

President Carter denies politicking of SALT

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter angrily denied today a published report that he had frozen U.S. talks on limiting strategic arms because of political considerations at home and abroad.

The Washington Post report, Carter said, is "totally inaccurate" and "damaging (to) our country and our credibility."

Carter, carrying the newspaper in his hand, called reporters in the Oval Office to personally chastise the Post for running the copyrighted story.

"It damages our country," the president said. "It damages my credibility and I think it damages the prospects for continuation of the basic policy of our government which has not changed since I came in office, that is, to proceed aggressively with SALT negotiations, to conclude a treaty as early as possible — and that is without delay or because of political consideration — to make sure the treaty, when concluded, will be in the interests of our country."

The Post, quoting reliable sources, said in today's edition that the administration decided it would be a political mistake to sign a SALT agreement because current domestic and international problems make ratification of such a treaty unlikely.

The Post reported administration officials said the net effect of the tactic is to reject any "new Soviet proposals" for the time being.

"We're stuck, we're not demonstrating flexibility," one official was quoted as saying.

But Carter angrily rejected that account. "I understand that on occasions there will be inadvertent inaccuracies in reporting of news ... and live with it. But this morning there was an example abhorrent enough to warrant a direct appearance before you by the president of the United States."

"This story in the Washington Post — the White House is reported freezing the strategic arms talks — is totally inaccurate. Before the story was published the reporters were informed the story was totally inaccurate. The editors decided to go ahead with it anyhow."

Carter said U.S. arms negotiators had never discussed such an option, "even internally."

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and Carter administration spokesman Jody Powell were also quick to deny the Post report. A White House official said Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko made a new proposal during talks last week with Secretary of State Cyrus Vance on one of the outstanding SALT issues, but it was "less than satisfactory," the Post reported.

"They are going to have to do most of the coming from here on out," the official said.

The Post said U.S. planners had originally expected a Soviet-American summit this summer to the United States at which Carter and Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev could have completed SALT negotiations.

However, the White House decided last month, just before Gromyko's visit to the United States, that a summer meeting would be premature.

The meeting with Gromyko instead became the forum for the new U.S. strategy, the Post said.

U.S. to airlift remaining western troops out of Zaire

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States will airlift the remaining French and Belgian troops out of Zaire and may also help a pan-African, peace-keeping force proposed to replace them, according to administration sources.

Press Secretary Jody Powell today said such a move is "a very real possibility."

Powell also said the U.S. involvement in helping put down the Katanga incursion into Zaire's Shaba province would continue to be "restrained." He said the U.S. aid would have "positive consequences."

"It's reasonable to assume there is a very real possibility that inasmuch as we did help bring the French into Zaire that we will help bring them out," Powell during his daily briefing.

Administration sources said Thursday night that Air Force "units have been alerted" to respond to an order to remove the remaining troops.

"We are not certain, but the Washington Post reported in today's edition the airlift would be conducted "over the next 24 hours."

"It will be similar to what we did before," one source said. "At his briefing today, Powell said there had been a very serious discussion and planning" for several days, but he could not say when the airlift would take place.

"The question of American assistance in bringing in other forces, African forces, also has to be considered a real possibility," Powell said. "It has also been under discussion." Again he offered no details.

"I don't think we would be participating in such an endeavor just because of the way it looks. It certainly does have that positive consequence for international political considerations."

Administration sources said there was a "less certain" possibility that the U.S. Air Force would fly in the African soldiers should a pan-African force be created.

State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said Thursday the United States is willing to discuss the idea of an African defense force, but reiterated that the U.S. contribution to such a force will not involve the use of U.S. troops.

He said, "What we have offered is something more along the lines of what we did in Shaba" in May. Carter stressed the economic rather than the military aspect of the Paris meeting.

"It is our understanding that this meeting is principally aimed at securing the economic stability of Shaba province ... the economic stability question is basic."

The Paris meeting arose from a French initiative discussed last Friday at the White House between presidents Carter and Valéry Giscard d'Estaing. It will be followed by a second meeting in Brussels June 13-14, which had been planned long before the Zaire invasion.

The U.S. delegation will be headed by Undersecretary of State for Political Affairs, David Newsom.

On a related issue, the State Department confirmed Thursday that the situation in Africa was one of the topics on the agenda of the May 23 meeting in New York between Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and Cuban Vice President Carlos Rafael Rodriguez.

HOW MANY BUGS ARE IN THE U.S. EMBASSY IN MOSCOW? ... the Soviets claim the building is bugless

U.S. Moscow embassy says it's being bugged

MOSCOW (UPI) — The U.S. Embassy said today it had lodged a protest with the Soviet Foreign Ministry over electronic eavesdropping devices discovered at the embassy building.

An embassy spokesman confirmed a State Department statement in Washington that "electronic devices of an intelligence gathering nature" were found May 25.

But the spokesman refused to comment on reports from other American sources that the devices had been placed in a secret shaft connected with an underground tunnel leading toward Soviet apartment and office buildings.

Workers remodeling the embassy following a fire there in August came upon the shaft in the south wing, which houses embassy apartments, the source said.

They said a workman who went down the shaft to investigate came upon a Soviet man who hurried out the other end. There was speculation that the Soviets realized the shaft had been discovered and had sent the man to strip it of wires and other electronic gear.

The source said the devices included a dish-shaped unit resembling an antenna used for transmitting and receiving.

The shaft was either part of or near an unused chimney toward the back of the roof and extended down seven stories to meet the tunnel, which branched off at an angle, they said.

"There was no indication how long it had been in use."

Ambassador Malcolm Toon was in Washington for vacation and consultation and other embassy officials refused to comment on the announcement made Thursday in Washington.

The south wing of the embassy was not damaged in the fire, which broke out the night of Aug. 26, but American personnel, including Navy Seabees, are extensively renovating the building in addition to fire repairs.

Unemployment went up in May

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Unemployment increased in May and inflation continued at a pace that could knock the national economy into recession, government reports showed today.

Both the jobless rate — 8.1 percent — and wholesale prices — 0.7 percent — last month were short of goals the administration has set for continued growth in the national economic expansion that began in 1975.

Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal and prominent academic and private sector analysts have said that continued inflation may lead to a "regression" of national growth by 1979.

The Labor Department said the unemployment rate increased in May largely because of a rise among the number of jobless women. Both black and white women entered the job market in larger numbers in May to help their families pay for higher priced goods.

Wholesale prices last month increased 0.7 percent. This was a considerable improvement from the 1.3 percent rise in April, but still well above administration goals.

Botulism threat charged

Amtrak will keep peddling its sandwiches

CHICAGO — A Food and Drug Administration official says he does not believe that Amtrak's sandwiches stored in oxygen-free packages posed any immediate danger to the public.

But Pete Reed, acting microbiology director in the agency's Bureau of Foods, said Thursday the FDA was testing the sandwiches to determine whether they can cause food poisoning.

Fears were raised by Chicago news commentator Walter Jacobson that the packaging process, in which oxygen is flushed from the wrapped sandwich with nitrogen, could cause deadly botulism.

Amtrak has denied the charges.

Reed said he did not "anticipate a problem under the conditions of refrigeration and short shelf life" of the sandwiches.

He said Amtrak has reduced the shelf life to five days from a month and is refrigerating the sandwiches at 45 degrees.

The FDA last week began a series of tests on the sandwiches, including one to determine how quickly botulism will grow in the packages.

However, Amtrak officials said they still will continue to sell the sandwiches. They noted that about 35,000 of the sandwiches have been sold monthly since September aboard Amtrak trains on the West Coast.

Muri H. Bonesteel, Chicago regional director of on-board services, said at a press conference here that there had been no reports of botulism or other problems.

The sandwiches went on sale yesterday on the 26 Amtrak trains that depart from Chicago each day.

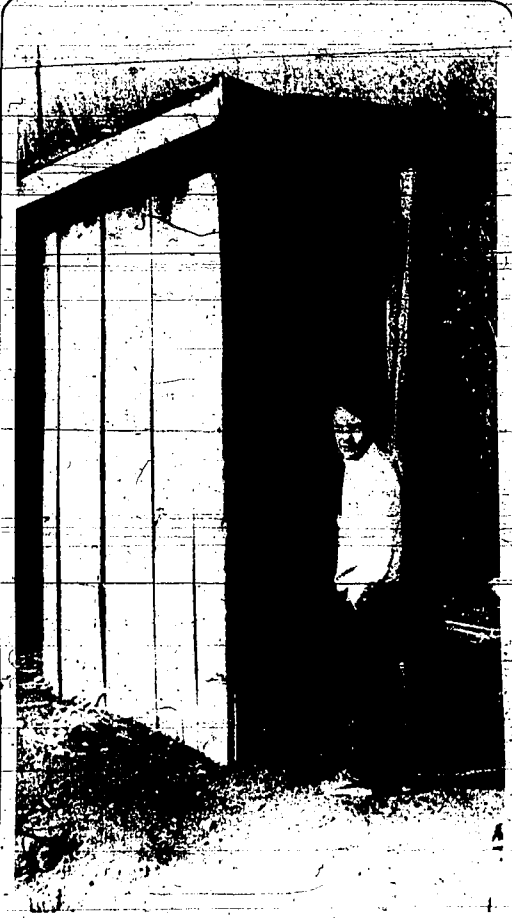

Asked at the press conference if he has eaten the sandwiches, Bonesteel replied: "Yes, absolutely. I'd eat them again and there would be no problem. If there was any chance the sandwiches were unsafe, Amtrak would not carry them."

He said the sandwiches were tested by an independent laboratory using FDA guidelines. The packaging of the sandwiches by the Dallas firm of American Micro-Fare also is done under the supervision of Amtrak quality control personnel and the FDA.

Bonesteel also said the process has been used without problems for the packaging of other products sold on supermarket shelves, such as luncheon meats.

Jacobson in his report cited a 1969 position paper written for the National Automatic Merchandising Assn. warning that the packaging process could lead to the growth of botulin organisms.

Outhouses find a home in a Louisiana museum

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI) — Behind every great house there was a little house in earlier times.

The outhouse, with its own special atmosphere, was an indispensable retreat in daily life.

Indoor plumbing long ago pushed the outhouse into history, but a collection of the little houses at the Rural Life Museum of Louisiana State University stand as reminders of the more personal hardships endured by earlier generations.

It began humbly enough.

"Three or four years ago someone gave me several items to put out here in the museum and one of them included just a seat," said John Dalton, associate curator of the museum.

"It had three holes in it. We were only able to save one pole, the others had decayed and rotted out."

The Rural Life Museum then began a search for outhouses to put behind its 19th-century buildings.

The invoice for the latest acquisition, a single seater, read: "Outhouse, 10 ft. high, 6 ft. wide and 8 ft. deep. Weathered cypress. Excellent seating facilities."

Dalton, who has personally tested the seats, said the buildings often were made from scrap lumber, but were given individual touches.

Cut out arcs, angles and, of course, moons, gourd doors and walls. Seats come in oval, round and teardrop shapes.

"Most of them are comfortable," he said.

"We ran across one square one. You'd have to have a lot of padding for it to feel good."

Graffiti on outhouse walls, was virtually non-existent, he said, although some folk with time on their hands carved initials.

The museum outhouses are for display to add realism only, Dalton said.

"The general public sometimes mistakenly thinks they are usable and attempts to use them, but they have modern facilities."

'Lunacy and Lace' publicity cost some broken bones

NEW YORK (UPI) — Aerialist Diane Terdik, 24, dangled by her teeth above the crowds during a publicity stunt called the "Iron Jaw" Thursday but lost her grip and plunged 30 feet to the street.

Miss Terdik, who performed the stunt outside a midtown Manhattan building, was taken to Bellevue Hospital, where officials today said she was in serious condition with two broken ankles and a splintered bone in her spinal column.

The stunt, the woman performed, called the "Iron Jaw," at one point had her dangling in the air 100 feet above the pavement without a net.

Miss Terdik was scheduled to be a featured aerialist in an upcoming Broadway musical, "Lunacy and Lace."

Alabamans mourn death of Allen

By United Press International
Sen. James Allen, dead at 65 of a heart attack Thursday night, was praised today by President Carter, his colleagues in the Senate, and political patriots in his native Alabama.

Carter said Allen's death meant the Senate has lost "one of the great masters of parliamentary procedure in the long tradition of southern senators."

"He was an honorable and indefatigable fighter for his beliefs, and a man of great personal integrity."

Gov. George Wallace, Allen's political mentor, said the nation had suffered a great, great loss. "In Washington, Allen's colleagues also expressed shock and sadness at his death."

Allen's death was expected to throw Alabama's political situation into turmoil as the process of replacing him gets under way.

Wallace said he would make an interim appointment before the November election at which a successor will be elected to complete Allen's term.

There was speculation that Wallace, who recently withdrew from the race to succeed retiring Sen. John Sparkman, might appoint himself to Allen's vacant Senate seat, but Wallace's legal adviser Bill Jackson said he doubted the governor would make that move.

Jackson also said he doubted Wallace would change his mind and enter the Senate race now that two seats will be open instead of one — that of retiring Sen. John Sparkman.

Commenting on Allen's death, Wallace said Alabama has had "no greater public servant, nor has anyone been more dedicated to our state or our people than this great American."

