

Proposition 13 passes by landslide

HOWARD JARVIS, PROPOSITION 13 CO-SPONSOR ... victory gesture after casting vote in California

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Californians have told pollsters in no uncertain terms that property taxes and government spending must be reduced. Voters by nearly a 2-1 margin approved an amendment to the state constitution that promised property tax cuts of 60 percent as well as restraints on future increases. With their action, voters slashed $7 billion from the revenue communities will have to finance public services such as education, fire and police protection. The message was read quickly in California and elsewhere. "The people have spoken very clearly," said Gov. Edmund Brown Jr., who had opposed the measure. "There will be no new state taxes and we must put a lid on government spending." President Carter, before most Californians were out of bed, discussed the outcome with congressional leaders at a White House breakfast. House Speaker Thomas O'Neill said California's approval of the Proposition 13 may influence upcoming voting in the House on multi-billion dollar budgets for government agencies. The measure, said assistant House Democratic leader John Brademas after the White House session, "only reinforced the desire of President Carter and a number of others of us in Congress that we must have a major tax revision bill this year."

The National Taxpayers Union said the California result would be an example for similar moves in 26 other states to cut taxes or government spending. The battle over the measure now almost certainly moves from the polling places to the court dockets, as legal challenges are mounted. Proposition 8, which would have triggered a more modest tax relief measure supported by Brown and the Legislature, trailed 53 percent. With more than 90 percent of the returns counted, Proposition 13 was winning by a 65 to 34 percent margin. The vote provides "momentum needed to pass similar tax proposals across the country," said Rep. Philip Crane, R-Ill., a leader of conservatives in the House. Jerry Wurf, president of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, called the outcome the "natural reaction" to an "intolerable property tax burden" made worse because the wealthy and corporations did not pay their share. Howard Jarvis, 75, co-author of the measure, declared: "I thought it would be a landslide all the time." He characterized the state as divided into two groups, motivated by fear. "The public officials who have lush jobs fear they will lose them," Jarvis said. "The other fear is that of the homeowners who feared they would lose their homes to

California vote impact on Idaho 1% initiative expected in next few days

By LONNIE ROSENWALD Times-News writer TWIN FALLS — The landslide victory of Proposition 13 in California came as "no surprise to anyone," says Gov. John Evans. Evans, interviewed in a telephone conversation from Boise late Tuesday night, said the next few days will tell what effect the California vote will have on the petition drive for Idaho's own version of that law, the 1 percent initiative. Idaho's 1 percent is a statutory initiative similar to Proposition 13 which is an amendment to the California constitution. Like Proposition 13, the Idaho initiative would limit property taxes to 1 percent of assessed value. Idahoans will be watching closely the effects of Proposition 13 in California, Evans predicted. "I don't think the people of California even recognize the seriousness of their circumstances created by passing Proposition 13," Evans said. California opponents of 13 say there will be fiscal chaos, including heavy personnel and budget cuts in police, fire, and schools, when the initiative takes effect. Proponents of Idaho's 1 percent initiative think the California vote will help 1 percent initiative get on the November ballot. Cal Williams, vice president of the Idaho Property Owners Association, which is circulating petitions for 1 percent, said on channel 7 TV news in Boise this morning 1 percent is just 6,000 or 7,000 signatures short of the 25,964 needed to get it on the November ballot. Don Chance, president of the IPOA, says Monday's vote will have a favorable impact in Idaho if the 1 percent initiative gets on the ballot. The significance of the California vote, says Jerome County Taxpayers Association president Jack Adams, is that "the people find out they're not alone." Connie Cunningham, also of the taxpayers association, says 1 percent is "going fantastically," and that in Jerome County at least, "there are not many people who don't wish to sign" petitions endorsing the initiative. The California vote "has raised the awareness of the people in Idaho that there is an initiative here," agreed Floyd Decker of the Association of Idaho Cities. Chuck Holden, also of the IAC, hopes Idaho voters will not be influenced by what they see in California. "What works in California doesn't necessarily fit Idaho laws," Holden said. He expects proponents to beef up their program of setting up information tables in shopping centers following the California vote. "They're waiting to see what the outcome in California is," Holden said Tuesday. Other officials throughout the state reacted to the passage of Proposition 13 by saying Idahoans should be wary of applying California solutions to Idaho problems. Max Yost of the Association of Idaho Taxpayers said the victory of Proposition 13 might change the Idaho voters' opinions, but Yost warns 1 percent would have a different impact than the California initiative. Although both pieces of legislation were written in the same language, Proposition 13 is a constitutional amendment, while 1 percent is a statutory initiative, and "will have to be amended because it's totally inoperative," Yost said. "Not only does 1 percent conflict with other Idaho statutes, but it may conflict with the state constitution," said Yost. "Let's look at it from the point of Idaho needs," said Chuck Holden, research analyst at the Idaho Association of Counties. Officials agree that the California vote might be an indication of how Idaho taxpayers will vote in November, but cautioned that Idaho's tax problems are different than California's. "California has a higher sales tax and a higher property tax," said Yost. "They are reasonably close on income tax," he added. Roy Truby, superintendent of public instruction in Idaho, estimated 1 percent could cut as much as one-fourth of the school budget of more than $200 million. "We do not have that kind of fat in our public school fund that we can afford to take a quarter out of it," Truby said. (Continued on p. A2)

CAL WILLIAMS ... predicts success

Taxpayer dissatisfaction expected to spread

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The American revolution did not begin at Concord Bridge. That was merely a piece of unpleasantness the authorities couldn't ignore. The same could be said of California's Proposition 13. Congress already knew there was taxpayer dissatisfaction, but Proposition 13 is a bit of unpleasantness Washington cannot ignore. And just as the "shot heard 'round the world" was not an isolated incident, neither is Proposition 13 expected to be a one-time occurrence. A number of congressmen, from western states in particular, expect similar movements in their states. House Republican leader John Rhodes, for example, "predicts a property tax initiative in his home state of Arizona. In practical terms, the immediate effect in Congress of the California vote will be negligible. The property tax is a local tax over which Congress has no control or responsibility. At the same time, the public has no direct control over the taxes that Congress handles — the income tax, Social Security taxes, customs levies and the like. The voters can always vote individual congressmen out of office, but there is no method to force a national vote over taxes. Also, a property tax revolt is basically a middle class issue, and if successful is likely to satisfy the one group of voters who might stage any national taxpayer revolt. But it is not a national revolt that worries congressmen. Those footsteps that follow lawmakers through the political graveyard are basically these: Will we be forced to bail out the states? And if so, where will we get the money? Even before there was a Proposition 13 there were moves to return federal tax money to local governments. Revenue sharing itself was a recognition of the growing pressures to bail out states and cities. In recent years proposals have been

Ideas proposed to stem housing cost increases

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Escalating costs for buying or even renting a house are threatening to turn the traditional American dream of home ownership into a nightmare, Housing Secretary Patricia Roberts Harris said today. Mrs. Harris released a 106-page study by a special task force on housing costs which outlined the problems besetting "too many Americans." By March 1978, she said, the median price for a new single family home had reached $53,700, compared with $22,000 in 1972. At a follow-up news conference, Mrs. Harris said, "The young who are purchasing their first houses, the elderly who live on fixed incomes, and those who have very limited savings, the dream has turned into a nightmare." The task force, under the direction of HUD official William J. White, made more than 150 recommendations for changes in existing laws and regulations to help help stem the housing cost increases in such areas as development and construction costs plus national, state and local monetary and tax policies. One recommendation — to partially or totally withhold funds for urban development, known as Community Development Block Grants, from communities which fail to meet site-development standards developed by HUD — was rejected by Mrs.

PATRICIA HARRIS ... dream going sour

Since 1972, the task force said, "Housing costs increased dramatically, outpacing family incomes for the first time and effectively pricing countless families out of the housing market." "In fact," said Mrs. Harris, "between 1972 and 1976 the price for a new single family home increased almost twice as fast as incomes and prices in general." Mrs. Harris said she had ordered that departmental assistant secretaries study the 150 task force recommendations and report within 10 days on which ones should be implemented. "Beginning today," she added, "we will make every effort to see that the debate on these issues is joined at the state and local levels which must be the origin of many of the solutions." White recently told a housing industry meeting that the task force recommendations would stress the "immediate implementation of a nationwide housing cost reduction program." Other HUD officials have recently suggested that the recommendations will center on a three-fold strategy: the cyclical, up and down, nature of housing production, the cost of restrictive regulation, including sewer, water and environmental regulations, and "the cost of indifference." Mrs. Harris created the White task force (Continued on p. A2)

Carter seeks balance

WASHINGTON — President Carter's speech at Annapolis today sought to bring balance to the increasingly controversial U.S. relationship with the Soviet Union, but it did not chart any new territory for U.S. policy. The speech developed out of controversy among presidential advisers over the correct response to Soviet pressure, particularly in Africa. While seeking to reassure the public by seeming to end this controversy, Carter did not resolve it. The speech to the U.S. Naval Academy ranged widely over U.S.-Soviet relations. Quotations could be found in it to support either a hard-line interpretation of Carter's attitude or a more conciliatory one. Carter called for a public mood that avoided either euphoria or despair about worldwide competition with the Soviet Union, either "an exaggerated sense of compatibility (or) open expressions of hostility." By implying that the present public attitude toward Moscow is an excessive swing, however, the president avoided coming to grips with what some senior officials think is a basic and major shift in the American perception of a Soviet challenge. This attitude is hardening as a result of a spreading awareness of the massive Soviet military build-up that began in the early 1960s and a concern fanned by some administration officials over the way that growing power is being projected around the world — particularly in Africa. Carter referred to the Soviet military build-up. "The Soviet Union apparently sees military power — and military assistance as the best means of expanding their influence abroad," he said. "We have met the enemy and he is us."

political advantage and increased influence in a variety of ways." How the United States will counter these Kremlin attitudes was not specified. What Carter called for was U.S. steadfastness and determination to speed throughout the world, as well as regional cooperation in areas like Africa. Carter repeated a basic theme that he and previous presidents have voiced by calling for restraint on both sides of the Soviet-American competition. But the question of how to get the Soviets to exercise restraint in such tempting situations as Africa continues to present was left unanswered. Instead, Carter warned that "a competition without restraint and without shared rules will escalate into graver tensions, and our relationship as a whole will suffer." The speech came at a time when Soviet actions have caused some alarm here.

Surprises mark nation's primaries Tuesday

By United Press International
California, rising up against the high cost of government, gave landslide approval Tuesday to tax-slashing Proposition 13.

New Jersey Republicans took a sharp turn to the right and toppled liberal Sen. Clifford Case.

Case, a pillar of the eastern GOP establishment, was cut down by Jeffrey Bell, a former campaign strategist for Ronald Reagan less than half his age.

Bill Bradley, a former New York Knicks basketball star, won the Democratic primary, setting up a liberal-conservative confrontation that will be one of the big attractions of the November general elections.

There were a number of other surprises in the primaries in eight states, but the attention was on the tax referendum in California which some viewed as the first telling volley of the long-predicted, national taxpayers revolt.

The measure would restrict property taxes to 1 percent of 1975 valuations and freeze future increases to 2 percent a year. It would cut the property tax revenues of California localities from $10 billion to $3 billion and provide no other means to finance government services.

The tax initiative was placed on the ballot by a pollster drive led by political gadfly Howard Jarvis and real estate operator Paul McCann. Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. and the legislature tried to sidetrack Proposition 13 with a more modest counterproposal, but the voters weren't buying.

Although the referendum was a defeat for Brown, he had no trouble winning nomination for a second four-year term.

In the state's four-way Republican gubernatorial primary, Attorney General Evelle Younger led former Los Angeles police chief Ed Davis, Assemblyman Ken Maddox and San Diego Mayor Pete Wilson.

Montana - also - retired - an incumbent senator, but it was no surprise. Rep. Max Baucus, as predicted, beat Sen. Paul Hatfield in the Democratic primary for the seat Hatfield had been filling by appointment since the death last year of Lee Metcalf. Larry Williams won the GOP nomination to oppose Baucus.

Case, 74, had been expected to win nomination and seek his fourth six-year term, but the 71-year-old Bell, backed by Mississippians all over the country, mounted a vigorous, well-financed campaign. Had he been re-elected, Case would have been the second ranking Republican in the Senate.

Case's loss brightened the prospects for Bradley, a Rhodes scholar as well as a famous athlete, who beat former state treasurer Richard Leone for the Democratic nomination.

Case had irritated the Republican right-wing for years, but once he got past the GOP primary, the backing of organized labor made him invulnerable in the general election. That arrangement probably ended with Case's defeat.

Bell's New Jersey feat was the stunner of the biggest primary day of the year, but it wasn't the only victory for the GOP right.

In Iowa, former Lt. Gov. Roger Jepsen, a staunch conservative, beat Maurice Van Nostrand, a moderate Republican with the backing of Gov. Robert Ray, for the nomination to oppose Democratic Sen. Dick Clark. Ray won re-nomination to seek a fifth term; state House Democratic leader Jerome Fitzgerald will oppose him.

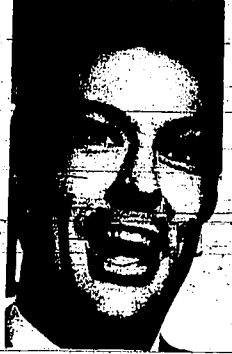

Mississippi also provided a surprise. Maurice Dantin came out of a field of seven candidates to lead for the Democratic nomination to succeed retiring Sen. James Eastland. Dantin will face Gov. Cliff Finch, the primary favorite, in a runoff June 27. Rep. Thad Cochran won the GOP Senate nomination.

In other primary results: Ohio - Republican Gov. James Rhodes won re-nomination without breaking a sweat; Lt. Gov. Richard F. Celeste won the Democratic nomination to oppose him. Former Rep. Wayne Hays won the Democratic nomination for a state legislature seat.

South Dakota - Rep. Larry Pressler won the Republican nomination for reelection, defeating Lt. Gov. Harvey Wollman, who will serve as acting governor this summer when Gov. Robert K. Knip leaves to be ambassador to Singapore.

New Mexico - Former Gov. Bruce King won the Republican nomination to succeed Gov. Jerry Apodaca. He will be opposed by former state Sen. Joe Sreen, the 1974 GOP candidate. Republican Sen. Pete Domenici and his Democratic opponent, Attorney General Tony Anaya, had no primary opposition.

Primary winners

Housing remedies offered

over a year ago and last July it made an interim report with some 60 recommendations for housing cost reductions including an attack on excess regulation at all levels of government, mechanisms for mitigating the sharp fluctuations in housing production and the adaptation and encouragement of new techniques in building technologies, land development and financing.

Tax revolt tremor felt

The vote ended a wild campaign in which opponents predicted widespread layoffs of teachers, firefighters, police, and closing of schools, libraries and parks and even snuffing street lights.

"Don't let the politicians scare you."

countered the pro-Jarvis forces in their broadcast ads.

It was that broad anti-government sentiment that Jarvis and realtor Paul Gann translated into votes for their ballot initiative that had been tried in other forms, including one backed by former Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Idaho impact awaited

Idaho already has the lowest per pupil expenditure in the nation, according to 1977-1978 figures. The state spent only $1,193 per student in elementary and secondary schools last year, compared to an average nationwide expenditure of $1,742.

Truby thinks passage of Proposition 13 will give some momentum to 1 percent, but he said Idaho tax levels have never reached anywhere near California levels.

"Holden said property taxes are unpopular, and the Idaho legislature, as well as other states, will have to tackle this concern."

Holden thinks that even if 1 percent loses here, "there are going to be revisions in the legislature."

House tax proposal ready

WASHINGTON - After weeks of negotiations, a majority of the House Ways and Means Committee has agreed privately to a compromise $15 billion tax package that runs diametrically opposite to that proposed by President Carter. The Chicago Sun-Times has learned.

Instead of closing so-called tax loopholes, the plan would reopen old ones by substantially cutting taxes on profits from the sale of real estate, stock and other capital assets.

What's more, with an eye toward California's tax revolt, politically-sensitive lawmakers have agreed to reshape proposed income tax cuts to benefit middle and upper income taxpayers more heavily. Whereas Carter's plan was skewed in favor of families earning less than $20,000, the committee compromise would direct two-thirds of its relief toward families earning between $15,000 and $50,000. Rep. James Jones, D-Okla., who worked three weeks to put together the package, said that the votes now are there to approve it when Ways and Means resumes deliberation Thursday. That's assuming, however, that the shaky coalition of moderate and conservative Democrats and Republicans can be held together in the face of tempting amendments designed by opponents to unravel the accord.

Key provisions of the compromise tax package, which is more than $4 billion below Carter's scaled-down $19.4 billion request, include:

- A $10 billion reduction in individual income taxes designed to give every taxpayer at least a 6 percent cut in his tax bill. This would be achieved by increasing the existing $750 personal exemption to $1,000 and by lowering tax rates.

- A $1.1 billion reduction in capital gains taxes. The top tax on profits from the sale of stock, real estate and other assets would effectively be lowered from 49 percent to 35 percent. At the same time, the current 25 percent maximum rate on the first $50,000 of gains would be repealed.

- A $5 billion cut in business taxes. Corporate tax rates, which now range from a minimum of 20 percent to a maximum of 48 percent, would be reduced 2 percentage points. Also, the amount of earnings exempt from the maximum rate would be increased from the current $50,000 to $75,000. In addition, the 10 percent investment tax credit would be made permanent and gradually liberalized so that a firm could use it to wipe out as much as 90 percent of tax liability. Now, investment credits generally can't be used to negate more than half of income taxes owed.

- Repeat of existing individual deductions for state and local sales, gasoline and personal property taxes.

Amtrak completes year of service

BOISE (UPI) - Amtrak quietly observed the first anniversary of its experimental rail passenger service to southern Idaho today.

Began a year ago today with great fanfare, the run between Salt Lake City and Seattle brought passenger service to Pocatello, Boise and other southern Idaho cities for the first time since 1971.

Part of a two-year experiment authorized by the Congress, the Pioneer train travels some of the same rails that carried the famed Portland Rose and City of Portland trains during the heyday of Union Pacific Railroad.

But its future appears to be in doubt. The Interstate Commerce Commission soon will conduct a series of public hearings in 38 cities, including Boise on July 6, on a recommendation to reroute Amtrak rail passenger service.

And a U.S. Department of Transportation study concludes the Pioneer route should be discontinued even though local and regional officials of the agency claim use of it is piking up.

When the route was begun last year, Idaho officials complained about the hours. The eastbound Pioneer train stops at Boise shortly before midnight while the westbound train to Portland arrives early in the morning.

