

Deductions sought for housewives

Housewives should receive fair compensation, Mrs. Bernays says, and they want it to be the law of the land.

Edward and Doris Bernays say housewives should be paid for their work. They also say housewives' equipment should be standard business tax deductions.

"A woman is born with a broom in her mouth" — not the mythical silver spoon, Mrs. Bernays said Sunday.

The Edward L. Bernays Foundation will award $3,000 to anyone who draws up the proposed law in 5,000 words or less by Oct. 16. Then they hope Congress or the legislatures will enact it.

"I have always felt that housewives should be reimbursed for their work, which consists of at least 33 different skills and professions," said Mrs. Bernays.

"Since I couldn't come up with a solution, I thought maybe somebody else could," she said. "So we decided to put it up in the country at large. Now, perhaps, we will be able to make a vacuum cleaner just as much of a tax exemption as a business machine."

Women have been victimized by inequities in Social Security, actuarial tables and property rights that make them "property statistics after their husbands die," she said.

"One housewife wrote that her husband, a clergyman, had left her after 25 years of marriage and she had to go on relief," said Mrs. Bernays. "That might not have happened if she had been compensated for her work."

The Bernays have been married since 1922.

"We have been equal business partners in our public relations firm and share equally in the profits," Bernays said.

Mrs. Bernays was the first woman in the United States to apply for and receive her passport in her maiden name.

"I fell in love with an incredibly talented and brilliant woman and we have a 24-hour-a-day relationship," he said.

The wife compensation contest is being judged by a panel of four women and two men. All entries should be mailed to Frank C. Genovese, administrator, Babsen-Bernays Competition, Babson College, Babson Park, Miss. 02157.

Red Brigades members charged in Moro death

ROME (UPI) — Authorities today formally accused six members of the Red Brigades urban guerrilla gang of planning and "carrying out" the kidnapping and assassination of former Premier Aldo Moro.

Five of the accused already are in custody and the sixth is being sought by police in connection with Red Brigades crimes since 1972.

The formal charges were filed by senior magistrate Achille Gajucchi, who has been leading the Moro investigation.

Charged with conspiring to kidnap Moro, multiple homicide and the killing of Moro were Enrico Triaca, 30, Teodoro Spadacini, Giovanni Lugnini, Antonio Marini, Gabriella Mariani and Mario Moretti, 32.

Triaca, Spadacini, Lugnini, Marini and Miss Mariani were arrested May 17 when police raided a Rome print shop that prepared Red Brigades leaflets.

Moretti, sought by police as a Red Brigades member since 1972, was identified by those arrested as the print shop's contact man with the gang's central organization.

The charges were the first against members of the Red Brigades since the Moro killing.

Moro, leader of the ruling Christian

Democratic party and prime candidate for presidency of the republic in elections later this year, was kidnapped in a Rome ambush March 16 that left his five police bodyguards dead.

His bullet-riddled body was found in central Rome May 9 after the government refused Red Brigades demands to release 12 imprisoned gang members in exchange for the politician's life.

The apparent breakthrough in the case came after Italian newspapers quoted investigation sources as saying that new evidence had been uncovered on the Moro killing.

Earlier today a powerful time bomb ripped through an automobile showroom in the mountain resort town of Tivoli, 15 miles east of Rome, causing serious damage to the Alfa Romeo dealership and shattering windows in a public prosecutor's office above the showroom.

In Ostia, south of Rome, an automobile belonging to a national police officer was heavily damaged by a firebomb, police said.

The bombing in Tivoli, 15 miles east of Rome, was the third attack on Alfa Romeo since Friday.

On Friday and Saturday saboteurs tried to saw down a large metal tower carrying high-tension electrical lines to the main Alfa Romeo factory north of Milan.

Campaign checkoffs upheld

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court today upheld the section of Minnesota's campaign financing law that lets taxpayers decide how much public money goes to each political party's candidates.

The justices affirmed a lower-court ruling allowing the state's income tax checkoff system to stand.

The decision was good news for six other states with laws similar to Minnesota's, which allows taxpayers to allocate $1 from the state treasury to a certain party's campaign fund. Those states are Idaho, Iowa, Kentucky, Maine, Rhode Island and Utah.

The ruling also may help guide other states considering such a system.

The Supreme Court in 1976 upheld sections of the presidential campaign financing law which provide matching funds for primary candidates and give each major party candidate the same amount of public funds for the general election.

But it never has looked at a system providing unequal amounts for different parties on the basis of taxpayer preferences.

Minnesota's checkoff provision was challenged in 1976 by seven state legislators on the Independent-Republican ticket and one independent seeking re-election.

If his taxpayers mark on income tax forms whether they wish to allocate $1 to the state elections campaign fund, if so, whether it should go to one party's account or to a general account.

Funds in each party account are distributed to its candidates shortly after primary elections, and funds in the general election are distributed equally after the general election to all candidates receiving 10 percent of votes cast for the office sought.

Because many more taxpayers checked the Democratic-Farmer-Labor Party, Independent-Republican candidates for state Senate and House seats got only about half the public funds received by their DFL opponents in 1976.

The challengers charged the checkoff scheme thus allowed the state wrongly to "promote the interests or assist the candidates of one major party to the disadvantage of another." They said the unequal funding also put added pressure on some candidates to seek campaign money from special interests.

But a three-judge U.S. district court said the Supreme Court's 1976 ruling made it clear "a party's or candidate's demonstrated public support may properly be considered in the distribution of public campaign funds."

Environmental votes criticized

Hansen makes 'hit list'

By JEFF SHER, Times-News writer

WASHINGTON — Idaho Representative George Hansen has been named to a "Dirty Dozen" list of congressmen with poor voting records on environmental issues.

Environmental Action, a national conservation organization with roughly 20,000 members, plans to raise $35,000 and contribute the money to candidates opposing the 12 congressmen, including Hansen. It wants to defeat in the fall general election.

Hansen, contacted in Washington today, responded to his status as a "Dirty Dozen" saying, "Being put on a political hit list by an out-of-state, special interest group with little concern for the interests of Idahoans isn't very concerning."

Hansen went on to describe Environmental Action as a group that "doesn't have much credibility among responsible congressmen."

He added he was "not at all bashful" about being included on such a list, since the list is composed of what he termed a "pretty credible group" of congressmen.

The "Dirty Dozen" includes Sens. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., and House members Hansen, William Armstrong, R-Colo.; Gary Brown, R-Mich.; Samuel Devine, R-Ohio; Willis Gradison, R-Ohio; Thomas Hucak, D-La.; John Meyers, R-Ind.; Ted Risenhoover, D-Ola.; Ray Roberts, D-Tex.; and Jamie Whitten, D-Miss.

An Environmental Action spokesman said the "Dirty Dozen" is chosen from the list of congressmen with the worst voting records on environmental issues.

Of those with the worst voting records, 12 are selected for the "Dirty Dozen" based on the chances their opponents are given for unseating the incumbent congressman and whether those opponents would "represent a significant improvement" in environmental outlook, the spokesman said.

The spokesman said Environmental Action asks Stan Kress will be Hansen's opponent.

President reaffirms revamp bill support

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter today reaffirmed his administration's commitment to legislation to make it easier for labor unions to organize workers.

Carter spoke at a White House meeting just two days before Senate leaders will try to break a filibuster against the measure to revamp federal labor law.

The president, in an early morning meeting with a bipartisan group of senators, predicted a "tough battle" to win Senate passage of the measure.

But Sen. Harrison Williams, D-N.J., forecast it would pass "strongly" after the filibuster is broken "by the end of next week."

"Eighty percent of our members are solidly with the National Labor Relations Board law. What we need to do is to make it more effective," said Williams, a Democrat who represents heavily unionized New Jersey.

Williams said he "never felt any doubt" at all that the president is committed in depth to the bill.

Carter met with the senators at the White House after a weekend at the presidential retreat at Camp David, Md. A Cabinet meeting was scheduled later in the day. Carter also was to receive credentials from several new ambassadors to Washington.

Anglers yelp about fishing waters dispute

OTTAWA (UPI) — Canada and the United States, who share the longest friendly border in the world, moved gingerly today toward enforcing a reciprocal fishing ban — a ban that brought cries of anguish from both commercial fishermen and common anglers.

The ban technically went into effect on EDT Sunday, with Canada barring U.S. fishermen from operating within its 20-mile limit on both coasts and the Americans reciprocating.

But both sides said there would be a 24-hour grace period — which ends at noon today — for fishing vessels to return to their waters.

Complicating the situation was an extension of the ban Saturday by the Carter administration to include recreational fishing in the Great Lakes. The lakes form part of Canada's 3,996-mile frontier with the United States, and U.S. sportsmen who enjoy fishing in Canadian waters reacted with outrage.

In Detroit, Tom Watson, head of the Michigan's largest sportsmen's club, the Michigan United Conservation Clubs, called the ban on Great Lakes fishing "preposterous... Hilarious."

In Goderich, Ontario, on Lake Huron, a motel switchboard operator, reported a group of Americans left in a huff when they checked out today (Sunday). They were all talking about the fishing ban.

"It's a stupid law anyway," she said. "It's all give and take, we all get along good," an American from Detroit fishing near Kingsville, Ontario, on Lake Erie, said.

Another American angler who was fishing in Canada said: "Whenever they're bltin' here, we come over here. Whenever they're bltin' there they (Canadians) go over there (U.S. waters). I can't see any dispute about it. I just can't see it."

Canadian officials, too, appeared unhappy the ban was extended to the Great Lakes.

"It was unfortunate that the United States was following the ban to the letter," said Leorne Clark, Ottawa's deputy chief negotiator for the interim fisheries agreement.

"Commercial fishing on the Great Lakes is so insignificant that we felt no need to mention it in the ban. But since the ban is a reciprocal arrangement we'll likely act accordingly," he said.

Canada announced the fishing ban Friday because it felt a 1978 interim agreement was not in the best interests of Canadian fishermen on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts.

There are less than 10 Canadian ships operating in U.S. waters and about 30 U.S. commercial vessels in Canadian waters on both coasts under normal circumstances, fisheries department spokesman Charles Friend said.

Under the interim agreement, trawlers from either country could overlap into each other's territorial waters without official permission.

Yet the warnings, by the traditional allies were far from strident.

"A whole lot of people will be playing it by ear for the first couple of hours," a U.S. Coast Guard spokesman said Sunday in Cleveland.

In Canada, Friend explained, "there was no surveillance of Atlantic fishing because because fog has grounded our patrol aircraft and surveillance on the West Coast is normal."

"We have not increased our surveillance."

He said U.S. fishermen had to be out of Canadian waters by noon Sunday, "but we're not going to arrest them or impound their vessels if they're not out of Canadian waters by noon Sunday."

"We'll have one poacher and one creacher," he said.

Uncovered hot cargo

CALEXICO, Calif. (UPI) — Two Detroit men discovered that U.S. Customs inspectors are not fooled by a foreign passport.

James Paul Allen, 32, and Wallace Burton Drew, 55, were arrested by officers at a checkpoint two miles north of the Mexican border, driving a truck officers said was loaded with 5,400 pounds of marijuana, worth $1.3 million.

The marijuana was concealed under a load of cattle manure, the inspectors said.

Raw material need behind U.S. African involvement

By WILLIAM J. HOUSTON
United Press International

The United States, weary of foreign entanglements since the Vietnam War, may soon be providing aid to an all-African military force.

The reason: raw materials.

The United States and four other Western powers were meeting today in Paris to discuss ways of stabilizing Zaire's mineral-rich Shaba Province, scene of a rebel invasion. Washington says it was backed by the Soviet Union and Cuba.

Diplomatic sources predicted the five would agree to provide military support for an all-African task force to put down Cuban and Soviet-backed rebellions in Zaire as well as across the rest of Africa.

Though U.S. officials insist the help would be limited to logistics and transportation, the plan raises the possibility of American involvement in Vietnam-like quagmires.

What really is at stake for the United States in Africa?

