile, somewhere nearby the same exit, George Zorick had pushed and dragged his wife to where maddened men and women were jamming up near the double doors. For an instant Mrs. Zorick disobeyed her husband and glanced back into the leavily scene behind her—screaming women wearing "hilly cotton dresses" were on fire. Her father-in-law, George Zorick Jr., 52, was standing by the table where Irene Muddiman, 48, was still sitting.

The younger Zorick, strong and stocky from loading Kroger trucks daily, picked up his 115-pound wife and heaved her over the heads of crazed men and women toward the exit. Janet Zorick landed amid squirming bodies. Feet trampled on her belly and caused a hernia.

"My last thought was, the poor kids, because I figured if I wasn't getting out, my husband wasn't either. The next thing I remember was someone saying, 'Hang on, you'll be okay.' I grabbed hold of a man's belt, and then I must have been unconscious."

George Zorick turned back into the inferno where his father and aunt waited and died with them.

Homes filled with fire fuel

By JEFF SHIER
Times-News writer

MAGIC VALLEY — Fighting fires is like fighting disease. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

That's the advice Twin Falls fire marshal Claire Harkins has for homeowners and business owners who want to avoid the expense and tragedy of fire.

"The biggest thing is just good housekeeping really. This is true even in businesses. If you have good housekeeping practices, you eliminate a big share of the problems that cause fires," Harkins stated his basic fire prevention rule.

Orderly arrangement of possessions or equipment doesn't remove the fuel for the fire, but the process of organizing, packstrapped memorabilia and the other flammable odds and ends that tend to stack up in corners or bury outlets and wires often reacquaints a home or shopowner with things he had come to take for granted, like furnaces and electrical systems, which, when improperly maintained, are a common source of fires, Harkins said.

Becoming aware of potential sources of fire requires minimal effort, and occasional checking of those sources requires even less effort, yet such awareness is the best insurance against fire.

Harkins also warned homeowners against the practice of substituting fuses with progressively higher amperage ratings when fuses continually burn out.

"If a fuse burns out repeatedly, this is a warning that you need to have it checked out," Harkins stated.

Replacing a burned out fuse with a bigger one can cause "a real problem that can lead to a fire," he added.

"While modern electrical and gas heating systems can be potential sources of fire, the billowing return to woodburning stoves as an alternate heat source is of greater concern to Harkins.

The problem with woodburning stoves is "just becoming apparent, and I don't think we've seen the real peak in it yet," Harkins predicted.

"There's nothing wrong with wood heat itself or the stoves, Harkins said. It's just that people are not installing their new stoves properly.

City code requires double or triple wall stove pipe (triple wall is safer) and minimum distances from flammable surfaces for good reason, Harkins cautions.

Treatment of asthmatics 'challenging'

The treatment of asthma is not only the most serious of allergic manifestations but also the most challenging to therapies. No one tolerates shortness of breath for prolonged periods of time. The average person may have experienced having his "wind knocked out," a condition which has nothing to do with asthma, but the discomfort is comparable. One only has to imagine a patient experiencing a lack of air for hours or days to appreciate the discomfort of this condition. In fact, it is the excessive symptoms, especially for a child unable to breathe, that sometimes complicates the therapy. A parent must have a great deal of understanding of this condition to tolerate wisely and objectively treat his child having difficult breathing.

The wheezing of asthma is the noise produced by the obstruction of small airways when exhaling. The asthmatic displays this condition in response to infection, allergens, or exercise. Croup can be differentiated by the noise made on inspiration and is always accompanied by an infection.

Asthma usually displays itself in childhood. The condition may disappear or persist into adulthood. Adults can become asthmatics but more likely have some component of a chronic obstructive pulmonary disease, more commonly referred to as emphysema or chronic bronchitis.

In contrast to chronic obstructive pulmonary disease, asthma is not permanently damaging. By definition, asthma is a reversible spasm of the bronchioles or small airways. Asthmatics, although challenging to treat, should have no lasting problems or participate in a normal life style.

Treatment of asthmatics is challenging. A patient should choose a physician whom he respects and trusts. Most difficult in treatment arise from patient compliance. That is, numerous home remedies are often employed when other measures fail or fall short of expectations. Although of some benefit, antiasthmatics and decongestants are not normally a mainstay of therapy. The use of sedative medications such as Valium or Phenobarbital should be avoided, but occasionally are of benefit in the difficult patient. Unless the asthma is of a very mild type the numerous combinations of medicine should probably be avoided. The most detrimental of home remedies, are the over-the-counter inhalers. The Primatone Mist Inhaler outlets prescribed inhalers to two one. These over-used and misused devices are the most frequent cause of hospitalization for asthma.

The mainstays of therapy for the astute physician are the Aminophyllin or Theophyllin products. There are numerous trade names for these drugs. Each patient must be adjusted to the proper dosage schedule. The schedule varies greatly from one patient to the next. Most patients lose confidence in their physician because they are frustrated by this drug. Asthma is a common side effect that is encountered when too much drug is used. The drug is somewhat difficult to administer since it requires regular, sustained dosage. It does not work immediately and is more effective when used over a prolonged period of time. The difficulty arises in maintaining this happy medium.

The patient is much more impressed by the immediate results of a shot of adrenalin or epinephrine for his asthmatic attacks. Oh occasion these are definitely necessary. Such injections should be performed in a physician's office or the emergency room. Several prescription items have become available that are nearly as effective as these injections but can be taken by mouth. These serve as useful help-along-to-the-therapy preparations. The usual side effects to these medications include: shakiness and upset stomach also. When used appropriately they have become quite useful.

As with other allergic conditions the cortisone preparations are nearly miraculous in treating this condition. The known side effects make their continued use quite hazardous, especially in growing children. Short term use is a definite benefit. Recently they have become available in the form of inhalers. The only major side effect of this modality of therapy has been localized yeast infections of the mouth; this is, in truth, occasionally used, these can be life-saving, but are definitely short term therapies.

About two years ago two powdered aerosols were advertised as "making pediatric asthma obsolete. This advertising campaign did not live up to its promises. When used properly these two substances called "Nal" and "Auram" are of definite benefit but are very difficult to administer. Occasionally they fit-out don't work, leaving a child breathless in this position for times a day itself limits its usefulness. These products are of no benefit once the asthma has actually started.

The only other preventive therapy for asthma is the previously discussed hyposensitization program. This program is not curative, but should make other drugs more efficient.

A physician is seldom irritated by the frantic parent's call concerning his child starting up on an asthmatic attack. Occasionally a call to the physician may be the quickest form of relief. An adjustment in medication or an injection of epinephrine is much more effective if started at the onset of wheezing. As the parent or patient becomes more adept at dealing with his disease his physician's reliance should become less and less.

In only a few other diseases is the parent-child-physician relationship, in so delicate a balance. The wheezing, short-of-breath child is difficult not to make special. The educated parent or patient is not too brave nor is he too afraid to ask for physician's assistance. The ultimate goal of the treatment of the asthmatic is achievement of normal development and participation in all activities. Asthma is not an emotional disorder but is definitely a severe disease to cause severe emotional turmoil.

Rich, Kerlin married

TWIN FALLS — Verna Kay Kerlin of Twin Falls and Stephen Rich of Florida, exchanged wedding vows in a double-ring ceremony April 29 at the Idaho Falls Fifth Ward LDS Chapel.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth (Dwight) Kerlin of Twin Falls. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Sam Rich of Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

The bride was escorted to the altar by her brother to the strains of the wedding march played by Rosalee Jamison. Bishop Roger Boll performed the ceremony.

The bride wore a satin dress with bodice of lace and lace cuffs made by Mrs. Louise Knutson. Her veil was a small chapel train of three tiers of lace. She carried a bouquet of yellow roses and carnations.

Maid of honor was Rae Anne Meldrum of Logan, Utah, and the bridesmaid was Jeanne Burke of Idaho Falls. The bridegroom chose "Rickey Scott" to be his best man and David Pearn was usher.

A reception was held in the Cultural Hall where the guest book was tended by Susan Pharis. A three-tiered cake, made and decorated by Mrs. Jeannie Ricks of Idaho Falls, was served by Mrs. Norbert Nordom of Weiser and Mrs. Don Hammar of Ontario, Ore., both aunts of the bride.

Ann Chidester served punch to the guests who were seated at round tables with blue tablecloths and centerpieces of yellow and white flowers. The gift table was presided over by Paula Jenkins, Bonnie Gridley and Denise Bird.

Another reception was held May 27 from 2 to 5 p.m. in the Twin Falls Church of the Brethren, 461 Filer Ave.

The newlyweds are residing in Idaho Falls where they are employed.

New Eagle Scouts

TWIN FALLS — Daniel King and Kent Heindel, both Twin Falls, recently received their Eagle Scout awards from Snake River Council director Del Hanks.

King, an eighth grade student at O'Leary Junior High School, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert King.

As a member of Troop 59 of the Twin Falls First Ward LDS Church, he has served as senior patrol leader and patrol leader. He assisted the South Central District Health Dept. in a community awareness program on dental health as his Eagle Scout project.

He is active in football, band and has received several scholarship merit awards.

Heindel, a sophomore at Twin Falls High School, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Heindel.

He is a member of Troop 59 in the same ward where he has served as a patrol leader and was tapped for the Order of the Arrow. He attended the World Scout Jamboree in Pennsylvania last year.