Despite these hours, however, some believe use of the train by Idahoans has been good. Steve Leroy, press secretary to Gov. John Evans, said introduction of a sleeper car for passengers traveling a long distance has enhanced it.

It is disturbing to the governor that they are talking about discontinuing even before the two-year trial program is finished and his intent is to submit testimony supporting continued service in Idaho, Leroy said.

Sen. Frank Church also calls the decision to terminate Amtrak "premature." He said "it is much too soon to sound the death knell for the Pioneer."

New American Falls unit on line

AMERICAN FALLS (UPI) - Idaho Power Co. said Tuesday the second generating unit at the new American Falls powerhouse has gone on line.

The unit's initial production came a little more than two months after startup of the first generator in the firm's new facility, built in conjunction with reconstruction of American Falls Dam by the President's Council on Environmental Quality.

W.D. Arms, Idaho Power vice-president for engineering, said the third and final generator is scheduled to go into service about July 15.

"The additional capacity at American Falls will help to supply our loads that we expect will continue to increase because of customer growth," he said. He added that Idaho Power provided service to some 11,000 new customers in the 22 months ended April 30. Of that total, more than 9,300 were residential customers.

The new powerhouse, estimated to cost $44.8 million, will have a peak capability of about 100,000 kilowatts.

Arms said the new plant's capability will only be available during months when large amounts of water are being released from the reservoir, though, primarily for downstream irrigation.

"American Falls is one of four projects the firm has under construction. Others are a fifth generating unit at Brownlee Dam, a fourth generating unit at the Jim Bridger coal-fired plant in which Idaho Power will have a one-third interest, and the Boardman coal-fired plant in Oregon in which it will have a 10 percent interest."

Protest by Tokyo

TOKYO (UPI) - The Japanese government has officially protested large-scale Soviet military maneuvers currently taking place in disputed waters just north of Japan, sources in the defense agency said today.

The protest against the air, land and sea maneuvers around the four southern islands of the Kuriles chain, off Japan's northern island of Hokkaido, was delivered to the Soviet government by the Japanese Embassy in Moscow, the sources said.

The islands' Japanese names are Etorofu, Shikotan, Habomai and Kunashiri and their ownership is disputed by the Soviet and Japanese governments. The Soviet Union has occupied them since the end of World War II.

Defense agency sources said the exercises involve Soviet air, sea and land units and are the largest ever conducted around the southern Kuriles.

Spy agency budgets hidden but approved

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Despite warnings about issuing a blank check, the House has approved budgets for all U.S. foreign intelligence agencies, including the CIA, with most members not knowing how much money is involved or what it will be used for.

The budgets were approved, 323-43, after Rep. James Johnson, R-Colo., warned that "members who vote the bill are granting a blank check to spend a lot of money by people who in the past have not warranted that kind of trust."

"I think we are reverting to the old days, when the CIA was given a blank check," Johnson said.

The amounts authorized were classified, except for $87 million earmarked for the intelligence community staff and $1.2 million for external research and analysis projects.

Rep. John F. Selberling, D-Ohio, was applauded by colleagues when he said, "Since the authorization is blank, I intend to vote blank. I simply intend to vote present, and I recommend you all do too."

But Rep. Bill D. Buntline, D-Mo., insisted the budget secrecy was necessary because "if the enemy knows what our plans are, it virtually destroys our intelligence programs."

"We have not been a rubber stamp for the intelligence agencies," Buntline said, adding that the classified documents available to members "had specific amounts of money and some details of operations" in it.

And Rep. Edward P. Boland, D-Mass., noted that only eight of the 435 House members bothered to check the classified information during the three days they were made available.

Johnson said, however, he found the documents "absolutely useless" because they referred to acronyms that "tell us absolutely nothing about what the intelligence community is doing."

He said the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence which approved the bill "has the responsibility for any kind of renunciation of activities of the past" by the intelligence community.

Besides the CIA, the legislation authorized funds for the Pentagon, State Department, Defense Intelligence Agency, National Security Agency, Treasury Department, Energy Department, the FBI, and the Drug Enforcement Administration.

Rep. Sam Stratton, D-N.Y., bitter about recent "indiscriminate mass firings of many qualified, highly dedicated" CIA agents, opposed granting the additional 71 agents provided by CIA Director, Stansfeld Turner, in the legislation.

"It's a case of empire building. Why should he fire some 200 or 300 people, dedicated people, highly qualified, and then ask for more?" Stratton asked.

"I have a number of friends who have been CIA people, and they tell me the firing of those 200 or 300 people rocked the agency from the top to bottom," Stratton said.

Limited support for water plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The eighth major national review of water policy in 30 years was greeted by limited applause from politicians backing costly public works projects and environmentalists who oppose the projects as "pork barrels."

President Carter, in his water policy which was announced Tuesday, stressed the need for conservation but said he would ask Congress interests this week for money to start some new projects.

Carter also proposed legislation which would force states for the first time to contribute up to 10 percent of the money needed for the multi-million dollar projects.

"The policy is a good, workable compromise," said Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., chairman of the House Interior Committee. "It has the proper emphasis on conservation without hamstringing Western water development where needed."

Sen. Jennings Randolph, D-W.Va., chairman of the Senate Environment Committee, praised the "general thrust" of Carter's program as "the realization that our water supplies are not limitless," and said it must now be translated into a workable program flexible enough to meet national needs.

Conservationists, such as Edward Oann of the National Wildlife Federation, praised the president for "clearly attempting to reorient the Army Corps of Engineers and other federal water development agencies toward more constructive pursuits."

But he said "the strongest constituency for the unreformed and rapacious water development policies of the past, however, is the U.S. Congress."

Brent Blackwelder of the Environmental Policy Center said the real test of Carter's policy will come next week, when a House Appropriations Committee public works bill goes to the House floor for a vote.

Oann said the committee "is apparently seeking a major confrontation with the president on water policy issues" because it has funded $21 million worth of projects which Carter, at the urging of conservationists, sought to kill last year. In addition, the committee has added 41 new project starts, many of which could never meet Carter's new criteria of having broad economic benefits, protecting the environment and conserving water, said Blackwelder.

The policy drew only limited praise from Utah's Gov. Scott Matheson, who headed a group of governors consulting with Interior Department officials on the study.

"President Carter's recommendation for flexible state participation in the cost of federal water projects appears to move in the direction recommended by the nation's governors," he said.

But he told a Salt Lake City news conference, "I do not believe the president understands the nature of conservation of water in the dry western states. I do not think he even appreciates fully how this is the very essence of how we survive."

Kentuckians want Nixon

FRANKFORT, Ky. (UPI) — Selected Kentucky officials, including Democratic Gov. Julian Carroll, will be invited to former President Richard M. Nixon's dedication of a recreational complex named for him at Hyden, Ky., on July 2.

Leslie County Judge-Executive C. Allen Muncy said Tuesday that Carroll, Kentucky's U.S. senators and representatives, and other state officials will be invited to Nixon's appearance July 2.

"The invitations should be going out next week," Muncy said Tuesday in a telephone interview.

He said he planned to confer this week with members of the staff of Rep. Tim Lee-Carter, R-Ky., to work out details of the Nixon visit. Carter talked to Nixon in May and confirmed that the former president was coming to Kentucky.

An aide to Carter, Johanna Schrambling, said no one on Carter's staff had talked to Nixon since early last week, but she added there was no doubt in anyone's mind that Nixon would be attending.

Muncy does expect thousands of people to come to the tiny southeast Kentucky coal mining town.

Controls advised

WASHINGTON (UPI) — HEW Secretary Joseph Califano says Congress must tighten government control over the $15 billion-a-year drug industry.

He told a House health subcommittee Tuesday that President Carter's proposed bill to reform drug regulations will establish uniform regulations on "a bewildering array" of 70,000 prescription drug products and several hundred thousand over-the-counter items.

The subcommittee is studying the sweeping bill proposed by President Carter and introduced by subcommittee Chairman Paul Rogers, D-Fla., and Rep. Tim Lee Carter, R-Ky.

The pharmaceutical industry has protested a number of provisions in the proposed law.

"The Health, Education and Welfare secretary said there are major objections among many drug firms, but noted that the proposal would:

- Provide for early provisional approval of breakthrough drugs on the basis of significant evidence of effectiveness.

Testimony by Moon in probe unlikely

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House investigators suspect evangelist Sun Myung Moon will stay abroad to avoid testifying about reports the South Korean CIA used him and his followers to stage pro-Korean rallies in America and paid for such help.

Rep. Donald Fraser, D-Minn., head of a House International Relations subcommittee, said Tuesday the Korean leader of the Unification Church went to London May 13 — 10 days after the panel asked him to testify — and has sought a visa to stay in Britain two more months.

Subcommittee investigators, probing Korean intelligence activity in the United States, said later Moon left hurriedly and they were sure he left to evade a subpoena demanding his testimony at a hearing next Tuesday.

"If he's gone from the country, we don't really have a remedy," Fraser said.

However, a statement released by the church headquarters in New York denied that Moon was avoiding a subpoena.

The statement said Moon was in England "as part of a long-awaited European tour," and said he had been planning for some time "to shift his focus to an international level."

The unsuccessful attempt to question Moon was revealed after Fraser released a summary of classified U.S. intelligence reports that said the Korean CIA station chief in Washington arranged in 1974 to have Moon's group take part in a demonstration in front of the Japanese embassy and the White House.

The summary also said: "The KCIA had used Moon and members of his Unification Church to stage rallies (previously) in the United States in support of Korean government policies and aims, and on at least one occasion Moon received KCIA funds for that purpose."

Fraser said Moon's lawyer would not say why Moon left the country, when he may return, or whether he would cooperate in the investigation. Moon has repeatedly denied that he or his church had any ties to Korean intelligence.

Theisen Motors Pleads Guilty

Theisen Motors is again being accused of being unfair to competition. The current charge is that Theisen is giving away one of the finest 10 speed bicycles with each new Honda they sell. It is further charged that this is a particularly unfair practice because, the Gas Saving, front wheel drive with 4 speed transmission is an outstanding value even at regular price. In addition to giving bicycles away, Theisen Motors has also slashed the price to only $3488. To the above charge, Emmett Harrison says, "We are guilty". Theisen Motors has also been accused of being the easiest place in the world to buy a car. Harrison says, "Again we must plead guilt to the charge". Theisen Motors is also guilty of being the number 1 import car dealer in Magic Valley and because of this outstanding sales record,

The American Honda Motor company has recently shipped full line supply of Hondas. This assures the people of Magic Valley a terrific selection of the gas saving Honda, including the hard to get, extremely popular Honda Accord. There has been other accusations made regarding Theisen Motors' business practices. They are charged with having the finest service department, with the lowest prices in the country. Bill Roemer, Service Manager, says, "Guilty as Charged". Whitey Jones, customer relations manager was quick to endorse Bill's admission of guilt. Theisen Motors is also accused of having the finest stock of quality used cars in southern Idaho, and that the prices are unbelievably low. We confess guilt and we also offer the lowest possible bank financing.

... inspecting one of the more than eighty new Hondas now in stock at Theisen Motors. This beautiful Wildcat Red Hatchback model with 4 speed transmission and front wheel drive is being offered at the low price of $3488 and in addition you'll receive one of the finest 10 speed bicycles in a matching Wildcat red. Theisen Motors also offers low down payment with easy bank terms on these cars that helped make Theisen Motors the No. 1 Import Car Dealer in Magic Valley.

Honda Owners Praise Magic Valley's No. 1 Import

Many Civic CVCC owners tell us that after owning and driving their Honda they wonder why they didn't buy a small car long ago. The Honda Civic CVCC is just that kind of car. It's so easy to drive in city traffic, parking is so much simpler, and you can use any grade of gasoline in it. A Civic takes a lot of the aggravation out of today's urban driving. There are even a number of big downtown parking facilities that are starting to mark out certain parking stalls "for sub-compact cars only." That's a real set-up when you own a Honda Civic CVCC. But the Civic CVCC's saving virtues are only part of the story. Four wheel independent suspension with MacPherson struts (except on the wagon) help smooth out the ride and give the Honda Civic CVCC a wonderful feeling of positive control on the road. The Civic CVCC's have excellent driver visibility. There is no sloping "fastback" style to obstruct the driver's rear view, an important safety plus.

Harrison Says Thank You

TWIN FALLS — Emmett Harrison said yesterday he is extremely happy to have become the No. 1 import car dealer in Magic Valley. Mr. Harrison said he would like to express his appreciation to the people of Magic Valley for the confidence they have shown in Theisen Motors over the years. Harrison mentioned that in addition to the large stock of Lincoln-Mercury automobiles, they now have over 80 Honda Civic and Accord on hand. This is perhaps the best selection ever offered. "We are proud of our achievements and fully realize that it is the result of the outstanding efforts of our entire organization, sales, service, parts, etc."

Honda Plans To Be First in the U.S.A.

Honda is making provisions to become the first Japanese auto maker to assemble cars in the United States. In addition, the No. 1 import firm in Magic Valley, which is also No. 3 in the U.S. is said to be planning an all-new "sporty" model that may be introduced in this country within the next 18 months. Timing of the new model may hinge on the progress of the assembly plant in the U.S. according to reliable sources. They have suggested that establishment of a U.S. auto plant would not be economically feasible unless the facility could maintain a production level of about 20,000 cars per month. This would be no problem at all, if the rest of the country can establish a sales rate equal to Theisen Motors, the No. 1 Import dealer in Magic Valley. Honda is the most logical choice among the Big Three Japanese manufacturers to begin building cars in this country. Honda's automobile production in Japan is currently running at maximum capacity.

The spokesman said that plans for the automobile assembly plant call for an investment of at least $250 million by Honda. He said that the new plant would most likely involve Honda's volume model, the front drive Honda Civic. Honda's future plans also include introduction, this fall, of a new luxury four-door version of the extremely popular Accord. In addition it has been rumored for several years that Honda was developing a two-seat car that would be unique in appearance from the present Civic and Accord. Understandably, Honda officials have remained tight-lipped about this sporty new model. Some details on the sport model have been leaked. The new model is said to incorporate a notchback design with a short deck. In size, it will be somewhat shorter and wider than the Accord, which is Honda's largest model at present. The cars all-independent suspension, with MacPherson struts and front & rear stabilizers providing superior handling characteristics.

Great Lake ban great mistake

When good neighbors become embroiled in a spat, the relatively small nature of the argument usually points out the significance of the ties that have held them together for so long...

Such a circumstance seems to exist these days in the fishing dispute between the United States and Canada. Let's hope that like many such arguments between the two countries, this one is short-lived and an agreement can be reached that is fair to both sides.

It can be appreciated that a situation such as this makes big headlines, whereas it would make small news in the relationships of many less friendly neighbors throughout the world.

The spat started late last week when the Canadian government announced that it was imposing a ban on American fishing in the Canadian 200-mile territorial limit.

Under the terms of the interim agreement drafted last year, trawlers from either country could overlap into each other's territorial waters without official permission.

In going against the agreement, the Canadians should have guessed that the Americans would be prone to make some sort of counter-move, and that's exactly what happened.

That move by Washington was somewhat reasonable but what followed was idiotic. The Carter administration complicated the matter Saturday by extending the ban to include recreational fishing in the Great Lakes.

In this case, the action is the epitome of foolish consistency, and as Ralph Waldo Emerson said about such a circumstance, it "is the hobgoblin of little minds, adored by little statesmen and philosophers and divines."

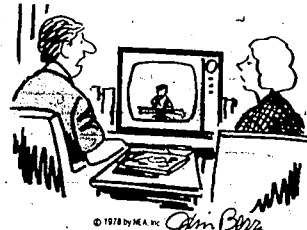

The person coming up with the idea of extending the fishing ban to the Great Lakes let the quest for consistency override all logic.

As one American fisherman said after receiving word of the ban: "Whenever they're bittin' here, we come over here. Whenever they're bittin' there, they come over there."

Learnie Clark, Ottawa's deputy chief negotiator for the interim fisheries agreement, made the point that commercial fishing on the Great Lakes is so insignificant that the Canadian government felt no need to mention it in the ban.

Fortunately, the Canadian government didn't act accordingly and Tuesday welcomed American sports fishermen on its side of the Great Lakes. The move (or, actually, the decision not to move) was not entirely a matter of good will.

Whether the underlying reasons for the decision be selfish ones or not, the fact that the Canadians didn't follow suit in this idiotic game of reciprocity can be cheered. It would be wise for the thinkers in Washington to follow suit and admit that they were wrong in imposing the ban in Great Lakes waters.

"For crying out loud! Can I help it if I'm a product of a decade overcome by apathy?"

Advice offered on marriage contracts

It's time for another column devoted to helping young men solve their romantic and marital problems. As I explained when I began offering this occasional service, many of today's young men are in need of mature, wise counseling if they are to avoid a lifetime of overbearing bills, lawnmowers, dope-ridden offspring and other distractions.

Today's problem comes from a young man who is planning on marrying soon, but he faces an increasingly common question among young people - whether to sign a marriage contract.

As he explained: "The girl I am going to marry wants us to have a separate contract spelling out how we share domestic duties, the raising of the children, and requiring mutual agreement on such things as where we will live, how we will spend our money, where we will go on vacations and so on."

"She has a better job than I have, and it has a better future; so she wants the contract to say that if we have children, the partner with the better income will work while the other one takes care of the home and kids."

"At first, I thought it was the fair thing to do because I had read about how a lot of couples are doing it. My girl showed me an article in Ms. magazine that told why marriage contracts are good, and I thought it made sense. But now I'm getting worried. I don't know much about legal matters. When I buy things, I usually don't bother to look at the fine print, or even the big print if the thing I'm buying looks OK."

"So how do I know what I'm gettin' into? I don't know if I could take care of a house and kids. I want to marry her, but don't even know enough about law to be sure if some of the things in the contract are for my benefit or hers. What do I do?"

The first thing you must do is try to avoid a contract. Give her a firm handshake and tell her: "Look, if you can't trust the man you're going to marry, who can you trust? Let's just shake on it like gentlemen."

But that probably won't work, since she wouldn't be asking you to sign a contract in the first place if she trusted you. In fact, if she really trusted you, she wouldn't be marrying you. She'd be content to just live together as modern best friends and roommates.

The question, then, is whether you want to agree to spend the rest of your life with someone who has so little faith in you that she would treat you like a customer who walked in off the street at a loan company.

If she is this suspicious already, what is she going to be like the first time you come home at 4 a.m. and explain to her that your car broke down and you were attacked by a gang of sadistic thugs who stole your money and spilled liquor on your clothes while making big marks on your neck? Or the second time it happens?

She will have the contract under your nose and scream that you are in violation of Paragraph 6, Clause 9, Line 8, as well as Paragraph 8, Clause 12 and Line 4: What will the neighbors think? And in the morning she will probably refuse to cook your breakfast, too.