Senate Democratic Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., called Allen "a cherished friend," and added:

"He was respected on both sides of the aisle. Whether one agreed with him on an issue, he commanded respect through his mastery of the rules and his courtesy on the floor. He was a truly great senator who will be missed by all who had the opportunity and the privilege to know him."

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., described

JAMES B. ALLEN
... of the old style

Allen as "perhaps the greatest parliamentarian ever to sit in the United States Senate."

Kennedy said Allen "was a skillful and unfailingly courteous statesman whose dedication to the Senate was surpassed by his dedication to the people of Alabama. They have lost a kind and extremely able public servant, and the Senate has lost one of its best-known modern institutions."

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said he was stunned by the loss of "one of the best friends I ever had."

He described Allen as "one of the truly great Americans of our time, a thoroughly decent man who was guided always by Christian principles and who courageously and relentlessly fought to preserve the liberties of the American people."

Up to $400

Airlines must pay more to overbooked travelers

By JANET BATAILLE

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In an effort to minimize the overbooking of commercial flights, the Civil Aeronautics Board Thursday issued revised rules requiring the airlines to pay up to $400 to any passenger with a confirmed reservation who is denied a seat.

As many as 150,000 people could have benefited from such rules last year.

Under the new rules, which take effect Sept. 3, a displaced passenger who will not reach his destination within two hours of his original schedule — four hours on international flights — can immediately collect twice the value of his fare to that destination, including the amounts for connecting flights, up to a maximum of $200. The minimum compensation would be $75.

Even if the passenger does reach his destination within two hours, he can collect the full amount of his ticket, up to a maximum of $200, and the minimum compensation would be $75.

However, the new rules allow the airlines to first seek out volunteers who will agree to be bumped in return for a negotiated compensation. By not specifying the amount of such compensation, the board hoped to provide an incentive to reduce the number of involuntary bumpings, since they would cost the airlines more.

The board said it was adopting the new policy to combat the "persistent and serious problem" of passengers who are denied seats, even though they had reservations, because of the airlines' policy of overbooking to compensate for those who do not show up.

While remarking that the 150,000 who were bumped last year were a small percentage of the 200 million passengers who annually travel by air, the board said that the numbers were significant "in absolute terms" and that existing compensation levels "are inadequate to redress the inconvenience and distress often resulting from involuntary bumping incidents."

Six killed, more than 20 injured

PLO claims responsibility for attack

By ALLEN ALTER
JERUSALEM (UPI) — A bomb today killed five Israelis and wounded more than 20 others on a bus carrying Sabbath eve shoppers home and the Palestine Liberation Organization claimed responsibility for the attack.

The explosion in the suburb of Bayit Vagan was the first "major" attack against a civilian target since seaborne gunmen commandeered cars and buses on the highway north of Tel Aviv in March, claiming 57 lives. That attack led to the Israeli strike into southern Lebanon.

In Beirut, the PLO spokesman said the bomb was the work of "the forces of the Palestinian revolution."

Hospital spokesmen said they had accounted for five killed and more than 20 injured in the blast.

The blast tore open the rear section of the blue-and-white bus like a tin can, shattering windows in nearby apartments and strewn the street with metal, glass, plastic and rubber.

Shopping baskets sent flying by the explosion spewed cauliflower, eggplants, apples and other foodstuffs across the street adjacent to the Mount Herzl military cemetery.

Police officials said the bus began its run at the Damascus gate in the old walled city, an Arab district annexed after the 1967 war.

The bomb went off in the garden suburb of Bayit

Vagan on the other side of town, an area inhabited by Jews.

"I heard a loud blast and as I got closer I knew what happened," said Avraham Rosenblatt, who was driving toward the bus when the bomb went off.

He and other motorists administered first aid before taxis and ambulances carried the dead and wounded to nearby hospitals, which went on emergency footing and called in extra doctors.

The blast downed some power lines and reduced the supply of electricity to the area on the western fringe of the Israeli capital.

There have been a number of similar bomb attacks in recent months. In the most serious previous incident, this year, two persons were killed and 45 wounded on a bus in Jerusalem Feb. 14.

Police identified the dead as Besir Balciglu, the brother-in-law; Nekia Guneralp, the wife, and driver Antonio Torres, 61.

"We claim justice for Armenians exterminated by Turkey and those who are suffering because of this country," the caller told the news agency, EFE said.

Police did not immediately say whether the responsibility claim. They blanketed the shooting area with officers and began a hunt for the assassins.

In October 1975, the Turkish ambassadors to Austria and France were killed in separate attacks in Vienna and Paris. On June 9, 1977 the Turkish envoy to the Vatican was slain.

Ninety minutes later a young man called a local news agency and in halting Spanish claimed the attack in name of a "commando for justice of Armenian genocide." He said they wanted justice for the killing of Armenians by Turks.

Illegal funding charged

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Gulf Oil's former top lobbyist says Sen. Russell Long, D-La., chairman of the influential Senate Banking Committee, was a conduit for illegal campaign contributions and money gifts to fellow congressmen in 1972.

Claude Wild Jr. said he gave $15,000 from Gulf corporate funds to Long to distribute to other members seeking office.

Long said he could neither confirm nor deny the amounts of money mentioned in Wild's sworn statement, but was filed Thursday in U.S. District Court. But Long said he had passed on money from Wild to other candidates.

Wild said Gulf tapped its secret corporate fund for a $1,000 donation to Jimmy Carter's successful 1976 campaign for governor of Georgia. The contribution was not illegal under Georgia law.

Jackson proposes oil swap

SPOKANE (UPI) — Senate Energy Committee Chairman Henry Jackson, D-Wash., said Thursday the United States should work out a temporary oil swap with Japan to ease balance of payment problems.

Jackson said such a swap is needed until West Coast refineries are modified to handle the high-sulfur crude oil coming from Alaska.

In an interview with the Spokane Daily Chronicle, Jackson said, the Alaska Pipeline is capable of delivering 2 million barrels of crude a day, but only half that much is currently moving down the line.

Jackson complained that the U.S. is holding back oil at a time when the dollar is threatened by foreign imports and suggested that the U.S. make a deal with Japan that would buy time until West Coast refineries can handle the high-sulfur oil.

"It's clear to me we have to work out a temporary swap with Japan because of the balance of payments problem," Jackson said.

Roadless area study report on schedule

MISSOULA, Mont. (UPI) — Northern Region forester Robert H. Torheim has announced that the Roadless Area Review and Evaluation is on schedule and the draft environmental statement will be available for public review and comment by mid June.

Torheim said the document will include a general national programmatic statement with state or geographic area supplements. The Northern Region is preparing separate state supplements for Idaho, Montana, and North Dakota.

The study is an acceleration of the Forest Service land management planning process. Torheim said it is designed to expedite decisions on how the forest service should manage 62.1 million acres of roadless and undeveloped lands in the nation's national forests.

In the Northern Region, which includes north Idaho, Montana, North Dakota, and southwest South Dakota, 245 areas totaling 8.5 million acres are included in the study.

Human wasn't designed for city

Good news in store for air passengers

America's airlines in a few months will have to give greater reimbursements to travelers who cannot be accommodated on planes because of overbooking.

That surely is a big step for the traveling public but is it necessarily a step in the right direction?

The phenomenon of overbooking has been created by the airlines as a way to deal with that lazy, inconsiderate beast known as the no-show, the person who makes a reservation and then doesn't materialize at the airport.

Such calculations are based on data collected over a period of time by each particular airline, but unfortunately, even though the overbooked figure may equal the no-show figure on some statistician's chart, there are still many persons at airports across the nation who have to experience the inconvenience and humility of being bumped off a plane even after following all the rules in the reservation process.

Under the new rules announced this week, the airline in question must make sure the overbooked passenger arrives at the planned destination within two hours of the initial plane's scheduled arrival or substantial penalties be paid to the passenger.

This plan may have good intentions, but shouldn't we look closer at the base of the problem and deal with that first? Perhaps it is too easy to make a reservation on a plane these days.

The airline reservation system may be a convenient system for the traveling public but is it also too convenient for the pranksters and for the travelers who have the bad habit of not calling in cancellations when plans change?

Perhaps the airlines should be forced to come up with a plan that would demand payment of fare by a certain time so the no-shows could be weeded out in advance, and also institute a plan of much greater penalties as applied to ticket refunds for the persons who buy tickets and then don't show up at the airport on time.

The current no-show problem came about because of the old story of persons taking too much advantage of a good thing. The recently announced overbooking reimbursement plan could lead to the same end. It could become so lucrative to be bounced off a plane that you could see fraudulent use of the system appear.

The no-shows and the pranksters involved in this issue are dealing with a form of fraud, and perhaps they should be treated with that in mind by law enforcement officials. It's too bad that a heavy hand has to be applied; but haven't we, as a collective traveling and/or fraudulent public asked for it?

City life started me thinking about toes. Somebody had stepped on five of mine in a crowded place, and it occurred to me that for city people toes were a mistake. In fact, major parts of the human design are a mistake for city life.

Things that must have seemed very sensible when the architect was designing anatomy meant to live in a garden wearing nothing but his own pell-seem-like hopeless bladders in an argues that he is thinking the best for his toes to skulk, for garden design men is more life for modern urban being than a spade is to go up against an intercontinental ballistic missile.

The skirt might be a good place to start. At present it houses nothing but a clump of absurd hair, and sometimes not very much of that. For man in a garden, hair might be a reasonable appendage; it gives him something to twine dandelion chains in during spring evenings.

First, he used a lot of blower to sort of pull it out. Then he used a brush to comb it back. He combed the blower with his left hand while he raked at the hair with the comb in his right hand.

When he had the hair pulled out to his satisfaction, he began air blowing his neck taking it into its proper place. That seemed a very big delicate touch because he received a warning to cover the upper one-third of each ear with a certain amount of hair. I don't know why that was important. His ears weren't dirty or the ribs, where nobody would have to see what it was up to. This might even make it possible for tobacco addicts to smoke again without terror, since it is entirely possible that smoking may destroy dandruff.

Whether all the toes could be disposed of 4-inches is hard to guess. True, their most palpable function in city life is to be stepped on by other peoples' feet, but some such vulnerable pro-uberance may be necessary for reasons known only to anatomists. In any case, there is surely no reason to have 10 toes to do the job.

The creating architect was remarkably generous in passing out the toes. When we consider that he thought two kidneys, two eyes and two ears were enough to handle far more interesting work than the toes are called upon to perform, it seems possible that he was simply padding out the construction with leftover material.

My guess is that one or two toes per foot would be more than adequate to do whatever toes are supposed to do. It would certainly reduce the number of toes vulnerable to assault in crowded intersections.

The architectural generosity in toes did not extend to the liver, regrettably, perhaps because it was assumed that Garden Man would spend so much time planting dandelions in his hair that he would have little left over for trips to the martini pitcher. A reasonable allowance for a garden environment but dangerous if constructing a man's life in terror because he's been breathing the air, unbreathed because he's been riding the Lexington Avenue subway and desperate because, lacking eyes in the back of his head, he can't see who is gaining on him from behind.

For Urban Man, one liver is not enough, especially since the liver, being made of notoriously inferior material, is subject to frequent breakdown. Instead of 10 toes, he needs two livers. Or, better yet, no liver at all, but another kind of alcohol-processing system which can be easily worked on in case of factory recalls.

A sensible solution here would be to use the ears. Originally designed to keep dandelion chains from slipping down around the neck, they have lost all purpose in a society that strangles itself with neckties, bandannas and strings of mineral and are, moreover, marvelously accessible for repair and replacement if ravaged by sour mash.

Escheres may protest that a man with lungs on his head and livers behind his cheekbones makes a disagreeable spectacle. Considering the variety of styles that New York men affects in public, however, I believe we can safely conclude that nobody will notice anything even slightly amiss.

Reporter will spend 81 days on hair

Chicago Sun-Times

As I dressed at my locker, I watched the TV person working on his hair. First, he used a lot of blower to sort of pull it out. Then he used a brush to comb it back. He combed the blower with his left hand while he raked at the hair with the comb in his right hand.

When he had the hair pulled out to his satisfaction, he began air blowing his neck taking it into its proper place. That seemed a very big delicate touch because he received a warning to cover the upper one-third of each ear with a certain amount of hair. I don't know why that was important. His ears weren't dirty or with brush and blower, because his hair appeared to want to do something else with itself, such as "hangstraight down over his nostrils. I thought it looked interesting hanging down over his face, but I guess he can't appear on TV that way and retain his credibility.

When he finished the forehead swoop, he you have ring around the collar. I finally put aside the blower, but he wasn't done. He picked up the spray can and gave one ear a sharp burst, and carefully patted those hairs into place. He made his way across the entire nogan that way—a short burst and a few light pats.

Finally it was done. He gave his head one final mighty blast from the can and stepped out of the chemical mist before his eyes were sealed shut.

I checked my watch. It had taken him 13 minutes to blow, arrange, pat and spray his hair. In itself, that might not seem like much. But I assume he does it every day. He has no "weekends." On weekends he probably leaves it alone and hopes it won't develop a mind of its own and go berserk and strangle him.

I have done some calculating. The results are enlightening. If he does this to his hair every weekday at the end of a year he will have spent 3,300 minutes combing it into place. That comes to 56 hours and 20 minutes. More than most people work in a week. More than a full weekend, just combing his hair.