Active in football at the high school, Heindel is also active in church basketball and baseball. He also works with Arabian horses, studies stud management and is an avid sailor.

New you know

Not all birds have that exceedingly keen seven-power binocular vision of the eagle. The kiwi bird, for instance, is blind as a bat. Which isn't, incidentally, but that's a difference item. The kiwi, though, does have the sharpest sense of smell among birds.

Check share of dependents' support at middle of year

(Fourth in a series of seven columns)
The time to check to be sure you are providing more than half the total support of a family member you plan to claim for a 57% dependency exemption is now. It is a mid-year — when you still have time to correct any errors you are making. You must act well before yearend if you are to avoid the inadvertent loss of a valuable dependency deduction and find ways to pick up any losses.

At college costs spiral ever upward to new peaks, one giant step for a college student — and you, the parents — is a scholarship. It not only provides money that doesn't have to be repaid, but it also sets up special tax breaks.

1. The money is tax-free to the student, and you don't lose the $750 dependency deduction for your child (and a higher medical deduction if you pay the child's medical expenses) no matter how big the scholarship is. This is because the tax law says that scholarship money doesn't count toward support.

Example: You pay $2,000 toward your daughter's college expenses. She gets a $1,000 scholarship that takes care of the rest. Result: she is still your dependent for tax purposes; since the scholarship doesn't count, you, in effect, have provided all her support, a total of $2,000.

Question: Are student-athletes actually students on scholarships or paid athletes? From a tax standpoint, emphasizes President Hall, the answer makes a big difference. For if what your son receives from the college is a form of compensation for playing sports, it's taxable to him.

What's more, the payments would count as support he provides for himself and could cost you a dependency deduction. But if the amounts are treated as a scholarship, they're tax-free to him and cause no dependency problem to you.

Good news: The IRS recently ruled the money is a tax-free scholarship all the way under the existing rule for intercollegiate sports. The factors: Under these rules, a college can expect but cannot require a scholarship student to participate in sports; and the scholarship total cannot exceed the cost of tuition and fees, room and board, books and supplies.

But since there isn't enough scholarship money to go around, many students take out U.S. government-insured student loans. From a tax viewpoint, the disadvantages of these loans is that they are counted as support for the student for dependency purposes.

the total support.

What to do: Put up enough extra cash to allow you to meet the more-than-half support test. It will be worth it for free, in the example above, a mere $201 extra would have given you the deduction, and a possible medical deduction as well.

Of course, you don't necessarily lose your child as a dependent if you still takes out a student loan. You still might pay more than half of the expenses because the "fair rental value" of your child's lodging while at home counts toward support.

The school or college year may be only seven months long. The cost of boarding your child at home for five months plus what you pay while he or she is at school or college may put you over the mark.

How do you measure the "fair rental value" of what you provide your child? IRS's answer: the "amount you could reasonably expect to receive from a stranger for the same type of lodging."

A final good-news item on dependency deductions: If you are paying for a child's wedding this year, the money you spend may help you reach the crucial more-than-half support requirement.

Example: Your daughter will graduate from college this month; after you paid $3,000 toward her expenses in the first five months of '78. She marries this June and you pick up a $6,200 wedding tab. She gets a job; she cannot file joint returns.

To support her herself and her new husband, still in graduate school because you did not lose the dependency deduction because (1) the $750 test doesn't apply to a full-time student and (2) the IRS now says you provided $9,000 toward her support ($5,000 plus $4,000), more than half. But they must be separately and item both you and your son-in-law's parents may each have 57% deductions.

Next: When a dependent's income tops $750.

Title term descriptive

L. James Koutnik is vice-chairman of the Idaho Real Estate Commission and broker for Western Realty Company, Inc., with offices in Twin Falls, Buhl, Rupert, Groffing and Sun Valley. Readers are invited to send questions either directly to the Times-News or to Western Realty for answering in future columns.

By L. JAMES KOUTNIK

QUESTION: A real estate agent was showing us a home the other day in which he said that we would receive a "fee simple title." I didn't know whether the fee simple referred to a low price or minimum commission on the sale — or possibly it referred to some "simple" title transfer system that might not give me all that I think I am buying. Could you explain what is going on, please.

ANSWER: Your agent told you correctly that you were getting "fee simple title" because that is the highest and most complete ownership that you can possibly get in a property. Like a lot of real estate terms, many of them are archaic, but it does mean something to title companies and lawyers. In this particular case, be glad that you have a fee simple title, because it means that you are getting everything that you could possibly get as far as your rights of ownership are concerned.

QUESTION: We would like to transfer our farm to our son before long so we can avoid a lot of heavy estate taxes. On the other hand, if we give him the property he will have full control of it, and we would have no place to go. Is there some safe method whereby this transfer could be made?

ANSWER: This one will probably take a lawyer and an accountant to work out details for you, but there are a number of ways that this can be done. The easiest way for you to consider is a "life estate." This enables you to transfer the property to someone else while you remain in possession of all or part of it. It is not unusual to have a family transfer a property to their children and keep a "life estate" in the house on the farm for the remainder of their lives. The remainder of the property — that is the house you occupy — would transfer to the heir upon your death. However, you get some expert help in this matter because you are dealing with what could be a critical situation and you might mess up your whole estate if it is not properly handled.

QUESTION: Hey, what happened? All of a sudden I find I can't borrow any money on real estate around here. The banks are giving me a lot of live about "freezing out of money."

ANSWER: Brother, you ain't just chewing on your mortgage. There is a real money crunch taking place in Idaho right now, and it is part of a national tightening up of money which is not limited to Idaho by any means. However, Idaho seems to be having a particularly heavy tab from this loan fund shortage due to our maximum interest rates of 10 percent. Many states have much higher limits, and this is where the money tends to gravitate.

But in answer to your question as to what has happened locally, there is no question that there is a severe shortage of mortgage funds throughout Idaho. It is extremely difficult to find money for investment properties, such as rental houses, commercial loans, and most importantly, interim construction money for building contractors.

Where did all the money go? Well, for one thing, our own government is competing very heavily for funds to cover the national debt. Four-year treasury bonds are bringing an excess of 6 percent to investors at this time, and there is no work in owning such servicing this type of security. Even 90-day and 180-day treasury bills are bringing investors (such as banks) from 6 1/2 to 7 percent. My financial advisers tell me that this could very easily get to be much more when it gets better.

One of the worst problems, however, is with the secondary mortgage money market. Outfit like the Federal National Mortgage Association (Fannie Mae), which buys up a great number of the mortgages from savings and loan companies and mortgage bankers, such as Lomas and Nettleton, Sherwood and Roberts, and others that we have in this area have set such a high price for the paper that the lenders can't sell the mortgages and make a profit.

I understand that Fannie Mae is currently demanding a yield of 8 1/2 percent on the mortgages that they buy from lenders. That's a real problem when most of these loans were made at 8 1/2 percent and 8 3/4 percent. They have to take in a heavy discount in selling them to Fannie Mae that the lenders have been forced out of the business. The recent rise in FHA interest rates from 8 1/2 percent to 9 percent — something which took place about a week ago — might have a slight effect, but frankly, I don't think it is going to amount to a hill of beans. The discount points are still 6 percent and 7 percent for all the lenders.

Nevada utility wants statement soon

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Nevada Power Co. has asked the federal court to order the Interior Department and its Bureau of Land Management to speed up action on environmental impact statements for the Harry Allen-Warner Valley Power Project.

The utility filed suit against the two federal agencies, contending it has been charged $890,000 in excessive fees for BLM studies on the two-site project.

The suit asks the federal court to order the BLM and Interior Department to immediately consider the "final environmental impact statement on the Warner Valley Water Project near St. George, Utah, and the Harry Allen Power Plant in southern Nevada."

Nevada Power is also seeking an immediate accounting of all BLM charges for studies on the proposed project, for an order granting it right-of-way access over federal lands for plant siting and transmission lines, and for a judgment declaring the BLM fees system illegal.

Nevada Power contends the fees have no statutory authority, that they are vague and unreasonable, that they provide no standards, guidelines or criteria, and that there are no provisions for accounting.

The utility also says the BLM has threatened to slow down its review of the environmental impact studies unless the study fees are paid.

The Warner Valley Project includes a dam on the Virgin River and a power plant near St. George; two coal slurry pipelines from Bald Knoll near Utah's Bryce Canyon National Park to the Warner Valley Project and to the Harry Allen Power Plant near Las Vegas; plus power transmission lines from St. George, through Las Vegas, to Victorville, Calif.

Business chair campaign outlined

BOISE (UPI) — President Richard Gibb Friday announced a nationwide fundraising campaign for an endowed chair in business enterprise at the University of Idaho.

The making of the announcement, Gibb said, is 80 percent or 10 percent of the total endowment already in the kitty. He said the University of Idaho Foundation, which is handling the fund-raising, expects the total $500,000 endowment to be raised in one year.

"We're off to a good start," Dr. Ernest Hartung, development director for the foundation, said.

Hartung will direct the campaign in cooperation with foundation directors Gary Mitchell, executive vice president of Albertson's, Inc., and Robert Woodhead, senior corporate vice president and director of Morrison-Knudsen Co. Inc., both of Boise, and Bruce McCowan, chairman of Kleinwort Benson McCowan Inc., New York City.