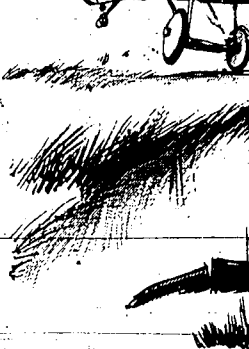

But if you feel strongly about getting it over with and marrying her, and you are willing to sign a contract, then you should make the best deal for yourself that you possibly can. To do that, I suggest that you get an agent to negotiate for you.

That's what everyone does today - athletes, TV anchormen, authors. If they think it is prudent to have agents negotiate for them when entering a simple two-year contract to work, you definitely should have one when signing a paper that will bind you until your teeth fall in your soup.

Unfortunately, there aren't many agents specializing in negotiating marriage contracts. Agents operate on a 10 percent commission, and who can live on one-tenth of somebody else's misery?

However, in Chicago there is one agent who does this kind of work for a fee - Mr. Loochies Zelinski. He is an expert in domestic matters, having spent more than 20 years as a bailiff in a police court.

He has negotiated several marriage contracts and is a demon at getting his client extra nights off for bowling, softball, reunion parties and in inserting penalty clauses should she gain too much weight, make a habit of oversleeping, interrupt your stories, refuse to clean the fish you catch or fail to bring you a snack while you watch a football game.

Carter goes easy on Ford Motor Co.

N.Y. Times Service
We can end the double standard of justice in America. I see no reason why big-shot crooks should go free while the poor ones go to jail! - Jimmy Carter, 1976 Democratic convention.

WASHINGTON - When candidate Carter needed entry to the heavy hitters of political fund-raising in 1976, he turned to Henry Ford II - who obliged with a lucrative luncheon at New York's 421st that put Carter in the big money big leagues.

When President Carter was traveling to Liberia in 1978 and had a problem with local press facilities, he told his press secretary to call White House aide Robert Strauss, who said, "Get me Henry Ford" - and the telecommunication problem was instantly solved.

Such high-powered service does not go unrewarded. When on April 6, 1978, Ford lawyer

John Martin informed the Criminal Division of the Department of Justice that a Ford subsidiary had been engaging in a cover-up of a million-dollar bribe offered to an Indonesian general, the high levels of the political justice department proceeded to give kid-glove treatment to the company headed by the president's friend.

The chronology in brief: In June 1975, a $30 million contract was drawn between the Ford company and an Indonesian government company. When a top general demanded his 3 percent payoff, a new contract was drawn and back-dated, with phony documentation, slipping in an extra $300,000.

Everybody was happy until a federal grand jury, digging into Indonesian payoffs by ITT and Hughes Aircraft, asked Ford about its deal in January 1978. On Feb. 24, the automaker submitted a vigorous defense, but the coverage soon unraveled; on April 6, the company admitted that its submission may have been an "inaccurate record." Since that time, Ford's lawyers have been negotiating with Justice for a slip on the wrist to some mid-level employees.

Despite all the proof of back-dating, Ford still holds to the story that no bribe was actually paid, and its legal strategy is to insist that proof of the payment is "the essential question." But the bribe itself is insignificant since no law was broken at the time: the "essential question" is whether there was a coverup this year. In the Carter lingo of legal populism, if a poor man had, handed the cops so much misinformation, he would have been in jail long ago.

Ford officials say that a corporate officer who knew of the bribe plan was given early retirement. What I believe they have not told Harold Webb and Fred Becker of Justice is how much money was paid after his departure, and in whose direction. If Henry Ford II, Philip Caldwell or Lee Iacocca - the triumvirate that runs the company - directed that a substantial sum be paid to anyone fired for cause, then they and the company would have to answer questions about whether that may have been "hush money."

It may be, after a thorough airing, that we will find that nobody at Ford rates "big-shot crook" status; it is to the company's credit that a correction of the misleading information was submitted.

SAM POOL, ONE OF YOUNGEST TRANSPLANT PATIENTS exercising at prep school

Prognosis better for heart patients

NEW YORK (UPI) - The probability that the heart transplant recipient will survive in good health beyond one year has continued to improve.

According to a report from the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute, the preferable recipient for a heart transplant should be less than 50 years of age, should not have high blood pressure in the pulmonary - lung - circulation. The patient also should have no evidence or unresolved pulmonary blood clots or infarctions - lung tissue that died due to poor or cut off circulation. The candidate also should be free of any serious infections and should not have insulin-dependent diabetes.

Improvements in heart transplant surgery the report notes include:

- Improved means for early detection of rejection episodes and for monitoring immuno-suppressive therapy. The patient must walk a tight line between suppression and rejection. The improved techniques make it possible to hit rejection early in the game.

- Early and aggressive diagnosis and treatment of infections. Infections are a major cause of sickness and death among heart transplant recipients. This is due to their reduced resistance - a result of the immuno-suppressive therapy necessary to prevent and control rejection episodes.

- Careful control of diet to cut down the development of hardening of the arteries in the new heart.

The first three months after surgery are likely to be the most critical. In one study of 109 recipients, 49 died during the three-month period. But for the ones surviving beyond it, prospects for long-term survival improved substantially.

Eighty percent were alive after one year, 66 percent after two years, 52 percent after three years, 48 percent after four years, and 43 percent after five years.

However, waiting for a heart to become available when one has been okayed as a heart transplant patient doesn't always have a happy ending.

The report from the Institute notes that among 40 on a waiting list the average survival was 46 days when no hearts became available.

Skylab maneuver Friday

HOUSTON (UPI) — Scientists are readying Skylab for a week-long maneuver they hope will correct the craft's orbit and prevent it from falling to Earth.

On Tuesday NASA scientists instructed computers aboard Skylab to begin charging its batteries in preparation for the first maneuver Friday morning.

Officials of the Johnson Space Center in Houston are trying to keep the grumbling laboratory on course until astronauts from the Space Shuttle can push it into a higher orbit with remote-controlled rockets or set it on a safe path back to Earth.

If Skylab's course cannot be altered, the 8-ton, 118-foot hulk could fall back to Earth as early as next spring to be destroyed in a slow re-entry into Earth's atmosphere.

"We got the batteries back up and we turned on the CMG (control moment gyro) beater," a JSC spokesman said. "They turn those on a couple of days before they turn on the gyro. It takes about 12 hours to get the charge up to maximum."

"They're just monitoring the system and making sure everything operates OK," the spokesman said.

The control center will maneuver the Skylab to a position so that the solar panels on the outside of the craft will point to the sun at all times. On Saturday, Skylab's course will be further changed, making it fly "like an airplane" to achieve "the least resistance and drag," he said.

Heavy rains swamp Southern states

Residents of states from Arizona to Louisiana raised today for floodwaters from torrential rains that swept the South to the Atlantic Coast.

Flash flood warnings were posted in parts of Lea County in southeastern Arizona. Flash flood watches were up for many sections of Texas and also in northern and western Louisiana, southern Oklahoma and Arkansas.

More than 11 inches of rain hit sections of southern Louisiana. Water was up to 4 feet deep in low-lying subdivisions in New Iberia and Lafayette. New Iberia residents used pirogues for transportation after a 11.2-inch rainfall over 29 hours. Several families were evacuated.

The mayor of Vinton, La., Roywood Lemaire, said 8.13 inches of rain fell in a 10-hour period, including 3 inches in 90 minutes.

Three-inch rains were common in Oklahoma.

More than 4 inches of rain caused damage in Chickasha, Okla., estimated at more than $100,000. Fire Chief Bill Harris said. Water rose 3 inches in a shopping center. An industrial park was partly submerged. The lake in Shannon Springs

IDI AMIN

Amin described as flamboyant, but brutal ruler

United Press International
DR. AMIN, I PRESUME
 Idi Amin's ambassador to the United Nations pulled out all the stops Tuesday in New York in describing the flamboyant but brutal ruler of Uganda at the U.N. special session on disarmament. Ambassador Khalid Younis Kinene prefaced his address to the General Assembly by conveying "the regrets of his excellency Dr. Idi Amin, conqueror of the British empire." The ambassador then listed a number of awards and decorations he said Amin holds. Kinene said Amin hoped that "this year should be a year of love, peace and reconciliation." His speech drew polite applause as he addressed by the representatives of 10 other nations in the half-empty chamber.

TIPPLES' DEATHALON
 Valerio "Bobby" Batugo of Tip's restaurant in Valencia, Calif., is the new national champion bartender. He won the 33rd annual cocktail competition of the U.S. Bartenders Guild in Beverly Hills, Calif. Monday night with a concoction he dubbed "The Universe" — mixed with vodka, pineapple and lime juice, and melon and pistachio nut liqueur. Batugo, who will represent the United States in international competition in Yugoslavia, was the 1974 national and world's champion. Tip's restaurant must be some creative bar. The 120 judges placed Batugo's brother, Lucian, who also works there, as the third-place finisher out of more than 100 semifinalists.

A HARD ACT TO FOLLOW
 Levar Burton, the young actor who portrayed Kunta Kinte in "Roots," is the first to admit his new role doesn't come naturally. For a television movie Burton is playing the part of Ron LeFlore, the Detroit Tigers outfielder who jumped from prison to the majors. "I'm an actor and dancer but I'm not an athlete. Playing this role is really tough," Burton said in Milwaukee Tuesday where the movie is being filmed. However, he didn't have any problems with one scene — a re-creating of LeFlore's "tough major league debut" in which he struck out his first three times at bat.

MEXICAN TREASURE

Nazi demonstration ban sought

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court has been asked to rule whether the predominantly Jewish village of Skokie, Ill., can ban Nazi demonstrations without violating the Constitution. Village officials want the justices to reverse a 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals decision knocking down three ordinances designed to prevent demonstrations by the National Socialist Party of America in the Chicago suburb. In an appeal filed Tuesday, they said two factors create a "clear and present danger" that allow them to restrict the Nazi flag speech. One is "the historical reality of genocide within recent memory" — the systematic, calculated extermination of 6 million Jews under the "aegis of the swastika." The other, they said, is the "special characteristics of Skokie's population," which includes "tens of thousands of the closest relatives of Holocaust victims and hundreds of survivors." They compared a Nazi march in Skokie to screaming "fire" in a crowded theatre. The appeal also argued that Nazi demonstrations would be "an intentional incitement to riot" and constitute "intentionally false and defamatory statements" unprotected by the Constitution's freedom of speech guarantee. "The portrayal of criminality or depravity in a group of persons by reason of their parentage is a falsehood," it said. "The village is not attempting to censor books or to inhibit the dissemination of ideas, even those which it finds hateful," it said. "Rather it is attempting to prevent direct racial or ethnic lies, the type of outrageous conduct which inflicts harm immediately upon utterance and is socially destructive for that reason." In an effort to stop Nazis from marching there, the Village Board enacted three ordinances May 2, 1976. One requires applicants for demonstration permits to obtain a total $350,000 in insurance; another prohibits dissemination of material which incites racial or religious hatred; and a third bars public demonstrations by members of political parties while wearing military-style uniforms. Since the 7th Circuit voided the ordinances, the board has issued a permit to the National Socialist Party of America to march there June 25, and to a Jewish group to stage a counterdemonstration the same day.

After seven months

'Will' trial ready for jury

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Jurors were told by one side the so-called Mormon will attributed to Howard Hughes was forged of "shreds and patches," while the other side claimed the document had to be real. Today, the panel was expected to weigh all the evidence presented in the seven-month-long trial and determine if the three-page, hand-written document is Hughes' will. Los Angeles attorney Paul Freese, the first of three attorneys to argue for Hughes' relatives, who believe the will was forged, said Tuesday that the document was "a thing of shreds and patches." "It fundamentally is a thin web built on fundamental falsehoods," said Freese, who represents three cousins of Hughes. Freese showed the jury records of hotel charges in San Francisco on April 17, 1976, which he said proved Alaskan contractor Levarie Forsythe was in San Francisco the day he claims he delivered the will to the Utah service station of Melvin Dummar, now a beer truck driver in Utah.

Dummar, a one-sixteenth beneficiary in the will, testified he carried the will to the Mormon Church headquarters and left it on a desk that same day. "Forsythe was not on his way to Salt Lake City on April 17, 1976. He was in San Francisco tape recording a meeting with a bottle of whiskey on the table," Freese said. Attorney Harold Rhoden, substitute executor of the will, opened final arguments May 22 and took one day, Tuesday, to rebut opposing arguments. Attorneys representing Hughes relatives who are contesting the will began final arguments May 31. "If I had one piece of evidence it would be this one," Rhoden said in his rebuttal, presenting the jury on April 5, 1976, deposit slip for an Anchorage bank showing Forsythe deposited $2,800 in $100 bills that were not circulated after 1971. Hughes died April 5, 1976, on a flight from Acapulco to Houston. "How could Forsythe turn back the clock?" asked Rhoden. Forsythe claims he worked as a secret courier for Hughes.

Doctor indicted in Hughes case

OGDEN, Utah (UPI) — A Logan, Utah physician has been indicted for allegedly supplying billions of Howard Hughes will large amounts of codeine over the last 20 months of his life. "A federal grand jury in Ogden handed up the indictment Tuesday against Dr. Wilbur S. Thain after a year-long investigation by the Federal Drug Enforcement Administration. Thain, 53, was a medical advisor and consultant to Summa Corp. during the period named in the indictment. Two other Hughes aides were indicted on similar charges in Las Vegas, Nev. in March — John Holmes, a vice president of Summa Corp., and Dr. Norman Crane. Max Wheeler, assistant U.S. Attorney for Utah, said Dr. Thain "ordered and delivered" 5,500 dosage units of codeine phosphate, the liquid injectible form of codeine, to Hughes from August, 1974, until Hughes' death in April, 1976.

"The law says a doctor can only distribute drugs if he does so pursuant to a legitimate medical purpose," Wheeler said. The evidence showed, he said, that there was no legitimate medical purpose in this case. A University of Utah pharmacologist said 5,500 units over a 20-month span would be "an excessive amount, roughly 10 units a day." He said that amount of the drug could be prescribed for a terminal cancer patient, or for someone with chronic severe pain, and that the person could be functioning normally if his body had adjusted to the dosage. The pharmacologist said that amount of codeine could be lethal in combination with other factors but that would depend on several circumstances. Thain is currently director of the Exceptional Child Center at Utah State University in Logan.

Withdrawal by Belgian units next

KINSHASA, Zaire (UPI) — Belgium announced today it will pull out its remaining 600 paratroopers from Zaire's Shaba province, joining the exodus of French Foreign Legionnaires. Official sources in Brussels said the Belgian paratroopers may leave this week. The Belgian airborne troops were spread out in several towns of Shaba to reassure the white population. The Belgian decision to pull out was announced in Brussels after a meeting of the crisis cabinet headed by Premier Leo Tindemans.

Tuesday, Zaire's President Mobutu Sese Seko Konde Ngbendu issued a farewell to the French Foreign Legion paratroopers who helped restore order to embattled Shaba, which was invaded by rebels based in Angola.

Four hundred of the 700 legionnaires have been flown out of Zaire aboard U.S. aircraft.

The departure of most of the French left the Belgians as the major protection for European expatriates, who have appealed for a permanent and reliable security force in the region to prevent a repetition of last month's Kolwezi massacre.

The expatriates had hoped the Belgians would step in place at least until a pan-African peace-keeping force spearheaded by Moroccans had taken up positions.

Most of the 1,500 Moroccan-manned expeditionary force is in Lubumbashi, flown here by U.S. Air Force transports.

In Washington, the State Department announced the transports also will fly Senegalese and Gabonese troops to Zaire as part of the peace-keeping force. The number of these troops was not known.

A 150-man French garrison remained at Kolwezi, waiting for Moroccans to take over.

President Mobutu has been dealing with visiting Chinese Foreign Minister Huang Hua and patching up his differences with President Kenneth Kaunda of neighboring Zambia.

The Zambian leader paid a one-day visit to Lubumbashi for what the official Zaire news agency AZAP said would be a difficult summit to reconcile differences with Mobutu.

Sadat to Israel: 'Your move next'

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — President Anwar Sadat wants Israel to come up with new proposals for the stalled Middle East peace negotiations, warning that failure of the initiative could mean a new Arab-Israeli war.

State-controlled newspapers today played up the warning, with the influential Al-Ahram describing it as "clear."

Speaking Tuesday to the troops of the Egyptian 2nd Army in the Suez Canal city of Ismailia, Sadat said, "I will give you the order, just as I gave you the order (to wage) the October 1973 war, if peace efforts fail to ensure Egypt's honor and sovereignty."

The Egyptian leader appeared to be renegeing on a promise he made last November during his historic trip to Jerusalem that the 1973 war should be the last between the Arabs and Israel. His speech indicated dissatisfaction with the lack of progress in the collapsed peace negotiations, which he blamed on Israel's intransigent stand.

Sadat said the negotiations will not be resumed "unless Israel comes up with new elements (proposals). The old elements are totally rejected."

Sadat's statements acquired significance in view of his earlier statement that the success or failure of his peace initiative would be determined by October.

Sadat contends the Sinai military disengagement agreement between Egypt and Israel expires in October. He also promised a "bombshell" surprise July 23 when Egypt celebrates the 26th anniversary of the 1952 revolution that overthrew the monarchy.

Lebanese pullout conditions listed

BEIRUT — Israel has set a number of terms for its withdrawal from Southern Lebanon which is scheduled to take place next Tuesday.

It has informed the Lebanese government that four Israeli military outposts will have to be maintained permanently inside Lebanese territory to guard against infiltrations by Palestinian guerrillas across the border into Israel, according to sources close to the government here.

They said the Israeli conditions were conveyed Monday to Prime Minister Selim al-Hoss and Foreign Minister Fuad Boutros by Lt. Gen. Ensis Silliasvuo, of Finland who is chief coordinator of the United Nations peace mission in the Middle East.

Lebanese officials rejected the terms and insisted that all territory in Southern Lebanon must be brought back under Lebanese sovereignty and control, the sources said, and reported that Silliasvuo took the Lebanese remarks back to Jerusalem and is expected to return here Saturday with the answers.

Hoss and Boutros briefed Silliasvuo on government plans to send regrouped units of the Lebanese army to the south to assist U.N. troops in polling the area after the Israeli pullout.

Another Israeli condition is that only United Nations troops should be present in the eight-mile deep border strip which Israeli forces are expected to evacuate next week, the sources said.

Analysts said Israel wants to keep the area in the hands of right-wing Christian militias whom it has trained and supplied with weapons to fight Palestinian guerrillas and their Lebanese-Jehudi allies.