He's been in television about 15 years. And to the best of my memory, his hair has always looked that way. So he has already spent 815 hours on his hair—which comes to more than 35 full days.

His hair doesn't look like it is starting to fall out, so he'll probably last in television for another 20 years or so, assuming he doesn't develop a twitch, a drooling habit or otherwise lose his credibility. That would give him another 45 days of tending his hair.

So by the time his career is over, he could very well have spent 81 full days blowing, patting, spraying his hair. More than 10 weeks. Almost three full months. You can take a boat around the whole world in that time.

Or if you want to figure it another way—he will have spent 213 eight-hour workdays on his hair. That comes to 48 workweeks—almost a year of full-time employment. Just to make his hair pool and swoop.

A lot of people begrudge TV reporters their huge salaries. But how many of us would be willing to sacrifice 81 days of their lives doing nothing but staring into a mirror, patting, blowing, alert to any strand that might pop out of its proper place?

That's a terrible thought. If at the end, a person's life does flash before his eyes, what is his guy going to see? A procession of blowers and combs and spray cans?

I'll never begrudge the TV anchorman their salaries again. In fact, I'll pray that they get bald. For their own sakes, of course.

worked on the sides, making them plump out as the skull were bulging at the temples. Frankly, I've always favored the slicked-back "Sals" which are aerodynamically more efficient when blowing into a wind.

Next, he worked on the back of his head, which he combed so that the hair hung down over his shirt collar by a fashionable inch or so. That was a very good idea because you can wear a

Making California dream come true

It's happened all over the country. People get out of bed in the morning and the day is ruined. They start to brush their teeth and they want to cry. It's not their fault, it's not anybody's fault. They want to be in California and they aren't.

The California Dream is becoming a desperate people need to be with the things you are not to well let them stick out. Especially in mild weather.

What is the California Dream? It has something to do with sunshine and easy money and long days and warm night breezes and beautiful willing women. It is 10 parts fantasy and one part reality, but that doesn't matter. The idea is that California is a place where you can be successful if you know how to do it.

But most people don't. They have the dream, but they don't have the money. They have the dream, but they don't have the money. They have the dream, but they don't have the money.

I know one man who did it. His name is Benjamin Stein, he is 35 years old and he is a phenomenal example of someone who spent most of his young adult life trying to make it in the country's traditional power centers. He grew up in Columbus, Ohio, and he went to college in Columbus, Ohio, and he worked for the Federal Trade Commission, and after that he became a speech writer for Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford. He left the White House to work as a speech writer for the 38th Street Journal.

Stein had the California Dream. He has the world I feel is full of people sitting in little rooms and crying, whimpering, if I said, "L.A. is people trying to get things done. When I came to California I was trying to get away from a world of scared, imprisoned little losers. I was becoming one of them. It's like being told all your life that there are very strict limits on what you can do and what you can't do, and then all of a sudden being told that you can do anything you want to do. It's like being told all your life that you're a Chevy, and then finding out that you're a Mercedes."

Stein is aware of the notion that Los Angeles is full of hunters and steady schemers. He has no problem with that. There is far more dignity in trying and losing than in not trying at all," he said. "People in T.A. have their schemes and their dreams and their plans in the rest of the country. If you hustle a lot, that's considered disgusting. It's something to get away from that kind of thinking. I'd like to be even more of a hustler. The other day I looked at a ranch that cost a million and a half dollars, and I thought, 'I'd like to own a million and a half dollars.' And then I started thinking, 'If I do this and this and this, I'll get the money. That's how California makes you think.'

"You can get anything you want in California—success, acclaim, money, artistic fulfillment, success—just by trying to get it. It's like a special dispensation from God to be allowed to be so happy, driving along Mulholland Drive. I have a feeling that if I could get all my friends around the country—jobs out here, they'd all move out. Everybody seems to have the dream these days, and the secret is that the dream is real."

Stein, who writes books, screenplays and television scripts now said: "Los Angeles is made up of a lot of people who want to get rich, get famous, bank in the sunshine, go to Aspen for vacation, drive out to the desert on weekends, be known in all the right restaurants. The beautiful thing about the L.A. dream is that anyone who works hard can get it. Let me tell you a California Dream story. My wife and I were having lunch at the Palm, which is a restaurant in Los Angeles, and we came out the door, and the doorman said, 'Ah, Mr. Stein, the Jaguar or the Mercedes?' And it made me feel terrific. My wife drives a Jaguar and I drive a Mercedes, and I know it's a shallow and superficial to feel good because the doorman knows it. But I'll probably never win a Pulitzer Prize, and I'll never get the Congressional Medal of Honor, and to me, this is good enough."

"In my old life, I got up, took a bus or the subway to work, I went through a cloud of smoke and yucky people into a yucky office. I was miserable all morning, I went to a dingy crutch-hole for lunch. I tried not to fall asleep in the afternoon, I spent the day listening to people I hated as they complained about their lives."

"In California, life is just... different. Before I was a victim. Now I feel that I'm the luckiest guy in the world. People don't have to be helpless prisoners, trapped in a desperate life of lowered expectations. If you had received a special dispensation from God to be allowed to be so happy, driving along Mulholland Drive, I have a feeling that if I could get all my friends around the country—jobs out here, they'd all move out. Everybody seems to have the dream these days, and the secret is that the dream is real."

Gooding committee can serve useful role

Gov. John Evans' announcement this week of a committee to help determine the uses for the former state hospital in Gooding can be heralded as a logical way to initially deal with the issue.

As the governor noted in his formal announcement, the recent refusal by the Legislature to provide funds for the proposed uses of the former state hospital in Gooding has stalemated many planned uses for the hospital buildings and grounds. As well as the majority of Land Board members, believe the facility can be better and more fully utilized, the governor said. It has been reported that only about 40 percent of the available building space is now being used.

The 11 Gooding residents appointed to the review committee should be able to effectively deal with the matter better than could any existing organization in Gooding or any bureaucratic assembly in Boise.

The committee has the tremendous potential to determine what is needed by the current tenants of the buildings as well as to find new tenants to occupy the 60 percent of vacancy.

Gulf, Midwest still stormy

Thunderstorms rumbled through the Gulf states and Midwest today, dumping up to 9 inches of rain in some areas and flooding streets.

In the southwest, hot temperatures were prevalent. The high for Thursday was 104 degrees at Gila Bend, Ariz.

Thunderstorms spread from Florida, across the Gulf states through South and Central Texas, over the lower half of the Mississippi Valley and across the Ohio Valley into the Central Great Lakes.

Rainfall of 9/2 inches flooded streets and underpasses in the Corpus Christi, Texas, area Thursday. Traffic was stopped by 4-foot accumulations, but there were no reports of injuries. The deep water, however, stranded many workers throughout the city in the late afternoon.

The 1978 tropical storm season opened Thursday. The first storm of the year will be named Amelia.

Thunderstorms also were reported along the Central Atlantic Coast, the Central and Southern Plains as well as in Northwestern portions of the Great Basin.

One tornado touched down in Southwestern Missouri Thursday and a flash flood watch was posted over the foot-hill of the state late in the evening because of heavy rains.

Strong, gusty winds were reported in Southern Illinois and East Texas. Large hail fell in Southeastern Michigan, Southwestern Arkansas and Central New Mexico.

Boy's trial still in doubt

AUSTIN, Texas (UPI) — Two psychiatrists have found the son of former presidential press secretary George Christian is mentally incompetent, but it is now up to a judge to decide if the boy will be tried for killing a junior high school teacher.

District Judge Home Cole was scheduled to consider motions today on the mental competency of John Daniel Christian, 18, who was arrested for shooting his English teacher to death in front of a crowded classroom May 18.

If ruled mentally ill, Christian cannot be tried on juvenile delinquency charges until he recovers. However, mental illness might also be used as defense at any subsequent trial on delinquency charges.

Terrorist jail terms wanted

TWIN FALLS, Idaho (UPI) — The prosecution demanded 15-year jail terms and $1,200 fines today for six top leaders of the Red Brigades terrorist gang.

Chief prosecutor Luigi Moschella also asked for 10-year sentences and $1,000 fines for seven other gang members and an eight-year sentence for a lawyer accused of helping organize the group.

The prosecutor's statement came on the 43rd day of the terrorism trial that has been marred by the killing of a police witness, a jail warden guarding the defendants and threats to kill jurors and judges working on the case.

Other Red Brigades members, still at large, killed former Premier Aldo Moro last night.

Those facing a possible 15-year sentence and fine included Renato Curcio, 37, the bearded former sociology student who founded the Red Brigades eight years ago and started it along the path of political terrorism.

The Red Brigades founder and his fellow defendants were accused of forming an armed band with the aim of overthrowing the government and carrying out kidnappings, robberies and killings.

The Turin trial entailed 622 of the most stringent security measures ever seen in Italy, with an estimated 4,000 police at one point circling the converted police barracks where it was held.

Curcio and his fellow defendants viewed the trial proceedings from a barred cage set up in the courtroom and surrounded by armed guards.

Curcio and his wife, Marguerita Casol, founded the Red Brigades in late 1969 along with radical sociology student colleagues at the University of Trento, in Northern Italy.

Tuition tax credit plan now goes to the Senate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A tuition tax credit for all private school students from the first grade through college has won House approval.

Its next test — assuming easy Senate passage — will be a veto by President Carter. Unless the House can muster more "yes" votes than it did in Thursday's 237-158 vote on final passage, it will not be able to override the veto.

And were a veto to be overridden the tax credit would face the greatest test of all — a Supreme Court battle over the constitutionality of credits for the parents of church school students.

The bill passed by the House Thursday would allow parents of college, secondary and elementary school students to claim a credit of 25 percent of the cost of tuition, up to certain maximums.

For college students, the maximum tax saving per year per student would be $100 for tuition paid after August 1978, $150 in 1979 and $250 in 1980. For private and church elementary and secondary pupils, the maximums would be $50 in 1978 and $100 in the next two years.

A credit is subtracted directly from taxes owed as opposed to an exemption or deduction which is subtracted from income before taxes are calculated.

Despite the obstacles still facing tax credits, the fact that the House voted at all was a victory for proponents. The Senate has voted tuition tax credits six times in the past decade, but this is the first time the issue has ever reached a House vote.

Those favoring the bill were mainly Catholic groups, and numerous priests were peppered through the gallery during debate.

Bishop Thomas C. Kelly, general secretary of the U.S. Catholic Conference, called the House action "most encouraging." He said it promises to be of great benefit to parents who must meet the costs of educating their children, and certainly is in the best interests of the nation.

There were several preliminary declarations Thursday.

Illinois governor proposes change in ERA vote method

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — Gov. James R. Thompson says the General Assembly should reduce from three-fifths to a simple majority the votes required by each house to ratify the Equal Rights Amendment.

The change would be "a significant help" in efforts to pass ERA, Thompson said Thursday. The three-fifths requirement was challenged in federal court several years ago, but the court ruled the requirement strictly is up to the Legislature.

Thompson said "the suggestion has been made" that Republican floor leaders try to alter the vote requirement, but he would not say he is the one proposing the strategy. "It has been discussed around this building."

House ERA sponsors have been counting heads lately to see if they have the needed 107 "yes" votes. A three-fifths Senate vote would require 38.

Under a simple majority rule, 89 votes would send ERA to the Senate. There, Thompson said, a simple majority rule might be adopted more easily since the three-fifths figure is not a Senate rule as it is in the House.

Susan's campaign trail 'cold'

United Press International
LET GREEN DO IT

As anybody who reads newspapers knows, there's a good chance Jerry Ford will win in 1980 for the job he lost to Jimmy Carter — a 50-50 chance, according to Ford's 20-year-old daughter Susan. But she says there's no way she'll help him get the job. "I've already done the (campaign) gambit once and I have no desire to go back to Washington again," Miss Ford said in Baltimore Thursday. "I think he still has a desire for the job, but whatever that desire is, I can't understand him wanting the job. The hours are rotten, the travel is rotten."

Clarice studies blacktip sharks

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Clarice Prange, 27, swims among 10 hungry sharks in the Steinhart Aquarium at feeding time. In a "test" she finds a high-speed underwater camera on their jaws as they attack the fresh frozen bonito which is the main course of their three-times-a-week dinner. Ms. Prange, a doctoral candidate in zoology at the University of Illinois, came to Steinhart because of its tank water clarity and unique collection of blacktip sharks from the South Pacific.

The object is to find out how the sharks' jaws work when they eat. Because sharks are cartilaginous, their body mechanics could offer clues to a human disease, arthritis. Ms. Prange is filling in some of the blanks in knowledge of how the sharks' body components function together. She has found that the sharks' loose teeth fold back into the mouth when food enters and anchor themselves in prey to prevent escape. The blacktips are young, measuring only 2 feet of their eventual 5-foot length, but their teeth can be just as ruthless to humans as other sharks. The first time Ms. Prange entered the tank, one tried to nibble and left toothmarks before she waded it away. Ms. Prange says the sharks seem to be spotted by the camera at less than 18 inches distance, and she seeks to get as close to their mouths as possible. "I get afraid, but really there's nothing to be afraid of," she says. "They're beautiful, graceful animals. It's an indescribable experience, being in the water with them."

Librarian to appeal decision of faculty

CEDAR FALLS, Iowa (UPI) — A University of Northern Iowa librarian plans to appeal a decision denying her tenure, claiming she is losing her job because she had a sex change operation.