First, it depends on imports of oil, uranium, diamonds, copper and other materials for industrial strength and also for more exotic — and strategic — metals such as platinum, germanium and cadmium.

Even critics of U.S. policy in Africa acknowledge the United States has an interest in safeguarding its raw materials such as those in Zaire's Shaba province.

would be a mistake for the United States to intervene directly in the continent's deeply rooted struggles.

"I think it's entirely proper to have a pan-African force to go into Shaba," he said.

"But, if we are talking about a broader kind of group that's going to roam around Africa, I'd certainly want to see a lot more detailed plans. There is nothing that would be more disastrous for us than to become directly involved in those 100-year-old civil wars."

Countries with raw materials of major U.S. interest include Angola, Nigeria, Rhodesia, South West Africa, South Africa and Zaire.

Other African countries, like Ethiopia and Somalia, have little to offer economically, but their geographic position on the Red Sea all routes makes them militarily important.

The importance of several African countries — Tanzania, Mozambique and Zambia — stems from the fact they surround Rhodesia and their cooperation is crucial in U.S.-British efforts to avoid a racial bloodbath in the breakup of British colony.

The most important black African nation to the United States is Nigeria, which is shipping billions of dollars worth of oil to the United States.

Trade between the two countries has doubled in two years and now surpasses even trade with South Africa, where America's most important economic partner in Africa. Nigerian exports to the United States last year amounted to $5.5 billion and imports of American goods totaled $1.1 billion.

Though the two-way trade between South Africa and the United States was less than $2 billion, American corporations and banks have a huge investment there.

And South Africa has vast amounts of uranium and gold and a near monopoly on critical metals such as platinum. Strategically, its importance lies in the fact it controls the sea routes around the southern tip of Africa.

Rhodesia is the world's primary producer of high-grade chrome and several American firms have large investments there.

"I think we do have an economic stake," said Sen. Dick Clark, D-Iowa, head of the Senate subcommittee on African affairs. "Most of the great mineral resources of the world are found there in Africa."

Defense secretary traces Cuban ties to Katangans

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Defense Secretary Harold Brown said Sunday that evidence linking Cuban forces to the recent invasion of Zaire by Katangan rebels came from prisoners, diplomatic channels and neighboring African countries.

At the same time, Brown said that although there were indications that Cubans had accompanied Katangan troops "very close to the border," there was "no convincing evidence" that Cubans actually accompanied the invading forces into Zaire.

Brown's comments on the CBS program, "Face The Nation," were the most detailed so far by an administration official on the source of the government intelligence reports which were plainly designed to blunt any uncertainty about Cuban involvement in the Zaire invasion. Cuba has repeatedly denied involvement in the attack.

"As a scientist by training I am accustomed to evaluating evidence," Brown said. "There is not the kind of evidence that a scientist is accustomed to seeing."

"It consists of reports, statements, some of them eyewitness reports, and it's of various kinds," Brown said. "Some of it comes from prisoners who were held by the invaders. Some of it comes through diplomatic channels."

"Some of it comes from the Zairean government," he said. "Of course, we tend to discount that because they're an interested party. But some of it comes from people in surrounding African countries who don't have that same degree of bias."

"What it says to me, having looked at it, is that the Cubans and the Angolans were clearly engaged in the training and equipping and supplying logistics for the forces that invaded Zaire, not once but twice."

Brown, in an apparent reference to intelligence received in March 1977, when rebel forces based in Angola initially invaded Zaire, said:

"Some of the intelligence that we got said there was going to be a second incursion and rather soon. And when it happened, that gives added weight to the other things."

Brown, in reply to another question, said that East Germans "may be involved" with Cubans in Angola. But Brown added that there was "less clear evidence" that East Germans were actually engaged in training rebel forces in Angola.

Brown said that there was evidence that Cubans accompanied rebel forces to the Zairean border, but no indication that Cubans moved into Zaire.

"There is nothing like a Cuban flag butt picked up in Zaire," he said.

Brown, in reply to another question, expressed some uncertainty about linking a strategic arms accord with the Soviet Union to Soviet and Cuban involvement in Africa.

"We need to be able to show such actions (Soviet involvement in Africa) can't be carried out without incurring some penalty to those who do carry them out," he said. "But in selecting such responses, we need to be very careful not to select things that we think will penalize the other side, but will penalize us just as much."

"I would not hold up a SALT agreement in order to demonstrate unhappiness with Soviet actions in Africa," he said.

But Soviet involvement in Africa, Brown added, was liable to have an impact on American public opinion and Congress.

Talks hurt

SEN. George McGovern, D-S.D., said in a television interview Sunday the Carter administration has become preoccupied with the involvement of the Soviet Union and Cuba in Africa, to the detriment of the SALT talks. He said those negotiations could mean human survival.

Old defense systems favor Soviet forces

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States' emphasis on sea-based nuclear missiles and its reliance on weapons systems designed in the Kennedy-Johnson years has shifted the advantage to the Soviet Union in some strategic weapons, a House Republican task force says.

"Shortsightedly, the U.S. has placed most of its strategic eggs in one basket by its over-reliance on sea-based missiles," said the first of a series of "working papers" on defense issues released by the House Republican Research Committee.

"Regrettably, the bulk of America's deterrent capability rests on weapons designed in the early 1960s."

The paper, representing the findings of a 15-member task force on defense, said President Carter's decision to halt production of the B-1 bomber also has increased the disparity between U.S. and Soviet weapons systems.

The report said the Soviet Union is leading the United States "by a huge margin" in the production of tanks, personnel carriers, combat aircraft, submarines and surface ships.

Soviet tanks number 45,000 compared to the U.S. tank arsenal of 6,500, and Soviet general-purpose submarines number 259 compared to 74 for the United States.

"Such striking disparities translate into a burgeoning enhancement of Soviet political-military power which could overwhelm the West's ability to resist during a future crisis," the report concluded.

The GOP report said the first strategic arms limitation agreement gave the Soviets a numerical advantage in offensive weapons, an advantage offset by superior U.S. technology and missile accuracy.

"Six years later, as the SALT II negotiations proceed, the military picture has markedly changed," the report said.

The American strategic capability was "downgraded" by cancellation of the B-1 and by the delays in the MX strategic missile program, while the Soviet Union has developed intercontinental ballistic missiles "several times more powerful than their U.S. counterparts."

Hard rain soaks Colorado, Texas

By United Press International

Waters spilled down the central Rockies and advanced across the southern Plains today, threatening flash floods for residents in low areas.

Heavy thunderstorms triggered the cascades from the mountains onto the plains through rivers and streams already swollen by the snowmelt. A wide band of showers and thunderstorms curved from western Kansas to southeast New Mexico with the strongest activity over north Texas.

The National Weather Service said as much as two inches of rain fell within 30 minutes Sunday near Canon City and Penrose, Colo. Nearly 3 inches of rain fell near Glenwood Springs, Colo., in one and one-half hours Sunday night.

Very heavy rains in the southeastern Texas Panhandle prompted flash flood warnings for several counties west of Wichita Falls, where an inch and a quarter of rain fell Sunday night. In addition, flash flood watches were posted for portions of the Texas Panhandle and the South Plains.

A flood warning was in effect between Parkdale and the Pueblo Dam in Colorado, for the Arkansas River was already filled by the snowmelt.

Hail up to 5 inches deep damaged roofs and trees in and around Pueblo, Colo., Sunday night.

Showers also occurred over the southern Rockies, the Florida peninsula, the southern Great Lakes region and the Ozark Mountain area of northwest Arkansas and southwest Missouri.

Skies were mostly clear from the Tennessee Valley through the Middle and Northern Atlantic Coast states.

Bear Lake leasing trial set July 17

BOISE (UPI) — Federal Judge Marion Callister has scheduled July 17 for trial of a lawsuit brought by Hunt Petroleum Co. to stop the state Land Board from auctioning oil and gas leases under Bear Lake.

Hunt claims the board gave Ed Pendleton, a Denver oil and gas broker, a lease on the 44,000-acre two-year ago and that he assigned his drilling rights to Hunt.

When Hunt asked the board earlier this year for permission to drill, the board gave its approval, contingent on approval of Bear Lake County commissioners and Bear Lake Regional commissioners.

Later, however, Gov. John V. Evans said the state should get more for the lease than the scheduled $1 per acre and the board voted to put the lease up for auction. The auction was canceled after Hunt filed suit to enjoin the board.

Bigfoot sighted second time

KROTZ SPRINGS, La. (UPI) — For Leonce Boudreaux, apparently seeing "Big Foot" once was not enough.

For the second time in less than a year, Boudreaux has told officials he may have seen the hairy, 7-foot-tall, apelike creature.

Boudreaux told St. Landry Parish sheriff's deputies he and his wife saw a towering figure early Sunday at a fishing camp near their trailer home.

Boudreaux said he and his wife were returning home about 2:30 a.m. when they heard a strange noise. He said he flashed lights in the direction of the noise and saw the outline of a hairy, reddish creature.

Authorities made a plaster mold of a footprint that measures 18 inches, but said it was too early to tell if an animal actually had made the print in the soft, muddy ground.

Kenneth Widrine, an official from the Louisiana Department of Wildlife and Fisheries, said the impression should have been deeper for a creature Boudreaux estimated to be 7 to 7½ feet tall and 100-500 pounds.

Boudreaux claims to have seen a similar creature last October or November in woods near Belleville, La., several miles from the sighting Sunday morning.

Sheriff's deputies searched the woods Sunday and are reportedly planning to make a horseback search today.

LA shaken by tremor

POMONA, Calif. (UPI) — A mild earthquake shook the Los Angeles area Saturday night but did no damage.

The Caltech seismology laboratory in Pasadena said the tremor registered 3.6 on the Richter scale and was centered about eight miles south of Pomona, which is 25 miles east of central Los Angeles.

The tremor lasted several seconds, shaking parts of Los Angeles and Orange counties.

California primary holds Tuesday political spotlight

FORMER NAVY SECRETARY JOHN WARNER MAKES LAST MINUTE CHARGE
... but sortie through Virginia GOP convention didn't gain nomination

By United Press International
In the busiest political week of the year so far, California voters are ready to slash property taxes, congressional and local primaries are set in eight states, and Virginia holds the second of two conventions to choose Senate candidates.

And former Rep. Wayne Hays, who left Congress two years ago under pressure of the Elizabeth Ray sex scandal, attempts a comeback. He is one of five candidates in his district seeking a seat in the Ohio legislature, and hopes to get more votes than his four opponents combined.

Richard Obenshain, former GOP national chairman, won the Republican Senate nomination on the Virginia GOP convention's sixth ballot late Saturday night, but must wait until the Democrats' convention Saturday to find out who his November opponent will be.

whom dropped out on the earlier ballot. The other survivor was the sixth ballot Republican, state Rep. Mickey Leonard, who won re-election in the runoff, since there is no GOP opposition in the fall.

When it was obvious Obenshain had won, Warner moved to make the nomination unanimous. In what Virginia Republicans were calling the largest political convention ever held — 7,800 delegates and alternates.

There is no incumbent in the seat. The one occupied by GOP Sen. William L. Scott, who retired.

In the runoff election in Texas Saturday, 11-term Democrat Joe Young, who had survived one re-election (in 1976) since he, too, was accused by a former aide of keeping her on his federal payroll for sexual favors, lost to state Rep. Joe Wyatt, a bachelor making his first bid for Congress.

retiring Rep. Barbara Jordan, keynote of the 1976 Democratic National Convention, state Rep. Mickey Leonard, who won re-election in the runoff, since there is no GOP opposition in the fall.

In the Texas district represented since 1934 by Rep. George H. Mahon, George W. Bush defeated Jim Reese, a conservative Republican enjoying backing by Ronald Reagan. Young Bush enjoyed wide name recognition because of his father, who has served as — 647 — national chairman, U.N. ambassador, chief U.S. diplomat to Peking and CIA director.

The so-called Proposition 13 was capturing most of the attention in Tuesday's California primary. The citizens' initiative on the ballot would cut property taxes to 1 percent of assessed value — and officials across the country, fearful of taxpayer revolts in their own areas if the proposition won, were nervously awaiting the outcome.