The chair, which has been envisioned as a program in the study and advancement of business enterprise as well as a professorship, will be administered through the College of Business and Economics. The program will seek to develop the type of political, social and economic environment which will enable private enterprise to prosper and grow, Hartung said.

Market sales soaring

BOISE (UPI) — Board Chairman Warren E. McCain told an annual stockholders' meeting Friday that Albertson's Inc. will become a $2 billion company this year, predicting fiscal year sales of about $2.1 billion.

McCain also announced expansion plans for this year that call for capital expenditures of $35.5 million, in addition to real estate to be mortgaged or leased during the year with an underlying value of about $40 million.

He said the sale and capital expenditure estimates do not include the potential acquisition of the Fazio supermarkets in the Los Angeles area. Earlier, the company reported reaching an agreement in principle with Fisher Foods of Bedford Heights, Ohio, to buy 45 stores with annual sales of about $300 million.

McCain said the proposal would involve the payment by Albertson's of some cash, leasing of certain equipment and assumption of store leaseholds.

During 1977, McCain said, sales for the year ended Jan. 28, 1978, were up 22 percent — climbing to $1.82 billion from $1.49 billion. Earnings, he said, jumped to $24.8 million, or $1.27 a share, an increase of 48 percent from last year's $17.1 million — or $1.26 — per share.

McCain said the company had 20,241 employees at year's end and said it ranked as the 10th largest supermarket chain and the 32th largest retail company among all merchandising companies in the United States.

At year's end, he said, there were 305 supermarkets operating in 15 states — including 37 large combination drug-grocery units and a large super drug store in the southern states.

Directors declared a regular quarterly cash dividend of 24 cents per share, payable Aug. 31 to shareholders of record on Aug. 4.

'Flexitime' comes to U.S.

Employees decide schedule

WASHINGTON (UPI) — "Management likes it; labor likes it, the Democrats like it, and the Republicans like it," says Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y. "It is flexitime, a new concept in work hours."

A huge success in West Germany, flexitime has spread to Great Britain, Switzerland, Canada, and — to a lesser extent — the United States.

The idea is to let workers decide, within certain limits, what hours to work.

A bill to induce government agencies to try flexitime was approved last week by the House on a 288-57 vote. Now it's up to the Senate.

Flexitime is already being used by some federal agencies, but its wider use is hampered by existing laws requiring payment of overtime to government workers who put in more than eight hours in one day.

However, the House bill would lift that requirement for three years and, for example, let a government employee work six hours one day and 10 the next. An employee could juggle his hours as he wished, provided he is on the job during certain "core hours" and puts in the full 40 hours for the week.

Sponsors of the legislation, such as Solarz and Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., think it's a good idea whose time has come.

"Flexitime is one of those ideas which benefits virtually everyone and harms practically no one," Solarz said. "Whenever it has been tried it has resulted in an increase in productivity and in a decrease in tardiness."

The general public benefits, he said, because federal offices normally open from 9 to 5 can open earlier and stay open longer because some workers will be willing to work at those odd hours.

Mrs. Schroeder said earlier experiments with flexitime by the Social Security Administration have already shown positive results by "virtually eliminating tardiness and increasing employee morale."

The legislation, she says, is needed to provide a better test of flexitime.

Rep. Robert Leggett, D-Calif., was among the 57 House members who voted against the plan.

Leggett says many citizens already complain that federal employees have "soft jobs" and would feel that flexitime gave government workers advantages that most workers in the private sector do not have. And there's another reason.

"I cannot really see what would keep an employee from moonlighting on another job the other three days of the week," Leggett says. "I find this most disturbing when one stops to consider our legitimate desire to increase employment in the private sector," when coupled alongside the current uproar against so-called double-dipping by federal employees."

Government hits alcoholism

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government plans to mount a major attack next year against alcoholism among women and heavy drinking by young people, it was learned Saturday.

An estimated 10 million Americans are alcoholics or often drink to excess. While figures are hard to pin down, surveys indicate the total may include 4 million women and at least a half-million children.

Loran Archer, acting director of the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism, told UPI his department will send a report on current alcohol abuse programs to HEW Secretary Joseph Califano by Aug. 1.

That report and accompanying recommendations, Archer said, form the basis for a battle plan such as the anti-smoking program Califano started last year.

"I expect he (Califano) will have something late this year which can be implemented in 1979," said Archer. "He expressed major concern about excessive alcohol problems among young people."

Archer said the alcohol abuse program will probably use federal funds, public volunteers, schools, churches, civic groups and perhaps the alcoholic beverage industry in a two-pronged attack.

Finding female alcoholics and telling them it's not a shame to admit their sickness and that they can be cured.

Educating young people on what alcohol can do to the body. And the fact that "getting drunk once a week, every week, can lead to a lot worse in later life."

Aside from problems for children in later life, the tragic fact is that an average of 20 kids die in auto accidents around the nation every day because they were drinking and driving," said Archer.

"And women drinkers are a major problem — they tend to be well protected by families. Studies over the last 10 years have shown that young women are increasing their drinking at a rapid rate."

About 100 million Americans over 15 have drunk alcohol in at least minute quantities and 10 million of those are alcoholics or problem drinkers, said Dick Bast — of the National Clearing House for Alcohol Information.

"A lot of them are women and children," said Bast. "You know, we had one case of a school janitor in northern Virginia (the Washington suburbs) who said his biggest job in the morning was emptying beer cans and bottles out of the trash bins at school."

Taxes pay for restaurant

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Home Loan Board is installing a French restaurant in its new $47 million building under terms of a lease calling for taxpayers to pay for most of the building's interior decoration.

The agency also has constructed an outdoor skating rink at a cost of $150,000 inside a $1.2 million courtyard despite conclusions by an FHLBB study questioning the need for the rink.

The FHLBB is the regulatory agency for the savings and loan industry, insuring savings accounts and providing needed credit to local banks through its 12 district banks.

The restaurant will be operated by the owners of Rive Gauche, one of the capital's most expensive French restaurants. The firm, 1725 F Street, Inc., also will operate an outdoor cafe and cafeteria in the new building.

Under the lease, the agency paid for 75 percent of the restaurant's (and the cafeteria's) interior decoration — up to $700,000 in tax money — and will pay all of the restaurant's utilities.

However, at least two other tenants of the building — a fashion designer dress salon and a card shop — are paying all preparation costs plus all utilities.

Internal memoranda from 1975 and 1976 — during the building's planning stages — show there was considerable intra-agency discussion about dining amenities and the prospective ice rink. UPI obtained copies of the memos.

In one, Mary Tracy, a building coordinator for the board, said, "I wonder whether it would be wiser not to define a restaurant menu. The present description sounds distinctly Marxistish, and you know our general feelings about such an operation. London broil doesn't do it for me."

Another discussed the potentially adverse reaction to a private executive dining room within the agency, but concluded, "The FHLBB could probably get away with offering the service since 'perks' are standard practice in the private banking fields."

A board spokesman said the skating rink should provide additional inner city public recreational facilities although it is far from inner city neighborhoods and a few blocks from two other rinks.

In 1975 a top board official, asked to study the need for another rink, told George Oram, former director of the board's Office of Management Systems and Administration, "Personally, I think the ice rink is a great idea, but I have reservations about its potential."

The study said that while workers might like the rink, few would "return during evening hours with their children." It noted suburban rinks were "increasing in numbers and offer convenience, concluding that everyone consulted on the proposed project presented 'a pessimistic view.'"

The day after Oram received this study he told officials, "We have concluded that construction of the rink is not only feasible, but desirable in terms of its impact on the board and the city."

A board spokesman said, "This is a dead issue. The administration that handled this is not here now. It started so long ago, there's really no responsibility among those who are now here."

However, the spokesman said the board was going ahead with the French restaurant and the leasing of adjacent commercial shops including one to Frankie Welch, Inc. a fashionable clothes designer who counted former first lady Betty Ford among her clients.

Almanac

By United Press International
Today is Monday, May 29, the 149th day of 1978 with 216 to follow.

This is Memorial Day. The moon is between its last quarter and new phase.

The morning star is Mercury.

The evening stars are Mars, Venus, Jupiter and Saturn.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Gemini.

John F. Kennedy, 35th president of the United States, was born May 29, 1917.

On this day in history:

In 1453, Constantinople (now Istanbul), capital of the Byzantine Empire, was captured by the Turks. Some historians say that marked the end of the Middle Ages.

In 1796, Rhode Island became the last of the 13 original states to ratify the American Constitution.

In 1953, Sir Edmund Hillary of New Zealand became the first person to reach the top of Mount Everest.

In 1977, a flash fire swept through a night club in Southgate, Ky., killing 162 persons and injuring 30.

A thought for the day: American revolutionary leader and orator Patrick Henry (born on this day in 1736) said: "I know not what course others may take but as for me... give me liberty or give me death!"

First Security has always been the region's savings leader in offering you the highest interest allowed, and the widest possible choice of ways to save. So it should not surprise you that we're now offering you higher interest rates than ever before, on two brand new savings plans for short or long term savers.

NEW EIGHT - YEAR 7 3/4% CERTIFICATES

All you need to lock in 7 3/4% annual interest for eight full years is a minimum deposit of $1,000. Interest is paid quarterly and it can be added to the face amount of your certificate to earn compounded interest. $1,000 will grow to $1,848.00 by maturity. If you prefer, we can pay your quarterly interest by check or deposit it to your First Security checking or savings account. The choice is yours.