The main Christian strongholds, such as the towns of Marjayoun and Alala are inside the territory which Israel now occupies and which stretches from the village of Ras Al Bayada on the Lebanese Mediterranean coast to the slopes of Mount Hermon in the east.

Tax break date scored

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A House subcommittee charged Tuesday that Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal allowed political interference to delay an IRS decision designed to end a $1.2 billion annual tax break for oil companies.

The subcommittee called on Blumenthal to "take immediate administrative action . . . to insure that the Internal Revenue Service is free of improper political influence."

Under federal law, the IRS is supposed to make tax rulings independent of any influence from agencies or government officers not directly connected with tax administration.

The subcommittee said oil companies should be liable for the tax retroactive to at least July 16, 1975, but the final IRS ruling set the effective date as July 1 of this year. The subcommittee said the change in dates would cost U.S. taxpayers more than $2 billion.

The findings and recommendations were contained in the report of the House Commerce, Consumer and Monetary Affairs subcommittee, chaired by Rep. Benjamin Rosenthal, D-N.Y.

The subcommittee held hearings on the tax break for oil companies last fall.

The issue concerns American oil company payments to the national treasuries of the oil producing nations.

Space talks due

WASHINGTON — The United States was to begin talks with the Soviet Union today on trying to control weapons for shooting down earth satellites, but the Carter administration is still unclear on its own attitude toward anti-satellite systems.

The talks in Helsinki, scheduled to last 10 days, are described by officials as "exploratory." The administration wants to find out what the Soviets are prepared to consider — partly as a guide to clarifying its own thinking.

President Carter proposed banning "a-sats," as anti-satellite weapons are called, shortly after taking office.

The Soviet Union has been testing a-sats since 1967. Defense Secretary Harold Brown said last October that it has missiles ready for launching that can knock down U.S. reconnaissance satellites.

The United States had studied a-sat possibilities off and on and has a research and development program, but it is far from an operational a-sat capability.

Hospital cost lid proposal offered

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Paul Rogers, D-Fla., introduced an amendment Tuesday to substitute voluntary restraints for mandatory limits in President Carter's plan to cut hospital costs.

The administration wants to limit increases in hospital bills to 9 percent a year. HEW Secretary Joseph Califano said recently hospital cost rose an average of 17 percent per year between 1975 and 1977.

But as the House Commerce Committee took up the administration legislation, Rogers introduced his amendment that would permit hospitals to voluntarily cut costs over the next two years.

Califano has cautiously predicted victory for the Carter plan, despite opposition by most of the nation's 7,000 hospitals to any type of mandatory federal controls. Many hospitals have already begun voluntary cost-cutting procedures.

Rogers, chairman of a health subcommittee, said his proposal would allow hospitals to cut the increase in their bills by two percentage points a year over the next two years, or face the administration's mandatory controls.

Oil rates upheld

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court, in a ruling that may cost owners of the trans-Alaska oil pipeline more than $100 million, today upheld a government order limiting initial rates charged for use of the 800-mile conduit.

The ruling means pipeline owners would have to refund higher rates the justices had allowed them to collect over a three-month period while the case was under consideration.

The court only allowed them to collect the higher rates — an estimated $1.5 million more per day, totaling $100 million or more — on condition they return the extra money if they lost the case.

Involved in the case are rates charged to producers using the pipeline to transport crude oil from Alaska's North Slope to the ice-free port of Valdez. Shortly before the line was set to go into operation last summer, seven of the eight owners filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission proposed initial rates of from $6.64 to $6.44 a barrel.

The ICC has power to suspend a "new" rate for seven months pending an investigation of its reasonableness and legality.

Wheat, metals post gains

(Courtesy Sinclair & Co.) CHICAGO — Wheat and metals advanced while Maine potatoes and live cattle lost ground in commodity futures trading Tuesday.

Local short covering helped wheat recover from the lows in late trading, leaving closing prices unchanged to 2 1/2 cents lower. Export prices were stimulated by traders but lackluster soybean trade dominated the action.

cash bids were strengthening factors, and one analyst said continued strong cash prices could induce farmers to expand plantings.

Commodity News Service said limit down moves in pork bellies and anticipation of a coming decision on meat imports dragged live cattle down to a close from 17 points up to 60 points lower. Uncertainty over import policies caused long liquidation. June was the only month receiving support for an upside close.

Feeder cattle closed 40 to 70 points higher in active trading in all months save August, which ended 22 points off. An estimated 4,010 contracts were traded. Back months were supported by confidence in a constructive long term supply and demand outlook.

New York Sugar silver advanced 50 to 310 points, reversing earlier declines of around 4 cents, on volume of 7,000 contracts.

Live hogs closed 102 to 45 points down with deferreds at or near the day's lows. Early strength gave way to liquidation. Volume was 8,198 contracts.

Wheat under liquidation selling was the major factor in the soybean bid, although trade was active. Beans ended 1 1/2 to 8 1/2 cents lower, with meal down 5.80 to 50 cents and oil up 10 to 40 points.

Stocks at Midday

Opening NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices opened lower Wednesday in active trading of New York Stock Exchange issues.

The Dow Jones Industrial average was off 1.90 points to 844.90 shortly after the opening. Declines led advances, 335 to 224, among the 833 issues crossing the NYSE tape at the outset.

Since Tuesday's rise up to the Dow 124.30 points off its Feb. 28 low of 742.12 and up 34.2 points in the past six sessions, analysts said many traders were willing to cash in some of the profits.

Some traders voiced concern over the dollar's decline on foreign exchange, and recent surveys by the Conference Board, Citibank and the New York Stock Exchange showing inflation was hurting consumer confidence.

The White House is showing even more concern about inflation than it has in recent months, according to Wednesday reports. There were indications President Carter would only another $3 billion to $5 billion cut in the fiscal 1979 budget deficit. Also, there was talk that proposals being put on Carter to trim his proposed tax cut to about $15 billion from $19 billion.

On Tuesday, meanwhile, California voters overwhelmingly approved legislation to trim property taxes sharply. The vote was seen as a taxpayers' revolt that could have national implications.

Idaho water questions focus on Snake in Hells Canyon

MOSCOW — Critical questions on the use of Idaho's water are coming to a focus in the Hells Canyon reach of the Snake River, according to a University of Idaho professor working with the Idaho Water Resources Research Institute.

"The choices and trade-offs which must be weighed in Hells Canyon are basic to virtually all other water problems facing the state," said Calvin Warnick. "They also reflect important decisions that are going to have to be made in conjunction with Washington and Oregon."

Conflicts between options for power development, irrigation and recreational uses of the canyon's water are examined in a special report Warnick has prepared which will be released through the Idaho Department of Water Resources.

The report is the product of a two year study which involved the cooperative efforts of both the IDWR and the IWRRI. By focusing on Hells Canyon, the report exposes how various options will affect the future use of the entire Snake River.

Upstream of the canyon, the river flows through Idaho's irrigated farm lands while downstream it feeds into the power complex of the Columbia River Basin. In the canyon itself, the upper portion of the river is dammed at three sites for power production while the lower river is enclosed in a national recreation area. The stretch reaching from just below the canyon to Asotin, Wash., is now under study for inclusion in the National Wild and Scenic River system.

"With a limited amount of water and a great many interests making demands on it, Hells Canyon is now a key area for defining uses and setting limits," Warnick said.

The recent decision by the Idaho Legislature to set minimum stream flows along the Snake has already altered the options for the development of more upstream agriculture, he said.

Increasing upstream storage by building new reservoirs might guarantee water supply for years of drought, Warnick said, but with water needed downstream for power, the state probably could not afford to fill such reservoirs except in years of excess rain. The price of such "insurance" coupled with the environmental disturbance of damming would raise some objections, Warnick said.

Power interests have also advocated upstream reservoirs to supply water for peaking loads. However, pumped storage reservoirs cannot easily double for irrigation storage reservoirs and again there is the problem of lands they would impound.

An option that could potentially satisfy all three interests would be to revise the operation of existing reservoirs, Warnick said. Changes in flow regulations could provide for more favorable power releases while the increased ability to forecast river flows could tend to assure that irrigation supplies were maintained and that reservoir capacity was available when needed for flood control.

Further study would be necessary to determine whether such a scheme could adequately serve Idaho's power needs in the future, Warnick said. In the meantime arguments continue in favor of new power plants along the Snake. Building dams at the Nez Perce site, within the canyon, or at Asotin, within the wild and scenic river study zone, are also suggested.

"The options and their inherent trade-offs continue to increase in complexity while the water supply of the Snake remains the same," Warnick said.

Fisheries, wildlife, navigation, historical sites, existing Federal Power Commission licenses and potential downstream agriculture are only a few of the other considerations which any future policy must be able to cope with, he said.

aid planners and decision makers in taking all options into account, Warnick has devised a graphic matrix which summarizes his report. Based on a scale of verbal values, the matrix registers a positive or negative impact where any two given considerations intersect.

Water plan reaction mixed

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. John Evans said he is pleased and disappointed with the National Water Policy announced Tuesday by President Jimmy Carter.

Evans said he was "pleased to see that the president has stricken any provisions in the document for transfer of water from state to state or basin-to-basin," which were in the original document published last July. He said he was further pleased to see the president's recognition that water conservation must be an integral part of water resource management.

The governor also praised the president for his repeated recognition in the policy of the importance of states' rights in determining national water policies, saying "President Carter's basic contention that the future of this country's water resource planning belongs to the states themselves is the type of philosophy I and all Idahoans wholeheartedly endorse."

But the Idaho chief executive said "My acceptance of the policy ends, however, where the discussion of state-shared funding of federal water projects begins."

Pea prices edge down

MOSCOW — Average prices for May 31 have been posted by the Pacific Northwest Pea Growers and Dealers Association.

Prices for that date, the previous week and the comparable week a year ago include greens 9.55, 9.70 and 11.85; yellows 10.85, 10.85 and 13.00; blacks 10.00, 11.00 and 13.00; lentils 10.65, 21.70 and 23.65.

Evans plugs low power dams

MOSCOW (UPI) — Low-head, hydroelectric power generation will help balance the Northwest's energy plan while reducing pressure for more high dams, Gov. John V. Evans said today.

In a keynote address at a low-head, hydroelectric technology seminar at the University of Idaho, Evans said the energy policy is a critical element in the entire growth management strategy of the region.

"How we handle bringing new sources of energy into production, the regional distribution of our existing energy supplies and our efforts at conservation will have tremendous impact on our future growth and industrial and economic development," he said.

"If we finely tune our policy, we can use energy to effectively stabilize our rate of growth and attract those industries that citizens find acceptable," he said.

But, he said, that policy must be based on an adequate production and supply, equitable rates and effective conservation. And, he said, an excess of new energy is acceptable because it will act as a growth magnet to the region — resulting in significant cost increases and providing an incentive for consumption.

The challenge, he said, is to develop a balanced energy future — making the most appropriate and reasonable use of all resources.

"Low-head, hydroelectric technology can give both public and private decision makers another very valuable tool to use in arriving at that critical balance for the future," he said.

He said low-head generation offers such advantages as its environmental acceptability, its flexibility and its potential to keep electrical rates reasonable. He said it also reduces pressure to develop new high dam sites in the face of environmental objections.

In developing low-head sources, however, there is a distinct need, he said, for legislation and new procedures to simplify licensing for such projects while continuing to provide adequate review and safeguards. He said there virtually is no distinction made between the various types of hydroelectric generating facilities when it comes to applying for licenses.

Codling moth found

TWIN FALLS — Codling moths have been found in pan traps monitored by the University of Idaho Extension Service.

William F. Hazen, extension agricultural agent, said the codling moth is the insect pest many home owners know as a "worm" in apples and pears.

To protect apple and pear crops from this pest, a registered insecticide should be applied immediately. Home gardeners should apply sprays containing diazinon according to label directions, Hazen said.

State board keys on pollution

By GARY ELIASSEN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Regulations outlining what steps would be taken in case of emergency air pollution conditions in Idaho were adopted by the Idaho State Board of Health and Welfare Tuesday.

The board also heard a report on the state water plan and approved rules governing future sewage management of land over the Rathdrum Prairie aquifer in northern Idaho.

The rules were adopted with little discussion by the board. The aquifer is a vast underground river flowing west from Coeur d'Alene to Spokane and has been declared a "sole source" of drinking water by the federal government.

Under the air pollution procedures accepted, four stages of degraded air quality were established including: Air pollution forecast, alert, warning, and emergency.

Lee Stokes, administrator of the division of environment in the state Department of Health and Welfare, said the emergency provisions were required under the new federal Clean Air Act.

"I doubt very much if we will ever get to the emergency stage," he said. "But some cities—Boise and Kellogg—have reached the alert stage."

Under the forecast stage, the National Weather Service would maintain an "internal watch" for air stagnation; the alert stage begins air pollution control measures by industrial sources; the warning stage indicates that air quality is further degraded and that increased control measures are necessary; and the emergency stage is initiated when air quality has degraded to a point of danger.

Stokes also said the emergency regulations add carbon monoxide to the two pollutants—dust and sulfur dioxide—already covered in Idaho's air pollution control rules.

In other action, the seven-member board heard a report from Stokes on the plan to transfer some water quality functions from the state's health and welfare group to the state water-resources committee.

This was mandated by the legislature's adoption of the state water plan.

Stokes explained that the change won't take effect until the legislature passes implementation legislation. This, he said, was still being discussed by Gov. John Evans and representatives from both groups.

Marvin J. Wittman, chairman of the health and welfare committee, told the Times-News he would reserve judgment on the proposal until all the facts have been worked out. He said he did have reservations about such a transfer.

"One of the problems with a bureaucracy is you have a hazard of creating new units that overlap. That could be the problem here unless we work out certain problems," he said.

Wittman said a "split-off" of functions might do two things: one, reverse the trend which was begun in Idaho a few years ago of reducing the number of regulations; and two, create a management problem.

"I just don't know if it would be in the best interests of our state," he said.

Rules governing sewage management of land over the Rathdrum Prairie aquifer were accepted with little discussion by the board. The aquifer is a vast underground river flowing west from Lake Pend Oreille and the city of Coeur d'Alene to Spokane. It has been declared a "sole source" of drinking water by the federal government.

Larry Belmont, director of the Panhandle Health District, said the rules were rescinded by the health and welfare board in December, 1977, after receiving several complaints from developers about lack of public input. Since that time, members of the board said they were convinced enough public input was gathered.

Next meeting of the board will be Sept. 12 and 13 in the Boise Valley.

Carter water plan 'all wet' in Idaho

By KEN HODGE
Times-News writer

BOISE — A proposal by President Jimmy Carter to require states to participate in funding federal water projects within their borders drew fire from several Idaho water experts Tuesday.

Carter's proposed water policy would require states to put up as much as 10 percent of the cost of new water projects. The projects would also be subject to a new set of federal criteria judging their worth.

Idaho Governor John V. Evans called the cost-sharing proposal "unreasonable," and other state officials, interviewed Tuesday, had reservations about Carter's announced water policy.

"My acceptance of the policy ends where the discussion of state shared funding of federal water projects begins," Evans said in a news release Tuesday.

Evans said future projects would be almost unobtainable without the implementation of some long-term federal loan program.

"Idaho on its own clearly does not have currently intact any means for upfront funding of its share of large Bureau of Reclamation or Army Corps of Engineers water projects and projects in Idaho will be almost impossible," Evans added.

Other Idaho water officials questioned whether a state would have some say in the building of a project after putting up 10 percent of the cost.

Vard Chabrum, R-Albion, chairman of the House Resources and Conservation Committee, said he thinks Idaho could afford its share of a new water project if the state wanted to participate.

But he cautioned against too much federal control of the outcome and benefits of a water project.

"If they fed us up in a knip, I'd tell them to take a long running jump," Chabrum said. "We know more of what our needs are than people back in Washington, D.C."

He said he did not think Idahoans would have objections to meeting conservation and environmental criteria in constructing a new project since Idahoans are "by and large conservation minded."

Evans also said he was pleased to see the president has stricken any provisions for interbasin or interstate water transfers from his recently announced water policy.

He also said he was pleased to see recognition of states rights included in the policy.

Evans, however, vowed to work on a tax-exempt long-term bonding program to help states fund their share of federally funded water projects.

"I don't object to sharing part of the burden if you are going to share in the benefits," state Senator Reed Budge, R-Soda Springs, said.

Budge, who has worked on Idaho's state water plan since the beginning, also voiced concern about possible requirements the federal government might place on a project which would blow the cost out of proportion.

"It should be economically sound to begin with," Budge said. "No project the federal government has ever been involved with has ever been economically sound."

"I'm a little scared of the federal requirements, the tremendous cost overrides," he continued. "If we can say, 'Now, look, this is where we stop and this is where we begin,' then it might be worth it."

He said a project should be financially sound to amortize its own costs over a period of time and beneficiaries could rightfully be expected to share in costs.

"There may be too much bureaucratic red tape that we don't get any benefits. If we can stop that, then I don't object," Budge added.

"We want a voice in it. If we have to pay part of the bill, I think we ought to have some say about it."

Evans on 'hit list'?

TWIN FALLS — Is Idaho Gov. John Evans on a special "hit list" of the Republican National Committee?

The campaign manager for the Evans election drive insists his boss is one of three Democratic chief executives marked for defeat by the RNC, and that the national Republican organization will spend $500,000 defeating Evans, Gov. Paul H. Castro of Arizona and Gov. Richard D. Lamm of Colorado.

But RNC spokesmen in Washington D.C. said today the Governor's charges are "nonsense," and although Republicans prefer candidates of their own party, the RNC doesn't have the amount of money Democrats say.

Jan Hammer, state coordinator for the Evans election bid, made the charges Tuesday evening at a meeting of the Twin Falls Democratic Central Committee.

"The Republican National Committee has targeted Idaho, Arizona and Colorado as likely take-overs," Hammer said. "They have half a million dollars for those three states."

But Pete Tesley, RNC director of campaign operations told the Times-News, "It's not true. We don't have that kind of money. We are spending half a million dollars on all gubernatorial races, but there are 38 of them. The money spreading that rumor doesn't know what it's talking about."

Tesley acknowledged some gubernatorial contests would be watched more closely than others, but said the "targeting" couldn't begin until primary elections were held.

Tesley said the RNC will support Idaho's Republican gubernatorial candidate, and that the Republicans are strong in Idaho, "but money doesn't grow on trees."

Jerome mobile homes overassessed

By LONNIE ROSENWALD
Times-News writer

JEROME — Jerome County in 1978 overtaxed owners of mobile homes and has begun granting tax reductions to some of the 600 mobile home owners in the county.

Former assistant tax assessor James Coakley pointed out the overassessment errors in a letter to the county commissioners.