President John Kemerick Thursday upheld the decision of a faculty committee that denied tenure to Gayle McDowell. The president's ruling split her grievance should be denied. Dr. Michael Milfar, Ms. McDowell's faculty counsel, said Kemerick's decision would be appealed to the State Board of Regents. However, the board can deny the request for a hearing.

Inmate attacks priest

CRAWFORD, R.I. (UPI) — A Roman Catholic priest was beaten and kicked by an inmate undergoing psychiatric tests at the state prison Thursday. Authorities quickly transferred the prisoner to another building because other inmates threatened to "get" him.

The Rev. Sean Maher was talking to a prisoner through a cell door of the hospital segregation unit in the maximum security building when he was attacked by Manuel A. Encarnacion, the Corrections Department said.

"He was punched in the right eye, knocked down and kicked before officers restrained the inmate," said spokeswoman Lillian G. McDaniel.

Encarnacion, 24, of Pawtucket had been undergoing psychiatric evaluation since his May 23 jailing to avoid trial on charges of possessing marijuana, cocaine and a stolen car. After the incident, he was transferred to protective custody in another cellblock. "When the maximum security population heard of the incident, they threatened to storm the area to get the inmate," Mrs. McDaniel said.

Answer protested

DEAR ABBY: Please reconsider your answer to DEBATING, who asked if she should tell the woman her ex-husband was about to marry that he had beaten her up. You said, "On the chance that she'll bring out the best in him while you brought out the best in him, keep mum." My sweet young niece was married only three months. No one would have believed that the man she married was capable of such violence as he later evidenced. If only someone would have warned that gentle, unsuspecting girl, she might be alive today. She suffered such a beating at the hands of that monster, the undertaker was sickened at the condition of her bruised and battered body. Wife-beaters sometimes kill. I hope you will change your advice, Abby.

HEARTSICK AUNT IN CALIF.

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for protesting my answer. You are right. My "give 'em another chance" philosophy should not have been applied to a matter as potentially dangerous as wife-beating. I should have emphatically recommended that wife No. 1 warn wife No. 2. I contritely stand corrected.

DEAR ABBY: In regard to LADY PREACHER IN IOWA, she needs to read First Corinthians, Chapter 14 (King James version):

Paul says, "Let your women keep silence in the churches: for it is not permitted unto them to speak; but they are commanded to be under obedience, as also saith the law."

The 35th verse goes on to say, "And if they will learn any thing, let them ask their husbands at home: for it is a shame for women to speak in the church."

I am a fan of yours, Abby, and hope that even though you are all for women's rights, you will be fair and print this anyway. Sign me.

23-YEAR-OLD PREACHER, KINGSFORD, TENN.

DEAR PREACHER: Although the printed word remains unchanged over the years, over Scripture has been interpreted in a variety of ways. It is no longer considered a "shame" for women to speak in many churches, temples and synagogues.

DEAR ABBY: I just finished crying my eyes out over something that is not my fault. A very nice boy from school started dating me and I was on cloud nine. I was never popular, and he was like an answer to my prayers.

Well, he just called me up and told me he couldn't date me anymore because his parents have forbidden him to. The reason was they heard that my sister had a baby out of wedlock. (She did, but Abby, I have never done one thing out of the way, so why should I have to suffer for something my sister did?) I have even had girlfriends tell me they couldn't go around with me anymore because of my sister's reputation.

I am not like my sister, and I don't see why people should hold this against me. How can I prove that I am a "nice" girl when I have this against me?

NICE GIRL IN RHODE ISLAND

DEAR NICE: Don't try to "prove" anything. People who are willing to judge you on your own record aren't worth having as friends.

Alcohol necessary?

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb, My husband read this piece in the paper about how drinking beer or liquor could cut heart attacks in half. He thinks it's a great idea. I don't. He has ulcers already. I want you to write on it in your column and clear this up.

Dear Reader, I do agree a little "truth squad" work is overdue on that particular spate of news stories. The reports were based on an article in the New England Journal of Medicine. It did show that in Japanese-American men studied in Hawaii those who drank one or two beers a day had fewer heart attacks than those who did not. But the authors pointed out that heavy drinking was associated with quite different results.

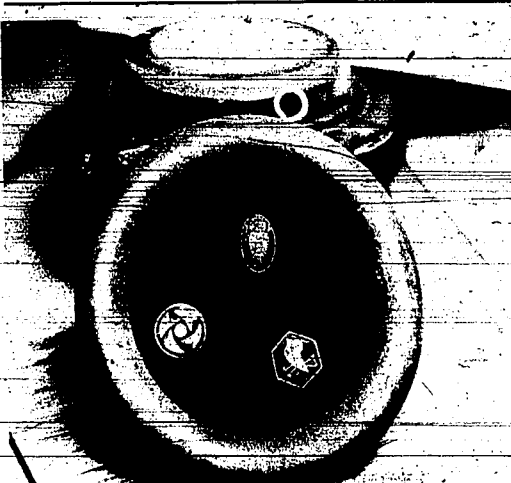

Alcohol, even in small amounts, may be significantly detrimental to the person who already has heart disease. It can decrease the efficiency of the heart. This can cause a person who has chest pain from heart disease to develop it with less exertion after alcohol than with it. Worse, electrocardiograms recorded while the person is working, as on a treadmill, show that the heart is already suffering from inadequate circulation before the pain occurs. The alcohol has an anesthetic action and blocks out nature's warning that you are overworking the heart.

Finally, alcohol is a sedative poison. It is damaging to the brain, the liver, the heart and almost all organs that are exposed to it. Your husband should certainly avoid alcohol if he already has an ulcer. Alcohol stimulates an outpouring of acid-digestive juices that are related to the ulcer.

To give you a more complete idea of some of the bad things alcohol can do to your body I am sending you The Health Letter number 14, Alcohol, Whiskey, Gin, Vodka, Rum, Wine, Beer. Other readers who want this information can send for sheets with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

ONE WAY TO DISPLAY SMALL BUTTON COLLECTION mounted on velvet framed by wooden ring

Buttons rank 3rd in collecting hobbies

By LORAYNE G. SMITH

Times-News writer

FILER — Collecting buttons may rank third in estimated number of participants among the collecting hobbies in the country, but it definitely is not third rate, according to a Filer couple.

Roy and Jan Teuber, whose interest into this fascinating collecting world has taken them across the country, say it is the third largest collecting hobby today in the United States, superseded only by coins and stamps.

Napoleon was bit by the same bug, Teuber said. The French leader collected buttons. Since buttons have been made in the United States only for the past 200 years, many of the oldest collections now in existence came from Europe. As with any type of collection, when owners die, old and extensive collections often are broken up and available through dealers.

Through this route, the Teubers have come into ownership of many valuable frames, including Victorian gilt and military buttons. They also have a group of old pewter buttons dated between 1800 and 1820.

But, as any true collector knows, the Filer couple finds their "loot" anywhere — at garage sales, flea markets, antique stores. Wherever they go they are always on the lookout for additions to the thousands of buttons they have gathered, made from all imaginable types of material.

One of the most interesting of the many frames in their button display room is a group of large buttons carved from avocado seeds by Don Crabtree, Kimberly, expert in Stone Age tools.

Crest buttons are a whole world in themselves, the Teubers say, and some of the oldest button collections in existence bear the insignia of the great old families of England, Ireland and other European countries.

Not only are buttons made from every available type of material known in different parts of the world, such as bone, wood, colored silver to ivory and all types of metals, but as button collectors are well aware, the little inanimate objects also reflect every aspect of life which mankind has experienced throughout the centuries.

There are buttons depicting flowers, animals, opera, fairy tales, special historical events and the zodiac to a modern innovation — smooth wooden buttons with pictures from old books affixed to them. The Bicentennial was a boom for collectors.

Another prized possession of the Teubers is their Satsuma ware collection. Satsuma is the ancient Japanese art of painting on porcelain.

Like any hobby of such wide proportions, the button collecting world comes complete with state and national organizations and publications. In fact, part of the Teubers' shelves are filled with books on button collecting as well as the bi-monthly editions of the National Button Society and Just Buttons.

Button collectors are organized in every state and the national show is held yearly in a different city.

Last November, Teuber won two merit ratings at Portland with his Victorian gilt and military collections. It was the first time he had ever entered a national meet.

Button society schedules show

TWIN FALLS — The Idaho State Button Society convention and show will be held at the Holiday Inn June 10.

More than 30 members from throughout the state are expected to display thousands of frames of all types of buttons, according to Jan Teuber, Filer.

Dorcas Peck, Twin Falls, is program chairman for the event, sponsored by the Pioneer Button Club, which includes collectors from throughout Magic Valley.

Displays will be open to the public from 2 to 4 p.m. June 10 and dealers are expected to attend the event, along with Judy Mullins, Portland, vice-president of the National Button Society.

While the intricate hand labor that once went into making buttons seems to have been lost in the rush of modern technology, Teuber believes some of today's buttons will still be of interest to collectors generations from now.

ANTIQUE DOLL PROUDLY DISPLAYS BUTTON COLLECTION these buttons feature all jewels in metal

"You know the old saying 'Today's garbage will be tomorrow's antiques,'" he laughed.

Like any well organized hobby, button societies have specific rules about displays for state and national shows. The number of buttons per frame is regulated by the size of the buttons, varying from 20 to perhaps 40.

Judges take nothing for granted, the Teubers say. Buttons entered in a show are examined both front and back to see if they are authentic.

Like all collectors, the Teubers say they always keep on learning about their hobby. One thing leads to another. Receiving valuable buttons often are found on vintage clothing, they have gathered books on old costumes. Currently they have a long black dress of the 1900 era which sports black glass buttons.

Like many collectors, the Teubers are interested in and have other old things — from books to a wooden washing machine. Among the many objects displayed attractively in their home is a silver teapot which once belonged to the granddaughter of J.P. Morgan, the American financier.

Mrs. Teuber said she lived next door to the granddaughter in Illinois.

While visiting in Hawaii the Teubers found another teapot which, they were told, had been retrieved from a gunkan ship.

Asked how they got started collecting buttons,

Mrs. Teuber said "after 5,000 chickens, you have to go into something else." The chicken collecting, from ceramics to paintings, started almost from the beginning of their marriage 47 years ago.

Over their many years of reading and collecting, the couple has come across much interesting folklore. One is that girls in the South would stop when they got to number 999 because according to tradition, when they got to 1,000 meant they were to marry.

Following this old superstition, Mrs. Teuber has strung 999 red, white and blue beads on string herself.

When they find only a few of any type button which they believe they will not ever get enough to fill a frame, Mrs. Teuber arranges them to be set inside the old round, wooden rings on used-up curtains.

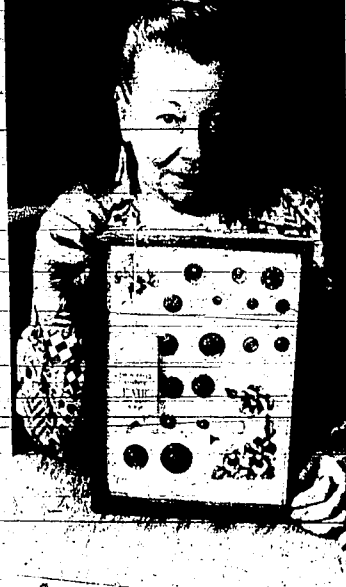

Teuber has just completed getting enough of the crest buttons to frame them for display at a state show in Twin Falls June 10.

Asked what they will do when they run out of space for their many-collector items, Teuber said "We'll just get some more. Big battle. Already several bottles filled with unmounted buttons stand unobtrusively in the Teuber home.

The couple moved to Filer several years ago after living in Twin Falls.

Summer worship hours continue

TWIN FALLS — This Sunday the First Presbyterian Church continues its summer worship at 10 a.m.
 Rev. Robert Van-Nest will speak on "The Power of God in You." The Sacrament of Infant Baptism will be celebrated.
 Special music will consist of an instrumental duet. Dr. Richard McClure will play the organ and his son, Douglas, will play the cello. Child care will be provided during the service.
 Vacation church school will commence this week. Registration will take place from 10 a.m. to noon Monday at the church office. Classes begin on Tuesday and will go through June 15 when a picnic will be held. Classes will be held each day from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. and will include a wide variety of activities for children from age 3 through sixth grade.
 Besides regular classroom instruction, the children will participate in arts and crafts, a special music program, outdoor activities and a field trip.
 The church school will conclude with a "Praise Parade" June 18 at the 10 a.m. worship.
 All children of the community are welcome and invited to attend.

Bell ringers present concert

HAGERMAN — The Wesley Bell Ringers of Christ United Methodist Church, Sall Lake City, will present a concert Thursday at the Hagerman United Methodist Church.
 The concert, "Arlisry and Rhythm XIII," will begin at 8 p.m. Starting with nine high school students and 25 handbells, this organization was begun in 1963 by Edwin J. Duncan. Since that time, Duncan has increased the membership to 21 and has encouraged the group to purchase a total of 110 precision-tuned bells.
 The Ringers raise most of the money used to buy and repair their equipment and to finance their concert tours through the sale of "Hoogie" sandwiches. There is no charge for the concert, but a free-will offering is taken.