It eclipsed the contest for the GOP gubernatorial nomination to challenge Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr.

American aerospace firms losing ground

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The American aerospace industry is losing business to foreign manufacturers because some European governments provide nearly 100 percent financing for their deals.

And Rep. Mark W. Hannaford, D-Calif., thinks it's about time the federal government did something about it.

In a minority report filed last week with Export-Import Bank legislation which would extend the bank's operations until 1983 and boost its lending authority from $25 billion to $40 billion, Hannaford said he believes the bank is the "right" channel for boosting "U.S. manufactured commercial jet sales.

The Export-Import Bank was created in 1945 to boost American exports by extending credit and guaranteeing loans supporting export sales.

In a bitter attack, Hannaford accused the British, German and French governments of "predatory practices" by financing recent sales to Pan American World Airways and Eastern Airlines, sales he said "should raise a few eyebrows and a lot of questions."

"In one, a substantial number of Lockheed TriStars, powered by Rolls-Royce engines; were sold to Pan American World Airways; in the other, Eastern Airlines purchased nineteen A-300 minijumbos from Airbus Industries, a European consortium," Hannaford said.

The aircraft are good, and all things being equal, the sales might have been coincidental wins for European industry and losses for American industry," Hannaford said.

"But all things were not equal," said Hannaford. "Eastern purchased A-300s because it received virtually 100 percent financing from the French and German governments and our aircraft companies simply could not compete with either the French or German treasuries."

He said Britain provided nearly all the financing of the Pan American purchase of TriStars, "even though the expressly British interest (Rolls-Royce engines) amounted to only about 25 percent of the cost of the aircraft."

"I believe that these financing arrangements amount to predatory practices on the part of our foreign competitors," Hannaford said. "What is more, I believe that these transactions demand an appropriate response from our own government."

"The actions of our European competitors seriously and unfairly jeopardize the viability of our domestic aerospace industry," he said.

Hannaford, in his second term, is from Lakewood, Calif., and represents parts of Los Angeles and Orange counties, where some major aerospace industries are located.

Hannaford noted the bank has been reluctant to make direct loans to domestic aircraft manufacturers trying to increase export sales. But, he said, "the time has come to take the field in supporting the export of U.S.-manufactured commercial jet transport aircraft."

Ford Motor denies Indonesian bribe

DETROIT (UPI) — Ford Motor Co. officials have denied a report they wanted to pay an Indonesian general $2 million to guarantee a contract for a Ford subsidiary.

The No. 2 automaker, which has faced such allegations several times in recent months, disputed a New York Times story on the reported Indonesian deal.

To reiterate what we previously have said," Ford Secretary Sidney Kelly said, "no such payment was made to an Indonesian official or anyone else."

Kelly also said the Justice Department is conducting a wide-scale investigation of corporate payments abroad. He said Ford was cooperating with that investigation and therefore refused to comment further on the New York Times article.

The Times said Philco Overseas Services Inc., a subsidiary in 1975 of Aeronautics Ford, planned to pay a $2 million bribe to an Indonesian general to secure a lucrative telecommunications contract with the Indonesian government.

The newspaper said two local subcontractors were to be used as conveyors of the payment.

—However, the paper reported that $1 million of the bribe, to have been paid through the Electronics Trading Co. of Singapore, was withdrawn when officials at Ford Motor Co. learned of part of the plan a few months later. But, the Ford officials did not discover the part under which $300,000 was to be paid, and the money was disbursed.

It was not known whether the monies was eventually handed over to the general.

Quake hits Soviet Asia

MOSCOW (UPI) — An earthquake registering an intensity of 8 on the 12-point Soviet scale hit Soviet Central Asia early today, the official Tass news agency said.

The quake hit in the Southern Kyzylkum region shortly after 1:30 a.m. local time (4:30 p.m. MDT Sunday) and caused "some slight damage but no loss of life," according to Tass.

The town of Gazli in the region measured the quake at a reading of 6.7. Gazli was destroyed by an earthquake in 1976, but "since then the town was fully rebuilt with the use of structures and materials of increased strength which excellently passed today's test," Tass said.

GOOD REASONS

why a Simple Interest Loan from Twin Falls Bank and Trust may be the best way for you to get money for a new car, truck, boat, a vacation or many other uses.

- 1 When you qualify for a Simple Interest Loan, no interest is added on in advance, unlike conventional installment loans. You sign only for the amount you borrow. Period.
- 2 You pay interest on the monthly declining balance on your loan. Interest is computed on a "day-to-day" basis. You pay interest only on what you owe, not on what you originally borrowed.
- 3 If you pay us back a day early, you save a day's interest. Make an extra payment when you can and save interest.
- 4 You can even pay off your entire loan early, with no penalty for prepayment.
- 5 There are no "bank charges" if you are late with a payment. Interest charges are always calculated from the date of the last payment, so it is to your advantage to pay promptly, even early.

Cyprus questions still unresolved

CANDIDATE JULIO CESAR TURBAY CASTS BALLOT
Liberal Party leader votes in Colombian election

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Turkish Premier Bülent Ecevit says he was willing to meet informally with Cyprus President Sphar Kyprianou last week, but efforts to arrange such a meeting — which could have advanced a Cyprus peace settlement — fell through.

The administration had hoped to work out the diplomatic niceties so the deadlocked Cyprus talks between the Greek Cypriot community and the Turkish Cypriot community could be renewed.

Resuming the talks would have been something of a diplomatic coup because U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim tried recently and failed to bring both sides back to the bargaining table.

The unresolved Cyprus problem now looms large in the forthcoming debate in Congress on lifting the 1974 arms embargo against Turkey.

The issue, too, divides Greece and Turkey and contributes to the erosion of strength along NATO's southern flank.

Administration officials thought the moment particularly propitious because four key players were in the United States simultaneously: Ecevit and Greek Premier Constantine Karamanlis attended the NATO summit meeting May 30-31.

Kyprianou came to address the U.N. disarmament conference in New York, and Paul Denktash, leader of the Turkish Cypriot community, came to promote the case for a Cyprus settlement with U.S. officials — and he hoped, with Kyprianou.

But Kyprianou, who early on rejected the Turkish Cypriot proposals as insufficient, refused to see him and vainly sought a meeting instead with Ecevit.

But in an interview with UPI, Ecevit said he would have been willing to meet Kyprianou informally, despite the fact that most U.S. officials see Kyprianou's contention that Turkey is an occupying power in Cyprus.

"I would like to meet him," Ecevit said, "but in view of the unacceptability of the reasons he has given, and in view of the fact that his counterpart is and should be Mr. Denktash — in those negotiations, I said I could meet him within a more reasonable framework."

"Namely, Mr. Karamanlis and myself," Mr. Denktash and Mr. Kyprianou, we could all come together while we all happen to be in the United States in an informal meeting and this might be very useful.

"But unfortunately, Mr. Kyprianou didn't want to come together with Mr. Denktash even in such a meeting."

Karamanlis also raised objections, saying he did not want Cyprus to become an issue for direct negotiation between Greece and Turkey.

The moment for an early breakthrough in Cyprus, it seems, can't and won't.

Ecevit planned to return to Ankara late today following his appointment with the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and Karamanlis was to depart for Athens Tuesday after addressing the U.N. conference.

Still, the confluence of leaders was not entirely without result.

Ecevit and Karamanlis agreed in a meeting a week ago at Blair House to resume the Turkish-Greek dialogue in Ankara July 4-5 by scheduling a follow-up meeting of specialists.

U.S. officials said that while Ecevit and Karamanlis resolved none of their disputes during their visit here at least they agreed to keep talking.

Anti-airport farmers battle on

TOKYO (UPI) — A farmers' group opposed to the new Tokyo International Airport at Narita declared the start of a "Hundred Day Struggle" today to force the government to close the controversial $2.6 billion air terminal.

Japanese government decided to build the Narita facility, and Sept. 17 will be the seventh anniversary of riots at the airport site that killed three policemen.

The airport opened May 20 despite violent protests by radical leftists who supported the farmers' league. Several sabotage attempts since then have not affected operations, and the number of police guarding the terminal has been reduced from 13,000 to 9,000. However, the airport is still off limits to visitors.

The leaders of the group, the Sanriyuka-Shibayama Anti-Airport League, are farmers who will lose their farms if the government goes ahead with plans to build a second runway at the airport 41 miles northeast of Tokyo.

Mass rallies will be held July 4 and Sept. 17, they said.

The first protest marks the date in 1968 when the complete returns were not expected until late today. The government banned public broadcast of unofficial vote counts.

Turbay, 61, a veteran politician who spent two decades working his way up the powerful Liberal Party organization, was considered the favorite in the race.

Candidates claim victory

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — Liberal candidate Julio Cesar Turbay held the narrowest of leads today over Conservative Belisario Betancour, but both men declared themselves the winners in Colombia's presidential election.

Armed soldiers put on alert during the balloting Sunday continued their patrols today. There were few people or cars in Bogota streets — perhaps a sign of the uncertainty of the election outcome.

The latest official report from the Elections Commission showed that with 80 percent of the ballots counted, Turbay had 1,868,000 votes to 1,832,102 for Betancour. Five minor candidates shared the rest of the votes.

"I accept this beautiful victory with pride and humility," Betancour said at an early morning news conference when less than 50 percent of the votes had been counted.

Minutes later, at a hotel three blocks away, Turbay held his own news conference and said: "I am happy to announce that after having closely followed election developments, according to data we have, we have obtained a significant majority over candidate

Belancour."

The latest returns from the national elections office, based on little more than one-third of the total vote Sunday, gave Turbay a narrow edge — 48.9 percent to 47.2 percent for Betancour. The lead shifted continuously during earlier stages of the vote count.

Four other candidates shared the remaining votes. Under Colombian law, the candidate with the most votes wins. A majority is not needed.

This election was Colombia's first since expiration of a 20-year-old law that mandated rotation of the presidency between the Liberal and Conservative parties. The measure was adopted in 1954 to end a 30-year period of political violence.

Betancour declared himself president-elect and said: "I will totally comply with the campaign promises in my platform."

Turbay said he would wait for the National Elections Court to declare him president-elect and declared: "I will in no way create a situation that could affect the public order of my country."

The elections office was proceeding slowly with the vote count and near-

Two soldiers were killed and another injured in the guerrilla attack 350 miles southwest of Bogota. Four bombs set off in the capital caused only minor damage and no injuries.

Massive security was in effect throughout the capital during the election. Armed soldiers lined major streets to prevent any recurrence of a series of disorders that marred the last month of the campaign.

Medical unit adds vans

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley Rehabilitation Services, a non-profit privately-owned facility for handicapped residents, has just received two new 15-passenger vans.

The units will be used to transport persons from all parts of Twin Falls County to the center in Twin Falls. James Crumrine, director, said the $16,000 project was financed through a $4,321 contribution from Twin Falls County and the remainder from a federal transportation grant.

He said because MVRSS is a private institution and non-profit, it was able to qualify for funds under the Urban Mass Transportation Grant program of the Department of Transportation.

The vehicles will be traveling to various communities to bring individuals to the center for training and rehabilitation assistance. They will then return them to their homes the same day, making it possible for these people to reside at home while receiving assistance through the center's program.

Crumrine said there are a number of individuals in training in the center who are able to work only a few hours a day, and the vans can be operated to meet their schedules. He said one of the units is equipped with a metal ramp which folds down for wheelchairs.

The ramp reduces the capacity of the vehicle by three as it necessitates removing the rear seat. At the present time there are only two wheelchair users at the center. Crumrine said purchase of a wheelchair elevator for the vehicle would have cost about $1500 and the ramp cost very little and still is not pressing the center for transportation space.

Only U.S. palace open for display

By RAY YUEN

HONOLULU (UPI) — Iolani Palace, the nation's only royal palace, has reopened to the public for the first time since a $8 million restoration project began more than eight years ago.