NEW MONEY MARKET CERTIFICATES* AT TREASURY BILL RATES

If you can invest $10,000 or more for 6 months, you can earn the highest interest rate we are permitted to pay on 6 month savings certificates. Rates are based on the average yield for 6 month Treasury Bills established in the most recent weekly auction. Ask us for the current rate, which presently exceeds 7%.

Come to First Security — the savings center — and take advantage of these new higher rates. We can take care of you quickly and efficiently.

Fired directors won't be rehired at alcohol centers

By RAY SULLIVAN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley Alcohol Rehabilitation Centers Inc. board of directors won't rehire the fired executive directors of its Twin Falls alcohol treatment center.

On Friday, the board voted unanimously not to rehire Jim or Bess Butcher as executive directors for the men's and women's alcohol treatment centers.

And the board of directors of the two centers overwhelmingly rejected a proposal to hire either one of the Butchers as counselors.

But the board did agree to rewrite the termination letter given to the Butchers to say only that they were fired because of policy difference with the directors.

When the Butchers were fired May 1, the board's termination letter charged the couple had not handled the finances of the treatment centers properly, nor had they set up what the board considered an adequate alcohol treatment program.

In addition, the board said the two were fired because of communication problems with the Butchers.

Don Chisholm, a Rupert lawyer representing the Butchers, said Friday he will "review" the board's actions expects it will be the middle of the week before the Butchers decide whether to accept the board offer to rewrite the termination letter.

Since the Butchers were fired, Edmond Cormier has been serving as acting director of both facilities.

However, the women's center has not had any clients since shortly after the firings. And the men's center, which can hold about 17 persons, was last reported to have only five clients staying there.

In addition, the house managers at both the men's and women's treatment centers quit in protest of the board's action.

Iona Kline, women's house manager, left about the same time as two other women's counselors. The three had just started a pre-intern alcoholic counseling program set up by the Butchers. Cormier, acting on the board's instructions, cancelled it after taking over.

The MVARC board members also agreed not to appeal the Butchers' unemployment claim "in the spirit of compromise," if the couple would drop its right to "any and all" possible future claims, and not make any more public comments about dealing with alcoholics in the Twin Falls area.

The compromise offered regarding the termination letter parallels Chisholm's suggestion made at a public hearing Monday night before the board and the Butchers.

Jim Butcher said Friday he and his wife would not be satisfied until the board publicly retracted its statements that the Butchers mishandled finances and had not set up an adequate alcoholic treatment program. He declined to comment on the board offer further before talking with Chisholm.

The board's decision came in a brief open meeting at 1 p.m. in the Twin Falls County Judicial Building following an hour-long executive session.

Schwartz working in Zaire

By JEFF SHER
Times-News writer

HAZELTON — Twelve days after he was airlifted out of a war zone in Zaire by Morrison-Knudsen Co., Floyd Schwartz, of Hazelton, is back at work, in the battle-torn country, his wife said today.

"I have not talked to him personally," said Mrs. Schwartz, a veteran of overseas living. "It's pretty hard in a lot of those countries to get a telephone call through," she added.

She did, however, receive a tape her husband made while still in Kolwezi before he was carried to safety along with 6 other Morrison-Knudsen employees in an airlift and truck operation organized by the company.

The tape was delivered to Mrs. Schwartz by another Morrison-Knudsen employee who was with her husband through the tense hours before their rescue, and who subsequently returned to the United States.

Mrs. Schwartz said her husband indicated in the tape that although he and his fellow employees were afraid, the situation never presented an immediate threat to his safety.

Mrs. Schwartz said her husband "credited" Morrison-Knudsen with doing an excellent job in protecting their employees from the carnage which saw rebels take the lives of 170 white foreigners, most of whom were French and Belgian nationals.

Schwartz was one of the last four Morrison-Knudsen employees to leave the Kolwezi area, the tape indicated, but Mrs. Schwartz said her husband's reaction was not one of fear but more that "the just couldn't believe it."

Mrs. Schwartz said her husband, a heavy-equipment mechanic, is now working in Kananga, about 450 miles from Kolwezi, on another section of the 1,200-mile-long electrical transmission line the firm is building in Zaire.

She said her husband is going to finish his current overseas contract with the company, and, despite his frightening experience, probably will work overseas again in the future, because he enjoys working overseas.

And Mrs. Schwartz, who has accompanied her husband on overseas stints in Australia and New Zealand, may go overseas again herself. Both she and her husband enjoy traveling, she said.

Thermal work goes on

MALTA — Engineers for the Raft River geothermal energy project have only two wells left to drill for a $6 million, five-megawatt pilot power plant.

Workmen recently completed the fifth of seven wells planned to feed the project with underground hot water, Don Stout, communications manager for EG & G Idaho Inc., Idaho Falls, said.

The Department of Energy site is located 15 miles southeast of Malta.

Susan Prestwich, EG & G Idaho project drilling engineer, said three of the wells will produce 300° F. geothermal water, two will be used to reinject cool, used-water and two will be standby wells.

The latest well was drilled to 3,872 feet, Ms. Prestwich said, and the sixth well will be drilled down to 5,500 feet.

The final well will be drilled sometime in June.

The pilot plant is being developed to determine whether it is economically feasible to produce electrical energy using the relatively low temperature geothermal water found extensively in Idaho and other western states. To date, only studies using higher temperature underground hot water — up to 500° F. — have been conducted.

The pilot plant is expected to begin operating in 1980, EG & G officials say.

$16,000 thefts reported

TWIN FALLS — Clifton Shebley, 1893 Granada Drive, reported rings valued at $16,000 were taken from his home Saturday.

Shobley told city police he removed the three rings from his fingers while washing his car and left them on a snack bar in his home.

He said when he returned later to get them they were missing but that he thought at the time his wife had moved them.

He said they disappeared between 8:30 and 9:50 p.m. The home was not locked, he told police. Shebley said one of the rings was valued at $15,000 and the two others at about $500 each.

Solar seminars slated

TWIN FALLS — The south central Idaho Community Action Agency has scheduled two solar energy awareness seminars to be held June 8 and June 29 in Twin Falls.

The featured speaker at both is Dr. Leland Corey, Idaho State University professor of engineering.

Corey has designed a built a low-cost solar heating system which can be made at home for less than $200. He also has developed other recommendations for tapping solar energy.

The seminars in Twin Falls are part of CAA's energy conservation program, and their purpose is to explain alternative energy in layman's terms, according to Roberta Carter, CAA consumer adviser.

Each seminar will last from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. in the Shields Building at the College of Southern Idaho.

While aimed at low-income residents and senior citizens, the seminars are open to interested members of the public.

The seminars will take "technical verbiage and turn it into plain English," Carter said, and will include explanations and plans on how to make a solar collector at home.

Other speakers will give brief explanations of geothermal and wind power.

Carter said the seminar hopes to show people "common, everyday things they can do to utilize these energies."

Now, we have licensed babysitters

By KEN HODGE
Times-News writer

FILER — Beginning baby sitters are now going to school in the Magic Valley to learn the proper techniques.

Since early April almost 50 students averaging 12 years of age have been taking classes on baby sitting from 4-H advisors in Twin Falls and Filer. They will be graduated next week.

"We wanted to give them helpful hints about baby sitting just so they know what they're doing," Carolyn Turner, a Filer 4-H leader, said. "The reason is that most of them have never sat before."

Students who successfully complete the program gain a 4-H certification, and parents can hire a certified sitter through the 4-H program.

Turner and Mary Beth Davis of Twin Falls have been schooling youngsters, including two boys, on safety, responsibility, child behavior, child care and entertainment techniques to prepare them for teaching children.

In Filer, Turner invited Police Chief Randy Lammers to her class to tell them what to do in emergencies. He told them how to report emergencies and how to turn in a fire alarm.

Turner also invited Tajuana Cochran, a teacher of special students, to tell her class how to handle handicapped or retarded children they might be baby sitting.

The children have also learned simple first aid and were advised about food and snacks for children in their care.

In other classes, the apprentice baby sitters had actual experience with dressing, bathing and feeding babies. She also tutored them in ways to entertain a young child.

"One thing I taught them is that they don't have to baby sit for anyone," Turner said. "If they have a bad experience, they don't have to go back."

"We learned to keep the babies away from the stove, plug-ins and telephones," one youngster said about the class. "And we learned if you clean the people's house, you might get more money."

Baby sitting students get all the advantages of participating in the 4-H program. They can enter their projects in a booth at the Twin Falls County Fair in September and attend a summer 4-H camp if they choose.

Each student completed a "magic bag" as a project for the class. In each bag, students put toys, books, and other articles they choose to entertain their charges during an evening of baby sitting. Each student varies the contents of his magic bag for children of different ages.

To enter their magic bag as a project at the fair, each student must complete 30 hours of baby sitting by fair time.

One student, Tammy Severance of Filer, will baby-sit for a working mother this summer during the daytime. She has learned to handle more complex functions around the home and must work at running the home in the mother's absence.

Wilma Southwick, a 4-H official, said her office has had numerous requests for all-day sitters like Tammy to take care of a home for a working mother.

Just because they come trained with a certificate of graduation, does not mean the beginners will charge more for their services.

Turner said the going rate is about 75 cents an hour and does not expect her students to charge more.

In another week, the students will graduate, and receive their certificates.

In the meantime, they discuss hypothetical challenges on the baby sitting front.