Commissioner Ray Cobble and Jerome County assessor Howard Jepson now have conceded that Coakley's charge was correct, and say mobile-homeowners who contact the county clerk to ask for a hearing on a reduction in their property taxes stand a good chance of receiving a reduced tax bill.

But mobile home owners must appear before the board of equalization (the county commissioners) by the first Monday in July in order to ask a reduction in taxes.

The first mobile home owner to capitalize on the assessment error was Mrs. Clifford Miller of Twin Falls, who asked the board of equalization Monday for a reduction in her $5000 1978 assessment.

Jerome County assessor Jepson said he planned to reduce Miller's evaluation by $500.

The change in tax assessment on Idaho mobile homes is the result of a state law which went into effect last July.

That law says mobile homes must be assessed according to the same value-per-square-foot applied to stick-built residences.

In the past, Idaho law has considered mobile homes as vacation or temporary homes, but now are considered as residential housing.

But Jerome assessors continue to use the old standards, which computed value according to make and model of the mobile home and, as a result, continue to over assess some mobile homes in the county.

Ironically, Coakley made 300 of the incorrect assessments before he was fired by Jepson last January.

But he says he was acting under orders from Jepson.

"I had no choice in the matter," Coakley said.

It remains unclear why Jerome County has failed to comply with the new law, when most other counties in southern Idaho changed their assessment procedures to meet the standards.

Twin Falls, Minidoka, Lincoln, and Blaine counties are all in compliance with the law.

Jepson says Jerome needs a broad reassessment program, but says he was turned down by the county commissioners last year when he asked for $150,000 to fund such a program.

"We'll just wait until we're forced into it," Jepson said.

Phil Long, Director of evaluations for the Idaho Tax Commission, was unaware of the over-assessments in Jerome, but he said it was too late to do anything about it this year.

Cassia County is the only other county in southern Idaho which has maintained the old method.

Cassia County assessor Calvin Heiner says he lacked staff this year sufficient to re-evaluate all the mobile homes in the county.

Two-thirds of the mobile homes there were reassessed this year, but Heiner used the old values in making up the 1978 assessments. He expects to assess the remaining homes by January, when the 1979 assessments will be calculated.

Coakley's charges come just as he begins his campaign to unseat Jepson as Jerome County assessor in the fall general elections.

Jerome salaries raised today

JEROME — Jerome city employees will receive a $50 a month pay increase retroactive to May 1.

The Jerome City Council granted the raises Tuesday night, following discussions with city employees who asked for a raise last month.

No raises had been budgeted this year, and city officials had indicated earlier they could not consider a raise until budget-setting time later this summer.

Although the raise only applies through October 1, Mayor Marshall Everheart said the council will not take it away at that time.

The mayor explained the increase was granted because of an increase in the cost of living. He noted that the last increase given to city workers was in January 1977.

South Hills road closed

TWIN FALLS — The Rock Creek canyon road in the South Hills will close beginning at noon Thursday for approximately five weeks, Sawtooth National Forest officials announced today.

Closure is necessary to allow the contractor to apply the asphalt on the upper five miles of the road which was widened and prepared for surfacing last year.

Velda Lawrence, information officer for Sawtooth, said forest officials just learned of the closure dates Tuesday. She said barricades will be placed on the road at Third Fork of Rock Creek and at the Magic Mountain Ski area.

The upper area will continue to be accessible through Shoshone Basin and the road there will be cleared of remaining snow drifts and improved for traffic.

Lawrence said the contractor hopes to have the road opened by the July 4 weekend. She said the area from Third Fork to the ski lodge will be completed now and the area from the ski lodge to the end of the project near the Diamondfield Jack snowmobile area later.

Gooding, Lincoln filings

MAGIC VALLEY — Candidates have filed for most county offices in Gooding and Lincoln counties for the Aug. 8 primary election. Deadline for filing petitions of candidacy is 5 p.m. today.

In Lincoln county all the candidates are Republican, while in Gooding County the only Democrats who had filed by this morning are for precinct committee jobs.

The only contest so far for the Republican nomination for Gooding prosecuting attorney, Severt Swenson, Gooding is acting prosecutor, having been appointed recently to replace Phil Becker, who was named county magistrate.

Other Gooding Republican candidates include Doris O. Robertson, treasurer, and Wes Trumson, assessor, both incumbents, and Lawrence Critchfield, Hagerman, for second district county commissioner, the post now held by John LeMoyné.

City street plan runs into protest

JEROME — Plans to widen North Filmore Street and provide a bicycle path, sidewalk or both were protested by 51 residents of that street in Jerome Tuesday night.

Resident Don Sparhawk gave Jerome city council members petitions with 51 signatures protesting the widening which the signers say will intrude on their property.

Sparhawk said North Filmore residents are not opposed to a new sidewalk, but he believes the street widening will bring "more and faster traffic" to the road, by diverting traffic from Lincoln Street.

The city is moving ahead with plans to widen the forty-foot wide street and install an eight-foot-wide combination of sidewalks and bike paths on either side. The city council will hold public hearings once plans are complete and before construction gets underway.

The project, which supporters say will provide children a safe bike ride to Jefferson Elementary School, is being financed under federal Urban Development matching funds.

CSI plans geothermal campus

By GARY ELIASSEN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — College of Southern Idaho officials are continuing their plans to use geothermal energy to heat buildings at the school.

Dr. James Taylor, president of the college, said if all goes well CSI may be tapping underground hot water to help warm the campus within a year.

"We're in the process now of developing a plan of action for CSI and acquiring a permit from the state for geothermal exploration on the campus," said Dr. Taylor.

He said the college will be seeking help from the federal government for the conversion process. An estimated $500,000 will be needed, the president said.

"We hope to have the process completed in less than a year," Taylor said. "It will take about two months to get the well drilled."

Taylor said he has no doubts usable hot water used will be found at the college.

Temperature estimates are about 115 degrees.

A site for the well drilling will be determined by the end of this week, and a permit application is in the process of being drawn up to send to the state Office of Energy.

If adequate hot water reserves are found beneath the campus, Dr. Taylor hopes the entire school eventually will be heated by pumping underground hot water through the existing buildings.

First on the list of buildings to be heated by the hot water may be the proposed Herrett Museum at the campus.

A fund drive currently is underway to get the museum built.

"We want to make this conversion at the earliest possible date," Taylor said, "because it is estimated that it can save the school about $100,000 a year in energy costs."

In addition to heating the school, CSI plans to run experiments with the hot water.

One experiment will study whether prawns can live in hot water which already has been used in providing energy, but reduced in temperature.

Dr. Taylor and several other local officials returned from geothermally-heated Oregon Technological Institute at Klamath Falls last week determined more than ever to proceed with geothermal heat at CSI.

They also visited a hospital, junior high school, high school and two industries which use that type of energy to heat buildings.

Others who went with him were Chuck Brockway, engineer with the Snake River Research Center at Kimberly; Leo Ray, oilfield rancher in the Hagerman Valley; Robert Erkins, who is experimenting with hot houses north of Bliss; David McClain, Boise, Office of Energy consultant; and Bob McManaman, CSI superintendent of buildings and grounds.

Involved in the studies but unable to go was Clid Tomlinson, a geological engineer.

Petitions of candidacy up to 192

BOISE — The Idaho Secretary of State's office received Tuesday an additional 56 petitions of candidacy, including those of Gov. John Evans and one of his Republican opponents, two other statewide candidates and two GOP candidates vying for the same congressional seat.

With the addition of the latest petitions, the number now filed was boosted to 192.

In addition to Evans, C.L. "Butch" Otter of Caldwell filed for the Republican gubernatorial race. Congressman George Hansen also filed as well as James P. Jones, Eden, who will face Hansen in the GOP Primary Election in August.

Removing tracks on route to Wells will save money

TWIN FALLS — Ninety-four miles of railroad, unused for approximately five years, and running from Rogerson to Wells, Nev., where it formerly connected with the Southern Pacific Railroad, may soon be abandoned by Union Pacific Railroad Co. The line, which once served shipment of the area who shipped out of Rogerson has outlived its usefulness, according to UP officials. Rogerson, once one of the largest sheep shipping points of the northwest, is just about out of the sheep business.

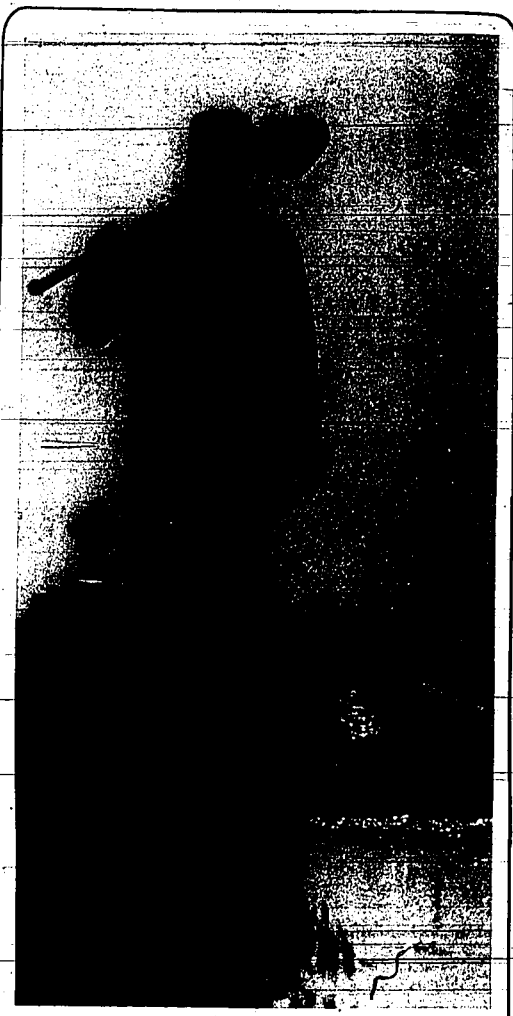

Dick Tischer, assistant public relations director for UP in Salt Lake City, said any livestock or other freight shipments from the Rogerson area move over the branch line to Twin Falls, then on to Mindoka to the main line and into Salt Lake City or Ogden for routing to their final destination.

"We can handle the shipments more economically and efficiently in this manner and there just isn't any need to continue to maintain the 94 miles of line below Rogerson," Tischer said.

If the line south of Rogerson to Wells is abandoned, he said, the railroad would probably remove the tracks and give up the right of way. He said as it now stands, the company has to pay taxes in Idaho and Nevada on the 94 miles and as long as the line is there, has to spend money providing maintenance so it could be used. He said abandonment would mean a financial saving to the railroad.

The total branch from Twin Falls to Wells via Rogerson is 123.4 miles. Only the 94-mile section south of Rogerson is proposed for abandonment.

Tischer said Union Pacific will file with the Interstate Commerce Commission early this month and after 30 days, or about June 30, the commission will open the matter for public comment. After that it will be decided if a public hearing is necessary and if so, one will be set by the commission.

named to commission

TWIN FALLS — Robert Lancaster has been named to the Twin Falls County Planning and Zoning Commission in place of another appointee who had to resign because of an imbalance in representation.

The appointment fills the vacancy originally left when Richard Pence was named county clerk, county commissioner Bill Chancey said recently.

Betty Woolen, Twin Falls, was appointed to the vacancy but resigned last month. It was learned her appointment resulted in more city residents on the board than rural residents. The commission's bylaws require an equal number of both.

One vote of the planning and zoning board was invalid because of the imbalance and had to be retaken.

Lancaster is employed by Coca Cola Bottling Co. but resides on an acreage south of Twin Falls. Chancey said he is well qualified to serve on the board and is interested in the development of the county.

Dinner funds announced

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls Democrats raised just over $800 at their recent "Democrats for Agriculture" fund-raising dinner. Marie Stollen, chairwoman of the Twin Falls Democratic Central Committee said Tuesday.

Total receipts for the dinner came to just over $1,600, Stollen said. Roughly half that was spent on food and other expenses, she added. Funds raised totaled $810.89, she said. The funds will go to support local Democrats in the November elections, she said.

More than 800 paid a penny a pound to fly

TWIN FALLS — More than 800 persons participated in a "penny-a-pound" day at Burley Saturday sponsored by Key Airlines.

Janice Collins, station manager at Twin Falls, said the event was intended to get people "more oriented toward flying." Under the "penny-a-pound" procedure, passengers paid for short rides according to their weight, at a cent a pound.

She said the event apparently was successful in that passenger boarding load has increased this week at the Burley airport.

Schedules also were changed late in May in an effort to attract more customers for the new airline, officials said. To attract business, fares offered are less than half those of other carriers, she said, with round trip ticket to Boise costing $38.

Flights now leave Twin Falls and Burley in the morning, arriving at Boise at 8:30 a.m. so persons can get in a full day's business with the evening.

The firm also has a flight to Salt Lake City at 9:55 a.m. from Twin Falls and Burley. "We've had lots of complaints on our 2-passenger Offer planes," the station manager said. She said the firm has not yet missed a flight since starting the Boise-Twin Falls flights earlier this spring. The firm has operated out of Halley for some time.

TWIN FALLS — Two women residents of the Miller Apartments, 428 Main Ave. N., reported money stolen from their apartments sometime between Saturday and Monday.

Ruth Peterson, who manages the apartments, told police she left $200 in her purse which she kept in a bedroom. She said she was only out of the apartment a few minutes at a time to attend to management matters. She discovered the money had been taken when she checked the purse Monday.

Virginia Peterson told police $68 was taken from a purse in her bedroom sometime Saturday night. She said she was away several hours playing cards in another apartment. She discovered the money missing Sunday morning.

Police are continuing to investigate the thefts.

Idaho First building damaged by car

TWIN FALLS — An estimated $1,000 damage resulted to the Idaho First National Bank building at 748 the Lakes Blvd. N. Tuesday when a car jumped the curb and struck the front of the building.

City police reported the vehicle was driven by Deborah Y. Johnson, 27, and was travelling north when it struck the curb and collided with a decorative arch at the front of the building, causing the arch to collapse.

The accident occurred about noon Tuesday.

Construction continues steady

TWIN FALLS — In spite of tight money and a slow down reported in real estate sales, building continues in Twin Falls at a steady pace.

Building Inspector Darrell Howard said 15 single family dwelling building permits have been issued in Twin Falls in the past two days in various parts of the city.

He said this is part of a steady trend that has been shown over the past several months with no less than in sight.

Jerome school board OKs contract

JEROME — The Jerome School Board voted 3-1 Monday night to accept a new teacher contract agreement.

Trustee Jerry Callen cast the one negative vote.

The settlement gives teachers a 10-percent salary increase, raises by $5 per month the district's contribution to medical insurance coverage and establishes a sick leave bank and a plan to reimburse teachers for unused personal leave.

Negotiations for the contract began in early April.

Jerome Teacher Organization members ratified the negotiated agreement about two weeks ago.

Gooding offers land for seniors center

GOODING — Gooding's senior citizens may soon get the new home they have been hoping for.

Plans for a future home for the Gooding Senior Citizens moved forward Monday night when city officials indicated they are ready to donate or lease city owned property for the structure.

At the Gooding city council meeting other business included adoption of a law prohibiting beer drinking in public and a decision not to apply for federal funds to replace a bridge on Idaho Street.

A spokesman for the senior citizens, Howard Niccum, Wendell, told city council members the seniors' building committee liked one city-owned site "so well we didn't look any further."

The site is located on the south side of the Little

Wood River between Idaho and California Streets. Council members had told Niccum previously they would do what they could to help the group obtain a site for their own building, since the new city hall-library complex now being remodeled from the old Safeway building will not have adequate meeting space for the seniors.

It was previously suggested that the public meeting room in the new complex could provide a home for the seniors. But the city lacks the money to finish the room, and senior citizens officials say they need a place where their equipment can be locked and that it would be difficult to share a room being used by other groups.

Both Mayor Don Morrow and the city council said they could see no objection to allowing the seniors to use the site along the river; although they pointed out it was in a flood plain.

City Attorney Cecil Hobbey was instructed to check into the best approach — either leasing it to the seniors or giving the land outright.

Niccum said his organization has "somewhere around $7,000" and that the Gooding center is near the top of the list for money to be distributed next year through the regional Office on Aging located at the College of Southern Idaho.

Niccum said he believed it would be much cheaper and easier to build a center, without getting a federal grant, although he is not sure whether money coming through the CSI regional office would also necessitate the red tape associated with an outright grant.

Councilmen urged him to get definite plans so he "would know what you're looking at."

Niccum said the committee is planning a 40 by 70 cinderblock building. He said many senior would volunteer their labor.

In other business the council adopted an ordinance prohibiting beer drinking in public places outside of bars. The ordinance would be a useful "tool" for the police to combat excessive drinking by youths on Main street and other areas in town, council members said.

The council decided not to apply for federal money to construct a new bridge on Idaho Street. Dale Riedel, of J-U-B Engineers, Twin Falls, said of the estimated total cost of $36,075, the federal share would be only $33,152.

Photographers added to staff

TWIN FALLS—The Times-News has added two new photographers.

Charles Kogod and Jose Lopez are now shooting pictures in Magic Valley for the newspaper.

Kogod, 26, from Washington, D.C., has worked for the Walla Walla Union-Bulletin and for newspapers in Oregon.

He was nominated as Time-Life photographic discovery of the year in 1977.

He also won third place in the Sigma Delta Chi Excellence in Journalism awards for 1977. The award was presented through the Inland Empire Chapter located in Spokane, Wash.

Kogod also was director of photography at Maude Kears Art Center in Eugene, Ore. He is a 1973 graduate of the University of Oregon Honors College.

Lopez, 20, of Santa Fe, has worked for papers in New Mexico. Before coming to Twin Falls, Jose was the in-state photographer for The Associated Press in New Mexico.

He is currently a senior majoring in Journalism at New Mexico State University in Las Cruces, N.M.

He won four awards in the New Mexico Press Association while working at his first internship in the summer of 1977. They included first in picture page, second in feature, and honorable mentions in spot news and photo sequence.

Both photographers are members of the National Press Photographers Association.

This national organization is designed to further the quality of photojournalistic work, and to help the working press photographer.

Attorneys seek delay in hearing

SHOSHONE—Attorneys for Myron Johnson, former Lincoln County treasurer who faces charges of misusing $130,000 in public funds, Monday asked for a delay of Johnson's preliminary hearing.

Preliminary hearings must be set within 20 days of arraignment unless a waiver is filed, according to Brenda Brown, of the Shoshone Magistrate office.

Johnson's attorneys filed the waiver Monday in 5th District Magistrate court in Shoshone.

Criminal charges against Johnson were filed May 26, and Johnson was arraigned without bail and released on his own recognizance May 30.