Now immaculately clean and virtually totally rebuilt and refurnished, the two-story palace, though it still lacks furnishings, sparkles from revarnished woodwork, white-painted iron pillars and outside stairways, and an exterior that appears to have been sandblasted clean of nine decades of dirt.

The 140-by-100-foot palace was built in 1882 by King David Kalakaua at an original cost of $360,000. It contains 100 "spaces," including the large upper floor royal bedrooms, and the first floor dining room and throne room.

The palace was occupied by Hawaiian royalty for only 11 years. Kalakaua died nine years after the palace was completed, and his sister-successor, Queen Liliuokalani, was overthrown by an 1893 revolution.

Since then, until a new structure was built, the palace served as the islands' capitol. For the first 10 years of statehood, Hawaii's 78 legislators used the palace's dining room and throne room as the state Senate and House chambers, respectively.

When the new capitol was completed in 1965 at a cost of $24 million, the state authorized the Friends of Iolani Palace organization to undertake the restoration project.

The first view visitors see is through the engraved glass-paneled double door main entrance to the brilliantly varnished Douglas fir floor and koa wood stairway. Light from a large picture window at the head of the stairs illumines and glistens off the floor and the stairway banisters and railing.

Visitors are taken on a 45-minute tour through the blue room, so-called because of the color of the original draperies, the dining room, upstairs through the king's bedroom, through the adjoining music room and then outside to the second floor lanai.

Then the group is directed back inside to the two guest rooms and the bedroom of Queen Liliuokalani, and back downstairs to the tour's climax, the throne room.

Three large mirrors trimmed in pure gold leaf adorn one wall of the throne room and engraved glass-paneled doors are opposite. Six crystal chandeliers hang in the room, and at the head of the room is a raised platform for the thrones, which are now in the Honolulu's Bishop Museum. Replicas are being made to be displayed in the palace.

"The work began over eight years ago, and we've had eight different contractors on the job," said Joe Spillman, chairman of the restoration project for the Friends of Iolani Palace. "We must have had at least 500 different people working on it, for the most part local craftsmen and subcontractors."

"We've had some specialists we had to bring in from the outside, such as a rehanging specialist for the crystal chandeliers. We had to bring him in from Oakland, Calif."

"In other areas, such as security, we had a consultant from the mainland, and for some finished hardware on the doors and windows, we had to get someone from Baltimore, Md."

"As for the lightbulbs, there was nowhere in America we could get the small, 12-volt bulbs used in the chandeliers. We finally located such a manufacturer outside of Paris."

Other materials and objects for the palace restoration included white marble from Italy, linoleum from Luxembourg, cedar from Oregon, and a 14x20 English rug that is an exact duplicate of one that originally lay in the palace throne room.

Reservations for the tours, held each day, must be made in advance either by telephone or at the palace.

Institute stresses 'wholistic' health

By IRENE LINK
Times-News writer

MILL VALLEY, Calif. — Almost everyone is familiar with the old adage, "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

And while it is particularly true where our own health is concerned, it is remarkable that few of us know much about how to prevent sickness. At least, it appears that we know little in view of how we treat our bodies.

Over the years, in the last decade we have seen a surge toward more interest in personal responsibility for health. Many people are earnestly engaged in physical fitness programs, more nutritious diets, and other attempts to ease the toll of the stresses of life in a society full of pressures.

Not only are people finding that they feel immediately better from their efforts, but they are also having fun doing it. The widespread interest in active sports such as tennis, racketball and jogging seem to attest to this.

Any doctor will tell you that improved physical conditioning and good nutrition also give the body the ability to fend off sickness and disease more effectively than the poorly nourished, weak and flabby specimen.

While some individuals have begun their own programs in the area of "preventive health" practices, so are some very forward-looking people in the medical community looking in this direction. There are doctors who are altering their approach to the care and treatment of bodies that are not well. They are stressing not only treatment after the fact, but prevention of illness and the nurturing of the well body to forestall sickness and disease.

Dr. Charles Berry, former chief medical officer for NASA and current space medicine consultant, recently said of his work with NASA, "The job with the astronauts was to keep them fit — not to let them get sick. There's no reason why we can't do the same thing for others."

One group of doctors who agree with this philosophy and approach to health care functions is in the Wholistic Health and Nutrition Institute in Mill Valley, Calif., just a short ride north of San Francisco. It is one of a handful of such clinics in the country.

Richard Crews, M.D., clinical and executive director of the institute, says, "Medicine is in a bind. It is increasingly clear that our current medical approach in this country is not working. Nevertheless, there is considerable resistance to change. We at the institute don't feel that we have the final answer, but we feel we do have a better approach."

A brochure from the institute puts it this way: "The Wholistic Health and Nutrition Institute is a non-profit organization designed to assist individuals in developing a sense of enthusiasm about taking responsibility for their own health while moving toward high-level wellness."

"Good health is a natural condition. It is feeling alive in body, mind and spirit. Wholistic Health means viewing a person's life from every possible perspective, making use of concepts and skills which encourage individual growth to wholeness — and to the experience of harmony and balance for this whole being."

The institute, which was established in 1974, is the brainchild of Dr. Rick Kozlenko, who specializes in nutritional counseling. Kozlenko says, "I had for some time felt a dissatisfaction with the approaches to health of conventional medicine. I felt there had to be a better way, and that way quickly took form in a greater use of the more natural therapies."

"These, it seemed to me, offer us our greatest hope in preventing and dealing with diseases that are very often life-style oriented."

"This approach involves not only nutrition, not just exercise, not just the annual physical checkup, not just emotional stability, but all these things and many more. If one is to realize a true, whole status of healthfulness, each such component is just one spoke in the wheel. And you need them all, if the wheel is to turn and keep on turning."

When Dr. Kozlenko advocates the use of the "more natural therapies," he is talking about adjunct body and health services and treatments not ordinarily given much credence by the medical community at large. However, many of them have been used by non-medical practitioners for centuries.

Some of these services, which are used in alliance with standard medical practices, are listed in the institute catalogue. For instance, one is iridology, which is the "science" of reading the iris of the eyes to determine health problems. Another is acupuncture, which has been used in China for 5,000 years but is only beginning to be recognized in America as a legitimate health care practice.

Other services are therapeutic massage, nutritional consultation, stress management consultation, physical fitness coaching, psychosomatic psychiatry, psychotherapy and arthromolecular and spiritual consultation.

The institute, in keeping with its desire to help make the layperson more capable and responsible for his own health, offers classes in almost every facet of health care. Many of the classes are available for college credit. Some of the enticing offers include Meet Your Feet; Body Harmony Through Reflexology; pain control workshop, ayu-hypnosis, a day of living with the herbs (a field trip), Nutrition: Developing a Personal Approach, homeopathy and couples seminars.

Dr. Richard Shames, one of the four original doctors in the institute, believes this is where medicine is headed. He says, "I definitely believe that there will be more and more work done in nutritional education, preventive medicine, self-help instruction, and other services to promote good health.

Innovative approach

MICHAEL Rosenbaum, M.D., who practices psychiatry and arthromolecular therapy, gives views on the innovative approach to prevention of disease and treatment of health problems used by the institute.

"We are receiving a lot of encouragement both within and outside the medical profession. Gov. Jerry Brown has said, 'We want to stimulate and encourage innovative approaches to health care.' The past president of the AMA, Malcolm Todd, recently spoke at the annual convention of the Association of Wholistic Health in San Diego, and said he is supportive and interested in new techniques for prevention and motivation in self-help health care. And there has been no harassment from the AMA in what we are doing."

How are doctors with conventional medical training reacting to this somewhat radical approach? Dr. Shames says that many are showing interest but have a "wait and see" attitude. Often the initial reaction is, "I think it's a great idea, but it will never work. There just isn't enough time for all that."

Others say that it is not economically viable, that people will not pay for preventive services and health counseling. Some even say that many people are not interested in prevention of disease and don't worry about their health until a crisis occurs. And still others say that these unconventional methods are not scientifically proven and therefore should not be used.

But Dr. Shames says, "Illness begins in the spiritual, goes to the psychological, and ends up in physical symptoms. Helping a client become well and maintain health involves dealing with all of these things — the whole person. That's what we mean by Wholistic Health."

Health care

RICHARD Crews, M.D., clinical and executive director of the Wholistic Health and Nutrition Institute of Mill Valley, Calif., discusses the basic philosophy and approach to health care practiced at the clinic.

Three doctors give views on health institute's theory

By IRENE LINK
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — After having an opportunity to read the literature from the Wholistic Health and Nutrition Institute, three local doctors were asked to give their personal reactions to this rather unorthodox approach to treatment and prevention of disease.

Drs. Roy Shaub, C.F. Wurster and S.J. Smith offered their opinions.

While one of the institute doctors said that he felt conventional medical practices are in trouble, none of the local doctors agreed. Dr. Shaub, an internist in Twin Falls for 17 years, states, "Doctors take the best medical knowledge available and use it. The facts speak for themselves. Conventional medicine practices preventive measures more than it appears. Both mortality (death) and morbidity (disease) have decreased. Longevity has increased. We must be doing something right. I think things are going quite well."

Dr. Wurster, who has practiced for 22 years in Twin Falls, says, "I don't think conventional medicine is inadequate. It may be in some trouble regarding what it costs to deliver medical services to patients. But, patients demand so much more than they did years ago and it all costs."

Dr. Smith, a Magic Valley doctor for eight years, agrees by saying, "We traditional medicine have never claimed to have all the answers — neither do they at the institute. And for as long as I've been in medicine, we have been moving toward the wholistic approach. Doctors are using more and more ancillary services. Here at the Twin Falls Clinic we have physical therapists, nutritionists and inhalation therapists. I refer many patients to other specialists, too, like mental health counselors. I am already practicing what I consider to be the wholistic approach."

When they were asked how they feel about M.D.s utilizing some of the unconventional services approved at the institute, the opinions varied somewhat.

Dr. Shaub says, "When it comes to criticizing others, I am very liberal. Just because I don't know something, doesn't mean it is right or wrong. I'm willing to wait and see. If they, at the institute, have something going for them, time will tell."

Dr. Wurster adds, "This is a free country. These people at the institute are free to use this approach if they want to. Doctors are human like anyone else. We are not omniscient. We don't know it all. If these doctors feel that they have something good going for them, who am I to criticize? While their approach may have some merit, I don't think they have all the answers."

These services are far beyond the reach of most people. It might be a place for rich people to go to have a good time — like a 'fat farm.' For the most part, it all seems rather 'far out' and impractical to me.

"None of this stuff (the unorthodox services offered at the institute) written up in the medical journals. We doctors in communities like Twin Falls have to rely on what has been proven scientifically. They, at the institute, may be right, but I don't think so."

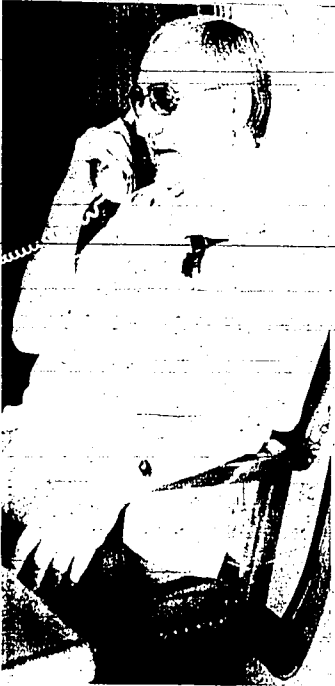

Regarding these unconventional services, Dr. Smith says, "They would have to show me scientifically measurable results before I would believe that these services are valuable. However, if a doctor feels or has evidence that these services can be helpful, it would be inappropriate for him not to use them. In my experience and knowledge, there is no scientific evidence that these services provide the benefits that they say they do. When we see proof of the benefits, then conventional medicine will adopt them."

All three doctors indicate that they feel they are already practicing what the institute terms the wholistic approach. Dr. Wurster says, "I don't feel that I just look at runny noses and broken bones. I try to consider the whole person. For instance, I give nutritional advice. Probably 8 out of 10 of my patients need help with nutrition. And half of my patients suffer from stress-related diseases, so I incorporate stress consultation and psychotherapy."