"How would you like to take care of Dennis the Menace," one student recently asked her peers. "That would be a challenge," Turner said.

Few tragedies mar weekend

TWIN FALLS — Memorial Day weekend in Magic Valley has been quiet, but law enforcement officers say the traffic crunch is yet to come.

Traffic has been moderate on I-80N but state police say tonight will see the heaviest flow of traffic as most people who left home for the weekend begin returning home.

State police and sheriff's officers in all Magic Valley counties reported no serious accidents as of this morning.

Sawtooth National Forest officials had been anticipating heavy use of many lower-elevation campgrounds as the summer camping season officially opened and most picnic and camp areas were crowded Saturday and Sunday.

Higher elevation campgrounds are still closed by snow and wet ground.

One of the few if not the only community Memorial Day services in Magic Valley was held this morning in the Filer IOOF Cemetery.

The Filer American Legion held a brief service at 11 a.m. honoring servicemen of all military conflicts.

Rev. Will Lane, Filer Baptist Church pastor, gave a memorial address. The grave of Phillip Brennan, one of many Filer area servicemen who gave his life in combat, was decorated in memory of all of the area's war dead.

Cemeteries in Magic Valley were crowded Saturday and Sunday as residents gathered to decorate graves of loved ones.

The Kimberly rural fire department was called to a house fire about 10:15 p.m. Sunday southeast of Twin Falls. Sheriff's officers said a mobile home and its contents were completely destroyed by the fire.

Signs should clear up road confusion

The Idaho Department of Highways has erected this sign half a mile south of Shoshone in order to clear up confusion created by a change in the designation of the old U.S. 93 to state scenic route 75.

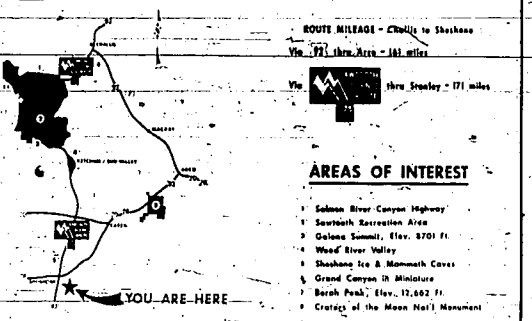

U.S. 93 was routed through Arco, Mackay and Challis earlier this year and some inattentive motorists bound for Sun Valley followed old road maps which said highway 93 led to Ketchum but then found themselves in Arco, instead.

The new sign, placed before the intersection of highway 93 highway 75 in Shoshone, shows the prominent highlights along both routes.

Featured on the map are the Shoshone Ice Caves, The Sawtooth National Recreation Area, the Craters of the Moon National Monument and the towns of Ketchum, Halley, Arco, and Challis.

A similar mapboard will be erected north of Challis later this summer.

Suspect sought in teen slayings

MORGAN CITY, La. (UPI) — "Frank Green" drifted into town a few months ago, found a job as a mechanic and general helper and lived an ostensibly quiet life in a small room at the welding company where he worked.

Not until the first bodies were found did anyone connect "Frank Green" with Robert Carl Hohenberger, 35, a former California convict who had been arrested several times in that state on sex charges.

By that time it was too late. Police suspect Hohenberger of the sex killings of five teen-agers, two of whose bodies have not been found.

A nationwide search was on today for Hohenberger, who had left town before the first two bodies were found last week in a septic tank on the welding company property.

The disclosure of Hohenberger's background stunned those who had known him in Morgan City.

"He was just a nice, quiet, polite guy," said Fred Matzahn of R&M Service welding company where Hohenberger worked.

"It really shocked me," Matzahn said. "Any time you hire people who come down the road, you take your chances. But he seemed like the nicest fellow I ever met in my life."

Authorities said the slayings were sex related. "The motive in all of the kidnappings is sex — there is no question but that," said FBI agent Francis M. Mullen of New Orleans.

By mid-May, "Frank Green" had moved out of his sparsely furnished room. Authorities did not connect him and the disappearance of the five teen-agers within a three-month period until an odor drew attention to the septic tank in the R&M yard.

When the tank's lid was lifted last Thursday, two bound bodies were found. Dental records and other data identified the victims as Judy Adams, 15, and Bridget Sons, 19.

Two days later the body of Gordon Canelia, 17, was discovered in a sugar cane field five miles west of the

Two days later the body of Gordon Canelia, 17, was discovered in a sugar cane field five miles west of the welding shop. Autopsies showed all three were strangled. None had been shot or stabbed.

Bertha Gould, 14, and Mary Leah Rodermund, 18, still were missing. Authorities said they suspected both were victims of the same killer.

Canelia and Mrs. Sons were kidnapped in a robbery at a grocery on April 27.

Miss Adams and Miss Gould disappeared May 11 after they left a high school fair. The fifth victim, Miss Rodermund, was abducted March 2 while running errands to a drugstore.

Hohenberger, a former reserve sheriff's deputy from California, had served jail sentences in that state on assault and escape charges. But he was arrested several times for more serious sex offenses, including rape, and he was wanted in a Palm Desert, Calif., kidnapping and rape that occurred after two days later from jail in 1977.

Everest conquerors to celebrate

KATHMANDU, Nepal (UPI) — Thirty climbers who have stood "on top of the world" began gathering today to celebrate the 25th anniversary of the first successful climb of Mount Everest, by Sir Edmund Hillary.

The climbers from 10 nations who have conquered the world's highest mountain met in Kathmandu to celebrate what Nepal's Tourism Ministry said was "the victory of man over nature."

Bill Hillary, a New Zealander and Everest's first conqueror, along with Sherpa guide Tenzing Norgay, was to attend celebrations in Wales with 10 veterans of the British team that helped him subdue the 29,202-foot peak in 1953.

Nepal's Premier Kirtinidhi Bista will inaugurate the Silver jubilee's activities by issuing commemorative postage stamps.

Other events planned included symposiums, exhibitions and a night of camping in a royal forest preserve on the outskirts of Kathmandu.

Austrians Reinhold Messner and Peter Habeler, who recently became the first climbers to reach the summit of Everest without the aid of oxygen equipment, were to attend.

In addition to Nepal and Austria, other countries represented at the celebrations include India, China, West Germany, Italy, Japan, South Korea and the United States.

A seven-member Chinese delegation, led by Han Ming-yang, an official of China's sports commission, arrived in Kathmandu Sunday for the celebrations.

The delegation includes three Chinese climbers who have reached the top of Everest.

The United States is represented by Lute Jersted of Portland, Ore., who made the climb in 1963.

Another American team made a second successful ascent in 1976 in celebration of the nation's Bicentennial.

Karl Reinhard, the first West German to reach the summit as a member of an Austrian team this spring, represented the Bonn government.

An official of the Ministry of Tourism said the celebrations "are essentially relaxed and comfortable without being pompous."

Fellow officers mourn Oklahoma troopers

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — Troopers from Alabama to California jammed the Capitol Sunday in tribute to three Oklahoma Highway Patrolmen who died in a gun battle that ended the "thrill killing" spree of two escaped convicts.

"Pappy" Summers, 36, Houston and Billy G. Young, 39, were killed Friday by fugitives suspected of four slayings in Texas and Alabama in the past month.

The suspects, Claude Dennis, 35, and Michael Zam into the humid halls of the Capitol was Lt. Hoyt Hughes, 46, his arm in a sling because of a wound suffered in the shootout.

Hughes, credited with killing one of the fugitives, left a hospital bed to attend the service with his wife. As he and other mourners filed out of the Capitol, fellow officers hugged him.

A uniformed policeman and his wife stood before one of the caskets and bowed their heads for a moment. The wife stood with her arms folded tightly in front of her, as though chilled. Silently, the officer and his wife walked away, holding hands.

Gov. David Boren said in his eulogy the troopers slain in the furious firefight in Caddo, Okla., displayed "the greatest love possible." Pastor Richard Hogue said only God "knows how many lives have been saved."

The governor Friday declared a week of mourning, with flags to be flown at half-mast throughout Oklahoma. Boren called the shoot-out "the worst single tragedy in the 60-year history of the Oklahoma Highway Patrol."

Flags also flew at half-staff in Abilene in honor of the troopers.

Juvenile names go to print

LANDER, Wyo. (UPI) — A municipal judge believes publishing the names of juvenile offenders and their parents, may help cut the juvenile crime rate.

Municipal Judge Josef Rejzple recently asked, and received, the City Council's backing to make public court files on offenders under 16 booked into his court, which handles misdemeanors.

Traditionally the names of youthful defendants have been kept secret, he said. Wyoming law allows the prosecuting presiding judge, at his or her discretion, to release the names of criminal defendants under 16.

Al Unser limps to heat plagued '500' win

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — First Al Unser pushed his car into a challenging position in the Indy 500.

Then his car, because of a mishap, pushed Unser, slowing him to a squeaky victory over charging Tom Sneva.

Unser became the fourth driver to win the 500-mile race three or more times, joining four-time winner A.J. Foyt and three-time winners Louis Meyer and Wilbur Shaw. Mauree Rose won two crowns and shared a third.

But Unser, who won in 1970 and 1971, triumphed in the second fastest 500 ever, a speed of 161.33 miles per hour. It also was one of the hottest days ever with the temperature reaching 89 degrees. It was a premature self-made birthday present, too, since he is 39 today.