Educational program planned

TWIN FALLS — St. Edward's Catholic Church will be holding a Right to Life educational program at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday. There will be two films and key speaker will be Dick Walters, past president of Right to Life in Boise. The public is invited.

Peace Lutherans hold potluck

FILER — Peace Lutheran Layman's League met at the church for a potluck dinner and meeting. The group will not meet during the three summer months.

Car wash slated June 4

FILER — The Walker League of Peace Lutheran Church will hold a car wash beginning at 10 a.m. June 4. Proceeds will be used to finance a three-day outing in the north mountains July 14-16.

Adventists study consecration

EDEN — The lesson study Saturday at the Eden Seventh Day Adventist Church will be "We Consecrate Ourselves."
 Sabbath school begins at 9:30 a.m. Due to the Idaho Camp meeting of Seventh Day Adventists at Caldwell June 2 to 10, there will be no worship service at the Eden church.

Gabriele Trio in concert

JEROME — The First Church of God of Jerome will host a concert by the Gabriele Trio of anthems, hymns and gospel and modern compositions at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday.
 This performance is part of the girls' trio's summer tour, sponsored by Warner Pacific College of Portland. The college is a four-year school of liberal arts, founded by the Church of God.

Sermon title announced

TWIN FALLS — Title of the lesson-sermon Sunday at the Twin Falls Christian Science Church will be "God, the Only Cause and Creator."
 Sunday school begins at 9:45 a.m. and church services at 11 a.m. Sunday and 8 p.m. Wednesday, at the church, 160 Ninth Ave. E.
 The reading room, 352 Main Ave. S., is open from noon to 4 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

Student minister at Hollister

HOLLISTER — Student minister Susan Fleenor will bring the sermon, "A Time to Weep," to the Hollister Presbyterian Church at 11 a.m. Sunday.
 Sunday school will start at 10 a.m.
 Following Miss Fleenor's sermon will be a lunch and meetings of the session and of the evangelism committee. Those attending may bring sandwiches or cookies. Everyone is welcome.

Brethren observe sacraments

TWIN FALLS — Both services Sunday of the First United Brethren Church, 302 Third Ave. E., will observe the sacraments of the church.
 The 11 a.m. service will include the serving of the Lord's Supper. Pastor L. Arnold's message will be an expression of "Our Debt to Christ."
 The 7:30 p.m. service will include baptism of several adults and youth. The evening message will be entitled "Follow Thou Me."

Family gospel hour slated

TWIN FALLS — Fred Brodin, a professional musician for over 20 years, will present a program of classical, country and contemporary music at the Community Christian Church on South Grandview Drive at 6 p.m.
 Brodin is a pianist who also sings and gives his personal testimony. The public is invited to enjoy this special program at no charge.
 The family gospel hour will be followed by interesting classes for all ages.

Ascension inflates new program

TWIN FALLS — A new program of evening services will begin this Sunday at the Church of the Ascension of Twin Falls.
 In recognition of the church's need to minister to the worship needs of those who work on Sunday and the "weekend recreationalists," Ascension Pastors is adding a Sunday-evening service at 8. It will involve a celebration of the Holy Communion on the first Sunday of each month followed on the other Sundays by a Pentecost service of the day. The worshippers are urged to "come as they are" since the service will be an informal one.
 The vestry of the parish will meet at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the Memorial room.
 An Altireya will be held for the Anglican Cursillistas of the Magic Valley at Ascension church. The meeting will begin with the celebration of the Eucharist at 2:30 p.m.
 Title of Father Albert E. Allen's sermon for Sunday is "I Did It My Way," based on the Ten Commandments.

Bible school in Grange Hall

TWIN FALLS — A Vacation Bible School for the rural community south of Twin Falls will be held at the Mountain Rock Grange Hall June 3 through June 9.
 The classes, sponsored by the Filer Mennonite Church, will be held from 9 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. weekdays for anyone aged 3 through the eighth grade, regardless of religion.
 The Grange is located four miles south of Motor Vu corner on Eastland Drive.

Sunday services at 10 a.m.

TWIN FALLS — Sunday services of Church of Religious Science will commence at 10 a.m. at the YM-YWCA chapel. "Positive Thinking" is the topic chosen by Rev. Doreen Williams.

Lutherans plan Bible school

FILER — Vacation Bible School will be held at Peace Lutheran Church from 8:45 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. June 5-9.
 Children of ages 3 to those in sixth grade are welcome. A closing party will be held the evening of June 9.

Adventists meet in Caldwell

FRED GRIFFITH — Eden-Rupert pastor
 ... ROBERT LEAKE ... Twin Falls pastor

Rosenau graduates

TWIN FALLS — Kevin Rosenau, son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Rosenau of Twin Falls, graduated with a B.A. degree in Business and Economics from Northwest Nazarene College in Nampa, on May 14.
 Northwest Nazarene College is a four-year liberal arts college, fully accredited, with an enrollment this year of over 1200 students.

Yodeler schedules church concert

TWIN FALLS — Gospel singer Robert "Hazz" Goertzen, from Lewiston by way of Twin Falls, will be in concert Saturday at 8 p.m. in the Christian Center, 181 Morrison St.
 Goertzen will also be singing and ministering during the Sunday morning worship service at 10:30.
 The public is invited and there is no admission charge.
 Goertzen spent many years in law enforcement in Boise, first as a Boise police officer and then later as narcotics officer for the state. It was through this work he became interested in drug addicts and then became involved with Christian rehabilitation in Richland, Wash. He trained about 40 drug addicts as a large singing group which found itself singing all over the northwest.
 Goertzen is now back in Idaho, traveling full time around the United States singing and playing his guitar and ministering at many churches of every denomination.

He is probably the only gospel yodeler in the country. He writes most of his songs using different scriptures as subjects and puts some yodeling in them.
 He is also a recording artist with Ripcord Records. Just being released is a country western record, "The Idaho Yodeler."
 He often travels with his family in a motor home as his 19-year-old daughter and his 18-year-old son sing with him. They have an album out with much gospel yodeling and some humorous, but uplifting, country western music.

TWIN FALLS — Pastors of the Seventh-day Adventist Churches in the Magic Valley area have briefly interrupted their duties at their respective churches to help prepare for a large camp meeting and Bible conference in Caldwell.
 The conference begins tonight and will run through June 10. Tuesday Pastors Hugh Cowles (Jerome and Gooding), Fred Griffith (Eden and Rupert), and Robert Leake (Twin Falls and Filer), joined ministers and Bible workers who turned carpenter and general handymen in preparation for the annual convocation.
 Together with local and world leaders of the denomination, members of the Magic Valley area Adventist Churches will be among some 2,000 persons expected to be in attendance, according to Pastor Cowles.
 Local members will attend Sabbath sessions at the convocation on two Saturdays, according to regional Sabbath School director James B. Gray of Boise. The meetings will convene on the campus of Gem State Academy, a four-year church boarding high school. The regular services held each Saturday in local churches will be transferred to the camp site.
 Living quarters will include dormitories, mobile homes, recreational vehicles and tents. Some if attendance will stay in nearby motels or with friends in the area.
 "Persons of any denomination are welcome," says Pastor Leake.
 For those unable to attend the camp meeting in Caldwell, Sabbath services will be held both Saturdays at the Twin Falls Adventist Church on Grandview Drive.

Moonie beliefs attract more than followers

By DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — His critics claim he's a fraud who brainwashes impressionable young adults, traps them in an authoritarian movement reminiscent of the Hitler Youth, and manipulates followers into fundraising for his personal wealth.

Supporters insist he is a prophet of God, a missionary with a divine message received from direct personal communication with Jesus, Moses, John the Baptist, Noah and Abraham. Critics, his supporters say, are either misinformed or intent on deliberate religious persecution.

His name is Sun Myung Moon.

His organization is the Holy Spirit Association for the Unification of World Christianity, better known as the Unification Church.

And although the first "Moonie" came to the United States only 19 years ago, the Unification Church movement has created controversy far in excess of what would normally be expected of an organization so young.

Most recently, the Unification Church has appeared in headlines as part of the "Koreagate" probe. Congressional investigators say they have received "very serious" allegations and testimony linking the Unification Church with the South Korean government, a charge the Moonies hotly denounce as untrue.

Three top leaders of the Unification Church were in Twin Falls recently, as part of a national tour which will eventually reach every state. The tour is designed both to inform persons of the true message of their church and to counter what Unification Church members feel have been sensational and untrue characterizations of their organization and its beliefs.

"The Unification Church is a group of people who are following Rev. Moon's teachings," said Dan Fefferman, national missions coordinator for the Unification Church. "The Unification Church is not trying to become another denomination, but rather to act as a catalyst within the Christian church as a whole. We believe Rev. Moon is a prophet who has received certain revelations from God which help us to understand God's work in history and the modern age more clearly, to understand what our responsibility is in this age."

Moon, now 58, gained much of his philosophy as a child in what is now North Korea. Jesus Christ appeared to him then, Moon says, revealing new truths for Moon to take to the people.

At later points in his life, Moon says, he has communicated with Moses, Noah, Abraham and other great religious leaders.

Moon began preaching his beliefs in Korea, and sent his first missionary to the United States 19 years ago. Since then, Moon himself has made trips to this country, visiting Boise on April 11, 1974, for a lengthy speech at Boise State University.

Moon's movement has attracted followers — though the exact number of disciples is in question. According to Fefferman the church lists about 7,000 full-time "core members" in the United States and perhaps five times that amount who are on membership lists as supporters. Ex-Moonies, however, challenge that figure, claiming it is intentionally inflated for public relations purposes. An honest head count would cut the number of core members in half, they say.

Idaho Unification Church Director Lynn Musgrave, who coordinates Idaho Moonie activities out of a house in Boise's north end, says the Gem State has "maybe 30 or 40 full-time members, although their degree of church involvement varies."

But the Moonie beliefs have attracted more than followers. Critics have blasted the movement as "non-Christian." In June of 1977, the Commission on Faith and Order of the National Council of Churches of Christ in the United States issued a statement saying Moon's organization is "not a Christian church" and that many of its doctrines are "incompatible" with Christian beliefs.

That report took specific exception to several beliefs it said were tenets of Unification theology. The report, a year in the making, specifically condemned the following points:

- That Moon's revelations are more authoritative than the Bible.
- That sin was transmitted to Eve through sexual union with Lucifer.
- That Jesus failed in his mission on earth because he was crucified.
- That because of the crucifixion a new messiah will be born — in Korea.
- That the Jews were largely responsible for the failure of Jesus' mission on earth.
- While not all Christian churches belong to the National Council of Churches, 26 Protestant, Roman Catholic and Eastern Orthodox denominations belong to the commission which prepared the report.

Fefferman, however, sharply attacked the finding of the commission that the Unification

Church is non-Christian. The commission refused to speak with Unification Church members before issuing their report, he says. "Apparently they had their minds made up before they even issued their paper."

Fefferman also says the commission made its decision after a reading of the "Divine Principle," a collection of Unification teachings. "That would be like someone reading the Bible and deciding, without discussion with a particular church, what its doctrines were, based on their reading from the Bible and taking selected quotations out of context," he added.

Fefferman said it was "grossly unfair" for the commission "not to include us in the discussion about what the true meaning of the Divine Principles is."

But Christians aren't the only persons upset with Moon's church. In December, 1976, the American Jewish Committee formally called the Unification Church's beliefs "anti-Semitic."

To this statement, as well, Fefferman objected. "It is absolutely not true," he said. "I'm Jewish myself and it's deeply disturbing to me that this kind of thing would come out." Passages can be found in the Divine Principle which could be used by anti-Semites, Fefferman said, "but you can find things in the Bible that will do the same thing."

More recently, the Unification Church has drawn attention as a result of the investigations of the House of Representatives Subcommittee on International Organizations. That subcommittee, headed by Rep. Donald Fraser, D-Minn., has been charged by the full House with investigating the conduct of relations between the United States and the Republic of Korea (South Korea).

Mike Hershman, the committee's deputy staff director, told the Times-News the committee "has a job that we've been asked to do by the House of Representatives. We're checking into at least 10 different areas ranging from investigations of allegations of KCIA harassment of Koreans living in this country to allegations of extortion of United States corporations doing business in Korea, to allegations our executive branch had an early awareness of the Korean lobbying and took no action to prevent it."

Hershman said the subcommittee "received very serious allegations and testimony linking the Unification Church with the South Korean government and the activities of the church in this country to the actions of the South Korean government."

Hershman said there will be "additional information coming up concerning the Unification Church," but refused to list specific conclusions of the investigation, saying "our final report is due in five months, and it's not fair to draw conclusions at this stage." But he did add that "only a very small part of our investigation" focuses on the Unification Church.

Unification Church members have sharply attacked the Korean investigations as "persecution" designed to destroy their religion. Unification Church leaders have sent to persons around the nation copies of testimony given to the committee by Col. Bo Hii Pak, a leading Unification Church member.

In that testimony, reprinted in a chapter entitled "Exposure" of Congressman Fraser's "Secret Motives," Pak charges Fraser with consistently supporting pro-Communist causes and groups. Pak quoted from news articles written by Walter Rieley that charge Fraser with being an "agent of influence" for the Soviet Union.