"However, the average physician cannot do it all. If I participated in a lot of these extra services, it would be very expensive. Most of my patients could not afford it."

Dr. Smith agrees that "it would be a highly impractical routine approach."

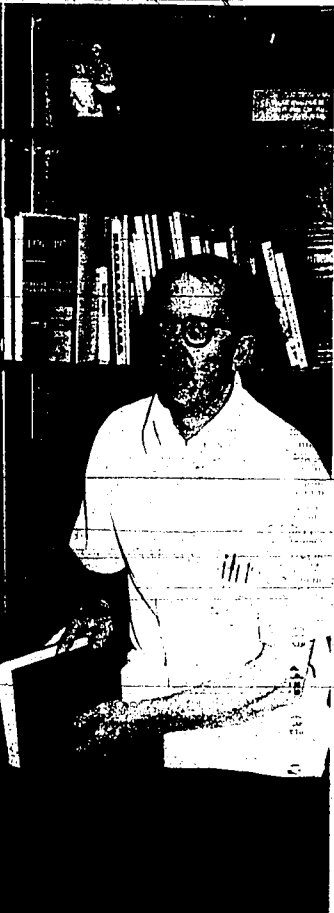

Dr. Shaub concludes with what he considers to be the weaknesses of the institute and its approach. "A lot of what they are doing, I question. Some of it might be harmless, and some might be beneficial. Much of it is unproven to be medically beneficial. When you are not working with controls, there can be no proof as to whether this approach works or not."

CSII sets summer GED test scheddle

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho is announcing a summer schedule for GED testing and ABE classes to start soon.

Anyone desiring a high school equivalency diploma may take the tests if they are 18 years of age or their high school class has graduated. There are five GED (general education diploma) tests which include math, English, science, social studies and reading. Idaho also requires a test on government. The entire cost for the six tests is $12. Testing for GED will start Monday and be available each Friday from 8 a.m. to noon.

Adult basic education (ABE) will be offered each Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday from 9 a.m. to noon.

This program offers help for anyone who does not have a high school diploma. The program offers help from speaking the English language to algebra free of charge. No night time classes will be offered this summer, it was announced.

Further information can be obtained by calling Marvin Glascock, CSII, 723-9554, extension 21.

North asking for aces by means of Blackwood and then bidding six clubs. Five trump in that spot would ask for kings. This bid of a new suit asks partner to bid seven if he holds two of the top three trump honors.

Oswald: "It certainly works here and is simple enough so that any established partnership can use it. Let's formalize it."

Alan: "OK. A partnership using this convention agrees that if a player who uses a Blackwood four trump folks up with a bid of six in an unbid suit, he guarantees all the aces and asks his partner to bid seven with two of the three top trump honors."

Sedaka's daughter starts own career

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (UPI) — Dara Sedaka is probably the youngest singer ever to be fired by singer-composer Neil Sedaka. That's what happens when you talk back to your father.

Dara was unimpressed by her early setback and now, at 14, has embarked on her own singing career, releasing her first single, "My Guy," in April.

"The first time Dara sang with Neil she was 9," recalled her mother, Lela Sedaka, during breakfast during a school holiday.

"She looked so cute, dressed in a little kimono," Mrs. Sedaka said. "She sang backup for Neil on 'Beautiful You'."

Dara became friendly with the musicians and began picking up some of their "hip" jargon.

Mrs. Sedaka said.

"One night Neil changed the program around a little and Dara said to him, 'Hey, what's the lineup? I can't do this gig without knowing the lineup.' She was replaced the next night by a tape recorder."

"I was fired at 9," Dara chimed in with a smile.

Dara, who loves to write poetry and composes all her family's greeting cards, said she would rather sing something she has written because "there is more feeling" and "it's my own creation."

The best praise she ever got, she said, was when her father recorded a song she wrote, "Hey, Mr. Sunshine."

"I've never been so proud," she said. "It showed that he thought I had talent."

Her father tried to teach her to play the piano, but she just couldn't take him seriously.

"So he decided he would have to really become my teacher. He dropped up in a long coat, went outside, rang the doorbell and introduced himself, in a thick accent, as Dr. Begunka, the music teacher."

"Then Dara told all her teachers her mother was sleeping with the music teacher," added Mrs. Sedaka.

From the easy bantering between mother and daughter and the funny anecdotes, it sounds like the Sedakas have a warm home. Being the daughter of a celebrity has not been that difficult for Dara.

Dara, articulate and grown-up for 14, ("she's 14 going on 45," her mother joked), has become a very attractive young lady, quite a change from the rather chubby adolescent who sang with her father on his television special in 1976.

It was the praise that she drew that convinced Dara to try for a singing career.

"We debated for a year and half before we allowed her to record," Mrs. Sedaka said. "We thought, why subject the child to this business, to worrying whether a song makes the charts or is played on radio stations? Then we thought it wouldn't be fair to let her have a shot. It was a tough decision but there were two things that helped influence us."

"One was Brooks Hayward, who wrote her first screenplay when a youngster but her mother wouldn't let her take it to the studio. She said she would never forgive her mother—and Barbara Streisand said she never forgave her mother for turning down a job for her without even consulting her. So we decided we didn't want Dara to feel later that we robbed her of something."

Another consideration was Dara's brother, Mark, 11, with whom Dara is very close.

At first he was rather blasé about her career, Dara said, "but now he's very excited and very proud."

4-H states camp clinic

GLENN'S FERRY — Elmore County 4-H Club Camp counselors and leaders will participate in a district camp counselor clinic June 6 in Jerome.

Mini-workshops have been planned to prepare teens for a successful camping experience with young 4-H'ers at the county 4-H camp.

Sessions will be held on camp counseling, camp recreation, campfires, ceremonies and lead songs and camp craft. Marie Olson, Elmore County teen leader, will share a successful macramé craft she developed for the 1977 Elmore County camping season.

All leaders and teen camp counselors are invited to attend the clinic. Ruth E. Van Slyke, extension home economist, can be contacted at 587-8226 for more information.

Stocks at Midday

The Dow Jones Industrial average, which was 6.4-point gain Friday, fell a 15.50-point rise last week, was about 7.19 points from 854.72 to 847.57. EDV's advances led declines, 97.50, among the 1,728 stocks traded. The New York Stock Exchange volume at the two-hour session amounted to 155,461,540 shares, up from 144,000,000 the previous trading day. The same period of P.F. led Bergsten, said analyst, sparked some early buy when he speculated the nation's 11.9 billion first-quarter trade deficit would have been the worst for the year and that the rate would subside in the next three quarters. Meanwhile, the House Ways & Means Committee reportedly is in the process of approving a reduction in capital gains rates to 20 percent from 49 percent. President Carter opposes the move, asking instead to tax increase.

Stocks registered broad gain

By FRANK W. GLUSSER
UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stocks overcame inflation and interest rates to register a broad gain this holiday week as government reports confirmed the economy was rebounding from the winter-plagued first quarter. Trading was moderate.

The Dow Jones Industrial average, a 15.16-point loser a week ago, climbed 6.4 points to 847.54. The Dow had lost 23.73 points in the four sessions prior to last Tuesday.

The New York Stock Exchange common stock index rose 0.89 to 850.03 and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index added 1.56 to 98.14. Advances topped declines, 1,185 to 627, among the 2,064 issues crossing the complete day.

Big Board volume the four-day week totaled 1.1 billion 110,721,680 shares, compared with 143,198,610 last week and 75,072,640 traded during the same week a year ago. Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter totaled 125,405,960 shares, compared with 160,294,110 last week.

Analysts said investors took a positive view of the news that a strong economy was being accompanied by rising costs and prices because President Carter has acknowledged inflation is the No. 1 problem and is trying to do something about it.

The news that April's index of leading economic indicators rose 0.5 percent following a 0.1 percent drop in March was the prime evidence the economy was rebounding from first-quarter problems.

Construction spending rose 3.4 percent to $19.2 billion following a 4.3 percent rise to $18.5 billion in March. Factory orders rose 1.8 percent, but non-consumer goods orders fell 0.9 percent.

Unemployment was nearly unchanged, edging up to 6.1 percent from 6 percent while employed climbed more than 300,000. Inflation, some economists are worried the improving job picture could tempt inflation because a labor shortage may develop in certain levels.

If that happens, employers will bid higher wages for talent. And this will make life more miserable for Robert Strauss, the man President Carter has picked to make voluntary wage and price guidelines work.

Inflation already is moderating. Farm prices rose 3 percent. May wholesale prices 0.7 percent but this was better than the 1.3 percent hike in April and consumer prices a 0.9 percent pace—down from 6.6 percent hike in beef prices.

The nation's basic money supply fell $1 billion, Reserve's growth target exceeded the Federal Reserve Bank of New York. This could mean tighter credit and higher interest rates. One economist predicted the prime rate, now 9 1/2 percent, would hit 10 percent by early 1979.

A record $1-billion surge in loan demand at New York's top banks apparently was an unusual one-shot $40 billion deficit, a continued sharp rise in private demand could produce a credit squeeze beyond a 6.6 percent hike in beef prices.

Business Week magazine predicted interest rates would continue to rise as part of an accord between Federal Reserve Chairman G. William Miller and Carter to battle inflation in return for more stimulative monetary policy in the late summer or early fall.

Brokers said the small investor was beginning to get involved in the market. Also, some portfolio managers are considering some buying because they don't want to miss a major market move.

Reliance Group was the most active NYSE-listed issue, up 2 1/4 to 3 1/4. The company said about 75 percent of outstanding warrants to buy its common stock at $25 a share had been exercised.

American Motors was second among active issues, up 1 1/4 to 1 1/4. The No. 4 automaker plans to close Pacer and Matador production lines next week to control its unsold inventory.

Bally Manufacturing, which wants to open a casino in Atlantic City, N.J., was the third most active issue, falling 1/4 to 2 1/4. The Justice Department is investigating the company for possibly monopolizing the casino machine industry.

Other gambling stocks, which had drawn considerable attention as Resorts International opened a casino in Atlantic City, suffered from profit taking. Caesars World fell 1/4 to 1 1/4 in active trading.

Resorts A stock, the most active American Stock Exchange issue, fell 3/4 to 3 3/4. The B stock slipped 3/4 to 5 1/4.

Shaklee plunged 7 1/2 to 19 1/2 in active trading after the company revealed its third-quarter and fiscal year earnings would fall short of expectations. A leading analyst downgraded the stock, which had been something of a glamor.

Dentistry, which had a first-quarter loss, climbed 3/4 to 23 1/4 after the company said its second quarter loss might set a record. Dentsply said its April quarter loss was 35 cents a share.

Break for senior citizens

House sale taxes reviewed

(Last in a series of seven columns)

If you are a taxpayer of any age and you sell your home, you may defer the tax on your gain if you replace it with a new home costing at least as much as you got for your old one.

But if you are at least 65 years old, you get a special tax break.

You pay no tax if your adjusted sales price is your selling price, minus commissions, fix-up costs.

A. Yes, the break is available if either spouse is at least 65.

But, warns Prentice-Ill, to get it, you must file a joint return; you must elect to get it, for the break is not automatic; he used the property as your principal residence for at least five of the eight years before sale; get the break only once in a lifetime.

An extra tax assist is that if your property is part-residence, part-business (say a two-family home), there's tax-free treatment on the part of the gain "attributable" to the residence. And the breaks apply to condominiums and co-op apartments.

If you are planning to sell your home in '78, you may be pleasantly surprised to find you may have to pay more tax than you anticipated due to the so-called minimum tax on capital gains. And this minimum tax — aimed at high-income individuals who pay penny tax bills — has been beefed up. It catches numbers of homeowners at all income levels, low and middle as well as high.

SYLVIA PORTER

You expect to pay a capital gain tax if you sell your house and don't buy a new one or buy another at less than the price you received from the sale. But you may get a second tax hit, because numbers of homeowners at all income levels, low and middle as well as high.