Unser, starting in fifth position, never was far out of contention, eighth after 75 miles, which was when he began his push. In 100 miles he moved into second and never lost ground in the final 325 miles, leading all but one of the last 80 laps.

Still, he thanked luck for victory, since Sneva in the last 20 laps cut Unser's lead from 33 seconds to 23 seconds, and had the race been 10 laps longer, the former Seattle school teacher could have moved in front.

The mishap Unser suffered befell Sneva. After 179 laps Unser ran into a replacement tire when he drove into his pit and the impact damaged his right front wing. Thereafter he had handling problems.

"I came into the pit too hard," he said. "I didn't know what I had done, but it wouldn't have happened if I went back. I knew there was something wrong, but I didn't know what. It made it push real bad. The wing went down in front and it wouldn't turn. That's why I had to slow down. If I didn't have the faintest idea what went wrong, but I didn't know what it made it push real bad. The wing went down in front and it wouldn't turn.

"That's why I was picking up as much as I was Al," he said. "The only thing I could think of was Al was running low on fuel."

Only four drivers ever led, Danny Ongais moving in front on the first lap and picking up $10,550 in lap prize money before his engine blew up and he was forced out after 145 laps. Unser earned $18,150 in prizes at $150 per lap and the only other front-runners were Sneva and unofficially Steve Krisloff. Krisloff, Gordon Johncock and Larry

Dickson each were penalized one lap for improving their position under the yellow and the penalty could endanger the final positions of both Krisloff and Johncock.

Unofficially Johncock finished third, Krisloff fourth, Wally Dallenbach fifth, followed by Bobby Unser, A.J. Foyt, Janet Guthrie, George Snider and Johnny Parsons. Only Steve Sneva, with a speed of 161.244 miles per hour, and Al Unser finished the 500 miles, and only 14 of the 33 starters were running at the finish.

Unser was expected to pick up the top prize money of about $250,000 tonight at the 500 awards banquet.

Bullets drop one-pointer to Sonics

LANDOVER, Md. (UPI) — Guard Dennis Johnson scored five points to key a Seattle rally early in the fourth period and the SuperSonics survived a late scare to beat the Washington Bullets 83-82 Sunday and take a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven NBA championship series.

The Sonics can wrap up the series by winning home games Tuesday and Friday nights. Game 4 will be at the Kingdome with Game 5 at the Seattle Center Coliseum.

The Bullets, down by nine points at one time in the fourth period, rallied in the final seconds and had a chance to win.

Tom Henderson stole a pass and made a layup with three seconds remaining to pull the Bullets within 93-92. Then Seattle's Paul Silas carelessly stepped on the end line while trying to get the ball in and referee Earl Strom awarded the ball to the Bullets.

Silas, a 14-year NBA veteran, was called for stepping on the line while throwing an inbounds pass with three seconds left to play. His goof gave the Bullets an opportunity to win the game but Bob Dandridge's 15-foot shot from the corner bounced in and out at the buzzer.

"It was a very dumb move. People with 14 years in the league shouldn't make those type of mistakes," said Silas. "If Bob Dandridge had made that shot, I would have felt like the dumbest basketball player on the face of the earth."

A basket by Johnson with 8:38 remaining had given the Sonics a 78-70 lead. They later extended it to 84-75 on a Marvin Webster basket with 6:21 remaining before the Bullets made their comeback.

A foul shot by Dandridge pulled Washington within 86-84 with 2:33 left and the Bullets got the ball back when Seattle's Fred Brown tried to beat the 24-second clock with a twisting eight-footer that missed badly and Kevin Grevey rebounded.

Brown, however, redeemed himself on the Bullets' possession by stealing a pass from Charles Johnson and driving the length of the court for a layup to make it 90-84.

Washington pulled within 93-90 on a layup by Elvin Hayes with 12:55 left and then closed to within one on Henderson's layup.

Webster led the Sonics with 20 points and 12 rebounds while Gus Williams also had 20 points. Rookie Jack Sikma, who fouled out late in the game, finished with 17 and Johnson had 12.

Hayes led Washington with 29 points and 20 rebounds and Dandridge added 21 points.

The first quarter ended in a 24-24 tie with Hayes and Dandridge combining for 22 of the Bullets' points. Hayes had 14 plus nine rebounds. The game stayed close until the Sonics took advantage of Washington's turnovers and missed shots to run off a 10-2 streak during a four-minute span midway through the second period.

Sikma had four of those points as did Fred Brown, whose layup with 3:15 left in the half gave Seattle a 42-34 lead.

But a Hayes' jumper halted the Bullets' skid. Two jump shots by Mitch Kupchak kept the Bullets' rally going and a three-point play by Henderson pulled Washington within 49-47 at halftime.

The Sonics made a bid to take control early in the third period, moving ahead by four, but Dandridge keyed an 8-0 Washington run that put the Bullets up by 61-57 with 6:05 remaining.

With the score tied 67-67 and 25 seconds left in the third period Silas put Seattle ahead for good with a tap-in and followed it with a layup in the fourth period.

After a Sikma basket, Johnson scored his five key points on a fastbreak layup and a three-point play, to make it 78-70. Following a three-point play by Henderson that brought the Bullets within three, the Sonics scored six straight points to make it 84-75.

Grevey, who hit just 1-of-14 shots from the floor, hit a pair of two-shot fouls late in the game to tie the Bullets within four, the last time at 92-88 with 33 seconds remaining.

Webster, fouled with 19 seconds left, made 1-of-2 to put the Sonics up by five, then Hayes, and Henderson made their last-second layups and Silas' blunder gave the Bullets their chance to win.

Webster, who scored just 10 points in Seattle's Game 2 loss, hit 9-of-15 from the floor. Hayes, Washington's leading scorer throughout the playoffs, was 12-for-24 from the field.

HAPPILY waving at the crowd is Indy driver Janet Guthrie. The smile turned to a frown when she mentioned there was no place to change clothes had to endure heat and humidity in driving outfit.

Janet Guthrie earns ninth despite broken right wrist

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — When the widow of Tony Hulman announced "Lady and gentlemen start your engines," Janet Guthrie got her foot to the floorboard and kept it there for most of the million-dollar Indianapolis 500 Sunday.

It was the type of race Guthrie knew she could run. The ex-physicist finally had the horses in finishing eighth with a Wildcat, originally built by master mechanic George Bilgotti and one that proved Indy's only woman driver could end an Indy race in the top 10.

"I was aiming for the top five," said Guthrie as she usually dove into Indianapolis Motor Speedway officials for talking to provide her with a dressing room. "Prior to the race, I predicted a finish in the top 10, but I was determined to do better."

Guthrie was racing under a handicap. She injured her right wrist in a fall during a charity tennis match earlier in the week and the pain forced her to race gears with her left hand. Fortunately, Indianapolis is one big left turn and Guthrie used the power of her left hand to steer the car and keep it off the wall in the corners.

Police seek way to talk to boxer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Detectives said Sunday they hope to work out a signal system to talk to boxer Bobby Halpern, who was shot in what police called a "hit" and still is in critical but stable condition in North Central Bronx Hospital.

The 45-year-old heavyweight and ex-convict was shot six times Thursday at point-blank range by two men as he picked out a suit in a clothing store in the Bronx. Shot in the mouth, he has been unable to communicate with police.

A Bronx detective said police will "try to rig up some way of talking to him, maybe give him a list of questions and have him blink an eye or use his hands to tell what he can."

Halpern was attempting to make a comeback after 17½ years in prison for robbery and kidnaping.

Three hours after the race, Guthrie was still answering questions from newsmen. She was sweaty in a double layer of triproof underwear and her driving suit.

"It's a big joke to the Speedway not having a ladies room in the garage area," she complained. "I won't be able to shower and change clothing until I get back to where I'm staying."

"I was down on power on the straightaways but I was getting through at the corners a lot better than most. I wasn't surprised at the start. Everyone behaved and there were no shenanigans."

ELBOWING his way to the basket is Seattle's Jack Sikma. Washington's Mitch Kupchak doesn't look too kindly on the action.

Heard ends 4-year drought with Atlanta win

ATLANTA (UPI) — Jerry Heard, who has been struggling since being struck by lightning three years ago, birdied the final hole Sunday to set a tournament record in winning the Atlanta Golf Classic by six strokes.

Heard, witness on the pro golf tour for more than four years, was locked in a tie with Bob Murphy going into the last hole, a par-5 water-guarded layout. He placed his third shot only a couple of feet from the cup and had an easy tap-in for his birdie, while Murphy, 40 feet away with his third shot, took a bogey and wound up in a three-way tie for second with Tom Watson and Lou Graham.

The victory was worth $40,000, nearly $6,000 more than Heard had won in 16 previous tournaments this year.

Heard began Sunday's round a stroke behind the then pace-setting Murphy and didn't catch up until he birdied the seventh hole. He went in front with a birdie at No. 10, but Murphy forged back into a tie on three different occasions, the last when he ran home a 10-foot birdie putt on the next to last hole.

"I really felt I was going to win today," Heard said. "I was almost too confident. But my back felt good and my nerves felt good."

"I got off to a shaky start but it didn't take me long to settle down. It was a bit of a struggle. I had three 67s this week and this was the toughest of the three."

Heard then came through with his sixth birdie of the afternoon to post a 5-under 67 for the day and a four-day total of 19-under 269.