Fefferman said he agreed with "just about everything that Col. Pak said." There is stronger evidence to believe Fraser is an agent of the Soviet KGB than to believe the Unification Church is tied to the South Korean government, Fefferman said. Ties between Fraser and the Soviet Union would explain the committee's harassment of the Unification Church, Fefferman added.

Hershman, however, told the Times-News that "Walter Rieley doesn't exist. It's an alias. He's actually Claude Reiley Wallace, an ex-convict with a criminal record that goes over two sheets." Hershman said Reiley came to the committee "before these articles appeared, and said he had been approached by the Unification Church to write derogatory articles about Congressman Fraser."

Fefferman said he was unaware of Reiley's background and he didn't know if Hershman's charge was true or not.

Fefferman and Susan Reinbold, national director of Public Affairs for the Unification Church, left Idaho for Oregon — the 28th state visited by top church officials since the beginning of the year. Their schedule calls for "one state every three days," Fefferman said.

In enthusiasm the Moonies make up what they lack in numbers. They seek converts with the drive of true believers. But for some time to come it appears their enthusiasm will be divided in two directions — half spent proselytizing new members, and the other half answering charges about their beliefs.

Drive-in church set

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley Drive-In Church will begin its 22nd year of early morning services Sunday at the Motor-Yu Drive-In Theater at Twin Falls. These are non-denominational services.

This is Magic Valley's only drive-in church, offering Sunday morning services to the community and tourists.

The speaker for Sunday will be Rev. Wes Scott of the First Christian Church, Twin Falls. Loreta Scott will sing "Follow Me," and the pianist will be Sylvia Osterman.

The services begin at 8 a.m. and conclude at 8:45 a.m. Following the services free coffee and doughnuts are served at the snack bar.

Buhl Christian Church holds annual Bible school

BUHL — The Buhl Christian Church will hold its annual vacation Bible school June 5-9. Classes will be from 9 to 11:30 a.m.

On Friday the children will have a sack lunch and also practice for the evening's program, which will culminate in the week's activities. The program will begin at 8 p.m. Craft projects will be displayed at this time and special entertainment will be provided by Pastor Jim Huckaba and Dan.

The theme, "Come Find God's Secret — Jesus in You," will be taught through songs, missionary stories, daily lessons, recreation and handicrafts. This year the children will each be making one craft item to be delivered to Harrah's Nursing Home in Buhl. The Bible school offering will be given this year to the Christian Missionary Fellowship.

LDS stake presents play

JEROME — The Jerome Stake of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints will present "I Believe in Make Believe" by Carol Lynn Pearson in five towns in the stake next week.

On June 6, the group will perform in the Hagerman Ward at 8 p.m. Performances will follow June 7, 8, 9 and 10 in Hazleton, Wendell, Gooding and Jerome respectively at 8 p.m. In Jerome, the group will perform at both 4 p.m. and 8 p.m. for local audiences.

Director Karen Dalton of

Leaves June 7

BRENT Boyd, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Boyd, Twin Falls, will play drums with the Continentals from June 17 to Aug. 28 in the U.S. and Canada.

Children 4 years old through sixth grade are invited to participate. Nursery will be taught by Mary Sisson and Trudee Eckert. Anita Svanccara and Tony Strickland will work with the 5 and 6 year olds. First and second grade will be taught by Donna Clark and Nancy Eckert. Shari Rountree and Claire Robbins will be instructing third and fourth grades. Lisa Hubbard will be in charge of grades 5 and 6.

Others assisting will be Annette Dieckendorf and Edith Graffe with music, Ruby Quigley and Olive Casebeer with refreshment, and Mrs. John Unlecker will tell the missionary story. Students assisting the teachers will be Amy Bencken, Susan and Cheryl Thomas, Mickey Parrott and Bridget Turner. Jan Olson, with the help of Donna Clark, is directing the school.

Elected

BARBIE Sharp is the newly-elected president of the Young Mothers Council and was installed recently at a banquet in the Filer Peace Lutheran Church.

Twin Falls Methodists plan school

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls United Methodist Church is presenting a one-week vacation church school for all children in the area.

The school will be held June 12-17, beginning at 9 a.m. each day. School will consist of fun activities, singing, Bible stories, crafts, recreation and refreshments. A small registration fee to cover costs will be charged. There are scholarships available for those who need them.

The staff invites you to come. Call the office to register, 733-5872.

Outlook changes: cloudy, showers

Twin Falls, North Side, Burley-Rupert area:
Partly cloudy with a few widely scattered showers and thunder storms, mainly afternoons and evenings, through Saturday. Gusty winds near thunderstorm activity. Warmer. Lows tonight near 40 and high Saturday near 80. Probability of measurable rainfall only 10 percent at any particular spot.

Halley, Camas Prairie, Lower Wood River Valley:
Partly cloudy with a few isolated showers or thunder showers this evening, then clear through Saturday. Warmer. Low temperatures tonight 35 to 40. Highs Saturday 70 to 75. Light winds, except briefly gusty, near thunderstorm activity. Probability of measurable rainfall 10 percent or less at any particular spot.

SYNOPSIS
A small area of moist unstable air associated with a very weak upper air disturbance drifted over southern Idaho Thursday night. It will cause a few isolated showers or thunderstorms through Saturday before it moves on over into Utah and Wyoming. Precipitation should be very spotty, with only a few places receiving measurable amounts in Magic Valley. The extended outlook is for a return to sunny dry weather Sunday and through the first half of next week. Temperatures will average above normal, with highs 75 to 85 and lows in the 40s. In spite of possible showers this evening and Saturday, this is still better having weather than we usually have during early June. The weekend, especially Sunday, promises to be favorable for recreational activities.

Hearing in Boise

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Interstate Commerce Commission has announced it will hold 38 hearings across the country — including one in Boise — to invite public comment on a Department of Transportation report concerning the future of Amtrak rail passenger service.

"Public input is necessary to assure that Amtrak's final route structure meets the needs of the American public," said ICC Chairman Daniel O'Neal. He said the hearings will begin the last week in June and will continue through July.

Grains pace Soviet imports

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union's imports from the United States dropped 6.3 percent from 1977 levels in the first two months of this year.

At the same time, according to a U.S. Embassy report on trade issued Wednesday, Moscow's exports to the United States almost doubled, although there remained a drastic imbalance in trade figures.

The U.S. Commercial Office said the January-February 1978 trade figure for American goods to Russia was $352 million, compared with $375.5 million for the same period a year ago.

U.S. import figures, meanwhile, were set at $462 million, a 62.1 percent increase over the $283.5 million figure for the January-February a year ago.

The trade turnover figure also declined, leaving the United States $305.8 million ahead in a comparison of what each country imports from the other.

By far, the biggest business between the United States and the Soviet Union was in grain, with agricultural imports

Grain, hay inspection assigned

BOISE (UPI) — The Federal Grain Inspection Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture has named the Idaho Department of Agriculture to assume official grain and hay inspection duties for south Idaho, beginning July 1.

Jerry Williams, administrator of the state agency's Division of Markets, said the inspection service has been operated for 27 years by the Utah-Idaho Grain Inspection Service in Ogden, Utah and Pocatello.

Williams said the service will continue to operate at its Pocatello facility and that the Agriculture department will lease the building from the city and purchase the equipment from UGIS.

"In addition to the regular inspection and grading, we will be making protein analyses on both hay and grain," Williams said.

Grain inspection duties for Idaho and north of the Salmon River will continue to be operated by the Lewiston Grain Inspection Service.

Moisture runs high

McCALL (UPI) — The McCall Ranger District said today the Brundage Mountain snow course measures 99.8 inches of snow compared with 33.5 inches last year.

The total is 11 percent above the 11-year average of 80.7 inches and compares with the record high of 116.8 inches in 1974. The record low was in 1977.

Water content measured 46.8 inches, 11 percent above

Doctor reports findings on inner ear chemical balance

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — A University of Michigan researcher says the reason so many older persons often lose their balance and fall may be due to the loss of microscopic clumps of crystals in the inner ear.

Dr. Muriel Ross, an anatomist in the UM Medical School, reported her findings Thursday at an international meeting in Sweden of the Barany Society — experts concerned with the function of the inner ear's balancing system.

Most doctors had believed that loss of blood circulation to the brain was the reason for falling in many older persons.

However, Ross and her colleagues have found that deterioration of tiny bits of calcite called "otoliths" occurs with age and may be a reason why so many people in their 60s, 70s and 80s lose their balance and suffer often debilitating falls.

Ross said her findings are based on after-death electron microscope studies of the human ear crystals from fetal stages to those of persons in the 70s and 80s.

Magnifying the crystals 3,000 times, Ross and Dr. Lars G. Johansson, a UMI ear specialist, observed the crystals grow both in number and size from the fetal stage into youth. At age 60, however, the crystals begin to show signs of pitting and etching and by age 70, nearly disappear from the inner ear.

"It may be that, even after we have discovered the cause of the chemical changes in the inner ear, nothing can be done other than observe it as a consequence of aging," she said. "It also might be possible in the future, through a special diet or supplements or other means, to maintain this chemical balance in the inner ear and thereby help preserve people's equilibrium despite age."

Death called murder

NEW YORK (UPI) — United Nations Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjöld, who died in a plane crash in the Congo in 1961, is murdered by Soviet spies, Penthouse Magazine reported Thursday.

The magazine, in its August issue, said CIA sources are saying the Russians murdered Hammarskjöld because of his opposition to their scheme to install a "troika" or three-man tribunal to head the United Nations.

A secret report prepared by the CIA for President John Kennedy in 1962 stated there was evidence that the explosive device aboard Hammarskjöld's plane was "of standard KGB incendiary design," the magazine said.

The CIA sources told Penthouse that Kennedy kept the report secret so as not to endanger the 1963 nuclear test ban agreement with the Russians. The troika proposal was turned down after Kennedy made an emotional appeal for the UN to honor Hammarskjöld's memory by turning down the Russian scheme.

Penthouse also said in the article that the KGB is using the United Nations Secretariat as a cover for some 200 spies operating throughout the United States.

The magazine said some 40 to 65 percent of the Russian employees of the Secretariat are KGB agents trained to recruit former CIA employees dismissed by President Carter's CIA Director Adm. Stansfield Turner.

Almanac

By United Press International

Today is Friday, June 2, the 153rd day of 1978 with 212 to follow.

The moon is approaching its new phase.

The morning star is Mercury.

The evening stars are Mars, Venus, Jupiter and Saturn.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Gemini.

American inventor George Carlliss, designer of the steam engine, was born June 2, 1817.

Actor-swimmer Johnny Weismuller was born on this date in 1901.

On this anniversary:

In 1862, Gen. Robert E. Lee took command of the Confederate armies of eastern Virginia and North Carolina in the American Civil War.

In 1924, Congress granted citizenship to all American Indians.

In 1941, Queen Elizabeth II was crowned in London's Westminster Abbey by the archbishop of Canterbury.

In 1969, the U.S. destroyer "Frank Evans" was cut in half by an Australian aircraft carrier during maneuvers in the South China Sea. Seventy-four American sailors were lost.

A thought for the day: British writer Samuel Butler said, "To live is like love — all reason is against it, and all healthy instinct for it."

At last, Tom McGinnis will be freed

IDAHO FALLS — For the mother of imprisoned Idahoan Tom McGinnis, a two-year ordeal to free her son may soon be over.

For 18 months the 27-year-old Idaho man has remained in Bolivian jails awaiting trial as an accessory in a drug possession case.

In January, he was convicted of the charges and spent another six months in jail awaiting an appeal of his conviction.

Yesterday, that appeal was denied in La Paz, but U.S. ambassador Paul T. Boeker phoned Idaho Representative George Hansen to say that McGinnis would still be let out of jail in June since he has already served nearly two years in prison.

"This morning, Vera McGinnis said she is relieved that the whole thing is going to be over."

It now seems certain that her son will be back home by July.

For Mrs. McGinnis and her daughter, Carlye Cook of Twin Falls, it has been two years of anxiety and disappointment.

As Mrs. Cook said today, Tom's release from prison is "no great victory" for the family. "I feel bad that his appeal wasn't granted," Vera McGinnis said.

Tom has denied all along that he was guilty as an accessory in a cocaine bust in a hotel room in La Paz on June 22, 1976.

Tom's communication to his family has been limited to censored letters, the last of which came in February. In that letter Tom said ambassador Boeker promised him he would be out of prison in April.

Tom also said he would not be bitter when he got out, and not to worry about him.

But the family isn't as stoic about Tom's plight.

"They received no medical or dental care," Mrs. McGinnis said. As a result, they suffered from dysentery and gum disease.

Mrs. McGinnis first contacted her son in jail by sending letters to the daughter of Methodist missionaries in Bolivia. "The ambassador wouldn't go near the jail," she said.

Tom's future began looking a little brighter last fall when the old American ambassador to Bolivia was replaced by Boeker, who "has tried very hard to get the prisoners released," according to Mrs. McGinnis.

In February, Ambassador Boeker told Mrs. McGinnis, "We will have your son home within a month and probably sooner."

But as Idaho Senator Frank Church noted, "Things move slowly in Bolivia." Tom's appeal was denied only yesterday.

The embassy began delivering her letters, and then Representative Hansen and Senator Church got into the act.

In addition to these efforts, the families of the four Americans who were among the eight foreigners arrested in Bolivia organized to get their relatives released.

A Washington D.C. human rights group called LAOS also took up the case.