Also pending is a $216,000 civil suit brought against the former treasurer by Lincoln County after he resigned last fall. Bill Stuart, Lincoln County prosecutor, and William Hollifield, Twin Falls attorney who has been hired to assist in the case, May 25 requested a trial date be set in 5th District Court, but as of Tuesday one had not been set.

Lincoln County commission chairman, E.L. Ward, said the county would be represented by Hollifield if the cases are not completed before July 1 when Stuart will become magistrate.

Stuart will resign as prosecutor by that date, but has indicated he would continue in the post until toward the end of the month, depending upon how soon he can wind up his private practice, Ward said.

Qualls announces three promotions

TWIN FALLS — Three promotions and the addition of two new officers were announced Friday by Twin Falls Police Chief Tim Qualls.

Robert Hodge, a uniform officer with five years experience on the department, has been promoted from patrolman to patrol sergeant in the uniform division.

James Milton, who has been on the force 12 years was promoted from patrolman to traffic sergeant, and Don Waldon, who joined the Twin Falls department two years ago after 12 years with the San Francisco police department, has been transferred from the patrol division and promoted to the detective division.

Qualls said the promotions were effective June 1.

Two new officers also began work June 1.

Gary Motzner, formerly a deputy sheriff in Twin Falls county, was hired to work as a police department radio dispatcher.

Dave Nelson, who formerly worked for the department, has been rehired as a radio dispatcher.

Accident victim reported 'improved'

POCATELLO — LuAnn Hogg, 44, Burley, was reported in fair condition Tuesday at St. Anthony Hospital in Pocatello, almost three weeks after she was injured in a vehicle accident south of Burley.

A hospital spokeswoman said Mrs. Hogg has been transferred from the intensive care ward to the surgical ward. She said Mrs. Hogg's condition also has improved since last week from critical to fair and she is drifting in and out of consciousness.

Mrs. Hogg was injured May 18 when the car she was driving south on Highway 27 was struck by a dump truck, according to Cassia County Sheriff's reports.

Hagerman youth hurt

HAGERMAN — Lane Pugmire, 11, Hagerman, was listed in good condition Friday at Gooding Memorial Hospital after being injured when the bicycle he was riding collided with a pickup truck.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Doyle Pugmire.

His father said the boy was riding in an alley when he ran into the side of the truck about 4:45 p.m. Thursday, according to the Gooding County Sheriff's office.

He was taken to the Gooding Hospital for treatment of knee injuries and a possible concussion.

Restaurant dining grows

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — By 1980, Americans will be spending half their food dollars in restaurants, a restaurant association official said Tuesday.

Between 35 and 47 percent of the food dollar at present goes to meals eaten in restaurants and that amount is growing, Peter Canakes, executive director of the Iowa Restaurant Association, said.

Canakes said rising food prices are among the main reasons for the projected increase.

"People are finding it as cheap to take their family out as it is to go to the supermarket and buy a roast," he said. "So when this occurs they are often going to the easier alternative — eating out."

Families with several children are finding they can eat out for less than it would cost to produce a similar meal with all the trimmings.

But the growing number of customers "does not mean a sudden boom for the restaurants, he said. Some restaurants will not be able to survive.

"On the contrary, there will be some closures," he said. "I wish this weren't the case. But, those who don't change and don't hustle to keep up with the times and don't work at it, will fail and have to close."

The fast-food restaurant is tops today in family eating with the supper-club atmosphere right behind for couples.

"This is when you consider your average eating habits," Canakes said.

"When mom and dad are taking the kids out, they want a good deal for their money and a lot of food."

"We will be seeing more and more fast-food restaurants springing up around the country," he said.

But mother and father also are spending money on themselves.

"We've also got a good number of super-type clubs holding their own in markets. These are not the places that you would take the kids, though," he said. "There always has to be a place for just the two of them — for an occasional treat."

Frying machine wiring may shock

WASHINGTON (UPI) — More than a quarter million Great American Frying Machines have faulty wiring and should be returned to the manufacturer, says the Consumer Product Safety Commission.

It said the deep-fat fryers may pose a potential shock hazard because wiring inside them could move during use and make contact with the metal housing. So far two shock injuries have been reported, it said, neither serious.

"Consumers should stop using the fryers immediately and return them to American Electric Corp., 937 West Jefferson Blvd., Culver City, Calif., 90230, attention customer relations department," the agency said.

Consumers can get their purchase price refunded, plus the cost of mailing the machines in, if they enclose proof of purchase.

Keeping your eye on the ball could be dangerous

That's what Rodney Sample thought as he first, soft-tossed a ball to his teammate, and then ducked when he heard the crack of the bat. He quickly realized that the ball was heading for the backstop instead of his head, but he kept his arms close to his face just in case. The ten-year-old from Castleford was one of many youths that participated Tuesday in the baseball clinic held at the Jaycee diamond in Harmon Park. The clinic is being sponsored by the Twin Falls Parks and Recreation Dept. and will continue through Friday afternoon.

Business panel advises LA to drop Olympics

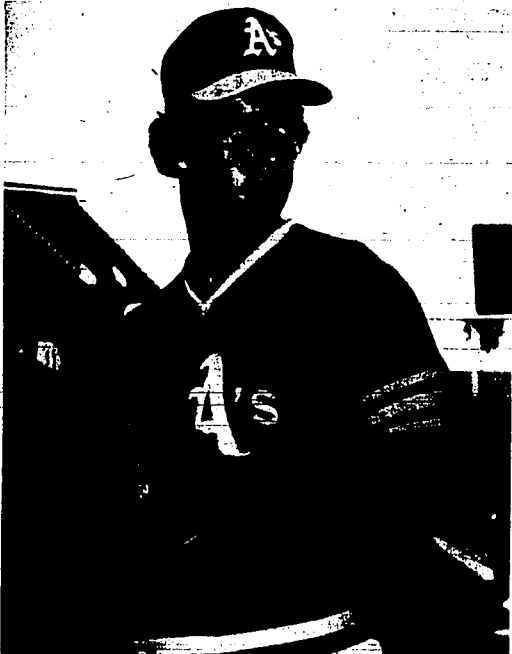

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A panel of businessmen named to negotiate an Olympics contract acceptable to both city taxpayers and the International Olympic Committee has decided to recommend that the city drop its bid for the 1984 Games unless the city can be freed of all financial liability. "By unanimous vote of all seven members present, we resolved that it is our intent to work out a contract with the IOC, which will include no liability on the part of the city of Los Angeles," John Argue, head of the panel named earlier this week by Mayor Tom Bradley, announced.

"We further determined that if it is not possible that we will then recommend that the 1984 Olympic Games not be held in Los Angeles." Argue, an attorney who also heads the private Southern California Committee for the Olympic Games, made the announcement after a meeting of the panel Monday night. He also disclosed plans to meet with IOC representatives "at an early date" to determine whether it would be feasible for an Olympics organizing committee to accept financial liability for the Games and to learn which IOC executive will negotiate on that group's behalf. Argue said the committee plans to appoint a subcommittee of insurance experts to study the admittedly remote possibility of obtaining liability insurance, a proposal originally suggested by IOC officials. But Argue added, "We do not have too much confidence in insurance as a solution." A spokesman said the new committee also agreed in its first session to make public announcements of all meetings, to not issue any gag orders, to treat

IOC officials tactfully and to work independent of Bradley's office and the City Council. In a related development, City Council President John Ferraro and a majority of council members indicated Tuesday they were willing to let the panel work without interference, but insisted that the contract will eventually need council approval. Councilman Bob Farrell, meanwhile, released a letter to Bradley asking him to expand the panel by three members — Rep. Yvonne Braithwaite Burke, D-Los Angeles, former President Gerald Ford and a White House staff member selected by President Carter. "It is not just the city but the United States who will host these Games," Farrell said. "It is not just a local issue but a matter of national pride." Bradley named the committee after negotiations between the city and the IOC broke down in a dispute over the liability issue. The IOC has tentatively awarded Los Angeles the 1984 Games, providing officials can sign a mutually acceptable contract by July 31.

DRESSED up and everywhere to go is 18-year-old Mike Morgan who is scheduled to pitch against the Baltimore Orioles this Sunday. The best part of the situation is that he was drafted Tuesday by the Oakland A's.

ASU slugger first in baseball draft

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Atlanta Braves, whose park is a home run hitter's dream but whose lineup has been unable to supply the long ball, chose college baseball's all-time leading slugger Tuesday to open major league baseball's summer free agent draft. Bob Horner, an infielder from Arizona State who set NCAA single season and career home run records this year, was the No. 1 choice in the 14th annual summer draft. "All our scouts felt he was the best available player," said Bill Lucas, the Braves' player personnel director. "It's no secret we need a third baseman with power. His ability to play third base plus his home run power was the reason we picked him." The announcement was made by Paul Snyder, Atlanta's minor league administrator, from the team's home office via a conference call hookup to Commissioner Bowie Kuhn's office. Horner, a 21-year-old junior from Glendale, Ariz., was a starting shortstop as a freshman before moving over to second the last two seasons. The Braves, however, project him as a slugging third baseman who can take advantage of the short home run dimensions in Atlanta. Lucas said Horner, who will pass up his final year of college eligibility, would be assigned to the Braves' Class AA team in Savannah, Ga., when he signs in a few weeks. He was originally drafted by the Oakland A's in the summer of 1975. The Braves hope Horner can follow in a line of power-hitting infielders that includes Hall of Famer Eddie Mathews, Dave Johnson and Darrell Evans. Horner headed a group of four players from Arizona State drafted in the first three rounds. Shortstop Hubie Brooks, who set the NCAA Division I record for hits in a season with 123, was the New York Mets first pick and third overall. Cleveland named catcher Chris Bando, the brother of Milwaukee third baseman Sal Bando, in the second round and Montreal chose outfielder Steve Michael in the third. Arizona State is currently battling in Omaha, Neb., for its second straight College World Series title. Horner's 58 career home runs is an NCAA Division I record. His 25 homers this year broke the Division I mark of 23 set two years ago by Bill Ewing of Wyoming. For the second consecutive year Horner led the nation in home runs and RBI. A right-handed hitter, Horner batted 425 this year entering the College World Series and had a .386 career average. He was the MVP at the College World Series last year. "The way things worked out, I couldn't be happier," Horner said. "Atlanta is a youthful club and it's a building program. This fits my scheme of things perfect." Horner was the third Arizona State player in 14 years to be named the first choice in the draft. Rick Monday, now with Los Angeles, was the first pick in the inaugural draft in 1965 and Floyd Bannister of Houston was the top choice in 1976. No other college or high school has ever had more than one player chosen No. 1

The clubs selected in reverse order of their 1977 finishes, with the National League picking ahead of the American League under a rotating system. For the first time, the draft provided compensation to teams who lost veterans in the re-entry draft. Selected Lloyd Moseby, an 18-year-old left-handed hitting first baseman-outfielder from Oakland, Calif., High School. The Blue Jays immediately announced the signing of the 6-3, 200-pounder and said he will be assigned to the Pioneer League farm club at Medicine Hat in Alberta, Canada. After the Mets chose Brooks, Oakland took the first pitcher, right-hander Mike Morgan of Valley High School, Las Vegas, Nev. Rod Busberger of Southern California was the first college pitcher taken and the 11th player overall when the right-hander was picked by Houston. Detroit, picking 12th, chose outfielder Kirk Gibson of Michigan State, an outstanding football prospect who intends to play for the Spartan football team this fall. The "New York Yankees received two extra first round selections as compensation for the loss of veteran free agents Ron Blomberg to the White Sox and Mike Torrez to Boston. The Yankees chose shortstop Rex Hudler from Bullard High School, Fresno, Calif., and outfielder Matthew Wilentz of Williamsville, N.Y., High School as their compensation choices. They closed out the first round by selecting right-handed pitcher Brian Ryder of Shrewsbury, Mass., High School.

USC downs ASU in college series

OMAHA, Neb. (UPI) — Chris Smith slammed a two-run double and Joe Boxberger held the Sun Devils to two runs to lead the University of Southern California to a 5-2 victory Tuesday over defending champion Arizona State in the 1978 College World Series.

Tuesday's game left USC the only unbeaten team in the series. USC jumped to a 4-1 lead in the fifth inning. Dave Van Gorder doubled, then scored on Bob Skube's triple, and Smith's game-winning double brought Skube home.

Right-handed Boxberger, 22-1, held the Sun Devils to six hits and two runs.

A Sun Devil error scored Tim Tolman in the second inning to give USC an early 1-0 lead. Arizona State's Glenn Moon singled and scored on a Steve Michael double to tie the game 1-1 in the fifth inning.

Jamie Allen's solo home run in the sixth inning set the Trojan lead at 2-1.

More than 15,000 fans turned out to watch Tuesday's battle of the unbeaten, breaking the series' single game attendance record of 14,000 set in 1972.

Arizona State, 55-11, plays Miami of Florida, 50-11, and North Carolina, 38-16, takes on USC, 52-10, Wednesday night.

Ousted player says pills always given

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Willie Johnston, Scotland's World Cup player banished from his team for taking drugs, flew home to Britain Tuesday night.

Before leaving his team headquarters at Cordoba, Johnston said the positive dope test on him was being used by the Scottish team to mask the fact that Scotland had played badly in losing 3-1 to Peru in its opening match.

"The pills I took before the match with Peru were always given to us in Scotland," Johnston said, adding that team manager Ally MacLeod had never warned the squad about drugs.

"They are trying to sling mud at me to somehow cover up the defeat by Peru," Johnston said. "It was only after the defeat that Ally MacLeod took the trouble to speak to us about these matters."

Johnston is reported to have said: "Please believe me. It was a genuine mistake. All I can say is that I did it innocently."

Johnston flew to Rio to connect with a flight from London.

Johnston's admission that he took two stimulant tablets before last Saturday's 2-1 defeat of Peru has stirred up speculation that the practice is widespread in English soccer and has highlighted the lack of control over a habit which was thought to be largely absent from the game.

Professor Arnold Beckett, in charge of dope testing during the 1966 World Cup in England and a leading authority on doping in sport, said Tuesday he had "strong information" that stimulants were used in English soccer.

Alan Hardaker, secretary of the English Football Teachers' League refused to comment on any aspect of doping in British soccer, but Professor Beckett was reported to have said: "I feel strongly that it is wrong there should be no testing in our own football program."

"Ideally they would be the sort of random tests that are carried out in other sports such as weightlifting and athletics. It would be wise to have them in soccer."

"British soccer must put its house in order — even down to club level. It is no use the football authorities saying they don't have a list. It is there — the FIFA list."

Johnston is quoted as saying other players in Britain take the same kind of stimulant tablet which contain the drug fenammin and are marketed as Reactiva.

Now there is growing pressure for soccer clubs to use a new drug detection unit due to be established at the Chelsea College, London, by the English Sports Council.

A spokesman for the Sports Council said: "Drugs are now more widely used in sports than ever before. Now it is up to the Football League and the Football Association to decide if they want to cooperate in a scheme which we are making available in August."

English national soccer manager Ron Greenwood said after the ban on Johnston was announced: "Lots of players use lots of things. I don't think they do anything. They are mostly psychological."

Observers agree that Johnston's poor performance against Peru owed nothing to stimulants and the player himself insists he only took the pills to alleviate depression and was not aware they contained a drug banned by FIFA.

Auburn cage coach killed in motel fire

COLUMBUS, Ga. (UPI) — Paul Lambert, picked two months ago to rebuild Auburn's sagging basketball fortunes, died Tuesday in a motel fire that caused heavy damage and injured several other guests and hotel employees.

The 43-year-old Lambert, who was taking part in a two-day Columbus coaching clinic, was the only fatality in the fire.

Auburn President Harry M. Philpott said school officials were shocked and saddened by Lambert's death. "In the brief time he has been in Auburn, we came to admire him for his dedication to our program and for his fine character," Philpott said.

The fire broke out about 5:15 a.m. at the Airport Holiday Inn, sending smoke billowing through the second floor wing. Some guests smashed windows and jumped to the ground while others fled to the roof.

Fire Chief George Lamb said Lambert, who switched to Auburn from a head coaching job at Southern Illinois, was found lying face down on the floor of his room. Lamb said it appeared Lambert was "attempting to find his way out, groping through the heavy smoke."

Auburn officials said Muscogee County authorities determined the cause of Lambert's death was asphyxiation from carbon monoxide poisoning.

The fire was believed to have started in a pile of mattresses stacked in the motel hallway. The used mattresses were to have been exchanged for new ones.

Lambert was named head coach at Auburn in April, replacing Dr. Bob Davis, who was forced to resign a month earlier when basketball fell on hard times at the Plains. Lambert had a 126-84 record in eight years with Southern Illinois, including 22-7 in 1976-77 when the Salukis went to the NCAA tourney.

Former Knicks star elected

TRENTON, N.J. (UPI) — Former New York Knicks' basketball star Bill Bradley Tuesday won the Democratic Senate nomination in New Jersey.

Bradley, an All-America at Princeton and star forward for the New York Knicks, in his first try for public office easily defeated former state treasurer Richard Leone.

With 1,383 of the 5,007 precincts counted, Bradley led Leone 56 to 30.24, as Leone failed to poll as strongly as had been expected in Hudson County. A third Democrat, former State Sen. Alexander Menza, trailed with 11.50.

Do or die for Sonics, Bullets in game seven tonight

SEATTLE (UPI) — Come Sonic Boom or Bullet Bust, today is the final day of the 1977-78 NBA season — and as the Washington Bullets went through their final workout Tuesday, Dick Motta displayed some flawless arithmetic.

"We got it down to 12 teams, then down to eight, then to four and now there are only two," said the Washington coach. "Tomorrow night there's one."

For the first time since 1974, the NBA championship series is going a full seven games. The Bullets evened the series Sunday in Landover, Md., with a 117-82 drubbing of the Sonics.

Motta said he would consider the season a success even if the Bullets lose the final game. But with their loss in game six, he thinks the pressure is on the Sonics.

"This is the first time Seattle has had playoff pressure," Motta said. "They haven't had playoff pressure for one single minute in the series — they always had a tomorrow."

The Bullets have won three games by a total of 47 points while the Sonics have won their three by a total of just nine. But Seattle Coach Lenny Wilkens doesn't think Sunday's blowout will bother his young team.

"The team has a lot of pride," said Wilkens. "The championship is at stake and that's uppermost in their minds."

The Bullets, playing in their third NBA championship series, are three games closer to the title than they've ever been. In 1971 against Milwaukee and again in 1975 against Golden State, the Bullets lost four straight.

Motta thinks Seattle's play in the last five quarters ought to worry the Sonics.

"They're going to have to think for the first time about that shot going in," he said. "And when you start aiming that shot, there's a difference."