Murphy said he gambled when he saw Heard go into the lead with that closing birdie putt. "I tried to get one, too, and it cost me more than $7,000," he said. "That was a pretty costly chance that backfired."

Murphy had a 70, Watson, leading money winner on the tour this year with more than $203,000, closed with a birdie for a 68. Graham got his 271 by posting a final round 66.

Only nine of the 75 golfers who played the final two days of this $200,000 tournament wound up over par for 72 holes and defending champion Hale Irwin wound up in a tie for 16th place despite shooting 10-under-par golf.

Gilby Gilbert was fifth at 273, Lanny Wadkins sixth at 274 and Jim Colbert seventh at 275. The final day's best round was a 65 turned in by former two-time PGA champion Dave Stockton. But Dave Eichelberger, who wound up well back at 282, had a 1978 tour low 62 on Thursday and there were three 63s on Saturday, two of them in the same

CSI makes quick exit from tourney

GRAND JUNCTION — College of Southern Idaho made a quick trip to the national junior college baseball tournament over the weekend.

The Eagles, who figured to be one of the better outfits sent by the local school to Grand Junction, were knocked out of the tournament by Columbus, Ga., 10-0 in seven innings Sunday. That was the second loss, CSI bowing 2-1 to Flint, Mich., in the opener Saturday.

"As well as we played Saturday we played just as badly today," said Coach Jim Walker. We did absolutely nothing right... committed five errors and did not show the city of Grand Junction anything we'd like to have."

"I feel like we're down a little," he added. CSI had one chance, that coming in the top of the first inning when it put two men on base with one out. But Columbus ended that threat and then blew the Eagles away.

"We found out that .372 team batting average they've been talking about must be pretty close to true," Coach Walker said. "They hit shots all over the lot on us and I think we were all pretty relieved to get off the field in seven innings."

Columbus jumped on Eagle starter Brian Lunden for four runs in the first three innings. They rapped Wymon Smith for three runs in one, and one-third inning and then finished up by scoring three off Tim Mueller.

"I suppose we were down a little from losing that first one when we played well enough to win," Coach Walker summarized. "But that is no explanation for the way we played today. We played very badly and got just what we deserved."

Huge crowd sees Giants down Dodgers

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Pinch-hitter Mike Ili hit a grand slam homer to highlight a five-run sixth inning, but it was his error in the seventh inning that helped the San Francisco Giants a 6-2 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers before a Candlestick Park record crowd of 56,105.

Ili's homer, which came off of Roger Dean Sinton, was the 12th home run issued by the Dodgers' right-hander this season but the Giants in front 5-3, but an error by shortstop Johnny Latham and Reggie Smith's eighth home run tied the score 5-5 in the seventh.

With one out in the Giants' half of the seventh, Terry Whitfield fouled his third double and fourth hit of the game then scored the winning run when Evans dropped a blooper into left.

Randy Moffitt, with three shutout relief innings, picked up his fourth victory in five decisions while Sinton lost for the fifth time in nine decisions.

The Dodgers, who fell 3 1/2 games behind San Francisco in the National League West, took a 1-0 lead in the third on a walk to Bill Russell and a double by Ron Cey. They added a run in the sixth on a single by Cey, a wild pitch, and doubles by Steve Garvey and John Oates.

The crowd was the largest in the major leagues this season.

ballich," said Carl Yastrzemski after Boston extended its winning streak to six games.

"The fact that we're 26-and-3 in the series is a surprise. Nothing this ballclub does surprises me. This is probably the best ballclub I've ever played on. They're capable of doing anything.

"Despite losing all four games of the big weekend set, Houk was encouraged by his team's play.

"We played a good ballclub in their ballpark and we held them to one-run decisions in three of the games," said the Major. "When you do that, you're playing pretty good baseball. We played 'em close but didn't get the big wins when we needed them. Anytime you come here and keep them from scoring the way we did, you've done well."

Jim Rice's 18th homer of the season, leading off the bottom of the 10th of John Hiller, 4-2, gave Bob Stanley, 4-1, the win in the opener. In the nightcap, Jerry Remy raced home from third on the winning run on Fred Lynn's seventh-inning sacrifice fly as rookie Jim Wright upped his record to 2-0 with relief help from Dick Drago.

Ron LeFlore and Jason Thompson hit first-game home runs in the third and fifth innings, but have now dropped six straight. Yankees 5-6, Blue Jays 3-5. hiller tied the game at 7-7. Amos Otis drew in three runs with a pair of doubles for Kansas City while Ron Carraway had three hits and scored twice for the Twins. Brewers 6, Angels 3.

Robin Yount's run-scoring single — keyed a four-run seventh inning as Milwaukee handed Nolan Ryan his fourth loss in seven decisions.

Yount's single came after Charlie Moore and Paul Morlier had tied the game with run-scoring hits. Rookie Andy Renfro, 3-0, got the victory despite giving up home runs to Don Baylor, Carney Lansford and Rance Mulliniks in the second inning with Lansford and Mulliniks hitting consecutive pitches. Sixto Lezcano's home run was the only hit off Ryan through the first six innings.

White Sox over A's

Francisco Barrios pitched a five-hitter in the second game after three Chicago pitchers combined on a four-hitter in the opener in the Sox' sweep of Oakland. Barrios yielded just a blooper single by Jeff Newman in the fifth and a ninth inning double by Gary Thompson in making his record to 2-8. Ken Kravitz took a four-hitter in the ninth inning of the opener before giving way to Lerrin LaGroy and Jim Willoughby, who got his third save. Jorge Orta's sixth home run in the eighth proved to be the winner in the opener and Jim Brantley's RBI single drove in the winning run in the nightcap. Indians 4-0, Orioles 3-3.

Indians, Orioles split

Jim Palmer hurled his second straight shutout and the 48th of his career, tying him with Gaylord Perry for the 200th career victory as Baltimore earned a split with Cleveland. Palmer, 6-4, scattered eight singles in pitching his third shutout of the season. Doug DeCinces doubled in two runs and Bill Smith one in the Baltimore offense against the Mike Paxton, 1-3, who had singled in a run earlier, hit a 10th-inning sacrifice fly to bring in the winning run against Don Stanhouse, 0-4. Sid Monge, 2-0, got the win in relief. Carlos Lopez blasted a two-run homer for Baltimore in the opener. Royals 8, Twins 7.

Yankees, Jays split

Willie Randolph singled home Fred Stanley with the winning run in the 12th inning of the second game to give the New York its sweep over Toronto after Ron Guldry had run his record to 7-0 with a win in the opener. Rich Gossage worked seven innings in the nightcap to split his record to 4-1. Willie Upshaw sent the game into extra innings with his first major league homer and fourth hit of the game in the 11th. Mickey Rivers homered in both games for the Yankees. Revisited the opener at 2-3 in the seventh and Chris Chambliss' RBI single made a loser of Jesse Jefferson, 3-6. White Sox 3-3, A's 2-0.

Boston over Detroit

The Boston Red Sox' weekend redemption of "There's No Place Like Home" has sent the Detroit Tigers reeling off into the pack in the American League East.

The Sox, who have now won 30 of their 37 home games this season, completed a four-game sweep of the young Tigers with a pair of 4-3 victories Sunday afternoon, leaving Ralph Houk's kids six games behind in third place.

"Twenty and three is phenomenal," said Dwight Evans, whose ninth homer of the year and third of the series contributed to the second game victory. "We've had a lot of breaks but more importantly, we've played real good baseball."

The victories led the Sox' all-time record of 22 victories in May, which was set back in 1946.

"We've got a real good have to work real hard to win this one."

Sadri had equal praise for McEnroe.

"He's got a nice serve and backhand," Sadri said. "He can do a lot of things to counteract my game. But I'm going to stick to my same basic game...boom!"

In the doubles final, Princeton's Kevin Curran and Gary Plick face UCLA's John Ausil and Bruce Nichols. The Princeton duo upset Stanford's Enroe and Wade in the semifinals Sunday, 6-3, 6-4. The UCLA team behind Stanford's Mitchell and Wright, 3-6, 6-4.

Stanford, NC State's aces to square off in finals

ATHENS, Ga. (UPI) — The powerful serve of North Carolina State's John Sadri and the cunning net play of Stanford's John McEnroe meet today in the singles final of the 94th NCAA Tennis Championships at Athens.

McEnroe, the tournament's top seed and slight favorite going into the finals, downed Kramanic and doubles partner Bill Maze, 6-4, 6-7, 6-2, Sunday to advance to the finals.

Sadri, who upset second-ranked Elliot Kwocher of UCLA in the quarterfinals, defeated Pepperdine's Eddie Edwards, 6-1, 6-2, 6-0.

Sadri, a 6-foot, 175-pound senior with a powerful serve, zipped 16 aces past Edwards and baffled the Pepperdine star with precision passing shots.

"He comes to the net on everything," said Edwards. "He played the big points really well. If he serves as well and plays the crucial points as well as McEnroe, it will be a great match."

McEnroe, the No. 1 ranked tennis player in the nation and the youngest player ever to reach the semifinals at Wimbledon, said he had never played "the strong-serve Sadri in singles before, and

Classic simplicity could well describe this knit shirt... perfect for golf or any sport including spectator!

Collar has a run of colorful stripes and the single pocket has the classic touch, an embroidered emblem. A favorite for sure... updated for 78 in an easy-care blend of Dacron and cotton.