The tax-free amount is now $35,000 against $20,000 in 1977. If your adjusted sales price is more than $35,000, the ratio that $35,000 bears to the adjusted sales price. For instance, if the sales price is $70,000, half the gain is tax free or $35,000 of $70,000.

Q. My father will be 65 years old later in '78. He has a bid for his house now and wants to sell now. Will he get the break?

A. No. He gets the break only if he sells on or after the day he reaches 65. But there is a strategy which he should ponder now.

He can enter into a contract of sale now, with the date for closing set after he reaches 65, he's entitled to the break.

Q. I own a home jointly with my wife. I'm over 65 but my wife is only 60. If we sell, are we entitled to the tax break?

Workmen's 'comp' is in trouble

By LEROY POPE
UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Workmen's Compensation, with its coverage of 83 million American workers one of the most sensitive areas in insurance and labor relations, is in serious trouble.

The business is covered by private insurance carriers and has become so unprofitable to most of the firms and so burdensome to employers, that a recent detailed study concludes "we do not believe employers and insurance companies will be willing to continue to withstand nationwide workers' compensation costs of approximately $7.8 billion annually."

Loeb Rhoades & Co., the Wall Street investment house that conducted the study said the main reasons the insurance companies have not thrown in the towel already on workers' compensation are that the business does generate a steady cash flow and it involves a huge social responsibility. The companies are loath to precipitate a national crisis by pulling the compensation rug out from under 83 million American workers.

One research organization, Chase Economic Research Inc., Bala Cynwyd, Pa., claims a population shift will restore the incidence of accidents and increasing premium revenues.

But even this optimistic forecast could easily be sidetracked by federal intervention to set up for the first time minimum national standards for state compensation laws. A bill to require this was announced May 11 by Sen. Harrison Williams, D-N.J., and Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y. At a Washington news conference they said it no longer is possible to wait for the states to come up with adequate reforms in workmen's compensation.

Senator Javits said reform in workmen's compensation has been lagging disgracefully. He said only half the 14,000 accidental deaths in American industry in 1976 resulted in compensation to survivors under existing state laws.

Javits and Williams plan to hold hearings on their bill later this year.

The new bill supercedes one introduced two years ago by the same senators and Rep. Dominic Daniels, D-N.J., which incorporated a considerable number of 87 recommendations for reform made in 1972 by the National Commission on State Compensation Laws. The commission had declared 19 of these recommendations to be "most essential."

The Loeb Rhoades study of the compensation insurance industry prepared late in 1976, said that the previous Williams-Javits bill could more than triple the cost of workmen's compensation insurance.

And the optimistic Chase Economic forecast said the cost to insurance companies of writing workmen's compensation business will go up 17 percent annually until 1980 and increased premium income will not have a significant benefit before then. But David, Henley of Chase Economic said the average age of workers will continue to drop for the next three years after falling from 40 to 35 since 1960.

At the same time, the proportion of white collar workers will rise and the proportion of blue collar workers continue to drop. Since white industrial workers and office workers are less accident prone or less exposed than younger blue collar workers, Henley said this is bound to reduce the enrollment of more employees and companies will increase premium revenues.

Consequently, Henley predicts the 1980s will be a profitable decade in workmen's compensation insurance.

The annual bill to employers and their insurance carriers for workmen's compensation claims jumped from $3.9 billion in 1972 to an estimated $7.8 billion in 1977. Bills pending in Congress and various state legislatures could jump that to anywhere from $23 to $31 billion a year, a seminar sponsored by Loeb Rhoades & Co. was told.

Robert E. Goodfriend and Robert G. Smith of Loeb Rhoades, who presented the firm's study said the companies will have to get relief if the whole private insurance compensation structure could collapse — throwing the entire burden on federal and state governments.

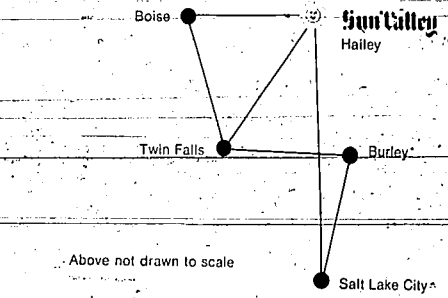

As alternatives, Goodfriend and Smith suggested several urgent reforms:

- More liberal tax incentives and credits to encourage expanded private financing of the workers' compensation insurance business.
- Establishment of state reinsurance funds to supplement presently available reinsurance.
- State government underwriting of substandard risks.
- Legislated reform to set up regional standards and codes.
- Creation of regional consortia to handle such problems as miners' black lung disease.

The study pointed out that black lung disease compensation began as a modest program in 1968 and had mushroomed into "a major federal commitment with 500,000 miners and their survivors now receiving $1 billion a year in benefits."

Almanac Tale got twisted after snake attack

By United Press International
Today is Monday, June 5, the 156th day of 1978 with 209 to follow.

The moon is new.
The morning star is Mercury.

The evening stars are Mars, Venus, Jupiter and Saturn.

Those born on this day in history are under the sign of Gemini.

Mao Zedong, Chinese leader, wife of the late leader of Nationalist China, was born June 5, 1897.

On this day in history: In 1917, more than 9.5 million Americans between the ages of 21 and 31 registered for the World War I draft.

In 1933, President Franklin D. Roosevelt signed a bill abolishing the gold standard.

In 1966, American astronaut Gene Cernan left Gemini 9 for a two-hour and 10-minute "spacewalk."

In 1968, Sen. Robert Kennedy was fatally shot in Los Angeles by a 24-year-old Arab national, later identified as Sirhan Sirhan. The assassin was sentenced to life imprisonment.

A thought for the day: President Franklin Roosevelt said, "There is no indispensable man."

LAKEWOOD, Colo. (UPI) — A motel manager says a former resident who told doctors he kept a pet cobra, rattlesnake and tarantula in his room will be encouraged to go elsewhere for lodging as soon as he gets out of the hospital.

"He's locked out," the angry manager said Friday after police, firemen and animal control agents searched the motel for the poisonous animals. None were found.

"There are no snakes here and there never were any," the manager said. "He's dying because he's delirious."

Agents for the Lakewood Department of Public Safety said James Bricker, 31, told doctors about his "pets" while they were treating him for a rattlesnake wound to the hand.

The manager, who asked not to be identified, said Bricker was delirious from a bite he received a week ago while hunting rattlesnakes.

Look to the savings center for higher interest with two new certificate plans

Effective June 1, 1978

First Security has always been the region's savings leader in offering you the highest interest allowed, and the widest possible choice of ways to save. So it should not surprise you that we're now offering you higher interest rates than ever before, on two brand new savings plans for short or long term savers.

NEW EIGHT-YEAR 7 3/4% CERTIFICATES*
All you need to lock in 7 3/4% annual interest for eight full years is a minimum deposit of $1,000. Interest is paid quarterly and it can be added to the face amount of your certificate to earn compounded interest. $1,000 will grow to $1,848.00 by maturity. If you prefer, we can pay your quarterly interest by check or deposit it to your First Security checking or savings account. The choice is yours.

NEW MONEY MARKET CERTIFICATES* AT TREASURY BILL RATES. If you can invest $10,000 or more for 6 months, you can earn the highest interest rate we are permitted to pay on 6 month savings certificates. Rates are based on the average yield for 6 month Treasury Bills established in the most recent weekly auction. Ask us for the current rate, which presently exceeds 7%.

Come to First Security — the savings center — and take advantage of these new higher rates. We can take care of you quickly and efficiently.

Saccharin warnings ordered, merchants ask, 'so what?'

By GARY ELIASSEN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Signs warning grocery shoppers of the cancer-causing potential of saccharin are visible in most Twin Falls supermarkets today.

Managers of markets around Twin Falls said there has been no customer reaction or effect on sales yet.

The signs are required as part of the law Congress passed last year delaying for 18 months the Food and Drug Administration's attempt to ban saccharin in food products. The law took effect June 1.

In addition the law requires specific written warnings on the labels of diet soft and other saccharin-containing foods.

Smith's Food King, Marty's IGA Market, Safeway, and Albertson's managers reported they had received the 11 by 14-inch signs and put them up or were in the process of doing so. The signs are posted on the front doors of the stores, in the dietetic areas and the pop sections.

The assistant manager of Buttery Food Stores said Friday his market had not received the signs yet.

Printed in red and black ink on a white card, the signs read:

SACCHARIN NOTICE:
"This store sells food including diet beverages and dietetic foods that contain saccharin. You will find saccharin listed in the ingredient statement on most foods which contain it. All foods which contain saccharin will soon bear the following warning: Use of this product may be hazardous to your health. This product contains saccharin which has been determined to cause cancer in laboratory animals."

"I haven't even received a comment," said Marty Richter, manager of Marty's IGA

Market.

There's no difference yet," Richter said, speaking about sales of saccharine products, but he added, "The effect will take awhile."

Manager Dale Ford of Smith's Food King also had no reaction to the new warnings. He expects diet pop drinks will continue at the high level they always have.

Ford also said any effect on saccharin product sales would have shown up last summer following the original FDA ruling on saccharin. But there was no decline at that time.

Doug Cobbley, manager of Albertson's, echoed the comments of the other managers, saying he had received "no reaction at all."

The signs will remain in place while the FDA and the National Cancer Institute continue their survey of people in five states and four metropolitan areas to determine if the artificial sweetener really does cause bladder cancer in humans, as it did in laboratory rats.

Hansen among 'dirty dozen'

The spokesman said it has not yet been determined how much of the $5,000 the group will raise to oppose the "Dirty Dozen" will be given to each of their opponents, but federal law prohibits national political groups from contributing more than $5,000 to any one candidate.

Environmental Action officials claim their actions have resulted in defeat of 25 of the 41 congressmen named to their list since 1970.

But Devine, named to the seat four times, has kept his seat.

In defense of his environmental record, Hansen said, "I consider my environmental voting record as practical and proper and serves the best interests of my state and the nation as a whole." He described his environmental outlook as one-in support of "balance, in using the environment, but only to the point where you can restore it and clean it up."

"We do have a future to think of," he added.

The Environmental Action spokesman said Hansen voted the wrong way in 18 out of the 18 issues the group considered in compiling the "Dirty Dozen," including bills on clean air and water, dolphin protection, SST noise reduction and safeguards against strip mining.

Pollution meeting today

TWIN FALLS — The Idaho Board of Health and Welfare meets in Twin Falls today and Tuesday.

The board will be taking up mostly by environmental protection issues.

Regulations to protect the Rathdrum Prairie aquifer in Idaho's panhandle plus amendments to state air pollution regulations are among the items on the board's agenda.

A set of much-debated water quality regulations for the Rathdrum Prairie aquifer which supplies drinking water for the Coeur d'Alene and Spokane areas, were developed by the local health board but turned down by the state board earlier.

The state board overruled on grounds public hearing procedures were inadequate.

To amend air pollution control regulations, the board plans to add carbon monoxide and other auto related pollutants to the list of pollutants for which emergency episode procedures will be developed, according to public relations officer Doris Schneider.

Broken kneecap reported

TWIN FALLS — Nancy Barron, 37, of Twin Falls was injured Saturday when her 15-year-old daughter lost control of the family car, and pinned the woman against a parked car.

Barron's daughter, Jerry, was backing the car out of a driveway at her home at 2023 11th Ave. East when she lost control of the car.

Mrs. Barron had inadvertently stepped behind the car and was pinned between her car and a neighbor's van.

Barron suffered a broken kneecap and torn ligaments in the nishap. Her injuries required surgery.

Rail line abandoned?

TWIN FALLS — Union Pacific Railroad has filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission notice of its intent to abandon a 94-mile portion of the railroad's Wells Branch in Idaho and Nevada.

The Wells Branch extends from Twin Falls, Nev., a total of 123.4 miles. The section to be abandoned is from Rogers to Wells.

T. P. Rogers, general manager of UPR's northwestern district, said the reason for the abandonment is that there simply is no need for that portion of the line.