"They only made three field goals the last nine minutes of game 5 (won by Seattle 98-94), and they started out that same way Sunday."

"There's a little more at stake now."

The no-name Sonics are trying to write the final chapter to a storybook comeback. When Wilkens took over as Seattle coach on Nov. 30, the Sonics were 5-17 and could find only the hapless New Jersey Nets below them in the NBA standings.

Wilkens completely revamped the Sonics' lineup. The five starters the last half of the season — John Johnson and rookie Jaak Silman at forward, Marvin Webster at center, and Dennis Johnson and Gus Williams at guard — had a total of just 12 years of pro experience at the start of the season.

Eight of the 11 Sonics on the playoff roster did not play in Seattle last season.

The Bullets' veteran lineup — Elvin Hayes and Bob Dandridge at forward, Wes Unseld at center, and Kevin Grevey and Tom Henderson at guard — boasted 30 years of NBA experience at the start of the season.

Grevey, who was limited to six minutes of playing time with an injured wrist Sunday, worked out with the team Tuesday. Motta said he would watch how Grevey performed before deciding whether to start him Wednesday.

Wilkens said the poor performance in the sixth game will not make the Sonics any more cautious.

"We're going to come out and play our game. You don't get into a championship to be conservative."

Motta said he felt relaxed before the Bullets' triumph Sunday.

Larry Costello named Bucks head coach

Larry Costello

CHICAGO (UPI) — Larry Costello, considered a coaching maverick when he tutored the Milwaukee Bucks for nine years, said Tuesday he would carry a different attitude into his new job as coach of the Chicago Bulls.

"I think a soft sell is better than a hard sell," Costello said. "I don't intend to raise my voice. Some players are very, very sensitive. I can see the need to make adjustments and I know what to do to get it done."

Costello signed a three-year contract estimated at more than $60,000 annually Monday, ending a two year career on the sidelines as a scout for the Houston Rockets, and a part-time radio color announcer on basketball games.

His outlook, despite his "soft sell" attitude, did not mean lack of discipline, he emphasized at Tuesday's news conference.

"You need a certain amount of discipline," he said, "not for punishment, but to help a player develop and reach his potential."

Players, he said, have "become independent because of the money situation. Some have drive and others need to be pushed—I will try to get the most out of them in the team concept."

"Today a coach has to work harder, understand the players better and be more flexible and do what management wants. If you don't go along, you're not going to succeed."

Costello said he anticipated no problem in communicating with the players, although he recognized that in his term with the Bucks "it was said that I can't communicate. I believe that's false. I'll talk to anybody any time, and I like input from the players."

"Communication is a two way street. If a player doesn't want to talk to me, we can't communicate. I like to communicate on a one and one basis. You can reach a player better, and he understands you better. A player doesn't want to be embarrassed in front of his team."

"But no one coaches super. No one's perfect. I think I'm better and more comfortable now than in 1968."

Costello became coach of the Bulls in 1968 after starring as a player for Syracuse and Philadelphia. His teams won one league championship, five division titles and reached the playoffs six times in his nine years.

Costello said he believed the Bulls had good talent, but the bench could be improved. He described his probable top five of Artis Gilmore, Mickey Johnson, Scott May, Wilbur Holland and Norm Van Lier as a "quick team."

The Bulls problems in the past, he said, were failure to take enough shots and get "the easy shot," lack of a running game, and "not enough aggression on defense."

"I want Van Lier to score more," he said, "to be more offensive minded. I know he can control the offense more, and we need this."

"I'm very excited. I hope I can put the team together. I know it's not going to be easy, but we'll try to produce a championship."

PCAA heads visit USU

LOGAN, Utah (UPI) — The Pacific Coast Athletic Association begins three days of meetings Wednesday on the campus of its newest member, Utah State University.

A USU spokesman said Tuesday there would be two major items before the school presidents, athletic directors, and faculty representatives.

A new commissioner must be named to replace Jess Hill, who retires July 1.

In addition, the leaders will consider changing the name of the conference to more accurately reflect the geographical situation now that Utah State is a member.

USU has already competed in some spring sports with the PCAA and will join the football schedule next season.

Table Tennis meet to open June 29

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — The U.S. Open Table Tennis Championships, enjoying a dramatic increase in worldwide prestige, will draw more than 600 of the world's best players from at least 12 countries, officials said Tuesday.

Okla. Educational Television Authority said the four-hour telecast would be the longest presentation of table tennis ever shown on American television.

More than 2,000 matches in all classes will be played at the Myriad Convention Center June 29-July 2, with four hours of finals to be telecast nationally July 16 by the Public Broadcasting Service.

Experience against youth in British Open match

TROON, Scotland (UPI) — Frank Campbell, a 58-year-old golfing grandfather, pits his experience against South Africa's brilliant teenager Philip Jonas Wednesday to shoulder the U.S. challenge in the third round of the British Amateur golf championship at Royal Troon.

Campbell, a former professional from Huntsville, Ala., is savoring the prospect of sampling Jonas' talents at first hand.

"I have heard a lot about this youngster," said Campbell. "I know he is rated very highly by Gary Player and that is a good enough recommendation for anybody. It will be very interesting to see the outcome."

Jonas burst onto the scene when he was only 14 and led after two rounds of the South African Open two years ago.

Campbell gives his chance after providing a gritty performance to defeat Britain's Ian Bradshaw on the last green yesterday.

Campbell, who spent four years as a professional just after the war, is one of the four Americans to win through to the third round while there are another 15 still waiting to settle their second-round matches.

But at least one U.S. challenger is assured of a place in the fourth round with Ted Ferguson, Midland, Texas, facing Dick Welch, Northbrook, Ill.

Steven Waddell has the toughest of the outstanding second-round ties. After disposing of Walker Cup player Peter Hedges Tuesday he is paired against another British international, Ireland's Pat Mulcare.

But he is confident he can complete a notable double.

"Playing against Walker Cup players doesn't particularly bother me. At 29 I may be considered by some to be too old to represent America in the competition. But this event is part of my buildup in the hope of winning a place in America's Walker Cup team," said Waddell.

Earlier, Jim Gabrielsen of Atlanta, one of the strongest U.S. contenders, suffered a 19th-hole defeat by Scot David Roxburgh.

NFL agrees on injury list

NEW YORK (UPI) — NFL owners agreed on informal guidelines to enforce the rule against hiding players illegally on the injured reserve list, NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle said Tuesday.

Rozelle also announced teams will be allowed to suit up 45 players for each game, rather than the 43 permitted last year.

The owners hope to conclude their series of meetings Wednesday. The meetings began in March in Palm Springs, Calif.

"The owners have asked the league office to enforce the rule against putting players on the injured reserve list to circumvent the player limit rule," Rozelle said. "We agreed that an injury would have to be severe enough to keep a player out at least four weeks before he can go on injured reserve. Where it appears there is a clear attempt to get around the rule, disciplinary action will be taken that could be draft choices. That normally gets their attention."

In the past, Rozelle said, teams had been known to put as many as 18 or 19 players on injured reserve at one time. There is no limit to the amount of players who can be put on injured reserve.

Teams must still cut their rosters to 43 players by Aug. 28, but can add two more and activate them. Last year only 43 players could be dropped, while two had to be placed on an inactive list.

Do you know the one thing that shoppers most dislike about shopping in supermarkets? The numerous quick decisions they have to make therein. Or so says a merchandising expert who has made a study of the matter. What these buyers would prefer, it's thought, would be a home microprocessing memory bank on which they could compile their weekly shopping list at leisure; they could dial up the market, press a button to order the things they want electronically, and sit back to wait for its delivery.

The mineral value of the chemical elements in your body, not counting the gold fillings, is now said to be $5.60.

Claim is the average bedsheet will last through 100 washings.

KETCHUP

Q. "Is it all right to serve ketchup in its own bottle as a formal dinner?"
A. Certainly is, say the etiquette experts. Ketchup is not as vulgar as you think; it's rated with steak sauce, chili pepper juice, like that. The label counts. Understand this is also true of hard liquor. A decanter creates distinction. To let them know what they're getting, I say, put it in their original Mason jar.

Q. "Never mind whether it was the Indians or the Whites who first started the practice of scalping. The question is, when a victim was scalped, how much of the scalp was cut loose?"

A. Just enough to hold a recognizable lock of hair. Usually, maybe a piece of skin the size of a half dollar. That was typical. Object was to take home proof of the killing. A lot of times much more scalp than that was taken, though.

SHEEP

Many a shepherd divides up his livestock into flocks of 100 each with a ratio of one black ram to 99 white ewes. To count them then, say from a hillside overlooking the whole schmeer, aid herder need only tally the blacks and multiply appropriately. Or so it's reported. Is it true?

No river's name is more frequently misspelled than that of the Swannee. Blame Stephen Foster. He thought he needed a two-syllable title, so changed the name of his song to "Swanee."

Pacers offer No. 1 draft choice to get players

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — The Indiana Pacers Wednesday hoped to turn the first pick in the National Basketball Association draft into at least two players.

The NBA cellar-dwellers were considering a stack of offers for the number one choice in Friday's collegiate draft, including a proposed deal with Philadelphia bringing forward George McGinnis back to Indianapolis.

General Manager and Coach Bobby Leonard has been on the phone constantly in recent days discussing the various proposals.

"We're hopeful of getting more than one player out of this," said Lee Daniel, the club's spokesman. "We're trying to turn the number one pick into two players — or into an experienced player and another high draft pick."

"If we can't, then we've narrowed our number one choice down to three players — Mychal Thompson of Minnesota, Rick Robey of Kentucky and Phil Ford of North Carolina."

"We're trying to decide what's best for the franchise. We hope never to be in this position again, and we can't afford to make a mistake."

Leonard listed forward Larry Bird of Indiana State as his top choice, but the All-America junior plans to return to school this fall and play one more year of collegiate ball.

"We'd have a year to sign him, but we just can't afford to wait," said Daniel. "We need help for next season."

But the Pacers' spokesman predicted Bird would go on the first round.

"There's no doubt someone like Portland, which has three first round picks and can afford to wait a year, will be willing to take him," he said.

The Pacers confirmed last week they were dickering with Philadelphia for the 6-8, 235-pound McGinnis, who starred for the Pacers in the old American Basketball Association before jumping to the Pacers three years ago.

A published report said the Pacers would give up the top pick and forward Mel Bennett in return for McGinnis and two other players, with Philadelphia agreeing to pay part of McGinnis' $500,000 a year salary. Indiana obtained Bennett from the Pacers for its No. 1 draft pick in 1980.

The New York Post reported the deal was complete except for McGinnis' approval.

His mother, Willie Belle McGinnis of Indianapolis, said Wednesday George may come home.

"I'm not for sure, but I'm hoping he's coming back for my sake," she said. "I talked to him last week and he wasn't for sure. There was nothing definite, but he did tell me he was going to come home."

The Pacers' top forward, high-jumping rebounder Danny Roundfield, played out his option last season and is considering offers from a half-dozen clubs.

"We have made him an offer and are trying hard to re-sign him," said Daniels. "We're very hopeful."

Leonard contends he needs another forward and another guard, along with his five starters from last season, to become a playoff contender. The starters were rookie center James Edwards, forwards Roundfield, James Bantom and guard Steve Sobers and Earl Tatum.

Jets confirm offer

WEST HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (UPI) — Leon Hess, chairman of the board for the New York Jets, confirmed Tuesday that he had received a $19 million offer for the team but indicated that his share of the National Football League club was not for sale.

A five-man group headed by James V. Aufero, a land developer in Italy, made the $19 million offer.

Club President Jim Kensil released a statement Tuesday saying, "an unsolicited offer has been received by Leon Hess, chairman of the New York Jets, for the purchase of the team. Mr. Hess said he would submit the offer to his two partners but Mr. Hess' personal interest was not for sale."

The other members of the group include T.P. Johnson, co-owner of the Pittsburgh Pirates; John Brunetti, owner of Hialeah Race Course in Florida; Martin Fife, a New York industrialist; and Bernard Kalstein, a fabric manufacturer. The group indicated it is willing to spend another $4 million to transform the Jets, who were 3-11 last season, into contenders next year.

"We haven't had any talks with them before," said Aufero from his New York restaurant. "But we are a bonafide group. We've got some substantial people and we think they're ready to sell. We're not interested in buying a piece of the team. We want to buy the whole thing."

Aufero's only previous background in sports was in horse racing. He owned his own stable, J.J. Stabile, in the 1960s.

Woman drag champ awaits meet

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — If drag racing champion Shirley Muldowney is going to get back on the winning track, it should be in the Spring Nationals this week.

Muldowney has recorded a series of firsts in the Spring Nationals at National Trail Raceway near here and she probably wouldn't mind if most National Hot Rod Association competition was held at the raceway.

The first hurdle for Muldowney at the $25,500 Spring Nationals will be Thursday's time trials. She is off to a slow start in defense of the most prestigious title in drag racing.

Muldowney has won the Top Fuel category at the Spring Nationals the past two years and set the track record set in 1976 at 5.96 seconds.

Besides those achievements, the other firsts that came to Muldowney during the Spring Nationals included the first time she ever qualified as a driver, the first time she ever won a round of racing and first in which she led the qualifying heats.

But Muldowney has had some rocky moments in the current campaign, including her failure to qualify at the Gator Nationals in Gainesville, Fla. But recent regional victories indicate she may regain prestige at National Trail Raceway.

The only driver to have exceeded 250 miles per hour in a quarter-mile course three times, Muldowney had the fastest time on a drag strip, 5.77 seconds in 1976 and 1977.

With five career victories on the NHRA circuit, she is third on the all-time list behind former Spring Nationals champion Don Garlits of Saffers, Fla., (13) and Gary Beck of El Toro, Calif. (7).

West dumps East team in golf meet

EUGENE, Ore. (UPI) — The West defeated the East 124 to 81 Tuesday in a preliminary to the NCAA golf championships that begin at Eugene Country Club today.

Biggest win of the day was the 4 and 5 victory by Mark Wiehe of San Jose State and Tony Sills of USC over Mark Davis of West Chester and Scott Slinger of Ball State.

Like Beck, Garlits and Richard Tharp, Muldowney's ultimate goal is to win two national titles. No one has accomplished that feat since the Top Fuel program was reorganized on a national points basis in 1974. Beck won in 1974, Garlits in 1975 and Tharp in 1976.

Churchill Downs officials examine sale to Kentucky

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — The Churchill Downs Board of Directors met Tuesday but took no action in regard to a possible purchase of the racetrack by the Commonwealth of Kentucky.

The proposed purchase of the historic track by the state was discussed at the board meeting, but Downs Board Chairman Thurston Morton said, "No action toward serious negotiations with the state is planned at this time."

Morton was applauded by the other shareholders when he said, "I'm pretty good at reading the tea leaves and I think I'll know how to act when the time comes."

He gave the answer at the meeting in reply to a shareholder from Chicago, who asked the status of the possible purchase of the Downs, site of the Kentucky Derby, by the Commonwealth.

Before Tuesday's meeting, Morton, a former U.S. senator, had been quoted as saying a recent count of stockholders and board members indicated a majority opposed the sale of the track.

Kentucky Commerce Commissioner W. Terry McBrayer, Lexington, was quoted in Tuesday's edition of The Courier-Journal as saying he opposed any effort by the state to get into the "gambling business" through purchase of the track.

The 1978 General Assembly passed a law creating a Churchill Downs Authority, which goes into effect June 16.

At that time, Gov. Julian Carroll may appoint three regulators to discuss sale terms with the Downs. If the track's stockholders indicate a desire to do so.

If the state agrees to the purchase, the governor would then appoint a nine-member, self-perpetuating board to govern the track — supposedly assuring its preservation free from politics.

The governor has said repeatedly that any such action must be initiated by the track — not the commonwealth.

Carroll supported the legislation creating the Downs authority, to protect the track from a possibly detrimental takeover by out-of-state interests.

The Board of Directors re-elected the company's present slate of officers for the upcoming year.

Reappointed were Morton, chairman of the board; Lynn Stone, president; John Calbreath, Columbus, Ohio, vice-president; Bob Gorham, vice president and resident manager; Kenneth Cayte, secretary-treasurer, and Clyde Spaw, assistant secretary-treasurer.

Says... Cooking habits are hard to change

Happy birthday? Let's face it! Elevating that special day of each year can be exulting for the celebrant as well as the celebrated.

Okay, but how? Do it differently! Make the feasting yourself and twist the traditional. Anybody, no matter the age and sex, can do it.

WILLETTA WARGERS

By NORMA HERZINGER Times-News writer TWIN FALLS—After cooking for a family all these years, many of us find it more than difficult to cook for only one or two.

Even shopping habits must be revised to accommodate the single or the twosome; often making it necessary to stop at the market more often because one avoids buying fresh produce or meat in any quantity.

Cooking for one or two fits the lifestyle of millions of American people, however, so I think with the others must adjust my way of thinking as well as favorite recipes to keep balanced meals on the menu and avoid waste.

With this thought in mind I recently took advantage of an offer from Best Foods, a division of CPC International, to send us some good recipes created expressly to serve two. The three dishes I have picked from those sent are not intended to make up a menu. Rather, each can be the focal point around which a menu for two is built.

When Chicken Supreme is the entree, the meal could be completed with a vegetable, salad and a very simple dessert such as fresh fruit. On another occasion, the Green Bean Casserole can give the vegetable dish the starring menu role. Chocolate Souffle is right for one of those occasions when the twosome would rather play it low calorie on the main course in anticipation of a gourmet dessert.

All three dishes were developed in the Kingsford Kitchens at Best Foods. For the convenience of those who own a microwave oven, directions for microwave as well as conventional cooking are given for all three recipes.

CHICKEN SUPREME 1 whole chicken breast, halved

1/2 teaspoon salt Pepper to taste 3 tablespoons margarine 1 cup sliced mushrooms 1 cup milk 1 tablespoon cornstarch

2 tablespoons dry sherry Sprinkle chicken with salt and pepper. In 8-inch baking dish or two individual baking dishes, place chicken skin side down. Dot with margarine. Bake in 350 degree oven 20 minutes.

Add mushrooms. Bake five minutes. In small saucepan, stir milk into cornstarch until smooth. Stirring constantly, bring to boil over medium heat and boil one minute. Stir in sherry. Pour over chicken. Stir well to incorporate pan juices and mushrooms. Bake five minutes or until hot and bubbly. Serves two.

Microwave Method Sprinkle chicken with salt and pepper. In an 8-inch earthenware baking dish or two individual baking dishes, place chicken skin side down. Dot with margarine. Microwave with high power 5 minutes. Turn chicken and microwave an additional 5 minutes. Add mushrooms. Microwave 2 minutes. In small saucepan stir milk into cornstarch until smooth. Stirring constantly, bring to boil over medium heat and boil 1 minute. Stir in sherry. Pour over chicken. Stir well to incorporate pan juices and mushrooms. Microwave 1 minute. Serves two.