Sizes S, M, L, XL

$9.00

For the man who likes a clean, classic look, here's a tennis duo that's sure to please. The mesh shirt is solid except for narrow stripes on the collar and banded short sleeves. The shorts pick up the theme with nylon stretch stripes below the adjustable side tabs. Both top and bottom are in never-iron fabrics — the shirt a polyester/cotton blend, the shorts a textured polyester.

Borg wins Italian Open despite fight with wasp

HOME (UPI) — Bjorn Borg bounced back from an eye injury in the first set and an unruly crowd in the fifth Sunday to capture the $210,000 Italian Open with a 4-6, 6-3, 6-1, 4-6, 6-3 victory over local favorite Adriano Panatta.

The top-seeded Borg cut his left eyebrow with his racket while trying to swat away a wasp in the third game of the first set. But the 21-year-old Swede overcame the bothersome injury to take three of the final four sets and the $24,000 winner's prize. Panatta earned $12,000.

The three hour and 15 minute match was marred only once when some of the 10,000 fans jammed around the Foro Italico center court began tossing coins at Borg as he began to pull away from Panatta in the fifth set.

"If they had done it three or four more times I might have retired," Borg said. "You just can't put up with that. I really got irritated."

The incident was less serious, however, than the crowd behavior during Panatta's semifinal victory Saturday over Jose Higueras of Spain.

With the Italian down 0-6, 1-5 in that match, Panatta's always noisy fans began loudly insulting Higueras, throwing coins and soft drink cans toward the court and whistling when he tried to serve.

Umpire Bert Bowron of England walked off in disgust and when the crowd kept up the jeering, Higueras himself stalked off and forfeited the match after making an obscene gesture toward the stands.

Other than the fifth-set coin-tossing incident, the crowd was better behaved for Panatta's match with Borg, who also won the Italian men's title in 1974. Those who did heckle the Swede were told to go home by other members of the crowd.

Panatta, 27, looked sharp in winning the first set as Borg's eye injury seemed to slow him down. But Borg recovered in the second set and started working his two-handed backhand top-spin-to-all-advantage, repeatedly catching the Italian out of position.

Backed by his cheering and chanting fans, Panatta rallied after dropping the second and third sets. He built a 5-1 advantage in the fourth set before Borg started fighting back. The Italian finally won the set by breaking Borg's serve in the 10th game.

Borg said Panatta's strong start did not faze him so much as the Italian's victory in the fourth set.

"I got very worried in the fourth," he said. "Adriano started to play much better and I was getting tired. Adriano can be tough because he comes back when he's down."

Asked about his injury in the first set, Borg said, "I was trying to catch this wasp and hit it but I hit myself in the head with the racket and it started to bleed. I've done it before. It's very clumsy of me."

Panatta was glum after the loss, saying, "He played better than I did. When Bjorn is playing well he's difficult to beat."

In the women's singles final played Saturday, Regina Marsikova of Czechoslovakia defeated Virginia Ruzici of Romania, 7-5, 7-5, to collect the $8,000 winner's prize.

Victor Peceer of Paraguay teamed with Chile's Belar Pizarro to win the men's doubles title over Czechoslovakia's Jan Kodes and Tomas Smid, 6-2, 7-6, 6-1.

Ruzicel teamed with Czechoslovakia's Mila Jausovec to win the women's doubles title over Florenta Mihai of Romania and Betsy Nagelsen of the U.S., 6-2, 2-6, 7-5.

The wasp won — EXAMINING — the eye of Swedish tennis ace Bjorn Borg is an undentified doctor. Borg was swatting at a wasp, missed and injured his eye.

Carner takes LPGA lead

NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y. (UPI) — Defending champion JoAnne Carner shot a 1-under-par 71 Sunday to take a two-shot lead over rookie sensation Nancy Lopez after the third round of a $100,000 LPGA tournament, and at the same time bringing back a flood of bad memories.

It was just one week ago that Carner, a winned tour veteran of 39, blew a three-shot lead in the 21-year-old Lopez on the final round at Forgegate, N.J., and then lost in a sudden death playoff when Carner admitted she "choked."

"I've been looking forward to it," Carner said of another head-to-head duel with the hottest rookie ever to join the LPGA circuit. "I want to see what I can do. I imagine I'll be thinking of what happened last week but it'll gear me up so I won't blow it this time."

Lopez, meantime, seeking her fifth victory of the year and third in a row, had a troublesome round with three bogeys before finally notching her only birdie of the day on the 18th and 19th holes. Her score of 71 marked only the first time in the last nine rounds she failed to match par.

"Carner will really be psyched up because she'll be defending her title and she's never been able to do that," Lopez said. "She respects my game and I respect hers and if we play the best we can, one of us is going to win. It depends on who hits the most consistent shots."

When it was suggested to Lopez that she and Carner were building a kind of rivalry once enjoyed by Arnold Palmer and Jack Nicklaus, she laughed and said, "I've never thought of it as a matchup like Arnold and Jack but it's a good comparison."

With 18 holes to play, Carner had a score of 6-under 210 to Lopez's 212 for Lopez, Sandra Post, the second-round leader, faltered to a 75 to drop to third place at 213.

Australian Penny Pulz, still seeking her first victory in her 88th tournament, also had a 75 to fall five shots off the pace at 215.

The only other women to match par for three rounds over the rugged 6,410-yard Wykegolf Country Club course were Amy Alcott and Jane Blalock, both at even-par 216. Blalock returned a 71 and Alcott a 72 following an erratic round that included six birdies, two double bogeys and two bogeys.

The tournament, sponsored by Golden Light, offers a first prize of $15,000.

Palomino hand broken in fight

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — World Boxing Council welterweight champion Carlos Palomino broke his left hand as he feared in his seventh successful title defense against Mando Muniz on national television Saturday.

Palomino, 28, had his hand placed in a cast after a visit to a doctor's office and will have to wear the cast for four to six weeks. He probably will be able to resume training in two months, according to his manager, Jackie McCoy.

The fracture occurred behind the knuckle of the ring finger and will not require surgery. McCoy disclosed Sunday that he has received a $30,000 offer from Bob Arum of Top Rank Inc. for his 167-pound champion to meet World Boxing Association lightweight champion Pipino Cuevas of Mexico-City this year.

"However, I was told that Cuevas' manager (Lope Sanchez) has already turned it down," McCoy said, "because he doesn't want a fight with Palomino at this time."

McCoy said Arum would like to stage another national TV Palomino fight at Las Vegas, Nev., Sept. 9.

"But I don't know now if Carlos will be fight by then because of his hand," his manager noted.

Under WBC rules, Palomino must make a mandatory defense against the No. 1 WBC welterweight contender, unbeaten Wilfredo Benitez of Puerto Rico, by October.

"But I understand Benitez is sick right now," McCoy said. "I've been told he has hepatitis real bad."

seventh or eighth round against Mando Muniz Saturday. After landing a left hook to the head in the ninth round, he said he no longer could continue to throw his left hand with any force because the pain was unbearable.

However, he dominated and outboxed the 32-year-old challenger from the fifth round and won 149-138, 141-141 and 145-142 on the three officials' scorecards.

Palomino broke his right hand in training for his first title defense — against Muniz — 18 months ago.

"I just can't say enough nice things about Carlos. He's improving every fight. Take Saturday, for example. He was forced to use his right hand, of course, but he used it much better than he ever

House made it by, barely

It's a little wider and higher than most traffic and caused just minor slowdowns as this house, built by Students at Metropolitan High School in Little Rock, Ark., moved across the Broadway Street bridge to its final resting place. John and Emily Denton paid the cost of materials plus 10 percent, amounting to only $10,500 for the house, but paperwork caused their waiting time to be over two years. The house covered 2½ lanes of traffic. (UPI)

Government denies impeding Nazi hunt

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There has been no "widespread conspiracy" — in the federal government to thwart the search for Nazi war criminals who may have fled to the United States, the General Accounting Office says.

Despite that conclusion, however, the GAO said in its report Friday it cannot rule out the possibility of some isolated incidents in which investigations were obstructed.

The GAO also said its investigation was hindered by the passage of time and limited access to agency records.

In its report to Congress, the GAO said: "It is unlikely any widespread conspiracy has existed in federal agencies — especially in the Immigration and Naturalization Service — to obstruct investigations of allegations that individuals, now residents of the United States, committed atrocities before or during World War II while serving the Nazi government of Germany."

"Since the war, there have been many such allegations," the report added. "While GAO concludes that no widespread conspiracy existed, it cannot absolutely rule out the possibility of undetected, isolated instances of deliberate obstruction of investigations of some alleged Nazi war criminals."

GAO said it reviewed case files on 94 persons against whom allegations had been made.

Two were expelled and, in some other instances, probable cases were developed and prosecuted but, for various reasons, the individuals were allowed to remain in the country, GAO said.

"In most other cases, there appeared to have been only routine inquiries with other agencies, while in other cases there were no indications any inquiries were made," GAO added.

As of last month the Immigration and Naturalization Service had a list of 252 allegations, GAO said, and added that legal proceedings have been opened against 13, including five which had been dropped prior to 1973.

"There have been no successful prosecutions since 1973 and the possibility exists that some individuals under prosecution now or in the future may never leave the United States due to legal appeals and procedures," USA REPORT RARE.

GAO said it gave the State and Defense Departments, CIA and FBI the names of 111 persons who were targets of allegations.