"No traffic originates or terminates on that part of the branch and through traffic between areas connected by the branch line can be handled much more efficiently and expeditiously by using the main line through Ogden and Salt Lake City, as it has been for the past several years without any problems," he stated.

Disco fever in Twin Falls?

Two new discos will open soon in Twin Falls as owners try to cash in on Travolta fever

By JEFF SHER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Will disco fever infect Twin Falls as it has the rest of the nation?

More to the point, can Twin Falls support not one, but two (or more) disco dance halls?

The answers to those questions are of interest to an unlikely assortment of Twin Falls people, including CSI math professor Ray Lewin, Maxie's Pizza manager Farren Davis, and aspiring entrepreneur Gary Havin.

All three men are hrrying to open the first disco in Twin Falls.

Disco is changing the music and entertainment worlds in ways John Travolta never dreamed of when he first wiggled into his skin-tight, white suit.

Thousands of people are not only listening to a new style of music, but they are getting off of their backsides and onto their feet in numbers which have caused an explosion in the number of dance halls across the country.

Lewin, Davis and Havin are not interested in disco because they like to shake their tail feathers, but because they are the principal competitors in the race to bring a disco dance hall to Twin Falls.

Lewin and Davis are taking the risk of opening a disco, the Disco Dock, in the Old Times-News building in downtown Twin Falls.

The venture is risky because of the large capital investment required to set up a full-on, sound-and-lights disco, and because Havin is opening another disco, the Count Down, a mere three blocks away in what is now the Small Mall.

Which disco, if any, will become the new "in" spot to whirl and be twirled will depend on whether the return to patterned and together tancing from the no-contact, free form, who-was-my-partner-anyway style born in the 1960's is just another fad.

It will also depend on whether Twin Falls high-steppers will be satisfied just to dance, or whether they need liquor to loosen their joints and exhilarations enough to get on the dance floor in the first place.

Both discos will have lights and music. Only the Count Down will serve liquor, and only beer and wine at that.

Davis said he is not worried that the Disco Dock will lose customers if no liquor is available. In fact he and Lewin never intended to serve liquor. He said the Disco Dock will be for dancers 16 years or older who want to go to a place and dance but don't want to put up with the atmosphere of a bar.

Which is exactly the opposite of the attitude held by Havin, who tried to get a full liquor license, found none available on what he called the "black market" for liquor licenses in Twin Falls, and had to settle for beer and wine.

Havin is opening a disco, he says, because disco dancing will attract people and enhance his bar business.

Havin is considering a cover charge of $2 per person and $3 per couple at the Count Down compared to $2.50 or $3 per person at the Disco Dock, but he expects to make his money at the bar.

"Our primary purpose is to sell beer and wine because that's what we have to sell," he said.

Carol Fox, general manager of Elevation 6,000 in Ketchum, which boasts Club Dominique disco, believes liquor is an essential part of a successful disco.

Club Dominique (cover charge, $1), which has become Ketchum's most popular dance spot in its two years of existence, would not exist were it not for its bar, because "that's where we make our money," Fox said.

On the other hand, a no-liquor disco might make it on the patronage of kids too young to go where liquor is sold.

Allen Hunt, owner of Burley's only disco, the Power Playhouse (cover charge, $1) says his disco draws an average of 50 to 70 kids per night without liquor. The best night his disco has had in its two months of operation saw 170 boppers wriggle onto his 25-foot-by-35-foot dance floor. And the Power Playhouse doesn't even have fancy synchronized lights.

The disco atmosphere is created by the music and lights synchronized to the music.

The Disco Dock may hold the edge over the Count Down in the lighting department.

Havin has sunk $5,500 into a sound system for the Count Down, and several thousand more dollars into chaser lights, spot lights, and other electronic wizardry calculated to induce disco madness, and thirst.

But the Disco Dock, according to Davis, is pouring $6,000 into a sound system and another $20,000 into a 16-foot-by-25-foot—lighted, pheroglass dance floor (almost an exact copy of the one Travolta danced to stardom on in Saturday Night Fever), plus overhead strobe lights, police lights, spinning cluster lights, and a computer system to synchronize the scene to the sound.

But the advantage the Disco Dock may enjoy due to superior disco atmosphere may be undermined by the young crowd it expects because of its no-liquor approach.

Will older prancers be willing to tolerate teenage antics for the chance to strut their stuff? Is there anyone less tolerant of teenage behavior than those who were recently teenagers?

The Disco Dock also plans the daring step of instituting a dress code. Would-be Nureyevs wearing frayed or dirty levis, tennis shoes, tank tops, football jerseys and the like will not be allowed in the Disco Dock.

Will a dress code be accepted in the basically casual social atmosphere of Twin Falls?

Fox says it works at Club Dominique, which "sort of discourages" levis and hiking boots during the winter season.

Club Dominique, with its stainless steel dance floor and floor-to-ceiling mirrors, cultivates the image of being a place where people can "gussy up and get loose" in Fox's words, and she says the idea is catching on in outdoor chic, image-conscious Ketchum.

Will Twin Falls dancers "gussy up and get loose" at the Disco Dock or the Count Down?

Now that the new Rock Creek Restaurant (formerly the Outlaw) has decided dancing is out, Turf Club owner Leo Soran has denied rumors that disco fever may break out in his establishment, and an unidentified man interested in opening a disco in the old Homeguard Systems building on Kimberly Road has reportedly abandoned his plans. Those dying to learn the hustle, travolta, the latin line dance, the Jason, the tango-hustle or other new dances have only two options.

Havin said he will try and open the Count Down between June 15 and July 1, and Davis said the Disco Dock is shooting for a July 1 opening date.

Havin wants to win the race to open first, "to create the initial impact, because there's nothing comparable to it right now" in this area, Davis says he doesn't care if he wins the race to open first.

Jeff Stoker would involve office in civic affairs

By GARY ELLIEN

TWIN FALLS — Republican Jeff Stoker, candidate for Twin Falls County prosecuting attorney, wants "to get" that office more involved in community affairs if he is elected.

"In the past, I think there has been a tendency not to be actively involved in community affairs," he said. "But I believe there are many benefits which the prosecuting attorney can provide to the general public."

Stoker, 31, received his law degree from the University of Idaho in 1974 after graduating from Brigham Young University in 1971. He has practiced criminal defense and personal injury law in Twin Falls since 1975.

Stoker is the only announced candidate for the position.

Incumbent Frank J. Dykes said Friday he hasn't made a decision whether to seek reelection.

Concerned about the "excessive" juvenile crime rate in the county, Stoker believes there should be more direct involvement of the prosecutor's office with parents, churches and schools.

Another area of priority to him is "consistency in dealing with criminal offenders."

"I feel there has to be more consistency not only in dealing with first time offenders, but in recommendations on sentencing of repeat offenders," Stoker said.

Stoker, who filed last Thursday for the $19,000 a year position, pledged to work to maintain an experienced staff in the prosecutor's office. He said the turnover rate for the attorneys on past staffs "according to him, three attorneys have come and gone in the last year" has been too high.

The prosecuting attorney's responsibilities include dealing with misdemeanor, felony, and child support cases. The prosecutor also handles all county cases and advises the county commissioners.

"I believe I have had adequate experience in these areas and feel I can make a contribution," he said.

Stoker and his wife, Rosemary, have two children, Melissa and Amanda.

Teton Dam disaster a year old

REXBURG (UPI) — Today is the second anniversary of the Teton Dam disaster that took 11 lives and caused $400 million worth of property damage.

It was about noon on Saturday, June 5, 1976, that a widening crack in the 308-foot, earth-fill, flood-control structure burst and spilled 80 billion gallons of water into the valley below.

Within minutes a wall of water inundated Sugar City — then flowed on to flood Rexburg, 15 miles to the south, and then to Teton Falls and Blackfoot before it finally dissipated three days later into "American Falls" Reservoir.

Since then, the federal government has paid millions of dollars in claims to flood victims and most of them have rebuilt their homes. Last Friday, the Interior Department announced plans to sell public land to people whose farms were damaged by the flood.

The replacement land, to be sold to qualifying farmers, formerly was in the Idaho National Energy Laboratory Reserve in Jefferson County.

Morocco troops replace French

KINSHASA, Zaire (UPI) — U.S. Air Force transports today ferried in what Western countries hope is the vanguard of an all-African peace-keeping force in Zaire — 1,500 Moroccan troops to replace departing French Foreign Legionnaires.

President Mobutu Sese Seko's regime was also bolstered by political support from a different direction — Chinese Foreign Minister Huang Hua.

"It is in adversity that one learns one's friends," Mobutu told Huang in Lubumbashi, the capital of the province formerly known as Katanga.

Bullets 117-82 win evens series

LANDOVER, Md. (UPI) — The opera, as Washington Bullet fans keep reminding everybody, wasn't over until the fat lady sings. Coach Dick Motta, who has popularized that cliché through the NBA playoffs, hopes he'll hear a favorable song Wednesday night.

The Sonics' biggest problems were shooting and rebounding. They shot just 30 percent in the first half and finished the game at only 34 percent — their worst performance in the series. Washington shot 45 percent.

The Sonics were within one, 32-31, with five minutes left, but the Bullets outscored them 15-4 on the way to a 12-point lead at halftime.

GETTING a helping hand is Washington's Bob Dandridge as he heads up the lane for a shot. Sonics Marvin Webster and Bruce Seale use their height and push-off advantage to stop the play.

UCLA coach mad over race call

EUGENE, Ore. (UPI) — Southern California won the 1978 NCAA Track and Field Championships but no one ever will be able to convince Jim Bush of arch-rival UCLA.

With a disappointing leap of 18-1 1/2, as was mad as his coach over the outcome of the meet.

The 100, while Ron St. Michel marks in winning heats of the steeplechase (8:18.63) and 5,000 (13:21.73) on Thursday, and Robert Roggy of Southern Illinois took the javelin mark to 230.0 and Scott Nelson of Washington the hammer to 227.5 on Friday.

Soccer player tested for dope

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — The world governing body of soccer, FIFA, surprised players and officials Sunday by announcing that Scottish World Cup wingman Willie Johnston had failed a doping test.

The said player will have to undergo a new check which will take place Monday morning.

Andy Bean wraps up Kemper win

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — Powerful Andy Bean made three birdies and an eagle over his first five holes Sunday and went on to finish with a 66 for a 72-hole total of 158-under-par 273 and a five-stroke victory in the Kemper Open.

Steve Meinyk finished alone at 9-under-par after a 70 while six golfers finished at 8-under, including Allen Pate, Coady, Armstrong, Hale Irwin, Dave Eichelberger and Ed Sneed.

Pate had won only $428 in 17 tournaments this year and needed to win just over $4,500 in the Kemper and next week's Memphis Open to keep his PGA playing card. He won $9,525 Sunday.

ATTEMPTING to get out of a bad situation is Arnold Palmer during the final round of the Kemper Open Golf Tournament. Palmer led the second round but dropped to a tie for seventh at the end.

Angels spoil Red Sox visit to sunny Anaheim

Life would be so easy for the Red Sox — if only Fenway Park had been built on wheels. But the old ballpark is firmly planted just off the Massachusetts Turnpike, and the Sox had to travel a few roads to get to Anaheim this weekend, arriving just in time to get shot down by Frank Tanana and the California Angels 4-2 Sunday.

"It's always nice to beat a team that's considered one of the best in baseball," said Tanana, who became the American League's first nine-game winner with a four-hitter over Cleveland. "I've always pitched well against Boston here, though." Ron Jackson and Ken Landreaux powered solo homers to back Tanana and give Jim Fregali his first victory as a manager. The win also snapped a seven-game losing streak for the Angels. Tanana struck out five and walked two to lift his record to 9-2 and become the second pitcher in the majors to win nine games. Ross Grimsley of Montreal was the first.

Brewers 12-9, Indians 7-4

Sixto Lezcano belted a three-run homer and Buck Martinez had four hits, powering Milwaukee over Cleveland in the nightcap. The Brewers won the opener behind a grand-slam homer by Dick Davis and homers by Larry Hale and Gorman. Rangers 9, Blue Jays 5. Al Oliver drove in four runs, Mike Hargrove drove in two and scored twice, and Juan Benitez hit a two-run homer to help Dock Ellis get the win.