"At first my brother wanted us to do nothing," said Carlye. "He thought if he maintained a low profile he would be released."

Mrs. McGinnis was told that two or three weeks of paper work were necessary before her son could actually return to Idaho.

Among other things, they have to work out arrangements with the embassy for payment of the fine.

Tom has already spent $6000 for living expenses, since Bolivian jails don't provide food or other necessities.

Sister Carlye says "It's going to take a long time for re-entry."

Jury favors Hazelton

TWIN FALLS — A 12-member Fifth District Court jury ruled in favor of the village of Hazelton Thursday afternoon in a case brought by attorney S. A. Kolman of Jerome over legal fees.

Kolman filed the action against Hazelton last year asking $2,000 for attorneys' fees and $200.25 in legal services for the city in connection with a new sewage treatment plant.

The jury verdict was "in favor of the defendant and against the defendant."

Kolman's complaint alleged he was employed by the city to prepare legal matters in connection with the project at a rate of $300 a month and "total project costs." He said as far as he was able to determine the total project cost was $139,000. Kolman said he was paid $4,151.81 plus $190 in expenses.

He said the city did not live up to terms of the written contract and owed him another $8,899.35. He asked for his attorney costs in suing the city.

James Jones and Greg Fuller, attorneys for the city of Hazelton, argued the project was built in two phases. They said at the time the contract was signed it was not planned to go into more than the first phase. They also argued Kolman did not provide any legal services in involving the second phase which was part of the project "total cost."

The case was heard in Twin Falls on a change of venue order granted at the request of the plaintiff. Kolman charged the Northside News articles about the case prohibited him from obtaining a fair hearing in Jerome county.

Ravenscroft criticizes Evans on Energy

TWIN FALLS — Idaho Gov. John V. Evans proposal to create a regional power distribution board in the Northwest is "outright socialism," Republican gubernatorial candidate Vernon Ravenscroft charged Thursday.

Ravenscroft, a Tuttle farmer and businessman, formally declared his candidacy for the state's top post Thursday when he filed a petition in Boise signed by 3,000 Idahoans.

The gubernatorial hopeful, stopping in Twin Falls on a campaign swing through southern Idaho, said he wants "to get more actively involved in the energy debate" in Idaho.

"I have been conducting a series of interviews on the subject of energy," Ravenscroft said.

"One very definite conclusion I have arrived at at this point is that the governor's Domestic and Rural Power Authority (DRPA) proposal is highly unpopular with all of these leaders except the conservation groups," he said.

Ravenscroft has chatted with utility officials, Rural Electrification Association officials, Idaho Conservation League officials and city officials.

"The DRPA proposal would put the state in the position of retreating energy, which is outright socialism," Ravenscroft said. "And it would establish a dangerous precedent."

Ravenscroft said Evans' proposal, by allowing Idaho or any other state to take power from a neighbor, would set the stage for other states to take water from Idaho.

Ravenscroft said he supports the "PNUC Bill" (Pacific Northwest Utilities Committee) pending in the U.S. Congress.

"That bill would provide a pooling of power available for industrial customers of Bonneville Power Authority (BPA) and BPA would make a corresponding block of power available to the private utilities and they would average the price," he said. "This plan would not take the power away from other consumers and not put the state of Idaho in the power business."

Ravenscroft also criticized the 100-percent property tax initiative and proposals made recently by Gov. Evans to reduce property taxes.

He proposed his own tax plan which would reduce property taxes to about 1.25 percent of market value over a five-year period without hurting government funding.

Ravenscroft said economic growth in Idaho has boosted state revenues generated from income tax, sales tax, corporate taxes, cigarette tax and liquor and beer tax about six and a half times in 15 years.

Inflation and population growth can only account for about half of that increase, he said.

"Why not take that excess growth coming to the general fund and over a period of years bring in the reduction in property tax that would phase us somewhere in balance with what the property taxpayers consider reasonable," he said.

Ravenscroft said he already has the support of several prominent Republicans for his campaign.

Bill Campbell, former campaign manager for retired Idaho Senator Len Jordan's campaigns, is serving as his campaign advisor. And Bob Robson, former Idaho attorney general, is his finance chairman.

He said he is proud of the "grass roots" background of the majority of his supporters.

"We're proud of the fact that 678 people have contributed an average of $63.40 each," he explained. "That is just a way of proving our campaign is being supported by the grass roots, the rank and file of Republicans in Idaho and some Independents and Democrats."

Ravenscroft announced his campaign contributions and financial status this week, ahead of the schedule set forth in Idaho's Sunshine Law because "the voters have a right to know if there is any potential for conflict of interest."

Rabies shots Saturday

MAGIC VALLEY — Pet owners can have their animals vaccinated for rabies in nine Magic Valley towns Saturday.

Sponsored by local veterinarians and the Magic Valley Veterinary Association, the rabies clinics — at discount rates — are being held to help control rabies in the Magic Valley.

Shots will be administered at $4.50 per animal.

Dr. Robert Beede, chairman for the clinics, said vaccinations should be given to dogs and cats four months old or older.

"Rabies is a very serious disease," Beede said. Each year, 30,000 Americans must undergo rabies treatments because they have been bitten by rabid animals, and more than 3,000 rabies cases are confirmed.

Vaccination clinics will be held Saturday at Bull's Hoop Hall from 1 to 2 p.m.; Hazelton's Valley Veterinary Hospital from 1 to 3 p.m.; Hollister Grange Hall from 2 to 3 p.m.; Jerome's South Park from noon to 2 p.m.; the Blaine County Sheriff's Office in Hailey from 1 to 3 p.m.; the Twin Falls fire station at 345 2nd Ave. E. from 1 to 3 p.m.; the Wendell fire station from 1 to 3 p.m.; the Minidoka County Fair grounds and produce building in Rupert from 1 to 3 p.m.; and the Burley animal shelter from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Ken Carter hits Canadian snag

TWIN FALLS — Canadian officials have told daredevil Ken Carter he must make his twice-delayed jump across the St. Lawrence River this fall.

Only problem is, Carter tentatively has planned to jump his rocket-powered Lincoln Continental across the Snake River at almost the same time.

Now, the stunt driver faces the possibility that Canadian officials will revoke permission they had granted Carter to attempt his mile-long jump from Ontario to Ogden Island, New York.

The would-be scuttler Carter's grand scheme to become king of the daredevils.

The Canadians are upset because Carter has said he would delay the St. Lawrence River, first scheduled in 1975, a third time so he can first test-ride the rocket car in Idaho.

In a telephone interview Thursday, the head of the Matilda Township Council in Ontario said the council voted May 4 to tell Carter either to make the mile jump this year or to forget it.

George Cooper said the townships council, which oversees Morrisburg, Ontario where the jumpsite is located, is beginning to zone the jumpsite area for residential development.

"It was being on for three years now, three years. In our books, it means either he is or he isn't going to jump," Cooper said.

"You can appreciate that in the jumpsite area it was not well received to start with. Our council feels we have been very, very fair. We have given him the opportunity," Carter, contacted at a North Hollywood, Calif., hotel where he is staying while trying to arrange financing for the Snake River Canyon jump, said he has been aware of the Canadian reaction.

But the daredevil said he will still jump the Snake River Canyon first so he can test the rocket car before having to jump the large expanse of water up in Canada.

Carter said he feels he can convince the Matilda Township Council to delay the Canadian jump until early 1979.

Carter said since that jump is on private property he did not think the council could stop him from jumping next year.

But he admitted "if it comes to" "if they say jump or else, it means the Snake River and Canadian jumps would be back to back."

He said the Snake River attempt would come first in September. Then, in October, allowing for two to three weeks to repair any damage to the rocket car, Carter said the Canadian jump could be made.

Carter said he is confident of raising the money for the Idaho jump soon and he is planning a trip to Montreal, Toronto and Ottawa next week to speak with various people about the jumps.

He said the trip would include a side trip to Morrisburg to speak with the Matilda Township Council.

Twin falls County wants O'Leary

TWIN FALLS — County commissioners and trustees of the Twin Falls school district met Thursday to lay the groundwork for the county's plan to purchase the O'Leary junior high school property.

School officials said the property will probably not be available for a new owner until January, although the new junior high school is scheduled to open its doors this fall.

County officials hope to buy the property which adjoins the county courthouse and judicial building in Twin Falls as a site for a future county jail, law enforcement building and possibly other county offices.

Merl E. Leonard, commission chairman, said the first step will be to select an appraisal firm to check the building and property and estimate the value.

"We agreed we need an appraisal before we can do any further negotiating," Leonard said. "We will probably select three appraisers. The county will let the school district recommend a firm they will feel comfortable with, and we will get together on the others. We want to have three to make sure we are close to an accurate value."

Leonard said the county has money available for the purchase of the property. The "in lieu of taxes" payment from 1977 did not arrive in time to be budgeted in the 1978 county budget and is available for budgeting in the coming year.

He said there should be another similar amount coming in late this year and the county should be able to purchase the old building and land out of these federal allocations. The funds were authorized in 1976 and became effective with 1977 to be paid to counties where large amounts of federal land are located, and which provide no property taxes to the counties. Twin Falls county will receive about $470,000 annually under this law.

Leonard said the old school building may or may not be useable.

"If we are successful in buying the property we will want an architect to check it over carefully and advise us on this matter. It may be we will be able to use the outside shell of the building and rebuild the interior or we may be better off to demolish it and start over," Leonard said.

The building has been condemned as unsafe for use as a school, Leonard said, and although it has a sprinkler system, there are other undesirable features the county would have to correct in the existing building if used.

He said federal regulations are already making it difficult for continued use of the county jail on the fourth floor of the old courthouse building.

"We know we are going to have to do something and soon about our jail," Leonard said.

He said the area would be ideal for future growth of the county offices and would allow all of the county offices to be moved to a single location for greater public convenience. Presently some of the county offices are housed in the old hospital building and other scattered areas. Additional parking would also be available by using the lot just west of the junior high school which now serves as an outdoor athletic field and driver's training course. The county would also want to purchase this, Leonard said.

Construction of the new junior high school which will replace O'Leary on Elizabeth Boulevard is progressing, school officials said, but they plan to retain the old building for use should something occur to prevent completion of new classroom space pending the opening of school this fall or if the complete move is not finished at that time.

Recreation report

TWIN FALLS — Most campgrounds in the Sawtooth National Forest are now open but some are without water because of continuing cold weather.

This week's recreation report from the Sawtooth said many side roads are still muddy and motorists should observe closure signs and use caution before venturing from the main paved or well graded routes.

In the South Hills, construction has begun on the main road and large equipment will be encountered during week days. The Oakley-Rogers road and the Goose Creek Road are still closed by snowbanks. Most lower campgrounds are open, however.

In the Fairfield district, all campgrounds are open but water is not yet available in Baumgartner, Canyon or Pioneer. A use is not yet available in Baumgartner, Canyon or Pioneer. A use is not yet available in Baumgartner, Canyon or Pioneer. A use is not yet available in Baumgartner, Canyon or Pioneer.

Some of the murine trails are free of snow and hikers may reach the Bench Lakes without difficulties. Roads in the SNRA which are still closed include Fourth of July Creek, Mayes Creek, Fisher creek, Park Creek, Dry Creek and the Elk Meadow road.

Campgrounds are open in Alturas and Stranley lakes areas. The Custer museum is open on a daily basis. Fishing is generally only fair but good in both the high and low streams.

Of special interest, the recreation report notes, are the annual Spring Camas lilies which are now blooming in the Fairfield area.

Mining tools come home

MURPHY — A long-lost group of silver miniatures of mining and blacksmithing tools from the 1890s has come home to Idaho.

Some 50 silver replicas of an ore car, skip cage, ore buckets, fangs, bellows, and other items, were made in the last century by Colonel W.H. Dewey, operator of the "Black Jack" mine in Owyhee County.

They left Idaho sometime in the early 1900s when a hotel in Nampa where they were displayed was demolished.

Cement danger spotted in Rupert

By GARY ELIASSEN Times-News writer

RUPERT — A potentially dangerous brand of cement was used in a sewer rehabilitation project last year at Rupert, but apparently there will be no harmful effects to local workers on the job.

Also there is no danger of contamination from the concrete which was poured, a state EPA official said.

The Environmental Protection Agency recently sent out warnings to American companies, municipalities and water districts about the hazards of the sewer construction cement, marketed under the name AM-9.

The memo advised companies to avoid exposing their workers to the product because the cement has apparently caused nerve damage to workers in Maryland, according to Charles H. Niles, a spokesman for the EPA.

The jellike cement was used by the Rodding and Cleaning Co., Las Vegas, Calif., in a $160,000 Rupert sewer project from May to August in Rupert, said Robert Sketcheley, president of the firm.

He said the AM-9 was handled only by experienced workers brought to Rupert from California with his firm. The workers took all the necessary precautions, such as wearing rubber gloves, boots and masks, he said.

"Nobody we hired in Rupert did any work with the AM-9," Sketcheley said. "We've been using it for about 15 years, and have always been careful in how we dealt with it."

According to Warren McFall, coordinator of construction grants for Idaho EPA, Boise, said there will be no detrimental effects at the treatment plant or downstream from it because of the use of AM-9.

Also, he said no local workers hired for other work on the project would be adversely affected.