GREEN BEAN CASSEROLE 2 cups green beans, cut in 1-inch lengths 1 1/2-ounce can sliced mushrooms, drained 1 tablespoon cornstarch 1/2 teaspoon dry mustard 1 1/4 cups chicken bouillon 1 tablespoon margarine

1/2 cup french-fried onion rings In 1 1/2 quart casserole dish, toss together green beans and mushrooms in small bowl, stir together cornstarch and mustard. Stir in bouillon until smooth. Pour over vegetables. Dot with margarine.

Cover and bake in a 400-degree oven for 15 minutes. Sprinkle top with onion rings. Bake an additional five minutes or until sauce is bubbly. Serves two.

Microwave Method In 1 1/2 quart earthenware casserole dish, toss together green beans and mushrooms in small bowl, stir together cornstarch and mustard. Stir in bouillon until smooth. Pour over vegetables. Dot with margarine. Cover and microwave with high power 12 minutes. Sprinkle top with onion rings. Microwave an additional three minutes or until sauce is bubbly. Serves two.

CHOCOLATE SOUFFLE 2 1-ounce squares semi-sweet chocolate 2 tablespoons sugar 1 tablespoon cornstarch 1 tablespoon dark rum 2 eggs separated Dish of salt

In small saucepan, melt chocolate over low heat. Stir together sugar, cornstarch and rum until mixed. Stir into chocolate. In small bowl with mixer at high speed, beat egg whites and salt until stiff peaks form. In small bowl with mixer at high speed, beat egg yolks until thick and lemon colored.

Add chocolate mixture and beat until blended. Fold egg whites into chocolate mixture. Turn into two 6-ounce souffle dishes or two 10-ounce custard cups. Bake in a 375-degree oven 12 to 15 minutes or until knife inserted in center comes out clean. Serves two.

Microwave Method In glass measuring cup, microwave chocolate with full power 1/4 to 2 minutes or until melted. Stir together sugar, cornstarch and rum until mixed. Stir into chocolate. In small bowl with mixer at high speed, beat egg whites and salt until stiff peaks form. In small bowl with mixer at high speed, beat egg yolks until thick and lemon colored. Add chocolate mixture and beat until blended. Fold egg whites into chocolate mixture. Turn into two 6-ounce souffle dishes or two 10-ounce custard cups. Microwave with full power 1 to 1 1/2 minutes. (Souffle will be puffed when microwave is on, will fall immediately when microwave turns off. Top will look uncooked.) Serves two.

CHICKEN SUPREME — A DELIGHTFUL MEAL FOR TWO ... add a vegetable and salad for a complete meal

Cooking for a small household can be fun

Women prefer to spend less time in kitchen after the family is grown and demands slow

If you have reached a period in life when you again have time to call your own, you may want to spend less of it in the kitchen. Free from the responsibility of cooking for children now grown or from the day to day demands of a job, there's no need to tie yourself down by preparing "a meat and potatoes" dinner daily.

A nutritious sandwich can be just as filling a main dish — and a lot more fun. It's no trouble to keep a variety of sandwich making ingredients on hand. Staples such as canned meat spreads are easy to store and ready to use. Ideal for small households, one can will make generous sandwiches for two with no leftovers. Serve with bowls of steaming hot soup for a satisfying meal in minutes.

For lunch or supper, try a crunchy mixture of chicken spread, real bacon bits, celery and onion spread on English muffins. Top with tomato slices or shredded Swiss cheese before baking. These open-faced sandwiches are especially good with crisp dill pickles and thick, hearty pea soup.

Who said sandwiches had to be made on bread? Spread deviled ham and crushed pineapple between toaster size frozen waffles for an unusual treat. Sweet and spicy, they're delicious with cream of celery soup. You might also want to serve them for a late morning brunch. Sloppy Beef eaters are great on hamburger buns or hard rolls. Canned roast beef spread adds real meat flavor instantly to a chili seasoned tomatoey sauce. While the mixture simmers you can prepare mugs of onion soup or beef boillon and in just 15 minutes dinner is on the table.

BACON 'N CHICKEN SURPRISES

2 English muffins, split and toasted 1 can (4 1/2 ounces) chunky chicken spread 2 tablespoons real bacon bits 2 tablespoons chopped celery 2 tablespoons chopped onion 1 tablespoon mayonnaise 1 tomato, sliced

In a small bowl mix together chicken spread, bacon bits, celery, onion and mayonnaise. Spread each muffin half with about 1/2 cup chicken mixture. Top with tomato slices and bake at 400 degrees for about 10 minutes. Makes two servings.

WAFFLE HAMWICHES

4 frozen waffles (toaster size) 1 can (4 1/2 ounces) deviled ham 1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon 1/2 cup drained, crushed pineapple. Toast waffles as directed on package. Spread deviled ham on two waffle halves. Sprinkle with cinnamon. Top with crushed pineapple. Cover with another waffle. Slice in half and serve. Makes two servings.

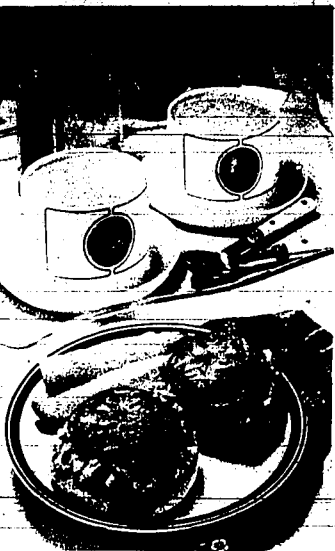

SLOPPY BEEFEATERS

4 tablespoons tomato paste 3/4 cup water 1 1/2 tablespoons chopped onion 1/4 teaspoon chili powder 1/4 teaspoon dried leaf oregano 1/4 teaspoon garlic salt 1 can (4 1/2 ounces) roast beef spread 2 split hamburger buns In a large skillet mix together all ingredients. Simmer uncovered 15 minutes, stirring occasionally. Serve over hamburger buns. Makes two servings.

SANDWICH WILLIAM TELL

(For one serving) Ovenproof serving dish 1 tart apple 1 tablespoon butter 1 tablespoon minced onion 1 thick slice of firm bread (white, whole wheat, or rye) 2 slices baked or boiled ham 2 large slices Swiss cheese Peel, core and slice apple in 1/2-inch rings. Melt butter in a frying pan, add onion and apple rings and cook until apples are just tender. Lightly grease the bottom of the serving dish. Place bread in the center of the dish, cover bread with ham slices, put apple rings and onion on top and cover with cheese slices. Just before serving, place under broiler for a few minutes, only until the cheese melts and is hot and bubbly. It also may be baked in 350 degree oven for 8 minutes. Serve with cold apple juice.

Pet owners, note

DEAR ABBY: You wrote a whole column on the "dirty tricks" that humans perpetrate on dogs (such as letting them run loose and breed accidentally). Well, I am tired of dogs leaving their dirty tricks on my lawn! I'm tired of shoveling dirty tricks off my yard so I worry about "warn each visitor to step carefully. I think you left out an important law concerning care of dogs. Any parent who gives a child a dog should specify that the child is obligated to shovel up the dirty tricks his dog leaves on neighbors' lawns.

I have learned to cope with dogs tipping over my garbage cans. I rinse off meat papers and even sprinkle chili powder over anything that might interest dogs, and I always make sure the lid on my garbage can is tightly secured. Dogs have learned a new respect for my garbage cans, but not for my lawn.

Come on, Abby, be a friend to countless thousands of people who are abused by dumb animals, and print this letter.

DOGGONE MAD IN MESA, ARIZ.

DEAR DOGGONE: The dirty tricks that dogs perpetrate on humans would be completely eliminated if every dog owner accepted the responsibility for his dog's actions—as he well should!

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I've been seeing a psychologist for about five months. He's a male and so am I. On my first visit to his office, he made a strip naked, stand before a mirror and talk about my body. I don't know if he asks his female patients to do this, but all of his male patients that I've spoken to told me that he did the same thing with them. (He asks his patients not to mention this procedure to others.)

We wonder if perhaps he is a voyeur. He's about 45, and has a nice wife and family.

If you lie on his couch and feel embarrassed or nervous, he sits on the floor beside you and holds your hand to relax you. I have never heard of a psychologist doing this, have you?

If you return for further sessions and lie on his couch, he asks you to remove your shirt. He has told me that he has seen some very good-looking young men in his practice.

I once heard a well-known psychiatrist say on a talk show, "Never take your clothes off for a shrink."

I'd like your opinion.

JIM IN LOS ANGELES

DEAR JIM: Most psychologists are competent, caring and strictly ethical in their manner of treatment, but if you question the professional ethics of your psychologist, write to the State Board of Medical Quality Assurance, 1430 Howe Ave., Sacramento, Calif. 95825.

Those residing in other states should check out their therapists with their county psychological associations.

DEAR ABBY: A reader signed ALWAYS THE GUEST asked how to graciously get the check in a restaurant. In this case, it was a woman who occasionally entertained gentlemen who were not as financially able to handle the check as she was.

You suggested that she go to places where she had credit and arrange with the management to add the gratuities to the bill and charge everything to her account.

I have a minor credit card with the maker of which instructions to charge the meal, taxes and appropriate tip to my account. This always works and is a surefire way of avoiding embarrassing squabbles over who is to settle the bill.

Whereas most people have major credit cards, many do not have restaurant accounts.

Casino $ take high

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (UPI) — The operator of the first and only casino in Atlantic City today announced it grossed more than $2.6 billion during the East Coast's first six days of legal casino gambling.

Resorts International said, in reporting the figures to the New Jersey Casino Control Commission, that the $2,631,028 represented money taken in from May 26 through May 31. The daily average take on slot machines and table games came to $438,504.

Slot machines, the company said, accounted for $1,455,297 or an average of $24,538 per day, while table games accounted for $1,175,809, or an average of $195,968 per day.

Resorts said its figures represent gross revenues from gaming operations before any expenses, including taxes, are deducted.

Resorts estimated that 19 percent of company's 893 slot machines were not in operation because of mechanical difficulties.

It also said that 11 to 21 percent of the 56 table games not in operation because the casino did not have sufficient licensed staff to man the tables.

Resorts also said construction would be completed June 16 on an extension to the casino that would add 30 percent more square feet.

Girl admits beating

SPOKANE (UPI) — A Spokane County Juvenile Court judge has declared a 12-year-old girl delinquent after she admitted beating 3-year-old Desiree Barthoud to death.

Judge William H. Williams Monday ordered the girl held in custody pending disposition of the case within the next two weeks.

The body of the 3-year-old girl was found last May 12 in a chicken coop a short distance from her home in a neighborhood just outside the northeast corner of Spokane. The child had disappeared several hours earlier and was the subject of an extensive search.

The court was told that the 12-year-old girl "enticed the victim" into the chicken coop and struck her about the shoulders and head with a wooden club.

Hemorrhoid problem

Dear Dr. Lamb:
My problem is hemorrhoids. I am embarrassed to discuss them with anybody. They bleed a great deal at times. I have used local preparations for years but nothing seems to help. I am afraid to have an operation because of bad reports I have heard about it. My brother-in-law had his removed by a doctor who used rubber bands. No operation, not hospitalized, no anesthesia, no pain. He is still very happy with it, two years later.
My surgeon just passed it off with "Oh, that's an old-fashioned method. We get too much scar tissue that way." I'd rather have scar tissue than hemorrhoids. Do you recommend this method?

Lawrence E. Lamb M.D.

Dear Reader:
Hemorrhoids are simply varicose veins of the rectum. They pop out because the veins are overstretched. Anything that exerts pressure on the veins around the rectum can cause this. An extreme example is the pressure of the fetal head as it passes through the pelvic area during birth. Constipation with straining at the stool is another major cause. Obesity contributes to the problem, as do other factors that increase the pressure inside the abdomen and prevent drainage of the veins from that area.

There are internal hemorrhoids — which bleed — and external hemorrhoids which cause pain and itching. The pain fibers are in the external area, hence the hemorrhoids often do not produce any symptoms until one day a person bleeds.

You should never ignore rectal bleeding because even if it is from a hemorrhoid the pressure behind the vein causing the hemorrhoid may be a tumor. Let your doctor decide what is causing the bleeding. Cancer of the rectum is too common to ignore such an important sign.

Yes, rubber bands can be used to tie off internal hemorrhoids. It is an office procedure but cannot be used in all cases. It depends a lot on the extent of the hemorrhoids. And despite your brother-in-law's glowing report and equally misleading reports in popular lay magazines it is not always painless. The internal hemorrhoid is grasped by a pair of forceps and pulled into the instrument used. The tight rubber band is slipped over the hemorrhoid. It may cause pain for six to seven days, and you have to be on the lookout for bleeding for about two weeks afterward. Only one hemorrhoid at a time is operated upon.

You might ask to see a proctologist. Your family doctor could send you to one. Your own case will have to be evaluated before it can be determined if it would be suitable to do this in your case or not.

Injectons are also used in some cases to scar off the offending vein or veins.

You may get-by with a change in habits. Improved bowel habits and the use of stool softeners often decrease the pressure and hence the bleeding and other problems that occur. I am sending you the Health Letter number 2-4, Spasms or Irritable Colon and Constipation, to provide some tips on good bowel function. This should be helpful with or without hemorrhoids.

Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1351, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. But remember before you can choose the right course your doctor will need to review exactly what your own problem is since there is a world of difference in hemorrhoids.

Brooke's daughter 'peddles' deposition

BOSTON—(UPI)—The eldest daughter of Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass., has admitted she leaked some of her father's financial statements to the news media so her parents' divorce case would be reopened.

The senator was ordered to appear in court today with his financial records to answer questions surrounding a controversial $49,000 loan.

Remi Brooke Pettit, telephone station WBZ Sunday night after her father had appeared as a guest. She told the radio talk show that she had "peddled" her father's divorce-deposition—to the Boston Globe to force Middlesex County Probate Judge Lawrence Perera to reopen the case.

Brooke had declined to discuss recent financial disclosures on the show.

"I really feel bitter that I've had to peddle anything in order for my mother to get a fair trial," she said minutes after her father had left the studio after the live interview.

Perera has ordered Brooke to appear in his Cambridge courthouse today with financial records, to answer some of the questions surrounding his recent admission of "misstatements" about the $49,000 loan.

Brooke, in a sworn deposition filed last year with his wife Remigia's lawyer, said he owed Boston liquor businessman A. Raymond Tye $49,000. He later told the Globe only $2,000 was owed to his friend, and he owed the rest of the money to a family fund.

"I don't think you should be able to lie on a private deposition," Mrs. Pettit said. "I've had the depositions since May 12 (1977). I knew he was lying on them."

"I love my father," she said in the radio interview. "I'm bitter we had to go to the press for Judge Perera to hear my mother's case again."

Mrs. Pettit has accused her father of using his political power—to influence divorce proceedings and cutting off weekly support payments to her mother.

Brooke's daughter also accused the senator of lying about the sale price of the family's St. Martin's Island home in the French West Indies.

She said Brooke listed the value of the property on its deed as $46,000, but reported paying $202,000 for the property in a divorce deposition.

Perera put a value of $30,000 on the house and awarded that property, the couple's Newton, Mass., home, and $18,000 annual alimony to Mrs. Brooke.

On the earlier broadcast, Brooke had been asked why his own daughter turned against him. "That is probably the most difficult question I've been asked," he said. "I hope someday we can get back together."

Treehouse will stay

SEATTLE (UPI)—Jode Coble's treehouse is going to stay up. The City Building Department had told 11-year-old Jode he had to have a building permit or remove the house he had built in a cedar tree outside his home. The department told Jode he would face a criminal charge in Municipal Court if he didn't do one or the other.

But the city has changed its mind. Mrs. Walter Coble, Jode's mother, said Monday. "They decided to forget their whole thing," said Mrs. Coble. "Apparently we didn't break the law."

The legal issue was whether a treehouse is a permanent structure.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Every hand, for a champion player, is a challenge and deserves to be played well. Some hands, of course, because of the stakes involved and pressure at the championship level are more important than others. Champion bridge players spend many hours each day studying and practicing for just such a hand as is diagrammed here. This hand was played in the 1975 Team Trials in California, the winning team earning the right to compete for the World Championship in Monte Carlo.

It took three key plays by declarer to avoid what seemed like certain defeat. First, at trick one, when East covered West's 10 of spades with the king, declarer allowed the king to win the trick. From the bidding (i.e., West's two spades), declarer knew that spades were almost certainly divided 5-2 and therefore, ducking the king of spades would deprive East of an entry to West's hand for a future spade trick.

Key Play Number Two: After South won the spade return with his ace, he cashed the ace and king of diamonds and led the singleton club toward the K Q in dummy, losing the queen to East's ace. East now had to lead a diamond to prevent declarer's access to dummy's club king.

Key Play Number Three: After ruffing East's diamond return, declarer led the jack of trumps and when West showed out, he played dummy's queen. This truly was a rare and great play. Declarer (Piyush Yanki, a Californian born in India) through three spectacular strokes had engineered a coup that rendered the defense impotent.

If East allowed the queen of hearts to win, declarer would discard his spade loser on the king of clubs. If east won the queen of hearts with the ace, any suit he led would allow South an entry to dummy—a diamond play would give a ruff and bluff; a club play is clearly fatal; and a trump lead from the 9-2lets South play low and win with the seven.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Deloy Bingham, Twin Falls. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Reese T. Casperson, Idaho Falls.

The bride wore a floor-length gown of white satin fashioned in layers of tiers with a train. The sheer sleeves were of lace with the yoke of the bodice which had a mandarin neckline.

She wore a white hat with an elbow-length veil trimmed in satin.

The bride carried a cascade bouquet consisting of yellow-silk-rose and white daisies accented with yellow streamers.

A bridesmaid was given by Brenda and Pam Ottersberg.

The newlyweds are graduates of Rice's College in Remburg and will attend Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah, this fall.

ables centered with baskets of yellow and green, gingham flowers matching the bridesmaids' dresses.

The four tiered wedding cake featured stairways leading to the top layer. A miniature wedding party was placed on the stairways and a fountain sat beneath the cake.

The cake was made and decorated by Virginia Bingham, aunt of the bride.

Assisting at the reception were Mrs. A.J. Munk, San Rafael, Calif.; Mrs. Doyle Uham and Mrs. Kellersberger, both Granger, Utah, and Lana Derricott, Arlene Clawson, Julie Munk, Pam Montgomery, Vickie and Leslie Hymas and Ranae Call.