ASU nine tops Oral Roberts in NCAA tournament

OMAHA (UPI) — Record-setting Bob Horner slugged a grand slam home run and knocked in what proved to be the winning run to lead Arizona State to a 7-6 victory over Oral Roberts Sunday in the second round of the 1978 College World Series.

In earlier games, North Carolina eliminated St. John's 9-5 and the University of Southern California trounced Michigan 11-3 in the double-elimination tournament.

Arizona State, 55-10, was to play the 51-9 Trojans Tuesday while Michigan, 30-16, was to meet North Carolina, 37-16, Monday in third-round action. Oral Roberts, 45-11, Monday was to play Miami of Florida, 48-11.

The Sun Devil victory broke Oral Roberts' 19-game winning streak. Horner's grand slam was his 25th home run of the year, the highest season total ever by a NCAA collegiate player. The five runs he batted in gave him nine for the series and propelled him to a season RBI record of 98.

Horner's sacrifice fly in the fourth inning scored Glenn Moon. After yielding five runs in the first inning, including a grand slam homer by Bill Sprigman, right-hander Milt Dean shutout Oral Roberts until the last inning.

In the other second-round game, USC sent 13 men to the plate and scored eight runs in the first inning to beat Michigan. Three Trojans — John Wells, Doug Stokke and Chris Smith — each collected two hits in the opening frame. Michigan starter Craig McGinnis gave up five runs and was knocked out of the box.

Israel delegates surprise meeting

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Delegates from Israel unexpectedly showed up in Bangkok for a special meeting of the Asian Games Federation Council set for Monday, throwing Arab delegates into an uproar.

Israel, which had earlier been denied participation in the Asian Games scheduled for December in Bangkok, insists on its right to take part in the event.

"We are here to insist on our rights to participate in the games," the English language newspaper The Nation quoted Israeli delegation leader Italm Glovinsky as saying. Saudi Arabian representative Othman Alsaad accused the Israelis of undermining the Asian Games.

"We are definitely going to participate in the Asian Games," Glovinsky said. Alsaad vowed, however, "if Israel participates in the next Asian Games, the seven Arab countries would not compete with the Israelis, that's for sure."

Asked about the Arab boycott threat, Glovinsky replied, "The Arab countries do not constitute a majority of participants anyway." Representatives from nine countries have already arrived for the Monday conference, which will have to address the subject of Israeli participation once again.

"This is a political movement. They just want to give the games more problems," Alsaad said. Glovinsky said the delegation was still a legitimate member of the federation and arrived despite not receiving an invitation. "Perhaps there was some mix-up in the mails," he smiled.

Waterskiers earn championships

LONG BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — World record holder Cindy Todd slid around 56 bouys in a tie-breaking runoff with Deena Brush to capture the women's slalom title Sunday at the International Water Ski Championships at Marine Stadium.

Todd of Plerson, Fla., and Brush of Sacramento, Calif., whipped through the bouys during the final run with 35 feet off the 75-foot towline. In the men's slalom division, world-record holder Kris LaPointe of Los Banos, Calif., zipped through 54 bouys with 38 feet off the 75-foot towline to rack up a first-place title.

Camille Duvall of Dallas soared 119 feet from the five-foot ramp to win the women's jump division while master jumper champion Bob LaPointe of Oakland, Calif., soared 167 feet from a six-foot ramp to take first place.

World Cup kickers rest

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — The most popular single event in international sport, the World Soccer Cup, took a break Sunday after three frantic days which produced 22 goals, two expulsions, the first hat-trick, a saved penalty shot and some stunning upsets.

goalkeeper Quiroga saved a second-half penalty by Don Masson. Scotland began to crumble. Cubillas scored from outside the penalty area with a thundering right foot shot, then applied the coup de grace from almost the same spot with a superb curving free-kick.

All 16 finalists have now played a game. Play restarts Tuesday after a two-day let-up to let injuries heal and tempers cool, and to allow coaches to rethink strategy.

The win gave Peru a very good chance of confounding the experts and reaching the second round. Scottish Coach Ally MacLeod said his team now would have to beat both Iran and Holland to qualify. "This is a very difficult task but not beyond us," he said.

With eight of 38 games on the slate already played, Argentina and Italy in Group 1, Tunisia leads Group 2, Austria Group 3 and Peru Group 4. The top two in each group qualify for the second round when first round play ends June 11.

Another sensation Saturday was the way the game ended between mighty Brazil, 9-4 favorite, and 40-1 Sweden. With the score at 1-1, Nelinho took a corner and Zico headed the goal. But referee Clive Thomas of Wales had already blown the whistle for fulltime, ruling that the 90-minute game-plus injury time had run out during the split second the ball was in flight 50 yards from the corner flag to the goalmouth.

The start of the competition was accompanied by the usual bizarre sidelights — like British pop star and soccer fan Rod Stewart dodging bullets during a robbery attempt at the Buenos Aires restaurant where he was dining.

Brazilian Coach Claudio Coutinho was angry. "I find it unbelievable, incredible," he said. "For me, it was a goal." Another upset Saturday saw Austria (66-1) defeat Spain (25-1) 2-1 largely because the underdogs took their chances.

Hundreds of millions of television viewers have so far looked vainly for a new Pele or a Franz Beckenbauer, but sports experts had little doubt men with checkbooks from the North American Soccer League would be descending on the elegant 35-year-old Peruvian Teofilo Cubillas, who orchestrated his country's shock 3-1 victory over Scotland Saturday.

The one predictable win Saturday was Holland's 3-0 victory over 500-1 longshot Iran in which Robbie Reisenbrink scored all three goals, two of them from the penalty spot. On Tuesday, Italy meets Hungary and Argentina challenges France in Group 1. Group 2 games are Poland-Tunisia and Mexico-West Germany.

The Scots entered the competition rated 9-1 to take the Cup while Peru was a 50-1 outsider.

But after taking an early lead with a Joe Jordan goal, the Scots began to fade as Cubillas organized his quick and intelligent team into a series of lightning counter-thrusts.

Cesar Cueto got a first-half equalizer, then Peru's

In a recent independent test, over a thousand people looked at six unidentified 19" (diag.) color pictures. Side by side. They were asked to pick the best overall color picture. The Sylvania Superset was picked #1. It beat RCA, Zenith, Sony, G.E., and Sears. Then in a separate test of 25" (diag.) pictures, the Sylvania Superset sat side by side with Zenith, RCA, Magnavox, Quasar and Sears. Once again, the Sylvania Superset was picked #1. And now Sylvania is already telling everybody about their two big successes with exciting commercials running coast to coast on all 3 networks. And with a big print advertising campaign appearing in top-consumer magazines.

This year it's been estimated that over 9,000,000 color TV's will be purchased. What do you think is going to persuade these millions of potential buyers? Well, Sylvania has two success stories that are going to be hard to beat. So, if you're presently a Sylvania dealer, then you already know what the Superset has been doing for you. But if you're not, don't you at least owe it to yourself to find out more about the Sylvania line?

DETECTIVE FITZPATRICK USES COMPUTER TO FIND CRIMINALS... he shows how victim can describe suspect, crime in St. Louis County

Computer helps detective

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Sherlock Holmes used his powers of deduction to make everything elementary. Hercule Poirot relied on his little gray cells. Sgt. Michael Fitzpatrick has his computer.

The computer file has fingerprints, color mug shots and descriptions of thousands of known criminals in St. Louis County, cross-indexed by features ranging from physical characteristics down to scars, nicknames and their usual area of operation.

The system, paid for by federal funds and in operation since the first of the year, allows Fitzpatrick to go through the crime file in minutes, discarding all possible suspects who do not fit a description provided by a victim or witness.

When the possibilities are down to a manageable number, officers working on the case can concentrate their efforts where they will do the most good, rather than having to work the scene of the crime, pulling "mug shots" out of their pockets to help find the criminal.

"The purpose of the system is to identify the unknown," said Fitzpatrick, a white-haired 17-year police veteran who says the computer is "like a dream" in working through the maze of possible suspects.

"We're just trying to move into the 20th century," Fitzpatrick said of the system that could serve as a model nationwide.

The computer has helped solve 31 crimes since it went into operation, but it could be used more often if more members of the county police department were willing to give it a chance.

"You have to see it in operation to appreciate it," Fitzpatrick said during a demonstration.

"You can hear or read about it, but that doesn't show you what the system can do."

Sifting through 14,000 arrest records in the computer, he demonstrated how the system works. If the suspect were a white male, he said, punching the code on a keyboard, half the computer file would be eliminated, reducing the number to 7,000.

Height between 5-foot-9 and 6-foot left out more, making the number 4,072. If a criminal weighs between 180 and 200 pounds, only 693 possibilities fit, and if he has medium-length hair, only 173 suspects match the description.

If a sharp-eyed victim or witness noticed the hair was dark brown and parted on the right, the possibilities were down to seven — an easy number for investigators to handle.

Of course, the computer can't solve the crime by itself. It has to rely on two major factors — reliability of the description and the chance the criminal has a prior arrest record. Fitzpatrick acknowledged the limitations.

"It's not a miracle machine," he said. "We're not going to solve every single crime that occurs. I'd like to say we could, but let's be realistic. We'll solve about 10 percent of the crimes we handle."

Public wins round

Piccadilly Circus redone

PICCADILLY CIRCUS, LONDON'S MOST FAMOUS INTERSECTION

... gets new look as construction crews begin face lift

By GREGORY JENSEN
LONDON (UPI) — Construction is finally under way to give a face lift to Piccadilly Circus, and that means the public has won at last.

Changes are coming to London's most famous intersection. Some already have begun.

"But all the big changes in the Circus which were thought about won't be happening now," said Martin Stearnman, the former chief Piccadilly planner.

It took 74 years of battle between public opinion and public planners to reach the point where, today, one side of Piccadilly Circus is a gaping hole lanced by a building crane. An additional building is waiting in scaffolding. An even bigger remodeling job is due to start this spring.

But the Piccadilly Circus of tomorrow, said Jack Chambers, the current planning officer, "will look very much like the Piccadilly Circus of today."

Some traffic will be rerouted to bypass the Circus. Individual buildings will be rebuilt — like the Monico site where work has begun — or remodeled. But their size and shape will remain as before.

"The changes are being made piecemeal," Chambers said. "We're treating Piccadilly Circus as we do everything else."

"That's quite a switch. Piccadilly Circus is perhaps the most planned area on earth, though to a stranger it might seem perverse that Londoners resisted every effort to make something sparkling out of it."

True, it is the city's focal point. Piccadilly is a place to celebrate the end of a war, the birth of a future king, a big soccer match. Soho starts here, and theaters and top shops and cinemas cluster on all sides.

The statue, in the center, misnamed "Eros," is a favorite place for tourists to sit amid the famous neon advertising signs, and watch the cars go by — even though they risk life and limb by dashing through traffic to get there.

But this chaotic, roughly triangular intersection once known as "The Top of the Empire" had gotten distinctly sleazy. Seven streets collide here, and they choke it with the noise and fumes of 55,000 vehicles daily. Decay was evident everywhere. Neon no longer concealed the grime.

Planner-after-planner-schemed-to-sort-out-the-mess. Developers by the dozen dreamed of converting its potentially golden real estate into scintillating plazas, ranks of skyscrapers, split-level urban dreams.

At least 77 separate development plans were proposed. Londoners shouted down every one.

The outcome, says the magazine "Architectural Journal," means that Piccadilly Circus will be "a spectacular example of underdevelopment." But Londoners want it that way, and public opinion has triumphed over public planners.

The biggest rebuilding job still to come will transform the Criterion site, which holds the subway station entrance and the Criterion theater.

Its owners submitted 41 complete redevelopment plans over the years. The 42nd, which was approved, will create an arched colonnade along one side of the Circus, a covered walkway opening onto shops.