Rupert City Engineer Don Courtright said he wasn't aware the firm had used the EPA-created AM-9.

The chemical has been manufactured and sold by an American Cyanamid Co. plant in New Jersey for 15 years. The company said May 11 it planned to phase the product off the market.

Rupert's project involved cleaning, TV inspection, internal sealing and replacement work. Workers hired from Rupert were mainly involved in the TV inspection of the sewer system.

City officials in Twin Falls and Jerome said their cities had not been involved in any projects recently which would have required the use of AM-9.

BSU employee fights

DRIGGS, Idaho (UPI) — The State Board of Education has postponed until Friday its ruling on procedural aspects of a Boise State University decision not to renew an employee's contract and has asked for an analysis of legal issues involved.

William Roden of Boise, an attorney representing BSU's director of information services, Bob C. Hall, contended Hall was entitled to a hearing on the merits of the decision not to renew his contract after June 30.

Don Lejek of Boise, representing BSU, urged the board to look at procedure only and let the courts, if necessary, consider issues of cause.

Susan Mauk, assistant attorney general, said the board could make almost any decision it wished on any issue. She agreed to provide by Friday an analysis of legal issues raised by both attorneys along with options for the board to consider.

The board also approved temporary personnel appointments at three colleges and universities despite misgivings about exceeding the intended number of posi-

As a compromise, the board denied some new personnel requests and approved the others with understanding that appointments would be for one year only and requests for permanent positions should be included in the fiscal year 1980 budget presentations before the board in July.

During the Hall hearing, Roden maintained Hall was protected by a BSU policy outlining a grievance procedure, which includes appeal to the board. He said since Hall was given a form evaluating his performance, Hall was entitled to a hearing on the merits of that evaluation.

He also contended that while the notice of non-renewal fell within the proper time requirements of the Boise State policy, the evaluation form was delivered on March 29 rather than March 1 as required by BSU employee policy.

But Lejek said that because Hall worked under a yearly contract, he was aware that renewal was necessary and was given timely notice of non-renewal. He said it was "legally irrelevant" that the evaluation form was not given to Hall by March 1.

He told the board that to consider the merits of the administrative decision would "be to open Pandora's Box for similar appeals from other employees. He said arguments on which issues the board should consider should be determined by a court.

Board member John Swartley of Boise noted some contracts already had been signed for the new positions and said he felt the board must "support the ones we've looked into. I don't think we have any choice."

Board member Clinton Hoopes of Rexburg added that he felt institutions should have as much flexibility as possible to meet their needs.

The board also approved expenditure of $1,774 from its contingency fund to correct deficiencies noted by the Gooding fire chief at the State School for the Deaf and Blind. The money will be used to update and improve fire alarms and smoke detection systems at the school.

Lawyer requests Johnson hearings

By LORAYNE O. SMITH Times-News writer

SHOSHONE — Court hearings have been requested in both the criminal and civil suits now pending against former Lincoln County treasurer Myron Johnson.

Johnson was arraigned in magistrate court in Shoshone Tuesday on charges of misuse of public funds in connection with $130,000 reported missing after he had resigned as treasurer last October.

His attorney, Jack Murphy, requested a preliminary hearing, but no date has yet been set. Mel Edwards, Twin Falls magistrate, served as acting Lincoln County magistrate for the arraignment.

Date for the hearing will be set sometime soon, according to Brenda Brown of the magistrate's office here. The criminal charges were filed Friday after nearly five months of probing of the treasurer's office records by a Boise accounting firm.

Zarley apologizes for 'bad '66, can't believe he leads tourney

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — Kermit Zarley scored a 6-under par 66 Thursday to take a 1-stroke lead over Arnold Palmer in the opening round of the $30,000 Kemper Open golf tournament.

Zarley was not impressed with his performance. He called it one of his worst rounds of the year.

"Is that leading?" Zarley asked as he came into the press tent following his bogey-free round over the Quail Hollow Country Club Course. "I'm embarrassed to say I played one of my worst rounds of golf of the year from tee to green but everything went right for me."

Zarley's last win came in the 1972 National Team tournament.

"I really didn't hit the ball that well," he said. "I had some good shots at the right time."

Palmer, who owns a house on the edge of the 7,160-yard, scored six birdies and a bogey.

"I missed a couple of greens but I was able to get the ball up and down and that was the key to the round," said Palmer.

Six golfers came in behind Palmer at 3 under par. They were Mark Hayes, Howard Twitty, Danny Edwards, Arnie McNickle, Mark Pfeil and Wayne Levi.

Zarley, whose best finish of the year is a tie for sixth at Houston, had birdies at the 12th and 15th holes and closed his round with a birdie putt from six feet.

"I've been on my worst putting streak since I've been on the tour. I'm just coming out of it," said Zarley, who has won $18,567.

He used only 22 putts Thursday and sank putts of 30 feet and a pair of 12-footers.

"The key for me today was my wife," he said. "At the third hole this 12th she said, 'Knock it in, honey.' She said it on every hole coming in and I made everything."

Palmer's only bogey came on the par-4 18th hole — his ninth of the day — when he took three shots to get the ball down from the sandtrap.

"I'm probably hitting the ball off the tees as long as I have at any time," said Palmer, whose best finish this year was a tie for fifth in the Phoenix Open.

Palmer had birdies at the 13th and 17th holes and three consecutive birdies beginning at the fourth hole and closed with a birdie on the par-3 ninth.

"I feel like I'm hitting my putts a lot more solid," said Palmer, winner of $17 million and 61 tournaments including the 1963 Kemper.

"It helps to stay at home," he said. "I've played this golf course more in the last week than I have any other course in years. I've played every day since Friday."

Tom Weiskopf, a three-time winner of the Kemper and the defending champion, had a 1-under par 71 to lead a group of 23 golfers including Gary Player, third on the money list with more than $157,000 in earnings this year. Nine golfers had 65.

Tom Watson and Jack Nicklaus, the top money winners this year, skipped the Kemper. Lee Trevino had a 73.

LA still fighting Olympic tax idea

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — City Controller Ira Reimer said Thursday he has heard "one scheme after another" to finance the 1984 Olympics. So he is spearheading a "No Olympics Tax" initiative to prohibit use of city tax funds to stage the Games.

"Since Athens, we have heard almost daily of one scheme after another to finance the Olympics," Reimer said. "The suspicion grows that the Olympic boosters are playing hide the ball with the public."

Reimer said he has been assured assistance from the same group whose efforts helped qualify the Proposition 13 tax initiative in the drive to secure the necessary 115,378 signatures.

Reimer said he has no confidence in efforts by Mayor Tom Bradley and City Council members to protect taxpayers.

Hayes claims it's tough being 6-9

SEATTLE (UPI) — Elvin Hayes says sometimes it's not so easy being only 6-9 in a world of basketball giants.

Hayes and the Washington Bullets came back from a 15-point third quarter deficit Tuesday to defeat the Seattle SuperSonics in overtime, 120-116, and even their best-of-seven series for the NBA championship at two games apiece.

"If we can play with this same intensity," Hayes said Thursday, "we can win Friday."

The fifth game moves back to the 14,000-seat Seattle Center Coliseum after a score-breaking crowd in the Kingdom saw the Sonics' 21-game home court winning streak snapped.

The fourth game was almost an exact reversal of the series opener when the Sonics forced back from a 19-point deficit to win. Hayes declined to answer reporters' questions after that game and was miffed when stories focused on the fact that only two of his 21 points in that contest came in the fourth quarter.

Hayes was more talkative after the big win in the dome.

"The most important thing is winning," he said. "It's sort of a joke. Elvin lost, the Bullets lost. But like (Bill) Russell told me, there's always tomorrow."

Hayes thinks some of the criticism he has received comes from unrealistic expectations.

"People forget that I'm 6-9 and have to go against guys twice my size," said the Big E. "I always have to do it with double teams and triple teams. I've never had the luxury of going against a single guy."

The fourth game was played before 39,457, an NBA record for a single game. Some ten years ago, Hayes played in front of an Astrodome crowd of 52,693 when his University of Houston team defeated the Lew Alcindor-led UCLA Bruins.

"This was history, this was a history kind of game people will remember," Hayes said, of the Tuesday win. "I was happy to win this."

Five players, including Hayes, fouled out of the game as officials whistled the two teams for a total of 62 fouls.

After the game Sonics Coach Lenny Wilkens commented, "The only thing that irritated me was that (Jack) Sikma seems to get the phantom fouls I don't see and Elvin Hayes complaining the whole series and yet gets to manhandle people."

"His (Wilkins) players talk out there (to officials)," said Hayes. "I've been backed and beaten more because my game is an inside game."

Hayes added, "I'll say something to the referee. (But) I'm not trying to get anything for nothing."

"I put up the shots and I don't expect the official to put the ball in the hoop... I hustle, I work hard whatever minutes I'm in the game."

Hayes, averaging 23.8 points in the four games, and Bob Dandridge, averaging 21, have been Washington's leading scorers against the Sonics in the Bullets' third appearance in an NBA final. The Bullets were swept by Milwaukee in 1971 and Golden State in 1975 in their two previous appearances.

"If you win the championship," said Hayes, "people will realize and say, they really worked. Maybe they'll give me some of that credit."

Astros fine Cedeno for injury

HOUSTON (UPI) — The Houston Astros Thursday fined center-fielder Cesar Cedeno $5,000 — the largest fine ever meted out by the ballclub — for accidentally injuring his right hand in a gametime temper tantrum.

According to a spokesman for the team, the fine was levied during a morning meeting by mutual consent of those present. Astros officials, the 28-year-old millionaire ballplayer and his agent attended the meeting.

"Cedeno expressed his regrets and apologized to the club, his teammates and the fans for the actions which resulted in the temporary loss of his services," said a team statement.

Cedeno was injured Tuesday night, and he wore an elastic bandage over his right hand Wednesday. After Wednesday night's Astros game he told reporters, "I don't want to talk about nothing." In his previous eight major league seasons, Cedeno has been fined $200 at least twice for infractions of club rules. The fine was the latest misstep in Cedeno's professional baseball career.

In December, 1973, a shot from his pistol killed a 19-year-old Dominican girl in Cedeno's motel room.

Taylor ends career

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Washington Redskins' wide receiver Charley Taylor, the NFL's leading all-time receiver, retired Thursday, saying he was taking the advice of numerous friends, including those in the Redskins front office.

"It's tough to knock yourself," said the 35-year-old Taylor, who has been hampered by injuries the past two seasons. "But my friends who have watched me closely through the years felt I had had some sort of drop in motivation — my motivation was gone. I had to look at myself totally."

Taylor, who reached his decision after the club's spring minicamp two weeks ago, will move into the Redskins' personnel department, under Director of Personnel Mike Allan.

"My biggest goal in life is to become a coach," said Taylor. "I want to learn personnel, both offense and defense, and maybe soon I'll be the receiver coach of the Redskins or some other club."

TOYOTA'S MILLION-DOLLAR-DASH FOR THE 1980 OLYMPIC GAMES.

SOMETHING FOR THE U.S. OLYMPIC ATHLETES... A $1,000,000 DONATION.

As you may know, our Olympic athletes are not government subsidized. So they need money to train now if they're going to win in Moscow in 1980.

Here's our plan: Toyota and your participating Toyota dealer will make a donation for the U.S. Olympic team every time a new Toyota car or truck is sold through June 30th, 1978. Help us make our sales goal, so we can give $1,000,000 or more, to help build a tough U.S. team. When you buy a new Toyota, you'll also get a specially designed Olympic pin, patch, and a certificate thanking you for your support. Now you can get a tough Toyota, and a tough Olympic team.

Help us help them.

Stingers stay alive in WHL

CINCINNATI (UPI) — The Cincinnati Stingers can skate for at least one more season.

With an assist from local business, the World Hockey Association club Thursday scored its 5,000th season ticket sale at the buzzer — the league-imposed June 1 deadline. Team officials have said 5,000 sales will mean a "reasonable" financial loss for franchise owners next season.

At an afternoon news conference, Stingers Executive Vice President Bill DeWitt Jr. said he would "notify the league immediately" if the club can continue next season.

"Now we have a base of support to build on, not only this year but for future years," DeWitt said.

TORNADO

Q. "In a house without a cellar, where's the best place to stay during a tornado?"

A. In a small room or hall in the center of the house. Open some windows, but stay away from them thereafter. In an office building, get into an interior hallway on the lowest floor possible. In a shopping center, forget about your car, and go to the middle of the nearest building.

Q. "Is there any member of Congress who was serving when Franklin D. Roosevelt was inaugurated?"

A. Only one. Sen. Jennings Randolph (D; W. Va.), now 76. He was elected to the House in 1932.

Q. "Are beavers ever killed by the falling trees they chew down?"

A. It happens.

SQUARE PEGS

Those who contend you can't put a square peg in a round hole don't know enough about the work of the old-time furniture makers. The craftsmen who made chairs in colonial days purposely squared the ends of seasoned wood rungs, then inserted them into round holes in green wood legs, thus to weld tight joints that seem to last forever.

The man most likely to be murdered is between the ages of 20 and 24. The woman, between 15 and 19. The man most likely to commit suicide is between the ages of 25 and 29. The woman, between 20 and 24.

Maybe one reason the mystery authors writing that detective's "mural clue" is that the original meaning of the word "clue" was "ball of thread."
